OW unfit I am to perform even this common and usual Office of introducing thee to the Entertainment, which the following Discourses will afford, the knowledg which I ought to have of my self, is sufficient to convince me: For it cannot be expected that I should give a due Character of the Author, which hath been already drawn by a far more excellent Hand, and which for me to attempt, as it would not be comely, so it is above my undertaking. It would as ill suit with my disability, who am inconsiderable, and so little known, to offer my mean Judgment needlessly to recommend any of his Writings to the World. All that is proper and agreeable for me to do, is to assure thee, that these which I have had the care of publishing, are the genuine issue of his Thoughts; most of them the mature Fruits of the later Years of his Life; and to give some short account of their Order and general Design.

Mr. Tharkfal Owen, in his Preface to the Exposition upon the Epistle to the Ephesians.

I have here offer'd to public view, in a second Volume of his Works, several Discourses upon great and important Truths; that what were his own retir'd and profitable Meditations, may, by the Divine Blessing, become a common Benefit.

The first which presents it self, is, An Exposition on the Revelation: A Portion of Scripture so abstruse, that tho' it has exercised the Thoughts and Studies of many worthy Divines, may yet, in some respects, be called A Seal'd Book; which will be more perfectly explain'd, when He who alone is found worthy to open it, the Holy Lamb of God shall come to unfold all its difficult Passages, in their glorious Accomplishment. As the Author liv'd and rejoic'd in this hope, he has here in this his Comment, pointed to the Foundation, upon which he grounded it, even a sure Word of Prophecy: But as he was fully ascertain'd, that God would in his own time make good his Word, he was not over-curious in dating the Day of his Performance: you will find him modest in this Point, he himself determines nothing, but expresses the Opinions of others rather than his own, tho' he indeed illustrates them with Reasons, which might make them look probable; and tho' they have prov'd to be be mistaken in their Calculations, yet many things occur in drawing them up, which are not altogether unworthy of being remark'd. Their Account indeed is now superannuated, yet it was proper enough for the Author to mention it at the time of his writing this Discourse, which was in the Year 1639. It seems to be the Divine Prerogative to know the Times and the Seasons; and as he always chuseth the fittest, he reserves to himself the exact knowledg of his own appointed Day.

That which comes next in order of these Treatises, is, A Discourse of the Knowledg of God the Father, and his Son Jesus Christ; which I have plac'd the first of these Theological Tracts, (and of others that are to follow, if Providence permits me an opportunity of publishing them, which insift upon other the chiefest Heads of Divine Knowledg) because it is the design of the first Rudiments of Religion, to instruct us what due apprehensions we ought to have of the Deity. As our Saviour tells us, That this is Life Eternal, to know God the Father, and Jesus Christ whom he hath sent; so 'tis the firm Foundation, whereon the beautiful and uniform Structure of all other Truths is built; and sad experience in all Ages hath made us understand, into what wild Imaginations, as to the other parts of our Christian Religion, those unhappy Men have wandred, (as the Arrians in the Primitive Times, and the Socinians in our own) who have stumbled, and so made a false step in their entrance at this first and principal Truth. The Author, who consider'd the irremediable mischiefs of the least Error in these first Articles of Faith, and saw the proneness in Men to mistake, has made it his chief Design, in all the parts of this Discourse, to direct our Thoughts to due Conceptions of the Divine Nature, of the Trinity, and the Person of Christ. And as his Assertions herein are no other, than according to those measures the Word of God has prescribed, he has fetch'd his Proofs from the same Magazine; and the evidence of his Arguments is the more convincing, since it proceeds from that Light which he beats out, by comparing places of Scripture together. If any should judg some of his Notions to be too fine, and condemn his Thoughts for taking too high a flight, and leaping over the common bounds of Knowledg; this may be pleaded in defence, that he has at least asserted nothing that contradicts a received Truth, or which by any Consequence may weaken the Foundations of Religion. Nay, he asserts nothing, but what Divine Authority in Scripture does countenance; he proves all by plain Texts, and by an easy unforc'd Explication, without racking or torturing them to make them speak his own mind. He is the vender of no new Opinions, since what he delivers, he clearly evinces to be the sense of the Eternal Oracles of Truth; nor is he too boldly curious, since he is not wise beyond what is written; and the inquisitiveness of his Mind should not be prejudged, when his Enquiries have proceeded according to the conduct of an Infallible Guide; and if they have gone further than others, it is only because, having seen the glympse of a Truth, he could not leave it, till he had pursued it down through the most intimate recesses of Scripture. It is certainly allowable to dig deeper in those Mines which are inexhaustible, and where those, who come after the diligence of others, may stil find new and far richer Treasures. Our Spiritual Knowledg surely is capable of increase, and further degrees may be yet added to it; for even after those glorious Times, wherein God has promised to bless his People with larger effusions of his Spirit, who shall lead them into all Truth, they yet will then know but in part; and indeed all the successive Ages of the World put together, afford too short a time for us perfectly to search into the deep Things of God, since Eternity it self will give us but space enough to know and admire them.

The Discourse which follows, is, Of the Creatures, and the condition of their State-by Creation; which I have plac'd before that of Election: Because tho' indeed the Electing Decree eternally preceded the framing of this World; yet God made his choice out of the Creatures which he determin'd to make, and considered them in the State wherein they were plac'd by Creation. And the Author, when he evinces the necessity of an Election-Grace, to save certainly and infallibly any of either Angels or Men, draws his most cogent Proof from the mutability of the Creature, which absolutely requir'd a supernatural Grace to secure its establishment; and he therein refers the Reader to this Discourse, wherein he proves that the Creature, as such, was changeable and uncertain in the best Circumstances of its Condition, and had a very unfix'd Station when it stood, and flourish'd in all the Glory of its Innocence. It is therefore requisite for the intelligent Reader, if he would understand the Force of the Argument, to peruse what is discours'd in this Treatise concerning the weak and unstable condition of the Creatures, which renders the Grace of Election indispensably necessary unto their Salvation. And as the Author had it in his Eye and Heart, not only to prove the absolute need we have of this Grace, but also to celebrate unto the height, its Glory and Praise; In prosecution of this Design, he compares all the Advantages which Adam, as an Innocent Creature by Nature possessed, with all those signal Mercies which belong to that condition, whereunto Grace advances the Elect since the Fall, and endeavours to convince us, how vastly those Blessings we receive from Christ, the Second Adam, excel all the Benefits which the Creator's Bounty bestowed upon the first: How Grace instates us in a higher Happiness than we should have enjoy'd; Tho' we had liv'd with our first Father in Innocence: How Grace makes us Gainers by the loss of all Paradises Pleasures; tho' we are apt to envy and regret that we have lost them: And how the State of the meanest Soul that belongs to Christ, who is blessed with all Spiritual Blessings in Heavenly Places in him, is infinitely preferable to Adam's Primitive Condition, with all its Enjoyments. Thus in this Discourse he prepares the Mind of the Reader to admire and adore the Riches of that Grace, which further to evince and illustrate, is the whole Design of that which follows in the last place of this Volume.

The last Discourse then is Of Election, which to so many is a hard Saying, a Stumbling-block, and a Stone of Offence. He discourses this high Truth with such a wary Exactness, that its greatest opposers will not find any thing in what he asserts, whereon to fasten those invidious Reflections, those harsh and horrid Consequences with which they use to deform this Doctrine, to make it look affrighting. He is very

very tender in the point of Reprobation, and expresses himself no otherwise concerning it, than the Scriptures themselves do, viz. That there are some of Mankind whom God has left out of the compass of his Gracious Decrees, as indeed he was not oblig'd to share equal Favour to all. Rom. ii. 7. That these are the rest, or remainder, when God has chosen out the others. That these he resigns to the conduct of their Free-Will, and leaves them to go on in their own ways, and to reap at last the bitter Fruits of their Evil Actions. Act. 14. 16. After he has prov'd the necessity of such a Grace, as is deriv'd from the Decree of Election, to assure the Salvation of both Angels and Men; and that all whom God hath rescued from the misery and ruin of the Fall, were really saved by this Grace; He proceeds to illustrate the infinite greatness of it by many Considerations, as, That it appoints, and certainly brings us to a higher Glory and Blessedness, than was the design of Creation to confer on the Creatures, tho' they had continued in Innocence; and that it commends its self by a discriminating Love, which makes a difference between the Elect, and the other of Mankind. He then discourses how infallibly God's Decrees of Election obtain their design'd issue, and proves largely how an effectual invincible Grace does certainly accomplish what the Decree and Counsel of God's Will had determin'd. These were the Truths which exercised the Thoughts and Heart of the Author, the Element in which he lived, the Air in which his Soul breath'd, and by which a Spiritual Life was constantly maintain'd in it: And as he experienced, that they afforded him comfort and support against all his Temptations and Trials, he committed them to writing; that others might receive from them the same solace and refreshing help as he did.

It renders his loss the more supportable, that he has left behind him now that he is retired out of sight, what may perpetuate a grateful remembrance of him among Men: That tho' God hath withdrawn him to Heaven, he may yet be useful to his Church here on Earth: That his Service is not ended with his Life, nor buried with him in the Dust; and tho' he rests from all his Labours, yet the Fruits of them may follow him, even after he is gone hence to receive their Reward. He lives again in this Off-spring of his better part, his Mind; and being dead, he yet speaks in them the same Truths, which when living, were the most delightful entertainment of his Thoughts.

But I forget that I assume too much to my self, in delivering my own thus freely, in things which are indeed so much above me; And I know not how a zealous affection for the memory of a Father's Name, whom I cannot but love and honour in the Grave, hath carried me beyond the bounds of that reservedness and modesty, which would perhaps have far better become

REVELATION.

P A R T. I.

C H A P. I.

The Design of the Book of the Revelation. That it is a Prophecy, wherein, as in a Vision, the Story of all Times is represented. The prophetic part of it begins at the Fourth Chapter. An Exposition of the Fourth Chapter. The Vision of the Throne, Beasts, and Elders: A Representation of the Church in all Ages.

THE three first Chapters, contain Seven Epistles to Seven Particular Churches; but from this Fourth Chapter, to the end of the Book, is laid down a more general Prophecy from John's Time to the Worlds end. There is therefore this Character of Difference put between that part of this Book in those three first Chapters, and this that begins here, That that concerned things that then were past, things that then were, and things to come hereafter, (as Chap. I. 19.) whereas this delivers those things only which must be hereafter, Chap. 4. 1.

In this Prophecy, as in a Vision, is the Story of all Times acted and represented. A Comedy is the representing of a Story past, by Men; this a Prophetic Vision of things to come, acted by Angels answerably; as in such Interludes and Shews, there is first a Stage built, a Scene or Place supposed where the things were done, and a Chorus or Company of Spectators sitting on the Stage continually, and giving their judgment and approbation, (which was the custom in Comedies of old): So in this Chapter the Apostle hath the Vision of the Scene, Theatre, or Stage, namely, the Church of Christ, in a general view, throughout all Ages, presented; the Members whereof are the Chorus, who upon any great or solemn occasion, give their Plaudite or Acclamation of Glory unto God; So the four Beasts, and four and twenty Elders, you may in this Book often observe to do. And then, as in such Shews and Representations, there used to be a Prologue, so Chap. 5. you have as artificial a Prologue acted, as any in any Poem: from whence (Chap. 6.) the Representation of the Story of things begins.

PART I.

Vers. 1.

Ver. 1. John is called up from the Earth into the Air, (by which Heaven is here meant, as often elsewhere it is) the place of John's Vision; and in the Air a Door seemed to open, in at which he entering, sees the Sights following.

Vers. 2.

Ver. 2. And immediately I was in the Spirit.] The Phrase [in the Spirit] is like to that, when we say, a Man is in Love; or a Mill is said to be in the Wind; as noting out such a repletion, or filling with the Spirit, as possessed, and took up all the Powers of his Soul to attend this Vision: it filled all, it carried all in him unto the thing in hand, and wholly acted his Faculties by a supernatural Motion of the Spirit, so that his Understanding and Senses acted not in their natural way, but as moved by the Spirit. Now this his being in the Spirit was extraordinary, and to an extraordinary purpose, even to see these Visions, and by the Holy Ghost to write them: yet to us it should be ordinary, so far as in our ordinary course, to walk in the Spirit, and be in the Spirit; that is, to give up our Selves, our Powers and Faculties, to the Spirit's Rule and Guidance, so that he should move all Wheels in us.

Observat. I.

Now from this [immediately] observe, That a believing Soul may presently be in the Spirit; he soon and suddenly comes upon a Man.

The Vision that follows, is of the Church, which is made the Scene of all things prophesied of in this Book; for all things done, are either for it or concerning it. And though Passages of Judgments on the World are recorded, yet for the Churches sake they are recorded, and are done as by God out of the Church. Now this Vision of the Throne, Beasts, and Elders, is a Representation of the Church (wherein God hath his Throne) of Men on Earth, Universal in all Ages; set forth according to the Form or Pattern of Institution of a Church, into which all Saints on Earth should be moulded. To prove this in the several parts of it:

I. It is a Representation of the Church: For,

1. In the Church only is God worshipped; as here, vers. 8, 9, 10. In the Church only is God known; and there they speak of his Glory, Psal. 29. 9.

2. The Throne here is evidently God's Seat in his Temple the Church: So Chap. 16. 17. A Voice came from the Temple, from the Throne, &c.

3. Accordingly the Allusion in this Vision is to Solomon's Temple, and to the Tabernacle, which were the Types of the Church to come, under the New Testament. Therefore God here sits on a Throne, as he did then in the Holy of Holies: and there are seven Golden Lamps here, as there the Candlestick; and a Sea of Glass here to wash in, as there was there one of Brass: All Ornaments and Utensils of that Temple typifying forth ours.

II. It is the Representation of a Church of Men, not Angels.

For, 1. these Elders and Beasts sing, that they are redeemed by the Blood of the Lamb; which the Angels were not, Chap. 5. 9.

And, 2. vers. 11. the Angels are reckoned distinct from these Elders and Beasts, and are said to be about them: as also Chap. 7. 11.

III. It is of the Church of Men on Earth:

For, 1. the Allusion is to the marshalling of the Church of the Jews about the Tabernacle; as shall be shown.

2. Here are seven Spirits ; that is, variety of the Gifts of the Spirit, which in Heaven do cease.

3. Here is a Sea of Glass, for the Priests and Worshippers to wash in ; which supposeth a remainder of defilement, at least, of the Feet ; as John 13. 10.

4. The distinction of Beasts and Elders in this Company, (namely, Officers and Brethren) which in Heaven ceaseth, argueth it also.

IV. Of the Church Universal.

1. In all Ages : therefore placed at the beginning here, and often brought in in this Prophecy, as Spectators.

2. In all Places : So Chap. 5. 9. redeemed out of every Kindred, Tongue, and Nation.

V. This Church Universal, represented whilst on Earth, as cast into the Pattern of a Church, instituted according to the Rules of the Word, the measure to square Churches on Earth by ; and though in all Ages they kept not that Pattern, (therefore, Chap. 11. 1. John is bidden to measure the Temple of that Age, as having swerved from the Original Form too far, in Antichrist's Apostacy) yet such a Pattern is given forth here, as the only true Pattern, into which all should be cast ; and God sets forth his Church as it should be in all Ages, and as it was in John's Time : All Saints, in all Ages, should be cast into such Companies. So that here is the Church with her Appurtenances.

The Church consisting of Three States :

1. Christ the Head.
2. The four Beasts, the Officers.
3. The 24 Elders, who are the Brethren.

There are the Appurtenances also ; as the seven Lamps, which are the Gifts of the Holy Ghost ; and the Laver, which is Christ's Blood, to wash in, &c.

First ; Verf. 2, 3. I saw a Throne,] which is an Allusion to the Holy of Holies Verf. 2, 3. in the Temple, where God did sit. Therefore, Isa. 6. 1. when the Lord was presented sitting upon his Throne, it is said, the residue of his Train filled the Temple ; that is, those other parts of the Temple, the Throne being the Holy of Holies. Therefore, Ezek. 43. when the Glory of God returned to the Temple, vers. 4, 5. God calls it, (vers. 7.) the place of my Throne, and the place of the soles of my Feet, where I will dwell in the midst of the Children of Israel for ever. The like you have Jer. 17. 12. which Throne is here in the midst of the 24 Elders, and the Beasts ; signifying, (as himself interprets it, Ezek. 43.) his dwelling in the midst of his Church ; according to that saying of Christ, I will be in the midst among you.

To set up a Church, is to set up God and Christ a Throne : A Church is his only visible Throne on Earth, till the Kingdoms of the World become his, visibly. Observat.

Now, secondly, for him who sitteth on the Throne : Mr. Brightman would have God in the Trinity (or the Three Persons) set forth in those three Colours mentioned. But to make the Rain-bow, which encompasseth the Throne, to be the Holy Ghost, when as that Rain-bow is presented as divided, and distinct from him who sitteth on the Throne, is nimis durum, it is too much. I take it, it is God in Christ, in whom he is reconciled unto his Church, and by whom he rules it, Chap. 3. 15. and Chap. 12. it is called the Throne of God. And Ezek. 1. 26. (in which Chapter the same kind of Vision is represented) ; He who sits on the Throne there, is the Son of Man : As also in Isa. 6. 1. which place Christ in the 12th of John interprets of himself. So that God, considered as in Christ, is he that sitteth on the Throne. And, Chap. 7. 10. He that sitteth on the Throne, and the Lamb, are made distinct, yet mentioned together.

Verf. 3. For the Rain-bow that was round about the Throne, it notes out the Verf. 3. memorial PART I. Memorial of his Covenant of Grace; that as the Rain-bow was the sign of the Covenant of Nature, to put God and Us in mind, he would not destroy the World any more by Water; so this Rain-bow is to God a Memorial of his Covenant of Grace to his Church, [This is to me as the Waters of Noah; for as I have sworn, the Waters should no more go over the Earth; so have I sworn not to be wrath with thee, saith God in Isaiab.] Which Covenant is round about his Throne, so to put him in mind, in all his Dispensations towards his Church, to remember his Covenant; that let him go forth any way in his Dispensations towards his Church, he may still be minded of Mercy; and his Church again in all their Intercourses with God, and all Dispensations from God, and Occasions coming to him, may be put in mind of Mercy also, and his Covenant of Grace, to trust in it; and that the Prayers of the Church may still pass from them through the Rain-bow, as all God's Dispensations to the Church do come through the said Rain-bow also.

Now for the Situation of the Church: Both Elders and Beasts are about the Throne, Verf. 4, 6, 7. it is formed after the enquartering of the People of Israel about the Tabernacle in the Wilderness; Numb. 2. The Levites were next to the Tabernacle, and the Tribes about the Levites. So here, the Beasts (the Officers) were (as in vers. 6.) in the midst of the Throne, and round about the Throne; that is (as Beza interprets it) their station is between the Throne, and these Elders, who did surround the Throne about the four Beasts. The phrase [in the midst] in Scripture being put for [between] or [among]. So Gen. 23. 6. The Beasts, though nearest the Throne, yet are mentioned after the Elders; for though their place be nearer, yet they are but the Churches Servants, and the radical Power is in the Church, here signified by the 24 Elders.

Verf. 4. To begin with the Elders, who as (was said) do signify the Church.

First, They are called Elders; 1. Because the Church, under the New Testament, is grown up to an elderly Age, in opposition to the Church under the Old Testament, who are termed Children under Age, Gal. 4. 1, 2, 3, &c. As also, 2. for that Gravity that should be in all Church-Assemblies, and in their Proceedings and Administrations.

Secondly; For their Number; They are 24, in Allusion to the 24 Heads of those Orders of Levites who were Porters, and Singers, established by David in the Temple, 1 Chron. 24, and 25 Chapters, and Chap. 31. vers. 25, 26. And this, to shew the encrease of the Church under the New Testament, in comparison of that under the Old, whereof that proportion made by David, was a Type. The Heads of the twelve Tribes then were multiplied to 24. Now in like manner Solomon's Temple had a double proportion to that of the Tabernacle of Moses; that also being an After-type of the Church's encrease under the Gospel.

Thirdly; They are clothed in white Raiment, signifying that they are Priests, Exod. 28. 40.

Fourthly; They had on their Heads Crowns of Gold, to shew their Kingly Power; and that it belongs to them to judg Matters in the Church; as 1 Cor. 5. 12. Do not you judg them that are within.

Fifthly; They were round about the Throne: the meanest Saint is as near and dear to God as the greatest. Therefore the word in Cant. 1. 12. is a round Table which the Saints sit at with Christ; it shews also their equality. And Christ, He is in the midst here, and will be so in Heaven: We shall eat of the Tree which is in the midst of the Paradise of God.

Verf. 5. And out of the Throne proceeded Lightnings, and Thunderings, and Voices.] By Thunderings and Lightnings, are meant the Judgments of God, (Psal. 18. 13, 14. The Lord also thundered in the Heavens, and the Highest gave his Voice; Hailstones and and Coals of Fire. Yea, he sent out his Arrows, and scattered them, and he shot out Lightnings, and discomfited them. And Psal. 29. 3. The Voice of the Lord is upon the Waters; the God of Glory thundereth, the Lord is upon many Waters.) They are said to come out of the Throne, because all Judgments do come from God, as sitting in his Church, and for his Church's sake doth God use them. Psal. 68. 35. O God, thou art terrible out of thy Holy Places; the God of Israel is he that giveth strength, and power unto his People; blessed be God. Amos 1. 2. And he said, The Lord will roar from Zion, and utter his Voice from Jerusalem: and the Habitations of the Shepherds shall mourn, and the top of Carmel shall wither. Voices also proceed out of the Throne; which is more general, and extends unto Promises, and answers to Prayers.

Seven Lamps, which are the Seven Spirits of God]. By these are noted out the Holy Ghost, and the variety of his Gifts and Operations, or Manifestations of Himself in the Church: That the Holy Ghost is meant, is evident by Chap. 1. 4. where John wishes Grace and Peace from the seven Spirits, which are before God's Throne; which he ought not to have wished from any, but from the Holy Ghost, who is the third Person. And these Manifestations are counted Seven, because of the variety of Gifts. For otherwise, that Person is but one Spirit, 1 Cor. 12. They are compared to Fire, because they give Light, and Heat; and the Allusion here is to the Candlesticks in the Temple.

There was a Sea of Glass like unto Christal] in allusion to Solomon's Sea; but Vers. 6. this was purer than that, which was only of Brass; Exod. 30. 17, 18, 19, 20. and typified out Christ's Blood to wash in, both for Justification of Person, and Sanctification of Life: So Heb. 10. 22. Let us draw near with a true Heart, in full assurance of Faith, having our Hearts sprinkled from an evil Conscience, and our Bodies washed with pure Water. 1 Cor. 6. 11. And such were some of you, but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the Name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God. Titus 3. 5. Not by Works of Righteousness, which we have done, but according to his Mercy he saved us by the washing of Regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost. And this Blood of Christ stands in the Church, as the Sea in which we must wash, chiefly when we come to worship. Therefore wash before you worship.

And there were four Beasts full of Eyes before and behind]; by which are meant Church-Officers.

1. Because of the situation of them, between the Throne and the Elders, who are round about.

2. Because they are the Leaders of the Praise, and so the Mouths of the Congregation, Vers. 9. 10. They are not Beasts properly, as we understand and speak; not Brutes, but living Wights: the Greek word, which wants a full and proper expression, in one English word signifies so. They are called Living, to shew that they have, or should have Life in them to quicken others. They are four, and the Throne is four-square, and so they are said to be in the midst between every Angle; to shew that they are compleat for Number, and should look every way to all the Necessities of the Church, both for Soul and Body.

They are full of Eyes, because they are to be Overseers; Acts 20. 28. And they have eyes within as well as without, to see to their own Hearts, as well as to others.

And the first Beast was like a Lion]; who is the Ruling Elder, who needs the Vers. 7. courage of a Lion, to deal with Mens Spirits in case of Sins, that deserve to be brought to the Church, or to have Admonition to prevent that course.

The second was like a Galf, (or Ox, for so the Septuagint translates the Hebrew word forty times) the Pastor, who is like an Ox for laboriousness, and taking pains in treading out the Corn.

The third Beast had a Face like a Man]; the Deacons and Widows (which are all one Office in a kind) who have a Face of a Man; a Man's Heart being disposed and inclined for mercifulness and pittifulness, which is proper to a Man, not Beasts.

And

And the fourth Beast was like a flying Eagle;] the Teacher, who hath Eyes like an Eagle, quickly to spie out all Errors; and then they soar aloft into high Mysterics.

- Vers. 8.* They had each of them six Wings apiece] to shew their aptness and readiness to fly and act all manner of ways. So in Ezekiel the Cherubims had, who were Types of these. They rest not Day nor Night] to shew they labour continually; crying, Holy, Holy, Holy]; these worshipped God in Trinity. And they are the Mouths of the Congregation; for when they begin, the four and twenty Elders fall down: Vers. 9, 10. And when those Beasts give Glory, and Honour, and Thanks to him that sat on the Throne, who liveth for ever and ever; The four and twenty Elders fall down before him that sat on the Throne, and worship him that liveth for ever and ever, and cast their Crowns before the Throne, saying, Ver. 11.
- Vers. 11.* Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive Glory, and Honour, and Power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created. And then they altogether, both one and t'other, praise him for his Works of Creation; acknowledging him both the Efficient, and the End for which they were created: and not only for whom they were created at first; but for whom they are so still; their Being and Motion, serving to that end, and working for his Glory materially.

CHAP. II.

The Exposition of the Fifth Chapter.

THE Stage being built in the Fourth Chapter, the Chorus (which is the Church being set) here begins the Prologue; and that, so elegant and stately an one, as was never heretofore invented, or put before any Poem.

First; Here is a Book Sealed, presented in his Hand who sits on the Throne. Which Book contains God's Decrees to be executed until the Day of Judgment.

Secondly; Here is a Proclamation made to all Creatures, to find out one who should be found worthy to open it.

Thirdly; There were none such found in Heaven, nor in Earth.

Fourthly; John weeps, thinking there would be an end of his Visions; and that he must put up his Pen.

Fifthly; In this strait comes Christ, and takes upon him the opening and fulfilling of this Book, and all the Decrees therein contained.

Sixthly; At this the Chorus fall down and worship.

First; What is this Book? Many make it to be the Scriptures: But it is plain, Vers. 1. by what all along does follow, that it is a Book containing the Affairs of the World, and the Church, and God's Decrees about them both. For upon the opening every Seal, John sees a Vision containing the Matter of the ensuing Chapters, namely, the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th. And when the Seals were all taken off, Chap. 10. 8. then John is bidden to eat the Book, that he might prophesy again the other part of this Prophecy. So as it is this very Book of the Revelation, and the Government of the World and his Church that is set forth therein, which Christ, by taking the Book, undertakes to manage, perform, and execute, and give it to John. Which agrees with what is said at the beginning of this Book, Chap. 1. 1. The Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to shew unto his Servants things which must shortly come to pass, and he sent and signified it by his Angel unto his Servant John.

A strong Angel thereupon proclaims who is worthy to loose the Seals of this Book, &c. Vers. 2. The use of the Seals, is not simply to shew, that it cannot be known, as Daniel's Sealed Book did shew, that the Things in it could not be known till the End; Dan. 12. 4. But thou, O Daniel, shut up the Words, and seal the Book, even to the time of the End: Many shall run to and fro, and Knowledge shall be increased. This signified not only so, but it is for the setting out the Glory of Christ, and how he was only able to take the Book; and loose the Seals, &c.

1. God causeth a general Proclamation to be made to all Creatures; as some Kings have done for some noble Service, promising a great Reward, as Saul did; 1 Sam. 17. 26, 27.

2. An Angel makes this Proclamation; to shew, that none among Men could; and was a strong Angel, that so his Voice may reach all Creatures. The end of which was;

1. To stir up strong desires in John, and all else that read, to search into the meaning of this Prophecy. What he did exhort to, Chap. 1. 3. and by promise provoke unto; here he does the same again by this Proclamation.

2. To set out the weakness of the Creature still to the end; that so the Honour of Christ might the more appear, in that he only can do this. It is God's manner thus to endear Mercies to us, as he did a Wife unto Adam: He first brought brought all Creatures unto him, that so he might see that there was not a meet help for him among them. So in the Work of Salvation, he lets the Soul try all means first, as to run to Duties, and all other Helps, and then he brings it to Christ, (1 Cor. 1.) that his Power may appear. First, He lets the World try their Wisdom, what that could do, and then sends the foolishness of Preaching to save them that believe, (Vers. 21, 25.) It is a Question among the School-men, Whether any meer Creature could satisfy for Sin? Some say, it might; and some say, it is a needless Question: but it is a necessary thing to know, that a Creature cannot; for it glorifies Christ the more, as that all Creatures here were first challenged; which is an Argument against that also: for if they could not open the Book, they could much less have redeemed us, that being made a greater thing, Vers. 9. where they sing, That Christ was therefore worthy to open the Book, because he had redeemed us.

Use.

Hence learn we to renounce all Kings, Priests, and Prophets, except Christ, who is a Priest to redeem, a Prophet to teach and reveal the Mysteries of God, and a King to execute all God's Decrees. It is good to go over all the Creatures, and to renounce them, and say, I will be saved by none of you. Suppose the Work of Redemption were yet to be done, and God should make this Proclamation (as here): Find me out a Party able to redeem, call a Council, and seek one fit for the purpose. Surely none would be found; and then how would we howl and weep, (as John did here) and count our selves undone! And then, suppose God should set out Christ at last, as one able to save to the uttermost, but this not till he had tried what you could do for your selves: surely this would non-plus you. But God would not thus put you to it, and therefore took another course, and the more to commend his Love unto us, he himself found out Christ, and spake to him to die for us, and do the Work of Redemption to our hands.

Who is worthy!] It is not simply an Act of Power to break open the Seals; but there must be an Authority by worth. So that which puts the value on Christ's Satisfaction, was the worth of his Person. And thus in this Act of opening the Book, a meer Creature might have had as much habitual Grace, and performed as much Duty; but who is worthy! It was a personal worth which carried it: Such an High Priest became us, who is higher than the Heavens, (that is, than the Angels) Heb. 7. 26.

Vers. 3.

None was found worthy]. Observe the word [none] it is not restrained to Man [no Man]; but never a reasonable Creature, either in the Heavens, as the Angels; nor on Earth, as Men, nor under the Earth, as Devils, nor Holy Men departed, who are said to go down to the Grave: all these, nor any of these, were able to open the Book, neither to look thereon], that is, so as to understand it; for else John could, and did look on it, vers. 1.

Now to loose the Seals, and open the Book, is not simply to know God's Mind in his Decrees, but to make the Vision of them to John, and to execute and fulfil them in their Times. It is an Allusion to those who take a Commission, who do it, not only to look on it, but to fulfil it: It is a Commission sealed, so that this Proclamation is in effect thus; Who is able to be God's Commissioner, to take this Book, and make the Visions to John, and in their Times to produce and execute them! And this appears from Chap. 6. 1. And I saw when the Lamb opened one of the Seals, and I heard, as it were, the noise of Thunder, one of the four Beasts saying, Come, and see. Still as the Seals are opened by the Lamb, there is a Vision made to John of what shall be done. Therefore the Lamb is presented, not simply, as one that should take the Book, but as one that hath Eyes and Horns, Eyes of Providence, and Horns of Power to execute. And this agrees with Gen. 49. 9, 10. where Judah is made a Type of Christ, and called a Lion's Whelp, and a Scepter, and a Law-giver, to take God's Laws from him, and execute them; for in that respect it is, that Judah is called a Law-giver in the place above-cited, not in respect of making or giving Laws, but in respect of executive Power to see God's Laws kept: So Christ here takes this Book as to deliver it to us, to execute the Decrees of it. Chap. 2.

And I wept much.] His despairing put him upon weeping: He was called up to Heaven to see Visions, but meets with a stop. This was to set off the Mercy, to try his Heart, and to render his Joy greater. Vers. 4.

God in greatest Mercies, may make greatest Stops; he may so bring to despair, that no hope shall be seen, yet at length shew himself in Mercy. So to John here. So likewise in the first Work of Conversion many times; and so in other great Works. John was called to see Visions, yet a stop and pause was in his view made. Observat.

Here John is comforted; first, by a stander-by, endeavouring to uphold his Heart; and, secondly, by the sight of the Lamb, Use. Vers. 6.

Observe here the Degrees God useth to comfort his People by; first, letting fall something giving hopes of Christ, so to draw the Soul patiently to wait; then, secondly, shewing it Christ himself. God might have at first shewed John the Lamb, but he first comforts him by a stander-by (as Job first heard by the hearing of the Ear) and then his Eye saw the Lamb.

Christ the only Opener of this Book, and Giver of this Prophecy, is diversly expressed.

1. He is called the Root of David, out of Isa. 11. 10. Christ put this Riddle to the Pharisees, How David could call him Lord, if he were his Son? So here it may be ask'd, How could he be called the Root of David, if he were the Son of David, and so a Branch of that Root? The truth is, he is the Root of David, and of all the Saints. He was the Root of his Ancestors, and the Father of his Mother. The Root of any Family, is in Scripture put for the Eldest Son in it, who is as the Root of the rest: So Isa. 14. 30. I will kill thy Root with Famine; that is, thy First-Born, the Root of thy House; for in opposition, he says, and the First-born of the Poor shall be fed; So Mal. 4. 1. Therefore, in that Christ is called the Root of David, is meant, that he is the First-born among all his Brethren, as he is called Rom. 8. 29. and Psal. 89. 27. So God calls David in the Type, but intends Christ thereby, when he says, I will make him my First-born, higher than the Kings of the Earth; and vers. 29. his Seed shall endure for ever. In this is Christ the Root of David, that he is the First-born of every Creature; of whom the whole Family in Heaven and Earth is named.

2. He is called the Lion of the Tribe of Judah; and this in a manifest Allusion to the Prophecy in Gen. 49. 10. wherein Judah (as this place shews) is made a Type of Christ. And it warrants the application of all there unto Christ. Now Judah was called a Lion.

1. Because out of Judah came all the Worthies and Lion-like Men, as Joshua, Othniel, and David, who were all Shadows of Christ; Therefore, Gen. 49. 9. He is called an Old Lion, (as the word is) a courageous hearty Lion. So 2 Sam. 17. 10. valiant Men are said to have Hearts like Lions. Such was Christ, who durst engage his Heart to draw near to God, Jer. 30. 21.

2. Judah had the Kingdom (whereof a Lion is the Emblem); therefore Scepter and Law-giver are attributed to him, vers. 10. So that it is as much as to say, Christ the King by Inheritance (as Judah was) shall overcome.

3. Judah did take the Prey (the Land); it was done by Judah's Worthies; Joshuah, Caleb, &c. And when as a Lion they had taken that Prey, they couched, and had rest, as in Solomon's days, 1 King. 4. 21. which was also prophesied of Numb. 23. 24. Behold, the People shall rise up as a great Lion, and shall not lie down till they have eaten the Prey. And Gen. 49. 9. He couched as an old Lion, who shall raise him up? So Christ, when he had led Captivity captive, sits down quietly in Heaven, as it were, couching and lying in wait, especially till the Day of Judgment;

PART I.

ment, and till afore, when he shall see an opportunity to avenge the Enemies to his Church, when he will appear as an Old Lion, who being roused, suddenly leaps on the Prey, especially in the latter days, when the gatherings of the People shall be unto him, as the context is, then shall his Kingdom be as of a Lion among Beasts, Mich. 5. 8. where the Prophet speaks of Christ's Kingdom and Conquest in the Calling of the Jews, as he had done of Christ's Birth, vers. 2. Now that Kingdom is the scope of this Book.

Vers. 6.

And in the midst of the Elders stood a Lamb as it had been slain, &c.] John had heard of Christ as a Lion, but he sees him as a Lamb. So many a poor Soul is afraid of him, till it comes to see him, and be acquainted with him. But he in the end will be found to be a Lamb, and a Lamb that hath seven Eyes to run to and fro through the Earth for the good of his Saints; and seven Horns, not to hurt them, but to defend them, and to butt his and their Enemies. Therefore let not your thoughts of Christ be all as of a Lion; for though he hath the courage and strength of a Lion, yet he hath the meekness of a Lamb too, unto you; who therefore have cause to wonder at, and praise this mixture in him. Christ is called a Lamb, in allusion to the Sacrifices of the Old Law, which were most commonly, of Lambs; two Lambs a day, Numb. 28. 3. Here he was to be represented as a Priest, (as before, in being called a Lion, he was presented as a King). And therefore it follows, [as it had been slain].

This Lamb stood in the midst of the Throne], nearer than the four Beasts who stood between the Throne and the Elders; and this, for that he is the Mediator between his Church and God.

As it had been slain.] That is;

1. As if he were newly slain, his Blood perpetually remaining fresh, as if he had been slain but yesterday, Heb. 9.

2. But [as] slain, to shew, that he doth not remain slain and dead, but is alive. So Chap. 1. 18. I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold, I am alive for evermore.

Stood a Lamb]: Standing, imports a readiness to afford help. When Stephen died, he saw Christ standing at God's right hand, as ready to receive him. It also shews his readiness to intercede.

Having seven Horns.] Horns are put for Power with which to push: So Chap. 17. 12. and the ten Horns are ten Kings. So by seven Horns here, is meant all Kingly Power. Seven is a number of Perfection; and it shews that Christ hath power to open the seven Seals. And as there are seven Trumpets, and seven Vials, so Christ hath seven Horns, that is, power to fulfil all these. Antichrist riseth like Christ, and comes with Power, Rev. 13. 12. But what discovers him! He hath but two Horns; the Church needs not fear him. The Lamb hath seven Horns to vindicate himself of his Enemies. Fear not Kings neither, though they be Ten; Christ is King of Kings: And fear not the Devil, who is a roaring Lion; for Christ the Lion of the Tribe of Judah is stronger than he, and will bind him sure enough for hurting of thee.

And seven Eyes; which are the seven Spirits of God sent forth into all the Earth]. The Spirit, not in his Personal Subsistence, is here meant, but in his instrumental working by Gifts and Providence; and so is called seven Spirits before, in Chap. 4. 5. which seven Spirits before the Throne, are Gifts in the Church which are from Christ; for he is the Fountain of Spiritual Gifts, and hath the Spirit without measure. But here, by the seven Spirits in Christ, are not meant Gifts powred out, but Eyes of Providence sent into the Earth, by which he knows and sees all things; which alludes to that in Zach. 4. 10. For who hath despised the day of small things? for they shall rejoice, and shall see the Plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel with those seven: they are the Eyes of the Lord, which run to and fro through the whole Earth; and implies the perfection of the Know-

Knowledge and Providence of Christ, to order all Affairs on Earth for his Church's good; as in 2 Chron. 16. 9. and in Zechary before quoted, he ordered the Affairs of the Persian Monarchy for the building of his Church. Christ, as Man, hath Eyes as well as Horns, to discern and guide all things here below: his Humane Nature, is the Instrument of all God's Power, all goes through his Hands; and all the Works of God's Providence go through his view; he knows whatsoever is done in the whole World. But why should Christ be presented here in this Chapter, under these Notions, of a Lion of Judah's Tribe, and a Lamb, and the Root of David, than any other?

Chap. 2.

First; In that he speaks in the Language of the Old Testament, and of John the Baptist, who was under the Old Testament, (for Christ is every where spoken of throughout the Volume of that Book, as appears by Luke 24. 27. where it is said, That Christ, beginning at Moses, and all the Prophets, did expound unto them the things concerning himself). Now Moses called him a Lion, Gen. 49. 9. Isaiah called him a Lamb, Chap. 53. 7. and the Root of David, in the 11th Chapter of his Prophecy, vers. 10. and then John Baptist called him the Lamb of God, which bears the Sins of the World. Wherefore, as all other things in this Book are set forth in allusions to the Old Testament, so these Descriptions of Christ also.

2dly, He gives Christ these Titles in relation to the Work of Redemption, of which mention is made, vers. 9.

Now to that two things are required;

1. A Price to be paid to God, and so, as a Lamb he hath redeemed us to God by his Blood, Vers. 9.
2. Power to deliver us out of the hands of our Enemies; and so, He is a Lion that overcomes.

3dly, It hath relation especially to the opening of this Book, and executing the Affairs contained in it; and so, those Titles are most proper:

For, 1. he needed to die for it, and so is presented as a Lamb slain. For that very Price that Salvation did cost, the same must each Revelation to us cost also. And his being simply the Son of God, and so knowing the Counsels of God written in his Decrees, was not enough for him to make them known to us: but to reveal this Counsel, as in a Book to be opened to us, he must needs die, our Sins otherwise hindering it. Hence it is said, vers. 9. Thou art worthy to open the Book, for thou wast slain, &c. So therefore, as a Lamb, he is said to take Sin away, that hindered the revelation of it to us.

2. As a Lion, he needed courage to encounter God's Wrath; and by breaking through a consuming Fire, to approach his Throne, and take the Book. [Who is this that hath engaged his Heart to draw near unto me!] no Angel durst have presumed to come so near God.

3. As a Lion he needed to overcome Death, and rise to execute the Contents of this Book. They say, that a Lion sleeps the first three days after he is brought forth, but then being roused, by the roaring of the Old Lion, he, after that, sleeps the least of any Creature. So did Christ rise by the Power of his Father, to sleep no more.

4thly, Being risen, he is set forth;

1. As a Lion of Judah; for that in that Prophecy, Gen. 49. 9. as also Psal. 60. 7. Judah, in respect of his Kingly Office, is called, God's Law-giver; not simply, in respect of giving the Laws (that Moses, of the Tribe of Levi, did) but because Judah executed them. Now in that Christ did here take the Book of God's Decrees, and undertook to execute and fulfil them as God's Commissioner, therefore he is in this respect most properly here called, the Lion of the Tribe of Judah.

2. He is here set forth as a Lamb, having seven Horns, and as many Eyes; and this, in as fit and proper a respect as might be, to signify his being one; not only fit to give this Prophecy, but to effect the things contained in it by his Horns and

PART I.

Eyes. And he is said to have seven Horns, and seven Eyes, to shew his full Power to open the seven Seals, and to blow the seven Trumpets, and to pour out the seven Vials. He is such a Prophet as never was, in that he not only makes a bare revelation of things, but brings them to pass, and makes them good. God gave him the Plat-form of Occurrences to come, and Power and Wisdom to order the accomplishment of them. He is also set forth, both as a Lamb and a Lion, to shew his Priestly and Kingly Office; and how, by virtue of both, he makes us Kings and Priests, as they sing, vers. 10. and having his Kingdom in their Eye, they are confirmed in the Promise of it, by a remembrance of him as a Lamb, and a Lion, thus strong and powerful. As a Lamb, he purchaseth the revelation of what concerns his Church, and as a Lamb, with Horns and Eyes, he effects the accomplishment of it. And the scope and sum of this Book being, to shew how Christ rules the World, and his Church, till he hath put down all Rule, and how he then takes the Kingdom himself; therefore he is described as a Lamb, in respect of his quiet governing the Affairs of the World, and the Church, until that his Kingdom, which then, as a Lion, by open force he assumes, and rescues the Church, as a Prey, out of the Enemies Jaws; and that, by the right of a promised Succession from Judah and David; for which cause, those Titles of the Root of David, and Lion of Judah, do here come in.

In a word, first, this Title of his being the Root of David, shews his right to that Kingdom which he is to receive; of which David, and his Kingdom, was but the Type.

2. His being called a Lamb slain, is to shew both a Right and Title to that Kingdom, and also the price by which he purchased it, even his own Blood.

3. His being a Lion, is to shew the Power by which he conquers, obtains, and possesses it. Therefore this Heavenly Chorus, or Company, here, when they once see Christ, by taking the Book, to undertake the accomplishment of this Prophecy; the conclusion of which, is his instalment into his Kingdom: They, in the Joy and Faith of it, shout out before-hand, saying, We shall reign on Earth; as looking on all that was to fore-goe his Kingdom, and to come between this Vision, and his Kingdom to come, all as already done, and having this Kingdom chiefly in their Eye, which should come.

Now from the 8th Verse, to the end of the Chapter, is a Doxology, or a giving praise for the Lamb's taking the Book: Which Song consists of four Parts, or was sung by four Companies: As,

1. Four and twenty Elders, and four Beasts, (the Church of Men upon Earth) they begin and raise the Song, Vers. 8. And when he had taken the Book, the four Beasts, and four and twenty Elders, fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them, Harps and Golden Vials full of Odours, which are the Prayers of Saints.

2. The Angels join their Voices, Vers. 11. And I beheld, and I heard the Voice of many Angels round about the Throne, and the Beasts, and the Elders, and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands.

3. The Creatures come in also, Vers. 13. And every Creature which is in Heaven, and on the Earth, and under the Earth, and such as are in the Sea, and all that are in them, heard I, saying, Blessing, Honour, Glory, and Power, be unto him that sitteth on the Throne, and unto the Lamb, for ever and ever.

4. The Beasts close all, saying, Amen. Vers. 14. And the four Beasts said, Amen. And the four and twenty Elders fell down and worshipped him that liveth for ever and ever.

Observat. 1. Observe in the general, That the Sons of Men are the eminentest Praisers of God: They are the Leaders in this Heavenly Quire, and they conclude the Song. The reason of which is, in that the highest Work that God ever did, is the Work of Redemption, which concerns us, not the Angels, for which notwithstanding, the Angels praise him, in Luk. 2. as also here: yea, all the Creatures rejoice in our Redemption, Vers. 13. But still we are the First-Fruits, we are the Leaders in the Song, whom the Angels follow. It is not said by Them,
Thou

Thou hast redeemed us to God by thy Blood ; That concerns Us, though they sing Praise too. Chap. 2.

1. Learn we from hence to bless God for his Mercy and Goodness to others: Use 1. We see the Angels do so for us, who yet cannot sing as we, with an Interest, and yet they praise God for our Redemption ; and this is their highest Grace.

2. Learn we to bless God in a sense of our Interest: That will raise our Hearts a degree higher, as it was with the Church of Men in their Song here ; Verf. 9, 10.

The Praisers who were of the Sons of Men, are described.

Verf. 8.

1. As having Harps. 2. Golden Vials: In allusion to the Levitical Service in the Temple, where they had Musical Instruments, and Incense in Bowls or Vials ; which Zech. 14. 20. are called, the Bowls of the Altar. Not that Musical Instruments are to be in the Worship of God now, neither Incense ; which as it was the Type of Prayer and Praises, Psal. 141. 2. [Let my Prayer come up before thee as Incense] ; so those Harps were of that Spiritual Melody (as the Apostle calls it) which we make in our Hearts to God ; even of Spiritual Songs, Ephes. 5. 19. Therefore John himself interprets the Odours or Incense here, to be the Prayers of the Saints. And their Hearts are the Golden Vials, having Faith purer than Gold, (as Peter speaks) which is the spring of all their Prayers. And their Harps also are their Hearts ; [Corda] and [Chordæ] are near akin.

And every one is said to have Harps ; for in publick Worship all should join ; the little Strings go to make up a Confort, as well as the great. Though thou hast but little Grace, yet God's Worship would not be compleat without thee. And whereas John calls these Odours the Prayers of the Saints ; it makes nothing for what the Papists would hence collect ; namely, that the Saints in Heaven offer up the Prayers of the Saints on Earth. For,

1. This Company are (as we said before) the Church of Men on Earth.

2. These here offer not the Prayers of others, but their own ; for both themselves make the Song, and that a new one ; and also the Benefit they praise God for in it, is their own, [Thou hast redeemed us to God by thy Blood]. Those words therefore [the Prayers of the Saints], are but the Interpretation which John adds ; and do imply only this, that these were Saints, and their Odours were their Prayers.

1. And they sung a [new] Song. You shall find, in the Psalms, that when David had a new occasion, in a further degree, to praise God ; He says, I will sing a New Song ; now here there was a New Occasion given. Verf. 9.

2. It is called New, in opposition to the Old Song under the Old Testament ; as John 13. 34. I give you a New Commandment ; that is, of the Gospel, called New, in opposition to the Commandments of the Old Law. In the 4th Chapter of this Book, these Elders had sung a Song for the Work of Creation, (vers. last) ; but here they sing for the Work of Redemption, (as vers. 9.) which is the eminent Work of the New Testament, as Creation was of the Old : and therefore it is called a New Song.

3. There is a more special Reason, why they should sing a New Song, for that the New Hierusalem was in their Eye: Christ's Kingdom, and their Kingdom, [we shall reign on Earth] there all things shall be made New. And therefore their Song is now a New Song, for the Instalment of their New King. Thus Psal. 96. 1. (which is a Psalm of this Kingdom of Christ, as appears by vers. 10, and 13.) doth therefore begin with these words. O sing unto the Lord a New Song.

1. Learn we from hence to frame New Matter of Praise, and to have fresh Uses. Affections upon every New Occasion.

2. We are to bless God, both for our Creation and our Redemption ; and to take in the mention of Old Blessings, when we give thanks for New. As a good good Scribe is said to bring forth of his Treasure, New Things and Old : So in Thanksgiving, we are to sing the Old Song, and the New.

The Matter of the Song, is Praise to the Lamb : where we have ;

First ; The Person praised, the Lamb [Thou art worthy] spoken, in answer to the Proclamation afore made ; Who is worthy ! Thou, and Thou alone : for by him, and for him, are all things, Col. 1. 16.

Secondly ; The things for which they praise him : As,

1. For his Death, that he died to redeem them.
2. For his Resurrection, intimated in this, Thou [wast] slain ; the one making us Priests, the other Kings ; as follows, Rev. 5. 10. And to this end Christ died and rose, that he might be Lord and King, Rom. 14. 9.

The word here, which is translated [Redeemed], is ὑπεργατος [bought] in the Original.

For thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy Blood, out of every Kindred, and People, and Tongue, and Nation]. Rev. 5. 9. From hence observe :

Observ. 1. 1. That the Blood of Christ was paid as a Price to God, for the purchasing of our Redemption. So 1 Cor. 6. 20. [bought with a Price]. And in 1 Tim. 2. 6. it is called a Ransom.

Observ. 2. 2. Yet Christ hath not redeemed all Men : for it is not [every Nation and People], but [out] of every Nation the Elect only.

Observ. 3. 3. In that they say, Christ is worthy to receive the Book, because he was slain ; it argues, this Book of the Revelation, is a special Fruit of his Death, and so should be the more prized by us. Before Christ's Death, we have his own Word for it, that he knew not when the Day of Judgment should be : But now, since he was slain, he doth, for he is pronounced worthy to take the Book, and to open the Seals thereof, Vers. 9.

Vers. 10. And hast made us, unto our God, Kings and Priests, and we shall reign on the Earth]. Christ was before set forth as a Lion, for a King, so as a Lamb, for a Priest. And both were mentioned, to shew the Ground of our being both Kings and Priests, [We shall reign on Earth].

From hence observe ;

1. That this comforted the Saints of Old, even the consideration of Christ's Kingdom on Earth : And how peremptory are they ! [We shall reign]. They mention that, because that is the end and scope of the Revelation, and the conclusion of this Book, when the Seals are off, and the Contents of the Book accomplish'd ; and therefore they have that in their Eye. And seeing Christ undertakes the accomplishment of all, (whereof this is the Issue) they are confirmed in the Faith of it.

2. That this Kingdom of Christ on Earth to come, is a far more glorious condition for the Saints, than what their Souls have now in Heaven : for these here over-look that Condition which yet they were to run through ; and their Thoughts fly to this for comfort, [We shall reign on Earth].

Vers. 11. In the 11th Verse comes in the other Company of Angels, and their Song : Who,

1. For their Number, are ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands : So likewise, Dan. 7. 10. where the same Throne and Kingdom of Christ is prophesied of, there is the same Number of his Guard of Angels mentioned ; A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him : thousand thousands ministred unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him : the Judgment was set, and the Books were opened. Observe from hence, that God hath another World of Rational Creatures which we see not. And what a Story then will the latter Day produce ! And what need we fear, when there is so many for us, (as Elisha said to his Servant, 2 King. 6. 16.) for they are all our Guardians too.

Chap. 2.

2. For their Station; They are behind the Elders, yet round about the Throne, having all in a Ring as it were. These are the Guard of the Queen of Heaven, the Lamb's Wife, the Church. So Psal. 34. 7. The Angels of the Lord encompass round about them that fear him. And Heb. 1. ult. it is said, They are sent out to minister for the good of the Saints.

The Song follows in the next Verse, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive Power, &c.] Here observe:

1. That Christ, though he were worthy by Inheritance, yet he was worthy by Purchase also; so the words [that was slain] do imply.

2. As he hath seven Horns, and seven Eyes, so he hath a seven-fold praise.

3. To express their strong desires to give him sufficient Praises, and such as were due unto him; they heap up many good things, of which they pronounce him worthy.

4. None is worthy to be the King of all the World, but only Jesus Christ. And indeed it were too much for any Creature. The Angels themselves were top-heavy of their Glory, which made them reel out of Heaven; but Christ hath the Godhead to poise him. No Beast is naturally a King of Beasts, but the Lion, (says the Philosopher); neither is any worthy to be King of all Creatures, but this Lion of the Tribe of Judah.

The Things they attribute to him, are,

1. Power; that is, Authority over All. So says Christ, John 17. 2. To me all Power is given.

2. Riches; that is, possession of all Creatures; All things are Christ's, and so ours, 2 Cor. 8. 9. Riches of Glory, Knowledg, all are his.

3. Strength, joined to his Authority. He is able to work any thing; not as other Kings, who though they have Authority, have yet no more personal strength than other Men; but Christ hath seven Horns too.

4. Wisdom; and this as large as his Power and Dominions. He knows all that God means to do; and sees all with his own Eyes, not with other Mens, as other Kings do.

5. Honour; that respects what all Creatures bring in to him. They all adore, and bow the Knee to him, Phil. 2. 10.

6. Glory; both in his Personal Excellencies, and also what his Father gives him: He sits at God's right Hand, and governs with him; and in his Person, is the brightness of his Father's Glory; and especially shall be made manifest when he shall come to judg the World.

7. Blessing; which respects that Glory, which for his special goodness to them, his Saints do give him. Others (yea even the Devils) do give honour to Christ, but not Blessing: That the Saints only give; for that respects in God the communication of Goodness. They only bless him, whom he blesseth first. Take notice therefore, that Christ hath all desirable Excellencies in him; Power, Riches, Wisdom, Strength, Honour, Glory, and Blessing.

And every Creature]. Every Creature in its kind shall worship Christ, Phil. Vers. 13. 2. 10, 11. Every Creature comes in here, because when Christ's Kingdom is set set up, they shall be renewed, (Rom. 8. 21.) and be delivered into a glorious Liberty.

The Church of Men began the Song, and these continue it; for it is the Mercy to them is the Matter of their Song, and the Instauration of their King. And therefore we are the more to be stirred up to do it, in that we see even all the Creatures do it, whom it doth not so much concern.

Vers. 14.

And the four Beasts said, Amen.] And with them the Elders join. Observe that the Officers do both begin and end.

Amen]; It seems to be an Ordinance, that this word should be used in the close; and that, first, by the Officers, and then by the People. A Precedent for the practice of this, you have likewise in 1 Cor. 14. 16. Else when thou shalt bless with the Spirit, how shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned, say Amen at thy giving of Thanks, seeing he understandeth not what thou sayest?

CHAP.

C H A P. III.

The Scheme and Division of the whole Prophecy, from the beginning of the Sixth Chapter.

THE Stage being set, Chap. 4. and the Prologue acted, Chap. 5. the Prophecy it self begins, in several Scenes and Visions, Chap. 6. But ere I can proceed to tell you what the six first Seals of the 6th Chapter (or any Vision else) doth concern, I must necessarily give you the Argument, and the Division of the whole Book; which will afford a better prospect, and a more delectable view; than that of the Glory of all the Kingdoms of this World, (although that was made once in the twinkling of an Eye); for what can be more pleasant, than to have an insight (though but a general one) into what is God's Design and Project upon the World, in which the Church is seated, and the condition of the Church it self, in the World, since Christ's Ascension? Now this you have as artificially, and in as many Scenes in this Book presented, as ever was Story in any Poem.

Now for a general insight into this Prophecy, which may serve both as a Compass and a Chart to us, in sailing over this Sea, that we may know still where we are: I premise these general Propositions or Assertions concerning the whole Prophecy:

Prop. 1. That this ensuing Prophecy, from the beginning of Chap. 6. to the end of the Book, contains two Prophecies, distinct each from other. That Book, mentioned Chap. 5. is brought in to represent this Prophecy of the Revelation (as was shewed) to be given to the Church, and executed by Christ the Lamb and Lion of Judah.

Now in that Book, two things are distinctly to be considered, as given with that Book.

1. The Seals on the back-side of the Book.
2. The Contents of the Book it self.

Now, 1. as the Book contains Matter of Prophecy, so do the very Seals also. And accordingly the Visions of those Seals do take up the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th Chapters. Both Books and Seals are mysterious, and do contain Matter of Prophecy. The very Back-side, and Cover of this Book of God, is Prophetical. This Book is all composed of Prophecies; and the use of the Seals, is not simply to shew, that the Matter of this Book was difficult to be known, (as in Scripture phrase a sealed Book imports) but besides, they serve to contain a Matter of Vision to be delivered.

2^{dly}, Add to this, that answerably, vers. 2. of Chap. 5. In revealing and delivering this Prophecy, two Difficulties are distinctly mentioned:

1. The loosening of the Seals.
2. The opening of the Book.

Now if the Seals only did import the difficulty of this Book, it would not have been made a new Difficulty to open the Book. But it is expressly made a distinct Difficulty to open the Book after the Seals are loosened. This therefore was, because to loosen the Seals, was to deliver one Prophecy; and to open the Book; when these Seals were loosened; was to deliver another.

3^{dly}, Accordingly in the 6th Chapter, when the Lamb opens the first Seal, a Vision is seen, and therein a Prophecy delivered. So when the Second is opened, there

PART I. there is mentioned another ; and when the third, a third Vision, and so on in that Chapter : And the 7th Seal produceth seven Angels with seven Trumpets ; six of which are recounted from Chap. 8. to Chap. 10. and the seventh Trumpet is in the end of the 11th Chapter.

In the second place ; When these Seals are, the one of them after the other, taken off, and the Prophecy and Visions of those Seals seen and ended, then an Angel comes with a little Book (alone, without Seals) open, Chap. 10. 2. as containing a New Prophecy for John. Now when that this first of the Seals was past, then accordingly John was bidden to eat it, vers. 9, 10. to be enabled for a New Prophecy. So, vers. 11. it is expressly said, Thou must prophesy again, before many Tongues and Kings. And because a New Prophecy was upon the eating of that Book to begin, hence, vers. 18. 'tis said, The same Voice which he had heard before, did speak from Heaven again. Now that Voice, or Speech, he had heard but twice before, and 'twas both times whenas a New Prophecy was given ; once when the Revelation first began, and the Epistles to the seven Churches, Chap. 1. vers. 10. And then another Time, when this General Prophecy begins, Chap. 4. vers. 1. (which is distinct from that Prophecy of the seven Epistles, in the three first Chapters) which is peculiar to the Seven Churches). And now again, Chap. 10. vers. 8. as beginning a new and third Prophecy.

Observe.

In that the Seals themselves do thus contain a Prophecy ; Observe, That in God's Book nothing is without a meaning. Christ said, Not a tittle of it shall pass ; let it not therefore pass us. The very Cover here is Prophetical ; much more does every word written in it, contain Matter of Instruction. Search the Scriptures narrowly, and slight not a tittle of them, though you understand them not. There is enough in what you understand, to admire ; and in what you understand not, to adore ; as judging it the Word of the Great God, every syllable of which has its weight and value.

Proposition 2. That both these Prophecies, both Seals and Book-Prophecy do run over the same whole course of Times, from Christ's Ascension unto his Kingdom ; containing in them several Events and Occurrences successively, from that Time to this of his Kingdom, with which this Book ends ; namely, the Seal-Prophecy, from Chap. 6. to Chap. 12. doth act over one Story of all Times to the end of Time ; and then the Book-Prophecy, from Chap. 12. (beginning at the same Time again) doth act over another Story of all the same Times, unto the end. So that the same whole Race of Time is run over in both, but with several and distinct Occurrences ; even as the two Books of the Kings and Chronicles, do contain the Stories of the same course of Time from David unto the Captivity. But the Book of the Kings, handles most the Affairs of the Kings of Israel ; and that of the Chronicles more eminently holds forth the Story of the Kings of Judah.

Now to demonstrate this apart ; first of the Seal-Prophecy, and then of the Book-Prophecy.

1. For the Seal-Prophecy ; lay but these three things together, (whereof the two first were never denied by any) and the Point in hand will necessarily follow.

1st, That in the 6th Chapter the six Seals do begin ; with a Prophecy, either from John's Time, or from Christ's. To prove this, besides those Evidences, which when we come to interpret them, will more evidently appear, as that the first Seal begins with Christ his going forth in preaching the Gospel, so to lay the first Foundation of his Kingdom ; which going forth, refers to those Primitive Times : As also that in the fifth Seal, you have the first mention of the bloody Persecution of the Saints, professing the Gospel, in the same Primitive Times ; which appears by this, that they are told, that when the rest of their Brethren, by the succeeding Persecutions, should be killed, they then should have have vengeance upon their Enemies for their Blood spilt ; which argues these in the 6th Chapter, to be those first Persecutions : besides these Evidences (I say) it appears more generally, because the Prophecy it self does but here begin, all in the former Chapters being but a Prologue and a Preparation. And it begins with John's Time at least ; for, Chap. 1. 1. he says, he was to shew to Christ's Servants, things which should shortly come to pass : the things contained in this Prophecy, entring into an Accomplishment presently upon John's writing them, and divulging them to the Churches.

The second thing (which also none ever denied) is, That these Seals and Trumpets, which do in order succeed one another, do contain a continued Prophecy of Events following one another in a succession of Ages downward. To this purpose you may observe the phrase used Chap. 10. 7. [In the days of the Voice of the seventh Trumpet, when it shall begin to sound] which imports, That these several Trumpets do (as Scenes in a Comedy) share among them, the several Ages and Times succeeding one another. And in like manner the Seals have their Days, even as the rest of the Trumpets have their Days proper, and peculiarly given to them. And look how in order they are placed, one before the other, as first, second, and third, &c. so do the several Times or Ages precede or succeed one the other : So as the Days of the first Seal are the first Age, and things done in that Age after John, and so on the second Seal, &c.

3dly, Add to the two former, this Consideration, That the seventh Trumpet, in the 11th Chapter, doth end all Time, and so becomes a Period to one distinct Prophecy of all Time. This appears from Chap. 10. after the Seals were passed over and seen with their Effects, and the six Trumpets had sounded in the 8th and 9th Chapters afore-going ; The Angel swears, vers. 6, 7. of that tenth Chapter, that Time should be no longer ; but in the Days of the seventh Trumpet, all should be finish'd. And therefore, Chap. 11. from vers. 15. (where the seventh Trumpet is brought in sounding in its order, when his Day and turn comes to sound) must needs be esteemed the End of that Prophecy ; for it brings you to the End of all Times ; that is, of the Times which God thought fit to allot this World, and his Enemies in the World, to Rule and Reign. First, The Monarchs and great Men of the World, are to have their Time here ; and then Christ's Time, and the Time of his Saints, is to begin ; as Verf. 15. [The Kingdoms of this World, are become the Kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ, &c.] and Verf. 18. [The Time of the Dead is come, that they should be judged] ; when this World's Hour-Glass is run out, then that of another World is to be turned up to run, when there shall be a New Heaven, and a New Earth. So that, from the first Seal to the seventh Trumpet, is run over all the Time that the Monarchies and Kingdoms of this World (whilst they should be in the Hands of Christ's Enemies) should continue and last. For that is the Time, which towards the End, under the sixth Trumpet, the Angel that came down under that sixth Trumpet, swears, should be no longer. I shall set down the words of his Oath, in the 6th and 7th Verses of that 10th Chapter ; He swareth by Him that liveth for ever and ever, (that is, by God) who created the Heaven, the Earth, and the Sea, and the Things that are in all these his three Dominions, That there should be Time no longer, Verf. 6. But in the Days of the seventh Angel, when he shall begin to sound, the Mystery of God should be finished ; as he hath declared to his Servants the Prophets, vers. 7. Which whole Voice, or Words, of the sixth Angel, do import, 1. That much of that whole Time, had now been past and run out already in the former Visions of the Seals and Trumpets, from the first until now ; And, 2. that now the time allotted by God was brought well nigh to the very last Sands of it. And that the Church might have some warning, and be able to make some guess, and compute when this Time of the World's Monarchy, or Kingdoms of the World, should have an end ; and so, when the Time of the Gentiles should be fulfilled, and be no longer, this Angel doth, towards the expiration of that whole Time, give us, in the 11th Chapter, the true computation of that Time, during which the last Monarchy (you know there are four) on Earth should endure, as that which might serve us to compute the Period of the whole, and the beginning of Christ's visible Kingdom, even the Days of the Beast, or Pope, who is the last part, with his ten Kingdoms of Europe, treading down the Church, or Holy City; which Beast, and his Kingdoms, supporting him as their Head; and whose Time, from his first beginning, to the near approach of that seventh Trumpet, (which shall begin to sound not long after, or but a little afore his very end) is forty and two Months; or (which is all one) one thousand two hundred and threescore Days; that is, so many Years. And with him all other Rule and Dominion on Earth shall end; and Christ shall take the Kingdom, when he shall have destroyed Antichrist through the brightness of his coming, which will grow brighter, as his coming is nearer. And withal, this Angel gives a signal of Occurrences, which should immediately forerun the Period of this Time of his Ruin, whereby the Church might with some nearness discern his approaching Ruin; which he does, in that 11th Chapter, by presenting the Face of that Church, which shall be before the downfall of that Kingdom, and the last Persecution of the Church by the Beast, foregoing his Ruin, that so the Church might have both warning, and not think it strange at the fiery Trial, which at last was to come upon them; as also to be comforted, for it should be the last; and soon after it, the ending of all Time, together with that of the World's Kingdoms.

That there is a New Prophecy that runs over the same whole Race of Time, from the beginning to the end of the World's Monarchies unto Christ's Kingdom, beginning at Chap. 12. and so on to the end of the Book.

Now then the Prophecy of the Seals, which runs over the whole Time of the World's Monarchies, being thus ended, chap. 11. there begins another Prophecy at chap. 12. which runs over the same whole Race and Period of Times, though with other Occurrences. And this is the other part of this General Proposition, which I demonstrate thus, (as I did the former).

First; The 12th Chapter begins a New Prophecy; not only because that the other having ended all Time, this must needs begin again anew: But further, the Vision of the Woman and the Dragon in the 12th Chapter, must needs be of things foregoing the Rise of Antichrist, (the Beast in chap. 13.) and therefore concerneth the Primitive Times, which were the Times before Antichrist. This is proved thus; The Dragon mentioned chap. 12. endeavouring to devour the Woman, is cast down from Heaven: after which, striving to drown her with a Flood, he is prevented: and then John standing (as the best Copies read it) upon the Sand of the Sea, spies this New Beast arising, and the Dragon gives his Throne and Power unto Him, chap. 13. All this therefore which is in the 12th Chapter, must necessarily contain a Story of things done before the rising of Antichrist, and so by consequence must belong to the Primitive Times, as the particular Interpretation will make more clear.

Secondly; Add to this, That unto this Beast, from his first rising in the 13th Chapter, there is allowed him to continue 42 Months, or 1260 Years; which is the very same Period of Time; upon the expiring of which the Seventh Trumpet begins; which (as you heard) had ended all Time before, chap. 11. 15. and then the 14th Chapter which follows, contains the State of the Church during the Times of the Beast, in their separation from him, and opposition of him. And then chap. 15, and 16. contain Seven Vials to ruin this Beast; whereof the last doth end all Time again, even as the seventh Trumpet had done. And this is proved;

1. In that, as when the seventh Trumpet should sound, the Angel sware, Time should be no longer: So when the seventh Vial is poured out, chap. 16. v. 17. a Voice says, It is done; that is, Time is at an end, all is finished.

2. It is said, chap. 15. 1. that these Vials contain the last Plagues, in which the Wrath of God is fulfilled; and therefore must necessarily make an end of all Christ's

Christ's Enemies, and so of their Rule; and together with them, of all their Time.

Chap. 3.

And, 3. the same things are said to be done in the pouring out the seventh Vial, (which is the last of Plagues) that are presented to be done at the sounding of the seventh Trumpet, (which is the last of Woes): Thus at the sounding of the 7th Trumpet, chap. 11. 10. there are said to be Lightnings, Voices, Thunderings, Earth-quakes, and a great Hail: And so likewise upon the pouring forth of the last Vial, chap. 16. 18. there were Voices, and Thunderings, and Lightnings, and an Earthquake, such as never were on Earth before; and so great an Hail, that every Stone weighed a Talent.

But you will say, If there be an end of all when Christ's Kingdom comes, then what do the 17, 18, and 19 Chapters contain? and to what Time will you refer them? seeing the Description of the Kingdom of Christ begins but at the 20th Chapter, and so on. Object.

The Answer (in general) is, That they contain a larger Explication or Vision of some eminent things that fall out under the Time of some of these Vials. And therefore, the 17th Chapter begins thus, [--One of the seven Angels which had the seven Vials, talked with me, and shewed me, &c.] as implying that what follows belonged to their Times. Answer.

But more particularly;

1. The 17th Chapter contains an Interpretation of what was spoken concerning the Beast in chap. 13. and shows who that Beast is. And as in the Prophecy of Daniel, the manner of the Holy Ghost was to interpret the Visions there made; so here. And of the Whore carried by the Beast, he says plainly, by way of Explication, (vers. 18.) it is that Great City that reigneth over the Kings of the Earth, namely Rome. And it was necessary that the Holy Ghost should give an Interpretation of some things in this Book; and of this especially, as being that which gives light to all the rest; which therefore fitly comes in after all.

2. The 18th Chapter, and the 19th, to the 11th Verse, doth contain a more Poetical Description of the ruining of that City, the Seat of this last Monarchy, and therefore is but a more copious Explication of the 5th Vial, (which, chap. 16. 10. is said to be poured out upon the Seat of the Beast). Together with a triumphing Song of the Church's concerning those Times, sung at the Whore's Funeral, and for the approaching Marriage of the Lamb. And this, chap. 19. to vers. 11.

3. From thence to the 20th Chapter, is a more full description of that last War of the Beast, and all the Kings of the Earth, and their overthrow by Christ: which is therefore all one with the last Vial, and the preparation thereunto; as none that shall read from the 13th Verse of the 16th Chapter, unto the end, and compare it with chap. 19. from vers. 11. to the end, will be able to deny. For so it pleased the Holy Ghost, towards the latter end of this Prophecy, to give a more full explanation of the two more eminent Vials, and the Times of them; after he had first (for method's sake) briefly set them together, with the rest, in their order: as in like manner, after he had compendiously set together in one Chapter, (chap. 20.) the Reign of Christ during a thousand Years, and the Universal Judgment that follows, he yet spends the 21 Chapter in a more copious and magnificent Description of the state of the New Hierusalem, and that Kingdom of Christ during those thousand Years.

But then you will say, Unto what will you refer the 11th Chapter, from vers. 1. to vers. 15. which is placed, as it were, between both Prophecies? Object.

I Answer (as before); All that Discourse delivered by Word of Christ's Mouth, between the Seal, and the Book-Prophecy, doth belong unto both; as containing an exact Chronology of that last Period of the Time of the World's Monarchies: By means of which, we may easily compute, how much that whole Time is that both the Prophecies do run over, (as shall be shewed in the Interpretation Answer.) pretation of that Chapter). And withal, there is a Signal given, of such eminent Occurrences befalling the Church, as should be most proper and suitable Signs of the dawning of Christ's Kingdom shortly after to follow; and so, of the ending of the Time of both Prophecies. That as the Old Hierusalem before it was destroyed, had Signs given of its destruction imminent; So hath the New Hierusalem also, before it is reared.

PART I.

Now that these Passages in the 11th Chapter do belong thus unto both Prophecies, appears;

1. In that he speaks of Matters contained, and afterwards mentioned in the Book-Prophecy, chap. 13, and 16. as likewise of Matters mentioned in the Seal-Prophecy; namely, of the ending of the sound of the sixth Trumpet; which is declared in vers. 16th of that 11th Chapter, and called, the passing away of the second Woe.

And, 2. the Angel therein mentions how and when the expirations of the Times of both Prophecies do meet in the sixth Trumpet of the Seal-Prophecy, ending about the time of the date of the Beast in the Book-Prophecy. And thus to insert a Chronological Table (as it were) between both Prophecies, serving them both, and knitting together the Times of both, in one Period; how agreeable is it to the way of Historians, who when they run over much Time, and several Matters, use to affix a Table of Times unto that their History; and so doth our Historical Prophet John in that 11th Chapter.

The third General Proposition, or Head, shall be an enquiry into what is the Matter or Argument prophesied of in this whole Book: as also (more particularly) what are the differing Subjects of these two several Prophecies, the Seal, and Book-Prophecy.

I shall unfold and clear this by several steps and degrees, in these Propositions following.

1. It is certain, that the Subject of both Prophecies are the Fates and Destinies of the Kingdoms of the World, which should be after Christ's Ascension, until he take the Kingdom to himself. Therefore at the end or conclusion of the Seal and Trumpet-Prophecy, there is an acclamation that the Kingdoms of the World were then become Jesus Christ's, (chap. 11. 15.) as having all that while before been under other Monarchs Hands, and of which the former part of the Prophecy had spoken all along. And therefore he says, Time shall be no longer; that is, for the Kingdoms of the World, (that is, not for their Worldly Kingdoms) unto which he opposeth that of Christ's. And therefore the Book-Prophecy also, which begins chap. 12. when it came to be first given, chap. 10. vers. last, hath this Prologue or Preface unto it, Thou must prophesie again before Kings and Nations, &c. [before Kings]; that is, about Kings, (as the Stile of the Prophet is); and that word [again] implies his having prophesied about them before, in the Seal-Prophecy, although other Occurrences in them, and also his being to do it again in this other Prophecy following, in new Occurrences that concerned the Church.

The second Proposition is, That the whole Prophecy concerns only such Kingdoms or Monarchies of the Gentiles, as had to do with the Church of Christ. For,

1. At the beginning of both Prophecies, the Church is made the Stage or Scene upon which all is acted; and so the Prophecies extend to no other Kingdoms than where the Church hath been. And this you may observe throughout both of them; as in the fifth Seal, chap. 6. you have blessed Martyrs then calling for Vengeance for their Blood; and under the Trumpets, (which are Miseries upon Kingdoms) there are Men sealed, as being Servants of God, scattered and mingled amongst those Nations, upon whom those Trumpets blow. And the like may be observed in the following Chapter. So that they extend but to such Kingdoms or Monarchies in the World, where the Church in all Ages

Ages still was ; therefore, not to the West-Indians, nor Tartarians, nor Chineses, nor East-Indians, &c. where the Church hath not been (or not to any considerable purpose) not any of these Kingdoms doth this Prophecy concern. This likewise agrees with God's manner in the Prophets, who prophesied of such Kingdoms only, as had to deal with his Church, thereby to shew Christ's Power in ruling Kingdoms for his Church's good.

2. This Book being written for the comfort of his Church, and all the Judgments therein mentioned, coming out of the Throne of the Temple, which is the Church, and likewise upon the Prayers of the Church ; it contains therefore the Fates of such Kingdoms as the Church should have to do withal. Now if so ; then ;

The third Step, or Proposition, is this, That the Roman Monarchy, or Empire, with the Territories both in the East and West Sea, which were under its Jurisdiction (which Empire when John wrote, was in its height and flourish ; and with which the Church had most to do, and in the Jurisdiction of which the Church had always been chiefly, and in a manner, only seated) must needs be (in the several Revolutions and Changes of it) the main Subject of this Book of the Revelations, together with the State of the Church under it. Now this Empire, and the Dominions of it, was extended well-nigh as far for Circuit, as the Dominions under the Turk in the East, and the ten European Kingdoms in the West. All which, in John's Time, were wholly and solely under the Emperor of Rome. And in this Empire, and throughout all the Territories of it, did God place his Church and Gospel ; and throughout all which the Christian Profession doth remain unto this Day, (even in the East as well as in the West, though darkly and corruptly) and in a manner here only. This Empire therefore, with its Dominions, is in the New Testament called the World, even all the World, for the greatness of it, and because indeed, this was the World which God had set up to act his great Works upon. Thus, Luk. 2. 1, 2. the whole World is said to have been taxed by Augustus : and Acts 11. 28. there is foretold a Famine that should rage throughout all the World, in the Time of Claudius Cæsar. And this World was the Line, (as the Apostle's phrase is) beyond whose reach the Apostles preaching never stretch'd to any considerable purpose. This was their chief Auditory, as appears by Mat. 24. 14. where before the Destruction of Hierusalem, foretold vers. 15, 16. (as a Sign forerunning it) it is said, the Gospel should be preached to all the World ; that is, over all the Dominions of the Roman Empire, (as it was, by the Apostles, before the ruining of it). Now that this Empire, and the Territories under it, (together with the Church in it) should be the main Subject of this Book, there are these Reasons for it ;

1. Because (as hath been said) it is the chief (and in a manner only) seat of the Church ; which was, and still is extended so far, and no further. And by the Power of this Empire, and the several Successions of it, hath the Church been mainly oppressed in all Ages. If therefore this Book-Prophecy be of the Church, then surely, of the Church under this Empire ; and if of the Judgments upon any Kingdoms for their Oppression of the Church, then surely upon this, for the Church's sake. And if the Judgments which are in this Book, set out under Seals, and Trumpets, and Vials, do come for the Church's sake, and be made to fall upon her chief Enemies ; then they must eminently light upon this Grand Enemy, (for such it hath been) and so, this Prophecy must note out the Judgments and Wars that ruined the Empire for its persecuting the Saints ; who, chap. 6. 10. do cry out for Vengeance ; and the Trumpets are the hearing of their Prayers, chap. 8. 3.

2^{dly}, The Roman Empire (and the Successions of it East and West) was that Fourth and Great Monarchy that should oppress the Earth ; now only left, when Christ Ascended. Now in the Prophecies of the Old Testament, their main Subject, was the Great Monarchy then in being, or presently to come. So in Daniel, two or three Chapters are chiefly taken up with the Successions of the Grecian Monarchy, and then of the Roman. And Daniel foretold that this
Roman

PART I.

Roman should be the most terrible of all the rest. And therefore surely God in this Prophecy of the New Testament, doth (according to his manner in the Old) lay out the Fates of that Fourth Monarchy now only left; as he had done of those others that were gone and past e're Christ ascended.

3dly, This must needs be so, especially seeing the scope of this Book is the enstallment of Christ into his Kingdom, and so, to shew how, in the mean time, he puts down all Rule that keeps it from him, and takes it to himself; so erecting a Fifth Monarchy, succeeding the other Four. Now then, this Roman Monarchy, in the several Successions of it in the East and West, being the chiefest Rule and Power that was left on Earth for Christ to put down, (and which his own Kingdom was immediately to succeed) it is therefore fitly made the Subject of this Book, to shew how he puts down the Rule of it, and preserves his Church under it. And so it answers yet more fully unto the like scope of Daniel's Prophecy; who being to prophesie of the Kingdom of Christ, chap. 7. 9. God doth first, on purpose give him a Vision of the four Monarchies that were to precede that of Christ; and especially insist on the fourth, namely, this of Rome, (vers. 7.) as being that which Christ, after his Ascension, was to encounter with, and put down, e're himself take the Kingdom. And then he shews Daniel how Christ will ruin it (vers. 11.) and then take the Kingdom to himself. So that this Revelation, which is the Prophecy of the New Testament, doth more largely and particularly set forth that which Daniel in the Old Testament (according to the Dispensation then) saw more generally, even the ruin of the Fourth Monarchy, which Christ's Monarchy succeeds.

4thly, That this should be the Subject of this Prophecy, suits also with the chief Prophecies delivered by other of the Apostles in the New Testament; which were reduced to three Heads;

1st, Foretelling the Ruin of the Roman Empire, which, 2 Thess. 2. Paul calls a taking out of the way him that lets.

2dly, The Discovery of the Pope (who is the last Head of that last Fourth Monarchy) and his Ruin.

3dly, The Kingdom of Christ to succeed.

These three things were ordinarily preached by the Apostles, as appears plainly by 2 Thess. 2. from the 2d verse to the 9th, where Paul (having spoken of these three things) says, vers. 5. Remember you not, that when I was with you, I told you these things? So that the Apostles did certainly tell the Churches of these three things, which surely therefore are the main Subject of this Prophecy also; but they are more largely delivered unto John. Wherefore this Revelation may answerably be divided into these three Parts.

1. The Story of the Roman Empire, and the taking of it out of the way; which is the Subject of the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th Chapters of this Book.
2. The Discovery of the Man of Sin, and his Ruin, Chap. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, and 19.
3. Christ's Coming, and Kingdom, Chap. 20. 21.

Now then, the fourth and last Consideration shall be spent in an enquiry after the Difference of the Subjects of these two Prophecies, the Seal and Book-Prophecy: For in this Roman Empire, and the several Successions and Revolutions of it, there are these two things to be considered in the Story thereof:

1. The Empire, or Political Body, and the State thereof.
2. The Church under it, and the State and Condition thereof.

And therefore some Writers have written the Ecclesiastical Story (or Story of the Church in all Ages) apart by it self. Others have writ the Story of the Empire, and its several Revolutions. As among us here in England, (to give you you this Instance only for an illustration) the Book of Martyrs is chiefly a Story of Church Affairs, and the Conflicts of it with Antichrist, in England; but Speed's Chronicle is chiefly a Story of the Affairs Civil, falling out in that Kingdom in the several Invasions, Wars, Conquests, and Intestine Broils of it. Now the like Method hath the Holy Ghost been pleased to observe in this Prophetical Story of this Empire, and the Church spread through the Territories and Dominions of it. These two Prophecies before mentioned, (namely, the Seal and Book-Prophecy) do share these two between them. The one does apart contain (more particularly) the several Wars, Events, and Revolutions of the Empire it self; and that is the Seal-Prophecy. And the other (which is the Book-Prophecy) contains the several Conditions and States of the Church of Christ in all Ages. Now this difference of the Subjects of those two Prophecies doth appear in the several Characters, and in the very place and scituation of the Visions themselves.

Chap. 3.

First, The differing Shews or Faces of the Visions in these Representations, do argue this difference; for in the first Prophecy, you read of seven Seals, and four Hornes, chap. 6. and then of Trumpets, chap. 8. and 9. noting sometimes Sealed Judgments and Devastations by Plagues, Famines, and Wars; of which latter, Trumpets are in all Nations the Signal and Symbols, and in Scriptures used to signify [Wars]; and so do note out the several Judgments by Conquests and Devastations by War brought upon the Civil State of the Empire. But in the Book-Prophecy, the chief Actors are Women; fit Emblems of the Church. Thus, chap. 12. it speaks of a Woman with Child, ready to be delivered; and, chap. 14. of Virgins, free from her Fornications; then of a Whore representing the false Church, chap. 17. and 18. and then, chap. 19. of a Bride preparing, and prepared, personating the State of the Church, when Christ shall come to fetch her, and bed her everlastingly in his Fathers House and Kingdom. Thus artificial is the Holy Ghost in handling things of differing Nature, apart.

2dly, Answerably; The differing scituation and place which these two Prophecies had, do shew this. The Seals which contain the Prophecies of the Empire, were on the back-side, as containing Matters (extra Ecclesiam) without the Church; but the Book it self contains things within: even as the Church is said to be within, 1 Cor. 5. 12. For what have I to do to judg them also that are without? do not ye judg them that are within? Whereas those that are not of the Church are said to be without: Rev. 22. 15. For without are Dogs, and Sorcerers, and Whoremongers, and Murderers, and Idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a Lie. And so the Prophecy thereof is cast to be, as it were, without the Book, even upon the Seals of it; as denoting that the Seal-Prophecy treats of things Outward, and of the temporal State of the Church: whereas the Book-Prophecy treats of Spiritual Things within the Church. And as in the General Division this appears, so it will appear in the interpretation of all particulars throughout this Book: for John puts things of a sort together; as the best Historians use to do. Only take this Caution along with you; that neither in the one nor the other of these Prophecies, the things of the Empire or the Church are so handled apart, as that nothing at all of the Church-Affairs were handled in the Seal-Prophecy, or that nothing of the Affairs of the Empire were mentioned in the Book-Prophecy. But it is so to be understood, as that eminently the Ecclesiastical Story is contained in the one; and the Imperial Story in the other. For as in the Books of Kings and Chronicles; though the first does more eminently and setly contain the Story of the Kings of Israel; yet so, as Matters of Judah are withal intermingled: And again, in the Story of Judah, Israel's Affairs are interwoven; even so is it here: Some things appertaining to the Church, are scatteredly mentioned in the Prophecy concerning the Empire; and some things touching the Empire are diffused through the Prophecy of the Church, or the Book-Prophecy.

 PART I.

Now briefly then to sum up all this Book ;

It is a Trage-comical Vision of the Occurrences of the World, and of the Church in the World, through all Times and Ages : whereof this may truly be the Title, [The Story of Christ's Kingdom, and the Removal of the several Difficulties of his coming to it].

Chap. 4. The Stage for this is set up in chap. 4. where there is a representation of the Universal Church in all Ages, set forth according to the exact Pattern of a Church Visible and Instituted ; into which all Saints on Earth should be cast.

Chap. 5. Then enters the Prologue, chap. 5. in which is set forth Christ's taking upon him the Kingdom and Government, by taking the Sealed Book ; as thereby shewing, he undertaketh to be God's Commissioner, to execute the Decrees contained in this Book, and to give the Vision of it unto John. At which Enstallment of him into his Kingdom, there is a Song of Praise sung to the Lamb, by the four and twenty Elders, and four Beasts, (who are the Chorus in this Show) with a triumphing Assurance, and Expectation of what will be the happy Conclusion of all, even, our reigning on Earth with him, say they there.

Now the Scene or Place where all was to be acted, which these Visions here hold forth, is the Roman Empire, and the several Dominions of it in the East and West, called, οικουμένη, the whole World.

Then begins the Story it self at Chap. 6. The General Argument of which is, That whereas Christ's Government was to be executed and seen ; First, In putting down all opposite Rule and Power that stand in his way, as St. Paul speaks I Cor. 15. 24, 25. Then cometh the End, when he shall have delivered up the Kingdom to God even the Father, when he shall have put down all Rule, and all Authority, and Power. For he must reign, till he hath put all Enemies under his Feet. And, secondly, in a visible taking the Kingdom to himself and his Saints (which makes the Fifth Monarchy) Accordingly here the Story of this Book,

1. Shews how Christ doth put down all the opposite Rule, and Power, and Dominion, whatsoever, in the fourth and last foregoing Monarchy of the Romans, in the several Successions and Revolutions of it, one after another, till that he hath worn them all out that were ordained to stand up in it. And these many Difficulties of his coming to, and obtaining his Kingdom, do exceedingly serve to make the Story of it appear the more glorious.

Then, 2. it closeth and endeth in a glorious visible Kingdom which Christ sets up on Earth, and peaceably possesseth together with his Saints, as the Catastrophe of all.

More particularly the Story is this, according to the several Contents of each Chapter.

Christ when he ascended up to Heaven, found the Roman Monarchy (whose room he was to possess) stretched both over East and West, even over all those parts of the World, where he was to seat his Church and Kingdom ; and all this wholly in the Hands, and under the Dominion and Power of one Monarch or Emperor ; under whose Government all that were subjected, were altogether Heathenish, and Idolatrous, and wholly brought under the power of Satan, who was set up therein, as the God of this World.

Chap. 6. Hereupon, Christ the designed King first sets upon the Conquest of Satan's Dominion and Worship in it ; and by the preaching of the Gospel, overturns that Chap. 12. vast Empire as Heathenish, throws down Satan from his Throne, and height of Glory in it, and brings it into subjection and acknowledgment of himself as King ; and turns both it and its Emperors to Christianity, within the space of three hundred Years. This is the sum and mind of the sixth Chapter of the Seal-Prophecy, and likewise of the 12th Chapter of the Book-Prophecy.

But this Empire, though wholly turned Christian in outward Profession, yet having persecuted his Church whilst Idolatrous, and also after it was Christian, (when

(when Arrian) therefore at the Prayers of the Martyrs slain (mentioned chap. 6. 11.) and in vengeance of their Blood (chap. 8. 4.) he further proceeds to ruin the Civil Imperial Power of the Empire it self, by the Trumpets in the 8th and 9th Chapters. And the Empire then becoming divided into two parts, the Eastern and Western Empire, (as they were commonly called) first he ruins the Imperial Western State and Power in Europe, by the four first Trumpets, the Wars of the Goths by four several steps, in the 8th Chapter; and then the Imperial Eastern State (which stood after the other) and this by two degrees; first, by the Saracens, then by the Turks, (and these two are the fifth and sixth Trumpet) which two possess all that Eastern Part unto this day; and this is the Contents of the 9th Chapter only, before these Trumpets bring these Evils upon the Empire; he seals up a Company of 144000 Christians in the Eastern Part (as chap. 7. vers. 2.) to be preserved and continued in the true profession of his Name, under these two first and longest (and there called the Woe, Woe) Trumpets, which were to fall upon the Eastern Part of the Empire, in which these Servants of his there sealed were to be; as appears by chap. 9. 4. And this their sealing is the sum of the seventh Chapter. Chap. 3.
Chap. 9.

Now then that old Roman Empire, as under those Emperors, being thus in both parts of it removed; yet still, as that Eastern part of it is left possessed by the Turks, chap. 9. so this Western part of it, in Europe, being by the Goths broken into ten Kingdoms, they all consented to give their Power to the Beast, the Pope, who so becomes a Successor to the Western Emperors, and possesseth their Seat and Power, (though under another Title) and so heals that wound given to the Roman Monarchy, and restores it. And this Beast, the 13th Chapter describes, and gives the Vision of his Rise, Power, and Time of his Reign; which the 17th Chapter doth expound and interpret. Chap. 13.
Chap. 17.

Under whose Antichristian Tyranny (as great as that of the Turks themselves towards Christians) Christ yet preserveth another-like Company, of one hundred forty and four thousand Virgins (who are in like manner sealed) Christians, in the West (as under the Tyranny of the Turks and Saracens he had done the like in the East, chap. 7.) himself so keeping possession still, by preserving his Church under both these Parts of the Empire, as being his Inheritance. And this Company of 144000 Christians, opposite to the Whore, are there called Virgins; and their separation from her, and opposition to her, is recorded in chap. 14. Chap. 14.

But now, these two, the Pope and Turk (both Enemies to Christ) thus succeeding in the Empire, and sharing the two parts of it between them; we see that Jesus Christ is still as far off from his Kingdom designed him (which is to be set up in these Territories) as he was before; for Mahumetanism, under the Turk, tyranniseth in the one; and Idolatry, under the Pope, over-spreads the other; even as Heathenism had done over the whole Empire at first. And so Christ hath a new Business of it yet, to come unto his Kingdom, and as difficult as ever.

Therefore he hath seven Vials, which contain the last Plagues (for he means to make this the last Act of this long Trage-comedy) to dispatch the Pope and the Turk, and wholly root them out, even as the Seals had done Heathenism, and the Trumpets had done the Civil Power of the Empire: And the Plagues of these Vials, are the Contents of the 15th and 16th Chapters. Ch. 15, 16.

The first five Vials do dissolve, and by degrees ruin the Pope's Power in the West; then the sixth Vial breaks the Power of the Turk in the East; so making way for the Jews (whom he means to bring into the fellowship of his Kingdom, in their own Land) there called the Kings of the East.

But by these six Vials, their Power and Kingdom being not wholly ruined; both the Turkish and Popish Party do together join, using their utmost Forces (and together with them, all opposite Kings of the whole World) against the Christians, both of the East and West, (who when the Jews are come in, and converted, do make up a mighty Party in the World); unto the help of whom, against those and all opposite Power whatsoever, Christ himself comes, and PART I. and makes but one Work of it, with his own Hand from Heaven destroying them. And so it is done, as the Voice of the last Vial is, in the 16th Chapter.

Chap. 17. The 17th Chapter is an Interpretation concerning the Beast, shewing who he is, and where his Seat is.

Chap. 18. The 18th Chapter sings a Funeral Song of Triumph for the Whore's Ruin, (which is the fifth Vial) after which comes in Christ's Kingdom, the New Hierusalem, and the preparations to it. Which New Kingdom of his shall be made up,

1. Of Eastern Christians, (who endured the Bondage of the two Woe-Trumpets, the Saracens and the Turks) yet continuing to profess his Name. And therefore unto those 144000 in the seventh Chapter, is said to succeed an innumerable Company, with Palms in their Hands, who have the same very Promises of the New Hierusalem made to them, that are mentioned in the 21st Chapter, which shews their Interest therein.

Chap. 19. And, 2. it is made up of Western Christians, whose 144000 in chap. 14. do arise to an innumerable Company also; who therefore after the rejection of the Whore, Chap. 19. from vers. 1, to 9, are brought in singing in like triumphant manner, decking themselves for the Marriage, in fine Linnen.

But, 3. and especially, it is also to be made up of Jews dispersed both East and West, and over all the World; and from them hath this Kingdom the Name of the New Hierusalem.

With whom, 4. come in (as Attendants of their Joy) other Gentiles too, who never had received Christ before. The Glory of the Gentiles is said to be brought into it.

And so both East and West, Jew and Gentile, and the fulness of both, do come in, and become one Fold under one Shepherd for a thousand Years, and one Kingdom under this Root of David their King, [King Jesus the Conqueror] even as it first was under one Heathen Idolatrous Emperor, when Christ had first set to conquer it. And so that Prophecy of this his Kingdom, in Isa. 59. 19. is fulfilled; where, after the final destruction of all Christ's Enemies, foretold vers. 18. he says, They shall fear his Name, [from the East unto the West] and the Redeemer shall come unto Sion: which words Paul interprets of the Jews final Call, and this Restauration of the World with them; Rom. 11. 26. Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly.

C H A P. IV.

Of the Six first Seals in Chapter the sixth.

HAVING thus given a Scheme and Division of the whole Prophecy, and a general Argument of the Story of it, briefly set together in one view, I will now run over each Chapter apart; yet I shall largely insist only on the sixth Chapter, as being taken off by other Occasions from commenting so copiously, with Observations, upon the rest, which I shall pass over with a more slight glance of Interpretation, (as hastening to the second Part, which I more especially aim at); which although it arise not to a full and copious Commentary, shall, notwithstanding, serve to hold forth that to be the true Portraict of the Holy Ghost's Mind in this Story, which in the General Argument foregoing I have given it out to be.

The Seal-Prophecy concerns the State of the Empire from John's Time downward. Which State (as all Story will represent unto you) is to be considered, Either,

1. Whilst Heathenish, when false Gods were worshipped, as Jupiter, Mars, &c. and the Professors of Christian Religion were persecuted and massacred; during all which time, the Empire stood whole, undivided, and entire, under the Government of one Emperor, under whom both East and West were subjected, and this for the space of three hundred Years after Christ.

Or else, 2. when turned Christian, as by Constantine it was; from whose time the whole Empire more generally was subjected to the outward Profession of Christ; but withal, it began to be divided and broken into two Parts: Which Rent was afterwards established by Theodosius; the Eastern part of Europe (whereof Constantine made Byzantium, from him called Constantinople, the Seat) being allotted to one Emperor, (which Eastern Part the Turk now possesseth); and the Western Part (which had Rome for the Seat of it) unto another; (which Western Part the Pope for many hundred Years hath entirely had under him); so that the one was called the Eastern, and the other the Western-Empire. And according to this Division, the Seal-Prophecy divides it self into two parts.

1st, The first six Seals, Chap. 6.

2^{dly}, The first six Trumpets, which the seventh Seal brings forth in the 8th and 9th Chapters; from the Woe of which Trumpets, the Servants of God are sealed; Chap. 7:

Here, in the sixth Chapter, the first Prophecy begins, and that with the Primitive Times: Of which these two Things are Evidences;

1. That in the first Seal is the going forth, (the preaching of the Gospel) conquering, and to conquer, (for as then, and in that manner it had begun). This was the Foundation of all God's after-proceedings, the first Corner-Stone of Christ's obtaining and setting up his Kingdom.

2. That the fifth Seal mentions the Martyrdom of Saints, crying out for Vengeance: which being the first mention of any such Martyrdom in this Book, must needs refer to those famous first Persecutions under Heathenish Rome, which was followed by the Arrian a little after; as vers: 11.

These six Seals are several steps and degrees, setting forth the moving Causes and Means of God's plaguing and ruining the Empire of Rome as Heathenish.
Christ

PART I.

Christ being to put down all adverse Power, he finds not only this Empire to stand in his way, but Gentilism, the worship of false Gods, and of Satan, under those Idols of Jupiter, Saturn, Mars, &c. First therefore he encounters Satan's Worship, Heathenism; which had all the Power of that Empire to back it: and then in the Trumpets he encounters the Empire it self: He went forth conquering, and to conquer, and that but by degrees. The first Judgments on that Empire, left the Empire standing. Therefore, Seal 5: the Martyrs, after those Punishments foregone, in the second, third, and fourth Seal, do yet cry for Vengeance on the Empire it self.

They are called Seals;

I. In a General Relation to this whole Prophecy; it being,

1. A Book of Decrees to be executed by Christ, and these are the Seals of them.

2. This Book being not to be opened till the Time of the End, (as Daniel foretold) is sealed up till just before the end of all; as there 'tis prophesied, Dan. 12. 4. But thou, O Daniel, shut up the Words. and seal the Book, even to the time of the End: many shall run to and fro, and Knowledg shall be encreased. Towards this End of all you have (mark this) the same Angel in Dan. 12. coming in the 10th Chapter of this Revelation, with a Book in his hand open; which as it was to give a New Prophecy, so to shew, that when all the Seals were off, (that is, when these Judgments were all executed on the World) then the Book should be understood; and accordingly, not till all these Seals were passed, was the Revelation understood.

II. More particularly they are called Seals, because,

1. They are Judgments decreed by God, that should certainly come upon that Empire. Now what is decreed inevitably, is said to be sealed. So the Salvation of the Elect is said to be, 2 Tim. 2. 19. [the Foundation of God standeth sure, having this Seal, the Lord knoweth who are his]. So also Judgments decreed are said to be sealed, Deut. 32. 34. [Is not this laid up in store with me, and sealed up among my Treasures!] even to punish them; for so it follows, [to me belongeth Vengeance, &c.] Thus Job 14. 17. My Transgression (says he) is sealed up in a Bag; that is, God had before appointed surely to punish it.

2. They are said to be sealed, in that they are Judgments hidden, stealing in upon the World e're they were aware of them, and which they knew not the meaning of. And accordingly we find, by the Apologies of Tertullian, Cyprian, Arnobius, and others, that the Heathen Romans observing such strange unheard of Famines, Civil Wars, and Plagues of Pestilence (typified out here by the Red, Black, and Pale Horses) did exceedingly wonder at the Reason of them, and laid it on the new Sect of the Christians, as with whom their Gods were angry for contemning their Worship; for it was never so with them before, and therefore they attributed it to that Cause. These Judgments were sealed, and Christ here opens the Cause of them, the contempt of the Gospel.

3. They are Sealed Judgments, for Pledges and Assurance of all that follow. That is the use of Seals to give Assurance. For that end is the Seal of the Spirit: And so here, there being other things in this Prophecy foretold, as the Ruin of the Empire it self, the Rising of Antichrist, and of the Turk, the Ruin of them both, by the seven Vials, and then Christ's Kingdom. That all these things should certainly come to pass in their Time, God first sent these Judgments as Seals; that as we read in Story the truth of these to be evidently fulfilled, so we may assure our selves of the accomplishing all the other.

Observe

Observe from this General,

A ground of confirming your Faith about all these things prophesied of by God; in that the fulfilling of one is a Seal, assuring that the other shall be fulfilled. That Heathenism is ruined (and no Adorers of those Pagan Gods left (as

(as this Chapter shews) which was more firmly rooted (being of 4000 Years continuance) than ever Popery was, is a Seal to us that Popery shall be ruined. You see many things past, and fulfilled; The Beast of Rome (the Pope then, when John wrote this, not Risen) is now up in your Days; which may confirm your Faith, that he shall as certainly be ruined: For the same Prophecy foretells his Fall, chap. 18. as his Rise, chap. 13. and that after this there is a glorious Kingdom to come, of which all these are Seals. You find (in the 11th Chapter) before the End, the Temple measured anew, and the outward Court of Carnal Worshippers and Worship cast out; and you see it now in your days fulfilled; yea, your selves fulfil it: You may therefore as certainly expect that which follows in the same Chapter, and prepare for it. Thus Zechary begins his Prophecy, so to assure them of the truth of it; Did you ever know Prophecy fail! My words, (says he, Zech. 1. 6.) did they not take hold of (or arrest) your Fathers? by the Judgments threatned, and like as the Lord thought to do unto us, —so hath he dealt with us; therefore believe the rest.

Now the four first Seals are represented unto us, under the Vision of four Horses, in allusion to the Visions in Zechary, Chap. 1. and Chap. 6. Christ in the first Chapter of that Book, vers. 8. is presented riding on a Red Horse; and behind him stood other Horses, Red, Speckled, and White: And vers. 10. they are interpreted to be Angels, who walk to and fro through the Earth; and, chap. 6. 5. to be four Winds, or Spirits, that go forth from standing before the Lord of the Earth. So the good Angels, Heb. 1. 14. are called ministering Spirits sent forth, &c. Thus Psal. 104. 3, 4. compared with Heb. 1. 7, 14. Ezek. 1. where they are called Winds, as in that of Zech. 6. 5. So in like manner are the Evil Angels sent forth to do mischief, as 1 Kings 22. 21. and Job 1. 7. The Angels are the Executioners of all God's great Designs; and therefore whatsoever is done in this Book by Men, is still said to be done by Angels. So chap. 8. 2. Seven [Angels] with seven Trumpets, &c.

Here the Vision is of Horses going forth in like manner with Commission from God. And this allusion to those Horses, who there were Angels, shews either, that these Executions, under these Seals, (by whomsoever visibly executed) were yet performed under the Conduct of Christ the first Horse, (presented here, as also in that of Zech. 1. as an Angel) accompanied with other Angels his Followers, who are those other Horses; or else however, to shew, that as those Angels upon Horses in Zechary went their circuit over the Earth, so that here were Commissions sealed to these Executioners, to traverse and compass the Earth, as Angels use to do. God begins here to war with the World, and sends out four Horse-men to give the first On-set. That this Vision is presented under Horses, is but for variety sake.

The Revelation takes all the eminent Visions of the Old Testament, and makes use of them. The Elegancies of all the Types in the Prophets, serve but to set forth and adorn the Visions of this Book: as if you should make up one beautiful Picture out of all Beauties, by taking what-ever is elegant and excellent in any one. The Vision of the Throne, chap. 4. is borrowed from Isaiab, and Ezekiel; That of the Book sealed, from Daniel; this of Horses here, from Zechary; and so that of the Olive Trees, and Candle-sticks, chap. 11. from Zech. 4. &c.

Observe from hence;

I. The Perfection of this Book: It is a Posy of all Flowers, a Vision composed out of all Visions; as Solomon's Song was a Song of Songs. All the Types in Moses's Law, and all the Stories and Visions of the Prophets, are borrowed to adorn it. Obseru. 1.

II. Observe, That the Occurrences under the New Testament, and the Story of the Church under it, have all the Perfections of all kinds that were under the Old. For in the New Testament the Old is more eminently acted over, in all Passages of Providence. Was there a Temple? Here is one more glorious; this second exceeds the first. Was there an Egypt, a Sodom, a Babylon? Here also is one far worse than all those were. So Rome is called in this Book, ch. 11. and and and chap. 18. Was there a restoring of the Temple, decayed in the Captivity of Babylon? Here is the like, and that at twice, and by degrees, as then. Had they a Hierusalem? The Revelation hath a better, a New Hierusalem. Did the Bond-man of Old persecute the Free? even so it is now; Gal. 4. 24, 29. Which things are an Allegory; for these are the two Covenants; the one from the Mount Sinai, which gendreth to Bondage, which is Agar. But as then he that was born after the Flesh, persecuted him that was born after the Spirit; even so it is now. We have all the same things befall us, that befall them, and that, more eminently, as Paul said, Are they Apostles? I much more. Had they Persecutors? We much more, and those worse. Had they Pharisees that sinned against the Holy Ghost, and Crucified Christ? So hath the New Testament, such as shall after this great Conviction wrought by the Gospel, prove like a Generation of Pharisees, scorched with the heat of Hell Fire, (as in the Fourth Vial) and that shall kill the Witnesses, ch. 11. The Allusion is to these Times. The Apostle hath said it in one word, and given the Reason of it; 1 Cor. 10. 11. All these things happened unto them for Types: So also did all their Visions, being written for our Admonition, upon whom the Ends of the World are come, (you may read it, Perfection of the World is come): We have the Perfection of every thing under the Old Testament, both good and bad.

This may serve to give a general Light into the Stories and Visions of this Prophecy. As for the several Visions themselves;

The first Horse is a White one, and his Rider Crowned, &c. This Rider is Christ himself, going forth (in the preaching of the Gospel) conquering and to conquer; alluding unto Psal. 45. 4, 5, 6. where Christ having a Kingdom to possess, as vers. 6. [Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever] (speaking of Christ, as appears by Heb. 1. 8. But unto the Son he saith, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a Scepter of Righteousness is the Scepter of thy Kingdom). He is set out in his going forth to conquer it; for he must win and wear it: And he is described as here, [In thy Majesty prosper thou, ride thou] (or ride thou prosperously) that is, go forth conquering; and that being accoutred with Bow and Arrows, as vers. 5. [Thy Arrows are sharp in the Hearts of the King's Enemies] that is, his own Enemies, who is King.

Now answerably this Book also tells us, that Christ was to have a Kingdom; and here you have his first setting out to conquer it. The first Foundation of his Kingdom laid, was the preaching of the Gospel in the Roman Empire by the Apostles, which was now begun; therefore he is said to go forth conquering already. And he goes first forth; for all the other Horse-men do but attend him; He is the General of these Horses. Thus likewise, in Zech. 1. he is described with other Horses with him. And he goes forth first on a White Horse; which, as it was a sign of Triumph, that he was to conquer, (for so in Triumph their Chariots were drawn with White Horses) so especially of Meekness and Candour, offering at first Conditions of Peace in the Gospel, unto the Empire of Rome, and to all Nations, if they would submit to him as their King. God had given him the Nations for his Inheritance, and he goes forth peaceably to challenge it: with Conditions also, that the World should yet hold their Crowns of him, only turn Christians they must, and do Homage to him as their King. This the Colour of White denotes; for here it is opposed to the colour of the Red Horse that followed, which Colour betokened Blood. Thus Tamerlane, before he denounced War, first hung out a White Flag, in token of Peace offered. Therefore in Psal. 45. 4. Christ is bidden to ride on, because of the Word of Meekness: And the Progress of the Gospel is compared to that of an Horse and his Rider; for it had its progress over the Earth, from one Country to another, by Commission; [Their sound went out to all the Earth] Rom. 10. 18. [Come to Macedonia and help us] Acts 16. 9. His Weapons to conquer, if Men yield not, are here but Arrows: but, chap. 19. when his Conquest is to be finished, you have him with a Sword: In Psal. 45. he is described with both. The Threatnings of the Gospel are Arrows, striking secretly, and dartingly, into Men's Hearts, and wounding them mortally; hæret lethalis arundo.

He is Crowned; for God (when Christ first ascended) made him a King. We see Jesus—crowned with Glory and Honour,—though yet we see not all things put under him, Heb. 2. 8, 9. yet we see him crowned; for all must be subject to Him.

He goes forth conquering: for whether Men obey, or not, Christ still conquers. Paul speaks like a Conqueror, 2 Cor. 2. 14. God always causeth us to triumph in Christ: For if Men turn, there is a triumph of Grace pardoning, and so subduing Traitors; and if not, it is a favour of Death, like a Box of Venemous Ointment which poisons by the smell.

Now if you ask, How the preaching of the Gospel can be a step of Ruin, and a Sealed Judgment, it being in it self so great a Blessing? The Answer is, That it was truly a step unto the Ruin of Heathenism in the Empire, which was the first opposite that Christ encountred. When Christ first sent his Disciples forth, (speaking of the Event of it) he says, I saw Satan fall from Heaven like Lightning. The Devil was struck dumb in his Oracles, when Christ began to publish His: And so Christ already conquered, in part; but ere he had done, he threw Satan out of Heaven, as the sixth (and last) Seal shews. So that though the Gospel was a Blessing to the World, yet it was a Curse to Gentilism; as the first Vial, by converting many People's Hearts from Popery, is called a Vial on the Earth.

Observe from hence,

I. The Mercifulness and Meekness of Christ: He goes not forth first on a Red Horse, but on a White, and makes offer of Peace; but if Men turn not, he hath other Horses to do that Work of destroying them. He loves unbloody Conquests; Who therefore would stand out against such a Saviour! Observ. 1.

II. The strangeness of Christ's course to get his Kingdom; even by no other means at first, but preaching the Word. He takes no Weapons but a Bow, the Tongues of Men to dart Arrows into the Hearts of them that resist. It was a strange unlikely course to set twelve Men scattered (and Fisher-men) to conquer the World, the Roman Empire; as if twelve Men should be sent into Turkey to conquer the great Turk, and throw down Mahumetanism, [Not by Power, nor by Might, but by my Spirit] Zech. 4. 6. Observ. 2.

III. Observe; That where Christ begins to conquer, he will go on to perfect his Conquest. Fear not the Cause of God in England; there is a Battel to be fought, Christ in his Angels growing more and more Holy, and fuller of Light; and Satan in his growing worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived. Christ comes up with fresh supplies of new Light, with his Bow and Arrows bears up as hard as they. And it is certain, that Christ will not be foiled. The Primitive Christians, although their Light grew dimmer and dimmer, yet they conquered Heathenism; These now must needs conquer much more. Observ. 3.

After the going forth of this White Horse, there follow three others, as Light-horsemen, attending this their General. So Zech. 1. 6. he saw a Man upon a Red Horse, and behind him were other Horses, Red, Speckled, and White. Now that Man was Christ, (vers. 8.) who hath always other Horse-men his Attendants to fulfil his Will, as here he hath. Christ there was upon a Red Horse, for so he appeared, as being to revenge himself on the Enemies of his Church; but here he is on a White Horse, as being to send forth the Gospel. But those other Horses that do here follow after him, are indeed Judgments that follow for the contempt of that Gospel, and which plagued the Empire successively. Their Colour is suitable to the Plague they brought; therefore the second Horse is Red, a Colour betokening Blood, Isa. 63. 2. And answerably, this Horse is [War] for his Commission is to take Peace from the Earth; that is, the Roman Empire, the Subject of this Seal-Prophecy. And [Civil War] it is, as those words note out, that Men should kill one another; not Persecution of the Saints,

PART I.

(as some take it) but mutual Blood-shed, as that phrase imports: All which was for their contempt of the Gospel.

For, 1. if they take Peace from the Saints, it is a suitable Plague that God should take Peace from the Earth.

2. If they will not embrace the Gospel of Peace, it is suitable that God should take away their Peace.

And, 3. if they will kill the Saints, is it not a proportioned Judgment, that God should turn their Swords into their own Bowels?

And this Power is said to be [given him]; it proceeded from a Commission from God; and so was a Sword given him. God puts the Sword into an Enemy's Hand, and gives it its Commission. As Magistrates do bear God's Sword, so Souldiers; who therefore, in the Prophets, are often called God's Sword. Now, how after the preaching of the Gospel in the Apostle's Time, such Wars fell upon the Empire in the West, is most evident in Story; nor are there greater Civil Wars mentioned, than in the Roman Stories. John wrote his Revelation just before Trajan's Time, in the Reign of Domitian, about the Year of Christ 94, and died in 104, ten Years after. Now in Trajan's Time (in whose sixth Year John died) these Wars began. And so then, when the Apostles were all dead, and had preached the Gospel to the World, the Jews rise, and with Armies raged through all the Parts of the Empire; and so devastated and depopulated Lybia of her Inhabitants, that Hadrian was afterwards forced to send thither new Colonies. About Cyrene they destroyed 22000; in Egypt also, and in Cyrus, 24000; and in Mesopotamia likewise a great number: And Hadrian afterwards succeeding in the Empire, destroyed 58000 of them. Then after Trajan's Time, the Parthians revolt, and the Empire was lessened, having in his Time had the largest extent: And in Antoninus his Time, Anno 140, all the Northern Nations came down upon the East, and upon all Illyricum: yet they, as a Land-flood, were dried up; so that the Empire stood entire: And that these Wars might be the more eminently taken notice of, as following upon the Apostle's Deaths; as they had none before, so for 44 Years after this, there was an Universal Peace, and Wars ceased through the Empire.

The third Horse is Famine; his Colour (answerably) Black, for Famine makes Men's Countenances such. So, Lament. 4. 6, 7. Her Nazarites that were purer than Snow, and more ruddy than Rubies, their Visage is blacker than a Coal; and this, by reason of Famine, as appears by Isa. 9. His Rider hath Scales in his hand, to shew, that he sells Corn by Weight, not by Measure; as Levit. 26. 26. When I have broken the Staff of your Bread, Women shall deliver you your Bread by weight. And a small quantity of Corn, even so much as serves a Man in Bread for a Day, (for so the Chænix was) was sold for a Penny, which amounts to 7 d. ob. yet with Commission not to hurt the Oil and the Wine. Now because Historians are silent concerning any notable Famine, and Universal, that fell out in the next Age after these Wars in the Roman Empire, therefore Mr. Mede carries it to the justness of those Emperors, (signified by the Ballances) which in Severus and others was eminent; especially in Laws against Theeves, and in publick Provision for Corn. But this was Heterogeneous to the rest, which are all steps to the ruining or plaguing of the Heathenish Empire. And for the Holy Ghost to take notice of a Moral Vertue, and to insert it thus among the midst of his Judgments, I cannot be induced to believe it. But this Scarcity being not of Oil and Wine, but of Corn only, might well be slipt over by Historians. When yet the Christians of that Age, as Tertullian and others, do mention a Famine of Corn as a Judgment on the Empire for their contempt of Christ, and their persecuting of the Saints. I have searched diligently for such foot-steps in them of that Age, 200 Years after Christ and upwards, as might confirm the truth of this.

And, first, I find, that in Commodus his Time, Anno 190, there was a Commotion made for Bread, within the City of Rome, by the poorer Sort. Thus says says Herodian, Fames Romanos afflixit, the Romans were afflicted by reason of Famine and Scarcity: When Cleander, Commodus his great Favorite, detained the Corn from the common People, (he being keeper of the Store-house of it) upon which they mutiny, requiring him to be put to Death; and proceeding further in their Rage, they throw down Houses, oppose the Souldiers, stone the Captains, &c. so that Commodus was enforced to cut off his Favorite's Head, and set it upon a Pole, and to destroy his Children also, so to pacify the People. Yea in those very words which Mr. Mede quotes for Severus his Justice, and care about Oil, &c. there is an intimation of the exhausture of the Corn of the publick Storehouse, through that Famine: The words are these, Rei frumentariae quam minimam reperiebat ita consuluit, &c. So likewise there is such an intimation in that other place which he quotes for Alexander Severus his care, (Anno 118.) which only was occasioned by Heliogabalus his having overthrown the publick Stock of Corn, [Frumenta evertisset.]

Then, 2dly, for the Christian Writers of these Times: Tertullian, who lived in Anno 203, doth more confirm this; for in his Apology for the Christians, he brings in this Calumny as usual among the Heathens; that they laid the cause of all their Miseries upon the Christians: His words are these, Si Cælum stetit, &c. if it rained not, if Nilus overflowed not Egypt, (which was the Granary of the Empire) from whence arose a Famine; or if the Pestilence devoured them, &c. Statim, (says he) they cried, Christianos ad Leones; away with these Christians to the Lions. I observe, he instanceth most in Famine, and the Causes of it, as being that which then they were most punish'd with. And he, in his Apology, pleading for Christians, how they fasted in Times of Judgments; He instanceth in that of Famine only, saying, If Famine be threatned by want of Rain, so that their Arinona, or Provision of Corn (as de la Cerda reads it) were in danger to be spent, that then they Christians fast, whilst other Romans pour themselves out to all Licentiousness. It is observable, that he still instanceth in the Judgment of Famine. And in his Apology to Scapula, the African President; he shewing that no City that persecuted the Christians did go unpunish'd; instanceth, how lately, under Hillarion's Presidentship, (his Predecessor) the Christians begging a Floor of Corn, a Voice was heard from under-ground, saying, Area non sunt: And indeed they were not, for they had no Harvest nor Corn the next Year, to thresh in them, it being spoiled through a great Wet in the Time of Harvest, as he there says. And you (says he) condemning a Christian to the Beasts, Statim hæc vexatio subsequuta est; which Baronius understands of that wet Year before spoken of, which brought ruin to the Corn. But Origen speaks more clearly to this, who presently after (about 226 Years after Christ) writing upon the 24th of Matthew, and taking occasion to answer the same Calumny, objected so generally against the Christians by the Heathens; namely, That because of the multitude of Christians among them, they had been vexed with Wars, Famine, and Pestilence, although he reckons up all those three Plagues as objected; yet to make it good that the Heathens did so object, he especially instanceth in Famine; Frequenter enim (says he) Famis causa Christianos cultores culparunt Gentiles; (for the Heathens oftentimes laid the fault of their being afflicted by Famine, upon those of the Christian Religion); though they did so because of other Plagues also, yet they often laid their Famines in the Dish of the Christians. Which evidently argues this Punishment to have been very frequent in those Times, as being taken notice of by the Heathens themselves, and also by Origen, to have been the eminent punishment of that Age, which made up the third Seal.

Now then the Fourth Seal produceth a fourth Horse, and that a Pale one, for his Rider is Death; Mors pallida, pale Death as they use to call it. And this Horse brings Death upon the fourth part of the Empire, called the Earth; and his Work was to kill with all sorts of Death, both Plague, and Famine, and Wars, and Wild-Beasts, all God's Plagues let loose at once. Before, Civil Wars came alone, and Famine came alone; but now, for their impenitency, he lets loose all four Judgments mentioned in Ezek. 14. 21. God now brings forth all his Treasures of Wrath. Pestilence is here (vers. 8.) called Death, as it is likewise by the Chaldee Paraphrase, and the Greek; and by the Fathers it is called Mortality, as by us the Sickness. Now from the Year 240 after Christ, it is wonderful to read, what a Stage of Misery and Blood the Empire was made, by reason of all these Plagues raging at once. Civil Wars so raged, that in the space of 33 Years, there were ten Emperors kill'd. Under Gallus and Volusianus, Anno 250, the barbarous Nations came down upon the Empire and harrowed it; and among them the Scythians, from whose Rage, no place under the Roman Jurisdiction was exempt; but almost all Towns were by them depopulated: and this was followed by an extream Famine. When we had a breathing time from them, then came the greatest Plague of Pestilence, worse than all the former, says Dionysius Alexandrinus, who lived in those Times. The greatest Plague (says Lypsus) that ever was read of in any Age, a Plague of fifteen Years continuance. And to add the last hand for the making the Misery of those Times compleat, God let loose thirty Tyrants at once, who, as so many wild Beasts, preyed upon, and made Havock of the Empire.

Now to come to some Observations;

Observ. 1. I. Take notice, that after the going forth of the White Horse, then go forth these other three. The Gospel is always followed by terrible Judgments upon the World, for the contempt of it. You know what Peter says, The time is come that Judgment must begin at the House of God, but it will not rest there, as he says. The Time of the Gospel's preaching, was a Time of Judgment; which began with the Church, but after that, fell most heavy upon the Empire, and upon the Heathens in it. So that as you look for Storms in Autumn, and Frosts in Winter; so expect Judgments where the Gospel has been preached. For the Quarrel of the Covenant must be avenged and vindicated. If Men despise it, God cannot hold his Hands.

Use. Wonder not therefore if God go over all the Churches in Judgments, as he hath done by Germany, Bohemia, &c. They had the Gospel first, and so the Cup of Tribulation first; but God will visit the rest in their order, and it may be, that of Holland last, because they have had the Gospel but a little while.

Observ. 2. II. Observe, that God useth to rise higher and higher in his Judgments. He began with Civil Wars, and they not working, he sent Famine, which is worse, and then War, as Lam. 4. 9. and then he came upon them with the Pestilence, and all the other three at once. Which agrees with that in Levit. 26. 22. If you repent not, I will punish you seven times worse. So in the Trumpets, the three last are the Woe Trumpets. And so in the Vials too, God will rise higher and higher, as here he does.

Observ. 3. III. Observe, That all Plagues have their Commission from God; they go forth only when Christ openeth a Seal. Of the second it is said, Power was given him, and a Sword. And so to the third, a Commission of Restraint was given, not to hurt the Oil and Wine. And to the fourth, only to kill the fourth part. They are therefore compared to Horses sent forth, that are guided by Riders; God's Providence to direct them, and have their way chalked out, as the Egyptian Plagues had: Psal. 78. 50. it is called, a Path made for his Anger, chalk'd out where it should go, and into what Houses. So, Jer. 15. 2. Those that are for the Sword, to the Sword; and those that are for the Famine, to the Famine, &c. Now in all these Circuits of God's Judgments, let us wait for his turning towards us in Mercy. In the way of thy Judgments have we waited for thee.

Object. And whereas it may be objected, That these are Plagues that were ever common in the World, and in all Times as well as these.

For Answer; These Considerations made these Plagues then more eminently to be set down.

1. They

1. They were as eminent in the Roman Empire in those first Ages, as in any other afterwards.

Chap. 4.

Ans. 1.

Ans. 2.

2. Though the Empire had such Plagues in after-times also, yet these were all the Plagues which it had whilst Heathenish, and so were proper Punishments of their Gentilism, and contempt of the Message of the White Horse, and so intended by God ; and therefore brought in here as such. Neither did these at all ruin the Empire (which stood unbroken) but simply punish'd it for its Idolatry. But such Plagues as fell out after these, had other effects accompanying them, even the Ruin of the Imperial Government, by dividing it, lessening it, and the like ; which these did not.

But, 3. and more especially, the Holy Ghost doth mention these Plagues here (although the like were in other Ages) as Punishments attending upon the Gospel : Because this was the very Observation and Objection that the Heathens of those Times made ; That since the Christian Religion began in the Empire, Wars, Pestilence, and Famine raged more than ever they did in former Times ; and so laid it upon the Christians as the Cause, in that they contemning the Gods, provoked them to send these Plagues. This we find to be the main Complaint and Calumny which the Christian Writers of those Times writ Apologies to wipe off ; as appears in Tertullian, Cyprian, Arnobius, &c. whose Apologies I purposely read, and found these Judgments to be most frequently taken notice of by the Heathens themselves, and this Calumny by the forementioned Authors answered. Yea, Cyprian in his Apology says, That to wipe off this Calumny, was the sole Motive and Occasion that put him upon writing. I held my peace (says he) till they laid all these Plagues upon us, as the cause of all. Now how properly therefore did the Lord Christ single out those eminent Plagues following the Gospel, and present them under these Seals, as the most notable occurrent Punishments of those Times rather than any other ? And how fitly are they called Seals, seeing they were so hidden, that the Heathens were utterly mistaken in the Causes of them ? For they being Punishments of their Persecuting the Saints, they turned the matter clean contrary, and imputed it to the Anger of the Gods for the Christians contemning their Heathenish Religion. But though they were hidden, sealed Plagues (in respect of the causes of them) to the Heathens ; yet the four Beasts did then instruct John, (who personates the Church) and so the Church in him, concerning the true cause of them : And therefore every Seal hath a Voice of one or other of the Beasts, saying, Come up and see. For the Officers or Ministers of Churches instructed them, how that all these Plagues were from the Gospel, and the contempt of it, and their persecuting the Professors of it. This you may read in the Apologies of Tertullian, Arnobius, and Cyprian, (whose Apology I will instance in for all the rest) ; who, as he lived under the Fourth Seal, in the rage of these four Plagues, so he speaks in the very Language of the Fourth Seal. He writes against one Demetrianus, who had long barked at Christian Profession. And (says he) I forbore till he laid to our charge, that all these Miseries on the Empire we Christians were the cause of : Cum dicas plurimos conqueri quod Bella crebrius surgant, quod lues, & fames sevant, ultra tacere non oportet : When I hear you say that many complain of us as the Causes why those Wars so often arise, and why the Pestilence and Famine rage so ; I can be no longer silent, but must needs give you an Answer ; and he plainly declares, from the Lord of Hosts, that their Idolatries and Persecutions of the Christians, were the cause ; and that these Punishments, non eveniebant casu, came not by chance, but were the Vengeance of God, who hath said, that Vengeance is his, and that he will judg the Cause of his People. And he withal tells them, that if they repent not through these Plagues, Hell would then follow. Manet postmodum (says he) carcer aternus, jugis flamma, & pœna perpetua : There remains, after all this, an eternal Prison, a continual Flame, and an everlasting Punishment. He speaks in the very Language of this fourth Seal, not knowing it, nor referring to it, for he lived under it. Thus doth Tertullian also in his Apology, wherein he attributes the cause of their Famine, and other Plagues, unto their persecuting the Christians. And this is the Mystery of

of the four Beasts, calling upon John to come and see, and behold the mind and meaning of these Judgments on the World; the Officers of Churches in their Sermons so instructed them.

Observat.

The only Observation I shall raise from this Instruction of the four Beasts, is this, That during the first four Seals, (which indeed bring us to 260 Years after Christ) the Officers of Churches remained according to the Institution in the purer Churches; but afterwards you hear not of them, Corruptions coming in upon all the Churches, and perverting their right Institution and End. You meet not with any more mention of them, till the Vials begin (chap. 15.) which was in the first separation from Popery; and then you read not that all four, but only one of the Beasts gave those Vials. But after a second measuring the Temple before Rome's Ruin, as Chap. 11. you read of four Beasts, chap. 19. in their right order again, praising God.

The fifth Seal, is that great and bloody Persecution which followed after all these Plagues, in the Time of Dioclesian, about the Year 300, which was of all the ten Persecutions foregoing it, the greatest, and therefore is put in for all the rest: Under it there suffered 144000 in one Province of the Empire; how many therefore in the rest? Now this last is here mentioned instead of all the rest.

1. Because indeed those other Plagues, for the contempt of the Gospel, did but enrage the Heathens the more; for they thought that all this came upon them for their suffering the Christians to live.

2. This being the last, and greatest, is brought in as crying for Vengeance in the Name of all the foregoing Martyrs; for so their Cry intimates, How long, Lord, wilt thou not avenge our Blood!

The Vision is,

1. Of Souls severed from their Bodies, even of Men slain, or of Martyrs.

2. These Men are presented as new sacrificed, and with their Throats cut, lying bleeding at the foot of the Altar, alluding to the Sacrifices, for Martyrdom is no other than a Sacrifice; 2 Tim. 4. 6. For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand; and Phil. 2. 17. Yea, and if I be offered upon the sacrifice and service of your Faith, I joy and rejoice with you all. And whereas many understand this Altar to be Heaven, that comes in afterward, when white Robes are given them. It is an allusion to the Altar of Burnt Offerings, whereon their Bodies were offered; but, chap. 8. their Prayers are offered up upon the Altar of Incense.

3. They are presented as crying for Vengeance for their Blood: Mark it, It is not simply the Blood that cries, (as 'tis said of Abel's Blood) but the Souls themselves cry, and that for Vengeance and utter Ruin on the Empire: A Lapidem makes it [liberationem] so the Hebrew word signifies; and so vindicare is to free, as praying for the Liberty of the Church below. But these cries are in the behalf of their own Blood already shed; and for that there was no such liberty to be sued for.

The Satisfaction to their Cry is double;

1. A Reason why Vengeance is delayed; they had Brethren to be made perfect as they were.

2. In the mean time they are received to Glory.

1. For the Reason; it consists in this, that the Empire was yet a while to stand in Power, because they had other Brethren to be perfected as well as they, after a little Season. So that, it refers not to the Persecutions of Antichrist, which were a thousand Years after; but to those of Arrianism, when under those Emperors, as cruel Persecutions for the Time, were raised some thirty Years after this, as ever before; and then the Trumpets sound, and they ruin the Empire it self through their Prayers, as chap. 8.

2. For

2. For their Glory ; it is expressed by White Robes given them.

Which is, 1. a Sign or Badg of Heavenly Glory ; so chap. 3. 4. They shall walk with me in White. So Christ, when he gave a shine of the Glory of his Kingdom, he caused his Garments to look as white as any Fuller could make them.

2. It denotes Joy. In Triumphs they were wont to wear White Robes, as a Token of Gladness ; Let thy Garments be always White.

3. Robes were worn only by Noble Personages ; Mulier stolata was distinguished from togata, as calling for a more special Honour. Thus Mordecai was apparell'd in the Royal Robes, Esth. 6. 11.

This giving them White Robes, is an allusion to the bringing the Priests first into the Temple, when their thirty Years were expired ; they clothed them in White.

Observ. 1. In that this Persecution was the last and greatest of all, take notice that it is God's manner to bring sorest Trials just before deliverance. So to David at Ziglag, a few hours before he was proclaimed King. In chap. 11. there is a Persecution and War of Antichrist yet to come, for the space of three Years and an half, when for ever the Witnesses shall cast off their Sackcloth. I fear it; for 'tis the last.

Observ. 2. That though great Punishments had befallen the Empire by those three Horfes ; yet this is not Vengeance enough for Martyrs Blood, which nothing will slack but the ruin of that Kingdom and State which shed it ; this Punishment therefore is brought in after all the other. So Manasse's blood-shed nothing would pacify, but the Captivity and Ruin of that State.

Observ. 3. That in a Business wherein many Ages have an Interest, the Saints in the last Age foregoing, do put up their Prayers in the strength of all Prayers and Crys of Blood preceding. So do these theirs, in the name of all foregoing Martyrs : How long ! &c. That as in a Generation of Wicked Men, the last of them do inherit the Sins and Punishments of all their Fore-fathers ; so do a Generation of Godly Men go forth against their Persecutors in the strength of all their Fore-fathers Prayers, and Bloodshed. How comfortably therefore may we pray against Rome and Spain, and the Abettors of them, the Bishops, who all have even wallowed in the Blood of the Saints, and against whom we have the Prayers of all Ages to join their Forces to ours for the more sure prevailing ; and we may justly cry in the strength of them, How long ! &c. I have seen many Cords so linked together upon a Pully, and with such an Artifice, that a Child might draw up a mighty Weight, for he pulled in the strength of all the Cords. So here, though we be weak, yet praying in the strength of all the Saints Prayers, and of their Blood, we must needs be heard. It is but a little resting, till our Brethren (it may be our selves) the Witnesses, are killed ; and then down goes Rome, and the Hierarchy with it. In this respect it is good living in the last Ages of the World, for we drive a Trade with all our Fore-father's Stock.

Observ. 4. That the Power of Persecutors stands no longer, than till they have finished the great Work of persecuting the Saints. The Empire stood so long as it did, mainly for this end ; and therefore this Reason is here given. Thus Hab. 1. 12. Thou hast ordained them for Judgment, (on themselves) and established them for Correction (of thine). We think much that they should have so great Power ; why, they have it to this end, to persecute.

Observ. 5. That the Souls themselves are here said to cry, and not their Blood only : A wicked Man being murdered, his Blood calls for Vengeance ; but not only the Blood of a Godly Man, but his Soul also calls and crys for Vengeance ; which cry must therefore needs come up with much clamour in the Ears of the Lord of Hosts. Think you that he will not avenge his Elect ! Yes, he will do it speedily. And from hence raise up your Thoughts higher, that if Abel's Blood hath hath a force in its cry, and his Soul that still lives, a greater force; then how much more hath Christ's Blood, and how much more yet hath Christ himself, who liveth to make intercession for us. Thus the Scripture riseth in expressing the efficacy of the Intercession of Jesus Christ for us.

Observ. 6. That the Souls in Heaven, following their Interests on Earth, they prosecute the revenging of their Blood. There is the same reason for other Interests; as for Friends, for Children, for Businesses, and the like; which having prayed for on Earth, they still do prosecute them in Heaven.

Obs. 7. That the Souls in Paradise know the reason of God's Dispensations, and his Counsels, which are satisfactory to them. God here opens his utmost Reason, why the Empire was as yet to stand; and that was, to kill a few more Martyrs. They are guided by a Spirit of Prophecy as Christ is, they being Prophets as well as Priests.

Obs. 8. That in all Dispensations, if we knew what reason God hath for them, we should rest: So the Souls do in this standing of the Empire. Let our Faith apprehend that God hath a Reason for what he does, otherwise we should have no Persecutions.

Obs. 9. That Saints that were not yet born, are called their Brethren, as being such in God's Election; this Persecution came not till forty Years after: So Christ calls all his People Brethren, God having given them unto him before all Worlds. He knows perfectly who are his, and their Number in all Ages, and chose not Qualifications, but Persons: So says Christ, I have Sheep which are not of this Fold. Labour we therefore to love the Jews, as those who are to be called; and the Saints departed, as those who are our Brethren.

Obs. 10. That Martyrdom is a perfection; it is said, till they are fulfilled [πληρώσονται]; so Christ calls his Suffering: I will watch to day and to morrow; and then (says he) I shall be perfected. If thou hast all Holiness, and wantest this Coronis, thou art not so perfect as Martyrs for Christ are.

Obs. 11. That Saints departed do presently enter into Bliss. They sleep not, but have white Robes given them, as the Priests had when they were first brought into the Temple. These have the like when they are brought, as Priests, into the Inner Temple of Heaven. And their Robes of Glory are new ones, which they had not before; for they are given them anew. Glory cloaths them, till they and their Bodies meet again; and these are called Robes, as reaching from Head to Foot; they are all over happy and glorious.

Obs. 12. They reckon us Fellow-servants and Brethren, though we be sinful; and do hold a Communion with us. Let us do the like towards our weak Brethren, and esteem them such notwithstanding their Infirmities, and although we be holier. There is a greater distance between us and these Saints in Heaven, in respect of purity, than can be supposed between us, and the meanest Saint here below.

Obs. 13. That the Cause for which they are reckoned Martyrs, is for the Word of God, and their Testimony to it. So that if it be for any Truth in the Word, though never so small, it is accepted as if it were the greatest.

Obs. 14. God may defer to answer Prayers for the present: He doth so to Saints in Heaven; he puts them upon staying a while; much more therefore may he deal so with us. And yet God in the mean time recompenceth this Demur some other way. As he gave these White Robes of Glory, so will he give thee other Blessings that are better, in which thou mayest rest satisfied and content.

The Sixth Seal follows, from vers. 12. to the end of the Chapter. Now as the former Seals contained several Punishments upon the Heathenish Roman State; so this Sixth expresseth the final accomplishment of God's Wrath upon the Heathenish Religion in it, in throwing it down; and upon Heathenish Worshippers, and upholders of Gentilism, in confounding them; and is therefore called, the great Day of the Lamb's Wrath. Now, because it is thus called, and some Phrases are used concerning it, that are used of the immediate fore-runners of the Day of Judgment, (as Matth. 24. 19. when before the Son of Man's coming, the Sun is said to be darkned, &c.) therefore some Interpreters have understood it, of the great Day of Judgment only; and so you may have heard it often quoted by such as by piece-meals take up Interpretations of this Book, not having framed them to the series of the whole.

But, 1st, the Great Day of Judgment it cannot be; the Series of this Prophecy will not admit that Exposition. Which is argued,

1. From what goes before it: For John having but now spoken of the Primitive Times, in the five former Seals, and brought us but to three hundred Years after Christ, in the tenth and last Persecution: Now to make a leap over the 1300 Years since passed, and after those Primitive Persecutions, to bring in the Day of Judgment, were too great a Stride, too wide a Chasma and Gulph in this orderly Story.

2. From the Series of things after this; for there is a Seventh Seal yet to be opened, and that to produce seven Trumpets, which are new and fresh succeeding Punishments upon that Empire. And it is certain, that there are no such Punishments to come after the great Day of Judgment.

And as for the Phrases here sounding so like those used of that Day, it is certain that there is never a Phrase here used, but is frequently and ordinarily used to express great Mutations and overturnings in Kingdoms, and great Calamities brought upon Men in those Kingdoms by God, long before the Day of Judgment.

As, 1. that it is called the Great Day, in which who can stand? (vers. last;) and that the Sun and Moon are said to be darkned, &c. You shall find the same Expressions used Joel 2. 9. to set forth the great overturning the Jewish State by the Armies of the Chaldeans in the Captivity. Their Armies the Prophet describes, vers. 2, 3, and 8. and their sacking Jerusalem, vers. 9. and the Confusion and Calamities brought upon that State, he expresseth, (by the same Metaphors that are here used) vers. 10. The Earth shall quake before them, the Heavens shall tremble; the Sun and Moon shall be dark; the Stars shall withdraw their shining. And vers. 11. because these were God's Executioners of his Vengeance, therefore he is described as their General, making a Speech to them; The Lord shall utter his Voice before his Army; his Camp is very great. Therefore that Time is called (as here) the great and terrible Day of the Lord; and who can abide it! as here, Who can stand! Thus Isa. 34. where the Prophet plainly describes the overthrow of Edom, as appears by vers. 5. though he calls all the World to consider her Example as a warning to them, (as vers. 1.) that he would go on to do the like to them, (as vers. 2.); yet thus he describes it, (just as here) vers. 4. All the Host of Heaven shall be dissolved, and the Heavens shall be rolled together as a Scroll; and all the Host (or Stars) of Heaven, shall fall down as Figs from a Fig-Tree: and yet all this foretells but the Sword upon Edom, overturning that State, as appears by vers. 5, and vers. 8. It is the Day of the Lord's Vengeance for their persecuting of Sion, just as here. And those other Phrases also, of hiding themselves in Caves and Rocks of the Mountains; and calling upon the Hills to cover them: They are but Expressions of such Shames, and Miseries, and Calamities, as the Vengeance of God in such great Changes doth work. Thus Isa. 2. 19. when God comes to punish Israel for their Idols, and to send forth the Light of the Gospel unto them; the Idolaters, as confounded, are said to go into the Holes of the Rocks, and into the Caves of the Earth, for fear of the Lord, and the Glory of his Majesty. And when the ten Tribes were carried Captive by Assur, their Calamities mities were expressed by this, (Hos. 10. 8.) They shall say to the Mountains, Cover us; and to the Rocks, Fall upon us. So that Christ, the giver of this Vision, and opener of this Seal, hath but borrowed the Similitudes and Expressions used by the Prophets in several places, to set forth the like Change, Calamity, and Confusion, that befel the Heathenish State of the Roman Empire.

But then, 2dly, Because these places of the Prophets alluded unto, do speak of the overthrow of Kingdoms by Wars; therefore Mr. Forbes would have this Seal to be that utter overturning of the Western Empire of Rome, by the Goths and Vandals, which began four hundred Years after Christ; and so, to note out the Ruin of the Empire it self, and not of Heathenism in it. And but for these Reasons following, I should have thought so also: As,

1. That the first Seal beginning but with the Conquest of Heathenism in the Empire, (for Christ in the preaching the Gospel, did at first seek outwardly to overcome or plague nothing else) here in this Seal must be the accomplishment of that Victory or full Conquest gotten, described and set forth; and so, the same thing made the Subject of the compleat Conquest described here, that is, made the Subject of the first Onset, in the first Seal, vers. 2, and 3. and that was, the Heathenish Religion in the Empire, and the Upholders of it. And so Christ's first step, or degree of Conquest in order to his Kingdom, is compleatly in this Chapter presented: with his first full Victory over the first Enemy, whom he encountred in the World, even Satan, and his false Worship; to shew, that what Christ begun with, he makes an end of. And so this Book still shews how he makes a clear and full dispatch of such Enemies first, as first he encounters. He encountred Heathenism first by the Gospel, then by Plagues: but now as one grown angry, he compleats the Victory by Power and Might, and by a violent concussion and shaking of that State. And having dispatch'd this Enemy, and so made clear work as he goes, (as wise Conquerors use to do) then he falls upon the Empire it self, in the Trumpets. And that is the reason why this last Act of this Tragedy is represented under such Metaphors as the Great Day of Judgment is set out by: even for this, that it imports a full and a compleat Victory, and a final overthrow of that which he had encountred. That as the Day of Judgment is a final Conquest of all Enemies by the Lion of Judah; so is this a like final Conquest by the Lamb, of this first Enemy whom he did set himself to conquer, even Satan and his false Worship set up by that Roman Monarchy.

2dly, The Trumpets that come after, are reserved for the Ruin of the Empire, as a distinct thing from Heathenism in it: and the Vials for the overthrow of Popery, and the Faction of Mahomet.

And, 3dly, Thus the parts of this Prophecy are found to run on similarly; and things alike are put together in distinct Visions. Here are three sorts of Enemies, and so of Plagues to ruin them in this Prophecy.

1. The six Seals; which are the beginnings of Sorrows to the World; and they fall upon Satan's false Worship, which stood in Christ's way.

2. The six Trumpets; which fell upon the Empire it self, for having persecuted and profecuted the Church.

3. The Vials; which fall on the Pope, and his Idolatry, and on the Mahometan Faction, the Turks, his last Enemies; These therefore are called the last Plagues, chap. 16.

And for a fourth Reason, observe, That the 12th Chapter, (which begins and contains the Story of the Church in the first Primitive Times, as this doth of the Heathenish Empire) doth wonderfully agree with this Chapter here, containing the like space of Time, and describing the same Conquest and Victory over Satan (the Dragon) in the Roman Empire (in Heaven); only with this difference, that here the Calamities and Confusion that befel the Kings or Emperors, and the Chieftains of Heathenish Worshippers, that did seek to uphold that Religion igion still, are set out ; whereas there, only Satan's Confusion in being thrown down, is described ; which was very suitable, that being the Story of the Church, this of the Empire more eminently. Chap. 4.

So then two things are distinctly set out unto us under these Phrases and Metaphors.

First, By the darkning the Sun, Moon, and Stars, according to the Analogy of the Prophets, is expressed the deposing of those Heathenish Emperors and Governors in that State, considered as they did strive to keep up Heathenism, (with whom Satan and his Worship also fell) : So as though the State stood still, yet those Governors, and the Heathenism of the State, were removed and destroyed, and thrown down from their Heaven, the Superior Government of that State ; which was done by Christ's sending Madness and Diseases upon Dioctlesian and Maximinianus, Heathenish Emperors ; insomuch, as they, out of a sense of the Lamb's Wrath, gave over their Government (whilst they were in the Meridian of their Glory) to the wonderment of the World. And afterwards Maxentius and Maximinus (Heathen Emperors also) were overcome by Licinius, whilst he favoured the Christians, and was Colleague with Constantine ; by which Constantine it was afterwards more compleatly furthered and carried on ; for when the foresaid Licinius made a Revolt unto Heathenism, Constantine subdued him and his Chieftains, (for Heathenism went not down without blows) and turned that whole State Christian, when he had deposed Heathenish Persecutors. Now such a Deposing of Governors in a State, and overthrowing their Armies, is in the Prophets expressed, by darkning the Sun, Moon, and Stars, as well as the overthrowing the State it self. So Isa. 13. 10. the deposing the Babylonian Monarch and his Nobles by the Medes, is set forth, vers. 2, 3, and 4, by the darkning the Sun, their King ; the Moon, their Queen ; the Stars, their Nobles. And in another place it is said, How art thou fallen, O Lucifer, thou Son of the Morning ! speaking of the bright Star the King of Babel ; who, Isa. 14. said, He would ascend to Heaven, and exalt his Throne above the Stars. In the Dialect and Phrase of Speech used in the Eastern Countries, (as among the Arabians and Jews, &c.) To throw down any ones excellency, is expressed by casting down his Heaven to the Earth. And so it may be said, (that which also some Interpreters would have) that that which after follows, expresseth but the same thing which was at first metaphorically uttered under the Prophets Allusions, of Sun, Moon, and Stars ; all which John afterwards literally expoundeth, vers. 15. when he says, [and the Kings of the Earth] ; that is, those Roman Emperors, the Suns of this Firmament were step'd off from their Glory and their Stars ; the Heathenish Nobles, that adhered to them, were deposed ; their Mountains removed, that is, their Chieftains and strong Men, as such are called, Isa. 2. 14. so that the one is but an exposition of the other. And thus, only the miserable overthrow of the Heathenish Worshippers is here described, as became the Seal-Prophecy, even as the putting down of Satan and his Worship, is expressed in the Book-Prophecy. And that which may strengthen this Interpretation, is, That the rest of the Prophecy being to proceed with the like Metaphors, of Plagues upon the Sun, Moon, Stars, Earth, Trees, &c. (for in such Language and Metaphors, are the Contents of the Trumpets and Vials expressed) : He therefore here gives one literal Explanation of them in this, which is his first mention of such, which one may serve for all ; that so by the Analogy of the Holy Ghost's own Exposition here, the rest might be interpreted ; who makes Kings to be as the Sun, and Nobles as the Stars, &c. To this purpose you must know, that in Scripture Descriptions and Expressions, (the Prophets using to point things out by Similitude) every Kingdom, State, or Body of Men, is compared and assimilated to a World ; in which, what is superiour and highest, is called the Heavens ; and therein, the highest the Sun, the next the Moon, and next to them the Stars, &c. And what is of lower Rank, is called the Earth, Sea, Rivers, and Trees, &c. And therefore Punishments on States and Kingdoms, in this Book, are expressed by casting them down from their Heavens, and by Miseries falling upon the Rivers, the Sea, &c. whereby such things are understood, as answering in States amongst Men in nearest resemblance unto the Sea, Earth, &c. in the great World. And this is the Key, as of this Vision, so of the Trumpets, and the Vials that follow. And sometimes the Scripture expresseth the Alterations of Kingdoms themselves, and of all places of Rank and of Government, by this darkening the Heavens, the Sun, &c. So Haggai 2. 21, 22. Speak to Zerubbabel Governor of Judah, saying, I will shake the Heavens and the Earth; And I will overthrow the Throne of Kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the Kingdoms of the Heathen, and will overthrow the Chariots, and those that ride in them, and the Horses, and the Riders shall come down, every one by the Sword of his Brother. And sometimes only the deposing of Persons from those Places and Dignities, the Places standing still. Now in the Trumpets, the casting down the Sun, Stars, &c. is spoken of in the Abstract, even the altering the very State, (together with deposing the Persons) Power, and Dignity of the Empire: But here it is to be understood of deposing the Persons only (in the Concrete) who had that Power, but were put down from it. And so, it imports the throwing down the Chieftains of Heathen Emperors, and the deposing them from their Places, not yet meddling with the Places themselves in the Empire.

The second thing that these Expressions hold forth, is not simply the overthrowing of Kingdoms and States, or of Governours, &c. and so to be understood of Political Mutations only; but they are used to set forth a Change and Mutation of Worship and of Religion in a State. For as Bodies Politick are compared to a World, (as was said) so Religious Bodies, and States considered in respect to their Worship or Religion, are thus compared also. So Jesus Christ is said to have His World, Psal. 8. 3. [Thy Heavens, thy Moon and Stars, &c.] where the Sun is not mentioned, because Christ himself (who is the Sun of Righteousness) is the Sun therein. Now, Heb. 2. 5, 6. that Psalm is interpreted of Christ's World, the World to come; as it is called, vers. 5. both this of the Gospel, in opposition to Adam's World, and Christ's Kingdom hereafter. Moreover, for the present, the State of Christ's Worship and Worshippers under the Gospel, and his Ordinances, are compared to a World, wherein are Heavens, and Moon, and Stars. Thus Psal. 19. 1. [The Heavens declare the Glory of God] which is interpreted of the preaching of the Gospel, Rom. 10. 18. But I say, Have they not heard? Yes verily, their Sound went into all the Earth, and their Words unto the Ends of the World. The Apostles and their Doctrine are the Heavens, the Lights in this Heaven of Christ, to declare his Glory to the World. And therefore the words of the 4th Verse of that 19th Psalm, are there in the 10th to the Romans, applyed to their Preaching. And (you know) Ministers are called Stars, in the first Chapter of this Book of the Revelation. So likewise Churches are called Heavenly Lights shining in the World, Phil. 2. 15. [φωσῖτες] [Light-bearers] the same word that is given by the Septuagint to the Stars, Gen. 1. 14. And it appears by that place, that they irradiate the World; not an House, as a Candle or Torch does, but the World, as Stars do. And the Apostles Ministry is compared to twelve Stars; which the Primitive Church was crowned with, Rev. 12. 1. And so Heb. 12. 27. it is one part of the meaning of shaking Heavens, that is the Ordinances of the Gospel which are called the Heavens. That Frame of Worship which Christ hath erected, and instituted to be under the Gospel, is interpreted to be meant by the Heavens, (for as they are the Ordinances of Day and Night, so are these of the Church) as oppositely; the legal Worship is there called the Earth. Yea, the Temple-Worship, with the Priests and Elders of that Religion, are so called. Therefore Dan. 8. 9, 10, Antiochus his causing that Worship to cease, and putting down those Priests, is expressed to us, by his prevailing over the Host of Heaven, and his casting down some of the Host and Stars unto the Ground. Yea, vers. 11. he is said to magnify himself against the Prince of that Host; that is, against God, and Christ, the Sun in this Firmament, as the Sun is Prince of the Stars. Now then as Christ thus hath his World, so Antichrist also hath his Heavens, and Sun, and Earth, &c. which are to be interpreted Spiritually, as well as Politically. And thus Satan's Heathenish Religion and Worship in the Roman Empire, is in like manner here expressed expressed unto us: The false Gods of the Heathens are called in Scripture, the Host of Heaven; as Deut. 17. 3. not only because some of them worshipped the Sun and Stars immediately, but also because the Romans and Grecians did entitle the Stars by the Names of their Gods, or Men famous among them, whom they worshipped, and so they worshipped both at once, under one and the same Name. The Sun they entituled Apollo, and the other Planets by the Names of other Gods and Goddesses, as Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Venus, and the Moon they called Phæbe, or the great Goddess Diana: All which had once been Men and Women among them, though now being dead, they were worship'd for Gods and Goddesses. So that they worshipped the Host of Heaven under the Names of Men; though really, and indeed, under both these, they worship'd Satan and his Devils, (though not immediately, yet interpretatively). Thus speaks the Apostle, 1 Cor. 10. 20. The Things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to Devils. Now then, this advancement of Satan, under the Names and Titles of the Host of Heaven, was truly his Heaven, wherein the Devils, by that Religion, were set up as the Gods of this World, as 2 Cor. 4. 4. And answerably the throwing down of Satan's Worship and Religion, is expressed by a change of the Heavens, even as Christ expresseth the throwing down the Heathenish Worship by the Apostle's preaching, to be, its falling from Heaven like Lightning; which Christ speaks, of their casting out Devils then, when sent out to preach, as a certain Omen which his Faith had before-hand, that Satan in like manner, with all his Worship, should be thrown down by the preaching the Gospel in the Empire; and so accordingly, chap. 12. Satan and his Angels are said to be cast down from Heaven, when he and they were acknowledged for Gods no longer. Now the alteration of this Heathenish Worship; and change of this Religion in the Empire, is the shaking the Heavens and Earth here meant. The word for Earthquake is not only to be confined to the Earth, (in English we have no word large enough) for it imports the concussion, or throwing down by a commotion of that Heathenish World, the Heavens and Earth, and all of that Religion, even of all that had a station in that accursed Frame. Thus, Haggai 2. 17. you have the like Allusion for the alteration of the Jewish Worship into the Gospel Worship; and then, that alteration yet to come, of this Gospel Worship, when the Kingdom of Christ shall be set up: The one is expressed by shaking the Earth, the other the Heavens. And that shaking is interpreted, vers. 27. to be, removing away of the things shaken. And so the throwing down Satan and his Devils from being worshipped any longer, under the Names of the Host of Heaven, and those Appellatives given the Stars, and Titles to Men departed, (whereof he received all the real honour) may fitly be here understood to be the darkning the Sun and Moon, and the falling of these Stars from Heaven. As Christ is the Sun in his Heaven; So Satan the Prince of Devils, the Prince of this Host of Heaven, (as Daniel's phrase is) was the Sun in this Firmament. And the lesser Devils, with him worshipped under the Title of the Lesser Gods, and of the Stars, are the Stars here, which fall from Heaven. And as the Moon is Christ's Church, and the Queen in his Heaven; so the Colledg of Priests (who were then in Rome, as the Pope and Cardinals are now) that were the Instruments of his Worship, they were the Moon in his Heaven. And so his consecrated Places, his Islands and Mountains, the high Places of his Worship were removed out of their place; that is, diverted from that use which they were once put to in that Idolatrous Worship.

So then this mutation of the Heathenish Religion from Constantine's Time downward, during the space of an hundred Years (for so long was it e're Heathenism could be utterly extirpated, and wholly abolish'd, for ever rising again) is here set forth unto us by two Things here distinctly and apart laid down.

First, The overthrowing the Worship and Religion it self, expressed by those Metaphors before-mentioned. As,

1. By the eclipsing of the Sun and Moon, [the Sun became Black, — and the Moon as Blood] that is, the glory of these their chief false Gods, and the Priests of them, was darkned.

2. By

PART I.

2. By the falling of the Stars, as Figs not fully ripe] that is, by a violent Wind. Shewing that Mens Hearts were not loosened of themselves to a dislike of that Religion, nor brought so freely off from it at the first; they would have stuck on still, had not the Wind of Power and Authority shook them down.

3. By the vanishing of the whole Heaven of this Worship, as a Scrawl folded up. The manner of the Jews was to write on Parchment, which from being folded or rolled up, they called Volumen, a Volume; and with us Parchment is from thence called Vellume to this day.

Which Metapor imports;

1. That as when a Scrawl is folded up, not a Letter of it is to be seen, but immediately upon the rolling up, all do disappear: so these Gods vanish'd, not any of their Worship retains the same Name now, that was then used; there is not a Tittle of those Gods left, they have had no Worshippers these thousand Years.

2. As a Book or Scrawl folded up is not used, so neither is this Religion.

In the second place, this Mutation is represented unto us, in the Confusion that befel the Upholders of that Ethnick Worship, the Atlas's of these Heavens that endeavoured to support them, and opposed Constantine and other Emperors in the discarding of this, and bringing in the Christian Religion. The Devil goes not out of a Man possessed, nor out of our Hearts, without Blows, nor till a stronger than he comes. So neither did he leave that Station of his in the Empire easily, and without resistance; but egg'd on Kings, namely some Emperors, and Generals, and the common sort of People with them, to join together for the upholding of the Old Religion and Worship of his. These the Lamb encounters, and in his Wrath confounds. Now it is observable, how John useth some of the very Names which were given the Romans in their several Ranks. For here are three several Ranks mentioned.

1. Highest Governors, as Kings.

2. The middle sort of Men, as the Rich and Strong.

3. The Inferior Multitude of false Worshippers, as Bondmen and Free.

1. Kings; that is, Emperors, for which the Greek Tongue had no word but [βασιλεύς] which therefore the Apostles used for [Emperor] so Peter, 1 Pet. 2. 3. and Paul, 1 Tim. 2. 1. Then χιλιάρχοι, Captains of Thousands. The Roman Legions over whom these were Captains, consisted of 7000.

2. Rich Men, and Mighty Men, who made up the middle sort of Men.

3. Bondmen and Free, who made up the lower and inferior Rank of Men. These were usual Distinctions of Men's Ranks among the Romans.

Now their Confusion is express;

1. By their shameful overthrow; they fly for shame, and hide themselves in Dens, a phrase expressing shameful confusion and disappointment.

2. Their despair of help, intimated in that phrase, [they shall say to the Mountains, fall upon us, &c.] So Luke 21. 30. and Hos. 10. 8. where when common Calamities came upon the ten Tribes, and upon the State of Jerusalem, their being at their Wits end, in respect of getting rid out of them, is expressed by their calling to the Mountains to cover them, and the Hills to fall upon them; as wishing for Death, rather than the present Miseries. Not that they should use these very words, but that their State should be such as should make them wish some such thing, or any thing, rather than that Misery then brought upon them. Those of other Nations, who are reduced to some extream and miserable exigent, are wont to express their Grievance, by wishing the Earth to swallow them; but this particular phrase is peculiar to the Jews, who had a rocky Country, full of Caves, to which they for refuge were wont to fly, (and therefore it is usual in Scripture to say, Enter into thy Rock and hide thy self, as Isa. 21. 10.) and being in those Caves, their Fear and Despair did oft-times put them upon wishing, that those Rocks would fall on them, and make an end of them.

3. The phrases import, that all this is done with a sense and conviction in the Hearts of these Enemies of Christ, that it was by the Power of Christ, whom they they called accursed, and derided; and that he was indeed the King of the World, and Conqueror of them. For they that are thus confounded, do within themselves call to the Rocks to cover them from the Face of the Lamb, with whose anger their Consciences were struck, in those Victories got over them, and Miseries brought upon them. And therefore it is here brought in as their Speech, to bid the Rocks cover them from the Face of the Lamb, for the great Day of the Lamb's Wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand or to abide it? as Joel 2.11.

Now the Story of those Times (when the Heathenish Religion was altered in the Empire) presents such a Face of Things as this Seal doth: For Dioclesian and Maximinian, (the greatest Persecutors that ever the Church had) in the height and ruff of their Imperial Glory and Rage, did give over their Authority and Empire, and retired themselves, whereof no Historian could give the reason, but imputed it to madness; but indeed, they did it so, (as it were) to hide themselves from the Face of the Lamb. To these succeeded Galerius, and Maximinus, and Constantine, the Father of Constantine. Maximinus persecuting the Christians, was smitten with a strange Disease, and being ever and anon convinced that Christ was King, he recalled his Edicts for the Persecution of them; and yet, like Pharaoh, he afterwards put them forth again, till at length he died miserably, acknowledging Christ's Wrath. Then was Maxentius set up by the Romans a Defender of the Heathenish Cause. But being overcome by Licinius, he threw away his Imperial Robes, fled, and lay hid for the safeguard of his Life, and acknowledged Christ by a Decree; but his Flesh was eaten of Worms. Then Licinius opposing Constantine, (joined in the Empire with him) was overcome by him, and he and his Complices condemned, at the place of Execution, acknowledging Christ to be God. What afterward befel Julian, who attempted to set up that Heathen Religion again, (as how being shot in his Wars against Persia, he took his Blood, and flinging it into the Air, cried out, Vicisti O Galilee) you cannot be ignorant of.

Observ. 1. Learn, when you see any notable overthrow given the Enemies of Christ, to raise up your Hearts to thoughts of the Day of Judgment. We find, as here, so elsewhere, notable Judgments on God's Enemies, set forth and described under the Language of that Day. It is frequent in Scripture, as Psal. 18. and elsewhere. They may mutually help to strengthen our Faith in each other; a particular Judgment, in that of the Great Day, that it will also come; and that Great Day doth also assure us, that Christ will here be avenged on his Enemies. Christ hath many great Days that forerun that Great Day; and wicked Men, and wicked Causes, have Days of Judgment here.

Observ. 2. How easy it is for the Lamb to make an alteration of Religion in a Kingdom, causing the new One which he brings in to prevail. Thus in a few Years he turned the whole Empire Christian, even when Heathenism was rooted in all Mens Hearts, and when Satan had a Throne fix'd in appearance to continue, then by his Power possessing himself of the Emperor's Heart, he (as the phrase is 1 Kings 2. 15.) turned the Kingdom about; and this, when Men's Hearts of themselves were not turned, but were as Figs not fully ripe, yet shaken off by this Wind. And he folded up the Heavens as a Scrawl, not one Constellation or Star of all those false Gods (that then shone so bright in all Men's Eyes) having shined in the World these many hundred Years. And Christ hath promised to do the like against Popery. Which State, as it is the Image of that Empire and Religion, so it shall bear the likeness of its Punishment. What a mighty change was wrought in the Hearts of Kings and Princes, upon the first Reformation! And God will work the like upon the second Reformation, before Rome is destroyed, and will put it into their Hearts to ruin her utterly.

Observ. 3. Christ thinks it not enough for him to confound his Enemies, but he will make them also to acknowledg his Truth. Thus he did by Nebuchadnezzor, by Antiochus, and by those Persecutors; and thus he will do by all the Proud of the Earth. He will not only confound the False Church and Synagogue gogue of Satan; but he will make them come and acknowledge, that God hath loved the Philadelphian, Rev. 3. 9. How often in the Prophets is this made the Fruit of their Punishment! (and by this it is expressed) they shall know that I am the Lord. It is ill standing out with Christ in any thing. Christ will have, not only every Knee to bow, but every Tongue to confess his Name. Learn we therefore not to stand out against Convictions of any kind. The Lamb will in the end have, not only a real Victory in Men's Punishments, but he will have Men render it more compleat by their Confessions and Acknowledgments.

PART I.

Observ. 4. How in dispensing Punishments, Christ meets with Persecutors in their kind: They caused poor Christians to fly into Caves and Dens, and to worship the Lamb in Corners, (as the Apologies of those Times shew); now Christ comes forth and appears openly, and drives them into Corners wherein to hide their Heads.

Observ. 5. What a glorious and long Time, Satan the God of this World, and his Devils with him, had of it, when they were counted as the only true Gods, and were worshipped for such by the whole World during the space of three hundred Years. They who are reserved in Chains for Hell, were then counted the Immortal Gods, Possessors of Heaven; and had their Seat (in all Men's Opinions) above the Stars, having all the World for their devout and zealous Worshippers. What therefore is it to have a great Name, or the best Name, the Name of a Saint for a while here! The Devils had not only the Names and Titles, but the Honours of Gods; and that, for some thousands of Years; for whom notwithstanding, the lowest Place in Hell is designed.

Observ. 6. You will not wonder at the prosperity of wicked Men, that they carry it so long in the World, if you consider but how long the Devil carried it, without encoutring any stop in his way; as having all Nations for his Inheritance; God was worship'd but in one poor corner of the Earth, but the Devil possessed the Heavens, and was as the Sun in the Firmament, and his Priests as the Moon and Stars, as if they had been perpetual Ordinances. Think not much at the continuance of Popery for 1200 Years; Heathenism stood far longer, and Christ will make more quick Work in the last Days, than in those passed.

Observ. 7. That Christ, though he be a Lamb, yet he can, and will be angry. Men have all such sweet thoughts of Christ, as if he had no Anger in him; but when his Anger is kindled but a little, then blest are all they that put their trust in him.

Observ. 8. That God punisheth Idolaters and their Idols together. Here both the Heathenish Emperors, and their Religion, and Gods, are together removed. Thus, Isa. 2. 17, 18, 19. And the loftiness of Man shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of Men shall be made low; and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that Day. And the Idols he shall utterly abolish. And they shall go into the Holes of the Rocks, and into the Caves of the Earth for fear of the Lord, and for the Glory of his Majesty; when he ariseth to shake terribly the Earth. Which Place is parallel to this here, and a Prophecy of the Kingdom of Christ. Thus God punish'd Egypt, as appears by Numb. 33. 4. where it is said, upon their Gods also he executed Judgments. The like you have in Jer. 43. 11, 12, 13. So also was Babylon and her God's punished, as Jer. 50. 2. Declare ye among the Nations, and publish, and set up a Standard, publish, and conceal not: say, Babylon is taken, Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in pieces, her Idols are confounded, her Images are broken in pieces. And thus God also did, when he began to ruin Popery, the Spiritual Egypt and Babylon. He punish'd Monks, pulling down Monasteries and their Idols together; his Anger was against them as well as against their Persons. And so Superstitious Ceremonies and Will-Worship will down together.

Observ.

Observ. 9. How fearful and terrible will the Day of Judgment be, when Christ shall come as the Lion of the Tribe of Judah, if now, when he reigns as a Lamb, (carrying things meekly, and with much patience) he brings such confounding Judgments? All Vengeance here is but the Vengeance of a Lamb, in comparison of the roaring of a Lion that is to come: For (as I take it) he is set forth as a Lamb, in respect to his Governing and Dispensations until the Day of Judgment; but then he will come as the Lion of Judah, and shew himself so much more terrible then, as a Lion is more terrible than a Lamb. All Terrors of Conscience which Men suffer here, (which yet make them call for the Hills to cover them) are but the Wrath of the Lamb in comparison of those roarings of the Lion at the Great Day. O consider this, you that forget God, lest he come and tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver you.

Chap. 4.

I shall now proceed no further by way of a large commenting, or raising any more Observations, until I come to the Second Part.

C H A P. V.

The Six First Trumpets.

NOW the six first Trumpets contain several Steps and Degrees of ruining the Imperial Government of the Empire it self when turned Christian, by several Wars and Incurfions of Barbarous Nations upon it; whereof Trumpets are fuitably made the Denouncers, and this, in revenge of fo much Christian Blood, as was fpilt when the Empire was Heathenish; even as the Captivity of Babylon did break the Jewish State for shedding Innocent Blood in the Time of Manaffes; at which Time that State was Idolatrous, though he and all Judah did afterwards turn to the True Worship of God again. And according to the Divifion of the Empire, East and West, accordingly was God's Method in the Ruining.

First, Of the Western Parts of it, by the Goths and Vandals, who utterly shattered the Government of the Occidental Emperors, and broke it into ten Kingdoms; over which the Pope fucceeded.

Then, fecondly, after that, overturning the Oriental Part.

1. By the Saracens; of whom Mahomet was the Head, who wrung one great part of the Eastern Empire in Arabia, Egypt, and Affyria, out of the Emperor's Hands, and fubjected thofe Dominions unto Mahumetanifm.

And then, 2. by the Turks profefling Mahumetanifm alfo; who conquered and fubdued, not only what the Saracens before them had done, but alfo that other part of the Eastern Empire remaining ftill Christian, namely, in Natolia and in Greece, over which the Greek Emperors (fucceffors of the Roman) till then continued, but were now wholly fubjected (together with Constantinople it felf, the Seat of their Empire) unto the Turks, who thus alone poffefs the whole Eastern Empire unto this day.

And according to this Method of ruining the Empire, the Trumpets are anfwerably divided by the Holy Ghofl.

The four firft Trumpets (which are made the leffer Evils and Miferies) are the Wars of the Goths and Vandals, in four feveral Incurfions, chap. 8. but the two latter, (the fifth and fixth) Trumpets, (which are made the Woe Trumpets, chap. 8. verf. laft. chap. 9. 12. chap. 11. 14. and fo are diftinguifh'd from the former) are thofe Infinite Calamities and Inbondagements which were brought upon the Eastern part of the Empire by the Saracen's Wars and Conquefts; who are the Fifth Trumpet; and by the Turks, who are the fixth Trumpet; both longer for Continuance, and greater for Extremity, than the four firft, and that by far.

Now to give a little general Light into thefe Trumpets, as I have done into the Seals. The Trumpets are the Vengeance upon the Empire it felf, for the Blood of the Saints therein fhed; which therefore was promifed unto the Martyrs under the fifth Seal, chap. 6. 11. whofe Prayers are here, chap. 8. 5. offer'd up by Chrift, the Time being come, for the Vengeance promifed, and fo the Trumpets found.

S E C T. I.

The Exposition of the Eighth Chapter. The four first Trumpets signifying the Ruin of the Western Empire.

THe four first Trumpets are chiefly upon the Western Empire extended all over Europe; which was performed by four Steps or Degrees.

The First falling on the Earth, vers. 7.

The Second on the Sea, vers. 8.

The Third on the Rivers, vers. 10.

The Fourth on the Sun, Moon, and Stars, vers. 12.

You must remember (as before was said) that Kingdoms and Empires are represented in Scripture, by a World that hath Heaven, Earth, Sea, &c. (as Jer. 4. 23.) Wherein,

1. The Earth, and Grass, and Trees thereon, are the lower sort of People; both the Richer and Poorer, as Zech. 11. 2. Howl Fir-Tree, for the Cedar is fallen, because all the Mighty are spoiled: Howl, O ye Oaks of Basban, for the Forrest of the Vintage is come down.

2. The Sea is the Extent of the Jurisdiction of an Empire or Kingdom over several Dominions. Therefore Rome is said to sit on many Waters, and to arise out of the Sea; which is but the Collection of many Waters; that is, many Nations. The like phrase to which is used of the Babylonish Monarchy over many Kingdoms; they are called Her Sea, Jer. 51. 36. and 44. compared, Therefore thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will plead thy Cause, and take Vengeance for thee, and I will dry up her Sea, and make her Springs dry. And I will punish Bel in Babylon, and will bring forth out of his Mouth that which he hath swallowed up, and the Nations shall not flow together any more unto him, yea, the Wall of Babylon shall fall. And the many Nations under the Assyrian Monarchy are so called, Ezek. 31. 4. The Waters made him great, the Deep set him up on high, with her Rivers running round about his Plants, and sent out her little Rivers unto all the Trees of the field.

3. The Rivers are the several Cities and Magistrates over them, who have a lesser kind of Jurisdiction over those Cities or Provinces.

4. By the Sun, Moon, and the other Stars in this World, are meant the Superior Magistrates, and the Glory of them, as Isa. 13. 10. For the Stars of Heaven, and the Constellations thereof, shall not give their Light: the Sun shall be darkned in his going forth, and the Moon shall not cause her Light to shine. Jer. 15. 9. She that hath born seven, languisheth; she hath given up the Ghost; her Sun is gone down while it is yet day; she hath been ashamed and confounded, and the residue of them will I deliver to the Sword before their Enemies, saith the Lord.

Now these four Trumpets, contain four several Degrees of Calamities by Wars that beset the Western Empire, and the City of Rome, the Head of that Empire, by the IncurSIONS of the Goths and Vandals, from the Year of Christ 400, to the Year 540. Of which,

The First harrowed the Earth, the People of that Empire, as Wars at first used to light most heavy upon them. It proceeded to no further harm, than the burning up of the Trees and Grass, as Rev. 8. 7. The first Angel sounded, and there followed Hail, and Fire mingled with Blood, and they were cast upon the Earth, and the third part of the Trees was burnt up, and all green Grass was burnt up. 1. Trumpet.

The Second fell on the Sea; for the Goths did break off from the Imperial Yoke, those Nations that were subject to it; and gave them opportunity to set up Ten Kingdoms, which remain in Europe to this day, beginning in France, Anno 413; and by 450, all the Ten were up; (as the Chronicles shew). And this renting of the Kingdoms from it, with the burning of that great Mountain, the sacking of Rome it self (which, as Babylon of old, Jer. 51. 25. is called a destroying 2. Trumpet.

PART I.

destroying Mountain, as overshadowing all Cities; and her Sacking by Cyrus, is there called the burning of the Mountain; so this spoiling and sacking of Rome by Allaricus King of the Goths, Anno 410.) is called the burning of the Mountain, Chap. 8. 8. And the second Angel sounded; and as it were a great Mountain burning with Fire, was cast into the Sea, and the third part of the Sea became Blood.

3. Trumpet. The Third Trumpet produceth the Fall of that bright Star, which is called a great Star burning as a Lamp, that is, a Blazing-Star, or Comet, which was the utter extinguishing and putting down of Emperors, Anno 476. who ceased in Augustulus, whose Fall is express'd like that of the King of Babel's, Isa. 14. 12. How art thou fallen from Heaven, O Lucifer (or Morning Star) Son of the Morning! Which Prince, upon his Fall, hath his Name given him, Wormwood, for that he was a Prince of Bitterness and Sorrows. And together with him, many Provincial Cities and Magistrates (which are called Rivers and Fountains) had their Dignity taken from them; and this is the Third Trumpet, vers. 10, 11. And the third Angel sounded, and there fell a great Star from Heaven, burning as it were a Lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the Rivers, and upon the Fountains of Waters: And the Name of the Star is called Wormwood, and the third part of the Waters became Wormwood, and many Men died of the Waters, because they were made bitter.

4. Trumpet. Rome now being in the Hands of the Goths, was the Seat of those Kings that won it, who yet conserved in it the Senators, Consuls, and Supreme Magistrates, in their ancient Glory. But then comes the Fourth Trumpet, (vers. 12. And the fourth Angel sounded, and the third part of the Sun was smitten, and the third part of the Moon, and the third part of the Stars, so as the third part of them was darkned, and the Day shone not for a third part of it, and the Night likewise) and this totally deprives this City of Rome of her ancient form of Government, under Consuls, Senators, &c. with the Glory and Majesty of which it had shined many hundred Years, before ever the Imperial Power was placed over it; and therefore that Government is here called the Sun, &c. because of the Glory and Majesty of that State, under which it had won to it self the Monarchy of the World; which Ancient Government had still continued under the Emperors, but was now wholly and utterly subverted; and this was done in the last War, Anno 542. Here was the Glory of the Western Empire and Rome utterly extinguished, but that the Pope (whom you shall find in the 13th Chapter, when we come to the Book-Prophecy) obtains a Power there (though upon another Title than these Emperors had) over these Ten Kingdoms, and builds up another Rome upon the Ruins of the Old, and so possesseth the Seat of the former Beast, the Empire. But because the Title he pretends, is the Title of the Church, although a false one; therefore his Story comes not in in this Seal-Prophecy, but in the Church-Prophecies, chap. 13.

But these four Trumpets that fall upon the West, are but lesser Evils in respect of those that are to fall upon the Eastern Part, which during all these Alterations in the West, stands entire and whole, professing the Christian Faith. The other two Trumpets, which are their Portion (chap. 9.) do, for continuance, and extremity of Calamities, infinitely exceed the other; and therefore they have this Preface to them, chap. 8. 17. [Woe, woe, woe, to the Inhabitants of the Earth, by reason of the Voices of the other Trumpets that are yet to sound]; for so God ordered it, (as his manner is) that that Eastern Part, standing longest, should be reserved unto the forer Punishment.

S E C T. II

The Exposition of the Ninth Chapter. The Fifth and Sixth Trumpets betoken the Ruin of the Eastern Empire, which was first broken by the Saracens, and at last utterly destroyed by the Turks, Anno Domini 1453.

HERE the Fifth Trumpet sounds, which produceth the falling of a Star from Heaven, which opens the Bottomless Pit, and lets out Smoak as out of a Furnace, which darkens the Sun and Air, and lets out an innumerable company of Locusts. Whose cruel Description you have, vers. 7, 8, 9, 10. And the shapes of the Locusts were like unto Horses prepared unto Battel, and on their Heads were as it were Crowns like Gold, and their Faces were as the Faces of Men; And they had Hair as the Hair of Women, and their Teeth were as the Teeth of Lions. And they had Brest-plates, as it were Brest-plates of Iron, and the sound of their Wings, was as the sound of Chariots of many Horses running to Battel. And they had Tails like unto Scorpions, and there were Stings in their Tails; and their Power was to hurt Men five months. Who torment Men so, that they shall seek Death, but shall not find it; such shall be the Calamities of those Times. By all which is set out the bringing in of Mahumetanism, the greatest Imposture that ever the World knew; which darkens the Sun and Air, by putting out the Light of Christian Profession. And this was done by Mahomet, who is that Star that fell from the Profession of Christianity, and opened Hell to bring forth that damned Religion of his, making himself the Prophet of God. Unto whom an innumerable Company of Arabians, his Country-men (who are here called Locusts for their Multitudes, as the Midianites and Amalekites are also called, Judg. 7. 12.) did cleave, and set him up as King, (vers. 11. And they had a King over them, which is the Angel of the Bottomless Pit, whose Name in the Hebrew Tongue is Abaddon, but in the Greek Tongue hath his Name Apollyon) wringing from out of the hands of the Eastern Empire, Arabia, Egypt, Assyria, Armenia, and much of Asia the Less; and extending their Dominion further, over Persia, East-India, and a great part of Africa and Spain; they became almost as great an Empire as that of Rome had been, although this Dominion of Mahomet extended another way; yet withal possessing the one half of the Eastern Empire: Only these are bidden by God not to hurt the Servants of God sealed in their Foreheads, (vers. 4.) for God had some true Believers in that part of the Eastern Empire, who yet remained Christian; and among them God had some also whom you read to have been before-hand sealed, (chap. 7. 3. Saying, Hurt not the Earth, neither the Sea, nor the Trees, till we have sealed the Servants of our God in their Foreheads) ere that any Trumpets blew; such was God's care to prevent all hurt unto them, (of which I shall afterwards particularly speak); And this Kingdom began to be set up, Anno 630, and continued many hundred Years.

Then succeeds the Sixth Trumpet, which is the second Wo Trumpet, and ordained to bring Calamities on the other part of the Eastern Empire, which was left standing still under the Successors of the Roman Monarchy, and professing the Christian Religion in Asia the Less, and in Greece, known commonly in Historians by the Name of the Empire of Greece; to Ruin which, God had ready prepared four Angels, with four several Armies of Horsemen, which amounted to 200000000, (as chap. 9. 14, 15, 16. Saying to the sixth Angel which had the Trumpet, Loose the four Angels which are bound in the great River Euphrates. And the four Angels were loosed, which were prepared for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, for to slay the third part of Men. And the number of the Army of the Horsemen were two hundred thousand thousand; and I heard the number of them); which Armies, with the Angels their Leaders (being a long while restrained) lay hovering about the Borders of the River Euphrates: Whom the Angel of this Trumpet lets loose, by the command of God, like so many Furies, to fall upon the last part of this Eastern Empire remaining; and also to conquer those other Dominions, which the Saracens (under the fifth Trumpet) had before over-run. Now according to all the Characters and Foot-Prints which we find in the Turkish Stories, no Prophecy doth, or can more punctually describe any Nation or Event, than this doth the Turks, and their Irruption upon the Eastern Empire; who when they came first out of their Native Country, about the Year 1040 after Christ, did seat themselves first by the River Euphrates, and were divided into four several Governments or Kingdoms; known commonly in Historians by these four Names; First Iconian, seated at Iconium; the second at Aleppo; the third at Damascus; and the fourth at Bagdat, or Babylon, bordering on the River Euphrates. Who having lain hovering thereabouts for the space of 200 Years, did, about the Year of Christ 1300, over-run all Natolia, or Asia the less; and joining all into one Kingdom, under Ottoman, (the Fore-father of the present great Turk) did not cease till they had won Constantinople it self, and all Greece, the Empire of which they put down, (which was now the only Relict of the Ancient Roman Empire) and this in the Year 1453, (which is 186 Years since*) who possess that whole Eastern Empire unto this day; for the Number of the Turk (which is an Hour, a Day, a Month, and a Year) is not yet fulfilled or expired, being by computation 396 Years from his first breaking out. The raising of the Turkish Empire by Ottoman in Asia the Less, was Anno Dom. 1300. Laonicus Chalcocond. de Rebus Turcicis. Lib. 1.

PART I.

S E C T. III.

The Exposition of the Seventh Chapter, why reserv'd till after that of the Eighth and Ninth. Who are intended by the 144000 Persons that were sealed in their Foreheads.

HAVING given you the meaning of the six Trumpets, Chap. 8, and 9, I must now return to shew you the meaning of those 12000 out of every Tribe, in all 144000, which you read of Chap. 7. and to tell you who they are that were there before-hand sealed. For though God, to shew his care, is said to Seal them before these Trumpets blew; yet I could not tell you who they were, so fitly, until after you should have heard, upon what parts of the World these Trumpets chiefly blew.

The Persons sealed, are, vers. 3. called, Servants of God; so that they are true Believers: they are also called Jews, not that they were so by Birth, both for that the Company they grow up into, and of whom these are the Predecessors, are said to be out of all Nations, Kindreds, and Tongues, vers. 9. and therefore are of the Gentiles; as also because the Jews have generally been hardened all along the Times of this Prophecy, to this day. But the Revelation speaking in the Language of the Old Testament, and the Types thereof, calls true Believers [Jews], and [the Israel of God]. Gal. 6. 16. And as many as walk according to this Rule, Peace be on them, and Mercy, and upon the Israel of God; and False and Idolatrous Christians it calls Gentiles, (as chap. 11. 2. But the Court which is without the Temple, leave out, and measure it not; for it is given unto the Gentiles, and the Holy City shall they tread under-foot forty and two Months) [Who say they are Jews, and are not] that is, profess themselves Christians, and are not, [but do lye] Chap. 3. 9.

These are Numbred up by Thousands, in allusion to the Thousands of Israel, as the Phrase commonly is in Moses's Writings, (Israel's 72 Persons brought into Egypt being now multiplied by Thousands) as Numb. 10. and Numb. 31. And these are said to be sealed, in allusion to that sealing of the Mourners before the Captivity of Babylon, Ezek. 9. So these, before the Miseries and Captivity of these Trumpets, as those that were to be preserved under them in all Ages. God persevering by a kind of Miracle (for it is no other to consider it) in the midst of all this Mahumetan Tyranny, both under Turks and Saracens, (in the Eastern part of the World) thousands of true Believers, even 144000, as he did under the Tyranny of Ahab, preserve 7000 that did not bow the Knee to Baal; and as he did the like Number of 144000, under the like Antichristian Tyranny in the West, as in chap. 14. in the Book-Prophecy will appear. Only there, (chap. 14.) they are more roundly in the general summed up together to the Number of 144000; whereas here they are only reckoned by twelve several particular Parcels, 12000 out of the Twelve Tribes; whether to shew their more scattered and divided Condition, happily alluding to the Twelve Tribes (then when the Apostles wrote) scattered (as James speaks, Jam. 1. 1.) in those Eastern parts; or if not so, yet to the Twelve Tribes, as living apart in several Quarters of the Land of Judea, and not as assembled at Hierusalem in the Temple. So likewise these dwelling scatteredly in several Nations, which were to be overcome by the Trumpets, not assembled in publick Worship or Churches, such as were acceptable to God, but remaining single; they are numbred by a set Number, to shew that they shall be few: For this defining of their Number, is in opposition to the innumerable Company that are to grow out of them, as vers. 9. [After this I saw a great Multitude which none could number]; and their Number being multiplied by 12, (as their Root) and a 1000, hence it is a long Number, extending in length much further than in breadth; to shew, that he speaks not of Christians as in one Age arising to this Number, but through many Ages continuing. And they are multiplied by 12, to shew their Breed and Kind to be from the Apostles, and of the Apostolick Faith, (which chap. 21. 14. is made the Mystery of this Number, And the Wall of the City had twelve Foundations, and in them the Names of the twelve Apostles of the Lamb). And they are presented in one Uniform State during all that Time, even unto the New Hierusalem: of which, because these, and their Successors, are to be made partakers, therefore it is that those Promises of the New Jerusalem, and the representation of it, comes in from the 9th to the end, to shew their partaking therein, as the Reward of the great Tribulation they come out of; vers. 14, 15. And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said unto me, These are they which came out of the great Tribulation, and have washed their Robes, and made them white in the Blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the Throne of God, and serve him day and night in his Temple: and he that sitteth on the Throne shall dwell among them.

Now these seem to be a differing Company, from that 144000 in the 14th Chapter; for those there do not remain till the New Hierusalem, in that dark and loose condition, upon Mount Sion; but long before do break forth into a separation from Antichrist, and set up glorious Temples, filled visibly with the Presence of God, as Smoak, out of which come the Vials: but these continue in one uniform Condition still alike, untill the very approach of the New Hierusalem, and do then come newly out from under a sore and long Bondage, (here called great Tribulation) and are presented as more scattered and divided, as being more spread over the Face of the Earth, singly here and there, and therefore reckoned up by several Tribes, whereas those there are summed up together, only in their total Number they are alike, being but a few both of them, and in like Times of Darkness and Desolation; yet with this difference, that the one continues to the very New Jerusalem, but the other long before grows up to a glorious Light, and then out-grows that Number.

Now who these 144000 are, (out of whom (as being the Predecessors of them) do come that innumerable Company, that shall, together with the Jews, possess the New Hierusalem) is made the enquiry of John, and is one of the Wonders of this Book; which therefore one of the 24 Elders would have John especially to mark and observe, as a strange thing, beyond the expectation and imagination of Men, that God should ever take those (so numerable a Company) into so great a Priviledg, as to be made Denisons of the New Hierusalem, and have their Names found there. This you may observe, by the Question which the Elder asketh John, to provoke and stir up his Observation, (vers. 13.) What are these? and whence come they? Thence! where (when you are told) you will scarce believe that God should intend this so great a Priviledg unto such, even the poor Christian Elect Believers, dispersedly scattered over the Eastern parts of the World (the now Turkish Dominions) which were anciently called the Eastern Empire, and the Churches therein, called the Grecian Churches. And for this, I take the Holy Ghost's own designation, (and as it were his pointing with the Finger at them) to be my Guide and Warrant for this Interpretation; as also the Characters of, and Notes of difference of the 144000 here, and in chap. 14.

PART I.

1. It is evident, their Sealing here is for their preservation from hurt, (as vers. 3. Saying, Hurt not the Earth, neither the Sea, nor the Trees, till we have sealed the Servants of our God in their Foreheads) from the four Winds that were to be let loose, (mentioned vers. 1. And after these things, I saw four Angels standing on the four Corners of the Earth, holding the four Winds of the Earth, that the Wind should not blow on the Earth, nor on the Sea, nor on any Tree); by which are meant the cruel Blasts of devastating and depopulating Wars of fierce and cruel Nations, dashing against each other, as Winds use to do. Thus the Wars that scattered Elam or Persia, (in Jeremy's Prophecy) are expressed Jer. 49. 36. And upon Elam will I bring the four Winds from the four Quarters of Heaven, and will scatter them towards all those Winds, and there shall be no Nation, whither the out-casts of Elam shall not come. Now these Wars, or Winds, are all one with the Blasts of the ensuing Trumpets, (chap. 8. 9.) for to prevent the hurt of these Servants of God under them Trumpets is it that these are thus aforehand sealed. Only, what is there particularly expressed by Trumpets, is here in general expressed by the four Winds. Now then, according to Reason, look which of these ensuing six Trumpets are the forest, and bring most hurt and danger to the Servants of God, the sealing of them must most respect the Times, and Plagues of those Trumpets. Now according to the Note of Aggravation, which the Holy Ghost himself hath put upon the fifth and sixth Trumpets, is that they are the Va Tube, the Wo Trumpets; so chap. 8. 13. And I beheld, and heard an Angel flying through the midst of Heaven, saying with a loud Voice, Wo, wo, wo to the Inhabitants of the Earth, by reason of the other Voices of the Trumpet of the three Angels which are yet to sound; in respect of which the four first are but mild and gentle: And then, according to the former Interpretation given, these two Wo Trumpets being the over-runnings of the Saracen and Mahumetan Nations, the greatest Plague in respect of outward War and Bondage that ever befel the Christian World; which Trumpets were to be (and have been) for Time, five times double the continuance of the other four Trumpets, for it is already 1000 Years since they began; and the other four took up but 200 Years; and for extremity of Bondage, there hath been no comparison between those four first Trumpets, and these two latter. The Wars of the Goths indeed, did rather relieve the Servants of God against the Flood of Arrian Persecution, (as chap. 12. 16. And the Earth helped the Woman, and the Earth opened her Mouth, and swallowed up the Flood which the Dragon cast out of his Mouth) although it did break and harrow the Empire. Hence therefore surely the Hurt aimed at by God, which these 144000 were in danger of, must needs in reason be from these two Trumpets especially; and therefore must chiefly respect the Elect Christians in the Eastern Parts, where these Trumpets sounded; for the Christians in the West were in no danger of them. It must therefore respect these Tribes seated among them. Add to this, that even the Winds of some of those four first Trumpets also reached unto great devastations of some of these Eastern Parts. And the first breaking forth of those Goths and Barbarous Nations, was upon Thrace, Macedon, Theffaly, and Greece, ruining all the Cities therein, except Athens and Thebes; and then after five Years harrowing the East, they fell upon the West, but first began in the East. So then, the two first, and longest, and forest, being upon the Eastern Christians, and they beginning and ending thus also with them; in reason, the sealing of them must principally and eminently be intended, according to the proportion that the Trumpets fell upon them; which was ten-fold to what they did upon the Western.

2. And

2. And as in reason it must be so, so the Holy Ghost hath declared, that the preservation from the Hurt of those Mahumetan Invasions, was the aim of this sealing thus afore-hand, (so great was God's care) and that therefore these Servants of God, the 144000 sealed here, are indeed the Christians of the East, who were only in danger to be hurt in their Souls by Apostacy, through the tyranny of these Trumpets. You may read in the 9th Chapter, vers. 4. that when these Saracen Locusts, under their Ring-leader Mahomet, were first let loose, and had their Commission, that then comes in this Clause of Exception, that they should hurt only those Men that were not sealed. In that therefore then, and not till then, and there only, the mention of this Priviledge of their being sealed comes in, it manifestly argues, that the main and primary intention of the sealing of this Company, had its place and accomplishment in Persons that were under the Blasts of these Locusts. The Holy Ghost hath set this as an hand in the Margent, to point at them; and to shew, that although in the Vision their sealing comes in before-hand, (chap. 7.) yet here especially it receives its intended aim and fulfilling, in the real execution of it; as if he had said, Now comes in the Mystery of the sealing of those 144000, (chap. 7.) in these two Trumpets, the fifth and sixth. Neither can it be objected, that even the Christians in the West were preserved from the Hurt of these IncurSIONS; in that these Mahumetans were restrained from breaking in upon these ten Kingdoms; and that so they might be meant.

For, 1. the Mystery of Sealing, notes the singling out, and marking of some here and there, from the croud of others (designed to ruin) by God's special hand of Providence; even as the Door-Posts of the Israelites were marked, as a Man marks his Sheep when he puts them in among other Drovers: And so the Mourners going into Captivity with the rest, were marked: But so, not the Servants of God in the West only, but all the Kingdoms of the West should have been said to be sealed; which is contrary to the Mystery of Sealing here intended. And therefore it must mean God's scattered Ones, under the Blasts of those Trumpets scattered (like the twelve Tribes, Jam. 1. 1.) here and there in those Countries, but their Souls preserved faithful unto Christ, maugre all the Mahumetan Seducements or Bondage they were then subjected unto.

And, 2. they are said (when they partake of the New Jerusalem, vers. 14, 15.) to come out of great Tribulation: and therefore it must be meant of such as were not wholly kept free from Mahumetan IncurSIONS, but were under them, and in great Tribulation by reason of them. For (as Forbes well observes) that great Tribulation (chap. 7. 14.) must needs be the danger of those Locusts, (chap. 9. 4.) from the Hurt of which (so as not to damn their Souls, though afflict them they might) they should be preserved; (although he indeed interprets both this Tribulation, and the Hurt done by the Locusts, to be that Anti-christian Persecution in the West, but is rather that Tyranny of Mahumetans in the East.)

Add to all this the many Characters in the Text, that carry it to these Eastern Christians, affording probable Reasons that they should be intended: As,

First; That the Angel, who seals them, is said to ascend from the East, (vers. 2.) or from the rising of the Sun, (as it is in the Original) as coming up like the Sun when it riseth, in the Eastern Part of the Horizon, or of the World. And his standing there to Seal these Christians, manifestly thereby draweth our Eyes to the Eastern parts of the World, as the place where these sealed Ones are to be found.

And, secondly, That they are presented as a few that may be numbered, and as making up but a few in many Ages (as was said) and living in that condition, even to the very Times of the New Jerusalem, under great Tribulation, and scattered apart like to the twelve Tribes; and that from the Primitive Times, in this uniform condition of Paucity, and Tribulation, and Darkness; which (as was observed) those 144000, in chap. 14. are not, but do arise up to a greater Light and Victory, before the Time of the New Jerusalem under the

PART I.

Vials: Now how doth this agree with those poor, forlorn, Eastern Christians, whose Churches have remained corrupt and dark, and overwhelmed with Superstition and Ignorance under all these Times, (and so but a few among them Holy) and have been under these Mahumetan Tribulations a thousand Years, the one half of them, and the other half two hundred Years, and continue still to do so under the Turks, without any ease from Misery, or restoring to Light and Beauty. And yet Christ hath had a Company among them, though scattered and divided; for so they are parted into several Sects and Companies, as the Grecian and Armenian Christians, &c. And therefore God hath preserved among them the Knowledg and Profession of Christ, and of much more Truth than is in the Romish Church (in the dark Times of it) to be found; which God sanctifies to some of them. And in that, according to all the best Interpreters, this Turkish Tyranny and Tribulation is to continue, even till the New Jerusalem, (for the Turks is to be overthrown, to make way for the Jews, the Kings of the East, under the sixth Vial, and to be destroyed by the Seventh); how doth this accord also with this, that the state of these Eastern Saints is represented here to consist of so few, and those to be under great Tribulation until the Time of the New Jerusalem, as that which should prove their first Deliverance; and when they come into the New Jerusalem, to be as it were but new come out of that Great Tribulation. And the wonder that is made at this God's gracious dealing with a People, so of all Christians forgotten, and not accounted of, (that ever they should be taken into this New Jerusalem) doth further confirm it: For that the Western Churches, that have born the heat of Antichristian Persecution, and overcome Antichrist, (and shall in the end perfect their Victory) and have set up Temples, encreasing more and more in Light and Glory, even until the New Jerusalem; that these should be made partakers of the New Jerusalem, is no wonder, no strange thing; for they growing up unto it, it were strange if it should prove otherwise: And therefore, chap. 19. 1, &c. we find them (after the Ruin of the Whore) preparing themselves yet more for the Marriage of the Lamb. But that these forlorn Grecians should be taken into it, among whom we scarce imagine any Believers at all to be, this might well be made one of the greatest Wonders of God's richest Grace and Mercy, (and hath as much affected my Heart to consider, since the time God led me into the thoughts of it, as any thing through the whole Book) that (as the Prophet saith) this Ephraim should be his pleasant Child, who would have thought! But this is just like God, whose Ways are unsearchable, and his Works past finding out. And therefore one of the Elders says here unto John, vers. 13. (as provoking him to observe this Passage, as much as any thing in this Book) What are these? and whence come they? And John says unto him, Thou knowest; and he said, These are they who come out of great Tribulation; and indeed the greatest Tribulation that ever the Servants of God were under.

And there are these probable likelihoods for this also, (even according to the course of God's Ways and Dealings) for God to chuse such a People from under so great Tribulation, and who are of all the lowest; and therefore, or for this cause (as it is vers. 14.) to make them partakers of so great a Priviledg; this is just like God, who loves to do Acts of Mercy, which may justly set all the World a wondering. And they having born the Heat of the Day, and continued in the Profession of Christ as well as we; reason is, they should be recompenced, and have their Penny also. And they being seated in those very Dominions where the Turk is seated, who is to be overthrown by or for the Jews, to make way for them to get possession of their own Land, which lieth in those Eastern Countries, and in the midst of those Nations, (who are therefore called Kings of the East, Chap. 16. 12.); how probable is it therefore that upon the Ruin of the Turks, they shall be thus delivered! and that if any Gentiles be partakers of the Jew's Priviledg, those Christian Gentiles should, who have been oppressed by this their Common Enemy, and who dwell and inhabit in Countries near, and about the Land of the Jews; especially if their Land shall be made (as is thought by some) the chief Seat of that Fifth Monarchy; then surely, these Nations that are nearest them, are like most to partake the Benefit and Light of it ; which also the Prophets have foretold, that the Gentiles (yea, and these Gentiles) should walk in.

Chap. 5.

Lastly ; If mention be not made of the Grecian Churches here in this place, then there is none, or scarce any (according to the course of the best Interpreters) in all this Book. The Book-Prophecy is wholly taken up with the state of the Western Churches opposing Antichrist, (chap. 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19.) as being they whom God means chiefly to use for the ruining of that great Antichrist; among whom therefore he hath continued the Knowledg of Christ, and the Face of Churches in the greatest Power and Purity ; and therefore the Revelation speaks most of them. But yet, there having been a continuance of the Profession of the Christian Name in those Grecian and Armenian Churches, even from the Primitive Times ; and at this day their number amounting to as many as the Professors in Europe do, notwithstanding Mahumetan Incurfions: can we think that God hath passed them over in silence in this Book ? surely no. Seeing therefore that the Book-Prophecy is taken up with the Western Oppositions, to the great Antichrist of the West ; hence, most fitly, in this Seal-Prophecy, (wherein the Mahumetan Oppressors bear so great a part) does come in, the Representation of the State of those Eastern Christians under Mahomet, Christ so keeping possession, both in the East and West. And the Event hath been according to the Prophecy : True Believers have been, and yet are continued among them, even as our Eyes may read in all Stories of those Eastern Parts, and our Ears have heard the Report of to this day : whose Confession of Faith you may read, being printed in English, Anno 1629. set forth by Cyril the present Patriarch of Constantinople : and you may, with joy, find it in all Fundamental Points, as our own Confession is. See also Field of the Church, Book 3. Chap. 1, 2, 3, and 5.

S E C T. IV.

A short view of the Tenth and Eleventh Chapters. The Ends for which the Mighty Angel, i. e. Christ, descended from Heaven. The Seal-Prophecy being closed, a New Prophecy is given, which begins at the Twelfth Chapter.

THUS the Seal-Prophecy, under the Visions of these Seals and Trumpets, having run over the Story of all Times, which concern the Ruin of the Roman Empire downward, from Christ's Time even to our Days, (for the Miseries of the sixth Trumpet still continue, and shall last till near the Time of the seventh Trumpet, which is to bring in the Kingdom of Christ, Chap. 11. vers. 14, 15. with whose sounding, this first Seal-Prophecy, (as do all Kingdoms and Times) ends. Jesus Christ therefore, in the likeness of a Mighty Angel, comes down from Heaven ; and that to a double end :

First, To give the World and the Church warning by an Oath, that now Time should be no longer, but till this Wo of the sixth Trumpet (that is, the Turks Dominion) should expire and pass away, (as his Speeches in the 10th Chapter, vers. 6, 7. And swear by Him that liveth for ever and ever, who created Heaven, and the Things that therein are ; and the Earth, and the Things that therein are ; and the Sea, and the Things which are therein, that there should be Time no longer. But in the Days of the Voice of the seventh Angel, when he shall begin to sound, the Mystery of God should be finished, as he hath declared to his Servants the Prophets. And in the 11th Chapter, vers. 14, 15. compared together do shew ; The second Wo is past, and behold, the third Wo cometh quickly. And the seventh Angel sounded, and there were great Voices in Heaven, saying, The Kingdoms of this PART I. World, are become the Kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever.

And secondly, To give withal a New Prophecy, this Seal-Prophecy being thus ended. Wherefore he now comes with the Book open in his Hand, which chap. 5. John saw sealed, the Seals being now taken off, and the Visions of them already past; which Book contains another distinct Prophecy to be given anew unto John, which therefore he is bidden to eat, (as Ezekiel of old was) and he should be enabled to receive and write a New Prophecy, (as appears chap. 10. vers. 9. 11. And I went unto the Angel, and said unto him, Give me the little Book. And he said unto me, Take it, and eat it up, and it shall make thy Belly bitter, but it shall be in thy Mouth sweet as Honey. And he said unto me, Thou must prophesy again before many Peoples, and Nations, and Tongues, and Kings); which new entire Prophecy begins chap. 12. after this Angel had further, by word of Mouth, a while discoursed what should be the State and Face of his purest Churches in the Western part, (vers. 1, & 2.) in those last days, to which this Seal-Prophecy had brought John, namely, the Times immediately, or not many Years before that seventh Trumpet was to bring in his Kingdom; and after that this Angel had fore-warned those Churches of a great and sore Conflict which they were to have with Antichrist towards the end of all; out of which they should rise again; and then comes the end of Antichrist, and of the Turk also. After he had given all this as a signal or warning to the Church when the End should be (all which he doth chap. 11. 1. and from vers. 7, to the 14.); then (I say, after that short digression made by this Angel (Christ) who came principally to give John a new compleat Prophecy) doth that new Book-Prophecy begin in new Visions, (at the 12th Chapter) which contains the Fates that should befall the Church in all Ages from Christ's Time, as the Seal-Prophecy had done those of the Empire.

C H A P. VI.

Of the Book-Prophecy, that begins at Chap. 12. An Account of the general Design of it.

The State of the Church from Christ's Time, until the Kingdom of Christ, may be divided into two :

1. The State of the Church during the first 400 Years after Christ, usually called the Primitive Times.
2. The State of the Church during the Times of Antichrist, whom Jesus Christ is to destroy with the brightness of his Coming.

1. The State of the Church, during those first 400 Years, may be divided into its Condition until the Time of Constantine, the first Christian Emperor ; and the State of the Church from his Time, under the Arrian Emperors, and others Christian, until the Rise of Antichrist, about an hundred Years after the beginning of Constantine's Reign. These were the two eminent various Conditions of the Church in those first four hundred Years.

2. For the State of the Church during the Times of Antichrist, namely, the Pope, who succeeded the Western Emperor here in Europe, (for of the State of the Church in the Eastern part of the Empire, especially under the Turks and Saracens, you formerly heard in the Seal-Prophecy, chap. 7. and therefore this Book-Prophecy speaks little of it, but (in a manner) only of the Western Church, which now indeed was made the more eminent Stage, as for Antichrist, so for Christ to play his Part upon) this State of the Church in the West (I say) was,

1. Either that of the false pretended Church, whereof Antichrist is and was the Head : Or,
2. The State of the True Church under Antichrist, and during his Time; whereof Jesus Christ is the Head.

Now, answerably to this Division, are the ensuing Chapters to be divided. The 12th Chapter shews you the State of the Church under the first four hundred Years. And Chap. 13, 14, &c. shew the State of the Church afterwards, during Antichrist's Times. These are the Divisions of the State of the Church from Christ's Time hitherto.

And, first, This 12th Chapter shews the Face of the Church in these Primitive Times; and that under those two fore-mentioned eminent Conditions.

First, As under Heathenish Rome until Constantine's Time, when the Empire turned Christian; from the 1st Verse to the 13th, under the Vision of a Woman bringing forth a Male Child to rule all Nations; (that is, a Christian Emperor) wherein she is opposed by a Dragon, (the Devil in the power of an Heathenish Emperor, endeavouring to devour her Child).

The Vision and Appearance of this Woman is such, and so glorious, as it fits no State of the Church, but that pure and glorious Church of the Primitive Times. She is a Woman, weak, yet glorious, as being clothed with the Sun, (the Righteousness of Christ) crowned with a Crown of twelve Stars, (the twelve Apostles); her Head (the first part of that Church) having been honoured with their Preaching, and holding forth the Light of their Doctrine; She had the Moon under her Feet, she was above the World, and the rage of Heathenish

PART I.

Heathenish Persecution, (for they loved not their Lives unto the Death); and, as a Woman, all that while labouring in sore Travail, under ten sore Throws of Persecution, yet labouring with God, Day and Night, in Hopes and Prayers in the end to bring forth, and obtain Christian Emperors that should set Christ in the Throne to Rule with them, and throw down Heathenism from the Imperial Throne, in which the Devil ruled; the Empire being all that while under the Heathenish Throne of Satan, and is therefore represented under a Dragon having seven Heads and ten Horns, which are ever in this Book the Character of the Roman Empire. And it is now called the Dragon, because Satan did openly and visibly act it. Now the throwing down the Dragon from the Throne, (which was his Heaven, and where he was worshipp'd as God) doth this Woman in the end obtain, and prevails through the help of Michael (namely Jesus Christ) and his Angels, (the Apostles and Preachers of their Gospel.)

And then, secondly, The State of the True Church, when the Roman World was now turned Christian, for the first hundred Years after Constantine; which Church was also persecuted by Arrian Emperors, though Christians, and was like to have been ruined by the multitude of Carnal Professors; in so much as she is presented, as hasting to fly into a Wilderness; that is, into an hidden retired Condition; and in her flight, hath a Flood of Arrian Persecution sent after her, to drown her, but that the Earth, the Goths and Vandals (whom you heard of under the first Trumpet) came in accidentally, by God's Providence, and helped her, by breaking the Arrian Faction; which is the swallowing up the Flood. (The Arrians, though they profess'd Christ, yet they denied him to be God; into which Heresy the whole Empire fell, and persecuted the Church for professing the contrary, as much as ever the Heathen Emperors had done.) And this State of the Church you have described from the 13th Verse, to the end of the 12th Chapter.

C H A P. VII.

The Exposition of Chap. 13. in which is set forth the State of the False Church under Antichrist. What his Name, and the Number of his Name denotes to us. A short account of the Time which some fix for his Fall.

THe State of the Church, and her Conflicts with Satan the first four hundred Years, being thus described chap. 12. in the following Chapters is set forth the State of the Church from that Time, during the Times of Antichrist; all which Time there was, and is, both his false Antichristian Church, and the True Church under him, running along together. Now the Description of Antichrist (the Pope) and his False Church, in his Rise, Power, Greatness, and extent of his Dominions, and of the Company that should cleave to him, is set forth in the Visions of the 13th Chapter: which afterwards in the 17th Chapter, the Holy Ghost himself interprets and makes a Comment on. And then the opposite Company of the True Church, who have the Lamb for their Head, are described in the 14th Chapter; and that in all those several States and Conditions, which during all that Time they should run under; and this from the first Rise of Antichrist, until these very Times wherein we live; with which (I take it) the Visions of that 14th Chapter do end.

First, for Antichrist and his Church in the 13th Chapter; and this set forth unto us under the Vision of a Two-fold Beast, which points at the Pope according to his double pretended Claim of Power and Headship in the Church; Which is,

1. Temporal; which he claims over all Kings and Kingdoms, to Depose and Excommunicate them and their Subjects at his pleasure. Unto which the Ten Kings and Kingdoms of Europe (into which the Western Empire was now by the Goths reduced) did tacitly, and with one consent, submit themselves, and gave their Power up, (as you may read it interpreted, chap. 17. from vers. 12. to 17.) And so, the Pope, together with the Body of these ten Kingdoms joining into one, whereof he becomes the Head, is that first Beast with ten Horns, described in this 13th Chapter, from vers. 1. to 11; which New Beast is a true Image of the former Roman Monarchy in the 12th Chapter; which being wounded and slain in the Emperor's being Deposed, is healed and restored to Life again in this Beast; and so, the Roman Monarchy comes still to continue, though under another Head, namely, the Pope.

2. Besides this Temporal Power which he receives from the Kings of these ten Kingdoms, (who in that respect do together with him make up one Beast); He and his Clergy do claim a Spiritual Power of Binding and Loosing, of pardoning Sins, and of cursing Men to Hell, which is peculiar to Christ alone. And in that respect, he, and the Body of his False Clergy with him, do make up another Beast, having two Horns like a Lamb, as exercising that Spiritual Power of Christ; for which, they and he are properly called Antichrist. And this Description you have of him from vers. 11. to the end of this 13th Chapter: He being Head of two Bodies, Ecclesiastical and Temporal, is described under two Beasts. Now this Spiritual Beast (the Pope and his Clergy) is he, who by his lying Doctrines, did persuade the Ten Kings and their Subjects, to subject themselves in one Body under him as their Head; and is said to make the Image of the first Beast, namely, of that Dragon mentioned in the 12th Chapter, that is, of the former Heathenish Empire, and the Religion thereof; which is therefore said to live again.

PART I.

For, 1. both these Kingdoms becoming one under the Pope as their Head, are in their very Form of Government, the Image of the Empire under one Emperor formerly; and so, the Roman Monarchy, in the joining of these ten Kingdoms under one Head, the Pope, may be said still to continue.

But besides, 2. This new Beast is called the Image of the first Beast, not simply in respect of like Form of Government and Tyranny; but further, in a Religious respect, in that the Pope and his Clergy do mould the Christian Religion (which now they profess) and the Worship thereof, into a true likeness and conformity to the Heathenish Religion, which the Empire before was framed unto. For all the Popish Worship is but the translating of those Ceremonies, wherewith those False Gods, Jupiter, Apollo, &c. (who were cast down under the sixth Seal) were worshipped, into Religious Ceremonies in their Worship, wherewith they worship Christ and his Saints. So as, were any of the ancient Heathen Romans now alive, and should come into their Assemblies, and behold their Priests in White, their Processions, their Sprinkling with Holy Water, their Altars, Tapers, Images of Saints departed, and their worship of them; their Pontifex Maximus, or Great Bishop and High Priest, &c. they would cry out, and say, This is just our old Roman Heathenish Religion; only Jupiter is turned into Christ, and the Priests of the Gods of old, into Popish Bishops; and our Ancient Gods, Mars, Janus, Æsculapius, &c. (who were Men departed) are changed for Saints departed: So that the Life of the old Religion remains still, tho there be a change of the Gods worshipped. Thus, as Babel of old made an Image, and put to death all that would not fall down before it; so hath Mystical Babylon (for to that Babel, and to that Image, is the Allusion) set up an Image of the old Heathenish Religion and Worship, and upon the like Penalty enjoins the Adoration of this Image, and a conformity in Worship, to all the Subjects of these ten Kingdoms.

Now the Company that cleave unto this Beast, and may more or less be esteemed the Followers of him, are (as Mr. Brightman hath well observed upon vers. 16, 17.) distinguished into three Ranks of Men in several Degrees, some more, some less, acknowledging or cleaving to him, and to this his Image and Worship. Some receive his Mark or Character; Others his Name only; Others the Number of his Name: But so, as those who will not receive or submit to one of these, more or less, during the Time that is allotted him to Reign, may not buy nor sell, that is, cannot subsist or abide in these his allotted Dominions. This receiving of a Mark, &c. is a Similitude drawn from the old Roman Custom, which was to print on the Forehead of Servants, the Names of their Masters; and on the Hands of Souldiers, the Names of their Emperors or Generals. So these Men that do belong unto this Great Lord, and that are of his Faction, do accordingly more or less receive that; whereby they may be known to be his.

1. Some receive his Character, as all Priests and Religious Persons do, whether they be Jesuits or others, who are this Grand Seigneur's Janisaries, his sworn Soldiers and Prætorian Band. Their Doctrine is, that a Man entred into Holy Orders, doth, by his Ordination, receive an indelible Character, a secret invisible Stamp or Impres, which can never be rased out.

2. Others receive his Name; and so though not in Orders under him, yet so cleave to him and his Worship, as themselves openly profess that they are his, by suffering themselves to be called by his Name, which is that whereby they own him. Thus as he is called Papa (the Pope) they profess themselves Papists, or to be of the Pope as their Head. And as he is called Pontifex, they are called Pontifici. And even as Christ is called the High Priest of our Profession, (Heb. 3. 2.) and so we accordingly called Christians from the Profession of him: so the Pope being their Pontifex, or High-Priest of their Profession, they, to shew so much, do hold forth the Profession of him, by taking his very Name, and in all things fully subjecting themselves unto him as his Sons.

But now, 3. what should be meant by the Number of his Name; that Mr. Brightman carries rightly to a Company taking part with him, by a more remote kind of Subjection: but he not knowing well whom to fasten it upon, brings brings in the poor Grecians, that are Strangers unto him, and out of the Dominion of any of his Ten Kingdoms; who although they renounced all acknowledgment of the Pope for their Head for many hundred Years; yet were at last, through sleights, and the baseness of one of their Emperors, together with the Conquest that the Europeans made of Constantinople for a while, brought to yield a subjection thus far, as to acknowledg him for their Head, and so were called Latins, or of the Profession of the Latin Church, (which Name I find some to this day (that are Popish Christians among the Greeks) to be called by, by way of distinction from the other) and so received (says he) the Number of his Name $\lambda\alpha\tau\acute{\iota}\nu\omicron\varsigma$; Latinus; the Numeral Letters whereof (in the Greek Tongue) make 666, the Number that follows in the last Verse of this Chapter. But this forced Subjection of the Grecians so remote, as it might be intended (for those more Ancient Times) yet withal I think, that it is not only or principally meant:

First, Because these Grecian Christians are not Inhabitants within the Jurisdiction of those Ten Kingdoms of Europe, the Subjects whereof are mainly intended, as being those Inhabiters of the Earth, that should be the Worshippers of this Beast, and cleavers unto him, (vers. 8, & 14.) and so of them, and among them, must be found this Number of his Name; as well as those that receive his Name.

And, secondly, because the Christians in the West, who assist the pouring forth the Vials, are as well said (some of them) to overcome the Number of his Name; as (others of them do) his Image, or Idolatrous Worship, or his Character of lying Priests, or the Beast himself; so chap. 15. 2. I take it therefore, that this Number of his Name must be found in Europe, in some of these ten Kingdoms, where that Company are that pour out the Vials.

Now take the Times of Popery before the Reformation (that is, afore the Time that Protestant Kingdoms did first begin to cast off the Pope) and there were none that were suffered to have such a remis (no nor any lesser) kind of owning the Beast, but must all (as they did) receive his Mark, or his Name, and be professed Papists, coming to Mass, acknowledging the Pope, and worshipping his Image; or they might not buy and sell, they might not live quietly as others did. Therefore these that receive the Number of his Name, must be some Generation of Men risen up since, and that also within those Kingdoms (some of them) that have renounced the Pope: For within the Popish Dominions (unto this Day) either the Inquisition suffers none to profess less than the receiving his Name at least; or in others, those that are of Papists the most moderate, yet receive the Name of the Beast at least, and so, more than the Number of his Name. But this Number of his Name seems to be a Company that proceed not so far as to receive his Character; professing themselves to be Priests of Rome, nor to receive his Name; for they do not profess themselves to be Papists, and yet are of the Number of his Name; that is, do hold and bring in such Doctrines and Opinions, and such Rites in Worship, as shall make all Men reckon, account, or number them among Papists in Heart and Affection; and so, they are of the Number of his Name, that is, in account such, they behave themselves so as they are, and deserve to be accounted and esteemed Papists, and to aim at Popery, in the Judgment of all Orthodox and Reformed Protestants: and that justly, for although their Profession deny it, yet when their Actions, and their corrupting of Doctrine and Worship shall speak it to all Men's Consciences, they cannot but judg that the Pope, and the fear of him, is before their Eyes, (as David speaks of wicked Men.) And as those in Titus, that profess they know God, yet in their Works deny him, are justly accounted Atheists; so those that shall profess the Reformed Religion, yet in all their Practices, and under-hand Policies, depress it, and advance the Popish Party, are justly to be accounted Papists, and to have received the Number of his Name.

The phrase, [Number of a Name] is not only taken for a Name consisting of Numeral Letters, and so, not only for Number Arithmetical; but the word [Number] is in many Languages put for the Account, Reckoning, or Esteem, that is commonly had of Men ; as in Latin we say, He is one nullius Numeri, of no Number, or Account ; and so among the Grecians, ἐν πολέμῳ ἕναριθμῶ, is used by Homer, for one in great Account in War, being numbred or esteemed a Souldier.

PART I.

So then, Number of a Name, is a common Esteem or Account to be such or such an One ; and so the Number of the Beast's Name here, is the common repute or esteem to be a Papist, procured through under-hand advancing of the Popish Cause. It being therefore spoken in a distinct and lower degree from receiving his Name or his Mark, (which note out an open Profession) doth yet necessarily import so much, inclining and cleaving to him (though secretly) as shall deserve that account and repute to be so numbred, as being indeed tacitely and in Heart, as truly of his Company, as those that receive his Name. Now if in opening the meaning of the Holy Ghost in the Phrase here, this Description shall seem to the Life to picture out a Generation of such kind of Popish Persons as these in any (even the most Famous) of the Reformed Churches, certainly there will not want good ground for it : for though they, with an impudent fore-head, renounce the Pope's Character, and the Name of Papists, and will by no means be called Priests of Baal, (though Priests they affect to be called) but boast themselves to be of the Reformation, and opposites to the Papal Faction ; yet with as much impudence do they bring in an Image of Popish Worship and Ceremonies, adding to some old Limbs, never cast out, other substantial parts, of Altars, Crucifixes, Second Service, and the like, so to make up a full likeness in the Publick Service, to that of the Popish Church : they bring in the Carcass first, which may afterwards be inspired with the same Opinions. And all this, not as Popery, or with the annexion of Popish Idolatrous Opinions, but upon such grounds only, as upon which Protestants themselves have continued some other Ceremonies. And as in Worship, so in Doctrine, they seek to bring in a Presence in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, beyond that which is Spiritual, to Faith, which yet is not Popish Transubstantiation ; a Power in Priests to forgive Sins, beyond that which is declarative, yet not that which Mass-Priests arrogate : Justification by Works, yet not so grossly as in the way of Popish-Merit, but as a Condition of the Gospel as well as Faith ; and many the like to these ; thus truly setting up an Image of Old Popery in a Protestant Reformed Way, even as Popery is an Image of Heathenish Worship in a Christian Way. Say these Men what they will, that they hold not of the Pope, nor any way intend him, or the introducing of his Religion into these Churches, yet their Actions do (and cannot but) make all Men number them as such ; and therefore we say, They have gained that esteem at Home and Abroad in all the Churches : and it is no more than what the Holy Ghost prophesied of, who hath fitted them with a Description so Characteristical, as nothing is more like them than this of these here, who are said to receive the Number of his Name. And they doing this in a way of Apostacy from their former Profession and Religion in which they were trained up, and in a Church so full of Spiritual Light, where God hath more Witnesses than in all the rest of the Churches, and with an intention and conspiracy in the end to make way for the Beast, (this going before, as the Twi-light doth serve to usher in Darkness) therefore the Holy Ghost thought them worthy of this Character, (in this Prophecy) and of a discovery of them unto whom they do belong ; especially seeing they would so professedly deny it. And though haply but in one of the ten Kingdoms, (although the Lutherans else-where look very like this Description also) ; yet seeing they were to grow so potent a Faction, as to have power to hinder the (buying and selling) quiet living of others amongst them, who will not receive this Worship and Doctrine, (which is a new refined Popery) and with it the Number of his Name ; that is, those Opinions and Practices which do deserve that esteem. And further, because they were to be the Pope's last Champions before his Fall, whom those that are the true Saints, (of whom the greatest Number in the last Age before the Pope's Ruin, is in, or belonging to that one Kingdom) are to encounter and overcome, before the ruin of Rome ; therefore the Holy Ghost thought not fit to leave such a Company out of the Beast's Number and Followers ; and that also, although they were to continue but a short time ; for the Doom of these Men we have in another Prophecy, (as their Description also) 2 Tim. 3. from the 1st verse to the 10th, the Prophecy there being of a Generation of Men to arise in the last Days, (the Papists rising is attributed to the Latter Days, in 1 Tim. 4. chap. but the rise of these to the last of the last Days) who shall set themselves principally against the Power and Spirit of True Worship, and set up a Form or Image instead of it, vers. 5. but their Doom is, (vers. 9.) These shall proceed no further, they shall have a stop; and their Folly, and Madness, and Hypocrisy (to attempt to bring in Poperie with denying it; and when it is going down, then to build this Babel again) shall appear to all Men; and being discovered, will be their overthrow: but notwithstanding they must proceed further than as yet they have done, even to the killing of the Witnesses in that Kingdom; or tenth part of the City, (as chap. 11. will shew, when in its due order it shall be opened). And because these last Champions of the Beast, and Healers of the Wound given him, should come in the last Days of all, they are therefore last named, and are said to be last overcome by the Witnesses and pourers forth of the Vials, as chap. 15. 2.

Doom

There is but one seeming Objection or Difficulty in this Interpretation; and that is, That in the next verse the number of the Beast is made 666.

But the Answer and Solution is, That the Number of his Name in this Verse is one thing, and the Number of the Beast in the last Verse is another. It is not said; that the Number of his Name is 666, but the Number of the Beast, which betokeneth another thing, (as we shall presently see) only the Holy Ghost, by a wise Transition, passeth from the mention of one, unto the other, as agreeing in Phrase of Speech, yet differing in Sense; which is frequent in Scripture, and (particularly) in this Book, as Chap. 22. vers. 17. The Spirit and the Bride say [Come] as speaking unto Christ to come to Judgment quickly, (as vers. 20.) but in the following words [Let him that is athirst [come]]; there the word [come] is spoken of the coming of a Soul unto Christ, (by believing) as unto the Waters of Life. Even so the Number of the Beast, and the Number of his Name, are here mentioned, the one upon occasion of the other, because of the affinity of the Phrase in Speech; yet to a differing Sense.

Now the Number of the Beast in the last Verse, is the Time or Term of his ending; which is spoken in reference to the Time allotted him for his reigning, vers. 5. which is to be (as there) 42 Months; which counting thirty Days to a Month, according to the Egyptian Account, (which is the Account of this Spiritual Egypt) is one thousand two hundred and sixty Years from his first rising, (being the same space that the Church hath to lie hid in the Wilderness, chap. 12. 6. which though she began to hasten into from Constantine's Time; yet she first began to enter into her desolate Condition, wherein she still remains.) But then, when the Pope's Power began to rise, and during the same space of 1260 Years; the Witnesses are said to prophesy in Sack-cloth, chap. 11. 3. that is, in a mourning and mean condition; for the eminent Professors of the Truth, and opposers of the Beast, who with their Prophecy do feed the Church in the Wilderness all that while, (as chap. 12. 6.) these are the two Witnesses, Chap. 11. 3. Which dates of Time, both of the Witnesses casting off their Sack-cloth, the Woman's coming out of the Wilderness, and the Beast's dejection from his Kingdom and Seat (Rome), will all expire about the same Time; which some think will be about the Year 1650, or 1656, which if not the Pope's Ruin, yet the Jew's call, as they say it to be, or (at the farthest) in 1666, to which latter some incline; as thinking it probable, that it may be the meaning of that account mentioned in the last Verse of this 13th Chapter, which doth cast up the Number of the Beast; that is, the date and period of his Time and Power, which was given him to continue forty two Months, as vers. 5. which Days shall then be Numbered, that is, finished, (as the phrase is of Old Babylon's ending, Dan. 5. 26: God hath numbered thy Kingdom, and finished it): and this his Number the Holy Ghost hath computed to be in the Year: that according to Man's computation, shall be called, six hundred sixty six. And for the confirmation of this Interpretation, the word [Number] is often put to express express Time; the very definition which the Philosopher makes of Time, is, Numerus motus secundum prius & posterius: it is the Number of Motion. And therefore Johannes Viterbiensis (in his Gloss upon this place) plainly renders it thus; Numerus est illius Tempus, This his Number is his Time. Therefore some have made this Number to design out the Year of the Beast's beginning, or confirmation in his Kingdom, in the Year after Christ, 666. But Number, when it is put to signify Time, doth not so properly signify the beginning of it, as the ending of it, when the Number is finish'd and made compleat, and cast up (as I may so speak), for then his Time is numbred; and the account of it summed, and not before. And therefore Daniel (whose phrase (as whose Visions) this Vision in this 13th Chapter exactly follows) useth this phrase to note out the ending of the Time of a Kingdom, and not the Beginning, [thy Days are numbred]. And (which is strange) Ireneus himself, who was the first that interpreted this 666, to contain the Numeral Letters of $\lambda\alpha\tau\epsilon\upsilon\theta$, as the Name of this Latin Kingdom, does withal seem to think, that the end of the Times of the Beast, should in a Mystery be hiddenly contained, (Lib. 5. adver. Hæreses, towards the end of the Book) refert hunc Numerum 666, ad sexies Millenos annos Mundi in quibus (ait) Diabolica malitia consummabitur. He mistakes indeed, referring it to the sixth Thousand Year of the World, (according to the Old Tradition of the Rabbins, commonly received among the Fathers) but yet in this he agrees that it should signify the Time of the Consummation and ending of the Beast's Reign, and the Devil's Malice, as that which is to determine with the end of the World. And I observe the Holy Ghost puts an especial Wisdom on it, to reckon this Number; which if it had lain in Numeral Letters only, had been no great point of Wisdom to have such an Emphasis put upon it; the like whereof is used but once more in this Book, and that in Chap. 17. 9. when the Beast, and the Time of his rising with the Ten Kings, is set forth, as there, from the 9th to the 12th Verse; and so now here, when his Ending is spoken of, for this Wisdom indeed lay in reckoning the Time of his beginning with the Ten Kings: and so the Time of his Ending; by computing the whole Time of his Reign 1260 Years. The vulgar Computation of Years kept now in the World, is (as we all know) from the Year of Christ's Birth; by an Account from which, we difference one Year from another: And that is the Stile of the whole Christian World, to say, such a Year of our Lord, (reckoning from Christ). And this Computation is called the Number of a Man, for it is the ordinary vulgar way of reckoning Years, and the measure of Time used by Men: and therefore so called, in that Man doth use so to number the Years. Even as the measure of the Wall of the City, Chap. 21. 17. is said to be 144 Cubits, according to the measure of a Man; that is, the ordinary Cubits in use with Men, or taken from the proportion of the measure of Man's Stature. So here, say they, the Beast's Year of ending, when his Number shall be compleat, will be in the Year, which, according to Man's Computation of the Years from Christ, shall be ordinarily termed 666. Now the Number of the Thousand is not mentioned, as in vulgar phrase among the Greeks and Hebrews, it seldom was, neither among other Nations is it ordinarily used to this Day; we using to say, in 88, for 1588. And here especially it was needless; for if his Number was to end in a Year, which according to Man's account, should be called 666, it could be no other, according to them, but that of 1666 after Christ; for the Year 666 after Christ (which is past) it could not be, there being not 200 of his Years (allowed him to continue) as then run out; and in the Year 2666, (to come) the Years allotted him, would have been well nigh doubly run out; his Years from his first rising to this his ending being to be but 1260 Years. Now then, according to this their Account, so as to end his Time in 1666, his Time of Rising must begin in the Year 406 after Christ; and that the Pope's Rise did about that Time begin, we are not altogether without the Holy Ghost's Warrant, who tells us, that the Roman Empire (seated at Rome) over the West, must begin to be taken away, ere this Man of Sin could be revealed, or come up and appear in the World, 2 Thess. 2. 7, 8. And it was the Western Empire which was that which letted, whereof Rome it self was the Head and Seat; and therefore the Holy

Holy

Holy Ghost affixeth this Empire to the City of Rome as the Seat of it, which he calleth Seven-headed; in respect of her Seven Hills, and so meaneth not that Eastern Empire, whereof Constantinople was the Seat: Now this Western Empire, whose Seat was Rome, began then to be taken away; and the first foundation of its Ruin laid, when the Goths and Vandals (of whom you heard under the Trumpets) began to break that Empire into these Ten Kingdoms; and the beginning of the first Kingdom broken off from the Empire, was in the Year 410, the Emperor by Covenant allowing the Goths to set up a Kingdom in France. Then was Rome also first sack'd and taken by those Barbarous Nations, and first lost her Virginity; and Honorius the Emperor, to recover Rome again, and restore it to her former flourishing Estate, was forced to part with one piece of the Empire, namely France, which was the first of all the Ten Kingdoms that were broken off. And in the Year 412, he was forced to grant to the Hunnes to do the like. And Anno 415, he was forced to grant the like to the Goths in Spain. And by the Year 456, all the Ten were up, who gave their Power to the Beast. And this punctually agrees with what the Holy Ghost says more expressly of the very hour of Antichrist's Rising, Chap. 17. 12. That the Ten Kings should begin to receive Power as Kings, one hour with the Beast, and the Beast one hour with them; the Holy Ghost reckoning from the beginning of the first of these Ten Kingdoms, the Rising of the Beast, because therein was laid the first Foundation of his Empire over these Ten Kingdoms, for they were to set him up. And (which is strange) Ferome, who lived in the Times of this first Incurision of these Barbarous Nations, and wrote so complainingly of it, (who died about the Year 420.) when he saw Rome taken, and the Goths obtain pieces of the Western Empire, said, (then in those Times when it was a doing) in his Epistle, ad Gerontium, Qui tenebat de medio sit, & non intelligimus Anti-christum appropinquare. He seeing the Empire begin to break, said, Antichrist must needs be at hand. Some read, [μετὰ τὸ γενέσθαι] as importing the Rise of these Ten Kingdoms, to be after the Beast first risen; which if meant of the Time, when these Ten Horns were compleatly grown up, is true; for in Nature the Horns grow up after the Birth of the Beast that beareth them. But whether it be after the Beast, or with the Beast, it was but one hour after the Beast, or one hour with the Beast; still implying, that both the Rise of the one, and of the other, were near in Time, and in the same Age. And if the Time be reckoned from the very first Rise of that first Kingdom in France, granted unto the Goths, Anno 410. it will appear, that it fell out together, or not an hour after the Rise of that Beast, from whose Time the Centurists and others have made the Birth of the Beast to have been, though his Conception were before. And indeed, it so happened, through God's Providence (who made all things concur in this one hour) that he who was as then Pope, (namely Innocentius the First, created Pope (as some say) Anno 404, (some 406) began to usurp and challenge Jurisdiction over all Churches, (as I could out of many Authorities shew, but you may see it in Simpson's History of the Church, in English, 2. Book, 5. Century) and did set on foot that famous Falsification of the Canons of the Nicene Council, as pretending that they gave these Bishops of Rome that Power; for which, there is an Epistle of this Innocentius among the * Epistles of Augustine, where he writing to Augustine, and the rest of the African Bishops assembled, challengeth Power over all, ex Patrum illorum Institutis, from the Decrees of those Fathers of Nice, which his Successors afterwards prosecuted: so that a Copy out of the Authentick Records of that Council, held in the Time of Constantine; was sent for, by which this Falsification was detected. This Man also began first to arrogate a Power over Princes; for he Excommunicated the Eastern Emperor Arcadius (who yet was out of his Jurisdiction) for banishing Chrysostron; which no Bishop of Rome before him had ever adventured to do; and this in the Year 407, (the Copy of whose Bull of Excommunication is * extant to this Day). In his Time also, the Emperor Honorius granted the Clergy an Exemption from Secular Power, and Civil Tribunals; so making them a distinct Body for the Pope their Head. See here the first and second Beast (in this Chapter) rising both together, first in this Pope's proud usurping over Churches and Princes, and then then in exempting his Clergy, to make up; and constitute that second Beast with him as their Spiritual Head; and the Ten Kingdoms which were to constitute the first Beast under the Pope as their Head; then also beginning to arise.

And thus I have given an Account of their Opinion, who fix the Time of Antichrist's Fall in 1666; together with the Arguments which they urge to prove it.

C H A P. VIII.

The Exposition of Chap. 14. wherein the State of the True Church under Antichrist is described.

AS in the 13th Chapter you have the False Antichristian-Church, whereof the Pope is the Head; so in this 14th Chapter begins the Description of the true Church during the Time of Antichrist, whereof the Lamb is the Head; which Church is made up of that Seed of the Woman mentioned Chap. 12. last; whom, during her lying hid in the Wilderness, Satan through Antichrist's Power did persecute. Now the several Conditions of the Church, during those Times of Antichrist unto this Day, may be reduced to three Heads.

1. The State of True Believers in those darker Times of Popery, when they were mingled with Papists, as making no open separation from them, and yet preserving themselves pure from much of their Idolatrous Worship and Opinions; and this during the space of 700 Years from the Pope's Rising.

2. The State of the Church, when first a Separation began to be made from the Church of Rome, and the Gospel to be preached from the Year 1100.

3. The State of the Church under the Reformation since the Times of Luther and Calvin, for these last hundred Years.

Into these three several States the Church of God doth eminently fall divided, to the view of any that are skilled in Ecclesiastick Stories. And these three States are lively deciphered in this Chapter.

1. The State of that confused Company under Antichrist his first Times, from vers. 1, to the 6th.

2. The Church's first separation from the Company of Antichrist, in three several degrees of it, from vers. 6, to 14.

3. The State of the Reformation since Calvin's Time, from vers. 14, to the end.

First, The State of Believers mingled among Antichrist's Company, and not setting up Churches distinct from them under him, though opposing the grossness of his Idolatry, and keeping themselves pure from it. And these are set forth in Characters suitable to that Condition; They are a scattered Company of 144000, joining themselves to the Lamb Christ, having his Father's Name written in their Foreheads, that is, professing the True God, in the sincere Obedience and worship of him, whilst the opposite Company of Antichrist went wondering after the Beast, even a World of them, as Chap. 13. 3. and received his Mark, vers. 17. These are set forth by the same Number (of 144000) that the Christians in the East, under the Mahumetan Bondage and Darkness are, (who were the 5th and 6th Trumpets) their State and Condition being much alike in this, as they are a Company of Persons singly to be numbred and scattered up and down, here and there, (as they were) in the midst of the Corruptions of those Eastern Churches, under the darkness and oppression of Mahumetanism. So in like manner, These are a Company of True Believers scattered up and down under the growing Superstitions, and encreasing Darkness of Popish Antichristianism; which until the Year of Christ 1100, did increase more and more upon the World. They stand upon Mount Sion, which was called the City of David, as not yet having a Temple, or instituted Churches distinct from Antichrist, erected and built, as in David's Time Mount Sion had not. And though they sung a New Song, (the Truth of the Gospel which themselves believed) yet so confusedly and indistinctly, as none could learn it, or understand, that they differed from them. It was a New Song, differing from what the Papists taught about Christ, yet they did not propagate it to many; there were few or none (it is said) that could learn it. And they are said to sing it secretly, before this Representative Chorus of the four Beasts, and the four and twenty Elders, (as they are considered as a standing Company, that do view all the Visions of this Book) but themselves were not cast into such an Order of Worship, they not having Churches or Officers to begin the Song, as in other Times you may observe, that it is said, the four Beasts began, and the four and twenty Elders sung that Song. So that, they had no distinct Churches and Assemblies, nor Officers of their own who sung this Song; their Voices being sometimes as the Voice of many Waters confusedly murmuring against the Superstitions daily arising in those Times, and thundering aloud. First, Against setting up of Images, Anno 707, both in France and Germany: And then, against Transubstantiation: sometimes sweetly harping melodious Strains of true Devotion; which Believers (and some Writers of those Times (as we in their Writings find) were full of. Those kept themselves Virgins from the gross Idolatries of the Whore, not defiling themselves with the rest of those Women; by which are meant the Daughters of the Whore, that is, those Cities and Kingdoms in which they lived; which (as the Daughters receiving themselves the Fornications of Rome, the Mother City) allured these also unto Spiritual Fornication with them. Thus during those Times of gross Idolatry, we read of those who professed their detestation of Images, and that Idol of Transubstantiation.

The second State of the Church is, that of the Separation which Believers made from Antichristian Churches, having a new and a further Light broke forth among them; which we have described unto us by three degrees, rising higher and higher, presented under three several Angels, from the 6th Verse, and so on, (according to the usual course of this Book) the first of which flies in the midst of Heaven, being to publish his Message unto many Nations, having the Gospel to preach, that is, Jesus Christ and Justification by him, and the true Worship of him: which in those Times was counted a New Gospel, therefore in opposition to that made Calumny, the Holy Ghost here calls it the Everlasting Gospel. And this began to be done about the Year 1100.

But because I mean to begin the Second Part of this my Exposition of this Book, with the Story of the Church's first Separation from Popery, which here begins at the 6th Verse of this Chapter; therefore I reserve the particular Exposition thereof unto that Second Part in its due place, and break off this First Part here, although in the middle of a Chapter, yet at a right Joint or Period.

PREFACE.

The main Thing I aimed at, both in my first studying this Book, and also in this my Exposition of it, was, to search into such Passages therein, as did concern and fall upon the last Days, especially the present Times of the Church; and to enquire and find out under which of these Constellations our own Times do fall; and what is certainly yet to come. Now what hitherto hath been expounded by me, I found, by the general consent of the best Expositors (though upon divers grounds) to belong unto more Ancient Times, long since past. And hence it is, that in the Exposition of those 6th, 8th, and 9th Chapters, I have been the less inquisitive; therein especially following Mr. Mede, (whose Scheme and Division also of this whole Prophecy into the Seal-Prophecy and Book-Prophecy, and making the one to contain the Fates of the Empire, and the other of the Church, I ever accounted an happy Notion for the understanding of this Book, and have therefore enlarged it); although, in the Exposition of the 7th Chapter, I altogether differ from him, as also in some few things else. Now those parts of this Prophecy, which belong to more elderly Times, being thus briefly run over and dispatch'd, I have now selected and singled out all that I find, both in the Seal-Prophecy and in this Book-Prophecy, to have an Eye to these present Times, or to those yet to come; and have cast them apart by themselves, as being those things in this Book, which it concerns us more especially to search into. And to the end that I might begin at a right Joint, without mangling the whole, I have chosen to begin from that State and Time of the Church's separation from Popery, and of the Reformation which this Book-Prophecy begins at; namely, Chap. 14. vers. 6. and so to give upon this (but especially what concerns the present Age) a larger Exposition than upon the former I have done; having written that First Part, (especially that brief Exposition of the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th Chapters) but to make way for the understanding of that which now follows; It being impossible for any Man to be confirmed in the true Interpretation of any Part, without some general insight into the Whole.

Now in general, if you would know what belongs to these latter Times in this Prophecy;

- 1. The Seal-Prophecy, from the 6th Chapter to the 12th, running over all Time from John's Days, unto the Kingdom of Christ, and the Passages thereof* thereof in the 10th and 11th Chapters (being the last under that first Prophecy) do therefore belong unto the last Times, (as hath been abundantly declared in that General Scheme given in the first Part); And indeed, most of the things in the 11th Chapter, do belong to the Times of the Vials, Chap. 16. as will appear in the Exposition of it.

Then again, 2. at the beginning of the 6th Verſ. Chap. 14. in the Book-Prophecy, begins the great Restauration of the Gospel from under Popery, and so, the Story of the last Days; which is continued along in such things as shall befall the Church unto the Kingdom of Christ, which begins not until Chap. 20. Hence therefore all these Passages in those Chapters mentioned out of both Prophecies, being put together in their due place and order, do fitly fall in together, to make the Story of the Church compleat, from the first Separation from Popery, unto Christ's Kingdom: and do indeed take in all that in this Book of the Revelation is spoken of these Times. Which therefore I call a Second Part of the Exposition of this Book.

A Particular Scheme and Division, presenting, in their due Order and Succession, all the Contents of those Chapters which do concern our Times.

BEcause the right ordering and ranking of the particular Visions of this Book in both Prophecies in their due Times, either of Succession after each other, or their synchronizing or falling out together at the same Time, is the chief Key of Interpretation; therefore as I gave a more general Scheme and Division of this whole Book at the first, to make way for the Exposition thereof; so I will now premise a particular Scheme of these Chapters mentioned, so to make way for the understanding of the Exposition thereof also.

First, Therefore I will set together the Materials therein contained, according to that right and due order, either of synchronizing each with other, or in the succession after each other; that is, shew what Times the several Visions of those Chapters do belong unto; which of them are, in order of Time, before the other, and which fall out at the same Time with other. The full proof of which Method, and my so ordering them, I shall in part reserve to the larger Exposition it self, which follows. Only now take it briefly, for the better clearing the Exposition.

Two Representations of the Church, from the Separation to the New Jerusalem.

The Church of Christ, from those Times of Separation unto the New Jerusalem, is presented; Either,

1. In the various Conditions which in it self it should run through, all the time until then, in several Ages, both in respect of the Progress of its Separation further and further off from Rome, and so, of its encrease of Light, Purity, and Reformation; as likewise in respect of Persecutions and Judgments upon it, and its Restitution and Deliverance again from under them. Or else,

2. It

2. It is presented in one uniform, entire, and general Condition, suiting with all those Times of it, first and last, both as within it self; it partakes of like Priviledges all that time, and especially also in relation to the execution of Plagues and Punishments (poured out of the seven Vials) on the Enemy of the Church, whom this True Church is to be the Instrument of Ruining. And both these ways the Holy Ghost hath been pleased to represent the Story of it.

The Church's uniform and alike Condition entirely set forth together, Chap. 15, 16.

1. This same entire Condition of it, during all this long Time (as I take it) is set forth in the 15th and 16th Chapters.

2. In the 15th Chapter, is set forth the common, uniform, and like State Chap. 15. of the Church all that while.

1. As within it self, from vers. 2, to the 5th.

2. In the common and like Description of the Angels or Powers out of the Vials which come out of those Churches, from vers. 6, to the end. Which Representation of the Church, and of these Angels all that whole Time, is also made as the immediate Sign, great and wonderful (or the Fore-runner) of the New Jerusalem, vers. 1, 2. There being after these Vials, and this State of the Church, a more glorious State of it to come; which, vers. 5. is called; The opening the Temple of the Tabernacle, (so called by way of distinction from the Temple of the seven Angels) as wherein the Ark (Christ himself) is to be seen, as Chap. 11. v. last. Which until the Vials are all poured out, stands veiled, as the Holy of Holies did. And so this present State of the Church (which is the Temple out of which the seven Angels come forth, vers. 6.) holdeth but the Proportion and Allusion of the inward Court of the Priests unto the Holy of Holies in the Jewish Temple, in comparison unto that other Church or Temple to come after this, as vers. 5. speaks. And so the Erection of it is made the Sign or immediate Fore-runner of this Holy of Holies, as vers. 1, and 5. compared, do evidently shew.

And then, 2. in the 16th Chapter, you have the execution and pouring out of Chap. 16. these seven Vials by the Angels out of this Church or Inner Temple, erected from the first Separation from Antichrist, all along those times unto the New Jerusalem, which in their several Orders and Successions, are in one view exhibited in that 16th Chapter.

The various Condition of the Church, scatteredly presented in three parts.

Now, 2. although this common uniform Condition of the Church all this time, is set thus (in relation to the execution of those Vials on the Enemies) in one entire view, in the 15th and 16th Chapters; yet that other various Condition of the Church, as in respect to its own particular and diverse State in all those times, the Holy Ghost was pleased variously, and in several places, of this Prophecy to describe and set forth (as best suiting to a special End and Occasion) yet with such infallible Characters of their Times, of the Vials they belong unto, and also unto what Times of each Vial, as cannot deceive us.

Thus

1. Part in
from vers. 6.
where begins its Separation
ry.

Thus the First Part of the Story of the various Condition of the Church during the four first Vials, is set forth Chap. 14. from the 6th Verse to the end. At which 6th Verse, the separation of the True Church from Antichrist beginning, there began also the first erection of True Churches, or the Temple, (first made mention of in that Chapter) when Waldus and his Company first fell off from Rome. And the reason why this was first done, e're the Vision of the Vials was presented, was, because it was meet to shew how the Temple was first built and reared, e're the seven Angels and their Vials poured forth out of this Temple should be mentioned. And therefore Chap. 14. shews that first Part of the Church's Story in all its first comings forth from Antichrist, and laying the Foundation of Churches; but then it breaks off at the Times of the fourth Vial, for that so far proceeds the Reformation of the True Church, as it respected a separation from Antichrist, and so runs along with such Vials as should by degrees first prepare for his Ruin, as the three or four first Vials do.

But then, 2. the next state of the Church, from the time of the fourth Vial to the fifth Vial, (when Antichrist's Time of 42 Months is to expire); That the 11th Chapter (which comes in as a Chronology, to shew the end and expiring of those Times of Anti-christ) doth supply the Story of it, from vers. 1, to 14. And this Story comes in there, rather than here in Chap. 14. because that was to be as an immediate Signal of Antichrist's Downfal; and so comes in most fitly there in that 11th Chapter, that Chapter being intended as an exact Chronology or Computation of the Times of the Beast's Reign, to the end it might be discerned when his Time should end; and so, the immediate Sign afore it is therefore annexed, for the Church's warning and comfort against the approaching of the time of his ending, and a fatal prevailing of Antichrist over them just afore. And so the Story of that 11th Chapter doth indeed begin, where that 14th Chapter endeth, or about the same time. And as the 14th Chapter presented us with the Story of the Reformation of the Church, from Antichrist and his False Church: And so, what befel the Church during that time, so the 11th Chapter begins with a New Reformation of the Reformed Churches among themselves, and what should befall them upon that Reformation; namely, the killing the Witnesses, between the fourth Vial and the fifth, or (at the utmost) before the sixth Vial.

And then the third part of the Church's Story, from after the fifth Vial, until the New Jerusalem, (which New Jerusalem begins Chap. 20. of the Book-Prophecy, and Chap. 11. vers. 15. of the Seal-Prophecy) the 19th Chapter presents us within its due place: For the 17th and 18th Chapters being, the one but an Explanation who was the Beast, and where his Seat was, that so the Church might be able to discern this Antichrist; and the other being a Funeral Song for the pouring out of the fifth Vial, when the Seat of the Beast, the Whore (the City described in the 17th Chapter) is ruined, when also Antichrist's Kingdom (as it is most probable) doth end: Therefore fitly after both these Digressions, comes in, in its due order, the State of the Church from the time of that fifth Vial, or the Ruin of the City, unto the New Jerusalem. And therefore the 19th Chapter, vers. 1. thus begins, And after these things, I heard the Voice of an innumerable Company, &c. that is, after the Ruin of the City and Whore, described in Chap. 17. and ruined Chap. 18. and so goes on to describe the State of that Church then, until the New Jerusalem. Now

Now to sum up all. As the Story in the 14th Chapter, containeth the first Reformation and Separation of the Church from Antichrist, in several degrees; and the 11th Chapter containeth a second Reformation of the Church within it self from prophane mixture; so this 19th Chapter contains a third Reformation Personal, of the Saints themselves in it, as then with might and main preparing and adorning themselves for the Marriage of the Lamb, (which then they shall evidently see approaching, now when the Whore is cast off and burnt) and there you may see them getting all the fine Linnen they can, that is, of Holiness and growth in Grace, [the Righteousness of the Saints]: that so, their Lord and Husband might greatly delight in their Beauty, as you may see vers. 7, 8. And this is the true general coherence and order of what yet remains to be interpreted.

The Particular Synchronism of the several Visions and Contents of all those Chapters: And first, of the 14th Chapter, from vers. 6, with the 15th and 16th, to its 8th Verse.

NOW because, according to this Division, and general Scheme given, the Visions of the 15th and 16th Chapters (namely, those of the Vials) do run along the same whole course of Time through divers Ages, that the Visions of the 14th Chapter, from vers. 6. and also of the 11th Chapter, to vers. 15. and of the 19th Chapter also do, (though the one in an uniform continued way, the other in a scattered successive representation of the Church's Condition, all along the same tract of Time through many Ages): Therefore it will be expedient to shew, which of these several parts of these two Representations do synchronize and fall out together in the same Age, and which of them do succeed each other.

I will therefore a little more particularly set together the several parts of these Stories; both of that of the seven Vials, which are put together, Chap. 15, and 16; and those other several Pieces, and scattered Passages of those other Chapters, in all their due Times as they fell out together.

1. That same Temple filled with Smoak, Chap. 15. 8. (out of which come the seven Angels) I conceive to have been begun to be set up in the Times of the first Separation from Antichrist, Chap. 14. 6. When also the Everlasting Gospel was begun distinctly to be preached, both by Waldus and his Followers, who did erect True Churches unto Christ, (as the History of the Waldenses shews) when those Harpers on the Glassie Sea, Chap. 15. began more distinctly to sing the Song of Moses and the Lamb; that is, the Doctrine both of the Law and Gospel, which the 144000 in the darker Times of Popery had but muttered, and that so confusedly, as none could learn it. For this, compare Chap. 14. 6, 7. with Chap. 15. 3, 4. So that, the Doctrine of the Gospel, and the Erection of the Temple, out of which the Vials do come, and the Separation from Popery do all begin together.

2. This erection of the Temple, and preparation being thus made by the first Angel, Chap. 14. 6. the first Vial out of that Temple, Chap. 16. 1, 2. began with the Voice of the second Angel, Chap. 14. 8. So that the first Angel, Chap. 14. 6. sets up the Temple, and the second Angel brings forth the first Vial. And therefore accordingly, the Voice of that Angel, Chap. 14. 8. is, Babylon is fallen, Babylon is fallen; that is, now is the first Foundation of her Ruin laid, (as in opening the Vials, I shall afterward shew) or, now do those Vials begin, which shall be her Ruin.

The second Vial, Chap. 16. 3. follows with the Voice or Cry of the third Angel's preaching, Chap. 14. 9. then when the Sea of Antichrist's Doctrine was both proved and pronounced damnable by Luther's Doctrine, and the Waters which the Whore sate on fell from her, that is, those Kingdoms and Common-Wealths, which had subjected themselves unto her. For this, compare the Year of Luther's preaching, recorded Chap. 14. 9, 10, 11. and that second Vial, Chap. 16.

The third Vial, Chap. 16. 4. hath been pouring out since that Harvest began, Chap. 14. 14. since the Summer-Weather, and settled peace of the Reformed Churches, meant by Rivers and Fountains, (as in the opening the meaning of that Vial, will appear).

The fourth Vial, Chap. 16. 8. (I take it) began about the time of the Vintage, Chap. 14. 18. whereof this to me is an infallible Character, that an Angel who had Power over Fire, is said to excite unto it. Now, Chap. 16. 8. The fourth Angel, who poured out this fourth Vial, is said, to have Power given him to scorch Men with Fire. And so that Description, Chap. 14. 18. is of the same Angel, to shew that these two (the fourth Vial, and this Vintage) fall in the same times: and so, it is evidently evinced, that the 14th Chapter, and the times of it, reach but to the fourth Vial.

The Synchronism of the Vision of the 11th Chapter, in the Age between the Fourth and Fifth Vial; and of the 17th and 18th Chapters, with the Times of the Fifth Vial: and of the 19th, with the Age after the Fifth Vial unto the New Jerusalem.

Come we next to the 11th Chapter.

Which, First, under the Seal-Prophecy, begins (now about the Times of the Fourth Vial) afore the expiration of the World's Monarchy, Antichrist's Times, and the Church's Oppression, and before the 7th Trumpet, which blows, vers. 15. And it begins with the representing the Temple of the Reformation, the same which the 14th Chapter had represented, (out of which the Angel, with his Sickle for the Harvest, did come, vers. 15. of Chap. 14.) in which these Reformers, who erected that Temple in the 14th Chapter, having committed this Error, to lay an outward Court unto it, (John there bearing the Persons of the Godly of this Age) are bidden to measure measure that Temple anew, as not fully conformed to the Pattern, and to cast out the outward Court. And so, it contains a further Reformation of the Temple in that 14th Chapter erected. And as in the Vintage, Chap. 14. the Popish Gentiles had (as was said) trod down the Grapes in Germany: so here, Chap. 11. vers. 1. the like Outward Court in other Churches elsewhere, is given unto these Gentiles to tread down; and so, with that exploit to end their date of treading down the Holy City for 42 Months, (or 1260 Years) with this their re-entry, which shall be their last upon the Churches of the Reformation. And so you see the 11th Chapter begins, where the 14th Chapter ends.

Then, secondly, vers. 5; 6. of that Chapter, (in the description of the Witnesses) you furthermore expressly have the first four Vials briefly summed up: and no more of them, than the first four mentioned therein, to shew that these Witnesses in these latter Times of their Prophecy, are the same with those Angels that pour out the Vials, Chap. 16. And observe, that that mention of them comes in but by way of Parenthesis in this Speech of the Angel unto John, that he might discern who they were; and know them again in this New Book-Prophecy; and all to this end, to shew what after these four Vials, or from the time of the Fourth, and before the Fifth should befall them, in the expiring of the 1260 Years allotted them to prophesy in in Sackcloth, or in a mourning condition; which now should end with the Beast's Reign also, which ends with the Fifth Vial. And so, vers. 7. when they shall be about to finish their Testimony, (that is, just now, at the ending of their Prophecy) they that formerly have had the power to execute four such Vials on the Beast's Company already, must now, before they do fatally darken and overcome his Kingdom by the fifth Vial, be themselves once more overcome by the Beast. Which killing of them, being thus mentioned after four of the Vials, summed up vers. 5, 6. and in the end of their Prophecy, and in the very expiring of their time of Mourning, must needs therefore be from after, or upon the time of the fourth Vial, and before the Fifth, or at farthest with the sixth. And then, vers. 13. the Witnesses they rise, and the tenth part of the City falls; which some have interpreted to be the fifth Vial, the Ruin of the City of Rome. But of that hereafter in the Exposition.

After that, vers. 14. the second Wo passeth away; which notes the removing of the Turkish Power and Tyranny (which was the second Wo; or sixth Trumpet, spoken of Chap. 9. 12, 13.) which is all one with the sixth Vial, Chap. 16. the drying up the River Euphrates; or the preparation unto it, as in the Exposition will appear.

Then follows the seventh Trumpet, Chap. 11. 15. to the end; at which time the seventh Vial begins, as is evident, by comparing the 9th verse of Chap. 11. and Chap. 16. 18, and 21 verses; as also Chap. 10. 7. in that 'tis said in one place, that Time shall be no longer, than until the seventh Trumpet blows, and in the other, It is done, (says the Voice) when the seventh Vial is poured out, Chap. 16. 17.

And lastly, As under the seventh Trumpet comes in the Holy of Holies, which (as was said) is the opening the Tabernacle of the Testimony in Heaven, in which the Ark is seen, Chap. 11. 18. so you may read Chap. 15. 5. that after the Vials, (he says there; μετὰ ταῦτα, after these Things) this Temple of the Tabernacle of the Testimony in Heaven, is said to be opened. That Temple out of which the Vials come, being but as the Inward Temple which was begun to be erected (for else they had no True Churches) from the first Separation, but polluted with the adjoining of the Outward Court by the Reformers. But under the Times of the fourth Vial, this Temple is measured and purged, and that Court cast out, Chap. 11. 1. now ending in the Holy of Holies succeeding it.

But whereas still what should befall the Church from the Time of the rising of the Witnesses, (which falleth out about the fifth Vial) is not expressed in that 11th Chapter, nor what should be the Church's Condition from that Space between the fifth Vial, and the seventh Trumpet, and Holy of Holies: But we are still to seek that, for the 11th Chapter does setly describe only what befall the Church just afore the expiring of the Reign of Antichrist, as a Signal added for the Church's Warning: Therefore this Part the 19th Chapter supplies, (the 17 and 18 Chapters being but a larger Explication of the fifth Vial (as all agree) namely, the Ruin of the City) the first Verse of which begins thus; After these things, I saw an innumerable Company in Heaven, praising God for the Downfal of the Whore, (at large set forth Chap. 17, and 18.) and therefore it must needs set forth the State of the Church now after the fifth Vial until the Seventh, (as in the Exposition will appear). And then that great Battel, at the Lamb's Marriage-Supper, which follows in that Chapter, how that agrees with the seventh Vial, let any one judg, that shall read Chap. 16. from the 14th Verse to the end, and Chap. 19. from the 11th Verse to the end. And then come in the 1000 Years, and New Jerusalem, Chap. 20. 21, 22. which is all one with the Holy of Holies.

The End of the Preface.

EXPOSITION
 O F T H E
REVELATION.

P A R T. II.

C H A P. I.

The Thirteenth Chapter explained, from Verse the 6th to the end.

NOW having ordered and cast these Chapters, remaining to be expounded, into this Mould: I begin this Exposition here; where the Story of the Church's first Separation from Antichrist doth indeed begin; (where also I brake off the First Part of this Exposition).

In which my ranking of these Chapters was shewed; That as the 13th Chapter does throughout set forth the Condition of the False Antichristian Church, and the several sorts of that Company which shall cleave to the Beast: So that this 14th Chapter does in like manner set forth the Company of True Believers, which shall apart by themselves cleave unto the Lamb, and that; in those several Conditions which they are to run through. As,

1. The Condition of the Church in the dark Times of Popery; from his first rising, until the Gospel's Light did break forth more clearly, and a Separation was made from the Church of Antichrist. And this (as I have opened it) you have from the 1st verse unto the 6th.

Or, 2. The Condition of the Church from that first Separation from Popery, and Believers erecting Churches and Assemblies by themselves, from vers. 6. to the end. Which now begins to be expounded.

And the scope of the Holy Ghost in this remainder of Chap. 14. is but to shew by what degrees the Gospel should first break forth, and how Churches should at first be erected, and a glorious Reformation made. And so, it reacheth no further than till the Times of that prevailing again of the Beast, which PART II. after this great Reformation, he should a second Time obtain to have over these Churches, about the Times of the Fourth Vial, which is executed by the Angel that hath Power over Fire, who is mentioned, vers. 18. Which prevailing of his, the 11th Chapter (the scope whereof is to shew how the Beast's Reign is to end) does more fully shew forth.

Now when as the Holy Ghost had in this 14th Chapter given the Story of that first Separation and Reformation, as being sufficient to shew the Foundation and Progress of this New Temple and True Church, erected in opposition to the False; he then breaks off, and presents the general and common condition and station of Believers in this new erected Temple, separate from the Church of the Beast, and from its Doctrine and Worship; and shews the Judgments to be executed upon the False Church all that while, until the Kingdom of Christ, entirely together in one view in the 15th and 16th Chapters.

Now this State and Condition of the Church, as first breaking forth from under Antichrist, and so coming out of Babylon and Egypt, laid forth in this 14th Chapter, until Antichrist's second prevailing, spoken of Chap. 11. hath two Parts.

1. Their first Separation, in the dark and elder Times of the Gospel, before the Reformation.

2. The Reformation it self, made by Calvin and others.

1. The first Separation, made and continued in the Elder Times before Luther, hath three degrees of it orderly set forth, as Light encreased in the Church, from vers. 6, to 14.

2. The Reformation it self, from the 14th verse to the end.

First; Of that first Separation.

It hath three Degrees (as was said) set forth by Three Angels, (as by whose Ministry all the great things done in the Church and World throughout this Book is still said to be effected) who in their Voice and Cry rise higher and higher, and louder and louder against Antichrist and his Company.

The first Angel who lays the Foundation of all, is said to have the everlasting Gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the Earth, and to every Nation, and Tongue, and People, and so to fly into the midst of Heaven, as reaching his Voice to all. And he also calls upon Men to fear and worship God alone who made Heaven and Earth, vers. 7. So that, the Matter of his Preaching is the Gospel, which brings to light the free Grace of God in Christ, for the justification of a Sinner, and also the true Worship of this God alone; withdrawing Men from Idolatry and false Worship of Saints and Angels; which the World was then overwhelmed with: which because in those Times it was called the New Gospel, therefore in opposition to that Calumny, the Holy Ghost calls it the Everlasting Gospel, which was now restored and brought to light. And by the preaching of these two Things to all Nations, was the foundation of that whole Separation from the Pope that followed, first laid.

Now this first Angel's preaching, doth most lively set forth the first Proceedings of Waldus and his Followers, who first began to make Separation from Popish Doctrine and Worship. This Waldus, an Alderman of Lions in France, about the Year of Christ 1100, being Converted by occasion of the sudden death of a Friend of his, as they were walking abroad together, (which mightily terrified and amazed him; God using that as a means to humble him and bring him to Christ) fell a preaching in that City, and converted many others to the saving Knowledge of Christ. And he being a Man learned also, (as even Popish Writers say of him) opened the Scriptures, and turned them into the vulgar French. And he and his Followers, thinking it their Duty to preach this Gospel unto others, as did the Apostles; they forthwith sent abroad some of their Company a preaching: Which when it came to the Ears of the Pope, they were prohibited, as being Lay-Men. But they affirming, it was better to obey God than Men; and it being an Article of their Faith, unicuique licere Verbum Dei liberè predicare, that it was lawful for any Man to preach the Gospel; they went on in the course they had begun, though they were persecuted for it. And look as in the Primitive Times, when Persecution arose after the Death of Stephen, and that the Church of Jerusalem was dispersed, it was an occasion of further spreading the Gospel unto other Nations. So Waldus being himself excommunicated, came into Picardy, and so into the Low Countries, and there, by his preaching, made many Disciples, and then went into Germany, and last of all into Bohemia; and his Followers were dispersed into Savoy, Lombardy, and the Countries on this side the Alpes; and Arnoldus his Companion went into Spain. Inſomuch that Poplinerius the Historian gives this Testimony of them, That these Waldenses, (mauger the Power of all Christian Princes) about the Year 1100, did broach a Doctrine little differing from what the Protestants now hold; and not only dispersed it through France, but over all the parts of Europe. Of these things you may read at large in the English History of the Waldenses; and in Bishop Usher's Book de Successione Ecclesie. Thus you see they preach'd, as here; yea, it was their Profession; and they preach'd to all Nations, and the Doctrine they preach'd was only the Gospel, and to call Men from Idolatry to Worship God aright, (as you may read at large in those Books mentioned) as the Angel is here said to do, vers. 7.

But in an Age or two following, their Number encreasing in all Kingdoms, and their Light growing more clear, there follows out of this Company a Second Angel, who with open Mouth proclaims, That Rome was Babylon, and the Pope that Beast, and that Antichrist, in this Revelation described, and ordained to Ruin. Which thing Waldus did at the first but begin to mutter; for in one more ancient Breviary of the Articles of their Opinions, (as you have them in that fore-named Book, de Successione Ecclesie, Cap. 6. N. 16.) this is the first, concerning the Church of Rome, in these modest words only, Romanum Præsulum reliquis parem esse Episcopis; that the Pope of Rome was but equal to all other Bishops. But afterwards in the following Ages, their Followers grew more bold; and in another Edition of their Articles, in the same Chapter, N. 17. you find this, Romanam Ecclesiam esse Meretricem Babylonicam, that the Church of Rome was the Whore of Babylon. Which thing the Professors in those next Ages did inculcate and insist on, and made it the eminent Article of their Profession and Confession. But this was especially done by Wickliff and his Followers, beginning about the Year 1371 in England; and after him by John Hus, and Jerome of Prague, and their Followers, Anno 1400.

But then follows a Third Angel, more vehement than the rest, and that was Luther and his Followers: and he proceeds further, and says, That not only Rome is Babylon, but that all those who cleave unto her Doctrine and Superstitions, shall drink of the Wrath of God for ever; that is, be certainly damned, and go to Hell. He shewing, that her Worship and Doctrine (the Image of the Beast) was a damned Doctrine, and laying open the Falshood and Errors of it so manifestly, that now under so clear a Light of the Gospel as this Age held forth, it could never stand with Salvation to live therein. And so he urged a separation from Rome under pain of damnation. The Voice of this Angel is from vers. 9, to 12.

Then follows an Intimation, once for all, of those Martyrdoms and bloody Persecutions of all those three Angels and their Followers; as the effect of this their Preaching, and as a Trial of the Truth of their Doctrine, and their own Sincerity. So, vers. 12, 13. Here is the Patience of the Saints; that is, here comes in Matter for the trial of it. And for their encouragement, there is a comfortable Acclamation subjoined, Blessed are those that die in the Lord. Now how, upon the preaching of all those Angels, Persecutions were raised; (which from the Times of the Heathenish and Arrian Persecutions, for the space of 800 Years past before, in the dark Times of Popery, the Church was free from) and there followed the Martyrdoms of the Followers of Waldus, Wickliff, Hus, and Luther, and of those that embraced their Doctrine (especially upon, and after this Third Angel's preaching) this the Book of Martyrs will inform you.

PART II.

In the second place comes the Time of the Reformation, after Luther; the state of which is presented to us under a double Vision; the one of a Harvest, the other of a Vintage, (which useth to come after Harvest).

The first betokens that glorious Peace and Sunshine of the Gospel which followed after those Persecutions in Germany, England, &c. for sixty Years and upwards, and this from vers. 14, to 17. By an Harvest, in Scripture, is meant the Conversion and gathering in of the Elect by the Preaching of the Gospel. So in the Old Testament, Isaiab prophesying of the Conversion of the Jews in Egypt and Assyria, Chap. 27. 12, 13. he useth this Expression, That God would thresh or beat off all along from the River Euphrates unto Egypt, those his Elect People, that, as Corn, should grow upon the Shores thereof; and that he would thresh so clean, that they should be gathered one by one; not leaving one grain of Election behind, nor one Ear of Corn standing unreaped. It is an Allusion to an Harvest, and having in of Corn, and threshing it. Like unto which, is that Speech of Christ, when he sent out his Disciples. Lo, the Regions are White, and ripe for the Harvest, and the Harvest is great. Which he spake when there were multitudes of People ripe, and ready to receive the Gospel. And since the preaching of the Gospel by the Third Angel, what multitudes of such hungry Souls have there been in these Kingdoms? And what a glorious Time of Summer and Harvest have we had? And this preaching of the Gospel, that hath reaped this Corn, hath been authorized by the chief Magistrates, and by Kingly Power, even whole Kingdoms professing it. And therefore he who in this Vision hath the Sickle given him, to Reap, is presented crowned with a Golden Crown: which according to the Analogy with the other Contents of this Book, Chap. 12. 5. is when Jesus Christ, the Son of Man, is visibly set in the Throne, ruling by Christian Magistrates, they using their Power for him; as when the Emperors turned Christians, you find the like Expression used, Chap. 10.

The other Vision is of a Vintage, from vers. 17, to the end; which, as a Vintage comes after Harvest, so this falls out in the end of this Summer, and after the Harvest of the Reformation, and so shuts up the Story of it. Wherein God, after he hath had in his Corn, falls upon the Grapes, the Wild Grapes, and cuts them down; but with another manner of Sickle, than he had done his own Corn: He had reaped them with a Sickle of Conversion, but these he cuts down with the sharp Sickle (twice so called) of vengeance; and therefore it is said, that they are cast into the Wine-press of God's Wrath. And these Grapes, are those Carnal Protestants and Professors of Religion, who, together with the Elect, have enjoyed the Heat of this fair long Summer, and hung like to Grapes in the Sun, but retaining their Sownness, have been ripened indeed, but only for Wrath and Vengeance. And lo, how this sharp Sickle hath gone up and down in Germany for well nigh these twenty Years, being such a Wine-press of fierce Wrath, and such a treading down to an overflowing of Blood and Misery, as hath scarce been parallel'd in any Age. For it is the Vengeance of the Temple, not so much destroyed, as defiled and dishonoured by their Mixture; which as much provokes God unto Wrath, as the Persecution of his Temple would have done. And therefore the Angel that is the Executioner of it, is provoked unto it by the Cries of an Angel that comes from the Altar, as one who is zealous of God's Worship, and disdains as much that the Temple and Altar (the Ordinances of Worship) should be pestered and defiled with such as call themselves the Church, saying, We are the Temple of God, and so cause God's Name to be blasphemed; as that the Idolatrous Papists, (whom this Book calls the Gentiles, Chap. 11. 1.) should tread down this Holy City and Sanctuary. For even these are no better than Gentiles also, who say they are Jews, but are not.

And that this Vengeance should be meant of this execution of it upon the Protestant Party, seems evident unto me by this, that the Wine-press is said to be troden without the City; that is, without the Jurisdiction or Reach of the Power of the City of Rome; (for so that word [City] according to the Stile of this Book, doth still import, as chap. 11. 8. chap. 16. 19, &c.) and so is on purpose added, to shew, that it befalls even such Kingdoms and Places as had cast off the Pope's Supremacy. And it appears also by this, that it is mentioned apart from the Vials which follow; which are all the Judgments that fall upon the Popish and Turkish Enemies of the Church; but this upon a third sort of Enemies within the Church it self. And although it be true, that so far as there hath befallen (through these German Wars) a Plague upon the Popish Party in Germany, (as upon the Emperor, and those Popish Princes under him) so far indeed as upon them, it is to be reduced to one of the Vials, (which do contain all the last Plagues on the Popish Party) and particularly comes under the 4th Vial: Yet so far as these Wars have brought Miseries and Desolation on the Protestant Party, so far in that respect it is presented in this Vintage. And therefore you may observe, that the Angel, who (it is said) hath power over Fire, (who is indeed the Angel of the Fourth Vial, as the Angel of the Third is called the Angel of the Waters) because he hath power to scorch Men with Fire; Chap. 16. 8. that Angel it is that incites and provokes this Angel here, with the sharp Sickle, to cut down, and tread these Grapes. So that this Vintage is a distinct execution from that of the Fourth Vial, and yet contemporaneous with it. In a word; these Wars, so far as they hurt the Popish Party, are the fourth Vial; and so far as they hurt the Protestant Party, they are the Vintage here meant. That Horses are mentioned as treaders of this Wine-press, most fitly carries it to these German Wars; the German Horses being the most approved War-horses in Europe, and these Wars having been chiefly maintained and acted by them. And then also this Allusion of Grapes trodden in a Wine-press, was as suitable to express the Miseries befallen those Countries; which are famous for Vines and Vintages, (as the Palatinate and other places in Germany are). And for the like Reason the Judgments upon Edom and Bosrah are expressed by a Vintage, Isa. 63. 1. because it was a Country famous for Vines. And then again, haply the space of 1600 Furlongs here mentioned (which some make more Miles, some less) may for the length be found as fitly to agree unto the chief Seat of these Wars and Wine-press; which (take the length of the Protestant part of Germany trodden down, and here only intended) may not every way extend much further. But the computation, and measuring of this, I leave unto others. And whether or no God will bring this Wine-press into any other of his Vineyards, as England, Scotland, &c. and by bloody Wars tread down the Grapes there, as he hath done in Germany, keeping still to the same proportion of 1600 Furlongs, (as our Brightman reckons the length of England to be) and fulfilling it over and over in other several Protestant Kingdoms and Dominions; He only knows who is the Lord both of this Harvest and Vintage. Only this may be more confidently affirmed, that the rest of those Carnal Protestants in England, and other Places, who like the outward Court have been laid and joined to the People of God, shall yet, before the expiration and ending of the Beast's Kingdom and Number, be more or less given up to the Papists, and to the Jurisdiction of the City of Rome, and be trodden down, and made to vail to them, if not all of them by bloody Wars and Conquests, yet by some base and unworthy yielding to them, as a just Punishment of their Carnal Profession of the Gospel. And this in England (we see) they begin to do; and this (I take it) the 11th Chapter, vers. 1. doth foretell and prophesy of: Which Chapter being intended to give a Signal or Fore-runner of the Beast's Ruin, and the expiration of his 1260 Years, and Period of his Kingdom, (which now is approaching); doth present the State of the Church, and what shall befall it, not long before his Ruin; and so withal, that Face of the Church just afore, is presented there, (Chap. 14. vers. 1.) And the setting down what should befall it (from vers. 7, to 14.) must necessarily belong to these Times, and so is to be subjoined unto this 14th Chapter (though it comes in there, as a common signal of the ending of both Prophecies, and therefore between both) to make the Story of the Church compleat.

And this I shall handle, and make to appear, when I have first opened the meaning of the Vials, especially of the four first of them; which though for order-sake are by the Holy Ghost put (as in this Book things of a sort use to be) with with the rest, after this 14th Chapter; yet they have been a pouring forth upon the Beast and his Company, from that first preaching of the Gospel until now, (as will further appear). And the Reason why I would open these four first Vials, ere I open the 11th Chapter, is, because they synchronize with this 14th Chapter: and because four Vials are mentioned, as poured out, chap. 11. ere the Witnesses being slain, which cannot be understood till these be first explained.

C H A P. II.

The Exposition of Chap. 15.

THE Holy Ghost having thus first of all shewn how the Reformation from Popery was to be brought about, and Churches erected; he here beginneth to set before us the uniform State of Believers in this Temple, and the several degrees of their ruining the False Church, by several Vials. And this, as set together in one continued view throughout all these Times, from the first Separation from Popery, until Christ's Kingdom. Concerning which, in general, I shall premise three Things.

First, The difference between their Condition here; and the Condition of the Churches under the dark Times of Popery, as is uniformly described chap. 14. from vers. 1. to the 6. And observe this difference in these four Particulars.

1. Those, chap. 14. were Virgins, but not separate; but these here stand alone in a Temple by themselves, washing themselves from the Defilement of Popery, as being separated therefrom.

2. Those sung a New Song confusedly, but these sing the Song of Moses and the Lamb, (that is, the Law, and the Gospel) distinctly.

3. Those there stood naked upon the Hill of Sion; as it was, ere a Temple was reared upon it; but these here are gathered into a Temple, and roofed over their Heads.

4. Those sung their Song in Egypt; but these are come out of Egypt, and so sing Moses his Song.

The second Thing to be premised is, That these seven Angels, and their Vials, and this Company here, are in the general description of them, (or in that Preface to their description prefixed, vers. 1.) called a Sign, great and marvellous, and another Sign.

1. It is called a Sign. A Sign is always a fore-runner of something to come. Now what it is that is here pointed at as to come, vers. 5. tells us; namely, that after these things, (that is, after these Vials) the Temple of the Tabernacle of the Testimony was opened in Heaven. So then, these Vials, they are the Sign of that glorious Holy of Holies, which John saw was to come after them; or they are the Sign of the New Jerusalem, (for by that Temple of the Tabernacle of the Testimony, is that state meant) and also of Christ's coming; and so they are that Sign of the Son of Man spoken of, Matth. 24. And these Plagues do here go before him, as in like manner the Prophets use to describe his Progress with Plagues and Pestilence afore him. And therefore (if you observe it) just when the last Vial approacheth, Chap. 16. 14. then warning is given, Behold, I come as a Thief, &c.

2. It is called another Sign ; for that Sign, chap. 12. was the Sign of the Devil's being thrown down in Heathenism ; but this, of the Devil's throwing down out of Popery, and Christ's coming to set up his Kingdom. So that we of this Age do indeed stand in the midst of the Times of these Vials, and so may see how much of Christ's Train is gone before, and what is to come hereafter, himself being to come in the Rear of all.

Chap. 2.

The third Thing to be premised and observed, is, That they are called the last Plagues.

Christ had three sorts of Enemies to subdue, by three several sorts of Plagues.

1. Satan and his False Worship, together with the Heathenish Empire, which he dispatch'd by the six Seals, chap. 6.

2. The Roman Empire, which he ruined by the six Trumpets.

3. The Pope in the West, and the Turk in the East, who succeeded in the place of the Roman both Eastern and Western Empire ; and for these he hath prepared seven Vials. And because these are the last Enemies, therefore these Vials are called the last Plagues.

Thus much in general ; now more particularly to descend to the several Contents of this Chapter.

There are two Things which are more eminently presented to our view in this 15th Chapter.

First, The Church, or Company of Believers standing in the Temple, described from vers. 2, to 5. and vers. 8.

Secondly, The Angels, who are Executioners of the Vials out of that Temple, described from vers. 6, to 8.

First, For the Company from among whom the Angels come :

1. They have a Temple over their Heads, as vers. 8. continually filled with Smoke, vers. last ; as at the first dedication of Moses his Tabernacle, Exod. 40. 34, 35. and at the dedication of Solomon's Temple, (which was a larger Edition of that which Moses had given the Pattern of) 1 Kings 8. 16. To shew, that during the Vials, there should be new Erections, and Editions, and Reformations of the Temple ; unto all which God still gives the testimony of his Presence.

As, 1. when that first Separation from Popery was made, and True Churches were set up by the Waldenses, and Smoke filled their Temples.

2. In the Reformation made by Luther and Calvin, there was a farther Edition of the Temple, and Smoke did afresh fill it also.

3. In the 11th Chapter, vers. 1. you will meet with another Reformation, and casting away the Outward Court ; and Smoke will afresh fill those New-measured Temples also : God still giving new Testimonies of his Presence, as new Editions of purer Churches do come forth.

2. Their Station in this Temple is upon a Sea of Glass ; which (as you heard out of the 4th Chapter) was an allusion to that Brazen Sea, in which the Priests washed themselves. To shew, that this Company of Believers, from out of which the Vials do come, should be such as should still more and more purify themselves afresh in their several Ages, from those Defilements of Doctrine and Worship which Antichrist had brought into the Church. And they, in their several Successions, discovering new and further Defilements, are therefore still presented as coming forth fresh and anew out of the Sea of Glass ; and accordingly are presented standing upon the Brim, as being new come out from washing themselves, and so growing purer and purer, until they become a Bride fully prepared for their Lord and King.

3. They are also presented as Victors and Conquerors ; for such, through pouring forth these Vials, they do become ; and in the end shall fully prevail over the Beast, and over his Image, and over his Mark, and over the Number of his Name ; which are several Degrees of Popery and Antichristianism, whereof some are more gross, and some more refined. All which they in like manner do by degrees, in their several Successions, go on to discover, and to overcome ; until by that time that these Vials are all poured out, they have got a full and perfect Conquest over all. And therefore in this general Description are set forth as those that had such a full Conquest ; for that (take them first and last) they shall have a perfect and compleat victory over all these. The meaning is not (as Mr. Brightman understands it) that this Company had first got a compleat Victory over all these, before the Vials began : but this is spoken of the whole Company and Succession of them first and last conjunctively, the intendment being, to give a general description of them, and to set down what they should do and accomplish by that time their whole Time is expired, and to shew, how by that time they shall have poured out their Vials, they shall obtain the Victory. Thus in like manner of Speech it is said, vers. 1. That in them is filled up (or fulfilled) the Wrath of God ; expleta est ira Dei. Which is spoken as if it were already accomplish'd and fulfilled ; but the meaning is, that by that time they are all emptied, the Wrath of God will be thoroughly exercised and fulfilled through them and by them. And so doth this here, note out, not a full Victory before the Vials, but a compleat Victory in and through the pouring out of these Vials ; and that this Company, ere the time of the Vials is fully expired, obtains it : For the Vials are themselves the Means by which they do overcome ; and for each degree of which Victory, they sing a triumphant Song.

4. These sing the Song of Moses. For the former of the Vials are allusions to the Plagues of Egypt ; and by that time that the fifth Vial comes, they will have drowned the Egyptians in the Red Sea, and so will sing that Song, Exod. 15. And after that, they will sing the Song of the Lamb, even his Marriage Song ; as in the 19th Chapter, (which comes in after the Funeral Song of the City of Rome, or the fifth Vial in chap. 18.) vers. 6, and 7. Let us be glad and rejoice, for the Marriage of the Lamb is come ; that is, is approaching. Or this Song may refer to the Doctrine of the Gospel, which now began to be taught among them more clearly : For Moses his Song, Deut. 32. was Doctrinal ; and so in the Old Testament it was ordinary to utter Matters of Doctrine in Songs. And thus in this Book the Doctrine of the Church is still expressed, and is called a Song. And so whereas, during the dark Times of Popery, they sung (as it were) a New Song, differing from Popish Doctrine ; yet so confusedly, that none could learn it, as Chap. 14. 3.

Now they have the Everlasting Gospel to preach, as Chap. 14. 6. and they sing Moses his Song, and the Lamb's, distinctly ; they preach the Law and the Gospel clearly and rightly, and make manifest his δικαιώματα, which we translate [Judgments] but signifies his Justifications (as Rom. 8. 4.) of poor Sinners made manifest, as vers. 4. The Doctrine of Justification by Christ being eminently revealed and made known in the Time of these Vials, and the Works of Redemption most clearly manifested.

And moreover these do also set up Christ, both in himself, and in his Relations to his Church, as calling him :

1. The Lord Almighty.
2. King of Saints.
3. The only Holy One.

And so,

1. As the only Ruler and Lord of his Church.
2. And King that must give Laws unto it.
3. As the Fountain of all Grace and Holiness.

(In

(In a word) As a God only to be believed in, and worshipped, as being only and alone Holy; They magnify nor Saints, nor Temples, nor the Pope, no, nor any Creature whatsoever: For so, Jer. 10. 7. the like Speech is uttered in opposition to all False Gods; and therefore, say they, Who will not fear thee? or worship thee, and that, according to thine own ways prescribed in thy Word, and not according to Men's Inventions. Just, and True, and Righteous are thy Ways, (that is part of their Song) and all Superstitions and humane Inventions in Worship are false: So says David, I hate every evil Way, but thy Law do I love, as being only True and Righteous, Psal. 119. Thus much for their Song.

Secondly, The Description of these Angels, and their Preparations to pour out their Vials, you have from vers. 6. of this 15th Chapter to the end, as you have the execution and pouring out of their Vials in the 16th Chapter.

The Angels are described as cloathed in White, as Priests, and girt with a golden Girdle of Alacrity, Strength, Sincerity, and Truth; for in Scripture Men are said to be girt with all these. And one of the four Beasts (that is, of the Officers of the Churches, whose Mouths in praying the Officers still are) is said to give these Vials unto these Angels, in that theirs and the Church's Prayers do fill up these Vials in their several Successions. And the Plagues they execute are said to be in Vials, both because the Prayers of the Saints do fill up the Wrath poured out, (for chap. 5. the Vials are interpreted the Prayers of the Saints); and also in allusion to the Expression in the Old Testament, where God's Wrath is described by a Cup or Vial in the Hand of the Lord; as often in the Psalms you have it. And Rome's Sin being expressed by a Cup of Abomination in her Hands; her Plagues are therefore fitly expressed by Vials and Cups of Wrath, irresistably poured out upon their Heads from Heaven. And they are said to be filled with the Wrath of God, that liveth for ever and ever: For that these Plagues are Spiritual as well as Corporal (as I shall shew); and are but the beginnings of an Everlasting Wrath, as that Fire from Heaven upon the Sodomites, is said to be an Everlasting Fire, and so called by Jude.

Again, these Vials are said to come out of the Temple; that is, out of the Church or Churches then erected. Which because it follows the mention of the opening the Temple of the Tabernacle in Heaven: therefore some have mistaken it, as if these Angels had come out of the Temple of the Testimony, mentioned vers. 5. whereas that Temple there, is, by way of distinction, called, The Temple of the Tabernacle of the Testimony, even the Holy of Holies; and the opening of that Temple, not spoken in relation unto the Angels coming out, as opening upon their coming forth; but for the discovery of the Ark, as you have it interpreted under the seventh Trumpet, chap. 11. vers. last, in allusion to the Holy of Holies, which was kept veiled. Now by that 11th Chapter, it evidently appears, that the Vials are poured out before the opening of this Tabernacle of the Testimony in Heaven. For vers. 5, and 6, you read of four Vials before the killing of the Witnesses; and the fifth Vial is after their rising; and the passing away of the second Woe is the sixth Vial; and then the seventh Vial, and the seventh Trumpet are all one, (as hath been often times shewed); and then comes the Tabernacle of the Testimony, or Holy of Holies to be opened, and the Ark to be discovered and seen in it, vers. last of that Chapter. And in like manner here also, the opening of this Tabernacle is said to be μετὰ ταῦτα, after these things; that is, after these Vials; which is a phrase in this Book, always noting out things in a several Succession performed, and a differing Vision, as chap. 4. vers. 1. and chap. 7. vers. 9. And the mention of it comes in here, only to shew the Event of these Vials. The Temple therefore that these Angels come out of, is at the purest but the Temple of Priests; and yet filled with Smoke from the Glory and Power of God, it betokening his special, glorious, and powerful Presence in and with the Church during the Time of the Vials, which the Smoke that filled the Temple at the Dedication, was a Sign of. And this Smoke here implies, and is the Sign of three Things.

PART II.

1. Of God's Presence in these Churches: So Isa. 4. 5. under the Allusion to the Smoke in the Temple; God's Presence in his Assemblies under the New Testament, is there spoken of. And here it is interpreted the Glory of the Lord; for so it follows, The Temple was filled with Smoke from the Glory of the Lord; that is, his glorious Presence, which Isa. 6. 1. is said to fill the Temple.

2. Of God's Defence, and Protection of his Church; and therefore it is here also added, [and from the Power of the Lord]. So that none can enter in to hurt them within the Temple. And thus also Isa. 4. 5. the Smoke is interpreted a Defence; and vers. 6. there is said to be a Covert and a Refuge from the Storm, &c.

3. Of Offence also to their Enemies. So in the 18th Psalms, Smoke is made a Sign of God's Anger and Wrath; A Smoke ascended in his Anger. And so, whereas it is said, That no Man was able to enter into the Temple, one probable meaning of that expression (to me) is, That whereas God poured forth upon the Enemies of his Church Vials of Wrath, and these Plagues were rained abroad upon them, (against which this Temple, (as was said) was the only Refuge and Covert, Men still using to fly unto the Temple, and to the Horns of the Altar, as being their Sanctuary) God in his just Judgment hardneth, and so keepeth those his Enemies of the Popish Party, from joining themselves to this his Temple; so that they, through the obdurateness of their Hearts, (of which you may still read in the Vials) are not able to enter into it, and so perish, and are destroyed by these Plagues. And whereas it is said, They entred not in, till the seven Plagues were fulfilled; the meaning is, that they never entred, as Gen. 8. 7. and Psalms. 112. 8. and Acts 3. 21. [Until] is put for [Never].

C H A P. III.

The Exposition of Chapter 16. A Division of the Vials; the two last briefly touch'd.

THE Execution of these two last Vials doth follow the five First, from vers. 1. to the 12th; and they are Vials upon the Beast, the Pope, and his Adherents; God by degrees plaguing them as he did the Egyptians; until the Fifth falling eminently upon the Seat of the Beast, Rome itself, his Kingdom be so darkened and despoiled of its Glory and Power; that although the Beast may remain, for Jesus Christ himself (at his coming, under the seventh Vial) to have the last blow at him, and the full glory of the Conquest; yet so weakened and darkened, as that I believe the Period of his Power to do (as the word is in the Original, chap. 13. 5.) for 42 Months, or 1260 Years, is there set, and the Date of his Lease expired.

Now for the 6th and 7th Vials; because they are further off to come, and that the 7th Vial, and the preparation unto it, from vers. 13. belongs to the Kingdom of Christ, as being the immediate making way thereunto; therefore I will but briefly touch upon both these, and dispatch them first. The five first (especially the 4th and 5th) being those that concern these Times, and which chiefly serve for the opening the 11th Chapter, I shall treat more largely upon.

Now the 6th Vial is upon the great River Euphrates; that is, the Turk, whom the sixth Trumpet left standing in the East. And he is compared to the great River (which is the Epithete given to the River Euphrates in the Old Testament) as the Assyrian Monarch and his Army are called, in the 8th of Isaiah, and the 7th verse. And to the River Euphrates; for his first Seat was (as you heard out of Chap. 9. 14.) upon that River. Now this River is to be dried up, for the Kings of the East, the Jews, to possess their own Land, according to that Prophecy of their last Conversion, Isa. 11. 13, 14. compared with the 15th and 16th verses of the same Chapter.

The 7th Vial is general, upon the Air, the whole Power of Satan all the World over. The Reliques both of Turk and Pope, and of all the Churches Enemies throughout the World, (as vers. 14.) mustering up all their Forces against the Christians in the West, and the Jews in the East, are to be overthrown by Jesus Christ himself, and his Armies; as you may read more at large in the 19th Chapter, from the 11th verse to the end, that being an Explication of this Vial, the last upon the World, as the 18th Chapter is of the 5th Vial, the most eminent upon the Beast.

S E C T. I.

Seven Things premised for the understanding the five first Vials, which are upon the Beast and his Company.

NOW for these five first Vials upon the Beast, Antichrist, and his Adherents ; I shall premise these things for the true understanding of them.

First, That for the Times of them, they (as was said) began with the Times of the first Separation from Rome, recorded Chap. 14. 6. and so do indeed contain all those Steps and Degrees of ruining Antichrist, first and last, from the first Time of the Church's attempting to come forth out, and separating from this Egypt. And therefore the three first Vials are an Allusion (as you shall see in the next Premise) unto those Plagues which Moses and Aaron, in bringing Israel out of Egypt, executed upon the Egyptians ; and so do refer to the Times of the Church's Separation and first Reformation. It appears also from the thing it self ; for how can we think that all those Discoveries of the Whore's Nakedness, and the falling off of these Kingdoms from her, (although they for a time should begin to court her again) should not be reckoned among the Vials, they having been well-nigh as great Plagues as are like yet to befall her, (except that her last Ruin)! And it appears likewise from this, that in the Vintage of the 14th Chapter, we find (as was observed) mention made of the Angel of the fourth Vial : Therefore the Times after that Vintage, must belong unto those three Vials which preceded this fourth. And for the Time of the beginning of them, whether at the Harvest, or the Voices of those Angels that made the Separation, the Holy Ghost hath not left us without some Character whereby we may discern it, in the Story of that 14th Chapter, where the Song which the Church sings, when the Vials do begin, is, (as you may see it there) Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy Name? for all Nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy Judgments are made manifest, &c. Of which this is one meaning, (though there is another) that the Plagues of these Vials now beginning, the Judgments of God are made manifest. Now see what the Voice of the first Angel is, (he who began the first Separation from Antichrist, and first preach'd the Gospel to every Nation) Chap. 14. vers. 6, 7. His Message unto all Nations is, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his Judgments is come; and worship him who hath made Heaven and Earth. That Angel did but begin to give warning to Antichrist and his Company, of the Vials that approached : But then observe the Voice of the Second Angel, and you will find that the first Vial did begin as the effect of these two Angels preaching : For this second not only calls Rome, Babylon, and discovers the Pope to be Antichrist, but says, Babylon is fallen, is fallen ; that is, the Foundation of her Ruin is laid. Now here began the first Vial, even in this discovery of him to be Antichrist, whom before that, the superstitious World did never so much as suspect. And whereas it is said, Babylon is fallen, the Scripture speaks of a Thing as done, when the Foundation of it is laid : So the Western Empire is reckoned as taken away, then when the Wars of the Goths began, and when the first of the Ten Kingdoms was broken off from the Empire, Anno 410. (as was before said, in the Exposition of the 13th Chapter). And the Pope is from that Time reckoned to rise with his ten Horns, though it was forty Years after e're all the ten Kingdoms were fully erected ; yea, and seventy Years after e're the Power of the Western Empire was wholly extinct. Thus in the like manner Isa. 21. the Prophet says of Old Babylon, She is fallen, he prophesying at the very Time when the Medes first revolted from that Monarchy, and began to set up a Kingdom of their own, which afterward was to destroy Babylon, being also enabled thereto by that Revolt. Now so is it here, when the first open and professed Revolt from Rome (as from a second Babylon) was made by our Predecessors, then was the Foundation of her Fall laid, then (says the Angel) Babylon is fallen ; and and so there begins the first Vial (for the Vials are the means of ruining of it).

A second Thing to be premised is, That these Vials are expressed in an Allusion unto the Plagues executed in Egypt by Moses and Aaron; of which the first were not so great, but they ended in the drowning of those Egyptians in the Red Sea; even as these do in the utter ruining of the Seat of Antichrist.

The first is upon the Earth, and the effect of it, a noisom and grievous sore on the Men who have the Mark of the Beast; in Allusion to that Plague of throwing Dust in the Air by Moses, which caused a Botch on Man and Beast then in Egypt.

The second on the Sea, and the Waters thereof.

The third on the Rivers and Fountains, turning all their Waters into Blood. All this is a manifest Allusion unto that turning the Egyptian Rivers, &c. into Blood, by Moses.

The fourth is upon the Sun, and tormenteth Men with Fire. Which may be an Allusion to the Punishment of Sodom. For so in the 11th Chapter, (where these four first Vials are enumerated) vers. 5, 6. the Antichristian State is called Egypt or Sodom. Or rather it alludes to Moses his consuming by Fire that Company that offered up strange Fire in the Wilderness, when they were come out of Egypt.

A third Thing to be premised is; That as in the Trumpets the Holy Ghost compared the Empire to a World, so here in the Vials he useth the same comparison, comparing the Kingdom of the Beast, and the several parts of it to be plagued, unto several parts of the World. And as the four first Trumpets were so many degrees of ruining the Western Empire; so are these Vials of ruining the Beast's World or Empire. The first Trumpet was on the Earth; the second on the Sea; the third on the Rivers; and the fourth on the Sun. And whereas it was there shewed, that in Scripture any Kingdom or Body is usually compared to a World, (which hath an Earth, and Heavens, &c.) wherein what is lowest is the Earth, and what is highest is the Heavens, the Sun and Stars, &c. So in that Empire then, and now in this Antichristian Kingdom here; the parts of it are compared to an Earth, Sun, Sea, Rivers, &c.

Fourth Premise. And as I observed in the 13th Chapter, that the Pope and his Company were resembled by a double Beast, one representing the Political State of these Ten Kingdoms; which made up one Body under him as an Head; and the other, the Spiritual State of his Church and Clergy, (as they call it) which make up a distinct Body under him as their High Priest and Spiritual Head: So (answerably) this his Earth, and Rivers, and Sun, (which are the Parts of these his Kingdoms) may (according to the Analogy of this Representation) be interpreted in a double sense; either his Spiritual Earth, Sea, &c. or his Political Earth, Sea, &c.

Fifth Premise. Seeing that in the 11th Chapter, vers. 8. his Kingdom is called Spiritual Egypt and Sodom; and this, in relation unto these very Plagues of the Vials (which are enumerated there, vers. 5, 6.) [The City (says he) which is spiritually called Egypt and Sodom]; and that is more than meerly, or allegorically such, it importing that this his Kingdom is a Spiritual Egypt, and a Spiritual Sodom. And it is a State (we know) that claimeth Spiritual Jurisdiction in Spiritual Things, and over the Souls of Men, (as Chap. 18. vers. 13. hath it) and not only or principally in things outward and political, but in ordine ad spiritualia, in order to things Spiritual. Now therefore the Plagues (and so these Vials, they being the Plagues upon this Egypt and Sodom) upon this City, must needs be understood of Spiritual Plagues, upon the Souls and Spirits of Antichrist's Adherents, as well as outward. For they must be answerable to the Egypt, upon which they are Plagues; yea, and seeing that it is both a Spiritual State, and yet withal, a Temporal Kingdom also for outward Power and Pomp; having an Earth, Sea, &c. as other worldly Kingdoms have: therefore they shall shall have double Plagues, Spiritual and Outward also, on their Spirits, and also on their outward worldly Kingdom. Even thus it became the Righteous God (as in relation to these Plagues he is called, Chap. 16. 5.) to proportion their Plagues to their Sins, and so to double unto her, double, according to her Works, (as the phrase is, chap. 18. 6.) For him to ruin this Beast and his Adherents but outwardly only, (as he hath done other Monarchies) was not enough; for he sinned, not only in assuming outward Power, Pomp, and Glory, and a Kingdom like to other Monarchies, (under the Name and Pretence of having Christ's Power) but a Spiritual Kingdom also. The Merchandize of this City was not only Gold and precious Stones, &c. chap. 18. 12. but likewise the Souls of Men too, (as it is there). She traded in Spirituals as well as Temporals; and therefore the highest Spiritual Judgments (as well as Temporal) shall befall that State, and the Abettors of it. And as the Plagues of Pharaoh and his Egyptians were Spiritual (in the hardening of their Hearts) as well as Temporal; so such a spiritual Hardness and Impenitency is made mention of in some of these Vials, as well as outward Plagues. And therefore they are also said, chap. 15. 7. to be the Wrath of God that liveth for ever, an eternal Wrath seizing upon the Souls of them on whom they are poured. And such are these four first Vials, and so to be understood, both of Spiritual and Temporal Plagues.

I mention the four first especially, because there, where this City is called Spiritually Egypt, these four are enumerated, namely, chap. 11. 5, 6. And as it is evident that these Vials are in that 11th Chapter to be understood spiritually; so it is as evident, that the same Vials (as here in chap. 16. they are made mention of) are to be understood of outward Plagues; and so meant of both.

6. For the right understanding these Vials, I premise, That though there be a First, Second, and Third Vial in order succeeding each other, and which in a successive Order begin after each other, and have some special precise Time for their eminent pouring out and execution; yet so, as some sprinklings of the First may continue still under the Second, Third, and Fourth; and some Reliques of the Second, under the Third, Fourth, &c. and so of the rest. And this seems evident to me, in that their Sores begun under the first Vial, are made mention of under the fifth Vial, vers. 11. of that Chapter. And so in like manner the same effect (namely, Blaspheming) which is a part of the fourth Vial, (and an effect of it) is also continued in a further height under the Fifth. And so again, on the contrary, it may fall out that some droppings of a succeeding Vial, may begin in the Times of the Vial foregoing it, and go before, as the droppings of Storms do, before their Strength and Fulness comes; and so may these, before the extremity of pouring forth the Vial itself. As for Example; During the Times of the fourth Vial, some droppings of the Fifth may begin, and some preparations to it, though still the fulness of that, and every other Vial, hath a special Time in its due order succeeding.

The seventh and last Thing to be premised, is; That all the Plagues on the Popish Party, first and last, are reduceable to one of these Vials: For, Chap. 15. 1. they are said to be the last Plagues, in which the Wrath of God is fulfilled upon that Party; and so every Drop and Sprinkling of Wrath and Vexation poured out, goes to fill up some Vial or other, as a part of it.

SECT.

S E C T. II.

A particular and more large Explication of the five first Vials on the Beast and his Company.

NOW for a more particular Explication of them :

The first Vial is principally upon the Beast's Earth, the lowest part of his Kingdom (and this according to that Rule given) both Spiritual and Political. Now this Vial was the effect of those first and second Angel's preachings, Chap. 14. especially of that second Angel there: For the preaching the Gospel, and the discovery of the Pope to be that Antichrist, did draw away many of his Inferior Subjects, and of the common People in all Kingdoms, (namely the ten European Kingdoms, which are his Earth Political. And so his Authority and Interest in the Hearts of the People all Europe through was weakned, and the Number of the Worshippers of the Beast lessened. So as all the World did not now, without contradiction, go after him as they had wont. And there was an effect of this Vial also, upon his Spiritual Earth; which his Clergy were: for the Waldenses and their Followers, by their preaching in those Ages, discovering the uncleanness, idleness, and hypocrisy of the Priests, Monks, and Nuns, (who were the Beast's Enchanters) they did (as it were) cast up Dust in their Faces, as Moses did; and so they brake out in Botches, and became odious to all the People. So speaks the Vial, v. 2. There fell a noisom and grievous Sore upon the Men that had the Mark of the Beast. Now they are properly his Clergy; who being exempted from the Civil Power, are more peculiarly his Subjects and sworn Vassals; and indeed by Ordination do receive from him a Character indelible. (For this, see the Exposition upon Chap. 13.) Who are also called the Worshippers of his Image, they being the upholders of his Idolatrous Doctrine. And accordingly we find in Story, that all those first Gospellers before Luther, made it the chiefest Subject and End of their Writings and Disputes, to render odious and vile, the Pharisaical Popish Clergy, (as in the Book of Martyrs abundantly appears).

Neither was this Judgment meerly outward, as only bringing shame through such an outward discovery of their hateful and abominable Iniquities, which was also the beginning of their Ruin; (for it made way for it in all Mens Hearts): But further, it is most certain, that the Effect of the Light of the Gospel, which in their preaching was discovered, proved really a Curse unto this Popish Clergy, in order to this their breaking forth in Filthiness and Botches: in that for this their not embracing it, but shutting their Eyes against it, God gave them up (by way of a Curse) unto all manner of gross Sins, of Uncleanness, Sodomy, &c. so as after this, to commit them with more greediness, than before this preaching of the Gospel; even as he did the Gentiles, Rom. 1. Because they with-held the Truth in Unrighteousness, therefore he gave them up the more unto vile Affections. So these, after the first Light of the Gospel began to dawn, they daily brake out into Botches and Boils more than ever they did before. And thus this Vial was a Spiritual Judgment upon them, as well as an Outward, in discovering their Sores unto their shame. And this is the first degree of their Spiritual Judgment under the first Vial.

The Second Vial is upon the Sea. And this is the Fruit and Effect of the third Angel's preaching, namely, Luther and his Followers; who as in their Doctrine they were raised up to a greater Light, (comparatively to the former); so the Fruit of their Doctrine was a further Plague, both upon the Political and Spiritual Sea of the Beast. The Sea in a Kingdom or Body Politick, is put for Jurisdiction over many People, (as was shewed in the second Trumpet, chap. 8.) and so here the Sea of the Beast, are those many Kingdoms, and Peoples, and Nations, and Tongues, which she sits upon, (as you may see it expounded pounded, chap. 17. 15.) Now after Luther's preaching, and his Followers, not only particular Persons (as before) were divided from the Pope, but whole Nations were rent from him, (as England, Germany, Sweden, Scotland, &c.) and his Sea lessened by a third part and more, and some of the ten Horns of the Beast wrung off, so becoming like as Members when divided from the Body, and (as the Similitude is vers. 3. to express that Division) as the Blood of a dead Man. And every living Thing died in those Seas divided from him; in that now those of the Popish Faction could not, through the alteration of Religion by Law, live in their Idolatrous Worship, so quietly, safely, and peaceably, as before. There was no free living or breathing for them in these separated Kingdoms.

And in like manner his Spiritual Sea also had a Vial poured upon it, even his abominable Doctrine and Worship; as, the Doctrine of Purgatory, Indulgences, Merit, &c. in which, as in the Sea, his Merchants (namely, his Priests) had brought in Gain, both to themselves, and to the Pope's Custom-house, (as the Expression is, chap. 18. 17.)

This Sea of the Beast's Doctrine is turned into Blood, and does (like the Blood of a dead Man) begin to putrify and stink; yea, and (which is a further Plague) to be damnable. Insomuch that those, who after so clear a Light of the Gospel now discovered, will still continue in that Doctrine, die and perish eternally. And so in that sense also it is true, which is said, vers. 3. that every living thing died in the Sea. And see how this agrees with the preaching of the third Angel, chap. 14. 9, 10. He preaching, that not only that Rome was Babylon, as the former was, but that if any one did worship the Beast, or his Image, the same should drink of the Wine of God's Wrath. And by that Wrath is meant Hell; for it follows, the Smoke of their Torments ascends up for ever and ever; that is, now they shall be sure to be all damned, who know the Truth, but embrace it not. And this was a further Spiritual Punishment upon them, above what their Doctrine was unto them in former Times, wherein through Ignorance Men remaining, many more of them were saved than now there are.

The Third Vial is upon the Rivers and Fountains; that is, those who serve to enlarge, or any way recover that his Sea again, or to sweeten it. They are therefore called Rivers, because as Rivers run from the Sea into the Sea again, so do these.

I shall now explicate both the Rivers and Fountains severally.

First, For his Fountains; They are the lesser Springs; and those,

1. The Spiritual Ones. When the Egyptian Waters were turned into Blood, we read, that they digged Fountains and Wells; and that they also were turned into Blood by Moses. So here, they when their Sea is become bloody, dig Fountains to live in. Which Fountains are their Writings and Writers since the Reformation, that with Learning and Eloquence, would labour to sweeten and make good some of their Sea-waters again, but in vain: Our Writers again confuting them, and turning all into Blood, as it was before. So as, still those among them that shall read the one and the other, cannot but so be convinced, that if they persist still in their Doctrine, they will be damned, (as the Curse is, 2 Thess. 2. 11, 12.)

2. Their Fountains Temporal and Political also. Such we may account those Politick Agents, the Jesuits, and others, that have, in all these Separated Kingdoms, attempted to restore this his lost Power and Jurisdiction. And the lesser Springs, (namely, particular Persons) have many of them been turned to Blood, whilst Laws enacted against them, (in England, 1581. in Holland, 86. in France, 84. and again in England 1605.) cut off many of them, and gave them Blood to drink, many of them being martyred; insomuch that they have a Martyrology, or Book of Martyrs, even as we have. Thus they have had a just Reward, as the Angel from the Altar cries, vers. 7. that is, True Worshippers in Churches, who through their Prayers had procured these Edicts, and therefore do now return the praise unto God's Justice, in retaliating to them and upon them. That Phrase [from the Altar] notes not out Martyrdom, (as some think) think) neither here, nor chap. 14. 18. (but this Phrase [the Souls under the Altar] is, that which importeth Martyrdom, as chap. 6.) but [Altar] is here put to signify Worship; and so, the Angel out from the Altar, or place of Worship, is put to signify those publick Worshippers and Priests of God that stand at the Altar, or in publick Assemblies, and give thanks for these Judgments upon all Occasions. Their Acclamation is, that as they had dealt by us, so now themselves were dealt with, and indeed, just in the same manner; for they had singled out particular Persons, and put them to death by bloody Laws established; and these Kingdoms being fallen off, have enacted the like, and put them to death in the like publick manner.

In the second place; this third Vial is upon his Rivers also, and greater Streams, namely, those Armadoes and Navies from out the Sea of those Kingdoms that continue still to uphold the Beast, and endeavour to lay all Kingdoms into this one Sea again. As the Spaniards, both against England in 38; and against Holland often since, sent out to regain Rome's Jurisdiction; who yet have still been defeated. And unto this Head may be reduced the Defeatment of that late Navy, 1639, (sent forth to the same end) as a sprinkling of this Vial, (though now be the Times of the fourth Vial) still going on, according to the Rule given in the 6th Premise.

The Fourth Vial is upon the Sun; and to the Angel that is Executor of it, there is power given to scorch Men with Fire. The Effect whereof is, their Blasphemy. This Vial seemeth to me to have two distinct parts;

1. The Effusion of this Vial upon the Sun.
2. The scorching with Fire those that adhere to the Beast. And according to my former General Rules, I do interpret it, both of Outward, and of Spiritual Plagues, and both of them falling on the Popish Party. And so, the former Part of the Vial to import an Outward Plague, and the latter a Spiritual Punishment.

Now, 1. for the Vial upon the Sun. The Sun here (according to the third Premise or Rule given) may be put for the more illustrious Light, or Prince, adhering to the Popish Party, and shining in his Political Heaven, whereof he is the great God or Jupiter. And this must be either the Emperor, or the King of Spain, or (as it may be) both; they both being of the same Family of Austria.

The Issue of these German Wars (when the Popish Party shall once have had Blood enough given them to drink) shall be either the Ruin of the one, or the other, or both; and if not of them both, then of the Austrian Family in Germany (as Mr. Mede first well conjectured) though it may be the Hint of his Conjecture might have been taken from what was Mr. Parker's Opinion of this Vial long before; who interpreted this Sun to be some Protestant Prince in Germany, who should first have a part of this Vial poured upon him by the Popish Party; but being thereby provoked, and afterwards raised again, should (like the Sun) scorch them with his heat, and so only the latter part of this Vial should fall on them. Thus Mr. Parker, Anno 1616, did first interpret this Vial, long before these German Wars. But I do much rather incline to Mr. Mede's Opinion, because these Vials are wholly peculiar to the Beast and his Company, and to those professed Enemies of the Church who adhere unto him. And so this first part of the Vial upon the Sun, cannot be understood of any Protestant, but of those that do adhere to the Beast, even as well as the latter part of it, scorching them with Fire.

Now if this Sun be one of these two, either the King of Spain, or the Emperor, I rather take the latter: For the King of Spain, though now the greater Light in the present Horoscope, and so would, rather of the two, seem to be this Sun: Yet considering those more elderly and former Times, the Empire of Germany hath, for this 800 Years, been the eminentest Principality in Europe, and hath upheld the Pope the most, and in those Times done more that way than any other King, (though indeed some of the Emperors opposed the Pope). Now God in bringing Punishments on Kings and Kingdoms, reckoneth with them for what their Predecessors in State have done, and respecteth former Times as much, if not more then present. And besides, this German Empire was peculiarly of the Pope's Creation, being by him set up in the first Foundation of it, in Charlemain; Even as God is said to set up the Sun in his Firmament, the Work of his Hands, Psal. 19. So the Pope may be said to have set up this Sun in his. And so the Ruin of the Emperor is more peculiarly a Punishment, respecting the Papal Seat and Authority, than the Ruin of any other Prince: He having so peculiar an Interest in him, as in his Eldest Son, and chief begotten. This Vial Mr. Mede thought to have been in execution in that great prevailing of the King of Sweden against the Emperor, (Whose Death diverted many Mens Thoughts from that Interpretation). But surely, though he proceeded not to throw down that Sun from his Heaven, yet those glorious Victories of his, and quelling of the Popish Party, may well be accounted in it self a Vial, although it should proceed no farther, and such a darkning of this Sun, as he will never more recover his ancient Glory and Splendour; and that King did lay such a Foundation of weakening his Power, as may end in the utter ruin of that Family in the issue of these Wars. Others have interpreted this Vial to be upon the Pope's own Temporal and Spiritual Authority, which is his Sun, or chief Glory (for so Sun in the Old Testament, and the darkning of it, is put for Glory, and the obscuring of it; as Isa. 60. 20. Jer. 15. 9.) And so, that Power and Authority which the Pope once had in Temporals, is here to be understood; He so eminently and conspicuously shining over Princes in their Temporal Power, that (as their own Decretals speak) they used to call the Pope, and the Emperor, the two great Luminaries in Heaven, the Sun and the Moon, entitling the Pope the Sun, and the Emperor the Moon. But how hath this his Glory, in the Consciences of his own Vassals, and in the Eyes of those Princes who sometimes were subject to him, wained more and more? (which now at last may haply grow yet more dim). The whole Kingdom of France ever denied him that absolute Temporal Power he once challenged. And in these latter Times, how is the King of Spain rather become the Sun, and the Pope the Moon? who is glad to beg Light from him, and to flatter other Princes, to be by them upheld, who once flattered him, and whom he excommunicated at his pleasure. So that the Pope indeed is but the Chaplain to the King of Spain, whom he makes use of for the acquiring of an Universal Monarchy. But which of these, or whether both of these are here meant, the Event must judg. And thus much for the first Part of this Vial.

Now, 2. for that other part which follows, [and power was given him to scorch Men with Fire]. This hath been much mistaken; As if because the Sun useth to scorch with Heat, therefore that Power were here given to this Sun, to scorch with Fire; and so it should refer to the Sun's Heat. Whereas (I take it) it is mentioned as a distinct Power given to this fourth Angel; that as he hath power to pour out a Vial on the Pope's Sun, (be it taken as Political, or otherwise) so also that he hath a further Power given him, to scorch all those with Fire, that shall continue to advance the Pope in these his declining Times. Which (as I take it) doth (according to the Rule given) properly refer to a further and greater height of Spiritual Punishments, (and so this latter part makes up the Spiritual Plague, as the former part did the Political and Outward Plague) inflicted upon the Upholders of the Beast in the Times of this Vial; even upon the Learned among them, especially those who now take pains to write for him, or to bring in his Authority into these European Kingdoms again, where the Light of the Gospel shines so clearly and perspicuously, as they cannot but long since have been convinced of it; their Sea being turned into Blood, and discovered to be corrupt, and their Writings (their Springs) so clearly refuted and turned to Blood also, that those that live in those Kingdoms, and still labour to bring in Popery again, cannot but manifestly go against their own Light and Knowledg.

Now

Now to punish this so presumptuous and high Rebellion, against so much Light still shining, and Age after Age encreasing, the Angel (or the Executioners of this Vial) hath Power to scorch them with Fire. And this is manifestly interpreted, chap. 11. where the Holy Ghost, speaking of this Vial, says, (vers. 5.) I will give Power to my Two Witnesses, (who are all one with these Angels) ; and if any Man will hurt them, Fire shall proceed out of their Mouths, and devour their Enemies : and if any will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed. The Punishment there recited is Spiritual, (as all the rest there mentioned are) for they do execute it as Witnesses, by prophesying ; and therefore this Fire is said to come out of their Mouths. And those other Plagues (as their stopping the Rain, &c. vers. 6.) must needs be so understood, namely, in a Spiritual Allusion. And so this of devouring with Fire, notes out the highest kind of Punishment that Men are capable of, as being killed with a Witness, [in this manner must they be killed]. And it is also there made the Punishment of a wilful sinning of Men, even of those that set their Wills against God, and these his Witnesses: For so the Emphasis is put [if any Man [will] hurt them] and it is twice said, as making them go wholly and fully against Knowledge, and so to sin wilfully. Now both this here, and that in Chap. 11. do seem to be an Allusion, either to the Fire of Sodom (this City being called Spiritually Sodom) which Jude 7. is called, the Vengeance of the Eternal Fire; because that Fire that came down from Heaven upon the Sodomites, was but a beginning of Hell unto them, and a Type of it unto us. Or else (to which I rather encline) it is an allusion unto that Fire that came out of Moses his Mouth (namely at his Prayer) unto Nadab and Abihu, for offering strange Fire unto God, Levit. 10. 1, 2. and upon Corah's Company, Numb. 16. when they said, All the People are Holy. Which, Heb. 10. 27, 28. is brought in as the Type to express their Punishment, who sin wilfully after the knowledge of the Truth, and so sin against the Holy Ghost, vers. 26. [If we sin wilfully, after we have received the Knowledge of the Truth, there remaineth no more Sacrifice for Sins, but a certain fearful looking for of Judgment, [ἐπιδοχὴ κολάσεως] or receiving Judgment in their own Consciences; which he there calls fiery Indignation that shall devour the Adversaries, [ὄνειδύρις] under-hand Adversaries, (so the word is) as that Company was unto Moses, pretending to be for God and his People; all the People are Holy (say they) and so themselves were. And that unto this Fiery Indignation that fell on that Company, the Apostle's allusion there was (who in that Epistle openeth many Types) as making it a Type of the Torment and Punishment of such kind of wilful Sinners under the New Testament, is evident by what follows in the next, vers. 28. He that despised Moses Law, died without Mercy, under two or three Witnesses ; then of how much sorer Punishment shall he be thought worthy, &c. Now bring but Paul's Exposition of that Type there, unto this Allusion, that is used both in Chap. 11. and also here; and it helps fully to expound this part of this Vial, (as I shall shew when I come to open the 11th Chapter, vers. 5. unto which I must refer you for the full Exposition of it). As Paul there calls this Sin, a sinning wilfully: So, chap. 11. their Sin is exprest twice by the malice of the Will. And that it is this Sin, or at least an high kind of presumptuous sinning against Knowledge, accompanied with Terror, that is here meant in this Vial, chap. 16. 8, 9. appears further also by the Effect here mentioned, namely, their blaspheming the Name of God, who hath Power over these Plagues. Now blaspheming the Holy Ghost, or the workings of him, in others (knowing they are his Works, as here these do blaspheme God, knowing they are his Plagues) this is the very Spirit of this Sin: And then final Impenitency is here also added as the Effect of it, that they repented not. So that it is presumptuous sinning at least, that is here meant. And you may further observe, that this Plague goes on in the fifth Vial; and this Sin against Knowledge, grows up to a further height under that Vial; for there they are so scorched, that they gnaw their Tongues, as Men in Hell. And that in these Times (the Times of the fourth Vial) this sin against the Holy Ghost grows very rife and common, by reason of the abundance of Light and Conviction that shineth in Churches, hath long been the observation of Godly Men, who have had Senses exercised to discern the Spirits of Men growing in Rage and Madness, beyond the supposal of any other Principle that should act them in their wrap'd and eccentric Motion, and violent Proceedings. And surely, how that many of the Learned among the Jesuits themselves, should come to commit this Sin, is not hard to conceive : For in their Younger Years, they are bred up in ways of Devotion, and have Truth and Light enough among them to give them a taste of the Powers of the World to come : Who yet, after their studying our Writings, and discerning the Truth, do, for Worldly ends, wilfully go against it ; and being once engaged in those ends, they fall to despise the Truth, and are given up unto a wilful sinning of this great Sin, through a just hand of God upon them ; they being ordained to grow worse and worse, as their Light encreaseth ; even as it became God under these Vials to punish them. And so, as that first small and weaker Light under the first Vial being rejected, their Punishment was, a giving of them up unto gross Sins : and then further, under the second and third Vials, their Doctrine having been by a clearer Discovery made to the Persisters in it, damnable ; nothing was now left, (they yet persisting, and God being engaged to rise higher in his Plagues) but that God should strike Hell-Fire into their Consciences, and seal up Reprobation unto them. And thus it became him not to leave these Opposers and Murderers of the Saints and Holy Witnesses of God in all Ages, till he had given many of them up to this Sin, of all other the highest, so to make full the measure of their Iniquities, before that Kingdom and State be finally ruined ; as he did the Pharisees in that last Age (when he meant to bring on them all, their Fore-fathers killing his Prophets in Jerusalem, giving them up unto this Sin, as the effect of Christ's Ministry, (as this here of the Witnesses Testimony).

But (above all), how those that Apostatise, and become of the Popish Party, having lived, and been brought up in a Land of Uprightness, (as it is Isa. 26.) and yet will not behold the Majesty of the Lord shining round about them, but relinquish the Truth they are educated in, and would bring in the Worship and Doctrine of the Beast and Whore, after so clear a Light and powerful Preaching so long enjoyed, (towards the latter end of the Harvest, and Summer growing more bright than ever) who yet in Hypocrisy deny this to be their Aim, and yet their Deeds do so manifest it, that all the World accounts them Popish, and to be of his Faction, (and so they merit the Title of the Number of his Name) being Spirits, such as Rome hath not worse, in Malice and Enmity against God's Witnesses : How a Man's Thoughts (I say) should excuse many of these as innocent, from presumptuous Sins at least ; yea, and this great Transgression also ; is as hard not to think it, as the Thing it self is hard to be thought of them. For their Venom, Rage, Subtilty, Hypocrisy, and under-hand opposing the Saints, is such, as the Godly do almost generally suspect them for this Sin. And indeed, what other Principle could act Men so, cannot well be imagined. Their Case being in this, worse than that of the Pharisees ; in that they had been brought up in Darkness and Ignorance of the Righteousness of God, and of the Messiah, when the Ministry of John and of Christ came upon them, calling on them to acknowledge and embrace Christ as the Messiah ; whom being but a Carpenter's Son, they never acknowledged ; and yet they sinned that Sin, through their smothering that New Light, (because their owning him, would have put themselves out of Credit, and have set up Christ). But these Men in this our Age have been brought up in the contrary Truth and Light, and have both professed it, subscribed to it, and preached it ; and yet they love this darkness of Popery, and embrace this Carted Whore, and courting her, would bring her into their Tents in the Face of Moses, and of the whole Congregation ; and they loath the Truth of the Gospel, and of the Faith they once received, and this, in the face of the clearest Sun-shine, and Light (that ever shone) round about them. One would think God should destroy them visibly : but they must do one exploit for him first ; their Destiny further is, that they should kill the Witnesses for this their scorching them through the powerful Testimony of their Lives and Prophecy ; and so be even with them, and overcome them yet before the fifth Vial comes. And though as yet they have not got a full Victory, yet they are now a making War, and shall prevail, and banish and disperse them among Tongues and Nations throughout out Europe. But by that Time the fifth Vial comes, these Witnesses in the end shall again have overcome them, who are indeed that Number of the Beast's Name, the last of all his Company to be overcome, as Chap. 15. 2. they being the last sort of his Champions, even these Names of Men [ὀνόματα ἀνθρώπων] (as they are called chap. 11. vers. 13. and they shall be killed instead of the Witnesses, at their Resurrection, as the first Degree and Preparation to the fifth Vial.

The Fifth Vial is upon the Throne, or Seat of the Beast; which is plainly Rome it self, which was the old Seat of the Dragon, the Heathenish Empire, which Satan did, as it were, openly govern that Empire under Heathenish Idolatry. But after that, this Seat was resigned by the Dragon unto the Pope, at his first Rising, Chap. 13. 2. Which City the Sybills long since prophesied of, should again become a Sheep-coat. And the Holy Ghost, in Chap. 18. that it should be thrown down as a Mill-stone, and be no more found at all, but should become the Habitation of Devils only, and the dwelling of every foul Spirit for ever. Of this Vial we may say, as the Disciples said to Christ; Now he speaketh plainly, and not in Parables, as before. Only, as the other Vials are to be taken in the largest sense, so I think this is, (though not in a Spiritual Sense; for he speaks plainly, and not in Figures). And therefore, as was said chap. 13. in the explaining of that second Beast, That not alone the Pope is that Beast, but concrete, and together with him, his Clergy, who make up one Body with him as their Head. And so it may be, that by Seat of the Beast here, is not only and simply meant Rome, the Sea and Seat of that chief Bishop the Pope; but it may be extended to other Seas and Seats that fall together with it; namely of such of the Clergy, whether in Italy or elsewhere, as cleave unto the Beast, and profess themselves of his Number and Company. Who now under this fifth Vial, are tumbled down from their usurped Seats, Thrones, and Dignities; together with this their Head, whose whole Kingdom is now become full of Darkness and Obscurity. Yet so, as eminently Rome, the proper Seat of the Beast, is here intended, and in the Letter of this Vial held forth as the Subject of it upon which it falls. And with the fall of Rome, the Number and Time of the Beast's Reign and Kingdom, is reckoned as fulfilled; namely, his 1260 Years allotted him to do in. Which Years have now their Period. And although the Popedom remains to be destroyed by the seventh Vial; yet his Glory is here reckoned as gone and taken from him; and he is now reserved alive, only for a further and more glorious execution. Therefore it is said, His Kingdom is darkned; For now he is put by his seven Hills, his Seat: His Seven-headed Kingdom is no longer reckoned of, (as Mr. Mede reasons). But that which hath chiefly confirmed me in the Opinion, that the Period of the Beast's Kingdom is by the Holy Ghost reckoned to end with this fall of the City of Rome, is, That I observe the 17th and 18th Chapters are principally and on purpose added; first, to present this City of Rome in all her Bravery, before her Ruin, as chap. 17. and then to sing a solemn, stately, and triumphant Song, for her Ruin and Destruction, as Chap. 18. throughout. Now that the Holy Ghost should make this Ruin of the City that hath so long reigned (as vers. last of Chap. 17.) over the Kings of the Earth, so great a matter of Triumph, and so eminent above all Things else in this Book, imports, That the last and fatal Period of that fourth Roman Monarchy (of which that City was to be the Seat, and the Beast the last Head) is here to be accounted as come, and the number of its Years expired, the Beast's Kingdom being now as good as at an end. He may indeed raise some trouble, and again make some resistance, after the sixth Vial; but Reign any more he shall not: For otherwise, this had been Pæana Triumphalem ante Victoriâ canere, to triumph before an assured Victory; which the Holy Ghost would not have done, upon this Occasion, but reserved it till after the seventh Vial.

But then was to come another manner of Triumph, more high and glorious, for the Marriage of the Lamb, when Rome's Ruin, and the Beast's Kingdom, will be forgotten. And therefore God ordained it to be performed at the Funeral

PART II.

Funeral of this Great Whore, the City of Rome. And it is much that two whole Chapters should be spent on purpose to set forth the Pageants of the Church's Triumph over her. Surely, here this Great Kingdom ends; and therefore, after that the Church prepares for the Lamb's Marriage, Chapter 19.

Now that that Whore presented in those two Chapters, (the 17th and 18th) is this City of Rome, is evident by the last words of the 17th Chapter. The Whore is that great City that reigns over the Kings of the Earth. And so those two Chapters are but a fuller setting forth, and enlargement of this same fifth Vial, as being the most Eminent, and the most Fatal of the Vials upon the Beast. Which Chapters therefore, I shall not need to spend time in explicating of, but do now hasten to the Exposition of the 11th Chapter, which was by me mainly intended, because that contains the State of the Church, and the Condition of it in these Times, and those that are next a coming upon us. And I join that next unto the Vials, because these Vials serve directly to expound it; and it mentioning the four first Vials, goes on then to shew what shall befall the Churches of the Reformation, under the fourth Vial, and afore the Fifth; with which fifth Vial those 1260 Years, or 42 Months of the Pope's Kingdom (there in that Chapter computed) are to end and expire, (according to the Notion even now given). And as the 14th Chapter shewed us the Condition of the Church within it self, to the Times of the fourth Vial (as was proved); so this 11th Chapter begins where the 14th Chapter ends. And from thence the Supplement of the Story of the Church's various Condition is to be fetch'd; as will appear in the opening of it.

Five Generals premised for the understanding of it.

THE first is to shew, Who this Angel here spoken of is, and what is his Purpose, and when the Time of his coming down here in this Vision. And for this, know, that the Angel who comes down here, and delivers all the Contents of this 11th Chapter, unto vers. 15. unto John, and that, immediately by word of Mouth, is Christ himself; as appears by his words, vers. 3. [I will give power to my Two Witnesses] which no Created Angel could speak. And observe withal, that Christ himself doth speak no where in this Book, but only in this, and in the first Chapter. And above all observe, that this is the very same Angel that came to Daniel in the end of his Prophecy, to confirm it with an Oath, chap. 12. of that his Prophecy. This his alike Gesture here and there, doth argue: there, lifting up his right Hand to Heaven, and swearing by Him who liveth for ever, vers. 7. and so here, taking the very same Oath, with the same Ceremony also, vers. 6. of chap. 10. And then you may take notice, that his Oath is taken about the very same thing, and to the same purpose. You shall find that that Prophecy of Daniel, containeth (though more confusedly) the very same things that this Prophecy of the Revelation does more clearly. As namely; the Tyranny of the fourth Roman Monarchy, and the oppression of the Church thereby, first by the Heathenish Empire, then, under the last Head of it, the Pope (of whom Daniel had prophesied, chap. 11. of his Prophecy, from the 36th verse to the end); after whose Time expired (as Daniel had shewn) should come in a Fifth Monarchy of the Saints, chap. 7. All which things you have in this Book, and the Visions of them more distinctly presented. As, namely, how under the seventh Trumpet, after the Time of the Beast expired, that same glorious Kingdom was to come in. Thus, in the subject Matter of both they do agree; and so also in setting down the Time determined by God, how long this last Head, the Pope, and his Tyranny, should continue, do these two Prophecies and these two Angels both agree. For concerning this Time, and the ending of the Tyranny of this last Head (the Pope) over the Church (after which should come in the Kingdom of Christ) it is, that the Angel there in Daniel doth take that his Oath: And discourseth of that his Time, and the manner of the ending of his Tyranny, in that 12th Chapter of Daniel, and at the end of that whole Prophecy. And (answerably) concerning the ending of that very Time, and the manner of the ending of the Beast's Tyranny, and the succeeding of Christ's Kingdom when that is ended; that is the very thing that the Angel here sweareth about, and in like manner discourseth of just at the end of this first Seal-Prophecy. So that his Oath and Speech, both there and here, are about the very same thing. And observe the accord in both: for there (Dan. 12. 7.) he swears, That, It (namely, the Pope's Reign) should be for a Time, Times, and half a Time, (so mentioning it there confusedly, and more indefinitely); And when he (that is, that last King, the Pope, the Head of that Monarchy, whom Daniel had last prophesied of in the fore-going Chapter, from the 36th vers. to the end) shall have accomplish'd to scatter the Power of the Holy People; then all these things shall be fulfilled: that is, then is the Time, when these things (which he had spoken of to be done just before Christ's Kingdom) shall begin to take end and accomplishment.

Now in a direct correspondency and answerableness unto the Angel in Daniel, doth this Angel here come down in this Vision, now, at the very end of that Time, (according to that course of Time run out in this first Seal-Prophecy) which that Angel in Daniel had sworn about; even now when this fatal Period of the Fourth Monarchy (according to the Series of this Vision) was near approaching.

And first he renews the Oath then taken, and swears again here, (chap. 10. 7.) That Time shall be no longer; but that in the Days of the seventh Trumpet, the Mystery shall be fulfilled, which is spoken of by all the Prophets: that is, the Fifth Monarchy, or the Kingdom of Christ, (which was to succeed the other) of which all the Prophets speak, as you have it Acts 3. 21. These words of the Angel's Oath do imply, that now that the Visions of all Times past in the former Seal-Prophecy, from the Primitive Times, had brought Things to the last Scene of the World's Time; Now (says he, as standing in the Extremity, and towards the approaching end of all) Time shall be no longer, (or, as Mr. Brightman well interprets the word) [Delay] shall be no longer. Stay now but a little (says Christ,) here you are at the last Sands; tarry but till the seventh Trumpet blows, it will end all.

And (accordingly) the Angel here in this 11th Chapter, explains distinctly by word of Mouth, what, and how much that Time of the Pope, mentioned in the Oath in Daniel, was; and what that accomplishing to scatter the Holy People, (which in the Oath in Daniel, was made the immediate Fore-runner of the fulfilling of all things) also was. So that indeed this 11th Chapter here is, as concerning the Point of Time, but an Explication of that 12th Chapter of Daniel, at least of that part thereof, and by this Angel's Oath and Speech there. And it is the same Angel cometh here to express distinctly (as became the Revelation) what was there delivered darkly and indefinitely. And it is as if the Angel here had spoken thus, or to this effect, (in more plain words, for the comfort of the Church):

Now Beloved, I come now, after so long a while worn out, to bid you to lift up your Heads; for Time now in these days of the sixth Trumpet is expiring, and my Kingdom is at the Door: for the Times of the Beast, prophesied of by Daniel, (of which Beast you shall hear more in this little Book-Prophecy, which is open in my Hand, and which I here bring with me, and give you) do now shortly end and determine. Daniel's period of a Time, Times, and half a Time, allotted the Beast, the Pope, the last Head and King to reign in the Fourth Roman Monarchy, is now in these Times very shortly to expire, and with him the Times of this present oppressing World. And that you, my Church, may know, and have infallible warning, when the expiring of this Beast's Time to scatter the Holy People shall be, I will both explain to you how long this Time in Daniel, (where it is but confusedly mentioned) is allotted him to scatter the Holy People, my Witnesses; and I will also tell you, how or in what manner it shall be, that he shall accomplish (as Daniel's phrase is) to scatter the Power of the Holy People; that is, for your comfort I will reveal to you, and describe the very manner of that eminent and last Scattering, which in the Oath in Daniel is made the immediate Sign, when Antichrist's Ruin, and all those other things, should begin to be fulfilled. And further, I will present to you what the Face of the Church shall be in that Age immediately before the scattering the Holy People; that so you may have, together at once, both a true compute of the Time, as also of such Occurrences (and such a Face of the Sky presented) as may be an eminent Signal unto you: that when you see these Things done, then know, that the Time is expiring and determining. And this I my self do thus immediately inform you of, because that last scattering will be so great a one, as all the Faith you have will be put to it : and therefore it is that I have took that Oath, as it were, (now) in these Times ; for that your Faith had need of it, to confirm it. Which Oath therefore do you remember and have in your Eye ; for even now your Redemption draws nigher than you are aware of. This is the first Thing I premise.

2. PROLOGOMENON.

Now in the second place, observe in how fit a Scene or Place in this Comedy, or Vision of all Times successively, hitherto acted before John, and by him penned for us, doth this Angel Christ here take to enter upon the Stage, and act this Part in. You before heard at large, how that the Seals and Trumpets, in Chapters 6, 7, 8, 9. contained one Prophecy, that ran over all the Times from John until the end : and then, that the little Book, that is open in the Hand of this Angel here, Chap. 10. doth contain another Prophecy of the Church, which in like manner begins at the Times of John, and so again runs over all Times unto the End.

Now this Angel steps in now, just now, as in the last Age, and towards the expiring of the sixth Trumpet, and so of that first Revolution of all Time, with his New or Second Prophecy in his Hand, ready to be delivered. And yet because that some Sands, or space of Time remained under the first Prophecy, not yet compleated ; He therefore in this, as a convenient Season between both, fills up that little space of Time, that this first Prophecy had yet left to continue, with an additional Discourse of his own ; to inform the Church what special Occurrences were now, before the final consummation of all under the seventh Trumpet, to fall out in this small Interim, as a Warning to them when the End of all, even of both Prophecies, (viz. of this Seal-Prophecy, and also of that other Book-Prophecy) should be.

Now the Sixth Trumpet, which is the Turkish Empire, we yet see standing. An utter End of the Roman Empire had been as compleatly set forth in the Sixth Seal, as it could be ; and only now the Ending of it remained, and so there was no other Matter of that kind, or belonging thereunto, to be added : And yet that being to continue some hundreds of Years afore its ending should be, and the Seventh Trumpet should blow, he therefore fills up that Space of Time, until the Seventh Trumpet should blow, and entertains John, with relating what special Occurrences, that most nearly concerned his People, should fall out in the Western Church, over which the Pope had the Dominion, now towards the End of both Turkish and Popish Empire, and so in this last Age, before the ending of these Times : Which Occurrences, though they properly belonged to the Book-Prophecy, which (as was said) properly takes cognisance of Matters of the Church ; yet they fitly come in here between both Prophecies, as the Signal of the ending of the full Course of both Stages of Times. And when he had thus, in this Discourse, filled up that remaining Time in this Interlude, with such Occurrences as were indeed yet to fall out together with it, in the Times before the Sixth Trumpet's ending ; then (I say) he concludes his Discourse with this, The second Wo is past : That is, the Time of the Sixth Trumpet ends also hereabouts ; and so then, as in its orderly Time, blows the Seventh.

3. PROLEGOMENON.

Observe the manner of his delivering all this to John ; namely, that he utters this his Narration as a Chorus, or as an Interlocutor in a Comedy useth to do his Speech, and not by Vision only, wherein he opens and explains what could not by Vision well have been understood ; and therefore gives it by word of Mouth. And as thus this Angel doth here, so the like doth that Angel in the 17th Chapter. (And I the rather put together the Parallel Speeches of these two Angels;

PART II.

(Chap. 17. and here Chap. 11.) because that, as the scope of him there, was to give an Interpretation and Explication who the Whore was; so his scope here, is to give a clear interpretation of the Times of this Beast and Whore, and the immediate Tokens or Signals that shall fore-run the ending of them). And look as in that 17th Chapter, when one of the Angels of the Vials (and as it is thought, the Fifth) gives the Interpretation who the Beast and Whore is; he doth it by a Speech, meerly as an Interlocutor, to inform John; so here, in like manner doth this Angel. Yet so, as you may also observe that his Narration here in this 11th Chapter, is first occasioned by a Vision presented, of the Face and State of the Church, as it should be in that last Age wherein these Things are to be accomplished; namely, of a Temple presented standing with an outward Court surrounding it, and an Altar in it, and two Witnesses standing before the Lord, and ministring in it. Which Vision first to have been made unto John, is tacitly implied, in that the first entrance of his Speech begins with bidding John to arise, and to do a real Act towards the Temple, even to measure it. And therefore such a Temple, &c. must needs have been presented to his view. And thereupon observe how that this Vision of a Temple, and of an Outward Court adjoined, is made the ground or occasion of the Angel's following Speech; as from which the Angel takes the rise of his following Discourse. So that this Vision of the Temple's measuring, and giving its Outward Court to the Gentiles, is the first Occurrence that is here presented as belonging to that Age, (wherein Time is to expire) as from whence he takes the ground of that his Discourse, (wherein he explains how much time the Beast was to have, and how and when it should end); which Discourse, after that explained, closeth again with the Relation of another Occurrence, (vers. 7.) that shall fall out after this, in that Age, as the last signal of all. And this is done just in the like manner, as chap. 17. one of the Angels of the seven Vials (who therefore must be supposed to stand in the Times of the Vials) being to make a Description of the Beast, and of the Whore, (namely, Rome, the Seat of the Fourth Monarchy) in all the Times allotted her; yet takes his rise from a Vision of that Whore, as then in her last old Age, and in the Times of the Vials, she should appear drunk with the Blood of the Saints, just before her ruin. And yet there, in that his Speech about her, he speaks of her as in her whole time of reigning she should be. Just so here, this Angel (Christ) first enters upon the Stage but as an Actor, under the Times of the sixth Trumpet, and in the very declension of it, and takes his Oath as under those Times; and then presents to John a Vision of the Face of the Church, (in that present Age, under the latter Times of the sixth Trumpet) as of a Temple which in these present Times he will have measured by John, as representing the Persons of the Saints of that Age) and leaving out the Outward Court of it, as to be given again unto the Gentiles: And then from that Occasion, (it being part of that scattering the Power of the Holy People which Daniel aimed at) he plays the part of an Interlocutor, and makes a Narration of the whole Times of Popery, which after this their treading down this Outward Court of the Temple, were to expire. And he takes occasion also to relate and discourse of that opposition which the Witnesses should make against the Beast, or these Gentiles, all the Time of his whole Reign; and so describes them, vers. 3, 4, 5, 6. And all this, as an Interlocutor, or a Chorus in a Comedy useth to do. Till at last he comes again to that last Occurrence which belonged to that Age wherein he stood, when he began his Speech, (namely now towards the end of the sixth Trumpet) as that which should then befall these Witnesses. With which he determines his Speech about them, from vers. 7. to the end of the Chapter. Unto the better and clearer understanding of which, all his former description of them, and what else he related concerning them, had only made the way. Namely to shew, both what that Time was, which in Daniel had been so darkly delivered, and how it should end, and how (to use the Phrase in Daniel) the scattering of the Holy People should be accomplish'd. So then,

4. PROLEGOMENON.

Chap. 4.

Observe how fitly the words of the Oath in Daniel, do agree with all the Things delivered in this 11th Chapter, from vers. 1. unto the seventh Trumpet, vers. 15. where the Angel's Speech ends.

Now those Things are reduceable unto two Heads :

1. This Angel's Computation and Interpretation of that Time mentioned in Daniel, (which when it ends, the Fourth Monarchy shall begin to end also, and shortly after it the Kingdom of Christ begins).
2. Such eminent Occurrences as shall fall out at the ending of it, as Signals thereof. Or rather, thus.

In the Angel's Oath in Daniel, four Things were intimated.

1. The Time that the Beast, the last Head of the Roman Monarchy, should have to reign ; which was a Time, Times, and half a Time.
2. A Holy People, who all that Time should yet continue to oppose him, and whom he should oppress.
3. Who yet towards the end should get some Power against him ; so it is there called, [the Power of the Holy People].
- And, 4. which Power of theirs he should, in the ending of that Time scatter, and themselves also, and that with an eminent scattering, which yet is the Accomplishment, or last Act of his so doing ; that is, he should never scatter them any more, but after that his Reign was to end, and their Mourning and Oppression to cease.

Now answerable to this, you here have ;

1. That Time, confusedly mentioned in Daniel, but here exactly computed by a double account (not to fail) both of Months, and also of Days ; the one, as expressing Antichrist's whole Time of Reigning, even 42 Months ; and the other, the Holy People's Time to oppose him in, even 1260 Days ; though yet in Sack-cloth and Oppression. But so, as both have one and the same Period ; and as they begun, so they end together.

2. You have the Holy People in Daniel here interpreted by Christ, to be his Two Witnesses.

3. You have the Power of this Holy People all that while set forth, (especially that Power they obtained in their last days) I will give to my Witnesses, &c. vers. 3. They had Power given them to erect a Temple, back'd with a mighty Party of an Outward Court. And out of that Temple they have had Power given them to pour out four Vials already : So as that if any Man hurt them, they will scorch him with Fire, &c. vers. 5. And in the weakest days of their Prophecy, they have had power to shut Heaven that it rained not, vers. 6, &c.

4. This Angel here shews, how in the end of this Time, when they are even about to cast off their Sack-cloth, and to finish their Testimony against this Beast, vers. 7. (so the word in the Greek is, [are about to finish, &c.]) that then this their Power shall be scattered, their Outward Court trodden down, and so, they left exposed to the Beast's Fury and Outrage, to be by him scattered among the Nations, and killed ; Which Nations shall see their dead Bodies lying in the Streets, &c. And then he gives a particular description of this their oppressing, unto vers. 14. telling us withal, for our comfort, that thus they shall accomplish to scatter them, being never to scatter them again any more, after they are once risen again, so vers. 11, 12, 13. And thus you see how this 11th Chapter is but a Comment on the Oath in Daniel.

5. PROLEGOMENON.

Lastly, Observe this in General concerning the joint mention or bringing in both these Occurrences, and this computation of Times together. They are mentioned thus together principally and chiefly in this respect, to shew how this whole whole Series of Time should end and expire; namely, with those Occurrences here mentioned. So that, the Angel's scope is not simply to mention this Period of the 1260 days, &c. only to compute it, (though so also he makes mention of it); but withal to shew how that with these Exploits and Occurrences, or when these things here mentioned should fall out, this Time was near its end and expiration. Whereby this Angel here doth directly hit the very aim and scope of that his former Oath taken before Daniel; which was, that with the very expiring of that his allotted Time, he should accomplish to scatter the Power of the Holy People. And therefore he so mentions this whole term of Time here, as withal to shew how it shall at last be accomplish'd and fulfilled; and to that end he mentions such particular Exploits, as this Beast to his very last shall play, even till his Kingdom be taken from him.

Now to explain this further; In the 13th Chapter, the Beast had power given him to do (as the word is) 42 Months; and during that Time, to make War with the Saints, and overcome them. And Power was given him over all Tongues, and Nations, and Kindreds; (that is, over the Ten Kingdoms of Europe) vers. 5, 6, 7. Now the Gentiles here, and that Idolatrous Company that worship this Beast, (vers. 3, 4. of that 13th Chapter) and that set up this Power of his, are all one and the same; and their Lease here, of treading down the Holy City, runs, and is made (as you see) for the very same term of Years here, that it is there. Only mark the different scope of the mentioning of them in that 13th Chapter, and here; namely, that here it comes in to shew, how this whole Time should end, and fully be accomplish'd; and also with a Narration of that very particular last War and Victory, which this Idolatrous Company should obtain against the Holy People, even their last scattering them before the ending of this their Time. But it comes in there, as it was considered wholly, and entirely, as yet through all Times to be fulfilled; with all those Wars and Slaughters, which in that whole Time Antichrist should make against the Saints. So in chap. 13.

Now that the mention of these two Computations of that whole Time, does thus come in here in relation to these last Exploits, and War of Antichrist, at and towards the ending of that Time, is many ways evident. Of both which I shall demonstrate this severally, and apart.

And, 1. for the mention of their treading down the Holy City, for 42 Months; this comes in but (as you may observe it) upon that one particular Occurrence of giving up the Outward Court anew to the Gentiles; to this, or the like purpose, as if the Angel had said, 'Cast out that same Outward Court of the Temple of this present Age, (which hath indeed help'd against the Papists, and kept them off, but yet hath defiled the Churches) leave them out; for this Court is given to the Gentiles now in this last Age, for them to re-enter upon, and to get power over. And so with this last treading down, and overcoming that Outward Court, (which once they had possessed, but lost from their Dominions) it is that they shall have accomplish'd that whole term of 42 Months allotted them for the treading down of the Holy City, (namely Europe, the destin'd Seat of this Church, and of their Reign). And thus their full Dominion over the whole for 42 Months space, or length of Time, shall be made good by this; that however they had lost for a while part of their Dominion over it, yet they regaining this Outward Court now towards the end, they will be found to have possessed the whole 42 Months, first and last. That look as upon the giving in of the last Payment, we use to make mention of the whole Sum as paid: so here, upon that last eminent regaining their lost Power over some of the European Kingdoms, the whole term of the Time of their reigning comes to be mentioned.

This I here premise, to prevent that great Mistake which hath diverted Interpreters from taking the measuring this Temple here, and giving up the Outward Court, to be meant of some special Occurrence to fall out, or some Act to be done done to the Churches of these latter Times ; but they rather take it of the Papists themselves their possessing throughout all Ages the Face of the Church (which they interpret the Outward Court) because of this that is added, and that followeth upon it, [and they shall tread down the Holy City for 42 Months]. As if it imported, that after the Outward Court is given up to them, they should have so many Years of reigning over it. Which if it were so, it could not be meant so particularly of the Temple or Church in this last Age, and the Outward Court thereof. But this (according to the former coherence given) need not divert any Man's Thoughts from the present Age to former Times (as it hath done some Mens, to think the Churches of the Primitive Times to be the Temple measured, and the Outward Court to be the Outward Face of the Church, which the Pope hath possessed these 1200 Years) the coherence may easily be found to be this ; as if the Angel had said, ' Measure anew the Temple you now see ' standing in these last Times of the sixth Trumpet, and of Antichrist before his ' Fall, and cast out the Outward Court thereof ; for it is again given to the ' Gentiles : and so (namely with this last treading down of it, and regaining, ' as it were, the whole anew) they shall fully accomplish their allotted Time ' of treading down the Holy City, namely, their 42 Months.

But the removal of this Mistake more fully, I refer to the Appendix that follows. Only for the present, for a Confirmation that this is, and may well be the meaning of the coherence of these words, Observe,

1. It is not said, that they shall tread down the Outward Court for 42 Months ; but the Holy City, which is much vaster than the Outward Court ; the greater part of which City, (namely of Europe) they kept the Lordship over, even when the Outward Court was separated from them, and not yet recovered. So that to me, the Outward Court here is one thing, and the Holy City another, (though this Court indeed stands in the City) even as the Outward Court and the Temple were distinct Things from the Holy City of Jerusalem, though standing therein, (as I shall afterwards in the particular Exposition more fully shew).

And, 2. The purpose and scope of the mention of their whole Time of 42 Months here, is to shew how in this latter Age it should be fulfilled and ended ; even in a full Power and Jurisdiction over the Holy City, in a re-entry on that part of it the Outward Court also ; which is again laid common with, and unto the rest of the City. And so now it may be said of them, as of a King who reigns, and hath Jurisdiction over a Country (suppose) for fifty Years, it may be said he hath reigned over it fifty Years, (although some few Years before the end of his Reign, some of his Subjects haply revolted from him) if so be he were their King before the Revolt, and in the end again recovered his Royalty over them ; (the Account being taken from the beginning to the end, first and last).

And one Reason why Antichrist's Time of doing is reckoned by Months, and not by Days, may be to shew, that though he hath not, the whole Time of his Reign, the same continued Jurisdiction ; yet by Months he hath, from such a Time to such a Time, though not the like Power all that Time. For so at first the Goths interrupted him much in the exercise of his Power.

And then, 3. these words [and they shall tread down the Holy City for 42 Months] do fitly come in, as a just Reason, why this Outward Court is now in these last Times given to these Gentiles ; and so do insinuate a Reason why Antichrist is thus permitted again to take Possession of the most (and chief part, if not all) of this Outward Court, so as to have fair hopes of recovering all Europe again. [And they shall, &c.] The word [xxi] or [And] is often used as a Causal Particle, and notes out a Reason of a Thing. So then, the term of their Commission over all the Nations and Tongues of Europe being 42 Months, and none exempted, but such whose Names are written in the Book of Life, (as you have it, Chap. 13. 7, 8.) ; therefore, though this Outward Court of Carnal Protestants, and Unregenerate, hath made a Separation together with

with the True Worshippers; yet they being inwardly Gentiles, and their Names not written in the Book of Life; therefore they are given unto these Gentiles again, as being their allotted Inheritance (as it were) for so long a Time here mentioned; which is not fully run out as yet, in this Age of the sixth Trumpet, of which Christ spake this. They are yet within the Bounds and Date of their Lease, which is 42 Months, not yet expired; and therefore they are to be re-entred upon by them. So that the mention of this their Term comes thus in; as if in a Suit at Law, to recover one's own Ground leased to one for 21 Years; a Man pleads and shews, at the 18th Year's end, how the whole term of his Lease was 21 Years, as yet not expired; which he exhibits as a just Plea, why some part of it with-held from him, should be restored to him, it being included in the Tenure of his Lease, as well as the rest. Just so is it here; this Outward Court being within the Bounds of the City, and being Land belonging to the Pope by Gift, for so long time (they being not written in the Lamb's Book) and his Lease of 42 Months not being expired; therefore says the Angel, Here it is given or restored to him again; and so he shall accomplish to tread down it, and the rest of the Holy City for 42 Months. Which are the Angel's words in Daniel, Chap. 12. and which this Angel came to interpret.

And in the second place; for the mention of that other Computation of 1260 Days; it is yet more plain, that this is brought in here, principally to shew, how this Time should end and determine now at the last. And so, that both this long Description of the Witnesses, and the declaring their whole Time, is indeed but in order to this their last Accomplishment. This is apparent by the 7th Verse, which is the close of all the former Narration. The words there are, [and when they shall have finished their Testimony] that is, held out to testify, during that whole Time of 1260 Years. Or they may (and ought rather to) be rendred [and when they are about to finish] [ὅταν τελέσωσι]. Which notes out, not a full end first made, but a being about to make it: So that when they are about or near the finishing of this their Testimony, then shall this befall them. And further, In that he spends the better half of his Discourse in this Chapter, in the setting forth this one particular, namely, their last scattering, upon the finishing their mentioned days of Prophecy; this apparently shews, that this was the chief scope which that former part of his Discourse had tended unto. And in that, although Antichrist, the Beast, hath had many famous overcomings of these Witnesses in former Times (and killings also of them); yet that he should single out this (which also is no where mentioned in the larger Book-Prophecy, and yet) here, and that haply not for the greatness of the prevailing in it self considered, but for its eminency in this respect, that it should be the last, and with which their whole Time should end. Which also is made eminent by this, that after these Witnesses had got so much ground upon the Beast, and won a Temple and an Outward Court from him (set up upon his ground, as it were) that then, after all this, this prevailing of his should fall on them. Hence it serveth as the most eminent Prognostick and Sign of their Times expiring; and therefore is here mentioned. So that I shall conclude with this brief Series of the coherence and connexion of one thing with another in these first Verses.

Here is the same Period of Time twice mentioned, under a several computation; The one of 42 Months, the other of 1260 Days; both which come all to one. But the one is mentioned as the Time that the Pope and his Company shall reign; and the other, as the Time for the Witnesses to prophesy in Sackcloth. And they both come in, in order and reference, unto the two of those last Occurrences, which shall accomplish the Reign of the one, and the Oppression and mournful Condition of the other.

I. Their whole Time of treading down the Holy City, shall end with a recovery and treading down the Outward Court of the Temple, the Reformed Churches. And so the mention of that their Time comes in only in that respect, to shew how it ends. And accordingly the Vision of the Temple, and the Angel's bidding John to measure it, comes in but as an Introduction to the mention of this last Occurrence.

And

And then, 2. being in like manner to mention the same Time of 1260 Days, as the Time of the Holy Witnesses Prophecy, in order to their last Scattering and Oppression; he inverts the Order, and first mentions the Time of their Prophecy, by way of a continued Narration with what went before; and then after that, mentions their last scattering as the accomplishment of that their Time. And it was fit that this mention of their whole Time should first be immediately connected to the foresaid mention of their Enemy's whole Time, and the Times both of the one and the other first set together; for that this latter serves to explain the former, which else were ambiguous and dark; (as I shall shew hereafter). And especially, because these Witnesses are mentioned as the continual Opposites set up against these Gentiles, and as the main Butt and Object of their Malice. That same [καὶ] (vers. 3.) [and] I will give Power, is used here (as often elsewhere) adverbatively, for [but]; as if he had said; 'Whereas they have 42 Months allowed them to tread down the Holy City, (Europe, the chief Seat of Christian Profession) and the Witnesses in the compass of that Time, have won a Temple and an Outward Court from them: Yet that this allotted Time of their Reign may therefore be made good unto them, even to the last; they shall regain that Outward Court of the new erected Temple separated from them; But so as they shall not so Reign all that while, as to carry it without opposition; But I will give power to, or uphold my Two Witnesses by their Testimony, to oppose them continually (though in Sack-cloth) that whole Time of 1260 Days, and even at this their last treading down the Outward Court, to avenge themselves of these Gentiles with Fire, &c. But yet for all that, these Gentiles shall go on, and in the end of these their Days prevail yet further, even over these my Witnesses also; and when they are about to finish their Testimony, shall kill, and destroy them.

So that, the mention of their Time, though it comes in a good way off before; yet is in order to this their last killing; to shew, (as in Daniel) how it should be accomplish'd.

S E C T. II.

The Measuring the Temple, and casting out the Outward Court, Chap. 11. vers. 1, 2.

Section I.

An Explication of this double Computation

Of } 1260 Days.
 } 42 Months.

And why they are together here mentioned.

THESE things thus premised, I come to interpret the Contents of this Chapter, from vers. 1, to 15. which are reducible to three Heads.

1. This double computation of the Times above-mentioned.
2. The Occurrences that were to fall out in those Times of Antichrist, in the Age just before their fatal Period; unto the accomplishment whereof, those Occurrences do conduce, (which Age, as I take it, is that that we live now in).

PART II.

3. What is withal said of the Two Witnesses, as woven in by the Angel in his Discourse of them, by way of describing them, in order to the explanation of what should at last befall them.

1. For these computations of the Times, both of the Beast's Reign, and the Witnesses Oppression here mentioned; these things are to be explicated about them.

1. That they are both the same term of Time, that in the Oath in Daniel the Angel intended. This appears by Chap. 12. v. 6. compared with v. 11. for what in vers. 6. is called 1260 Days, is in the 11th verse of the aforesaid Chapter, expressed by this, A Time, Times, and half a Time.

2. He makes this double computation of that Time, first by Months, then by Days; so without ambiguity to explain how much Time was meant in Daniel by that indefinite Number, Time, Times, and a half. Which as it is laid down in Daniel, is altogether ambiguous; For who could tell what is meant by a Time, and Times? or who could tell but that 100 or 1000 Years might be the Time, and 10000 the Times here meant (they being only expressed in the Plural Number, and indefinitely) as well as Two of those Times? Therefore clearly to free it of all ambiguity, he explains this first Time here by 42 Months. Now reckoning 12 Months to a Year, these 42 Months make three Years and a half. So then, by Time is meant a Year; by Times, two Years; and by half a Time, half a Year more. And yet because there was some ambiguity in that also, in that some Nations reckon but 28 Days to a Month, whereas others reckon more, (so the Jews reckon 28, but the Egyptians 30 Days) therefore he reckons the same Time by Days also, even [1260 Days]; which 42 Months do make up, reckoning 30 Days to a Month.

Now all these are not Solary Days, that is, Natural Days, consisting of Day and Night; but the Prophetical Days, as in Daniel a Day is put for a Year, and a Week for seven Years; and so thirty Days for thirty Years, and 1260 Days for 1260 Years. And that thus they are to be taken, appears by this, that the Witnesses, vers. 8. are said to lie in the view of all Nations (as being haply banished out among them) for three days and an half; and their Enemies are said to send Gifts one to another in the mean time: Which if they were but three Natural Days and a half, all this (in three Natural Days and an half) could not be done.

3. By joining together these two Computations here, and so shewing them to be the same, he thereby clears the mention of them, as they are apart named Chap. 12. and Chap. 13. of which otherwise there might have been a Doubt, whether the 42 Months, Chap. 13. had been 1260 Days of Years. But by thus linking them together in this 11th Chapter, it is made certain that those Numbers are the same.

4. Though both Daniel there, and the Angel here, do mention only the Times of the Pope's Reign, who is the last Head of the Roman Monarchy; and not the whole Time from John's Days, but only the latter part of it for the last 1260 Years under the Pope: Yet so, as this was sufficient enough for the computation of the whole Time that the Visions of the Revelation do run through, and served fully enough to shew the contemporarioufness of things in both Prophecies, and to shew when the Fourth Monarchy should end, and so when the Fifth should be towards its beginning. Which was his principal aim; And therefore as in the 17th Chapter, v. 8. he explains who this Beast was, and what he should be at last; so in this Chapter he shews what the Time of this Beast's reigning is, and when it should end.

Now to demonstrate all these.

1. This Explication of this Time may serve as a sufficient measure of the Computation of the whole Time spoken of in the Revelation. For if you know but either when this Time of the Pope's Reign begins, or when it ends; you who live in these latter Days, may know how much time the Prophecy of this whole Book runs over. We know, by Story, when John began to write this Prophecy, even 94 Years after Christ, or thereabouts. So that it is about 1550 Years since John. Now 1260 Years are to be allowed the Beast the Pope, from his beginning to his end. And to know when, and in what Age he began, the Holy Ghost hath given us a Hint and Character, Chap. 17. telling us that he riseth one hour with the ten Kings; which was not long after the Year of Christ, 400. So that 300 Years are all, that before that, even from John's Time, do belong to the Primitive Times, before the Pope's Reign. And then after the end of this Pope's or Beast's Time, there is but the Turks Ruin to come, (which is the second Wo mentioned here, vers. 14.) and then comes in the New Jerusalem. And if we who live in these last Days, could but know when he either begins his Time, or ends it, we might easily tell (at least with a conjectural knowledge) how long it will be from the Incarnation of Christ unto his Kingdom here on Earth, which is the Fifth Monarchy.

2. I might also, at large shew, how this Computation coming in here in this Chapter, shews the true synchronising and contemporaneousness of things, both in the Seal and Book-Prophecy; which was necessary somewhere to be done, and is here in this Chapter most fitly done, between both these Prophecies. For the sixth Trumpet of the Seal-Prophecy is vers. 14. made to end upon (or not long after) the ending of the Pope's Reign, whose Story belongs to the Book-Prophecy. For, says the Angel there, (after the Rising of the Witnesses) The second Wo is past, and behold the third Wo cometh quickly. Now that second Wo is the sixth Trumpet of the Seal-Prophecy, (so chap. 8. 13.) and the passing of it away, is the sixth Vial in the Book-Prophecy, the effect of which is the Ruin of the Turk, or at least a preparation thereunto, by the calling of the Jews. And then the seventh Trumpet begins with the seventh Vial. And so (as it is probably thought) these 1260 Years of the Beast, and the rising of the Witnesses, do end with the fifth Vial; after which the sixth Vial shall not stay long.

And it is probable, that the Angel's Division of things into this double Series, of six Seals and Six Trumpets, is suited to his division of all Times. Which, from John's Time to the Kingdom of Christ, he branches, either into the Time of the Beast's Reign, which he defines to be 1260 Years, or the Time before his Rising, which he defines not. For the beginning and ending of the Beast's Time being once known, thereby the other Times foregoing (or the Primitive Times) might easily be computed. So as when we know (through the help of this Angel's Speech in this Chapter) that the Book-Prophecy and the Seal-Prophecy do meet towards their ending and closure downwards; then, how they run along upwards, is not uneasy to conjecture. For the Seal-Prophecy being branched into two so equal Divisions, of six Seals, chap. 6. and then six Trumpets, chap. 7, 8, 9. the six Seals, containing the Story of the Empire till the Beast's rising, and so taking up all that tract of the Primitive Times before the Beasts 1260 Years do begin; it is therefore likely, that the six Trumpets do contain the Story of the Empire during those 1260 Years, in which the Pope is to Reign. And then, as they end not far off from each other (as was even now shewed): So also the Times of these six Trumpets, and the Beast's Reign of 1260 Years, should begin not far off of each other. Thus the mention of this one Term or Period of Time here, serves (as you see) for the measure of the Computation of the whole Times of this Book, and both Prophecies of it; and so comes fitly in between both for such a purpose.

And lastly, the Reasons why the Holy Ghost singleth out only the Times of this last Head, the Pope, thus to be the Rule and Measure whereby to sum and cast up the Account of all the Times of this Book, are,

1. For that the Beast's Reign was to have the longest Time allotted it of any Monarchy after Christ, and the longest of all the Heads of the Roman Monarchy foregoing him; yea, it was to contain as much Time, as had passed from Rome's first Building, until his Rising; and so, would afford a Computation of the greatest part of that Time, and indeed three parts of the whole Time from John until the Kingdom of Christ.

2. The Matters of this Book being not so fully to be opened, till about the Time of the end, (as it is in Dan. 12. 4.); if the Times of the Beast (whose Reign was to continue till towards the end) should then come to be known; then then the whole Time from John downward, would be known also by them that live in these latter Days; for whose Benefit and Comfort (as most concerning them to know it) this Computation was made, and here given.

3. This Beast, the Pope, being the last Head of the Fourth or Roman Monarchy, (which but for him had failed, but was in him healed again and restored); To know when he should end, and with him that Monarchy, this would be inkling enough of the approach of Christ's Kingdom which is immediately to succeed it. To give the inkling of which, for the Church's comfort in these latter Days, was the thing herein principally aimed at.

And, 4. this Beast being to be the most eminent Oppressor of the Church in the Times after Christ. Therefore the Computation of his Time, beginning and ending, and the oppression of the Witnesses by him, would be most acceptable to be known, and so be most enquired after by the Church. And thus much for the Computation of the Times here mentioned.

Sect. 2.

The Occurrences that fall out towards the expiring of these Times here computed. And first, A general View and Division of them.

AS Christ was thus careful (as you have seen) to give us this Computation of Times; so further, for our Comfort, he makes a Relation of such Occurrences also as should fall out towards the ending and expiration of these Times, which is the second Head we are to explain.

And as the Computation of Antichrist's Times was two-fold; so answerably the chief Occurrences of things appertaining to the accomplishment of those Times, are two.

1. The re-giving up the Outward Court to the Gentiles, with the treading down whereof they are to end their whole Reign and Time of the treading down the Holy City.

2. Their killing the Witnesses, with which their 1260 Days of prophesying in Sack-cloth do end also. The one is annexed as the signal of the Period of their Reign, and the ending of their 42 Months; the other as the Signal of the Accomplishment of these Witnesses Oppression for 1260 Days, with this most eminent Victory of the Gentiles over them.

And then again observe, how each of these Occurrences have two others here mentioned with them, as conjunct Appendixes to them, or Occasions of them.

1. The giving up the Outward Court to the Gentiles, is accompanied with a measuring the Temple by John, representing the Godly of that Age; who leaves out the Outward Court, as being ordained by God to be given up to the Gentiles.

2. This last killing the Witnesses, is much occasioned, and in a more especial manner Enemies are provoked unto it by the hurt these Witnesses did them by Fire, in the Times just afore (as we shall see anon); in revenge of which, they are encouraged to kill them.

Or, (for the better conceiving all these) I cast them into this Mould.

John and the Angel standing here in the very extremities of Time, even the Times of the fourth Vial, (this Age, as I take it) wherein Antichrist's Reign is drawing near to its end; John hath represented to him (as an Introduction unto all that follows) the Face of the Church in that Age, and is himself bidden to represent the Work of the Godly of that Age towards that Church.

And,

And, 1. the Church in this Age is represented to him as the Temple standing in the Holy City Jerusalem, (as it was represented to Ezekiel, Ezek. 40. which he also measured with a Reed, as John is bidden to do here) namely, the Temple inward, into which the Priest only was to come, and in which stands the Altar; with a Company of true Worshippers: but round about it (as inclosing the Temple without) lies a vast Outward Court, into which (as of Old, the Multitudes and Croud of the People of the Jews professing the True God, so here) all sorts of Professors of true Worship do come. This Temple, the Church of this Age is moreover represented, as adorned within, with Golden Candlesticks, and two stately Olive Trees; vers. 4. being two eminent Witnesses and Prophets, that minister before God in his Church. And the Gentiles, they possess the City already, and have done a long time, and are still to possess it, till their 42 Months be expired: But the Temple, and the Outward Court about it, of late days erected in this City, they have been kept out of; and so could not come at these Witnesses who are within the Temple, nor have been able to overcome, and kill them, as in former Times; against whom notwithstanding, in that they have so tormented them with Fire, and other Plagues, out of this Temple, they are even mad again with vexation, and an eager desire to be avenged on them. But now, before the expiring of their 42 Months, God being angry, both with the Carnal Gospellers in the Outward Court, so prophanely mixing themselves with his Worshippers, and laying themselves to his Building and Temple, and also with the Carnal Gospelling of the two Witnesses among them, and with the imperfection of his Temple Building, not yet answering the Pattern, and therefore intending to erect a purer Temple; He,

2. Bids John (representing the Godly of that Age) measure the Temple anew; and so begins to make a new Reformation therein more answerable to the Pattern in the Mount; for he is not pleased with the Old one that now hath stood so long. And therefore in this new Reformation, he commands John to leave out that Outward Court, as intending (after his purer Churches shall thus first have (as it were) excommunicated them) to give up that Outward Court to these Gentiles, who have already took possession of the City, and kept it a long time, but shall now again enter upon this Outward Court, it being within their Lease and Demise. And so with this over-running the outward Court of the Church, shall they accomplish their Reign over the whole City, being then to be driven out of all for ever; which makes them so angry, as you have it vers. 18.

And thus they having gained the Outward Court, which fenced and kept safe the Witnesses, as from Persecution by the Papists, who yet had vexed and plagued them, by shooting of Wild-fire out of the Temple, (though they had also shot back again that which had hurt the Witnesses all that while): But now the Beast can come to them to overcome them and kill them quite, (for their Outward Court was won) and so utterly scatter the Power of the Holy People; but yet so, as with this the days of their Oppression shall cease, this being the accomplishment of their Years of scattering, and the last War wherein Antichrist shall any way prevail: He (the Reliques of him left) shall indeed make head again, before the seventh Vial; but it shall not come to a Victory as this doth.

Sect. 3.

The Occurrences, vers. 1, 2. (the measuring the Temple, Altar, &c. and the leaving out the Outward Court, and treading down the Holy City) more particularly and fully explained.

SO then, here are two things to be explained ;

1. What this Temple and Outward Court are, and what the measuring of the Temple, &c. and the leaving out, and treading down the Outward Court and City.

And, 2. who these Witnesses are, what their Description, and what this their last Killing.

For the first ; I will make good and establish what I think to be the true Interpretation, and then consult those other false Interpretations given of it.

It is wonderful to me, to see how exactly this Vision, in the whole Series of it, represents the present Face, the Affairs, Stirrings, and Alterations now a working in the Churches of Europe ; the Type and Anti-type so fully answering and suiting each the other.

For the first ; The Holy City here (wherein these Gentiles have a Lease of 42 Months Reign) are these Kingdoms of Europe, which for these 1000 Years and upwards, have been the Metropolis and chief Seat of Christian Profession, as Jerusalem of old was of the Worship of the True God ; which therefore in the following part of this Book-Prophecy, is made (from the Rise of the Beast) the only Stage of all, until that New Jerusalem and Holy City, which comes from Heaven and succeeds this ; this being in the mean Time the Old Jerusalem, as that the New.

Yet, 2. this City (for the punishment of the World) God permits the Gentiles to tread down for 42 Months, (alluding to that Expression which Christ used of the sacking of that Jerusalem in Judea, by the Romans, Luk. 21. 24.) Now the Beast, the Pope of Rome, with his Idolatrous Crew, they are these Gentiles ; and so called, because they set up the Image of that Worship which was practised under Heathenish Rome and Gentilism. So chap. 13. 15. and as the 144000, the Company of True Worshippers, are called the Israel of God ; so are these called the Gentiles ; their Religion and Worship being (as was said) the Image of the first Heathenish Religion, under the Heathen Empire, the first Beast. And this City they were to have Power and Jurisdiction in, till 42 Months were fulfilled, as in chap. 13. appears.

But, 3. towards the end of their Time, there begins a great part of this City to fall from them, (though they still kept possession of the greatest part) and they lost much Ground, and Enclosure and Separation being made from them, and within it a Temple built, (namely, Churches separate from Antichrist, which you heard of in chap. 15.) : And further, as that in Jerusalem was built on the North side of that City, Psal. 48. 2. so is this Temple built in the Northern Parts of Europe, (the City here meant, as was foretold in Isa. 49. 12. and Dan. 11. 44.) for in these Northern Kingdoms hath been the Reformation of Religion.

Unto which Temple (4ly) there hath been an Outward Court laid of Carnal and Unregenerate Professors, who have made the greatest shew in this Building, and took up so much of the Room, that although true Churches and Temples, by reason of the true Worshippers among them, have been set up, yet they have been defiled with the addition of an Outward Court, into which all sorts came.

came. So that indeed these Reformed Churches are Outward Courts more than Inward Temples. And by reason of this their Mixture, great Corruptions and Defects, both in the form of the Temple, or Church-Fellowship, and impurities in the Worship, and about the Altar, have been continued among them.

Now for the understanding of these Allusions, we must know, that there were belonging to the Temple in Jerusalem;

1. The Holy of Holies, which was at one end enclosed and separated from the rest of the Temple, after the manner of our Cathedral Quires.

2. The Body of the Temple, whereinto came the Priests only; and in which stood the Altar of Incense, which was answerable to the Body of our Cathedral Churches, compass'd by the Inner Court: Wherein,

3. There was a larger Outward Court encircling the whole Temple, into which the People of all sorts, both Men and Women, did come. And this was answerable to the Church-Yards which go round about our Churches.

Now this third and last Court is, that which is here said to be without, that is, without the compass of the Temple. And it is called the great Court going round about the other, namely, encompassing the Inward Court of the Priests, and the Holy of Holies: Thus, 1 Kings 7. 12. it is expressly called. And it is by Ezekiel called the Outward Court very often, in distinction from the Inward Court or Temple where the Altar was; which in distinction from this, is also called the Court of Priests. So 2 Chron. 4. 9. where it is said, Solomon made the Court of the Priests, and the Great Court, namely that into which the People came.

There was indeed a fourth Court for Strangers to come into, built by Herod. But that is not here alluded to, for the Scripture mentioneth it not. But the Outward Court here is, that which Ezekiel (as I said before) does so often call by that Name, in distinction from the Court of Priests, (for to his measuring there, is the allusion of this measuring here); of which you may read chap. 40. vers. 17, and 27. And the Inner Court is put for the Temple, and the Temple for it, as being all one.

Bring this then to the New Testament: The Scriptures and Prophets, by the Notion of a Temple, do still express the true Church, as 1 Cor. 3. 17. Ephes. 2. 21. and many other places. And by Priests, who only are to enter into the Inner Temple, they express True Worshippers. You have both these Expressions put together, in 1 Pet. 2. 5. You as lively Stones, are built up a Spiritual House, and an Holy Priesthood to offer up Spiritual Sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. And whereas the People entred not into the Temple then; Now all that are Holy, are bidden to draw near, having their Bodies (or whole Man) wash'd with Water, (as the Priests were wont to be) even Water of Regeneration and Sanctification, as Heb. 10. 22.

Now in distinction from these True Worshippers, the carnal Professors of Religion, and croud of Unregenerate Men, (that join themselves to the Church by professing the same Religion and Faith, though yet continuing in the natural Uncircumcision of their Hearts) are called the Outward Court here; they having no right to approach this Altar. And (by the Law of Distinction and Opposition) if the True Worshippers now under the Gospel, be typified out by the Priests, (who were in a peculiar manner Holy unto God, and whose Holiness typified forth inward Holiness under the Gospel) then Carnal Professors now, who are Jews outwardly only, are left typified out by that common croud of Jews who came then into the Outward Court. And these may most truly be term'd an Outward Court, in a comparison with this Temple and True Worshippers, be the Notion of Temple taken in what sense it may: For whether Temple or Church be taken for the Mystical Temple or Church of the Elect and sincere Worshippers. These are without, (as the Apostle's Phrase is, 1 Cor. 5.) in comparison to them, and are Carnal Worshippers, worshipping God in the Letter, not in the Spirit, with outward bodily exercise, not in Spirit and Truth, (as 1 Tim. 4. 8.) and they are such, as to a stander-by, who hath skill to judge, are, (for the generality) apparently such; even Jews outwardly only, not within, as Rom. 2. 28, 29.

Or if Temple be taken for Churches Instituted, or Congregations of True Publick Worshippers, (as Ephes. 2. vers. last it is taken; as also Heb. 10. 22. compared with vers. 25. where the assembling together to worship, is called a drawing near, &c.) in that respect also these carnal Men joined with them, are but as the Outward Court laid to the Temple, who join in the same Service, but do draw near with their Lips only, and (as Isaiah speaks, chap. 1.) tread his Courts, with Sacrifices abominable to God: whilst the other, as an Holy Priesthood, are only within the Temple, and do draw near with assurance of Faith, having their Hearts sprinkled, and their Bodies wash'd with Water, (as the allusion to the Priest's entring into the Inner Temple where the Altar stood, is, in Heb. 10. 22.)

So that, in what sense soever the Papists, (whom some would have to be the Outward Court here meant) might be called the Outward Court, these also may. As whether because they arrogate to themselves the Name of the Church; and say, they are Jews, and are not, but do lie.

In this respect may these also be called the Outward Court, who with impudence do arrogate to themselves the Name of the Church, and under that Name do in some places cast out the True Worshippers; and who, by reason of their multitude and number, (the best Congregations of the first Reformation, consisting of many more apparently bad than good, and many of those Churches having none but Men unregenerate) are in view only or chiefly the Church; whilst the true visible Worshippers are a Company of hidden Ones (in comparison); and therefore the Outward Court, in the Type, was called the Great Court.

Yea, these Unregenerate Protestants, are much rather to be accounted the Outward Court, and so are mainly here intended: Which will appear, if you put but two things together.

First, Outward Court here is oppositely put unto all these other Particulars enumerated, that were to be measured; both unto Temple, Altar, and Worshippers therein; and so oppositely doth import, not meerly an outward Face and Place of Worship; but as withal including Persons worshipping also; and so Carnal Worshippers, in full opposition to the other. For otherwise this Expression answers not the Type, namely, the Outward Court in the Jewish Temple, in which were the Multitude, as in the Inner Temple the Priests. So that, the Outward Court imports and includes a Company or sort of Worshippers, as well as it imports the outward visible Face of the Church; and that by a Metonymy, the Continens being put for the Contentum, the thing containing for the thing contained: Even as these Phrases [Heaven] and [Earth] do often import, and are put for all things therein contained. And so [Outward Court] here implies, a sort of Worshippers therein; and in that respect is opposed to, and distinguish'd from the Temple, and the true Worshippers therein. And indeed, Churches, and the Face thereof, in the Notion of the New Testament, consisting not of Material Buildings, (as Cameron well shews) it is the Persons worshipping, who have the Name of Churches. And so here, Persons worshipping, distinct from the Temple and True Worshippers, must needs be meant, as those that do constitute and make up this Outward Court. So that take Persons away, and the Face of an Outward Court ceaseth to be. Thus Cornelius a Lapide upon the place. In hac parte Templi (says he) & in adorantibus Sacerdotibus symbolicè significantur Fideles, qui Antichristum tempore erunt optimi, religiosissimi, Deo conjunctissimi, & in culta ejus solidissimi. Per Atrium exterius intelligit Christianos infirmiores, & vitæ laxioris, ideoque a Deo remotiores. Hos (ait) ejice foras, (id est) extra Ecclesiam. Quasi dixisset, Rejice eos inter infideles & Apostatas; quia hi cedunt Gentibus & Antichristo affectis, & ideo indigni sunt qui inter Fideles numerentur.

Now then, 2. add to this, that this Outward Court thus consisting of a Multitude of False Worshippers, is here made distinct from the Gentiles: for this Outward Court, and the Worshippers thereof, are given to the Gentiles; and therefore are to be left out in the New Measure taken.

Now a Company of Worshippers, who are distinct, both from the True Worshippers of the Temple, and from the Gentiles or Papists, must needs be the multitude of Carnal Protestants that fill our Churches, and make an Outward Court, together with the Temple. For if the Gentiles be this Outward Court themselves, then who are these Gentiles that are to tread it down?

Neither, 3. can it be thought that the Gentiles, possessing the outward Face of the Church, should so fill up this Outward Court here meant, as to be made (as they are here) the other sole contradistinct and opposite Party to the Temple and true Worshippers: Unless we would say, That all Protestants are the Inner Temple, as well as the Priests and true Worshippers therein, and both to be here measured; and so the Papists and they share these two alone between them. But we assuredly knowing that of Protestants, not one of an hundred are True Worshippers, (according to outward Judgment, by those Rules the Reed warrants us to judge of others by) may as assuredly also conclude, that this multitude of Carnal Professors are not here intended by the Angel, as at all included in the Temple, and among the True Worshippers; especially seeing he puts the Reed into John's Hand, to measure none but such as are visibly True Worshippers. And therefore they must necessarily make up that third Party, distinct both from the Temple Worshippers, and from the Gentiles; and are they; who are to be cast out by the one, and seized on by the other, as the Outward Court is here said to be. And more sure I am, that according to Apostolical Institution, such as they ought to be left out by those that build true Churches, and Churches to be measured anew without them. And therefore, if this measuring the Temple fall under the Times of this sixth Trumpet; I cannot but imagine this New-Reformation begun, to be intended; and that re-entry the Gentiles are now a making upon the Outward Court of our Churches; and their yielding to them, to be the giving thereof unto the Gentiles here.

And, 4. the Papists cannot so well be meant here by the Outward Court, as some would have them. For I see not, that the Angel would vouchsafe them in this his mention of them here through this Type, so much as the bare Name of the Outward Court unto his Temple. That Romish Church is not worthy in his esteem to be so accounted of in the proportions of this Allusion. But he rather calls them Gentiles; as being Idolatrous Worshippers; and else-where, the Synagogue of Satan, Worshippers of the Beast and his Image, Sodom, Egypt, &c. as being in a further distance and degree of Comparison remote from the True Temple here, and the Worshippers therein. And so between the True Worshippers in the Inner Temple, and these Gentiles, he placeth a third sort of Worshippers, who are not Gentiles in their Worship, but separate from them in it as well as the True Israelites; and who worship the True God after the manner of the Worship of the Temple, outwardly; and yet are but outwardly Jews (as Rom. 2. 28.) and remain uncircumcised in Heart and Life. And these in this Allusion doth God allow the Place and Name of the Outward Court; which till the Reed, the Light of the Word came, distinguishing True Worshippers from them, were accounted as of the Inner Temple; but are now discovered to be without, (as the Word in the Original is). So that, the Outward Court doth typifie out a Company, who in these Times have a greater nearness to the True Worshippers than the Gentiles have, and yet are but without. And though this Outward Court is here said to be given to the Gentiles; yet (mark it) not to them, as those who are reckoned the Worshippers therein, not as the Treaders of the Outward Court (as in Isa. 1. the Phrase is of God's House); God reckoneth not them such; but as the treaders down of this Outward Court, (as they are said to do by the Holy City in the next words) God bringing in upon these Carnal Professors, for their contempt of the Gospel, and of the True Worshippers?

PART II.

shippers, the worst of the Heathen upon them, to tread them down by Violence, either of Conquest over their Bodies, (as in Germany) or over their Consciences, in making them again to submit to their Superstitions and Idolatries, (as they shall go on to do in other places).

And observe the glorious Wisdom that is in God's proceeding herein, as the reason of it: For God intending to have a Church most Holy unto himself, under the seventh Trumpet, in which the Ark shall be seen, (which notes out the Holy of Holies) as it is vers. ult. of this 11th Chapter; and his manner being, to carry on his Church unto perfection, by degrees; he doth therefore, about the midst of that Time, between the first Reformation long since made, and that seventh Trumpet (in an Age or so foregoing it) set his Builders on work (whom John here represents) to endeavour to erect a new Frame, and a Reformation of that Reformation; and to take the Reed, and measure over anew, both Temple, Altar, and Worshippers, and to cast out that Outward Court of Worshippers, with those Corruptions of theirs which hindred that thorough Reformation; and so, to contract his Temple into a narrower compass (as the proportion of the Inner Temple to the Outward was) yet purer and more refined: He delighting more in Truth, and purity of Worship, than in magnitude or multitude of Sacrifices and Worshippers: And so, to make to himself a Church that shall consist of Priests, and an Inward Temple separated from that Outward Court, into which the True Worshippers are called up from the other, which afore lay common to both. And how elegant is this Allusion here! whereby he sets forth the several States and Conditions of his Church, growing up unto Perfection.

The first Reformation he sets out by an Inner Temple, more imperfect, unfurnish'd, and besides, defiled by the adjoining of an Outward Court unto it.

The second Reformation more pure, he represents by the Inner Temple measured again, to be finish'd and cleansed from that Mixture.

And then, in the last Verse, he opens the Holy of Holies, into which no unclean Thing shall enter, as it is chap. 21. 27. For though their second Reformation, and the Reed thereof, keeps out Men civil and prophane, whom visibly so to be Godly Men (whom John here represents) may judg; yet many an Hypocrite that maketh a lie, may scape and croud into this Inward Temple still; whilst the Judgment of Men (who often err) applies this Reed. But into the other Temple to come, under the New Jerusalem, shall none of these enter. There shall be a Golden Reed then, as chap. 21. vers. 26. whereas now there is but an ordinary Cane, Reed, or Staff, which though in it self it be streight, yet being to be applied by Men, they may be deceived.

Now having given this more general view what is meant by the Temple and Outward Court; I will more particularly explain, what it is to measure the Temple, Altar, and Worshippers therein; and what it is to leave out this Outward Court.

1. To this end Christ puts a Reed into John's Hands, (who represents the Builders of this Age); that is, puts into their Hearts and Hands the Word, and the Light thereof, as alone a sufficient Rule to square Churches (both Worshippers and Worship) by. Other Reeds Men would have, but God hath given us Rules in his Word, to square the whole Frame and Model of this Temple by. And this is to be laid as a Principle, that we admit of nothing in Matters of the Church, which the Word does not warrant. Which Principle was never yet so fully taken up and practis'd by our Reformers hitherto; though it hath long been contended for, as the fundamental Ground-work of this Building.

2. By Temple here I understand, not only the Church of the Elect, (for they are all one and the same with them that worship God in Spirit and Truth; whereas here, in this enumeration, Temple and Worshippers therein seem to import distinct Considerations at least). But I rather understand, Churches or Congregations of Publick Worshippers considered as such; Church-Fellowship, (as you call it), which as well as the Company of the Elect, was typified out, and and called the Temple, as Ephes. 2. 20, 21, 22. For the Apostle there having first said of the Ephesians, that as they were Saints in common with others, so they were built up with all the Elect, into a Temple unto God, and this vers. 20, 21. and so made part of Templum Electorum: He after that, says again of the same Ephesians, as they were a Company knit in Church-Fellowship, that they were built together for an Habitation to God, vers. 22. And so the particular Church at Ephesus, made a Temple and an Habitation apart, and, as it were, a little Sanctuary. Now every such particular Church bears the Name of the whole, and may also justly be called the Temple; because in a Church so gathered, the Ordinances of Church-Communion and Worship (as the Sacraments, Excommunication, &c.) are to be administred, and not out of such a Church-state, or such Assemblings; as at the Temple of Jerusalem only, Sacrifices were to be offered.

And therefore, 3. by Altar here; which was that main Ordinance of Temple-Worship serving for Sacrifice, (which was no where out of it to be used) I understand Church-Ordinances of Publick Worship and Sacrifice.

And, 4. by Worshippers; I understand the Persons who only are to be of this Temple, and to approach to this Altar; as only the Priests then did into the Inward Temple, and unto the Altar: even such only who are lively Stones, built up in a Spiritual House, and an Holy Priesthood, to offer up acceptable Sacrifice unto God; as it is in 2 Pet. 5. So that, although Temple here doth connote and import Worshippers, (for now under the New Testament, Temple and Worshippers are materially the same; as by that place of Peter appears, though formally they may be considered as distinct, as here they seem to be); and so Worshippers importeth these Persons considered in such meet Qualifications as belong to them as Saints, and are required in them to make them meet Worshippers in this Temple, which this Reed lays forth: Yet formally Temple notes out these Persons as to be gathered up in a Church-Assembly, according unto Christ's Institution.

Now then, 5. to measure all these with this Reed, implies a drawing of a true Platform by the Rules of the Word; by shewing both,

1. What a True Church or Temple is, and how to be built; and what the Power, the Frame and Constitution of it, &c. this is rightly and truly measuring the Temple.

And, 2. laying out the right way of the administration of all Church-Worship and Ordinances, as Excommunication, Sacraments, ordaining Officers of Holy Things, who partake, and serve at the Altar, and all this by the Word. This is to measure the Altar. In a word; all that which, Rom. 12. 1. the Apostle calls λογισμὸν λατρείας, Word-Service or Worship. He speaking to the Romans in that Chapter, as they were a Body of a Church, as in the 13th Chapter he speaks to them as Members of a Common-Wealth.

3. Measuring the Worshippers is with the Reed, laying forth who are True Saints, and so are meet Matter for, and to be Worshippers therein; and so, judging of Men by the Rules of the Word, and accordingly admitting into, or rejecting from this Fellowship, and judging them when within, as the Apostle speaks.

And thus measuring is taken for drawing a Plat-form of all these things. As appears by that measuring the Temple by Ezekiel, (unto which the Angel here alludes) Ezek. 43. 10, 11. where it is called a shewing them the Pattern, the Form of the House, and fashion of it; together with the goings out and comings in for Administration, &c. all the Ordinances thereof, and all the Forms of those Ordinances, and all the Laws thereof. And as there Ezekiel sees distinctly and apart measured the Temple, Chap. 41, & 42. then the Altar, Chap. 43. 13. and then concerning the Worshippers, the Angel gives Laws, chap. 44. blaming them that they permitted Strangers, Men uncircumcised in Flesh and Heart (speaking in the Language of the Type) to be in his Sanctuary, vers. 7. giving a Law, vers. 9. that none such should enter in; shewing whom he would have to be Priests and Levites, and who not, and their Duties, in the rest of that Chapter: Even so here John is bid to cast out the Outward Court, as being Strangers unto God, and unclean, and using strange forms of Worship.

PART II.

And 2. Measuring is here also put to signify, that such a Temple, Altar, and Worshippers, should now in this Age begin to be built and erected, and Men set on work to do it. So in Ezek. 43. 10, 11. the Measure is taken to that end, that Israel seeing the true Pattern, might be ashamed of their former Aberrations, and for the time to come, might keep to, and do according to that Pattern, and square all by it. Measuring here respects not the Old Temple so much, as if the Temple that had hitherto stood were to be Measured: but it respects a New Building, or finishing of a Church. So also Zech. 2. the measuring the City, ver. 2. was to signify not the taking the Platform of Jerusalem as then it stood built: but as further anew to be built and inhabited, ver. 4, 5. So also the Temple, as then being yet unfinish'd by the Jews, after the Captivity, the Plumb-line or Measuring-Line, chap. 4. 10. (which answers to the Reed here) signified that the Temple should be finished; which appears, if you compare the above-named Place, with ver. 9. of the same Chapter.

And 3. Measuring imports Protection also: So Zech. 2. the measuring the City there, is in the Interpretation given, ver. 5. explained, that God would be a Wall of Fire round about them, and their Glory in the midst of them. And so here, so much may be intimated, and so, hoped for: For the Outward Court is therefore not measured, because it is given to the Gentiles. But on the contrary, the Worshippers are measured, and called up as it were, out from the Outward Court, that they may be preserved from the re-entry of those Gentiles upon them, or power over them; at least, from such power as they had over the Outward Court. To get into this Temple, is the greatest preservative to keep the Saints from the over-growing Corruptions and Defilements of these Gentiles; and it may unto many prove a Protection, and Sanctuary, from their Power, (as to those Churches in New-England it may be hoped it shall): God will create a Defence upon his Glory. And however, they shall hereby be reserved for that Resurrection which afterward is to come, ver. 11, 12, &c.

Now in the second place, on the contrary, the not measuring, and the leaving out the Outward Court (and yet measuring the other) is,

1. By the Word, exactly putting a difference between them that fear God, and them that fear him not; measuring out who fear him, by Marks, Signs, and Spots upon his People, (as in Deuteronomy God speaks) which the Word gives. And this distinguishing and putting a Difference between Men and Men, the Word calls excluding, or leaving them out: Which accordingly, to make way for the right Constitution of Churches, in discerning the true Matter of them; hath been the chief work of the Godly Ministers in England, in this last Age: Who though they wanted the Ordinance of Excommunication in their Churches, yet in lieu of it they had excommunicating Gifts; and were forced, because of that prophane mixture in Churches, to spend most of their Ministry, in distinguishing Men, by giving Signs and Marks of Mens Natural and Regenerate Estates, and convincing and discovering carnal Men to themselves, and others: Which God in Providence ordained, to make way for the erection of more pure Churches. For by this Light, was set up in Godly Mens Hearts a Spirit to discern between the clean and the unclean; and so, to hew and set apart the Materials for this Temple; as the Stones for Solomon's were.

2. This implies a rejecting them from Church-Fellowship, and not admitting them into this new-reared Temple, as being not fit Matter for this Building. Which is a kind of Excommunication of them.

3. This leaving out the Outward Court, may also imply, a rejecting such Forms of Administration in Worship, (Liturgies, &c.) and Corruptions therein, which are not found agreeable to the Word. For I take the Phrase of [Outward Court,] to import a full Opposition to those Particulars mentioned in the former Words: Which (as you have heard) are these, Temple, Altar, Worshippers. And therefore oppositely, all carnal and corrupt Worshippers, or Forms of Worshipping, cleaving to Ordinances, and left in the first Reformation, (as the Filth which the Sea leaves behind it at an Ebb), these are all comprehended under that Expression of [Outward Court.]

Now (in the last place) consider the Reason given, why God stirs up his People, now in this Age, to do thus by this Outward Court: Which is, because, as their Forms of Worship came from Popery, and themselves are inwardly, and in Heart Gentiles: So he hath (for many glorious Ends of his) ordained them unto Popery again, more or less to be subjected to it. And therefore he declares this as the Reason, why he would now, and not before, put it into the Hearts of his Builders, thus strangely and suddenly to reject them; because that the Time is now come, when by his Decree, they must return to the Gentiles again: Only ere the Gentiles should thus again seize on them, they must first be left out by the Templers, the true Church, which being once done, they forthwith become as Heathens (as Christ says); and being cast out, they wither, and become a Prey to Men, as it is John 15. 6. Popish Opinions and Practices take them again. And how by degrees, do these Gentiles win Ground upon the Outward Court in England? And how does their winning Ground drive the true Worshippers into the Inner Temple, and cause them to abandon their Mixture with the Outward Court? So that as this new Reformation made way for their ruining the Outward Court; so the Gentiles winning more upon the Outward Court, doth further this new Reformation: God carrying on these two Works at once.

Now the Word [given] (It is given to the Gentiles) imports an easy kind of Conquest, which the Popish Party obtains over them; they yield, and give up the Fort as it were, and suffer the Papists to come in upon them, without much; or long holding out. Now in such a Dispensation of God towards the Carnal Protestants, thus to give them up again unto the Gentiles, there are many and glorious Ends which God may have in it, that may make it the more probable, that so indeed he intends to do, ere he means to bring in that glorious Church to come.

As, 1. That he might have a purer Church, according to the Primitive Institution; these Treaders of his Courts, becoming loathsome to him, with their Oblations. And though the first Reformation, was outwardly in shew, more specious and glorious, for the Multitude of those that Reformed, and this is to be by much a smaller and narrower Building, (even as in Proportion, the Outward Court did far exceed the Inner Temple); yet this consisting of purer Worshippers, and Worship, squared by the Word: this second Building shall in true Glory excell that other.

2: God may do this, to let many of these Worshippers taste of the Fruit of their own Ways. They took upon them to be the true Church-Zealots, and Defenders of Religion, against the Papists, and yet cast out God's true Worshippers, and their Ministers, saying, Let God be glorified, whilst they beat their Fellow Servants (as the Parable hath it). But here they are met with, being cast out by them again: And upon their being rejected from their Fellowship, the Protection and Defence of these from the Gentiles cease, and they are given up to them.

3. For the same Cause that God let Popery come in upon the World at first, for the same he suffers it thus again to overflow; even because Men received not the Truth (so clearly shining in the Prophecy of the Witnesses amongst them) in the love of it.

4. To throw out this Rubbish, that would hinder that Temple; which after all he intends to build and make most glorious. For these, like those Samaritans; Ezra. 4. 1, 2. offer indeed to build with them; but being according to God's Appointment not to have a Hand in it, they would be a hindrance to it, (as indeed they have been.)

5. That of that glorious Restauration, and Resurrection of the Church, and Witnesses, which is yet to come, and is foretold in the 12. and 13. Verses of this Chapter, only true Worshippers (who in this Time of Trial, stood out as faithful Witnesses against Popery, and the Invasion of it) might have the Honour and Praise. Therefore God brings this Trial upon all the Churches; so to burn up and consume this Dross, and to discover those Carnal Protestants (that have spoken as big Words, and talk'd as hotly against Popery, as any, and made that the Evidence of their Sincerity) to be such, and unsound; by a base yielding unto the Gentiles the Papists: That so, when Christ seems to revive his Church again (after this) ver. 13. then (as you have it in Isa. 66.) Christ may appear to his Peoples Glory, but to their Shame; who yet before cast them out, and said, Let God be glorified.

6. That

PART II.

6. That the Gentiles, and the Pope might thus accomplish their Time and Period of 42 Months, with an investment of the Pope into his old Territories, now towards the expiring of that his Time. Which Reason the next Words do give. [And so they shall tread down the Holy City for 42 Months] and be found domineering in it (in a manner) as fully as before, towards the end of their 42 Months; that so their Lease may well nigh expire in a full Possession: And that so the confusion of Anti-Christ (the greatest work to be done for the Church, from the Apottle's Days) may be the more glorious unto God. Thus Daniel seemed to fore-tell, that after those Tidings out of the North should trouble him, (which was this Separation of these Northern Kingdoms from him); as also out of the East, (through the prevailing of the Turk, when he came so near unto his Territories) that enraged with this, he shall go forth in great Fury, chap. 11. 44. and plant his Tabernacle, (his Power and Jurisdiction) again, upon the glorious holy Mountain, (where the Temple stands) between the Seas. And what follows? even that after all this his recovery of Power over these Churches of the Reformation towards his end, yet he shall come to his End, and none shall help him. And after Rome's recovery of her Power thus; and when the Whore begins to sing her Sister Babel's Song, just afore her Fall, (as Rev. 17. 7, 8) and saith in her Heart, I sit as a Queen, and am no Widow, as having her ancient Paramours again; and so, thinks she shall (now, see no Sorrow: therefore shall her Plagues come in one day; for strong is the Lord that judgeth her: And thereby will be seen God's Omnipotent Power in her Confusion. There is nothing also in it, that chap. 17. the ten Kings, or States of Europe are twice mentioned, as giving their Power unto the Beast; and ver. 17. are the second time said to agree to do it; through some special Hand of God to fulfil his Will: even till those Words of God, uttered by Daniel, in the fore-cited place, shall be fulfilled; (For unto some Word of the Old Testament, do these Words here refer.)

SECT. 4.

An Appendix to the first and second Verses of Chap. 11. Refuting other Interpretations, given of the Measuring of the Temple, and Outward Court. (which you may read, or not read, as you please.)

THis Interpretation of John's Measuring the Temple, as in this latter Age to be performed, being thus made forth, to hold in all things (as you have seen); I shall not need to spend much time (and yet some) in refuting other Interpretations.

Mr. Mede would have the New Book-Prophecy to begin here at this 11th Chapter, and the sixth Trumpet under the Seal-Prophecy, fully ended before, at the conclusion of the 9th Chapter; and the Oath of the Angel, Chapter 10. to supply the seventh Trumpet: And so makes the Angel here in chap. 11. to begin again anew, aloft from John's Time: And so, this 11th Chapter, to be a short compendious representation of the Story of the Church, in all Ages, beginning here anew from John's Time; and as it were, the Contents, and brief Sum of that larger Story, which begins at Chapter 12. And so, would have all the several States of the Church, in all Ages, more briefly here represented through all Times: As,

1. That of the Primitive Times, until Anti-Christ's rising, under the Type of the Temple measured; till when (says he) the Church remained Pure, according to the Pattern: And therefore, John is bidden to measure it, as a Pattern of the Truth unto after-Ages.

And then, 2. The Face of the Church, during Anti-Christ's Time, for 1260 years, under the Type of the Gentiles treading down the Outward Court, and Holy City: Thereby (says he) representing, how the Papists should arrogate and possess the Name and Face of the Church so long time; which yet, because it will not bear the Measure of the Reed, John is therefore bidden to leave out, as neither in Doctrine, nor Discipline, keeping to the Word, nor unto the Primitive Pattern, Pattern, but utterly swerving from it, as the Church of Rome hath done. And in this State the Church continues for 1260 Years: the Gentiles having that Time allowed them to tread down the Holy City: And the State of the True Church all that while, is but as of these Witnesses in Sack-cloth. This Interpretation the Reverence had to the Integrity of the Church for the first 400 Years did beget; together with that appearance, (at first view) that the Outward Court should here be said to be given to the Gentiles, to be by them trodden down as the Holy City is, for 42 Months. Which mistake I have abundantly removed in the first Section, and in the fifth general Premise to this my Interpretation.

But further, to remove the Supposition on which this Interpretation of his is founded;

1. The sixth Trumpet, and the Times of it in this Vision, are not yet ended here in this Angel's Intention. For the Angel, after his long discourse of the Occurrences that are to fall under the Times of the sixth Trumpet, doth then (when the Time of it, according to the Series of this Vision, did indeed come to end) say (vers. 14. of this Chapter) The second Wo is past, and the Third cometh quickly. And you may observe, that after the expiration of the Time of these Wo Wo Trumpets, (which are the Fifth, Sixth, and Seventh) such a closure comes in after each of them, [one Wo is past, another comes, &c.] And thus, after that the Times of the fifth Trumpet were out, according to the Series of the Vision, this Closure is added, (chap. 9. 12.) [One Wo is past, and behold there come two other Woes more].

Now at the end of the 9th Chapter, there is no such close annexed. But here, chap. 11. 14. when the Angel had related the Occurrences which are to fall out in the latter days of the sixth Trumpet, that is, whilst the Turkish Kingdom yet stands, and which shall fall out not long before his Fall; then, and not before, he brings in that close of the Times of that Trumpet, [The second Wo is past, and behold the Third cometh quickly]. Which shews, that either part of the Matter, and of the Wo, that goes to make up that sixth Trumpet complete, remained to be uttered by this Angel, chap. 11. (which when he had declared, he says, The second Wo is past); or that, (according to the course of the Vision) the Time of it was now expired.

And then, 2. the Angel takes his Oath, chap. 10. as yet standing under the Times of the sixth Trumpet, and after the Times of the Seventh; and that seventh Trumpet's Time yet not come to blow, according to the order of Time presented in this Vision. And therefore it is not a meer suspension of the Vision it self, until he had begun with, or run over all Times again, (as Mr. Mede would have it): But its Time to blow was in this Vision not yet come. This the very words and phrase of the Angel's Oath, chap. 10. do imply; when he says, In the days of the seventh Trumpet, when he shall begin to sound. Mark that phrase, [The Days of the seventh Trumpet]. It implies that he speaks according to the compute of Vision-Time (as I may so call it); for Vision being a representation of Events, even as a Comedy is of Stories, accordingly these Visions that succeed each other, have a supposed Artificial Time that runs along with the representation of those Events in these Visions, in their due Order; Even as the several Seasons of the Year are in a Prognostication laid forth, according to Artificial Names (as in an Almanack you read of Dog-days, and the like) or; even as in a Map all Countries are represented with their several Climates or Scituations, by Lines of Longitude and Latitude, which have Artificial Names by Geographers given unto them. So from the 6th Chapter of this Book, hath been represented a Map or Vision of all Times, and these, as successively governed by Angels, from whence they have their Names, as Seasons have from their Planets that govern them, (as the Dog-days in Summer, from the Dog-star's Reign at that time). So the days of Christ's Kingdom to come, are called the Days of the seventh Angel: And so the Times before it, are called the Days of the sixth Angel, or the sixth Trumpet, (under which the Turk reigns). Now then, in that the Angel swears, Time shall be no longer, but till the Days of the seventh Angel; when he begins to sound, all shall be finished; it implies, that according to the course of Time in this Vision begun, this Time was not yet ended.

that

To demonstrate this; consider,

1. That those words [Time shall be no longer, but till the Days of the seventh Angel] do imply a long Series of Time already past in the Visions of the former Angels, and Time hitherto brought down; and so, he must needs speak this, in a respect to Vision or Representative Time, (as I may so call it) which he, as an Actor coming in his due Place and Order stood under. And accordingly likewise he must be supposed to speak unto John as a Spectator brought to the last Stadium or Scene of Time: And therefore he speaks, as taking it for granted, that there was some Time yet left, according to the Series of this Vision; and yet, no more, but until the Days of the seventh Trumpet, which was next to come upon the Stage. And so the Angel must be supposed to speak those words, as yet standing under the Days of the sixth Trumpet, as yet not ended, but as having some Time still to come. For should he be supposed to begin again aloft at the top of Time, and so to bring John thither, as having ended the former Prophecy; and then, with a New Vision, to begin to run over all Time again; he should, in the same Speech, take in two several Accounts of Time at once. For whilst he says, Time (or Delay) shall be no longer, (which imports that whole space of Time under the former Trumpets, from the Age wherein John lived, to be past and off the Stage already) in respect thereto he must be supposed then to stand under the sixth Trumpet, as viewing all that Time gone over. But in the following words, when he says, [But in the Days of the seventh Trumpet, when he shall begin to blow], he should speak, as taking all Time afore him anew, and as beginning all Time again, (according to this Opinion). And it were strange, if in the same Sentence, two Speeches should bear such differing Dates.

2. Those words [But in the Days of the seventh Angel, when he shall begin to sound] do also argue this. For,

1. He says not to John, The Vision of that Angel, and his sounding, I will not give thee now (John) which yet should now in order follow; but he says, The Days of his sounding (as speaking of Vision-Time) are yet to begin. [When the Angel (says he) shall begin to sound] as manifestly noting the Time of sounding according to the order of Representative Time in the Vision, not yet to be actually come to be presented; and not the Vision only suspended unto John.

And, 2. when he said, chap. 11. 14. that the second Wo is past, he adds; Behold, the third Wo cometh quickly; as noting yet some space of Time between this and the seventh Trumpet to come, as between the sixth Vial, and the Seventh, there is to be. So that the Vision is not suspended only, but really (according to the Series of this Prophecy) it still went on, and this Seventh was to follow.

And, 3. accordingly, when in the 11th Chapter, the seventh Trumpet doth indeed sound, there is a Voice heard (in answer, as it were, unto what the Angel had said, chap. 10. that Delay should be no longer) that, Now that Time is come, &c. He had said it should be no longer then till then; and now, when it sounds, the Voice says, that Time is come. So that then, and not till then, according to the Series of this Vision, was the Time of the sounding of it. And all this argues the Vision of this 11th Chapter, and the Occurrences of it, to be a Supplement or Addition, to come in towards the end of the sixth Trumpet, and not to begin again at the top of Time. So that rather I take it, he still speaks all in this 11th Chapter, as standing in the last days of the sixth Trumpet, the Times whereof are not ended; and so mentions such Occurrences as shall fall out in the latter Times of it, in which John and he do stand (as hath been shewn).

And, 2. for that other thing supposed, namely, Mr. Mede's making the first 400 Years until Antichrist's rising, to be the Temple measured, as so long agreeing with the Reed, and so continuing as an exact Pattern for Churches, and so intended in this measuring, I say two things;

1. If

1. If the meaning should be, that these Primitive Churches are therefore measured, that they might be held forth as a Pattern to Churches afterward (as is intimated in his quoting Ezek. 43. 10, 11. and applying it to this measuring, in such a sense only) I cannot imagine, that although a just and a due reverence is to be given to those Times, that yet Christ would ever impart such an honour to any Church not purely Apostolical, as to make them the Pattern for Worship and Doctrine; which is Honour due only to the Word, and unto those Churches extant in the very Times of the Apostles, only so far as they kept those Ordinances in which the Apostles settled them; so 1 Cor. 11. 2, 22. Otherwise the Apostle pulls down the Pride of that Corinthian, and of all other Churches, for arrogating this unto themselves, saying, What, came the Word of God out from you, or to you only? Chap. 14. of that Epistle, vers. 36. It is therefore too much to give to those Primitive Times, especially for the first 400 Years.

For, 2. although the Doctrine and Discipline of the first Age in which John lived, and in which Churches were then settled by the Apostles, might then be thus measured to be held forth, and so to serve for a Pattern, (as we have the Story of it in the Word, which on purpose relates the State of those Churches); yet to make such an integrity to extend to those other following Ages, until the very Times wherein Antichrist rose, (which in many Matters, both of Worship and Government, did so much swerve one Age after another, still more and more from the Rule) this were unsafe. For the Corruptions which still did steal in upon the Doctrine and Worship, in the first 300 Years after the Apostles Deaths, were indeed the occasion of the Rise of Antichrist; the Mystery of whose Iniquity began to work in the Apostle's Times; and in every Age more than other so prevailed, as that Antichrist arose in the view of the best Churches and Fathers, though then undiscerned by them. Which, had they kept that Primitive Integrity, had been utterly impossible. And therefore to reduce our Worship, &c. now unto the Pattern of the first four or five hundred Years, (which is the plausible pretence of our New Deformers) is to bring Popery again in by the same degrees now, as it at first crept in by. And this the Devil, who knew the way of introducing it then; to that end cryeth it up now.

For my part, I rest assured, that the Light which hath broken forth in many of our Reformed Churches, since Calvin's Time, and which still encreaseth, and shall, until Antichrist be consumed, is both in Matter of Doctrine, Interpretation of Scriptures, Worship, Church-Government, &c. much purer, and might be taken for a truer Measure, than what shines in the Story and Writings of those three latter Primitive Ages. But yet it were too much to attribute that to it, which this Opinion puts upon the Light of those Primitive Times. But all that I have said in my fore-gone Exposition is, that now in this Age Light coming in, and discovering how far the constitution of Churches in their outward Government, &c. hath swerved from the true Pattern: Therefore John is set at work afresh to measure it. Which use of the Phrase is very proper, as implying only a Reformation and Restitution of the Church attempted, after a swerving from the Rule. In which sense Beza and other Interpreters understand it, without any arrogation to these Times.

And, 3. for his making the Outward Court to represent the Churches state as in order of Time succeeding this Temple of the Primitive Times; I only say this, That it seems to me, that these two, the Temple, and the Outward Court, are represented as rather existing together, and contemporaneous, the one being bid to be measured, and the other to be cast out, at one and the same Time, as being not capable of the true Measure. And the contrary Opinion would make no Churches erected according to the Pattern in this Reformation, since Luther and Calvin, but still to remain, as it were, hidden under Popery as an Outward Court, until Antichrist's Times are fully out. Whereas Churches are, and have been, long since erected, and that, as exactly according to the Pattern as any we read of, (the Apostle's Age only excepted).

And then, 4. for that other Supposition, that the 11th Chapter should be a Compendium of all Times from John's Age unto the seventh Trumpet, so to shew the synchronizing of two Prophecies; I say,

PART II.

1. It were strange, that in a Compendium, one particular Passage (of the killing of the Witnesses) should be insisted upon more largely than all the rest, and take up the half of that Discourse, as from vers. 7. to 14, this doth; and that such a Passage or Occurrence as this, that is not mentioned in the large Prophecy that follows (whereof this should be the Compendium and Argument) should yet come in here by it self; would it not rather argue, that the Angel here did chiefly intend to give some special Occurrence, which should go before the seventh Trumpet in the Church of the Age that preceded it, as a sign of its approach?

2. It is true indeed, that one end of this Angel's coming down, was to shew, what was the Time and Period of the fourth Monarchy, under that last Head the Pope, whose Time and Continuance Daniel had mentioned but indefinitely. But yet, his purpose was to make mention (and but a mention) of no more Times than simply those 1260 Years of the last Head; which were enough to interpret Daniel, (which was his scope) and not explicitly to ascend to the whole Time of the Revelation. And then, his annexing to that Computation such Occurrences belonging to the Book-Prophecy, as should fall out at the ending of that Time; and his subjoining the expiring of the sixth Trumpet (which belongs to the Seal-Prophecy, it being the passing away of the Second Wo) vers. 14. presently upon the ending of these Occurrences; this serveth sufficiently enough to shew the Connexion of all Times in both Prophecies, and more clearly than that other way of Mr. Mede's.

There is but one Objection, both against this way of mine, and that makes most for that Opinion of his, that I know of; and that is, that chap. 10. John eating a little Book, which contains a New Prophecy, (and therefore, vers. 12. he says, he must prophesy again); hence therefore it follows, that the Seal-Prophecy must be supposed ended; and so, this 11th Chapter to contain a New Prophecy from the beginning.

To which I Answer; That the Angel's coming down now towards the end of the Old Prophecy, had a double scope; the one to give a New Prophecy, the other to give an exact computation of the Times of both Prophecies, himself as yet standing in the end of those Times of the one Prophecy, and being shortly to enter into the other; and so withal intending to give a signal of the ending of those Times for the Church's warning. Which Occurrences that were to be the Signs, because they were Passages belonging to the Book-Prophecy, as being the Fates of the Reformed Churches in the Days before the Pope's Ruin, (which are Matters belonging to the Book-Prophecy) hence it is necessary, that John should now first eat that little Book, (the Story of which was entirely to begin at the 12th Chapter) that so thereby he might be, as it were, enabled to conceive of these Passages related, chap. 11. they being such as belonged to that Book-Prophecy. For John had not yet seen the Beast ascending out of the bottomless Pit, who is mentioned, vers. 7. nor heard of the Witnesses and their Vials; but by eating that little Book, now was signified to him, that therein was contained the Vision of these things, which these Passages here related did concern. And besides this, there was likewise signified unto him thereby, that now in the last Days of the sixth Trumpet, the Book was open, (as Daniel says).

But for a more full Answer to be added to these, take in that fifth Precognition, or premised Consideration, which in the beginning of this Exposition of Chap. 11. I laid down afore-hand, tending to the opening of it.

I might do the like by the Interpretations of Mr. Brightman, and Mr. Forbes; who though they make the measuring to signify and represent the Godlies discerning the difference between the Temple, the True Church, and the Outward Court, the Popish and False Church, (in these latter days of the first Reformation); Yet so, as they make the Outward Court here, to be the Outward Face of the Popish Church, the Seat and Name of which they possessed; and the Temple to be the Church of God in all Ages hid under Popery, (as the Temple was, within the Outward Court) and for many Ages not discern'd; whilst the Popish

Popish Church possessing the Outward Court, stood only outward to the Eye, and held the Name and Face of the Church, but became now to be discerned or measured by the Reed of the Word; which is (say they) the measuring here. So that, they make the Church, in these Anterior Times under Popery, to be the Temple, and the outward Face of the Church all that while to be the Outward Court. And having placed this Temple, and Outward Court, in the first days of Antichrist, and this measuring of the Temple thus high, even from the dawning of the Gospel so long since; they accordingly go on to make the following Occurrences of this Chapter to be all already fulfilled.

The 1260 Days of the Witnesses (which they would have to be the two Testaments) their Prophecy in Sack-cloth they make to be expired, and their Slaughter past in that Council of Trent, coincident with the small-Caldique War in 1547, or thereabouts: After which there was in Germany a restoration of the Gospel, after three Years and a half; where the tenth part of the City fell off again from Popery. After which the seventh Trumpet sounded (say they) when these Northern Kingdoms settledly embraced the Gospel, and became the Kingdoms of Jesus Christ, (where, that he may for ever reign without any recovery again by the Beast, I say Amen, as Jeremy did).

But this Interpretation I cannot assent to; for (as we shall see afterward) this killing the Witnesses, and the passing away of the second Wo, (or the Turkish Dominion) together with the sounding of the seventh Trumpet, are all yet to come.

And for their making the Temple measured, to be the Company of Elect past through all the Ages until then, but now in the beginning of the Gospel discovered, these things are against it:

1. The Visions of this Book are still of things present, or to come, and not of things past. And therefore this seems much rather to note out the present state of the Temple; existing as then unto John, under some of the Times of the sixth Trumpet, than a discerning what was past and gone before that Time.

2. The Condition of the True Worshippers, whilst hidden in those Anterior Times of Popery until the Reformation, are rather represented in chap. 14. (which Chapter summarily contains the several Faces and Conditions of the Church through Antichrist's Reign, as the 13th Chapter doth the State of Antichrist during that Time) to be as a Company of 144000 upon Mount Sion, whereon as yet a Temple was not built; and so distinguish'd from them under the Times of the Reformation, when only we come to have the first mention of the Temple, vers. 15, 17. and of the Altar, vers. 18. therein alluding (as it seems to me) unto the State of the Holy City, wherein, until Solomon's Time, there was not a Temple built; though in David's Time, that Mount was by the Jews inhabited. So nor was this Virgin-Company as yet formed up into a distinct Temple and Altar of Worship distinct from the Popish, in any eminent manner, but rather lay scattered in the Popish Churches, and were hidden among them, although they were not of them. But now in the Reformation, they began to be built up into a Temple apart, and to set up an Altar distinct from that of these Samaritans.

And then, 3. to make the measuring this Temple to be an after-sight, or discerning of them, does not enough fill up the meaning of that Phrase, (though that be connotated and implied in it); which we find else-where used, (as Ezek. 43. 11.) for drawing a Platform of God's House, and the Ordinances thereof; to keep them, and put them in practice; or else for building and finishing an Edifice, as Zech. 2. vers. 2, and 4, compared, and Zech. 4. 9, 10. Which must therefore rather respect a Temple as in these Times existing, and in being, or to be built and finish'd, than a Temple in Ages past, and but now discovered.

And, 4. those opposite Negative words [measure not, but leave out the Outward Court] do import a real Act of Rejection put in execution, and in Fact done towards that Outward Court as then existing; and not merely a discovery or judging them only to have been but an Outward Court in Ages past. They do imply an Act of leaving them out in that Building that was now erecting; as being such whose Form and Frame was not for this Building, nor capable of that measure which was now to be applied.

All these things argue to me, that this Vision and Work appointed John here, respected not Anterior Times, but the Face of that Church, the Times whereof he then stood in, and the Work of that Age about it. Whereas (according to their Interpretation) the Outward Court must have existed at the beginning of the Times of Antichrist; for they suppose the Outward Court (that is) the Face of the Church possessed by Antichrist 42 Months, even from the beginning.

There is a Third Interpretation, which to me seems more probable than either of these (and which I exclude not in this of mine); and that is, That this measuring the Temple, &c. should be that first Reformation and erecting of Churches, with that Separation made from Popery by our Worthies, they casting out that Catholick Romish Church as not agreeing with the Rule. And so that Reformation and Separation falling out together with (or not long after) the Turks possessing the Eastern Empire, (which is the sixth Trumpet, chap. 9.) This 11th Chapter beginning with that Reformation of the Church, should thereby orderly continue the Story of the sixth Trumpet, without any Chasma or void space of Time between the 9th and 11th Chapters. Whereas, to draw it down to our Time, leaves an interim or vacuity of an hundred Years.

But, 1. I conceive the Scope of the Angel here not to be so much to make up a compleat Story continued to the other, chap. 9. For the former Story of the Trumpets, having contained only the Fates of the Empire, it therefore suited not his Scope to annex this Reformation of the Church thereunto, as any homogeneal part of one continued Story, although in Time immediately succeeding it: For that more properly belonged to the Book-Prophecy that follows, and is at large set forth, chap. 14, 15, and 16. But his Scope seems rather to be, to give a computation of the Times of Antichrist, and a signal of their ending, by the Occurrences of the Age just afore; singling out to that end such particular Passages, (that otherwise belonged to the Book-Prophecy) about the Church in that last Age, as should be most eminent, and likewise designatory of the ending of those Times, being such also as should fall out before the expiring of the sixth Trumpet, or second Wo.

And if these Occurrences have any affinity with the sixth Trumpet, it rather lies in this, that whereas the fifth and sixth Trumpets had contained two Woes on the Christian World in the East, (for their Idolatry) from the Turks and Saracens; This contains a like Wo on the Churches of the Reformation in the West, by the Papists over-running their Outward Court, as a punishment of their Carnal-Gospelling. Which added to those Woes brought upon those Grecian Churches by the Turks, should make the Wo of the sixth Trumpet compleat. And so, the treading the Wine-press without the City, (in Germany) chap. 14. should be reduced to the sixth Trumpet, as a part of it, rather than to any of the Vials. The Vials being upon the Turk and Pope only, but these other Woes upon those other Professors of Christ, and his Name, after a fleshly way, both Grecians and Protestants; the one by the Turk, chap. 9. the other by the Papists here in this 11th Chapter.

And then, 2. The main eminent Business of the first Reformers from Popery, being chiefly about Matters of Doctrine corrupted by the Papists, and about the Idolatries of Rome; therefore both in chap. 14. in the Voices of those three Angels; and in chap. 15. in their Song there, Matters of Doctrine only are mentioned. And though they laid the Foundation of the Building of all Churches, yet that was not τὸ ἔργον, that very Work unto which they did so specially attend. It was not so much the right measuring and constitution of Churches, and of the Materials of them; as here (you see that) that is made the main thing intended, even to measure the Temple, Altar, &c. and indeed is, and hath been eminently, and peculiarly the Work in hand now in this last Age.

3. Let it be considered, that the Popish Party in this Allusion, cannot so properly be called the Outward Court; but they are rather intended by Gentiles here:

here: And so, the Outward Court must note out that third sort of Worshippers between these Gentiles and the Templers, (as I before shewed).

And, 4. this being that exceeding great Error and Defect laid in the Foundation of the Churches of the first Reformation, (especially in our British Churches) namely, the adjoining this Outward Court of Carnal and Unregenerate Protestants, and receiving them from the first into the Temple, Worship, and Communion of all Ordinances; so that, the Bounds of the Church were extended as far as the Bounds of the Common-Wealth. Which was done out of Humane Prudence, suddainly to greaten the Party against the Gentiles in the City. That as the Earth helps the Woman, chap. 12. so this, as an Outward Court, might round about shield the True Temple and Worshippers in it against the Beast. And then, on the other side, this being in this New-begun and second Reformation of these Churches, the main fundamental Principle which is here mentioned, of receiving none into Churches, but only such Worshippers as the Reed, or Light of the Word, (so far as it gives Rules to judge others by) applyed by the judgment of Men (who yet may err) shall discover to be truly Saints, (which belongs to another Dispute); and this Vision falling out in, and as belonging to the Times of this latter Age, and being purposely intended (as it were) to amend and correct that very Error: Hence it seems most properly to belong to this Work of a second Reformation.

Yet, because that was a true measuring, and this but the finishing of that Building, whereof their Hands had laid the Foundation, (and like Zerubbabel's finishing the Temple); therefore I verily think the Holy Ghost had an aim at both, as unto two several gradual Accomplishments of it. For this I perceive in almost all Prophecies; that there are several Accomplishments which the Holy Ghost hath in his Eye; yet so, as he fixeth upon one, (and usually, the last of them) as the main intended. For which I could bring many Instances; of which one I shall hereafter give. And that he might have such a double aspect in this, I shall shew when I come to the killing of the Witnesses.

C H A P. V.

The Description of the Witnesses, Verse 3, 4, 5,
and 6.*

S E C T. I.

Some Things in general premised. The Division of the particular Acts ascribed to them: with the Order and Time of each.

Now I come to the Angel's Discourse concerning the two Witnesses; who are the Holy People, whose Power is at last to be scattered. The Description of whom is set down, to make way for the relation of that their scattering.

Two things (as was said) are here related about them.

1. The Description of their Condition and of their Power, ver. 3, 4, 5, & 6.
2. The last scattering of them, and of this their Power.

I. For their Description (which the Angel makes, to the end that John might know whom he spake of, who were at last to be thus killed); He describes them as throughout all Ages they had opposed Anti-Christ: which he doth upon that occasion, that he had for to mention their whole Time. But especially he sets them out by what in their latter Times (the Age immediately foregoing this their killing) they should have power to oppose the Beast in; and yet, how that after all, he should prevail against them. So that there is this use and end of this so large a Description of them, ver. 3, 4, 5, & 6. that the Time of this their last killing might be more evidently discerned, when it was to come; namely, after they should have done thus and thus against the Beast and his Company: To wit, set up a Temple, and poured out four Vials, and when they should be come to one of the highest Plagues, even to devour them with Fire (which is the fourth Vial); that then their Enemies should prevail against them.

Now this Description of them, is absolved many and several Ways: As

1. By their Office; they are Witnesses and Prophets.

(1.) Witnesses, As being in all Ages to testify against Anti-Christ; but especially now at last.

(2.) Prophets, As being to Prophecy, and thereby to feed the Church, whilst in the Wilderness, the same term of 1260 Years, as you have it Chap. 12. 6. where it is said, that They (that is, these Prophets and Witnesses) shall feed her, &c.

2. They are set out by their Condition, which is in Sack-Cloath and Mourning; whilst the Pope and his Clergy, are in their Silk Triumphant.

3. By their Number; they are Two.

For, 1. By the Mouth of two Witnesses (at least) every Word is to be established.

And, 2. They are Two, in Allusion to those famous Parts or Couples (for by Couples they have still gone) in the Old Testament, living in the like Times; and which were fit Types of these Times of Anti-Christ, and the Churches State therein, in the various Progress of it throughout all Ages of Anti-Christ's Reign.

The Couples were these.

1. { Moses
Aaron } Prophets to the Church in Egypt, and in the Wilderness.
2. { Elias
Elisha } Prophets to Israel in Ahab's Time, wherein Idolatry prevailed, and no Face of a Church was seen, and but 7000 hid in Corners that were Godly.
3. { Zerubbabel
Joshua } Prophets in the Days of the finishing the Temple, after the People were come forth from Babylon's Captivity.

And that to these three Pairs the Allusion is here made, is manifest.

1. To Moses and Aaron : For

(1.) These execute Egypt's Plagues, ver. 6. like as they did.

(2.) They devour Men with Fire, ver. 5. as Moses did twice by his Gain-sayers in the Wilderness.

2. To Elias and Elisha ; for as they shut up Heaven, that it rained not ; so these here do the like, ver. 6.

3. To Joshua and Zerubbabel ; for therefore in ver. 4. these are called the Two Olive Trees, and Candlesticks that begun and finish'd the Temple after the Captivity.

Now out of this Allusion made to such Persons, you may in the general observe, That they are eminent both Ministers and Magistrates (for such were all these Types in their Times) ; who especially are here intended, under the Notion of Two Witnesses. And thus we have had the Description of their Quality, Office, Condition, and Number.

Then further, They are set forth to us by their several Exploits, which they are to perform and execute during the whole Time of their Prophecy. And these are particularly related in each Verse following : Which before I explain particularly, let me premise this in the General to your Notice about them. That the Angel doth enumerate them, and order his recital of them so, as to draw our Eyes unto two of these Exploits or Facts especially, as being the more eminent, and as those which were nearest to the Times of this last Age, wherein John measured the Temple. And these are,

1. Their devouring their Enemies with Fire, which is mentioned, ver. 5.

And 2, Their being Two Olive Trees, &c. ver. 4.

Which Two are first mentioned, and set in the first view, as being such, as did set forth these Witnesses according to what they should be in this latter Age. And to confirm this, you may observe.

1. That those Words in the 5th Verse, [If any Man hurt them, Fire comes out of their Mouths, &c.] have indeed a direct reference to those Words, ver. 3. [And I will give to my Two Witnesses, &c.] So that it is as if he had said, I will give to my Two Witnesses Power, that if any Man hurt them, Fire shall come out of their Mouths, &c. And the Particle [καὶ] [And] I will give, &c. is there (ver. 3.) adverbatively put for [But] ; as noting out that special opposition, that these Witnesses should have Power to make against the Gentiles, that should enter upon their Outward Court. But (says he) I will give to my Two Witnesses Power, that if any Man hurt them, &c. To this (I say) do these Words [And I will give] ver. 3. refer, as well as to those other Words [They shall Prophecy, &c.] which follow in the 3d Verse, (as Piscator also observes.) That whereas he had said three things in the 1st and 2d Verses ; As

1. That the Temple was to be Measured and Finish'd in this latter Age, by the Godly in it (whose Person John sustains.)

2. That their Outward Court (which fenced the Temple and Witnesses) was to be regained by the Papists, and trodden down.

And 3. That the Gentiles whole Time of reigning (upon this Occasion mentioned) was to expire.

PART II

Answerably and oppositely (as [xai] is taken) he says three things of these Witnesses; As

1. That the same space of Time that the Gentiles are to have to reign in, the same these have (even as many) to prophesy in, and shall be enabled to oppose them all that while. The Witnesses are to have their 1260 Days, for the Gentiles 42 Months; so ver. 3.

And 2. Whereas this Temple was in his latter Age to be begun to be Measured, but that Work is interrupted and hindred, by this Assault and Invasion made by these Gentiles, upon this Outward Court and Temple: Yet these Witnesses shall be as those Two Olive Trees, (ver. 4) That minister before the Lord of the whole Earth; (whose Power is engaged in that Work.) And thus they are called, to signify, that as Joshua and Zerubbabel then, (who were called two Olive Trees in that Vision, Zech. 4. in respect, that they were to perform the like work of finishing the Temple, against all Opposition made); so should these two Witnesses now compleat the finishing of this Temple measured, notwithstanding this Interruption, by the Gentiles Invasion of the Temple and Outward Court. And so, this is oppositely spoken to that second thing said of the Gentiles.

And 3. Although these Gentiles in their subduing the Outward Court, do much hurt to the Witnesses, who shall oppose them in this their Assault upon it, and the Temple: Yet they again shall be able to avenge all the hurt done to themselves, by Fire returned upon their Enemies, and spit out of their Mouths against them, whilst they are thus endeavouring to regain the Outward Court from them. And this is the first thing in General to be observed.

Now 2. To the same purpose you may observe, that this Power given them to hurt their Enemies, is spoken of as a Matter of Fact, done at that present Time, and in the Age wherein John in the Vision stands, bearing the Persons of the Godly who were to measure this Temple. Yea, and that this is spoken of, as an encouragement to that work, that If any Man will hurt them, Fire comes out of their Mouths.

But now, 3. On the other side, it may be observed, that whatever else is said of their Power in the 6th Verse (besides these two things in the 4th and 5th Verses) is brought in meerly as a thing added for illustration sake, to shew, what Power besides this, they have in their Days formerly exercised: As thus, These have Power in the Days of their Prophecy, &c. ver. 6. But the prime and eminent thing which is first mentioned, is that their devouring their Enemies with Fire; which is plainly the fourth Vial, mentioned next the measuring the Temple, as conjunct with it.

And again, 4. This Exploit of theirs hath an Emphasis set upon it also, ver. 5. [In this manner he (speaking of him that shall hurt them) must be killed,] as noting the greatest Plague which these Witnesses could execute, and that which so vexeth and tormenteth their Enemies, (as ver. 10. hath it) and so scorseth them, (as the fourth Vial expresth it) that they are thereby provoked to kill them for it, and so to rejoice over them chiefly in this very respect, as ver. 10. tells us.

Yea, 5. These four Plagues being plainly the four first Vials; you may observe, that they are here mentioned ordine inverso, in a clean contrary Order from what they are ranked in, Chap. 16. For the fourth Vial of Fire, which in Chap. 16. is made last in Execution, is yet here ranked first: And that Vial on the Earth which is first there, is mentioned last here; meerly to shew that this of Fire, was that which belonged to the present Times of this Chapter, and the Visions of it; namely, when the Temple is Measured, and also as that which was mainly intended: and the other to come in only for illustration sake, to shew more fully who these Witnesses were, (even the same, that the Pourers forth of those Vials.)

S E C T. II.

The Acts of the Witnesses ; first in the darkeſt Times of Popery, withholding the Rain, What? Next in the Times of Separation from Popery, in the three firſt Vials, verſ. 6.

THIS being Premiſed, to the end that you might know what Times to refer theſe unto ; I come now particularly to explain theſe ſeveral Exploits here againſt their Enemies, and that great Service they do for God all this long Time of their Prophecy. Which ſerviceable Acts of theirs have a double Aſpect.

1. Towards their Enemies.
2. Towards the Temple, the Church of God.

Or they may be divided, according to the ſeveral Times in which theſe Services were performed. As,

1. What in this laſt Age they were to do before their killing, and now when the Temple is meaſured, and the Outward Court to be troden down : and this in the 4th and 5th Verſes.

And, 2. what in the former Ages of their Prophecy they had alſo done ; which is laid down verſ. 6.

And this Diviſion you will here ſee to fall in according to that Diviſion which I made of theſe Times, Chap. 14. and in the Vials.

For the firſt, What they did to their Enemies : And,

1. What they did againſt them in the days fore-going this latter Age, wherein John is ſuppoſed to ſtand. Which Acts of theirs are ſet forth in the ſixth Verſe.

1. And thoſe were either done in thoſe firſt Times of all, even in the darkeſt Times of Popery, when the 144000 ſtood on Mount Sion without a Temple, and when Idolatry overſpread the World, (Chap. 14. from the beginning of it, unto verſ. 6.) Then theſe Witneſſes did ſhut Heaven, that it rained not ; which in the Alluſion refers to the Times of Abab, as the fitteſt Type of theſe firſt Times. For that Exploit carries us unto what Elias then in like manner did, when he brought that Curſe on the Land for their Idolatry, That it rained not. When alſo the Church was ſo ſmall, that Elias thought himſelf alone ; and when Abab, and his Priests of Baal (that is, the Pope and his Maſs-Priests) ruled all the World. But hereby is ſignified, that then theſe Prophets had this Priviledg, to have true Grace only, and the Dews and Influence of Heaven to come down upon themſelves, to have a Truth of Doctrine among them to ſave them ; which fell not into the Knowledge and Hearts of theſe Priests of Baal ; (you heard, Chap. 14. 3. that they had a peculiar Song unto themſelves, which none elſe could learn). Now all theſe Dews of Grace, and Saving Doctrine, were reſtrained and withheld from thoſe Idolaters, as a juſt curſe upon them for their Apoſtacy.

Or, 2. in the Times ſucceeding, next to theſe firſt Times ; that is, from and after the Times of their Separation from Popery, and upon their coming out of that Egypt. Then, as Moses and Aaron, they execute the like Plagues to thoſe of theirs on Egypt, even the three firſt Vials, which are therefore alſo mentioned in this 6th Verſe ; (for which I refer you to the 16th Chapter). And theſe are the Days of that Separation of Churches from Antichriſt, and firſt Reformation, ſet forth in the 14th Chapter.

S E C T. III.

The Acts of the Witnesses in this their last Age of Prophecy. And first, their Devouring with Fire, (vers. 5.) What? The Allusion thereof unto Moses his destroying Nadab and Corah's Company with Fire, applied.

BUT then, 2. in their last days of all, towards the Time of this New Reformation of the Temple, and afore this their killing to come, they pour out the fourth Vial in scorching and devouring their Enemies with Fire, as vers. 5. shews us. Even as Moses and Aaron, when the Church was come out of Egypt, and in the Wilderness, devoured Nadab with Fire, Levit. 10. 1, 2. and 250 Princes in the Rebellion of Corah, Numb. 16. 35. And this devouring their Enemies with Fire, holds not only of those that profess Popery, but of any Man that shall hurt them, (though living among them) as you have it vers. 5.

Now observe how this Type agrees with the Face of Things in this latter Age: For, as when this fell out, Moses had then brought the People out of Egypt, and had long afore begun to set up the Tabernacle, and other Ordinances of Worship. So when falls out the Rebellion of these Men here devoured with Fire? It is after the Church is come out of that Spiritual Egypt where these former Plagues were executed, and after that Publick Worship is erected, and set up, according to God's appointment in many things; that is, after the first great Reformation made by Luther, &c. But here is a Company of Rebels that rise up against Moses for his endeavouring to keep to the Word in his Temple's Frame and Fabrick, and for his calling for this at the Builder's Hands.

Observe the Quarrel of both those Companies then, and of these now.

The first Quarrel then was about introducing Humane Inventions in God's Worship, which himself commanded not.

The Second was, not only a renewing and continuing that Quarrel; but further, to take away all distinction of Persons in Worshipping.

For the First; Nadab and Abihu, they offer strange Fire, (namely, the common culinary Fire, which in God's Worship was strange Fire) before the Lord; which God commanded them not: For by his Command, only Fire from the Altar should have been offered, which originally came down from Heaven. And so, the Sin for which they were devoured with Fire, it was a Transgression in bringing in, or continuing to use such Humane Inventions in Worship as God had not commanded, and a justifying such to be warrantable.

And, 2. that other Company that clave to Corah, their Sin was, as their Offering Incense, not being true Priests; so their quarrelling Moses and Aaron for putting such a difference between the People, as making some to be Priests, (of the Tribe of Levi) and others not: Whenas (say they) all the People are Holy; and therefore ye take too much upon you ye Sons of Levi, &c. seeing every one throughout the whole Congregation is Holy, and so is as fit to worship and draw near to God as you; Wherefore then lift you up your selves above the Congregation of the Lord? (who they thought were God's People, and whom he had chosen to draw near unto him). This was the Quarrel, as Moses states it, vers. 5. and unto this Sin they added Rebellion, vers. 14.

Now what has been the Quarrel, that in England (which I instance most in, as being best known to us) and in some other Reformed Churches, which hath since the first Reformation been continued (of the latter days of which Times, this is especially here understood, for 'tis the fourth Vial) but about Humane Inventions? which are as that strange Fire then, which God commanded not; which yet are introduced and continued in Worship, and by the most, justified against the few Witnesses, the Pleaders for the Commands of God, to be the only Rule of Worship.

And again, 2. for that other, the putting such a difference between Men and Men, by the faithful Witnesses and Prophets, between the Holy and the Prophane; phane; this hath been another, and a greater ground of hot and violent Opposition against these Witnesses. And for this (the latter of the two, as then also it was) these Witnesses have all generally still preached: That only those who have such or such a Work of Grace upon their Hearts, and that do endeavour to walk thus and thus holily in their Lives; That such only are Saints, and the Children of God. The stream of their Ministry in England hath still run in this Channel, thus to distinguish Men from Men, and to separate the Precious from the Vile, (and this occasioned from that promiscuous mixture of all sorts): the chief Work and Bent of their Ministry hath been, to mark out whom God hath chosen, and who only are True Priests, and Worshippers of him in Spirit and Truth. And for this (what-ever hath otherwise been pretended) have those of the other side quarrelled, opposed, and silenced them, saying, as Corah's Company, Are not all the People holy? Have they not all been baptized? You take too much upon you, (you precise Ones) out of the pride of your Spirits, to lift up your selves above the Congregation of the Lord.

Or else the Quarrel hath been about God's own Election of a few to be Priests unto him, (even as then, that God chose the Tribe of Levi from the crowd of common Israelites) who are his, and whom he hath chosen, as vers. 5. of Numb. 16. This was the Quarrel then; and these now plead the Cause of all Mankind in Universal Grace and Redemption.

All the Quarrels between the Popish Party (the Number of the Beast's Name) and the Witnesses, are reducible to these two Heads.

1. True purity of Worship: And,
2. True Holiness, and peculiar Election of Worshippers.

And the Light in both these Things, hath in our days grown up so high and clear, as that many of those who oppose either or both of these, do sin even out of Rebellion and Presumption in opposing that, the Truth of which they are convinced of, as Corah's Company did. And so their Punishment riseth to be like to that of Nadab, and those 250 of Corah's Conspiracy, even Fire from the Lord devouring them; which is (as was said in the fourth Vial) a Spiritual Punishment on their Souls; and is the effect of the powerful Conviction of the Word out of the Mouths of the Witnesses, who spit Fire into their Consciences, and begin Hell-Fire afore-hand. And this very Allusion is thus interpreted and applied to that fearful expectation of Wrath, which those have in their Consciences, who sin wilfully against the knowledg of the Truth, and so, against the Holy Ghost, Heb. 10. 26, 27.

And indeed, bring but Paul's Exposition there of this very Type, and Example of those Israelites then, unto this Allusion here made unto it by the Angel; and that of Paul may clearly expound this of John. The Allusion there, is to those who died by Moses's Hand, and that without Mercy, for despising the Law which he brought from God to them, and more particularly to those who died by Fire, (as that Phrase [the expectation of fiery Indignation to devour the Adversaries] doth shew); who therein were true Types of those that sin wilfully under the Gospel, and despise it; they were Types of these, both in their Sin and Punishment.

For, 1. their Sin is Rebellion, as the others also was. Corah's Company, after Moses's conviction of them, came to a despiteful scorning of Moses, and doing opprobry to him for bringing them out of Egypt, as you may read, Numb. 16. 13, 14. And such is their Sin mentioned, Heb. 10. 26. even a sinning wilfully, after the receiving of the Truth. And so here in this 11th of the Revelation, the Emphasis of their Sin is put upon their Wills, [if any Man [will] hurt them]; and again it is repeated, [if any Man [will] hurt them], vers. 5.

And, 2. As they then were struck dead by God, upon their despising Moses's Law, and conviction of it under two or three Witnesses, (as Paul interprets it, Heb. 10.) (Moses and Aaron themselves testifying against them, and convincing them); so here, the Angel adjudgeth them to this notorious Death, for despising the Testimony of these Two Witnesses, and the Light of the Gospel in their Mouths. Thus in their sinning they were true Types of these.

PART II.

And then, secondly, in their Punishment, they were their true Types also:
For,

1. A Punishment they there have executed on them, of all the forest, which Paul calls a dying without Mercy. So in that 10th to the Hebrews; How much sorer punishment (says Paul) shall he be thought worthy of, &c? sorer than that of Nadab and Corah's Company there being devoured with Elementary Fire; and indeed so sore, as he knows not how to express it, but utters it by an imperfect indefinite Speech, [how much sorer?] rather leaving it to us (from comparing their Sins together) to conceive it, than that he was able to express it. And in like manner here also, their Punishment (you see) hath this Emphasis put upon it [in this manner he must be killed] as noting out the extreamest punishment that could be.

2. A Punishment it is, not so much killing their Bodies as their Souls. So in the Type, the Fire that came forth rather blasted than burnt them. Their Bodies and Cloaths were left whole, Levit. 10. 5. It burned and scorched their Souls, not their Bodies, (say the Hebrew Doctors); and so it was the liveliest Type that could be, to lay a Punishment upon their Souls. Now unto such Sinners under the Gospel, doth God answerably become a consuming Fire.

Again, 3. That which here in the Revelation is called Fire, is there by Paul expounded fiery Indignation, and a fearful looking for of Judgment, (namely, in the Consciences of those Men who sin this Sin) [φόβερὰ ἐνδομὴ κολάσεως] a fearful and certain expectation of Judgment, (as it is in the Original) God sealing up, by some flashes of his Wrath, these Men's eternal damnation, who do sin this Sin. And this fiery Indignation sparkles forth upon all Occasions, from the Writings and Lives, and from the Preachings and Testimonies of these Witnesses Mouths, as this place implies.

And, 4. As Paul there useth the word [devouring] the Adversaries; so the same is used of them, Levit. 10. 3. And so also here you see the same Phrase used, [devouring] their Enemies. In the Original the same Verb is used in one place that is in the other; and the word for [Enemies] used Heb. 10. 27. is [ὑπεναντίας] Subcontrarios, under-hand Adversaries; shewing, that not always those that thus sin, do presently renounce all profession of God, (as the Pharisees did not); for then they should not have place and opportunity to hurt the Witnesses. So that they profess God still, but do under-hand, and by pretences, oppose his People.

The like to this, we read the effect of the powerful Light of the Ministry of John Baptist, and of Christ, to have been: whose crucifying, as it is manifestly alluded unto here, in killing the two Witnesses, from vers. 7. to 14. So also this effect of his Ministry on those Pharisees in those his Times, who were tormented with it, is in the like manner alluded unto here, in those that were tormented with the Light and Heat of these Witnesses Prophecy (as vers. 10. of chap. 11. expresseth it) which, Chap. 16. 6. is called a scorching Men with great heat and pain. Now John, and after him Christ, were burning and shining Lights, (as Christ spake of John) which the Pharisees despising, the effect of their Ministry upon many of these was this very Sin, and so a tormenting of their Consciences with this fiery Indignation.

And accordingly, in the Prophet Malachi, we have the Times of Christ's Ministry, in this respect, called, a terrible Day that shall burn as an Oven (those Pharisees Consciences) so Mal. 4. 1. And as it was the torment from Christ's Ministry, that made these Pharisees crucify him, (though knowing him to be the Son of God): So it is the torment of these Witnesses Ministry here, encreasing so in Light and Power under the fourth Vial, that causeth their Adversaries to kill them, as vers. 10. of this 11th Chapter is exprest.

And thus you have seen the Power which they have against and over their Enemies.

S E C T. IV.

Secondly, Their Temple-work in their last Days, in being two Olive Trees, explained; from the Allusion to Joshua's and Zerubbabel's finishing the Temple.

BUT, 2. their Power is also further set out in that Temple-work which they do for Christ and his Church in these latter Days; especially in that measuring, building, and finishing the Temple, spoken of vers. 1. To represent which to us, the Holy Ghost hath culled and singled out the most proper and choice Type, and the most lively Allusion that the Old Testament doth afford us. These (says he) are the Two Olive-Trees, and the Two Candle-sticks, that minister before the God of the Earth.

Now where in the Scriptures do we find this spoken, and of whom, and upon what Occasion? Find but this, and by having recourse thereto, you will see all things suit and conspire to make up a full Type of that Work of this Age. You have this Vision of two Olive-Trees and a Candle-stick, made unto Zechary, (as you may read in the 4th Chapter of his Prophecy) and the Interpretation thereof. And it is made unto him upon this Occasion: The People coming out of Babylon's Captivity, Joshua and Zerubbabel had from their first coming forth begun to Sacrifice, and to set up Publick Worship: and after two Years began the erection of the Temple, laid the Foundation of it, and set up the Altar, (as you may read in the third of Ezra); but left the Work imperfect, without the Roof covered, or the Temple as then adorned with all those Holy Utensils and Ornaments of it, which yet were Ordinances that to the Complement and Perfection of his Worship then, God had appointed.

And you may further find, that they had then left the Temple so incompleat, through the opposition of a Samaritan Faction, that pretended to be for God as well as they. So Ezra 4. 2. We seek your God (say they) as you do. Who yet were of a mungrel Religion, between the Jews and Gentiles (as 2 Kings 17. 41. you may read). And being not taken into this Work of building the Temple, nor owned by the true Jews, they therefore hindred the People in building, vers. 4. and raised up the opposition of the Persian Monarchy to frustrate their purpose, vers. 5. and made them to cease by force, vers. 24, 25. and so the Work lay imperfect for many Years, (and yet notwithstanding, it was a true Temple and Place of God's Worship) until God stirred up the Prophets Zechary and Haggai, by their Prophecy to move Joshua and Zerubbabel unto the finishing of this Work, Ezra 5. 1.

Now among other Visions which (to excite them to finish the Work) the Prophet Zechary had had, this (in his 4th Chapter) of two Olive Trees, and a Candle-stick (into which the Olive Trees did empty their Oil) was one. The meaning of which Vision was this. The two Olive Trees were Joshua and Zerubbabel; Sons of Oil, (as in vers. 14. they are called). Which Phrase notes out their being full of Oil; as being those two who should lay out their Grace, Gifts, and Estates, (which was their Oil) and spend their Fatness, and use their heartiest Endeavours in, and for the repairing and finishing the Temple. Which finishing of it is there represented by the Candle-stick, the Candle-stick being one of the most necessary Utensils that went to make compleat the Glory of the Temple; and so (by a Synechdoche) is put for all the rest. And it being one of the last to be brought into the Temple when once fully finished, and when the Roof is covered; therefore it fitly served to resemble the finishing of that Temple, and the adorning of it with all those Accoutrements and Ordinances which God had appointed for the perfection of it. And hence in the Exposition position of this Vision in that Chapter, is Zerubbabel presented with a Plummet in his Hand, and a Measuring Line, to measure this Temple to be now fully finish'd, (even as here John is presented with a Reed) and this Promise is annexed; that in despite of that Mountain of Opposition raised by that Samaritan Faction, ver. 7. Zerubbabel's Hands which had laid the Foundation of this House, even His Hands shall also finish it: as you have it, ver. 9.

And all this is made the meaning of that Hieroglyphick, there represented, in a Vision of Two Olive Trees and a Candlestick; for ver. 5. when the Angel said to Zechary, Knowest thou what these be? (that is) knowest thou the meaning of this Vision? And he said No; the Angel answers, This is the Word of the Lord (namely, his Mind in this Vision) unto Zerubbabel, &c. Namely, this which I before recited, about Zerubbabel's and Josuah's finishing the Temple, (as you may there read it interpreted by the Angel.)

Now this is the very Type alluded unto here: And how fully suits it all our former Interpretations given, of Measuring the Temple? The Church having been long since come out of Mystical Babylon, hath set up Publick Worship, and by the Authority of Princes hath begun the Foundation of the Temple; but hath been hindred from going on to full perfection of Discipline intended and endeavoured, through the mixture of a Samaritan Party, by whom they have been still interrupted, from attaining that perfection which many have contended for. But in the end, God stirs up many of the English Spirits (like Josua and Zerubbabel) to finish what was before left incompleat, and to begin to make a further and purer Edition of Churches according to the Pattern. And so, they stand in this Age with a Measuring Line (as Zerubbabel) or a Reed (as John here) in their Hands; and (like these Two Olive Trees) do empty Oil out of themselves, unto this Work; endeavouring to add unto this Temple such Ordinances as (though to the being of a Church not absolutely necessary, (for they were Temples before) yet) are Institutions of God, and do tend (as the Candlestick then did) unto the Perfection, Beauty, Complement, and Glory of it. And though the Foundation of this Temple, laid in the first Reformation, is in this Allusion included; yet the Allusion principally falls upon this finishing of it. For that is the most proper and peculiar aim of the Vision of the Olive Trees, as in Zechary it is presented; unto which the Allusion here is: the End of Zechary's Prophecy being to excite unto the finishing of the Temple.

These Two Witnesses the Holy Ghost here calls the Olive Trees and the Candlesticks; which are the Churches themselves, as Chap. 1. last ver. So that both eminent Persons and likewise Churches themselves, (the purest of them) are the Witnesses against the false Church, that are here spoken of.

But some would carry it thus; that the Witnesses are the Two Olive Trees [unto] the two Candlesticks, the Churches: For so in the Vision of Zechary they are mentioned, as pouring Oil into the Candlestick. And besides, the Copulative [and] being in the Hebrew sometimes put for the Preposition [unto]; according to this Hebraism [xci] here should be so taken. And the Churches now under the New Testament are called [Two] Candlesticks; (whereas there in Zechary is mention but of one Candlestick) because now there is not one Church only, as the Jews then had; but they are multiplied by particular Congregations. There are Sister-Churches now, and not one Mother-Church only. And you shall sometimes in the Allusions to the Temple find in this Book the Proportion doubled to what it then was; to shew the encrease of the Gospel (as we observed out of the 4th Chapter.)

Now this New Reformation of the Church here typified out, though it be as yet, but as their first attempts to finish the Temple then were, even a Day of small things, (which who (almost) despiseth not?) yet it shall go on and spread, and at length be perfected (as that work then was); For it is of God, the God of the whole Earth; which Attribute of his is here mentioned, to shew the Power that backs these Builders; and to shew, that now the Work is not to be effected so much by Power and Might, (as that finishing the Temple then, is said to have been.)

been,) but by the Spirit, causing the Hearts of the Godly to fall to it. And that Samaritan Mountain of Opposition, even Rome it self, that hath stood in the way of it, shall in the End become a Plain before it; as there (Zech. 4, 5, 6.) that Samaritan Faction did before Zerubbabel.

And out of this Temple are the Vials to come, and to pour out their Plagues upon this false Church: (as you may read chap. 16. 1.) So that the True Church is still ordained to be the ruin of the False. And when that which is more perfect comes, that which is imperfect will be done away.

And however the beginning of this Work may seem small and contemptible; yet the Work it self is of such moment and concernment for God and his Glory, and shall so far go on and prosper, as he is pleased in this Book to take notice of it, as of any further progress of his Church unto Purity, he still doth, (as in the 14th Chapter we have seen.) And yet I fear these Olive Trees and Candlesticks among us, will (as the rest of the Churches in Europe) have their Power scattered, ere this Building be fully finish'd. But after this, they shall revive again, and grow up into an Holy Temple unto the Lord, from the Times of the Witnesses rising, after their being killed, until the New Jerusalem, as Chap. 19. will shew.

Now to make the Allusion to the Condition of Joshua more full, I will only add this: That as these Witnesses are here presented in Sack-cloth, so is Joshua there, in filthy Apparel, Zech. 3. 4. And as there he had change of Raiment given him, so after a few Years will these Witnesses also have the Garments of Praise for the Spirit of heaviness (as Isaiab speaks): and their Testimony being ended, they shall put off their Sackcloth, and put on fine Linnen, the Wedding Apparel of the Lamb's Bride: as Chap. 19. you have it. And so in the end, the Glory of this Temple, set up after Antichrist's demolishment, will yet be rendred more glorious (as that of Zerubbabel's also was) by Christ's coming into it. And an Holy of Holies shall be added unto it, (or rather swallow this up) in which the Ark shall be seen (as it is in the last Verse of this 11th Chapter): But these Witnesses must be killed first; (which is the last thing I am to speak of in this Chapter.)

C H A P. VI.

The Killing of the Witnesses, Vers. 7, 8, 9, 10. of Chapter the 11th.

S E C T. I.

The Time of their three Years and a half not yet come. A reconciliation of this and Mr. Brightman's Opinion, in a double fulfilling of it.

THis Angel's Scope is (as was said) to shew, how, according to the Angel's Oath, in Daniel, Antichrist should accomplish to scatter the Power of the Holy People, towards the end of his Reign, of a Time, Times, and half a Time. And so, what is here said of the Beast's War and Victory, refers not to the Conquests and Slaughters which Antichrist, during his whole Reign, should make of the Holy People or Witnesses (spoken of chap. 13.) but particularly designeth out an eminent prevailing over them at the last, or (as the first words of vers. 7. have it) ὅταν τελέσωσι, &c. when they are about to finish, or end, the term of their Prophecy in Sack-cloth, even their 1260 Years, (which is the same space that Antichrist hath allotted to him to reign in). Now what Power these Holy People, the Witnesses, had got before this their last scattering, hath in their Description been declared. They had power to erect a Temple to themselves, and out of it to pour forth four Vials upon their Enemies, as hath been shewn. And that they might the better fence themselves against the Beast, (possessing the greatest part of Europe, the Holy City) we have heard how they had environed the Temple with a mighty party of Carnal Professors, (separating with them from the Beast) as with an Outward Court; which we have seen by vers. 1. the Gentiles are again to subdue unto themselves, and to tread down. Which treading down their Outward Court, is indeed one part of that his last accomplishment, to scatter the Power of the Holy People; or haply it may rather be termed a Preparation unto it: For come at the Witnesses they could not, till this Outward Court were gained. Which when they shall have more fully won, (which is now a doing) then they further shall kill the Witnesses; for then both they and their Inner Temple will be exposed to the Irruptions of the Gentiles, and will be easily subdued by them, when-as their Outworks shall first be thus taken and recovered. And this will not be fully done, till even towards the finishing their allotted Time of prophesying in Sack-cloth, (and so, of the Beast's reigning, which is to expire soon after it) with their ascension into Heaven.

Now, 1. for the Times when this last killing of them here intended shall come to execution; the Question among Interpreters is, Whether it be yet past, or yet to come?

Mr. Brightman (as was said) maketh this measuring the Temple, to be long since fulfilled and past; so also this killing the Witnesses here, and the expiration of their Time of prophesying in Sack-cloth, to be already wholly past; and this, in that great overthrow of the Protestant Party in Germany, by Charles the Fifth, Anno 1547. and in that condemning the Scriptures (which he makes the Witnesses) by the Council of Trent, about that Time, now well-nigh an hundred Years since.

But most others, as Graferus, Matthias Hoe, Mr. Mede, Mr. Wood, &c. do think it yet to come. And according to that Series of Interpretation hitherto by me given, (if that hold good) it must necessarily be as yet to be executed. And it seems to me most evident, both by what is said to go before it, and also to follow after it; of which nothing (that is to follow after it) is yet fulfilled, although an hundred Years, since the Time that Mr. Brightman interprets it of, are run out.

For, 1. this is to fall out towards the ending of their Prophecy in Sack-cloth, or of their mourning and oppressed Condition; after which they are to cast off their Sack-cloth. As Joshua's filthy Garments (who was one of the Types of these) were taken from him, and a fair Mitre was set upon his Head; so after their Resurrection, these Witnesses are to be clothed in fine Linnen, as you may read chap. 19. Now it is evident that the Time of their prophesying in Sack-cloth, of bewailing the Condition of the Church under Antichrist, and of their Oppression by him, is not yet out. The filthy Garments they wore during their Captivity in Babylon, they still have on; as Joshua also had his on in Zechariah's Time, which was a long while after they were come forth out of Babylon. So the true Witnesses are still in an oppressed Condition, whilst Antichrist's Church, and those of their Enemies, even in the Reformed Churches, are as the Church-Triumphant, in Silk, and at their full liberty.

2. This is here to fall out towards the ending of the Reign of Antichrist, in respect of his Power to do: For this is that last scattering (prophefied of by Daniel) with which he is to accomplish his Times. Now we see he hath his Kingdom yet standing, and his Power to do; and there are an hundred Years more run on since that havock made of them by the Papists in Germany, and yet Antichrist's 42 Months are not expired, we being now but under the fifth Vial: And when the Seat or Throne of the Beast (Rome it self) shall come to be ruined, then shall his Kingdom be full of darkness, and the Glory of it so dampt and extinguish'd, as it is thought, that from that time his Reign is accounted of as at an end.

And, 3. we see Antichrist as yet but in his first march towards this War, he is but now going forth to win the Outward Court, which he must again recover, ere he can come at the Witnesses; and this killing of them is placed here, after his recovery of that. And though he hath trod down Germany, yet he is but setting up and advancing his Engines of Assault and Battery, upon other such Places where God hath the most of his powerful Witnesses in these last Times. Though already he be evidently set down in his Siege of them also, by his Instruments, and those that receive the Number of his Name, who are to be his last Champions.

4. We evidently see by what is gone before in the Description of these Witnesses, that four Vials of the seven are to be poured out by them, before this their killing. For in the days of their Prophecy, they smite the Earth with Plagues; which is the first Vial, and turn the Sea and Rivers into Blood; which is the second and third Vial; and then devour Men with Fire, which is the Fourth. And then after all these exploits of theirs, comes their killing. So that this falls out after, or under the fourth Vial: But that Slaughter, an hundred Years since, was but under the second Vial, and indeed but in the beginning of that Vial; and we as yet see not the full effect of the fourth Vial, which is but now a pouring forth. And therefore this killing of the Witnesses here is not as yet fulfilled.

5. After their rising again, the second Wo is said to pass away. Now that second Wo is the sixth Trumpet, which then is said to pass away, when the Times of it are expired, or the Foundation of its ruin laid. And that sixth Trumpet is (as hath been said) the Turk, and his great Power and Tyranny. Whose Kingdom we see yet to stand in its full vigour and flourish, and no fundamental blow of weakening given to it.

6. Much less is the seventh Trumpet begun to be blown, (which yet is to come quickly after that Sixth, as you have it vers. 14.) For although Jesus Christ, in these Northern Kingdoms, hath been assisted in that his Harvest of his Elect since the Reformation, by supream and Princely Authority;

PART II.

thority; and therefore, chap. 14. that peaceable Harvest was reaped by an Angel crowned: Yet,

1. The Kingdoms of the World becoming Christ's, for him to reign for ever, and this, at the beginning of this seventh Trumpet; his Kingdom then shall be another manner of one than as yet he hath had; even that fifth Monarchy which is mentioned in Dan. 7. 14. and is to begin at the end of the Days of the Beast. And (if you mark the words) this shall be a Kingdom that shall not be administered by Deputies, and by a delegated Power; but by Christ the King his immediate Rule and Government: Thou hast taken to thy self thy great Power, and hast reigned, &c. vers. 17.

And, 2. when that seventh Trumpet shall begin to sound, then (as chap. 10.) shall that Mystery be fulfilled, spoken of by the Prophets, (and which Paul calls a Mystery, Rom. 11.) even the New Jerusalem, and Kingdom of the Saints, and the first Resurrection, as appears by vers. 15, 16, and 17 of this Chapter, compared with chap. 20. 21, &c. But now since that Resurrection of the Witnesses, which Mr. Brightman would have this to be, is almost an hundred Years, and yet none of these things are begun, nor as yet to begin.

3. The seventh Trumpet, and the last Vial, (as hath been often said) do fall out together; or rather, the last Vial begins the seventh Trumpet, as the last Verse of this 11th Chapter, compared with the seventh Vial, chap. 16. doth shew; for there are the same Thunderings, Hail, &c. in them both. Now we are yet but under the fourth Vial, and so, very far off from the last.

Yet I will add this, which may reconcile that Opinion of Mr. Brightman with this other, and haply serve in the closure of all, to give some small further hint about the Time of the last Vials fulfilling; and so, concerning the expiring of Times before mentioned.

As I said before, about the measuring the Temple, that the Angel might have an aim, both at that first laying the Foundation of True Churches, and also at this second Reformation now in hand, and take both in his view at once, they both being degrees of the same Work; yet so, as ultimately he looks unto the latter, as the special intendment of this Place, (though the other were in it self infinitely far the greater Work); so I conjecture that he might take in two Killings of these Witnesses, which should follow after, or (it may be) accompany both those Measurings; the one at, or after that Foundation laid, the other at, or upon the finishing to be begun, and so ordered, that the first should be a fore-going resemblance, of this other to succeed. Yet so, as his ultimate aim and scope still should be at a latter killing of them, which is yet to come.

I have observed it in many Instances which I could produce, That many Prophecies in Scripture have had two several gradual Accomplishments; whereof, both the one and the other, are intended by the Holy Ghost; yet so, as the latter is usually more eminently intended, and the first sometimes intended as a fore-going Type of that which is to follow. You may observe many Passages quoted out of the Prophets, and applied by the Apostles in the New Testament, unto the Times of the Gospel, as being then fulfilled; which yet had a gradual accomplishment under the Old Testament, in the Times after the Captivity of Babylon. So that the Holy Ghost aimed at both. Thus the 9th verse of the 1st Chapter of Isaiab is quoted by Paul, Rom. 9. and applied unto the Gospel-Times.

Yea, and you shall sometimes find the same Prophecy even under the Old Testament, fulfilled over and over; and so, to have two several intended Accomplishments. For instance, I will give one which some Learned Men have fallen upon, (though I find others do dissent from them in it). And I rather pitch upon it, because it is proper to the thing in hand: for it is made the Type of this measuring the Temple. It is that Prophecy of rebuilding the Temple after the seventy Years Captivity in Babylon. Which (as some think) had a double Accomplishment aimed at. And as there were two eminent Leadings into Captivity, the one of Jeconias, the other of Zedekias, when the City was destroyed; so (according to Learned Chronologers, and best Interpreters) I find a double Reckoning of the seventy Years, and of the Building again of the the Temple. Some reckoning from that Captivity of Jeconias, in the first Year of Nebuchadnezzar; some from that of Zedekiah, in the 19th Year of Nebuchadnezzar, (as the Jesuits, Sanctius and Ribera do affirm). I will not meddle with the Dispute about it; but that God kept a double Reckoning of that seventy Years, in respect to a double gradual Accomplishment, to me seems evident. For Ezekiel begins the Captivity from that carrying away of Jeconias, Ezek. 1. 2, 3. & chap. 11. 15. and the Prophet Jeremiah, in the 29th Chapter of his Prophecy, vers. 10. comforts those that were carried away with Jeconias, with this; that after seventy Years God will visit them, &c. Now one seventy Years was ended, when Cyrus gave leave to lay the Foundation of the Temple, as reckoning from the first Captivity. And yet after this, in Zechary's Time, when the Temple was to be again measured and finished, there is another seventy Years said to be ended; as the Time wherein this Temple, which hitherto had lain imperfect, was to be perfected. This you may see by Zech. 1. 12, and 16, compared. For there the final ending of the seventy Years, is made the Foundation of the last Work of perfecting the Temple, and God's returning in Mercy, according to his Promise, for to do it. So that, a double Captivity, and a double seventy Years, ending in a double Work, (the one of laying the Foundation, the other of finishing the Temple) seem to have been in the Holy Ghost's Eye.

Now why may it not be so, even in this also, That the Computation of the Beast's Reign, and the Church's coming out of Babylon, the killing of the Witnesses, and the measuring of the Temple, may have a double Accomplishment and expiration, and all intended; yet so, as the latter mainly aimed at.

The like Instance might be made of the Computation of another Period of Time and Prophecy fulfilled, (which because I may, in the closure of this 11th Chapter, have particular cause to mention, I will also instance in). It is that of Daniel, Chap. 12. 11. the things in which Chapter refer to the Times of the End, under the New Testament, (when is the Time of which the Angel tells him, that Knowledg should be encreased, &c.) And Daniel enquiring when these things should be, the Angel answers, From the Time that the daily Sacrifice (namely of the Jews) shall be taken away, and the Abomination that maketh desolate, set up; shall be 1290 Days. Now by History it is evident, that there hath been a double taking away of the Jewish Sacrifice under the Days of the New Testament, and a double setting up the Abomination of Desolation, (that is, Heathenish Idolatry). And so, a double Computation must needs be taken, of these 1290 Years.

When Vespasian and his Son Titus sacked Jerusalem, destroyed the Temple, and advanced Heathenish Idolatry in the room of it, then was one Time when both these things were evidently done, (both the Jewish Sacrifice taken away, and the Abomination that maketh desolate set up). And if from that Time we reckon 1290 Years; that first setting up Heathenism instead of the Jewish Worship, being in the Year after Christ's Birth, 69 or 70, they end in 1359, or 1360. When indeed, the first great encrease of Knowledg, and discovery of Antichrist began, under Wickliff, Thaulerus, &c. and a great diffusion of the Light of the Gospel amongst us Gentiles. But there was another, both ceasing of the daily Sacrifice, and setting up of Heathenish Idolatry by Julian the Apostate Emperor, about the Year 363, who both suppressed the Christian Religion, (typified out by the daily Sacrifice) after it had been set up by Christian Emperors, and also advanced Heathenish Worship. Yea, he did set up the Jewish Sacrifice again, which till his Time had ceased, and was then taken away, and never unto this day set up again. And it is observable, how special an Hand God hath had in binding the Jews from setting up their daily Sacrifice at Jerusalem again. The Turk, whom they live under, tollerates all other Religions, and theirs also in all other exercises of it, but suffers them not to live at Jerusalem, or to Sacrifice there; and yet permits the Christians to inhabit in it, and to possess the Sepulchre of the Lord, and to perform all Rites of their Religion; And though the Jews would give much more for the like kind of Liberty, to have that place to dwell in, and to Sacrifice there, yet it is prohibited them.

Now from either of these Times above-mentioned, may this Computation of 1290 Years be taken; the one respecting the blessed Times when the more clear Light of the Gospel, and the discovery of Antichrist, began to come among us Gentiles; the other those happy Times to come, when the Jews shall first be re-called, which some fix about the Year 1655, or 1656. And to two Accomplishments of those 1290 Years.

Now then, to return unto the thing in hand. Mr. Brightman, he reckons the beginning of Antichrist's Reign, and the Witnesses beginning to prophesy in Sack-cloth, from the Time of the Roman Emperors removing to Constantinople; which he interprets to be, that taking him that letted, out of the way, (as Paul to the Thessalonians hath it); namely, the Emperor; who being removed to Constantinople, and the Pope having Rome (ordained to be the Seat of the Beast) thus left him, he might soon begin to gain Power. And that indeed, from thence his first Conception did begin, may not be (nor is it by most) denied. And so Mr. Brightman from thence beginning the 1260 Years of the Witnesses prophesying in Sackcloth, (which falls 18 Years short, according to the Account he makes, after that of Egypt, and of our vulgar Account) makes the end of those Years to fall out in 1550. When the rising again of the Protestant Cause in Germany did begin. And thus in like manner the term of Antichrist's Kingdom or Power to do (namely, as formerly he had wont) might be reckoned to have had one kind of Period in the falling off of these Kingdoms of England, Scotland, &c. which fell out not many Years after this, even before 1560, (which Mr. Brightman (according to that his Series of Interpretation) interpreteth to be the seventh Trumpet; when the Kingdoms of the World became the Kingdoms of Jesus Christ) and so, before that settled Peace of the Gospel established, and the throwing of Antichrist and his Power out of those Kingdoms. In all which Kingdoms the Witnesses had first their Times of being overcome and killed for three Years and an half, though at several Times in each of them. So in Germany, in that Victory got over the Protestants, Anno 1547, (or thereabouts) just three Years and a half after which, they revived and enjoyed that Peace which since they have had.

In like manner, in England, after that, in Queen Mary's days, whose Reign, although it lasted five whole Years, yet the first part of her Reign was spent in making War upon the Witnesses, or (as I may so speak) in the Preparations of War against the Witnesses, in getting Statutes made for their Burning, &c. and the killing and martyring of them was but for three Years and an half. After which ended, they rose again in Queen Elizabeth's beginning to Reign, and have since that Time hitherto enjoyed, as it were, an Heaven.

Thus also in France, in the Year 1572, (which was 14 Years after) and about 1260 Years after Constantine, (according to our account of Years) the Massacre of the Protestants began, and in appearance; an extinction of the Religion (as they called it) for three Years and an half: When, An. 1576, their Peace and Liberty was again granted them, and they had a manifest Resurrection. Thus God observed a gradual fulfilling of this their Killing and Rising, as a shadow foregoing that great and last one to come.

But then there is another Computation of the beginning of Antichrist's Reign, (and of the Witnesses prophesying in Sack-cloth, in opposition to him) reckoning it from his Birth, and bringing forth into the World, (as that former was from the Time of his Conception) about an hundred Years after Constantine, in Anno 406, or 410, when not only the Roman Emperors were removed out of the way, unto Constantinople; but also the Western Empire it self began first to break into ten Kingdoms: Which is the truest and utmost Character of the Time of the Beast's rising, (as was shewed in our Exposition of the 17th Chapter). Which breaking the Western Empire, was that taking out of the way, which Paul especially aimed at. For then the Pope had full scope to get his Power, which these New Kingdoms were to give unto him. Which term of his (if the Reckoning be made, after the ordinary compute of Years) will end in 1666, or there-about.

Now as there is this other Computation of the Pope's Times, (beginning and ending) which falls out in this Century of Years now running on: So also in this same Century since the Year 1600, there hath answerably been begun another, or second measuring the Temple, as being to precede the expiration of this other Computation of the Witnesses prophesying, which is yet to come. And in like manner also there will follow another great and eminent slaughter of the Witnesses, and prevailing of the Beast over them, before this second Computation of his and their Time be ended; that is, before 1666.

S E C T. II.

The Allusion unto Christ's last Passion, in this last slaughter of the Witnesses, explained.

Thus much in General, for the Time of the Witnesses killing.

Now, 2. to come to the Thing it self. For the understanding of which, I shall also in the general premise this:

That this their last Killing, Rising, &c. is represented in an Allusion unto the Story of Christ's own Crucifying and Rising again. Which makes this the most remarkable of all former Sufferings, in that it is in an exact conformity to his Death, and to the Circumstances of it. In all other Passages of this Book, the Allusions are still to Stories of the Old Testament: But this (in a manner alone) alludes to that great and eminent Story of Christ's Passion and Resurrection, which are the Center of all, both in the Old and New Testament. And whereas all other Stories in the Old, are but Types of the Sufferings, and Resurrection of Christ; Here those Sufferings, and that Resurrection of his, are made the Pattern of these of the Witnesses; and that, not in respect of that general, common Conformity that is in all the Sufferings of all the Saints (for Christ and his Gospel) unto those of Christ, (as Paul speaks, Phil. 3. 10. and therefore calls them the after-sufferings of the Body of Christ, Col. 1. 24.) but this here is made such in some peculiar eminency and transcendency, above all Sufferings that have been formerly in any Age: And it being the last, it is in a singular manner set forth unto us thereby. Which may at once both provoke us to prepare for it, as Christ did, when he knew what he should suffer; and also comfort us against it, as being therein in a peculiar manner to be made conformable unto Christ: which will draw on with it, a peculiar conformity also in reigning with him in Glory.

Now that the Allusion here, is indeed unto the last Sufferings of Christ, &c. is acknowledged and observed by all Interpreters. And it appears in every Circumstance here related.

As for Example, in that, as he, after three Years and an half Preaching upon Earth, once finish'd (when that he had almost carried it in the Peoples Hearts; the World going after him) was yet in the end prevailed upon by his Enemies, and put to death by the Forreign Power of the City of Rome, having then Jurisdiction over Jerusalem, and for three Days did lie in their Power: So in like manner that these Witnesses, after three Years and an half (for that is the exact Compute of 1260 Days, or 42 Months) prophesying well-nigh expired; and now when they are about even to finish it, (having so mightily prevailed in the Peoples Hearts, that their Pharisean Enemies are afraid of utterly losing their Credit and Authority) that then these Pharisees again acknowledging the Forreign Power of Rome, should prevail over these Witnesses, and that so far, as by, and under the Authority and Jurisdiction of the Beast, and for his sake, should now at last kill them, and have them in their Power for three Years and an half (which do bear a like proportion to those 1260 Years, or Days, fore-passed, that Christ's three Days did to his three Years fore-passed.); their Enemies also also rejoicing, feasting; and sending Gifts for Joy that they had them thus down, and in their Power; (even as the Pharisees did at that their great Feast of the Passover, when they were (as they thought) rid of the torment which Christ's Ministry had put them to; and made it the joyfullest Feast and Passover that ere they kept.) After all which, that those Witnesses should notwithstanding rise again; (even as our Lord did) and rise with an Earth-quake (as He then did) and with an affright to their Enemies that see it, (as befel those Souldiers who saw His, as you may read in the Story of his Resurrection,) and after this, should ascend up to Heaven (as He then did); all this makes the Allusion here very full and observable. And because the Holy Ghost thus alluded unto Christ's Sufferings, therefore John by way of Parenthesis, puts in these Words (speaking of the Place where this Slaughter was to be) [in the City (says he) where our Lord also was crucified] ver. 8. That same [ὅπου καὶ] [where also] may have a double reference; it may as a Copulative relate to the former Cities unto which he had resembled it, (even Sodom and Egypt); in this Sense [and [that City also] where our Lord was crucified] that is, Jerusalem. And it may as well refer unto the Word [Crucified] in this Sense, where our Lord was before in like manner [crucified] there are these now in like manner to be [killed].

SECT. III.

That this killing of the Witnesses is to be executed by, and under the Power of the Beast of Rome: And so could not be meant of any of the former Persecutions in the Reformed Churches, which were from among themselves.

THUS much in General, for the Understanding this great Occurrence, which is yet to come in the Church.

Now more particularly, to explain some things about it (though it be a difficult thing to hit right in the understanding, and much more in applying the Circumstances of a Prophecy unto things to come, and which the Events do best interpret.)

I. Take notice, that the Power and Authority by which this Slaughter shall be made, is to be that of the Beast, or the Pope of Rome: and this, as having regained more or less Power in these Places where these Witnesses are. This is evident,

1. In that not so much their Enemies who are among them, and of the Reformed Religion with them, (that yet hate them) but the Beast that ascends out of the bottomless Pit, is said to kill them.

And, 2. In that he calls the Place where their dead Bodies lie, (and so, (by consequence) where this Slaughter is to be executed,) the City where our Lord was crucified. Which is not spoken of Jerusalem, but of Rome; that being here called the great City, which Chap. 17. ver. last, is called the City which then ruled over the Kings of the Earth: Which can be none but Rome. And to make this good, we are to know, that the Jurisdiction of the Roman Empire, was then in John's Time called the City: And therefore the whole World was called Orbis Romanus, the Roman World. (And in like manner now, all Kingdoms subjected to the Pope, are called the Church of Rome, as together making that great City.) And in that World the City of Rome was as the Regal Palace, from whence issued out Edicts and Commands over all. And in such a sense it is said [the City where Christ was crucified]; because it was the Roman Power and Authority by which he was put to Death, though it were done at Jerusalem (for thither did the Jurisdiction of Rome reach); and therefore Christ says, they should deliver him up unto the Gentiles, Mat. 20. 19. that is, the Romans, who then had trodden down that Holy City, and got the command of it; the Pharisees owning Cæsar for their King. And thus now for the killing these Witnesses, it must be, that the Beast of Rome shall shall again recover, so much owning and acknowledgment in the Places of the Reformation, (whether by secret combination, or by professed avouchment, God only knows); where the Witnesses are to be killed; so as, for his Sake, and at his Instigation, these Pharisees, either as joining with him, or else using the help of his Party, shall kill them. And so far must the Beast have a hand in it, that he may truly be said to do it; and that, in order to the further advancement of his Power in those Places.

And therefore, 3. The Place where their dead Bodies are said to lie, is said to be πλατεία πόλεως τῆς μεγάλης, The Street (the extension of the Jurisdiction) of the great City; as being within the Jurisdiction or Walls of it (as it were). You heard before, how that the Gentiles were to regain the Outward Court, and so it to become part of the City again, and within the extent of its Jurisdiction.

So that, however the Witnesses have had Enemies from among themselves, who have been (as those Pharisees were to Christ) of the same Nation and Religion, and yet have persecuted them from the first, even from the Times of the first Reformation downward (and therefore it hath been, that the faithful Witnesses have continued to prophesy in Sackcloth, and Mourning, even now in their last Days, when yet a Separation hath been made from Antichrist, because those among them still continued to oppress them): Yet none of all those Wars and Prevailings against them all that while, by those of their own, are this same War and killing of them here so eminently set out: For this must be by the Beast, even by their Enemies combining with the Papists, or using the help of the Beast, to join with them against the Witnesses; or (it may be) beginning again to submit to the Beast, in a more open and avowed manner (as those Pharisees did to Cæsar): And so, for his Sake, and to advance his Power, shall they kill those Witnesses, who indeed are only and alone, the greatest and most hearty withstanders of him, and that will stand it out against him. Or if when this is done, they do not so openly avow the Beast's Power; yet it may be said to be done by the Beast, if by a Party or Combination of Men that are for him, though not professedly; yet who in order to reduce his Power into those Churches, do raise this War against the Witnesses and oppress them. And that which may give Suspicion of this, is, because (as I shewed out of Chap. 13.) there is a Generation of Men set forth as the Beast's last Champions, who yet should not (at least at the first) so openly own his Name or Character, that yet receive the Number of his Name. And these are there reckoned his as truly as the other, as being they who should interdict buying and selling to the Beast's opposites, in order unto his Advancement. And they doing this in order unto the Beast and for him, the Beast therefore, and his Power may be said to do it.

But I fear that they shall proceed yet further, even to an open acknowledgment and professing the Pope's Power, (though perhaps not as infallible Head of the Church, yet as Universal Patriarch of the West) and so endeavouring to effect an Union and Reconciliation with him. For these Men (as was said) are to bring in but an Image of Popery (as it was of Heathenism) especially at first, though with intent to introduce more. And with this doth that Speech of the Angel, in his Oath, in Dan. 12. 7. accord (which, as I said, this Angel here came to renew and interpret); That when He (namely this Beast) shall have accomplished (namely with this last killing) to scatter the Power of the Holy People, &c.

That which I here cite this for, is, that it must be he, and his Power that must do it. And in that the Gentiles are here said to obtain the Outward Court, ver. 1. so as to tread it down with the rest of the Holy City; this would argue a prevailing of them, so far as to gain a subjection from carnal Protestants, by reason of which it shall be, that even the Beast's Power as entertained, and owned by the most, may be said to kill them. And likewise the Allusion here to Christ's Suffering, by the Power that then Rome had in Jerusalem, the Holy City, would argue this also: That even as then, a Governor, or President, from Rome, (namely Pilat) lay at Jerusalem, and was in the Name and Power of Rome, the Author of Christ's Crucifying; so, at least, that Rome should now in like manner have her Legats, that should have power, in these places, to procure the Deposition and Death of these Witnesses. That so, as God ordained Jerusalem the City where Christ was Crucified (unto which the Allusion here is made) to be the Slaughter-house of all the Prophets, (insomuch that Christ said, It was not possible that a Prophet should perish but in Jerusalem; and therefore it was, that himself was so secure, that he should not be killed until he came thither): So, that Rome is in like manner ordained to have a hand in the Deaths of all the Witnesses, (though others may persecute them too). And so this last and great Slaughter and Martyrdom of them shall be executed by her. That so when at her downfall she comes to be reckoned with, it may be said (as it is in Chap. 18. vers. ult.) that in her was found the Blood of the Prophets, and of the Saints, and of all that were slain upon the Earth. And therefore, until the Romish Flag be advanced upon the Walls of the Outward Court of this Temple; reckon not this Time of the Witnesses three Years and an half to be come. But when you see that Abomination of Desolation begun to be set up, then flee into the Mountains, (as Christ in another Case speaks).

SECT. IV.

The Time of the Beast's enjoying this full Victory but three Years and an half. The Time of obtaining it, and of killing the Witnesses, may be longer.

FOR the Time of the continuance of this Slaughter. Whereas there is here mentioned the Beast's making War against them, and overcoming and killing them, than when they are about to finish their Testimony, (that is, towards the Time of the end of it) and then their lying dead for three Days and an half: We must herein warily take heed we mistake not this only mentioned Time of three Years and an half, as if that were all the Time allotted for this last War against them, victory over them, and slaughter of them: No, it is not said they should be overcoming and killing them only so long Time; but that these Witnesses should lie dead no longer, after a full Victory obtained, and Slaughter once made. So that that War against them, and killing of them, may be much longer in execution, than for three Days and an half only. And indeed, how long that shall continue afore these three Years and a half begin, we know not. The Gentiles have already been a long while a besieging and making War against the Temple, and have not as yet prevailed: It is not yet come to an overcoming of so much as the Outward Court; that Out-work is not yet fully enough gained: (for the winning of the Outward Court, I account part of this their making War against the Witnesses). But how long soever this War may prove, and how far soever it may be lengthened out, yet when it comes to a compleat Victory once, then (for our comfort) we are sure, that the Time of the Witnesses lying dead shall be but for three Years and an half, until their rising, or beginning to rise again. And as in a great Eclipse of the Moon, the Time whilst all or most of its Body is darkned, and whilst that Eclipse is in its fulness, useth especially to be set down and taken notice of by Astronomers, and that Time is especially accounted the Time of the Eclipse, and not so much the Time when it begins to lose, or after that to recover some light: So is it here in this great and last hour of Darkness which the Church is to have; wherein the Time of its total Eclipse is only reckoned. The Pharisees were long a laying their Plots against Christ, and consulting how to ruin him, but at the last prevailed only for three Days. And thus all hitherto done, is but the War in order to this Conquest; the Enemies are as yet but a taking the Out-works, and making their Approaches, &c.

3. For this Time here mentioned of their lying dead; it is but for three Years and an half, which is here called three Days and an half; whereby three Natural Days, consisting of 24 Hours, cannot be meant. For how shall the noise of this full Victory be carried to Nations and Tongues, (who are said to see their dead Bodies, partly in that respect, of having the news of it)? And how shall the

the whole Roman Party universally rejoice, and send Gifts one to another to congratulate this Victory? These three Days therefore and an half, in which they are to lie dead, are such as those 1260 Days (formerly mentioned) were; even Prophetical Days, taken according to the Stile of the Prophets, namely; Days for Years. And such a three Years and an half had Jerusalem the Holy City under Antiochus, when the Temple was polluted, and the daily Sacrifice (God's true Worship) taken away, and Heathenish Idolatry (which there, and still elsewhere, in Daniel, is called, The Abomination that maketh desolate) set up; And when those that were the most eminent for Godliness; did fall by the Sword, and by Captivity (as you have it, Dan. 11. 31, 32, 33, &c.) for many Days. But the last Persecution of his Reign, was for three Years and an half, as in the 1st of Machab. 1. from vers. 30, to chap. 6. you have it recorded. But in the 11th Chapter of Daniel, where this Antiochus is prophesied of, he is in this made the Type of Antichrist; and therefore after that the Prophet had thus set forth and ended that his Tyranny, at vers. 35 of that Chapter, he begins, vers. 36. to set out the Pope and his Tyranny unto the end of the Chapter: So passing from the Type to the Anti-Type, even as Christ doth, in the 24th of Matthew, from the Story of the destruction of Jerusalem, to that of the end of the World, because that was a Type of it. And therefore it is, that Daniel useth this Transition, vers. 35. of that 11th Chapter, when he had ended Antiochus's Story. That there remains yet a Time ordained, (so Graserus and others read it); that is, yet another Series of the Fates to be related, whereof this was the Type: and so he passeth on to describe Antichrist (who is that King mentioned vers. 36.) unto the end of that Chapter; whose Ruin and End, he says, should be, after ill Tidings to him out of the North (that is; the Reformation of Religion in these Northern Countries) had so enraged him, as to cause him to go forth in fury, at his last endeavouring utterly to root out, &c. And in which Expedition he should so far prevail, as to plant his Tabernacle on the glorious Holy Mountain; that is, to over-run the Church. Which indeed, I take to be all one with this last War, and killing the Witnesses here (for it is there just afore his end too) for three Years and an half; whereof that last prevailing over the Jews by Antiochus, was the Type. And such a like time (as I said before) had the Pharisees over Christ, even three Days; which Christ calls the Hour of Darkness; even as this is thought to be that Hour of Temptation to come over the whole Christian World, Rev. 3. 10. The Enemies indeed think to have the Day of it, but they shall have only the Hour of it: This great and fearful Eclipse, in the fulness of it, shall last no longer; this is their Hour.

And such a like space of Time is used in Scripture, to express a short Time: as Hosea 6. 2. After two Days he will revive us, and in the third Day raise us up, &c.

Again, such a like Time had Julian over the Church, when he had again set up Heathenism. Some say his Reign was three Years long (though others say less). And so hath God ordered it, (for the like Holy Ends) that as Heathenism had a prevailing again in the World, (before it was utterly extirpated) For that small Time in Julian's Reign, (and this, even after that Christianity had been set up forty Years before, by the Imperial Power of Constantine): So that Popery (the Image of it) should in like manner expire, and after a glorious Reformation made by Kingly Power, and casting out of Popery in many States, that it should yet have a prevailing over those Churches, or the eminentest of them once again, before its final and utter extirpation.

SECT. V.

The sharpness and the extent of this Victory, how great; whether unto Death natural, or Martyrdom, discussed.

Concerning the sharpness of this Victory, of the Beast, and of the Popish Party, how far it shall extend: As,

I. Whether unto Blood, or to Martyrdom, and to death Natural of the Witnesses; and whether this killing here be meant of such a kind?

I find some who interpret all done to them to be meant of a Civil Death, not a Natural; that is, a killing them, considered as Witnesses, not as Men; that is, a taking away all Power from them, of prophesying as they had wont; a general silencing of Ministers, and deposing Magistrates and Men of worth, that profess and uphold Religion, putting them from their Places, shutting their Shops, burning their Books, &c. And for this, makes,

1. That their Death, and lying dead here, is but correspondent to their Resurrection. Now their Resurrection is not from a Natural Death, and therefore such not their killing.

2. That their Bodies, when dead, are said to lie in the Street of the great City for three days and an half; and after that, a Spirit of Life to come into those dead Bodies. Now that cannot be meant of naturally dead Men: for their Bodies cannot be supposed to have lain naturally dead so long above-ground. And then, in that the Spirit of Life is said to enter into those Bodies that were dead; and in that it must be supposed, that those lay dead, who are first here said to be killed: All this would seem to carry it to the very same individual Persons that were killed, that they should rise. Which to suppose of a Natural Resurrection, before the Day of Christ, we have no warrant, nor any ground for.

And accordingly they interpret that following Passage; That those of the Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds, suffer them not to be put in Graves; as that which may be construed and taken in the better part; as shewing what should hinder their Enemies from killing them out-right, namely, that there was a Party of Protestants in the Nations about them, that should hinder their Enemies from martyring and utterly extinguishing them, and should preserve them above-ground for a reviving; even as Men whom we think not dead, but in a Swound, we use to keep out of the Grave, and not bury them, because we hope they may revive again. And so these Protestants, that the Cause may again prevail, they may preserve the Persons. And this the rather appears the Intendment here; In that these of the Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds, seem to be a diverse and distinct Company from the Enemies of the Witnesses. For of their Enemies, that is said which follows in the next verse; And those that dwell on the Earth, rejoiced over them, &c. As if the Angel went about to describe the differing Spirits of the two sorts of Men, of whom he speaks, towards these Witnesses: The one (whom he calls those of Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds) as Friends doing them this kind Office, as not to suffer their Bodies to be put in Graves: But the other (whom as diverse from these, he calls under a new Phrase, Those that dwell on the Earth) as Enemies rejoicing over them. Which makes this suffering of the Witnesses herein alone to differ from Christ's (unto which, in all other Circumstances, the Allusion holds) that Christ was really killed, and therefore buried: But these, though killed as Witnesses, yet are not suffered to be buried; as noting out a keeping them from an Extinction, or an utter taking them out of the way, though by their Enemies they be suppressed. And it may be, that as Christ foretold his Resurrection the third Day, and so, it was commonly known and bruited, that even the Pharisees had knowledge of it, and said unto Pilate, This Deceiver said, he would rise the third Day; which they laughed at as a vain Dream: So it may be, this very Notion of such a prevailing of the Popish Party for three Years and an half, which hath been so long and so much spoken of in the Church, shall be so commonly known, (as already it begins to be) that for that very Cause, these Friends of theirs may so far interpose, as to hinder the utter extinction, or the Burial of them, wholly underground (as it were), as hoping that this Notion given out of their Resurrection, after three Years and an half, may prove true, as the Disciples hoped of Christ's Resurrection all the while that he lay in the Grave.

And whereas it may be thought, that because the Holy Ghost singeth out this one last Killing, and instanceth in it alone, above all those other that have fore-gone it throughout the Beast's whole Reign, (although he hath made many Wars against, and Slaughters of the Witnesses in former Times); that therefore this should be the worst and sharpest; their Answer hereunto is, That this killing of them here, is thus particularly and alone mentioned, in another respect; namely, as it is the Signal of the Pope's Ruin: and so, that this argues not the foreness of this their last Killing above any foregoing. This is that which useth to be said for this Opinion. But for my part, I think it cannot be denied, but that,

1. This lying Dead here of these Witnesses, must needs be Metaphorically meant, and understood of such a Civil Death, and of a suppression of them and their Cause, and, as they are Witnesses, to be so put down and extinguish'd, that they, for a Time, remain as Men laid forth by the Walls for dead, and as Men in whose Testimony there is in appearance no Life, or likely-hood of a Revival, their Enemies having now got such a Power over them. This is certainly made the great Matter of their Enemies rejoicing; that as the Pharisees they had Christ sure enough when they got him condemned and crucified, and had him in the Grave: so these their Enemies shall think they have the Witnesses down sure enough for ever; so great, desperate, and helpless in all view, will the suppression of the Witnesses by these their Enemies be. And this was principally intended, in their being said to lie dead. And oppositely, the revival of them and their Cause, is set forth by a Resurrection from the Dead.

And to this purpose there may be something in that Phrase in Daniel, when the Angel, speaking (as I take it) of this last War of the Beast, says, He shall accomplish to scatter the Power of the Holy People; as noting out rather the dissolving their Power as Witnesses, than killing them as Men. So that what-ever Proceedings the Power of their Enemies may reach unto, further to kill or martyr the Natural Bodies of these Witnesses; yet this is the Thing eminently held forth in this Metaphorical Expression, and therein eminently intended. That the Cause and Testimony of these Witnesses should be as desperate and hopeless, without any appearance of Life. And the Holy Ghost would have us take notice, that their Enemies prevailing should so far reach.

But yet withal (in the second place) I am notwithstanding afraid, lest that so great a Victory over them, and suppression of them as Witnesses, should also be followed with great effusion of Blood, and with martyring many of them. And although this their lying dead, and rising again, be metaphorically meant and intended, to set out the desperateness of their Cause and Testimony, and so, to illustrate that glorious Revival of theirs afterward: yet those other foregoing words, [He shall make War against them, overcome them, and kill them] may import further Proceedings, by which they got this compleat Victory. I confess I am afraid of those many Metaphors; lest this same Killing mentioned after Overcoming, should not be meant really and properly of some further Cruelty in Enemies so malicious, when they have got the Power in their own Hands. For if the intent of that word [Killing] were to express their suppression only as Witnesses, that word [Overcoming] had then been sufficient to import it. Sure I am, in the 13th Chapter, (where the rage and utmost cruelty which the Beast should at any time, through his whole Reign, exercise against the Saints, is so prophesied of) all that cruelty of their Enemies, which proceeded to so great Slaughters of them, is expressed in the same words that here, [and it was given him to [make War] against the Saints, and to [overcome] them], vers. 7. And yet under those two Expressions (whereas here are Three [Killing] being added) are contained all those bloody Executions and Butcherings of the Saints, by Martyrdom and Death; which afterwards, in the 10th Verse of that Chapter, is more fully expressed, when it is said, He that [kills] with the Sword, must.

PART II.

must be [killed] by the Sword; as shewing the Cause and Manner of the Beast's bloody Fall and Ruin in the end, and what it is that should provoke God and Man unto it; even their butchering of the Saints. And although Antichrist's Power is in general there set out, as it should be in his Height and Ruff, and during the whole Time of his Reign, as getting Power over all Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds, and here only his last particular War against the Witnesses is described, (which should immediately forego his Ruin); yet it follows not, that this Expression here should not be of the same Nature and Kind, and import the same Cruelty and manner of prevailing that is there intended. For notwithstanding that the Issue of the last particular War, is the fatal and utter Ruin of the Beast; yet that hinders not, but that he may first recover again the like Power, and exercise the like Cruelty over these Witnesses for this small space, which he had done in former Ages, when he obtained Power so long to continue over them. Yea, it may be feared, by that Dirge of her own Funeral Song, which her self at last makes, in the 17th Chapter, vers. 7, 8. that she shall recover her ancient Power again, or at least entertain certain Hopes and Expectations of it, through her prevailing over some (and those of the chief) of her lost Kingdoms. For there you may read that (when the next day (as it were) she is to be burnt for a Witch, and a Whore) she saith in her Heart, and sings, I sit as a Queen, and am no Widdow, and shall see no Sorrow. Which is spoken of her present Condition just before her Fall; for it follows, [therefore shall her Plagues come in one day, and she shall be utterly burnt with Fire; for strong is the Lord who judgeth her]. All which implies, that as her destruction should be suddain, and in the midst of her rejoicing; so that she shall have got such Power and Footing again, as that God's Omnipotent Power must be put forth in that her so suddain and-unexpected Ruin after all this.

There is the like intimated in that mention of the Beast's recovery of his Power, in Daniel, Chap. 11. vers. ult. where it is added, [Yet] he shall come to his end; as importing the greatness of that Work, and the utter unlikelyhood of it, now when he shall have gained his Power so settledly again. That [yet] comes in there, as that [yet] in the 2d Psalm does; [Yet] I have set my King on my Holy Hill of Sion, maugre all the Opposition and Rage of the Gentiles and Pharisees; though they have so far prevailed as to crucify him; Yet I have set my Son as King on Sion, and raised up him and his Cause again to prevail.

And I therefore encline to think, that that Song of the Whore, mentioned vers. 7. of the 17th Chapter, is uttered by her as during this her merry Time at last; when she and her Friends rejoice so, and make merry during these three Years and an half, (vers. 10. of this 11th Chapter); when suddainly after it she is to be ruined. Yea, I believe, that the Cruelties, which upon this recovery of her Power, she may now at last exercise (according to her manner in former Ages) may be the means to revive the Memory of all her former Slaughters, and so to provoke God and Men, as for this her last Blood-shed to bring upon her the Blood of all the Prophets and Martyrs before shed, even as the Blood of Christ at last brought upon the Jews the Blood of all from Abel, to provoke God to ruin Jerusalem. That as the Ten Tribes were enraged against the Benjamites, with eagerness to root them out, because of their great Victory at first got over themselves: So may the Protestant Party be whetted on by these fresh killings of the Saints (which may revive the memory of all the former, otherwise apt to be forgotten) to do execution upon these their Enemies without all Mercy. And so shall be fulfilled what is said, chap. 13. He that killeth with the Sword, must be killed by the Sword: They shall reward her, as she had rewarded them just before, as chap. 17. vers. 6.

And whereas it is alledged; That this being but one particular War against the Witnesses, why should it be alone mentioned at last as some way peculiar, if it were such as Antichrist had commonly made upon the Saints all his former Days, which are mentioned chap. 13? The Angel would not have recorded it thus alone by it self, if it had not been a different War from those former ones which the Beast made against these Witnesses.

The

The Answer is ; That it follows not that this is not such a kind of War and prevailing as formerly Antichrist had. For this (though such as the former) is thus particularly and alone mentioned, meerly for this respect, because it is the last of them all, and so, as a Signal to shew the Time of Antichrist's ending, and to make known the wonderful dealing of God, both with his Church and with his Enemies ; that after so great Victory by it obtained against the Beast, he should notwithstanding thus prevail over it again, and have power to do for this space of Time, even as in former Ages ; when thinking himself as secure as ever, that then he should for ever be overthrown ; the Wonder of this deserved to be made a Sign, and that this War of all other should particularly be instanced in.

Then again, add to this, that it is that last, great, and eminent Suffering of the Church, (namely, of the European Churches) ; and therefore it of all others, may be ordained to be the forest. These Witnesses do now die to rise, and so to die no more, (as Christ did not after his Resurrection, Rom. 6.) but to enter into their Glory, as Christ also did. I have observed, that those last Afflictions, which are the immediate Fore-runners of the greatest Happiness and Good, are still the sharpest. So it was with Christ himself ; so with all Christians in their last conflict with Death, the King of Fears, who yet is the Porter to let them into Heaven ; and so it is with the Church in her Persecutions. The Egyptian Bondage was forest at the last. And (says Paul) God hath set forth us Apostles [last] as it were appointed unto Death, 1 Cor. 4. 9. alluding to those Gladiators or Fencers in the Roman Games, the last of whom (there being three sorts that used to come upon the Stage) were appointed not to go off, but to fight it out till they were killed, (they being ordinarily either Slaves, or else Malefactors). The greatest Persecution that ever the Church had under Heathenish Rome, was that last one under Dioclesian, and the fifth Seal. And therefore all the former Martyrdoms of the Saints by that State, during the Times of the former Seals, do, with a general cry of their Blood, come but then in, when-as that the cruellest of all the former was come. And yet that was not the last neither, of those Persecutions that the Church ever was to have : For it is there told those Saints, that they had other Brethren yet to be killed : But here these Witnesses are to Rise, and die no more ; For as they died, as Christ did ; so they shall rise, as Christ did.

Yea, and further ; you may observe, that this is now mentioned not only alone, and above all other Conquests over the Saints ; but also as the very Epitome of all their former Sufferings during the whole Time of the Witnesses Prophecy. And therefore in the very Time of the duration hereof, (namely, three Days and a half) it is set forth as bearing the proportion of a Compendium of the whole Time of their Propheying and Suffering, which was for three Years and an half, or 1260 Days. As in like manner Christ's Sufferings (unto which the Allusion here is) were all summoned up in his Death ; which is therefore put for all his Sufferings. When therefore it came to a [My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me ?] then he was heard and delivered from what he feared. And so in this last brunt of the Church, when you shall hear the like Voice uttered by it ; know then, that Delivery is near.

We may also further consider, that now the Beast hath been so chased by these Witnesses propheying, and hath had so many Vials emptied upon him and his Company ; they will thereby be so enraged, when once they shall get the Victory and Power into their Hands, that surely in their Rage they will be cruel, (as was said of Reuben). And the Angel in Daniel, Chap. 11. 44. expressly attributes this his last Invasion of the Churches unto his Rage for their opposing him by this Northern Reformation, (which in these Kingdoms hath been the occasion of it). Therefore (says he) he shall go forth with great Fury to destroy, and utterly to make away many. So that, nothing but Blood and Cruelty will be in their Hearts. And therefore if God restrain not their Spirits, or cut them short by an Almighty Work of his Power, this last must needs come to be far the forest of all former Persecutions.

PART II.

Add unto this, that in chap. 17. vers. 6. the Whore (the City of Rome) is presented as she shall be just before her Ruin; and this, as drunk with the Blood of the Saints. Which unto me seems to argue, that Drunkennes now at last shall be added to that her thirst of Blood, which by her being scorched with Fire by these Witnesses, hath been encreased. I know it may be said, that it is spoken of her in relation to her former Bloody Martyrings of the Saints. But that Vision being made of her, as just afore her Fall: for vers. 1. John says, That one of the seven Angels of the Vials (and as it is conjectured by Interpreters, the Fifth, because he it is that pours out his Vial upon the Seat of the Beast, the Whore) shewed him the Judgment of the Great Whore, with whom the Kings of the Earth have committed Fornication, &c. that is, in so many Ages fore-passed. So that he presented her in her old and last Days; and that then she appears so drunk, makes me fear, that it is by reason she was new come out from her Cups of Blood; and that now at last, (after these Years for her to sleep in) some fresh Cup, some new Draught shall make her tipsy again, that so she may be surpris'd, Somno Vinoque sepulta, buried in Sleep and Drunkennes, (as Babylon was); which will be the greater Judgment and Confusion unto her.

But yet, whether it shall be thus, or no, I dare not, nor cannot certainly and peremptorily determine. For on the other side, how God may restrain their Wrath, and cut short their Spirits, (as the Psalmist speaks) we know not. Yea, notwithstanding all their Rage, Malice, and Spirit of Revenge, yet how far their own Wisdom and Policy may move them of themselves to forbear the full execution of that Vigour, which their Power gives them opportunity of, we know not. For when their Victory is gotten, they may use it more moderately; especially in a respect to that Protestant Party, which though outwardly overcome by them, yet they cannot but in their Hearts and Consciences continue firm unto the Cause of these Witnesses. The Light of the Gospel hath took such a deep impression on Men's Spirits, as it cannot be extinguish'd, nor they be brought so suddainly to embrace Popery as the Truth. And as the Pharisees, for fear of the People, forbear many Attempts against Christ, so may these for fear of these Tongues, Kindreds, and Nations, here mentioned, (which are in Heart inclined to the Protestant Cause) forbear the extremity of their Rage, though for the present they have the Power; especially considering, that they may wait for, and promise to themselves, some after-Age and Time when their Power shall more perfectly be recovered and settled, and Men's Consciences quieted in Popish Ways, and when the Adverse Protestant Party shall be brought low and diminished. And so they may come to forbear and defer their full Revenge so long, until this limited and short Time of their full Power (namely, their three Years and an half) be expired, and out of Date sooner than they dream'd of. Which may prevent and hinder the execution of their cruel Intentions to destroy and utterly make away many. And we have experience of the Wisdom of this Generation of Men, who love easy and gradual Conquests. And their own experience hath and doth teach them, that the martyring and butchering of the Saints, hath still advanced the Cause of the Protestant Religion, and branded theirs with Blood and Cruelty, as a Mark of the False and Whorish Church. And though they be full of Malice, which puts them on to use the utmost extremity; yet their Wisdom having some further mischievous end, may keep down the rage of that their malice; even as in Julian the Apostate (who sinned against the Holy Ghost) it did. For he seeing that Martyrdoms did tend rather to add unto and encrease the Church, than to diminish it; and knowing that Martyrdom would procure to those that suffered it, a fairer Crown of Glory: Out of Envy therefore, and a witty Malice, he would make no Edicts for the killing of the Christians, but rather used ways of Subtilty, by laying Snares and Temptations to draw Men from the Truth, and to shipwreck their Consciences; and so with his prophane Hands to paddle in the Blood of their Souls, (a sweeter Victory to him) rather than of their Bodies, and to triumph over them in their Falls from the Truth, rather than in their Deaths. And to that end he invented another way to mischief and diminish them, by denying them Schools of Learning, and the use of Books, and suffered none of the Christians to bear any Office, either in War or Peace.

Moreover, there may be insinuated some mitigation of this Rage of these Gentiles in the pursuing this their last Victory, in that which follows the fore-cited Place in Daniel; where although it be said, that he shall go forth in such Fury and Rage, and with an intent to root out many; yet all his prevailing is in the Issue and Success expressed but by this, that he shall plant his Tabernacle upon the Glorious Holy Mountain. Which may imply, that although his Intention is utterly to destroy; yet for the execution of it, no more shall be done, than getting a possession again in the Church, and a planting his Tabernacle, his Power and Throne therein; which is therefore called a Tabernacle, because it must presently be pulled down again.

The Event only must declare how far this prevailing shall succeed. In the mean Time, we have cause to fear, and to prepare for the worst; both from the Sins of the Witnesses in yielding too far unto the Superstitions of Rome, and in suffering some of those Superstitions to be left in their Churches, by the overflowing of the Romish Sea, (as we see much filth useth to be left on the Shore by the overflowing of the Ocean) and from many other Sins of theirs, as Carnal-Gospelling, Worldly-mindedness, &c. and also from their base yielding up the Outward Court, and deserting the Cause. For (as the Angel in Daniel says) many among them shall do wickedly.

Now to conclude this Point; That whereto my last and utmost Thoughts and hopes concerning this Matter do chiefly encline and sway me, is, to think, that it will be but such a Time with the Church, as that under Julian was; and that haply that Persecution of his, was a kind of Type of this: That being the last prevailing of Heathenism, as this of Popery. Julian abstained from extremity of Cruelty, in respect of Blood, especially at the first: but having the Power in his Hands, he endeavoured, by crafty means, to undo and extinguish Religion, by denying the Christians the use of Schools of Literature and Books, &c. (as I before told you) and rather shewed his Malice, in flouting and jeering of them, than in killing them; and studied Snares for their Consciences, setting up his own Image with the Idols of the Heathen Gods round about it, in the Forum or Market-place, that so in doing reverence to his Image, they might seem to reverence the Gods, and refusing to bow towards these False Gods, they might be accused, as denying reverence to the Emperor. Which course, in the end, was the cause of much Blood-shed, though by no Publick Edict of his made, (as formerly by other Emperors). And the People knowing his hate unto the Christians, they fell upon them in diverse Parts of the Empire, and persecuted them even unto Death.

Now for this Prevailing to come, I think that through many Temptations and Snares laid, together with Cruelties inflicted, it may prove worse than Death and Martyrdom it self. And it may perhaps be eminently rather an Hour of Temptation and Trial, than of the blackness and darkness of Martyrdom unto the generality of Believers; though haply accompanied with the Martyrdom of many; and therefore the Gentiles are also said to kill these Witnesses. These Times are like to be (as Paul to Timothy hath it, 2 Epist. 3. 1.) καὶ ἐν καιροῖς, difficult Times, rather than Bloody Times, (the Apostle there speaking of the last Days, as in his first Epistle, chap. 4. vers. 1. he speaks of the latter Days of Popery). And these are called Difficult Times, because of the cunning and subtilty that shall be used to ensnare Men, and the Temptations laid for them; and yet they may be stained with much Blood also.

Yet so, as however this we may be sure of, that many shall survive this War, and only be made white and tried, (as it is in Daniel). Which is the rather to be hoped, because so suddain a Resurrection of so great a Multitude, as chap. 19. 1. are mentioned, who shall possess that glorious State of a Church described in that Chapter, from vers. 1, to 10, after that three Years and a half once ended; is not likely to arise meerly out of a Succession of New Converts; but is probably to be made up of the same Persons surviving, and out-riding that great Storm.

SECT. VI.

Of that Concomitant of the Witnesses Killing. The Nations seeing their dead Bodies, and not suffering them to be put in Graves. Several Senses given of it : Whether taken as an Office of Favour, or an Injury. And whether to be understood of Friends, or Enemies, discussed.

Now for that particular Clause that follows, That those of the Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds, should see their dead Bodies lie, and not suffer them to be put in Graves, (which is interpreted in a way of Favour to the Witnesses); Although I think their lying Dead to be meant in a Metaphorical and Allusive Sense; yet it is exceeding doubtful unto me, whether or no this Clause be not to be taken in malam partem, in the worser sense; as rather expressing inhumanity by this Metaphor, than Kindness and Love. And this seems to me to be the meaning of it; (whether those of the Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds, be taken for Friends or for Enemies) and so to have been here added, further to represent unto us the extream Misery, and desperate Calamity, into which these Witnesses shall be brought, in this their Time of Trial.

1. If these Nations, &c. be meant of Enemies; this Phrase [they saw and suffered not, &c.] doth imply their feeding their Eyes with this sight, and making it a spectacle of delight and joy unto them. For to see or view a thing, (when the Sights are of this nature) is in such a sense used in Scripture: and implies that the Thing seen is made a Spectacle and Gazing-stock; and in the Seers and Beholders, it imports Derision and Triumph. Thus in Christ's Sufferings (unto which the Allusion is) they are said to come out to see him, and to mock at him. And Psal. 22. 8. All they that [see] me do mock at me, (says the Prophet there in Christ's Name). And in the 109th Psalm, vers. 24. They [saw] me (says Christ there (for of him is that Psalms made) and shaked their Heads, &c.

And thus seeing is usually mentioned in this Sense, when any Judgment is executed, to shew how the opposite Party comes forth, and sees it, and rejoiceth at it. Thus when Judgments are executed on the Wicked, the Righteous shall [see] and laugh at him, Psal. 52. 6. So Isa. 66. vers. ult. They shall [look] upon the Carcasses of them that have transgressed against God; which shall become an abhorring unto all Flesh.

And so that other Phrase that follows [and they shall not suffer them to be put in Graves] may also import a height of inhumanity. For, Psal. 29. 4. when that like miserable desolation of the Temple, and Slaughter of the Saints (be it either that of Antiochus, (the Type of this) as some think it meant) or that of the Babylonish Captivity, as others) this Aggravation is there added unto their Slaughter, that there was none to bury them. Yea, and that here it should rather be taken in such a bad sense, appears by this, That their Killing being an Allusion unto Christ's Passion, this Circumstance is therefore mentioned, as heightning this Suffering of the Witnesses above that of Christ's, in this respect. For though his laying in the Grave, (as endured by him) is accounted a part of his Humiliation; yet it is noted as a Work of Humanity in Pilate, to suffer his Body to be taken down from the Cross, and laid in a Grave; and especially in Joseph of Arimathea, who begg'd it to that end, and afterward honourably entombed it. This was an Office of the greatest Charity (and therefore recorded); which this Prophecy notes out as that which should be wanting in these Nations and Tongues here, whether they be Friends or Enemies.

And, 2. if they be taken for Friends unto these Witnesses, and as such among those Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds, as are in heart of the same Religion with them, and who do in Heart respect and love them, (as the People did Christ); the Query then will be, Whether this their not suffering them to be buried, be a friendly Office? I confess indeed, they seem to be some distinct Company from those their Enemies, who do so rejoice over them, vers. 14. and some special Company also of the Nations, and Tongues, and Kindreds. For it is not said, that [all] Nations, Kindreds, and Tongues, &c. (as in the 13th Chapter, when Popery was in its first height undiscovered, it is said, that Antichrist had power over [all] Nations and Tongues, &c.) Nor is it said [The Nations], &c. but [they] of the Nations, or [some of the Nations] [ἐν ταῖς λαοῖς, καὶ φυλαῖς, καὶ γλώσσῃς, καὶ ἔθνεσιν, &c.] and not [all] in those Kindreds, and Peoples, and Nations, among whom these Witnesses are. And so the Phrase of Speech serves fitly to note out a contradistinct, special Party, or Company; even the Protestant Party, who are not in all Nations; neither are they all universally Protestants in those Nations where the Gospel is preached and professed. But only some Nations are Protestant, and but some in, and of those Nations; And so the mention of them here may come in to shew what part they should play in this Tragedy.

For this killing the Witnesses, falling out in an Age, when so many among the Nations, do in Heart still continue of the same Religion with the Witnesses; the enquiry would be, What will they do? Will they endure it when it shall come to such extremity? Will they not put to their hand to help the Witnesses of their own Religion? No, (says the Angel here) they shall see their Dead Bodies, and not suffer them to be put in Graves.

I. It is said, They shall see their dead Bodies lie in the Street; or publick Marketplace, (as the word may also signify). Which their so publick lying in such a Place, notes out the greatest scorn put upon them by their Enemies, that may be. And yet these behold them as Friends that have no heart to help them, and so will not once stir to relieve them; but like standers-by, and meer lookers-on, are shie, and list not to intermeddle in their killing, one way nor other. They stand aloof off, as Men use to do from Malefactors Executed, although they be Friends and Well-willers to them; or as Men that pass by, and go on the other side of the Street, when they see a dead Carcass lying before them. Thus the Phrase [seeing them] is also used in Scripture, and particularly in this Book. For thus when the Wheel is turned about, and after this, Rome's turn comes to be burnt, her Friends, the Kings of the Earth, that shall in Heart still cleave unto her, are described as standers aloof off, and Spectators that [see] her Smoke, (as Abraham did the Smoke of Sodom): So chap. 17. 9, 10. and 18. And thus it may be, These of the Peoples, Kindreds, Tongues, and Nations, who have taken part with these Witnesses formerly, shall now not dare to do it, but stand afar off (as it were) and pass by and see them kill'd, and not have Hearts to help them. This the Phrase [seeing them] may import.

Or further, it may be said, that Those of the Peoples, Kindreds, &c. should see them, in that these Witnesses should be driven out among those Peoples, Nations, &c. and should fly unto them for refuge and help.

And so (in the second Place) that which follows, may come in as a further degree of inhumanity, which these their false Friends should shew to them, which shall be added unto the Indignities put upon them by their Enemies, so to make the calamity and distress of these Witnesses the more compleat. Namely, that these their Friends, of the Protestant Party, should be so far overcome and prevailed upon by the Power and Dread of the Papists, that they shall deny these Witnesses all help and shelter which they shall seek for, and all those common Offices of Friendship and Humanity which might be expected from them. Those that are Friends, use to bury the dead Bodies of those whose Lives they could not rescue out of the Hands of their Common Enemies; but these here shall be so far from helping the Witnesses, that they shall not suffer them to be buried among them, or to be laid in Graves; which are here metaphorically put for Resting-places, where they might be sheltered from the shame, contempt, and indignities imposed on them by their insulting Enemies, who now were compleat Victors over them.

And thus the Allusion herein may be unto the Sufferings of Christ, who though he had a great Party of the People for him, crying, Hosanna in the Highest; yet those very Jews were so far prevailed upon by the Pharisees, (when they once had Christ down in their Power) as to cry with the rest, Crucify him, Crucify him, and to run out in Troops to see him executed. So Luke 23. 35.

PART II.

The People (says the Evangelist) stood beholding him, and the Rulers also with them derided him. The People that before had rejoiced in his Ministry, now take part with the Pharisees his Enemies. And even so (it is to be feared) shall the Protestant Party, over-awed with the Power and Tyranny of Rome, (which shall have Power to tread down them also) comply with her against the Witnesses; though not so far as to have their Hands in their Blood. Yet so far, as not to suffer them to be put in Graves, and to be harboured amongst them, or by them; so far as thus Negatively to be against the Witnesses, as not to shew any office of Kindness in relieving them.

And so this their inhumanity is, after the manner of Men (who use to perform this as a common Office of Humanity, to put dead Men's Bodies into Graves) expressed unto us by this contrary carriage of theirs, that they suffered not their Bodies to be put in Graves; A Metaphorical Speech it is.

And particularly; the Allusion here is made unto the putting the Carkasses of dead Men into Graves; which (you know) is an honour and a shelter to them; and indeed, all the Office of Kindness that lies in the Power of Friends to afford them. And so kindness unto Men in that dead Condition, is by this here fitly expressed. Now therefore when these Witnesses are deposed from their Station, and haply banish'd from forth the Nation in which they lived, (which haply is their Death here meant) and cast forth with the highest Contempt, and persecuted with the greatest Malice of their Enemies; and shall come to those of other Peoples, Nations, and Tongues, (who are of their own Religion and Party) for succor and shelter from these Indignities and base Usages from their Enemies, so to find rest to themselves, (who are now, in respect of that active Life of witnessing by Prophecy, laid by the Walls speechless, and as Dead) and to have only a harbour among them (which unto those that are among Strangers of another Language, is but of the Nature of a Grave) and a Place of rest, (where, at best, they cannot so much be said to Live, as to lie still in quiet as Men dead); when they shall seek but thus much, and shall not obtain it, these Nations and Kindreds who refuse it them, may justly be said, not to suffer their dead Bodies to be laid in Graves: Which yet to perform for them, were but a common favour of Humanity, and by the Law of Nations to be imparted unto banish'd Strangers, especially to those of their own Religion. And we see it hath hitherto been allowed the Witnesses flying out of England, by the Low-Countries, and to the Protestants flying out of Germany, by the English. And so in Queen Mary's Days, the English Professors found Graves at least; some at Geneva, some in Germany, and others elsewhere; where they lay quietly enjoying their Consciences, though put by that active Life of Prophecy, which before that they lived in, and enjoyed in King Edward's Reign. But now such shall be the surpassing misery of these three last Years and a half, above what in former Times, and so potent the prevalency of the Popish Faction, and such their Vigilancy to stop all Holes of Refuge, against these Witnesses, that they seeking only for Graves among these States of their own Party and Religion (which formerly they had permitted them) shall yet be refused it by these Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds, who shall so inhumanely be carried on against their own Principles, as not to suffer them to have such Graves among them, namely, a condition of Harbour, Rest, and Quiet.

And further; Because this shall be done with a Prohibition to the contrary; therefore it is thus expressed, That they suffered not their dead Bodies to be laid in Graves; that is, by Edicts prohibiting any of the banish'd Witnesses to have harbour among them. And although this Phrase [putting their dead Bodies in Graves] may seem improper to express oppressed Men's flying for shelter, because [to be put in a Grave] is a Passive Phrase in respect of them that are dead, and imports a thing done by others; we must therefore still remember, that this is a Metaphorical Speech, and so a Civil Death, and civilly lying dead, are here to be understood. For these Witnesses (many of them) are not to be killed with a Death Natural; as they are Men, but with a Civil Death, as they are Witnesses; and so, may seek for shelter as Men, when they are dead as Witnesses; which shelter in this Allusion, is called a Grave. And because dead Men cannot bury themselves, therefore (according to the Metaphor of Men dead) the Holy Ghost expresseth their seeking a place of Rest, by their being put into Graves: So, passively expressing it: For how else (speaking of them under the Notion of dead Men) could it be express? It is but τὸ πρέπον Figuræ; the Decorum of following the Metaphor taken up, requir'd this, and no other kind of Expression. The like unto which, is usual in Scripture Phrase, and in all other Languages. Which putting the Witnesses into Graves (in this sense taken) these their Friends shall yet not suffer or permit.

And thus, as it may be mentioned, to note out the inhumanity and cowardise of their Friends; so withal, the great misery and desperate calamity of the Church in this their last being subdued; which will prove worse than ever any before it, in that now they shall have no Sanctuary, no safe retiring Place to rest in throughout all Europe; which shall in this respect universally become the Jurisdiction of the Great City, (so some interpret that word [πλατεία] Street). It shall not now be, as at other times it hath been, that when they were persecuted in one City, they might flee to another, and there have quiet and safety. But the Jurisdiction of the Popish Party shall so far now prevail in Protestant States, (if any such remain) as they shall not dare to receive and protect the oppressed Witnesses, seeking a refuge and a harbour amongst them, but shall rather prohibit them so doing. Which in this Allusion is spoken, in opposition unto that Humanity and Charity in Joseph of Arimathea, who honourably laid Christ's Body in a Grave, when yet he had not power to hinder his crucifying.

And that even the Protestant Party may turn thus inhumane towards the Witnesses, the unfaithful carriage of many Protestant States towards their Neighbours and Brethren, now whilst this War is but begun against the Witnesses, may give us cause to fear and suspect.

How hath the Lutheran Party in Germany, complied and took part with the Popish for the ruin of the Calvinists? And it were happy for other States, professing the Calvin Religion, if they could wash their hands of the Blood of the Churches, not only not assisted, but even betrayed by them.

Thus I have proposed another different Interpretation from that formerly given, by way of mitigation of this Extremity; yet leaving both it and the other unto the Event to determine, and to the Reader to judge of.

SECT. VII.

Of the Universality of this Slaughter. Whether reaching to all Churches Reformed, and in them, to all Professors, or only to eminent Witnesses. That some one may be more eminently designed. What is meant by the Street of the City, &c.

THe next Query may be concerning the Generality or Universality of the extent of this Slaughter; How far it may reach. As,

1. Whether to all sorts of Professors of Religion, or whether to eminent Persons in the Church only.

Now for that; It may seem principally to be of Witnesses; that is, those that are eminently such. It is probable, that the purest and best Professors will be singled out to a Duel or single Combat, as it were. The Gentiles before this, had the Outward Court of Carnal Professors more easily given up unto them; but among these truly Godly Ones, they find serious and stiff Opposers, that will never be brought to yield unto them. And this the Popish Party themselves do both see and find; namely, that the Godly of the Protestants are their only real Enemies, and those who still put the great Bars and Impeachments to their Plots; and that are the great Stakes in the Hedg of the Church, which stand in the Gap against their Irruptions. And these are they, who only by their Lives and Profession, do torment the ungodly, (as you have it, vers. 14.) who there-therefore rejoice for their Victory over them. And therefore this is not like to be a Massacre of all sorts of Professors at large (as was that in Paris, Anno 1572.) but a particular Combat, and set Battel against the sincere Witnesses only: Whom their Enemies have been taught to know and distinguish from others, by the Fire they have shot into their Consciences, as vers. 5. Thus in Antiochus his three Years and an half (the Type of this) the Persecution fell especially upon those that were Teachers and Instructors of others. So Dan. 11. 35. And thus will this do.

Only let me add this; That these Witnesses being the Golden Candlesticks also, (as may seem by vers. 4.) therefore a scattering of them (namely, of the purer Churches) will be joined with it. And if their Olive Trees be felled and removed, if their Prophets and Rulers be scattered, themselves then must needs be scattered. [Smite the Shepherd, and the Sheep will be scattered] as Christ spake of himself and his Disciples; which smiting of his there, (namely at his Passion) is here alluded unto.

But a second Query may be; Whether this Killing will be over all the Reformed Churches, and so generally of the Witnesses in all Protestant States and Kingdoms? Graserus, a judicious Lutheran Divine, thinks that it will be Universal; and that this is the Angel's very scope here, thus particularly to design out this last Killing, as herein differing from all other former Ones, that it should at once be a general and total Eclipse of True Churches for three Years and an half. And so (says he) Quod hæcenus per partes impleri nunquam desit, jam plenariè & universaliter perficietur: that is, That Persecution which in some place or other hath never ceased, and so by parts hath been fulfilled, at several Times, that shall now at once more fully and universally be accomplish'd. And I must confess, that the treading down the Outward Court, and the Sins of all Churches, so great and so general in all, do universally threaten this. And it may be part of the drift of that Speech which we have explained, that those of the Peoples, Kindreds, Tongues, and Nations, should see their dead Bodies lie in the Street (or Jurisdiction) of the Great City; as importing, that generally, in all those Nations where Witnesses are to be found, they shall be killed; and so, by that means, they should all have opportunity to view and see their dead Bodies.

This I deny not, but think it may be the Event, more or less. Yet however, I believe, That some one Kingdom or State, will more eminently be made, Sedes Belli, the Field of this Battel, the Shambles of this Slaughter.

And one Reason hereof is, Because where the Witnesses rise from this their dead Condition, there is an Earth-quake joined with it, which shakes the tenth part of the City; that is, (as I take it, and shall afterwards give my Reason for it) one of those ten European Kingdoms, that have given up their Power unto the Beast, shall now in this Slaughter begin to fall from, and cease to be a part of the City, or to belong to the Jurisdiction of Rome any longer; under which, for the space of these three Years and an half, it had been. Now, that falling away of the Tenth Kingdom, being joined with these Witnesses rising again, it would argue, that Accident of the Earthquake to fall out for the especial help and furtherance of the Witnesses rising, who are in, or do belong unto that Kingdom, or tenth part of the City. Some one particular State or Kingdom shall assist the Witnesses in it in their Rising and Ascending into Heaven; and shall revenge their Slaughter, by killing 7000 Names of Men, who were their Enemies, and had been Executioners of them in their fore-passed Slaughter. Now if their Resurrection and Ascension be in some one part of the ten Kingdoms made more eminently glorious, and so, the special Priviledg of the Witnesses belonging unto that tenth Part; then one would think, that the killing or slaughter of them should also be in that tenth part of the City more conspicuous than in the rest. For in this suffering, whereof Christ's Passion is propounded the Type, those that suffer most with him, shall rise and enter into this their Glory spoken of; which is to be answerably proportioned to their Suffering. If therefore the Glory that follows, seems to be more peculiar to one tenth Part; the suffering fore-going it would also seem to have been more peculiar peculiar to that tenth part likewise, and the main shock of the Storm to have fallen there: though haply all the Heavens may be covered with black, and all Churches feel some drops and sprinklings of it.

Chap. 6.

It hath also somewhat moved me, that the Place where they are said to lie dead, is called πλατεία, [the Street] not [Streets] of the Great City, as noting out some one eminent Place or Street of that City, or some State belonging to the Jurisdiction of Rome: so comparing the Jurisdiction and Power of Rome through and over all Europe, unto a City, and the Kingdoms and States of it, unto several Streets. And so some one State or Kingdom is this same πλατεία τῆς πόλεως, this same Street of that City. I know what Criticks say, That this is, Numerus Singularis pro Plurali, [Street] for [Streets]. But the Elegancy of the Allusion seems better made up, by taking it for some one place of the City, by this Slaughter, made the Market-place, and (as it were) the Shambles therein, more eminently than the rest of the Streets.

And thus also that former Interpretation (of [those of the Peoples, Kindreds, &c.] (they being taken as meant of the Protestant Party of other Nations round about) and their [Seeing, &c.] to be their knowing and taking notice of this Slaughter, as standers-by, aloof off; and their [not suffering them to be put in Graves] to be their prohibiting them a Sanctuary and Resting-place among them, when they fled unto them for help); that Interpretation (I say) is made more clear by this, That the Slaughter falling more eminently upon some one Part, or Kingdom, the rest of the Kingdoms and Nations about it, do deny them of that Kingdom shelter, and a Grave to hide their Heads in, when from thence they flee unto them, and seek it at their Hands.

And if in this last Combat, the Witnesses be singled out as the one Party, and by Witnesses be meant only such faithful Christians and Professors, as do, in respect of their Godliness and Sincerity, hold forth an eminent Testimony and Witness, above that which others of the croud of common Professors do, and so not Men of Learning, but of Holiness and Zeal, are they who are here said to be the real Tormenters of these their Enemies: then surely in that Part of the Reformed Churches, where such Witnesses are chiefly found, who do continue eminently to hold forth such a kind of powerful Testimony as Hol. Men (for this is a Testimony of Holiness, not of Learning) their Fore-fathers (who were killed before them for the same Cause) have done; surely there especially will be the Seat of this War, and the Field where this Combat is to be fought.

Now then, look generally over (almost) all the Reformed Churches; and how few of such Witnesses, with difference from the common Croud, do appear amongst them; the Fire, the Heat of those Godly Men, their first Reformers (which is the thing that should torment these Enemies at last) being gone, and the Light only remaining; which gives but a faint, cold, and dull Testimony, and which these Enemies do therefore despise. Only in the Witnesses of Great Britain, both the Light and Heat of Religion have been kept up and encreased; and among them only hath the Profession of the Power of Godliness been continued, with difference from the croud of common Professors. And (according to what appears in view) more of such True Witnesses now in these last Days, (wherein this Slaughter is to fall out) are to be found in it, and belonging unto it, than in all the Reformed Churches besides; and that, according to the Testimony which they of those Churches (who in these Times of Scattering have come hither for Refuge) have, and do give.

And surely, the Place of this killing the Witnesses, must be where most Witnesses are. And so, that Kingdom may be designed more than any other; as in which also more eminently are found those last sort of Champions for the Beast, who receive only the Number of his Name; who yet shall be the chief Executioners of this last Slaughter, and who are to be overcome last of all the Beast's Company, before the fifth Vial on the Seat of the Beast, as chap. 15. tells us.

Add unto this, this Conjecture upon Dan. 11. ult. which Chapter, from vers. 36. hath Grasius excellently, and Mr. Mede, in his Discourse of Demons, upon upon 1 Tim. 4. 1, 2. applyed unto the Pope; who is that King there mentioned; and whom Antiochus (whose Story is contained in the former Part of the Chapter) typified out. But the larger Interpretation and Application of all from vers. 36. I leave to be fetch'd from them; and shall only mention my own Conjecture (as supposing their Interpretation good) upon the last Verses, unto the Purpose in hand. It is evident, that the Angel's scope there, is, (as I find others to acknowledg) to shew the issue of the Beast's last Expedition against the Reformed Churches, after their Reformation, and before his End; and so to denote out this last War here prophesied of, namely, Antichrist his accomplishing to scatter the Power of the Holy People, (as before hath been at large related).

Now when he shall go forth in this his last War, in such Fury and Rage, with a purpose utterly to destroy; the main Event and Issue of that Expedition of his, is made to be this, That he shall plant the Tabernacles of his Palace between the Seas, in the glorious Holy Mountains: Yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him, vers. ult.

The Allusion in that Phrase [the Holy Mountain] is to that of Sion, where the Temple stood; which therefore in the usual Phrase of the Prophets, is often put to express the true Church; which is the Mountain of the Lord. This Mount, and the Temple thereon, was erected in Europe by the Northern Reformation mentioned vers. 44. which he shall prevail against, and tread down, and place the Tents of his Throne upon it (or some part of it) again. This Alstedius, and others, acknowledg to be the meaning of the place. And so, it agrees with what this Angel (who came here to expound what he had told Daniel) affirms, That the Outward Court, now at last, was to be given up unto the Gentiles.

That which to Graserus occasioned the greatest puzzle in the Interpretation of this Verse, was this phrase which is added, to describe the situation of this Mountain, [inter Maria] [between the Seas] that there the Pope should at last replant his Ancient Throne; He stands wondering, why to the mention of Mount Sion, (which nakedly (says he) without this addition, had been enough) there should be subjoined [between the Seas]; which (says he) hath puzzled all Interpreters. For Sion stood not between two Seas. And therefore (says he) those words must be added by way of difference and distinction from the Holy Mountain: By the Type and Name of which, the Angel had yet expressed the State of the Church. And if his scope had been thereby to set forth the Church Universally throughout Europe; then the bare mention of the Holy Mountain, (as chap. 14. 1. it is expressed by) had been sufficient, and suitable enough unto so general a scope. But it being with this addition of difference concerning the situation, that it was [between the Seas] or [among the Seas]; it therefore must more particularly design out some Church or People of God, whose Place and Habitation is for the Situation of it, thus between the Seas, and thereby singled out from the rest.

Luther, He makes it to point out Rome, (which is the Seat of the Beast) which stands in Italy, between the Adriatique and the Tirbene Seas. But his Ancient Seat (Rome) cannot be here meant; for, vers. 44. he is said to go forth, as from that his old Seat; and to plant, as noting out this to be a new-gained Seat, which was not the ordinary Place of his Residence, as Rome is.

Graserus gives a touch, that Germany may be intended, as that Place which should again be subdued unto the Pope, as lying between the Baltick and the German Oceans; which it does but very remotely; and only the Northern Parts of it, being bounded with, and touching upon those Seas.

But I rather fear, that these British Islands are here intended; in that they so eminently, above all other Places of the Churches Reformed, and with difference also from all others, do stand between the Seas, even wholly among Seas; [Penitus toto divisos Orbe Britannos] which Islands likewise God hath made the eminent Seat of the Church in these latter Days; and which he hath loved above all the Habitations of Jacob.

And

And in that the Angel there calls this Mountain, in an high and transcendent Phrase, yet of further difference, [the Mountain of Delights of Holiness] or as Junius turns it, [Mons Decoris Sancti] [the Mountain of holy Comeliness]; it seems in some way of peculiarity from others, even in that respect also, to note out a Place, which for Holiness should more eminently be God's Delight, and comely in his Eyes; where he should have a most Holy People, and which he should make a Land of Uprightness, where his Majesty and Glory should more eminently shine. Which place, notwithstanding, (for the Tryal of the Witnesses in it) God shall again give up unto the Power of Antichrist, there to plant the Tabernacle of his Palace, or Throne, (or his Clergy, as Graferus reads it); even as Nebuchadnezzar did his Throne at Taph-hannes, when he had conquered Egypt, as a sign of that his Victory. By the Conquest of which Kingdoms, and regaining them unto him, he shall seem so rooted in his Ancient Power, that in hope of all the rest, the Whore shall sing, I am now no Widow, and that, just before her fall. And yet this prevailing, is but a preparation to Antichrist's Ruin: For it follows, there in Daniel, Yet he shall come to his End, and none shall help him. Which notes out, as that this is to be done just before his End; so also, that that regaining his Power should seem so to strengthen him, that he should be, as it were, out of the danger of Ruin, and as for ever secure.

But this his suddain Victory, is but as the planting of a Tent, or Tabernacle, in a Field, not to stand past three Years and a half, though that Party, and their Abettors, do in their Hopes think they build for Eternity. But it being of Man's, not God's planting, it shall therefore come to nothing; for every Plant which the Father plants not, shall be rooted up.

C H A P. VII.

The Rising of the Witnesses ; from Vers. 11. to the 15th of Chap. 11.

S E C T. I.

Three Things in General observed. Christ's Resurrection the Pattern of this. The Proportions between their Killing and Rising. This Resurrection a Shadow of that to come.

I Come now to their Rising again, and to those Events which do accompany it.

Three Things in the general I observe about it.

I. That the particular Circumstances of it, are like to those in Christ's Resurrection and Ascension ; this Rising of theirs being an Allusion to that Resurrection of his, (as was before said) ; and Christ Mystical being in these last Days, when his visible Kingdom approacheth, more eminently to be made conformable unto Christ Personal, both in his Death and Resurrection, the last of his Acts done on Earth before that his Kingdom then. Yea, and (for our comfort) although there are some evident Characters of likeness to that his last Passion, mentioned in this their Killing here : Yet there are more apparent ones of a conformity unto his Resurrection, in this their Rising again. The several Particulars whereof, will arise to our observation in the Explication. This but in the General.

II. That God hath so recorded the more eminent Circumstances of this their Resurrection, that they do, as it were, answer unto those more eminent Circumstances noted in their Killing ; and this, as it were, a Reward suited and proportioned unto the debasement in the other. For,

1. Then they are said to be killed ; and, now a Spirit of [Life] is said to come into them.

2. Then they are said to lie dead in the Street ; and now they are said to stand upon their Feet.

3. Then these their Enemies, or False-hearted Friends, are said to see them, either as rejoicing over them, or at least-wise as not helping them : but now at their Resurrection, it is twice noted and indigitated, that their Enemies saw them, and that, both when they Arose and Ascended. So vers. 11, 12. both which Acts are done in the very Face of their Enemies, the more to spight and vex them. Yea, and (as Pareus observes) the Greek word for [See] is here changed ; for as there it imported, that they then saw them with pleasure, so here it intimates, that they now behold them with horror.

4. Then their Enemies rejoiced over them, but now great Fear is said to fall upon their Enemies who beheld them.

5. Then they were exposed to such contempt, that their Bodies were not suffered to be buried (which is a degree of Humiliation beyond Death ; but now instead of this, they have therefore a farther degree of Glory put upon them, beyond restoring to Life. A Voice calls them up to Heaven, and they ascend, that is, to a far more glorious Condition than they had before.

And,

And, 6. Their Enemies are now killed in their stead ; as being sacrificed unto them, for their killing them before seven thousand of their Enemies were slain, vers. 13.

And all this is but to make the Parallel of their Resurrection and Ascension, unto that of Christ, the more full. For so it was in Christ ; the lower he Descended, he higher he Ascended, Ephes. 4. 9. Now that he ascended, what is it but that also he first descended into the lower parts of the Earth? And (as Dr. Ames hath well observed) the degrees of his Exaltation were answerably opposite to the degrees of his Humiliation ; his rising from the Dead, being opposed to his Death ; and his ascension into Heaven, to his descent into the Grave, and going down to Hell, (or into the State of Death) ; and his sitting at God's right Hand, to his remaining in the Grave, and in the Estate of Death.

The Third Thing which in General I observe, is, That in this their Resurrection, there is a fore-running Shadow of that last great Victory, which brings in the Kingdom of Christ, and of his Saints, for the Thousand Years. Of the glorious beginning whereof, under the seventh Trumpet ensuing, vers. 15. this is ordained to be the Dawning.

But the Particulars thereof I shall observe, when I have dispatch'd the Particular Interpretation. It is enough now, in General to have observed it.

S E C T. II.

The several Steps and Degrees of their Resurrection and Ascension.

I. THe first step of their Resurrection, is the entring of the Spirit of Life from God into them ; even as in Christ's Resurrection, the coming of his Soul into his Body, was the Principle of that his future Life. And such a Principle this same [Spirit] of Life here imports. And so here in this Allusion, it notes out their full restoring to their former State ; even to that Life and Power which at any time before their Killing they had had. This Resurrection here is not to be understood of the Resurrection of their Natural Bodies ; which is not to begin till the thousand Years, (yet 'tis the Resemblance and Shadow of it) ; but it shall be a Rising of the Persons of these Witnesses who shall survive this short Storm, or of their Successors standing up in their Cause. That whereas they were laid as Men utterly dead, during these three Years and a half, in respect of any active Life of Prophecy ; and partly, it may be, through the discouragements and base Fears of their own Spirits, they lay too still and quiet, (like dead Men) and suffered their Enemies to carry it, by their not opposing them so boldly as they ought to have done : Yet now, a bold and steeled Resolution, to lie still no longer, together with an active Spirit, comes upon them, and they stand up upon their Feet, and make Head against their Enemies, and so, in that Sense, are said to rise again from the Dead, as it were, namely comparatively, to their dejected Estate during those three Years and an half. And as for those who were bodily slain by their Enemies the Gentiles, during that War and Slaughter ; They may be said to rise in their Successors, who continue to profess the same Cause. For the Saints are a Holy Nation, and Community, and what the next Succession doth, through the Prayers or Sufferings of a former Generation, that former Generation is said to do ; as Isa. 58. 12. and so John Baptist rose up in the Spirit of Elias ; and when Christ preached, they thought John was risen from the Dead. And this Spirit of Life is said to be from God, ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ, as noting out a more than ordinary Hand of God therein, and a special demonstration of his Power, such as he put forth, when he raised up Jesus Christ from the Dead, as Ephes. 1. 18, 19. and Rom. 1. 4. If in any thing

PART II. Christ was declared the Son of God with Power, it was in his Resurrection from the Dead. And such a Power shall raise up these Witnesses.

II. They stand upon their Feet : that is,

1. As in their former Station or State.
2. As Men erect, and taking Heart, their Cause being just, though before condemned.

And, 3. as ready to defend it, and as Men able and resolved now to confront their Enemies ; which strikes a mighty dread into their guilty Consciences. [Great fear fell upon them that saw them] ; that is, a disheartnedness and dejection of Mind. Their Hearts begin to sink and die, at the Witnesses first beginning to live : For they see this Prophecy, beyond all expectation, fulfilled, that (as Christ foretold he should rise again the third Day, so (it being generally foretold) that) these Witnesses should rise after three Years and an half ; which they (as these Pharisees) had slighted : But now (think they) surely the Ruin, both of us, and of our Cause, will follow. So the Hearts of Human's Friends misgave them, when they saw him begin to fall before Mordecai. And now may the Church well begin to say, Rejoice not against me, O mine Enemy ; when I fall and lie in the Street, I shall arise : — Then she that is mine Enemy shall see it, and shame shall cover her ; — and she shall be troden down as Mire in the Streets, (never to rise again) as you have it Mic. 7. 8, 10.

Or (it may be) this great Fear that is here said to fall upon them that saw them, is meant of those standers-by of the Peoples, Kindreds, Tongues, and Nations, that had before seen their dead Bodies, but relieved them not, though they were Friends unto them. Upon whom therefore this great Fear and Reverence of God and his Truth in these Witnesses doth fall, so as now to take part with them, and be on their side ; being moved thereunto by the marvellous Spirit of Life, and zealous Courage, which God (according to the Prophecy which before run of them) did now cause to come upon them. The word [θεοφῆν] implies, a fixed diligent observance and intention of mind ; such as, upon seeing a wonderful Work of God, we use to have. They see the Finger of God in this, and that makes them to fear and dread his Power and Majesty. For in that sense we often find in Scripture, that upon some great and eminent Deliverance, or Work of an Almighty and Divine Power put forth, Fear is said to fall upon the Beholders ; so Jer. 33. 9. and elsewhere.

III. As Christ Ascended up to Heaven in a Cloud ; so also these being called up to Heaven by a great Voice from thence, saying, Come up hither. Where, by Heaven, the Place into which they are called, is meant, a condition more honourable and glorious than ever they had before, and which, comparatively to their former estate, is a Heaven. For now they are about to cast off their Sackcloth for ever. And again, as Christ rose, to die no more, Rom. 6. 9. so shall these ; they shall die no more, (as Men that ascend to Heaven do not). And thus, as Christ said of himself, Luke 24. 26. It became him to suffer, and so to enter into his Glory : so it may be said of these. So that, by Heaven here, is not simply meant the Church, (as often in this Book it is) : For these that rise, are of the True Church already, and were so even when they lay dead : But it is meant of their following Condition, which for Liberty and Honour shall be as a Church in Heaven, in comparison to what it was before ; which was but as a Church on Earth.

Thus [Ascending into Heaven] is used to express an obtaining of new Power, Freedom, and Glory, as Isa. 14. 12, 13. And this is done in recompence of that Contempt which they lay in before, especially just before, when they lay Dead. And indeed (as I take it) the dawning of the Glory of the New Heaven, and New Earth approaching, begins first in this Glorious Condition, which the Church after this Rising of the Witnesses, shall within a while be raised up unto, and quietly enjoy, (as those in Heaven do) whose State is described, Chap. 19. I saw a great Multitude in Heaven, &c. Of which hereafter. And thus much of their Resurrection and Ascension it self.

S E C T. III.

The Events that accompany their Resurrection.

NOW further; As there were certain Events which accompanied Christ's Resurrection; so the like do accompany theirs. When Christ arose, there was an Earth-quake, which affrighted the Souldiers that watch'd him; and so was there here likewise, as vers. 13.

Now to explain what is here to be understood by this Earthquake.

1. For the Time of it; it is said to be at the same Hour, namely, with this their Resurrection, or beginning to rise; and so may seem to be mentioned as one of the Means which did make way for, and facilitate this their Rising, by removing the Impediments of it, and, as it were, rolling the Stone away, that so these Witnesses might rise from under the Power of their Enemies; which former obtained Power of theirs, this Earth-quake doth scatter and dissolve.

Now whereas their Resurrection and Ascension, are both together mentioned in vers. 11, and 12; and then, after both comes in the mention of this Earthquake, vers. 13. [There was the same hour, &c.] Yet (as I take it) this follows not, that all of them (Resurrection, Ascension, and Earth-quake) were at the same Time, or Hour, together: For their Resurrection and Ascension are two distinct Degrees of their Exaltation, (as in Christ they were) and therefore may not so immediately follow one after the other (as in Christ they did not; his Ascension being forty Days after his Resurrection); and yet they are both recorded and set together, because they are Things of a kind and sort; as pertaining both of them unto the Exaltation of the Witnesses. So that, for this Passage that follows, vers. 13. that there was an Earthquake the same Hour; It may perhaps not refer to the Time of both (namely, their Rising and Ascension) but unto the beginning of the Time of their first Rising, as an Occurrence that fell out the same Hour when this great Turn began; or rather indeed, as the Way and Means God first used to remove Impediments, for the setting free of these Witnesses, and restoring them unto their former State and Life.

2. For the Thing it self, and the Place where this Earthquake shall be, and what shall be the Effects of it: This is expressed in what follows; The tenth part of the City fall; and of the Names of Men were slain 7000. Great Earthquakes have oft-times shook down Cities and Buildings, &c. and many Men have often perished by them. And such shall be the Effects of this here.

S E C T. IV.

The Fall of the tenth Part of the City. What? Whether thereby be meant the Ruin of Rome, (the Fifth Vial)?

BUT the main Question is; What is meant by [the tenth part of the City] and what by [the Names of Men]?

Mr. Mede thinks, that by the tenth part of the City, is meant Rome it self, and its Ruin, by the fall of that tenth part: As being that which shall fall out immediately upon, or at the same Hour with this Rising and Ascending of the Witnesses; and so to be all one with the fifth Vial. And his Reason is, because this being an overthrow of the Popish Party, who are the Enemies of these Witnesses, (for the Beast kills them) it must therefore be reduced to one of the Vials: and to which of them, but to the Fifth? for four are mentioned before, in vers. 5, 6, 7. and the Sixth seems to be all one with that which follows, vers. 14. when it is said, The second Woe is past : and then the seventh Vial is all one with the seventh Trumpet. And this Interpretation he thus makes out.

Rome, which now is the Seat of the Beast, being but the tenth part of Ancient and Imperial Rome, (as History and Chorography tells us.) the scope therefore of the Angel here must be, to shew how that Relique of Rome before brought to a tenth part, by the former Wars and Trumpets, chap. 8, & 9. should now wholly and for ever be defaced and overthrown. And so (accordingly) the Names of Men that are said to be slain, he makes to be those Dignities, (happily, Ecclesiastical Dignities, says he) whereby Men are ranked in Italy whilst Rome stands, as Cardinals, Arch-Bishops, Bishops, &c. the Merchants who in Italy have enjoyed so great Traffique, by reason of this Whore's Merchandise, these are together, with the Fall of the City, to be deposed, and civilly to die (as the Witnesses before had done) this Seat of the Beast now falling into the Protestants Hands. (An Interpretation, learned, and ingenious).

But that which hath carried my Thoughts to some other distinct Event from this, (though this ultimately may be intended) hath been the Observation of that so different Effect, mentioned vers. 13. as wrought upon the Hearts of the Remnant of those (and so of the same Company with them) that are slain with the fall of the City, in this Earthquake; together with that other contrary Effect, which the full and fatal Ruin of the Seat of the Beast (under the fifth Vial) is said to have upon the Remnant of the Beast's Company there, as the Event of that Vial. Here the Remnant of Men that are not Slain, are said to be affrighted, and to give Glory to the God of Heaven; but there, upon the execution of that fifth Vial, in the height of it, it is said, They gnawed their Tongues for pain, and blasphemed the God of Heaven, because of their Torments, and their Sores; and repented them not of their Deeds; so chap. 16. 10, 11. Now if we interpret this, their giving Glory to God, here in this Chapter, in the lowest and most diminishing sense that can be supposed, and as not arising to true Repentance; yet at least it implies an acknowledgment of God to his praise, (such as Achan made) though happily forced, and out of fear constrained; and if it be so taken, yet it is utterly opposite to blaspheming the God of Heaven, which these other feeling his Hand, (upon the Ruin of Rome) are said to do: This Remnant here (chap. 11.) being such as were, through fear, drawn in to be of the Popish Party, and therefore do now repent.

So that, it rather seems to me to be some special Occurrence, more nearly and properly belonging unto the Witnesses Rising and Ascension, as immediately making way unto them both, in those Parts of Europe, where the Witnesses had chiefly been killed; where, for the helping forward their Resurrection, God causeth this Earthquake, and mighty Commotion of the State of Things, and of the Peoples Hearts. That whereas through a forced Consent and yielding, the Popes Power had again been entertained by that tenth Part of the City, for the Killing the Witnesses; they now do cast off that Power, with a mighty Commotion and Insurrection, and so proceed to ruin the Opposite Party unto the Witnesses, who were the Instruments of that former Slaughter. Of which Party, the Remnant unslain do, as Men affrighted, give Glory unto God, and turn back again to embrace the Truth, and acknowledg God to be in these Witnesses, and in their Cause.

So that, although this may, and shall end in the Ruin of Rome, (which is the highest Effect of the fifth Vial) (for this Resurrection and Ascension of the Witnesses, are truly the preparation unto it); yet this other Passage of the Earthquake, &c. that here is said to be the same Hour with their Rising, is rather to be understood of the Means, or Thing, making way unto that their Resurrection. So that, this Insurrection, or Rising of the People in the tenth Part of the City, (which is meant by the Earthquake) is the preparation unto their Resurrection, which ends in the Ruin of Rome. The Scope of the Holy Ghost here, being to shew, what did properly and peculiarly concern the Rising of the Witnesses, as the Means to it. Yet so, as still this Earthquake here, and fall of the tenth part of the City, are reducible unto that fifth Vial, as a degree unto it. And so, that fifth Vial may also be ultimately intended in this Passage

Passage recorded of the Witnesses Rising, as the preparation unto it. Thus in the Interpretation of the Vials, I shewed, that there may be many Sprinklings of the same Vial, both long before it come to its ἀρχή and Vigour, and also after; all which are, notwithstanding, to be reduced unto that Vial of the kind whereof they are, or unto which they are either Preparations or Appendixes.

Chap. 7.

Yea, further, The word [City] being taken in a double consideration in this Book, one (more strict) for the City of Rome it self, another (larger) for the Jurisdiction of that City, (as was before observed); accordingly may the tenth part, both of the one and the other, be here meant, as the one is successively to follow and fall after the other. And so both Interpretations may aptly be here intended; the Fall of the one, being as a degree unto the Fall of the other, which is the height of that fifth Vial. Unto this I do the more incline, for that such a double Scope and Aim, in things of equivocal signification, I find the Holy Ghost often-times to have in his Eye. So in the Vials, (as I before shewed); and so I believe in this Passage, and Event. So that, I exclude not that Interpretation of Mr. Mede's, but do only join another with it, though I think that may be mainly and ultimately intended.

S E C T. V.

(More Particularly); that by [a Tenth Part of the City] is meant, one of the Ten Kingdoms of Europe. How it is said to Fall. The Earth-quake in it, What? The Names of Men, What? and their Killing.

NOW to come to a more Particular Interpretation of this Place.

1. By the tenth Part of the City, I understand, (as Mr. Brightman before me) some one tenth part of Europe; which as it all once belonged to the Jurisdiction of the City of Rome, (and is in this Book called Ten Kingdoms); so now again, upon the Gentiles, or Idolatrous Papists, their recovering the Outward Court, shall now at last, more or less, come under the Jurisdiction of that City, but especially, or at least this tenth Part of it here intended; where most faithful Witnesses shall be found, and where most of them shall be triumphed over and slain, shall, during these three Years and a half, become a Part of the City again; and so is called a tenth Part of the City; City being put here (as it often is in this Book) for the Extent of the Jurisdiction of the City of Rome, which had these ten European Kingdoms by Charter allotted unto it, chap. 17. and unto which these Kingdoms are a second time to agree to give up their Power. In one of which Ten, or in the tenth Part of the whole, the Witnesses shall first begin to rise; and therein shall this Earthquake accompany their Resurrection. This tenth Part of the City may perhaps be all one with that Street of the City, mentioned vers. 8.

2. By the Earth-quake here (which is said to be a great One) is meant (as still in this Book it is) a great concussion or shaking of States, Politiques, or Ecclesiastical, (for of either, or of both, it is used). Thus under the sixth Seal, the great Alteration wrought in the Roman Empire, when it turned from Heathenism to Christianity, brought about by the Power of Constantine, (with the deposing those Heathenish Emperors, Captains, &c. and altering the Face of the Empire's Religion) is called an Earth-quake, Chap. 6. So that, the like mighty Commotion, with an alteration of the Face of Things, (either Civil or Ecclesiastick) shall fall out in a tenth Part of the City, and shall accompany, or usher in this Rising of the Witnesses.

Now,

PART II.

Now, 3. by, and through this Earth-quake's falling thus out in a tenth Part of the City, this tenth Part of it is so shaken, that it falls; that is, ceaseth to be a Part of the City, or to belong unto its Jurisdiction any longer; or (which is all one) falls off (as we say) from being of the Number of those that give their Power to the Beast. Which if it prove to be any of the Protestant States, that should yet again (as was said) embrace the Beast's Power, and come under his Jurisdiction; or in order to the bringing in again of the Pope's Power, should kill these Witnesses, and so thereby become a Part of that City, and be reckoned as pertaining unto its Jurisdiction; yet now revolting from under the Power of this City, and recoyling again through this Earth-quake, it may truly be said to fall; namely, qua Urbis Pars est, as it is a Part of the City, which it before was, but now ceaseth so to be, it now utterly renouncing either to belong to its Jurisdiction, or to be of its Party any longer. And as Earth-quake's are from inward Motions in the Bowels of the Earth, so this here may seem to arise from within that Kingdom it self; whether through the Supream Magistrate's beginning to hate the Whore, (as the Promise is, chap. 17.) or the People's abominating the Cruelty and Contempt put upon the Witnesses and their Cause; their Consciences having been enlightned in the Truth, while themselves were troden under, as the Outward Court, by these Gentiles, and so they come to shake off that Yoke; and the Witnesses having a Spirit of Life now come into them, these take Heart, and join with them and their Cause: Whether (I say) through the working of either, or both of these, I cannot determine; but I think, through both; For the ruin of the City (unto which this is at least the preparation) is to be effected through God's changing one of the ten King's Hearts so to hate the Whore, as to eat her Flesh, and burn her with Fire, Chap. 17. And this Voice speaking unto the Witnesses out of Heaven, Mr. Mede conjectures to be that of Supream Authority, with which the People also shall join; for an Earth-quake certainly notes out a Commotion in the People and Nations.

4. The Effect of this Earth-quake, and Fall of this tenth Part of the City, is the killing seven thousand of the Names of Men, (so it is in the Original). A Phrase, which as thus joining [Names] and [Men] together, is not so to be found in the whole Book of God. By these [Names of Men] are certainly denoted out those, (be it interpreted of whomsoever) that had been the Witnesses Enemies, and that had the great Agency and Hand in killing them, and in subjecting those Nations unto the Power of the Beast.

Mr. Mede conceives it to be, ὀνόματα ἀνθρώπων, [Names of Men] for [Men of Names] according to the usual Phrase of Scripture, (as [Riches of Grace] for [Rich Grace]; &c.)

Now by [Men of Names] in Scripture, is meant Men of Office, Title, and Dignity. So Numb. 16. 2. those 250 Men, who were Princes of the Congregation, and in Coral's Conspiracy consumed, are called, Men of Name; (so in the Hebrew) that is, Men of Title and Dignity.

You heard before, how the last sort of Enemies unto these Witnesses, under the fourth Vial, were set forth unto us by the Type of those very Opposers of Moses and Aaron, who were then the two Witnesses of the Lord, (as was shewn in the Exposition of the 5th Verse of this Chapter). Now as there, in Numbers, the Spiritual Punishment of many of them, for their Enmity against the Witnesses, is noted out by that Fire, which then devoured them: So here a Civil Punishment falls upon these, for having thus killed these Witnesses, themselves are to be killed (happly) by being bereft of their Names and Titles, which are to be rooted out for ever, and condemned to perpetual forgetfulness.

This Mr. Mede carries to Ecclesiastical Dignities under the Papacy, those Latiales Episcopatus, &c. And for the number 7000, it is an Indefinite Number, and put for Many, (as the usual manner of the Scripture is). And certainly, if these Names here do prove to be Ecclesiastical Dignities and Titles, the Phrase here used fits them, and is most proper for them; for they use it of Themselves, and when they would in a word or two comprehend all the several Ranks and Orders

Orders of the Hierarchical Ministry, from the highest to the lowest, (which for them particularly to enumerate were too tedious) they involve all in this indefinite Expression, [by what [Names] or Titles soever dignified or distinguished].

Chap. 7.

Now as they call their Dignities Names, so the Holy Ghost (you see) calls them Names [of Men]; that is, meerly Humane, of Man's Institution, and not of God's: For so are most of their Offices themselves, and (in a manner) the Names of them all; they being not such Names as the Holy Ghost teacheth us to call them by, but such as the Canons and Constitutions of Men have imposed. And this may indeed be the true Reason why this Phrase, used no where else, is yet used here, now when the ruin of the Pope's Creatures comes to be mentioned, as most fitly, by [Names of Men]; denoting forth that Evil and Error of theirs, which is one true Cause of their Ruin. But now for Civil Offices and Titles, for them to be of Man, (that is, to have their Rise from Men) is proper to them; and therefore they are called Creations, or Ordinances of Men, [ἀνθρώπινη κτίσις, &c.] 1 Pet. 2. 13. and this, in opposition or distinction unto Ecclesiastical Offices. Whereas Ecclesiastick Offices and Names should all (for the Foundation of the Calling and Office it self) be of God, and not of Men. They are of another Building and Constitution, although Man designs the Persons to them, and that too, in a way of God's Appointment. Thus this Phrase [of Man] is used of this sort of Offices, and to this very purpose, in other Places of Scripture. So when Paul speaks of his Office of Apostleship, and his being designed to it, Gal. 1. 1. he useth this Phrase, [An Apostle neither of Man, nor by Man]; that is, my Office it self is not of Man's appointment, nor was I put into it by Man, that is, designed to it by Man's Choice. And although that Office of his was an Extraordinary Office; yet other Ordinary Ministers Offices are Divine for the Institution of them, and in that respect, not of Man, though by Man (that is, the Church) their Persons be designed unto those Offices. For Christ is Lord of these Administrations or Offices, (as you have it, 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5.) and so they hold of him as truly as Gifts (in the same place are said to) do of the Spirit, and Operations of the Father. And Men are no more to assume to appoint Church-Offices, than they are able to give Gifts, or to bless those Gifts with Operations; and when they do so, they derogate from Christ the Lord as truly, as they should from the Holy Ghost, in attempting to bestow (upon such as Simon Magus, who desired it) the Gifts of the Spirit. No, it is God, who hath set [ἔθετο] (as you have it, vers. 28. of that Chapter) Teachers as well as Apostles in the Church. Paul there reckons up Ordinary Officers, as well as Extraordinary; for the institution of the one is from God as well as the other.

Now therefore, when the Holy Ghost here speaks of those false Names and Titles of Church-Officers, which Christ appointed not; he disclaims them from holding of him; but calls them Names of Men, as being of Humane Creation, whenas they should be only of Divine Institution. And so being Plants which God the Father planted not, they are here said to be rooted out of this one Kingdom or State, where (it seems) they had been the Causes and Authors of all this Mischief and Cruelty against the Witnesses; and which through the efficacy of their working to uphold their Names, had again been become the tenth Part of the City; but now, by this Earthquake, falls from being any longer under that Jurisdiction. And together with it are all those Steeples and Cathedrals, and all those Names and Titles that belong thereto, utterly shaken down also; it being a just Punishment and Reward of their Conspiracy against the Witnesses, and agency in their Killing.

SECT. VI.

What Tenth Part of Europe, or which of the Ten Kingdoms it is most probable that this Earthquake and Resurrection of the Witnesses shall fall out in.

Now which of these Ten Kingdoms, or of the Ten States in Europe, and what tenth Part thereof, shall first have this great Priviledg, as a blessed handfel to the rest that follow, is not hard to conjecture, though it be rashness peremptorily to determine: for God maketh new choice of Nations and Churches therein, beyond the line and reach of our Conjectures; and his ways are past finding out; neither can the Face of his former Proceedings with any of the Churches, give us any certain and infallible designment, which of them he will do most good unto.

I will therefore only cast in such Conjectures, as according to the Face of the Sky in the Churches of this present Age, do seem to prognosticate where, and in what Parts this Heaven (which the Witnesses shall ascend up into) is like first to clear up in, from under these Clouds, and from out of this Hour of Darkness to come upon the World.

1. The Saints and Churches belonging unto the Kingdom of France, God hath made a wonder unto me in all his Proceedings towards them, first and last; and there would seem some great and special Honour reserved for them yet at last. For it is certain, that the first Light of the Gospel, by that first and second Angel's Preaching, chap. 14. (which laid the Foundation of Antichrist's Ruin) was out from among them; namely, those of Lions and other Places in France. And they bore and underwent the great Heat of that Morning of Persecution which was as great (if not greater) than any since. And besides, the Churches of France have ever since had as great a share in Persecutions; yea, greater than any other Churches. And though it be well nigh 500 Years since they began first to separate from Antichrist, and they still continue a Glorious Church unto this day: Yet they never had that great Honour and Priviledg, (which other Churches have been so blest with) as to have a Supream Magistrate professing their Religion; but either they have been bloody Persecutors and Oppressors of them, or else they have apostatised from them. May it not therefore be hoped and look'd for, that their Kings in the end, should be of the Number of those Kings who (as you have it, Chap. 17.) are to be wrought on, to hate the Whore, and to burn her with Fire? And so that this Voice here, which calls these Witnesses (who there have ever prophesied in Sack-cloth) up to Heaven, may proceed from one of their Kings. And so, as that Kingdom had the first great stroke, so now it should have the honour to have the last great Stroke in the ruining of Rome?

But yet, 2. If you take a view of the Face of the present Condition of the Saints and Churches in Europe, as in this last Age (wherein these Things are in all likelihood to be fulfilled) it presents it self, together with a prospect into the Times past also; and then, if you put all together, the Churches and Saints in Great Britain, and the Islands belonging to it, have, in my Thoughts and Conjectures, (not swaied unto it through Affection only, which may betray the Judgment, but through a serious and impartial Consideration, and weighing of Things) more hopeful Characters upon them for this Glory, than any of the other Reformed Churches: and so appears the likeliest unto me to prove the more eminent Stage, both of this great Slaughter, and also of the Rising and Ascension of the Witnesses.

1. For the Ages past, there hath been these three hundred Years, as glorious a Succession of Godly Witnesses and Martyrs, as any other Nation can produce, as you may collect out of Mr. Fox's Martyrologie.

2. For the last fore-going Age, since the Times of the Reformation, and for the present one, the Marks of these Witnesses designed to this Slaughter, and Glory (as in the former part of this Chapter you have had them laid forth) appear the liveliest, and (in a manner only) upon them of Great Britain. For,

1. There hath God continued the most Faithful, and Called, and Chosen; (as they are called, chap. 17. 14.) who are of the Lamb's side, and who are together with him to overcome the Kings that shall hate and burn the Whore; and indeed, more of them that hold forth the Power of Religion with difference from the World, than in all the nine Kingdoms besides. And surely, where most of the Witnesses are, there will be their most eminent Slaughter; and where their greatest Slaughter is, there will be their most glorious Resurrection and Ascension. For all these will certainly be commensurated, and proportioned one to the other; magnitude of Sufferings, to multitude of Witnesses; and then greatness of Glory, unto the greatness of Sufferings. Now that the Saints in these Kingdoms of Great Britain, are like to be the Subjects of that Slaughter, and those Kingdoms made the Street, or open Market-place thereof, I shewed before.

2. There God hath eminently stirred up Men's Hearts to breath after a further and purer Reformation, and measuring of the Temple. And they have been put to contend for it more than all the other Churches: and this, more or less, ever since the first erection of the English Church at Franckford, in Queen Mary's Days. And in the contention about it, and through that bitter Persecution for it, they even for this very Cause having prophesied in Sackcloth, more apparently than others in other Reformed Churches; their Spirits have encreased, both in Spiritual Light and Holiness, and in Practical Knowledg in the Ways and Works of Sanctification, (by which the Worshippers are to be measured); and also in further and clearer Light, about the Institution and true Government of a Church, (by which the Temple and Altar are to be measured) more than all the Reformed Churches besides have done: Who in the quiet enjoyment of much of what these contend to have in a further Purity, have run out almost into nothing but an Outward Court of Profession, and a meer Form; there being few Priests, or true Worshippers, that (with difference from others) do worship God in Power, in Spirit, and in Truth, that are to be found in the Inner Temple of their Assemblies. And let but the Exposition of the six first Verses of this Chapter be consulted with, and that Interpretation given, be but impartially applyed to the Protestant Professors this day in Europe; and how eminently, above the rest, will the Condition of the Saints of Great Britain, and their constant Conflicts with the Beast and his Abettors, unto this Day, be found to fit the Measure thereof, and to look more like, and come nearer the Life of that face of Things therein presented, than any other, or than all other the Reformed European Churches since that their first Reformation?

And, 3. That Description of those who are to be the eminent Opposites of the Witnesses in these last Days, and the Authors of this their Slaughter, fits those open and professed Enemies of them in those Kingdoms also. And there (if any where) are found those that receive the Number of the Beast's Name; who, notwithstanding hitherto have, and may yet for a while, deny his Character, and disclaim his Name. Whom shall we liken this Generation unto? Or, where shall we find Similitudes that will suit them, if those Descriptions fore-passed in this Chapter suit them not? Sure, I am, if these be not they, they are as like as Ovum Ovo. And these (the Number of his Name) being the Beast's last Champions, (as appears out of chap. 13. 17. and chap. 15. 2. and are therefore there mentioned last) are to hold up the last great Quarrel of the Beast's Cause, and to fight this last Combat with the Witnesses; and so, in this last Age to be overcome in open Field by them, as their Predecessors that had the Mark and Image of the Beast, have been overcome by the former Generation of Witnesses in elder Times.

And, 4. In which of the Reformed Churches are these Names of Men (who are to be the Killers of the Witnesses; and therefore are slain in this Earthquake in their revenge) continued but in these Kingdoms? And that in this (otherwise unused) Phrase [by what Names or Titles soever distinguish'd]! Which Names, and Titles, and several Dignities, (take in all sorts of them, from the highest to the lowest) in all those Kingdoms, may haply be found to amount to 7000, (that Number being an Indefinite kind of Number, and taken for more or less) even besides such Ministers of Parishes and Assemblies, as have for the substance of their Office, a Warrant from God; though for their usual Names, whereby they are called, they retain a Name of Man's devising. Yea, is not this very Thing made the Quarrel now, Whether their Ranks of Ministry, be Names of God, or of Men? About which the Witnesses have, from the very beginning contended. Yea, is it not the Suspicion, and general Opinion, that to continue, and to secure these their Names, they would again introduce Popery? And is not the Matter as thus stated, the very ground of their Quarrel? And hath it not long been the Ground of all the Opposition against the Witnesses and Saints in this Kingdom; as of Silencing, Fining, Depriving them, and Depositing them from their Ministerial Charges, &c. lest that (as the Pharisees said of Christ) the People's running after the Witnesses Doctrine, should endanger their Names, Credits, and Dignities, and so take away their Kingdom! Hereat the Quarrel first began, and for that secret Cause hath all along been continued, though under other outward Pretences. Yea, this is the thing that shall provoke them to the ensnaring slaughter of these Witnesses (which now approacheth): They say, within their Hearts, Let us kill these Witnesses, and the Vineyard will be ours.

PART II.

Now upon all these Grounds, how fairly probable does it seem, that these Occurrences here mentioned, as those that shall attend the Resurrection of the Witnesses, are to fall out in this tenth Part of Europe, and in one or both of these our Kingdoms above-mentioned, more eminently than in any other European State or Kingdom? And how just were it with God, to give up these Names of Men, (who have been the Enemies of his Witnesses in all Times since the Reformation) to receive, at last, the Number of the Beast's Name; and under his Name and Power, to become, in the end, the killers of these Witnesses, and his Trained Band, and Leaders in this his last War. And how wonderful and wise a Dispensation of God, will it be towards his own in these Kingdoms, to have reserved the utter extirpation of these Names of Men, (though so long while contended for) unto such a Time and Occasion as this? And, that after they shall first have done this Feat and Exploit for the Beast, in killing the Witnesses, they should then be sacrificed as Baal's Priest's were by Elias; even when these Witnesses, whom they so persecuted, shall rise, and die no more; and so by this means, the ruin of these their Enemies, should be made the Witnesses Triumph, and the removing them out of the way by this Earthquake, made the Foundation of their Ascension into Heaven: After which, the Work of measuring the Temple by these Samaritans interrupted, shall go forward in the Hands of Joshua and Zerubbabel; and the People who before were afraid of those Hinderers of the Work, shall now begin to cry Grace, Grace, unto it; and so, the rearing of these purer Churches, shall be upon the Rubbish of this Samaritan Mountain the False Church.

And if the fifth Vial be also aimed at in this Earthquake, and the fall of Rome, the Seat of the Beast, (as ultimately I think it is); then how comely will it be, and suitable with the long expectation of God's Witnesses and Holy Ones, that the Ruin of these Episcopal Seas, and Seats of those that shall do Antichrist such Service, should fall out with, or be a preparative unto the Fall of that great Bishop's See, (as I said in expounding the fifth Vial) and both to go down together, as alike pertaining to the same Building of Man's, not God's!

And lastly; If this prove the Issue of God's dealings with these Kingdoms; How gloriously shall God thereby acquit himself in the conclusion of all his Dispensations towards them? For to see two such contrary Streams running so strongly one against another in the same Channel, hath indeed caused a wonderment in the Godly-Wife of this last Age, what God means to do, and what end he means to make with England; This is that which is now the great expectation of the Churches there, how equally God means to proceed, both towards them that fear him therein, and also towards the opposite Party that are and have been been there. For it is strange, even to a Miracle, (to see) how God upholds in the same state, two such contrary Factions and Parties; one of his own People rising higher and higher in Spiritual Light, and in opposition to Superstition, and breathing after further Purity of Holiness, and perfection of publick Worship; and together with this (at the same time) another strong Party looking towards Rome, and encreasing in Superstition, Darkness, and an impudent out-facing the Light of Truth; and that, then when it shineth hottest and clearest on them. Now for the All-wise God, who professeth to have this Art and Skill, to preserve the Righteous, and reserve the Wicked unto Punishment, as Peter speaks; for him now at last to come off so gloriously; what more equal, and so more likely Dispensation, than to run this course chalk'd out here in this Chapter, both towards the one and the other Party in that Kingdom, and which, according to the course of his dealings throughout the Scriptures, (though this Prophecy had not been left us in this Chapter concerning these very Times) the Godly-Wife might have hoped God most probably might intend to take?

How this their Resurrection and Ascension, is a fore-running Shadow of the Restitution of all Things at the coming of Christ's Kingdom.

Now further; Concerning this great Priviledg and Honour thus first befalling some one tenth Part of Europe; let me add this unto all that hath been said of it, to make it appear yet the more glorious, That this Resurrection of the Witnesses, seems to be the beginning of the first great Turn of Things in the Church, hastning to the New Jerusalem; and so the very first dawning of the Kingdom of Christ approaching, and of the final Restitution of the Church's Liberty from under the Yoke of Antichrist. When Christ arose, (as these Witnesses here do) his Disciples then asked him, Whether he would at that Time restore Israel? He denies not but that it should be done; only he tells them, It was not for them then to know the Seasons. But now, the Time of that Restitution approaching, the Rising of these Witnesses (which beareth the true Resemblance of his) is here mentioned as the Signal of that Restitution, which, chap. 20. is called, the first Resurrection; of which (I say) this is the fore-running Shadow. And indeed, thus have the Writers of all Ages, since Christ, understood it. For when they speak of that Day, and the Signs of it, you shall generally find it among the Ancients, that this killing of the Two Witnesses, and their Rising, (though indeed it hath by them been interpreted of Enoch and Elias) are made the fore-running Signs of the approach of that joyful Day of Christ's Kingdom, (which they called the Day of Judgment.)

And, I confess, I have thought, that the true Reason why this Particular Occurrence, though falling out but in a tenth Part of Europe, is here made mention of, rather than other Occurrences which are like to fall out with it, or after it (as the Ruin of Rome, which in it self is a greater one) is, because that this one Passage should have more fitness to become a sign (which to give, is the scope of the Holy Ghost in this Chapter) of the approaching of the New Jerusalem, (to come under the seventh Trumpet) than any other Occurrence: It being not only the first step of the Restauration of the Church after Antichrist's last scattering of it; (which shall for ever after go on, and encrease, untill the full Restitution of all Things); it is not only, I say, the first turn of the Stream, after that last low-Ebb; the Waters whereof shall rise and encrease, till it be full Sea, and never Ebb again, (these Witnesses now rising, as Christ did, never to Die again, but to cast off their Sack-cloth for ever): but further also, in many Particulars, the liveliest Picture and Model of that great Restauration of all Things,

PART II.

Things (which is to come) above any other Passage; and so, is singled out as a fore-running Type and Resemblance of it.

This great Restoring of all things (of which we speak) is to begin with the seventh Vial; which (as was said) is all one with the seventh Trumpet; when old Things are to be done away, and all to be made New. Now as then there is said to be a great Earthquake, (and that such a one as never was since Men were upon the Earth, Chap. 16. 18.): So here there is said to be a great Earthquake also. And as the Effect of that Earthquake, is the dividing the remainder of Babylon into three Parts, and the falling of the Cities of the Nations, vers. 19. of that 16th Chapter; so here the Effect of this Earthquake, is the falling of a tenth part of the City, and the slaying of these Names of Men. And as that is ushered in with a Resurrection, which Chap. 20. 5, 6. is called the first Resurrection, (that is, the first Physical Rising of the Bodies of the Saints:) So this also hath a Resurrection (though not Natural and Physical, yet Metaphorical) of Dead Witnesses unto a better Life than ever they had before. So wonderful a Work and Change is this to be, that it shall be even as Life from the Dead, (as the Apostle speaks of the Conversion of the Jews).

And again, as then after that Resurrection there is a New Heaven, and a New Earth; so here there is an Ascending into an Heaven. So glorious shall the Condition of these Witnesses be, in comparison of what it was before, that it shall justly be counted a Heaven, if compared with their former best Condition before their Killing.

Thus among the Gentiles will God give one Instance, as a small Scheme, Type, and Shadow of this his Kingdom; to confirm the Faith of the Saints in it; and that, (as is most probable) in those Churches of Europe which he means chiefly to make Partakers (afterwards) of this his New Jerusalem, under the seventh Trumpet.

S E C T. VIII.

*An Interpretation of that Clause, Vers. 14. [The second Wo is past].
A reconciling some Difficulties about it.*

There remains nothing now in this Chapter to be expounded, excepting this Clause which follows, vers. 14. [The second Wo is past, and behold, the Third cometh quickly] which is the close of the sixth Trumpet. For the three last Trumpets being called three Woes, Chap. 8. 13. when the fifth Trumpet had done sounding, it is said, chap. 9. 12. One Wo is past, and behold, there come two Woes more, &c. And now when the sixth Trumpet's Time of ending comes, it is said, The second Wo is past, &c. which is all one as to have said, The sixth Trumpet, and the Wo of it, do here determine, or at least begin to determine and end.

Now the sixth Trumpet being the Empire and Tyranny of the Turk; and the sixth Vial, being that great and deadly blow that shall be given that Empire, to make way for the Kingdom of the Jews, the Kings of the East, mentioned in that Vial: Hence Mr. Mede interprets this passing away of the second Wo, to be the very sixth Vial, (as this Fall of the tenth Part of the City he makes to be the fifth Vial). Which if it be so, the difficulty to me (which I see not so clearly by him reconciled) is, That this passing away of the second Wo, as it is here recorded, seemeth, for the Time of it, to fall out together with this Resurrection and Earthquake, and with the Ascension of the Witnesses, and Fall of the tenth Part of the City, and all these to determine and end (as it were) in one common Period. For as soon as the Holy Ghost had made the Narration of all these, he concludes with this, The second Wo is past. And then, he making the fifth Vial to be the Period of the Pope's Reigns, and the Witnesses ceasing to prophesy in Sack-cloth, to be at their Rising, and at the Fall of the tenth Part of the City: How then can the passing away of the second Wo (if it be the sixth Vial) be imagined to fall out at the same time with these; seeing the Vials, as well as the Seals and Trumpets, do fall out successively each after other? and though not in equal, or alike distances of Time each from other, (as Napier would have it) yet all of them in some distance, (as is most likely); and it is certain, it hath held so in all the rest.

Now to reconcile this Difficulty;

1. Either the fifth and sixth Vial shall fall out altogether about the same Time; and so the Conversion of the Jews, and Rising of the European Witnesses, fall out together as Preparations unto them both, (which I confess, unto me seems not altogether improbable): For that Passage in Dan. 12. 1. compared with the last Verse of Chap. 11. would seem to imply as much. In which last Verse, the Angel had spoke of the end of the Reign of Antichrist, and in the 1st Verse of the following 12th Chapter, he speaks of the Jews being delivered from their greatest Time of trouble (which is to befall them from the Turk upon their first Conversion); and he seems there to make them both to be at the same time, or at least so near each other, that the distance is not considerable: For he expressly says, At that Time shall Michael stand up,—to deliver thy People, (so he calls the Jews by way of distinction from the Gentile Christians, as being of Daniel's Nation).

Or else, 2^{dly}, Whereas there are two things here mentioned concerning these Witnesses:

1. Their Rising, accompanied with this Earthquake.

And, 2. Their Ascension into Heaven, which must needs fall out after their Resurrection: It may be, that as Christ's Ascension was forty days after his Resurrection; so this their Ascension (though mentioned immediately next their Resurrection) may be some space of Years after; when their Enemies are removed, and all Obstacles and Impediments out of the way; then they have a Heaven granted them, and a Voice calling them up thither. And so it may come to pass, that this Ascension of theirs may not be until the sixth Vial, though their Rising were before the fifth Vial, and a preparation unto it.

But, 3^{dly}, and lastly, to salve all these Doubts; it may be, that the only scope and drift of the Angel in now bringing in this Clause, [the second Wo is past] (here, vers. 14.) was not so much, thereby to denote the exact common Period or Instant of Time for all these Occurrences mentioned; or to shew, how the sixth Vial, and the end of the sixth Trumpet shall, for the time of them, be together with this Earthquake, &c. but rather, whereas the Turkish Tyranny was one part of the second Wo upon the Eastern Christians, (spoken of chap. 9.) and the treading down the Outward Court of Carnal Protestants, by the Papists, and killing their Witnesses, another second part of that second Wo; that therefore now, when he had related and put them both together, then he comes in with this Speech [the second Wo is past]; that is, I have now fully declared what a Wo God will bring, both on the Eastern Christians, and also on the European and Western Christians; and these two do compleat and perfect the Story of the second Wo, and do also belong unto the Story of the sixth Trumpet: which second Wo consisting of those two Parts I have now fully done withal, and so I pass from it to speak of the third Wo, which now cometh quickly, &c. And so, this Passage seems to be intended rather materially to shew, what appertains to the sixth Trumpet, then Chronologically to shew the expiring of it. And so this great punishment from the Popish Gentiles upon the Protestant Party in the West for their Sins, is fitly cast under the Trumpets; and joined to that great Plague and Punishment on the Eastern Christians by the Turk, as a part of the sixth Trumpet, and severed from the Vials as no part of them: They being to fall only upon the Enemies themselves of both these Christian Companions, namely, upon the Pope, and the Turk. Thus the Holy Ghost homogeneally putteth together the punishment of Carnal Christians, both Eastern and Western, under the Wo of the Trumpets; and in like manner involveth those other two grand Enemies unto the Christian Profession feffion and Religion, wholly under the Punishments and Plagues of the seven Vials. And so, that may be the Reason; both why the Story of treading down the Outward Court, and of the Killing of the Witnesses, comes in here, in Chap. 11. though the matter of them belongs unto the Book Prophecy: and why also the treading the Wine-press, Chap. 14. last verse (which is part of the treading the Outward Court in this 11th Chap.) is reckoned as no part of the Vials; it being to fall upon the Protestant Party: Yet so, as with what in the Trumpets, what in the Vials, God will be sure to meet with all sorts for their Sins, and so by a like just and impartial Rule proceed both towards Friends and Enemies, without any respect of Persons.

But whether of these, or whether any of these will reach the Holy Ghost's meaning, I leave unto the Reader to judge.

I shall by and by add a fourth Interpretation of that Clause, to me as probable as any of these; when I have first cast in a few Conjectures, about the Times of the fulfilling of these things; which I reserved to the last, as the Closure and Coronis of this long Discourse: Because many things already delivered in this Interpretation do fall in, to strengthen the Conjectures concerning the precise Time of the falling out of these so great Occurrences.

SECT. IX.

The Conclusion of this Discourse. The Conjectures of some about the Time when this Killing and Raising of the Witnesses shall be.

I Find two Periods of Time more eminently pitc'd upon by Writers of this Age (according to the diversity of Mens Conjectures), for great changes in the Churches of Christ.

The first is fix'd some time between the Years 1650. and 1656.

The other upon 1666. Both which Periods are not far off to come.

Concerning both of which, (as also any other that shall be made, upon Conjectures out of these Prophecies) this General Caution must be taken in.

That in these Computations a mistake of a few Years may fall out, and the Event fall out sooner or later than the Time conjectured, by reason that the vulgar Account of Years from the Birth of Christ is uncertainly kept; (according to the acknowledgment of Chronologers themselves) so Arnobius at the writing of his Apology speaks indefinitely of the reckoning of Years, how long it was from Christ unto his Time, Tricenti sunt ferme anni (says he) aliquid plus vel minus, a quo cœpimus esse Christiani. And therefore the best Chronologers (as Helvicus, &c.) reckon the true Account to reach two Years further than the vulgar Account doth; and so makes the Year 1650 with us, to be in Truth 1652, and so of the rest. Others give a larger allowance, namely of four Years. And this indeed is the true reason of that difference about the first Period mentioned, namely between 1650, and 1656; some saying it shall be in 51, some in 52, and some in 56: yet all making the ground of their so fixing it one and the same, only varying about the precise Time by reason of several Computations and Accounts of the Years since Christ, (as we shall see by and by.) And for that second Period of 1666, which is made to terminate the date of Antichrist's reign, and is to that purpose understood to be that Number of 666, made mention of in the last verse of Chap. 13. the first that so interpreted that Place was an unknown English Writer, Anno 1589. who in a little Book dedicated to the Church of Rome, first gave this obscure hint of it [Yet (says he) Two Months, two Weeks, two Days and an half, and thy Number 666 shall be fulfilled] (as writing to that Church): Which casting up, from 1589 (the Year his Book bare date of, from the Printing of it) I found him to aim at 1666. Now the Reason which they give for this Interpretation, and why they reckon the beginning of Antichrist's 260 Years, or 42 Months, from Pope Innocent's Time, Anno 406, I have given upon upon Chap. 13. And I find Simpson the Scotch Abbreviator of the Churches Story, to pitch the beginning of the Popes Usurpation over Churches, in this Man's Time; who yet had no Eye at all unto this Interpretation of 666. And (as I remember) Mr. Wood (now with God) in his Manuscript upon the Revelations, doth also encline to think the Year, 1666, to be the Time of the Popes downfall. And so also do some others.

Chap. 7.

That other first Period of 1650, or 51, or 56, I find by some to be made the Time of the Jews first Call. And by others, that of 1656, to be the Time of the Expiring of Antichrist's Reign, and the Fall of the City. The first that I know of, that ever pitch'd upon this Term of Years, was that Holy Man Hiltenius, (the great Fore-runner of Luther, in Germany); and who foretold the very Year of Luther's Rising after him, to teach the same Doctrine that he had done; which, Melancthon says, he saw written under his own hand: Among other of whose Sayings, you shall find this as one of the last recorded in his Life, (written among the Lives of the German Divines, by Melchior Adamus); that the Year after Christ 1651, shall be the Time of the Change of this World, and so, the beginning of that New World to come. Since him, many others (though haply not from him) have fallen upon this Period of 1650. So Finch in his Book of the Calling of the Jews, makes it the Time when God will leave off (as says he) to scatter his Holy People, for then shall the Turks first declining come, &c.

And the Jews themselves have their Eyes upon this very Time; For it was a Secret communicated to old Mr. Forbes, by a Learned Jew, (as Mr. Forbes himself related it, not long before his Death) that the learnedest Rabby they had had in the World, of late Years, did pitch upon 1650, or thereabouts, as the utmost Time wherein they should expect their Messiah to reveal himself unto their Nation; and how he had left this Secret with some of his Learned Friends that came about him when he was on his Death-bed, to know his Judgment about the Messiah.

I find also Mr. Mede, in his Clavis, to pitch upon 1656, though tacitly, and implicitly, yet clearly enough) as the Time (he most inclined unto) for the expiration of Antichrist's Kingdom. For in his Synchronisms, he makes the first Trumpet, and the Pope's 1260 Days, to begin together; and in his Comment, he makes the beginning of the first Trumpet to be in the Year 395. So that, if the Reign of Antichrist begins at the Year of Christ 395, then his 1260 Days, or Years, will end in 1655. And thus there will be so many Years from Christ unto the beginning of the New World, as there was from the beginning of the Old World, until the Days of Noah, (unto which Christ compares his coming) even 1656 Years.

Now the best ground for this Opinion that ever I met with, (and which I suppose, all, or most of these have gone upon) is that Computation of Years given to Daniel, Chap. 12. vers. 11. of his Prophecy, by this very Angel that gave this little Book here, and this 11th Chapter, by word of Mouth, unto John (as was said before). Who there says, That from the Time that the daily Sacrifice shall be taken away, and the Abomination that maketh desolate, set up, there shall be a thousand, two hundred, and ninty Days, or Years. The beginning of which Account they fix (as I said before) in Julian's Time, when was the last Time, both of the ceasing of the daily Sacrifice by him set up, and of setting up Heathenish Idolatry in the World. Which Years, if otherwise they be reckoned, from Vespasian, and Titus his Son, their sacking of Jerusalem, were out almost 300 Years ago. This Place and Account in Daniel, I suppose Hiltenius (the first that pitch'd on it) had in his Eye for the ground of his Conjecture: For he was a great studier of Daniel's Prophecies, and wrote Notes upon them, (as in his Life you may read). And sure, I am, that Mr. Wood, Finch, and others, do make that the ground of their Opinions. And, I suppose, that most of all these Jews also do the like. And (as was said before) the reason why some do so uncertainly pitch upon 1651, others 52, others 55, and others 56, is the variation and uncertainty of the Account of Years since Julian's Time, when, and how long he reigned : some pitching his Reign in the Year 361, some in 363, and others in 365.

Now I shall only shew how both these Periods, namely, of 1650, or 56, and 1666, may be reconciled, and how they both may stand together.

The fifth Vial (as hath been said) hath two gradual Accomplishments of it ; whereof the one is a Preparation to the other. That Vial is emptied (as also are some of the other) by two several pourings forth of two several Portions, the one of the Top, the other of the Dregs of the Wrath of God ; whereof this 11th Chapter mentions one, and the 16th Chapter the other. The first Degree of it begins at the Rising of the Witnesses, with the Fall of the tenth part of the City, (as taking the Word [City] for the extent of Rome's Jurisdiction) ; which is compleated by a second Degree of it, namely, the Ruin of the City of Rome it self, (which is now but a tenth part of the Ancient (material) City of Rome that once flourished) with the Ruin of which City it self, the Time of Antichrist's Reign and Kingdom is reckoned to end ; it being the full Accomplishment and compleat Effusion of the fifth Vial. Now (according to their Conjecture) the first of those formentioned Periods (namely, 1650, or 56) may prove the Time of the first of these two Occurrences ; and the second (namely, 1666) may be the Time for the latter of them. That is, some Time between 1650, and 1656, may be the Period of the Witnesses killing, and the Time of their Rising, and of the Fall of the tenth part of the City, and the Earthquake, &c. and then 1666, may be the designed Time for the Ruin of Rome it self, and for the Witnesses their more glorious Ascension into Heaven.

You heard, in the beginning of this Discourse, that the Angel who here gave this 11th Chapter, is the very same whom we find to have uttered that 12th Chapter of Daniel's Prophecy : In which he speaks of the End and Ruin of Antichrist, Chap. 11. vers. ult. and how long his Time should be, and his Power last to scatter the Holy People ; and when he should accomplish, to scatter them, and after that never hurt them more. This the Angel declares, vers. 7. of Chap. 12. adding withal, that at, or about that Time, the Children of Daniel's People (that is, the Jewish Nation) should be called by Michael their Prince, (that is, Christ, vers. 1. and they should be delivered out of the greatest Distress, also from the Turkish Empire, that ever that Nation was in ; this you have vers. 1. After which Ruin of Antichrist, and Calling home of the Jews, should follow the Resurrection of the Saints ; with which Christ's Kingdom begins, vers. 2, 3.

Now here in this 11th Chapter of the Revelation, he comes and explains, both what that Time of Antichrist's Reign is, (namely, 1260 Years) and also what that last scattering the Power of the Holy People by him, should be ; even this very killing the Witnesses, the signal of its expiring. And then, how the second Wo should pass away, (namely, the Turkish Tyranny) and then, under the seventh Trumpet, should come the glorious Resurrection of the Saints, and the Kingdom of Christ, (which Daniel and all the Prophets have so much spoken of). Daniel being inquisitive, after the Times when these things should thus be finished, the Angel in vers. 11, 12. gives him two Periods ; the beginning of the Time of both which, is to be counted from the ceasing of the daily Sacrifice ; that is, (as was before said) from Julian's Time. Now the one of those Periods, is that of 1290 Years, beginning from that his Time, and ending between 1650, and 1656. The other is that of 1335 Years, beginning from that his Time also, and ending between 1690, and 1700. Which two Periods (as I understand them) are set as two Posts, the one at the beginning, and the other at the ending of that whole Stage of Time, which is allotted for the dispatch of those great Things prophesied of, to fall out afore the Kingdom of Christ. The first (of 1290 Years) is mentioned vers. 11. and shews when the first turning of the Course of Things, for the Accomplishment of all, should begin. The other (of 1335 Years) you have in vers. 12. shewing the Time of the full and final End, and compleat accomplishment of all that the Angel had foretold. And so that space of Time between these two Periods, (which is 45 Years or thereabouts) (for so many Years the latter Account, vers. 12. adds to the former vers. 11.) is allotted as the Time wherein those Things prophesied of by him to fall out in the last Ages of the World, should, each in their order, be accomplish'd. And so, from the first Period, should begin the great turn towards the accomplishment of them, and the immediate Preparations thereunto. And in the Interim of that intermediate space of Time between 1650, or 56, and 1700, shall follow the orderly performance of those Things which are to end and consummate all, before the glorious Kingdom of Christ. As first, the Ruin of Rome, and so, the end of Antichrist's Reign; and then the destruction of the Turkish Empire; after which, shall begin that great Resurrection, even at that last Period of 1335, falling out about 1700, which is the consummation of all.

Now the Question is, What that Occurrence should be, which the first Period of 1290 Years, falling out between 1650, and 1656, doth point at; as then, either to begin, or to be ended? Whether it be then that Antichrist's Time, Times, and a half (which the Angel had spoken of, vers. 7.) should expire; or what else it is, that he would have our Eyes especially upon in that first Period?

It seems unto me, that in the 7th verse of Dan. 12. the Angel mentions these two Things as distinct, though he names them together. First, For Antichrist's Reign, that it shall be for a Time, Times, and half a Time. And then he adds this second thing also, as a Note or Sign of the expiring of that his Time; with which, all those Things foretold besides, should begin to be accomplish'd, (namely, when he shall have accomplish'd to scatter the Power of the Holy People); as speaking of this very last and eminent killing of the Witnesses; with which all their scatterings should end, and for ever be accomplish'd. Then, namely from that Time, shall these things begin in their order to be finished, (namely, Antichrist's Ruin, and the Turkish Empire's Destruction, &c.) For thus I understand those words, [and when he shall have accomplish'd to scatter the Power of the Holy People, all these things shall be finish'd] namely, these two things there prophesied of, even Antichrist's Ruin, and the Turk's; he mentioning this last Scattering, as the Sign, or the beginning of the finishing of all. For it is hard to think, that all these things should together, and exactly at one Time, be finished.

So that, indeed (as it seems to me) the Angel's Scope in that first Period of 1290 Years, (beginning from Julian's Time, and ending between 50, and 56) is not so much to design out the End of Antichrist's Time, Times, and half a Time; as it is to point out the first Turn of Things, preparing to the Kingdom of Christ, which shall begin from this last Scattering the Holy People, (which is all one with this killing of the Witnesses here). And so, that some Time within these 45 Years (that are to run out between that Time and the End) shall be the expiring of that his Time.

And the Reasons making me think, that Daniel's first Period of 1290 Days, do rather thus refer to the first Turn of Things, towards the Accomplishment of all, (which is to begin with this Accomplishment of the Scattering of the Holy People, or Slaughter of the Witnesses, (and so, that to be made the eminent Occurrence that does Periodize these 1290 Days) are these:

1. The Angel's fixing the latter Period of 1335 Years for the final End of all. And his leaving 45 Years space between, doth argue the former to be the Punctum, that begins that Time allotted for the accomplishment of these Things during that Space. So that, those, 45 Years are indeed the space of Time for the fulfilling those great Things; whereof Antichrist's Ruin is one, and a great One. And so the ending of those 1290 Days, is the beginning of these 45 Years, and the expiring of those 1335 Years, is the ending of these 45 Years, which bring in the 1000 Years of Christ's Kingdom. For to what end should this space of 45 Years be thus set out, and measured, but as to be made famous by being designed for the fulfilling of those Things, namely, the Ruin of the Pope, and of the Jew's Enemies, the Turks, in the interim of it, whereof Daniel had there prophesied?

PART II.

2. In the 10th Verse (immediately before) he had again repeated, and a second Time mentioned this last scattering the Holy People; and this, as a Preface to his Answer about the Time when it should be, that all should be finish'd. Many (says he) shall be made white, and tried, and purified, &c. (namely, by this their last Scattering); and then he subjoins, vers. 11. [And from the Time that the daily Sacrifice is taken away, (that is, from Julian's Time) shall be 1290 Days] namely, unto the end of this last Tryal mentioned, even when this Scattering the Holy People, or killing the Witnesses, shall be accomplish'd. He mentions it thus, on purpose to shew, that he makes that killing the Witnesses, the Terminus ad quem of his Account. You heard afore, that Antiochus's three Years and a half, (spoken of Chap. 11. 31, 32.) was the Type of this three Years and a half; and lo, he useth the very same Phrase here of this, that he had there used of that Trial, Chap. 11. 35. Many (says he) shall then fall, to try them, to purge them, and to make them white. Yea further, I verily believe, that one Reason why he singleth out Julian's Time as the Term or Moment from which he reckons, unto this last scattering the Witnesses, rather than any other Time from which to begin this Account, is, Because that for the Comfort of the Church, he was to pitch upon the End of the like Scattering unto that of Julian's, when (as was before observed) Popery should, after the Reformation, prevail again, and the Power of the Beast make a Scattering of the Saints, before the final Ruin of that Power; even as Heathenism, after it was purged out of the Empire, was then again set up by Julian, with the killing the Holy People, by the Authority of an Heathen Emperor, before its final overthrow and extirpation: And so, that Scattering in Julian's Time was chosen, rather than any other Occurrence, as that from which the Computation of this Time should begin; Because through the likeness of it, it was most suitable to resemble the Occurrences about this killing the Witnesses, with which this Time was to have end: This being just the like Time of Trial, as that in Julian's Days was; and therefore he thus pitcheth upon that. Whereas, had he intended to reckon the Pope's Time, Times, and a half, and the exact ending of it, he might (and surely rather would) have reckoned from some other more eminent Mark suitable unto it, that accompanied his first Beginning and Rise, rather than this heterogeneal Passage of Julian's Persecution, (which yet is homogeneal with this last Slaughter of the Witnesses).

And, 3. Unto the Time of that latter Period of 1335 Days, vers. 12. (when it shall come) he adds a [Blessed is he that cometh, &c.]; Which to me sounds, as if the former Period had some eminent Blessedness also in the beginning or dawning of it; but yet, not to be compared with this other which is to follow. And it is, as if he had said, Blessed indeed is he that cometh to the end of the 1290 Days, when the Scattering of the Saints shall be accomplish'd, and when they shall Rise, to die no more: But Blessed, and thrice blessed is he that cometh to the other Time of 45 Years more; for then begins that first and great Resurrection, that brings us to Christ's Kingdom. And therefore he tells Daniel, Thou shalt stand up in thy Lot, &c. even thou, as well as others; and shalt enjoy the Blessedness of those Times. And this Speech is (in a manner) all one with that which John useth, when he speaks of the beginning of these Thousand Years, Chap. 20. 6. Blessed is he that hath part in the First Resurrection. So that, in the first Period (of 1290 Years) shall also begin blessed Times in comparison of those fore-going: For now the Scattering of the Holy People by Antichrist, is for ever accomplish'd.

Now then, the Angel's Scope here in this 11th Chapter, being to explain that Speech of his in Daniel, (for this 11th Chapter I take to be as a Comment upon that his Speech there); and he (namely, the same Angel) there mentioning a Scattering of the Holy People, which should accomplish all, and so be the last of their Persecutions; and making the ending of that Scattering, to be the beginning of that famous, and to be noticed Time, when is to be the finishing of all those great Things (which are to be done, ere Christ's Kingdom begins, and the glorious Resurrection) namely, the Ruin of the Pope and Turk, (the Preparations unto which, are to begin from the end of that Scattering): Hence it is, that he doth so largely insist on this last and eminent killing of the Witnesses, nesses, here in this Chapter : And also upon this their Resurrection. For this is placed as the Post, or Terminus a quo of the Race or Stadium of those 45 Years wherein those other great Things should in their order be accomplish'd.

Chap. 7.

And this Resurrection and Ascension of the Witnesses from under this their last Scattering, (they being now to die no more, as Christ did not after he arose) bearing (as was said) a Shadow and Type of the Resurrection, and New Heavens to come at the Thousand Years; and so, being a glimpse and scheme of the Blessedness then; how fit in this respect, was the Time of this Resurrection placed at the first Turn of Things, hastning to the bringing in that New World; and made the first Punctum, or Moment, beginning that 45 Years, whose End shall be the great Resurrection, and the Thousand Years of Christ's Kingdom. So that (to conclude this) that interim of 45 Years, is a Time which begins with a Resurrection, and also ends with a Resurrection; and that, an infinitely more glorious one; and in the middle course of which Time, the greatest Things are accomplished (as Preparations to that Kingdom of Christ) that ever were done upon the Earth; even the Ruin, both of the Pope and the Turk.

Yea further, to make the Harmony herein yet more full; This first Period of 1290 Days, ending between 1650, and 1656, is made by those who have pitch'd upon it, to be the Time for the Jews first Recalling and Conversion; and so of the Foundation of the declining of the Turkish Empire, (as I shewed before). And their Reason is, because the Angel, in the first Verse of this Chapter, makes mention of this their Call, as one thing to be accomplish'd also, (But for this, see Finch, Brightman, and others). And that may be one Reason why he pitcheth on the taking away the Jews daily Sacrifice in Julian's Time, (as then become abominable unto God) as that eminent Mark and Post (as it were) at which he would begin this Account; even because it was a Passage that would more conspicuously occur to the Jews as a Mark, in a way of oppositeness, answering that which was to fall out at the ending of this Time. For their setting up the daily Sacrifice in Julian's Time, was their last attempt to erect their Temple-Worship, unto which they (refusing the Messiah) unto this day do so cleave. Which Attempt of theirs, God from Heaven shewed his Hand against, by an Earthquake, overthrowing the Foundation of the Temple then by them laid; so more fully fulfilling that Prophecy of our Saviour; for not only above-ground, but even under-ground, was there not so much as one Stone left upon another. And therefore when he would hold forth unto them the Time when they shall turn unto the Messiah, typified out by that Temple and Sacrifice, he reckons from the taking away that their daily Sacrifice, which was made so remarkable unto them. And because he mentioneth the beginning of a Blessed Time, (blessed in its beginning, both unto Jew and Gentile, of both whom the Angel in that 12th of Daniel doth speak, and of the Ruin of the Enemies of both) which is to be compleated by the New Jerusalem, as the Accomplishment of all: Hence therefore this Period may also seem to respect the first Call of these Jews, as being that, which is the preparation unto their Kingdom.

And if these Two should then at that Time fall out together, (namely, this famous Resurrection of the European Witnesses, and the Conversion of the Jews) how would this reconcile all these Opinions together; and shew a further reason why that Period of 1290 Days was so eminently held forth unto Daniel, as that which was to be made famous by two so glorious Resurrections of Jews and Gentiles at once; when the Jews long scattering, and the Witnesses among the Gentiles, their last Scattering should both end together! And how harmonious were it, that in one day, as it were, the Foundations of the New Jerusalem to come (which is to be made up of both) should be thus laid together, and in a glorious Resurrection of them both! For such is that Revival which these European Witnesses here have, from this their Death unto Life, and is so here reckoned. And such, and no less, shall be the Conversion of the Jews, even no other than (as Paul speaks, Rom. 11. 15.) a Rising from the Dead. And thus should the Preparations to that glorious Kingdom consisting of both, fall out together, at the beginning of these 45 Years. During which interim and space of Time, the Enemies of them both are to be removed out of the World, who only do now stand in the way, and hinder the Revealing of Christ and his Kingdom,

PART II.

Kingdom, as the Roman Empire did the Revealing of Antichrist, that Man of Sin, and his Kingdom. And so, both these Typical Resurrections are in the end to be swallowed up by a more real and more glorious Resurrection, which shall begin that New Jerusalem and Kingdom of Jesus Christ.

And thus may the Resurrection of the European Witnesses be (as was said) the Preparation to the compleat pouring out of the fifth Vial in the Ruining of Rome. Even as (on the other side) the Conversion of the Jews (which is their Resurrection) is the Preparation to the Ruin of the Turk, which is the sixth Vial. And that the Jews shall be called, before the pouring out of the sixth Vial, (which is said to make way for the Kings of the East, Chap. 16. that is, for the Jews coming into their own Land) hath long since been the Opinion of Mr. Brightman and others. And many also do hold, that that Call of theirs, shall begin 45 Years before the compleat erection of the New Jerusalem. And so, those 45 Years after that first Call of theirs, (e're they can obtain the full possession of their promised Kingdom) do seem to answer unto those 45 Years which they spent after their coming out of Egypt, e're they got possession of their promised Land of Canaan, (for so long Time it was e're they were settled in it, if you take their 40 Years in the Wilderness, with the Time wherein Joshua fought his Battels, as himself expressly counts it, Josh. 12. 10.) Which 45 Years do begin at the end of the 1290 Years; and at the beginning of that Time falls out the Rising of the Witnesses, (according to the Interpretation formerly given).

And now, to give that other Interpretation of that Clause, [The second Wo is past] which follows upon this Resurrection of the Witnesses here, vers. 14. (which I before reserved unto this Place). [The second Wo is past (says the Angel) behold the Third Wo cometh quickly.] May there not in this Passage be tacitly intimated (as the Calling of the Jews still useth to be in this Book of the Revelation, which is chiefly written for the Gentiles) the Foundation of the Turks Ruin, by the Conversion of the Jews; as being that which was now to fall out together with the Resurrection of these Witnesses? For the Turkish Empire being the second Wo, or sixth Trumpet, with whose fundamental declining beginneth the Jews Call, (as Finch and others write of it); why then may not the Angel's meaning in that Clause be, that now, when he had, in his Narration, brought us to the Times of the Rising of the Witnesses, (contemporary with which, the Jew's Calling is to be, which is the first Foundation of the Second Wo's declining); then to pronounce this, [The Second Wo is past, &c.] that is, The Foundation of the Turk's passing away, and Ruin, is now laid, as is the Ruin of Rome in the Resurrection of the European Witnesses. And surely, then when the Jews are called, the Wo of that Turkish Tyranny may be reckoned and accounted of as past; for that the height and bitterness of it is past, (although the Empire it self may for a while still stand); the Wo of it lying in its Let and Hinderance of the Christian Religion, which now among the Jews shall revive in his Territories. Yea, in the stile of the Prophets, and also of this Book, when the Foundation of the Ruin of any State first begins to be laid, when its Empire and Dominion is past the Meridian, and once begins to decline, it is said to be past, (as you heard before). As when Things begin but to be accomplish'd, they are then said to be finished. Which was the learned Observation of Mr. Mede upon that Passage in Chap. 14. (which also I have inserted in the Exposition of that Place there), when the second Angel cried, Babylon is fallen, when yet the first Vial was but then begun to be poured out, and the open discovery of Antichrist made. But because at that Time, his Declension and Ruin began, he is therefore pronounced as then already fallen, (though again, afterwards, when his Destruction is compleated in the Ruin of the City it self, his Seat, chap. 18. the same Phrase is used). Even as in the Prophecy of Isaiah, (which Instance Mr. Mede also doth there bring) when the Medes first revolted from the Babylonish Monarchy, (which was done at the Time that Isaiah uttered it, he having many Years before prophesied the Ruin of it); Yet because that Revolt was the foundation of Babel's Ruin, (which was by those Medes when revolted from it, to be effected) therefore it is then said by the Prophet, (Isa. 21. 9.) Babylon is fallen, &c. And so say I; The meaning of the Angel here, is, to pronounce the Second Wo, or the sixth Trumpet, or (which is all one) the Turkish Empire to be now past, then when the Revolt of the Jews, in their Conversion unto Christ, doth first begin. This their Revolt being the Foundation or Preparation unto the passing away of this second Wo; and that, most truly, in the stile of the Prophets, in that it now begins to pass, &c. And so the Angel goes on, to give warning unto us of the Third Wo's approach; adding, [The Third cometh quickly] that is, the seventh Trumpet, or the New Jerusalem and Kingdom of Christ. And both the ending of the Beast's Reign now shortly follows, together with the Ruin of Rome, (the Foundation of, and preparation unto which Ruin, is laid in the Resurrection of the Witnesses); and also the sixth Vial, or the breaking in pieces the Turkish Empire, is after that to follow; the Preparation unto which, is the Calling of the Jews. And thus this 11th Chapter of the Revelation, does indeed become a compleat Comment on that 12th Chapter of Daniel, and makes mention of all those Things that are therein mentioned, as was at first observed.
Angel

Add unto all this, this small Observation.

I observed before, That God did use to fulfil Prophecies, and the Computations of them, over and over, in several degrees of Accomplishment. For Instances whereof, I gave this of the 1290 Days in Daniel; and this also of these 1260 Years of Antichrist's Reign: as in like manner those three Years and a half of the Witnesses Killing, and then their Rising again; whereof some gradual Accomplishments are already past, at several Times in Europe, within the Revolution of the Century of Years last past: And yet, I have withal proved, that another far greater Slaughter of them is yet to come. Now it may be, that the Observation of the Revolution of Time in the hundred Years last past, in which the former Killings of the Witnesses did fall out, may indigitate, and put some note upon the Time when this great and last Slaughter in the Revolution of this Century of Years now running on (since 1600) may fall out. That is, As those partial and smaller Killings of particular Witnesses, fell out in Anno 1547, (as did that in Germany, which ended in 1550) and in 1556, (as did that in England, in the Days of Queen Mary); So accordingly about the Time of the Revolution of the same term of 100 Years, now running on in this next Age after that, the Time of this last Killing of the Witnesses may also be.

I have long since observed it, (though not first to this particular purpose), That the Revolution of 100 Years hath produced (especially in these latter Days) new Motions and Alterations in the Church, like unto those that fell out 100 Years before. To this purpose that of John Hus is remarkable, who suffering Martyrdom at a Stake, Anno 1417, or thereabouts, post centum Annos, &c. After an hundred Years (says he) you Papists shall be called to an Account. (A Speech so memorable among the Bohemians, that they stamp'd it upon their Coins). And accordingly 100 Years after, Anno 1517, did Luther arise, and with him, the Gospel in Germany. And then again, if we descend to the Revolution of the next 100 Years, we shall find (and our Eyes have seen it) that 100 Years after Luther, about the Year 1618, began those notable Changes and Alterations in Germany, which still go on unto this Day. From which Year 1618, I reckon, that the War of the Beast against the Witnesses, and the Gentile's treading down the Outward Court, did begin; and shall still go on till it end in this great Slaughter of those Witnesses there. And this hap'ned in an opposite correspondency to what fell out 100 Years before. For as An. 1517, began Luther's Preaching, and the workings towards that Reformation that followed: So in Anno 1618, began the like workings towards the Deformation of the Gospel (as I may so call it), which hath gone on with as strange a Hand against the Church, as that other was carried on with, by God, for the Church. And to these I could add many other Instances. So that, I confess, that I am in like manner suspicious of the Revolution of 100 Years from those former (mentioned) Killings of the Witnesses in the Century last past; lest about the hundredth Year from thence, should be the Time of this other great and last killing of them, (as yet to come, and whereof those were but gradual Fore-runners).

PART II.

And (it may be, that) if England, and Scotland, &c. be that tenth Part of the City, which is to be the eminent Stage of this their Killing and Rising again, as hath been argued; then this Period will fall upon the hundred Years after that former Trial of England. And let me add this, That as upon the Rising of England and Scotland, began that Glorious Harvest of Blessed Times, which lasted till these German Wars began: So in this Revolution of another hundred Years after that Time, (according to the Conjecture held forth) are like to arise unto the Church, like Times of far greater Blessedness (if that hold true, that then those 45 Years (before spoken of) do begin, which are allotted for the accomplishment of All).

But to put a stop unto too much Curiosity in these Matters; All these Notions and Conjectures (though as probable as any of this kind usually given), I give up to further Light, and second Considerations, knowing that such have often failed, and deceived others. And considering also, that in fixing the Times and Seasons for God's great Works of Wonder, there is the greatest Modesty that may be to be expressed. For, if those 70 Years Captivity of the Jews in Babylon were so expressly designed out by God, and are now long since expired; and yet when to begin the Account of those 70 Years, is not agreed upon by the learned'st Chronologers unto this day: How much more difficult then must it needs be, to pitch the certain Time of any Period, before the accomplishment of it?

But however, let an indefinite Warning, that these Things are approaching, and we within the reach of them, suffice, for to move us to prepare for them; which is the only use of knowing them. It may be said of the Time of these Things, as it is said of the Day of Death, Latet hic Dies, ut observetur omnis Dies; The Day and Year of the Accomplishment of these great Matters are hid from us, that so each Day and Year we may be found ready, when-ever they shall come upon us, (as in this Age wherein we live, they are likely to do). And although we may think this dismal and black Hour of Temptation not likely to come so soon, (seeing the Clouds rise not fast enough so suddenly to o'rcast the Face of the Sky with Darkness); yet we are to consider, that we live now in the Extremity of Times, when Motions and Alterations being so near the Centre, become quickest and speediest; and we are at the Verge, and as it were, within the Whirle of that great Mystery of Christ's Kingdom, which will, as a Gulph, swallow up all Time; and so, the nearer we are unto it, the greater and more suddain Changes will Christ make, now hastning to make a full end of All.

And for the Jew's Call, which is conjunct with this Killing and Rising of the Witnesses: As it depends not upon ordinary Means to effect it, so there are like to be no Preparations at all unto it, until it comes, (as there are not for Things extraordinary); but a Nation shall bring forth in a Day, (as the Prophet speaks). And so, in the very Year before it, there will be no more outward Appearances, or Probabilities of it, than there are now, or than there have been many hundred Years since. And therefore our Faith need not be put off from this, by the seeing as yet no Stirrings or Motions at all unto it, or towards it. And the Truth is, both the Killing and Rising of the Witnesses, and also the Calling of the Jews, may fall out sooner than we are aware of.

OF the God-head, and the three Persons within it self. That there is but one God. That in the Divine Nature, or one God-head, there are three Persons conversing with, speaking to, and glorifying one another. Which Union and Communion of the Three Persons between themselves, is peculiar to the Deity, and incommunicable to any mere Creature.

- Chap. 1. That God is one in Essence, Pag. 1
 Chap. 2. That this God one in Essence, is three in Persons, who jointly co-operate in all God's External Works, 3
 Chap. 3. That these three Persons in the Godhead, are Persons distinct one from the other, 11
 Chap. 4. That the three Persons in the Godhead, have an Union and Communion between themselves apart, and incommunicable unto us, 13
 Chap. 5. Of giving Glory to God. That it is a Duty incumbent upon us, prov'd by numerous Instances in Scripture. That we are to glorify God, not only nor chiefly for the benefit he bestows on us, but for the glory of his Name, and the excellence and blessedness of his Nature. Some Reasons given, that Grace in us may be raised to this high strain, 22
 Chap. 6. A more punctual Explication, what it is to give glory to God, in Himself or Works; set out by a Comparative with all the other ways of glorifying God, which it far exceeds, 32
 Chap. 7. The Glory of God which appears in his Kingdom, and Universal Dominion, whereby he rules over all; as it is described in Pl. 89. from v. 6, to 15. 41

B O O K II.

OF the Son of God, the Second Person in the Trinity. What his Person is, considered in himself. He is the Eternal Son of the Father, one God in Essence with him. The Son, the Second Person took the Man Jesus into personal Union with himself; and so Christ is God-Man joined into one Person.

- Chap. 1. How greatly it imports us to have a true Knowledge of the Person of Christ. What his Person is. That he existed from all Eternity with God as a Person; and was not merely a Manifestation of the Deity in Time, and then only Existent when he first appeared in the World, pag. 49
 Chap. 2. Who this Person was that Existed from Eternity. The two Titles which are given to him, as Existing before the World was. 1. That he is the Word. 2. The Son of God. His first Title, the Word, imports two things; His being Eternally begotten of the Father, as the Image of his Essential Glory: And that he is given to us by God as his Word, whereby he manifests himself, 59

- Chap. 3. That he was the Son of God, who existed throughout all Ages, and from Eternity. This prov'd by all those Instances of Scriptures, wherein his Eternal Existence is asserted, and wherein the Title of Son of God is also ascribed to Him, 64
 Chap. 4. What kind of Son he is to God, or in what sense he is the Son of God. He is the proper Son of God in a special peculiar manner, such as no other Person can be said to be. He is styled the only begotten Son of God, which can be affirmed of no Creature. This imports that his Eternal Generation is the Foundation of his Sonship. He is called the Son of the Living God; that he is begotten of him in his own likeness: and is of the same Nature and Substance with him. That he is God by an Identity of one, and the same Essence of the Godhead, and not by Union only, or Office, 69
 Chap. 5. That the second Person of the Trinity assumed humane Nature into personal Union with himself, and so is God-Man in one Person for ever, 81

B O O K III.

OF the Glories and Royalties that belong unto Jesus Christ, considered as God-Man in one Person; (besides what accrued to him from his performance of the Work of our Redemption:) and which were appointed for him by his Father from all Eternity. The apparent Manifestation of the Divine Attributes in the Person of Jesus Christ God-Man. The Designation of him in God's first Decrees, as the End for whom all the Creatures were made. The part that he bore as God-Man in the Creation, as by him all things were created. The Appointment of him by God, to be one Lord over all, under him one God: and to be in a more special respect the Head of the Elect, on whom they were to hold the Tenure of all the Blessings bestowed on them, above the Dues of Creation.

- Chap. 1. A Preface giving a short Scheme or Draught of the ensuing Discourse. An Exposition of Col. 1. from ver. 15 to 19. all that is spoken there of Christ, must be ascribed to him as God-Man, pag. 95
 Chap. 2. The personal native Glories and Royalties which belong to the Son of God, as dwelling in our Nature. How the Divine Attributes are Inherent, and shine forth in that Manifestus so united to the Son of God. In what sense he is the Image of the Invisible God. How he is the Wisdom, and the Power of God. His humane Nature does not possess those Perfections in that high degree, as they are Attributes in the Divine Nature, and so Infinite; but he hath them in a nearer resemblance, than any mere Creature is capable of. In what respects he also has Independency and Sovereignty. It is upon the Union of the humane Nature with the Son of God, that it is invested with his high Priviledges, 103

Chap.

The C O N T E N T S.

- Chap. 3. The Honour and Royalties that appertain unto Christ God-Man, as ordained such in God's first Decrees, to be the final Cause or End of the whole Creation and Works of God. In what sense he is the First-born of every Creature. The Reasons why it is not to be understood in respect of his Eternal Generation as Son of God. It is spoken of him in consideration of a Dignity or Birth-right, which the Man Jesus Christ, united with the second Person in the Trinity, has above all other Creatures. He is also the First-born, in that he was first in order intended in the Eternal Purposes of God. He is the final Cause or End for which all things were created. And upon the presupposition of his being decreed to be God-Man, it belonged to him, as his due, to be the universal End for whom all things should be made: This was an high Prerogative of which no mere Creature could be capable, 109
- Chap. 4. That by this designed Union of the Son of God to this Individual Creature the Man Jesus, and in the Person of this his Son so considered, God hath and doth make the highest manifestation of his Glory, and communication of himself, such as by no created Ways or Means else could have been attained, 117
- Chap. 5. The Glory which Christ, as God-Man, had assigned him, before the World was, in his Election by the Father; manifested in an Explication of John 17. 5. Whether that Expression, Glorify me now with the Glory which I had with thee before the World was, be spoken of Christ, as Second Person in the Trinity, as God, or as God-Man, appointed in God's Eternal Decree. In what proper sense this might be said by the Man-Jesus, Glorify now me, &c. How, as God-Man, he can be said to have had this Glory with the Father, before the World was; when, as such, he did not then Exist. What Glory it is that is here intended, it is a Glory due to his Person. God-Man distinct from, and Superior to what followed, upon his performance of the Work of our Redemption, 123
- Chap. 6. The Exposition of some other passages in Joh. 17. That God having first predestinated Christ to be God-Man, this moved him to elect us to compleat his Glory. The first Motive was, That as he was to be an Head, there might not be wanting to him a perfect Body to participate with him in the enjoyment of his Blessedness. How the Marriage of Adam in Paradise, was a Type of the Relation between Christ and the Elect his Spouse, designed before the consideration of the Fall. The second Motive was, That a Glory additional to Christ's personal Glory, might accrue to him as God-Man, from their being Elected. The third Motive was drawn from the Interest and Part which Christ predestinated God-Man had, together with his Father, in electing them, Joh. 17. 1. And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them, that they may be One, even as we are One. The meaning of the Words explained, by Answers to some Queries. What that Glory is which the Father had given to Christ. What that Glory is which Christ thereupon assigns as his own Gift to us. When was the Time of giving this Glory to him and to us. The fourth Motive is, what Christ represents to his Father, viz. the Glory which the accomplishment of this Design will bring to himself, and to his Father, when the Union and Glory of the Saints, shall thereby be perfected at the last Day of the World, 138
- Chap. 7. That God constituted from Eternity Jesus Christ God-Man, to be one universal Lord, under himself, over all the Creatures he intended to make, 154
- Chap. 8. That the Title of Lord, though it imports him that is God, and connotes with it, his being God; yet in this Corinthian Text, (and elsewhere) doth primarily note, a Relation to an Office or a Dignity put on him by the Father, as considered to be God-Man; and not simply, his being Second Person, God with God only. The Apostle's intent here is, to set him forth in the dependence, that all things, &c. have of him as such, and not upon him as Second Person, simply considered, it is a Title of Office which he bears afore God, considered as God-Man. The Fitness, Fulness, and Sufficiency of this Person, Christ, God-Man, to discharge this Office of one Lord. For what Reasons it was necessary, that he should be God-Man in one Person, to qualify him for the Employment, 158
- Chap. 9. That all things do depend upon Christ as one Lord, as God-Man, as well as upon the Father, as one God. God's Eternal Purposes concerning the whole Creation were made in Christ, as God-Man. By him God made the World. The more peculiar Dependance which the Elect have on Christ, God-Man, as their Head. They hold of him the Tenure of a Spiritual Being, above what they had by Creation, and of all supernatural Blessings and Benefits, 165
- Chap. 10. How all things depend on Christ, God-Man; and what influence he hath into them; further proved and illustrated, by that Text in Col. 1. 16. Some Cautions premised for the understanding it aright. What is meant by those Expressions, In Him and by Him are all Things, 173
- Chap. 11. That Christ as God-Man is the Creator of all things, proved by Scriptures. The first Proof out of the former Text reassumed. 1 Cor. 8. 6. By whom are all things. Some further Explanation how this is attributed to him as God-Man, in Answers to some Queries concerning it, 180
- Chap. 12. That Christ, as God-Man, is the Creator of all things, proved from John 1. 1, 2, 3. Whether, ὁ λόγος, the WORD, import not as the Second Person, existing as God with God, in the Beginning, so withal connotating that Person, as sustaining, before God, the Personage of God-Man, by whom as such all things were created. An Interpretation of Prov. 8. from vers. 22 to 31. with a Parallel between that Scripture, and this of John 1. 1, 2, 3. A brief Exposition of the first Chapter of John, continued unto the 14th Verse, 184
- Chap. 13. How Christ, God-Man, is subservient to God in all the Works of his Providence. He upholds and supports all things. He governs the World, and rules all Affairs in it. After his Government is expir'd, at the end of the World he will judg all Creatures, both Angels and Men, 197

That God is one in Essence.

THat God is but one, you have this declared concerning him by Moses, Deut. 6. 4. The Lord our God is one Lord. Also by God's own immediate Testimony you have the same Truth pronounced, Deut. 32. 39. See now that I, even I am He, and there is no God with me. To which you may add, Isa. 44. 8. Is there a God besides me? I know not any. He puts that last Clause, as the clearest Evidence, and the most ultimate Demonstration of the Truth of this, that God himself the true God, and the God of Truth could give us. It is Pa-parallel for Certainty and Infallibility with God's adding an Oath to his Word, even such is this Speech here, I know not any. It comes in, as upon second deliberate Thoughts, after the former Speech declared: And to be sure if there were another God besides him, he must needs know it. For, 1. He that is God, knows all that are, if they be existent; and therefore if there were another, he must needs be privy to it. Especially, 2. Another God: for if there were another God, he must be Immense in Extent of Being, and so take up so much room for that his Being to dwell in, as he could not hide nor conceal himself from this one God, nor scape the Omniscience of his Eye, who is the true God. And, 3. Another God would have been his Compeer for our true God his God-head, the Rivalship would have been for no less. Such is the Interest of the very God in this matter, that his Jealousy, (who professeth of himself that he is a jealous God in point of Worshipping him as God, otherwise than he hath appointed); his Jealousy, I say, would have risen to the height of it, and have provoked him to have seen to that, and to have searched out that of all things else. To have an Equal, (Pompeiusve parem) a Corival for the God-head, would have detracted from the Glory of him, who hath said it, I will not give my Glory to another, Isa. 42. 8. Sole Dominion is the Essential Point to every one that is a Monarch; and God's Glory and Blessedness lies in that very Point of sole Dominion: and therefore you find these two conjoined, viz. God's Blessedness and Sovereignty, who is the blessed and only Potentate, (says Paul of him) 1 Tim. 6. 15. You may therefore well believe him, and take it upon his Word, when he speaks it in this manner, upon his Knowledg; I know not any.

We need not seek out many Reasons: one God, and one sufficient Reason for it is enough; and that is sufficient, which hath been in a manner mentioned already before: That there is no Room, or Space for two Immense Beings, divers from each other. When therefore God says, in Isa. 63. 3. There is none with me, his meaning must be the same with this, in 1 Cor. 8. 5. There is no other God but one, i. e. no God divers from him. The God-head is but one, yet the Persons in this one God-head are more than one. We may safely say of each Person, as of the Father, that He is God, and likewise of the Son, that He is God, and of the Holy Ghost, that He is God. And that there are three, each of whom is God, but still it is but one and the same God for Nature, and that Oneness, 1 Joh. 5. 8. in and by which the three are said to be one, is that they all three are one God alike. The God-head is but one, and we must be wary of saying there are three Gods, that would sound at least too much, as if there were one God diverse from the other; whereas one and the same God-head is in all, and each of the three, you may say it of each thrice over, the Father is God, the Son is God, &c. But that there are three Gods, sounds harsh, and is condemned by Scripture-Language, yea by the Text: There are many Gods, but to us but one.

And the Reason of it is his Infiniteness for Perfection, as well as his Immensity: for he comprehends all Perfections within himself, or else he were not Infinite, and his Blessedness consists in it, so that there cannot be a God diverse from himself.

C H A P. I I.

That this God one in Essence, is three in Persons, who jointly co-operate in all God's External Works.

I Cor. 8. 6.

To us there is but one God the Father, and one Lord Jesus Christ.

Here are two Persons mentioned in the Text, the Father, and Christ the Lord; and these two Persons are made distinct in the God-head. The Father is a Relate, and there must be a Son to answer as a Correlate thereunto, and an only begotten Son, for he is that one Lord over [us] Saints, and all other Things in the Text. So great a Father would put no other Person into that Sovereignty with himself, but such a Son who is of as high a Birth, and for substantiality of Nature, and Generation, equal with himself; and who in his very Person should greaten, and fill up this Office of Lord over all the Saints, by whom we and all things else, are, and do subsist.

There is a third Person in the God-head, the Spirit of God the Father, and of Christ; who, in my handling the Point will fall in, and appear to be that only true God, as well as these other two named.

And this is a prime Principle for me to premit, for it is influential into the most particular parts of this whole Discourse. It runs through every Vein of it, and we shall meet with it at every Turn, yea, whole Treatises in it refer to the Doctrine of three Persons in the Trinity, and therefore it cannot be omitted here, but deservedly and necessarily claims a place amongst these Principles I set first.

And further, there is this Occasion of my inserting it. We may, and cannot but know, that there hath risen up in this our Age, a Generation, of all others the most presumptuous, that have affirmed all the whole Creation to be but emanations of the God-head, or, in plain words, to be materially God himself, tho' turquoised and translated by himself into so many lesser parcels of Beings, which considered apart, we call Creatures: And that it is but the Folly and Ignorance of Men, to think themselves to be but Creatures different essentially from God: And that if Men would but believe themselves to be God really, and indeed (which, say they, we all are); they would be freed from that fond dotage of being in subjection to the Law of God, and bondage to the fear of Hell, and should instantly be enfranchised, and enter into all the Priviledges the God-head hath. And because they here of, and in Scriptures find three spoken of, to be in that one God, as Persons distinct, whom these Men foreseeing to stand in their way to this their Aspirement of each, and every Man to be as so many distinct Persons enjoying the God-head themselves with God; therefore they make no more ado, but throw down that blessed Society of three in the God-head, allowing them no other reality in the Divine Being, but as three Manifestations, or else Operations of God in us, and to us, doing herein like Men that are ambitious, and would rise, they cast down those that are in Rank above them: So these would deal with the Trinity, as if they stood in their way to this high Preferment: An high Preferment indeed, which Satan (having first sinned himself by the like impious Ambition) prompted our first Father unto, Gen. 3. 5. You shall be as Gods: And he has left the Seeds of this Aspirement in our corrupted Nature, upon which God said, Man is become as one of Us.

But the Nature of God blessed for ever, cannot admit of this, nor be able to raise a Creature unto it, for it is utterly inconsistent. For evidence of which, the Man Jesus, tho' the Father loved him above all his Saints and Angels, yet all the Power in God could not make him God in Essence, or in Nature; all that could be done for him, was to be one in Person with him, who is God. This he might be, but to turn his Human Nature into the Divine Being, was incompatible with it.

A lower Degree of accursed Pride than this, fell into the Heart of the Devil himself, whose Sin in his first apostatizing from God, take the height of it then, is conceived to be but a stomaching that Man should be one day advanced unto the hypostatical Union, and be one in Person with the Son of God, which his Proud Angelical Nature (then in actual Existence the highest of Creatures) could not brook. But the Devil was modest in comparison to these Men's Pride, which usurps upon the whole of the three Persons at once; and will not endure them Compeers with themselves. And truly these could have no better way whereby to step into these Thrones, in their Imaginations, than to depose our blessed Three, by setting up a Religion, and Opinion, whereby Millions of Persons instead of those Three blessed Ones, should communicate of the God-head, in the same manner as these blessed Persons do. This caused me to review the Scriptures afresh for the disquisition of this great Truth.

My Method in dispatching this great Point must be brief, and contracted. And therefore, tho the Scriptures afford plenty of evidence every where, yet I was satisfied with one full Passage of Scripture, which I met with at first in the very entrance of my disquisition about the Trinity of the Persons in the one God-head, and which is usually cited out of Moses for it, in several Passages of his in that one Book of Genesis. And I considered with my self, that as he was the first Pen-man of any Scripture, so he must needs have laid the Foundation (tho more darkly and obscurely) of such Gospel-Truths, as this of the Persons must be supposed to be, if it proved to be a Truth at all; and I finding that Carit in his Concertations with the Carnal Jew, professeth in preaching the Gospel, which seem'd new to them, to witness and preach none other things, than those, which Moses particularly, and the Prophets did say: And the Doctrine of the Gospel bringing forth this great Truth to Light more clearly, and so positively, and determinately, I judged that this great Truth, (if a Truth at all) must be extant in Moses; and Paul having appealed unto Moses to give Evidence, unto Moses I did go.

And in the beginning of his first Chapter, I was accosted with his Narrative of the Creation, as it is in the first Days work set out, ver. 1, 2, 3. And after that, more particularly, with that renowned Consultation which God had about the making of Man, and his Speech uttered concerning it; Let us make Man (the summary of all things that he had made) in our Image, according to our Likeness, ver. 24. of that Chapter; in which Moses bringeth God in, speaking in the Language of an [Us] Let Us make Man. Which [Us] imports a plurality of Persons to have been with God when he created Man. And we have the same [Us] twice used by Moses, when in like manner he bringeth God in speaking of, and to himself, Gen. 3. 22. The Man is become as one of Us. And then Chap. 11. ver. 7. at the Confusion of Languages, Let Us go down. And at the overthrow of Sodom, 'tis said in Gen. 19. 24. That the Lord rained Fire from the Lord out of Heaven.

And tho I find some of our Divines somewhat difficult to admit those Arguments, drawn from all the Proofs out of the first Chapter of Genesis, and are exceptions here and there against some of them; yet finding in a search and study of other Scriptures, which be alledged for the confirmation of the whole point it self, that so many of those Scriptures usually brought for it out of the Prophets, and the New Testament, do flow into this Current of Moses, and speak the same Things, and well nigh in the same Phrases, that Moses hath used, and all unto this one purpose and intent, that there are such blessed Persons in the God-head, God with God; I thereupon resolved to content my self with those few Allegations out of Moses alone. And finding them so strangely and strongly back'd by those other Scriptures, that came in with their Suffrages unto these of Moses; I then set up my rest in these Citations out of him, to make them the Rendezvous and Center of those other Scripture-Proofs, which of themselves, tho standing severed and single, might each be a sufficient Argument alone by themselves, yet marching under Moses's Banner, and being further Explanations of his Speech, they altogether have a joint united Force, as so many twisted Cords, or as so many smaller, they contribute their Waters into the same great Stream, and Channel.

1. For those Words used about the whole Creation, Gen. 1. 1, 2, 3. In the beginning God created the Heaven, and the Earth. And the Earth was without form, and void, and Darkness was upon the Face of the Deep: and the Spirit of God moved upon the Face of the Waters. And God said, Let there be Light; and there was Light. These Words being prefaced to the whole of the Creation, many judicious Divines insist upon them, as denoting the hand that each Person had in the whole Work of Creation, and this is no less back'd by other Scriptures, which follow. The Father is said to create all things by Jesus Christ, Eph. 3. 9. And the Son is said to create, Heb. 1. Unto the Son he says, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever, and ever, ver. 8. And God, even thy God hath anointed thee with the Oil of Gladness, above thy Fellows, ver. 9. And, Thou Lord in the beginning hast laid the Foundation of the Earth: and the Heavens are the Works of thine Hands, v. 10. And the Holy Ghost is said to create, Psal. 104. 30. Thou sendest forth thy Spirit, they are created: and thou renewest the Face of the Earth. And the word Elohim being used of each Person singly, tho it be a Word of the Plural Number: yet, as when Magistrates are stiled Elohim, Psal. 82. 6. I have said, you are Gods: Each Magistrate may be called Elohim; so applied to each Person singly, it may be said, that Elohim the Father Created, and Elohim the Son created, &c. Creation being an Action that is common to the Persons jointly. Both the Plural in the Word, אלהים God, and the Singular in the Word ברא Created, are fitly joined then, when the Great, and materially the General Work of the Creation of the whole World visible and invisible, made out of nothing immediately, is first spoken of: as this of creating both Heaven and Earth in the beginning, was. And the Creation in a singular manner is common to the Three, without a special Appropriation to any one of the three. And then the Argument for this Interpretation will run thus, that who created Heaven and Earth, is that Elohim of whom Moses did speak; but out of other Scriptures it is plain, that the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost created Heaven, and Earth; and therefore these Words of Elohim, are spoken of all Three.

I will not utterly leave out that Argument from the first Words, God created, which many judicious and holy Divines insist upon. That the Word אלהים God, is in the Plural Number, signifying more than one; and yet ברא Created is in the Singular, because that the Persons were in a Plurality, or more than one; but the Verb Created, was in the Singular, to notify the Unity and Oneness of the God-head. But there are so many exceptions against this, which have broken the Wards of the Lock, that it is difficult to find a Key which shall open it. I confess, I like not to say of the Persons, that they are Gods in the Plural: to say of each Person singly, that he is God, that is safe, but it is not so to say of them, that they are Gods. It sounds a Diversity of the God-head, as well as Distinction of the Persons. The Word אלהים Elohim therefore, tho in the Declension of it it be of the Plural Number, yet in the sense of it 'tis a Singular, sometimes used to signify the God-head, sometimes applied to each of the Persons singly, and so no Argument can be fetch'd from it.

But the Argument I urge from these three Verses is, That in them the three Persons are distinctly rehearsed in the Work of the Creation. First, the Father, in that saying, God created Heaven and Earth: which Work of Creation is more generally attributed to the Father; as in our Creed, I believe in God the Father Almighty, the Maker of Heaven and Earth, &c. Then the Son, who is the Word of the Father, by whom he made all things, Eph. 3. 9. is hiddenly covered, and yet truly notified in the 3d verse, God said, Let there be Light, &c. And this word is in the Chapter repeated five times, in the second, fourth, fifth, and sixth Days Work of the Creation; and adds a Confirmation, that the Son was included, and aimed at ultimately in Moses his [God said]; for in John 1. 3. 'tis said, Without the Word nothing was made that was made. As in Moses, all was by the same [God said, Let there be] created, as well as the Light. And it is no Objection, to say, that the first Days Work, the Creation of Heaven and Earth, was without it, or that Heaven, and the Earth was made the first Day, before the Light, which was the second Day: For the Heavens are said to be made by the Word of God, Psal. 136. 5. To him, that by Wisdom made the Heavens, not by the Attribute Wisdom; for in the Proverbs Wisdom is the Person, and it is said, Prov. 3. 19. The Lord by Wisdom hath founded the Earth. They were therefore all made both Heaven and Earth, and all things in them by one, and the same; [God said] and by his Word.

But finding the Word [Us] repeated again, and again in Moses's Story, denoting Persons whom God speaks unto, as at the Creation of Man, and again in matters of Government about Man, as at confounding their Languages, Let Us go down, Gen. 11. 7. And in the Prophets the same; and so many other Scriptures flowing in, compared with these of Moses to give Evidence, I resolved to content my self with the Testimony of Moses alone, as it came illustrated unto me by so many concurrent Witnesses, so that I will not divert, but will center in this one Proof alone, as the Seal for all the other.

Gen. 1. 26. Let us make Man in our Image, after our Likeness.

It is God speaking himself, God said, and not Moses, as in the Name of God: And there is no Instance in the Hebrew, that We, or Us, is ever used of one single Person, when God himself speaks of himself. And,

Secondly, It is God speaking, not by way of Declaration of what he could do alone singly; but uttered by way of Conference unto, and with some other Persons. And not only so, but 'tis an Excitation or Calling upon them, to do it with him, as if he should say, Come, Let us make; as those that being with God at that Time, were to join in that Work also with him.

Thirdly, God speaks not to his Attributes: No wise Man ever thus speaks to his own Abilities, Come, let us do such or such a thing; which more especially appears in that other Speech, Let us go down. 'Tis a Person, or Persons, who are said to descend: as elsewhere, the Holy Ghost is said to descend in the likeness of a Dove, Mat. 3. 16. and the Son of God, often in the Gospels, to come from Heaven.

Fourthly, These spoken unto, were not the Angels, (as some think) for they are never called our Creators: But God alone is said to create, expressly, Job 9. 8. Isa. 45. 18. And he is still said to create by himself, because he used no other Instrument: So expressly in Isa. 44. 24. Thus saith the Lord thy Redeemer, and he that formed thee from the Womb: I am the Lord that maketh all things; that stretcheth forth the Heavens alone, and spreadeth abroad the Earth by my self: And Chap. 45. 18. Especially, the Angels create not the Souls of Men, which God alone is the Father of, not Angels, Heb. 12. 9. Nor are we said, to be made after their Image, but God's, Col. 3. 10.

Nor are the Angels meant, when it is said, Thy Makers are thy Husband, as Jer. 54. 5. Or, Remember thy Creators in the Days of thy Youth; which stile of Creators is yet in the Plural used, when God is spoken of, in Multitudes of other Places, Psal. 149. 2. In his Makers. Isa. 44. 2. The Lord thy Makers. Yea, as Let us make, is in the excitation to it: so, in the next Verse which mentions the performance of this Work, it is accordingly said, [So, God created Man] which was the thing done, it is thrice repeated: 1. So, God created Man in his own-Image; 2. In the Image of God created he him; 3. Male and Female created he them: God, not Angels. Nor did he use them as Instruments, as when he gave the Law he did, but not in the Creation of the least Creature.

But let us further consider things impartially, comparing the Old and New Testament together, as to the Explication of this one Passage, Let us, &c.

1. Let us enquire, whether it be not elsewhere in the New Testament said, when the Creation is spoken of, that there were Persons, yea that these Persons were [with God] yea, and that when Man was made, John 1. 1. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and again, ver. 2. The same was in the beginning with God. Yea, and is it not as expressly there affirmed, that that Word that was with God, was at the making of Man? ver. 3. All things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made, that was made: And if all things were, and nothing made without him, then Man certainly: And doth it not follow also, from from ver. 4. that He was the Life of Man? In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men.

Again, We find another Person, the Spirit of God, to have been with God at the Creation, Moving and upholding the Waters, Gen. 1. 2. And the Earth was without form, and void, and Darknes was upon the Face of the deep: and the Spirit of God moved upon the Face of the Waters. And Pfal. 33. 6. By the Word of the Lord were the Heavens made, and all the Host of them by the breath of his Mouth. The Psalmist interpreting Moses, and referring to the Creation, speaks thus. And why should not we think then, these to be the [Us]; even the Father, Word, and Spirit. This at the Creation.

2. Again, In that other place, we find a Consultation about a Fact belonging to the Government of the World, to be done even as here, Let Us make: so, here; Come, let Us descend. Now, let us see, if more Persons than one are not said to have been of Counsel with God in these. 'Tis certain, he excludes all Creatures to be of his Counsel: Isa. 40. 13, 14. Who hath directed the Spirit of the Lord, or being his Counsellor, hath taught him? With whom took he Counsel, and who instructed him, and taught him in the path of Judgment? and taught him Knowledge, and shewed to him the way of Understanding? but professeth of his Son, that he is his Counsellor, Isa. 9. 6. For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the Government shall be upon his Shoulder: and his Name shall be called, Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. And the same of his Spirit, 1 Cor. 2. 10, 11. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. For what Man knoweth the things of a Man, save the Spirit of Man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no Man, but the Spirit of God. And as here, in Genesis, when God was to create Man: so there, when he was to judg and exert a great act of Government in the World. And it came to matter of Fact, which when it is to be done, he speaks to those of Counsel with him, as Persons interested therein, and shews them what he is about to do; even in like manner, as he doth at the creating of Man, Let us make Man, &c. Now then, when we shall read in the New Testament, and find that Word, who was with God in the beginning, John 1. 1. expressly called God at first dash. And to have been with God as a Person distinct from him, and this Person called the Word there, to be the only begotten Son of God, in ver. 14. And shall further hear, that the Son of Man, whom that Word is said to be made one Person with, is one with God; and that in his Person he says, Joh. 5. 19. Verily, Verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doth, these also doth the Son likewise. When we consider this, it will be then plain to us, that God doth nothing without an Us; and that his Son was an Original Co-worker with him in all things, which he accordingly sheweth unto him: for it follows, That doth the Son likewise. God doth nothing, but the Son likewise; he shews and tells his Son first, and by shewing it to him, consulteth with him about it: And mark the coherence, ver. 17. He not only consulteth with him, but they two are said to work together every thing that is done, from that first beginning of acting, any thing outwardly even from the Creation: My Father worketh [hitherto,] and I work: and the Jews thereupon, ver. 18. Seek the more to kill him, not only because he had broken the Sabbath, but had said also, that God was his Father, making himself equal with God. Having a joint hand with him, and working all and every thing as much as the Father, whom all acknowledg to be God. Where, upon such Words of theirs, it was that Christ pertinently replies, as you heard, ver. 19. Verily, verily, I say unto you, the Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doth, these also doth the Son likewise; acknowledging they had spoken rightly according to his very true Sense and Intent. Now judg impartially, you find this Man, this Person, speaks in the Name of one that was with God afore the World was, John 1. 1. One equal with God. Verse 18 of this 5th Chapter of John, you find himself say, that God doth nothing, but he shews it to him, as one to co-work and join with him. And you find here in Moses, that God, when he was to make Man, he consulted some or other Person, then with him, saying, Let Us make; that is, join together in the same Work; Let Us make Man; and shall we not judg, that this this his Son was here, and One of the Us? And there is a Spirit, who is of this Cabinet-Counsel, John 16. 13, 15. who shews, (as Christ's Word of him is). and over-hears all, and is privy to what the Father still says unto the Son. So then, here are Three that make the Us.

3. As in Creating, these are joined as an Us; so in Governing and Judging the World: My Father worketh hitherto, and I work, says Christ, Joh. 5. 17. In such Works also this Us is used; in confounding the Languages: and in bringing Vengeance on Sodom: In bringing them out of Egypt we find the same; Gen. 11. 7. Go to, Let us go down, and there confound their Language: The Holy Ghost descended to give Tongues; and he descended to confound them. And, for the Judgment on Sodom; I shall insist upon it a little: Gen. 18. ver. 1. 'Tis said, The Lord appeared; How? ver. 2. Three Angels came: One whereof was the Lord; and the other two created Angels, Companions of him. Two Angels went to Sodom, ver. 22. and the third stayed, Chap. 19. 1. who was the Lord himself that communed with Abraham; Of whom 'tis said, Chap. 18. 20, 21. The Lord said, Because the Cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great, and because their Sin is very grievous, I will go down now, and see whether they have done altogether according to the Cry of it, &c. And he staying with Abraham, 'tis also said, ver. 22. But Abraham stood yet before the Lord. This Angel was God, or bearing the Person of one that was God; for Exod. 3. 2. the Angel that appeared in the Bush, says, ver. 6. I am the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: the same, that as an Angel appeared to the Fathers: To Abraham, Gen. 18. To Isaac, Gen. 26. And to Jacob, Chap. 31. and Chap. 32. 9, 24. Whom, Gen. 48. 15, 16. Jacob, in his Blessings, calls both God, and an Angel; as Hosea also doth, Chap. 12. 3, 4, 5. This Angel, who was entrusted with the Government of the World, and said, he would see, ver. 21. was not the Father, for he is never Missus, Sent; as the word Angel imports this was, and yet withal was [GOD] though in the appearance and Office of an Angel. And we read of God sent by God, in Zech. 2. 8. Thus saith the Lord, He hath sent me to the Nation, &c. 'Tis Christ's Speech of his Father's sending him. So also, Isa. 48. 16, 17. — The Lord God, and his Spirit hath sent me, &c. He that is the Lord, says, he was sent by the Lord; even as we read the New Testament also speaks of Christ: And he that is sent, must be distinct, and a Person distinct from the Sender. Now there are two Persons that send him there, The Lord God, and his Spirit, hath sent me: And he that was sent was God, and no less Jehovah than they; as all the Contexts afore and after shew. So then, you find three Persons there; and for this Cause it is, he is stiled the Angel of God's Face, Isa. 63. 9.

And there you meet with the three Persons too, as joining in that great work of Redemption out of Egypt. First, the Father is spoken of in ver. 7, 8. I will mention the Loving-Kindness of the Lord, and the Praises of the Lord, according to all that the Lord hath bestowed on us: and the great Goodness towards the House of Israel, which he hath bestowed on them according to his Mercies, and according to the multitude of his Loving-Kindnesses: For he said, Surely they are my People; Children that will not Lie: So he was their Saviour. The Son, in ver. 9. In all their Affliction he was afflicted, and the Angel of his Presence saved them: In his Love and in his Pity he redeemed them. And he bare them and carried them all the days of old. The Spirit, in ver. 10. But they rebelled and vexed his Holy Spirit. He that is called Holy Spirit, in the New, is according to the Hebraism, called the Spirit of Holiness, in the Old. But it is Christ, that was the Angel of his Presence, appearing afore God, interceding, and in whose Face God shines, 2 Cor. 3. Exod. 33. 2. My Angel, in ver. 14. is interpreted, God's Face, Presence. John 14. 9. He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father. And he it was that saw the Affliction of his People, Exod. 3. 7. who ver. 8. is said to come down; even as upon the occasion of Sodom, you have heard it, in like manner spoken. And it was this Angel, in whom (God says) his Name was; that is, his very Nature, Exod. 23. 20, 21, 22. And 'twas he that governed them in the Wilderness.

Now, this Angel, or, the Lord sent in that appearance, both to Abraham about Sodom: and to Moses, Exod. 3. And to the People of Israel, was one and the same, as all places shew: And this was the Lord himself; as Mal. 3. 1.

He

He is expressly called The Lord; and the Angel of the Covenant; Even Christ, the Second Person whom they tempted. So Paul, Neither let us tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of Serpents, 1 Cor. 10. 9. So Stephen expressly, Acts 7. 32, 37, 38. I am the God of thy Fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, ver. 37. This is that Moses which said unto the Children of Israel, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, of your Brethren, like unto me; Him shall ye hear. This is he that was with the Church in the Wilderness, with the Angel, which spake to him in the Mount Sinai. And this Person, who came down in the appearance of an Angel, to Abraham, about Sodom, Abraham as expressly entitles, The Lord, and Judge of all the World, Gen. 18. 25. All which consider, how it punctually agrees with what in the New Testament out of John 5. hath been observed, as by comparing them, will appear. For, as the Son hitherto had wrought in all Works with the Father, as you heard out of John 5. 20, 21. So ver. 22. of that Chapter, God hath committed all Judgment unto the Son. And it is answerably said by Moses, Gen. 19. 24. The Lord, or Jehovah, rained down Fire from Jehovah; that is, the Son, who was God, he did it by Commission from the Father, that was God with him; as to whom he had committed the Judgment of the World: And so was, by his Office, the proper Executioner of this Vengeance upon Sodom: He also joining in all Works afore, and since, together with the Father, who shewing him all he doth, the Son doth it likewise; That all might honour the Son as well as the Father; as Christ there infers, John 5. 23.

4. That which fully added to my Conviction, That the Us in Scripture-Language, when spoken of, and by God, intends these Three in God, whom we call Persons; and that to be spoken More Regio, after the manner and stile of Kings, is, That I further expressly find these Three, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, each singly, and apart, using it in the Name of the other two, saying [Us]: and [We].

1. The Father, He whom all grant, is he that is to be understood, when 'tis said, [God said] Let Us; and as speaking to the rest.

2. The Holy Ghost, Isa. 6. 8. Also I heard the Voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send; and who will go for us? If the question be, What Person spake this Us here; and what other Persons he speaks of as involved in it?

1. For the Person that speaks it, it is the Holy Ghost. Read Acts 28. 25, 26. Paul resolves it so; Well spake the Holy Ghost by Esaias the Prophet unto our Fathers, Saying, Go unto this People, and say, Hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand, &c. Who is the same Lord, that in Isaiah says, Chap. 6. Verse 9. Go and tell this People, hear ye indeed, but understand not, &c. And He it is that said also Verse 8. Whom shall I send, and who will go for Us? And the like Speech and Character of Language, attributed to the Holy Ghost in the New Testament elsewhere, argues, that he is the Person. For upon the very same, or like, Occasion, we find him as a Person brought in, speaking of himself apart, under the Stile of Me. The Errand, or Business whereof he here speaks, Who will go for Us? was the sending forth Ministers, and Teachers, and Prophets: As it is express in that of the Acts, and in Isaiah. Nay, when the same Occasion or Errand came afore him, we hear him another time expressly speaking, Acts 13. 2. The Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them. 'Tis the same Employment of sending out Ministers, Paul and Barnabas, and it is the same Person, the Holy Ghost in both, and he a Person; for he speaks as a Person, [I] and [I], [Me] and [Me]; and one that was God. Add to this, that of Isa. 48. 17. And now the Lord God, and his Spirit hath sent me. Thus much that he was the Person that spake it. And,

2. For the Persons in whose Name he says Us, they are the Father and the Son. In ver. 3. you have the Angels cry, Holy, Holy, Holy is the Lord of Hosts. All that some would make of these Holies, is not in respect of the Three Persons, but to shew, God is ter Sanctus, ter Optimus, Most Holy, which alone I would not urge. But when I considered, that in this Chapter there is such a Presence and Mention of these Persons, I cannot but affix even that also, and that the [Us] vers. 8. refers to it; and that the Holy Ghost in that Verse doth give that Interpretation or Gloss upon it.

The Father to be Lord of Hosts, all acknowledg: And that the Son Christ is particularly intended, the first Verse of Isa. 6. compared with John 12. 37, 39, 40, 41. does manifest, Therefore they could not believe, because that Esaias said again, he hath blinded their Eyes, and hardned their Heart, &c. These things said Esaias, when he saw his Glory, and spake of him. What Him? He of whom he had spoke in vers. 37. But though he had done so many Miracles before them, yet they believed not on him.

Again, Those Words in Isa. 6. vers. 3. are also spoken of the Lord, who was that Angel that was tempted in the Wilderness, Numb. 14. 21, 22. which Lord was Christ, 1 Cor. 10. 9. who also sate between the Cherubims.

Then the third Person is the Holy Ghost, vers. 8. 9. whose work it is, to deal with Mens Hearts by the Word, softening or hardening.

So then, there are an [Us] of Persons distinctly and apart mentioned, and spoken of: And then the Holy Ghost at last, comprehending them all in this Word Us.

Then, Thirdly; For the Son, we find him likewise speaking the same Language, Sure I am, that Word Us, John 17. is his Speech, to his Father the first Person, vers. 11. — Holy Father, keep through thine own Name, those whom thou hast given me; that they may be one, as we are. And vers. 21. — That they also may be one in Us.

Thus you have seen, I have prosecuted no other Argument out of Scripture, than what the [Us] in Moses, in three Places, hath led me into; and alledged but such other Scriptures as are Complices, and of strict Intelligence with those Passages, and serve to the Illustration of them.

C H A P. III.

That these Three Persons in the Godhead are Persons distinct one from the other.

WH^O would not judg them to be so, by what hath been already said? But yet for further Evidence, it is apparent from this;

First; That they are found speaking, not only Us, as Persons, but also ordinarily, one to another, in the language of [I] and [Thou], as Heb. 10. 5. A Body hast Thou fitted Me, which Christ spoke to his Father, as a Person existing with Him, then when he took an humane Nature. And, Lo, I come to do thy Will, Heb. 10. 7. Again, the Father speaks to the Son, Psal. 110. 1. The Lord said unto my Lord. And again, from Heaven, This is my Son, Matth. 3. 17. And the Holy Ghost, as distinct from both, descending as a Dove.

And, secondly; One speaks of another, as another Person distinct from himself; thus, the Son of the Father, John 5. 30. — I seek not mine own Will, but the Will of the Father which hath sent me. Verf. 31. If I bear witness of my self, my Witness is not true. Verf. 32. There is another that beareth witness of me; and I know that the witness which he witnesseth of me is true. Likewise the Son, of the Father, and of the Holy Ghost; John 14. 16, and 26. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever. But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my Name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you. And John 16. 13. Howbeit, when he the Spirit of Truth is come, he will guide you into all Truth; for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak, and he will shew you things to come. He, the Masculine, is put with a Neuter Gender, in the word πνεῦμα, Spirit, which would never have been, but to design a personality in him.

Thirdly; You have each speaking of himself as a Person. Thus the Holy Ghost, Acts 13. 1, 2. Separate me Barnabas and Saul, for the Work whereunto I have called them.

Fourthly; There are Works proper to each assigned: To instance but in one Scripture; 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5, 6. Now there are diversities of Gifts, but the same Spirit. And there are differences of Administrations, but the same Lord. And there are diversities of Operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all. All three are mentioned, and as having, to distinguish them, several Works: And the Spirit there is said to have his own Things proper to him, as the Son the Father's: And, vers. 11. He is said to distribute them as he will; which, to say, is proper only to a Person.

Fifthly; These Persons are spoken of as distinct, when also they are called God; Psal. 45. 6, 7. Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever.—Thou lovest Righteousness, and hatest Iniquity: Therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the Oil of Gladness above thy Fellows. And there also we meet with all three Persons too, for Spirit is the Oil he is anointed with.

Lastly; There is this most evident Demonstration, That the Man Jesus being assumed and taken up into one Person with the Son of God, that He, the Son of God, existing in the Man as one Person with him, should speak of himself as a distinct Person from the Father and the Spirit: In Joh. 10. 31. I and the Father are one. Here he speaks of Himself and the Father, as Persons distinct, and yet both but one true God; as vers. 33. the Jews understood him, That thou being a Man, makest thy self God: One God and two Persons of the three, and yet it was not the Man as Man only that was that Person; but it was the Son who was truly God with the Father, and the Man being made one Person with the Son, speaks this of himself; so thereby evidently declaring, that in the Godhead there was the Person of the Son distinct from the Father; and so, in his Defence of himself, he declares, Vers. 36. Say ye of him whom the Father hath sanctified and sent into the World, Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the Son of God? And again, Vers. 38. Know and believe, that I am in the Father, and the Father in me; as two still, (as [I] and the [Father] imports) enjoying one Godhead: And elsewhere, he professeth his Manhood not to be alone the Person. And it was not God the Father that was incarnate, and in that respect is stiled the Son, as some have wickedly affirmed; for if the Father had been one Person with this Man, this Man could not have said, I and the Father; or elsewhere often [I] and [Thou], speaking to his Father.

And indeed, I have judged one great End and Issue of God's ordaining this Personal Union of the Man Jesus, and the Son of God, to have been, to demonstrate and ascertain us, That there is this distinction of Persons in the Godhead; in that the Man now assumed, talks at that rate of himself, as of a Person with God, and yet distinct from his Father; and that he was so, he refers unto all his Works, to believe and know it by; for that, whilst he so spake of himself, he should do such Works; This invincibly argues the Truth of what he so spake, as in that, John 10. in defence of himself, and those Speeches of himself, vers. 37, 38. he argues, If I do not the Works of my Father, believe me not: But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the Works; that ye may know and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him. Had the Scripture declared this distinction of Persons over and over, in a Doctrinal Assertion, it had not been so great an evidence as this; to hear the Man, who when become one Person with the Son of God, should himself still use to say, [I] and my Father; and when he speaks to his Father, to say, I and Thou. Himself came by this singular Way and Means, to declare it so invincibly, as nothing could have been more satisfiingly done. That I may say, as the Apostle to the Hebrews doth of other Revelations of Divine Truth, so I of this, That after God had, at sundry times and divers manners, spoke this Mystery of the Distinction of Persons, he hath now spoke it to us by the Son himself personally, as now incarnate and made Man: Who though he appeared to the Fathers, yet never personally united to those Appearances as now he did. So that put but these things together;

1. That he that was the Son of God, existed before the assumption of Man's Nature, as a Person.

And that, 2. The Man he took up, was not a Person of himself, but it was the Son that was the Person taking up that Man into One [I] or personality with himself; which that Speech of his own, when he came into the World, (Heb. 10. 5.—A Body hast thou prepared me) evidently shews. The Body, or his Humane Nature, was not the [Me] or Person, but he that assumes it was the [Me], A Body hast thou prepared Me.

And then, 3. That hence he should then speak unto the Father, as a Person distinct from the Father's Person, as those their words [Me] and [Thou] do evince. And that He, even after the Man so assumed, that he should speak as the Person when once so united, in the Language of Thine and Mine, I and Thou, and the like: This invincibly argues what I have driven at, viz. That the Father and he are distinct. And then, that he should speak of [Another] or third, distinct from both; [Another Comforter] the Holy Spirit; And he shall take of mine, &c. John 16. 15. whilst himself says, I the Son, and therefore alius, or Another from both Father and Spirit, and not alius, or another, by having become Man; but as Filius Dei, in whose Person the Man speaks it of himself.

Use 1. Is to exhort you to retain and hold fast this plain and fundamental Truth, and by Faith to receive it, (if you have been diverted from it) as from the Son, and not consult with Reason in it, which yet is not contradictory to it. This I am sure of, that if the Scriptures speak any thing, they speak this great Truth; and of all other, it hath been the most and longest tried, of any other.

other. It begun to be questioned in the first Age of Christianity; and, at times, hath been so ever since. Reason contributes little to it, but remains unsatisfied; and yet God hath still cast the Spirits of his People, and won them over to it. Receive it, I say, by Faith; Christ puts them upon bare believing it; John 14. 10, 11. Believest thou not, that I am in the Father, and the Father in Me? The words that I speak unto you, I speak not of my self; but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doth the Works. Believe me, that I am in the Father, and the Father in Me: Or else believe me for the very Works sake.— And when they required a demonstrative Argument, or rational Evidence of it; Christ only affirms it, and having affirmed, refers them to his Works, after he had said it; as was observed before, out of John 10. 38. for if he had not said true, such glorious Divine Works would not have followed such a Doctrine and Profession: And thereupon he calls for Faith, from that Evidence John 10. 37, 38. If I do not the Works of my Father, believe me not: But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the Works; that ye may know and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him. David is said to be in Spirit, when he brings in the Lord speaking to the Lord: By which Speech was discovered, both these Persons to be in the Godhead, and distinct as Persons, speaking thus one to another; The Lord said unto my Lord, Psal. 110. David in Spirit (says Christ) said this, Matth. 22. 43, 44. and I remember not that phrase spoken of David, upon any other occasion but this, although it be said, The Spirit of the Lord spake by me: And this was necessary, for Reason would, of all else, never have revealed it, nor entertained it as it is revealed. Heaven opened, when there was the first open distinct discovery of the Three: The Father spake, This is my Son, and the Holy Ghost descended. For but by opening Heaven, and upon occasion of discovering the Son, was this distinctly revealed.

C H A P. IV.

That the Three Persons in the Godhead, have an Union and Communion between themselves apart, and Incommunicable unto us.

THE Assertion which I undertake to prove, is this, That God, and Christ, and by consequence the Holy Ghost, have an Union and Communion of a higher kind, than what we are ordained ever to receive; and therefore I call it the supream Sovereign Union. In a word, the Creatures are not God, veiled under the appearance of Creatures, and so hidden as under a Veil, which is the impious falsification of many of the Ranters of our late Age, as appears by their Writings, and which put me upon writing this Discourse.

I. To prove that there is a Sovereign, Supream Union between the three Persons in the Godhead peculiar, and proper to themselves alone, and which cannot be communicated to any mere Creature; I have chose those Passages in Christ's Prayer, whereon to found my Discourse; John 17. 21, 22, 23. That they all may be one, as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; that the World may believe that thou hast sent me. And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one, I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one, and that the World may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me. Whatever use I have made of this 17th of John, in discoursing of this Union to another purpose, my scope now is to shew, how all the Ancients have judged this very Thing, (which I have asserted) with clear evidence of Reason, from Christ's manner of Speech, both Negatively and Affirmatively, as I shall alledge their Testimonies by and by.

This

BOOK I.

This alone of it self will evidence it, That an Eternity of Time did pass, when there were no Creatures at all; but the Three Persons wholly enjoyed themselves all that Time without interruption. And this also will further be demonstrated in the second Head of this Discourse, which will be a Demonstration of the Differences and Distances of that Communion which is between Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and that which we have with those Persons.

But to return to the Exposition of John the 17th. That the Union of the Three Persons in the God-head, is of a higher kind, and not communicable to us, is evident from the manner of Christ's Speech in that his Prayer.

1. Negatively, from what he forbears to say in it; He does not pray, That we all may be one with them, (as if speaking of the Father, and Himself, and the Saints altogether); No, but that we all may be one in them, and so with a differing Union from theirs. Thus Austin, He prays not that they may be one with us, but one in us.

Non enim dicit Christus ut nobiscum sint unum, aut sumus unum nisi & nos, sicut nos unum sumus: Sed ipsi in natura sua sint unum, sicut nos in Nostra unum sumus.

Augustinus Tract. 107. in Johannem.

Nos quidem in illis esse possumus. (and I add unum in illis, for the Text affirms it) sed unum cum illis esse non possumus. August. ibid.

2. Positively; He speaks of an Union of him and his Father, as standing apart entire from that of the Saints with them; and which though it admit this addition of that Union of the Saints, yet still remains inviolate in it self, notwithstanding no way intermingled with, or entercommoning with it. He repeats that Union of his and his Fathers five or six times, from vers. 11. to the end; and every time with a Character of such a difference as this. 1. He speaks of the Saints and their Union, as at a distance from Himself and his Father; and of their Union also between themselves; that they all may be one as We: Of the We he speaks, as of those who are of a Superior Order, and are one by a Superior Union. But of them as with a distance, that they, that these underfort Creatures, this vulgus Creaturarum, utterly differing and separated from us of themselves, that they yet may be one in us. 2. In his repetition of it a second time, vers. 22. that they [also]; there is an Emphasis in the word Also as to this purpose. 1. [Also] that is over and besides that Union which we have and keep within among our selves, even then when they are supposed united to Us; One in Us: The Us still remain in a separate Association apart, and retain a Consortium, an Association as a Superior [We]. 2. 'Tis a Speech of diminution of their Union in comparison of the [Us], and sounds thus; As if Christ, looking down from an higher Orb, Sphere, and Throne of Union, whereon Himself and his Father sits, upon these poor Things infinitely below, who are void of such a Condition in their Native proper State; upon them Christ looking down in love, prays, Let these poor Things [also] partake of Union with Us; little Ones, who of themselves are so far below us, no way worthy to attain, aspire to any such Thing, and yet by Grace are capable of in Us. 3. In his saying, that they be one, as I in Thee, and thou in Me, vers. 21. Observe, He says not either, 1. Ut sint in te unum, sicut ego in te unum sum: That they may be One in Thee, as I am One in Thee: No, but that they may be one in Us, as I in Thee, and Thou in Me: He therein entertaining and reserving still an Union as peculiar to himself. Nor, 2. He says not, that Thou mayst be one in us, (as involving and reckoning himself but as one of them and their Rank) and we all one in Thee; No, but he says, As Thou in Me, and I in Thee, (ita se à Creaturis separans) and they one in us: whereby he manifestly separates himself from them, and betakes himself to a peculiar Union and Interest with God above them.

Athanasii O-ratio 4. adver. Arrianos.

Ambros. lib 4. de fide. c. 2.

The repetition of it a second time, vers. 23. (which I most observe) is put there by way of Caution, and as with a wariness that that Union of himself and his Father be kept inviolate; I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in One: As if he had said, when they arrive to their highest perfection of Union, yet let them know, 1. their distance, That I am above them in it; I in them, and thou in me. 2. Their dependence and derivation of it from me; I in them, and thou in me: And this still continueth, that (so) they may be perfected in One: He seeks it not, nor would allow it them upon any other Terms. As if he should have said, when they are at their height of Union, Thou art not, nor ever canst be in them, with that immediate Union thou art withal in me, and I in thee: I must come in as a middle between them and thee, when they are with us in Glory. The descent is, The Glory thou hast given me,

I have given them, vers. 22. they hold of me even then; I in them, thou in me; and this is their highest perfection. Yea, at the last Verse, when he prays his Fathers Love might be in them filling them; His Prayer, you see, is not only, that God's Love may be to them, but in them: for the height of our Union is the fulness of God communicated in Love; as Ephes. 3. 19. And to know the Love of Christ which passeth Knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God. There is first Love, then all the fulness of God mentioned: for Heaven is but a communication of God in Love; yet even there Christ will needs step in between, even God's Love in the Communications of it; and I in them. The Love of God is not so in us, so that we become the Love of God; nor is God, or Christ, so in us, as we become God or Christ; nor is Christ left out, when God communicates himself in the highest manner: But as Paul saith, Herein is your Calling; so say I of this, Here is the descent of that Union on them; God one with Christ, and you with God in Christ. Yea, I observe further his Caution in this great Point to be such, that if in praying for our Oneness, he mention himself first, He will needs bring in his Father's being in him: So vers. 23. I in you, (is not that enough to make them perfect in One?) No, but thou in me; again, if he mention his Father's Love first, as Verse the last, He comes in himself for a share also; and I in them; He turns it every way: So that whether God be in us, it is because Christ is in us; or Christ be in us, and so we One; it is because God is in Christ. Lastly, which is Ambrose his Note, Nos unum [erimus] sed Pater & Filius unum [sunt]; He speaks of that Union of himself, and his Father, as already in Being and Perfection; yea, as that which he then needed not to pray for, and which never needed praying for by him, but he prays that we may be one. He prays not that his Father and he should be One, for they were as fully One already as for ever they could be, (to be sure, as Second Person naturally) and as Man; 'twas so bestowed at once for ever, as it needed no praying for a New: for though it was a Grace at first, yet to the Divine Person that the Man was now One withal, it was none; yea, it was a condescending in him, the second Person, to match so low, as his own Speech, when he was to assume it, imports; Heb. 10. 5. A Body hast thou fitted me; He speaks diminutively of it, and yet assumes it. But that the Saints shall be one with this High and Mighty US, this US; this is, and was with Christ, a Matter of, and Subject for Prayer; and this at this time, when yet they were united unto Christ already, as this Text implies; for this of ours depends for ever on Grace, not so that of Christ's Humane Nature: But once the Union being made transit in jus, it then becomes a Right: though at first it was the highest Grace to that Nature: For why? He is thereby advanced to be the Natural Son of God.

And whereas the word καθως, that they may be One, (As) we are One, is urged by some for Sameness or Oneness of Union in kind, it is evident by all that hath been spoken, that it is but unum Similitudinis, of Imitation and Similitude, or perhaps of Causality, because we are One: The Instances of which latter are so frequent I need not mention any of them; as, Be perfect, as your Heavenly Father is perfect: Forgive us, as we forgive: As we use the Speech in the Lord's Prayer.

Non est sicut æqualitatis sed modi & similitudinis: imitatione non perfectione. So Brugenfis. Ut hæc voluntaria unio naturalis istius in Filio & Patre unitatis imago videatur. Cyrill.

II. There is not only this superior Union of the Three Persons so far above that Union which we poor Creatures have with God: but there is also a Supreme and Independent Communion between those Persons in the Godhead, having an entire abstracted Converse among themselves, and incommunicable to any meer Creature; And this Communion, which they had one with another from all Eternity, consists,

1. In that Divine Eternal Life of the Three Persons among themselves.
2. In the mutual Interest, or Propriety, which they have in the Things of each other.
3. In a mutual Communication and Enjoyment.
4. In a mutual Knowledge and Acquaintance one with another.

5. In a mutual Communication, and imparting of Secrets, a disco very of each others mind.

6. In mutual Love and Delight.

7. In their possession of one common and equal Glory and Blessedness.

I. As to the first; The Life of the Three Persons among themselves. That excellent Man, in his Age, Bishop Usher, in a Sermon before King James, expressed the dependence which the best of Saints, the Apostles, held upon the supreme Life of Christ, considered as Second Person in the Trinity; John 1. 16. And of his Fulness have all we received, and Grace for Grace. There is (said he) Plenitudo Fontis, the fulness of the Fountain; Psal. 36. 9. With thee is the Fountain of Life, spoken of God much more; and there is Plenitudo Vasis, the fulness of the Vessel; which is but the pittance of the best of Saints, and that but received, which is soon dried up, if not supplied; and they receive but Grace for Grace, Glory for Glory, all from Christ. We have our Grace and Glory by measure; but Christ had the Spirit without measure.

Life is an Excellency added to Being: And the Divine Life of God, is a pure Activity and Quickness, which never ceaseth nor abateth: All three Persons therefore have the Title of Living; Of the Father there is none that questions it; Jesus Christ is the Son of the Living God, Matth. 16. 16. and that imports he is a Person of the same Substance and Nature with God: And as Man begets his like, so God begets his like, and he is his only begotten Son. The Spirit is said, to the same purpose, to be the Spirit of the Living God, 2 Cor. 3. 3. And as Christ is compared to the Son of a living Father, as being begotten of his Substance: So the Spirit is compared to the Soul that dwells in a Man, which is his Life. 1 Cor. 2. 11. is express for it, What Man knoweth the things of a Man, save the Spirit of Man which is in him? And the Life of all Three, is God, and the enjoying of the Life of God, and exercising all the Acts of Life among themselves.

This is for their Life abstracted, such as they had in Eternity, when no Creature was.

Now to the Point proposed, the Difference and Dependence of our Union, and the Life thereof. Upon this of the Three Persons that has been specified, take that place in the 6th of John, with the rest that are to follow; when at the third Verse Christ had declared of all Believers, He that eateth my Flesh, and drinketh my Blood, hath Eternal Life; and then had explained himself, and founded that Communication of Life, vers. 56. upon our Union with himself; wherein he speaks of that sort of Union which is between his Divine and Humane Nature, and also of our Union with himself, as the next words of the Verse shew, He that eateth my Flesh, and drinketh my Blood, DWELLETH IN ME, AND I IN HIM; which Union of ours with himself, the very similitude of Eating and Drinking doth alone import, (for what we Eat, or Drink, becomes one with our Bodies). Yet his adding, Dwelleth in me, and I in him, doth explicitly declare it in the Letter: This done, as if he could not pass over this Declaration of our Union, (as neither in that 17th of John he doth, as may be observed) without superadding how it was, that it was communicated from that his Superior Union with his Father; and that from thence it is, that Life is first communicated to himself, and also from him to us; as it expressly immediately follows, vers. 57. As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father; so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me.

Yea, and withal, to give a clear and evident Instance, that this Union of his with the Father, and ours with him, are of a differing kind, yea, and infinitely differing; Let us but add to this, what himself had said of this communication and descent of Life from his Father to us, by virtue of his own Union in the former Chapter: John 5. 26. the words are these, As the Father hath Life in himself, so he hath given to the Son to have Life in himself: The sense whereof is, (as I understand it) that his very Subsistence, as a Son, is from his Father, as he is the only begotten of him. Can this be said of us, or of our having Life, though Spiritual and Heavenly, that it is given us to have Life in our selves, as Christ hath, or as the Father hath in himself independently, and with power to give Life

Life to others; so as to be the Lord's of Life, and to be able to bestow it as we please? But thus doth Christ, vers. 21. For as the Father raiseth up the Dead, and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickeneth whom he will. And this Power, to give Life to others, he declares to this end, vers. 23. That all Men may honour the Son as they honour the Father. May this be said of us, poor Things that we are? Alas! We are so far from having Life thus in our selves, or to be Lords of Life, that it is well for us, (take us as we are fallen) if as condemned Persons we have that Life derived unto us at all; nay, that we have our lives, it is well if we scape so. This infinite Grace, as I have thus set it out, the 24th Verse indigitates; Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my Word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting Life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from Death to Life: Thus low and flat do we fall, when his Life, and Union with his Father, are compared with ours. To gather up this; our Tenure of Life, is but a Cobby-hold of Life in respect of our whole dependence for it, by way of influence from him, and as 'tis derived from him, and from his Life; Tenants at Will I may not call us, in regard he hath endowed us with an eternal donation of it, (Why else called Eternal Life?) and estated it on us for ever; yet still in regard, both of the Original of it at first from him, and his continual influential maintaining it, and keeping our Souls in Life; which is the very Phrase the Psalmist expresseth our Life by. There appears an infinite difference and distance between us and him, in that Eternal Life which is his and ours; but upon a differing Tenure, for he is the Lord Paramount of Life, to have life in himself: But we are to hold all from him, from first to last, (though for ever): And if our dependence on him for Life be so vastly different from his in himself, then our Union is accordingly answerable thereto, distant in inferiority, and subordination; and so in like proportion differing, for Life, as the Effect flows from Union as the Cause. Therefore, good Souls, see your Hearts at rest, know your own Imum, your own Bottom, and lowness you stand in, in the best Condition, as Saints, you could have been set in: Be not deceived neither, to soar or aspire too high, upon conceits of Unions which are above you, nor of which indeed you are not capable: You must needs acknowledge, that the setting these mutual Unions of Christ and the Father in their συζυγίας, from that of the Saints; and first theirs, and then ours apart by themselves, that they hold forth, at least, this to you, That though by means of your Union with Christ, you have an Union with the Father; yet that Christ hath an Union separate from your Union apart by himself with the Father, and the Father with him, which you can never attain: Would you be all Christs? then let us see you redeem your lost Brethren of the Sons of Men, whom Christ died not for effectually, or who of them have not as yet taken hold of his Death to save themselves from Sin and Hell: The Psalmist speaks thus, None is able to redeem his Brother from the Grave, and to quicken whom he will; no, nor is able to raise up himself at the Day of Judgment, as Christ did. And are you Hypostatically united to the Person of Christ then?

You might see this Truth of the infinite disproportion between these two Unions of God and Christ, and us and Christ, in a thousand other-like Effects, which you might make Demonstrations, that argue it, if a Man had time to gather them, or indeed to utter them. I come to a second Instance like to this.

II. Mutual Interest, or Propriety which the Three Persons have in the Things of each other.

Mutual Interest and Propriety in one another, follows upon Union. Now there is a vast subordination of the mutual Interests, the one of Christ in and with the Father, and that other of Christ with us; and such therefore must there also be in the several Unions: Will you see your Pedigree Emblazoned? All things are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's. Here is the Interest, the Propriety and Right of a Christian to God, Christ, all Things; yet in a Chain of Subordination set forth thus; therefore it must be so in the Union also. Christ is in the Father, and the Father in Christ; and this their mutual In-being, as the ground of their sharing in the same common Stock, causeth an BOOK I. answerable Interest in the Things of each other : Even of All Things. If you take a view of this, in the first and highest Supream Union of all, between Christ considered simply as a second Person ; They are one in the Godhead, and all things therein, or belonging to it, are thereupon equally common to both : All things the Father hath are mine, John 16. 15. And John 17. 10. All mine are thine, and thine are mine. And how is it that they have this equal mutual Interest in all Things ? It is because they are One, as the next Verse hath it, vers. 11. And their Union and their Interest runs Parallel. But we cannot speak thus as Christ doth, we must lowly and humbly acknowledg all Things are Ours, because they are Christ's, and Christ is God's. And again, that the Man Jesus hath a personal Oneness with the Son, and so with God ; hence it is, that all Things are committed unto him of the Father ; and he also may say, All thine are mine, &c. And now we are Christ's, and Christ is God's ; and so all Things become ours derivatively ; as our Union is but a secondary Union ; as the Unions have their Subordination, so answerably the Interests.

III. As to their Communication and Enjoyment mutual.

You may view these Gradations and Descents in the Communications, and Enjoyments mutual that pass between God and Christ, Christ and us. Union is for mutual Delight, and Communication, and Knowledg each of other : As the Father and Son have an Union superior and entire to themselves, (with the Spirit) which is immediate, and differing from that of ours with them ; so they have an entire Communication of themselves one to and with another, distinct and apart from us ; and they had it, ere ever any communicating of themselves did descend unto us ; and when they have communicated a suitable share to us like theirs, yet theirs still continues incommunicable to us, apart by themselves.

IV. Compare the Communications of them in mutual Knowledg one of another, and Acquaintance.

Where there is an Union of Persons, there is, or shall follow in the end, a making each other known one to the other : So it is in our Union which is inferior, John 14. 20. At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you. And because these of Christ's, and the Father, and Ours, are Unions of a differing Order, you shall see he speaks of their Knowledg still in the same stile of transcendency, as he doth in parallel Language unto what he doth of Union : in those Texts, John 14 and 17 Chapters ; making one sort of Knowledg, and so converse by Knowledg, proper, and peculiar, and entire to the Father and the Son, distinct and apart from Us, and infinitely above Ours ; and a Lower of ours, passeth between God, and Christ, and Us. Thus, John 10. 14. I am the Good Shepherd, and know my Sheep, and am known of mine. Here you see first there is an intercourse between his Sheep and him expressed, as his Union with them here ; but still he having another sort of intercourse, which, as Son of God, he drave with his Father (and Christ had the experience of both) which was the Cause and Pattern of Ours, he adds, vers. 15. As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father. You see he could not pass by the mention of one sort between him and his Sheep, but he must withal mention that other sort between his Father and himself.

V. And together with this Knowledg, there passeth a Communication of, and imparting of Secrets, a discovery of each others mind.

Now as there is that superior Order of Union, and a transcendent singular affection that accompanies it, between the Father and the Son, so the manifestation of the Father to the Son is answerable ; John 5. 20. The Father loveth the Son, and shews him all things that himself doth. He shews them all unto his Son, as one that is a Co-worker with him in all the things himself doth ; as the words afore and after shew, vers. 19. Whatsoever Things he doth, these also doth the Son likewise. Thus high is this Original Union, that is proper and alone between themselves, even to an equality ; for this Speech of his comes in to justify himself against the Jews who accused him, in vers. 18. that he called God his own Father

Father ἴδιον πατέρα, making himself equal with God; which he justifies against them, vers. 19. Then answered Jesus, and said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: For what things soever he doth, these also doth the Son likewise. But as for us, as our Union is far remote, so the manifestation both of Christ, and God to us, is also very far off from this: They shew us indeed, and reveal many blessed Secrets indeed to us that concern our own Salvation; but what we have thus discovered to us, is but at second-hand of what they speak about us among themselves. The Spirit tells us again what they say; as John 16. 15. The Spirit shall take of mine, and give it unto you: And vers. 13. Whatsoever he (speaking of the Spirit) shall hear, that shall he speak; namely, to you. He speaks of him as a Messenger sent, who conveys to us the mind of them that send him; but we have it but as from another's hear-say. And hence also, whilst Christ speaks of his Communication to us by his Spirit, by virtue of our Interest in him, he doth withal insert the mention of that his own Interest in, and Union with his Father, as the supream Original Union, so to shew the descent of ours; Vers. 15. All things the Father hath are mine, therefore said I, that he shall take of mine and shew it unto you; that is, Thus it comes to pass, that you have all manifested to you from me, in that I have all things that my Father hath, and so the Spirit reveals from us both. But still to shew that their Union is entire of Father, Son, and Spirit, apart, and incommunicable, kept up among themselves; He tells us, that their Communication, Conference, and Consultations, are thus in private held among themselves apart from us; that they hold a private, secret Counsel, which we are never immediately admitted unto: What the Father hath, the Son hath, and the Spirit heareth both; and as none knoweth what is in Man, but the Spirit of Man within him; so none knows what is in God, but the Spirit, who searcheth the deep things of God, and revealeth them, 1 Cor. 2. 11, 12. and the Son, who, as in John 1. 14. is in the bosom of the Father. These three drive an intercourse and intelligence in Secret, into the bottom of which we never enter: but the Spirit reveals, and Christ declares, as is said in those places; and thus, but at second-hand, we have the Mind of God and Christ, 1 Cor. 2. 16. For who hath known the Mind of the Lord, that he may instruct him? But we have the Mind of Christ; and but how little (as in Job) do we know thereof!

VI. Take and compare the Communications of mutual Love, breathings forth of Affection, mutual Delights, and mutual Pleasures in each other which follows Union.

They are represented to us in the very same gradation as Union here; Prov. 8. 30. *I was (says Wisdom, the Son of God) daily his delight: His Son in whom he hath alone considered an entire compleat delight, an immediate delight in him; and I was always also rejoicing afore him, and so in him again, so that there was a communication of mutual Love, or interchangeable breathings forth, or casts of Love each to other. Mutual Love is the Consequent of Union; and the Father being united to the Son, with a supream Union, (transcendent in comparison of that of ours) loves the Son with a transcendent primary Love; who therefore is called the Son of his Love; υἱὸς τῆς ἀγάπης, Col. 1. 13. as he that engrosseth the whole of it all to himself: likewise, This is my well-beloved Son, Mat. 3. 17. As the Son hath Life in himself, so the Father loves his Son for himself; with a natural Love, as that is wherewith he loveth himself: But his Love to us is secondary, and collateral, which shews our Union is at second-hand but as we are in Christ, and Christ in us. And from thence the care of the Father is derived to us, because Christ is in us, and we are united to him; this you have John 17. 26. And I have declared unto them thy Name, and will declare it; that the Love wherewith thou hast loved me, may be in them, and I in them. An original primary Union hath a love answerable, a derivative Union but a love proportionable. Our Union is immediate unto, and with Christ Jesus; so as he and we are the immediate Termini, or Correlates united: And thereby it is we become united to God, namely, through him: And therefore God's Love is said to be to us in him, Rom. 8. ult. Who shall separate from the Love of God in Christ Jesus? These were their proper, natural, incommunicable delights each in other; as their*

BOOK I.

Union is, and was afore the World was; I in my Father, and my Father in me, John 14.10. as dwelling in one another, so rejoicing in one another always; and these continue proper to themselves, and will do for ever, and cannot be communicated to us, otherwise than by way of Similitude and Likeness. But then they intended to make Creatures, and so to have their made artificial accessory delights, (as I may so speak). The Father shewed the Son a Platform of a World below, in which Men should dwell, which Christ calls his Father's habitable Earth, and therein the Sons of Men, his Elect, given to him to be one for ever with him. Now as he was God's delight, and God his immediately, and naturally, so these were made for Christ's Delight: He therefore subjoins, rejoicing in the habitable part of his Earth, and my Delights were with the Sons of Men, Prov. 8.31. Observe the Subordination still, as he is in the Father, and the Father in him; so he was in his Father's delights, and he in is: And then, as we say of Men, we in Christ, and Christ in us. And the Union is more direct and immediate between us and him; so we were primitively his Delights; even as afore you heard Christ was God's, and we Christ's: The Chain of Interest, and of Delight also, have the same parallel Subordinate Links.

VII. Come we last to Glory, and the Communication of Blessedness, (as we began with that particular of Eternal Life) there is therein found the like Subordination and Descent, Rev. 3. 21. Christ hath with his Father a Throne in those words, As I am on his Throne; to which Throne we never ascend (mark that); But there is another which he calleth his Throne, and which considered as Man, he admits us to a share in our proportion: To him that overcometh, I will grant to sit on my Throne. There is still a differing Rank and Order; Thrones higher and lower, even as of the Unions also: And καθώς, or [As] I with my Father, so they with me, you see, hath run along through all: for some parallel likeness will be found in all these Unions that are thus subordinate; though of so differing a kind, that they have their infinite distance and disproportion proper to them; which must be taken in and considered, if we will know the Nature and Condition of each.

Uses. Christ here, John 14. 20. tells his Apostles, for their comfort, That there was a Day coming, in which they should have a clear, and full, and intuitive Knowledg of this their Union, and its descent to them from the Father; and the parallel of it, with his own Union with the Father; In that Day ye shall know that I am in the Father, and you in me, and I in you. This being a Matter of so great moment for all Christians to know, and to discern in their own Selves and Hearts: and accordingly reserved as the proper Work of the Holy Ghost, when he should come as a Comforter: That though this Union it self is wrought when we are regenerate by him, yet the Sense, the Knowledg of it, is reserved to the last, after Christ's Resurrection and Ascension; yea, and as others would interpret it, until after our Resurrection, and the Day of Judgment. The Uses of which knowledg are;

I. For our Comfort; for this Knowledg, Christ here intends, is, That which the Spirit as a Comforter, vers. 16. was to bring; and it conduceth much to our Comfort, to know and meditate our Genealogy and Alliance that we have, and derive (by reason of our Union with Christ) from the Father, and how it holds of him: that although our Union be of a lower degree and kind, yet it is the off-spring of the highest and noblest Union; even of that between God and Christ; a second Person first, and then of the Man with the second Person.

By which also we shall perceive the sureness, the stability of our Union with, and standing in Christ, when we understand how it is founded: that it is so rivited into, and indented with that supream Union of the Father and the Son; that as that of theirs is indissoluble, and cannot be broken, so nor shall this of ours.

It is counted a matter of great moment unto Noble Families, if but for Honour-sake, to know their descent from Houses more Ancient, and Sovereign; reign; (as of the King of Egypt, the Prophet speaks, that he was descended of Ancient Kings) that they have sprung from such and such Marriages, and Conjunctions of Sovereign Princes; although they be in alliance very far removed from them. So is this here to us; the Saints they are a Chosen Generation, a Royal Priesthood, as Peter speaks, 1 Pet. 2. 9. the Royallest Family Heaven or Earth affords; and that in respect of the descent thereof, which is here Heraldred, My Father in me, and I in you: And Ephes. 3. 14, 15. I Bow my Knees to the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole Family in Heaven and Earth is named.

2. As for our Comfort, so for our Satisfaction to our Knowledg in this great Mystery: As in lower Matters, when we see the Rise, the Dependence, and derivation of Things, running along in the Channel of, and from their Causes, it uses to be a great contentment to us. Then here much more to see how our Union hath the Union among the three Persons, for its Foundation, and Pattern, and Original; and to hear the Story how Union is let down to the Man Christ Jesus first, and in him conveyed to us; to know and behold the Union of three Persons in one Divine Nature, Father, Son, Holy Ghost, one God blessed for ever, producing, in imitation of them, an Union of the two Natures of God and Man in the Person of Christ Jesus; to whom be all Glory for ever: And then, that occasioning a third Union, yea, the next that could be, though more removed: An Union of Persons, (though not personal) yea, of multitudes of Persons united unto one Christ Jesus; to make up one Body, yea, one Man, as Ephes. 2. 15. hath it, Having abolished in his Flesh the Enmity, even the Law of Commandments contained in Ordinances, for to make in himself, of twain, one new Man, so making Peace; to the end we may be one Spouse unto Christ as our Head and Husband; and then to see the derived Influence the first hath upon the Man Jesus, and both upon this Union of ours: As I live by the Father, so you by me, John 6. 57. As also the parallel and correspondency that is held between the one and the other: that same καὶ ἑνὴς ἡμεῖς, inculcated by Christ, John 17. again and again, [As] we are One, let them also be One: As also to close, how the one illustrates the other.

And, 3. this is chiefly necessary for our Knowledg in the Doctrine of it, until we come to have experience of it; to the end to fix, determine, and state the true Bounds and Condition of our Union with God through Christ; the right proportion of ours in their distance from God and Christ, of which there have been too many mistakes in these Times; some soaring too high, to Identities and Sameness with God, at least, with Christ, (whom they think they may be better bold withal) some falling too low, to Unions only by Grace and Assistance, and presence to assist; or in outward Relations to Christ. For when we shall come but to see, and acknowledg the Prerogatives and Priviledges of those Unions above us, that are between God and Christ (incommunicable to us) descending downwards towards us in a Subordination, we may the rightlier judg what is left us to be our Lot, and Share; that we are but meer Creatures still, notwithstanding our Union with God and Christ.

C H A P. V.

Of Giving Glory to God. That it is a Duty incumbent upon us, prov'd by numerous Instances in Scripture. That we are to glorify God, not only nor chiefly for the benefit he bestows on us, but for the Glory of his Name, and the Excellence, and Blessedness of his Nature. Some Reasons given, that Grace in us may be raised to this high strain.

1 Pet. 5. 11.

To him be Glory and Dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

ERE I raise that Observation I wholly intend out of these Words, I shall first desire you to consult with me the multitude of Parallel Passages unto this which we find up and down in the Epistles, which do arise to a great Bulk.

I shall not barely refer you to the Chapters and Verses, and so pass them over, but to the end to lay the more ample Foundation to that Doctrine I intend; and withal to make the deeper Impressions of it upon your Hearts, I will single forth those Passages out of the Epistles.

I fear the high and glorious Elevations that filled the Apostle's Spirits in these Doxologies, as they came from their Hearts, have not their due weight upon us Christians, for the imitation of them or aspiring thereunto: their commonness in so many Epistles, at the close of them, causeth but a common formal regard of them in us; even such as their Salutations of Grace and Peace (being made but as to those Men they wrote to) use to have with us, as if we were not concerned in them.

But we are to consider that the reason we meet with them frequently in most of the Epistles was, that their Hearts being full of the Glory of God, their Pens and Mouths were enlarged accordingly, and the Virtue and Example of them lasting to all Ages, they thereby do excite all that shall read their Epistles, afresh to join with themselves therein to give Glory to God as they did, it being expressly said, Eph. 3. 21. Unto him be glory in the Church by Christ Jesus [throughout all Ages,] World without end. Amen. And in almost every such a Doxology, [for ever and ever] is added: And in Jude, Now and for ever. This premised, I begin to enumerate the several Instances.

1. In the Epistle to the Romans, how often, by digression, doth he still vail to God in the midst of his Discourses, with an [Amen] set to his Blessing of him, as we also should occasionally in our speeches do the like? In Rom. 1. discoursing of the Heathens, changing the Glory of the incorruptible God, vers. 23. and vers. 25. changing the Truth, (or the true Divine Nature) into the similitude of the Creature, and worshipping and serving the Creature, more than the Creator; he with an Indignation at the relating of that dishonour done to the great God comes in with this, Who is blessed for ever, Amen. Which is a solemn Glory given to God, in transitu, by the way passant, as we say. The Form of Amen, that is in the Close, speaks how his Heart did give, and rejoiced to give all Blessedness to him, as rejoicing that he is so blessed a God. You find the like, Chap. 9. speaking of Christ asserting of his Divine Nature, vers. 5. Who is over all, God blessed for ever, Amen.

In like manner, at the end of his Discourse about Election and Reprobation, in Chap. 11. which he had finish'd with the end of that Chapter, he breaks forth from vers. 33. to the end, O the depth of the Riches both of the Wisdom and Knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his Judgments, and his Ways past finding out! For who hath known the mind of the Lord, or who hath been his Counsellor? or who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed to him again? For of him, and through him, and to him are all things: to whom be Glory for ever. Amen. And lastly, in the conclusion of the Epistle, Chap. 16. 25, 27. Now to him that is of Power to establish you according to my Gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, (according to the Revelation of the Mystery which was kept secret since the World began, but now is made manifest, and by the Scriptures of the Prophets, according to the Commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all Nations for the Obedience of Faith.) To God only wise, be glory, through Jesus Christ for ever. Amen.

2. That to the Galatians hath it at the beginning, Gal. 1. 5. having last spoken of God the Father, he steps to give Glory to him ere he goes any further; To whom be Glory for ever and ever. Amen.

3. In that to the Ephesians, his Heart was full, and he begins with it as soon as he began to speak, Chap. 1. 3. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, &c. But he takes occasion with more solemnity to intermix it, Chap. 3. 20, 21. Now unto him that is able to do exceedingly abundant above all that we ask or think, according to the Power that worketh in us; unto him be Glory in the Church, by Christ Jesus, throughout all Ages, World without end. Amen.

4. In that to the Philippians, Chap. 4. 20. Now unto God and our Father, be Glory for ever and ever. Amen.

5. In the first Epistle unto Timothy, upon occasion of narrating his own Conversion, Chap. 1. vers. 17. Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen. Then at the end of Chap. 6. vers. 15, 16. Who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords: who only hath immortality, dwelling in the Light which no Man can approach unto, whom no Man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be Honour and Power everlasting. Amen.

6. In that to the Hebrews, Chap. 13. 21. The God of Peace, &c. To whom be Glory for ever and ever. Amen.

7. Peter in his first Epistle was so full with it, that he begins with it as Paul had done, Chap. 1. 3. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant Mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. And Chap. 4. 11. That God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ; to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen. And then, thirdly, at the close again, Chap. 5. 11. The God of all Grace, &c. To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen. In the second Epistle, Chap. 3. 19. He doth the same to Christ the Son. Grow in Grace, and in the Knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ: to whom be Glory both now and for ever. Amen.

8. Jude, Verse last. To the only wise God our Saviour, be Glory and Majesty, Dominion and Power, now and ever. Amen.

9. And John's passing it by in his Epistles, makes amends for it in his Revelations, which abound therewith. First, himself annexeth it to his own Salvation, wishing Grace and Peace from God the Father, the Spirit, and from Jesus Christ, &c. vers. 5, 6. And from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful Witness, and the first begotten of the dead, and the Prince of the Kings of the Earth: unto him that loved us, and washed us from our Sins in his own Blood. And hath made us Kings and Priests unto God and his Father: To him be Glory and Dominion for ever and ever. Amen. Then throughout the whole Book his Ears are filled with it, with Voices from all Hands. 1. The Saints and redeemed of Men in their several Congregations, (their Officers being their Leaders and Speakers for them, and in their Names) Chap. 4. 8. And they rest not day and night, saying, Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come. Again, 2. In Chap. 5. there is the same Laudation performed unto Christ: 1. By the Saints of the Sons of Men, vers. 9, 10. And they sung a new Song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the Book, and to open the Seals thereof, for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy Blood, out of every Kindred, and Tongue, and People, and Nation; And hast made us unto our God, Kings and Priests, and we shall raign on the Earth. 2. Then by an innumerable Company of Angels, vers. 11, 12. And I beheld, and I heard the Voice of many Angels round about the Throne, and the Beasts, and the Elders, and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands; saying with a loud Voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive Power, and Riches, and Wisdom, and Strength, and Honour, and Glory, and Blessing. 3. By all Creatures unto both God the Father and the Son, vers. 13. And every Creature which is in Heaven, and on the Earth, and under the Earth, and such as are in the Sea, and all that are in them, heard I, saying, Blessing, Honour, Glory, and Power, be unto him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever. 4. Unto which the Saints on Earth do give their Amen. Vers. 14. And the four Beasts said, Amen. And the four and twenty Elders fell down and worshipped him that liveth for ever and ever. And what they do here at first, is to shew what they did perform upon all occasions of Praise, as they are given throughout this Book: For they are here brought in as the settled Chorus, such as in Interludes use to be.

And accordingly you find them at it again, Chap. 7. 1. An innumerable Multitude of Saints, cloathed with white Robes, and Palms in their Hands, and they cryed, vers. 10. with a loud Voice, saying, Salvation to our God, which sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb. Then, 2. All the Angels, vers. 11. first say Amen, unto what the Church of Men had spoken: for though they have no Interest in that Salvation of us Men; yet for the Glory that thence ariseth unto God, and out of their love to us it is, they say, Amen. And it speaks but their own very Hearts. And then, 3. Themselves add, de novo, a new Praise of their own, vers. 12. Blessing, and Glory, and Wisdom, and Thanksgiving, and Honour, and Power, and Might, be unto our God for ever and ever, Amen. And again, Chap. 11. 17. and 16. 17. when the Kingdoms of the World shall become Christ's. And lastly, Chap. 19. after the ruin of Rome, vers. 1. And after these things I heard a great Voice of much People in Heaven, saying, Haleluja, Salvation, and Glory, and Honour, and Power unto the Lord our God. Then of the Beasts and Elders, vers. 4. And the four and twenty Elders, and the four Beasts, fell down and worshipped God that sate on the Throne, saying, Amen, Haleluja. And then you have the Voice of a greater Multitude, vers. 6. And I heard as it were the voice of a great Multitude, and as the voice of many Waters; and as the voice of many Thundrings; saying, Haleluja: for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth.

That only Point which I advance from all these, is;

That as it is a Duty; so that the Grace in us may, in this Life, be wound up to a giving Glory to God, in an abstracted way: From all the Glory which is in himself, and which in himself he possesseth, or for what ariseth to him from his works of Grace or Providence, and Revelations of himself, and for the review of Praise, which all others in all Ages have, or shall give him, even for whatever doth any way accrue to his Praise, as well for what he doth in, and to, and for our own Souls, but also in, or towards all or any other of his Saints or Creatures.

Unto this ample Extent do many of these Passages extend, as upon a bare review of the Passages themselves doth evidently appear. For the materials in most of these Doxologies, (although occasioned by the remembrance of Benefits bestowed, and those also, as in common to others with our selves) are pure Glory, Praise, and Honour given unto God, simply, and not Thanks only returned, as for Benefits, nor chiefly for them; for that is mentioned but in a few of them: But the Objects for which the Glory is given, rise unto what is in God himself; As Dominion, Majesty, Power, The King Immortal, Invisible, only wise God, King of Kings, the Blessed and only Potentate, Lord of Lords, who only hath Immortality, dwelling in the Light which no Man can see, To whom be Honour and Power from everlasting. These are all abstracted from Benefits, and on these I shall in the Application particularly insist, as also that in the Revelations, Chap. 1. 4. John to the seven Churches which are in Asia, Grace be unto you, and Peace, from him which is, and which was, and which is to come; and from the seven Spirits which are before his Throne; that is, unto Jehovah, as he is Everlasting, and hath fulness of Being in himself.

In a Word, this comprehends all the Glory due unto his Name. Which Expression you find in two Psalms, Pfal. 29. 1, 2. Give unto the Lord, O ye mighty, give unto the Lord glory and strength. Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his Name; worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness: Psal. 96. 7, 8. Give unto the Lord, O ye kindreds of the People, Give unto the Lord glory and strength. Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his Name: bring an Offering and come into his Courts. In the Hebrew, 'tis the Honour of his Name: That Honour which from you his whole Name is worthy of. And unto such a frame of Spirit, I would provoke you all; 1. To aspire to the obtainment of it. 2. To comfort you if you have attained it. And, 3. To exhort you to seek that it may not flag in your Spirits, but be fixed in you.

This high and holy Frame and Temper, was certainly in the Apostles Hearts when they endited these Doxologies, and thereby excited others to the like.

And my Grounds (besides what hath been said, and which carries its own Evidence with it) are;

2. Hallowed be thy Name, is the top-Petition in that Gospel-Prayer Christ hath taught us, and the height and top of desires, and of Aspirments to hallow it, are therefore in some measure, in some of the Souls of them that are taught to pray so: And that Petition is of an higher Key, than Thy Kingdom come, that follows; and yet in that we pray that his manifestative Glory may be set up above all, in all his Works, and over all his Works, and in his giving his Church all Benefits, and in his confounding his Enemies, &c. But, Hallowed be thy Name, is far above all this, and therefore therein the Soul in the highest place desires that it self, and all others may give Glory to God for all that is due to his Name, any way, and principally for what his Name is. His Glory and his Blessedness is in himself, and they are to glorify God on this behalf. Now therefore, some strains of this are attainable in this World: for we are taught to pray it, and so are to have some dispositions of Heart suitable that accompany those Prayers.

2. Certainly Old-Testament-Grace rose not up higher, than now New-Testament-Grace will be found in some Christians to have done, and to do; nor did any of their Spirits aspire higher, in any of their givings of Glory to God, than the Apostles in these of theirs. The Prophecy of Gospel-Times, Zech. 12. 8. is, In that day he that is feeble among you, shall be as David, &c. Therefore David's Grace was at least to the highest acted in them, as it was in the primitive Christians many of them.

Now if you consult David's Psalms, in which we have his Spirit and his Heart expressed, (the Holy Ghost being witness thereof, in that through him and his Grace he penned them.) We find he was raised to this Elevation, in multitudes of Passages in his Psalms. In which he doth abstractly consider God in his Greatness, Power and Wisdom, &c. And then his Works in all the World, and towards his Creatures; then his Revelations to his Church, his gracious dealings with all his Saints, and his Glory that ariseth from all these, and upon these Accounts, gives Glory, Praise, &c. to him: and provokes all others to do so. That his Heart was filled with a suitable frame of Spirit, triumphantly, and from his whole Soul to do this, appears in the very Passages abundantly. There do occur so many Records of this, as I know not well where to begin, or which to insist on most. I shall single forth but one for all the rest, which is the 145th Psalm, of which I shall give a brief delineation.

There is this one Psalms of his which beareth this Title, David's Praise, or the Praise of David, so in the Original; and altho there are multitudes of other high strains this way in other Psalms, yet the Holy Ghost stiled this [David's Praise]; namely, of God. Now you will find the whole of that Psalms, to be a praising or giving Glory unto God, either simply abstractly, for what is in his Nature, or what he is in his Works to all Creatures, especially to his Saints: and you shall not find one Word in it about any Benefit proper to himself in that whole Psalms: that in the 1st Verse that he stileth this God his God, was from hence, the exercise of so high a strain of Grace, carries so clear an evidence of this with it, that that God whom any one should extol so much (as his Heart was enlarged to in that Psalms) must certainly be his God that so extolled him. But yet besides, that [As he is God] is the principal of the two; you have his Heart elsewhere expressed for that, as in Pfal. 43. 4. I will praise thee, O God, my God. 1. [O God] in the chief place, place, and [my God] in the second. This is more abundantly seen in this Psalms, and in many other Psalms.

'Tis observable, that David entitling this Psalms, the Praise of David, that in the Original no Psalms else beareth such a Title. It is appropriated to it, because this wholly consists of meer Praise: he was elevated therein to a frame of Spirit, meerly made up of pure Praise of God, without any touch of what was particular to himself: So as it was not Thanks, but altogether Praise, and wholly Praise. To run over this Psalms briefly.

Himself as Presenter or Leader of the whole Chore, begins vers. 1, 2. I will extol thee, my God, O King: and I will bless thy Name for ever and ever. Every day will I bless thee: and I will praise thy Name for ever and ever.

And then in Verse the 3d, declares what it was, which above all he had in his Eye, as provoking him to this Praise; —Even the great and infinite Excellency of God in himself. Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised: and his Greatness is unsearchable. This summarily comprehends all that is in God, which David intuitively viewed at his entrance to the whole. After this of his Greatness in himself, he proceeds upon what God is in his Works, and in that Argument he utters,

1. His own Joy first, for this, that they all should with one Mouth praise him throughout all Times. Thus, vers. 4. One Generation shall praise thy Works to another, and shall declare thy mighty Acts. And so that God will be sure to be praised to the Worlds end, and had been praised afore he was born; this joyed his Soul exceedingly.

2. As that throughout all Times, so that in all Times, All and every of his Works do praise him. First, Men, vers. 6, 7. And Men shall speak of the might of thy terrible Acts, they shall abundantly utter the memory of thy great Goodness; and shall sing of thy Righteousness. And Secondly, All of his other Works, besides vers. 10. All thy Works shall praise thee, O Lord. But Thirdly, With a greater Emphasis and Exultation for this, that THE SAINTS THEY BLESS HIM, so in the same Verse.

But that which I would desire you in a special manner to observe withal, that whilst he brings in all those (which added unto his Joy) thus praising God, he himself thought with himself, whilst he was bringing in this general Contribution of their Praise, that I will not be left out at so glorious an Exercise: But I will bear my part; so as he abruptly puts in with them, and rudely (as it were) interrupts them, intermingling his own in the midst still of theirs. Thus in vers. 4. after he had said, One Generation to another, &c. In vers. 5. himself breaks in, I will speak of the glorious Honour of thy Majesty, and of thy wondrous Works. Which as if he had said I will croud in mine, and bear my part, and he doth it whilst theirs was but begun. And then in the next Verse, vers. 6. whilst he brings them in again chanting out the same in these Words: [And they, namely, (One Generation to another, this referring to vers. 4.) They shall speak of the might of thy terrible Acts.] Himself as one that could not hold, (no not till their Praise had been half spoken out) puts in again, I will declare thy Greatness. Then vers. 7. when he had brought them all in again, They shall abundantly utter the memory of thy Goodness, and shall sing of thy Righteousness. Himself again, (as if striving to out-sing them) riseth up to the highest and loudest Note and matter of Praise, vers. 8, 9. The Lord is Gracious and full of Compassion, slow to Anger, and of great Mercy. (This was proper to him as a Saint to utter,) and so together with them, fall a magnifying that God, which was the Cause of all, viz. His Mercy; and, as the Source of that, for which all his Works do praise him, The Lord is Good to all, and his tender Mercies are over all his Works.

Which having said, he then commits and leaves this Matter wholly unto them, even to all his Works, especially unto his Saints, to speak what they could, or would, further say. 1. To his Saints; for his Mercies to them are above what to all his other Works, vers. 10. All thy Works shall praise thee, O Lord; and thy Saints shall bless thee. And so leaves it to them to speak out the rest; for he alone was not sufficient, vers. 11, 12. They shall speak of the Glory of thy Kingdom; and talk of thy Power, to make known to the Sons of Men his mighty Acts: and the glorious Majesty of his Kingdom.

The rest unto the 21st Verse is a setting forth that Kingdom, (in some branches of it) which they so much celebrate; and you may take it either to be his own, or their Celebration of it; or rather of both jointly. It begins, vers. 13. Thy Kingdom is an everlasting Kingdom, and thy Dominion endureth throughout all Generations. The Lord upholdeth all that fall, and raiseth up all those that be bowed down. The Eyes of all wait upon thee, and thou givest them their Meat in due season. Thou openest thy Hand, and satisfiest the desire of every living thing. The Lord is righteous in all his Ways, and holy in all his Works. The Lord is nigh unto all that call upon him, to all that call upon him in Truth. He will fulfil the desire of them that fear him: he will also hear their cry, and will save them. The Lord preserveth all them that love him: but all the Wicked will be destroy. Which containing the principal parts of his Dominion, I divide and consider thus:

First, The Everlastingness of it; for which 'tis so much celebrated, vers. 13. Thy Kingdom is an everlasting Kingdom, and thy Dominion endureth throughout all Generations.

In which Words, is especially aimed at that glorious Kingdom he shall for ever exercise in Heaven, with all his Saints magnifying him gloriously, of which, as 'tis often said, there is no end. And although in this lies the height of his Dominion. Yet,

Secondly, He takes in the exercise of it as it is in this World, throughout the many Generations thereof, from first to last. And the Parts thereof are,

1. His Dispensations towards his Saints in their Miseries, which is shewn especially in raising and recovering them from falls, and exercised for them, and on their behalf, as they are oppressed, vers. 14. The Lord upholdeth all that fall, and raiseth up all those that be bowed down. A most glorious Work. But withal,

2. Also that which is extended to all Creatures, that having a sensitive Life, are to be maintained by Food, as Fishes, Fowls, Beasts; God takes it upon him to be the Father of this great Family of the World, and to take care of all the several kinds of them that need, and accordingly provides and gives forth Variety of several sorts of Food, proper to each. As 1. To give each their several Meat, and Diet; And 2. Fails them not; 3. In the due season, wherein they need it: and moreover, 4. His own immediate Hand is said to give it them; and they, 5. As expecting it from him, are said to come about him, as Fowls use to do about those that use to feed them. Yea and 6. He not only feeds, but satisfies their Desires. All these you have distinct, vers. 15, 16. The Eyes of all wait upon thee, and thou givest them their Meat in due season. Thou openest thine Hand, and satisfiest the desires of every living Thing.

3. That special part of his Providence and Kingdom, exercised over, and towards the eminent of his Creatures, viz. the Sons of Men in common, wherein he sets forth the manifold Administrations and Dealings with all of them, both good and bad. First, in common to both, vers. 17. The Lord is righteous in all his Ways, and holy in all his Works. That is, in all the Variety of Trials, Chastisements, Judgments, upon both wicked Men, and good Men; and it is not in some, or a few of his Ways, but [in all] that fall out to either: and therefore let us adore him in all.

4. But especially to the Righteous, his choicest ones. And that peculiar care and love to them, he again returns to set forth, vers. 18, 19, 20. The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in Truth. He will fulfil the desire of them that fear him: he will also hear their cry, and will save them. The Lord preserveth all them that love him.

These are mighty Sayings, that we should have him to cry unto, and he to be nigh and quick of hearing, and his Eyes to run to and fro over us; that God in the Issue one way or other, should fulfil these Sayings unto all his Saints, even to every one; especially those latter; to hear and consider all their Prayers, fulfil all their Desires, and after, and above all that, he will make sure work of it, infallibly to save them at last, and preserve them to the end effectually. Of all things he will be sure to bring them to Salvation. What can be more?

All and every of these, through want of not searching them out, even the Saints themselves observe not, and therefore God loseth of his Praise, yet we should believe them to be exactly true, and at the latter day we shall have an account of the fulfilling of them; but it is with us as Job acknowledgeth, Job 9. 10, 11. God doth great Things past finding out, yea, and Wonders without number. Lo, he goeth by, and I see him not: he passeth on also, but I perceive him not.

You find at the close of this, that part of his Kingdom added, But all the Wicked will be destroy; namely, in Hell: for of other Dispensations to them in this Life he had spoken, vers. 17. and this is a matter of as great Praise as any other, but only that towards his Saints, and which next thereto does bring in the greatest and justest Revenues of Clory to him. And yet even in doing this he shews himself Righteous and Holy, as he had said afore, vers. 17.

These things done and gone through, look as he had begun with himself, so he ends, vers. 21. My Mouth shall speak the Praises of the Lord; namely, for all these things, and yet not a Word in all these things that was proper to himself, but of common Concernment to others. And then having said, he as a Leader of the Quire, provokes all Flesh to do the same. And let all Flesh bless his holy Name for ever and ever; that is every Creature (as sometimes Flesh is used) to be sure, of all the Sons of Men.

Truly he might worthily entitle this Psalms, David's Praise: namely, [of God] whom elsewhere he gives the attribute of the [Praised God] unto; as in Psal. 18. 4. I will call upon the Praised God: So in the Original there. Ainsworth observeth the same Word here, vers. 3. The meaning in that place is (to make it the highest Encouragement to beget Confidence in one that Prays) is this, that God never denied Prayer; and that is the Thing for which he comes to be so famed and renowned a God, and that makes him to be the Praised God; that is it the Saints do praise him for: as that Coherence shews. And it is as if David had said, I will call upon him, and I shall be sure to speed: For he is renowned for this, and bears the Title of the [Praised God], for that still he continually hears them that call upon him. And we may be sure that God will not lose his Praise, and therefore will hear every one that calls upon him: according to that in Psal. 22. 3, 4, 5. But thou art Holy, O thou that inhabitest the Praises of Israel. Our Fathers trusted in thee: they trusted and thou didst deliver them. They cried unto thee, and were delivered: they trusted in thee, and were not confounded. And this makes it no wonder, that David elsewhere further stiles him, The God of my Praise; Thus Psal. 109. vers. 1. Whereupon give me leave, in order to expound it the better, to expostulate a little. What, David, were there no Saints but thy self that gave Praise to God? Why dost thou then seem to appropriate and ingross God unto thy self, as the God of thy Praise, as if none praised him else but thee? It is because his Soul had devoted all the Praise he was able to bestow on any, unto the Lord alone; as whom he had set himself to praise, and praise alone. As of a Beloved Son we use to say, The Son of my Love: And further, it is as if he had said, if I had all the Ability of the Spirits of Men and Angels wherewith to celebrate him, I would bestow them all on him, he is the God for my Praise. And as he was his, so he should be ours.

Yea further, Hence it is, that he is entiled, The Praise of all Saints, Psalms 148. last. 'Tis one of his Titles, whereby (as God) he is set out. Give me leave to understand that Passage of God himself, which others have diverted from him; for the Psalmist afore had said, He also exalteth the Horn of his People: And therefore he it is, of whom it follows, The Praise of all his Saints.

And his Son Jesus Christ.

My Brethren, you that have Grace, understand, in some measure, what Metal the Grace in your Hearts is made of; and unto what that Divine Metal, or Nature in you, may be sublimated by the (more than Chymical) Operation of the Spirit unto.

There are these Reasons why your Grace may be intended or raised up unto this Strain.

Reason 1. The Divine Nature in us, as in Peter 'tis stiled, is the perfect Imitation, or Image of God's own Nature; and all true Holiness doth consist in its being such. It is, as they observe of a Load-stone, that cut round, is the perfect imitation of the Earth, though in a lesser Volume, a Terrella (as they call it) so as all the Lines, the Poles, the Variation of the Compass, &c. may be exactly drawn upon it, and found out, and discerned, by the Motions of a Needle put upon it, which will shew all these exactly, as I my self have seen. And thus Sympathetical, in the make of it, is Grace, the Divine Nature in us, unto what is in God, or his Divine Nature.

However, this I may truly affirm, That Grace is framed, either to be the resemblance of, or applies it self unto all that is in God.

'Tis true, Divines do rightly make this distinction in the Divine Attributes.

1. Of some that are Communicable in this respect, that the likeness of them may be stamp'd on us, as Goodness, Wisdom, Holiness, &c. And of them the Case is clear, That therein consisteth an Image of God's Divine Nature.

But, 2. Some that are Incommunicable, as Sovereignty, Eternity, absolute Dominion, Majesty, &c. likewise his Glory, which is not to be given to another. Now observe, that those Attributes wherein our Graces are not capable to imitate him, that yet we have Grace to apply our selves to them, some way or other, so as to give the Glory due unto them. As to his Sovereignty, and absolute Dominion, and Majesty, Grace in us can and may be brought down, (shall I say) or wound up rather, to submit to it, to fall down to the Dust afore it; not simply, in a Reverence or Adoration of it, but in an absolute resignation of it self unto it; as in David we see, 2 Sam. 15. 26. But if he thus say, I have no delight in thee. Behold, here am I, let him do to me, as seemeth good unto him. Yea, unto a casting all away unto the Glory of it. And truly, as such Acts of Submission, are a throwing away, (shall I say) or rather, a giving up ones self, and all our own Concernments, both unto, and for, what purely is in God; so there is a giving Glory to him, by way of exalting him, for what is purely in himself.

Reason 2. The tendency of Grace in us, is to have but one common Interest between God and our Souls, to make his Interest wholly Ours, and ours to be altogether His. We are imperfect in it indeed, but so far as we have Grace, we have but one interest common to God and us. 'Tis that which Grace would be at, but Corruption keeps us down. Christ expresseth his being one with his Father, as in his Nature and Essence, so as he and his Father, having both but one Will, and so one Interest; John 6. 38. & 10. 29, 30. & 5. 30. For I came down from Heaven, not to do my own Will, but the Will of him that sent me. My Father which gave them me, is greater than all; and no Man is able to pluck them out of my Father's Hands. I and my Father are one. I can of mine own self do nothing; as I hear, I judg; and my Judgment is just, because I seek not mine own Will, but the Will of the Father which bath sent me.

Now as Christ's Interest and God's are but one, so by our Union with Christ, (and so with God through him) Christ's Interest and ours is but one. Therefore, 1 Cor. 6. 17. He that is joined to the Lord, is [one Spirit]; namely, with Christ, of one and the same Disposition, Ends, and Aims; for in all these respects, and much higher than I can express, it is to be one Spirit with Christ. Man and Wife, that are but one Flesh, yet we all see and know where Love between them is, that there is one common Interest of both; and it is such and so near a conjunction, through God's Ordination, as it is, as if they were one, both as unto what concerns the good of each other, as Ephes. 5. 28. He that loveth his Wife, loveth himself. And also in what concerns the common Good of the Family, of the Children, &c. and they mutually rejoice in all those alike. Oh, but Christ our Husband, and we, are one Spirit. Even the Saints among themselves, so far as gracious, are said to be of one Heart, and of one Soul, &c. Acts 4. 32. And the multitude of them that believed, were of one Heart, and of one Soul: Neither said any of them, that ought of the Things he possessed was his own, but they had all Things common. And they were to rejoice and suffer in one another's Happiness and Misery; 1 Cor. 12. 26. And whether one Member suffer, all the Members suffer with it: Or one Member be honoured, all the Members rejoice with it. For, as vers. 12. The Body is one, and hath many Members; and all the Members of that one Body, being many, are one Body; so also is Christ. Thus is Christ in his Body among themselves; how much more is it thus between Christ the Head, and each Member. I may well say, Even so is Christ, of the one part and the other, much more Christ and they are but one, and have but one Interest in common; for Christ is the Foundation of that among Saints. Now what doth the virtue of such an Oneness of Interest tend unto, but that we should rejoice in all the Good, Happiness, and Blessedness that is in God, or that Christ enjoys? And that this is the Power of true Love, and of our being one Spirit with Christ, that Speech evidently shews, John 14. 28. Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you: If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto my Father; for my Father is greater than I. And who therefore is so able to make me happy? And therefore that you are so cast down, and that the joy for my Happiness and Advancement, swallows not up your Sorrow, is, because you love your selves inordinately. But still the Power of Grace lies therein you may see, and the Foundation of all, is Oneness of Interest. Look therefore, as Christ's Interest was one with his Father's, so seek his Glory, and to delight in it: John 7. 18. He that speaketh of himself, seeketh his own Glory; but he that seeketh his Glory that sent him, the same is true, and no Unrighteousness is in him: So it is of Grace in a Christian, when wound up to what the height of it tendeth unto. And therefore, as God delighteth in his own Glory for it self, so may a gracious Heart be brought to do. It is in his Grace whereby to do it: and as God's Blessedness lies in his enjoying himself, and his own Glory; so the height of ours should be to apprehend that he is so glorious in himself, and accordingly to rejoice in it.

Reason 3. You will allow that Grace may be wound up in some Spirits, to as high strains for God and his Glory, (take the sorts or kinds of the one and the other) as Sin and Self-love are in some sort of Sinners, against God and his Glory. I do not say in the same degree, (because such as I shall instance in, are wholly wicked, and full of all Evil, as the Devils are, and no Man's Grace is full for the measure of it) but for the kind; and there is no kind of Wickedness, but is in the genius and disposition of it, equalled by the Grace in some Saints that love God. Now, Self-love in them that sin against the Holy Ghost, and in the Devil doth rise up directly and immediately so high, as to oppose and fly in the Face of all the Glory that is in God, or that in any way he enjoys, grudging at it, hating it, blaspheming it immediately, as it is in it self, as it is in us, and in him; this is the Devil's sin, and also of some Men, put into the Devil's state and condition.

Now then, I say, and argue from this; That the same contrary disposition may be, and is driven forth in Grace, ever to love the Glory of God immediately, as it is his, and because it is his, and to rejoice therein, more than in its own Blessedness; and to have an amplitude of Heart this way, so as to delight in all the Glory God hath, or any sort of way accrues to him. Yea, and I add this, that there is reason it should rather fall out on Grace's part, that Grace in a Saint should, rather of the two, be supported, to be elevated unto this high pitch, rather than the Wickedness in Men or Devils unto the contrary: In that Grace is a Principle capable of loving God for himself, as the chiefest Good, but no
Creature

Creature can hate God simply and absolutely for himself, because he is himself the chiefest Good, as the School-men argue it, but yet they are found to do it only because God is an Enemy unto Self-Love in them, and so in revenge they are provoked to oppose God, and to fly in his very Face, they being acted by a Spirit to do despite to the Spirit of Grace, (which is the very Spirit of that Sin against the Holy Ghost); but the Creature having the Image of God's own Holiness stamped upon it, it may love God for himself, and true Love to God is not founded upon Self-Love merely in the Creature; and if it were, it were not the Image of God: And if it be a Principle of Grace to love God, as God; then it must needs be capable to rise up to this, to glorify him as such. I further add, that as that forementioned desperate frame of Spirit befalls some Men in this Life, as well as Devils; so this high and holy frame of Heart (though more imperfectly for degree) is raised up but in some gracious Saints Hearts in this Life; and yet as all evil Mens Wickedness is not wound up to this height of renown in Sinning, but only in a few; so nor is the Grace of all Saints intended or elevated to this other extraordinary pitch. Which stating of it thus, may conduce to clear the thing in Hand, and to the comfort of such Souls as want the Energy or working Sense thereof.

Reason 4. It is certain, that Grace elevated works thus in the Saints Hearts in Heaven; that is, to glorify God for himself, and their own Happiness they consider not; for it is but a result or consequent of their joying in the amplitude of God's Glory, which they are wholly swallowed up into: For God becomes all in all in them and to them, 1 Cor. 15. 28. Now, as some Communications of the Joys that are in Heaven, are vouchsafed unto some Saints in this Life, some immediate Drops (not to say Dews only) are let fall into their Souls of the same kind that are in Heaven, in a Fulness. Therefore also, by a Parallel Reason, some lesser Participations of the Intenseness of that Grace, that is in those blessed Souls made perfect; for some have the Earnest of the Spirit, and of that Inheritance: and an Earnest consists of the same kind with the whole that is yet behind.

C H A P. VI.

A more punctual Explication what it is to give Glory to God, in Himself or Works; set out by a Comparative with all the other ways of glorifying God, which it far exceeds.

OUR next Enquiry shall be, What this Grace and Duty I so commend unto you, are. I put them together; for the one may be known and discerned by the other: and that where in Scripture we find the Duty spoken of, we may thereby understand what the Grace, that is, the Root thereof in the Heart, is and ought to be; as also what is the Duty when the Grace is spoken of, or the encrease of it specified. To find out the true Elevation of both, I shall proceed by comparative steps, whereby it will appear, how far this exceeds other ways of giving Glory to God.

In General, we may consider, That to give Glory to God, is a Matter of a large extent, comprehending many ways of doing it. As,

1. We are to glorify God in every Thing and Action, 1 Pet. 4. 10, 11. that in every Thing God may be glorified. And this is done by the Holy Ends we have in Communications, either put forth immediately, or though mediately, yet ultimately aiming at God's Glory in them: 1 Cor. 10. 31. Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do it all to the Glory of God. And the Apostle Peter adds, over and above such a way of glorifying God, to whom be Praise and Dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

2. We give Glory to God, in such good Works as directly in themselves do tend to the Glory of God; Mat. 5. 16. Let your Light so shine before Men, that they may see your good Works, and glorify your Father which is in Heaven: Which Peter seconds, 1 Pet. 2. 12. Having your Conversation honest among the Gentiles, that whereas they speak against you as evil Doers, they may, by your good Works which they shall behold, glorify God in the Day of Visitation: Which is, as if he had said, Though at present Wicked Men will not acknowledg any Goodness in you Saints; but on the contrary, speak Evil of you; yet little do you think how every Holy Action lays up Matter against the Day of Judgment, in the Consciences of the wickedest Men, by which God will be glorified at that day in their Acknowledgments, when Christ shall have set his gloss upon these Actions, and in the mean time, afore that Day, these Holy Works do give an occasion unto Holy Men to glorify God in your behalf, which these Works do by a redounding to the Glory of God, (as the Phrase is, 2 Cor. 4. 15.) yet so to praise God, as I exhort you to do, is higher. The Angels, although their Character is, that they do God's Commandments, and that they be the highest instance of it; as in the Lord's Prayer, Thy Will be done, as in Heaven, &c. Yet they are called upon, by David, farther to bleſs God, as a Matter beyond their doing his Will otherwise: Pſal. 103. 20. Bleſs the Lord, ye his Angels that excel in strength, that do his Commandments, hearkning unto the Voice of his Word. Nulla Angelis præſtantior eſt exercitatio in quâ ſe occupent; Calvin on the words. There is no higher way of glorifying God, than this for them to be exercised in. It is beyond their doing all other Commandments. Likewise in Pſal. 50. ult. Although ordering our Conversation aright is so acceptable to God, as he will shew his Salvation to them that do it; yet the height and top of glorifying God, is set upon the Head of praising God, as the Crown; Whoſo offereth praife, glorifieth me: and to him that ordereth his Conversation aright, will I ſhew the Salvation of God.

3. In performing Duties of Worship, publick or private, and being conversant in Ordinances ; This is a further degree of glorifying God, than in Holy Actions, in ordering our Conversations, &c. Psal. 68. 9. All Nations whom thou hast made, shall come and worship before thee, O Lord, and shall glorify thy Name. Yet this way of giving glory to God, excels being conversant in Ordinances ; although having Communion with God therein. 1 Pet. 4. 10, 11. As every Man hath received the Gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good Stewards of the manifold Grace of God. If any Man speak, let him speak as the Oracles of God : If any Man minister, let him do it as of the Ability which God giveth, that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ ; to whom be Praise and Dominion for ever and ever. Amen. Which is spoken of the ministrations of Ordinances. As to speaking in the Church, or to contribute to the Saints, is a way of glorifying God in the way of Ordinances and Worship ; Yet still this Duty of giving Glory to God, exceeds it, and therefore is over and beyond, (superadded and exhorted to, after the other) as distinct from them ; to whom be Praise and Dominion, for ever and ever. Amen.

4. It is more than to praise God for Benefits vouchsafed, and received to ourselves ; which yet is an high way of glorifying God. We generally say, That Thanksgiving is a nobler and more divinely generous Duty than Prayer ; for Self-love puts us upon that, praying for Benefits, but Thanks is a more free, delicate, and pure Act, and yet is out of a sense of God's goodness unto ones self ; Bless the Lord, O my Soul ; and forget not all (that is, not any) of his Benefits. Who forgiveth all thine Iniquities, and healeth all thy Diseases, Psal. 103. 2, 3. And Psal. 86. 12, 13. I will praise thee, O Lord my God, with all my Heart ; and I will glorify thy Name for evermore. For great is thy Mercy towards me ; and thou hast delivered my Soul from the lowest Hell. Yet we see there is a deep touch of Self-love in this both praise and glorifying of God ; for great is thy Mercy to me. Well, but this way of glorifying God, is yet more high and generous, being for what is abstractly considered from all Benefits ; that is, simply considering what Glory and Excellencies are in God himself, or in his Glory unto others of his Creatures : It is to give Glory to God, for what he is or doth any way to his Church, or to all others in the World, and not only for what he is to us, &c. Look back upon the places cited, and you'll find the most of them speak this abstractedness. In the Revelation, you find both the Church and Men to give Glory and Honour distinct from Thanks ; Rev. 4. 9. And when those Beasts gave Glory, and Honour, and Thanks to him that sat on the Throne, who liveth for ever and ever. Upon this account, vers. 11. That thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive Glory, and Honour, and Power ; for thou hast created all Things, and for thy Pleasure they are and were created. Likewise the Angels run upon the same strain, Rev. 7. 12. Saying, Amen : Blessing, and Glory, and Wisdom, and Thanksgiving, and Honour, and Power, and Might, be unto our Lord for ever and ever. Amen.

5. It is more than to glorify God for his Love to us ; for the Assurance and Hope he will glorify us ; Rom. 5. 1. *By Faith we have Peace with God ; and a standing in Grace, and the favour of God ; so, vers. 2. And not only so, but we rejoice in the Hope of the Glory of God : and not only so, but we glory in Tribulations ; so strong, real, lively, powerful, are those hopes of Glory in us, as to rise to this ; thus Verse the 3d. But then, vers. 11. he riseth yet higher ; Not only so, but we also joy in God, and make himself the top of our rejoicing, far beyond our being glorified by him, and our hopes thereof. Why ? For in our being glorified by him, we are Passives, loved, rather than love ; glorified, rather than give glory : But in the exercise of this Grace and Duty, the Soul is Active, and casts Glory upon God's Acts, and upon him, reverberates all the Glory that shines upon them, back again upon him, and that for what is in himself, as a God in himself, so glorious, dwelling in Light inaccessible, Immortal, only Wise, &c. Yet this must be added, that withal the Soul considers, that this God that is thus Great and Excellent, is also his God. He rejoices to put that in all, though still the top of his Praise, and his solace therein, doth rise and reach far higher. Therefore you find praising God, and my God, so often in the Psalms joined, and in the Prophet Isa, Chap. 25. 1, 2. although his Praise is* for his glorious Counsels and Judgments in the World, which wholly concern'd the Glory of God, and not himself; yet he puts in, I will exalt thee, O my God. That is, he reflected upon this withal, that God, who was so great a God, was his God, in that high and near Relation.

Use. Let us next view the high Privileges, and Divine Dispositions of such a Soul, when raised up unto this blessed Frame. I so state the Terms of what is now to follow, in calling them his Privileges, as well as the Divine Out-goings or Dispositions of such an Heart: But I shall not handle these two apart, or accurately sever them, but as one and the same, speak promiscuously of them.

It is the high Privilege of such a Soul, to have all it doth, or can comprehend, to be in God himself, to give Glory to him for; and in doing so, therewithall themselves to glory and rejoice also therein, as that he is such, and so great a God, so blessed, so glorious in Himself; and although they cannot see his Glory, and live in this Life, yet all those Descriptions of him, whereby he hath made himself so wonderfully known, they have these afore them, as far as in this Life they may or do comprehend them: Ephes. 3. 18, 19. there is a being made able to comprehend, and to be filled with all the fulness of God, prayed for by the Apostle: And it is evidently spoken of what the Saints may attain in this Life; for it is, whilst Christ dwells in their Hearts by Faith. And that place shews, that beyond the apprehension of the Love of God in Christ, and of Christ's Love, there is a being filled with the fulness of God himself, in such a proportion and sense as this Life is capable of; yet so, as such a thing there is to be attained, as shall justly bear the Title of this. And because they he writes to (as generally Christians do) find this to be too high (as indeed it is, if they reflect upon their ordinary walking and common Experiments it is). Therefore he concludes his Prayer with this; Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask, or think, according to the Power that worketh in us, &c. For indeed the experience of such a frame of Spirit, is an height above what we are able to ask or think, and yet is attainable by the Power that now worketh in us, as it follows. And because the genuine Product, End, and Tendency of such an elevation of Heart is to wish, and to give all Glory to God; therefore it is he so solemnly adds, vers. 21. Unto him be Glory in the Church, by Christ Jesus, throughout all Ages, World without end. Amen. For any ones being filled with all the fulness of God, doth constrain the Spirit in whom it is, to give and wish this Glory to him. As likewise he that is raised up to that frame of Spirit, thus to give Glory for what is in God himself, that Soul hath all the fulness in God afore him, to give glory to him for.

Now to incite us all to the seeking this high disposition of Spirit, I shall, for your encouragement, spread before you many Instances of Saints, who have had Hearts to glorify God for all the fulness which is in himself. Moses, you know, desired to see the Glory of God, Exod. 33. 18. and, says God, vers. 19. I will make all my Goodness pass before thee; and I will proclaim the Name of the Lord before thee. And God caused his Glory to pass before him, vers. 22. And accordingly, chap. 34. 5, 6, 7. God proclaims his Name and Divine Nature, in those Attributes of Merciful, Strong, True, and Just: Upon which Moses being filled with this Glory, adored God; vers. 8. Moses made haste, and bowed his Head towards the Earth. He made a return of Worship unto all this Glory he had seen and heard; though likewise he put up a Prayer with all, vers. 9. But he adores him purely, for that Glory which God had manifested to him, to be in Himself, and in his Nature.

We find many Psalms made to glorify God alone by his Works: But in some other Psalms besides, over and above, and before they come to celebrate God for his Works, the Psalms began first to celebrate him for what is in his Nature, what is in himself: Psal. 104. 1. Bless the Lord, O my Soul; O Lord my God, thou art very great, thou art clothed with Honour and Majesty. Who coverest thy self with Light, as with a Garment. And then he sets him out by his Works in the rest of the Psalm, in so glorious a manner, as in no Scripture more. Likewise Psal. 145. 1, 2, 3. I will extol thee; I will bless thy Name for ever and ever: Every

Every day will bless thee. Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised; and his Greatness is unsearchable. Verf. 5. I will speak of the glorious Honour of thy Majesty. And vers. 8. He sets out the graciousness of his Nature; The Lord is gracious, and full of Compassion; slow to Anger, and of great Mercy. The rest of the Psalms is taken up with praising him for his Works, and a setting forth the Glory of his Kingdom. Calvin did observe this also, upon Psal. 136. 1, 2, 3. Oh give Thanks unto the Lord, for he is Good; for his Mercy endureth for ever. O give thanks to the God of Gods: O give thanks to the Lord of Lords; for his Mercy endures for ever. He sets out first (saith he) the height of his Deity, and Sovereign Kingdom. And then the following part of that Song sets out his Works; To him who alone doth great Wonders, vers. 4. Likewise, Psal. 147. A Psalms of Praise, so it begins, vers. 1. Praise ye the Lord, for it is good to sing Praises to our God. At the 5th Verse he sets out what God is in himself, by three things, as the Principles of all his Works. First, By his Greatness and Immen- sity, Great is our Lord. Secondly, His Power; And of great Power. Thirdly, His Wisdom; His Understanding is Infinite. Elsewhere it is said, In Wisdom hast thou made them all; namely, his Works, Psal. 104. 24. But here his Wisdom is, that which is in himself, for which he celebrates him, though he had never made any Work.

Priusquam ad Celebrationem Operum Dei veniat summam ejus Deitatem summumq; Imperium Commendat. Calvin in loc.

This Soul thus wound up, can sit down in God, and with God, and bless him, and rejoice in all the Blessedness that is in him; and for that it is His; that He is so blessed: And that in such an Infinite God, there is such Infinite blessedness; and can say Amen to it, when he hath gone over it in all his Thoughts of it. As Paul, Rom. 1. 25. upon occasion of a dishonour done to God, by worshipping his unworthy Creatures, more than the Creator, he in indignation of Spirit adds, Who is blessed for ever, and puts Amen to it. He speaks of what he is in his Divine Nature, in himself; which in vers. 20. he calls his Eternal Power and Godhead. In vers. 23. The Glory of the uncorruptible God: And in vers. 25. The Truth of God; that is, the true Being of God. Now God considered as such, it is that for which he pronounces him Blessed, Who is blessed for ever: and I say Amen to it, (says he) that is, I congratulate it to him; for, what is Amen, but, so be it, or, oh let it be so? And if one Amen be not enough, you shall have it doubly set to our blessing of him; Psal. 72. 18, 19. Blessed be the Lord God, and blessed be his glorious Name for ever; and let the whole Earth be filled with his Glory. Amen and Amen.

And whom do you think he speaks of? Of Christ, and God in Christ, vers. 17. Men shall be blessed in him; All Nations shall call him Blessed: Wherein Christ, in the whole Psalms, under the Type of Solomon, is set out. But you find the same Amen set to the Blessedness that is in Christ in the New Testament; Rom. 9. 36, where Paul speaking of Christ, Who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen. He says Amen to the fulness of the blessedness of the Godhead that is in him; yea, unto the Man Jesus, taken up into the participation of that Blessedness, through his Personal Union with the Son of God; from which it is, that all that Glory which he wears in Heaven, is his, by Inheritance, or Natural Right, as Heb. 1. tells us.

Now in Psal. 45. he sets him out in the Excellency of his Person as such, Thou art fairer than the Children of Men; Grace is poured into thy Lips, therefore God hath blessed thee for ever. And because God had thus blessed him, the Psalms goes on to bless him too, and to wish well to him with all this his Honour; so far is he from envying of it, though it might have been the Lot of any other Man, or of a Man's self, to have been taken up into that Union, and kept from the Fall. But he wishes it all to him over and over again, and is glad that God hath such a Son, and himself such a Head; and as Christ passes along by him in his Glory, he cries out, Gird thy Sword upon thy Thigh, O most Mighty, with thy Glory, and thy Majesty; and in thy Majesty ride prosperously. These are words of one applauding, and blessing, and wishing all Happiness and Prosperity to him, with all his Honour; Ride prosperously; or, as the Hebrew hath it, prosper Thou, ride Thou. The old Translation had it, good Luck have thou with thy Honour; yea, and as Subjects use to say to the King (though often in flattery) as he passes by, Vivat Rex, Vive le Roy; Let the King live for ever, as in Daniel.

And as they of Augustus, when themselves were dying, they would Sacrifice for his Life, and say, Let Augustus live, though I die: So (would you think it) that the very like Phrase should be in the Psalms; and the meaning of those words, Psal. 18. 46. The Lord lives, (as we translate it) and blessed be my Rock, should be an Optative, Let the Lord live; as we use to say to our Kings, VIVAT REX; so, Let God live, and be blessed, and live for ever.

Take we likewise the Matter of those two Doxologies of Paul; 1 Tim. 6. 15. Who is the blessed and only Potentate; The King of Kings, and Lord of Lords: Who only hath Immortality, dwelling in the Light no Man can approach to; whom no Man hath seen, nor can see; to him be Honour and Power everlasting. Amen. The other, 1 Tim. 1. 17. Now unto the King Eternal, Immortal, Invisible, the only Wise God, be Honour and Glory for ever and ever. Amen. This latter he did break out into, upon occasion of the Story of his own Conversion. But though that so great a Mercy to himself was the occasion, yet his Spirit soars far higher, beyond all of what God had done for him. To consider purely, and abstractly, what a glorious God he was in himself, let us but open the Particulars of it.

First, He gives Glory to him, for that Blessedness which was in him, Who is the blessed (says he) and only Potentate. What is Blessedness, but a confluence and fulness of all Good, to an Infinite, compleat within himself, so as God need not go forth of himself for any thing; as Act. 17. 25. He needs not any thing, seeing he gives Life to all, and all Things: Like as if a great Man should have in his House, and in the compass of his Grounds round about it, all kind of Things, of all sorts, within his own Demesnes, that he need not go forth for any Thing.

Secondly, He is the only Potentate, Sovereign over all; He hath not only all Happiness within himself, and Fulness, but he hath sovereign and absolute Power over all Things. Now when these two Things shall meet all inward Fulness, and such an absolute Power beside, he is blessed indeed that hath it. You shall find up and down in the Psalms, the Psalmist to bless him above all, for a Kingdom of his, Psal. 145. and other Psalms, where you find it celebrated.

Now that Kingdom is, 1. seated in himself, and then exercised towards his Creatures; you shall find the Psalmist praise him for both. First, Seated in himself; In Psal. 93. which begins, in the first Verse, with a celebration of his Kingdom; The Lord Reigns; He is clothed with Majesty, &c. He ascends higher there, to the exercise of it, in governing the World. At vers. 2. Thy Throne is established of Old; thou art King from Everlasting; and for this they praise Him. His Kingdom began from Everlasting; He reign'd within himself, and in his own Purposes, and Contrivements, and Orderings of all Things; He disposes of all from [then], as the word of Old translated is in the Hebrew; And then it was, that he did cloath himself with Majesty, and did gird himself with Strength, as a Man uses to do, before he begins to do any great Matter: thus, vers. 1. for this his Saints do praise him.

Then, 2. As it is exercised. First, As it is seated in Heaven; Psal. 89. 5, 6, 7. The Heavens shall praise thy Wonders, O Lord; thy Faithfulness also in the Congregation of the Saints. For who in the Heaven can be compared unto the Lord? Who among the Sons of the Mighty can be likened unto the Lord? God is greatly to be feared in the Assembly of the Saints; and to be had in reverence of all them that are about him. He speaks this of the Glory which he hath, and shews forth in Heaven afore all Angels and Saints whom he hath round about him. He had said, in the 4th Verse, of Christ the Spiritual David; Thy Seed will I establish for ever; and build up thy Throne to all Generations. And of that Kingdom he treats, from vers. 21. of that Psalm, to vers. 38.

Now for this Kingdom of his, the Heavens are said to praise his Wonders, which is spoken of the Angels, who are often called the Heavens, from their place: As in Job it is said, The Heavens are not clean in his sight. And these knowing the Wonders of that Covenant of Grace; they, even they, are said to praise; The Heavens shall praise thy Wonders, O Lord: In the Hebrew it is, Thy Wonder, or thy Miracle, in the Singular Number; which in Ephes. 3. 10. the Angels are said to adore; and in Luke 1. to sing Glory to the Highest; for, his Grace to Man is that Miracle. Now the Material Heavens do not praise the the Mercy of God, or the Grace of God, or the Covenant of Grace, or the Throne of Grace that is establish'd in the Heavens. They understand nothing of Christ; no, they do not so much as materially give occasion to Man to praise God for these; and therefore this is meant of the Angels, and most Interpreters understand the next words of them. Thy Faithfulness in the Congregation of the Saints, Angels, and the Holy Ones made perfect, for there the great Congregation is. For even in the Heavens, who can be compared to the Lord, where all his Angels thus do praise him? Who among the Sons of the Mighty, of all the Powers of the Earth, can be likened to the Lord? for he is the King of Kings, and he is the Lord of Lords; a God above all Gods, even Angels themselves; as elsewhere the Psalmist hath it: And he says not only, There is none like thee; But, Who is like unto thee? His excellency so exceeds. And in the 7th Verse, He is there presented with all his Saints and Angels round about him, as one that is greatly to be feared, or that is terrible in himself, by reason of his Greatness, in this his Council, and Assembly of his Saints, and to be had in reverence of all that are about him: For Saints and Angels, they are of his Council in Heaven, (as might be shewn) and encompass the manifestation of his Glory there round about.

This Kingdom of his, is set out and magnified by those Psalms. First, By his Throne; Justice and Judgment are the Habitation of thy Throne, vers. 14. Then Mercy and Truth, they shall go before thy Face. He compares them to Harbingers that he sends out before him; Psal. 57. 3. He shall send from Heaven, and save me; God shall send forth his Mercy, and Truth, that come down with Commissions from him, as from the great King, when his Saints stand in need thereof, and these make strange work in the World: He need not send down Angels, he need send but Mercy and Truth down, which else-where it is said he prepares in the Heavens, Psal. 61. 7. He prepares Commissions for them; and sends them down with them for Execution. It is likewise said, That Majesty is before him; Psal. 96. 6. Honour and Majesty are before him; Sing unto the Lord therefore, Vers. 2, 3, 4. Bless his Name; declare his Glory among the Heathen, his Wonders among all People. For the Lord is great, greatly to be praised: He is to be feared above all Gods, Angels, and Kings on Earth; Honour and Majesty are before him. And then his Faithfulness is said to be round about him, encompassing his Throne, Psal. 89. 8. For what-ever he doth, he is mindful of his Faithfulness, and Covenant, Before and Behind, and on each Side; he can look no way, but that is in his Eye. And though he employ Angels, and send them down into the World, and they stand round about him; Yet he hath better Harbingers than these, Mercy, and Truth, and Faithfulness, that wait round about him. And for this Kingdom of his, as thus set out, do the Saints bless him; Psal. 145. 10. All thy Works praise thee, O Lord; thy Saints shall bless thee. They shall speak the Glory of thy Kingdom, and talk of thy Power. To make known to the Sons of Men his mighty Acts, and the glorious Majesty of his Kingdom. Thy Kingdom is an Everlasting Kingdom; and thy Dominion endures throughout all Generations.

Thirdly; The Apostle celebrates him, and gives Glory to him, that he is Invisible; you have it in both places, 1 Tim. 1. 17. and 1 Tim. 6. 16. and that purely puts it from God's being praised for what he is in Benefits to a Man's self, or from what he is to any Creature; for we praise him for what we do not see, for what we do not nor cannot see, and so cannot enjoy, (for so far as we cannot see, we cannot come to enjoy); and therefore purely for this, For what he is in himself, and to himself, in the knowledg and enjoyment of himself. He blesteth him that he is so great a God, that the Fulness of his Glory can never be known by his Creatures; So Excellent, that still there is an Infiniteness we cannot know in him: Had it been out of Self-love, (this giving Glory to him) it would have blessed him for what is seen and enjoyed. We see in this Life but his Back-parts; yet by what we see of them, we glorify him for what we see not; And how little do we know of him! as you have it in Job 26. 14.

Fourthly; That he is only Wise, his Understanding Infinite, (as we heard out of the Psalms) and infinitely shown in all his Works. In Wisdom hast thou made the Heavens, Psal. 136. 5. Yea, in Wisdom hast thou made them all, Psalm.

BOOK I.

104 24. But above all, for his Wisdom, that hidden Wisdom, manifested in the Gospel in the Salvation of Men; To God only Wise, who hath revealed the Mystery which was kept secret since the World began; To God only Wise be Glory, through Jesus Christ for ever. Amen. Rom. 16. ult. Of blessing him for his Decrees I shall speak afterwards. In his ordinary Works, his Thoughts are very deep; Psal. 92. 5. O Lord, how great are thy Works! and thy Thoughts are very deep. But, O the depth of the Riches, both of the Wisdom and Knowledg of God! cries the Apostle out, when he speaks of his Contrivements of Mercy in the Gospel, Rom. 11. 33.

Fifthly; He gives Glory to him, for that he is Eternal; That he had all this Blessedness, Wisdom, &c. from Everlasting: Such a Soul can bless him then for that he hath been so blessed a God from Everlasting, and enjoy'd this Happiness, and then to be sure, we enjoy'd nothing from him, for he was alone. You have the same in Psal. 41. 13. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, from Everlasting to Everlasting; and there is an Amen for either of them, Amen and Amen; An Amen for what he hath been from Everlasting, and Amen for what he shall be to Everlasting; And it is here, in the Apostle's words likewise, that he is Eternal, in the 1st Chapter, as for time past. And only having Immortality, in the 6th Chapter. You have the same, Rev. 4. 8. The four Beasts rest not Day nor Night, saying, Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come. They praise him for his Holiness, and for his Power; they praise him for all he hath been, for what he was, and hath been for time past, is for the present, and is to come. One would think, what hath a poor Creature to do to bless him, for what he was from Everlasting, all which is past? Yet they herein would shew their good Will, I will cast in my Shot, and Congratulation, saith the Soul.

Sixthly; For that he only is, and hath alone all those Blessednesses and Perfections: This is three times, in those two Doxologies of the Apostle, whilst he calls him the Blessed and only Potentate, and that hath only Immortality, and that is only Wise; To him be Honour. Psal. 86. 9, 10. All Nations shall come and glorify thy Name; for thou art great, and dost wondrous Things; Thou art, God alone. Psal. 72. 18. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, who only does wondrous Things. Oh, says that Soul, let him have it, and he alone, and none share with him.

This large and ample Field hath this Soul afore him to expatiate in. I might extend the amplitude of this Soul; That he hath all in God's Works; All in his Decrees; All in his Word, to give Glory to God for. First, all his Works, past, present, and to come: We have this oft in the Psalms; Psal. 66. 2. Sing forth the Honour of his Name; make his Praise Glorious. Praise was too low a word; Make his praise glorious. Say unto God, How terrible; or how reverent art thou in thy Works! All the Earth shall worship Thee, and sing in thy Name. Come and see the Works of God! &c. Psal. 92. 1, 4. It's a good thing to sing Praise to thy Name, O most High; for thou Lord hast made me glad, thorow thy Works; I will triumph in the Work of thy hands. It rejoiced his Heart to see what a Glory shined forth in all he had done: Oh Lord, How great are thy Works! and thy Thoughts are very deep. And this he doth with delight; Psal. 77. 12. I will meditate also of all thy Work, and talk of thy Doings.

He hath also all God's Decrees and Counsels afore him to rejoice in, and to praise him for, his Counsels that contrived all about his Works, both of Judgments and Mercies: Isa. 25. 1. O Lord, thou art my God, I will exalt Thee, I will praise thy Name; for thou hast done wonderful Things; and thy Counsels of old are Faithfulness and Truth. As likewise that in Psal. 92. 5. O Lord, How great are thy Works! thy Thoughts (that is, thy Counsels) they are very deep.

For his Decrees of Election especially, yea, and Reprobation also. When the Apostle had discoursed both these Doctrines out, and justified God therein, Rom. 9. and 11 Chapters; shewing how God had once chosen the Jews, but then cast them off; then, taken the Gentiles whom before he had suffered to walk in their own Ways, who in time past have not believed; and then at last, how he will have Mercy, both upon the one and the other. And the fulness of the Gentiles shall come in, as well as of the Jews; but God hath concluded them all in Unbelief, that he might have Mercy upon all: For this Counsel of his, he cries out, Oh the depth of the Riches, both of the Wisdom and Knowledg of God!

God, namely, in these his ways, of chusing the one, and refusing the other: How unsearchable are his Judgments, and his ways past finding out; for of him, and through him, and to him, are all Things; To whom be Glory for ever. Amen. Reprobation it self, and the Issues of it, upon the consideration of the hardness and obstinacy that is in Man's Heart, and the wickedness of Men against God, causeth such a Soul to take part with God, and to rejoice in the Glory that accrues to him hereby; his Spirit will be stirr'd at the thoughts of all the obstinate Sinners in the World, that they should remain such against so great a God. In the 104th Psalm, where he sets out God in himself, and in his Works, as much as in any other Psalm, after all his praises of him throughout, and uttering his own frame of Heart thereupon; At vers. 33, 34. I will sing unto the Lord as long as I live; I will sing praise to my God while I have a being; my Meditation of him shall be sweet, I will be glad in the Lord. With indignation he adds, (his Spirit being raised up unto the exalting of God, and singing of his Glory) Let the Sinners be consumed out of the Earth; and let the Wicked be no more, who should thus dare to lift up their Heads, and Horns, and Souls against this God, so Great, so Good, so Gracious; However I have reason to bless the Lord (says he) whom thou hast chosen: Bless thou the Lord, O my Soul, and all ye Saints, praise ye the Lord. In Psal. 145. That Psalm of Praise, where he shews him to be good to all his Works, and his Mercy to be over all his Works, &c. And what a gracious God, and full of Compassion he is. What is the Conclusion of his Spirit from all this? The Lord will preserve all them that love him; but all the Wicked will he destroy. This he was glad of; this Soul can sit down at the Day of Judgment, and think of the Glory that shall then come in to God, from the condemnation of Wicked Men. As that poor Woman, who having a most wicked Son, whom she dearly lov'd, once upon occasion of a high wickedness of his, said, Well, I shall one day rejoice that thou shalt be damn'd, and take part with the Glory of God therein. And the Conviction of so high a strain of Grace to be in her Soul, of Love to God, (while he knew how well she lov'd him) was the Means of breaking that Man's Heart, and converting him to God.

He hath also all in God's Word afore him, to glorify God for every word and passage of it; Psal. 56.4. In God will I praise his Word, (says he). And again he hath it, vers. 10. In God will I praise his Word; for all his Promises, for all his Threatnings, and executions of Threatnings, though upon himself, according to his Word. Good is the Word of the Lord, when it was against him and his Family, and the whole Nation, said good Hezekiah, 2 Kings 20. 19. Above all, he loves God's Salvation that is therein; Let all such as love thy Salvation, say continually, The Lord be magnified, Psal. 40. 16. One would think that this should be Self-love alone makes us love Salvation: Ay, but they love it, because it is his, That love thy Salvation; as in Psal. 21. 1. The King shall joy in thy strength, O Lord; and in thy Salvation how greatly shall he rejoice. It is the Character of a Holy Saint, to love Salvation it self; not as his own only, but as God's, as God's that saves him.

Again, this Soul can rejoice in all that is in God himself, and heartily rejoice; and Oh, what an infinite Priviledg, and how blessed a frame of Heart is it, for the poor Creature to be wound up so high, as not only to rejoice in hope of Glory; But we rejoice in God, Rom. 5. 11. To rejoice therein, more than in its own Happiness; And therefore you have it so often, when praising God is mentioned, that there is rejoicing also; It does accompany it, Psal. 104. 33, 34. I will sing unto the Lord, as long as I live; I will sing Praises to my God while I have my Being: My meditation of him shall be sweet; I will be glad in the Lord. In Psal. 43. 4. I will give unto God my exceeding Joy; Yea, upon the Harp will I praise thee, Oh God, my God; In the Hebrew it is, the Top of my Joy, the Joy of my Joy. You find them also, when they are in this praising frame, to make their boast in God; Psal. 34. 1, 2. I will bless the Lord at all times; his praise shall be continually in my Mouth; my Soul shall make her boast of the Lord. Likewise, in Psal. 68. 3. there they are also joined, Let the Righteous be glad; let him rejoice before God; yea, let him exceedingly rejoice. Then follows, Sing unto God, sing praise to his Name; extol him that rides upon the Heavens, by his Name Jah, and rejoice before him. And, vers. 13. To him who rideth upon the Heaven of Heavens, which were of old.

This

BOOK I.

This Soul, as those will rejoice in God, so exult in giving those praises to God; Psal. 92. 1. It is a good thing to sing Praises unto thy Name, O most High; And he founds it upon this, For thou, Lord, hast made me glad through thy Works: It is a good Thing; that is, It is a sweet and pleasant thing, even Praise it self is. Psal. 135. 3. Praise ye the Lord, for the Lord is good; sing praise to his Name, for it is pleasant. Psal. 147. 1. Praise ye the Lord, for it is good to sing Praise to God, for it is pleasant, and Praise is comely.

David speaks it as the Joy of his Soul, that he should yet live to praise him; and he yet shall praise him more and more, Psal. 43. 4, 5. He expresseth it as his greatest Ambition, and delight of Soul, that he should live yet to praise him.

He does this with his whole Heart; Psal. 9. 1, 2. I will praise thee, O Lord, with my whole Heart, I will shew forth all thy marvellous Works; I will be glad, and rejoice in thee; I will sing Praise to thy Name, O thou most High. And therefore in praising of him, you find, they say, Amen and Amen, as in Psal. 41. 33. and Psal. 72. 18. which shews all heartiness.

That Soul can go over all Ages past, and be affected with the Praises that have been given to God by the Saints and Angels in all Ages. To read the Psalms, wherein David and the *Psalmist*s praise him. To read in the Revelations, how the Angels, the four and twenty Elders, and the four Beasts, and all Creatures praise him. He can begin and set down with the Angels, those bright Morning Stars, that began so early to praise God for the Creation of the World; Job 38. 7. Then the Morning Stars sang together, and all the Sons of God shouted for Joy; And he can shout with them, that they then did so. He can then sit down in the Ark with Noah, and glorify God with him, for that the Lord sat at the Flood, Psal. 29. 10. So most Interpreters render it, and interpret it, That he sat as a Judg, taking vengeance on the old World, and Ungodly, after so much long suffering; and sat on the Throne of Mercy, preserving Noah, that Righteous one, and thus the Chalde paraphrase on it. And that which follows, confirms it; Yea, the Lord sat King for ever; He did that great Act once, and ever since he hath held being King, and will do so to everlasting. This Man can join with Miriam and Moses at the Red Sea, Gen. 50. and sing the Song of Moses, and of the Lamb, as they do Rev. 15. He can bear a part with Hannah, and all those *Psalmodist*s in their Elogiums, and high Exaltations of God; even as the Psalmist, we find, did join with Moses in celebrating his Praise for his Wonders then done in Egypt, and in the Red Sea. His Heart falls in with those Angels Song, when they proclaim'd the Birth of our Redeemer; Glory to God on High, Peace on Earth, good Will towards Men: Yea, as one well says, Aures habet ad audiendam Calcrum predicationem. He hath Ears to hear the Heavens, declaring the Glory of God, and his Soul can make Musick on it; for thus we read Rev. 5. when every Creature, vers. 13. that is in the Heavens, and in the Earth, &c. said, Blessing, Honour, Power, and Glory, be unto him that sits upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb, for ever and ever: That the four Beasts said, Amen. And the four and twenty Elders fell down and worshipped him that lives for ever and ever; they fell in with them. And as a further Ground for this latter Branch, we find the Angels hearing the Saints of Mankind giving Praise to God, and saying, Salvation to our God which sits upon the Throne, and to the Lamb: We find, that all the Angels that stood round about the Throne, That they fell down before the Throne on their Faces, and worshipped God, saying, Amen. They join with the Song that the Saints of Men sung unto God, though they were not concerned in it; Not in Salvation, for they fell not, yet they say, Amen; and then they add of their own, Blessing, and Glory, and Wisdom, and Thanksgiving, and Honour, and Power, and Might, be unto our God, for ever and ever. Amen. And where there is such a frame of Spirit raised in the Heart of a Man filled with the Glory of God; as the Angels fall in with our Song, we can fall in with theirs, and with that of all the Creatures.

Musculus on
Psal. 89. 5.

CHAP. VII.

The Glory of God which appears in his Kingdom, and Universal Dominion, whereby he rules over all; as it is described in Psalm 89. from vers. 6. to vers. 15.

Here begins a Magnifick Description of God as King, and his Kingdom: For so expressly in the conclusion of this Description he is stiled, v. 18. [Our King]. And the intent of this I have elsewhere shewn to have this end and purpose, of setting out what a King Christ his Son should be, and what a Kingdom and Throne his Father would estate him unto, for the grand Promise of this Psalm, so often solemnly made and repeated, being of a Throne, under the Type and Shadow of David, and of Christ's being his Seed, unto Christ his Son. It begins, Verse 6. For who in Heaven can be compared unto the Lord? Who among the Sons of the Mighty can be likened unto the Lord?

He first sets out the incomparable Glory and Excellency of his Person to be such, as that he is a King above all Kings, Whether in Heaven (for there are Thrones, which notes kingly Dignity, as well as Dominions among the Angels, Col. 1. 16.) or whether on Earth, and that he is worthily, for his Personal Excellencies, the only Potentate, 1 Tim. 6. 15. and his exaltation of him as such, is carried so high above them, as he will not deign so much as a comparison with them; but that he surpasseth all or the least comparison to be made with him. 1. So far above the Angels, that who in the Heavens can be compared to him? The Heathen Philosophers and wisest of them admired, worshipped the Angels, (as some Pseudo-Christians, induced by their Doctrines, afterward did the like, as Col. 2. 18. with Piscator and others, by Sons of the Mighty, to be meant the Great Ones of the Earth, than of the Angels, as others would, because of the like correspondent distinction held in the verse afore, of the Heavens, and Saints on Earth, continued also in this: As also, because this Stile, Sons of the Mighty, or of the Gods, is no where given to the Angels, although they are stiled the Sons of God, as in Job, because they are such by Creation (for which respect even Adam is also called the Son of God, Luke 3. last.) Who though because they excel in Strength (as the Psalmist of them) are therefore stiled the Mighty Ones, Psal. 78. 25. Yet no where Sons of the Gods, or Mighty, which is a Phrase peculiar to Men, connotating Propagation from such Men as are Gods, and Mighty Ones in the Earth; thus Psal. 29. 1. Give unto the Lord ye Sons of the Mighty, &c. That is, you Nobles, great Ones, and Potentates of the Earth, descended from them that were such; whereas the Angels Nature knows not Propagation, for which they should be thus stiled.)

I rather understand with Piscator and others, by Sons of the Mighty, to be meant the Great Ones of the Earth,

And then, the Jews themselves had the Persons of their Heroes, as Moses, David, Solomon, &c. in too high an admiration (whose Renown was also spread over the whole Earth,) and did too much boast of them, as the Glory of their Nation, and had relied too much upon David's House, that it would be answerable in future Ages, unto so happy beginnings of David, and Solomon, which the Prophet here (living in Roboam's time) began to see to fall short. Thereupon says the Prophet, whether among Angels, or Spirits of holy Souls in the Heavens, or the Sons of the Mighty on Earth, the best and greatest that ever were, there is not one, no nor all of them put together, that hath the least Shadow of Worth, to be so much as named, by way of comparison, when God is spoken of: For so the manage of the Words import. He says not, there is no God like unto the Lord, (as yet elsewhere we have it) but who can be compared and likened? &c. God is so much and so infinitely beyond them all. I said, there is not the least Shadow for them to enter into the Lists of this Comparison. And the Dutch have translated those Words [Who can be compared?] thus, [Who can be shadowed with him?] that is, they are not worthy to be accounted Shadows unto such a comparison with him.

The intent of which, is to set forth how great a King in his own Person he is that is our King, as God (as he is in himself considered) is understood to be: As also to magnify that infinite Grace and Condescension of a God so great, to be the gracious Founder of so wonderful Mercies, and of such a Covenant of Grace to the Sons of Men: For that is the Argument he drives on all along.

This for the first, how great a God and King he is in his own Person simply considered.

VERSE 7.

2. From his extolment of him in his Person, so far above all Kings, &c. He proceeds to his Kingdom. And in the seventh Verse he begins that with a delineation of his Court: And how he hath erected a Palace, and so presents him as surrounded with Courtiers, and Attendants round about him. God is greatly to be feared in the Assembly of the Saints: and to be had in reverence of all them that are about him. This is exactly done in Similitude to the mode and manner of Kings on Earth, and correspondent unto the Scheme or Description here. You find, (if you compare it) that of God's Throne set forth in the 5th and 7th Chapters of the Revelation, where the Lamb had his Commission given him, to be God's King, or God's Viceroy, where you see how his Angels and Saints stand round about him. The like Posture of this Assembly you read in the Old Testament, 1 Kings 22. 19. and more fully and expressly of whom it consists in the New, Heb. 12. 22, 23, 24. But ye are come unto Mount Sion, and unto the City of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable Company of Angels, to the General Assembly, and Church of the First-born, which are written in Heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the Spirits of just Men made perfect, and to Jesus the Mediator of the New Covenant, and to the Blood of Sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel. And that as from thence he administers the grand Affairs of his Kingdom, the Scriptures do abundantly testify.

And by setting out this Solemnity of his Court in Heaven, he declares how great a King he is, and how greatly dreadful he is unto those glorious Spirits that are nearest to him; however he is disregarded by Men on Earth, yet in Heaven he is greatly feared and in reverence of them that know him best; that stand round about him, beholding his Face, being also ready prest to execute his Will, when it is signified by the least Nutus, or Cast, and Discovery of his Countenance.

And yet though he useth these Angels as ministering Spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be Heirs of Salvation, Heb. 1. last. yet the Psalmist further presents him as Potent of himself alone, to execute and do all whatever, which for these Heirs of his Covenant he hath a mind to do, and withal a faithfulness joined therewith to move him thereunto, as vers. 8. hath it, But unto the Son he saith, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever, a Scepter of Righteousness is the Scepter of thy Kingdom. Who yet is pleased to employ that glorious Company of Angels that are round about him, in the outward Administration and Affairs belonging to this Kingdom, whilst himself by his Spirit works and doth all as to the inward Effects in his Childrens Spirits: But this external Kingdom (visible to those that are with him in Heaven) he manageth as Kings, at and from their Courts, use to do: Which course and way, as for other reasons he chose to do, because his Son whom he would give it unto, being to be a Son of Man, and a visible King, he provided for him, to shew his Sublimity, the State and Grandure of a visible King: Who is gone into Heaven, and is on the right Hand of God, Angels, and Authorities, and Powers being made subject unto him, 1 Pet. 3. 22. And hath put all things in subjection under his Feet, Heb. 2.

From hence therefore, the Psalmist descends to set out God's absolute Dominion (as the only Potentate) which he hath over all things that are in these lower parts of his Dominion, which are his Foot-stool. As namely, over these visible Heavens, the Suburbs of those higher, and over the Earth, vers. 9. Thou rulest the raging of the Sea: when the Waves thereof arise, thou stillest them. The Heavens are thine, the Earth also is thine: as for the World and the fulness thereof, thou hast founded them. The North and the South thou hast created them: Tabor and Hermon shall rejoice in thy Name. And in this latter Passage he quarters forth the World, the North and the South; and Tabor, and Hermon (which two stood East and West) to shew that his Power reacheth to every Nook and Corner of the World. And for a manifest invincible Evidence of his Power in these lower parts of Dominion (this World) he gives instance of one sort of Sovereign Acts, (which sufficiently argue his Power over all things else, whatsoever, here below.) And those Acts too such as were done in Performance of, and to make good his Covenant, promised to Abraham (for the Mercies of his Covenant are the thing he prosecutes); they are his Wonders wrought in Egypt, and at the Red Sea, rescuing his People from thence by an out-stretched Arm, vers. 9, 10. Thou rulest the raging of the Sea: when the Waves thereof rise, thou stillest them. Thou hast broken Rahab in pieces, as one that is slain, thou hast scattered thine Enemies with thy strong Arm.

The Psalmist still goes on to set forth the Glory of this King and Kingdom by Allusions answerable to what the Pomp and State of Kings doth lye. And indeed the highest Glories of the most High (as he is a King) are yet to follow, which lye in this, that his own Internal Essential Attributes, and Personal Excellencies, are all sufficient to constitute him a King, and then to support his Greatness, and to hold forth, and express a Majesty and Splendour, such as alone doth render him dreadful, and to be revered of all that are about him, so as he needeth not any thing outward, no additional Glory, or Ensign of Majesty, but Himself, and his own Divine Perfections, are instead and beyond all such Forreign Ornaments. That whereas Earthly Kings (their Persons being Mortal, &c. as other Men) do therefore need accessory Circumstances of State and Grandure, Robes of Purple, Crowns of Gold, enriched with most Precious Stones, with which Solomon was clothed in all Royalty, Scepters also and Maces of Honour, and Swords to be carried afore them, also Thrones and Canopies of State, &c. and all to dazzle the Eyes, and beget a Reverence and Dread in them that are about them, or in others of their Subjects. But our great God and King hath no need of any of these things, no outward thing to greaten, or assist him. Now the Attributes he mentions are four, or of four Ranks.

First, In vers. 14. you read that Justice and Judgment (that is, Righteousness, and Righteous Administrations) are the Establishment (as in the Margent) of his Throne. He needs not, as Solomon, an Artificial Throne, Lyons, &c. as Solomon's Throne had, and needeth not his Subjects Hearts, his own Justice is sufficient to found and support his Throne.

The like you have (speaking of his Kingdom.) Psal. 97. 2.

Secondly, Whereas Kings have Mace-bearers, and Nobles to bear the Sword, to go afore them; also Messengers of State that stand ready to go forth to execute any Design: So God as in the same 14th Verse, Mercy and Truth are before thy Face, either to carry the Ensigns (which indeed themselves are sufficiently) or as ready to go abroad, (Tanquam Apparitores) to effect whatever he would have done in the behalf of his People. Thus elsewhere, when David was to be delivered, as in Psal. 57. 3. God shall send from Heaven, says he, (as from his Court and Palace) And whom will he send? It follows, God shall send forth his MERCY and his TRUTH. Creatures might fail, but if Mercy it self, and Truth be entrusted to dispatch his decreed Purposes, these will be sure to do it throughly and to purpose, as we say, for the Good of his Chosen, and the making Good of his Covenant.

Thirdly, These came down armed with all the Power that is in God the Lord of Hosts to assist them, and so can never fall short of Ability for the Performance, vers. 13. Thou hast a mighty Arm: strong is thy Hand, and high is thy right Hand.

Propheta ad Regni insignia vel Pompas alludens, dicit Judicium & Justitiam esse futuram solii ejus: Clementiam & Veritatem esse Apparitores: Ac si diceret loco purpuræ, vel diadematis, vel sceptri, his insignibus ornari Deum quod justus sit, & æquus Mundi judex, misericors Pater, fidelis suorum Protector. Nam quia Terrenis Regibus non suppetit intrinseca dignitas, aliunde eam mutant. Deus autem qui se uno contentus, nullis adminiculis indiget, splendorem imaginis suæ in justitia, bonitate, & veritate sua nobis proponit. Calvin. in loc.

BOOK I.

Calvin.

Fourthly; His Faithfulness; that is, a constancy to his own Resolutions, Intentions, Purposes, and promises of Mercy, that in vers. 8. is said to be round about him. In allusion still unto a King on his Throne; in the foregoing vers. 7. the Angels were said to be round about him; as also the Revelations. But here, his own very Faithfulness, is further said to be round about him. A tergo, à fronte, à dextra, à sinistra; afore, behind, and every way; Faithfulness environs him round; no Decree, no Execution can pass from him, but it must pass through his Faithfulness. And it is for all sureness to us, and our full security, that he is said to have placed it round about him as his Guard, that so his Faithfulness might watch and observe whatever passeth, as in our behalf, that nothing should be done, or fall out, but in very Faithfulness to his Promises made to his. His Fidelity hath an Eye upon him in every thing, and he hath an Eye unto it continually; for let him turn his Eyes which way he pleaseth, it is before him. Thus in like manner you find a Rainbow round about his Throne, Rev. 4. 3. The Rainbow was Mercy's Remembrancer, not to destroy the World; and was typical therein of the Covenant of Grace, Isa. 54. 8, 9. With everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee; for this is as the Waters of Noah to me, &c. And this Rainbow being thus continually round about him, he can look no way but he is put in mind of Mercy, in the midst of the most ireful Dispensations, as in the same place of Isaiab you have it. And therefore he also said, he will ever be mindful of his Covenant, Psal. 111. 5. and so of these Mercies of his Covenant.

Now all this which is said of God's Kingdom, is all true of Christ; his own Perfections innate in him, (being God's Son) have an alike sufficiency in him; his own Glory and Power, that flow from that Union, have Ability, Majesty, &c. sufficient. The Apostles say of him, We saw his Glory, as of the only begotten Son of God, proper to him, and innate in him, as such. And the Angels they cry aloud, Rev. 5. 12. Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive Power, and Riches, and Wisdom, and Strength, and Honour, and Glory, and Blessing.

Use 1. We should therefore praise and glorify God, That he is the King, the Great King, Blessedness in himself. You have them both joined, why we should praise him; Psal. 95. 3. For the Lord is a great God, and a great King above all Gods. You have them joined in the Lord's Prayer, Hallowed be thy Name, as he is God; and, Thy Kingdom come, as he is King. In Jer. 10. 6, 7. Here, as he is God, O Lord, thou art Great; and thy Name is Great in Might; And here he is as King, (and though there be forty other Reasons given, why he should be King of all the World), here is one, Who would not fear thee, O King of Nations? for to thee doth it appertain: For as much as among all the wise Men of the Nations, and in all their Kingdoms, there is none like unto thee. (Aristotle says, A superexcellency in a Man was it that made him a King); as if he had said, Lord, if thou lay down thy Place, there is no wise Man in the World can order and rule it as thou dost, to thee it appertains. And, vers. 10. he tells you plainly, He is both the True God, and the Living God, and an Everlasting King. You see he blesses him, for that he is blessed in himself. Now, What is Blessedness? A Confluence of all Happiness and Glory that he hath, and that wholly in himself, he needs nothing; for this he gives Glory to him. So Paul doth, Rom. 1. when he had told them how the Gentiles dishonour God, and abuse him, changing the Glory of the uncorruptible God into, &c. Vers. 25. His Spirit breaks out, Who is blessed for ever; And what does he add? Amen. What is Amen? So be it; O let him be blessed, let him enjoy it. Amen, is a wish, so it may be. The like you have Rom. 9. 5. speaking of Christ, Who is, over all, God blessed for ever. Amen.

2. As a King, we are to bless and praise him; truly you will say to me, That his being a King, relates to what he is to the Creature, not unto what he is in himself. I yield it, it refers unto what Relation he hath to the Creature: yet let me say, That to be the King of all, is proper, it is essential to him. To me that Scripture argues thus much, Psal. 93. 1. The Lord reigns, he is clothed with with Majesty, the Lord is clothed with Strength, wherewith he hath girded himself. Chap. 7.

 Verſ. 2. Thy Throne is eſtabliſhed of old; thou art from Everlaſting.

From then (as the word is) thou art from Everlaſting. His Throne was eſtabliſhed from Then, from of Old; and it is as old as himſelf: It is not only when he ſays, Thou art from Everlaſting, that God is Everlaſting, but it relates to his Throne. The ſame you have in Prov. 8. 22. The Lord poſſeſſed me in the beginning of his Way, before his Works of Old. The Lord was King before the World was. We uſe to ſay of a Man of a great and high Spirit, He hath a Kingdom in himſelf. To be ſure God had. Why? He had Frames and Models of Worlds, and could have made Millions of Worlds; and what not? He diſpoſeth of all that he hath made; Iſa. 44. 6, 7. Thus ſaith the Lord the King of Iſrael, and his Redeemer the Lord of Hoſts, I am the Firſt, and I am the Laſt, and beſides me there is no God. And who is like me, that ſhall call, and ſhall declare it, and ſet it in order before me, ſince I appointed the Ancient People? and the things that are coming, and ſhall come? let them ſhew unto them. A King is not a King only in Proclamations and Executions, but in Councils, in ordering Things in his Court. He was thus a King from Everlaſting. Antiquity of Kings doth enoble; As it is ſaid, Iſa. 19. 11. How ſay ye to Pharaoh, I am the Son of the Wiſe, the Son of Ancient Kings.

This is a Subject of a World of Praise; As alſo in the Revelations, That God is a King of Kings, is a Matter of great exaltation to God. Look Pſalm. 145. which is a Pſalm of Praise, the Title is ſo; it begins thus, I will extol thee, my God, O King; and I will bleſs thy Name for ever and ever. Verſ. 10, 11, 12, 13. All thy Works ſhall praise thee, O Lord; and thy Saints ſhall bleſs thee. They ſhall ſpeak of the Glory of thy Kingdom; and talk of thy Power. To make known to the Sons of Men his mighty Acts, and the glorious Majesty of his Kingdom. Thy Kingdom is an Everlaſting Kingdom; and thy Dominion endureth throughout all Generations. And therefore you find in the Pſalms, the Pſalmiſt bids them proclaim it; The Lord is King, and reigns in the World, as the beſt News they ever heard, or that ever could be told them; as in *Pſal. 96. 10. Say among the Heathen, The Lord reigneth; Make proclamation of it, That the Lord reigns; The World alſo ſhall be eſtabliſhed, that it ſhall not be moved. Verſ. 11. Let the Heavens rejoice, that the Lord reigns; and let the Earth be glad: Let the Field be joyful, and all that is therein; Then ſhall all the Trees of the Wood rejoice. Let the Sea roar; you Fiſhes that have no Tongues, you are mute, yet ſpeak and roar out now, That God reigns; as Chriſt ſays, That the very Stones would ſpeak: Let the Floods clap their Hands; let the Hills be joyful together, Pſal. 98. 8. Or as elſewhere, Let them ſkip and dance, that God is King, that he is the King of Kings, that he reigns; But eſpecially let his Church do it, *Pſal. 97. The Church eſpecially hath a ſhare in this, Thy Judgments are made manifeſt, as Rev. 15. Thou art King, and King of Saints; Let the Heavens declare his Righteouſneſs; and all the People ſee his Glory, verſ. 6. Worship him all ye Gods, verſ. 7. Gods or Angels; and this becauſe he is ſo high and great a King. And you poor Souls that are here below, and under Oppreſſion, ſowing Tears, before this Kingdom breaks out, (ſays he) there is Light ſown for you; Verſ. 11. Light is ſown for the Righteous; and Joy for the Upright in Heart. Rejoice in the Lord, ye Righteous; and give thanks to the remembrance of his Holineſs, verſ. 12. This is, becauſe he is King.

I will now explain to you the Frame of ſuch a Soul, as is wound up to God, to give Glory to God for what was in himſelf; and will deſcribe the many Diſpoſitions that Soul hath.

Fiſt; Such a Soul ſees ſo much of the Glory of God, as it is at a loſs what Praise to give him; It knows not how to praise and glorify him enough: As it is ſaid of his Benefits, which is a lower praise given to him; Pſal. 116. 12. What ſhall I render unto the Lord for all his Benefits towards me? Thus alſo Paul, 1 Theſſ. 3. 9. What Thanks can we render to God again for you? But if the Glory of God come in, it is above all your Bleſſing and Praise. Nehem. 9. 5. Blessed be thy Glorious Name, which is exalted above all Bleſſing and Praise. That a Soul is at ſuch a loſs you may ſee it in the Pſalms.

1. See the variety of Expression the Psalmist goes about to utter it by; sometimes he calls it Praise, and then Glorifying; Psal. 86. 12. I will praise thee, O Lord my God, with all my Heart; and I will glorify thy Name for evermore. And sometimes Singing; But he says it over, and over, and over, and over; Psal. 47. 6, 7, 8. Sing Praises to God, sing Praises; Sing Praises to our King, sing Praises; for God is the King of all the Earth, sing you praises with Understanding; God reigneth over the Heathen: God sitteth upon the Throne of his Holiness. He doubles it, and doubles it, to shew the vehemency of his Soul; He could not sing loud enough, Sing, Sing, Sing, Sing, four times in one Verse. And sometimes, A New Song, Psal. 33. 3. Sing unto him a new Song. I have praised him formerly, and sung to him, but all my old Songs are not good enough.

Sometimes he expresses it by shouting for Joy, Psal. 32. ult. Be glad in the Lord ye Righteous; and shout for joy all ye that are upright in Heart. Psal. 33. 3. Play skilfully with a loud noise. And extol him, Psal. 30. 1. I will extol thee, O Lord. And magnify him, Psal. 34. 3. O Magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his Name together. Sometimes I will greatly praise the Lord; and because Praise is too low a word, says he, Let us make his Praise Glorious. Psal. 66. 2. Sing forth the Honour of his Name; make his Praise glorious: Let us give him no other than glorious Praise.

As he useth this variety of Expression, which shews he knew not what to do or say; so he doth not know what to speak of God whilst he praises him, what words to use; and therefore he carries it off in so great a superlative; Psal. 77. 13. Who is so great a God as our God? Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, O thou King of Nations, Rev. 15. 4. And he hath it out of Jer. 10. 6. There is none like unto thee, O Lord: Thou art Great, and thy Name is great in Might: Vers. 7. Who would not fear thee, O King of Nations? In Psalm. 106. 2. He puts all the Creatures into a stand at it; Who can utter the Mighty Acts of the Lord? Who can shew forth all his Praise? Alas, vers. 3. Blessed be they that keep Judgment; that can be holy. Who can shew forth all his Praise? praise him we cannot.

And sometimes he useth this language, Be exalted above the Heavens; and let thy Glory be above all the Earth, Psal. 57. 11. And the God that rides on the Heavens, Psal. 68. 4, 33. Sing unto God, sing praises to his Name; extol him that rideth upon the Heavens, by his Name JAH, and rejoice before him. To him which rideth upon the Heavens of Heavens which were of old. Praise him under that Notion. Infomuch as indeed and in truth we find these strains in the Psalmist, that he knew not how to set him out with words enough; He leaves it to his own self, for himself to do it, for the Creatures cannot do it. Psal. 71. 13. Glorify thy self in thy own Strength, in thine own Excellency, for the Creature cannot do it. Such a Soul as David was, is enlarged to talk high of God; Psal. 86. 12. I will praise thee, O Lord my God, with all my Heart; I will glorify thy Name for evermore. Alas, poor Creature, How canst thou praise him for evermore? A Soul fired with desires to praise God, it burns after both more perfect things, and more lasting than it is able to perform. To will is present with it, &c. See but the reachings and roamings of such a Soul, how it swells in desires to glorify God.

First; That Soul in such a frame, does extend it self to praise God in all Times.

1. In all Seasons, that is, when any occasion shall be given; Psal. 34. 1. I will bless the Lord at all Times; that is (as I take it) at all Seasons.

2. His Heart goes further; His Praise shall be continually in my Mouth; he would be doing it continually; Psal. 84. 4. They will be still praising thee; at all Seasons of the day, Morning, Evening, and Night; Psal. 92. 2. To shew forth thy loving Kindness in the Morning, and thy Faithfulness every Night. Psal. 145. 1, 2. I will extol thee, my God, O King, and I will bless thy Name for ever and ever: Every Day will I bless thee, and I will praise thy Name for ever and ever. In other Psalms, I will bless thee while I live, Psal. 63. 4. Psal. 104. 33. I will sing unto the Lord as long as I live; I will sing praise to my God while I have my being. But this is but for this Life: But I will praise the Lord for ever and ever, says David, Psal. 104. 2. I will make thy Name to be remembred in all Generations; therefore therefore shall the People praise thee for ever and ever, Psal. 45. 17. Such a Soul is so enlarged, as if it were possible for him to do it, he would contract all the Praises due to God in all Ages into an Instant, and give him all at once, such are the enlarged Rooms and Desires of his Spirit. O that I could contract (thinks that Soul) all the Glory that is due to God, and that I can give to God to Eternity, that I could give it him in one Moment! Psal. 106. 48. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, from everlasting to everlasting, and let all the People (in the World) say, Amen. Praise ye the Lord. Thus this poor Soul doth reach; and the reason is, because he is so great a God for ever, and therefore he would praise him as for ever. Thus in Eph. 3. 21. where Paul gives Glory to God, To him be Glory in the Church, through Christ Jesus, throughout all Ages, World without end. So Jude also, To him be Glory now and ever. Amen. vers. 25.

3. This Soul will rejoice that God hath been celebrated by others, in all Ages, Psal. 102. 12. But thou, O Lord, shalt endure for ever, and thy Remembrance unto all Generations. That he hath lived in their Praises, Psal. 22. 3. O thou that inhabitest the Praises of Israel! More expressly, Psal. 135. 13. Thy Name, O Lord, endureth for ever, and thy Memorial, O Lord, throughout all Generations. This Soul could fit down with Angels, and take in all their Praises, and rejoice that God hath been so celebrated and praised in all times.

4. This Soul would extend it self, not only to all Times, but to all Persons, and Things, and Works of God, to praise him; oft in the Psalms he rejoices in God, and calls upon all Nations to do it. Psal. 96. 1. Sing unto the Lord all the Earth, vers. 7. Give Glory to the Lord, O ye Kindreds of the Earth, give unto the Lord Glory and Strength, vers. 11, 12. Let the Heavens rejoice, and let the Earth be glad, let the Sea roar, &c. Alas! I cannot do it, my Heart is too narrow! Psal. 72. 18, 19. Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only doth wondrous things, and blessed be his glorious Name for ever, and let the whole World be filled with his Glory, Amen and Amen. Nothing will content him else: if he could, he would fire all Creatures to do it; Let the People praise thee, O God, let all the People praise thee. So in Psal. 100. Make a joyful noise unto the Lord all ye Lands, serve the Lord with gladness, and come before his Presence with singing. Psal. 118. 1. O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, because his Mercy endureth for ever. He is King every where; O that they would praise him in all his Dominions! Psal. 103. 22. Bless the Lord all his Works, in all Places of his Dominion, in every Nook and Corner of the World. vers. 20. Bless the Lord all ye his Angels, that excel in Strength, and do his Commandments. Begin you to bless God! what had he to do to call upon Angels? It is as if he had said, Alas! poor Creature, I have not Strength; you Angels that excel in Strength, do you bless the Lord; it is better than to do his Will, it is your greatest Excellency. And vers. 21. Bless the Lord, all ye his Hosts, ye Ministers that do his Pleasure. And at last, Bless the Lord all his Works, in all Places of his Dominion: And bless the Lord, O my Soul! and what a poor little thing am I to bless him, so he concludes. And again, Psal. 113. 1, 2, 3. Praise ye the Lord, Praise, O ye Servants of the Lord, Praise the Name of the Lord. Blessed be the Name of the Lord, from this time forth and for evermore. From the rising of the Sun, unto the going down of the same, the Lord's Name is to be praised. He is so full, that himself would (if he knew how) wish himself in the midst of a whole Congregation of the Upright, Psal. 111. 1. Praise ye the Lord, I will praise the Lord with my whole Heart, in the Assembly of the Upright, and in the Congregation; would I had a Voice to reach the Multitude of all Nations! Psal. 108. 3. I will praise thee, O Lord, among the People, and I will sing Praises unto thee among the Nations. Nay, before all the Kings of the Earth, and all Angels, all Gods, he wisheth such an Auditory. Psal. 138. 1. I will praise thee with my whole Heart, before the Gods will I sing praise unto thee. Our Saviour Christ praised him thus in the midst of the Church Universal. Psal. 22. 22, 23. Bow down thine Ear, O Lord, hear me, for I am poor and needy; preserve my Soul, for I am holy; the Word is, I am thy Servant, or Saint, or Accepted. How does he praise God? O most mightily! vers. 8. Among the Gods there is none like Thee, neither are there any Works like to thy Works. Here is a poor Man in his Need talks thus: and thou that art so great a God, help me in a little Case. In Psal. 89. is an eminent Instance, vers. last. Blessed be the Lord for evermore, Amen and Amen. Says Calvin, there are those that say

say this Verse is foisted in ; why ? because the Man was in a great deal of Misery in the Verses before, Remember, Lord, the reproach of thy Servant, how I do bear in my Bosom the reproach of all the mighty People, wherewith thine Enemies have reproached me, O Lord, wherewith they have reproached the foot-steps of thine Anointed. How doth he praise God in this Psalme ! and it is there made the Fruit of his Death : I will declare thy Name unto my Brethren, in the midst of the Congregation will I praise thee. You that fear the Lord, praise him, all ye the Seed of Jacob, glorify him ; and fear him, all ye the Seed of Israel. You know who said it, O what Glory does Christ bring to God, vers. 25. My Praise shall be of thee in the great Congregation. The matter of his Praise is fetch'd out of God, he fully knew him. And Paul wishes, Eph. 3. last. Unto him be Glory in the Church by Christ Jesus, throughout all Ages, World without end. Amen. In the whole Church Universal.

5. Again, This Soul, let it be in the lowest frame that can be, in the greatest Misery, worst Condition, if this frame comes upon it, he will still praise God. I have known such as have been in the bottom of Hell, and there praised God. In Psal. 86. David praised God when he had been in a very pitiful Condition, vers. 1, 2, 3. No where such Praises, as from the 5th to the 15th Verse of this Psalme. And, as Calvin well said, might not this Man as well bless God at last, as he did at first ? I will sing of the Mercies of the Lord for ever, with my Mouth will I make known thy Faithfulness to all Generations, &c. When a Soul is at the lowest, if the Spirit of Praise come in upon that Soul, he will cry out to God aloud in praising him. There is another eminent Instance in Psal. 22. Our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ hung upon the Cross, there he hung, and all the Pharisees, the Bulls came about him, and says he, I cryed to thee. What doth he comfort himself with ? Vers. 3. But thou art holy, O thou that inhabitest the Praises of Israel. The Praises given to God are so delightful to God the Father, that they are call'd an Habitation to him ; and the Breath of them, says Christ, this is that which supports me, Thou art holy, and inhabitest the Praises of Israel. vers. 6. I am a Worm and no Man, a reproach of Men ; and despised of the People ; But no matter, so thou art praised. Isa. 24. 15. When the World was overwhelm'd with a Deluge of Misery, yet says the Prophet, Wherefore glorify you the Lord in the Fires : in the midst of all the Fires round about their Ears, they glorified God ; some read it, In the Valley, in the lowest Condition they could be in : This Soul yet rejoices that it shall live to Praise him. My Brethren, Let us pray for such a Heart as this, that the Saints of the Old Testament may not shame us that are Christians of the New.

The Knowledg of
G O D the Father,
 And his Son
J E S U S C H R I S T.

B O O K. II.

Of the Son of God, the Second Person in the Trinity. What his Person is, considered in himself. He is the Eternal Son of the Father, one God in Essence with him. The Son, The Second Person took the Man Jesus into personal Union with himself; and so Christ is God-Man joined into one Person.

1 Cor. 8. 6.-----And ONE LORD JESUS CHRIST, by whom are all Things, and we by Him.

C H A P. I.

How greatly it imports us to have a true Knowledg of the Person of Christ. What his Person is. That he existed from all Eternity with God as a Person; and was not meerly a Manifestation of the Deity in Time, and then only Existent when he first appeared in the VWorld.

T Here are two Things imported to us in those words of 1 Cor. 8. 6. And one Lord Jesus Christ;

- I. His Person, [Jesus Christ].
- II. His Office and Relation to us, and unto all the Creation, One Lord, by whom are all Things.

I begin first with the setting forth the Substance of his Person; What it is, and of what made up is he, this Christ, the Lord, of whom all Things are.

BOOK II.

And this is the more necessary (though it be largely handled by others) in relation unto those strange and monstrous Opinions, which, as touching the Person of Christ, this Age hath produced. Satan being let loose, hath preach'd over his old Sermons and Notions, read over a-new, and refined his old Lectures, which he had read to those great Heresiarchs in the Primitive Times: Who joining Philosophical Notions about λογος, the Word, (as Philosophers had spoken of him) with what the Jewish Gabala had also said concerning him, made up another Christ than whom the Apostles preach'd. And truly, the Bottom-Cause of Mens embracing Errors about this, hath been the seducement of that specious and alluring Principle unto Man's Nature, of being one with God himself in the highest manner that Man's vain Heart could find ambition within it self to aspire unto. Mistakes of Union have caused Men to shape out such a Christ, as might serve to their attaining that high and incommunicable Union with God, which they have fancied to themselves the Creature shall attain: and hence look, as we formerly observed; that to the End, they might make way for this, the most hellish Blasphemy that ever was uttered, That the Creatures were, and should become all one with God himself, partakers of the Divine Nature. They therefore throw down the three Persons in the Nature of God, as alone possessing that Priviledg, as those that stood in their way to this Preferment: Which done, they think each of their Persons may be God, as well as they have been voic'd to be. So, out of the same Principle, they in like manner serve our Lord Jesus Christ's Person; for there must be no Preferment in Heaven left, which they must not be capable of, and raised up unto. They must be Christ too, and ascend to the height of his Throne.

Yet, 2. There being three Persons in that Divine Nature; the Man Christ Jesus was capable of being one Person with one of these: the Personality, or to be one in Person, might be communicated unto a Creature, although to be one with God in Nature could not; and that is the highest Union with God, the Creature is capable of. And had there not been three Persons in the Nature of God, this high Union with God had not been neither. And then this Union with one of these Persons, is the Foundation of all our Unions; and by virtue of it it is that God descends to communicate himself to other Creatures, (the We in the Text) even by uniting himself personally to one Creature, the Man Christ Jesus; and so setting him up the Lord and Christ, and chusing us in him; and he in that his Person, undertaking for, and bearing, and representing our Persons, thereby we become one with him, and through him with God, in our measure, and in a subordination to him; according to that John 14. 20. At that Day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you.

Now in order to clear this Distinction of Union with God on Christ's part, from that of ours through Christ: As I have shewed, God was an infinite pure Being, distinct from the Creature, and standing out from those Dregs of the Creatures, into which the Fancies of Men would drench him and mingle him with their Mud: So we must now extricate the Person of Christ also from the like Entanglements, and vindicate the transcendency of his Union with God, and distance of his Person from ours. And then all Unions left below him, are left free for us to attain, and shall be obtained by us. And for the discovery hereof, I am first in pursuit of this, What the Person of Christ is; what he consists of.

The great weight and moment of the true and right Knowledg of the Person of Christ, will be evident by a consideration of these two Texts of Scripture compared together; Mat. 22. 42. Jesus said unto them, What think ye of Christ? Whose Son is he? compared with Matth. 16. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18. When Jesus came into the Coasts of Cesarea Philippi, he asked his Disciples, saying, Whom do Men say, that I, the Son of Man, am? And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist, some Elias, and others Jeremias, or one of the Prophets. He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art Christ the Son of the Living God. And Jesus answered, and said unto him, Blessed art thou Simon Bar-Jona; for Flesh and Blood hath not revealed it unto unto thee, but my Father which is in Heaven. And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this Rock will I build my Church; and the Gates of Hell shall not prevail against it.

Chap. I.

It is acknowledged by all that profess Christian Religion, That Christ is the Foundation; yea, and that other Foundation can no Man lay, than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ, 1 Cor. 3. 11. But let all know, that it is as much a Foundation, and as absolutely necessary, To know and believe him that is true, (as John's word is, 1 John 5. 20.) the true Christ; that is, the True Person; who and what he is, and not another Jesus; that is, not to mistake his Person. Which Mistake, or Error Personæ, is either, 1. when Men know not, or do not acknowledge the Individual Person, who He is. Or, 2. understand not, but mistake what that Person is, and what his Person consists of: both which are alike necessary to be understood aright by us. The Necessity first you may see by Christ's Speech to the Pharisees, John 8. 24. If you believe not that [I] am HE, [that is, this my Individual Person to be the He, that is, the Messiah] ye shall die in your Sins.

And the necessity of the latter; those two his Questions, one put to the Pharisees, Matth. 22. and the other to his Disciples, Matth. 16. do also argue,

1. To the Pharisees; What think you of Christ? Whose Son is He? Mat. 22. Here he doth not ask them, Whether they would acknowledge himself to be the Christ, but what manner of Person the True Christ should be? And the dint and aim of his Question is, concerning his Person, Whose Son is He? Which is the true Substance of the Person of the Messiah: Thereby to discover to them, and convince them that they erred as well in this, what the Christ they look'd for should be, as in their not taking himself that was afore them to be that Person; and fatally in both.

2. He catechiseth his Disciples, Mat. 16. 13. Whom do Men say I am? Whom do ye say I am? Vers. 15. Which, vers. 16. Peter, in the Name of the rest, gives answer to; And withal resolves that Question which he put unto the Pharisees, Thou art Christ, the Son of the Living God. In which he speaks home to both Particulars.

1. That He, individually present with them, was the Christ, [thou art, &c.] And, 2. What that Christ was for the Substance of his Person, Son of the Living God.

And Christ in his return to this, definitively pronounceth, That the Faith of both these was the Rock which he meant to build his Church of the New Testament upon. So then, What the Person of Christ is, is of the Foundation (being the Rock); as well as that, that Jesus was the Christ.

And let me add, That this being the Rock, the whole Church of the New Testament hath been built upon; you therefore may safely joyn issues in your Faith, with what hath been the Faith and Doctrine of the whole Church in all Ages; as touching this particular, what his Person for the Substance of it is. In this, I say, of all Points else, that Promise issues which is made to the whole Church, answering to this Declaration of Christ, Ephes. 4. 13. That they should all come into the Unity of the Faith and Knowledge of the Son of God. They should all, that were in all Ages saved, agree in the Knowledge of this, in whatever other things they might be found to differ. This is the Rock of Ages.

And therefore in this Point, be wary what you entertain anew, or how you vary from the Catholick Faith of former Ages, or in what shall any way make his Person differ, from that Person which all the Saints have understood him to be.

I shall not go about setly to confute the Errors that are abroad; only positively set forth that Person which the Glass of the Gospel holds forth. And I hope, in the end and conclusion, to give forth that Challenge, which Paul in the like Case doth, in that 2 Cor. 11. 4. If he that cometh, can shew you a better, or greater, or more spiritual Christ, (I do not say, shall set out our Christ better, but shew you a better Christ) then you shall do well to bear with that Man, yea, and receive him and his Christ also.

Of the Knowledg of God the Father,

Again, in the setting forth his Person; my scope is not herein to set forth the Excellency and Glory of his Person, but the Substance of his Person. And in doing this, I shall proceed, by degrees, as our Apostle John also did, when he did let himself to describe him; he doth it by piece-meal, John 1. 1. In the beginning was the Word, that's his first step; and that Word was with God, that's a second; And the Word in the beginning was with God, that's a third; And the Word was God, that's a fourth. He might have shut them all up in this Sentence, The Word was God, with God in the beginning. But he puts it into so many several positive Assertions; yea, and begins at the lowest, namely, his having existed, The Word was, and that in the beginning. And then after that, tells us what he is, A Person distinct from God; He was with God, and yet was God.

I shall proceed in the like Method, and set him forth in so many several Assertions: Whereof each, or most of them, are directed as opposite to some Error or other about his Person, which are now abroad in the World. And I will begin as John did, at his Existence; that is, his having been, when, and how long. And John's first Affirmation about him, is terminated merely upon his Existence, he was, says he. Adding withal the circumstance of the Time of his Existence, In the Beginning.

I. Of his Existence. When? And How long? Then of his Person; Who, &c. And of his Existence; first, Because the true understanding thereof will conduce to the Knowledg of his Person, who he is.

1. He is a Person who did actually exist before he came into the World, and was made Flesh; and that had continued to exist all along the time of this World, both in the Beginning of it, and before the World was, yea, from Eternity.

'Tis strange that the Socinians should so impudently, in the Light of this Gospel, and the Scriptures, say, that Christ began but then to exist actually, when he was first conceived by the Holy Ghost in the Virgins Womb; and that before he had existed but in Promise, as the Day of Judgment doth now. As also such who hold Christ to be but the Manifestation of God in Man's Flesh: God indeed, say they, was afore; but Christ, as Christ, being but the Manifestation of the Godhead in Man's Nature, existed not until Christ the Manifestation of Him: whereby they not only deny him to be a Person who did manifest God; but also necessarily declare that Christ, as Christ, existed not until that Manifestation of God in Man's Flesh. For the existence of that which is only and barely a Manifestation, lies only in being the Manifestation of some thing that existed afore, but it self not till then. And this is, even as if a Man should say, and affirm, that what all other Men call the Sun, is all one with what we term Day, and nothing else; which you know begins but in the Morning, and ceaseth at Night, and is but the Shine and Manifestation of the Sun, when it riseth and appears above our Hemisphere, or this part of the World. But look as the Sun is a Body of Light, that exists afore it is Day with us; and the appearances of it is that which maketh Day, yea, is Day: So Christ the Son of Righteousness, is not the bare Manifestation of God, but a Person that existed with God, yea, and was God afore that Manifestation of God made by him in this World. And he is not only the bringing in, or manifestation of Life and Immortality which was in God; but himself was that eternal Life which was with the Father, as distinct from him; and was manifested to us 1 John 1. 2. so as Life and Immortality is made manifest by his appearing, as of a Person that brings it, and manifests it, with the manifestation of himself, 2 Tim. 1. 10. And who also is said to manifest himself unto us, as well as the Father, John 14. 21.

To confirm this our main Assertion, Let us trace his Existence punctually through all Times. The Psalmist says of him, Psal. 102. 24. Thy Years are throughout all Generations. Which Psalm the Apostle quoteth of him, Heb. 1. 10. Let us go from Point to Point, and see how in Particulars the Scriptures accord with it. The first Joint of Time we will begin that Chronology of his Existence withal, is, that Instant afore he was to come into the World.

First, We find him to have existed, just afore he came into the World, the Instance of his Conception, Heb. 10. 5. in these Words, Wherefore when he comes into the World, says he, A Body hast thou prepared me. Vers. 7. Lo, I come to do thy Will, O God. Here is a Person distinct from God the Father, a [Me], an [I], distinct also from that Human Nature he was to assume; which he terms a Body prepared. A Person he is that speaks to God, as one knowing and understanding what he was about to do; yea, and how it was written of him, that he should do, In the Volumn of thy Book it is written of me, vers. 7. Therefore besides and afore that Human Nature, there was a Divine Person that existed, that was not of this World, but that came into it [when he cometh into the World, he says, &c.] to become a part of it, and be manifested in it.

Secondly, We find him, to have existed afore John the Baptist, though John was conceived and born some Months afore him. I note these several Joints of Time, because the Scripture notes them, and hath set a special Mark upon them, Joh. 1. 15. John bare Witness of him, and cryed, saying, This was he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me, is preferred before me, for he was before me. This Priority of Existence is that which John doth specially give witness unto. And it is Priority in Existence, for he alledgeth it as a Reason why he was preferred afore him; For he was before me. And therefore, these latter Words do not note out a Priority in Dignity, for that were to prove Idem per idem. And this Reason holds strong; for he is such a Person as existed afore he was made Man or Flesh, afore as Man he was born; and so must be more than a Man or Creature. And then again, he doth not say, He is before me; but speaks in the Time past, He was before me: And yet vers. 30. he expresth it thus, There cometh a Man (the same John speaking of Christ) which is preferred before me: for he was before me. Still he runs upon this Priority: And yet as a Man he was not afore John; for John was the elder as Man. Therefore as some other Person, namely, the Son of God, (as he had entituled him, vers. 14.) or as the Word, (as he had stiled him vers. 1. and so on.)

Thirdly, we find him existing when all the Prophets wrote and spake. 1 Pet. 1. 11. The Spirit of Christ is said to have been in all the Prophets; even as Paul, who came after Christ, also speaks, You seek a proof of Christ speaking in me, 2 Cor. 13. 3. And therefore, he himself whose Spirit it was, or whom he sent, must needs exist as a Person sending him. And particularly of the Prophet Isaiab, it is said, when he saw his Glory, Isa. 6. 1. Which Job. 12. 41. is applyed to Christ, and vers. 5. says Isaiab, I am undone, for mine Eyes have seen the King, the Lord of Hosts, which was Christ.

Fourthly, We find him existing in Moses's time, both because it was he that was tempted in the Wilderness; 1 Cor. 10. 9. Neither let us tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of Serpents. And it was Christ that was the Person said to be tempted by them, as well as now by us, as the Word xai [as they also] evidently shews. And it points to that Angel that was sent with them, Exod. 23. 20, 21. in whom the Name of God was; and who as God, had the Power of pardoning Sins, vers. 21. Beware of him, provoke him not, for he will not pardon your Transgressions: for my Name is in him. And him that Moses calls Jehovah or God, Stephen calls an Angel. And there is none to whom are given the Name of an Angel, and of God, but to Christ. And Stephen says, Acts 7. 35. That Moses was a Ruler and Deliverer in the Land of the Angel which appeared to him in the Bush. And in Heb. 12. 26. there is a comparison made between Moses and Christ: and Christ is there said to be he whose Voice then shook the Earth, vers. 26. and vers. 25. He is termed the Speaker from Heaven, alluding to that place, Exod. 20. 22. God said, You have seen I have talk'd with you from Heaven. So then, Christ then existed, and also is God. Yea further, it is he of whom it is there also said, that his Voice then shook the Earth. Even as he who now under the Gospel speaks from Heaven, and whose Voice shakes both Earth and Heaven under the Gospel. The same Jesus therefore then existed in his Power, that now.

Fifthly, We find him existing in and afore Abraham's time: Joh. 8. 58. Verily, verily I say unto you, before Abraham was, I am. The Jews had undervalued him unto Abraham, vers. 53. Art thou greater than our Father Abraham? And whereas he had said thereupon, vers. 56. That Abraham rejoiced to see his day; which Abraham

BOOK II.

Abraham had done by Faith: They will needs cavil, and put this upon him, that he had meant he had seen Abraham, and had lived in his Time, vers. 57. Thou art not fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham? Christ doth not answer as he might, that this was a meer Cavil, as to what his former Words did intend or hold forth; but instead thereof, with a deep Asseveration affirms, what they thought he had absurdly said of himself, namely, that he had not only lived in Abraham's Time, but long afore. And so their Cavil and Mistake drew forth from Christ this great Truth; as Errors use to bring forth Truth; and he utters it with the greatest Solemnity, and Asseveration, Verily, verily, (as being a Wonder to utter) yea, and speaks not in ordinary Language, as that afore Abraham was [I was] but [I am] in a correspondency to what God speaks of himself, Before the Day was, I am, Isa. 43. 13. We translate it, I am he, but Word for Word it is I am: signifying thereby that permanent, uninterrupted Being of his, which is proper to God, as Psal. 90. 2. Before the Mountains were brought forth, thou art. And Christ's Answer in this Place was opposite to their Demand; they speak of real Existence, and in the same Sense and Respect doth Christ answer them.

Sixthly, We find him existing in the days of Noah, that Preacher of Righteousness, 1 Pet. 3. 19. He says of Christ, that he was put to Death in the Flesh, but quickned in the Spirit. He evidently distinguisheth of two Natures, his Divine, and Human; even as Rom. 1. 3, 4. and elsewhere, (as I shall shew) and then declares, how by that Divine Nature which he terms Spirit, in which he was existent in Noah's Times, he went and Preach'd to those of the old World, whose Souls are now in Prison in Hell: Those Words [in Spirit] is not put to signify the Subject of Vivification; for such neither his Soul nor God-head could be said to be; for that is not quickned which was not dead: But for the Principal and Cause of his Vivification, which his Soul was not but his God-head was. And besides, by his Spirit is not meant his Soul, for that then must be supposed to have preached to Souls in Hell (where these are affirmed to be). Now there is no Preaching where there is no Capacity of Faith: But his meaning is, that those Persons that lived in Noah's Time, and were preach'd unto, their Souls, or Spirits, were now, when this was written, Spirits in Prison; that is, in Hell. And therefore he also adds this Word [sometimes] who were sometimes disobedient in Noah's Days. These Words give us to understand, that this Preaching was performed by Noah ministerially; yet by Christ in Noah: who according to his Divine Person was extant, and went with him, as with Moses, and the Church in the Wilderness, and preach'd unto them.

Seventhly, He was extant at the beginning of the World, In the beginning was the Word. In which Words, there being no Predicate or Attribute affirmed of this Word, the Sentence or Affirmation is terminated or ended meerly with his Existance, He was, and he was then, In the beginning. He mentions not his Parents, or time of his Birth, but simply that He was: He mentions not any King's Raign, or such Note of Worldly Time, but simply, In the beginning: And he says not that he was made in the Beginning, but that He [was] in the beginning: And it is in the Beginning absolutely without any Limitation. And therefore Moses's beginning, Gen. 1. 1. is meant, as also the Words after shew, All was made by him that was made; and vers. 10. The World he came into was made by him. And as from the Beginning, is usually taken from the first Times or Infancy of the World, Mat. 19. 4. And he answered and said unto them, Have ye not read, that he which made them at the Beginning, made them Male and Female? So Mark 13. 19. Christ expounds it the beginning of the Creation, which God created; For in those Days shall be Affliction, such as was not from the Beginning of the Creation which God created, unto this Time, neither shall be. So then, when God began to create, then was our Christ. And this here is set in Opposition (Job. 1. 14.) unto the time of his being made Flesh, lest that should have been thought his Beginning. And unto this accords that of Heb. 1. 10. where speaking of Christ, out of Psal. 102. Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the Foundations of the Earth; so as to be sure he existed then. But further, in Psal. 102. 24. it runs thus, Thy Years are throughout all Generations (we have run, you see, through all Generations, since the Creation, and have found his Years throughout them all.) And yet lest that should should be taken only of the Generations of this World, he adds, (as Rivet expounds it) Before thou laidst the Foundation of the Earth.

Chap. I.

Eightly; So then we are come to this, That he hath been before the Creation; yea, from Everlasting. Which,

1. Is made forth, in that it is said, He was in the beginning, (meaning of the Creation) and therefore from Everlasting. The Consequence of which appears;

Both, 1. because there was but that one beginning of producing Things by God; and so what was then, must needs be before, yea, from Everlasting, as having had no beginning. The Angels were not afore that beginning mentioned by Moses. For 'tis said, Exod. 20. 11. God made Heaven and Earth, and all that in them is; whereof the Angels are part. And Mark 13. 19. 'tis termed, the beginning of the Creation which God created; and so of the Creation of any thing what-ever that God made. So then Christ must needs have had no beginning afore, as well as that he existed then.

And, 2. In Scripture phrase, in or from the Beginning, is used to express Eternity. Isa. 43. 13. From the Beginning, when the Day was, I am. So they read it; that is, from Eternity.

But, 3. if that will not carry it, you have it more express, Prov. 8. 22. The Lord possessed me afore his Works of Old; 'tis spoken of Christ. Now to be sure, by that phrase of being afore his Works, even God's Eternity is expressed thereby; Psal. 90. 2. Before the Mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the Earth, and the World; even from Everlasting to Everlasting, thou art God.

But, Ninthly, If you would have his Eternity yet more express; see Heb. 7. 3. where, mentioning Melchisedeck, Christ's Type, he renders him to have been his Type in this,—without Father, without Mother, without descent, having neither Beginning of Days, nor End of Life: but made like unto the Son of God, abideth a Priest continually. Where his meaning is to declare, that look what Melchisedeck was Typicè, or Umbraliter, in a Shadow, that our Christ was really and substantially. It is the manner and custom of all Historians, yea, and of Moses, in that Sacred Story of his; if they bring in any Person more eminent, and as performing any more excellent Exploit, to relate his Parents, his descent, whom he came of, and what became of him. And this Moses had been careful and diligent to relate of all the Patriarchs, telling us whose Sons they were, rehearsing their Genealogy, how many Years they lived, and how then they died. Which is especially observable in that short Catalogue, Gen. 5. In the close it is added, of every one, and he died, when he relates little else. But this Melchisedeck was a Man greater in Dignity, in Office, than any of the Patriarchs, (for whom would your selves pitch on, as the greatest of all that Moses wrote of, but Abraham the Father of all the Faithful). Now (says the Apostle, vers. 4.) consider how great this Man was, unto whom even the Patriarch Abraham gave the tenth of the Spoils, yea (as vers. 5.) greater than all the Tribes; and so the whole Nation of the Jews, and People of God that followed. For whereas all the other Tribes paid Tithes to Levi; (says the Apostle here) Levi, and all the Tribes paid Tithes to him in Abraham's Loins. Yea, and vers. 6. This Man blessed him, (namely Abraham) who had the Promises for himself and all his Seed. And without all contradiction, the lesser is blessed of the greater, vers. 7. Now when Moses had in his Story brought upon the Stage a Man thus heightened and sublimated, which would for ever set all curious Thoughts on longing to know who and what this Man was, what his Original was, what his End, who his Parents, &c. he causeth him, as it were, on a sudden, to vanish, contrary to his wont, concerning other Persons, as if he had been a Man drop'd out of the Clouds: telling (as we say) neither whence he came, nor whither he would go. Paul, that observ'd this, tells us plainly, that it was consultèd, or on purpose done.

There was a Mystery in it, which was to signify the Eternity of Christ's Priesthood and Person; and whereas neither Melchisedeck, nor any Creature was or could exist from Everlasting, and so in the reality, could not have wherewith to shadow out Christ's Existence from Everlasting; therefore fore it is signified by silence, or omission, there being nothing in the Story that hints his Original or Beginning; and so it was, as if he had had no beginning: And it being setly and on purpose done, it had intentionally this secret Mystery in it. There was nothing in Christ, but some Type or other was ordained some way or other to shadow it. And when the Matter was such as could not in the kind or reality be personated, it was done by that which might most nearly shadow it. As the Sacrifice of his Body was by the Burnt-Offerings of Beasts; but for the Sacrifice of his reasonable Soul under the Wrath of God, there was not any thing in the Sacrificing of a Beast, of like kind, which could shadow it out, yet God appointed that which was as near in resemblance as might be; And that was the pouring forth of the Blood, in which was the Soul or Life, signifying the pouring forth of his Soul as an Offering for Sin, as Isaiab speaks, Isa. 53. 10, 12. Now so here there being nothing in respect of any real Existence from Eternity that any Man was capable of; therefore an Historical Eternity is given him, by way of Silence, concerning his Birth, &c. So as he was (as the Text there hath it) made like to the Son of God; that is, rendered in respect of what useth to be the Course and Manner of Story like to him in this respect. As in Law, Things that appear not, are in value as if they were not; so here. Now in that it is said, He was made like to the Son of God; It imports him to have herein been the Shadow, the Picture of Christ, who is the Body and Substance. God having his Son, and all he was and should be in his Eye, did all along the Old Testament draw his Picture in the Examples of all Eminencies in any Person that was extraordinary and transcendent; Christ being really the Abstract of them all. Some pieces, or Limbs, one Patriarch affording, others another; and this of Eternity was Melchisedeck's lot to hold forth, and that in the manner specified. Now that he shadowed out the Eternity of Christ's Person and Priesthood, for Time to come, all acknowledg, Socinus himself. Therefore also in the Eternity of his Person for Time past, for that is as well put in, without Beginning of Days, as without End of Life. And so these other Attributes, without Father, as a Man, without Mother as God. And who can tell his Generation? saith Isaiab, Isa. 53. 8. All which not only import, what he was in respect of his Priesthood, but of his Person; for the things he takes for him, are such as are common to all Men's Persons, as they are Men. As when he says, he was without Father or Mother; Inasmuch that whereas Adam was without Father or Mother, yet we read of the beginning of his Days; it is recorded, and his end of Life; but not so of Melchisedeck; and so represented in all things differing from all the Men that ever were or shall be. And further, If that had been his only Type, it had not been material to shew the Eternity of his Priesthood, to say he was without Father: For if Moses had set down his Father's Name, and withal had shewn that his Father was not a Priest, it had been all one as to that Point: So as these are spoken chiefly in respect of his Person, the Subject of this Priesthood; yea, and if his Priesthood were from Everlasting, his Person must exist from Everlasting; for these two are joined, Heb. 5. 6. Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten thee; and thou art a Priest for ever after the Order of Melchisedeck. If therefore it signifies the Everlastingness of the Priesthood, à parte antè, or from Time past, that that hath been for ever, (and it must so signify, if that other opposite, without end of Days, signifies the Eternity of his Priesthood for Time to come) then withal it must import the Eternity of his Person, and himself to have been without beginning of Days.

Lastly, add to this, that in Mich. 5. 2. But thou Bethlehem-Ephratah, though thou be little among the Thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall He come forth unto me, that is to be Ruler in Israel: whose goings forth have been from of Old, from Everlasting. Where he evidently speaks of two Births Christ had, under the Metaphor of going forth; one as Man at Bethlehem in the fulness of Time, the other as Son of God from Everlasting. Which latter is added on purpose, upon occasion of the prophesy of that other, to prevent that thought, that he had not existed afore he was Born or Conceived at Bethlehem; and his Birth is expressed by that Phrase, of going or coming forth, in both respects. His Birth,

nonparentia
æquiparantur

as Man, Mat. 2. 6. is so expressed, Out of thee shall come forth; which, vers. 4. is interpreted to be born.

And, 2. As Son of God, his goings forth (that is, his Birth) are from Everlasting. And it is termed goings forth, in the plural; because it is Actus continuus, and hath been every moment continued from Everlasting. As the Sun begets Light and Beams every moment; so God doth his Son.

So then we have two Everlastings attributed to Christ's Person; One to come, Heb. 1. 10. and another past, here in Mich. 5. 2. And so as of God himself it is said, Psal. 90. 2. From Everlasting to Everlasting thou art God; so also of Christ.

And to confirm this Existence of his yet more; If you ask where he was all that while? John resolves you, together with this his Assertion, that he was; and tells you with whom he was. At the Creation, or in the Beginning, he was with God; when none but God and he were alone, and no Creature with them; In the Bosom of the Father, John 1. 18. And in Prov. 8. 30. Then I was by him as one brought up with him. And accordingly, John 17. 8. Christ says, I came forth from thee, speaking to his Father: and vers. 18. Thou didst send me into the World: and John 16. 28. I am come forth from the Father, and am come into the World.

Now ask the Manifestarians; that is, those that say, Christ, as Christ, is only a Manifestation of God. How was it when it is said, that he was with God in the beginning of the Creation, when there was no Creature? when, according to them, his sole Being (as Christ) is barely a Manifestation: I ask them, to whom he was then a Manifestation? Not to God: for, according to them, he is the Manifestation of God in us; and to him, he needed not be the Manifestation of himself in their sense, but to us only: Now then we were not, nor any Creature to whom he should be manifested.

Use 1. Let Believers comfort themselves with this Existence of their Head and Redeemer Christ, 1 John 2. 14. he reckons it up a priviledg to raise up their Hearts withal: Ye have known him that is from the beginning; namely, Christ, of whom, 1 John 1. 1, 2. he says, That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our Eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of the Word of Life, (for the Life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear Witness, and shew unto you that Eternal Life which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us). This was the great Priviledg John and the Apostles boasted of; as it follows vers. 3. That which we have seen and heard, declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us. When therefore he saith, We have known him that is from the beginning; it carries a great Privilege, and Confirmation, and Establishment of them in their Faith; and also an Exhortation with it.

1. A Confirmation of them in their Faith, and to see and rejoice in their Privilege; and is, as if he had said, there cannot be any Christ proposed to them, that is more ancient; and therefore he is the best, the sole or only Christ. As the Gospel coming after, could not make void the Law: So no Manifestation can put down, or excel that which is made of God himself in Christ, for it is he that was from the beginning.

And, 2. it hath an Exhortation in it: That therefore they should always, and to the end, that is, for ever, cleave to him. It is he that was from the beginning. There can be no other Jesus; The same to Day, Yesterday, and for ever, as Heb. 13.

Use 2. Embrace him as thy chiefest Treasure; for he is Being and Existence it self; The World passeth away, and the Glory of it: But the Word of God endures for ever. If the Truth of this written Word, then much more this substantial Word, the Person of Christ, in whom all other Truths are, Yea and Amen. He is, I say, Existence it self, By whom all Things consist, Col. 1. 17. and exist, Heb. 1. 13. And in the Text, Through whom are all Things, and we by him. And it is Faith in us, that gives a Subsistence to him in our Souls, we thereby close with him, Prov. 8. 21. Wisdom, that is, Christ, exhorting us to embrace him, holds forth this Promise, I cause those that love me, to inherit Substance. All other things are shadows. And how doth he confirm this to them, that he is able to give them Substance? but by this, that he existed before this World was; Which is the Subject of his Discourse for ten whole Verses together next following, beginning thus, v. 22. The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his Way, before his Works of Old: I was set up from Everlasting, e're ever the Earth was, &c. Then only I was; but God himself accounted me as a Treasure to himself: The Lord possessed me, vers. 22. And therefore I may well be yours: If God esteemed me such to himself, you may well do so to your selves. When the Apostle says, He that was Rich, for our sakes became Poor, 2 Cor. 8. 9. it implies him to have been infinitely Rich afore he came into the World, where it was he was made Poor, and from his Birth born to nothing. And to conclude, As he only is Existence, so that Being you have in him is alone true Being. Of him ye are in Christ Jesus.

Use 3. You see how it came to pass, that we who existed not afore the World, had yet then the Promise given, 1 Tim. 2. Grace given us in Christ afore the World, 1 Tim. 1. 9. And chosen in him afore the World was, Eph. 1. 4. Even because that Christ was a Person who then existed; and took all the Deeds of Gift ordained us from God for us. Isa. 6. 9. He is stiled, The Everlasting Father; which he had not been if he had not existed: For of all else, to be a Father, implies Existence at the Time when he is said to be a Father. For it notes Antiquity and Priority; as Adam is said to be a Father in Time, so Christ from Everlasting. And as Adam must be supposed to exist, when he was a Father, so must Christ be supposed also: And therefore if an Everlasting Father, then he existed in that Everlasting.

C H A P. II.

Who this Person was that Existed from Eternity. The two Titles which are given to him, as Existing before the World was. 1. That he is the Word. 2. The Son of God. His first Title, the Word, imports two Things; His being Eternally begotten of the Father, as the Image of his Essential Glory: And that he is given to us by God as his Word, whereby he manifests himself.

You have seen that Christ was a Person who existed throughout all Generations, and from Everlasting, before he took Flesh. The next Enquiry is, who he was that had always so existed; thus, as yet, I, proceeding by degrees, do limit it: for, as concerning what he is upon the assuming Human Nature, that is to follow afterward.

There are two eminent Titles given to Christ, Existing before the World, and both of them in the first Chapter of John, ὁ λόγος, the Word, Joh. 1. 1. In the beginning was the Word, &c. 2. The Son of God, vers. 14. Of whom as such John Baptist thrice affirmeth he was afore him, vers. 15, 18, 30, 34. And parallel to this in the Book of Proverbs he is stiled; 1. Wisdom, Prov. 8. from vers. 22. to 33. Then, 2. The Son of God. What is his Name, and his Sons Name, canst thou tell? Prov. 30. 4. I will not here much dispute as concerning the first, whether that Title of λόγος, the Word, be the Title of his Person simply considered in himself; or whether withal in respect unto his being ordained the Manifestation and Revelation of God to us: yet something must be said. There are two Opinions about it.

First, Some say, it imports the Divine Substance of his Person, simply considered; and so merely notes out that Relation he hath to his Father, as begotten of him: In respect of which he should be termed the Word. That look, what the inward Thought, Conceptus, Concoit or Apprehension of the Mind, is to the Mind, being the first-born thereof; and remains within the Mind it self, and is the Image of the Mind to it self, though never uttered to any other: Such, say they, and in such a respect, is the Person of Christ termed the Word, unto God his Father. Now it is clear, that both in the Jewish and Greek Language, that which we in English call Word, and which we apply only unto Speech, doth with them betoken the inward Thought of the Mind. Aristotle distinguisheth between λόγος ἔξω and λόγος ἐνθω, the External of the Mouth, and the Internal of the Mind. Thus also, Job 32. 18. I am full of Matter; so we translate it. And he speaks of his Mind or Spirit; so it follows, My Spirit within me is full of Matter. Now in the Hebrew 'tis, full of Words. Thus, Dixit in Corde, The Fool hath said, in his Heart, is put to express the inward Thoughts of bad Men, Psal. 14. 1. As also, of good Men, Psal. 36. 1. For Words spoken, are but Thoughts appearing. So that according to this, the whole Object of God's inward Thoughts and Wisdom is here termed the Word, which comprehensively is Christ. And this Notion or Ground, why he is termed λόγος, the Fathers and Schoolmen have more generally and greedily entertained, as that which was most lively and really expressive of the Eternal Generation of the Person of the Son of God. That as the Mind, when it would understand it self, begets within it self an Idea or Likeness of it self, in which it views and understands it self; Like as the Eye, when when it would see and view a thing without it self, takes in an Image of the thing: So the Mind doth, when it knows it self or any other thing. And that thus God in the knowing of himself, doth beget within himself the Image of himself, as Heb. 1. 2. Christ is also called. And it is observable, that his Eternal Generation, as the Son, should be expressed by the same Phrase (and so they should so fitly agree) that the Production of the Thoughts, or Image in the Mind is expressed by. The Phrase used to express the Generation of him as God's Son, is, that he came forth from the Father, Joh. 8. 42. Joh. 16. 28. Joh. 17. 8. And the same Word is used, to express the begetting of the Thoughts and Purposes, by the Mind, and in the Mind, Matth. 15. 18.

se, and others.

But this import of it, many of our Reformed Divines have been and are shy of, as too curious. And yet, as I have observed, the same Authors are in other following Passages glad to make use of the Similitude thereof again and again, to express the Generation of the Son of God thereby, as most apposite and subservient thereunto: And so might have been glad that the Scriptures speak so near thereto.

There have been two things among many others, that have made them shy to own this, as the Scriptures intention in this Phrase.

1. That the Conceptus, or Images in the Mind, are Accidents, and less than the Mind it self, as also vanishing and transient, and not of the same Substance with it, and equal to it; which is dangerous to hold forth of Christ.

But that is easily answered. 1. That a full Similitude, from things Earthly holding in all things like, could not be found of this Mystery. And, 2. Themselves say of the Persons in the Divine Nature, that they being but various Modes or Manner of Subsistings of that one Divine Nature, the God-head; That though those several Modes in a Creature would be but Accidents, yet in the God-head they are Persons: So why not in the Case in Hand? That Image which in the Mind of Man is but an Accident, this in God, and of God himself, is a Person equal to God: Especially, seeing otherwise he should not know himself perfectly as he is in himself.

The second is, That to say Christ is the Word of the Father, as the Thoughts, or Reason, or Counsel is the Word of the Mind, vergeth and inclines too much unto the Notion of Plato, and other Heathen Philosophers; who acknowledging God the Maker of this World, conceived of this Word of God in God, to no other thing in God, than the Idea or Plat-form of all that which God meant to make. And so, as an Artificer having the Model of a Ship or Frame of Building in his Head, that Model, or Frame, or Pattern of what he means to make is one Thing, and his own Being or Nature as a Man is another; and indeed, thus did these wise Folks, philosophising of God's making the World, distinguish between God, and this Word in God thus; that by God they conceived one Person only, that enjoyed that Divine Nature to himself: Only he having all the Creation in him, the Pattern of all these, or Idea of them, according unto which he made them; they termed this the Word, or $\lambda\omicron\gamma\omega$, in God's Mind, so making the whole of the Being or Subsistence of that Word in God, to be wholly distinct from the Nature of God as God; and to be only that in God which was the Original and Sampler of his Creation; and so to be but the Head of the Creation: that is, the Top and Chief and Original of it, and a meer Respect thereto. This was Plato's $\lambda\omicron\gamma\omega$, or Word; and I fear is all that others, bringing but up old Philosophy for new Divinity, do intend, by that which they so usually cry up, and term the Eternal Word.

But that the Philosophers meant by the Notion of $\lambda\omicron\gamma\omega$, or the Word, no more but the Model of the Creation, needed not have deterred Christians from the owning of this Phrase [the Word] to intend the Image of what was, and is, in God, and that as a distinct Person that had the true Nature of the God-head, and as that which was not in God meerly, or only the Pattern of his Creation.

1. If indeed the whole of the Image of God's Mind, or Object of God's Thoughts and Knowledg, had been but the Image of the Creatures, in which God only foresaw what he would or could create: then indeed, John's $\omicron\lambda\omicron\gamma\omega$, or the Word, had been, nor could have been no other than this Sampler of God's Creation; but the chief Object of God's Knowledg is himself in the first Place, and thereby it is he knows all things else he can produce, and that at second hand, by first knowing of himself. And indeed, if the Idea or Sampler of his Creation alone, were all the Image or Object of his Knowledg he had in himself, of himself; then he should only have but an imperfect Knowledg of himself, and such as we have at the lowest of him. For to know God but in the Creatures, is but that which was in Adam by the Law of Creation: and we profess to look for an higher, to see God Face to Face, and in himself; which is our Perfection. And therefore, surely God's Perfection, is to see himself in himself much more. Neither indeed can God know himself perfectly, but by such an Image of himself, as is as perfect as himself. We Creatures indeed know nothing perfectly, because our Understandings penetrate not into the Things themselves, and so we know them only by such Images as fall short of the Substance of the Things themselves: But God's Knowledg is perfect, especially that which he hath of himself must be equal to himself. So then, if the import of this Phrase the Word, relates at all unto God's inward Thoughts or Apprehensions, and the Object of them; it must more especially carry in it Christ, his being the immediate Image of God himself.

3. 'Tis certain, that Christ himself (who himself knew best what himself was) doth speak of himself, as of a Person unto whom his Father doth shew, or make known the Pattern and Model of all his Works he means to do: and therefore, the Substance or Being of his Person consisteth not in his being the Idea or Model of the Creation, that is in God's Mind; but he is the Person to whom God makes known those Platforms of all. Thus, Joh. 5. 19, 20. Then answered Jesus, and said unto them, Verily, verily I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doth, these also doth the Son likewise. For the Father loveth the Son, and sheweth him all things that himself doth: and he will shew him greater Works than these, that ye may marvel.

1. These Words suppose the Idea of what he means to work, to be in common between the Father and the Son, and in the Father first; as in him the Being or Essence of God is first, and so communicated or shewn unto the Son (as indeed all the Platform or Form of God's Works is common to all three Persons in that they are alike God.) And therefore it were absurd to say, That the Son himself is nothing else but that Platform it self of what God means to work.

2. These Words suppose a Person whom God loves, and a Person of Understanding and Knowledg, such as to whom the Idea of all God means to effect is shewn. Now as it were absurd for a Carpenter to say to that Form in his Mind; I will shew thee all I am about to do: So here there would be the same absurdity.

And, 3. In vers. 17. Christ says he is one that works, and hath a powerful Hand to effect all that is done as well as the Father: And therefore, is himself a Person distinct from this Idea of all Things, and not the bare Image of them. And lest it should be understood of him as Son of Man only, he puts in that Word hitherto. My Father works [hitherto] and I work. That Word takes in all God hath ever done since the Creation. For that hitherto must relate to some time afore, either Eternity, or a Beginning: and we know that that beginning of God's working, was the beginning of the Creation; and (from that time hitherto saith Christ) I work. And be it what it will that the Father hath done at any time, the Son hath done the same. For vers. 19. Whatever things the Father doth, these also doth the Son likewise.

4. These two Expressions. 1. That he is one begotten of the Father, elsewhere used: And, 2. This here, That he is one to whom the Father sheweth all he doth; do imply two differing things, even as for a Father first to beget his Son, his substantial Image, and then to teach and instruct him in his Trade, and shew him what he is to do.

Yet I may add this, That God the Father communicating the Form of all things to his Son, so vieweth his own Thoughts and Purposes thereabout, as they shine forth in his Son: as a Man doth his own Thoughts in his Friends Mind or Judgment. Hence Christ the Word, may in a more eminent manner be stiled the Idea of all Things, in comparison with the other Persons: Yet so as this is, because he

he is the Image of God himself: And so, because he of all Persons in the Trinity bears the Title or Character of being the Image of God. Hence he doth in like manner, together with the Image of God's Being, bear the Platform of all things else that are in God; as in whose Breast God the Father views over his own Thoughts and Designs, and in whom they are presented to him.

Lastly, Whereas it may be said, That the Philosophers having used that Phrase afore John, in this or the like Sense: That therefore John taking up out of choice the same Title, and giving it to Christ, that therefore he should use it in their Sense and Intention. Answer is,

1. That John originally used this Word from the Old Testament it self. For the Jews expressed their Messiah, or Christ to come, under this Notion, the Word, and the Word of God, as appears by the Caldee Paraphrafts (who are at least as ancient as Christ) often, when God the Son is mentioned and spoken of, they translate it [the Word]. So Hos. 1. 7. I will save thee by the Lord their God, they render it, I will redeem them by the Word of the Lord their God. So Psal. 110. 1. [The Lord said to my Lord] the Paraphrafts expound it, The Lord said to the Word. And so, Isa. 45. 17. Israel shall be saved in the Lord with an everlasting Salvation; they read it, by the Word of the Lord, namely Christ. And this Phrase not the Jews only, but the Scriptures themselves do use, as 2 Sam. 7. 21. For thy Word's Sake, says David, that is, for thy Christ's Sake. For 1 Chron. 17. 19. it is rendered, For thy Servant's Sake: And is all one with that Dan. 9. For the Lord's Sake. Philo (a Jew never turned Christian, and not long after Christ's Time) in his Writings, calls him $\omicron\lambda\omicron\gamma\textcircled{\text{C}}$, as before did Plato, and those Heathens, who stole their Knowledg from the Jews, and vended it as their own.

Yet, 2. That the occasion why John, when he wrote his Gospel, used that Title of the Word, which no other Evangelist did, was that which was mentioned; namely, that the Gnosticks of those Times he wrote in, professing Christianity, formed up such a Christ, according to what the Heathen Philosophers had set him forth by: He therefore gives him the same Title (the Old Testament having given it him) but in full and direct opposition to them, and what they said of him, he at first dash affirms, both that his $\omicron\lambda\omicron\gamma\textcircled{\text{C}}$, or Christ, was God, and also equal with God; and a Person distinct from God, in those other Words, He was with God: The contrary to which was their Doctrine of him.

Thus much for the first Opinion, why he is called $\omicron\lambda\omicron\gamma\textcircled{\text{C}}$, the Word.

The second Opinion, why Christ should be termed $\omicron\lambda\omicron\gamma\textcircled{\text{C}}$, the Word, is, That it imports what God had afore all Worlds ordained Christ to be, and Christ himself undertook to be even his Word, whereby to utter or manifest himself to us. And indeed, although the Person whom John calls $\omicron\lambda\omicron\gamma\textcircled{\text{C}}$, did actually then exist; yet it cannot be denied but that this Title of $\omicron\lambda\omicron\gamma\textcircled{\text{C}}$, the Word, doth withal connote or import what Christ undertook to be, and God designed him to be; namely, the Revelation of God unto us. Which is made forth, 1. Because the inward Thoughts themselves are usually termed the Word but in relation to their being uttered: And therefore, in such a Respect, may also this be supposed given to him, seeing he is the Manifester of God unto us, Et Interpretis Voluntatis Divine, The Interpreter of God's Mind unto us, Heb. 1. 1. And, 2. In that Christ is said to be the Wisdom of God, namely Manifestative, and as he is made Wisdom unto us; by whom we know God in the form of Jesus Christ. Thus, 1 Cor. 1. 24. But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ, the Power of God, and the Wisdom of God; compared with vers. 30. But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us Wisdom, and Righteousness, and Sanctification, and Redemption. And in this Sense it is that Solomon calls him Wisdom, which is all one with this of John, $\omicron\lambda\omicron\gamma\textcircled{\text{C}}$, the Word, which the English or Latine reach not. And it were easy to Parallel John here, and Solomon there, in Prov. 8. which I have elsewhere done.

So then, Christ as he is the Power of God in the Creation ; God said, and it was created, Gen. 1. And as he is the Power and the Wisdom of God to us in Redemption, in whom and by whom we know God, in this respect it is, he is termed the Word : and so although John and Solomon affirm the Person that was thus ordained to be thus to us, was then existing, yet the Title given him, imports what he was to be when the World began, and after the World began, unto the World and to the Saints. And thus John himself, in his first Epistle, Chap. 1. vers. 1, 2. explains himself, That which was from the Beginning, says he, and which our (the Apostles) Hands have handled of the Word of Life, namely Christ. This Life was manifested, and we shew to you that Eternal Life, which was with the Father, and was manifested to us.

So then Christ the Word, in order to manifestation to us, is termed the Word of Life. And as he is termed the Word in both these respects mentioned : So also, that other Title John gives him of Eternal Life, is in like manner given in respect unto what he was ordained from the Beginning, to be to us, 1 Joh. 5. 11. And this is the Record, that God hath given unto us Eternal Life : and this Life is in his Son. As well as what he is in his Person, even the Fountain of, or Life it self, in himself. So vers. 20. of that Chapter, he speaks of him, This is the true God, and Eternal Life.

To conclude this, When God exhibited him first unto the World by a Voice from Heaven, This is my beloved Son, he adds, hear him. And it is as if he had said, As he is my Son, so he is my Word and Interpreter, unto you, the Speaker from Heaven; as Heb. 12. 25. he is call'd. And see these two Titles of his Son, and of The Word, met in that one Proclamation made of him by his Father.

Which of these two accounts given, why he is termed $\lambda\acute{o}\gamma\omicron\varsigma$, or the Word, is most to be received, I will not dispute ; because indeed I take in both. In doing which there is no more inconveniency to be found, than in interpreting other Stiles and Attributes of his in a double Sense, and taking in both ; As in that of being stiled, The Image of the Invisible God, Col. 1. Which Pareus and other Divines (whom he to that purpose cites) in his Opuscula, upon Col. 1. 15.

I now come to that other Title more frequent in the Scriptures.

C H A P. III.

That he was the Son of God, who existed throughout all Ages, and from Eternity. This prov'd by all those Instances of Scriptures, wherein his Eternal Existence is asserted, and wherein the title of Son of God is also ascribed to Him.

THis most eminent Title of Son of God, doth simply express, What and who the Second Person is in himself, and in relation to his Father, and so singly speaks the substance of his Person. And it is certain, was that more general and renowned Title the first Primitive Times knew him by. Under which Christ himself, and all the Apostles unanimously represented him unto the Church, which all Believers then professed to believe in, and concerning which that Promise is made and uttered unto all the Saints in succeeding Ages; Ephes. 4. 13. That all should come to the Unity of the Faith, and knowledg of the Son of God. The other of λόγος, the Word was (if used by any other Apostle than John, yet but covertly) by John sparingly mentioned after all the Apostles were dead, and but thrice by him; And though it was a known Title to Heathens and Jews, yet received but upon occasion of Heresies, which took the advantage of the use of that Title among Philosophers, to deform the Person of our Jesus.

And further, he was acknowledged and declared to be that Son of God by all sorts of Witnesses, either in Heaven, or Earth, or Hell.

1. By those Witnesses in Heaven.

1. The Father, Mat. 3. 17. And lo, a Voice from Heaven, saying, This is my Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; and Chap. 17. 5.

2. The Son himself in every Chapter of John, and Luke 10. 22.

3. By the Holy Ghost, who (besides that his Testimony is included in all the Scriptures that speak him the Son of God, because he wrote them all) personally appears in the likeness of a Dove, to join with the Father's Witness of him. This is my Beloved Son, Mat. 3. 16, 17. And lo, the Heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a Dove, and lighting upon him. And lo, a Voice from Heaven, saying, This is my Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And so the Baptist doth interpret that signal place, John 1. 32, 33, 34. And John bare Record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from Heaven, like a Dove, and it abode upon him. And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with Water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. And I saw, and bare Record, that this is the Son of God.

4. The same was witnessed by the Angels.

1. The Good, Luke 1. 35. And the Angel answered and said unto her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the Power of the Highest shall overshadow thee. Therefore also that Holy Thing which shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God.

2. The Bad, Mat. 4. 3, 6. and Chap. 8. 29. And behold they cried out, saying, What have we to do with thee, Jesus thou Son of God? Art thou come hither to torment us before the Time? Mark 3. 11. and Chap. 5. 7. Luke 4. 3. and Chap. 4. 31.

On Earth. 1. Wicked Men, as the Centurion, Mat. 27. 54. Of a truth, this was the Son of God.

2. The

2. The Apostles all jointly by Peter, John 6. 69. And we believed, and are sure, that thou art that Christ, the Son of the Living God.

Chap. 2.

Lastly, The whole Church, Ephes. 4. 13. So that we may boldly assert ;

Assertion 2. That our Christ, for the Substance of his Person, is the Son of God ; so stiled, not in respect only of God's taking Man's Nature, but as existing as such afore he took Man's Nature. And this is one of the great Foundations of the Gospel, and universally acknowledged by Believers in the first Times. This general Assertion will require many Particulars to explain it.

1. That he that thus existed, (as hath been proved) through all Ages, and from Eternity, was this Son of God, and so stiled afore ever he assumed Man's Nature.

2. How and in what manner this Title is given to him.

For the First ;

That he that thus existed through all Ages, was the Son of God, and so stiled afore ever he assumed Man's Nature.

For the Evidence of this, I shall run the same Race I did in the former Assertion ; when I proved his Existence, I went through all Ages, even up to Everlasting. And so I shall do in this, step by step, demonstrating, that it was the Son of God, that as such is said in all Ages to have existed.

1. He of whom John the Baptist affirmed, that he existed afore him, (as was shewn) his Person by him is stiled, The only Begotten Son of God ; John 1. 15, 18. John bare Witness of him, and cried, saying, This was he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me, is preferred before me, for he was before me. No Man hath seen God at any time, the only begotten Son, which is in the Bosom of the Father, he hath declared him. Compared with vers. 30, 34. This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a Man, which is preferred before me ; for he was before me. And I saw, and bare record, that this is the Son of God.

2. He, as the Son, was over the Church, as his own House, in Moses's Time. To him, as the Son, was Moses a Servant in his House ; so then he must exist as the Son. Thus you read expressly, Heb. 3. 5, 6. Moses verily was faithful in all his House as a Servant, but Christ as a Son over his own House, even then. Even he that then said, in Numb. 12. 7. Moses is faithful in all my House ; he was this Son, says Paul, and therefore existed as such, for it was he spake those words in Numb. 12. 7.

3. Again, 'twas proved in the first Assertion, That our Christ was a Person that existed at the Creation. Now he that then existed, and so afore Man's Nature was made, and four thousand Years afore this Man was made, is then called the Son. Of him, as the Son, it is said, Heb. 1. 1. His Son, by whom he made the Worlds.

4. It was shewn, that he was a Person existing, throughout all Generations from the Creation. And this was the Son : Joh. 5. 17. My Father worketh hitherto, and I work ; that is, Hitherto my Father hath wrought from the Creation, both on Sabbath-Days and every other Day. It was spoken to justify the Healing on the Sabbath. And it was not his own working only virtually or instrumentally, For his word is ὁμοίως, in like manner, vers. 19. And he that then is said to work, must be acknowledged in the highest manner to exist : And it is the Son that did this, vers. 19. Then answered Jesus, and said unto them, Verily, verily I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do : For what things soever he doth, these also doth the Son likewise. And as in the words, vers. 17. it is manifest, My Father works, and I that am his Son.

5. He who was without beginning of Days, and end of Life, of whom Melchisedeck was the Type and Shadow, (as was shewn out of Heb. 7. 3.) he is expressly termed the Son of God in that place. For thus the words concerning Melchisedeck run ; Having neither beginning of Days, nor end of Life, but was made like unto the Son of God. Who therefore as Son of God, hath this in a real and substantial manner true of him. And therefore the Son is not only, in respect of this Man Jesus his being united unto God. But,

6. In Rom. 1. vers. 2, 3, 4. Paul says, That the Gospel was promised by God before by the Prophets concerning his Son, whose Person he thus describes,

BOOK II.

Who was made of the Seed of Abraham according to the Flesh, or Humane Nature, and declared to be the Son of God according to the Spirit of Holiness, or a Divine Nature, (as shall after be shewn). Now that Spirit, or Divine Nature, in which, as Son of God, he existed, and was now declared, is called the Eternal Spirit, Heb. 9. 14. by whom also he offered up himself, as there.

7. Seeing this place hath mentioned how the Prophets speak of him as God's Son; Let us see how they spake thus afore of him as the Son; whereby will be decided, whether or no they stiled him not such, over and above the consideration of that Humane Nature; in regard to which only, say some, it and its being united to God, and God manifested therein, it is, say they, that he is called the Son of God. And not as a distinct Person from the Father, who in himself is the Son of God, and who took the Humane Nature into the same Sonship of his Person which he had without it.

1. Psal. 2. 7. Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten thee. God's (Hodie or) to Day, is the stile of Eternity. Verbs and Adverbs of the present Time, do best express Eternity. Before Abraham was, I am, John 8. 58. And I AM hath sent thee, Exod. 3. 14. So, to Day have I begotten thee. To Day, with God, is no to Morrow, nor Yesterday. As God was always God, so always a Father; and so he is a Son always unto God. Neither had he been God's Son by Generation, by begetting, if only he had been his Son, as Man, by Union. So he had been the Son of the Holy Ghost, and he his Father, rather than God, (whom the Scriptures only term his Father) because this Man was by the Holy Ghost conceived, formed, and united unto God. And the Spirit was not the Cause of his being a Son; for this very Spirit, is termed the Spirit of this Son, Rom. 8. 9. But ye are not in the Flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any Man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his. Gal. 4. 6. And because ye are Sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your Hearts, crying, Abba, Father. And sent by him, John 16. 15. All Things that the Father hath, are mine; therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall shew it unto you. And although this Scripture of Psal. 2. is applied to the Resurrection of Christ, Acts 13. 32, 33. yet 'tis evident, by Paul's quotation of it, Heb. 1. 5. and his denying, unto all the Angels, that so transcendent a Generation intended in that second Psalm by the Psalmist.

Neither by the Resurrection was he first made the Son of God, (as Man) for he is termed so all along in the Evangelists before: But it was then declared, as Paul's Phrase is, Rom. 1. 3. Declared the Son of God with Power, by the Resurrection from the Dead. For thereby it was shewn, that he had Life in himself, and was that Eternal Life that had been from the beginning, 1 John 1. 1. Whom therefore it was impossible Death should hold, Acts 4. 24. And unto this sense it is, that those words of the Psalmist are applied by Peter to the Resurrection, Acts 13. 32, 33. God by Christ's being raised up, had confirmed the Truth of that Promise made, to give his Son for us, whom he had from Eternity begotten, and did by his Resurrection declare him to be such. We declare unto you glad Tidings, how that the Promise which was made unto the Fathers, God hath fulfilled the same unto us their Children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again. As it is also written in the second Psalm, Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten thee. Thus, or thereby proving him to be the Son of God, whom God had from Everlasting begotten; who was promised to be given to us. Yea, his Incarnation and Conception, as Man, (which was the first Foundation of his being Man) was but the beginning of the Manifestation of the Son of God, John 1. 14. The Word was made Flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his Glory, as of the only begotten of the Father. And therefore this was not the constituting him a Son. So likewise it is termed, 1 Tim. 3. 16. God was manifest in the Flesh. Likewise 1 John 3. 8. The Son of God was manifested. Now Manifestation is of what was extant afore; but Production is the bringing forth of a Thing, from a Not-being to a Being.

2. Agur speaks of a Person distinct from God, then existing, whom he calls God's Son; Prov. 30. 4. What is his Name, and what is his Son's Name, if thou canst tell? He demands of the one, as well as of the other, known to the Jews; whose Name or Being was ineffable.

3. Isaiah,

3. Isaiab, in Chap. 9. 6. To us a Child is born, a Son is given, which is applied to Christ, Matth. 4. 15. A Child, That Title only is given to one that is of Mankind, and in that respect he is said to be born. But that Title of a Son is in a further relation given him. For else that first Title of Child had been enough. And in that he adds thereto, as a further thing, and distinct from Child; that is, A Son is given; This argues his existence as a Son afore, for that is given which first is. And then, the Angel coming to Mary, a Virgin, points her to the Prophecy of Isaiab; Behold, thou (a Virgin) shalt conceive in thy Womb, and bring forth a Son; which you have Isa. 7. 14. Behold a Virgin, &c. Now Isaiab had prophesied two things:

1. That a Virgin should bring forth, Isa. 7. 14. Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a Sign: Behold, a Virgin shall conceive and bear a Son, and shall call his Name Immanuel.

2. That he that was so brought forth, should be the Son of God, Isa. 9. 6. For unto us a Child is Born, unto us a Son is given, and the Government shall be upon his Shoulder: And his Name shall be called, Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace.

1. Mary doubts of the first; and the Angel resolves her in that, in the first part of his Speech, vers. 35. Then the Angel answered and said, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee.

And then, 2. from this wonderful Conception of hers, the Angel doth infer, That he that should be thus conceived and brought forth by a Virgin; should undoubtedly be the Son of God, which the same Isaiab had spoken of in his 9th Chapter, To us a Son is given. And so it follows in the latter part of the Verse, in Luke, Therefore also that Holy Thing which shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God. This Particle Therefore, refers not to his Conception as a Cause of this Effect, as if that therefore, because conceived of by the Holy Ghost, he should be thereby constituted the Son of God. But it is an Inference or Demonstration, that therefore she might be assured he was that Son of God that Isaiab had spoken of, that should be so born of her. Yea, and that Child should be called, the Son of God; that is, owned, reckoned, and acknowledged, to be the Son of God by personal Union with him; as he is and hath been by the believing World to this day; and called, that is, really made the Son of God by that Union. Or, it was he that was to be declared the Son of God, who was afore Deus absconditus, God that was hidden, as Isa. 45. 15. And so Matthew also interprets the Prophecy, Mat. 1. 22, 23. Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the Prophet, saying, Behold, a Virgin shall be with Child, and shall bring forth a Son, and they shall call his Name Emmanuel, which being interpreted, is, God with us. So then, this Son in Isaiab, is the Son of God, by the Angel's interpretation. God united to Man's Nature, and so dwelling amongst us. And the Angels they had known him, and conversed with him all along afore during the Old Testament, and appeared together with him unto Abraham, and others, and so were meet Witnesses of him, what and who he was when he came into the World.

4. And to this Head may be referred that in the Story of the Fiery Furnace, The form of the fourth, appearing with the three Children, says Nebuchadnezzar, is like the Son of God, Dan. 3. 25. Thus far we may more then probably conclude, that this Appearance was of the Person of Christ himself, the Son of God, who had formerly appeared to the Fathers in the shape of Man; and so with these three Children, to comfort them, and strike dread into the Tyrant. And so he was then extant as the Son of God; yea, and possibly this Prince, though an Heathen, might have received some glimering Notion of God's Son. And he now seeing one appearing, in so great and so superlatively differing a Glory from the rest; and such a Glory as struck him, though so great a King, as outshone his, and had overcome him; he concluded, that it must represent God's Son, who by Inheritance was Lord of all, of God, I say, whose Kingdom (as after he confesseth) is an Everlasting Kingdom, and his Dominion from Generation to Generation, Chap. 4. 3. And the scope of that Prophecy, is to discover that there was a Kingdom to come after the four Monarchies ended, which appertained to the Son of God. And God having been pleased to vouchsafe to this King the knowledg of that Kingdom it self, as in the former Chapter, Chap. 2. vers. 34, 44, 45. So here, in this which was the next occurrence, he gives him the Knowledg of his Son, (in this appearance) to whom this Kingdom appertained. Expresly calling himself the Son of God; Whom Daniel in his Vision, Chap. 7. terms the Son of Man: Who as then existing as Son of God, appeared in a differing Glory with these three Children comforting of them, countenancing, owning them, and being then present with them in their Afflictions, as Isa. 63. It is also said, he was with the Church in the Wilderness.

To conclude this: If he existed afore the World was, when he was not Man, and during all the Times of these Prophets, afore he took Man's Nature; It must be supposed, that such a Person so existing, must have some eminent known Title given him, between God and him; the import of which should be to speak his Relation unto God. And if so, then surely it must be this, which is thus afore given him by those Prophets, and as uttered by God, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee, Psa. 2. 7. And what is his Name? speaking of the Father; and what is his Son's Name? So then he was called the Son, Prov. 30. 4.

He is not termed a Son, as if only made such when he was conceived, or made Man; but on the contrary, being and existing the Son, he is said to be sent and made of a Woman, Gal. 4. 4. But when the Fulness of the Time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a Woman, made under the Law.

And unto this purpose it is further observable, That Christ, in his Discourses to his Disciples, affirms himself not only to be one sent into the World by his Father, (which sufficiently imports his Existence afore); but further, to notify to us his Eternal Generation, and proceeding from him as a Son, and as such existent afore; He therefore distinguisheth, and severeth these two things, (as appears in several Speeches of his) I came from the Father, so first; and then, And I came into the World: Or thus, And he hath sent me. This is not only oft repeated, but this very Order observed, as oft as repeated, John 7. 29. I know him, for I am from him, and he hath sent me.

C H A P. I V.

What kind of Son he is to God, or in what Sense he is the Son of God. He is the proper Son of God in a special peculiar manner, such as no other Person can be said to be. He is stiled the only begotten Son of God, which can be affirmed of no Creature. This imports that his Eternal Generation is the Foundation of his Sonship. He is called the Son of the Living God; that he is begotten of him in his own Likeness: and is of the same Nature and Substance with him. That he is God by an Identity of one, and the same Essence of the God-head, and not by Union only, or Office.

TO demonstrate in what Sense Christ has this Title of Son of God, I shall herein also proceed by degrees.

I. It is given him by way of Singularity, in comparison of all others that have the Title of Sons; this all acknowledg.

As God the first Person by way of Singularity, ordinarily is called the Father, One God the Father: So frequently, in the same way of Singularity, is Christ termed the Son, in Relation unto this God as the Father. And it hath been observed by some, That whereas ὁ υἱος θεοῦ , that is to say, A Son of God, is common to others, i. e. to us with him; yet ὁ υἱος τοῦ θεοῦ , The Son of God, is never given to any but to him.

2. God the Father himself by way of a special Appropriation sets him forth, and exhibits him as his Son, with difference from all others. He said it himself from Heaven, This is my beloved Son, Luk. 9. 35. This Person, this is the very He, He of all others individually, and alone He, and none other; and then he adds; let all else hear him. Thus when he presents him to the World, hear him, acknowledg, and receive him, as he who hath Power to make you Sons to me; Joh. 1. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he Power to become the Sons of God, even to them that believe on his Name.

But this General is far short of what the Scriptures speak concerning what, or wherein his Sonship consists. Even the Jews seem to conceive and apprehend, that he who should be the Christ, should have the Title of the Son of God given him by way of eminency above all others, yet all that while conceiving of him, as to the Substance of his Person, that it was but only a Man, that should transcendently have God's presence with him: and that God should appear in him, in a more glorious manner, than in all Men else. And not the Jews only, but the Gentiles were struck with a sense of some one special Person's being the Son of God, as in this Sence understood.

Thus far, and in such respect Pilate had Apprehensions that Christ possibly might be the Son of God. For when the Jews had told him, that one Jesus made himself (or took upon him to be) The Son of God, Joh. 19. 7. When Pilate heard that Saying, saith the Text, He was the more afraid. It cannot be imagined, that Pilate's Divinity reach'd to convince him to be the substantial Son of God, but he thought, he might (for all that he knew) be some eminently Divine Man from God, such as their Poets spake of, and attributed to Augustus Caesar, Magnum Jovis incrementum, which struck fear into him.

I am doubtful, I confess, whether to refer Nebuchadnezzar's Speech, in Dan. 3. 25. who when he saw one to appear in a differing manner, with those three Children in the Fiery Furnace, he crys out, The form of the fourth is like the Son of God; and surely it was an Appearance in such a Glory, as was far beyond what Creatures, even Angels appear in, that made him speak thus. But that which makes me doubtful, is that he had not any Notion of this Son of God to come, unless, as I afore challenged it, for Christ's Existence as God's Son, under the Old Testament, he perceiving his Glory such, and so superlatively different, acknowledgeth him to be the Son of that God, whose Kingdom was to be an everlasting Kingdom, Dan. 4. 3.

But it is yet more observable to prove the present Assertion, that whenever Christ spake of the Father afore his Disciples, or others, He never said Our Father, which yet he taught us to say, even when we pray in private, to the end that we should come to God as such a Father to us, as he is also to all others of his Elect. And so the Jews were taught and instructed to say, We have one Father, even God, Joh. 8. 41. But his own usual Stile was My Father, and therefore so a Father to him as to no other, nor to all or any of the Sons of God. And this Appropriation was so much his wont, that the Jews observ'd it, and took him at it, and were offended, Joh. 5. 17. Whereas he had said, My Father worketh hitherto, and I work; The Jews sought the more to kill him, because he had said, God was his Father, which is but slenderly so translated: For in the Original, 'tis because he had called God his own Father, that is, so and in such a manner his, as not others: And so the Jews themselves understood him, whilst the Words were yet fresh in his Mouth. Yea, and he speaks not this amongst a wicked Company of Jews, who were the Children of the Devil, vers. 44. As any other ordinary Son or Child of God alone, among a Company of wicked ones, might by way of Separation so use it; But further, Christ doth the very same, when he had an occasion to speak to, and of, his Disciples, and of himself (who were the chiefest Saints then alive of the Sons of Men, and representing the rest for ever to come) how God was Father both to him and them, yet he carefully makes this Separation; My Father, and your Father, Joh. 20. 27. You see he mentions their Relation apart, yea, as separate and aloof off from his own, He putteth the Sonship or Relation of all them into one common Relation, Your Father, and sets against it, and severs from it, as at a distance, his own; My Father. And that to shew their Relation of Sons to God, is not of the same Rank or Descent that his is.

2. There is moreover, [an Us all,] Rom. 8. 32. He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not also with him freely give us all things? namely us, the Saints, [God gave him up for us all] says he, and these All, we find had been afore termed the Sons of God, in the 16th verse of that Chapter, The Spirit it self beareth witness with our Spirit, that we are the Children of God. And so declared Heirs of all Things because Joint-Heirs with Christ, ver. 17. And Again, vers. 29. he had call'd them, the Brethren of Christ, and him the First-born among many Brethren.

And yet, 3. After all this, by way of difference, from these he entitles Christ, God's own Son; If God spared not his own Son, vers. 32. To have said His Son, by way of Singularity, when mention is made of many other Brethren, had been enough to have signified his Eminency unto them, especially to say the First-born, as vers. 29. he hath done. But he adds hereto over and above all, his own Son. As thereby signifying the different kind or sort of Sonship and Fatherhood, that was betwixt God and him. This is therefore an eminent distinction of two sorts of Sons which God had; his own Son, proper, genuine, true Son, and others that were not his own, but either by Marriage, or Adoption. As Strangers and Alians in their Original Descent use to be to a Father that afterwards takes them for his adopted Sons: and 'tis evident that this is his meaning. For ver. 15. the Apostle had given this other part of distinction of Sonship of this his [Us All]. We have received (says he) the Spirit of Adoption, by which we (that are Jews) cry, Abba, and we (that are Gentiles) Father, And if Children then Heirs, vers. 16.

Now

Now God in this speaks as plainly to Men in their own Language, as is possible to express it. Come to a Man that hath both Sons by Marriage, and also a Son out of his own Loins, and you hear him call them all Sons: But particularly ask him what Son is this? My own Son, says he. And are these so? No, they are my Daughter's Husbands, and so my Sons in Law, or my Wives Sons, or whom I have taken to be my Sons by Will. Well, and what doth a Man mean when he says, This is my own Son; especially when with a distinction from others that are adopted? All Men understand a Son that is of his Substance naturally begotten of him, of his Flesh and Blood. Then in its infinite proportion, it ought so to be understood here.

A second Expression to be added to this, is, that of his being stiled, The only begotten Son of God, so often, John 1. 14, 18. Chap. 3. 16. 1 John 4. 9. And therefore so begotten, as not others. Quasi præter eum nullus; As if besides him no other were begotten. And if any would quarrel, that others are said to be begotten of God, 1 John 5. 18. yet to be sure, when God says this of him, Thou art my begotten Son, he means it of such a begetting as hath not been communicated to any Creature of the Old Creation, which that place is express for. To which of all the Angels hath he said, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? Heb. 1. 5. So instancing in his highest Sons of the sort of meer Creatures, that are nearest to him; in excluding them, he excludes all the rest.

In which Speech we may observe two Things.

1. That a Generation, or begetting him, is the Foundation of his Sonship; as it is of all true and natural Sons else among Men. For so he joins them, Thou art my Son, I have begotten thee; as the Ground of that his Sonship. If it were but a metaphorical or similitudinary Generation; as when he says of the Ice and the Snow, Job 38. 28, 29. Hath the Rain a Father? or who hath begotten the Drops of the Dew? Out of whose Womb came the Ice, and the hoary Frosts of Heaven, who hath gendred it? Then his Sonship were no other. But doth God speak Poetically here, (as there he doth) when of the Generation of his Son? Then indeed he were but metaphorically a Son; and God a metaphorical Father to him: Whereas he is the true Son of God, as John calls him, 1 John 5. ult. and therefore as truly begotten:

2. Then that his Generation is such a begetting, and he such a Son in that respect as is denied of the Angels, or of Men, is evident. Thou, and thou alone art my Son; I have begotten thee, and thee alone. So that otherwise, let the Scripture speak what it will of Men's being born of God, begotten of God; it is with an infinite distance of sense from this. Their's is but by his Operation, not Generation, by Renascentia, a new Birth of God's Image on them, which are but Divine Qualities in the Soul, not by a Generation, that is proper to a substantial Person.

Then, thirdly, add to these two Expressions of one Son, and of only begotten, that other Mat. 16. 16. As also John 6. 67. Where both by Peter's, and all the Apostles their Confession, he is professed to be the Son of the Living God: And in both those Confessions, the Conglomeration, or gathering together so many Articles in the Greek set afore every word, are as so many Stars that call us to behold this Eminency of his Sonship and Generation. For they putting an Emphasis on every word in that small Sentence, Thou art that Christ; That Son of that God, that Living God. The like Indigitation is never used but for some special Intent, according to the Nature of the Matter spoken of. And that which makes it the more observable, is, that John (who wrote long after the other Evangelists, and avoideth to mention what other Evangelists had recorded, and so mentions this Confession of theirs, as uttered at another Time, and upon a differing occasion from that which Matthew relates) should yet, in his rehearsal of this Confession, not only punctually keep to the same words, but hath as carefully added the same Articles afore every word, as Matthew had done.

Yea, further, whereas 'tis observed by some, (as was said) that the Article of the Son, is given to none but to this Son; Lo, here it is also put to every sumitur.

1. Com-

nerabilia & corruptibilia. Et sic Generatio nihil aliud est quàm mutatio à non esse ad esse. 2. Propriè in Viventibus; Sic generatio est origo alicujus viventis à principio vivente conjuncto. Nec tamen omne hujusmodi dicitur generatio, sed quod habet rationem similitudinis. Unde Capillus non habet rationem geniti. Nec sufficit quæcunque similitudo. Vermes qui generantur in Animalibus non habent rationem Geniti. Sed requiritur ut procedat secundùm rationem similitudinis in Natura ejusdem speciei, sicut homo procedit ab homine.

every Word besides, when his Sonship is solemnly proclaimed. And so the meaning will be this, That Son of the only True God, that Living God. Which Emphasis, the God; and which Attribute, the Living God, are purposely annexed, to set out the Greatness of this so great a Son. And to shew, that if we do suppose the Great and True God to have a Son, and but one Son, and him begotten by him, as he is the Living God, (as put this and those former Things mentioned of him together, and it appears) then what manner of a Son must this be? and what manner of Generation, but such as Living Fathers have proportionably of their Sons? A Generation, such as is proper to Things living when they beget their kind. Generation, properly taken, says Aquinas, and Experience shews it, is of Things that are living, out of a living Principle, and is improperly applied to Production. And further it is then said to be Generation properly in them, when they beget in their own Likeness, and that Likeness consisting in their own Kind, Nature, and Substance.

And thus living Things properly are said to beget; as in Nature you all see, A Lion begets a Lion, a Man a Man. Proprium est viventium generare simile in substantia. And those two Attributes are given to Christ holding forth his Generation, viz. The Word, and the Son. The Word shews he is begotten by God, who is an Intellectual Being; the Son shews that he is begotten as a living Essence or Being.

Now then putting all these three together; 1. God's own Son; 2. Only begotten; 3. That one only begotten Son of the True and Living God. These twisted and interwoven mutually, are a three-fold Cord that cannot be broken. Let us therefore see what Arguments and Evidences these will afford to convince us what manner of a Son this is.

By a further adding all these succeeding Considerations together to them, and setting these by them.

Affertion 3. That this only Begotten, and Natural Son of God, is God; and not God only by Union, after he was put forth by God out of himself, but by an Identity, or Oneness of one and the same Essence of the Godhead.

This third is naturally connected with the foregoing Affertion, viz. That he is the Natural Son of the Living God: Thus,

I. The Scriptures connect and join these two together; in that often, when and where they mention his Sonship to God, they annex withal, (because the one necessarily importeth the other) his being God also; as may be observed, both out of the Old Testament and the New.

1. The Old Testament, Isa. 9. 6. Unto us a Child is born; which speaks him to be Man: And unto us a Son is given; that speaks him to have been God, and as such, extant afore he as Man was born: for what is given, hath a Being when he is given; and afore he is given, who took Man's Nature to himself as Son: And here, by Son, he means this Son of God, our Christ, Luke 1. 31, 35. The Angel there hath manifestly an Eye upon this Prophecy of Isaiab here; v. 32. Thou shalt conceive a Son, and he shall be called the Son of the Most High; and God shall give unto him the Throne of his Father David; and he shall reign over the House of Jacob for ever; and of his Kingdom there shall be no end; thus the Angel there. And how speaks Isaiab? To us a Son is given, and the Government shall be upon his Shoulders: of the Encrease of his Government, and Peace, there shall be no End: Upon the Throne of David, and upon his Kingdom, from henceforth, even for ever. The Angel citeth not the Place, but evidently reciteth the very words of that Prophecy, the very same, thus. So then, Christ being meant by the Son; that which I alledg Isaiab for, is this, That his being

Son,

Son, and his being God, are joined : And so it follows in Isa. 9. 6. To us a Son is given, and his Name shall be called the Mighty God.

2. In Heb. 1. 8. you have the same by Paul's Interpretation out of the Psalms : To the Son he says, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever. Compare we now the words of Isaiah, with that of the Angel ; and this of Paul out of the Psalms, together : They are one and the same, to shew he is God's Son. Thus for the Old Testament and New both.

Again, in the New, Heb. 3. 3. This Man says the Translation ; you may as well say, This Person (Man is not in the Original) was counted worthy of more Honour than Moses : Inasmuch as he that built the House, hath more honour than the House. And vers. 4. it follows, Every House is builded by some Man ; but he that built all these Things, (that is, The Church in all Ages, and Things about it, under both Old and New Testament) is God. He that had instructed Moses, and the Church, under the Old Testament ; and now that of the New, is God, speaking it of Christ, as God : So then, Christ is God, who is the Builder of this House. Now read on, and you will find his being [Son] not far off : For in vers. 6. Christ as a Son over his own House. Now compare Matth. 16. 16. Thou art the Son of the Living God, says Peter. And what says Christ upon it ? v. 18. Upon this Rock I will build my Church, as being the Son of the Living God : And he that was able to build it, was God, says our Apostle in that Heb. 3. 4. Therefore he is such a Son, as is also God ; and both are joined together.

Again, those two parallel Places, in the Epistle to the Romans ; The one Chap. 1. vers. 3, 4. Concerning his Son Jesus Christ, which was made of the Seed of David according to the Flesh ; and declared to be the Son of God with Power : Compare this with Chap. 9. 5. Of whom concerning the Flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen. Son of God in the one, is God blessed for ever in the other.

Further ; These two run as Terms equivalent in other places of Scripture ; where in like manner they be compared, 1 Tim. 3. 18. it is said of Christ, God was manifest in the Flesh : And in 1 John 3. 18. you have it thus, The Son of God was manifested.

Likewise, Acts 20. 28. it is said, God purchased the Church with his own Blood : Now compare Rev. 1. 5. speaking of our Christ, He hath wash'd us with his own Blood, and made us Priests unto God his Father. So then 'twas the Son ; whose Blood was personally his own ; who was distinct from his Father, and yet God, that purchased this Church.

Again, 1 John 5. 28. And we know that the Son of God is come ; and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ : This is the True God, and Eternal Life ; the True Son of God, and the True God. The very Devil himself doth in effect acknowledg it, Matth. 4. 3. If thou be that Son of God, command these Stones to be made Bread : Which was in effect as to have said, If thou beest that great Son of God, that is to come into the World, then thou art God, and hast Sovereign Power to create, or change the Being of the Creatures : Let us therefore see it by the Effects ; Command these Stones to be made Bread.

Last of all ; That known place, John 10. 30. alledged to prove Christ's Godhead, joins these two together ; Son of God, and God ; and the one is inferred from the other ;* when at the 30th Verse, Christ had said, I and my Father are One ; that is, I who profess my self to be that One, and only Son of God, who is my Father ; as in such a special Relation, I am such a Son to him, as am withal One with him.

So then, 1. Christ intended that his being God's Son, was all one, and to be One with God.

Again, 2. so the Jews understood him, to intend thereby that he was God : Their Quarrel with him is that, vers. 33. Thou makest thy self God ; and yet, lo, he had only affirmed, I the Son and my Father are One : So then, to be his Son in the sense the Jews understood him, to take on him that Title, was all one as to be God.

And, 3. in that very sense, he so defended himself to be the Son of God ; that is, such a Son as was God ; for having, vers. 34, 35, 36. made his defence, alledging alleging this Proof, That if the eminent Men, and Magistrates of the Old Testament, were termed Gods by Office, and Sons of God by Adoption; who were but shadows of him in both those Titles; Then he, who was promised to be sent into the World, as the Substance, must be God by Nature, and not Office; and the Son of God, not by Adoption only, but naturally, and therefore equal, and one with God, I say, He having defended himself by this Argument, his Conclusion is, vers. 36. Say ye then of him whom the Father hath sealed, and sent into the World, Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the Son of God? Now what was it that they had said? Or, what Blasphemy was it which they had laid to his Charge? It was this, vers. 33. for thy Blasphemy; because thou, being a Man, as to our apparent sight and view, makest thy self God: And Christ, you see, in his making his Conclusion point-blank to their Accusation, instead of saying, Why say you I blaspheme, in saying, I am God, (which yet was the thing which they had said of him) he speaks thus, Because, I said, I was the Son of God; believe not me, believe the Works, that you may know and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him; that is, that he and I are one in Nature, as he had affirmed vers. 30. For indeed, in his having affirmed he was such a Son to God as was one with his Father; which was his saying, vers. 30. He had affirmed he was such a Son to God, as was God; one that did the same Works the Father did, vers. 35. Which if I do, says he, then believe it; for it is the natural Inference from it.

Thus you see the Scriptures join his being, both Son and God, together.

II. The same is in Reason; That if he be the natural Son of God, and only begotten of the Living God, the true and perfect Son of God, as the Scriptures, when they speak of his being Son, do declare him, (as hath been clearly testified); that then necessarily, in point of rational Inference, he must be God essentially: If God hath a true Son, that Son can be no other than true God; it holds no proportion else to the phrase it pretends to: It holds true in all things else. It is not to be thought, says Bernard, that God should have a Son of another kind from himself; but it is necessary to acknowledg him to be of equal height, and dignity, since even the Sons of Princes, are themselves Princes too, Deus non nisi Deum gignit: If God begets a Son, He must be God, the living true God: God cannot beget less than himself; which is clearly the concession of those last words in John, speaking of Christ; 1 John 5. 20. God hath given us an Understanding to know him that is True; and we are in him that is True, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and Eternal Life. The Scope of which is this; That he being the True Son of the True God, the Living God; Himself is in himself, the True God also, and Eternal Life, having the Fountain of all Life in himself.

I shall but open and pursue one Vein, or Current, or Course of Scriptures, which carry on this great Point, That our Christ is God; not as appearing only in the Form of God, as some of late, or by Office only; but God by Nature; the Right God, the True God, the Great God, the Only God, the Living God: Which Attributes of God, when found to be given to him, argue him so to be God by Essence; the same God the Father is; as put us past distinguishing upon it.

I. He is God by Nature: It is the distinction which Paul useth, and whereby he sets out the True God in distinction from all other, that are called Gods, truly, or falsely; When you knew not God, ye did Service unto them which by Nature are no Gods: Why doth he not in plain terms say, When ye worship'd Idols? The Apostle supposeth the best of it; for some of those whom they worshipped, had been Gods by Office, that is, Kings, and Rulers, as Jupiter and others were; or of use (as Gods) Benefactors to Mankind, for which they worshipped them: He needed not else have put in that distinction, that they were not Gods by Nature. From which is gathered to our purpose in hand,

1. That none are to be worshipped, but he that is God by Nature: for he shews their sin to have been, that they worship'd such as God, that were not Gods by Nature: So then, if Christ were not God by Nature, he were no more more to be worshipp'd by us, though never so great a Benefactor to us: which yet is his due. And to strengthen this Argument, the command of worshipping so falls out, that those who are Gods by Office of the highest Rank, the Angels, are commanded to give Worship to him: That Saying, Heb. 1. Let all the Angels of God worship him. In the Psalmist's Words (whom the Apostle quotes;) it is, Worship him all ye Gods, Psal. 97. 7. So then, he is manifestly God by Nature, and thereby distinguished from all of them; and Worship is exacted from all of them, as his due upon that account.

And this is the true, and genuine Drift, and Result of that Passage of Christ's, John 10. 30. to 39. I and my Father are one. Then the Jews took up Stones again to stone him. Jesus answered them, Many good Works have I shewed you from my Father; for which of those Works do ye stone me? The Jews answered him, saying, For a good Work we stone thee not; but for Blasphemy, and because that thou, being a Man; makest thy self God. Jesus answered them, Is it not written in your Law, I said, ye are Gods? If he called them Gods, unto whom the Word of God came, and the Scripture cannot be broken: Say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the World, Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the Son of God? If I do not the Works of my Father, believe me not. But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the Works: that ye may know and believe that the Father is in me, and I in him. Therefore they sought again to take him; but he escaped out of their hands: That Scripture of all others hath seemed to have the greatest Objection in it, but one, (which I shall anon also again more touch) That Christ is called God only by Office, and Union with God; as the great, and eminent Men in the Old Testament were called. And the Objection lies thus, That the Jews having challenged him to have made himself God, he defends his Speech by this Saying out of the Old Testament, I have said, ye are Gods: as if himself were but such a God as they, only more eminent.

But Christ's Scope is manifestly the clean contrary. For,

1. The Jews did plainly understand him to intend that he was God, and truly God, vers. 33. So the Jews, saith Augustine, understood his Speech thus to be meant: But the Arrians will not. And the Blasphemy which the Jews challenged him of, was not that he made himself as one of those Gods, but that he made himself God, one with the Father; and so by Nature to be God as well as he: And his answer, if it had been intended in that other Speech, had no way come home to their Objection: for that was not the thing they quarrel'd him for, that he said he was a God by Office, and Deputation; as those whom the Psalmist did speak of only were.

Ecce Judæi intellexerant quod non intelligunt Arriani, Augustini Tract. 48. in Joan.

2. Christ here quoteth that Saying, I have said, ye are Gods, as a Prophecy; (so I term it, for Types were Prophecies of Christ, and what he should be, as much as any other) of Himself: Which those Words, vers. 35. And the Scripture cannot be broken, manifestly import. Now, how was this Prophecy, but in this respect, that God his terming Magistrates, and those eminent Men under the Old Testament, in Jerry, or elsewhere, Gods, was to fore-signify thereby his own Son, who was the Substance of those Shadows, what his Person was, that he had promised to send into the World: for in saying, The Scripture cannot be broken, his Intent is to say, the Scripture is, and must be found true, and fulfilled, or made good.

Now then, in this lies the Force and Edg of Christ's Argument, to prove himself God in that Sense they had understood him: The Jews looked at, and acknowledged all those great and eminent Men, whom the Scripture termeth Gods, to be but fore-running Shadows, and Types of him that is the Messiah: So that look what Titles, and Excellencies are given, and attributed unto them, must in an eminent, and distinct, and substantial way be found true in his Person: Or the Scripture will be broken, and not be found consistent. If therefore they were called Gods by Commission, and Deputation, as having the Word of God come to them; which put that Title and Office upon them; and it was said of them, them, Ye are Gods; as Psal. 82.6. Your Messiah must be God of another sort and rank than they were of: and not only meerly by Commission, or, as to whom the Word of God came, to make him God: but he must be truly, and by Nature and Essence such. Were he to be God no otherwise than they were, the Scripture had not been fulfilled.

And this Argument is so strong, as nothing can be supposed stronger to us Christians: who know that all Types of Christ, were indeed but Shadows in all their Excellencies, attributed to them, of Christ as the Substance: What is said of Ceremonies, is true of Persons that were Types of him; Col. 2. 18. which are a Shadow of things to come; but the Body, or Substance signified by that Shadow, is Christ. Now then, if they were termed Gods, and Sons of the most High, it must be understood that therein they were but Shadows, and he must have in his Person that which holds true of the Substance, the Essence, or real Being thereof. And so, according to Christ's way of Arguing, if they are Gods by Office, and Union; he must be God by Essence, and Nature: as that distinction of the Apostle, Gal. 4. 8. holds forth. And otherwise, he had himself been but a dark Shadow, an Officiary God, as they: no otherwise Son of the most High, than as they also were, Heb. 10. 1. The Apostle speaks thus of all Types, and Shadows, under the Old Testament: The Law had but a Shadow of good Things to come, and not so much as the Image of the Things themselves. From all which I gather, that as in Nature, so here, the Shadow is lower than an Image, and both alterius generis, from the Substance or Reality; as in the case of Melchisedec is apparent; who in a meer Shadow is said to have had no beginning, nor end of days; not that really he had not, but because in a Shadowy Intent it is not mentioned in the Book of Scripture, he being as a Shadow conformed to the Son of God. Now in comparison of Christ, all other Eminencies in any Person, though more real, are yet esteemed to be but Shadows, in as true a manner as he (Melchisedec) was. And so, this greatest Excellency of all Creatures, to be stiled Gods, must in comparison of him, be content with a Shadowy Title; whereof he bore the Substance. He in the conclusion of this Argument, instead of saying he was God, which yet his Argument, and their Accusation did drive to, concludes, he was the Son of God, vers. 36. Say ye of him, thou blasphemest, because I said I am the Son of God? The Blasphemy in their Sense was, vers. 33. that he made himself God, as an Inference out of that Saying, I and my Father are one. He defends it, and takes it on him by this, that he had said indeed, that he was the Son of God: (of whom all those Gods, and Sons of the most High, the Psalmist speaks of, were but Shadows) and therefore truly God, as they intended it: 'Tis not comparatio similitum, ut volunt adversarii; that is, that I am God in the same, and like manner that they are: but 'tis Comparatio minoris, & majoris, if they that are but Shadows are called Gods; then, if that Scripture be not broken, I must be God substantially. So then, by Christ's manner of concluding, it was all one for him to say he was God, and the Son of God; both in his Sense, in theirs, and in the Psalmist's foresignifying of him. He again paraphraseth, and explains all these by this Phrase, The Father is in me, and I in him. So then, the Conclusion, the Sum I draw out of all, is; That for Christ to be the Son of God, it is all one (as for him) to be God substantially: and in that respect one with God. And that being thus God, and one with God the Father, is (in its difference from God) best thus expressed; that his Father is in him, and he in his Father: Neither could Christ himself that experimented it, express his being God, and Son of God, more clearly unto us; than to say, I am in my Father, who is God, and he as God, is in me, and so both are One; that is, one God substantially, or by Nature, in distinction from Gods by Office; though we are two in Person that subsist in this Nature. Nor did John know better how to express it, in Chap. 1. vers. 1. both his Oneness with God, and his Distinction from God, than in saying, that he was God, and was with God. God, not as those in the Psalmist, to whom the Word of the Lord came, and were God's meerly by Gods saying so of them them; but He the Word, ὁ λόγος, it self, (as John calls him) of whom they that declared the Word, were the Types, and Shadows; and the only begotten of the Father, vers. 18. who was not made a God, and a Son, because sent into the World, and sanctified, but was therefore sent, and sanctified to that Office of Messiah, because he was by Nature, and substantially the Son of God, and God equal with the Father both in Power, and Nature; vers. 29, 30. And in Works, vers. 37, 38. If I do not the Works of my Father, believe me not: But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the Works: that ye may know, and believe that the Father is in me, and I in him.

2. He is stiled the Living God: Those Words, Heb. 3. 12. Take heed there be not an evil Heart in departing from the Living God, are manifestly meant of Christ: for his begun Exhortation, vers. 7. was to hear his Voice; and he it was that was tempted in the Wilderness, 1 Cor. 10. 7. And how that whole 95th Psalm was meant of Christ, I have elsewhere shewn: Yea it was he that gave the Law, and pronounced those Words, I am the Lord thy God, who brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, thou shalt have no other Gods before my Face: For Heb. 12. 26. it is expressly said of him, Whose Voice then shook the Earth; namely, when the Law was given, and those Words uttered by him.

3. He is stiled the true God: So 1 Joh. 5. 20. And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an Understanding, that we may know him that is true; and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ: this is the true God, and Eternal Life. And to testify this, he is stiled by that incommunicable Name of God, Jehovah; Jer. 23. 6. Jehovah Justitia nostra, The Lord our Righteousness: In his Days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his Name wherewith he shall be called, The Lord our Righteousness. So also, Isa. 40. vers. 3, 10, 12. Prepare the Way for Jehovah: These all the Evangelists apply to John, and Christ, Matth. 3. 4. Mark 3. 4. John 1. 23. And if John be the Vox clamantis, Christ must be acknowledged the Jehovah, whose Way was prepared afore him: And when he comes in the Flesh, Isa. 40. vers. 9. he says unto the Cities of Judah, Behold your God: And vers. 10. Behold the Lord God will come with strong Hand, and his Arm shall rule for him; behold, his Reward is with him, and his work before him: Which is expressly applyed to Christ, Rev. 22. 12. speaking of his second coming, vers. 11. He that is Unjust, let him be Unjust still: and he that is Filthy, let him be Filthy still: and he that is Righteous, let him be Righteous still: and he that is Holy, let him be Holy still. And behold, I come quickly, and my Reward is with me, to give to every Man according as his Work shall be. Which is expressly true of Christ. Read Matth. 16. 27. It is God of whom 'tis said, Isa. 40. 13. as the Septuagint hath it, τὸς ἕγνω ἅνθρωπος, Who hath known the Mind of the Lord? Which 1 Cor. 2. last, The Apostle applies to Christ, by adding, But we have the Mind of Christ. So then, Christ is that Jehovah, Jer. 23. 6.

Now Men may vainly dispute it, that this Name of Jehovah is given unto meer Creatures: But God himself hath decided it, and expressly declared, that it is given unto none but the true God: Psal. 83. 18. That Men may know that thou whose Name alone is Jehovah, art the most High over all the Earth. And Isa. 42. 8. I am the Lord, that is my Name; and my Glory will I not give to another, neither my Praise to graven Images. Now this Honour is given to Christ; and therefore he must be God, and the true God.

4. He is also the great God: Not only, Isa. 9. 6. The Mighty God: but Tit. 2. 12, 13. τὸ μέγα θεὸς καὶ σωτὴρ ἡμῶν; that great God, and Saviour of us: speaking both of one, and the same Person, Christ. And 'tis here, the putting the Article before great God, and none before Saviour, imports: and so distinguisheth him from God, by the like Phrase generally, Eph. 1. 3. ὁ θεὸς καὶ πατήρ, God, and the Father of Christ: but more simular yet. This here, Gal. 1. 4. τὸ θεὸς καὶ πατὴρ ἡμῶν, according to the Will of God, and our Father: So Christ, God and our Saviour in Peter, is Christ the great God, and Saviour in Titus

Titus. And this is at once proclaimed as the general Faith of all Believers, and Apostles: 2 Pet. 1. 1. Like Faith with us: And what is the Object of it? ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ, on the Righteousness. I have wondred they should translate it, through the Righteousness: When Christ's Righteousness is every where made the Object of Faith, as justifying, on which we believe. Yea, as that which out of Necessity to Salvation, Faith relies on; and that Righteousness, as of a Saviour that is God, which were of no value to us Sinners else: Let them else take Saviour and Righteousness that will; for he nor it would do no Man any good: This was the general Expectation, as Paul to Titus, the general fundamental Faith of all Christians then, as in Peter: And so the Prophet's stile, and the Apostle's stile, agrees: Isaiah, in his 40, 43, & 45 Chapters, stiles him, The God and Saviour, and there is none besides him: And the Apostles in like manner, The great God and Saviour.

5. If you yet doubt: Lo! to put all out of Question, he is stiled, the only True God: The other, and the greatest Objection that ever was, or can be made against this Godhead of Christ, is, That it is said there is but one God only: Yea, and the Father is so stiled, and called, John 17. 3. And this is Life Eternal, that they might know Thee the only True God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. And I find in some Men's late Writings here at home, them distinguishing thus: That take the Godhead simply in its Unity, and so considered, it is only the Father, quoting all those places, there is none besides: And the Son they make to be, either God, as united to Man, and so in that respect becoming the Son, or the Manifestation of God in Flesh; or, at best, but that in God which contained the Mass, and Spirit of the whole Creation as it was in God from Everlasting; and so distinct from the Nature of God, as purely in himself. But the Objection hath been the occasion to me of the greatest satisfaction in this Point, that the same stile is given as compleatly unto Jesus Christ, as to the Father, in those other Places: And so the words are not to be understood exclusively to Christ in this sense, to know thee as Father to be the only True God; the Father, that only is the True God; the words are not so, but inclusively rather thus; And him whom thou hast to be the only True God also: Only Christ having an Office, in respect of which he is called Christ; he is therefore named apart from the Father; yet so, as both are that only True God, in distinction from all Gods so called, that are not Gods by Nature: And the ground of my satisfaction is this, That in a multitude of places where God is called the only God, and none besides him; yet those places are expressly meant of, and applied to our Christ; Isa. 44. 6. Thus saith the Lord the King of Israel, and his Redeemer the Lord of Hosts; I am the First, and I am the Last, and besides me there is no God. Here you see is the Attribute we seek for, the only God, &c. And this is as evidently spoken of Christ. For,

First, Here are two Titles given him, which are proper to Christ.

1. King of Israel; see John 1. 49. Thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Israel. And for that of his Redeemer, I need not trouble you with any Quotations, that it is proper to him: And yet he to whom this Title is given, is God, and the only God, Yea, besides me there is no God. And if you yet doubt, and ask me, But are you sure that it is spoken of him? Lo, Rev. 1. twice, vers. 8. I am Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the End. And again, vers. 17. I am the First and the Last. And then you have them all three, Rev. 22. 13. I am Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the End, the First and the Last. The next in Isaiah, is Chap. 45. 5. I am the Lord, and there is none else; there is no God besides me: And vers. 21, 22. He bids us look on him; and sure, without any more adoe, we that live under the New Testament, should know him upon first sight: For to whom is it to whom all the Ends of the Earth do look, but he who was proclaimed the Desire of all Nations? who were not converted to God until Christ came: But he that is, of whom Isaiah says, Rom. 15. 12. There shall be a Root of Jesse, and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles, in him shall the Gentiles trust: Look, and trust on him, and be saved, who is a Saviour, and there is none besides, says the Old Testament. Believe on the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt shall be saved, is the general stile of the Apostle's preaching; A Saviour, and besides him there is no other. And thus they set him forth also, Acts 4. 11. There is no God, no Saviour besides him; and Justification in him, discovers him none other; Acts 13. 39. By him all that believe are justified from all Things, from which ye could not be justified by the Law of Moses. And in this Lord, shall all the Seed of Israel be justified, (says Isaiab) Surely shall one say, in the Lord I have Righteousness and Strength. And if you were all put to speak, in whom would you say you had Righteousness and Strength? Hear Paul for all the rest, in one Epistle; To be found in him, not having my own Righteousness, Phil. 3. 9. And for the other, hear him again in the same Epistle, Phil. 4. 13. I can do all Things through Christ that strengtheneth me. Do not all the Jury of Saints, with one Mouth, say the same? And what is he in whom we have this Righteousness? Doth not Isaiab's fellow-Prophet tell us, Jer. 23. 6. And his Name, for Essence, is Jehovah; for Office, our Righteousness. Thus, I say, Saviour and God still are joined: The Righteousness of this Saviour as God, is that by which through looking on him by Faith, all, both Jew and Gentiles, are saved. And bring all this to that of Peter even now quoted, describing true Believers, All that have obtained like Faith with us, Apostles; On the Righteousness of God, and our Saviour Jesus Christ: And yet he of whom all this is said, takes this stile upon himself, to be the only God, and none besides him. And if any have the Heart, or Face, to deny these Characters loosely scattered up and down, enough to convert a Jew to own him for the Messiah prophesied of; much more a Christian to acknowledg him the only True God, whom Isaiab spoke of: If any, I say, can deny it, as meant personally of Christ; let them then consult Paul, who expressly applies this very Scripture unto our Jesus: Rom. 15. 10, 11. Rejoice ye Gentiles with his People. Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles, and laud him all ye People. Where is that written but in this place of Isaiab, vers. 23. I have sworn by my self, the Word is gone out of my Mouth in Righteousness, and shall not return; that unto me every Knee shall bow, every Tongue shall swear. And again it is quoted, Phil. 2. That to him every Knee shall bow.

And let me yet bring the Current and Stream of other Arguments usually alledged, to prove that Christ is God, into the Channel of the last-cited Scriptures: You have heard it argued, that Christ is therefore God, because he creates and is worshipp'd, and forgives Sins. And the Scriptures are express, that God alone creates, is worshipped, and forgives Sins.

1. For Creation; these places are express, Isa. 44. 24. Thus saith the Lord thy Redeemer, and he that formed thee from the Womb; I am the Lord that maketh all Things, that stretcheth forth the Heavens alone, that spreadeth abroad the Earth by my self. And Jer. 10. 10, 11, 12. But the Lord is the True God, he is the Living God, and an Everlasting King: at his Wrath the Earth shall tremble, and the Nations shall not be able to abide his Indignation: Thus shall ye say unto them, The Gods that have not made the Heavens, and the Earth, even they shall perish from the Earth, and from under these Heavens. He hath made the Earth by his Power, he hath established the World by his Wisdom, and hath stretched out the Heavens by his Discretion. Now it is not only elsewhere said, That Christ created All, John 1. 1, 2. Heb. 1. and therefore is God; But further, in these very places where he is called that only God; even in these Places quoted, He is said to be that God who alone created; thus Isa. 43. 7, 11, 23. Isa. 44. 6, 24. Isa. 45. 5, 22, 23, 24.

2. Again, so of God alone it is made the Prerogative to be worshipped, Rev. 22. 9. Mat. 4. 10. out of Deut. 6. 5, 6. where also he is called one God: And of Christ it is also else-where said, he is to be worshipped. But further, you have both these in these very places also; wherein, as he is stiled, that God that is one, and none besides him; He is brought in swearing by himself, that every Knee shall bow to him; which is applied to him.

BOOK II.

3. So to forgive Sins, is proper to God alone, Mark 2.7. And we find Christ to forgive Sins; and therefore he is argued to be God: But further, you have both in these very places quoted; as he is called that only True God, so he is said to be that God that blots out Transgressions for, and by himself; Thus Isa. 43. 25. I, even I am he that blotteth out thy Transgressions for mine own sake, and will not remember thy Sins. So then the Argument is every way strong; and indeed all Arguments center in one; and we find all in this one and the same compass of Scripture.

1. That God is but one God.
 2. That God alone creates; is to be worshipped; and forgives Sins.
 3. That his Glory he will not give unto another.
 4. That Christ is that one God, who is God alone. And,
 5. These places are interpreted of him, and applied to him, by the Apostles:
- So as indeed this one Argument, from these places of Isaiah thus framed, hath all in it, which are scatteredly used by others out of several places. To conclude, to hear God speak, and saying, as Deut. 32. 39. He doth, See now that I, even I am he, and there is no God with me: I kill, and I make alive; I wound, and I heal; neither is there any that can deliver out of my Hand. And to hear John from God to say, The Word was God, and the Word was with God. And to hear the Prophets say, That Christ is that God who is God alone, and none else besides him: And to hear throughout the Scriptures, one that is God, talking to, of, and with another that is God, and yet all but one God; to hear the Father to be called the only True God, the Son likewise, and so the Spirit: Let all the Wits of Men, and Angels, reconcile it otherwise than thus if they can; That God's Nature or Essence is One, but affords Three Persons, who are each that One God: Three that are One.

C H A P. V.

That the Second Person of the Trinity assumed Humane Nature into Personal Union with Himself, and so is God-Man in one Person for ever.

I Come to the great Mystery of our Religion, which so loud a Voice proclaims to be such, by the Apostle, 1 Tim. 3. 16. And without controversy, great is the Mystery of Godliness, God was manifest in the Flesh. God had manifested himself in the Old Testament in his Works; as in Rom. 1. 19. That which may be known of God, is manifest in them: And vers. 20. For the Invisible Things of him from the Creation of the World are clearly seen, being understood by the Things that are made, even his Eternal Power and Godhead. But God manifest in the flesh, is an higher kind of Manifestation, for there he is present: We may say of it, Here God is, a visible God in his Person. In the Old Testament this was prophesied of, among other famous Oracles foregoing, Isa. 7. 14. A Virgin shall conceive, and bear a Son, and shall call his Name Immanuel; that is, God with us. And again, Chap. 9. 6. For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given, which notes his Being God, the Son; who had been begotten long before by God the Father, and now given, unto us a Child is born, and born of a Virgin, there is his Humane Nature; And his Name shall be called WONDERFUL; for his Person is a wonderful Person: The Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace, compounded of God and Man in one Person; which set all the World agast at the knowledg of it. He did wonderfully; that is, he shewed himself to be God, for he ascended into Heaven in a Flame, and therein shewed himself more than a Man or Angel. As his Person was Wonderful, so his Actions; Wonderful in his Person, as God united to Man; and wonderful as Man, in his making immediately by the Holy Ghost; such a Man as never was. Says David, of his own Body, Psal. 139. 14.—Thou tellest all my Members; I am fearfully and wonderfully made.—Curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the Earth: The Phrases do speak some curious piece of Workmanship to be undertaken in hand, by some special Artist: And to hide his Workmanship from the Vulgar, (which argues the nobleness of it) he goes into a dark Place, and there he works it unbeheld of any, and then he brings it forth to open view. It was an Instance Doctor Preston used to give, That in the Generation of a Child, between Father and Mother, the Father knows not what is a doing, nor the Mother knows not what is doing; but God stands by, like a secret Limner, and actuates the formation of every Member, according to the Idea thereof written in his Book. But in the Formation of Christ's Body and Soul, the Holy Ghost discovered his Workmanship in the dark place of the Virgin's Womb, called, the lower parts of the Earth. And to stop the flowings of Sin and Corruption, which by the Parents is done, himself performed the part of the Formative Virtue which is in the Seed of Men: whence it was, that the Divine Nature, when he came into the World, said, A Body hast thou prepared me; the word in the Original is, Kartartizein, that is, articulated, made and set in their due Place and Order.

I shall only add one place further, to set forth the wonder of the Mystery; Jer. 31. 22. The Lord hath created a New Thing in the Earth, a Woman shall compass a Man. It is a Prophecy of the Conception of Christ at Nazareth, one of the Cities of Galilee, the place where the Angel brought news first to the Virgin, and where she conceived him: Of which, if I have time, more afterwards. This was a New Thing indeed, a New Thing created in the World; the like unto which, as also the crucifying of his Son, he never did afore, nor never will will do again. And the Blessed Virgin hath a touch upon it, The Lord hath done GREAT THINGS for me, and Holy is his Name. The word in the Original is μεγαλεια, and is the same word the Apostles used in Acts 2. 11. The wonderful Works of God.

And thus Heaven and Earth met and kissed one another, namely, God and Man. And this Union is the middle Union, (as I call it) as in respect to the two other, the Union of the Three Persons in one Godhead, and our Union with God ; so in respect to the thing it self : For his Person being a middle Person between the two Persons, the Father and the Holy Ghost : He, the Son, as a middle Person, by his Union with the Essence of God, takes hold of God on the one part ; and further, by his Union with the Nature of Man, takes hold of Man on the other part, and so takes hold of both at once ; all which was suitable to his Office, as being Mediator, which the Apostle says, is of two that are at enmity : and this you have 1 Tim. 2. 5. For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and Man, the Man Christ Jesus.

Gal. 3.

And as the Person was thus wonderful, God manifested in the Flesh ; so the Signs and Wonders that accompanied and followed his Person, after his being gone to Heaven, and the coming of the Holy Ghost, as Paul an Eye-witness testifies, Heb. 2. 4. God also bearing them witness, both with Signs and Wonders, and with divers Miracles and Gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own Will : As also the Apostle Peter, 1 Pet. 1. 11.—The Spirit of Christ testified before-hand the Sufferings of Christ, and the Glory that should follow. The Times the Apostles lived in, were a glorious Season. The Apostle Paul hath in brief summed up the Characters of them, and annexed them to his [God manifested in the Flesh] as the wonderful Effects thereof ; as they follow in 1 Tim. 3. 16. where it follows, Justified in the Spirit, by reason of the frailty and meanness of his Flesh wherein he appeared ; He was set at nought by Herod and his Men of War, Luke 23. 11. Mocked and scourged by Pilate and the Jews, and for his pretension to be the Son of God, cast out of the World under the publick infamy of being the greatest Impostor, the most detestable Villain and Deceiver that ever was in the World ; The Rulers not sparing him, when he hung miserably upon the Cross. He was esteemed of God, Isa. 53. when he was crucified. overwhelmed with all these Prejudices. But presently, as he comes to Heaven, his Father owned him, set him at his right Hand, and made his Enemies his Footstool ; and he was justified from that great Reproach cast upon him, for making himself God. In respect unto these things, it is said, He was justified in the Spirit ; that is, in his Godhead, being owned as God. Was not this a Wonder, a mighty Wonder ! [Seen of Angels]. And by their seeing him to be the Son, (which none of them were) as soon as he comes to Heaven, they all fall down and worship him : When he bringeth his first begotten into the World, he saith, Let all the Angels of God worship him, when he came first to Heaven : (And the bad Angels, they believed and trembled, though Men did not ; and they besought him, not to torment them before the time, the Day of Judgment.) It follows, [Preached unto the Gentiles, and believed on in the World]. The Gentiles that had continued Idolaters two thousand Years, worshipping Devils, by whom they were led ; and the Apostles but by preaching the Gospel, (which was but whispered, and yet runs through all the World ; it ran like Wild-fire upon dried Trees) ; They turned the World up-side down, Act. 17. 6. [Taken up into Glory] and owned there in the highest manner by God. Whereas, John 16. 10. the contrary Speech there used insinuates, that he died, as cast out by God for the most unrighteous Person that ever lived in the World : Christ foretells, that by the Spirit's coming with the Word, he should convince the World, that he was a Righteous Man, and had satisfied for Sin ; Of Righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more. And what is the Reason of all this ? But because this Man being taken up into Glory, there is no Eye of Men or Angels that shall see him in this Glory, but must fall down and acknowledg, That Man there is God, the Son of God ; and so John tells us himself : And the other Apostles that saw a glymps of his Glory, do confess, We saw his Glory, as of the only begotten Son of God, John 1. 14. And if the Clothes he wore, which were but the outward Appendixes of his Person, did yet yet shine so bright, as no Fuller on Earth could white them : How much more his Humane Nature it self, in which the fulness of the Godhead personally dwells, shall transcendently shine much more, as being a part of himself, as he is able to make us to do; Phil. 3. 21. Who shall change our vile Body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious Body; much more shall he change Soul and Body into the Image of himself.

But I shall comprize, all that I intend to discourse of this Subject, in this one Assertion.

That this Person, the Eternal Son of God, who was, and is God, took unto himself, into an unity of Person with himself, the Man Jesus; or that the Person of Christ is God and Man, joined into one Person.

To demonstrate the Assertion; the Punctum of which lies in this, That in our Christ, God and Man are become one Person.

1. What is said of his Conception, or Incarnation, in that fore-cited place, Luke 1. 39. That Holy Thing that shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God; which is explained by that in Gal. 4. 4. God sent forth his Son, (his Son that was sent, and God, existed afore); and 'twas He, the Son, that so existed; that is, the Person; and he now said to be made of a Woman, the Virgin. Observe, 'tis spoken of, and attributed to, this Son, that he was now made of a Woman, made Man; who was begotten of God afore, and now sent into, yea made, Flesh: And that this Son, and that Man made of a Woman, are yet but one Son still, not two Sons: And therefore also one Person; for if they had been two Persons, they had been two Sons; the Son of God the 'one, and that Holy Thing born of the Woman, another: Whereas being now joined unto one Person, there is but one Son to God, as he is there denominated.

2. Evidence: Go we from his Conception, to the constant course and tenour of his Speech about himself; That this Man (when grown up) should continually talk of himself, and attribute such Things to himself, that were proper, and belonged only to that Person, the Word, the only begotten Son of God; as we have proved, and described him, existed before the World; that was the Son of God in Heaven, and very God; That this Man, this sorry Man to see to, should talk at that rate as he doth, and still say [I] not [We], whilst he so speaks of himself; all the Wits in the World cannot salve this Riddle, (if the several Speeches be collected, and narrowly observed, in the Gospel of John, and elsewhere) but by this, which I use to say salves all, He was taken into one Person with him that was the Son of God.

For Instance, besides many others; John 5. 17. My Father hitherto worketh, and I work: Which the Jews understood, that he made himself equal with God; vers. 18. But how a Man should be God, this they understood not. And he goes on to justify it, and assume it; extending that Speech of his (namely, that My Father worketh hitherto, and I work) unto all things past, as well as present, or to come: even unto all that ever God did, vers. 19. What things soever the Father doth, these also doth the Son likewise: If he created the World, so did I: If he hath governed all the Affairs of it, so have I; My Hands have wielded the Scepter with him: And God did never any thing without my Advice, and Counsel: Shewing me whatever he doth, vers. 20. Thus for time past. And so for time to come; As the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickneth them; so the Son quickneth whom he will, vers. 21. God's Will and Intention being, that all Men shall one Day honour the Son, as they honour the Father, vers. 23. And yet he that talk'd all this, was a Man; that came into the World (as a Man) but thirty Years afore: Yea, and he professeth of himself, Chap. 8. 57, 58. That he was afore Abraham; Before Abraham was, I am: that is, my Person. And yet they judg'd him not above Fifty. All which I alledg not as formerly, to prove that Christ was God, or Son of God: But now, That the Man Jesus, (who it is that uttered all this;) that he was one Person with that Son of God, who is God. For when he speaks it, he still maketh but one [I;] of the Son of God, and himself. And speaks the same things that are proper and peculiar to that Son of God, who had afore existed : The Man (I say) speaks them of himself, utters them in his own Name, without any Limitation, or Caution, for being mistaken: He, this Man, doth thereby distinguish himself from all his Fellow-Creatures. These things were so stupendously strange, that they made the carnal Jew wild, and mad, and in a rage, and to cry out upon him, that he blasphemed ; and ever and anon to take up Stones to stone him withal : and although they had believed that he was the Messiah, whom they expected ; yet such things as these they never could have imagined should have agreed to the Person of Christ, whom they expected : They judg'd he took upon him infinitely, beyond the Elevation, and Proportion of the Messiah himself. And therefore, John 10. 24. They having only at first ask'd him somewhat seriously, Tell us plainly if thou be the Christ : And he as plainly tells them so, that he was : yet frames his Answer up in such description of himself, as the Christ, that he was one with God ; as that thereupon, the next Word he hears from them, is, Thou blasphemest, vers. 33.

Yea, and in the 6th Chapter, those that were his Disciples ; that is, such as were a coming on to believe on him, were for such strange Riddles as these, utterly put of : as John 6. 61. And yet there, or unto them, such was his Zeal, to assert this his Personal Union between the Son of God, and that Man Jesus, whose Mouth was the utterer of it ; that he speaks yet more strangely, Doth this offend you ? What if you see the Son of Man ascend where he was before ? And there is no other Foundation, or Ground for such a Speech as that ; no other respect could bear it, but this his Personal Union, as the reason of it ; Why we know his Mother, and Brethren, say they : And where then could this Man be before ? Nay, to increase the Wonder yet more, he had said to Nicodemus, John 3. 13. And no Man hath ascended up to Heaven, but he that came down from Heaven, even the Son of Man which is in Heaven : that is, who is now in Heaven at this present. When as yet they saw him as a Man, circumscribed with local Bounds on Earth, even as any other Man is, within the Verge of a poor seamless Coat. And these things he so speaks of himself, in distinction from the whole Creation of God, as proper, and peculiar to him ; laying them therein in a rank infinitely below himself : yea also as one equal to God his Father ; and, as such, distinct from him ; and yet is a Son of Man that utters it. Although consider him as meer Man, it could not be he should have so spoken ; the Things said, will not bear such Words. And it is among other Demonstrations of this Truth, and also was one of the main Ends of God's ordaining this Personal Union, to declare ; to the End, that Men might hear with their Ears, and see with their Eyes, (as John,) the Original distinction of the Father, and his Son, as distinct Persons in the Deity : which was that which was, and had been, among the Persons from Eternity, afore Christ took our Nature, in that it was confidently held forth by a Man, who being become one Person with the Son, could, and durst say, and appeal to his Works, to justify it ; which were so stupendously miraculous, that his Father (afore whom, and to his Face he speaks it all) must be acknowledged to have concurred with him in ; and so thereby testified that he spake Truth in this : whilst yet this Man utters it in the Name of a Person that was not meer Man, but also God, Son of God. For this Man doth before, and after, upon this Doctrine of his, work his Miracles ; such, as no meer Man ever did : and God suffered him so to talk, did bear it, and let him go on, and assist him therein, or else he could not have done them. As John 10. 37, 38. If I do not the Works of my Father, believe me not ; But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the Works ; that ye may know, and believe that the Father is in me, and I in him. And when he had done all these things, to ascend up to Heaven, and sit down at God's right Hand ; this, I say, is at once a Confirmation of these two, the greatest Truths :

1. The distinction of the Persons of the Father, and the Son, though one God. As also,

2. That this sorry Man that speaks it, was one in Person with the Son of God : And if there had been no other End of this Incarnation of Personal Union, than to declare and manifest the first of these, it had been worth it ; which by so great an Evidence could never have been manifested.

And then, if this Man were not one in Person with the Son of God, who was God; let us all call him in Question, and arraign him at the latter day, instead of his arraigning us; for laying low to himself all the Saints, and the whole Creation of God; when as himself as Man was but a part of it: yea for usurping upon the Prerogatives of God himself, and let his own Words judg him. I say, let us cry out upon him as a Deceiver, if this Man had not that Divine Person, God's Son in him, and therewith a Divine Nature, besides that of a bare Man, which Divinity lay hid and concealed in him, as a Prince under a disguise; And that Person, and Divinity so united to him, as to make one Person with him, this Man that spake thus.

Thirdly, We find these two Natures of God, and Man, spoken of in him, as making up one [I] or one [He;] when himself speaks of himself, or his Apostles of him.

I begin with Matthew 16. where he catechiseth his Disciples in this Fundamental of Religion; for vers. 17, 18. he professeth to found his Church upon the Profession of it. 1. The Question ask'd, is evidently what his Person was, and of what made up? This, his second Question, vers. 15. Whom do ye say that I am? doth directly point to, for their punctual Answer: What, or who is my Person? And, 2. concerning that, you may observe, that he bounds it not, he terminates it not, upon his being a Man: The main Question is not, whether he was a Man or no? or the Christ, the Son of Man? as if that were all: But my Question reacheth farther, Whom do ye say that I, who am the Son of Man, Am? over and beyond my being a Son of Man, I am something besides. And yet, Son of Man imported the Messiah: as Cameron upon Joh. 5. 27. And hath given him Authority to execute Judgment also, because he is the Son of Man. Out of Dan. 7. 13. I beheld one like the Son of Man. Which is the Pariphrasis of the Christ.

3. Peter, in his Answer for them all, affirms not barely that he, the Son of Man, was the Christ; which was but a Name of Office: (As if you should say of a Man, he is the King, or he is the Chancellour; noting out an Official Person, or to denominate his Office only.) But he further adds, Thou art the Son of the Living God.

4. Observe, that he in his Answer joins these two together, to make up the [I,] the Person of this Christ, The Son of Man, and the Son of the Living God: and as substantially the Son of the Living God, as he was substantially the Son of Man. Yea, and manifestly shewing that the main of his Person, (for the Subsistence or Personality of it,) to consist in this, his being the Son of the Living God, more than in his being the Son of Man. The like you have joined in Christ's Question to the Pharisees; What think you of the Christ? David's Son, say they; David's Lord, says he: and both making up one Messiah, or the Christ. So then, the Person of Christ was Son of Man, and Son of God, Mat. 16. And Son of David, and Son of one greater than David: for which he calls him Lord, and both in one Person, Mat. 22. Let us now bring other Scriptures to these. 1. You have the same prophesied of him, at his Conception, by the Angel, Luk. 1. The Son of David his Father, vers. 32. The Son of God, vers. 35. And both the same He. Let us still pursue this Notion, through the Scriptures, and from hence, go unto Rom. 1. 2, 3, 4. Paul a Servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an Apostle, separated unto the Gospel of God, (Which he had promised afore by his Prophets, in the Holy Scriptures) Concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, who was made of the Seed of David, according to the Flesh: And declared to be the Son of God with Power, according to the Spirit of Holiness, by the Resurrection from the dead. In which Words you have,

1. As in the former, the Person of Christ: that is, who, and what he was in his Person, made the eminent, and primary Subject of the Gospel: The Gospel, (says he) concerning his Son Jesus Christ. And that set forth as the Prophets in the Holy Scriptures, or Writings of the Old Testament had set him forth to us: so as we shall have occasion from hence to call in the Testimony of some Prophets, unto the confirmation of this also. I say, the Person of Christ is the primary subject of it: for the next following Words, insist on the Description thereof. And so whereas Paul was to set forth in his ensuing Book II.  suing Discourse, how that Christ's Righteousness is that Righteousness which God hath ordained for Sinners, vers. 16, 17. I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for therein is revealed the Righteousness of God, from Faith to Faith: As it is written, The Just shall live by Faith. It was suitable for him in this so methodical, and systematical an Epistle; in the first place to set out who, and what the Person of Christ is. Which,

2. He performs in the next Words, and that under the same Terms, or equivalent, as in the two former Christ himself had done. 1. To be the Son of David, made of the Seed of David, vers. 3. And, 2. To be the Son of God, vers. 3. [His Son] in the same Verse. And so in vers. 4. both making up this one Person, Jesus Christ our Lord.

See Beza. Yea, and 3. He further, and more clearly proceeds to shew, how there were two distinct Natures met in that one Person; the Nature of a Man, according unto which he was the Son of David: the Nature of God, or the God-head, according unto which, or in respect of which, he was the Son of God: Who was made of the Seed of David, according to the Flesh, vers. 3. And declared to be (also) the Son of God with Power, according to the Spirit of Holiness. And as the Opposition proves this, so it is very observable, how exactly the Apostle speaks in so great a Mystery. 1. The Opposition clears it; for κατὰ σάρκα, according to the Flesh, is opposed to κατὰ πνεῦμα, according to the Spirit of Holiness. Now when he says, He was of the Seed of David, according to the Flesh; he (as all acknowledg) means that according to, or in respect of his Human Nature, termed the Flesh, or as Man: So here, was made of the Seed of David, oppositely, according to his God-head, termed the Spirit of Holiness; as he was in respect thereof, the natural Son of God: so he was manifested with Power so to be, by the Resurrection from the Dead. Now that Spirit, as in Christ, is taken for the God-head, or Divine Nature dwelling in him; is evident by multitude of Scriptures: The Flesh profits nothing, the Spirit quickneth: And by the Eternal Spirit he offered up himself, Heb. 7. And this God-head in him, is called the Spirit of Holiness; by way of the ordinary Title given the third Person, who is called the Holy Spirit: This here, the Spirit of Holiness it self, which sanctified that Human Nature, as the Altar and Temple did the Sacrifice.

Again, Observe the Apostle's exactness of Speech; as Son of David he is said to have been made, for begotten of Man he was not, yet made of a Woman, David's Daughter, of the same Matter that all Men are formed of: But as Son of God, he says not of him that he was made; but he here supposeth him already, before he was made Man, to have been the Son of God, vers. 3. And therefore, says only he was declared; namely to us, or manifestly evidenced to have been the Son of God, according to a Divine Nature in him, in which he existed before. And for proof of it, he holds forth the greatest Evidence, the Power shewn by him, in his Resurrection from the Dead: In that Christ did afore-hand profess, and declare that he would raise himself up, by his own Power, Job. 10. 18.

The fourth thing I observe, is; That these two Natures remain in themselves distinct in him, and yet both make up one Person. 1. Two Natures distinct. The Apostle doth professedly distinguish, as any Schoolman useth to do; According to the Flesh, says he, and according to the Spirit: Yea, he denies concerning him, that he is Son of God according to the Flesh; according to which Nature he is considered only as the Son of David: but Son of God only in respect of his Divine Nature. And, 2. He speaks of him as one Person, that hath both these, and consisted of both; or else this distinction needed not have been used: If he had been either nothing but a Man, or if the same Person had not been both God and Man. As when you distinguish of a Man, that quoad Animam, according to his Soul he is the Off-spring of God; for God is the Father of Spirits: but quoad Corpus, according to his Body he is begotten by Man, who are the Fathers of our Bodies: To say a Man is Mortal quoad Corpus, but Immortal quoad Animam: Such a distinction were needless, if a Man had not both a Body, and a Soul: Or if that Body, and Soul, made not up one manner of Person: Or if the Soul were one Person, as an Angel is, and the Body another.

Heb. 12.

Now the Person of Christ is still every-where spoken of, but as One: One Lord, 1 Cor. 6. And yet of this the Apostle Paul is found to distinguish, that he is Son of God, according to the Spirit; Son of David, according to the Flesh: And you have it again used by Peter, Acts 2. 30. David knowing that of the Fruit of his Loins, according to the Flesh, God would raise up Christ: That Addition [According to the Flesh] needed not, if Christ had not consisted of another Nature besides. Which being distinct, the Oneness, the Unity of this Christ, to whom both are alike attributed, must be found in the Personality: That he that hath both these, is one Person.

Now from hence, go unto Rom. 9. 5. Where you have the same distinction again used, as in manifest Opposition to his Divine Nature; Whose are the Fathers, and of whom as concerning the Flesh, Christ came; who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen. According to the Flesh, he was of David, and the rest of the Fathers; but besides, he had another Nature, which made him Lord over all, God blessed for ever. Which clearly interprets, Rom. 1. 3. Son of God, according to the Spirit of Holiness: That as he was God's Son, so he was God. Or as Rom. 1. Son of God, according to his God-head; even as Son of David according to the Flesh: Yet both making but one Atto, or Person, one Christ.

Now, 4. Because Paul, in that Rom. 1. 2. averred the Prophets for this composition of his Person, Son of David, according to the Flesh; Son of God, according to, or in respect of his God-head. Let us see if we find like, and similar places to these in the Prophets; not to name all that prove him to be God, and Man: but such as are punctually correspondent to these. Jer. 23. 5, 6. 1. Son of David, ver. 5. Behold, the Days come that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch: that is, out of his Loins, a Branch out of that Stock, or Root. Who, 2. Shall be God, and Son of God: (as Rom. 9. 5. Rom. 1. 3.) ver. 6. And this is his Name, whereby he shall be called; Jehovah our Righteousness. Jehovah, from the Name of his Essence, for it is the incommunicable Name of God; and our Righteousness, as being Mediator, and noting forth his Office. And yet Jehovah our Righteousness, rather than the Man our Righteousness; for his being our Righteousness, depends more upon his being Jehovah, than his being a Branch of David; although upon both, as they are conjoined in one Person.

From thence, let us go to Micah 5. 2. Where we shall find, that as Christ hath two Natures met in him, Son of David, Son of God; so two Nativities spoken of, and yet the Person but one. 1. The Ruler shall come forth of Bethlehem: He was born there as Man; and you know it was the City of David, whither Mary, as being of the Seed of David, came to be taxed. So then, still Son of David, according to the Flesh, and born as such in the four thousand Year of the World: But then, as Son of God, His goings forth have been from of old, the Days of Eternity.

Unto this Head I alledg, as the concluding Proof to them foregone, that strange Riddle in Heb. 7. 3. applied unto Christ, set forth from his Type Melchisedec, Without Father, without Mother, without Descent, having neither beginning of Days, nor end of Life, but made like unto the Son of God, abideth a Priest continually. Which being spoken of one and the same Person, Christ, can no otherwise be unfolded than by a differing respect had to the two Natures God and Man, and accordingly of two Nativities. That he was God, and in that respect had a Father, the Evangelist John doth in a special manner inculcate; that he had a Mother, the Story of his Birth, by the other three, doth enform us: That he was born of a Virgin, without a Father, those three Evangelists do tell us. And yet that Paul here should tell us, he was without a Mother, doth necessarily import another kind of Generation of his, wherein there was no Mother concurred, and so another Divine Nature met in this one Person; in respect of which he was as substantially begotten of him without a Mother, as that as Man he had been conceived of the Substance of his Mother, even Son of the Living God.

There are other sorts of Proofs of this great Truth.

As First, The Communication, and Attribution of the same Rights, Privileges, Attributes, Actions, Passions, Infirmities.

BOOK II.

1. All the Rights of the Son of God by Inheritance, given to the Man Jesus; as that, called, Son of God; not as the Angels, Heb. 1. Luke 1. 32. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: And the Lord God shall give unto him the Throne of his Father David, to rule the Nations; raise whom he will; have possession of all Power in Heaven and Earth; to forgive Sins as Man, Mat. 9. 6.

2. The Attributes proper to God, are given to this Man: As, to have been in Heaven before the World was; John 3. 13. & John 17. Glorify me with that Glory I had with thee, afore the World was. Before Abraham was, I am. Whereby what is not true of that Nature alone in it self considered, is yet attributed to that Nature of a Man now: The natural Properties of Man's Nature in him, were never altered: for Finite could never become Infinite; therefore it must necessarily be spoken in a personal respect, as being made one Person with him that is God; Qui, not Qua, that is, spoken of him who is Man, not of him as Man: As when what is proper only to the Soul, is attributed to the whole Man; as if when Paul's Soul was wrapt up into the third Heaven, and his Body remaining on Earth; that of his Body it should have been said, it is now in Heaven, because the Soul it was united to, was there: Like to which is, that Christ should call his Body in the Grave, God's Holy One; His Holy One saw no Corruption; which is spoken of the whole Person, though it was his Body only was capable of Corruption: Or that of John, We saw and handled the Word of Life, 1 John 1. 1. And the Word which was from the beginning: And yet speaks there of their handling his very Body, Feel, if a Spirit have Flesh and Bones, and putting their Fingers into it, so to verify his having been come in the Flesh. On the other hand, è contra, That all the Infirmities of the Humane Nature should be attributed to God, that God should be said to be pierced and crucified; 2 Cor. 12. 10. Therefore I take pleasure in Infirmities, in Reproaches, in Necessities, in Persecutions, in Distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong: compared with vers. 8. I besought the Lord; which is applied to Christ, John 19. 37. And again, another Scripture saith, They shall look on him whom they have pierced. And God to lay down his Life, 1 John 3. 16. Hereby perceive we the Love of God, because he laid down his Life for us; and we ought to lay down our Lives for the Brethren. These Contradictions, all the Wits in the World cannot reconcile, but by acknowledging two Natures in one Person.

3. That the Obedience, yea, Blood-shed of the Man, should be called, the Blood of God, the Life of God, 1 John 3. 16. There it is called the Life of God: And Acts 20. 26. The Blood of God; yea, God's own Blood; and his active Obedience the Righteousness of God, and our Saviour Jesus Christ, 2 Pet. 1. 1. And these things were spoken, not because God was the Efficient of these in him; for so the Spirit is of our Prayers, Rom. 8. yet they are never termed the Spirit's Prayers, or Requests; though made by him in us, and for us, but our Prayers. But all that Obedience of Christ, is called God's: Which difference can never be salved, but that the Man Jesus was one Person with God; not so we: Yea, if that Man had sin'd, (if you could suppose it, as to bring an Argument from it to illustrate this); you may, by the same Law, or Reason, that his Righteousness is now called the Obedience of God, or, the Life of God, infer that it must have been termed the Sin of God: For what the Man did in weakness, is attributed to God: But we are not in this personal manner united to the Spirit, that our Weaknesses should be attributed to him: We sin, yet 'twere Blasphemy to say that our Sins are his; and all because he is not one Person with us, though his Person is united to our Persons.

Neither, 2. when that Bloodshed is called the Blood of God, yea, his own Blood; this is not spoken in respect to his being Possessor and Owner of it, as God is of all the Creatures, The Beasts on a thousand Hills are mine. John 1. He came, εις τα ιδια, to his Own. And so the Blood of Bulls, and Goats, were God's, when sacrificed. But this is not only said to be his Blood, but his own Blood, and his own Life: These are Phrases never spoken of Possession, or of an Owner by Dominion or External Right: We call indeed other things, as Goods, a Man's own, but never call it a Man's own Blood, unless it be naturally ly or personally his own: We say not of a Slave's Body, this is the Body of his Masters, his own Body, because the Phrase, a Man's own Body, in propriety of Speech, is used another way for the Body of a Man's self as of a Person. Or if he give a Slave's Life, or Body, for a Ransom, we never say, nor can say in propriety of Speech, that the Master gave his own Body, his own Blood, as a Ransom: The Phrase so properly notes out personal propriety; that is, of a Person, unto what is a part of ones Person, and that the Blood is that Person's whose own it is called. Yea, though a Father gave a Child to Death, who yet is his Flesh and Blood, yet we hardly say he gave his own Blood; and yet if that might be said, because the same blood is naturally the Fathers: Yet of God, the Father, it could not be said, because Christ's Blood, as a Man, did not flow out of his Father's Blood; for God begets not him as a Man, nor hath he Flesh and Blood to communicate: So that it necessarily notes out, that one that was God, a Person taking up that Man into one Person with himself; that Man's Blood is therefore called God's own Blood, because the Man's, who is one Person with him.

Neither, 3. is it said to be God's own Blood, because shed by God's Will and Appointment; for so the Blood of every Man, that is killed by God's Will, should be so called; and so the Blood of Bulls was God's own Blood in that respect.

Use. We must labour to have our Minds and Faith well establish'd in the true knowledg of the Person of Christ, since it is a Truth of so great moment unto us, and the Mischiefs of erring about it, will be destructive to our Souls.

And the weight or importance, that our Faith be set and kept right in this Point, appears, in that Errors and Mistakes herein, as they have been frequent, so fatal in all Ages, and to all sorts of Men that have had the knowledg or hear-say of our Christ.

1. To the Jews, Christ was a Stumbling-block, 1 Cor. i. 23. both in what his Person should be, as appears John 10. 33. and in other places; as also that his Righteousness alone, through Faith, should be the Righteousness of a Sinner, is in like manner said to be a stumbling-block, Rom. 9. ult. Their Heads were mightily then taken up, and busied, who that Man Jesus should be; and how many various Opinions did the Devils buz into their Minds, to divert them from that which was the Truth, and alone was to save them. Some said he was John the Baptist, some Elias, others Jeremias, or one of the Prophets. And thus it is now at this Day. The Jews, according to the Principles and Phancies of that Age, had those forementioned several Opinions of him, and perhaps many more. And in this Age, according to other Principles which Satan possesseth Men's Brains withal, several Opinions are raised up, what this Christ should be, whilst all are zealous to profess him.

Then again Christ himself foretold it, as a fore-running Sign of the destruction of Jerusalem; That the Jews having rejected him the True Christ, they should be given up to many, φαρισαιομενδαι, false Christs. Now those Days, and the Occurrences thereof, afore Jerusalem's destruction, are made Types of the like to fall out (even in this particular Point) in the Days preceding the end of the World, (whereof Jerusalem's destruction was it self a Type in Christ's Intention in that Chapter): And accordingly these days now. Although Jesus at Jerusalem is more generally acknowledged by almost all that profess Christianity, yet in assigning what and wherein his being Christ consists; herein Men have; and shall run into as many several sorts of Christs, as the Jews had done; One saying, Here is Christ; another, There is Christ; one, that this is Christ; another, this.

And such buddings and sproutings forth of such Errors, began in those first Times, whilst Paul and other Apostles were on Earth, amongst those that pretended to Christian Profession: Witness those more than Hints in several Epistles; which Paul plainly stileth, the preaching of another Christ, than what himself and the other Apostles had preached: What else meaneth that passage, 2 Cor. II. 2, 3, 4. For I am jealous over you with a godly jealousy; for I have espoused you to one Husband, that I may present you as a chaste Virgin unto Christ. But I fear lest by any means, as the Serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your Minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ. For if he that cometh, preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another Spirit, which ye have not received, or another Gospel, which ye have not accepted, ye might well bear with him. That in these Passages he glanceth at some false Teachers that had come in among them, as those words, vers. 4. If he that cometh to you preach, &c. evidently imply, That at least such were then abroad in the World, and have been in other Churches, and were ready to come to theirs, which Paul was afraid of. But more plain and directly, vers. 13, 14, 15. For such are false Apostles, deceitful Workers, transforming themselves into the Apostles of Christ. And no marvel, for Satan himself is transformed into an Angel of Light. Therefore it is no great Thing, if his Ministers also be transformed as the Ministers of Righteousness, whose end shall be according to their Works. And these Expressions do import, that the Doctrines which these had vented concerning Christ, were framed and raised up to so high an appearance of Spiritualness, as were not only apt to take with Believers, and deceive them, as vers. 3. which made Paul so jealous over them, vers. 2. but further, they seemed so Angelical and Seraphick, that in these, if ever in any (his Depths, as they are called) Satan had shewed his Depths, and had play'd the Counterfeit of an Angel of Light, and transformed himself thereinto in his Inventions of them. And when yet, as Paul plainly tells them, that it was but a Counterfeit Christ, another Jesus than he had preached, another Spirit, and another Gospel. So as the Christ which these false Apostles had drest up, had so high an appearance of Christ's Spirit and Gospel, as seemed to vie with that true Jesus, &c. which the Apostles taught for Glory and Spiritual Excellencies. And this also, that new form of an Oath, which the Apostle useth upon that coherence, vers. 10. a new one framed to this occasion, as the Truth of Christ is in me, says he, &c. which he speaks to import, that in those other Teachers there was a false Christ, and not the True. And to affect the Corinthians the more, and arm them with wariness against, and shew them the danger of entertaining any new Doctrines about Christ's Person, he presenteth and enforceth the moment hereof, under the similitude of Marriage, I am jealous over you with godly Jealousie, (the subject which Jealousie is encreased about, is fear of what may rise to the breach of the Marriage-Knot) lest you should entertain the embraces of another; and so it follows, For I have espoused you to one Husband, and I would present you a chaste Virgin to him; that is, to Christ, to whom as yet you are but espoused. And it is as if he had said, There is but one Spiritual Husband, and there can be but one, your only Husband Christ. It is not as in the Case of other Marriages, if you have not such a Man, you may have another as good, yea perhaps a better. But if you mistake here in obtaining this one only-one for your Husband, you are undone. There can be no greater Errors committed in Marriage, than Error Personæ, a mistake of the Person you are to marry; and when thinking you marry such a Man, you marry another. Yea, and if after Marriage to one Husband, you should be deceived, as many Women (as Stories and Experience shew) have been, when their Husbands have been long absent and out of sight; others that have had some resemblance of their true Husband, or some privy Mark of him, have put themselves upon their Wives, and they entertained their Embraces; How fatal a thing is this? But I fear, says he, vers. 3. lest by any means, as the Serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty; so your Minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ. The Devil hath a special malice at the Person of Christ, of all other Truths concerning him; and to put this high abuse upon him, specially goes about to deceive his Spouse in his Person, to misrepresent him and deform him; yea, and if possibly he can effect it, put this trick upon him, and great imposture on her, that she should take another Jesus for him; the Devil's Jesus instead of God's. And to effect this of all other, he will use his utmost subtilty. And having been himself an Angel of Light, he will transform himself in pretended Manifestations, and Incomes, and Ravishments of Spirit, that shall accompany the Entertainment and Embraces of his Christ. He will use all means (if by any means, says Paul) to second, credit, and help forward this new Match.

And

And one great occasion of their aptness to be deceived, is the simplicity that is in the Person of our Christ; not only in his humane Nature, a Carpenter's Son, a crucified Man, a Christ in Flesh, but that when besides for his Divine Nature, they think they have heard and known already well enough what God's Nature is, by what is said of him in the Old Testament, and so in the Father, and to know but the same over again in Christ; this is no great addition to their knowledg. And that no other thing can be affirmed of him, but that he is God, and that to think that he should have but the same simple uncompounded Nature that God hath, and not be distinct from God therein. They think they are but as wise as they were in this, and so are apt to listen after such Representations of a Christ, as shew him to be some Divine Spirit that comes out of God, differing from God, which they fancy will afford matter of some new and manifold Wisdom, besides that knowledg they have of God by other means. And thus the simplicity of his Person (as they esteem this) is apt to cause them to listen after some other Story of him. Whereas the Glories and Wisdom which ariseth from that Union of God and Man in one Person, is such, as transcends all other Imaginations, though never so raised with either Angels, Men, or Devils; have or could for ever invent concerning him.

And the Deceits and Trains that Satan lays herein, he compares to those wherewith the Serpent deceived Eve, Lest as the Serpent beguiled Eve, &c. He put it into their Heads, that there was an higher Knowledg they might attain, than in that keeping to God's Law, they had already, or could attain thereby: And further, that themselves should be Gods; so seducing them from God. And thus here, there is not only a Promise of an higher and more spiritual Knowledg; than that simple Story of Christ God-Man affords. But that themselves should be Christs. And they frame such a Story of Christ, as should serve to perswade this, and their Capacity of this advance. For a Christ in Flesh, which this Man Jesus is, say they, you shall have a Christ in Spirit. For a Christ without you, that is, God substantially, you shall have, every one of you, a Christ within you; yea, and if need be, they will not stick to affirm, your selves shall be God substantially; and not be united only to God and Christ, but so united, as to exist in the form of God, and to be one and the same with God. Such or the like Workings of this Mystery of Iniquity, deforming and perverting of the true Christ into another, you find in Paul's Time amongst the Corinthians; or of which from false Teachers then gone abroad, they were in danger of.

Some thing answerable, or like to this, the Church at Colossus also were in danger of. Those Philosophical Teachers, which, Chap. 2. 8. he gives them warning of; Beware lest any Man spoil you through Philosophy, and vain Deceit; after the Tradition of Men, after the Rudiments of the World, and not after Christ. Their Doctrines perverted not only the purity of the Worship of the Gospel, but were intended to the misrepresenting the Person of Christ, as appears by many Characters; Both, 1. in that in the very next words, For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. He gives them a perfect definition or description of the Person of Christ, as in himself considered, and in his fulness to us, vers. 10. And ye are compleat in him, which is the Head of all Principality and Power. And this in a direct opposition, (as the coherence shews) unto their Philosophical Christ, which they for Wisdom and Excellency would needs compare with the Apostle's Christ. And, 2. in opposition to their Counterfeit Christ, it is; that he also sets out his Christ in all his Personal Excellencies and Fulness, the like no where in all his Epistles, Chap. 1. vers. 15, 16, 17, 18. And then also of his Gospel, which is the Revelation of him, vers. 23, 26, 27, to the end. And as it is the Mystery of God the Father, and of Christ, Chap. 2. 2. In whom are hid all Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledg. Exhorting, that as they had received Christ, so they would walk in him, vers. 6. as in Matter of Order, so for Faith. For unto both those that Exhortation is directed; as appears by the coherence with vers. 5. but especially in their Faith about the Person of Christ, with which he therefore begins, vers. 7. Stablisbed in the Faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving, being thankful to God, he had revealed such a Christ, his Christ to them; For they could not have a better, or another. And then follow those words; Beware lest any Man spoil you through

BOOK II.

Philosophy, after the Tradition of Men, Rudiments of the World, and not after Christ. Some of the Teachers of those Times, finding in Philosophers (then in credit) in Plato, Orpheus, Hesiod, Pythagoras, and in the Jewish Traditions, many Divine Things about λόγος, the Word, and of Emanations, and Genealogies, and Descents from God, as Irenæus shews, of him from God, and of the the Creatures from him, they dress up a Christ, and a Divinity, with those Philosophical Clothes, and Colours, and Paint, which the Apostle says, was not after Christ; as you say a false Picture of a Man, is not after the Man, being not taken from, nor resembling his Person, but another clean. They were descriptions of him, not taken from the Life or Truth that was in him. Whom therefore Paul sets out in the substance of him; In him dwells all the fulness of the God-head bodily, or (you shall give me leave to translate it) personally. And so it was another Christ. And therefore, chap. 3. vers. 19. these are said not to hold the Head, that is, Him, vers. 10. he had stiled the Head of all Principalities and Powers; and chap. 1. 18. the Head of the Body of his Church, they having clean perverted him to another Christ. And as it was then, so it is now. Men have gone about to bring Paul's, the Scripture-Christ, to Plato's; and as such, would obtrude him on the Saints.

Thus it was in Paul's Time: But John lived longer, after all the Apostles, and saw these Seeds and Buddings then sown, come to a greater ripeness, and open and more gross discovery, from Blade to Ear; and writing that first Epistle to the Christian Jews in a more special manner, he seeing what Christ had foretold should fall out, about the Time of Jerusalem's Destruction, both afore and after it to be fulfilled; doth therefore, chap. 2. vers. 18. give this warning; My Brethren, it is the last hour, (because the last period of Time afore that fatal overthrow of that Nation) for even now there are many Antichrists, (as our Lord had foretold) whereby we know that it is the last hour; we seeing it thus fulfilled. And, vers. 22. Who is a Lyar, but he that denieth that Jesus is, ὁ ἀέιστος, The Christ, the sole and only Christ. And he is an Antichrist that denies the Father and the Son, the Distinction of these Two, and the Personalities. And whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father. And, 1 John 4. 1. Many false Prophets are gone out into the World. And what was the great false point of odds, which they endeavoured to sow and diffuse, vers. 3. They confessed not that Jesus Christ was come in the Flesh; and that Christ was God: and therefore the Catholick Faith of all true Believers, in opposition to those Errors about his Person, he gives us, chap. 5. 20. And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an Understanding, that we may know him that is True: and we are in him that is True, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and Eternal Life. They had other Doctrines about their Christs whom they held forth, which were a full denial of all this. You have the like in his second Epistle, vers. 7. 9. And to obviate those Errors about the Person of Christ, was it that he wrote those Epistles, and his Gospel of John, after all the other Evangelists and Epistles written; exhorting them to hold fast to that Christ whom they had heard and known from the beginning, as himself and the Holy Apostles had set him forth, chap. 1. vers. 1, 2, 3. That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our Eyes, which we have looked upon, and our Hands have handled of the Word of Life; (For the Life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and shew unto you that eternal Life which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us). That which we have seen and heard, declare we unto you. And vers. 24. of chap. 2. Let that therefore abide in you, which ye have heard from the beginning: If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, ye shall also continue in the Son, and in the Father. The like, Epist. 2. vers. 9. declaring those that fell into such Errors, and continued in them, to be such Apostates as never had Truth of Grace; Chap. 2. vers. 19. They went out from us, but they were not of us: for if they had been of us, they would, no doubt, have continued with us: but they went out, that they might be made manifest, that they were not all of us. And hints how some of them so sinned therein, as that withal they sinned the Sin unto Death, never to be recovered; Chap. 5. vers. 16, 17. (though not all those words, vers. 16. do imply); If any Man see his Brother sin a Sin which is not unto Death, he shall ask, and he shall give him Life

Life for them that sin not unto Death. There is a Sin unto Death; I do not say that he shall pray for it. All Unrighteousness is Sin, and there is a Sin not unto Death. And of all he judgeth them such, as, without Repentance, the Saints should have no communion with, Epist. 2. vers. 9, 10, 11. Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the Doctrine of Christ, hath not God: he that abideth in the Doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you, and bring not this Doctrine, receive him not into your House, neither bid him God-speed: for he that biddeth him God-speed, is partaker of his evil Deeds. Of this Consequence is true Faith in this Doctrine.

Now, as it was then, so it is now. Those Times, and the Occurrences which then fell out (foretold by Christ) among Jews and Christians afore Jerusalem's Destruction, being Types of what should now fall out in the last Days afore the end of the World: and we have yet but the buddings of what perhaps will grow up to greater Ripeness and Spreadings, as then they also did.

Multitudes of those that are Orthodox in their Opinions, or speculative Judgments about the Person of Christ, yet perish, because they know not, apprehend not this true Christ, as he is in himself really and spiritually; They know not the Truth as it is in Jesus, as Ephes. 4. 20, 21. the Apostle speaks. And this hath and doth fall out amongst all that live in the Church. But others begin to err about the very Notion of his Person, coining other Christs by diminishing from, or adding unto the Person of him, as they would represent him to us. And this is as easy as 'tis dangerous, even as it was an easie thing to make another Gospel, and to entertain it, as in the Galatian's Example appears, Gal. 1. 6. I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the Grace of Christ, unto another Gospel. And in that forementioned, 2 Cor. 11. 15. the Apostle speaks the like of preaching another Christ, considering Men's aptness to err herein; It is no great thing (says he) though great in respect of the moment of it, yet easy and soon done. And that is the Apostle's scope in that Speech. And again, as some Churches then embraced another Gospel, (as the Galatians) so upon other Churches the Devil endeavoured to obtrude another Christ.

And he is soon (in the Doctrine about him) made another Christ, either by taking away from him, or adding to him.

1. By taking away from him, as if you take away his Godhead, this alters the Person quite, as taking away the reasonable Soul from the Body of a Man, takes instantly away the Man, and leaves a brute Beast in his room. It turns him into the Carcass of a Christ, let him be set forth in words, never so gorgeously or gloriously, the substance of his Person is stoln away. Or else,

2. By adding to him: For if the joyning Works to Christ's Righteousness, in matter of Justification, made another Gospel, as the Epistle to the Galatians shews; Then surely adding the Persons of all the Saints to the individual one Lord, one Husband, Christ, and that they all should be Christ as well as he, equal with him, their Union with God the same that he is, this is to un-Christ him.

Of the Glories, and Royalties, that belong unto Jesus Christ, considered as God-Man in one Person; (besides what accrued to him from his Performance of the Work of our Redemption:) and which were appointed for him, by his Father, from all Eternity. The apparent Manifestation of the Divine Attributes in the Person of Jesus Christ God-Man. The Designation of him in God's first Decrees, as the End for whom all the Creatures were made. The part that he bore as God-Man in the Creation, as by him all Things were Created. The Appointment of him by God, to be one Lord over all, under him one God: and to be in a more special respect the Head of the Elect; on whom they were to hold the Tenure of all the Blessings bestowed on them, above the Dues of Creation.

1 Cor. 8. 6. One Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him.

C H A P. I.

A Preface giving a short Scheme, or Draught of the ensuing Discourse. An Exposition of Col. 1. from vers. 15. to 19. all that is spoken there of Christ, must be ascribed to him, as God-Man.

WE have had the Person of our Lord set out unto us, What, and who he is.

This Text in more general Words, leads us next unto the Consideration of the Glory, and Royalties of this great Person; who as God-Man in one Person, is Sovereign Lord over all: And also, who hath 1. An Universal Influence and Efficacy into all Things; Through whom are all Things. 2. Specially cially into the Salvation of the Elect, And we by him. Neither doth the Text attribute these to him, as he is singly that second Person, the Son of God: But as he is constituted Lord by his Father. And therefore necessarily as considered the Son of God, personally united to that Man Jesus; as hath been set out. And of him thus considered, I desire, may be understood all that follows, as that which is the proper Subject thereof.

It hath been no small Diminution of Jesus Christ (as he is God-Man); That Men's Minds having been intent upon him as a Redeemer from Sin, and Wrath; (they being Sinners, the Consideration and Burthen of that hath lain nearest them, and prest upon their Spirits,) and that having once given them Ease, they have in a manner only given him the Glory thereof. Whereas there is in other respects as great a Revenue of Glory, from many other Contributions, due to him; even from whatever God himself can be supposed to challenge Glory from.

The Subject of these following Sections, is, the Glory of his Person, and the Relation thereof, simply considered and abstracted from the work of redeeming us Men from Sins and Wrath.

Ere I come to the Particulars, I shall in this first Chapter, which is an Introduction to the rest, do two Things.

First, Give the Sum, and Scheme of the Particulars, that thus shew forth the Glory of his Person.

Secondly, Single out one eminent and comprehensive Scripture, viz. Col. I. 15. which gives a general Bottom unto all the Heads of that Scheme or Draught.

First, The Series of the Heads themselves.

The First Head is,

The Native Personal Glories, which attend, and are due to that Human Nature united Personally to the Son of God; besides those that arise to him as a Redeemer.

Which are of two sorts.

First, Inherent in him, consisting of such Attributes, as accompany the Union of that Human Nature to God's Son, and do make up an Image of the God-head in him; besides his being the Essential Image of God as second Person: Such, as is to be found in no meer Creature.

The Second are incommunicable Royalties, Adherent, or appertaining to him; and yet no less due to him than the other. As,

1. That he as Man, or rather as God-man, should have in the Decrees, and Purposes of the most High, the just Honour to be the eldest, or First-born therein, in Priority of Order, before all other Men, or Angels, that were to be meer Creatures.

2. In those Decrees to be made, the End, or final Cause of all other things, and this also as his due; That all other things that were to be created, should be so disposed of, and contrived in God's Eternal Counsel, as might tend to his Glory, even as well as to the Fathers.

Unto these two, I add that which is the Result of both, especially of the first.

3. That by this designed Union of the Son of God to our Nature, and in the Person of the Son so united, and that simply and abstractly considered; God hath, and doth make the highest Manifestation, and Communication of himself, such as by no created Ways or Means could ever have been attained; (which is the Result of his being the Image of the Invisible God.) And this Manifestation (we now speak of) is, both that which is made unto the Elect, in him, and by him, and for his Sake; as also that one which is transcendently made in, and unto that Human Nature himself, who is one of us, Flesh of our Flesh, &c. So as by this Personal Union with the Man Jesus, God hath attained his chiefest, highest, and most substantial Ends, which by all or any means else could not have been so attained.

The

The second Head proceeds on such Glories, as are Relative unto the Works, and Counsels of God, touching the Things that were to be made, and brought forth into being by him; and the dependence they all have upon his being God-Man. Wherein is shewn, how that his Son's being made, and undertaking to be made Man, he withal became; 1. The beginning of the Creation of God: the Upholder of the whole Creation in his Father's Purposes: Yea, and virtually was the Creator, and Maker thereof, as so considered. 2. The Upholder, and Governour of them, when thus created. And, 3. All other of his Works (besides Redemption) are committed to him.

A third Head (which I shall treat of in another Discourse, viz. of Christ the Mediator;) is more special, namely, his glorious Efficaciousness, to the accomplishment of the Blessedness, and Salvation of God's Elect, both Men and Angels, out of the common Lump, and Mass of the whole Creation. Which contains in it,

1. His being an Head of Union to Angels and Men, but more especially of us, Elect-Men unto God, to raise them up as Creatures unto a Supernatural Union with God, above their Law of Creation.

2. Unto us Men, yet more especially in his being a Redeemer, over and above his being an Head unto us, to deliver us from Sin, and the Curse, by his (himself) being made both for us.

The Coronis, or top-Stone set upon this Pillar and Column of Glory, which is thus erected, and is a building unto our Lord Christ, is comprehensively contained in, Eph. 1. 10. That in the Dispensation of the fulness of Time, he might gather together all things in Christ, both which are in Heaven, and which are on Earth, even in him. And it is the whole and full Birth, the All of God's everlasting Purposes and Decrees, and so the whole of whatsoever shall be accomplished, touching the Person of Christ, the Salvation of the Elect both Angels, and Men; and the Restitution of all the whole Creation by Christ. As,

1. That God's utmost Design, was to unite a select Company of his Creatures to him, to be one with himself.

2. That to that end, he in his Decrees contrived it so, that the Person of Christ should consist, and be made up of all things, all sorts of things in Heaven, and Earth: and so made a meet Medium of such an Union.

3. That he hath made up that Body, or Company of his Elect that were to be thus united to himself by Christ, in a correspondent Anti-posture to that of his Person, made up out of all things in Heaven and Earth; and consisting (take the whole lump of them amongst them) of all sorts of things, that are to be found in either, both among Angels, or Men: even A Special all things, out of all the General all things.

4. That he hath made his Son an Head of Union, which is common both to Angels, and Men; and over and above a Redeemer, or Mediator of Redemption of us Men: So gathering them all into one a second Time in him.

5. That the whole Creation (but those in Hell, which are exempted out of that Catalogue,) have by an overflow, a Participation (take them in their Capacity) of this great Union, and are restored to a glorious Liberty therewith. Even so be it; O blessed, and thrice glorious Lord Jesus, to whom be Glory for ever. Amen.

I now at length must quit the Conduct of this Scripture, which I have hitherto, all along, taken for my Guide, and bottom: namely, 1 Cor. 8.6. And it having thus happily led me to that General, which hath these particulars in the Womb thereof; I shall take my leave of it, and betake my self unto another Scripture, as adequate to this, and which is its next Design and Model; setting forth the Heads fore-mentioned, almost in the same Order and Method I have proposed them in. This Scripture, I shall in this Section first suit in the whole of it, to the Particulars of this Draught.

Col. 1. vers. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19. Who is the Image of the Invisible God, the First-born of every Creature. For by him were all things created, that are in Heaven, and that are in Earth, visible and invisible; whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers; all things were created by him, and for him. And he is before all things; and by him all things consist. And he is the Head of the Body, the Church; who is the beginning, the First-born from the dead: that in all Things he might have the prebeminence. For it pleased the Father that in him should all Fulness dwell.

The Apostle from the 15th verse to the 23d, sets forth Jesus Christ, in all those rich and glorious Excellencies revealed in the Gospel; and his Scope, and Intention, designed therein (as likewise in the whole Epistle) is, (as appears by the second Chapter) to divert, and take off the Colossians Minds, from going after Jewish Rites; which he calls Rudiments of the World, &c. Col. 2. 8. and which some would have introduced into their Worship: and likewise, from vain and fruitless Speculations, brought into their Faith and Doctrine, but grounded on Philosophy, Carnal Reason, Traditions of Men, &c. vers. 8. which having a shew of Wisdom in them, did so carry away their Minds, as, (to use his own words in the 18th Verse) They were well nigh spoiled or robbed, (as were our fore-Fathers, by the like Subtilties of the School-men, and the ostentation of pompous Rites and Ceremonies) of these rich and never to be exhausted Treasures, of all Wisdom and Knowledg, which lay hid in Christ (vers. 3.) but unregarded by them, by reason of the other.

The Apostle therefore, knowing that the super-eminent Excellencies of Christ (if once discovered) would withdraw their Thoughts from gazing after such vain (though gawdy) Speculations of Science, falsely so called, and how in him they were compleat, (as himself speaks, Col. 2. 10.) and therefore needed not to go out of him, nor to be beholden to any other Knowledg for Direction in matters of Faith, and Order: seeing that in him were hid all Treasures of Knowledg and Wisdom. He therefore brings in this King of Glory among them, clothed in all his Royalties; That look, as when the King comes in State into the Presence Chamber, though the Eyes of the By-standers were before never so intent in beholding the curious Pictures, and rich Hangings about the Room; yet when the King comes in, they all turn their Eyes on him, diverting them from other Objects: So likewise would it be with these Colossians, when they should once see Christ appear in his Glory, in which the Apostle purposely sets him forth in these Verses, (the like whereof he no where doth in all his Epistles.)

So then, you see already this Scripture in the Scope of it, to be pertinent to what we are about to demonstrate: It agrees with my Design in this, That it sets forth Christ's Excellencies in all their Fulness. Let us next see how it will correspond with the Particulars.

The Words (adding the 19th and 20th Verses to them) do methodically set out those eminent particular Heads, which I have proposed.

First, The personal Excellencies, (which as was said in that Draught) are of two sorts.

1. Native and Inherent in his Person, considered as God-Man in these Words; [That he is the Image of the invisible God.] Which, as he mentions first, so it is the Chief. The meaning is, That whereas the Attributes and Excellencies that are in the God-head, are incomprehensible, or (to use the Apostle's Word) invisible, by any Creature. That of all those Perfections in the God-head, Christ is the compleat Image, in a transcendent way above what Angels and Men are; and so, as they are in him, they are incommunicable unto any meer Creature; He is the Image of the invisible God, to that end to make them visible to us. So vers. 15. Who is the Image of the invisible God, the First-born of every Creature.

2. There

2. There are made extrinsecal Royalties, incommunicable to any meer Creature, and infinitely transcending all their Priviledges: Whereof the Text instanteth in two. 1. That He is the first begotten of every Creature, vers. 13. And vers. 17. That He is before all Things. 2. The End or final Cause for whom, and whose Glory they were all made; for this, vers. 16. All things were created for him. That as he is the first-begotten of every Creature, that is, the eldest, before all the rest, and by Inheritance their Lord and King, and the sole Heir of Heaven and Earth; and so a King over them, with such a preeminency of Title and Prerogative, as all other Kings do want: for they are neither the Makers of their Subjects, nor are their Subjects made for them. But he is such a King, as is the Maker of all these his Subjects, yea their Upholder, by whom all consist: And therefore by a just Right their final Cause and End, All things were created by him, and for him.

2. Head. The Universal Influence he hath into all God's Works. 1. As Creator of them. 2. As Upholder, vers. 16, 17. For by him were all things created that are in Heaven, and that are in Earth, visible, and invisible, whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers: all things were created by him, and for him. And he is before all things, and by him all things consist.

And these Glories or Excellencies of his, That all were created by him and for him, are amplified and illustrated by the Apostle's particular specifying, the Prime, the Chief, the upper Rank, of both Worlds, Heaven and Earth; in Heaven are [Thrones and Dominions] that is, Angels, and Arch-Angels, the Nobles of that higher House; then in Earth, Principalities and Powers, Kings and Rulers, whom you so much adore. All these were made in him, by him, and for him: and in him they all consist.

The third Head. That he is the Head of his Church, that precious Body, of an elect and chosen Generation, by God, out of all the rest; 1 Pet. 2. 5. Ye also as lively Stones, are built up a spiritual House, an holy Priesthood, to offer up spiritual Sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. Vers. 9. But ye are a chosen Generation, a Royal Priesthood, an holy Nation, a peculiar People; that ye should shew forth the Praises of him, who hath called you out of Darknes into his marvellous Light. And the First-Fruits of the Creation, Jam. 1. 18. And thus vers. 18. of Col. 1. He is the Head of the Body, the Church: And that in two respects, 1. Of their Union to God, which was God's Primitive Design towards them, intended in those Words [who is the Beginning.] That is, the first Foundation of their Union with God: and hereon the first Corner-Stone of their Happiness was laid. And 2. Of their Restauration from out of Sin and Death, to bring them into that first designed Happiness, which is the great intendment of that Union, and this in those Words; [The First-born from the Dead.] Which is added, because at, and upon the Resurrection of him, and of his Members, of the Sons of Men, who were dead, and fallen into Sin, &c. Then begins the Demonstration of what as an Head he was ordained to be to all his Church, in the Glory that shall follow. Then appears and reigns for ever, that relation of his being an Head of Union, in its full and originally intended Splendor, and that Glory (by virtue thereof) which was originally and primarily ordained by God, then takes place, and the full Efficacy thereof not till then. When Christ arose, then said God of him, This Day have I begotten thee. Acts 13. 33. God hath fulfilled the same unto us their Children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second Psalm, Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten thee. Now, and not till now, thou appearest and lookest like that Son of mine, whom I rejoyced in from everlasting; and now first thou hast recovered that primitive Glory thou hadst in Decree and Repute with me, as God-Man, afore the World was; and which as the First-born of every Creature, thou wert arrayed with: A Glory only due to him, that was the only, and substantially begotten Son of God. The like to this holds good of his Elect Members of Mankind, when fully recovered, and restored from Death and the Grave, by him first as a Redeemer, now risen again, which Death is the last part of their Humiliation and Debasing for Sin.

BOOK III.

And yet, as if the Apostle having enumerated these (though the chief) of Jesus Christ's Prerogatives; yet because not all Particulars, but had given these few of all the rest for Instance sake: therefore he sums up all whatever in these two Totals, or Generals.

1. That in all he might have the Preheminence, or the Primacy: The meaning thereof is, That God ordered him to be such an one, as might not only have [all] manner of Priviledges, that any in this or the other World, do or may be supposed to excel in; but also with a Preheminence, a Primacy in all, above what any one hath in any thing whereof he may boast.

And, 2. That it pleased the Father, That in him should all Fulness dwell, vers. 19. Here is again another [All,] and a [Fulness] added to that [All]; an [All] for Parts, [a Fulness] for Degrees; a transcendency in all, above all.

All these mentioned, are over and besides that great and eminent work and Service, of reconciling us Men, as Sinners, to God: Which is,

The Fourth Head. That over and besides these Preheminencies, he is the Reconciler and Redeemer, by the Blood of his Cross, vers. 20. And (having made Peace through the Blood of his Cross) by him to reconcile all things unto himself, by him, I say, whether they be things in Earth, or things in Heaven. So as that preheminence of things which is in the close of the 18th Verse, as also that Fulness, vers. 19. is distinct from the work of Redemption and Reconciliation, which appears not only because in all this glorious description of him, from vers. 15. the Apostle mentions not the work of Redemption or Reconciliation, as making up any of this Fulness, which in the 19th Verse he intends: But further, he makes that a Surplusage, or rather another Fulness over and above this of Reconciliation, here rehearsed: So the Coherence carries it. For it pleased the Father, that all Fulness should dwell in him, and by him to reconcile, &c. vers. 20. As being a work besides and superadded unto all his other Fulness ordained to be in him.

As a Premise to all that follows, I have one thing to clear, which is necessary to found my way for the handling the foresaid Particulars; Namely,

That all this Fulness, and the Particulars thereof mentioned in this Text, are attributed to Christ, as God-Man; either as actually united, or to be united in one Person, and not only, or simply considered as God, or Second Person.

For the better entertaining of this Assertion, and the taking off Prejudices, it is meet that the Reader should know, how that holy and greatest Light of the Reformed Churches, Calvin, in his Comment upon this Scripture, interpreting the very first Passage, which leads on all the rest; namely, That he is the Image of the Invisible God, speaks thus in his Comment thereon. He shews hereby, says he, that it is he alone by whom God, that is otherwise invisible, is manifested to us, according to that, No Man hath seen God at any time: The only Begotten that is in the Bosom of the Father, he hath manifested him to us. I know (says he) how the Ancients are wont to expound this; who because they had a Controversy with the Arrians (who held Christ a meer Creature) do urge this place for Christ's being of the same Essence or Nature with the Father; (namely, simply as Second Person and God.) But in the mean time, they omitted what was the chief things in the Words; namely, how the Father hath exhibited, or exposed himself, as in Christ, to be known by us. And again, says he, The Name (or Title) of Image, is not spoken of the Essence, but hath a Relation unto us. So as therefore, Christ is the Image of God, because he makes, as it were, God visible unto us. And yet withal, (so he adds) For this is it also inferred, That Christ is of the same Essence with the Father; (namely, as Second Person.) For he could not truly (or to the Life) represent God to us, (namely, as God-Man); unless he were the essential Word of God: it being not compatible to any Creature, to represent God as here is intended.

A wretched Papist, to cast odium upon Calvin, wrote a Treatise against him, to prove him, out of his own Writings, unsound, in that great Article of our Faith, the Trinity, and about the God-head of the Person of Christ, entitling his Book, Calvin Judaizing, or turned Jew, and heaping up about 38 Scriptures; which, as he says, Calvin perverted to such a meaning. He alledgeth his Comment on this, in the last place, against him. Whereof Pareus in his Opuscula, printed 1595, undertook undertook the Defence, and faith, both Interpretations, according to Calvin's own Expressions, will stand together: Which I refer the Reader to. Now observe Calvin's Sense, how they may stand together; namely, That Christ (here) as God-Man, is chiefly or directly stiled the Image of the invisible God, in the Apostle's Scope: Yet so, as withal it argues, and from this inferred, must strongly, yea it must necessarily be supposed as the Foundation of the other, That he is so the Image of God transcendently above all Creatures (as here) must necessarily also be the essential Image of God: And this I would in this place preadvise the Reader once for all (though perhaps I shall be enforced necessarily to inculcate it) to be the genuine drift of all those other Interpretations, of the like, attributed to Christ; which in the ensuing Discourses, in opening of this Place, and of Joh. 1. 1, 2, &c. I shall pursue. And I desire the candid Reader so to understand me.

In the mean time, for the rest of the Particulars here said of Christ, that in what Sense this of Christ's being the Image of God, is interpreted by Calvin; I shall with like freeness assert of them all, That they are spoken of him as God-Man. This being but the first of this Jury, and the rest enumerated, therefore answers to, and are of the same sort and suit. And if this be so interpreted, then let us see, if all the rest will not give up themselves thereto. How this will be made good of all the Particulars that follow, I shall shew when I come to insist on each apart. I shall now collect general Reasons, for the carrying on this Analogy, and Proportion of Interpretation through the whole, out of those two Totals, or Summary Propositions, wherewith he shuts up all the Particulars enumerated (namely); That in all things he might have the Preheminence. For it pleased the Father, that in him should all Fulness dwell. This General Demonstration I give, by laying these two things together, out of them two.

1. That all, and every one of these Particulars, before rehearsed, are those, or some of those Glories, which as so many several peices do make up this his Preheminence in all things, and which put together with the rest, are parts of that Fulness, which is said to dwell in him.

And, 2. That the Apostle makes all this Fulness (whereof these are the parts) to reside in Christ, by an act of God's good Pleasure. And so by a Design, Decree or Purpose of God, by an Act of his Will: For he says, It pleased the Father that all this Fulness, spoken of, should dwell in him [ἐυδόκασε;] it was ex beneplacito, from the good Pleasure of God. Thus Eph. 1.9. (where the same Word is used) the Apostle calls it the Mystery of his Will, μετὰ τῷ ἐυδελῶν, after, or according to his good Pleasure, which he had purposed in himself.

Now therefore, hence I infer of all these parts and pieces, that they must be understood of him as God-Man. However that other Sense of theirs, attributed to him as Second Person, must also come in, as that which is necessarily the substratum, and Foundation thereof, and so originally and primarily true of him as such, at least the most of them. Yet so, as directly and primaria intentione, they are intended of the Son of God made Man. For if they had been spoken of him singly; as Second Person, this would not have been said of them, that they are part of that Fulness, which it pleased the Father, by an Act of his Will, and according to the Purpose of his good Pleasure should dwell in him, for so they are natural to Christ, and not at all subjected to God's Will.

For Example, If these two Speeches in vers. 15. He is the Image of the Invisible God, and the First-born of every Creature, should have been meant, the first of those his Essential Attributes of his God-head; whereby Christ is God of God, and so the Image of his Father: This is not a Fulness that dwells in him according to God's good Pleasure, or from God's Will; for then Christ should not be God. And that other Speech, if it should be taken as meant of that Eternal Generation of him, as Second Person, from everlasting; then this General that follows, That it pleased the Father, that all this Fulness, and these Preheminencies (whereof these Prerogatives here mentioned, and this Particular is a part) should dwell in him; would not have been so expressed. For Christ's eternal Generation was an Act of God's Nature, not of God's Will, or by a Decree of his Pleasure. He indeed begets us of his own Will, (as James speaks, Jam. 1. 18.) but not so his Son, as Second Person; for him he begets naturally.

BOOK III.

So also that Speech, vers. 17. He is before all things, if meant of his Subsistence, as Second Person, by that Eternal Generation of his, it could not then be made an Act of God's good Will, being it was natural, and due unto him. But now, take all these spoken of Christ, as ordained to be God-Man, to have all these Fulnesses meet in a Human Nature, ordained to be assumed into Union with the Second Person: So indeed, all this might indeed be the Object of God's Decree, and an Act of his good Pleasure, in this respect, that it was in God's good Pleasure, whether to have decreed him or any thing else, or no: And in Truth, it was the highest Act of Grace and God's good Pleasure, that ever was bestowed on any Creature, to ordain that Man at all unto that Union.

Yet still, let all this be so understood, that though these things be meant directly of Christ, as God-Man, as the Son of God dwelling in an Human Nature; yet so, as they are by Inference as great and strong Convictions as any other, That this Person, that is united to our Nature, is in his Person originally the essential Image: And therefore, so the Image of God (as Calvin observes this Place holds him forth) as no Creature is. That so, he is the Creator, End of all Things, or else he never had raised up that Human Nature he assumed, unto those Royalties.

Thus much, to shew how this Scripture is a ground for all those Heads and Particulars, whereof I gave you the Draught.

I next, make entrance upon the Heads themselves, to enlarge upon them.

C H A P. I I.

The personal native Glories and Royalties which belong to the Son of God, as dwelling in our Nature. How the Divine Attributes are Inherent, and shine forth in that Man Jesus so united to the Son of God. In what sense He is the Image of the Invisible God. How he is the Wisdom, and the Power of God. His Humane Nature does not possess those Perfections in that high degree, as they are Attributes in the Divine Nature, and so Infinite; but he hath them in a nearer resemblance, than any mere Creature is capable of. In what respects he also has Independency and Sovereignty. It is upon the Union of the Humane Nature with the Son of God, that it is invested with his high Priviledg.

THe words of the Text explained in the former Chapter, which sets out the personal native Glories, and Excellencies, and Royalties, appertaining to the Son of God, as dwelling in our Nature; and which especially shew, how the Divine Attributes shine forth in the Man Jesus Christ, so united to the Son of God, and which I shall in particular apply to that purpose, are in the 15th, 16, 17th Verses of Col. 2. Who is the Image of the Invisible God, the first-born of every Creature. All Things were created by him, and for him. And he is before all Things.

The first Particular is founded on those words, The Image of the Invisible God. Which the Apostle sets, first, as the greatest Excellency, and the Foundation, and the Key of Interpretation to all the rest that follow.

The resolution of which words, is into this Assertion, That in that Man Jesus Christ, by virtue of his Union with the Godhead, there is inherent a fulness of all Divine Perfections, which make up an Image of the Attributes of the Godhead, in so transcendent a way of Excellency and Eminency, as is incompatible and incommunicable to any meer Creature remaining such.

I. For the interpretation of the Apostle's Intent in those words; There is a double Image of God in Christ; The one essential, as he is second Person; the other Manifestative, as the Glory of God shines in the Face or Person of Jesus Christ, as Man; thus Grotius on the words, and Pareus in his Vindication of Calvin, who reckons up many Witnesses, as Ambrose, Martyr, Melancthon, Ursin, &c. for it (of which by and by); And the same distinction, to the same purpose, is acknowledged to be comprehended in his being called $\delta \lambda \acute{o} \gamma \omicron \varsigma$, the Word, (as in the first Chapter of John's Gospel) connotating both the essential Word of God, or Image to God himself, and also the manifestative Word, as representing him to us as made Man.

BOOK III.

If the Question be, Which of these two is principally and more directly intended in these words? I answer, the latter, and that for two Reasons.

I. Because he is not simply termed the Image of God, but with this addition, of the Invisible God; which does necessarily imply, his being such an Image, as relates unto us; that is, that he is such an Image as makes the Godhead, which is in it self invisible or incomprehensible, to be manifest and visible: For that is the end of an Image, namely, to hold forth a thing to make it apparent to the view, which otherwise is not seen.

Then, 2. The Godhead and Person of Christ, considered simply as Second Person, is in himself as invisible as the Godhead, or Person of the Father. The meaning thereof is this, That in Christ, as Man, united to the Second Person, there is a Resultance, an edition of the Godhead, in all the Perfections of it; which I may call so many Divine Attributes of Christ, as God-man, (even as we usually call the other the Divine Attributes of God) which do make up an Image of the Godhead; which in Heb. 1. 3. is called, not only the Image of God, but (with a difference from all Creatures) the express Image, or engraven Image, that is such as no Creatures are. The Image of God's Attributes in Angels and Men, are but such as the Light of Tapers in respect of the Sun, of which that is but a dull and faint Resemblance. But Christ is the Shine, the brightness of his Father's Glory. Even as the Beams of the Sun are to the Body of the Sun; as, Lumen est Imago lucis, so is Christ God's Image. And this similitude the Apostle there useth, and applies it to him as he was Man, namely, as he was appointed Heir of all. Which Phrase, as he is meerly Second Person, might not be used of him, for so he is Hæres Natus, not Constitutus, not appointed Heir, but begotten. Now as the Rays or Beams of the Sun, are but the Emissions and Effects of the Sun it self; and so far inferior to the substantial glorious Body of it: So this Image, or Shine of the Godhead's Glory in the Manhood of Christ, is but the Reluctance, the Effect, and so inferior to that Essential Glory, which as Second Person he partakes of in common with his Father. Thus Beza, Cameron, and others, have understood it.

II. For the Thing it self, and to explain what this Image of the Divine Attributes in Christ as God-Man is. It is not that bare Communication of Properties; so as only that which is said of the Godhead, is predicated of the Manhood: Or that the Manhood instrumentally useth the Attributes of the Godhead, and so is omniscient with the Omniscency of the Divine Nature, and omnipotent with his Omnipotency, (as the Lutherans fondly do dream). But it is such a System, or Fulness of Perfections really inherent and appertaining unto the Manhood, by virtue of that its Union with the Divine Nature; as although infinitely coming short of the Attributes that are essential to the Godhead, yet is the compleatest Image of them, and such as no meer Creature is capable of; and so is as truly incommunicable unto a creature, (whether it be Man or Angel) as those Attributes of the Godhead are to this Humanity of Christ it self, though so united. This in general may be made out of that Parenthesis, in John 1. 14. (And we beheld his Glory, the Glory as the only begotten Son of God). By Glory, the Evangelist means especially those glorious Perfections that dwell in his Person, as Holiness, Wisdom, &c. for it follows, full of Grace and Truth; though withal including those Signs of his Power, as Sparkles of his Divinity, that dwelt in that Flesh, and also referring to that Glory they saw in him at his transfiguration. The Essential Glory of his Godhead, it could not be, for they openly saw it, (as the word signifies) and therefore it is not meant of the Glory of the Godhead it self, which is here said to be invisible; and there it is also said of it too, that that is such which no Man hath seen, vers. 18. Now the Glory of these his Perfections shining in that Humane Nature; was such as was peculiar to him, and transcendently above what could be in any meer Creature, and such as carried its own Evidence and Testimonial with it, that they were such Perfections as were proper and peculiar to the only begotten of God; therefore it is added, the Glory, as of the only begotten of God; that is, such as could be in none but him that was God, and the natural Son of God. That as the Shine of the Sun carries its own Evidence with it, and it is the Glory, as of the Sun when it appears; appears; so transcendently, that the likeness of it cannot be made by all the Fire and Lights in the World, if put together; such was this Glory here spoken of.

To give two or three Instances of some of these Perfections peculiarly, and incommunicably dwelling in the Humane Nature of Christ; As,

1. Wisdom. 2. Power. 3. Independency and Sovereignty.

The reason why I instance in these, is, because I find them all put together by Christ himself.

1. There is a Wisdom in Christ's Humane Nature, which is so high an imitation of the Attribute of Wisdom in God, as no Creature, nor all Creatures could reach to, or have attained; and therefore they, though they be called Wise, yet not Wisdom, as Christ, God-Man is called, 1 Cor. 1. 24. But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the Power of God, and the [Wisdom] of God. And the reason why so transcendent a Wisdom is in him as Man, which is proper to him, and of which all Creatures must fall short, is given Col. 2. 3. For in Christ are hid all the Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledge: not objectively only, as in the knowledge of whom (if we could attain to it) we might find all Treasures; but subjectively also, as whose Knowledge in himself inherent contains in it all Treasures of Wisdom: For Christ could not be objectively all Wisdom unto us, if he had not first all Wisdom subjectively in himself. And therefore it is, v. 9. For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. Now the reason of all this fulness of Wisdom in Christ, is there given, That the fulness of the Godhead dwells bodily (or personally) in him, which is alone proper to him. And therefore also surely these Treasures of Wisdom are also meant of Inherent Knowledge residing in his Humane Nature as the Godhead doth.

Now the Treasures of Wisdom in Christ's Humane Nature, are not of that extent and richness, that the Wisdom that dwells in God himself is of; for to make Christ Omniscient as God is, were to make his Humane Nature God. Nor is it as the Lutherans express it, that his Humane Nature is Omniscient with the Omniscience of the Divine Nature; but yet, in such a transcendent fulness, as is Omniscientia similitudinaria, a similitudinary Omniscience comparatively to what is in the Creatures, (as Zanchy from the Schoolmen calls it) and so is an Image (and that in a transcendent way) of God's Omniscience. Not that his Humane Nature knows all that God knows; for God, per simplicem intelligentiam, by the Ideas of all he can make, knows all that his Power can do: And so his Knowledge extends it self, not only to all that is made or to be done, but to all that he can make or do, which is an Infinity. But yet there is a similitudinary Omniscience in Christ's Humane Nature, in that, it now glorified, knows all that God hath done, or means to do: and so it is of as large extent, for the Objects of it, as that knowledge in God himself is in that respect. Which Knowledge in God, the Schoolmen call Scientia Visionis; and the Scripture, God's Foreknowledge. All that God's Will hath decreed to be done (even all his Counsels) Christ's Humane Nature knows, and had, by virtue of its Union with the Divine, a right to know, both things past, present, and to come. And so it is in a sense a kind of Omniscience; and is a glory as of the only begotten Son of God, incommunicable unto any other.

2. The same holds in his Power. The Power of the Humane Nature is not equal with God's, as that he can do all that God can do; for God can make infinite many things, which yet he never made, nor will ever make; yet there is a similitudinary Omnipotency in Christ's Humane Nature; both in that he can do whatsoever he will, (his Will pitching on the same Design with God's in every Thing) and in that all that God will ever pitch upon to be done, he is an Instrument of. All was done, either in the virtue of him before he took our Nature, or hath been since his being glorified. His Fiat, his [I will] (as himself speaks John 17. 24.) must be set to every thing ere it be done. For all Power is committed to him, both in Heaven and Earth, Matth. 28. 18. All the Businesses of the World run through his Hands and Head. And therefore he is called the Power of God (in the fore-cited place, 1 Cor. 1. 24.) and the Arm of the Lord, Isa. 53. 1. And this is a kind of Omnipotency, that all that God means to do, he should be the Instrument of. Both these Instances we find together in one Scripture delivered, and unto the very same sense and purpose I have driven concerning them, John 5. 18. The Jews had quarrelled with Christ (he having said vers. 17. My Father worketh hitherto, and I work) both for calling God his Father, in so peculiar a manner from other Men, and also for that in that Speech, he should join himself so in Commission with God in all his Works of Providence, to say, Ego & Pater meus, I and my Father; so making himself equal with God, when-as he was a Man; that is, to have an equal and joint hand in all together with God. Hereupon Christ justifies this Speech of his, and shews how, although he were a Man, yet such a Man, as being one in Person with the Son of God, this was true of him, without any dishonour at all unto God. First, He acknowledgeth indeed, that this pre-eminence his Father hath, that he is the first Mover in all; The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do; yet so, as what-ever the Father doth, the Son doth also. For the Father loves the Son, and sheweth him all things that himself doth. Here we have,

1. That what-ever God doth, or means to do, the Son hath a hand in it.

2. That the Son knows all that is done by his Father. Therefore it is both said, What he sees the Father do, and that the Father sheweth him all things that himself doth, John 5. 19, 20. Here is both the Omniscieny we speak of, and the Omnipotency, in the terms we stated it, as respecting all God's Works, ad extra, even all that ever is to be done.

And this, 3. in an incommunicable way to any mere Creature; for so the Jews that made the Objection, understood it. That he (as they thought) being but a mere Man, as others, should join himself with God in all his Works, and so make himself in a sort equal to God. And this also is inferr'd from that which follows; That all this is given the Son of Man, That he might be honoured, even as the Father is honoured, John 3. 23. And so with such an honour as no mere Creature is capable of.

And this, 4. in a similitudinary way, as the word (ὁμοίως) likewise, or in like manner (vers. 19.) also imports.

And, 5. All this Christ speaks of himself as Son of Man, though it be true of him too (and that in a more transcendent sense) as he is God, a Second Person. And it is one of the greatest Keys to John's Gospel, that multitudes of such Speeches are spoken of him; both, first, and originally, as he is God, and Second Person, and then as God-Man, or as he is Christ, that is, the Son of God dwelling in Man; for Christ speaks pertinently to the thing that stumbled them. They thought much, that he being (in view) but a Man, should arrogate this to himself, to have a hand in all God's Works. Now this he answers and justifies himself in.

And further, that he speaks these things of himself as Man, as well as simply as Second Person, appears in the other Instance which he gives to confirm this, That the Father hath committed all Judgment unto the Son, vers. 22. And if in Judgment he hath this joint or equal hand, (as they call it) thence he argues it, He might also have it in other Works: Now this being spoken in a way of difference from his Father, that his Father judgeth no Man, but hath committed all Judgment to the Son. This must needs be meant of him as God-Man, for the meaning hereof is, That the Father judgeth not audibly, visibly, and in view, as Judges use to do: He takes not on him the Person of a Judg, to act that part; but thus, or so hath committed all unto his Son, and therefore as a Man. And this also the very committing or resigning the Judgment unto him, implies, it is a making of it over to him, and a giving him Commission to do it; which must not be said of Christ, as God. And vers. 23. it is added, He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father that sent him. Now Christ only as God-Man was sent.

But to put all out of doubt, that he speaks of himself in this Discourse, as he is Son of Man united to God, he himself, in the closure of all, doth expressly so explain it, that so he might be understood to speak fully contradictory to their Exception. Thus, vers. 27. The Father hath given the Son Authority to execute Judgment also [because he is the Son of Man]. First, He sets out this Prerogative with an Emphasis, as the Particle (also) doth imply, as being the highest Dignity and Power of all other, to have Judgment solely committed to him, to execute it so visibly, as God, and in God's stead, and in that respect more than what he had said, in that Speech they so excepted against; I and my Father work hitherto. I (namely) virtually and hiddenly, do co-operate and work together with him. And then, secondly, to explain how it is committed to him, he adds, because he is the Son of Man, (so it follows) the Particle [ὅτι] because being, (as some Interpreters carry it) put for [καὶ ὅτι] prout, as such (namely, as he is Son of Man) that even as such, all Judgment was committed unto him, and all these former Things true of him. And so, that word [ὅτι] not only renders the Cause of it, but explains how, and under what nature, all Judgment was to him committed. But how-ever, if it imports the Reason of it, it much more includes, that as he was the Son of Man, this Judgment was committed to him, (which to prove, is the Thing I aim at).

I shall now give another Instance of a third Attribute in Christ, which is also such an Image of what is God, as is incommunicable unto any mere Creature; and that is Independency and Sovereignty; which I therefore add, because I find it mentioned by Christ with these in this place. This Sovereign Independency, is one of the chiefest Flowers in that Crown of his Glory, (as in Kings also it is, whereby they differ from Subjects) that none have, Potestatem Vitæ & Necis, Power of Life and Death over them. The Creatures have a Life wholly dependent, as subsisting by the Power of God; Heb. 1. 3. Who being the brightness of his Glory, and the express Image of his Person, and upholding all Things by the Word of his Power, when he had by himself purged our Sins, sat down on the right Hand of the Majesty on High. And that so as at pleasure; God might annihilate them; and yet in so doing, rob them of nothing, which they can lay a just claim unto as their own: So that the tenure of their being is, Ad Voluntatem Domini, At the Will of the Lord of Heaven and Earth. But it is not thus with Christ's Humane Nature; now it is assumed into Union with the Second Person: but, it being together with that Union invested with the Royal Prerogatives of the Person, with whom it is one; it hath, Independenciam Similitudinariam, an Independency like unto God's; such as is communicable to no Creature: therefore, says Christ, vers. 26. As the Father hath Life in himself, so he hath given the Son to have Life in himself. I have learn'd, from divers Interpreters of the Gospel of John, and from much comparing the Speeches of Christ together, to interpret that, and multitudes of other the like, as well of him as God-Man, as of him also as Second Person; and this, and other, could not be true of him as God-Man, unless first as he is Second Person. And that which evidenceth more particularly this Speech to be understood of him as God-Man, is, that it is said to be given him. For this we are sure of, That the Man-hood obtained this Prerogative by a free Act of Grace, and Gift, God had a freedom to ordain, or never to ordain that Nature, or any other; unto so high a Dignity. Therefore, 1 Pet. 1. 20. Who verily was fore-ordained before the Foundation of the World, but was manifest in these last Times for you. Christ is said to be fore-ordained, as well as the Elect; and the Grace shewn in his Election was greater, than in all ours; by how much the Priviledges he was ordained unto, were greater. But when once this Nature is united to the Second Person, and become the Man God's fellow; then he is instantly invested with this indeposable Prerogative, to have Life in himself, and not to hold it by Gift, though so at first obtained: And so he hath an Independency, similitudinary to that of his Father's, as these words in John 5.26. ([As] the Father hath Life Life in himself; [So] hath he given to the Son to have Life in himself) do shew. He can now say that which no Creature can say ; and that which were blasphemy in their Mouths, is now not so in his : for he holds not his Life, ad voluntatem Domini ; but as the Second Person hath a natural Right to his subsistence, so now hath this Man, being made one Person with him : and so by virtue of that Union, hath the Personal Prerogatives of the Son of God made his ; yet so, as still this Independency of the Humane Nature riseth not to that absoluteness, and infiniteness, that is in God himself (as was in the like manner said of the former) ; for this Manhood subsists not by the Power of it self, but by the Power of the God-head dwelling therein. But God subsists meerly, simply, and absolutely, of himself. Yet there is this similitude in it, unto that which is in God ; that this Man can say, This Power which I subsist by, is my own, by virtue of his Relation unto the Second Person ; I being the Son of God, and one in Person with him, what is his, is mine, not Originally, or Essentially, but by Gift ; yet so, as there I have now an Independent Right to be and to subsist in that Second Person for ever, and can never be deposed. Indeed it was a free Act of Grace in God at first : But in doing of it, God did a Wonder in the World, of all, the greatest. For he sets up an Independent Creature, a Creature back'd with such a Right to his Being, that now himself cannot pull him down, nor dissolve that Union again. And what a glorious Image of God's Independency is this ?

BOOK III.

I might shew the like also in Holiness ; That there is that transcendency of Holiness also in him the Man, that is not in all the Creatures put together ; and so in that respect also, he is the Image of the Invisible God. If it could be supposed that any meer Creature could have as much habitual Holiness as the Humane Nature hath, (which were too bold a supposition) yet notwithstanding there is a Holiness over and above that habitual Grace in him, there is a Relative Holiness, that casts the Shine, the Superlative Glory on that Habitual. And the Stamp thereof that is upon this Holiness, is better than all the Coin. It is the Holiness of a Man united to God, and who is God, and this makes it acceptable. There is a Relative Holiness that follows from the Hypostatical Union, that gives all the worth to what he did, and to all the Grace that is in himself ; and this no Creature is capable of. And this was that that made him able to satisfy. And this is the Holiness that God takes the great Contentment in, and could never have been satisfied out of it ; and by reason of this, his Righteousness may be imputed to Sinners, which the Righteousness of a meer Creature could not be ; it is the Holiness of God, as his Blood is said to be the Blood of God.

I might shew the like in all other Attributes, and it is a noble Subject to spend pains upon, to set forth, and cut out every Limb of this vast Image of all God's Attributes that are in Christ, meerly upon his Personal Union. I have limb'd out only these two or three parts of it, ut ex pede ; that by the like proportion we might infer the vastness of all the rest.

C H A P. III.

The Honour, and Royalties, that appertain unto Christ God-Man, as ordained such in God's first Decrees, to be the final Cause, or End of the whole Creation, and Works of God. In what Sense he is the First-born of every Creature. The Reasons why it is not to be understood in respect of his Eternal Generation, as Son of God. It is spoken of him in Consideration of a Dignity, or Birth-right, which the Man Jesus Christ, united with the Second Person in the Trinity, has above all other Creatures. He is also the First-born, in that he was first in order intended in the Eternal Purposes of God. He is the final Cause, or End, for which all things were created. And upon the presupposition of his being decreed to be God-Man, it belonged to him, as his due, to be the universal End for whom all Things should be made: This was an high Prerogative of which no meer Creature could be capable.

I Am now in the next Place, to describe, in a second Branch of this Head, certain other Royalties or Prerogatives, incommunicable also to any Creature, which belong to Christ God-Man, whereof some are mentioned in the Text; as that, He is the First-born of every Creature, vers. 15. and that he is before all things, vers. 17. And that All things are for him, vers. 16. Which eminently imply two things. 1. That he was the first and prime Birth in God's Decree: And, 2. Also holds the Honour of being the End or final Cause of all. These I put together; because they more properly belong to this Head; and the latter serves to explain and illustrate the former: and still let it be taken along; that they are meant of him; not simply considered as Second Person; but as God-Man.

To begin with the first. The First-born of every Creature.

For the Explanation of the Import of it, I will,

1. Shew, Negatively, what is not only to be understood.

And, 2. Then, Positively, open the full extent of it, and shew, that what I have declared, is intended thereby.

1. It is not spoken of him simply as Second Person only, as some Interpreters have understood: So, as that his Eternal Generation, as Son of God, should be only intended. Concerning which Assertion, let me first make this Apology; That whereas this, and the like Scriptures, are alledged by our Divines, to prove that Christ is God, as Second Person; this Interpretation that I am about to give, doth not overthrow it, but establish it: For these Things could not have been said of him, had he not been God. And there are other Scriptures, that do more plainly and directly establish that, fully enough: but yet so, here I take it, that Eternal Generation, is not meant directly, or immediately, though by Consequence it is argued, and most strongly. And there are these two Reasons for this.

Christ

1. Because in Scripture Phrase, he is not in respect to that his Eternal Generation, called Primogenitus, the First-begotten, but Unigenitus, the Only-begotten. But this here is another Phrase; it is the First-begotten.

2. If that had been directly intended, he would not have called him the First-begotten, in Comparison unto Creatures; but here he saith the First-born of every Creature: Every Creature having had a Birth in the Apostle's Intention, as well as he. He is said in Job, to be the Father of the Snow, and of the Ice, Job 38. 28, 29. But here, first, to make Christ, simply as Second Person considered, and his Eternal Generation, as the Only-begotten Son, to be meant here; and then to compare and range him, in respect of that Generation, with the Birth of all Creatures else, and that he is the first-begotten of every Creature in that Sense; this had not been suitable. For as between him, as so considered, and them, there is no Comparison can be made: so nor between his Generation, and theirs. His Title, and Heraldry, would have been emblazoned, from the order he bears with those of his own Rank, the other Persons, Father, and Holy-Ghost; among whom to have been called the Second of those glorious Persons, is worthy of him, as such: But to say, The First-born of every Creature, and mean his Eternal Generation; of which the Prophet says, Who hath known it? Prov. 30. 4. The very Comparison of this high Birth of his, with the metaphorical Generation (so I must call it, when attributed to the most of Creatures inanimate, &c.) of every ordinary Creature, this had dishonoured him too much. I must say of this, what the Apostle of Melchisedec's Generation, Heb. 7. 6. His Descent (or Pedigree) is not counted among them, nor theirs to be named with his.

That that Name, which Agur in the Proverbs, Ch. 30. 4. so adores, as not to be known by us, and equals it, and compares it with God's only; What is his Name? (speaking of God) and what his Sons Name? If thou canst tell. Should be set in the Alpha, the first Name in the Alphabet, and Catalogue of Creatures; no, it is altioris ordinis, of another, and an higher Rank and Kind than so. This hath caused me to think, that the First-begotten of every Creature, it is spoken of him, as he is admitted into the Catalogue, or Society of the Creatures, as his Fellows, (as I may so speak) into their Number, or, as he is become one of them. Or, take him as he is the Son of God, ordained to Human Nature, and then to have his Name stand highest in the Tables, amongst all the rest of the Creatures; and to be called the First-begotten of them, it is no way a disparagement to him; for he is become as one of them, even a Creature among them, a Man, and so of the same kind or rank with other Creatures. Again, that which yet heightens, and further presents the Incongruity of it, is, that it is not said here, that he was the First-born of many Brethren, but of every Creature. To have said it in respect of those his many Brethren, they being only Sons though adopted, and he the Natural, had held a better Equipage; but 'tis far lower, even of every Creature. And when he is said to be the First-born of many Brethren; as in Rom. 8. 29. For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the Image of his Son, that he might be the First-born among many Brethren. 'Tis spoken of him in respect of Predestination, not of his Eternal Generation, as you may see there. And so much for the Negative, in what Sense it is not directly to be understood.

Therefore, II. To shew Positively, in what respect this Primacy and Primogeniture; and this in Comparison with every Creature, is attributed to him.

1. It is spoken of him in respect of a Dignity, and a Birth-right, that this God-Man hath at that Instant; he is admitted amongst the Creatures (as by being ordained to Human Nature he was admitted): That though he thereby became of their Rank, yet he must be the chief, and have the Birth-right. In Psal. 89. 27. You shall find the Birth-right (and that as spoken of Christ) is put for Dignity and and Excellency. Also I will make him my First-born, (and what is meant by First-born, is explained in the next Words,) higher than the Kings of the Earth. It noteth out therefore an Excellency and a Dignity, a heighth, and a being Prince of the Kings of the Earth, as Rev. 1. 5. So a Prince of all the Creatures.

2. But still there must needs be more in it, for in the Scripture, the Dignity, the Birth-right, was directly founded upon being the First-born. So Christ is not only said to be the First-born, because he was made higher than they all, but because he was born first, and therefore higher and greater than all. 2 Chron. 21. 3. He gave the Kingdom to Jehoram, because he was First-born, the first brought forth, the opening of the Womb. So that now the Dignity that Christ hath, it is because he is the First-born, some way or other of every Creature. Therefore, as it was said, it cannot be meant of his Eternal Generation, as Second Person. And if there were no more, I might add this against it, That it were infinitely incongruous, (to speak after the manner of Men) to say that the Creatures lay in the same Womb, or came out of the same Loins, that the Son of God, as Second Person, lay in, and came out of. Therefore, there must be some other Womb in which Christ and the Creatures all lay, and in respect thereunto he is the First-begotten: and that Womb is the Eternal Decrees and Purposes of God; which is the common Womb, both of Jesus Christ, as he is God-Man, and of all Creatures else. For that he was God-Man by Predestination is clear, 1 Pet. 1. 20. Who verily was fore-ordained before the Foundation of the World; and being so, he was in this, as in all other respects, to have a Primacy and Preheminence, and so to be in a true, and just Sense, the First-begotten in that Womb. And thus Rom. 8. 29. a Primogeniture, or a being the First-born, is attributed to him in respect of Predestination. For the Apostle in comparing the Rank or Order, wherein we were placed in respect of him, says, That we were predestinated to be conformed to his Image, therefore he was in some respect predestinated. That (as it follows) he might be the First-born among many Brethren; and so he, as the Eldest, came forth first: That as in all Births, according to the Order of Nature, the Head comes forth before the Body: so did Christ, the Head of the Body, the Church, (as vers. 18. he is called.) And therefore, Eph. 1. 4. We are said to be elected in Christ. Now then, there is this further addition, which heightens the reason of it, That if he be the First-born of the First-born of the Creatures, (for so the Saints are called, Heb. 12. 23. To the general Assembly and Church of the First-born, which are written in Heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the Spirits of just Men, made perfect:) then he must necessarily be the First-born of all other Creatures, who were all ordained both for them and him.

And this may be one true sense of that which follows, vers. 17. That he is, πρὸ πάντων, before all Things, namely, in respect of the Order of God's Intention. God, though viewing and ordaining all his Works, ad extra, at once, yet therein chiefly aimed at Christ, as under himself, the End and Perfection of all. Which also hath been understood by many to be the true meaning of that uttered by Christ himself (in the Proverbs) under the Name of Wisdom, Prov. 8. 22. The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his Way, before his Works of Old. It is a place much and often cited, as also this Text by them that have been of this Opinion, (which have not been a few in several Ages).

And, 1. God's Ways, are his Works, ad extra, wherein he purposed to go forth and manifest himself towards Creatures. Now in the beginning of these Ways, and the first thoughts of them, did God possess Christ God-Man in his Fore-knowledg, as the richest Treasure of all his Glory to be manifested in his Creation, without which he would not have proceeded to any other Work, or have walk'd forth in any Creature-way, but rested in that blessed Society of the Three without them. And it is not said, In the beginning of his Way, but it is also further added, that he possessed him before his Works of Old. Which is the same that is here said, He is before all Things; as also in saying, The first-begotten of every Creature. And for further illustration's sake, it is added, vers. 23. I was set up from Everlasting; ere ever the Earth was. The Phrase (I was set up) will less permit us to understand it of that eternal Generation of his, as he is Second Person, than in those other Expressions that have been here insisted on ; for that was an Act of God's Will : but that other, by a natural Act of a mysterious Generation.

I am now approaching to that second Royalty mentioned in this Branch, Christ's being also the final Cause or End for whom all Things were made. And this is such a Respect, as the Creatures were not capable of one towards another. Which Point is conjunct with this of his Priority in God's Decrees, and indeed is the greatest Confirmation and Proof of it.

All acknowledge a Priority, though not of one Act of God's Decrees before another in a successive order as in respect of the Decrees themselves, (such as in our Purposes and Thoughts there is through our Imperfection) yet in respect of the Objects of God's Decrees compared together among themselves. So one thing decreed by God, is ordered by his Will to have a reference unto, or dependence upon another thing, though at the same time decreed. And so in that respect there comes to be attributed, even to the Acts of God's Will, as terminated upon such Objects. That he intended one thing first and chiefly, and another subordinately unto it. And accordingly the Scripture speaks of God's Decrees condescending therein to the Conceptions of Men. And though in Men there are successive Acts in their Purposes and Resolutions, because Men are not wise enough, in the same instant in which they set up an End, to see and take in all the Means that shall conduce to the attaining of it ; or if they were, yet they are not able, by the same Act, to judg which is the best and most convenient : yet God, through the perfection of his Knowledge, can do this, and so make but one Act of all, both one and the other. Yet still, what is in Man imperfectly, is to be look'd at as an Image of God's proceedings herein, in a transcendent way of Perfection. And so we may truly attribute the same Thing unto God's Will in his Decrees, as to the substance of them in that perfect way of his, that we do unto Man in his that is imperfect. And hence God is said to work by Counsel, Ephes. 1. 11. In whom also we have obtained an Inheritance, being predestinated according to the Purposes of him who worketh all Things after the Counsel of his own Will. It is in Assimilation or Likeness unto what is in Man : Because as an Act of Knowledge and Deliberation is said to be first in us, ere an Act of Will or Determination what to do : so in God himself, an Act of Knowledge, or of the full Cognizance of what is to be done, is (after the manner of Men) supposed to be before an Act of his Will. And answerably in his Will, the Intention of the End is said to be before the Intention of the Means. And this Priority of the End afore the Means, is taken for granted to have been in God's Decrees : for if God had not thus proceeded, by ordaining the Means unto the End, he could not by us have been conceived to work with that perfection of Wisdom which must be in him. For Wisdom always considers, first, an End, then fit Means tending to that End.

Yet still this is but what is common to all other Things that are ordained to be as Ends by God, unto which other Things are subordinated ; and in this Scale there is a kind of Priority allowed one Creature to have had in God's Decrees, in respect of others its fellow-Creatures. As the Sun was intended for the enlightning of the World, and the Generation and Conservation of all things therein, by its heat and influence ; and yet both it and the World were intended for Man, and Man and all the World for the Elect, as the Apostle says, 1 Cor. 3. ult. All Things are yours, and you are Christ's, and Christ is God's.

Now all the Creatures fall infinitely short of that Royalty which I hence attribute to Christ, God-Man, when I affirm him to have been the final Cause or End of all Things. And look how far his Prerogative herein is found to exceed that which may be supposed might have been any of theirs ; by so much is thereby confirmed (according to the ground even now laid) a priority as transcendent that he verily holdeth in God's Decrees.

Now he holdeth a preheminance in this infinitely above all Creatures, and therefore even in this his being the End of all also.

And this Preheminence is held forth in these Particulars.

1. In that he was set up as an Universal End of the whole Creation of God, For whom all Things (says the Text) were created, vers. 16. And this is not to be predicated, either of Angels or Men. God vouchsafed neither of them that Honour, as to be the general and universal End of all Things. This Priority, is a similitudinary Prerogative of what God alone is, as one God, so that his Christ should be one Lord, 1 Cor. 8. 6. over all Things, and but one. And herein is Christ so the Image of God, as no Creature is; as in respect of Dominion over this visible World, Man is said to be the Image of God, (Gen. 1. 27, 28.) as his Type.

2. And further this Universality of Endship, (as I may call it) he holds with a peculiar Transcendency, which no Creature is capable of: for it ariseth from his Distance, and absolute Sovereignty (which if he be ordained to subsist in an Human Nature, that Nature must be raised unto) which he hath over all the Creatures. His Person decreed to subsist in Man's Nature, was considered by God; in his Decrees, to be of that worth and distance above the Creatures, that their very Being and Existing, was to become absolutely and simply his Propriety. He was to be absolute Lord of their Being, even as God is. But thus were not Man, or any of the Sons of Men, to the Being of Angels, nor Angels of Men; though as Superior in Rank the one may serve the other: But yet thus Men, and Angels are subordinated to Christ as their End. This we have in Heb. 2. Where, by this Argument, the Apostle proveth that that Man, spoken of by David, Psal. 8. could be none but the Man, Christ Jesus, nor any meer Creature; because he was (as set forth by David) advanced to an higher Prerogative than the Angels, in that God hath put all things in subjection under him, yea, under his Feet, (as the Phrase there is): So, as he hath left nothing that is not put under him, vers. 8. He therefore is not only the Universal End of all Things (if such, we could suppose any one meer Creature might have been constituted by God,) but he is the absolute Sovereign End; so as they are under his Feet, as Vassals, whose whole Being is for him, and at his dispose: Of which Prerogative no meer Creature is capable. And even in this Prerogative Sense, he is the Universal End of all: For God hath exempted nothing from Subjection to him, (as the Apostle there saith); Elect Angels are not thus the End of Elect Men; nor Elect Men of Elect Angels. He hath not put into subjection to the Angels the World to come, (says the same Apostle in the same Place, vers. 5.) Christ has an absolute and entire Lordship. And therefore he must needs be first in Intention, and so before all Things: as of no other Thing or Creature it can be said.

3. Add to this, That suppose him at all decreed to be God-Man, and united to a Creature, it was with all his due, to be ordained by God the End of all Things decreed together with him. And this is and was an incommunicable Royalty to any meer Creature, nor must be said, nor could have been true of any of them, but proper to him alone. And this makes a third Priority or Precedency in Endship, as also in God's Decrees.

As touching this third and last Head, I shall do two things further.

1. I must explain and declare the Ground of it. And,
2. Shew the Glory of this Priority, above what any Creature hath been capable of.

For the Explanation of it.

1. It is true, That the Second Person his subsisting in an Human Nature, or his being God-Man, dependeth wholly upon the Ordination of God, and that in respect of his being Second Person singly considered; or in respect of that Human Nature that was united to him. 1. It cannot be said to have been a natural due to the Second Person to be made Man: And, 2. Much less was it a due to that Nature of Man assumed, to be made one Person with the Son of God.

2. It is also as true, That though God would have thus decreed his Son to be God-Man; yet it was not necessary that God should make any Creatures at all, and so not necessary that he should have ordained to make any other Fellow-Creatures with him besides himself. And so it was not necessary in this Sense, that they should have been for him as their End: But God might for ever have rested in the communicating himself unto that Man, God's Fellow only; (and it had been a sufficient Motive to him, and a fulness of Satisfaction had thereby arisen unto him alone therein, to see and behold and enjoy the Image of his own Perfections in a Creature united to his Son.) And therein he had shewn his own Greatness, and Superiority above this his Christ, in this; that himself was the Supreme End of him, but he actually the End of nothing else, that was ordained to be made for him.

But, 3. That which I further affirm is this, That supposing God would decree him to be God-Man, and to subsist in an Human Nature; and likewise, withal would ordain Multitudes of other Things, Angels and Men together (as de factio God did); that then it becomes the necessary due of this Christ, and that as God-Man, so decreed, to be set up by God in those his Decrees, as the End of all those Things. Yea, and further, that God should so Mould, and Cast the whole Frame of his Designs, concerning his Creation, intended as that all should tend to him as their End, as well as to God's own Glory. So, that whereas God, in that which is called his simple Fore-Knowledge, or Counsel, (whereby he had the view of Christ, and of all Things else he did decree afore him, before that his Will did determine them to be) must needs foresee, that if he predestinated this Second Person to be a Man, and one Person with him at all, and other Things together with him (and it is hard to think that he should scape his first view, of all Things else); That then this did become that Man's Due, and the necessary Consequent of that Union with God's Son, that he should be so far respected and preferred by God, in his Decrees, as to have the Place of a Supreme End of all and every Thing; and accordingly, that God should cast his Decrees for Christ's Glory as well as for his own: Which indeed is his own, even to honour the Son as the Father is honoured, John 5. 23. Hence as we read Heb. 1. 2. that Christ is said to be appointed the Heir of all Things. So at the 4th Verse, we also read, That he was made so much better than the Angels, as he hath by Inheritance obtained a more excellent Name than they. In the first Speech the Apostle calls him the appointed Heir, because that Man should be assumed to that Personal Union, and Sonship; upon which this Inheritance befel him: this was by a free Decree and Ordination of God. But yet withal, the 4th Verse tells us, that yet, He obtained it by Inheritance. And if he were appointed Heir, this was due to the very Appointment. And by such a Right as no Creature, no not the Angels are capable of; and yet still it is founded, take him as God-Man, that he is made Lord and Christ, as Peter in the Acts speaks, Acts 2. 36. Therefore let all the House of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ. Yet so, as if he be appointed God's Son, as Man, at all, this is his due and his natural Inheritance: and this other also follows hereupon in God's Appointments and Ordinations; that all Things should be so Cast and Moulded as to be for him. For the Heir is the End of the Inheritance, as well as he is the Lord of it. And so must Christ be of all the Creatures appointed and co-ordained with him, and for him, to be thus, both the appointed Heir, and yet the natural Heir (as God-Man) is no more Contradiction, than to say of him, as Man, that he was both God's natural Son, as being one Person with the natural Son of God, and yet to have been predestinated unto that Sonship; because he was predestinated to that Union, upon which this followed. So that he was to be the End of all, this was a free Act of God's Appointment, because his being united to his Son was by a free Act of his Will also. And yet, for him to be made the End of all Things, was a natural necessary Consequent of God's decreeing him unto that Union. And God fore-saw that this would, and must be the necessary Consequent of it, and yet freely ordained him to it. And therefore, this, and all such natural and necessary Prerogatives that follow upon it, and which could not have been withheld or cut off, are yet all of them said to be by Appointment.

And indeed, others say the same Thing: For when it is affirmed, that Christ needed not have merited any Glory to himself, they ground it upon this: Because, by Virtue of the Hypostatical Union, all Glory is his natural Due, and a necessary Consequent of it. Which surely is a Truth, though it may not be made use of, to exclude another Title unto this his own Glory, namely that of Purchase: For it is no Dishonour to him to have two Claims.

And

And if it be said, That you must suppose him first, to be ordained God-Man, by a Decree, ere this the Consequent of it could become his Due: And therefore, in the Act of God's decreeing him, and all Things with him: (which decreeing him, and them, was done by one single and entire Act.) This was not look'd at by God as a natural Due to him.

The Answer is, That by that simple fore-Knowledg, which is antecedent to his Decrees, whereby he knows all Things that his Will determines, afore he doth determine them; he must needs know this would, and must be the Consequent of his decreeing Christ to be God-Man, if ever he did it; and so he predestinating upon such a Knowledg, he intended him so to be, even in that Act of decreeing him and all Things, and shaped these his Decrees accordingly.

Now for the second Thing propounded; namely, the Eminency of this his Priority, as thus stated, that it is such a Prerogative, as no meer Creature could be capable of; Besides what hath been said and observed out of Heb. 1. 4. and Chap. 2. 8. it is certain, it cannot be said to be the natural Due of the best Angels or Men, that God should make them the End of any Thing else decreed, or to be created together with them. It is true that God makes one Creature subordinate to another, as its End, intending it for the use of another. Thus 1 Cor. 11. 9. The Man was not created for the Woman, but the Woman for the Man; and so the World for both: Yet so, as it was not a Due, that if both Man and Woman should be created, the Woman should be for the Man: For in Heaven, though the Sexes remain distinct, yet there the Woman is no more for the Man, than the Man for the Woman. And this Co-ordination one with another, God might have made in all Things, and none in Subordination to another, especially Angels, and Elect-Men: But that the Angels should serve the Elect, this is meerly from an Ordination of his Will. And he might have made this World and Man in it, and yet not have subjected this World unto Man; and many more Worlds he might have made, which should not at all have subserved Man; but might some other way have been for his Glory: As it will be, if this World should stand and continue after the Day of Judgment, as some have thought. So, that for one Creature to be decreed the End of another, was a matter of meer Arbitrariness, and pure Liberty unto God. As there is a Decree that all these Things should Exist and have a Being; so there must be a further distinct Decree appointing the one to serve the other: upon which alone this Subordination doth wholly depend. So that not the Existence of the Things only arise from his Will, but also the Order of them, that this should be for this, and this for that; the one hath no other Claim or Due, but God's meer and arbitrary Decree. But in God's decreeing Christ, and all other things for him, the Matter standeth in far different Terms. For although (as was said) that he should subsist in Man's Nature, that depended meerly upon a Decree, and was in no respect his Due; but that he should be the Heir, the Lord, the End of all Things, is so the Object of God's Will and Decree, as withal he may claim it (supposing an Intention in God, that he shall be God-Man at all) as a Due, and Royalty, and Prerogative entailed to his being decreed God's Son, by the Supreamest Law that can come between God and his Son, which cannot be made void, or he be bereaved of that Prerogative. Even as if God himself purposes to make any Creature, this Law naturally falls, upon his decreeing of it, that it be ordained for his own Glory; Now say I, for Christ's also: For, by the Union, that Man becomes the natural Son of God, and so this Right is natural unto him. I will give Instance to illustrate this difference between Christ and the Creatures: Take any meer Creature, the Angels, and Souls of Men, and as its having a Being depended simply upon an Arbitrary Decree of God's; so its having an everlasting Being does also. God might freely have ordered the contrary, and they could no way have claimed it as a Due, or a Deprivation of their Right; it was no natural Due that was the Consequent of its Being. But if God decree his Son to subsist in an Human Nature once, then his being ever as a Man, and God for ever to dwell in him, is the natural Consequent of the former; for the Union is indissoluble, he being thereby invested into the Prerogatives of God's Son, whereof this is one, Thy Years fail not; whereas the Creatures may change and wax old. So Heb. 1. 11, 12.

They shall perish, but thou remainest; and they shall wax old as doth a Garment: And as a Vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed; but thou art the same, and thy Years shall not fail.

I do not, nor must not affirm, that this is not at all the Object of a Decree of God's: For it is certain that all his Works, ad extra (whereof this is one) are such. Yea, this is one part and piece of that Fulness in the Text, of which, as of the rest, it is said in the due of all, Col. 1. 19. It pleased the Father that all Fulness should dwell in him. And again, Psal. 2. 6, 7. I will publish the Decree, I have set my King on my holy Hill. His being King was the Object of a Decree. Yet still I add withal, that it was withal his Due and Inheritance.

Neither do I intend that it was a Decree only, and meerly in this respect, to this first Grace, That this Man should be united to God's Son, being the Object of a pure and meer Arbitrariness in God, to have, or not to have decreed it. That therefore, this other Dignity (that is, the natural Consequent of it) is said also to be so decreed: Virtually, (or as we say, Volitum in causa) because that that which this wholly depended upon, was the Object of a Decree meerly free, but I acknowledg it truly the Object of a free Decree of God's Will, as well as the former. For he was willing and well pleased in it, and from such a Will appointed him the Heir, and made him Lord, and Christ. Yet still, say I not in that sense Arbitrary, that supposing withal (as hath been so often said) him to be united to the Son of God, that by a contrary Decree this Royalty might for ever have been denied him, and the contrary determined by God.

And there is no Incongruity in this, or Derogation from God; that this and other the like Priviledges should be both his natural Due, and yet the Object of a Decree. We say against the Papists in a matter of a less alloy, That if God could make Man at first with an Understanding, and a Will; it was by the Law of Creation, a necessary and natural Due to that Man to be created Holy, and in the Image of God, and not in pure Naturals, as the Papists Dream; and yet to give Man that Holiness at first, was the Object of a Decree over and above his being made Man. But this Dueness of Christ's being the End of all, (if at all the Christ) is of an higher Nature; though I illustrate it by that of a lesser, between the Creator and the Creature.

Also we know, that in Christ himself, the Personal Glory he hath in Heaven, he holds by a double Tenure; the one as God's natural Son; the other by Merit: and yet over and above it is said to be given him by his Father, as an Act of his Will and Decrees. It is true, that for the manner or way of Contrivance, how all should tend and serve to his Glory, this must be granted to be meerly Arbitrary, and dependent on the Counsels of God's Will: Even as the ordering how they shall serve to his own Glory is. Yet that all should be cast for Christ's Glory, as for God's (though in a Subordination unto God's) is a necessary natural Law between the Father and the Son: And so he holds it, and not simply by Arbitriment.

Thus much for the second Particular, That his Royalty, in being the first of God's Decrees, and therein to be the End of all Things, is held forth in these Words, First-begotten, &c. He is before all Things.

But concerning his Priority in God's Decrees, there will be occasion to speak more hereafter, in other places of this Discourse.

C H A P. I V.

That by this designed Union of the Son of God to this Individual Creature the Man Jesus, and in the Person of this his Son so considered, God hath and doth make the highest manifestation of his Glory, and communication of Himself, such as by no created Ways or Means else could have been attained.

AND this third Branch, is the natural Result of both, especially the first, which was, That he was the Image of the Invisible God: Which is spoken in respect of the manifestation of the God-head to us, in his Humane Nature.

Herein then, thirdly, lies the Divine Glory of Christ, That God's highest Ends, of making and ordaining any Creature, being the Manifestation of himself, and the Communication of himself to us. If it be manifest that by this Personal Union he attaineth these Ends more fully than any other way, then this Design must needs be acknowledged the Sovereign and Eldest Birth, and first Born of God's Thoughts, and the Glory of Christ as God-Man, answerable hereunto.

It is true, the Work of Redemption addeth hereunto some pieces, as the Manifestation of Mercy, Justice; and the Story thereof giveth us a new and compleat Edition of God's Attributes, (which I have shewn at large in that Treatise, The Glory of the Gospel); Yet if the Ends for which this Union of God-Man in the Person of Christ alone serves for, be considered, it will be seen, that the ground-work, or the substance of that Glory on which those other Colours of Redemption are laid, and do but super-add unto, are found in the Person it self, simply considered as God-Man. Yea, and the most glorious of those Ends God had in the whole compass of this Design of Christ's Incarnation, are the immediate Result of his personal Union to our Nature, and of us unto him. However, this much is granted on all Hands, That the Glory God hath by this Work, and the Issue of it alone, exceeds infinitely what could have arisen from any, or all of his goings forth in making meer Creatures; and this, say I, moved him above all else in his purposes, to make any Creature.

The eminent Ends God had to move him to make all, or any Creature, were two.

1. The Manifestation of Himself, and his glorious Perfections to Creatures reasonable, that they might glorify him.

2. To shew his Love, and communicate his Goodness unto those Creatures reasonable, which he would set Himself to love.

The first respecteth Himself, who made all Things for Himself and his Glory; and therefore he resolved to manifest the Glory of all his Attributes unto the full.

The second respecteth the Creatures; to some of which it became Him, who was Goodness it self, to communicate also that Goodness to the highest and utmost.

Now take this great and most glorious Design of assuming some one Creature reasonable, (which by his Decree was Man, and that Man Jesus in special) into Person with one of the three Persons; which Lot, by his Decree, fell on that Son of Man: And take this singly and alone, without the super-added Project of Redemption, and we shall find, that both these great Ends are thereby more fully accomplish'd (though this Work of Redemption added, makes them more full) than could possibly have been attained by the Creation of Millions of Worlds of meer Creatures (if this should have been supposed wanting) made to manifest God's Glory and his Goodness in ; although they had all been made in never so several Variety, which the Wisdom of God could have contrived the Models of ; or never so glorious in their several Varieties.

For Demonstration whereof ;

First ; Would God manifest himself as God, and make known those Glories lock'd up in himself ; which was the chief End of Creating, as Rom. 1. 20. The Invisible Things of him (that is his Attributes, which cannot otherwise be seen or known by us, to which the words of this Text agree) from the Creation of the World, are clearly seen,—even his Eternal Power and Godhead. Here is a way, this is a way, namely, to assume Man's Nature into personal Union with his Son, puts down all ways of meer and simple Creation that can be supposed. More of God's Glory shall instantly shine forth in that small Model, the Man Christ Jesus, having the God-head dwelling in him personally, than by God's making Millions of Worlds never so various, or so richly furnished with Glories. For still in them, at best, would have appeared but τὰ θεῶν, the Things of God, as Rom. 1. 12. And the more diversified they had been, the more scatteredly and brokenly would those Things of God have appeared in them, even but as Foot-steps, Vestigia Dietatis, and at best but as the dark shadow of a Man in broken and scattered pieces to be pick'd up here and there, and set together, some resemblance or shadow of the God-head would appear. But in the Man Christ Jesus, God himself appears Personally, God manifested in the Flesh, 1 Tim. 3. 16. seen of Angels, and that with so great and supereminent a Glory, that they cover their Faces, and fall down at it. For when the Type of his Personal Glory, as he was to come in the Manhood, was presented, filling his Temple : The Seraphims are said to cover their Faces ; Isa. 6. 1, 2, 3. In the Year that King Uzziah died, I saw also the Lord sitting upon a Throne, high and lifted up, and his Train filled the Temple. About it stood the Seraphims ; each one had six Wings ; with twain he covered his Face, and with twain he covered his Feet, and with twain he did fly. And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of Hosts, the whole Earth is full of his Glory. And that that Prophecy and Vision was spoken of him, as God, manifested in the Humane Nature, is evident by Christ's own applying it to himself, as prophetically spoken of him as to come, John 12. 41. These things said Isaiah, (Christ having, in the 40th verse, cited the very words of his Prophecy in the 10th Verse of that 6th Chapter) when he saw his Glory, and spake of him, and so of those Times when he was in the Flesh, and that Glory that followed. And therefore also, in Heb. 1. 3. when he had set him out in that Glory the Humane Nature now wears in Heaven, being the Brightness (or Shine) of his Father's Glory, his Favour being as the Sun, the Glory of Christ, God-Man ; but the ἀπαύρασμα, the Shine, the Lustre of it ; yet such as it there follows, vers. 6. Let all the Angels of God worship him. Thus was he seen of Angels, (who worshipped him) the most curious Spectators that ever God made : and he was seen too of Men, John 1. 14. We saw his Glory, as of the only begotten Son of God ; which appeared so transcendent a Glory, as who-ever saw it, must needs acknowledg, This Man is God, This is He. Therefore John putteth this peculiar Character upon it, That it was as the Glory of the only begotten Son of God. By other Works you may know there is a God ; but there is that peculiar Impress of Majesty upon his Glory, and that brightness accompanies it, that you must say, when you see it, this is no other than God himself dwelling in Man. 'Tis such a Glory as could not have resulted out of Millions of Worlds, of meer Creatures made on purpose to shew forth God's Glory. And whereas the God-head, and the Glory of it, was invisible, as the Text hath it, and lock'd up from the Eyes of all Creatures, dwelling in Light inaccessible, 1 Tim. 6. 6. God dwelling personally in this Man, puts forth a peculiar Image of the God-head, and makes the Glory of the God-head visible, (as to the utmost it could be) God hath on purpose stamped his utmost manifestative Glory on the Face of Christ, that we might see it in him ; 2 Cor. 4. 6. God gives the Light of the Knowledg

Knowledg of God in the Face, (or as others read it) the Person of Jesus Christ. That as the Soul looks out in the Face, and you see more of a Man's Disposition in a Look, a Cast of his Eye, a Wink, a Blush there, than in all his Body ; so of the God-head in Christ Jesus, which is his Face. He is the brightness of his Father's Glory, shining in and through a Vail of Flesh (whereof the shining of Moses's Face was but a Type and Shadow) through the Lanthorn of his Humanity, (if I may so compare it) so to relieve our Eyes in beholding the God-head, which no Eye could otherwise have done. There is a Sun behind that Vail, the Glory of which immediately shining, would have put out our Eyes.

Now observe, how in this Design God exceedingly condescended to our Frailty. We are reasonable Creatures, clothed with Senses, desirous to prieve and see what we know and hear of, to have something visible, as the disposition of the People of Israel shewed ; and also appears in that Speech of Moses, Exod. 33. 18. Let me see thy Glory. Now hereby God hath satisfied this innate Curiosity that is in us ; Here we may, and shall see the God that goes afore us, (as they desired, Exod. 32. 1.) ; here we may say, as the Apostle did, 1 John 1. 1, 2, 3. That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our Eyes, which we have looked upon, and our Hands have handled of the Word of Life ; (For the Life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and shew unto you that Eternal Life which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us) That which we have seen and heard, declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us ; and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ.

I will instance but in the manifestation of one Attribute, and that is that which is mentioned in Rom. 1. 20. as that which is more especially instanced in, as seen in the Creation, his Eternal Power and God-head. The very knitting Man's Nature into one Person with the Son of God, was a greater Work of Power than God ever did besides. That God is made Flesh, is a greater wonder, than to have made Worlds ; therefore in this Conception, and work of uniting that Nature, it is said, The Power of God shall overshadow thee, Luke 1. 35. It argues great Power, to join divers Elements in one Body, and then unto that Body to unite a Soul, and breath a Breath of Life ; as when God made Man, his choicest Piece and Workmanship, a Living Soul. But he did not only all this in framing Christ's Humane Nature, the same that ours is ; immediately himself, by the Holy Ghost, but further united the Son of God ; and this Nature infinitely more disjointed and disproportioned each to other, than the reasonable Soul and our Bodies : Which he did, when he made him a quickning Spirit. All the Works in Nature are so far short of this, that they afford not a full similitude of it. Yea, all God's Works of Nature and Grace, are altogether bound up in it, (as the Schoolmen well shew) and exceeded by it. Of all other Works, we may say, That, Deus potuit facere melius & majus ; If we take but this Work out of the Order and Chain of Things, out of the System of this World. But we may safely say, that a greater Work than this could not have been done by God himself : Which therefore is the amazement of Angels. This one Instance is but for a taste of the rest.

God's second End respects the Creatures ; which was to shew his Love unto, and communicate Himself unto his Creatures. Now by this Union alone (if no other Design had been in it) he should have done it more than any other way.

Besides, that by this happy Marriage, and Union of both Natures, God hath given the utmost Pledg of his Love to his whole Creation ; a kindness and respect is done unto them all ; not only in that he shews he loves his Creatures, so that he will assume one of that Rank and Sort so near him ; but further in this, That that Creature so assumed, was the Epitome the Compendium of them all. Man a little World, call'd, Every Creature, Mark 16. 15. To the making of whom, the Poets feigned a piece of every Creature to have been taken.

And

BOOK III.

And so, by the advancement of this Nature, he preferreth and advanceth at once the whole Creation, and every kind or part thereof, for something common to every one is in him. There is an ἀνακεφαλαιώσις, (as I have else-where shewn) a gathering together of all Things in Earth and Heaven; and not of Creatures reasonable, only Angels, and Men, under his Dominion as an Head; but even of all Creatures also in his Person. He is the Corner Stone of the whole Creation. Yea, and God, and all comes in to make one, and is gathered together in one, with all things else in him: So as God hath thereby knit all Creatures to himself. And therefore Hugo brings in God, speaking of his making his Son a Man, thus, Do not think that in this I aim only at the Reconciliation of Men; but in him by this means the whole Creation is become amiable and lovely unto me; looking upon it in this Model or Epitome.

But more especially his Love is shewn hereby to Man, the Darling of his Creation. Suppose Christ, God-Man, had only been given to Men as an Head and Husband, (and they had not needed Reconciliation by him) this had been infinite Love; yea, this Gift had excelled, and doth excel all the Benefits of Redemption, if abstractly considered from this other. What would Adam have given for such an Husband? Now, vers. 18. of this Coloss. 1. he is called, The Head of this Body, his Church, an Head more worth than all the Body. But of this, more by and by.

I come to the second Head, the Communication of the Goodness of the God-head unto Creatures reasonable: And for this, the Union of the Son of God, with the Man Christ Jesus, serves in the highest way. Good we know is communicable of it self. Now God is Good, and so doth Good, (as the Psalmist speaks); He only is Good, as Christ says, the chiefest Good: Now by this same Law, That Bonum est sui Communicativum; that is, that Goodness is Communicative: By the same also, Summum Bonum est summè Communicativum sui; that is, the highest Good is Communicative of himself the highest way. And as to communicate himself to Creatures, moved him to create; so he was resolved to communicate himself to the utmost, or he would never create at all; he would never have put his Hand to this Work else. Now he could not have made a Communication of Himself the highest way; but by a personal Union of some Person with a Creature reasonable; for all Communication depends upon an Union. The Creature must be one with God, e're it communicate of his Goodness in a way of Blessedness. Now therefore by this Rule, still, The nearer Union, the nearer Communication. And by the same proportion, the highest Communication cannot be without the highest Union. Now that highest Union alone, is personal Union of a Creature with one who was God. So then to attain this End, this was necessary, for the highest Communication would not have been attained without it.

Now by this Union, you shall see is effected the highest Communication; and that,

First, To that Creature, or Individual Man Jesus, that was assumed.

And, secondly, in that Nature to us that are united to him.

First, To that Creature, or Nature it self: For in him thereby the Fulness of the God-head dwells Personally, as some well translate that word [Boothly]; and so it is the highest Union that may be, or might have been. He was united to God, or one that is God; not as to an Object only, or as to a Perficient only, as we all shall be in Heaven unto God, made perfect in One, John 17. 23. but to the Son of God, who is God, as Terminus Essentiæ, to terminate, and give bounds of subsistence and personality to that Humane Nature: So as the Humane Nature, and the Son of God, are not only one Flesh, as Man and Wife, which is the nearest Union with us; nor one Spirit only, as we with Christ, but one Person, (of which I have spoken else-where); And hence this Humane Nature is made God's Fellow, as Zechariah calls him, Zech. 13. 7. The Man, God's Fellow, is advanced to a Fellowship in this Society of Trinity; and therefore to him God communicates himself proportionably, without measure, as Christ in the Gospel of John speaks. Which was not due to any meer Creature, but it was his due when first assumed; No Man hath seen God at any time but the Son, Joh. 1. 18.

1. 18. None should have done it without him ; none can see God as he doth, nor is capable of it.

Chap. 4.

And, secondly, by means of this Union with, and communication unto this one reasonable Creature, there is way made for God in, and for his sake, to communicate himself unto other Creatures, who are made his Fellows, as he is God's Fellow ; and this in an higher way, than by the meer Law of Creation any Creature could have attained. Others of the Sons of Men united to Christ, come to be united to God thereby, more nearly than otherwise, or any other way they should have been. For this, let me put in by the way, It was not fit, or meet, some say not possible, to have united and assumed all, or many Men, to his Union ; however, not meet. It was a Dignity too great to be made common ; It became not the great God, who is one in Nature, to communicate this Dignity, but unto one. And this being supposed, as for us, the Vulgus of those Creatures, whom God meant to communicate himself unto, there was no way for their behoof like unto this, That God should take one of them up to himself, and by their Union with him, and for his sake, to give forth himself to the rest. First, To marry Man's Nature in some one individual Man in this incommunicable way, and then to marry us of the same Nature unto him ; and so thereby making him first partaker of the God-head in a transcendent way, as his natural due ; And then when once he was so united, for his sake, and in respect of our Relation to him, to admit us to the nearest Union, in a supernatural, or super-creation way, which meer Creatures are capable of, and which but for him, he never should have vouchsafed unto us as meer Creatures by any Law, or Covenant of our Creation. And thus through this Humanity, as through a Sacred Brest, we do, Lactare Dietatem, (as one of the Fathers speaks). And although our Redemption by Christ, as we are Sinners, is an infinite Benefit ; yet his Person thus given us, is more worth than all those his Benefits, Est aliquid in Christo formosus Salvatore. And then by our Interest in his Person, we come to inherit God with him, to be Heirs, and Coheirs with Christ of God, in such a way communicated, as but for this his Union with God first, we should never have attained.

I will give but one Instance to illustrate this, as I did bring but one for the setting forth the former : Power was the Attribute I pitch'd on, as manifested in this Assumption, in the foregoing Head ; and Wisdom shall be the Attribute I single out, to illustrate this other of God's communicating himself the highest way. And these two I instance in, because Christ is both the Power of God, and the Wisdom of God. Would God communicate and make known unto his Creatures reasonable, the Depths, the Riches of his Knowledg and Wisdom, as the Apostle stiles them ; and communicate the Treasures of them to the utmost they are communicable. Now by means of taking up one Creature reasonable, a Man, into this highest Union, shall this be effected the highest way that could be supposed.

First, To that Creature so united ; for it is his due to know more at the first instant of that his Union than all the Angels, blow up their Understandings, and fill them to the utmost wideness. For by virtue of that Union, he is presently in his Father's Bosom ; as it is peculiarly said of him, John 1. 18. No Man hath seen God at any time ; the only begotten Son, which is in the Bosom of the Father, he hath declared him. He is made there, by his Place, God's Privy Counsellor ; The Mighty Counsellor, Isa. 9. 6. 'Tis his place by Inheritance ; He hath right to know all God's Secrets ; He is God's Eldest Son, his Fellow. And therefore it is said, that God lays up all the Treasures of Knowledg in him, Col. 2. 3. Because (as it follows) the Godhead dwells bodily in him ; and thereby he comes to have the Spirit above measure, and that Spirit searcheth the deep Things of God. If God said of Abraham, How shall I hide from Abraham what I mean to do ? Gen. 18. 17. Much less can he keep it secret from Christ ; God can hide nothing from him which he means to do ; and indeed, to know, it is his due. He draws nearer to God infinitely than Moses did, or Angels ever did, or shall. Moses (his Type) was taken up into the Mount, where God appeared, and Angels up into Heaven ; but Moses was not taken up into this Mount, the highest place of Honour, of personal Union, standing upon which, this Man hath a full prospect into all God's Counsels and Ways. See how Moses is slighted to him, even in this. The Law came by Moses, says John, Chap. 1. vers. 17. Who, when he received it, was spoken to by God as never Man was. God professeth he revealed himself to no Prophet, as to Moses, Face to Face, Numb. 12. 8. But what follows in John 1. 17. Grace and Truth came by Jesus Christ. And John gives the Reason of the difference, No Man hath seen God at any time, the only begotten Son, who is in the Bosom of the Father, he hath revealed him, vers. 18. Moses saw God, as never no Man saw him. But Moses sight was no sight in comparison of Christ's. For notwithstanding he had spoken of Moses, vers. 17. Yet in the next Verse he dares to say, No Man hath seen God at any time, but only this Son, his eldest Son, no Servant. No adopted Son ever saw God so, or shall do, or could do, but the Eldest, who is in God's Bosom.

Secondly, This way of communicating himself to one thus assumed into this Union, was the best means to communicate his Depths of Wisdom to other Creatures made one with him, (for still remember it was not fit that any more than one should be partaker of this high Priviledg of Personal Union:) for this Man being himself thus in God's Bosom (as hath been declared) is able to declare more of God to the rest of his Brethren, than they otherwise should have ever known. He was first to see God, and then reveal him to others, as Job. 1. 18. He hath revealed him, says the Evangelist. And he is able to speak experimentally out of sight, the deep Things of God; John 3. 11. We speak (says he) the Things we have heard and seen, not at second hand, but upon personal Eye-sight. And whereas others, if they would speak of the Heavenly Things to us, must do it under Earthly Similitudes; he is able (if we were capable of it) to speak Heavenly Things in their own Idiom. So, vers. 12. to set forth his Knowledg of the Things he speaks, If I have told you Earthly Things, and ye believe not, (and yet Christ had spoken afore of nothing but Things Heavenly, and they only are the Object of Faith) How shall ye believe if I tell you of Heavenly Things? It is as if he had said, I have told you but Earthly Things in comparison of what I could tell you, if you were capable of them, I could speak Heavenly in their own Dialect. And the Reason follows, vers. 13. For no Man hath ascended into Heaven, but he who came down from Heaven, even the Son of Man which is in Heaven. Yea further, He hath the Power and Skill, not by the means of words only that are Heavenly, (suing Heavenly Things to Heavenly) but to create such inward real Images and Rays of Heavenly Things, as shall manifest the very Things themselves to us, in their Heavenly Splendor, and as the Beams of the Sun do let in the sight of the Sun it self into our Eyes.

2. Yea, and further, by means of this personal Union of our Nature with the Son of God, revealing and communicating the Knowledg of God unto us, it comes to pass, that the greatest Riches of Assurance is added unto that Knowledg; without which our Knowledg of God, and his Mind, would not be so fully satisfactory, though we could have come to know never so much any other way. No way could ever have been thought of, so to ascertain our Belief as this. No way conduces to such an Infallibility of Revelation, as this doth. If a meer Creature revealed God unto us, (as Moses did) it might be (at least) supposed not to be so certain, as when God-Man shall speak. For though the words of the Prophets had a certainty in them, as Peter comparing the certainty of the Scripture, with that Voice he had heard from Heaven; 2 Pet. 1. 19. he calls it, A more sure Word of Prophecy: So may I say of what God-Man shall speak. It is infinitely a more certain sure Word; for it is as impossible that he should lye, as that God himself should. Every Man may be supposed a Liar, but we are sure he cannot. And the Son of God being one in Person with him, if you hear him speak, there is an impossibility of being deceived, for himself is God. Therefore, Heb. 1. 1. In these last Days he spake by his Son: Which is also again indigitated, Chap. 2. vers. 2, 3. For if the Word spoken by Angels was stedfast, and every Transgression and Disobedience received a just Recompence of Reward: How shall we escape, if we neglect so great Salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him. And it is there brought in as a more infallible and unparallel'd Evidence of the Truth of the Gospel, above the Law, That that was given but by Angels, but this Gospel was first spoken by the Lord himself, who first broke up the Treasures of it. And hence, one of his Titles is, The Faithful Witness, Rev. 3. 14. Yea the Amen. God's [Amen.] Or, So it is ; as that which Seals up all, and puts all out of Question.

C H A P. V.

The Glory which Christ, as God-Man, had assigned him, before the World was, in his Election by the Father; manifested in an Explication of John 17. 5. Whether that Expression, Glorify me now, with the Glory which I had with thee before the World was, be spoken of Christ, as Second Person in the Trinity, as God, or as God-Man, appointed in God's Eternal Decree. In what proper Sense this might be said by the Man Jesus, Glorify now me, &c. How as God-Man, he can be said to have had this Glory with the Father, before the World was; when as such, he did not then Exist. What Glory it is, that is here intended, it is a Glory due to his Person. God-Man distinct from, and Superior to what followed, upon his performance of the Work of our Redemption.

J O H N 17. 5.

And now, O Father, Glorify thou me with thine own self, with the Glory which I had with thee before the World was.

TO clear and prove what is the Scope of these Words, I shall propose several Queries, and the Answers made thereunto will lay open the genuine Mind, and Sense of the Text.

1. Query is, Under what Notion, or Consideration Christ should be the Subject of that Speech, The Glory which I had with thee before the World was? Whether it be spoken of the Second Person, simply considered, as God, (which is a great Truth in it self, and which most do understand meant in this Place); or whether it be spoken of Christ, considered as God-Man, in God's Predestination; and so to involve the Man, or Human Nature. There are you see, two parts of the whole Speech: i. And now Glorify me. And touching that, there need be no stick to apply it to the Human Nature; for he was a Subject capable of being glorified now, as upon his Ascension he was. But then how may we withal apply

ply the other part; [With the Glory I had with thee before the World was] and take him in, as the Subject of that Glory? Yea, and if we do, it must be some way the same kind of Glory, which the Subject of the first part of that Speech prays to be now glorified withal, with the same Glory mentioned in the second part, which was before the World, and not with another: So as take which you will, whether the Divine Nature, as Second Person, or the Humane, still the same Nature must be the individual Subject of the same Glory, in either of those Speeches. We must not think to apply the one part of the Speech to the Man, or the Human Nature only; and then the other to the Divine Nature only: this will breed a Distraction, or a Division in the Sense.

My Answer to this Enquiry, and my Assertion is; That Christ, considered as God-Man, is the Subject of both: and that as the Man speaks it, so the Man is involv'd, as spoken of, and the whole Person as God-Man, Glorify me now, O Father. Now presently, upon my Ascension (says the Man) in respect of entering into an open actual Possession of that Glory, which I the Man had with thee, in the Idea of this Glory, in thy Predestination of me, ordain'd unto me before the World. But of the manner, how he the Man had it before the World, of this at large, and apart in my Answers to the other following Queries. In the meantime,

That it is the Glory that belongeth to the Man, that he prayeth for in these Words, [And now, Father, Glorify me]; and not simply as he is Second Person. This Assertion I prove both Negatively and Affirmatively.

I. Negatively. 'Tis not the Glory of the Second Person, simply, or alone considered; and therefore, it is the Glory of him as God-Man. For,

1. That he might be glorified with that Glory due to him, as Second Person simply, was not a thing to be prayed for; for it is Naturally and Essentially his Due.

2. As to that Glory, he might as well have formed his Prayer thus, Glorify thou me, with the Glory I now have with Thee; and not in this manner, And now, O Father, glorify me with the Glory which I had with thee from everlasting: For that Divine Glory of him, which is essential to him as Second Person, he had it as much now at the time he prayed, as he had it from everlasting, and all one.

3. That Word [Now] Glorify me, necessarily implies a Suspension of a Glory due before, and that could not be of his Glory, simply as Second Person: Also, that [Now] argues a Glory to be given in Time, in such a manner as not afore; and what is done in Time, concerns the Human Nature, not the Divine.

II. Positively. The Subject of the Glory pray'd for, is the Man. Austin was so far convinced of this, that though he were engaged against the Arrians, as much as any in his Time, and all the Fathers afore him, had urged this Place, to prove the Divine Nature of Christ as Second Person, his Existence from Eternity; yet betook himself to this, That it was spoken of him, as Man, and so interpreted, [The Glory which I had] to be meant, which I had by Predestination; and in that Sense [with Thee.] Now, that it is the Man, or rather the Person of God-Man, in Union together, is the Subject prayed for, is evident. Because,

1. It is the Petition of the Person who had been, and as he had been humbled, who had glorified God on Earth, and had finished his Work, and waited for this Glory until Now: As therefore, the Apostle says, the same that ascended, first descended; so I may say here: The same Person who was now presently to dye, and was Crucified the same Day, was the same, who was the Subject, the Person prayeth to be thus glorified, when he shall have done his Work. For,

2. It is a Glory suspended until this his Work were done: And therefore, [Now] Father (says he) Glorify me, &c. Answers unto that which is in Luke 24.26. Ought not Christ to have suffered these Things, and to enter into his Glory? Of which afterwards.

3. He prays for that Glory, wherein in Heaven, (when glorified) he should appear visibly, in his Human Nature, and which in the 24th Verse he prays his Saints might see and behold; and which in the same Verse, had been given him out of love before the World was; which cannot be meant of that of the Divine Nature, as Second Person simply, for that is as invisible as God the Father is; and was not by Gift, but by Generation, communicated to him.

All these Things cannot be the Voice of him, simply as Second Person. Fix upon it therefore, That it is the Glory of the Man, or rather God-Man, prayed for.

2. Query is, In what fair and genuine Sense can it be said by the Man Jesus; Glorify me with the Glory I had with thee before the World was?

My Answer, and second Assertion is, That it was the Glory which the Second Person, being in God's singular Predestination of him constituted God-Man, had in and by the same Predestination, given him as the Glory of the only begotten Son of God, as his Due in the perfect and exquisite Idea thereof, then given him, and pre-ordained unto him.

Unto me this hath appeared as the plainest and fullest Interpretation, and that which answers all Difficulties, and carries the Interpretation through, is, That the Word [I Had] relates to the Glory which he had in his singular and supereminent Predestination, which was the Sense Austin gave long since. And there is that which favours this Interpretation, in the Aspect and Correspondency which the 22d and 24th Verses, that follow in this Prayer, hold, and do mutually cast upon these Words of vers. 5. and these Words upon them serving to expound each other of them. The Glory thou gavest me, I have given them: So in vers. 22. and then put to them vers. 24. Father I will that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my Glory which thou hast given me; for thou lovedst me before the Foundation of the World. Where, God's loving him afore the Foundation of the World, is a Phrase all one with his having predestinated him out of Love, (as I shewed afore.) And by the Glory which thou gavest me, v. 22. is above all other meant, that Personal Glory of, and flowing from the Personal Union which was by Predestination given him as God-Man; by virtue of which first given him, it is, and was that he gives us a derived or Secondary Participation of Glory out of it. A Portion of Glory, and Priviledg like to this of his, wholly flowing from it, and conformed to it; yet not the same Hypostatical Union, or Personal Glory, which Christ himself hath, which the 24th Verse shews: For our Glory (as there) ariseth to us, but through our beholding that his so supereminent Glory; by which he manifestly declares, how it is, that the Glory given him, he gave to them: and that their Glory was to be differenced from what was personally his own, and proper to himself. His Scope being to shew the dependency that their Glory hath on his; and withal, how that his was first given him, in Predestination, by the Father; and that then he gave a Glory unto them, as concurring with his Father in that Gift. And it is not to shew at all, That our Glory is, for the Rank of it, the same with his: No, for our Glory he gives us, is to arise from our beholding his Personal Glory, and so is but a second-hand derived Glory. God having first, and with a primary and chief intendment estated Christ absolutely, singly, independently, in his personal Glory, and in his Predestination of him, God-Man, gave him that Original, as the grand Lease of all Creature-Glory: Therefore he is called the Lord of Glory, 1 Cor. 2. 8. And Christ being endowed therewith, did as freely give forth to those whom God had given him (as their several Portions) under-Leases. Which Glory of ours, may yet in this general respect, be said to be the same, in that it is supernatural, wholly above what by the Law of Creation, or the Covenant of Works, which from Adam we had derived; and which, though never so much advanced, should have attained unto: For this is a Glory the second Adam bequeathed us, like unto what himself had; which was wholly Supernatural. So then, bring all these together, first the 5th Verse, The Glory I had afore the World, down to the 22d. The Glory thou gavest me, I have given them; those whom thou gavest me, says vers. 24. And I will, that they behold that my Glory: and then, the close of all, in that 24th Verse, For thou lovedst me afore afore the World was, as the Spring of all ; and this Connexion of all these will amount to this, That, first, in God's predestinating of him afore the World, it was that he gave him this Glory, spoken of, vers. 5. And, secondly, that that Glory was first and absolutely given him by the Father, and then ours by himself concurring with the Father, who loved us as he loved Christ, vers. 22. which Two are the Sum and Substance of what I am to prove.

This thus proved, as meant of Predestination, my Interpretation of vers. 5. [Glorify me with the Glory I had with thee afore the World was] proceeds :

1. With the Glory] ; Thou hadst the Idea, the Portraiture of Me, when I was among all those other Models and Schemes of Worlds, and varieties of Creatures thou hadst in thy view, and which thou couldst have ordained to make, when as yet thou didst not. I in the Hue and Array of God-Man, simply as such considered, came up afore thee, and out-shined each and all of those creatable Glories of meer Creatures thy Power was able to make ; and I took thy Heart above all those curious Pictures or Images, in the Power of thy Art, what-ever, and out-shined them all, as not worthy to be thought of, or look'd at with me or my Glory ; that is, above all and afore all, thy Will and good Pleasure, did here set the Fiat of thy Desire, and of thy first Desire ; for being satisfied, in the Morning, with the Image of thy self in me, thou saidst, This I purpose to be my Fellow, and my sole Delight, which no other of meer Creatures, or all, could ever have been.

2. Glorify me now with the Glory] which in decreeing of me to be God-Man, Thou hadst in thy Heart, in thy Designs and Purposes, to bestow ; and didst then, and by this Decree, actually endow me with, as the natural Inheritance, Propriety, and proper Due and Concernment to that Person, thou should ordain God-Man, and one Person with thy Son ; This I now beg of thee, to be now possessed of.

3. With the very same Glory, according to the exact Draught of it, that was in thy Divine Understanding, and Will, and Purposes about me ; and he therefore says, with the Glory now, which I then had ; that is, in the Model, the Idea, exactly answering one the other. There are two Parts of the Petition, (as was said) Glorify me now, the first ; With the Glory I had, that's the second. And these two must prove to be, in a true respect, one and the same Glory.

And if any (as many do) will urge, That this latter [The Glory which I had] can be understood of no other, but of Christ's Divine Nature, or of the Second Person simply considered ; then, that other part [Glorify me now] will recoil and check them, as to that Opinion : For, it must be truly, some way, the same Glory. And though it be true, that the Divine Nature, or the Second Person, he might alone say, I had a Glory with thee afore the World was ; namely, the Essential Glory of the God-head ; yet he might not say, glorify me now with that Glory ; for that Essential Glory, was neither to be prayed for, nor was it ever laid aside, or interrupted, as it was enjoyed by him with God ; No. And again, on the other Hand ; For the Man to say, Glorify me now with the Glory I had with Thee ; and mean, the Essential Glory of the God-head, that is as incongruous as the other. So as, take both parts of the Petition, in conjunction together, and as to belong to but one Subject, either the Man alone, or the Second Person alone ; and they will never suit either, in an uniform way, or sameness of Glory. You can no more apply them both to the Divine Nature, than you can to the Humane. And yet it is plainly insinuated, to be one and the same Glory. This will never be unridled (at least, not so fairly) any other way, than by this of Predestination, viz. That look what Glory in God's ultimate Purposes and Transactions with his Son, was fore-ordained and designed him as God-Man, (and as such, He was the Subject of God's Decrees as well as We ; as many Scriptures declare) : And so it is exactly one and the same Glory ; which is the gloss that Austin long since gave of the words ; Clarifica me sicut tunc, ita & nunc : sicut tunc prædestinatione, ita & nunc perfectione : Fac in Mundo, quod apud Te jam fuerat ante mundum ; Fac in suo tempore quod ante omnia tempora statuisti, &c. Glorify Me, as then, so now ; as then in Predestination, so now in the perfect performance of it : Do that in this its due Time, which which thou hadst appointed and decreed afore all Times. Now what-ever God predestinates Persons, or Things concerning Persons, he hath the Idea thereof, and of all that appertains thereto, in his Divine Mind: For, known unto God are all his Works from the beginning; and therefore had, yea, much more had, of this very Glory of God-Man, the full and lively Portraiture of his Understanding and Purpose: yea, we may say, That even that Glory, this Divine Person, God-Man, hath now in Heaven, (when it was that this his Prayer had its Accomplishment) is no other Glory, either for Kind or Degree, than was in the Heart and Mind of God, laid up with God, for him; as in Job the Phrase is, Many such Things are with him; Job 23. 14. For he performeth the Thing that is appointed for me; and many such Things are with him. Yea, of all the Saints, it may be said, when they are glorified in Heaven, it is but with that same Glory and no other, for measure, and the like, than was in the Heart of God decreed towards them from Everlasting: And so they differ, as the Pattern which was so long afore formed, and the Piece that is framed to it: As when King Ahasuerus said, Let it be done, so and so, to the Man whom the King will honour, Esther 6. 9. Which when Haman had once performed, might be said, That he had been honoured with the same Honour in all the Circumstances of it; which the King in his Heart had contrived to be given him. And so it is here; for Predestination is but Preparatio Beneficiorum; a shaping, a forming of all those Benefits of Grace and Glory that shall be bestowed, in Time, upon every one that is Elect; and so 'twas in Christ.

3. Query. How is the Man, or he as God-Man, said to have had this Glory with the Father before the World was, when as such he existed not?

Answer. By Reason that the Second Person then existed, and all along from Everlasting upon his Election thereunto, took on him that Personage of God-Man, and bore the Title of it with God his Father; thereby it comes to pass, that it may be said by the Man Jesus, The Glory which I had with Thee; which no Saint or Angel else can say of the Glory given them by Predestination.

For that a meer Act of God's ordaining him God-Man in his own Breast and Intention, singly and alone considered, should be an adequate full Ground for Christ to say, That I as Man, or as God-Man, had a Glory with Thee afore the World was, when I, this Man, was not extant, as now I am who challenge it; cannot be alone sufficient: For, the Elect Saints (who were predestinated as well as Christ) might then also say, We had a Glory with Thee afore the World was: But this they must not, nor can say; for the very sound of it is such, as signifies, That the Person that had that Glory, and that says it, should have been then with God, and to have been glorified by God with that Glory he speaks of.

Nec enim habuisset gloriam nisi ipse prius fuisset qui gloriam possit tenere. Nemo enim habere aliquid poterit nisi ipse ante fuerit qui aliquid tenet. Tertul. de Trin. c. 24.

Now the Elect of Men, neither of themselves existed then with God, nor no part of them, no not their Souls. They may say indeed, that by virtue of their Predestination, Grace and Glory was given them afore the World was, as 2 Tim. 1. 9. Who hath saved us, and called us with an Holy Calling, not according to our Works, but according to his own Purpose and Grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus, before the World began. But for them to say, The Glory which I had with Thee afore the World was: This their Predestination, or God's single meer Act of Predestinating them, will not warrant them to say; Nor doth the Scripture any where so speak of the Saints their Predestination; no such Language is any where used of them. Besides, that it were to derogate from Christ, who alone is capacitated (for the Grounds that shall be added) thus to speak.

Moreover, their Election, and the Grace given them thereby, hath this difference from Christ's Election, That they are said to be chosen in Christ, Ephes. 1. 4. and that Grace given them from Everlasting, is said to be given in Christ, in 2 Tim. 1. 9. But Christ himself was chosen immediately in and for himself, which enabled him to say, The Glory which I had with thee afore the World. Which none of them could say; yea, and for him to say it, and to have intended no more more than what he had of Glory in, and by God's meer Act of Purpose and Predeterminating him unto it, had been to say no more than the World it self might say, or might be said of it, That it had a Being (namely, in God's purpose) afore its Creation, and actual Existence. For, whatsoever the World now is, it was in God's naked Decree and Purpose, afore it self was, as well as Christ himself.

Hence then there must be some extraordinary special Thing found in Christ's Predestination, which must give ground to this Speech, and fill up the whole Intendment of it.

And therefore I added, to this second Assertion, a second part of it, That the Second Person, the Son did, at and together, and upon God's Act of predestinating him to be God-Man, (and upon him did God's Predestination fall as well as on the Man Jesus) take on him the real Title and Repute of God-Man; and sustained and bore the Personage of God-Man afore his Father. And his Father actually gave him the Glory of it, as a super-added Glory to that of his being Second Person, and his Son simply considered. And this having been afore-hand done, upon the account of, and respect unto, his being to be that Man one Day: Hence, the Man Jesus being now existing and united into one Person with that Son of God, was justly and rightly enabled and capacitated to claim and pray, Glorify Me with the Glory I had with Thee afore the World was.

The Person he was now become, having been glorified in that very account, as God-Man, by his Father from Everlasting.

This Condition of the Person God-Man, upon whom this Election fell, hath not enough been considered; That whilst such a bare Act of Election lighting upon us, would not have been such an Expression, but been deficient; yet in the Case of Christ, as hath been now stated, it would; And with these Additionals it is abundantly verified, and holds good. But we must consider, that there was not only a Predestination-Act on the Father's Part, that passed upon Christ to be God-Man in common with God's predestinating us: But that there accompanied it, at the instant, on the second Person's part, an acceptance of what God had predestinated him unto, a sustaining of that Person afore God ever after; and a Glory given him all along by his Father in their Converses, answering that Dignity; which utterly varies the Case from that of our Predestination, by a single Act of God's. And because God's predestinating him to be God-Man, hath singly been considered by many, when that interpretation hath been given of the words, That they are to be understood of what was in God's first predestinating of Christ; and that as it is a bare Act on God's part falling short, they therefore have wholly rejected that Interpretation; whereas supply to it, what was also done at and upon God's predestinating, on Christ's part, and God's glorifying him as such for ever after; and so the Solution riseth (in my poor conception) to a satisfaction of the Difficulties that are otherwise incumbent on the words.

This new Supplement of so grand a moment in this Argument, I shall draw forth into sundry Particulars; which the Reader may please to add unto those of Predestination already foregon. For that must still stand, though these be also taken in unto it, to make the Interpretation more full.

1. The Son of God, second Person, was extant and with God, at the instant when he was chosen to this Glory of being God-Man; there he was, the Person, which we were not at our Election. This I need not insist upon. And hence,

2. The Glory of it was immediately given to himself, at the very instant of that Act of predestinating him to it. It needed not be given him in another, or to another for him; he was there to accept it, and receive it: whereas the Glory we were to have, was given us in Christ, when nothing of us existed, and so long afore we existed; and was therefore given us in Christ, because he was present by, and could receive it for us (as he did); and therefore might much more receive any Glory or Honour which the Father, by such an Act of Election, should ordain him unto, as, de facto, he did him to this of God-Man. But

But you will urge, That still the Man that was ordained to this Glory, existed not but in a bare Decree.

Consider therefore, 3. That the Second Person that existed, and was now chosen to be God-Man, had the Title of being God-Man; and so the Glory due to it, upon that Election of him to it, really conferred upon him: and so as from thence he was no longer to be considered, meerly and abstractly, as Second Person alone; but was thereupon afore God and with God, and in his repute and esteem accounted of as God-Man. Take a Man that is elected to an Office, whom thereupon you call Now Elect, besides what he is, and hath, as a Man singly considered, he hath now the Honour of his Office, though he be not installed. Thus a Man chosen and designed a General, hath the Honour and Title of his Designment, long afore he goes into the Field. Now this much more really was the Second Person's Case, as to this new additional Glory.

4. He not only knew what he was ordained to, but solemnly accepted it afore his Father; and concurred in assent and consent thereto, and undertook to be so as his Father had appointed; Heb. 10. 5. A Body hast thou prepared me. The Second Person deferred not, stayed not accepting it upon the first Act of God's chusing him; until the Time should come that he was to become God-Man, by being made Flesh; but he accepted it instantly without any more ado: And so he was absolutely and solemnly espoused by his own consent afore his Father, unto that individual Nature of Man, whom his Father had by that Act of Predestination, designed and proposed to him to be. And hence the Title of it must needs come on him; He took on him the Title, the Honour, and Glory, from that very instant of Eternity; He was thence-forward God-Man contracted, although the Marriage was to be after consummated, when the Word took Flesh: He had the Title of God-Man Elect, though not of God-Man united, or made Flesh: He bore the Personage of God-Man (mark that word) Personam gerebat, The Garb, the Port of it; although as yet the Son of God had not took up into his Person that Man he was contracted unto: I say, he bore the Title and Repute of it, and went under that Name with God, the Name of God-Man, even as he did, of Everlasting Father, or a Father of us from Everlasting, Isa. 9. 6. There is the like reason for either; for he had that title of Everlasting Father, but because from Everlasting He afore God took upon him that Relation to us as his Children, and so to be of the same Nature with us; as the Apostle argues in Heb. 2. 10, 11, 14. For it became him, for whom are all Things, and by whom are all Things, in bringing many Sons unto Glory, to make the Captain of their Salvation perfect through Sufferings. For both he that sanctifieth, and they who are sanctified, are all of one; for which cause he is not ashamed to call them Brethren. Forasmuch then as the Children are partakers of Flesh and Blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same, that through Death he might destroy him that had the Power of Death, that is, the Devil. The second Person singly considered, hath not the stile of Father, for that is the first Person's Propriety, only considered simply as a Person.

Again, if all the Promises God hath made in his Word, were from Everlasting made, and then extant afore God, as you read, Tit. 1. 2. they were, in hope of Eternal Life, which God, that cannot lye, promised before the World began. Then Christ, considered as God-Man, to whom, as such, all the Promises were made; and in whom as such supposed, they have their Truth, Foundation, and Existence, their Yea and Amen. He then (I say) must much more have born (being then present with God) that title of God-Man. And without his being considered as such, and his having accepted to be such, those Promises had had no Existence or Reality, nor would it have been so, that all our Grace and Glory was given us in Christ afore the World was, as it is said 2 Tim. 1. 9. Was not then that Title of being Christ, and God-Man, then given them? Without the consideration of which, we had not, nor could be considered as Legatees, to whom that Grace was bequeathed: Yes, it was a Title familiarly used of him amongst the Three, from thence-forward for ever.

This Title was in it self truly a Glory; though but an additional, given the Second Person then existing; and though the Man, or the Humane Nature, was not existent; yet the Glory of his being one day Man, was then existent; and and the Person was existent, that was capable of receiving even that Glory at that present.

1. It was a Glory; for the thing in it self, was truly a Matter of Glory, though but an additament to him, and being given by a Person of Glory, his Father, the Fountain of Glory, it must be truly such.

2. Though but an Additional Glory; for his native Essential Glory, as God, needed it not, as to his own Blessedness or Glory: As we see God doth not need that Glory we Creatures give him, and yet 'tis a real Glory to him, and a glorifying of him, that which Creatures give him.

3. Though the Man existed not, yet the Glory existed; for the Second Person existed to receive it from his Father, who existed together with him; and might, and did, afore-hand give it to him, upon his own ordination of him, to be Man, and the Second Person, his undertaking to become Man; and so, was given through that Relation contracted for afore-hand unto that Man. So as who-ever considers it, will find himself to be utterly in a mistake, if he should thus conceive of it, that Christ only had the Glory of his being God, and Second Person, afore and with his Father; and that God began first actually to honour his Son as God-Man, only from the time he actually took Flesh, and became Man. For if there be a real Glory ariseth to him, now he hath assumed Man's Nature; for which, and by reason whereof, he is by us deservedly to be glorified and adored as God-Man; Or if that be a Glory to him now he is in Heaven, that he is God Man, which he visibly wears there afore his Father, and all the Saints: Then it must be acknowledged, (having been given him by his Father, in his Decree, and undertaken by himself) that it was a Glory also, as then really extant between himself and his Father. At the time after he had assumed our Nature, and was actually become Man, then his Father should and did openly declare and congratulate him as his Son, in saying from Heaven, Matth. 3. 17. And lo, a Voice from Heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. It is added, that he gave him Glory and Honour, as is exprest in 2 Pet. 1. 17. For he received from God the Father, Honour, and Glory, when there came such a Voice to him from the excellent Glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. Then why may it not also be said, that when in God's Everlasting Decree, God had said the same to him as expressly, Psal. 2. 7. I will declare the Decree, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. Why should not this be as well a giving Glory to him from Everlasting, though but upon, and in his Decrees which was from Everlasting? Upon the making of his Decree for that Glory, this was said, Thou art my Son, &c. And the Psalmist professeth but to publish the Matter of that Decree, and to produce the Record, and set it down by way of prophesy. If then the declaring the same by God himself afterward, when he was made Flesh, and become Man, were an Honour given him by his Father: Then surely, at the making of that Decree it was the like; and therefore he had that Glory with the Father before the World was.

That there might be a Glory given the Son from Everlasting, is clear from this, That there was the highest and freest mutual Converse held between the Three Persons amongst themselves from Everlasting, when no Creature was; and in that Converse they drove and carried on Designs of what was to come, and gave the Glory to one another, of what each of them was, or should be, or do, in their several Activities, to all Eternity. They spake one to the other, and one of another, as Heb. 10. The Son said to the Father, A Body hast thou prepared me. And the Father to the Son, Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten thee. And this latter was from Everlasting in the decreeing of it, spoken to him; for the words afore are, I will declare the Decree, whereof that Speech therefore was the Matter. Likewise there were mutual Engagements and Promises past between them, 1 Tit. 2. Eternal Life was promised afore the World began. And there must be an intercourse of Persons promising, and that received and accepted the Promise. And in like manner in their Converse they glorified one another; John 15. 16. The Spirit shall glorify me, says Christ: He says it indeed of his glorifying Christ to us; but if he doth it to us, much more among themselves.

And truly, the Phrase here, which I had [with thee] (which now only remains to be expounded) in the fulness of the extent of the meaning it will reach unto, is very compliant with this Notion: For, which I had with Thee, imports not only a presence, or being with God in Existence.

As, first, John 1. 1. The Word is said to be God, and with God.

Or, 2. the intimacy of an alike Glory to that of the Father's, enjoyed by the Son, together with the Father.

But, 3. it denotes the Repute or Esteem which Christ had with him; so that the Glory I had with thee, is the Honour and Valuation I then held in thy Heart of me.

We use the same Phrase in our Language, (and it is current in all Languages) A Person who is honoured by another, we use to say of him, He is in Esteem, Repute, or Favour with him. And so it is not necessarily here to be wholly confined to signify his Essential Glory, which he had together with his Father, and enjoyed, as if that were only meant; but will well comport with this reputative Glory cast on him by Election, of his being God-Man.

And the Scripture speaks parallel unto this in point of Grace, that is now born to us by God, or to any Elect of God; and it is all one to say, such an one hath Grace with God; and to say, they have Glory and Honour with God. Now of the Blessed Virgin, the Angel accosts her with this, Luke 1. 30. Thou hast found favour with God; or, art in great Grace with God; that is, in God's Estimation and Repute: Grace in his Heart born to thee, which might have been said of Her, even from Everlasting; when it was, that God did single her forth to be the Mother of the Lord; it may be said, she had that Grace with God then, which otherwise is commonly express'd, by a finding favour in his Eyes. Maldonate takes hold of the Word, as often importing Esteem and Renown, (though he diverts it to another purpose); I may say of Christ, God-Man, that he was of Renown with God, and that he was as God-Man in Repute and Esteem, such upon his Election of him. This may justly be termed a Glory, when thus it was in God, and with God: For God's Repute and Esteem is Glory; for God is the God of Glory, the Father of Glory, and Glory comes only of God; John 5. 44. How can ye believe, which receive Honour one of another, and seek not the Honour that cometh from God only? His Esteem is the valuation of Glory, which is in the sight of God of great price, is really so, 1 Pet. 3. 5. And thus understood, Christ prays to have that Glory which in the Person of the Second he had then with God in his repute and valuation. And if you put [Had] unto it, yet still the Phrase, Had with Thee, will not rise up to denote, that he had it in real possession then with God. A Man is said to have a thing in a right unto it given him, though not yet enjoyed, as Heb. 10. 35. we are said, To have Treasure in Heaven, when yet we enjoy it not. Glorify me with thine own self, (there is an actual possession prayed for) with the Glory I had with Thee in thy Esteem, Account, and Design. A Title of Glory and Excellency given by a Person that is the true Fountain of Glory; what is this, but really and truly a Glory to the Person to whom it is given.

4. Query. Our next Query is, What kind of Glory is it that is properly intended in this 5th Verse?

This is a Matter of great moment to be enquired into, (as will in the Sequel appear). For the discovery whereof;

First; Divines have observed, though not upon the occasion of these words, that there is a double Glory of Christ, and that considered as God-Man.

See Gomarus;
Tom. 3. P. 74,
75.

1. Personæ simpliciter; Of his Person simply considered as God-Man, (abstracting from his being a Mediator for us).

2. Officii; Of his Office of Mediatorship; which latter was superadded, over and above, unto the Glory of his Person, as God-Man; and consists purely in what he is in Relation unto God his Father; whereas that Glory of Mediator, ariseth from his Relation unto us, and for us; and from what he did or wrought for us as Sinners, influenceth us with, in the virtue of that other personal Glory, in being an Head to us. And indeed Christ hath a three-fold Glory.

The first Essential, the same with God his Father, He the Son being coequal to him, God of God, and very God.

The second, belonging to his Person, as now constituted God-Man, to break forth in and upon the Man assumed, as being one Person with the Son, who is God essentially.

Thirdly, The Glory of his Mediatorship acquired by himself. The two latter are those afore us.

The first of the latter, the Glory of his Person, simply considered, is expressed in that Speech, Job. 1. 14. We beheld his Glory, as the Glory of the only begotten of the Father; which was meerly the Glory which brake forth in his Person: For otherwise, the Glory of his Office, as being Mediator, as dying and rising again, &c. was the Glory of his Person: And they saw not, nor considered not then the Glory of him, as dying, &c. for they understood it not till after he was risen; as in Luke 24. 45, 46. Then opened he their Understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures; and said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the Dead the third Day. This double Glory you may see, Heb. 1. 3. Who being the Brightness of his Glory, and the express Image of his Person, &c.

1. The Glory of his Person simply, as God-Man is in these words, Who being the Brightness of his Father's Glory, and the express Image of his Person.

2. The Glory of his Office as Mediator, in these words, When he had by himself (or by the Sacrifice of himself) purged away our Sins, he sat down on the right Hand of the Majesty on high.

Which latter Clause declareth, how he being originally in his Person as God-Man, the Brightness of his Father's Person, &c. after his Work performed on Earth, to purge Sins away, he went to Heaven, and took possession of a Glory answerable to that dignity of his Person; which was, to sit down on the right Hand of the Majesty on high: And therein to perform what was to be executed by him in Heaven, in intercession, &c. Which if it be not just the same in Substance and Order with what is here in these four Verses prayed for, I leave to be considered, he here praying, that now he had finished his Work on Earth, that now God would glorify him in Heaven, with that Glory which was due to his Person, who was the Brightness of his Father's Glory; and sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on High: So taking his place, according to the dignity of his Person specified; which Glory, as he was predestinated unto in his Person before the World, so he was appointed by Election, as the Heir, Lord, and End of all Things. And although his Mediatorship in Heaven, is involved in his sitting at God's right Hand; which he doth, as a Priest, to intercede, yet it is the possession of that personal Glory, which he was appointed unto, that is, the substantial Glory there spoken of, and intended, and which the weight is put upon.

Now Christ himself, within the compass of these five Verses, doth, according to this difference of Glories, frame his Prayer about himself. For, you may observe how he prays twice for his own being glorified; first, in vers. 1, 2. Glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify Thee; As thou hast given him Power over all Flesh, that he might give Eternal Life to as many as thou hast given him. And here a second time, vers. 5. And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the Glory which I had with thee before the World was. Now besides, that he would not have used such a repetition of the same thing, in so punctual and concise a Prayer, within the compass of so few Verses, and which is all he prays for, as for himself.

Besides this, the distinction of a two-fold glorifying, is evident from hence, that that glorifying him in vers. 1. relates to the performance of his Office of Mediatorship, which he says lay in this, To give Eternal Life to as many as God had given him; and the meaning of his first, Glorify Me, that I may glorify Thee, in vers. 1. is, that in that work of Suffering, which now he was entering into, God would gloriously assist him, and enable him to go through with it, according to the Commission, Authority, and Power God had given him, (for in that that Sense, Power, in vers. 2. must necessarily be understood) Glorify thy Son, that thy Son may glorify Thee: As thou hast given him Power over all Flesh, to this End, That he might give Eternal Life, &c. All this properly relates unto this Work and Office of Mediatorship: And that Participle [As] Thou hast given him Power, imports, that in a Proportion requisite unto that Work and Office, which he was empowered and authorised withal; he would give him a measure of glorious Strength answerable, or worthy of that Office, and fully enabling him to perform it, and throughly to execute it: and then to glorify him, as a Reward for that Work, when he should have finish'd it, vers. 4. I have glorified Thee on the Earth: I have finished the Work which thou gavest me to do. But the measure of this second Glorify me, in vers. 5. is the Glory of God Himself; and what it became God to glorify such an One with, as was his Son; and to be taken up into the Glory of God. It was not upon the account of what he had done in this World, as in Relation unto us, and our Eternal Life; but what simply arose from the Union and Communion, which he had, and was to have entirely with his Father, singly and alone; Glorify thou me with thine own self: And so, which was to arise from that Oneness with his Father, and which he had had with him afore this World; or, the consideration of any such thing. Any thing done in it, or Persons belonging to it, and which he and his Father had alone; and such as would have been, if there were no World nor had been extant; and so it was without relation unto his Work done; or Persons in this World, whom Eternal Life should be given unto.

If it be objected, that the Coherence of vers. 4, 5. I have glorified Thee on the Earth, &c. vers. 4. And now, O Father, Glorify thou me, vers. 5. would seem to carry it, that he should ask this second Glory; for this, as the Ground or Cause, that he had done such a work of Mediation on Earth?

I Answer, No, that is a Mistake: But that Coherence with this vers. 5. notes out that [Now] for the Time of it, that full Time was come he should be glorified. That whereas he now had, according to his own or his Fathers compact, performed all, and [finished] the Work which God gave him to do; and which also, that Word [finished] respects; namely, the Time, the due Time to be now come, That therefore, Now glorify me, with a Glory upon a far higher account due, It was to shew, That until this Now of finishing this Work of Redemption, that Glory otherwise due was suspended. And it is as if he had said, Now give me my Native Original Due upon thy meer Decree, and constituting me God-Man, and not at all depending upon my Merit or Work; but give me my Personal Due, which had been suspended till now, but which now is due: When I shall have performed that Work thou didst command and impose upon me, which finish'd, Now bestow that other upon me. Here was Ingenuity to the height, not to ask his native Due, nor speak a Word of it, till he had performed his imposed Service God had set him. And with this, doth that of Christ himself, Luk. 24. 26. Ought not Christ to have suffered, and enter into [His] Glory? His Glory, not upon account of Sufferings only due to him; but [His] before ever he suffered, which was absolutely and personally his upon another account, but which he was not (by God's Ordination and his own Consent) to enter into, but after Sufferings first, to enter upon it, and possess it.

And the Parallel of these two Places is observable. 1. That, as there he says, He ought (first) to suffer; So here, Now I have finished that Work. 2. To enter into Glory there; Glorify me with that Glory here. 3. Into His Glory, there; the Glory which I had afore, and without the consideration of this Work, here. And that Word, Enter into His Glory, imports, he then took Possession, and not afore, as Man; and yet in right it was his; and Sufferings were but the way to it; it was not purchased by Sufferings: This his Glory was an intrinsecal Glory, not additional.

Divers Interpreters have perceived, That the Glory of his Person, of God-Man; or, as they term it, His Intrinsecal Glory, is the Subject of this, Glorify me, See Toller, on vers. 5. in vers. 5. But they have not withal observed it with difference from that other Glory prayed for; vers. 2: Only Brüger's had a glimmering of it in his Exposition;

BOOK III.

Quamobrem glorificari mereatur & quod in eo sit gloria dignum. Duo exprimit, unum quod sit Redemptor humani Genetis, & hominum Salvator, vers. 2, 3. Alterum quod sit æternus Dei Filius.

Notat gloriam quam petit summam & singularem nempe eam quæ est Dei. Cartwright, in Verba.

on, on vers. 1. though he seems to have lost it again afterwards: his Words are these. ' He deduces two things, (says he) why he should be glorified: One, ' that he is the Redeemer of Mankind, and Saviour of Men, vers. 2, 3. The other, ' That He is the Eternal Son of God, vers. 5. Thus distinguisheth he, and but in a light touch.

3. the Differences between these two Glories, Personal and Mediatory, are many and great Ones. I take notice of the grand One of all, and 'tis in the Text, There is a Phrase which doth in the highest manner describe, wherein this personal Glory, the very Essence of it doth consist, Glorify me [with thine own self.] This so momentous a Clause, is diverted, to note only the Place wherein he would be glorified, [Glorify me, with thy self in Heaven, where Thou art] as spoken in opposition unto [I have glorified thee on Earth.] Others thus, I seek not worldly Glory, but Glory with thy self: All which do dilate the Spirit and Life of this Phrase. But our Cartwright and Gerard do interpret it of God's glorifying him, in, and with, and by the Glory God Himself had, and with that Glory alone, abstracted from all other Things whatsoever. Christ praying for that wherein the Spirit, the Essential Substance of his Glory and Blessedness lieth, even in thine own Self; O Father, Glorify me with thine own Self. Not only signifying his desire to be glorified conjunctly, both together, He as well as the Father; that is, That as God the Father had hitherto been glorified: So, that now Himself, that had been hitherto debased, might now be glorified also, according as in Joh. 5. 23. That all Men might honour the Son, as they honour the Father. But these are short of Christ's Desires, and Aims here; who seeks the utmost of Glory.

But it further notes, 1. That Glory which the Human Nature hath in God, and from God, and him alone. This both that Parallel place confirms, Joh. 13. 32. If God be glorified in him, God shall also glorify him in himself, and shall straightway glorify him. It is one and the same Glory he prayed for there and here; and expressed by the same Phrase: Only then, the Time when he prayed that, of his being glorified, was further off, though [straightway], perhaps within a few Months, or Days: So it was when that Sermon was made. But here, because the Time was approached, and the [straightways] run out; He therefore here says [Now] Glorify me: But 'tis one and the same glorifying. And in the 13th Chapter, 'tis God's Glory, Glorify him in Himself: but here 'tis, Glorify me with thine one self; the former Phrase explaining this other. In Rom. 15. 7. 'tis said, That Christ received us to the Glory of God, that is, to the Participation of that Glory which is to be had in the blessed God alone, whereof himself was personally and originally the Proprietor and Inheritor, and we Co-Heirs with Christ, Heirs of God, Rom. 8. 17. He communicating it unto us by his Right; according as he says after in his Prayer, Joh. 17. 22. And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them; that they may be One, even as we are One. Who was it first brought up seeing and enjoying God immediately? Christ the Son of God, he was the Founder of that way of Blessedness. There are two Psalms made of Christ, the 16th, and the 22d. The first Peter cites, Acts 2. And so applies it unto him, as not meant of David, but of Christ. The other, which is the Story of his being Crucified, beginning, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? &c. This latter, after the sad rehearsal of his Crucifixion, tells us of the Fruit and Consequence of that his Mediation, when performed as to himself: So to his whole Seed, from vers. 22. to the end. And this was the Glory that followed (as Peter speaks, 1 Pet. 1. 11.) the Glory of his Mediation. But that other 16th Psalms runs in another strain, and comforts himself with another manner of Glory, which should accrue to himself, as vers. 5. The Lord is my Portion and Inheritance. And it is the Enjoyment of this God alone, after his Ascension, he predicates as his highest Happiness, vers. 11. Thou wilt shew me the Path of Life: In thy Presence is fullness of Joy; at thy right Hand there are Pleasures for evermore. And this high Enjoyment of God, he brought up: None had, or should have seen God at any Time, had not he first done it. And this is the single Glory of his Person, as God-Man, which he prays for here in these Words.

And look, as in the former Verses, he had set out wherein our Eternal Life lies; namely, to know God, and him whom he hath sent: So in this Verse, he describes wherein his own Eternal Life lies, (I call it so, for of him now in Heaven, it is said, in that he lives, he lives to God); And it lies in God; Glorify me with thine own self. But his Mediatorial Glory, arising from his Works of Mediation, as Redemption and Intercession, is a Glory he hath afore God, and in his view, and which God gives him; but it ariseth from his Mediatory Action, as the Salvation of his Saints, as 2 Theff. 1. 10. But this of his Person, is a Glory he hath in God, and with God alone, in the Enjoyment of all that God is. As if he should have said, Father, let the Glory which is thine, be mine. Make me Glorious with the Glory thy self hast; with a Glory from Thee, and with a Glory in Thee. Nor is it the Manifestation of his Glory only unto others (as some would have it) he prays for, and in that Sense, to be glorified as his Father was: It is a thing beyond it, a Glory severed from that of Manifestation; for that is but outward, but this is an inward intrinsecal Glory of his Person, enjoyed in God, and with God, and such as God had, and which he should to Himself enjoy, and within Himself, a Glory in and between God and Him, consisting in that intimate entire Converse with God, and a free enjoyment of all the Sweetnesses, Perfections of the God-head, upon an account of personal Right to them, and Interest in them as his own, by virtue of his Union: And he is therefore said to come in his own Glory, and his Father's Glory, Luke 9. 26. That though it should shine in him and throughout him, yet inwardly much more.

2. You may observe, he specifies it to be that Glory he had with his Father when there was no World; that if you could suppose there were no World, no Creature extant, Saint nor Angel, yet let me be glorified (says he) with thine own self personally, and then I shall be glorious indeed. For that Glory I had with Thee afore the World was, was without any Work of Mediation done, or Creature made: And let me have but that Glory, and I have enough. And so, this is not that which his Mediation brought him in, or that which consisted therein.

'Tis true, (says he,) I have a Glory from all these Saints that are about me, and I am glorified in them, as 2 Theff. 1. 10. you have it, and they in me; and 'tis my Blood and Intercession hath brought them hither. Yea, and they are glorified by beholding my Glory: But what is all this in comparison of this alone, for me to be glorified with Thee and in Thee alone? This is the height of my Desires and Prayers: And this Glory is my personal Due, and hath been suspended to purchase an additional Glory by my Mediation. Yea, but this is the Glory I aspire after, and have in mine Eye above all other; and let us retire into each other, and enjoy it alone together; and therefore, Glorify me with thine own self: Draw the Curtains, as it were, upon all Glories else, whether of mine, or from all others I am glorified in, That Thou and I may singly and separately enjoy each other.

Other lesser Differences there are between this Personal and Mediatorial Glory, which might be added. As,

1. The Glory of his Person is his Birth-right, as Son of God: Heb. 1. 4. Being made so much better than the Angels, as he hath by Inheritance obtained a more excellent Name than they. The Glory that rises from his Mediation, and the Works thereof, is but acquired Accessory and Additional, won, and won by Conquest. He got by his Bow, as Jacob speaks, Gen. 48. 22.

If you would ask, Which of these two Glories, belonging to God-Man, are the greatest? Your own Thoughts, I believe, have by this Time, cast and determined, that this of his Personal Glory doth infinitely exceed that of his Mediatory Glory, or of his Office: Whether as Head to us, or Redeemer? although there was none in Heaven, or in Earth, that could have sustained these but He. For,

1. That is the Glory of the very Godhead, dwelling personally in him, breaking forth in, and shining through his Human Nature; as if the Sun being encompassed with a Case of Chrystal, how glorious would that Chrystal be! A Glory, such as is only worthy to appear in him that is one Person with God. This is the greatest and highest Glory; as well as Mystery; God manifested in the Flesh;

BOOK III.

Flesh; seen of Angels, taken up into Glory. For this, Let all the Angels worship him, (as Heb. 1. 6. when he brings his first-begotten into the World the Second Time); meerly for the excellency of his Person and Name, which by Inheritance he hath obtained above them; and not for Redemption of them, which is not there spoken of as of them.

2. It was the Excellency and Intrinsic Glory of his Person, from whence those Divinely-humane Acts of his Mediation did flow, and receive their value and virtue therefrom: His Blood because it is the Blood of God-Man, and so of the rest.

3. It is the Glory of his Person as God-Man united; that is, That Glory which after the Work of Redemption for us, and the Application of it to us finished, (as after the Day of Judgment it will be) when he shall have given up his Dispensatory Kingdom to his Father; Then it is he eminently appears in his own personal single Glory (as I may call it) for ever: I term it his single personal Glory which he will sit in Heaven with. You must know, if you have not known it, That his Type, the High Priest, went into the Holy of Holies, stripped of all his gawdy Robes: you see him pictured meerly in single plain Priest's Garments of Linnen: and it typified this out, That Christ's personal Glory is that with which in the Holy of Holies he shall most eminently, and above all others, appear for ever in, and sit down in it. And there he sits, shall the Saints say, appearing in the form of God; and so he is the utmost visible Image of God, to us: And was he, that furthermore did that great Office and Service to God, and Love to us, to bring us all who are here about him, out of the depth of Sin and Misery, hither to this Place with him, and purchased all the Glory we shall ever have: And this personal Glory, is that Glory, the beholding of which, the Blessedness of the Saints doth lie in, it is to behold his Person. For, as he prays for it here for himself, Joh. 17. 5. Glorify me, in, and with thine own self: So he prays for them, whom God had given him, that they may be where he is, (personally Resident); That they might behold my Glory, vers. 24. Father, I will, that they also whom thou hast given me, may be with me where I am, that they may behold my Glory which thou hast given me. And it is the Glory of his Person is above all there meant; for as elsewhere, it is seeing him as he is, that is the height of our Happiness, 1 Joh. 3. 1, 2. [As he is] (Mark it) that is, what his very Person is; beyond, and besides all that he hath done, or by his Person hath acted or procured: This is the Glory the Apostles so adored, as the highest Evidence and Efflux of his being the Son of God. All the Evangelists record the Story of his appearance on the Mount: The Apostle John he crys out in a Parenthesis of Wonderment; John 1. 14. And we beheld his Glory, the Glory of the only begotten of the Father, though shining in him but in the Days of his Flesh. And Peter he magnifies and exalts it above all things else he had to say of him, or could alledge in testimony for his being the Christ, and Son of God; We saw his Person in Glory, 2 Pet. 1. 16, 17, 18. We were Eye-Witnesses of his Majesty. For we have not followed cunningly devised Fables, when we made known unto you the Power and Coming of our Lord Jesus Christ; but were Eye-Witnesses of his Majesty. For he received from God the Father Honour and Glory, when there came such a Voice to him from the excellent Glory, This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased. And this Voice which came from Heaven we heard, when we were with him in the Holy Mount. And this Glory his Father then gave him from forth of the super-excelling Glory of his own, now breaking forth in him, and upon him, as an aforehand Demonstration and Specimen of what he was to wear in Heaven; where it is the excelling Excellency of his Glory there spoken of, doth appear. And 'tis plain, it was his personal Glory that Peter hath reference unto; and he interprets what is meant by the Glory Personal, which Christ in this Prayer says, Joh. 17. 22. that God gave him: And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them: that he might give us the like; namely, by meerly beholding him, and that His Glory, vers. 24. And to conclude it from the Text, It is this Glory, by the course of his Prayer, he aspires at, as the top and highest of his Glory. For you may observe, that he ascends in those his first Requests made for Himself: He begins to ask a being glorified in respect of his Office;

fice; both for to perform his Work, and that after, and for the Performance of it, to have the Reward promised him for it, peculiar and proper to it, which was, To be known and acknowledged the Mediator, and that had the Power to give Eternal Life to them that believe: And so, that Glory was for us, and our Salvation ordained Him, as the Words shew.

Chap. 5.

Well, but he soars up unto a Glory that is purely his Own, and for Himself alone; He flies up to the very top-Pinnacle, the Supreme Sublimity of the Divinest Glory, the utmost he could ask, and that for Himself; and enforces it from the highest Argument, The Glory which I had with Thee, afore the World was. And so ends his Prayer for Himself; for he had said the utmost. And therefore this is the Crown of All.

C H A P. V I.

The Exposition of some other Passages in Joh. 17. That God having first predestinated Christ to be God-Man, this moved him to Elect us, to compleat his Glory. The first Motive was, That as he was to be an Head, there might not be wanting to him a perfect Body to participate with him in the enjoyment of his Blessedness. How the Marriage of Adam in Paradise, was a Type of the Relation between Christ and the Elect his Spouse, designed before the consideration of the Fall. The second Motive was, That a Glory additional to Christ's personal Glory, might accrue to him as God-Man, from their being Elected. The third Motive was drawn from the Interest and Part which Christ predestinated God-Man had, together with his Father, in electing them, John 17. 1. And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them, that they may be One, even as we are One. The meaning of the words explained, by Answers to some Queries. What that Glory is which the Father had given to Christ. What that Glory is, which Christ thereupon assigns as his own Gift to us. When was the Time of giving this Glory to him, and to us. The fourth Motive is, What Christ represents to his Father, viz. the Glory which the accomplishment of this Design will bring to himself, and to his Father, when the Union and Glory of the Saints, shall thereby be perfected at the last Day of the World.

HAVING thus opened the fifth Verse, which sets out the Glory of Christ, as God-Man, given him in his Election by the Father; which was, and is, the proper Interest of his Person, as he was chosen to be God-Man, simply considered.

I come next unto those special Motives built thereon, made on our behalf, and as those which moved God, or, which God had an Eye unto, in his Choice or Election of us; with a respect unto Christ, as first ordained for himself.

Calvin well observes concerning Christ's praying in this Chapter; That he being entred into the very Inwards of Heaven, had afore his Eyes the secret and hidden Counsels of God, and prays at the rate thereof, and urgeth his Father therewith: And as I understand it (submitting it) he utters in the Passages I have selected; the very order of God's Counsels about us, and the Motives drawn from his own and his Son's Interest, as it stood in God's Electing; first, of Christ, then of us.

The Passages are in vers. 6. I have manifested thy Name to the Men thou gavest me out of the World, [THINE THEY WERE, AND THOU GAVEST THEM ME].

Verf. 10. And I am glorified in them.

Verf. 22. And the Glory which thou gavest Me, I have given them.

Verf. 24. Father, I will, that they also whom thou hast given me, may be where I am, that they may behold my Glory which thou hast given me.

And my general Method in opening each of these, as to this my purpose, shall be this.

First, To explain the words of each of these Verses in their order.

Secondly, To shew wherein the force of the Motives drawn from Christ's Interest in our Election, contained in those several Passages, doth lie; whereby he moved his Father, that according to his own Eternal Purposes made in Christ concerning us, in his choice of us, he would grant that Union (which is the end of our Election) ordained for US.

Unto the first, I premise and desire, this still to be remembered and carried along, That all those Passages, and the Motives therein contained, do, in a more especial manner, refer unto, and depend on, that personal Glory of Christ, spoken of upon that fifth Verse, (which hath been opened) first laid and supposed as the Head and Foundation of them all; as the top-link whereon these succeeding Passages I have singled out, do, as so many Links of a Golden Chain, hang, and in an orderly way depend; namely, that upon the Glory of the personal Union of Christ, God-Man, first ordained by God, (which therefore in the 5th Verse, Christ in praying for himself had forelaid); and from which (as first supposed) these principal Motives, made on our behalf for our Union and Glory, receive their Strength and Enforcement, as ordained us in the Election of us, with a relation to, and for the Interest of Christ.

And perhaps, that in the very opening and explanation of the words of each of these Passages, there will appear, couched, this very Point of Christ's having been first ordained as God-Man: And I shall, for the present, content my self with those; or at least 'twill be seen, how fairly they comply with the Notion thereof, (and herein I profess a modesty); However the opening the words, each in that plain sense and genuine meaning of them, (as it presents it self in that Dim Light I have about them) will serve unto the discovery, wherein the force of them, as they are Motives, should lie.

Verf. 6. Thine they were, and thou gavest them me.

1. Passage of Motive in the Words.

Here in order, next unto the Personal Glory ordained to Christ in God's Decrees, is his mention of an Election of other Persons of Mankind (Christ instancing in the Apostles for the rest) to be Followers, Companions, Consorts of his; That Christ might not be alone, nor partaker of his Glory wholly and only to himself; when the Father gave unto the Second Person, as he was considered God-Man, and as he sustained the Personage of God-Man, and whom he commended unto him to be his, and this from Everlasting. When one hath a Son that is marriageable, he thinks of a Wife, a Companion for him; And thus the Father did for his Son; and chose the Persons whom, and gave them him.

1. [Thine]; Thine by thy Election of them for me, out of the rest of the World: With which; that in 2 Tim. 2. 19. corresponds, The Foundation of the Lord

BOOK III.

Lord (that is laid in Election) remains sure ; The Lord knows who are HIS : They were His by his fore-knowledg of them, Rom. 11. 2. HIS People whom he FOREKNEW. Thine first, without Me when considered as God-Man ; though as Second Person he concurred in the choice of them, as also the Holy Spirit : Only the Father, being the first Person proposed them to the other two, as Persons with him simply considered ; and therefore, the Father here, in Christ's Address, bears the Honour of it ; [Thine], and thou gavest them me.

2. They were] ; which is spoken in distinction from what is again repeated in vers. 9. Them whom thou hast given me ; for they [are] thine : He urgeth there, That at present they are thine ; Here, in the time past, they were thine. This time past, notes out from Everlasting ; for then first it was, that he chose them for his : And in this Prayer, vers. 23. Thou lovedst them, as thou lovedst me. And among other, [As] or likenesses, the Point of Time when God thus loved them, As he did him, is one, (though him in order first) ; which he specifies, vers. 24. Thou lovedst me from the Foundation of the World ; and so, as me, from everlasting, so them.

3. And thou gavest them me]. This, some would limit unto their having been called ; and so, this Act to have been that in Time, when the Father gives those to Christ to apprehend and own ; and whom he draws to Christ by Calling. But the great and first giving of them to Christ, is an everlasting Act, as well as chusing of them ; and indeed, a distinct Act from Election it self, (considered as barely Election) though at Election and Concurrent with it : Thus in John 6. 36. All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me. Coming to Christ there, is Vocation ; and that Speech shews, that there is a foregoing Act of giving to Christ by God the Father, which is the cause of their coming ; and their coming, posterior to it, — shall come to me. And if afore calling, I ask, When that Act of giving them should first commence ? Sure, God that loved both them, to make them his own, and him so from Everlasting, would not defer giving of them to him, until after so long a space, as from Eternity unto their Vocation is : But, having his Son then extant and present with him, and privy to all his Intentions ; and the commending and bestowing them upon him, being so great a Gift, next to that of his own personal Glory ; he surely did it from the first, and as soon as the Thing was capable to be done, and this was from Everlasting, in those Transactions between the Father and the Son ; there being nothing to hinder it then, no more than afterwards.

And indeed, this their being given to him being twice repeated in this vers. 6. First, I have manifested thy Name unto the Men which thou gavest me out of the World. Then, secondly, again, Thine they were, and thou gavest them me. If we allow the first to import vocation in Time, we may well put the second unto Election afore all Time : And this latter, to be the account given by Christ, and an ascension unto the Original Cause, why they were given him at and by vocation ; vers. 12. Thine they were, (long afore, in thy everlasting Love and Election of them) and thou gavest them me, and from everlasting also ; which he after expresth, vers. 23. Thou hast loved them, as thou hast loved me : and me thou lovedst afore the foundation of the World, vers. 24. Where also their being given to Christ, is joined with Christ's Election. Gavest them me] ; For what end and purpose ? To be his, in his Relation to them, as they were the Father's in his : They are thine ; and mine are thine, and thine are mine : And his Relation to them, and theirs to him, we find in Scripture to be as Members to an Head, Fellow-Members, of Spouse unto an Husband, and Brethren to an Elder-Brother, of the same Nature with them ; of Father, and they his Children ; in and by all those Relations they are his.

Gavest them ME.] If this giving them to be his, was from Everlasting : The Question then will come under what consideration the [Me] comes under, Given them Me : Whether when they were given to him, and as Second Person, simply considered, or as constituted God-Man also. I said, at first, a Father seeks and gives a Spouse to his Son when Marriageable ; The Second Person simply considered, is not in potentiâ maximâ, of Marriage with us, but in a remote capacity ; unless you suppose him set up God-Man, he bears no Relation to us: The Wife is Bone of his Bone, who is the Husband, which signified Christ, and his Church.

And if it be said, That we were given unto him but with this as an after-propofal; that he might become Man for us, and then to marry us for our fakes only; That, I fay, is not signified at all by being given to him; but the contrary rather: For, in that fenfe it would rather have been said, That he was given to them, as both in the Old Testament, and when incarnate; To us a Son is born, to us a Son is given, (which we all acknowledg); And in the New, God gave his Son for us. But when a Thing is said to be given as a Gift to another, (as here we to Christ) it imports the Favour shewn to him to whom it is given; and therefore this giving these Persons, (which was the first Giving that passed) signifies, They were given to him for his sake, as a singular Gift and Favour to him. It remains therefore, that they were given as meet Companions, Children, Spoufes unto him already ordained, and set up as God-Man, to be an Everlasting Father, and by like reason, an Everlasting Husband to them, (they are both of the same Nature in God's Decree, and his own Undertaking). And being thus qualified and fitted to own them as such, it was therefore that he took them to be his, under these Relations, as being now, and by this Ordination of God's become a meet Husband, Father, Head, unto them. And to what end were they then given him, but that they should be owned by him, and received by him, to be his under those Relations, as well as they were the Father's in his Relation.

And truly, this is no other than what was prefigured and fore-signified, at and by the very first Creation of Man, when the execution of God's Purposes did first begin; and therein his Everlasting Purposes about Christ and his Church, were to be veiled under the Type and Shadow of the first Man Adam, both in his Formation and Marriage, which was, as soon as there was any such Subject capable to bear the Type of Christ and of his Church. His first formation, God himself declared to have been according to his own Image, which, as I anciently understood it, was according to the Original Pattern of Humane Nature, first set up in Christ's Ordination to be Man, as, in the Idea of God's Eternal Decrees, he was the first-Born of every Creature. And then, as for his Marriage with Eve his Wife, formed out of him; those Divines that stand for Christ's having been primarily ordained, use to alledge it for one proof thereof; that that Speech of his, Bone of my Bone, &c. And for this cause a Man shall cleave to his Wife, Gen. 2. 23, 24. was intended by God, (though Adam understood it not, as Caiphas did not his Prophecy) of our Christ and his Church; and so of that intended Union of Christ and his Church; though in execution brought about after the Fall, yet in Intention, first decreed without the consideration had of the Fall; it being uttered by him in his pure and innocent condition afore he fell. But this now I insist not on largely to explain, having done it elsewhere; that which I here alledge it for, is, That look as Adam (his Type herein) was first, that thus Christ was first, in God's Intention, absolutely ordained to be God-Man. And that therefore, because he should not be alone, God had given and predestinated his Church to be a Spouse to him; and from Everlasting brought Her, and presented Her (as who was to be made out of him) as a Gift, infinitely more valuable valuable than all the World besides, which God had made for him: And God put her into Christ's Heart and Bosom, and then Christ took her as given him by his Father to be his; and to cleave to her alone for ever, and to communicate his own Glory unto her, in her designed proportion: And that Adam and his Marriage, was in this very thing thus the Type of Christ and his Church, in their Union and Conjunction; the Application of the Apostle of Adam's Speech thereunto, manifestly shews, in Ephes. 5. 30, 31. For we are Members of his Body, of his Flesh, and of his Bones. For this Cause shall a Man leave his Father and Mother, and shall be joined unto his Wife, and they two shall be one Flesh. And how Adam was alone and first made, the Story in Genesis tells you; and the Apostle elsewhere, 1 Cor. 11. 8. For, the Man is not of the Woman, but the Woman of the Man.

2. Passage or particular Motive in the Words.

Verf. 10. And I am glorified in them.

It is from his own Interest in Us, as he is God-Man, he pleads; and his Plea is, That besides his single personal Glory ordained him, vers. 5. And his Interest in us then, by the Father's having given us to him, vers. 6. there was designed therewith a Glory that should accrue out of them to him, besides that which was personally his due: God's End in giving them to him being, that Christ might be glorified in them, and their Union with God effected by him; which Union is, that he centers in, in the conclusion of the 11th Verse, That they may be One, as we are One: which in plain words is, That in giving them Me, O Father, thou aimedst at, and didst ordain withal, A Glory to me in them, and them for my Glory: And those words [And I am glorified in them] have in their coherence, this import in them; That not thou only, O Father, art glorified in them, but I also; I as well as Thou. I have a joint-stock of Glory by thy Decree running along with thine, in them, and to be had out of them, even as thou hast. He had said, just afore, All mine are thine, and thine are mine; All things (as I opened it) as well as all Persons: All Things are in common, His as well as his Father's; and so the Persons of these were his, in that highest proportion of Interest and Propriety, as well as his Father's; and a Glory to accrue therefore from these, according to that proportion, is my due also, as well as the Father's; and is as if he had said, I (Father) have, according to thine own Decree, accepted them for mine: Now therefore perform that Design of thine, which, together with thy Gift of them, thou ordainedst them unto, and them to Me, which was and is my Glory: yea, and therein lay the greatness and excellency of the Gift of them, (as to me) that my Glory was to be a Sovereign End of them, together with Thine. And this, the parallel of the former Type will also warrant; Of the Woman 'tis said, she is the Glory of the Man, 1 Cor. 11. 7. And to be his Glory in this respect among other, That he had so noble a Creature as the Woman on purpose made for him: Even as of us 'tis said, We are the Glory of Christ, 2 Cor. 8. 23. But more expressly in vers. 9. of Chap. 11. Neither was the Man created for the Woman, but the Woman for the Man; there is the Type. Now that Christ is the Man, the Husband and Head of his Church, and she the Spouse, Ephes. 5. 23. informs us, For the Husband is the Head of the Wife, even as Christ is the Head of the Church; and he is the Saviour of the Body.

'Tis undeniable, but that Christ's Speech, Job. 5. 23. (That all Men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father; He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath sent him) carries this with it, That by God's Ordinance, the Son hath a joint Stock with his Father, in the dispensation of all Things; and so of the Glory that shall arise from thence: And that it was spoken of him considered as God-Man, or of the Son of God personally united unto that Man Jesus, the coherence of that Speech in vers. 22. afore, and vers. 27. after, do manifestly shew: For in vers. 22. He declaring what sovereign Honour it was which he shared in, he says, The Father hath committed all Judgment to the Son: And then, in vers. 27. he further explains himself, how it is to be understood of him; The Father hath given him Authority to execute Judgment also, [because he is the Son of Man]; and therefore as such considered, is that spoken of of him, vers. 23. And accordingly the Lamb (which is Christ God-Man) hath a joint Tribute and Revenue of Glory given him with the Father, Rev. 5. 12, 13. Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive Power, and Riches, and Wisdom, and Strength, and Honour, and Glory, and Blessing. And every Creature which is in Heaven, and on the Earth, and under the Earth, and such as are in the Sea, and all that are in them, heard I, saying, Blessing, Honour, Glory, and Power be unto him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever.

Yea, I say further, That this Glory of his, being a Sovereign Paramount End (though under his Father) becomes a right and just due to him as God-Man, when constituted so to be; and that the Saints and all Creatures, should in their several Ways and Proportions, serve unto his Glory as well as to the Father's. For, by the same Ground, that other Royalties which are so Divine and God-like, become an undeniable Due to him (as that, because his Person is the only begotten Son of God; that therefore, he should have a Divine personal Glory, answerable to the Fulness of the God-head, dwelling bodily or personally in him, as 1 Job. 18. shews.) So this of a Supream Endship, in like manner with the Father; this latter must be no more denied him than the other.

They Object, The Glory of Christ, as God-Man, is but a Creature. I Reply,

1. The very Glory of God which is given him by us Creatures, and ariseth out of all Creatures, (which we term his Manifestative, (not Essential) Glory) is but a Creature in it self: And yet, because the Terminus, or Person it belongs or redounds unto, is God; therefore, we say of it, that it is The Glory of God; in that respect it is so Supream, as it may not be given unto another, that is, not to Creatures.

2. Christ's Glory, as God-Man, is but a Creature, yet it redounds to the Glory of him; that is, God, who is One Person with a Creature, and thereupon shining in that Creature: And it is a Divine Glory, and you are to esteem and adore it as the Glory of the only begotten Son of God. You may see this in a Parallel Case to it; Take Christ's Obedience and Sufferings, and they are but Creatures materially considered; yet in relation to the Person that is the Subject of them, whose they are (though performed but in the Human Nature) and they are said to be the Blood of God, and Righteousness of God. So here, the Glory that appertains and belongs to this Person, is a Glory belonging unto God; and is not to be levelled with the Glory of Endship, belonging unto any the most glorious Creatures, or all Creatures.

You will again say, This Glory of Christ as God-Man, was given him, (as in this Prayer he acknowledgeth) by an Act of voluntary Predestination, as well as ours, and what is to us voluntarily given, might in the first rearing of it up and Ordination, be disposed of as Arbitrarily, and so for other Ends; as namely, for us and our Salvation.

I Answer, 1st. It was a meer arbitrary Act in God to ordain his Son to be God-Man; and he might have chosen whether he would predestinate him, or not, to such a Glory. 'Tis true also, It was purely voluntary in God, whether he would have ordained any others with him, or any other Thing besides him; and if any other Persons with him, whether to have made him their Head only preserving them from sinning, or withal, a Redeemer from Sin, upon the Fall. But still, if he would so ordain him, it must be an Ordination worthy of him that is his Son; and let that be whatsoever God pleaseth: yet still, that whatever must be ordained unto his Glory as well as to the Fathers, he must be the Sovereign End of all, as well as his Father; this falls to him as his Right. Heb. 1. 2. It is said, he was The appointed Heir of all Things, (which must be meant of him as God-Man); and for him to be God-Man, depended upon Appointment, yet being appointed, he is said to have it by Inheritance, vers. 4. Being made so much better than the Angels, as he hath by Inheritance obtained a more excellent Name than they: And so by a natural Right, because he is a Son; for so it follows, vers. 5. For unto which of the Angels said he at any Time; Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten Thee. So as indeed, in the appointing him to be God-Man, he necessarily constituted him the Heir of all Things; which he should otherwise, or besides him him predestinate. For, it was the natural Right of the Person so ordained, and could not be denied him; nor the Glory of it in the Execution be suspended, but with his own Consent: and that Suspension but for a Time.

And, 2^{dly}, Furthermore, God knew what he did, whilst he was predestinating of him, and foresaw that this Right must be the natural Concomitant of his being God-Man: And God in his single knowledg of Vision (as we call it) had the Draught and Model of all, in his Divine Understanding and View, ere ever his Will did set his Fiat, or Purpose, to any thing that was decreed. And among others of his infinitely vast Designs, he had the intuition of Christ as God-Man, as one great One: Yea, and of all other so eminent, as that, if his Will would decree him at all, this high Endship (I have spoken of) of all Things was to be his Right, and a necessary Concurrent and Consequent of such his being predestinated. And therefore, certainly, the Divine Counsel of his Will, did from the first, cast and contrive all Things else he did or should decree, in such a manner as to be for his Christ, and his Glory; as well as God did contrive all should be for his own Glory, as he is God; and both with one and the same Act from the first. So that, let Men say, what they in their Vanity imagine of Christ, as God-Man, his being decreed afore the Decree of the Fall, or after; they must all yet acknowledg this for a fix'd Center and Conclusion, That God afore-hand foreseeing him and all Things in the Idea's of his simple Intelligence, did form all for him as their Supream End, then whenever his Will decreed him. If indeed we could suppose, That the Idea of Christ, God-Man, had been out of his Eye, and the view of his Fore-knowledg, or simple Intelligence; we might then have only supposed, many things or all things might have been ordained, and Christ not as yet ordained; and Christ himself to have been decreed for them, and not them for him at first: But it could not be so here in Christ's case. For, seeing God foresaw that whenever he was decreed, it is He must be decreed the End of them all, and Heir of them all. Therefore he was first thought of and decreed; for so the End necessarily is to be: If therefore, when he is to be predestinated, he is to be predestinated this End of all Things, then it must be that he is first predestinated.

Yea, we say further, That when our All-wise, Great, and Sovereign God, did set himself to ordain any Thing at all, he did contrive and frame his Ordination about them, such as might tend to Christ's Glory, and his Own; and had the like Respect and Eye unto the Concernments of his Christ, as God-Man, in his, as he had to his own Concernments, as God.

3. Passage or Motive in the Words.

The third Particular Motive, is drawn from Christ's Interest, having been first set up as God-Man in God's Election. Joh. 17. 22. And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them: that they may be One, even as we are One.

First, For the Exposition, then, wherein the force of the Plea lies.

Here he further pleads, that they were not only ordained for the Glory of him, as in vers. 10. but that he himself being ordained God-Man in Predestination, he had as God-Man joined with the Father as the free Doner, and Ordainer of them unto that Glory, and perfect Union, as well as his Father: Or, if you will, in our Familiar Language, our Glory was a Deed of Gift, and his Hand was to that Deed of Gift, which was to make over Glory unto us, as well as his Father's: Our Glory was his free Deed of Gift, as was the Father's. And therefore, he must needs be deeply interested to claim it for us of his Father; and hath from thence an undeniable Plea to move him to grant it: and so the Story and Series of Election-Designs of Christ and us, begun at the 5th Verse, runs fairly into the 22^d Verse: In this Order, 1. God the Father, in Predestination, gave him that personal Glory of being God-Man; which the Second Person condescending to take on him, he bore it afore his Father as God-Man, afore the World was, this vers. 5. Then, 2. His Father did withal give him his Elect to be His, vers. 6. &c. And, 3. Did also Ordain and subordinate them for Christ's Glory, as the End of them, as well as his Own, vers. 10. And now, 4. In this 22^d Verse, God having given him that high and Sovereign Glory, singly for himself alone; and given it absolutely without Terms and Conditions, to him; (as the Nature Nature of a Gift, especially of that Gift, to such a Person, required): He thus set up, and constituted, in this Glory of God-Man, he was not only the requisite Means, or Medium to convey a Glory to us, but he was by the Priviledg and Prerogative hereof empowered to convey it by way of Gift, and to make a Deed of Gift of the like Glory and Union to us: And so, as unless in that manner, he did make it over to us, and set his Hand to it, and Signed it, as a concurrent Giver of it with his Father, we had never had it. And I (says he) gave unto those my Father had given me, out of Love to my Father, who had loved both them and me, Portions forth, to each of them, out of that Glory he had given me: And I did give it as freely to them, as my Father had freely given mine unto me, to the end that I and they may be one, and live for ever together, vers. 24. That so their Glory and Union with me and my Father, may be perfected by their beholding that personal Glory so peculiarly proper to me, given me by my Father. Every tittle of this may be evinced from the Aspect and Correspondency this 22d Verse holds with vers. 5. together with the immediate Connexion of the following 23d, and 24th Verses. And indeed, these 22d, 23d and 24th Verses, do continue the sum of all the former put together, as the Conclusion of his Prayer for the whole Church; the rest being for the Apostles.

This being the Sum, I shall open and prove the Particulars therein contained, either by Answers to certain Queries, or several plain and simple Assertions, and both founded upon the Words.

I. Query. First, What is meant here by that Glory which the Father had given to Christ?

Answer. First, Negatively.

1. It is not that Essential Glory abstractly considered as his Second Person, without the supposed Union of the Man-hood: (In that manner as hath been explained.) I will not only urge for this, that it's said to be a Gift given him; for his Essential Glory of the Second Person abstractly considered, was by natural Generation communicated to him: But a Gift is what is meerly out of Will, and Good-Will, bestowed. But this Argument for it would be alone sufficient, that he plainly speaks this Speech of himself as a Mediator, or Head of Union to us; as vers. 22, 23. shew. And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them: that they may be one, even as we are one. I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one, and that the World may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me. Now he, as the Second Person simply considered, is not the Means of Union of us with the Father, but it is the Divine Nature united to the Human Nature (as the Loadstone set in the Steel) which has the virtue of drawing us into Union with himself, and his Father; which he therefore prayeth for upon it, for us: Having said first, The Glory which thou hast given me, as that Glory which he gave unto us, upon the Glory given to him. And so he is considered here in this Speech, as Medium Unionis; Thou in me, and I in them, that they may be made perfect in One.

2. It is not meant here of the Glory of his Mediation, his Mediatory Glory, as we call it; that also is proper to himself, and incommunicable to us: And of it cannot be said, That the Glory God gave him, he hath given us. We are not constituted by him Redeemers of, or Mediators for, or Heads of Union to other Saints, as he is to us: then we should be givers of Glory one to another. And then, all Saints (and of all Saints he speaks here) should all be Heads, and Mediators; and so there should be no Body.

Secondly, Affirmatively. It is eminently, and singularly meant of the Glory we have been speaking of: namely, of his being God-Man, in One Person, and the Glory that flows from thence, as it is, and was designed to shine forth in him in Heaven, as the immediate Consequent of that Union. And this was a Gift indeed, a Gift to purpose, greater than all Gifts; as all Divines acknowledg the Grace and Glory in his personal Union to have been.

I know that many Interpreters extend it unto all whatever; that is, any where, or in other respects said to be the Glory of Christ: as that his working Miracles, which is called his Glory, Joh. 2. 11. This beginning of Miracles did Jesus

BOOK III.

Jesus in Cana of Galilee, -and manifested forth his Glory; and his Disciples believed on him. His giving to him his Spirit, which was to him without measure: So in giving Grace and Holiness, which is called Glory, 2 Cor. 3. last. But we all with open Face, beholding as in a Glass the Glory of the Lord, are changed into the same Image, from Glory to Glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. And many such like; by which they go about to shew the Scope of Christ's Petition to be, That he would give them the like Glory, in these Particulars, which his Father had given him: And so indeed, that all the Glory the Father had given him, in all the Particulars of it, he doth give sprinklings thereof to us. But this extended Interpretation, (though in respect of the Things themselves it be a Truth;) yet as applied to this Place, produceth from this Suggestion, that he should speak of that Glory, which in this Life is possessed by us; and given us in order unto Eternal Life: (Of which more anon.) And doting upon this to be Christ's main and sole Scope, that to make the Saints one among themselves is the intendment of the next Words, That they may be one in us. Whereas it is the high and ultimate Union which is perfected betwixt us, and Christ, and God, as I have shewn: And whereas in the Words after 'tis the ultimate Glory in Heaven, and the perfection of us by that Union that is intended. And therefore answerably, the Glory given Christ here, is his prime and ultimate Glory; which was his personal Union with the Son of God: that is, the Gift that is intended. Gerard after he had enumerated all such particular Glories forementioned, given to Christ, whereof some he admits; yet at last, when he had considered all, and attentively viewed the Scope of the Words, pitcheth upon this, That the Glory of the Son of God, who is God united to Man in one Person, and the Glory that flows therefrom, is the Glory here intended: And that as the Fountain of our Union, and so of our utmost Glory. And so Brugensis also doth interpret it; and he tells the Genealogy of it thus: The Son of God, the Second Person, being one by Essence with the Father, to him he united the Man Jesus by personal Union: And of him as such, I interpret that of the 5th of John, vers. 26. For as the Father hath Life in Himself; so hath he given to the Son to have Life in Himself. And that Person, as now become God-Man, when united to us, we thereby become Partakers of his Divine Nature; and so to have the Divine Nature to dwell in us first: As he by his Union, hath the Divine Nature of the God-head to dwell in him.

Hæc beatissima Unio inter Patrem & Filium, itemque inter divinam &

humanam naturam in Christo, origo est & fons spiritualis illius unitatis quam Christus [hoc loco] credentibus precatur: (And we must consider that our Union is the Thing prayed for) quia per Christum, propter Christum, in Christo fiunt filii Dei & divinæ naturæ participes, 2 Pet. 1. 4. And again more largely upon the same Place he sets it forth thus: Quia Christus secundum humanam naturam est unum nobiscum, secundum divinam naturam unum cum Patre, & quia assumptæ naturæ humanæ per unionem personalem datum est esse unum hypostaticum cum Filio Dei, qui cum Patre est unum per essentiæ unitatem; inde nobis hæc felicitas contingit, ut per Christum Deo uniti etiam Deo uniri possimus: atque eò respicit Christus quando dicit gloriam illam unitatis quam credentibus dedit se a Patre prius accepisse: ut enim Pater dedit Filio per æternam generationem ut haberet in seipso, Johan. 5. 26. Ita quoque per æternam illam generationem dedit Filio esse unum per essentiæ unitatem cum Patre: Juxta humanam naturam dedit esse unum personale cum divina natura, quam λόγῳ communem habuit cum Patre.

And others do in effect run upon the same interpreting, That the Glory given him, was to be his Son; and the Glory given us by him, is to be Sons unto God with him: and we believing on his Name, he gives us Power by Charter, or Grant, to be the Sons of God, Joh. 1. 12. Also our Sonship is derived by our Union, or Marriage with him, as being the natural Son of God; and his Marriage of us, is his taking us to be His: And so the Glory of Sonship which we have is by free-Gift; for 'twas free for him to marry, and 'twas to be done by his Consent. And it was by the personal Union that God bestowed on the Man Jesus the Glory of being his Son; That holy Thing (saith he) shall be called the Son of God, Luk. 1. 35. And his being the Son of God is the highest Glory of Christ; and more than all, even the Foundation of all. Thus, if we consider him as Second Person simply, he is the Son of God by natural Generation: if we consider him as Man, he is the Son of God by personal Union, unto the Second Person. If we consider our selves, it is by Adoption, tion, by Marriage with Him, who is the natural Son; that we become Sons unto God.

Chap. 6.

And besides, what the weight of these Things, re-ipsâ, or in the Thing it self have in them; let us but look about us, what Glory it is he speaks of before, and after in this his Prayer. We find it thrice spoken of, First, in vers. 5. Secondly, in this 22d vers. Thirdly, in vers. 24. And let us view the aspect and correspondency which these three Verses have, and hold one with another; and let us commensurately expound each of them.

1. Let any one attentively read the 5th Verse, And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the Glory which I had with thee before the World was. Then this 22d Verse, And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them: that they may be One, even as we are One. Surely the Glory which he said, I had with thee before the World was, there, is the same of which, and upon occasion of which, he utters, the Glory which thou gavest me, here; and refers to it. Now I have shewn, that the Glory of his Person, as he is God-Man, is meant, the Glory of which the Second Person then existing took upon him: God having predestinated him thereunto, and wore it afore his Father: He took on him that Person, and correspondently the Connexion of vers. 22. and vers. 5. is filled up thus. Thou having given me that Glory of the Personal Union, and predestinated me to it as proper and peculiar to my Person; I being constituted such by Thee, do freely concur with Thee to give the like Union and Glory pro suo modulo (as Brugers's word is) to be imparted to them.

2. Let us then look backward, and compare this 22d Verse with vers. 24. that follows: There saith he, That they may behold the Glory which thou hast given me. This certainly is the same Glory that is meant here, vers. 22. For he goeth on to prosecute the same Argument, speaks ad idem: And there shews the way how that Glory should be actually communicated to them, and they have it in Possession; which Glory here in the 22d Verse, he saith, he had given them by way of Right and Donation: And the way to possess it, according to the intent of his giving, is set out to be by their beholding his Glory, in vers. 24. Now what Glory of his is that? It is the Glory of his Person, that of God dwelling in the Human Nature, the Beams whereof break forth there; and that is his substantial or personal Glory, as he is God-Man: And that's it which his Disciples saw, John 1. 18. As of the Person of him who was the only begotten Son of God; it was the immediate breaking forth, and emanation of the Hypostatical Union. And so when he wrought Miracles, which is called his Glory, Joh. 2. 11. This beginning of Miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his Glory, and his Disciples believed on him. His Miracles were the immediate Demonstration that he was the Son of God, dwelling in the Human Nature personally; as himself argues throughout that Gospel against the Jews.

3. Again, the same Glory in the 5th Verse, and in the 24th Verse, is meant: For of that in the 5th Verse, He saith, It was the Glory he had before the World was: And in this 24th Verse correspondently, The Glory which thou hast given me: for thou lovedst me before the Foundation of the World. Which again he adds, as the Foundation of the Gift of that Glory which he means; even his Love before the World was. So then, it is the same Glory in all three places, which is his personal Glory, as he is God-Man, and his Union unto that One Person, and the immediate consequence thereof; and to be manifested in his very Person.

II. Query. What that Glory is which is given us thereupon?

Answer. It is the Participation of our Sonship-Union with him, in our Degree and Proportion, which we have from him, and the Glory that flows from him by reason of this, as it shall in the perfection of it break forth in Heaven, in us: This is the Glory which Christ hath given us. We know that our Sonship and Adoption is called Glory, Rom. 9. 4. and Rom. 8. 23. Christ's Glory being the Glory of the only begotten Son of God, gave us Power to be Sons. John 1. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he Power to become the Sons of God, even to them that believe on his Name. Compared with vers. 18. No Man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the Bosom of the Father, he hath declared him. And if Sons, then Heirs, Co-Heirs of Glory

BOOK III.

Glory with Christ. And it is the utmost Glory which breaks forth in Heaven, in Christ, from his Personal Union, and in us, from our Sonship and Union with Christ, that is here meant; and the Reason is, because it is that Glory wherein, and whereby our Union is said to be made perfect; John 17. 23. I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one, and that the World may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me: Which explains this vers. 22. And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one. And therefore, as Gerard observes the words, that they may be perfect in one, is not taken, τελικῶς, as noting the End, or the Effect of that Glory given us, as whereby, as the Means, we come to be perfect in One; but it is taken, ἐδικῶς, as explaining wherein that Glory lay; namely, in a perfection of Union; but we may take it in both. Now our Relative Union with Christ, is in this Life as perfect as ever, and we are Sons as much as ever; and the Man Jesus was as perfectly united to the Son of God, while he was on Earth, as he ever shall be; but the perfection of it, he saith, is in the other World. And therefore the Glory which he intends, is, as it breaks forth in the full enjoyment and manifestation of it in the other World, founded upon his Personal Union with the Son of God on his part, and our Glory, upon our Union with him, on our part: And therefore it is, that our Saviour Christ calls it Glory, both on his part, and ours, rather than Sonship. The same may be urged out of John 17. 24. Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my Glory which thou hast given me: for thou lovedst me before the Foundation of the World. And our Cartwright thus pitcheth the connexion and order of vers. 22. with what follows; that whereas he had in the former part of the Chapter, prayed for Sanctification and Preservation afore for us, as the Means to bring us to Glory: Now, saith he, he frames his Prayer for our Glorification; which Christ founded upon this ground, The Glory thou hast given me, I have given them. And therefore they pitch short, who interpret this Glory of Grace, as the Means to Glory hereafter, or the beholding of the Glory of Christ in this Life; 2 Cor. 3. ult. for here it is the very Glory it self which Grace is to bring us to; which God's, and Christ's Heart, in their several Decrees, were so intent upon in the primary Intention thereof; even the Glory of that Sonship, both of Christ and us, that should be in the other World; and was first given, both to him and us, as being Intentio Finis, the Intendment of what should be the ultimate End of us and Christ: and with that view of it, it is, that Christ prays here. And let any Man give a more suitable, harmonious, congruous, genuine Interpretation than this: For what is more suitable, or indeed can be, than that our Glory, both of Sonship and Possession, should be founded upon our Union with Christ; and that Christ should found both our Union and Glory on his Personal Union with the Son of God; and the Glory that thence follows, and is due to him. What more genuine, what more consonant, what more suitable can be thought of, to fill up the meaning of these words?

Nunc pro glorificatione petitionem instituit.

Object. This Interpretation will strengthen the Hands of those that hold the Saints have the same personal Union with the Son of God, the Second Person that the Man Jesus hath; for he saith, The Glory thou hast given me, I have given them.

Answer. 1. Our Saviour on purpose hath interwoven a difference between our Union and his, our Glory and his; whereby to prevent this very Objection: for our Union and Oneness with God and Christ, is declared to be but secondary and derivative; and his not of the same order or rank with ours, I in them, and thou in me, as it immediately follows. Ours is a collateral Line, far off removed, of an inferior House; but Christ's Union with the Father is in a direct Line: for his Divine Nature is the same with the Father's, by which they are one God; and his Humane Nature is one by an immediate personal Union, whereas ours is a far off removed: Our Union with God is but by our Union with Christ; it's a Copy-hold of this Lord of Glory. It is a certain Rule, that what is derivative of an Original, never riseth to be the Original: 'tis Christ's Glory here, so that 'tis he who gives us our Glory. And this is the Glory, and top of his Glory, that he hath Glory so in himself, as he is the Lord of it, to bestow it. This is far otherwise in our Case ; and Christ notes it out in that Speech of his, the Father hath given the Son to have Life in himself : That's his Prerogative, he hath it independently, he hath it in himself ; whereas of us, (he saith) Ye live in me, and that he is our Life, we have it not in our selves.

2. Of their Glory, he saith, It is but by a beholding his, and in that manner it is conveyed to them ; Verf. 24. Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my Glory which thou hast given me ; for thou lovedst me before the Foundation of the World. And how infinitely distant then must it be accounted, from what is the Glory of his Person : Ours is but by beholding his ; it is but as the shine of the Sun upon the Stars ; which though it be called a Glory by the Apostles, The Stars differ in Glory, 1 Cor. 15. 41. Yet it is not that Glory as it is subjective in the Sun, but susceptible in them ; that they are such Bodies, as that the Light of the Sun can be reflected from them, and thereby leave, and cause a Glory to appear in them.

3. This agrees with the main scope here ; which is not to shew it is identically the same Glory, but that it is derived from his, and he is the bestower of it, and he is the Lord of it : I have given it them, saith Brugensis, that is pro illorum modo & modulo, according to their capacity and measure.

3. Query. Unto what Time, or Date, the giving of this Glory should be referred ; either concerning that of Christ's, When it was that the Father gave this Glory to him his Son ? as also the Time which Christ means, when he saith, I have given it them : this in general we are sure of, that both are spoken of in the Time past.

Ans. 1. For the Father's giving this Glory to his Son, it was from Everlasting given, as Christ intends it, even that in Predestination : For this first corresponds with vers. 5. as I have opened : and, secondly, with vers. 24. The Glory which thou gavest me, for thou lovedst me from the Foundation of the World.

2. If the Question be of the Time of Christ's giving us this Glory ; we must take this along, That giving it here, is not his giving it, only as he is the Second Person, simply considered, that Act of his, as such, is included in his Father's ; but we must interpret it of him, considered as God-Man also, as hath been opened ; for it is a Gift to us, that flows from that Personal Union of his to us, and is founded upon it, and so supposed it first : So the Query will proceed anew ; Whether it is to be understood of him, taken as Man, after his actual Union with the Son of God, made at his Conception ; or of him as God-Man, the Second Person considered, as bearing that Personage, and undertaking it afore God, as hath been explained.

For the first ; If it be meant of him as God-Man, after he was united actually, &c.. Then,

1. 'Tis certain his Consent, as such, was to the Glory of every Name or Person of us whom God means to bring to Glory : The Man Christ knew his Sheep by Name, for he calls them by Name ; John 10. 2, 3. But he that entreteth in by the Door, is the Shepherd of the Sheep. To him the Porter openeth, and the Sheep hear his Voice, and he calleth his own Sheep by Name, and leadeth them out. And 'tis the Man that speaks it, vers. 16. He means not only the Jews that were godly, and then converted ; whereof many he saw, as Man, with his bodily Eyes, but the Sheep that were among the Gentiles, scattered in all Places, and in all Ages ; these in like manner he then calls by Name, and saith, that He must gather them, as being not yet called, nor many of them extant in being : And therefore that Book, or Copy of this Deed of Gift, which his Father presented him, for him to put their Names into, it's called, The Lamb's Book of Life. And we see, that even here, before he is crucified, he saith, I have given it them, even all whom his Father had given him, for he prays for the whole Flock. And yet speaks it now as in Time past, I have given it him ; 'twas fit that God should shew him, both whom he was to die for, and whose Sins he did bear : And so, his Deed of Gift was concurrent with his Father's, as to the Persons and Things given.

1 Cor. 2. 8.

2. Understand it of him, as now he is actually Man, 'tis said to be a Gift of his, and a Gift of his, such as his Father's Gift to him had been, so that he was free in it, as his Father also was in his Gift: And why? Because that Jesus Christ was the Lord of Glory, as he is sometimes called: and this is spoken of him, even when he was crucified, in that 1 Cor. 2. 8. Which none of the Princes of this World knew: for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of Glory. And therefore had Power to dispose of it as freely, as any Lord hath of what he owns: And his Father, in setting him up as God-Man, as he gave him to have Life in himself, John 5. 26. So a free Power in himself to quicken whom he would, as freely as his Father: As it is in vers. 21. of the same Chapter: for as the Father raiseth up the Dead, and quickeneth them, even so the Son quickeneth whom he will. And perhaps therefore it is he speaks here in the next words in the manner, as no where else, and in no point else but of this; Father, I will that those which thou hast given me, be with me, where I am, to behold my Glory; for he out of the freedom and dominion of his Will, did give it them, as well as his Father.

There is a Question started by the Jesuits, Whether Christ, as Man, was a meer Executor of his Father's Will? That Slur they would put upon our Doctrine of God's absolute limited Decrees, as in the Case of Christ, Whether he were not an Arbitrary Designer of what-ever he doth himself also? Which they hold to maintain the Dominion of Free-Will, according to their Tenent. But though they think they have us in a Noose in this Point, we easily salve it, by saying, That though he as Man, and as God-Man, doth not any Thing, or Act, nor to whom, but those whom his Father's Will is to have him to do: yet that therein he concurs with his Father, as freely as the Father himself; and therefore 'tis his free Gift, as well as his Father's. To go no further to confirm this Answer, than that of John 5. 21. For as the Father raiseth up the Dead, and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickeneth whom he will. And this he speaks of himself, as he is the Son of Man, as 'tis expressed, vers. 27. — And hath given him Authority to execute Judgment also, because he is the Son of Man. And yet he professeth to do nothing of himself without the Father, vers. 19. Then answered Jesus, and said unto them, Verily, verily I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: For whatsoever things he doth, these also doth the Son likewise. He indeed did not first Name the Persons, but his Father named them to him, and gave them to him; yet whom his Father did give to him, he gives this Glory to; and 'tis a free concurrent Act with his Father, both to consent to the Name, and the Gift, as free as his Father's was out of a special Love: Let us therefore honour Christ so far, as to say, that his Hand, his Vote, his Suffrage went unto, and was requisite to all these Things as well as his Father's: Yea, and therefore, those Apostles of whom, in vers. 6. of this 17th Chapter, he saith, Thou gavest them me out of the World, are yet said to be chosen by him, as well as by his Father. (The Apostles were, by the Choice and Will of God, and Christ, Gal. 1. 1. Paul an Apostle, not of Men, neither by Man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised him from the Dead.) And though some may say, that, as Apostles indeed, in respect of their Office, they were chosen by Christ, as Man, as well as by the Father; and so indeed that Speech of his, in the 16th of John, is to be understood: Yea, but in John 15. 19. Christ is said to have chosen them in respect of Salvation: If you were of the World, the World would love his own; but because ye are not of the World, but I have chosen you out of the World, therefore the World hateth you. You must know, that Judas was gone out when Christ spake these words, and his Eleven Elect Disciples were left alone with him. Christ had given him his Doom and Sentence, John 15. 6. If a Man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a Branch, and is withered, and Men gather them, and cast them into the Fire, and they are burned. But I have you now only alone with me, whom I speak these Things to; who are to be, and shall be eternally saved, vers. 3. Now you are clean, &c. You are not of this World; vers. 19. And I have chose you out of the World: And yet some of these were called savingly, before he saw them by Face; for some of them were John's Disciples, converted first by him: But however, Jesus Christ had chosen them first; that is, The Man Jesus had done it; and then the End and Issue

Issue of Election, you know, is Glory ; and so giving them Glory, is here to be understood ; as to the Time that I have given is referred to, after the Man Jesus was united.

Chap. 6.

But, secondly, What if we put the Query, upon the Person of him as God-Man, whilst he bore that Personage before his Father, in the sense that formerly we have spoken of? What should hinder us to ascend to Everlasting, as the Time whereof this intended [You have I chosen] here was given by him ; as he being Second Person, did bear and sustain the Glory of that Gift of being God-Man, all along from his predestination thereunto? And so, as his Father's Gift was from Everlasting to him, Why not Christ's Concurrence from thence also? What should stay his Hand from doing it under that Consideration? What, should he stay till he was of Age and Capacity to give, and so arrive at the Time when he, as Man, was actually united? This we may be certain of, that what the Man did, when actually united, concur to, That the Second Person did afore from Everlasting ; and did it then in the Man's Name : Yea, and undertook he should concur to it when he was united ; the Man's actual Concurrence was but a Confirmation of that Act which the Second Person in his Name afore had done : I shewed you, in opening the 6th Verse, upon these words, Those which thou hast given me ; That the Gift of his Father to him, as it was first from Everlasting, so it was not only to him as Second Person, singly considered, but as Marriageable, and constituted their Husband : which can be understood no other way, than that the Second Person bore the Personage of God-Man before his Father, as in opening the 5th Verse I have shewed.

Object. But you will say, There is this that hindered, still the Man existed not actu ; How then can it be said, that he, as God-Man, did this Act?

Answer. Yet he was before God-Man really, and de jure, God-Man contracted ; as I have shewn in the Instance of a new Elect to an Office, before he enters actually upon it, he hath the Title and Honour accordingly : And if he had the Glory of it afore his Father, Then why might he not as then do such Acts in the Name of his being God-Man, as a General doth before he goeth into the Field. I would ask this Question, Before he came into the Flesh, he appeared to the Fathers, and was with the People of God in the Wilderness, and appeared as Captain of the Hosts of Israel ; Were these Acts done then meerly as Second Person, and in the Name of the Second Person simply as such? You would say, that these Acts were done, as bearing the Personage of God-Man, in the Name of the Person that was to come : And therefore Christ saith, Abraham saw my Day ; for he appeared to him, as also to Jacob ; and as some think, in the likeness too that he was to take ; these were Acts meet for that Season, and virtually the Acts of him as God-Man. And so at the Creation, when all Things were made by him, as the W O R D, as John interprets it, Chap. 1. 1. I would only add this, If he took that Personage in his Acting and Appearances to the Fathers, and the Church ; Then why might he not, bearing that Personage afore God his Father, Act with his Father as such, and concur in all Acts with his Father, that were proper in that Season, if I may call it so, from Everlasting, and therefore concur in chusing of us as such, in giving Glory to us, when his Father had predestinated him to that of his, and he undertook it : I would say, that all along from Everlasting, he acted as such in that capacity, together with his Father. I would urge but this, in Isa. 9. 6. One of his Names is, the Everlasting Father ; that is, a Father from Everlasting ; and to whom it is of being so to us, that it is spoken ; and therefore he must be said to have born that Relation of a Father to us from that Time ; 'tis not his concurring as Second Person meerly with his Father ; for that's included in his Father's Act, with whom he did concur as such, and then the Second Person should be called Father in his personal Propriety, as he is the Son, as well as the first Person of the Trinity, to whom yet the stile of Father among the Persons is only proper. No, in the Trinity, take them as meer Persons considered, there is but one Father; therefore that Title must be given him in God's Decrees upon, and come under some other Consideration annexed to him, over and above his being Second Person: And what other can that be than this, of his being considered as God-Man in his Undertaking, and sustaining it, and as acting accordingly. Father relates to Children, and this we find in Heb. 2. 13. where Christ is brought in as a Proof, that he is Man of the same Nature with us; that as a Father he saith, Lo, I and the Children that thou hast given me. God the Father's Relation to us, as a Father, is not so founded, nor is the Relation in the Second Person, simply considered, so to be confounded with that of the Father's. Paul tells us, in that second of the Hebrews, That Christ is a Father, as he is considered Man; and he argueth it from that Relation. And Isaiab tells us, Isa. 9. 6. He was this from Everlasting; which could not be by his having actually assumed the same Nature; and yet Christ's Fatherhood to us is, because he is supposed of the same Nature, as Heb. 2. 14. hath it, Forasmuch then as the Children are partakers of Flesh and Blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same, that through Death he might destroy him that had the Power of Death, that is, the Devil. Why then he must be the Everlasting Father representatively, and by bearing that Personage of God-Man, and undertaking, afore his Father, that Relation; and so as considered by his Father as God-Man from Everlasting; and for him to give us Glory as such, and act accordingly with his Father, was but to act according to what a Personage he was afore-hand: and among other things he must act as such, in concurring with his Father to give us Glory, as hath been said.

And so the Issue of all comes to this, which explains the Text, That God having in his Decree, first settled an Estate in him, in the Glory of that Personal Union proper to him alone; then his Father gave us to him as so constituted, and he agreed, and concurred in his Decree, and Suffrage, as such; and so is said to have given us, in and at the same Instant, that Glory that was ordained by the Father, and by him as God-Man.

IV. MOTIVE.

He represents to his Father the Glory (which had been fore-ordained by him in his Decrees) that would accrue to himself and his Father in the accomplishment of this Design, when the Union, and Glory of the Saints, should thereby be perfected, as at the latter Day it will; and then appear before all the World; and this to have been the great Contrivement of God in our Election we all know: And it is not only the Glory he will have in the Saints themselves at that Day, when they shall appear with him in Glory, (of which the 2 Theff. 1. 10. speaks, When he shall come to be glorified in his Saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (because our Testimony among you was believed) in that Day): But what a Glory this is, will appear before the rest of the World of Mankind, who shall all be present at that Day; and see the Issue of God's Decrees, unto the amazing astonishment of Unbelievers: And this I take to be the meaning of the latter part of vers. 23. That the World may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me. The World there I take to be the rest of Mankind, who shall have no part in that Union: And the Time intended wherein they shall know this, is that at the latter Day; for it is, when the Saints Union is made perfect in One, as in the words before.

Then it is that they shall know, by the Saints Union with me, and by them thus perfected, which shall be made conspicuous to all the World; That thou hast sent me, and hast loved me; and hast loved them indeed, as thou hast loved me; when they shall see that I appear in thy Glory, (as at that Day I shall). And that therefore I am One with thee, whereas before they who would not believe, nor embrace me for their Christ, and come in for a share of this Union with me, but refused me, or unworthily fell short in seeking me, and would never never apprehend that I was such a Glorious Messiah as then I shall appear to be, but undervalued and despised me. But when they shall see that I also was able to bring about such an Union of my Church and Body together with me and thee, and not lose one of them thou hast given me; and therewith to have filled them with such a Glory as they shall appear in, by which it will be as conspicuous and Visible, that they are One with us; they will then know, with wonderment, that thou indeed hast sent me; of whom they had, the most of them, by hear-say, at least heard; for the sound thereof went forth to All the World; and that those whom they hated, and despised, together with me, whom they persecuted, and would have driven out of the World; that those are thus so nearly united to me, and thee, as it will appear, Thou hast loved them, as thou hast loved me: Lovedst me as their Head of Union to them; and for that nearer Union which I have with thee; hast loved them as my Body, and for my sake: All which when the World hath once seen, and known; then I shall further fulfil what I pray for, in the 24th Verse, even take them into thy Kingdom, where they shall ever be with me the Lord; and behold my Glory, and adore thy Love, both to me and them: Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me, may be with me, where I am; that they may behold my Glory which thou hast given me; for thou lovedst me before the Foundation of the World. And the appearing and apprehension of this, to and by the Wicked World, will be a new, and great, though a more secondary Glory, which will arise unto his Father by that Union then perfected, which he prays for to be his own.

C H A P. VII.

That God constituted from Eternity, Jesus Christ God-Man, to be one universal Lord, under Himself, over all the Creatures he intended to make.

1 Cor. 8. 6.

And One Lord Jesus Christ.

I Desire this to be noticed afore-hand, as touching this part of the Text I am now entring upon; That though All Things are said to be of God : Both His Creation, &c. of them, and our Union with him, to have been first designed by God ; that yet our Apostle doth evidently withal here declare, That all Things, both the Creation and Government of the World ; as also our Union : yea, even all that ever God did, was ordained by him, to depend upon Jesus Christ, as Lord ; as well as upon God the Father, as God.

Hence, at this our beginning to treat of what belongs to Christ's part, we must again climb up to the Supreamest Top, or Pinnacle of Eternity, and place our Thoughts in the first Instant thereof : And as yet, suppose that our God being but about to Purpose, and Decree All Things, or any thing which his Will should pitch upon : that none of these Things concerning us and the Creatures, had their determination, without a supposition of our Christ his having been first constituted the Lord, and a dependance of all Things upon him as Lord, to have been first ordained also. Or thus,

That God, in his Decrees and Purposes, for the effecting of all these, did presuppose and take in his Christ to be the Lord of us and of all Things : Of whom all did and should depend, as well as upon Himself, though under Himself.

So as for an Entrance to this Discourse about Christ's Interest in all these, we will make a stand, or rather go backward again, and make a Recognition, and set our Thoughts down in this Supposition, That we consider all these Concernments of us, and of the whole Creation, in the first instant of Eternity, but as yet lying in the Mind of God in a simple or pure Idea of them, or in a bare Contemplation, and Chart, or Model, in God's meer and simple Knowledg, and Intelligence ; they lay as a Mass of Gold, or Silver in the Oar, without their having a Decree of his Will as yet passed upon them, that they should be minted : They had not the conclusive Decree, or Fiat of his Will, what they should be ; although he stood ready and propitious to set that his Seal, or Imprimatur for their coming forth, and publishing into Actual Existence : But having them, and All in view, or Model ready afore him ; he was pleased in one and the same Instant, or Moment of Eternity, wherein he brought forth these, or any other Purposes of his to a Determination conclusive ; He was pleased (I say) to set up as the first-born of his Purpose, chiefly, or afore All, and to lay for a Foundation, and Corner-Stone a midst, or middle Person, between his Creatures, and Himself ; but especially between Him, and those First-Fruits, or choice of his Creatures, he would draw up into a high Union with Himself, to set up his Christ. A Person who in the Language of the Text, should be an [One Lord,] who should be a joint Compeer with Him ; or rather God's Commissioner and Plenepotentiary, in all his Works of Wonder ; and that is, Our Christ : Not considered barely, and and singly as he is Second Person, One God with the Father blessed for ever; but as God-Man, having the Office of Lord and Christ put upon him by the Father, as one that should be an [One Lord,] under this one God considered as he is God, and in that relation and respect lower than God Himself: And yet constituted in that Supreme Sovereignty of Lordship over them, his Creatures, that both all his Creatures which he should with him decree to make, they all, and their very Creation, and Government after their Creation, should depend on that One Lord. As also, that all of us whom he should decree to be taken up into that special Union and Communion, should owe all thereof to, and have the same dependance on, this one Lord, as upon God the Father Himself: Than which, nothing could be found more to honour and greaten this One God, as God, before the whole Creation. Thereby being shewed and manifested the infinite distance of God from the whole Creation, in having so Supreme a Lord over them, as this same Lord of his designing, should be; who yet should be under God himself, and so between him and them.

And there is this General Corolary, from this founded on the Text; That if All Things, and our Union with God depended upon this Person, as he is Lord, and Christ; and that these Titles import his Office, and not simply his being Second Person, as Son of God, (though that be the Substratum, and Foundation of All.) That then, he must have been first set up and constituted God-Man, and in God's Decrees invested with these Offices, and constituted and made both Lord and Christ, as by whom all Things should be, and we by Him, as well as by the Father: Which is one great Notion I drive at, and I carry with me in mine Eye all along, to make forth; and do therefore, upon any just Occasion, every where draw it out, unto Notice and Observation, as a great Gospel-Truth.

My present Task is, To begin with this his Title; He is (as hath been said) first decreed unto, His Title of LORD.

The following Explanation of which will make way for the clearing of that great Truth last noticed; as also of many other Things concerning Christ, previous to what are to follow. Now as to that,

I. It is an ancient Title of His, and one of his first Titles, given him in the Old Testament, and continued to him by them in the New, and of a larger extent than that of Saviour. And though distinct from that of One God, yet necessarily denoting and supposing (as the Foundation of it) that withal He is God.

In the Old Testament, Psal. 110. 1. The Lord said unto my Lord: and though our Translation observes no distinction, yet 'tis in the Original, Jehovah said to my Lord Jehovah, unto Adonai: that is, God the Father unto Christ, or the Messias, as Christ himself interprets it, Matth. 22. 42, and 43. To whom that Name Adon, or Adonai, is made specially peculiar, and had been traditionally let down to the Jews: For Enoch had prophesied of him, under that Title, afore the Flood; which, as a Tradition the Apostle Jude quotes, vers. 14. The Lord (namely the Christ) cometh with ten thousand of his Saints. To name but one more out of the Old, Dan. 9. 17. Hear O God Jehovah, for the Lord's Sake: Where Christ, in distinction from God the Father, is called Adonai, the Lord.

Which Title of the Messiah, because thereby he was more eminently known by them, than by any other, the Angels, when they bring the News of his Birth to the Jews, Luke 2. 11. do proclaim him by, and under the Title of it: To you is born a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. They describe his Person under the Notion which he had been more vulgarly known by, under the Old Testament, than that of Saviour [Christ the Lord.] And afterwards, the same began to be, by the unanimous Vote of all the Apostles given him, Acts 2. 14. publishing it in the Ears of all Israel, and applying it with an Appropriation to our Jesus, as that Title which answered to the general Expectation of the Jews, concerning their long-look'd-for Messiah. Acts 2. 36. Therefore, let all the House of Israel know assuredly, That God hath made this same Jesus whom ye crucified, both

Lord and Christ. And is, as if he had said, Lo, he is that very Person whom you expect. Who hath been generally and indeterminately known to you, under those Names given him by your Fathers, all along in the Old Testament; whom God hath now made, and set up, and declared so to be, by exalting him in Heaven, and putting all into his Hands. And know (saith he) assuredly, that that Man Jesus is He. 'Tis strange, that the Jews should so conspire, to forbear every where throughout the World, to read or pronounce the Name Jehovah, the Name of God's Essence: And that instead thereof they should substitute, and still use the Word Adonai, or Lord; which, as you have heard, is sometimes in the Old Testament appropriated to the Son. Yea, and that their own Cabalists should confess, the Mystery of it to be, That that Name Adonai, or Title of Lord (and so the Person of him, the Son, that more particularly bears it) is to be the Key to Jehovah, which latter is the Name of his Essence, which is hidden to us, (as they speak) to be as a Treasury, in which God Jehovah hath hid all the Riches he means to communicate to us. And further, this Adonai, or Lord, to be the great Ruler and Governour, under God Jehovah, nourishing and sustaining all Things. And that without Adonai, or this Lord, there is no Way or Means for any Man to come to this God Jehovah. Thus Masini hath out of their own Records observed: Which is a clear, if not a full Explication of the Office of our Christ, as he is Adonai, or Lord.

The New Testament speaketh the very same in terminis; God not being known to any, but to whom Christ reveals him: In whom are hid all the Treasures of Wisdom, he ruling and supporting all by the Word of his Power: As to whom God hath communicated the Execution of all Judgment; Himself visibly judging none. Neither is there any Name under Heaven but this, whereby Men can be saved, and approach to God; there being one God, and one Lord, as here, 1 Cor. 8. 6.

And this Title of Lord, in distinction from Jehovah, or God, as thus understood and used by the Jews, conduceth somewhat towards an Answer to that Objection of the Socinians; That Christ being usually thus stiled the Lord, but the Father God; that therefore Christ is not God. For not only according to the Jews Sense Adonai, or Lord, is all one with Jehovah, in this respect, that it is one of the Names of him that is God; for they ordinarily, in naming God, put it instead of God, or Jehovah; yea, and it is attributed to none other, but him that is God; as they acknowledg. But yet so, as withal it is evident also, That in their Sense it likewise signifies, an Office of Lord, and Mediator for us put upon him: And in that respect distinguished from Jehovah; yet so, as still withal, Christ Himself is also the true Jehovah. And therefore the Old Testament in a very usual way joins both together, the Lord God; and when it speaks in that manner, doth usually mean Christ, who was then the great Dispenser of all Things under the Old Testament, as well as now under the New. 'Twas he that appeared to the Fathers, who is, and was to them both Lord and God also, as well as Lord and Christ to us.

And thus the Apostle Thomas, John 20. when once convinced of his being the Messiah, crys out, vers. 28. My Lord, and my God! He spake it of Christ. For whereas other Disciples had called him the Lord, (as in that Chapter again and again, and frequently elsewhere, as his usual Title) and had said to Thomas, vers. 25. We have seen the Lord, that is, him whom we have and do own for the Messiah. And then the Old Testament having still put both Titles together of Lord and God, as you heard. Hereupon, Thomas his Faith being on the sudden struck, and enlightned with a fresh and new Conviction, he crys out, My Lord, and my God, thereby acknowledging Christ to be both, and he doth it with Application to himself, [My Lord, and my God.] And whereas in Eph. 4. 5, 6. when it is said, There is one Lord and one God the Father of all; And in this Text, 1 Cor. 8. 6. To us there is but one God the Father, and one Lord Jesus Christ. It is not to be underunderstood, nor doth it follow, That his Father's being said to be One God, in distinction from Christ, should exclude Christ from being that One God; no more than Christ's being termed that One Lord, in the same Places, would import, that therefore God the Father is not Lord. Yea, of Christ, as well as of the Father, it is said, That he is the only Lord; and that with his being God also is inserted, to second it and put this Matter out of all doubt. Thus Jude 4. the last Words of the Verse, Denying the only Lord God, ἐν τῷ μόνῳ δεσπότην θεὸν ἡμῶν ἰησοῦν χριστῷ, and Lord of us, Jesus Christ; affixing but one Article at the first unto all these three Titles that follow [Lord God,] the only Lord God, and our Lord: As meaning but one and the same Person known by all these Titles; not two Persons, as of God the Father, and of Christ, both: but one Person only; namely, our Christ, who is the Subject of all these Titles. Whom he there names our Lord Jesus Christ, all three spoken of one and the same Christ; which that of Peter added to it also clears, (and all know Jude's Epistle to be a Counterpart of that second of Peter; And he writing as Jude also, against the very same Hereticks in those Times,) he there says of them, Denying the Lord that bought them: And it is our Christ is the Person he speaks of too; as the proper Character he signifies him by; The Lord that bought them, and paid the Price of buying them as a Lord. And as he names no other Person but Christ only; so both Peter and Jude do name the very Heresies, the Hereticks of those Apostles Times run into; naming the very Things themselves wherein their Heresy consisted: namely, in their denying him to be God, the only true God, which together with that additional Character of The Lord that bought them, was the very Point they denied.

Add to this, It is well known, that those first Hereticks of the Primitive Times (who pretended to Christianity, and against such they only wrote,) did not deny One God the Father, or His being the only true God; but that Jesus Christ was the only true God, this they denied; and therefore it is, that Jude speaks this of Christ alone.

And last of all, an Angel from Heaven, in the close of the whole New Testament, speaks the very same, thereby confirming and sealing what all the Apostles and Scriptures had spoken of Christ; thus in Revelations the very last Chapter, vers. 6. And the Lord God of the Holy Prophets (who inspired them) sent his Angel to shew unto his Servants, &c. Now who is it, to whom the sending of this Angel is attributed, read vers. 16. I Jesus have sent my Angel to testify unto you these Things in the Churches; even the same Person (Christ.) The same (He) it is, that is the Lord God of the Holy Prophets, vers. 6. And this is for certain our Jesus. For vers. 16. I Jesus have sent my Angel. And who in like manner concludes his Speech, vers. 20. He which testifies these Things, saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come [Lord] Jesus, says the Church. And this is our Lord and our God; as Jude and Peter said in their Epistles.

And by all this, the Socinian Objection is sufficiently obviated, and gone beyond.

C H A P. VIII.

That the Title of Lord, though it imports him that is God, and connotates with it, his being God; yet in this Corinthian Text, (and elsewhere) doth primarily note, a Relation to an Office or a Dignity put on him by the Father, as considered to be God-Man; and not simply, his being Second Person, God with God only. The Apostle's Intent here is, to set him forth in the dependance, that all Things, &c. have of him as such, and not upon him as Second Person, simply considered, it is a Title of Office which he bears afore God, considered as God-Man. The Fitness, Fulness, and Sufficiency of this Person, Christ, God-Man, to discharge this Office of one Lord. For what Reasons it was necessary, that he should be God-Man in one Person, to qualify him for the Employment.

WE do, or may know, that there is a two-fold Lordship of the Second Person; one, natural, absolute, and underived, belonging to him, as he is considered, singly, Second Person, God with God, and Lord with the Lord; to whom therefore all the Royalties of the Divine Nature, do equally and alike in common belong, even as to the Father, and Holy Ghost; which Lordship is in them all founded on this which is common to all three Persons; namely, That they had a joint concurrence in the making of all things, and also in governing of them. But then there is another Lordship, that is, a derived Oeconomical Dispensatory, which is set up by Commission from God, for effecting all his Works of Wonder for him, and under him; and this is a Lordship proper and peculiar unto Christ, considered as God-Man, to whom, as such, the Father hath committed all Judgment, as the Son of Man; John 5. 22, 27. For the Father judgeth no Man; but hath committed all Judgment unto the Son. And hath given him Authority to execute Judgment also, because he is the Son of Man. And of this Lordship it is that Peter speaks, Acts 2. 36. Let all the House of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made him both Lord and Christ. So then, there is a made-Lordship of his, who yet, by virtue thereof, makes all things. And this is the very same in other equivalent Terms, that are else-where spoken of him by the other Apostles; as by Paul himself, Heb. 1. 2. Whom he hath appointed Heir of all Things. [Heir] there, is equivalent to [Lord] in that Acts 2. 36. and [Appointed] there, unto [Made] in Peter's Speech, Acts 2. 36. and [of all Things] there, unto one Lord [of whom are all Things] here in the Text.

Hence therefore, his being Lord, evidently imports an Office or Oeconomy committed to him, and undertaken by him; even as his being Christ also doth. And indeed, we find both those Titles, of Lord and Christ, joined often together, and attributed to him, as being, in this respect, of like Kind or Constitution, that is, as being both made Titles of Office. And to this sense, as we meet them joined, Acts 2. 36. so also we find him to have been publicly proclaimed, with and under these Titles, by the Angels, as the Militia sent from Heaven at his Birth, Luke 2. 11. to proclaim their own new Lord, as well as of Men; To you is born a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord: Where they add a third [Saviour]; All which three Titles, are also here in the Text, Our Lord Jesus Christ. All, and each of these three, do alike import Matter of Office given to him, and undertaken by him. And in respect to this Investment with an Official Lordship, it is, he is stiled Lord, in distinction from God, else-where as well as here; in those words, Psal. 110. 81. The Lord said to my Lord, sit, &c. though our Translation took no notice of a Distinction in the Titles given setly to each; yet in the Original it is, Jehovah said unto Ladonai, the Lord, that is, God the Father, said to the Lord, or Christ, as Christ himself interprets it, Matth. 22. 42, 43. And that his being Lord there, importeth this his Office of made Lordship, and not that as Second Person, Peter evidently shews, in the place fore-cited, Acts 2. where he quotes these very words of the Psalmist, vers. 34. to prove, That God had made him Lord and Christ; for, that is his Inference from David's words, The Lord said unto my Lord. And Christ himself, in Mat. 22. 43, 44, 45. He saith unto them, How doth David in Spirit call him Lord, saying, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right Hand, &c. If David then call him Lord, how is he his Son? In like manner, Dan. 9. 17. Hear, O God (Jehovah) for the Lord's sake: where Christ, in distinction from God the Father, is called Adonai, and Lord. Yea, and this distinguishing Title is made appropriate to him, [the Lord] by the Angels at his Birth, who is Christ the Lord. And before his Death, by the Evangelists, in their mention of him, Luke 12. 42. And the Lord said, Who then is that faithful and wise Steward, whom his Lord shall make Ruler over his Household, to give them their portion of Meat in due season? Chap. 24. 34. Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon. And John 4. 1. When therefore the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard, that Jesus made and baptized more Disciples than John. And Chap. 6. 23. Howbeit there came other Boats from Tiberias, nigh unto the place where they did eat Bread, after that the Lord had given Thanks. By Mary Magdalene, John 20. 18. Mary Magdalene came and told the Disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these Things unto her. By the Angels, Mat. 28. 6. He is not here, for he is risen, as he said: Come, see the place where the Lord lay: And in the Acts ordinarily. In the same sense is this my Corinthian Text to be understood.

2. This Title of Lord, thus distinguished, doth fitly serve as an introductory Proof from parallel Scriptures; That the Lordship of Office is also intended in this Title in the Text, and not as Second Person, simply considered. For these Reasons.

Reason 1. Christ is thereby here distinguished from God; not only as he is the Father, but as he is one God. Now, if Christ were stiled the Lord, only as Second Person, then he is not so to be distinguished from the Father, as the Father is one God; but as such he is included therein, with the Father; for he is one God with him, and not to be excluded from that Title; God-forbid! But it is evident, that this Title, one Lord, is to shew a distinction from the one God; and therefore it must import, as something more in his Person. So his Office of Lordship; by which, as in relation to the dependance of all things upon him, he is termed Lord. And otherwise, if his meaning were to express, that he is God, as he is Second Person, singly considered, he should say but one and the same thing by two several words, viz. That God the Father is God; and that Christ the Second Person is one God also, whilst he thus saith of him, That he is the One Lord. And indeed, then there were no difference at all; for God the Father is One Lord, in that sense of being Lord. And it is common to the Persons, and so it belongs to the Father as well as to the Son; and the Son is one God as well as the Father. Neither could the Socinian Objection be answered, unless we interpret this One Lord to be spoken of Christ (respectu Officii) in respect of his Office, and not of what he is as Second Person simply. For; there is no distinction between one God and one Lord, if his being God were simply simply meant in both ; but there is a manifest distinction between God the Father, and Christ, in these two Titles intended to them.

Reason 2. He is here set out such an One Lord, though holding an opposition unto, yet withal as beareth some semblance, in an opposite way, with what the Heathens did conceive of their Lords many in their subserviency unto their many Gods ; and we must suppose some Analogy or Semblance here to hold. Only they affirmed that there were many Gods, and that there were many Lords ; but to us there is but one God, and one Lord. And yet the parallel between both thus far holds, that as these Heathens supposed, that these Lords they fancied were such, as were appointed by their Gods to govern the World under their supposed Deities, so we must think of Christ, this one Lord, as under the Great God, in an Instrumentality and Subserviency unto this One God. And as a midst betwixt God and us, and in a perfect opposition to their many false Gods and Lords, he makes this the Glory of the Christian Religion, that they held but one Great and Sovereign true GOD, high above all Gods, as the Psalmist often expresses it, whereas they made many, falsely so called. And that that Jesus Christ, whom we worship, is but One Lord, in defiance of their many Lords, whom they fancied to be Mediators and Agents between God and them, and as placed in the middle betwixt God and Men ; that was their Religion. And the Apostle outvies them ; We profess such an One Lord, who is an Universal Lord over all, and a Mediator betwixt Men and God also.

And for the verifying of this Notion, as thus stated, I refer the Reader unto what a more Learned Hand hath writ, alledging this very Scripture to the same purpose I now do, for the confirmation of my Assertion.

This distinction (says he) also, of Sovereign Gods and Demons, I suppose our Apostle alludes to, in 1 Cor. 8. 5. where he saith, Though there be many that be called Gods, whether in Heaven, or in Earth, as there be θεοὶ πολλοὶ, Gods many ; that is, Dii Caelestes, Sovereign Deities, ἢ ἡγετοὶ πολλοὶ, Lords many, i. e. δαίμονες ἐπιχθόνιοι, Demons, Presidents of Earthly Things ; yet to us Christians, there is but One Sovereign God, the Father, of whom are all Things, and we to him ; that is, to whom, as Supream, we direct all our Services ; and but εἰς ἡγετοῦ, one Lord Jesus Christ, instead of their many Mediators and Demons, διὰ τὰ πολλὰ ἢ ἡμεῖς δι' αὐτοῦ, by whom are all Things which come from the Father to us ; and through whom alone we find access to him : The Allusion, me-thinks, is passing elegant ; and such as I think, cannot be well understood, without this distinction of Superior and Inferior Deities, in the Theology of the Gentiles, they having a plurality in both sorts, and we Christians but one in each, as our Apostle affirmeth : There wants but only the Name of Demons, instead of which the Apostle puts Lords, and that for the Honour of Christ, of whom he was to infer, εἰς ἡγετοῦ, the Name of Christ, not to be polluted with the Appellation of an Idol ; for his Apodosis must have been otherwise, εἰς δαίμωνων. Or may be, he alludes unto the Hebrew Name Baalim, which signifies Lords : And those Lords, I told you, were nothing else but Demons : for thus would Paul speak in the Hebrew Tongue ; There are בְּעֵלִים רַבִּים and אֱלֹהִים רַבִּים, many Gods, and many Lords. Mr. Mede's Apostacy of the latter Times, pag. 13, and part of 14.

They had heard of one God, of whom are all Things, from the wisest of their own Philosophers, but never of one Mediator between that God and them ; they had stumbled at this, in the Christian Religion ; That they worshipped a Man Jesus raised from the Dead, as Acts 17. 18, 31. when yet themselves held, that the souls of Men dead (though not risen) were Mediators for them to their Gods, and thus imprecated them to interpose for them. The Apostle therefore, most wisely, and aptly, and most elegantly, sets both these Religions together in a parallel Comparison, and yet in opposition of the one to the other ; and so maketh the false Notion of their Lords, thus far serviceable, as to let in to these Heathens Minds by a Similitudinary Glympse, that, whereby these Heathens, at least confusedly, might understand and apprehend (if they would but reflect) what manner a Lord or Christ it was we Christians believed and adored ; adored; and for what use or end. Their Fancies indeed ran upon many Lords, and Mediators many; and those dead Mens Souls: but the Apostle presents them instead of theirs, with one great Mediator, according to the Christian Profession; and Him, though a Man raised from the Dead, yet such a Lord, as being more than a Man, was not a Mediator only betwixt that one God and them (and we by him) but was a Lord over, yea, a Founder of all Things else, together with God, One Lord by whom are all Things. And thus he out-shoots them infinitely in the mainest Principles of their Religion they doted on, and accounted their Glory and highest Wisdom.

Chap. 8.

In the next place I come to manifest the Fitness, Fulness, and Sufficiency of this Person, Christ, God-Man, or of the Son of God united into one Person with a Man, to bear and sustain this Office of one Lord; both in relation unto all Things to be by him; and especially to us the Elect.

Let it be remembred, that this discourse of Christ's fitness in this place, is wholly confined unto that Notion in general of his Lordship, as in the universal extent thereof over all Things; but what is proper to set forth his Fitness to be the Head of Angels; and more particularly as an Head and Redeemer for Men. The discovery of that fitness is to succeed in its proper place, when Redemption comes to be handled, as that fitness of his Person is suited to that Work of Redemption.

See the Sermons on Eph. 1. 10. and Christ's fitness for the Work of Redemption, on Heb. 2.

If we (the Chosen of God) and all Things, were able to speak, as they are brought in speaking at last, Rev. 5. 11. and were permitted to give their Voices to design forth and chuse One, (and but one Person, as the Text speaks) to be the Universal Lord, they nor we could desire no other; none but this Person of God-Man, thus constituted and made up as he is, and is now to be set forth.

The All-sufficiency that is in this Person for this Office, the Narrative thereof proceeds on thus.

1. Though in respect of the Office it self, he that is to have it, is said to be made, that is, appointed, as coming under God's Will appointing; yet in his Person, as the Foundation of it, it was absolutely necessary, he be one that is not made, that is, not a meer Creature: One that had been but a meer Subject of God's, according to that Tenure of the Law of Creation only, had not had an intrinsecal Worth and Dignity in his Person, to fill up and carry forth this his Office of Lordship with port and comely Honour enough, nor suitably to that place. For, he must be so over the Creature, as that himself might challenge Worship and Honour from the Creature as their Lord, as truly and justly, as God the Father, in that he was to be One whom all things should depend upon, as well as upon the Father: In whose Person also a Demonstration might be given, how great a God, God the Father was in his distance from the Creature, in that he that was his appointed Lord, should yet naturally hold so great a Sovereignty over all his Creatures. Who ever had been but a made Person, and a made Lord too, and wholly both, he were too mean stuff to make God's Lord of; that is, such a one Lord, as this Text sets out, and which became God to set up: His Person must be able to bear and to fill up his Lordship and Dominion, for else he would but fall into the same Rank with those many Lords the former Verse speaks of; yea, if you would suppose one so sublimated, as to be the Spirit of the whole Creation; and in whom the several Species of the whole were, by way of Eminency, contained and comprehended; and out of whom, as an Elixir, they all might be extracted, (as some philosophize concerning our Christ); yet still, in that he were but only made, his distance from meer Nothing, were but the very same that his Inferior Fellow-Creatures have, he could never have been a midst between God and them, because in his Person he held not a proportionable distance between God and them; and thereby he had been as subject by his Original Make and Constitution, to the same mutability and weakness that any other of the Creatures were; and so would have proved but a meer Quick-sand, to the upholding and bearing up the weight of all Things that were to be founded on him, and depend upon him. Look then, as in the Case of Man's Redemption, like as Men that had Infirmity, were laid aside for

The Phrase, Heb. 1. 2.

BOOK III. the Office of the Eternal Priesthood ; and God sought out one that was perfect for evermore : So, of all meer Creatures, it must be said, as to this his Office of Lordship, they all had infirmity.

If it be said yet, If God would, could he not have made one great enough for this? The Answer is, Even for this very Reason, that still all would have been but meerly a made Greatness ; Even therefore, suppose what you can or will, it proves too little, and falls short : For alas, it were all but wholly borrowed ; yea, and of which Greatness, these very Stones were as immediately capable without him, by God's sole raising them to such an Estate, as himself once was thereof. God could have made as good such Christs, and Lords of them, as the Baptist says, Mat. 3. 9. Sons of Abraham out of Stones ; He that is capable of so high an Office, must be One that is God, which we have even now proved.

This for the first, That this One Lord, here in the Text, is and must be God.

And yet again, 2dly, If he be to be made a Lord, and Christ, (as the Scripture speaks also of him) ; He must, together herewith, be something that is made, as well as God, who cannot be made : He is to be, (in respect of this Office) under God, lower than God, between God and all things made by God ; otherwise, this Great End, which was to greaten God as God, by shewing visibly and demonstratively, that infinite distance between God and all his Creatures, had not been attained : for such a Person as was God only, as well as himself, had been equal unto him : But God, to shew his Greatness, designed such a One as should be also under him, and yet God ; and withal, a Sovereign Lord of all his Creatures. And we find Christ accordingly speaks of himself, My Father is greater than I. So then, some one of the Creatures must be taken in, to make up this Lord, to be made one Person with him that is God ; and so this Lord will take his Place in the midst, between God and all things.

For, 3dly. This Creature (whom ever this Honour is to fall upon) in God's Eternal Purposes (for we are still in the same Sphere of meer possibility) must be made into one Person, with a Person that is God ; for else, still he is not [One] Lord. God, you see, would have but One Lord, as God Himself is but One. The Text speaks it both Negatively, Not many Lords ; and also Affirmatively, One Lord : two compleat Persons of them can never make one, and these two must be made one Person. A King and Queen, though one in Marriage, (the nearest Conjunction) never did, nor never can, make one King, or one Prince, (as Philip and Mary with us did not). And again, if we would suppose, that many Creatures, and not one only, had been taken up into Union with some Person that was God ; yet still there would have been Lords many. But God will have such a Lord as is perfectly One, who therein shall be the perfect Image of his Sovereignty and Monarchy over all Things ; and therefore will have but One, to whom all Things else, without exception, are to be subject.

4thly. Which of the Three Persons in the God-head, and what sort of the Creatures, was fittest to make up, in a way of Personal Union, this One Lord ?

I. As to the Person of the Trinity, it must not be the Father ; it was no way proper for him, that was the Fountain of the Persons, and of the whole Creation, to undertake any Office what-ever, and so not to become this Lord, which is an Office under God, as the Text expressly affirmeth. Who then? God the Son is next, who in that he is the Son, is, by a proper natural Right, Lord of all Things ; for he is the Heir unto this his Father, in that he is the Son ; and it is the common Law, even from God to Creatures downwards, That the Heir is Lord of all, Gal. 4. 1. 'Tis fittest then that he, the Son, should have this Office and Title of Lord transferred on him ; and none so fit to be the appointed Heir of all Things, Heb. 1. 2. who, in his Person, is naturally next God the Father, the begotten Heir of all Things, who is not made, but begotten, and the only Begotten, namely, of this One God the Father ; John 1. 3, 14, 18. compared, All Things were made by him, and without him was not any Thing made that was made. And the Word was made Flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his his Glory, the Glory as of the only begotten of the Father) full of Grace and Truth. No Man hath seen God at any time, the only begotten Son, which is in the Bosom of the Father, he hath declared him. And so truly, a Person to whom of special right this Honour, as conferred, doth belong: This Title of Lord was not to be severed from the Natural Heir; not so, as that one Person should be the Natural Lord by Inheritance, and another made Lord, and Christ, by Decree and Appointment, upon this account also, that still there must be but one Lord. And therefore he who had a natural Right to be Lord, as Heir of all Things, and he who was made so by Decree, and Appointment, must meet in one and the same Person.

Chap. 8.

And as for the Pretension of the Third Person, the Holy Ghost; so it was in God's Design, that he that was to be this Lord, was to have such a multitude of Elect to be united to him, as he must be a Person, who was able to give and send the Spirit himself to make that Union, and to effect all for him, and complete all from him; John 16. 15. All things the Father hath, are mine; therefore I said, that he (the Spirit) shall take of mine, and shew it to you.

And again, the Intendment of erecting this Office of Lordship, being, that God might have an outward Representative of himself, or a visible Administration of all Things, and to whom the whole Creation should owe their Subsistence, and their All; and accordingly he was to be owned and honoured by them, and at the same rate that God is: Hence therefore, for this Honour, God comelily singled forth, and constitutes, this Son to be that Person that was next himself, as Fathers use to do their Sons. God the Father so loveth the Son, that he sheweth and revealeth all of himself to him, John 5. 20. and hath committed all Judgment to him, visibly to be administered by him; and that with this professed Purpose and Intent, That all Men (yea, and Angels, and the whole Creation) might Honour the Son, as they Honour the Father, John 5. 20, 23. So then, the Son is he that is made this Lord under our one God the Father.

We have seen, which of the three Persons was fittest for this Lordship. Now,

2. As to what sort of the Creatures, (we are still, as was prefaced, in the supposition of all Things as yet to be decreed, and so considered by God in the foresight of his simple Intelligence) should be meetest to be taken up in this high Priviledg of one Lordship.

It so pleased our Great and Wise God, as to single forth the Nature of Man; Not in order only to the Work of Redemption of us Men, (that is, but one Branch of this his Work and Office) but in order to his being Lord of all Things, he took that Nature of Man to chuse; yea, it is said, That so it became him, (namely God) for whom are all Things, and by whom are all Things; so to do: in Heb. 2. 10, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18 Verses, For it became him, for whom are all Things, and by whom are all Things, in bringing many Sons unto Glory, to make the Captain of their Salvation perfect through Sufferings. Forasmuch then as the Children are Partakers of Flesh and Blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same: that through Death, he might destroy him that had the Power of Death, that is, the Devil; And deliver them, who through fear of Death, were all their life-time subject to Bondage. For verily he took not on him the Nature of Angels; but he took on him the Seed of Abraham. Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his Brethren; that he might be a merciful and faithful High Priest, in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the People: For in that he himself hath suffered, being tempted; he is able to succour them that are tempted. And although God did thus design and determine, in a more eminent respect to Man's Salvation, (which was the occasion of what he there speaks of this, That he took on him, Not the Nature of Angels, but the Seed of Abraham); yet it is withal said, That that great God, of whom, and for whom are all things, (which is the Preface to that more eminent part for which Christ was ordained, namely, Man's Redemption) had together in his Eye at once all Things, and all Ends and Designs of his what-ever, as that Phrase [for whom are all Things.] imports; whiles he speaks of his ordaining him to be a Redeemer for Man; and accordingly it became him to extend to, or rather grasp in, a respect unto all Things in his great Design; which this my Text collated and brought unto that, confirms and discovers, in saying, One God, of whom are all Things; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all Things. And over and above that [We] (those Elected and Redeemed Men) should be by [Him] also.

And how fit it was, That the Person of the Redeemer of us Men, should himself be Man; this you all acknowledg. But I further add, If a Lord be to set up over all Things, that is, the whole Creation, What Sort or Species amongst the whole Creation, so fit as the Nature of Man? True indeed, that Nature, for its Rank is a little lower than the Angels; but that mattered not in this Business; For this dignity of Lordship, depended not on the dignity of the Creature, that was to be assumed: But the Dignity, or the substantial Worthiness and Grandeur of the Person, was to arise from the dignity of the Son of God who should assume it. The Nature assumed, contributed nothing of Worth, but had that wholly communicated to it; only it brought a Fitness, and a Meetness with it into this Union, for this Office, above all other Natures whatsoever. And that was it, which God had a regard unto herein (besides his good pleasure) to chuse that Nature above all other, as is plain by that in Heb. 2. And certainly, this comely Capacity doth every way fall fuller upon the Nature of Man, than upon any other: for who of Creatures so fit to be made Lord of all Things, by that God for whom are all Things; but he that is the Sum and Contract of all sorts of Creatures that ever God should make. Yea, and perhaps of all sorts of Creatures possibly to be made, even from the Angelical Nature upwards; than which (they being meerly Spirits) nothing could be higher of. Kind upwards, between God and them; and then downwards to the meanest Atom, or dust of the Earth; or if you will, to the Chaos, out of which all was made, you cannot thrust in a new Species or Kind, between any two of the whole Order and Descent of them: No new middle Link, between any two Links of that Chain of Creatures from top to bottom; and what we see are made, Man is the Abstract and Epitome, and contains all in him. If therefore we could suppose that all the Creatures had had a Tongue, and so a Voice in the Election of their one Lord, they certainly would have pitch'd upon that Nature to be their Lord, in which they all had such an Interest, and have cast it, That all Things epitomized, should be this constituted Lord: And God, who is wise in Working, and excellent in Counsel, considered this, and fitted them all with such a Lord, as themselves, if to chuse, would (for this respect) have chosen.

This was so happy a Match, and so well thought of, as being that which perfectly suited this general Administration, as it was no sooner thought of, but instantly it was concluded and agreed on by the Three in Heaven, and particularly consented to by the Son himself; Who (as Peter's Phrase is) was pre-ordained before the Foundation of the World was laid. All Things else depending on this, God's first Resolve about him. No sooner was it agreed, but instantly God the Father, and the God-head in the other two, embraced and possessed him, (as the Expression is, Prov. 8. 22. The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his Way, before his Works of old) possessed him as a rich and compleat Treasury and Magazine of all his Counsels, laid up with him; and also a most able Minister and Agent, for the execution of all his Works. Christ, who is both the Wisdom of God, and the Power of God executively; his Universal Instrument, by whom; a compleat Subject, in whom to manifest all his Glory: And vers. 30. of the same Chapter, I was as one brought up with him, as 'tis translated; it is a word so full of Significancies to our Purpose, as nothing could be more comprehensive. The word [אִמָּן] in the Hebrew signifies, any one that was Nutritius, the Nurse, or Nourisher; as unto whom God had committed all his Works, as Men do their Children unto a Nurse; to cherish, bring up, and govern, to all his Ends he had designed them for: Yea, as the word also signifies, to be his Artist, Architect, or Master-builder of them in their first Creation; who took the Fabrick of the whole Universe upon him, to contrive and frame the rearing of it, with the most exquisite Skill, to the most beautiful Fashion that might be. For these things, and many more, doth that word signify: So as God presently said with himself, I have found a Servant that shall perform all my Pleasure, a chosen chosen Shaft, a meetful universal Engine, Adequate to all my Purposes and Thoughts, a sufficient Ground-work and Foundation for any manifestation of himself he should desire to make. So as I need not to go out of him, or leave him out in any thing I have a mind to do. And all this, over and above, or besides, his being my Delight in his Person unto my self, whom alone and simply I delighted in for himself alone, which there follows, I was his Delight, &c. Thus was he appointed Lord of all, as fitted and suited, both to God and his whole Creation, and the Designs thereof; which to be meant of him, as God-Man, I have (I hope) elsewhere made evident.

And this is no other than that which I afore observed, to be generally the Sense of the Jewish Cabalists, who speak on this wise of the Messias; That he is a Treasure, in which God, or Jehovah, hath hid all the Riches he means to communicate unto us. And further, to be the great Steward, and Governour under God Jehovah, Nourishing, Cherishing, and Dispensing all: With which this Scripture in the Proverbs agreeth.

C H A P. IX.

That all Things do depend upon Christ as One Lord, as God-Man, as well as upon the Father, as One God. God's Eternal Purposes concerning the whole Creation were made in Christ, as God-Man. By him God made the World. The more peculiar Dependance, which the Elect have on Christ, God-Man, as their Head. They hold of him the Tenure of a Spiritual Being, above what they had by Creation, and of all Supernatural Blessings and Benefits.

1 Cor. 8. 6.

—By whom are all things, and we by him.

WE have seen what the import of this high Title, One Lord, is; and that in this Place it denotes an Office put upon him as God-Man, and the fitness of that Person alone, for this Universal Office, or Dignity.

I am as yet but upon Generals, which lead on to many Particulars that are to follow, and at large to be discoursed, and beaten out: I intending, God assisting, to dilate upon all, or the most Particulars; wherein Christ, considered as God-Man, is found subservient unto God his Father, in and for the giving being to, and effecting of, all his Works ad extra; or which are out of Himself. But the present Purpose on this Text is to touch rather upon two Generals, according as Christ's Lordship is divided:

First;

First, His Relation unto all Things what ever they be that are distinct from the We. All Things in Nature or Providential.

The second is, What concerns the Elect either in their Supernatural Being and new Constitution of them; in a Word, what they are, they are by Him, the whole of them, and what Belongs to them Supernaturally.

I come to the First. For we must remember that this Mediation-Work between God and Man, is but one part of his Lordship, although the greatest for moment and Glory: but it further contains a Commission from God, to be a Lord over all Things: as Peter speaks, Acts 10. 36. as that which is another part of it. And again, a Lord not only over all things to rule, and govern, and order them for God, and under God, when they shall be once made; but with a Commission from God, for the making of them, by virtue of that his Office which was given him, long afore the Creation it self; that although the Second Person did only personally then subsist, yet he bore, or sustained the Personage of God-Man, in the very Creation it self: All these you have full in the Text, in that Title One Lord. And then his Lordship is parted into two Administrations, and Commissions; one towards All Things, the other towards Us: And that towards All Things, extending to their very Beings; by whom are All Things: Even by whom all Things are, what they are, or any way shall ever be, from the first Foundation-Stone of Being, unto the full perfection of them.

And these being wrapt up here but in Generals; I shall therefore do no more, but for the confirmation of this first Head, give one General Proof, comprehensive of All Things: And which ascends far higher, than to prove Christ's being only instrumental to the execution of All; but further, that God's Eternal Purposes concerning all Things, were made in Christ as the Forge, or Machine, in which they were all formed. And this, if proved, we must needs acknowledge the dependance of all Things upon this One Lord, to be great indeed; when God's very Purposes of them shall be found to be in Him. And therefore still, that Himself was purposed first; and this Dependance is Superior, and Metaphysical (as I may so speak) unto his being the Executor, or Administrator of them all; for his Purposes are the Supreme Cause, and Original of all Things. And therefore in that sole Instance, I shall over and above make good, that all Things are through him indeed.

I shall now in this general Part of my Discourse, alledg but one Scripture for this Head: And add, for the proof of the Creation of all Things to have been through him, a neighbouring Text thereunto, bordering upon it: Which will be sufficient in this Metaphysical Part to have performed, as touching this Head.

I. God's Eternal Purposes concerning all Things, were made in Christ, as God-Man.

God's Eternal Purposes concerning the Creatures, or his Works that are out of, or without Himself, are immanent Acts of God's, remaining in Himself. And yet God so honoured this our One Lord, as not to purpose any Thing which was to be out of Himself, ad extra, without the contemplation of his being God-Man, on whom (as such) all Things should depend. In Ephes. 1. 9. it is expressly said, Which he purposed in himself: involving therein his very Purposes of working all Things whatsoever, as well as his Purposes of Grace to his Elect; as appeareth by comparing vers. 11. In whom also we have obtained an Inheritance, being predestinated according to the Purpose of him who worketh all Things after the Counsel of his own Will. And in like manner, Chap. 3. 11. of the same Epistle, it is said, According to the Eternal Purpose which he had [made] (so in the Original) in Jesus Christ our Lord: Which Purposes there, as to the Object Matter of them, do in like manner involve, and take in all the various goings forth of God, of what kind kind soever, even the whole System of God's Works, wherein and whereby the manifold Wisdom of God had, before-hand, contrived to manifest God by ; for that is the Matter immediately afore treated of, in the Verse fore-going, vers. 10. To the intent that now, unto the Principalities and Powers in Heavenly Places, might be known by the Church, the manifold Wisdom of God. And unto this it is, that those words cited out of vers. 11. do relate ; that is, the whole Oeconomy and Dispensation of God in the Works of Creation, Providence, Government of this World, and of his Church hitherto under the Old Testament ; being now set together, with the Work of Redemption performed by Jesus Christ, and under the Times of the Gospel begun to be discovered ; and thereby being all viewed, in one prospect, by the Angels, who before had but by peace-meal been the curious Observers of all ; and each all along, observing, and laying still, each in their Hearts, as they had passed, and been acted ; but then it came to pass, by the discovery of the Gospel, that the infinite, various, or manifold Wisdom of God in the whole, broke forth in the Person of Christ, to their admiration and astonishment, that all had been purposed in him, even all these Purposes what-ever, of one as well as of the other. It is there said, That they were made in Jesus Christ, as he is our Lord, vers. 10, 11. To the intent that now unto the Principalities and Powers in Heavenly Places, might be known by the Church, the manifold Wisdom of God ; according to the Eternal Purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord. So as this was it which became the Matter of the wonderment to them, to see and behold how both theirs, and our Lord Christ, was made the Centre of them all ; and that the Works, yea, the Purposes of them in God's Heart, about Creation, Providence, and all sorts of works, wherein the manifold Wisdom of God had so appeared ; all Dispensations to the Jews, (the Church of Old) and now the Calling of the New Church, the Gentiles, were founded all in this one God-Man Jesus Christ.

Chap. 9.

See Zanchy & Grotius in loco.

For the concluding of this, there are three Things particularly and eminently observable to my purpose, out of those words, and their coherence.

The first ; That all those several sorts of Purposes, are termed but one single Purpose ; for so in the Original it is in the singular Number, all being but one Act in God, and all made in one and the same Jesus Christ ; and as one single Purpose, though comprehending a whole Systeme and Lump of Purposes.

2. The Phrase [made] is used concerning this one big Purpose ; [Made] (which is the Phrase) in Jesus Christ.

Observe, I say, concerning it, that whereas in the former Chapter, vers. 9. you read, that God purposed all in himself ; yet here, that he made the same purpose in Christ, even as when it should, and did come to the execution ; it is said, That all things are by and through this one Lord, as well as of one God : As they are coupled jointly in execution, so in Purposes : Only as the Apostle, in another Case, says of him, The purpose of making and ordaining Christ himself, in whom all else are, must necessarily be excepted. And this notes out, that they were made in him, as he was made Lord and Christ ; as Peter, Acts 2. 36. Therefore let all the House of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ. They were verified all in Christ, as the French phrase is, of the Sanction to their Laws : So all God's Purposes taken up in God's own Heart and Bosom, are said to be made in Christ, they had their ratification in Christ, God brought them to a firm subsistence and ultimate resolvedness, in and through his Christ as a Lord. For, seeing all things purposed, were to be brought into Existence by him ; therefore the Honour God gave him in his very Decrees, was, that the very Purposes of them, are said to be made in him ; without whom, they would, as to the effect and issue of them, have been in vain : He being present, and by, and undertaking to effect them all ; therefore they are from the very first purposed in him. So as all God's Eternal Purposes depended on this Lord.

The third Thing I observe is, That to shew this Universal Dependence of all God's Purposes on his one Christ, he answerably mentions all his Titles.

- I. Of Saviour, in that his Name of [Jesus]. 2. Of [Christ]. 3. Of [Lord].

Which three do comprehend a Respect and Foundation unto all his Purposes, of what sort soever. The words afore mention all three; In Jesus Christ our Lord, which issues fully to the Point in Hand, and falls in with the words here to the Corinthians, my Text.

Thus of God's Purposes, which were the Matrix, the Womb of all Things.

II. Christ is the Medium of God's Creation, &c.

But more particularly, let me here add one Instance, which yet may serve for all other; and I add it here, because it neighboureth so near this form, as I could not well leave it out here: And it concerns the Execution of all Things begun by the same Christ, as the former did, the purposes of all Things in Jesus Christ. And so we have Proof, and Instance in both Kinds, both in God's Purposes, and in the execution of them out of the same Chapter.

When God should after (as he did) come to effect or put in execution all, or any of these the purposes of his Heart, still this Lord presents himself as fit and able to subserve him in the execution thereof, as an Universal Agent or Instrument; In the virtue of whom he effected them all, and brought them forth to act.

For Instance;

The first Purpose of God that was put into execution, and which was indeed the Ground-work, the Materia Substrata, or Subject Matter of all other Works that were to follow, in execution, was that of Creation; the putting of all Things into Being, (as the ultimate or bottom-Subject, the Matter which his Decrees were to have to work upon); of this it is expressly said, in Ephes. 3. 9. and indeed is added by the Apostle, as the eminent Instance of all the rest; Who created all Things by Jesus Christ, not one thing excepted, but was created by him.

And again, If when God, setting his Hand to create, would make more Worlds than one, (as he hath made two, viz. Heaven and Earth) in the virtual Influence of this Lord, God-Man, it was, that these Worlds were made; Heb. 1. 2. Whom he hath appointed Heir of all Things; by whom also he made the Worlds. And herein, likewise again, this Lord is the Maker of all, and every thing in each and both these Worlds; so, Col. 1. 16. Visible or Invisible, whether Things in Earth or in Heaven. All which is to be understood of him as God-Man. But of these Things afterwards, upon that Col. 1. 16, &c. more particularly.

III. The Church of the Elect have a more special dependance upon one Lord Christ, as God-Man, 1 Cor. 8. 6. And we by him.

I shall lay down only some Generals, that shew the Tenure that the Church of the Elect hold on the one Lord Christ, as God-Man.

Two Things are imported in these words, And we by him.

1. A Super-creation Being, and Existence given us in Him.
2. Super-creation Blessings, and Benefits by Him, which appertain to that Being in Him. Which Blessings are of two sorts.
 1. Of Redemption, as Sinners, through this one Lord; as he is Jesus, that we hold of his Merits.
 2. Of Blessings abstractly considered, from those of Redemption; that we hold of him as he is Christ the Lord; through our Relation to, and Union with his Person.

We have had a general view presented to us, how all things, that is, the whole Creation do, and did depend upon our Lord Christ, even in God's very purposing of them.

Chap. 9.

It is therefore meet I should next speak the like generally to this other Part, the Tenure that the Saints, the Elect of God have, and do hold of Christ: To the end, that this part of this Structure, may correspond with that which is foregone; which had but in general treated the dependance that all things have upon him.

And it is this latter is infinitely the more eminent of the two; and yet both necessary to shew the Compleatness of Christ, as God-Man; as in his Person, so in his subserviency to God, in all his Works whatsoever.

— — — And We by Him.

1. The We here, are God's Church of Man-kind, selected out of all Things which he created, and here separated from them, as a Company standing out apart by themselves, and who were separated and appointed by his Father to be a Body unto him as an Head. Now if we consider them in their first Creation-state, so they are to be counted among the all Things; and as such efficiently depending on him as one Lord; the Creator, &c. of them: But when here he adds, and We by Him; this imports their being a Chosen Generation, a peculiar People to God, the Chosen of God out of all Things else: And his being a peculiar special Founder unto them of a Supercreation-State, and a dependancy upon him for the whole of it, as he is Jesus Christ the Lord; which they have from him, de novo, and by a newer kind of Title, than that of Creation. A State, and all Things belonging to it, wholly supernatural unto that which was by Creation.

And here again, like as was said in way of Premise, to that former first Head, of the dependancy of all Things upon Christ; Our Thoughts and Contemplations must mount up again to that supream Age, or highest Point of Eternity: The top of that vast Sphere and Circle that comprehended us, and all Things; considered as yet decreable by God, and but in decreeing: And considered, that there lay afore our Great God in his Divine Understanding, a Platform of far higher, and momentous Designs than those, and beyond those of the first Creation and Providence towards all Things, together with Man, after his Kind, in common with them; namely, of calling in, and bringing a certain first Fruits, (as the Apostle James's word is, James 1. 18. Of his own Will begat he us, with the Word of Truth, that we should be a kind of First-Fruits of his Creatures); of that his intended first Creation, to consecrate them to himself, through a Supercreation-Union, and Communion with himself: A state which was to be utterly superlative in all the Things belonging to it, comparatively unto that State of, and by their first Creation; and all, and every thing whatsoever that appertains thereto: A State, in the ultimate End and Perfection of it, such as in Heaven, after the Work of Redemption is finish'd, the Saints and Angels shall enjoy to all Eternity: And in bringing us to which, he carries us through variety of Means preparatory, or conducing thereunto; and all, and each of them supernatural also. He, in his Infinite Grace and Wisdom, found his only begotten Son, Christ, God-Man, to be the Person: Yea, and in his Person as such, every way accomplished, adapted, and furnished, to accomplish this Design so fully and compleatly, as that whatever be designed by such a gracious Decree, proceeding out of Sovereignty, and such a Love that should so far transcend that Love, which by Creation he bore to us; (a pure Supercreation-Grace I stile it.) whatever (I say) should enter into the Thoughts of such an exceeding Riches of Grace, to bestow on them he would so love; This great Lord, his Christ, was adequately fitted, and enabled to be the Founder of. This God-Man was a Person after God's own Heart, to the very utmost extent of his gracious Purposes, and Counsels; and in his Person empowred to accomplish, at the first instant of his undertaking it, of whatever God could think of for them, or had a Mind to give them.

Now all, and the whole of this Supercreation-State we have by Him, are reducible unto two principal Heads.

First, What we are, or rather, That we are, or are endowed with a new Supercreation-Being.

Secondly, The Endowments which that Being is invested withal, or the Supercreation-Benefits that appertain, and belong to it.

And both these, and all of these, we are by Him, he is the Foundation of All we are, or have.

I. He is the Founder of a new Supercreation-Being, which is the subject of all Benefits bestowed: As God's giving Adam a Natural Being after his Image, that was the subject, and recipient of all the Blessings he enjoyed; and a Thing distinctly to be considered of.

We commonly say when a Subject hath been raised up unto a great Estate, Honours, Offices, whereunto he hath a legal Right, given him by his Prince, in whose Power it alone was to invest him therewith, we use in like manner of Speech unto this here, to express it; That what he is, he is by him: And therefore call him, His Creature. Which is but Translatitious; when yet he had not his very Being from his Prince, but from his Parents it was he came to have that Existence, which is the Subject, or the Person, unto whom all these Priviledges do belong. But this our Christ, is not only the Founder of our Right to all those Supernatural, Supercreation-Benefits; but God hath also founded for us in him, a Supercreation-Being, and Existence; (and not only that actual Existence we have from him) when we are made new Creatures: A Workmanship created in Christ Jesus, more truly than the Child may be said to be formed, and fashioned in the Mother; and the Foundation of his Being, lay in her Womb: And it is this new Creature, superinduced o're the Natural Person, which is the Subjectum of the first Creation: which in Scripture is termed the Man. Col. 3. 10. Put on the new Man, after the Image of him that created him: namely Christ, the Creator of it; That's the Man, and the Him in the Apostle's Account. And observe the Language the Apostle useth, when he speaks of himself, 2 Cor. 12. I knew a Man in Christ, &c. vers. 2. Of such a Man I will Glory, but of my self I will not Glory, vers. 5. And yet it was himself he spake of; but he reckoned not himself by the Creation-Roll, but what he was in the King's Book; no nor of the new Creature neither would he Glory, but as it was in Christ: and so it had a Being. But further, we had a Supercreation-Existence given us in Christ, afore the World was; which was the Foundation of the new Creature, and which makes us thus capable of all those Benefits, which were then also, and therewith given. And Supercreation-Benefits, must have a Supercreation-Being, or State of Being given them, superior to our first Creation-Being, and the Benefits thereof; which in God's Decrees we were appointed unto, as well as naturally to exist: by virtue of which we come to have a Title unto those Blessings. For if our first Creation-Members were all written in God's Book of his Purposes, so all the Members, which are the various Graces, the new Man or Creature consists of, they were all written in God's everlasting Purposes: Yea, and all the Blessings that belong to this new Creature, are altogether therewith given us in Christ; as is express in 2 Tim. 1. 9. Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy Calling; not according to our Works, but according to his own Purpose and Grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the World begun. The Work in God's calling us, is the forming the new Creature in our Hearts; stiled therefore there, an Holy Calling, as working Holiness: And this Foundation-Blessing is said to have been given us in Christ, according to his Purpose of Grace in Christ, that was afore the World began; and they could not be said to have been given us in Christ, unless we were considered some way or other in Christ then. God did not take up naked Purposes of Grace; and Good-Will to us, with a firm Intent and Resolution to bestow those Blessings on us: Though his Purposes are as Mountains of Brass, as the Prophet speaks, Zech. 6. 1. But he was pleased to fix, and ratify them in his Christ; and in like manner [Us], and our Persons he founded then in Christ, and and considered in Christ. God had as then his Christ present with him, and by him; and reckoned of us as Members of him, and elected us as such. And God thought not his bare Purpose of Election of our Persons, enough to satisfy Christ, who at that present undertook for us; nor to comfort us, when we should come actually to exist in this World, and to lay hold of his Grace; nor was he contented, if I may so speak, with Christ's bare Concurrence, as Second Person, in choosing us as well as the Father himself did; but further to strengthen his own Heart in those his Purposes towards us: as in the 8th of Proverbs it is said, our Christ was with him, strengthening, and supporting his intended Creation to him: He thereby engaged himself unto Christ, then present, for us: Yea, and constituted, and set up Christ, as a Representative of us, and common Person for us; and Christ accepted us, took us in to Himself, and owned us as his; and pieces of himself. And in these respects the Elect had a Being afore God; such as was far more than what was simply given them in God's Decrees, or Purposes of Grace, or Good-Will, or bare Choice on God's part; but his Choice did find a Foundation of their Existing: For this his Christ was there present with him, actually existent, and at his Request to bear the Person of God-Man; and therein to estate us all, at the instant of his Choice, as far as he should name them to him, to be his Body, Spouse, Members; and he from that instant also to bear, and represent their Persons afore his Father: and so to give them a representative Being in himself, which other Creatures then had not, but were left singly to their own Fortunes, Stations. And in these respects it is that Christ as God-Man is stiled the Everlasting Father, Isa. 8. Father of us; namely from Everlasting: bearing us then in his Heart, as a Mother doth her Children in her Womb. So as by means hereof it came to pass, that the Elect were not as Branches hanging in the Sun-beams of God's single Purpose of Grace only, to produce, and bring them forth into actual Existence by its single Influence; but such as have withal a Soil, a Root they were planted in, the Person of Christ: He and we being σύνφυτοι, as Twin-Plants, planted together in God's Heart from the first. Hence that high Foundation of Election, which is called the Election of Grace, is said to be in Christ: He hath chosen us in Christ afore the World began. And though God chose the Persons, yet compleated he his Choice of them in Christ, and gave us a Being in Him, as in an Head, and then gave them this Being in Christ; but chose them in Christ, from the first cast of his Thoughts to choose them. God never considered us as single Persons out of Christ, (though in this respect that he determinately, and distinctly foreknew, and pitch'd upon each of our Persons;) but chose us one in and with his Son, as an Head, or common Person, taking our Persons, and undertaking for them; He never abstractedly considered, or viewed us apart from, or without Christ, but as one in Him, and with Him; constituted and made one Head and Body at once: And this afore-hand gave them a Subsistence of another kind, than what by Creation they were to receive: Inasmuch, as their State in Him is termed a Being, a new Being, and Existence; as the Subject upon which Being first constituted, the Benefits do fall. Of Him ye are in Jesus Christ, says the Apostle, 1 Cor. i. 30. Lay that as our Foundation of Christ his being made Wisdom, Righteousness, Sanctification, and Redemption to us; which are the Benefits that belong to that Being: In him ye are, or have a Being, says the Apostle. And before God Christ had it, from that time wherein we were given to God by him. And we began so far to be, as we were considered in Him, and that was at our Everlasting Election; and he to be sure had an actual Being, and bore an actual representation of us: And this laid a Corner-stone of a higher Being supernatural, even from Eternity, than what our first Creation came unto.

This Supercreation-Being having been thus settled, I come to the second Head proposed, viz.

II. A General Consideration of the Benefits wholly Supercreational.

These Supercreation-Blessings we hold of Christ, are of two sorts, and distinct.

I. Such as are Supernatural, even in respect of our first-Creation Estate, unto which for that cause I give the stile of Supercreation-Benefits; which do far exceed in value the first stock of Creation-Blessings: Such as that of Adoption of Sons, Heirs of Glory; an unchangeable Love of God to us, and of an immutability of our Love, and of perfect Holiness in us unto God again.

2. The second sort of Benefits are those that are Supernatural in respect unto our sinful, corrupt, miserable Estate we are fallen into, and delivered out of: Such as are Pardon of Sin, Justification, and a Restauration of that Original Holiness we lost, and had once in Adam; together with that high superinduction of the Image of Christ in his dying, and rising; which involves in it the Original Holiness we had once in Adam, conformable to the Holy Law. These I call purely Redemption-Blessings; and may wholly be called Supernatural, as aforesaid.

And these two sorts of Benefits, as they are apparently distinct in themselves; so answerably they have a distinct Foundation in Christ. For

The first sort have their Foundation in his very Person, through a given Relation of us to him, and him to us; and these are abstractly considered from Redemption, or the Benefits belonging thereunto, and purchased thereby: So as God giving us unto him, and he accepting us for his Body, and to be one with us for ever; even by virtue of this Relation there is a wonderful Sphere, and round of Blessings, which have a Foundation thereby, and might have had, if God had so pleased, if Men should never have fallen: And although Man falling, God decreed that other sort of Redemption-Mercies; yet so, as these first sort were originally decreed, as being more glorious; without the consideration of the Fall. And though (as I acknowledg) they were upon Man's Fall, purchased all anew, upon the account of Redemption; yet the Interest of his Person, and our very Relation to his Person, (as aforesaid) was in the Original Decree of God about us, and continues to be the main Foundation, with a distinct consideration from those of Redemption, of our right unto those Blessings, although also purchased by Redemption, so as for us to have a double Title to them.

The second sort of Benefits are wholly by virtue of Redemption, and flow from the Merits, and Influence of the Acts thereof; and wholly so arise from an acquired Interest of his Obedience, Death, Resurrection, &c. And again, although the Merit that purchased these Benefits, do wholly arise from the Worth and Dignity of his Person; as namely his Death, and Blood, that it was the Blood of God; and the Obedience of him that was offered up by the Eternal Spirit, the Godhead in Him, and is therefore called the Righteousness of God; yet these Benefits are not founded, and conveyed meerly from our Relation to his Person, abstractedly considered from his Redemption; as if that Relation to, and Union with his Person, could have produced, or procured these Redemption-Blessings, as I stile them, without a Superadditional Merit acquired, over and above, and beside that of the Interest of his Person.

C H A P. X.

How all Things depend on Christ, God-Man; and what Influence he hath into them; further proved and illustrated, by that Text in Col. 1. 16. Some Cautions premised for the understanding it aright. What is meant by those Expressions, In Him and by Him are all Things.

Col. 1. 16.

For by him were all Things created that are in Heaven, and that are in Earth. visible and invisible, whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers: All Things were created by him, and for him.

NOW is to succeed that other Title of Glories, due to our Lord Christ, considered as God-Man, namely, in his Relation unto the Works and Counsels of God, and the influence he hath into them, the dependance they all have, either actually or virtually, upon that personal Union of the Son of God with our Nature; and this is the second Thing in order in the Text, or a second Crown of Glory, which our Apostle here setteth upon our Lord's Head, (who is yet moreover, above, and besides all this) an Head unto his Church, &c. as vers. 18.

That these Things here are spoken of him as God-Man, and not as Second Person only, I shewed in the first Chapter of this Book, in the latter part of it, wherein I opened and sorted the Particulars of this Text, into their due method.

The only difficulty that here occurs, (e're we proceed any further) is, That seeing the Son of God did not assume that Man Jesus into one Person with himself, until 4000 Years after the Creation; how can the Work of the Creation be attributed to him, considered as God-Man, that by him all Things were created? And so, why should it not still rest upon this Account, that by him, simply considered as God's Son, and Second Person, all Things were made.

Towards the clearing of this, I cast in these ensuing Particulars.

I. That there is a double Influence which Causes have into Effects; one Virtual, the other Actual. Not to instance in other Causes, (if any such like to this might be found); it will be enough to give a parallel-Instance in Christ himself, whose Actions performed by him, when come in the Flesh, had yet a virtual influence into many Things that were done long before, either the Actual Existence of him in the Flesh, or the performance of those Actions; yea, the virtue whereof reach'd to the beginning of the World: Thus by virtue of his death, Adam, and Eve, and Abraham, and all the Fathers were saved. Not to prove this by Induction, but by the Lump; Peter having spoken of all the Fathers under the Old Testament, Acts 15. in the last words of vers. 10. immediately diately subjoins and pronounceth this as common to the Jews, and themselves now in the Times of the New Testament; We believe, that through the Grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, we shall be saved even as they, vers. 11. that is, they and we both alike are saved, by the Grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. Yea, and further, this their Salvation is attributed to his Death; which though once, as a Sacrifice, offered up in the End of the World, Heb. 9. 26. yet was offered up for Sins past; Rom. 3. 25. Whom God hath set forth to be a Propitiation, through Faith in his Blood, to declare his Righteousness for the Remission of Sins that are past, through the forbearance of God. And that under the Old Testament, faith, Heb. 9. 15. And for this cause he is the Mediator of the New Testament, that by means of Death, for the redemption of the Transgressions that were under the first Testament, they which are called might receive the Promise of the Eternal Inheritance.

And as there is this double Influence, so answerably, a double Existence may be conceived of him.

A Virtual Existence, which is affirmed of him in that Speech, when he is said to have been the same Christ Yesterday as well as to Day, to all Believers; Heb. 13. 8. Jesus Christ, the same Yesterday, to Day, and for ever. Yea, and his Death, in respect of the virtue of it, hath existed from the beginning of the World; as that Speech, Rev. 15. 8. evidently imports, The Lamb slain from the beginning of the World.

Let us first see what the Text will speak in favour of this Interpretation; yea, let us but compare Phrase with Phrase, as things are spoken of him in this Text, he is said to be the First-Born from the Dead; and 1 Cor. 15. 20. The First-Fruits of them that slept; in so much as, vers. 23. of that Chapter, the priority of Order in rising again, is given to Christ, But every Man in his own order, Christ the First-Fruits, afterwards they that are Christ's. But is it so, that Christ, in respect of an actual Priority, was the first of all the Elect that rise again; so, as none of them afore him, though you know Lazarus, and divers others at his Death, rose out of their Graves? and yet, still he is the First-Born, the Eldest Son, whom that Womb of the Earth gave up, the First Fruits that Soil brought forth, which therefore must necessarily be understood of a Virtual Existence and Priority; and so, as because by virtue of him, all others do and have risen again. Then you may, by these and the like Parallels, easily conceive how this Assertion is to be understood, that all Things were created by him, as God-Man, and as that one Lord, or Christ; as also, that there is not a necessity to ascribe all such Things spoken of him, or to put the account of his being Second Person alone, as abstracted from the consideration of his being Lord, and Christ, because said to be done by him afore the Humane Nature existed.

And so the plain sense of this Assertion is this, That the Son of God, personally and actually existing as the Son of God, with God, afore the World or any Creature was made; he undertaking, and covenanting with God, to become a Man, (yea, that Man which he hath now taken up into one Person with himself) as well for this End, as for other Ends more glorious, God did in the virtue and fore-knowledg thereof, and in the assurance of that Covenant of his, proceed unto the creating all Things which he hath made; and without the intuition, or having this in his Eye, he would not have made any Thing which he hath made.

II. The second Particular is, the adding some Cautions touching the understanding of this Assertion.

I. It is not to be understood, as if I meant, that God had not sufficient Power, or absolute Sovereignty, to have created, unless the Son of God had become Man, God was God, blessed for ever, and all-sufficient in himself, without this Design about Christ: so as it adds no new Power to him, which he had not in himself afore. Thus take that Power which is in God to sanctify us now, when fallen into Sin, and which is in the Holy Ghost to effect it in us, is one and the same essential Power, which is in God as God, out of which he made Man at first, and created him in Holiness, and no other; and Christ's Redemption, Redemption, or dying for us, adds no new degree of essential Power to God, or the Holy Ghost, whereby to enable him to sanctify us, as if else he wanted Power to do it. No; And yet we say, as to the exerting or putting forth that Power, that it depends morally on Christ's having died, as without which it would not have been put forth; as also for that his Death purchased the Power, and also the Mercy that was in God, to have it demonstrated, in raising up Men dead in Sins and Trespasses; and so we say it is to be attributed to his Death and Resurrection virtually, which also the Scripture affirms, Phil. 3. 10. That I may know him, and the Power of his Resurrection, and the Fellowship of his Sufferings, being made conformable unto his Death.

2. As to the Point in hand: I assert not neither, so high and so great a dependance of this Creating-Power upon the Personal Union, as is of sanctifying us upon Christ's Redemption, for by his Death he purchased that Power. But so it is not here, as if that his undertaking to assume Man's Nature, had purchased this putting forth God's Power to create; but the dependance thereon refers to God's Will: and so is ex Hypothesi, that he would otherwise never have gone about to create, he would never have been pleased with any Creature, or all Creatures, he could have made without this; and so in him, and from him, as so considered it was, that God condescended thereunto, as the Reasons of this Point annexed to the proof of it, will give the account of.

3. When this is attributed to Christ, as God-Man, it is not exclusively to be understood, as if as Second Person, he did not concur to create as well as the Father, and the Holy Ghost, because he virtually concurred as God-Man. No; for look as in Redemption, the Son, as Second Person, concurs as well as the Father and the Spirit, as it is one Act in common of the three Persons, yet so as over and above Christ, as God-Man in one Person, doth in especial effect it: So here in Creation, he hath, over and above his common Concurrence as Second Person, in this, and all Works else, a special Honour attributed to him, as God-Man, from his virtual Hand in it.

III. It will much conduce to the right stating of this Point, as I assert it, to take notice of the Aberrations from, and yet dark Gropings after this Truth.

1. Arrius, he would have Christ to have been a great Creature in the Form of God, and as a God by Office, and like unto him in all Things, existing afore the World was, as the Medium or Means by whom God made all Things, and that without the intervention of such an Immense and Divine Creature, he would not immediately himself have created any thing. But then Arrius withal denied that this Christ was also God essentially, and of the Substance of his Father, and so asserted him to be but a meer Creature.

See Rivet's
Gen.

2. Others of late have in like manner thus endeavoured to set out the Person of Christ to us; that he was put forth by God out of himself a meer Creature, and under the Covenant of Works; yet so, as in his Person he was the Spirit, the seminal or prolific Virtue of all the Creatures that could, or should be made, being the whole Mass of what God had in him to afford to make Creatures out of, distinct from himself; as Man hath to afford, what, if let out of himself, is the Foundation or Matter of a Son, or Children from him: and that this great Son of his, thus put forth, finding himself distinct from God now put forth; and so as a meer Creature mutable, as under the Covenant of Works, as all are by the Law of Creation, and that so he would die and perish, if he remained alone and thus out of God; he therefore, by the supernatural Guidance, and impulse of God, willingly died to that Creatureship, and the State and Condition thereof, and giving that up to an Oneness with God in Spirit, he rose and ascended up to a Being in the Form of God, and one with God in Spirit; and in this respect was termed, the Lamb slain from the beginning of the World; and then did create, as God, and as being in the Form of God, and put forth Angels, and this World, and all Things out of himself, and thereby is become the Head of the First Creation: and by his appearing in Flesh, in that that Man at Jerusalem, did, by the like Example acted by him, teach us Men to die unto our being Creatures, which hath been commonly termed by them, destroying of Flesh, &c. and then to rise up in Spirit unto that Being in the form of God, and one in Spirit with God, even as Christ himself afore the World had done, and thereby preserved himself from Ruin: and this is the Covenant of Grace, say they; thus Christ became the Head of the New Creation, as he was Author of the first.

3. That great and excellently Learned Man, Sir Francis Bacon, in a confession of Faith, which I had in Manuscript, under his Hand, about forty six Years ago, and since printed 1641, but without his Name, his words are these.

‘ I believe that God is so Holy, Pure, and Jealous, as it is impossible for him ‘ to be pleased in any Creature, though the Work of his own Hands; so that ‘ neither Angel, nor Man, could stand, or can stand one moment in his Eyes, ‘ without the beholding of the same in the Face of a Mediator: and therefore ‘ before him, with whom all Things are present, the Lamb of God was slain
 ‘ afore all the World; without which Eternal Purpose of his, it was impossible ‘ for him to have descended to any Work of Creation, but he should have en‘ joyed the blessed and individual Society of three Persons, in the God-head only
 ‘ for ever. But that out of his Eternal and Infinite Goodness, and Love, pur‘ posing to become a Creature, and communicate with his Creatures, He or‘ dained, in his Eternal Counsel, that one Person of the God-head, should be ‘ united to one Nature, and to one particular of his Creatures, that so in the ‘ Person of the Mediator, the true Ladder might be fixed, whereby God might ‘ descend to his Creatures, and his Creatures ascend unto him.

And in his fifth Paragraph it follows;

‘ That by virtue of this his Eternal Counsel, touching a Mediator, he de‘ scended, at his own good pleasure, and according to the Times and Seasons to ‘ himself known, to become a Creature; who by his Eternal Word created all ‘ Things, and by his Eternal Spirit doth comfort and preserve them.

There are two Things in his stating this, which I do not readily assent unto.

1. That Christ was considered by God as the Lamb slain, and from the foresight of his Death; and the Second Person undertaking to become the Lamb slain, it was, that God designed to create, even as through and for his Death, as afore considered, he ordained to redeem Man, considered then as fallen: But this needed not as to Creation, there being no supposition of Guilt in that which was nothing, which all Things afore their Creation were; and besides, though his taking our Nature, was designed and proved to our Redemption from Sin, yet sufficient alone to move him simply to make and create meer Creatures, was that other Reason which he gives, that one Person of the God-head should be united to one of his own Creatures; in whose Person, so united, God's Holiness and Purity would fully be pleased to descend to create other fellow Creatures for him and his Glory. Let Christ's Blood then stand to reconcile Sinners, or those that were in danger to sin; and let his bare undertaking to be united to a Creature, be a sufficient relief against the meanness of meer Creatures, and by their Defects to set forth his Glory. The Creature alone considered, had not been worth the making, without this Design; Christ's Person alone was an abundantly well-pleasing Medium, or Mediator of Union to the Elect, and of stability unto the frailty and unworthiness in Creatures.

2. The second thing (which may stumble some) in this Assertion is, that he says, It was impossible for God, without this Counsel or Decree (namely, of Christ's Incarnation) to have descended to any Work of Creation, &c. Which Expression, unless understood of an Impossibility, ex Hypothese, by way of Supposition, (that God would not have been pleased with any, or all Works his Power could make, unless this Personal Union of some Creature with God, had been added and undertaken) would have a Danger in it, and a great Absurdity. Only as of a Wise Man it is said, He cannot do that which his Wisdom and Will, guided by Counsel, thinks not meet for him to do ; so the same may be affirmed of God ; which also seems, by the tenure of his Speech, to have been his Scope.

But the State I would put this Assertion into, in distinction from this, and in perfect opposition to those fore-mentioned Errors of others, is,

That indeed, according to the Scriptures, and the very Foundations of our Religion, God needed not any meer Creature to help him to create, but it is his own immediate Power that doth it, as the Book of Job and Genesis tells us : Therefore (to obviate that Objection) our Christ is truly and by Nature very God, of the same substance with his Father, begotten by him, and equal to him ; and that afore the World was ; as also at the Creation, he existed as God, with God his Father, afore any Creature was, or any way assumed by him.

His subserviency to God, in the Creation, is set forth in this Colos. 1. 16. in three Particles.

- I. Ἐν αὐτῷ, * In him.
- II. Δι' αὐτοῦ, By him.
- III. Ἐἰς αὐτόν, For him.

* So in the Original ;
 Ὅτι ἐν αὐτῷ ἐκτίσθη τὰ πάντα τὰ ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσιν καὶ τὰ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, τὰ ὄρατα καὶ τὰ ἀόρατα, εἴτε θρόνοι, εἴτε κυριότητες, εἴτε ἀρχαὶ, εἴτε ἰσχυροὶ τὰ πάντα δι' αὐτοῦ καὶ εἰς αὐτόν ἐκτίσθη
Col. 1. 16.

I. In him, As the Exemplary Cause ; so some Schoolmen of old interpreted it : for it is not in him all the Creatures can be said to be as in a Head, for that is the peculiar and proper Priviledg of Elect Men and Angels that are Homogeneal to him : He is a Lord to every Creature, but not an Head, therefore the exemplary cause is intended. And this was one Reason, among many others, why God in his Decree, about what Creature the Second Person should assume, pitch'd upon Man's Nature, rather than that of Angels, because Man's Nature is the compendium of all, and so fitted to be (as in Christ it was) exalted the Exemplar, the πρωτότυπον, the Pattern of the whole Creation. The Poets feigned a piece out of every Creature to have been taken, to make up Man, the perfection of them all, in his Reasonable Soul, which is a Spirit that can subsist of it self ; he agrees with Angels, in his Body, and the Lives thereof, Sensitive and Vegetative, with Beasts and Plants, &c. Now therefore God set up Christ as the Pattern of all Perfection, (for so that Humane Nature, united and quickned by the God-head, must needs be even above the Angels themselves, though having a Body, and more excellent than they) and drew in scattered Pieces, the several Perfections met in that Humane Nature in the rest of the Creation from this Pattern ; And in Man's Creation (whose Nature it was he was to assume) this seems to have been considered by God, in that Speech then uttered, Let us make Man according to our Image, which in Christ as decreed to be God-Man, and in which, as such, he is stiled, The Image of the Invisible God, as hath been shewn, (which some, both Antient and Modern, Divines have interpreted of Christ, as to be made Man, notwithstanding Austin's Objection). Even as that Speech used when Man was created, [Man was made a Living Soul] is interpreted by the Apostle, 1 Cor. 15. 45, &c. to have an Eye to Christ, as the Type or Shadow hath to the Body, so likewise that Speech uttered before concerning his Creation, Let us make Man after our Image, that Man refers to whom God was to be united to, and is, as if God had said, Whom we in our Decrees have set up as the Pattern, and expressest Image of the Invisible God-head, common to all Three Persons, to the utmost liveness ordained to be set out, in him who was set out. Therefore the first in Intention, and Decree, and therein before this Man Adam, and all Things, and of whom this Man Adam is but a shadow.

II. The second Phrase is, δι' αὐτοῦ, By him all Things were created ; so Ephes. 3. 9. where speaking of the Mystery of the Gospel it self, (whereof Christ was the great Founder, and apparent Author in all Mens Eyes) he adds, how the same Christ had also created all Things, he having been some way the Instrument, as he is [Christ] God-Man, anointed, of the Creation, as well as actually of Redemption. And the coming of it in there, so by a meer occasional Addition, imports, imports, as if this Christ indeed had been concealed, and came not into the World, but then when the Gospel was to be revealed and manifested, (of which he there speaks as a Mystery hid) ; yet unto him, as thus to come into the World, was the World beholden for their Creation ; and this Glory of Christ, God concealed, until the full revelation of him, in the great Work of Redemption ; that so all his Revenues of Glory might come in together. Yea, if he were at all to be made a Creature, it was his due Personal Priviledg, to have been first himself made, and himself to have been God's Instrument in it, and to have uttered those words still which were spoken by God, (yet as on purpose relating to him, as Cameron well observes) Let there be Light ; Let there be Sun, Moon, &c. Even as it was his due, when he assumed our Nature, to have been filled with all that personal Glory which he hath now in Heaven ; but that for accomplishment of other Ends also it was suspended ; namely, that he might first become Sin and a Curse for us : So, I say, it was his due to have existed in his Humane Nature first, (supposing such a Decree that he should assume) ; and then he, as God's Word and Instrument, to have created all Things, as he wrought Miracles when he was on the Earth ; but God having a further and more glorious End, suspended that (as he did his Personal Glory due to him when he came) and contrived his coming after the Fall, in order to Redemption. He yet gives him that Glory of Creation virtually, and that he created all Things by him, and by virtue of his Incarnation ; and in creating (to shew he should have done it as his $\lambda\acute{o}\gamma\omicron\varsigma$, a Word to be made Flesh) he accordingly acts his Part, as in Gen. i. God said, Let there be Light, and the like ; which but for this very Mystery needed not have been. Yea, such seems to have been his subserviency to God herein, that John contents not himself only to have said, that all Things were made by him ; but further adds, and without him nothing was made that was made : Unto the interpretation of which place hereto annexed, I refer the Reader for a further Explication and Confirmation of this Truth.

And the Reason of this is, partly to honour his Son, to make that his Act of undertaking to assume our Nature, (whereby the Son should be made less than his Father, even in the greatest height of Glory that could be put upon him ; and yet he did this to manifest the God-head to the utmost) the Foundation of the Creation, as he did his Incarnation in frail Flesh, together with his Sufferings, the Foundation of our Salvation, (for upon the Decrees of God's Will, we will suppose the connexion of these to depend) ; but yet partly withal, because it was not meet, nor did it become the Great God to make any meer Creatures, though never so glorious, but upon Christ's undertaking first himself to be a Creature ; and that for two Reasons.

First, For if God glorify himself by Creation at all, he will glorify himself as God, the utmost way that may be, or else he doth not like himself : God is curious in the Works which his Hands mean to make, and will manifest his God-head unto the utmost. Now all that could have been held forth and manifested of the God-head, in and to meer Creatures, had fallen short, had not been to the utmost ; therefore if God satisfy himself, it must be by that which is the utmost, or he would have torn all Projects of Models of Worlds in pieces, and never have put them in execution ; for still he says with himself, I shall not do my best and utmost, if there be not an Union of some Creature into one Person with us, nothing else would have satisfied his vast desires of being glorified.

And, secondly, The Holiness of meer Creatures would not have come up to a contentment of his ; as the manifestation of the God-head in the Creation of meer Creatures, would not have given full contentment to his Power and Wisdom, so no meer created Holiness to his Holiness. He finds folly in the Angels possibility of Mutability, an Imperfection, but there is none in God incarnate. Now therefore if his Son will undertake to be a Creature, he is so pleased herewith, as he can be content to condescend (as the Psalmist's word is) to look down upon the making Works of a lower Nature. Which all serve also to illustrate illustrate this highest Work of all by their several Subordination thereunto, in their several Ranks and Orders.

Chap. 10.

It is strange, that in the Text there should be three Phrases used concerning the Creation, in relation unto Christ: The Creatures are said to be created in him, and created by him, and created for him.

In him, as a Head, they are not; the Creatures cannot be said to be created, as the Elect are said to be chosen in him, that's proper to those Creatures that are homogeneal to him. In him, therefore may well be understood virtually, as in Ephes. 2. 10. we are said to be his Workmanship, created in him to good Works; so the old Creation is also in him in a virtual respect. That place in Prov. 8. 30. I was brought up with him (speaking of Wisdom); I remember Junius translates it actively, Educat; I was he that did foster the Creatures, he did foster the Purposes of God in the Creation of the World; he was Educans, nursing up, and fostering of the old Creation in his purpose. In Ephes. 3. 9. the Apostle saith, that it was given to him to preach the unsearchable Riches of Christ, and to make all Men see what is the Fellowship of the Mystery, which from the beginning of the World hath been hid in God, who (saith he) created all Things by Jesus Christ. He speaks of the Mystery of the Gospel. Now that Jesus Christ was the Founder of the Gospel, that was apparently known, it was in all Mens Eyes; but he addeth, by the same Jesus Christ he created all Things, that is, by Jesus Christ, as anointed God-Man; and to me the words come in thus, (for it is an addition by the way) that though the Gospel only began to reveal this Christ, and he did not assume Man's Nature till the Times of the Gospel, and for Evangelical Ends and Purposes, for the Redemption of Man took frail Flesh; yet, saith he, know this, the World was beholden to him for its Creation; and this is one Glory of his that is not to be laid aside; and the Revelation of it saith, He is by the Gospel. He brings it in here with the other, that Christ might have all his Revenues of Glory (which in the 8th Verse had been stiled His Riches) come in together.

C H A P. XI.

That Christ as God-Man is the Creator of all Things, proved by Scriptures. The first Proof out of the former Text reassumed. 1 Cor. 8. 6. By whom are all Things. Some further Explanation how this is attributed to him as God-Man, in Answers to some Queries concerning it.

I Alledge in the first Place, that preliminary Text, I took of 1 Cor. 8. 6. Shewing thereout, That the One God, had set up Christ as the One Lord under Himself, a Lord unto all his Creatures. I then proved that Title of Lordship there given him, was not meant of his natural Lordship, as he is God, or singly as Second Person, but as God-Man. For evidence of which, I must refer the Reader thither.

That particular Improvement which I now make of that Passage in that Scripture, By him are all Things, is to set it in the Front to the rest of Scriptures that follow, to lead on to the proof of the Point in Hand, founded upon this.

That if this Title of [One Lord] be given him as God-Man, and in respect of an Office he sustains afore God, as was there proved, the Inference is strong, That then he was as such, first and chiefly forelaid in God's Designs and everlasting Purposes, as a Midst or Foundation unto ALL, as upon whom All Things in common for Creation, and we in special for our Supernatural Estate, had a dependance, and not meerly as Second Person. And it is of All Things as well as of the State of the Elect. For,

1. If All Things be by Him, as the Lord; then he, under God, is a Founder of them, as the Lord of them. For that which is by another, must needs be acknowledged as such, to be before that other. Nor is it said only, That all are for Him, as if in that respect only, he were their Lord, (which yet is true) as Adam, his Type, was Lord of all the visible World, and yet the World was not by him: But here, he is such a Lord, as by whom, or through whom all Things are. And not only of them when they once are, but through whom they are, and have their Being: And so he is their Founder as well as their End. Nor is he said simply to be Lord of All, as Acts 10. 36. and Lord over All, Rom. 10. 12. But here it is further, One Lord by whom All.

2. It is as indifferently spoken of Him, That All Things are by him as One Lord, as that We (the Church) are by him. Now all will, and do acknowledg, that We, and all that belongs unto our Salvation, do and doth depend on him as God-Man, and as our Lord; and that that is the intent of that Speech, in that same 1 Cor. 8. 6. And we by him: In that respect therefore, in their kind and proportion, all Things else; for both are there set together and yoaked in one and like Parallel Expression.

3. And indeed, 3dly, The Dependance of all Things on him, meerly as God, and Second Person, is afore included in that preceding Speech: There is One God, the Father, of whom are all Things. And Christ, considered as Second Person, is one God with the Father; as our Divines upon this Place do affirm, against the Socinian Objection. And the Father is set for the other two Persons, both the Son and Spirit; as in Joh. 17. 3. And this is Life Eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. And here the Son is evidently implied, in saying, One God the Father, spoken in relation to Christ as the Son; and because they are both thus included, therefore it is that the Spirit is not mentioned at all: when yet upon him is the same dependance that is upon the Father; yea, and of the Son and Spirit it is that all things are, as well as of the Father.

To conclude: What is that great Truth the Apostle sets the primitive Churches awork to pray about, and that the generality of the then Heathen World might come to the knowledg of, but this very thing thus stated? God would have all Men to be saved, and come to the knowledge of the Truth: [for there is One God, and one Mediator] between God and Men, the Man Christ Jesus. 2 Tim. 2. 4, 5. And doth not this Corinthian Text speak just in the same parallel Language, One God, and One Lord? So then it is not Christ, simply considered as Second Person, the Apostle here intends, as the One Lord here; that sence would be too narrow in comparison of this other that comprehends the whole of our Christ, both as God, the substratum of his Person, and also Man, and the whole of his Office in the relation he stands thereby unto God, to us, and all the whole Creation.

There is a Query or two may be made.

Query 1. Is not Christ's Lordship rather thus to be understood, That as God indeed, he hath a natural right over all things; because as God he made them? (And the Title of God's Dominion over All, is founded on this, That he is the Maker of them) and so, that Christ's Official or Commissionated Lordship over all as Man, is but only for him to be the End or Ruler of them, which Psal. 8. 4. compared with Heb. 2. 6. gives him; But one in a certain place testified, saying, What is Man that thou art mindful of him? or the Son of Man, that thou visitest him? What is Man? Thou madest him to have dominion over the Work of thy Hands, &c. i. e. when they are once made by him, considered as he is God; and therefore in that respect of his being Man, is not to be extended to their Creation, or to his being Author of their very Beings themselves.

I answer; That if Lord here in the Text, be meant of that Commissionated Lordship he hath as God-Man, as hath been proved; that then, as truly as that all things are said to be of one God, as God, in respect of their Creation; so truly are all things said to be by this one Lord, though in a distinction from God. All Things is a reaching word, and comprehends the very Beings of Things; and we see, that in as full an extent and latitude, it is spoken of Christ, that All are by Him, as the former is of God, that all are of Him; only with this note of difference [of Him] so of God, but [by Him] so of that one Lord, shewing that God hath that Dominion originally, but Christ derivatively, as a Commissionated Lord, as He by whom God doth all things, that yet are of God himself. Now, when it is here said of God, All things are of him; all readily understand it, that all things have their Beings of Him, and their very Creation from Him: Therefore also, when it is said of Christ, All things are by Him; it is in like manner imported, that they all depend on this Commissionated Lord for their Beings and Creation also. And the Scriptures fall in with this phrase and manner of expression, whilst they frequently say of Christ, All things were made by Him, and that God by Him did make the Worlds; whilst they particularly express Christ's share of Efficiency in their Making and Creation. This is the common language with what is here.

Ans. 2. The Assertion is not, That as Man, singly considered, this is attributed unto him, but as God-Man. Singly and alone as Man he hath no such Lordship at all, either over all the Creatures to rule them, much less to create: for a meer Man was not capable of it, (as was said): Nor, on the contrary, is it true, That as he is God, singly considered, he only can create; but that as God-Man he can create also, (especially having been therewith commissioned thereto as such, by God) even as well as forgive Sins: which he takes on him as God-Man to do. The Jews in a like manner objected, Mark 2. 7. This Man speaks Blasphemies: Who can forgive Sins but God? 'Tis true, None could but He that is God: But it was not true, that it was not so a Property of God, considered singly as God, only that a Man that was one Person with God, or God-Man, could could not be partaker of it, as his Personal Priviledge by virtue of that Union, or have a virtual influence thereunto, as well as God. And to put an end to that Controversy ; Christ gives this real Demonstration of it, v. 9, & 11. Whether is it easier to say, Thy Sins are forgiven thee ; or to say, Arise, take up thy Bed, and walk? But that ye may know, [THE SON OF MAN] hath power on Earth to forgive Sins. Yea, Christ, as God-Man, doth greater Works every day than create Worlds: He creates new Creatures, and thereby causeth all old things to pass away, and all things to become new. And he will create new Heavens, and a new Earth; and change our vile Bodies, that they may be fashioned like unto his glorious Body, according to the working of his mighty Power, whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself. Phil. 3. ult. Which are all spoken of Christ as God-Man, even Him whom visibly we look for from Heaven, as it is there in the verse afore.

Answ. 3. Nor are these things attributed to Him meerly by way of communication of Properties ; whereby what is proper only to the Divine Nature singly as God, is attributed to the Manhood ; but these all by way of influence and virtual efficacy are attributed to him as God-Man, as truly as the Works of Redemption, Mediation, and Forgiveness of Sins, all which are secundum utramque Naturam attributed to Christ, in respect of both his Humane and Divine Natures, as we affirm against the Papists.

Answ. 4. To affirm this, is (as not any of those other afore-mentioned) no way derogatory unto God. It is proper indeed to God to create by his own sole Power originally, all the essential Power is solely his, and the Man Jesus can add nothing of Power thereunto ; yet derivatively the Person of the Son as God-Man, may be and was impowered thereto, over and above what simply as God and second Person, his Power was for: As by way of difference it is said, All things are by Him as Lord: But of God, That All is [of Him.]

Answ. 5. Nor is it true, that the sole foundation or rise of God's being Lord over all, is, That he is Maker of all things ; and that therefore this is peculiar to God as God: For he was Lord over all before they were made, in that he could make them, &c. His Lordship as God, is founded on a Sovereignty in himself; And accordingly doth learned Cameron speak upon this occasion of Christ himself, Dominium illud essentiale, &c. This essential Dominion (namely as God) belongs not only to Christ, for the cause or ground that he is the Creator of all things, but upon that height and Sovereignty of the Divine Nature ; which is such, and so high and lofty in kind above that of all the Creatures, That although the World had not been made by him, (which yet we cannot so much as feign the supposition of) He had yet been the Lord of all things, namely as God.

Query 2. That seeing he existed not as Man at the Creation, nor until four thousand years thence after ; as also by Peter, the first date of his being made Lord, as God-Man, is made upon his Ascension into Heaven, Acts 2. v. 34, 36. How then can his having created All, be ascribed unto him as God-Man, the Lord?

Answ. 1. This hinders not his virtual Influence (as God-Man) into the Work of Creation, no more than his not having existed as Man, did hinder his virtual Influence (and that as God-Man) into the Work of Redemption all along under the Old Testament, in which Christ is so often stiled the Redeemer. And further ; By the same Reason (if this Allegation should avail) he should not have been made [the Christ] no more than the Lord neither, until he had ascended ; for both are there equally joined, Him hath God made [both Lord and Christ]: But as Christ, and Jesus also, he is the same Yesterday, in the Old Testament ; and to Day, in the New, as well afore his Ascension as after, and for ever, Heb. 13. 8. and therefore as Lord also.

Answ. 2. The actual execution by the Man Jesus, (He now actually existing as such) was indeed first more openly and publickly entred upon, and manifestly declared before Angels and Men, upon his Ascension ; but was afore secretly executed and performed (in all the Works and Parts belonging to it) by the Son of God, who was the Person then existing ; and yet not as then by him him, as singly considered, as meerly Second Person, but as having been appointed and commissioned thereto by the Three Persons in God's Decrees, and himself having also undertaken to be Man, and therewith he sustaining that Personage, he performed and issued forth all Acts afore his Father, sub eo nomine: observe how the second of the Acts speaks, Let all the House of Israel know assuredly, (by this open and visible Demonstration given) that God hath made that same Jesus whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

Answ. 3. Nor doth he say, that when he ascended, (the visible Effects of which, ye now see and hear, says he, vers. 23. were the Evidence for this, that God had made him Christ, and Lord; which Effects the Apostle refers them there unto) that then first, God made him the Lord, and Christ, or that then first he had entred upon that Office; but he produceth it as an undeniable Testimony, that God hath made him so, &c. and that he was the Person, whom God had made; but when first made, is not there said.

Answ. 4. Those words [hath made] do as well, and as effectually speak, and involve, his having been appointed to it, as now to note out the actual execution of it, by the Man as actually ascended. Appointed is put to express being made, and è contra: So Heb. 3. 2. treats of Christ; He was faithful to him that [appointed him; the Greek is, that made him]: And his being appointed Lord, will allow us, and send us to an higher Date, even to afore the Creation, yea, even to Eternity; Heb. 1. 2. God hath in these last Days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed Heir of all Things, by whom also he made the Worlds.

The Subject of these Elogies, is not singly the Second Person, but the whole of Christ as now made Man, and by whom he had now in the last Days spoken to us as such. And yet, because he had said, That in the last Days this was done, and not till then; to preoccupate the very same Objection we have been answering, he goes on, Whom he hath appointed Heir of all Things, &c. As if he had said, Although our Christ, as Man, actually existed not untill 4000 Years after the Creation, (at which Period it was the last Days began, or perhaps rather at his Ascension); yet he was long afore that appointed the Heir, that is, Lord of all Things that were so long actually extant afore him as Man; yea, he was so appointed long before the very Creation of them; and therefore he sets this his being appointed first, and afore that of their Creation, [by whom also he made the Worlds]; yea, and because as God-Man he was appointed the Lord of them, therefore it was also, that God commissioned him to make them, as being considered God-Man, to make his Title of Lordship, even as Son of Man, proper and direct, and adequately full to him. So then, God appointing him to all this, and the Son of God then existing, and consenting to, and taking this Office of Lord on him, and Person of God-Man, and Christ acting accordingly in all that was done, as the Lord and Heir of all, there needeth no more to verify this we are upon, namely, That as God-Man he made the Worlds, and virtually as Man, as well as efficiently both as God and Man, in the sense it hath been explained in.

C H A P. XII.

That Christ, as God-Man, is the Creator of all Things, proved from John 1. 1, 2, 3. Whether, ὁ λόγος, the WORD, import not as the Second Person, existing as God with God, in the Beginning, so without connotating that Person, as sustaining, before God, the Personage of God-Man, by whom as such all Things were created. An Interpretation of Prov. 8. from Vers. 22, to 32. with a Parallel between that Scripture, and this of John 1. 1, 2, 3. a brief Exposition of the first Chapter of John, continued unto the 14th Verse.

JOHN 1. Vers. 1, 2, 3.

In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All Things were made by him, and without him was not any Thing made that was made.

IN the prosecution of this Assertion of Christ (as God-Man) his being instrumental to all God's Purposes, and Decrees, and Works; as namely, the Creation, Providence, &c. I shall further add what the fore-part of this Chapter, which speaks of the Creation by him, under the Title of the Word, may contribute hereunto: Wherein it will be meet to enquire, Whether that Title, the Word, be to be understood of him, meerly as Second Person, or also as bearing the Personage of God-Man.

In discoursing of the Person of our Lord Christ, I fell upon that Title of his, whereby John here styles him the Word: and then discoursed, how it imported, both his being,

1. The Image of God the Father, which he is as Second Person.
2. The Image, the Manifestation of God unto us in an Humane Nature.

Which two are suitably consistent; the Word in both those Tongues the Scripture was written in, signifying the inward Image, or Conceptus of the Mind framed within it self, and also that which is uttered in Speech, which is the truest Interpretation or Index of the Mind, and the most immediate lively Image and Manifest of what the Mind conceives within it self, to others.

Many of our Modern Protestant Divines, have (as I then observed) altogether declined the first sense, and betaken themselves to the latter, namely, That Christ is called the Word, as in relation to his being manifested in an Humane Nature, and therein to manifest the whole of God unto us; for as manifested in our Nature, it was only, that he was to manifest God to us. In the Old Testament, besides those other Titles of Shiloh, Messiah, Son of God, The Seed of the Woman, Adonai, The Lord, &c. this, of his being the Word, was known known and used among the Jews ; Nor otherwise, had the Greek Septuagint so often used it, when Christ was spoken of, naming him $\delta \lambda \acute{o} \gamma \omicron \varsigma$, the Word, as it is found they have done. That it is not appropriated to him only as Son of God, and Second Person, is manifest, as in the Discourse of the Person of Christ I have shewn. That in the New Testament he is stiled so, as Son of God, united to that Humane Nature ; and as such, is evident from Rev. 19. 13. And he was clothed with a Vesture dipt in Blood, and his Name is called, The Word of God. For 'tis spoken, when he came to do Execution as God's Deputy.

Now John gives him that Title here, long afore he had assumed it, even in the beginning, and at the Creation, which was the first Appearance, or Manifestation, that can be supposed of him, seeing Creation was the first of Works God himself ever did act of himself. What I have commented from those other former Scriptures, hath put me upon a further Enquiry, viz. Whether the Title be not given him then, in respect of God's having set him up, and himself undertaken, and as then acting the Person of God-Man, (in the sense hitherto driven) one day actually to take Flesh ; but in the mean time, under the Name of the Word performing this part ; I proceed to it by degrees.

1. It seems fair to me, that if he be thus termed the Word, after the assumption of our Nature, and as acting in it ; why should not his being termed the Word before his Incarnation by John, have relation to his undertaking that Office or Person afore ? Now 'tis evident, that he is termed the Word of God in this sense, as subsisting in an Humane Nature, and therein executing the Decrees and Counsels of God, as King of his Church and Nations ; thus expressly, Rev. 19. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16. And I saw Heaven opened, and behold, a white Horse, and he that sat upon him, was called Faithful and True, and in Righteousness he doth judg and make War. His Eyes were as a flame of Fire, and on his Head were many Crowns, and he had a Name written, that no Man knew but he himself. And he was clothed with a Vesture dipt in Blood, and his Name is called, The Word of God. And the Armies which were in Heaven, followed him upon white Horses, clothed in fine Linnen, white and clean. And out of his Mouth goeth a sharp Sword, that with it he should smite the Nations ; and he shall rule them with a Rod of Iron ; and he treadeth the Wine-press of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. And he hath on his Vesture, and on his Thigh, a Name written, King of Kings, and Lord of Lords. And we know also, that he acted virtually as Man, afore he came into the World as Mediator, and so as God-Man, and appeared as a Man ; for in such an appearance, he the Angel of the Covenant conversed with the Fathers ; for the Angels that came into Sodom, the Inhabitants took for Men. Among the Jews also that Stile of the Word, as that of Wisdom, Prov. 8. (which is all one) was the usual Title taken up among them, to express the Mediator by ; It was the Name he was called and known by as such. One eminent Evidence of this, is that of the Chaldee Paraphrast, who hath entiled him the Word, as Mediator ; and thereof as God-Man in the Paraphrase and Translation of that Promise made to Abraham, Gen. 22. 15, 16. By my self have I sworn, in blessing I will bless thee ; and in thy Seed shall all the Nations of the Earth be blessed. The Chaldee turns it, By my Word have I sworn. Now compare with it, Heb. 6. 17. the Apostle's paraphrase on that Oath, is this ; his words in the Original import, That God did intermediate by Oath ; the Margin it self varies it, [interposed] : So then, put both together, the Effect is this, That God, in making the Promise to Abraham, swore by that Word of his, his Son, that was to be the Mediator and Interposer, &c. to make that Oath good through his interposition ; who being one in Essence with God, God is therefore also said to swear by himself. Or perhaps, rather thus, That the Son of God being that Person that appeared to the Fathers, did swear by himself, as to become the Word, and by Oath undertook to mediate ; and to that end to become, as Heb. 2. 16. the Seed of Abraham, and to bless that Nation. But still, out of either sense, is collected this, That Christ as Mediator is the Word.

Secondly ; At other times he is spoken of as Mediator, (and so God-Man) under that Title : So in that great Promise to Abraham, God interposed by his Word : So to David, for his Words sake (as Daniel, Chap. 9. 17. for the Lord's sake) ; fake); And these were the two great Persons in the Old Testament, to whom, and in whose Name the Promises were made. And,

Thirdly, I found, that here this Title is given him in respect of his being $\delta \lambda \acute{o} \gamma \omicron \varsigma$, and so that to be esteemed the first Title of all other, in relation unto God's Works ad extra; and that by him as Second Person, all was created: and comparing it with those other Scriptures, I considered, Whether it might not be given him, in relation to his having undertaken to be Man, as well as meerly the Son of God.

Fourthly, I found that Title of Wisdom (which is near a-kin, if not all one with this of the Word) to be understood of him as God-Man, as set up in God's Decree, with his own undertaking that Personage: So in Prov. 8. and that under that Title, He is there spoken of as set up with God long before the Creation. I compared that Scripture with this, and found them parallel in many respects.

I then, fifthly, found Christ applying that Title unto himself as Son of Man, as sending out Prophets, which Wisdom is said to do; and in the Proverbs, Wisdom's calling upon her Disciples under the Name of Children, Prov. 8. 32. Now therefore hearken unto me, O ye Children: for blessed are they that keep my Ways. And Christ referring to it, says, Wisdom is justified of her Children, Mat. 11. 19. and that Speech doth verily suppose him God-Man. Also he is found delighting in the Sons of Men on Earth, which Psal. 16. 23. is spoken of Christ, as Man. My Righteousness extends to the Saints on Earth, with whom is all my delight; which are almost the very words in Prov. 8. 31. Rejoice in the habitable part of his Earth, and my Delights were with the Sons of Men.

Sixthly, When I came to the Creation, as in Gen. 1. from whence this Title is given him, as by comparing John and Moses appears, I considered, whether God by a Word within himself, did speak it as in Corde. Now so he had said, Let there be Light, and that from Everlasting; and therefore why may we not suppose it to have been uttered at the beginning of every days Work? and that Voice being a Creature, Whether that cloathing with words at creation, shewed not, That Christ was to be clothed on with a Creature, to speak God's Mind unto us Creatures, and that he had so undertaken, as being that Wisdom who had sustained it in God's Purpose, and now appeared to execute it.

The Interpretation of the words, John 1. vers. 1. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

These words do willingly, and without constraint, offer up this one import of them, That he that was known as the expected Messiah, by the usual Name of the Word of God, both as the Image of God to himself, and as who was ordained to be the Wisdom of God, the Manifestation of God to us, the great Interposer and Mediator in an Humane Nature, to come one day into the World; his Person was existing in the beginning, and was God, and with God. Thus for his Personal Existence; which having affirmed, as to this existence of his Person,

Then, vers. 2. he adds, The same was in the beginning with God.

This being in view but a repetition of the former, and indeed meant of the Existence of his Person, is no other in the sense of it: I enquire therefore, Whether this Expression, The same was in the beginning with God, be not distinct from the former in this, That qua λόγος, or as the Word, as sustaining that Personage, (as I have often distinguished it) That eo Nomine, & Persona, He was then with God? He was this same Word in the beginning with God; and not only, That he that was the Word, was from the beginning with God. He had said afore, vers. 1. That he was in the beginning, and that he was with God. To what end repeats he this? Say I, to this eminent meaning, which as yet John before had not spoke out, namely, That as the Word, he had existed in the beginning, and was with God as such; and so read it thus, This same Word spoken of, was with God in the beginning; or, he was this same Word from the

the Beginning, the Existence of his Person, and his being God, and with God, the first Verse holds forth; but his Existence also with God tanquam, as the Word, or Mediator, this the second holds forth; and that as a Preface unto that which follows, concerning the Creation.

Chap. 12.

Verf. 2. The same was in the Beginning with God.

1. It imports, that the Second Person, besides his personal Existence, spoken of vers. 1. and Relation of a Son which he stood in towards God; did then between Him and His Father, sustain, and took on him another Relation, or Person of the Mediator: and not only undertaking it, but further, even then entering upon the Office of it, and acting the part of it, sustaining the Place and Reputation of it.

2. He was so in God's repute or esteem, as we use to say, one is so or so, with another one; or, he is All in All with him. Such Speeches import not only a real Existence, but also a being such or such in real Repute and Esteem with another. Thus, that Second Person (who also personally then existed, and was with God, and in God, and one with him) was in God's real repute and esteem the Word, and sustained that Name, and Relation, The Word was with God; that is, He was with God, the Word. God had that account or honour for him; and in their actual Converses, God own'd him as such, and himself took it on him to be such, afore God, and with God: in which Sense the Man Jesus praying for the Possession of that Glory he hath now in Heaven, urgeth that he had it with God afore the World was, when yet the Man actually existed not, John 17.5. It is the same Phrase there and here. And there it is necessarily to be understood of the Glory of God-Man, which he had in God's Decree and Designment; and the Second Person then existing and taking the Name and Thing upon him, God convers'd with him under that Title, &c. For it was that Glory which during the Term of his Humiliation, after the Man had been actually united to the Person of the Son, was suspended until now the time of his Praying. And therefore he prays to have it as then bestowed in the real Possession of it, according to the Model which was in God's Heart and Design about it before the World was; That so he might be existently and really possessed of it in and with God, as he had been ordained to it, and bore the repute of it with God. This to be the meaning of that his Petition, and of that Phrase with God, I have at large elsewhere handled upon that Text. And when I say in repute with God, I understand it thus, it was among the three Persons, and their Converses afore the World was made; as if three Men, who purpose to erect a Company, or to found a Colledg, should in their Contrivements, long before they set upon the Work, take several Relations on them, and Offices aforehand, which they mean executively to bear, when that Corporation is erected, or the Adventure begun; one of them being reckon'd Treasurer or Purser to lay out all; another Master, or Governour, &c. and according they before-hand esteem and call each other such, in their Speech of, and to each other; and in the very first founding that Colledg, the Treasurer lays out the Money out of his Purse as Treasurer, and so manageth it afterwards.

3. The Words are to be understood that he did then Virtually exist as such, as being considered the Foundation of those Works that follow Creation, and the like. Thus in the like Phrase of Speech he is said to be, The Lamb slain from the beginning of the World, Rev. 13.8. that is, from the Fall, for so the Phrase [from the beginning] there is taken; the meaning of which is, that Christ's Death was considered from that time, as virtually existing as if it had been past; in that upon the consideration of that his Death, God saved Eve, yea in that respect Christ did exist as Mediator, during all the Days of the Old Testament; Jesus Christ the same to Day, Yesterday, and for ever: In like manner may Christ be said then in the beginning to be the Word, as virtually under that consideration, being the Foundation of the World, and all God's Works therein. So then, it was not only an Existence in God's Decree, as in like manner that Glory he is said to have had with the Father afore the World was, is not spoken simply in Job. 17. Decree, for the like Speech is no where said of any Elect-Man or Angel, nor is compatible to them, as if they had a Glory with God afore the World was; no it was peculiar to Christ: and the reason of the Difference is evident, because the Person then existing actually (as Men and Angels did not) might well undertake and bear this Person apart, as in the Old Testament, de facto, he did before he was incarnate. So besides, the essential Glory as second Person (which he there speaks not of) he had the Honour, Repute, Renown and Glory with God, as the Mediator and Saviour of his Church, which now in his Prayer the Human Nature challengeth to be bestowed upon him as his antient Investment and Endowment, the second Person having before the World was, by an Agreement and Complot with his Father, undertaken to assume Human Nature, and all that while bearing, and sustaining, and acting that Person his Father did, as between themselves, repute and converse with him, as such; and gave him reputatively a Glory, a Name between themselves, correspondent to that Glory, which now (when God-Man glorified in Heaven) he actually hath bestowed upon him; which is thus expressed by him [the Glory which I had with thee] which yet had been his due, actually to have received, from the first Moment of his assuming Human Nature, but he had laid it down both before God and Men; taking the form of a Servant, and becoming of no Reputation, (as it is Phil. 2. 7.) neither with God, so far as God's outward Dispensation held forth; nor with Men, during the Time of his Humiliation; during which, he had given up even that Glory, in the respect he had had with God before the World was. Hence therefore, he having finished that Work of Humiliation for Man's Sin, (which was but part of the Work, which as God-Man he was to do by the way, whilst in the World) he now desires God to give him actually and visibly, before Saints and Angels, that Glory, and cause it to break forth in that Human Nature he had assumed, which reputatively between themselves he had given him before the World was, when he had undertaken it, and bare that Person of God-Man, which Glory was but his due Inheritance, whenever he should take our Nature. And this I truly take to be the genuine Sense, and fairest meaning that can be given of these Words of Christ, Joh. 17. 5. Now, O Father, do thou glorify me with thine own self, with the Glory which I had with thee before the World was. Namely, that which then he had in real repute, in Relation upon his bearing that Person, before God, which now he had assumed, and now seeks to have actually and visibly bestowed upon that Nature, which he had according to his ancient undertaking assumed.

It is well known unto those who have met with that Question, Whether Christ, as a Redeemer, was the first intended in God's Decrees, or whether considered as Man simply, in order to other glorious Ends, were not the Primitive great Decree, which hath been agitated both by Papist and Protestant Writers; it is well known, I say, that those which are for the latter, do insist, and urge much, that of Proverbs 8. Where Wisdom, that is Christ, for so Christ expressly takes it on himself, in those Words spoken of himself, by himself, Wisdom is justified by her Children, Prov. 8. 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31. The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his Way, before his Works of old. I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the Earth was. When there was no Depths, I was brought forth: when there were no Fountains abounding with Water. Before the Mountains were settled; before the Hills was I brought forth: While as yet he had not made the Earth, nor the Fields, nor the highest part of the Dust of the World. When he prepared the Heavens, I was there; when he set a Compass upon the Face of the Depth: When he established the Clouds above; when he strengthened the Fountains of the Deep: When he gave to the Sea his Decree, that the Waters should not pass his Commandment: when he appointed the Foundations of the Earth: Then I was by him, as one brought up with him: and I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him: Rejoicing in the habitable part of his Earth, and my Delights were with the Sons of Men.

These things (say they) cannot be understood of Christ simply, as Second Person, or as a Redeemer.

I. Not as Redeemer, which supposed this World first to be decreed to be Made, and Man to be Created, yea and Fallen; but as God-Man, and considered as such, as subservient to other Ends of God, as well as Redemption, in the utmost utmost Latitude of God's vast Purposes, which he made in Christ, besides those of Man's Redemption, and the beginning of all his Ways, ad extra.

Chap. 12.

2. Not as Second Person singly considered, for he is there made the Object of God's Decrees; which as God's Son simply considered, he did no way come under: But only as God-Man, 1 Pet. 1. 19, 20, 21. But with the precious Blood of Christ, as of a Lamb without Blemish and without Spot: Who verily was fore-ordained before the Foundation of the World, but was manifest in these last Times for you; Who by him do believe in God that raised him up from the Dead, and gave him Glory, that your Faith and Hope might be in God. And yet Wisdom, or Christ as here spoken, is made the Object of a Decree of God's, I was set up from everlasting, and the Lord possessed me in the beginning of his Way: that is, he so designed and decreed me afore all his other Ways, and as the Foundation of them: Or as the Revelation hath it, The beginning of the Creation of God, Rev. 3. 14. And unto the Angel of the Church of the Laodiceans, write, These Things saith the Amen, the faithful and true Witness, the beginning of the Creation of God.

Now compare but this Prov. 8. with this of John 1. from the second Verse; besides, that the Titles are in Effect and Significancy the same in the Original Languages, the Word, and Wisdom, you will find, that Solomon speaks but the same Things of him there, that John doth here; he calls him by the same Name, (that is, the same in Sense and Meaning) for Wisdom and $\delta \lambda \acute{o} \gamma \omicron \varsigma$ the Word, are all one, and both respect us; that which is there in John, said of the Word, That He was in the Beginning, is vers. 22. of the 8th of Proverbs said, The Lord possessed me in the Beginning of his Way: And so it may explain what is meant by [In the Beginning] here; namely, of the Creation, alluded to there: For the Ways of God are his goings forth towards the Creatures, which are called Opera ad extra; and therefore is not meant of his Eternal Generation: for so, Christ is not the beginning of God's Ways. That Speech is all one with Col. 1. 15. Where he is called, The First-Born of every Creature, being in God's Decree of Creation, the First, the Corner-Stone, and Beginning of the rest: So as it must be meant of Christ, as God-Man, and not simply as Second Person. Again, That which is here said, [was with God,] is there said [the Lord possessed me;] they dwelt together: He was with God as possessed of him. And vers. 30. Then was I by him; and from vers. 23. to vers. 30. He rehearseth the particular Works of Creation, by Parcels; as here they are in this one Sum, All Things were made by him. And vers. 30. that which is translated [I was brought up with him,] as a Nourishing, or one nourished Passively taken, is rendred by Junius Actively, [educans] as one Nourishing; that is, by my Power supporting the Creatures, and God's Decrees about them, and his Purpose to Create. And that which is here said, that he was [The Life of Man,] is there said, vers. 31. [Letificans,] that is, Blessing; or with Blessing, making joyful the Sons of Men: So Junius out of the Hebrew reads it; and Cartwright also, with others: So as the one Place may interpret the other.

Nor doth this Interpretation, weaken or derogate any thing, from alledging these Texts as strong Proofs, for the actual Existing of the Second Person, as Son of God, begotten by him from Everlasting. For, look as the Greatness of a Personage, doth argue the Greatness of the Person in his Birth, (when such or such an Office or Dignity goes by Birth.) So here, all this said hitherto, doth necessarily suppose and argue our Christ to have been God; (as John affirms) and Natural Son of God: And that he did then also actually exist, as bearing and sustaining this Dignity and Office afore God, of being his Word and Wisdom. Inasmuch, as if this Natural Greatness of his Person, were not as the Substratum, first supposed, and laid down, all these Assertions we have insisted on, would fall at once to the Ground, as having no Basis or Foundation to stand upon: If there were not a Person of Original Worth for such a Place and Employments. And accordingly, the Apostle, Heb. 1. argues and infers from the one to the other; and also this 1st of John, That He is God.

To come then to that which is eminently and summarily intended in his being called the Word, in respect of his then sustaining and assuming the Person of God-Man, in relation to all God's Works, Ways, and Counsels, whereof John gives gives instance in the Creation ; and the like, John 1. 3, 4. All Things were made by him, and without him was not any Thing made that was made. In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men.

We find, 1 Cor. 1. 24. that Christ is said to be, The Power of God, and the Wisdom of God : Both which are spoken of him, not as they are essential Attributes in God's Nature ; for the Person of Christ, is as a Person distinct from the Attributes, which are common to all Three ; and so, he is not stiled the Attribute of Wisdom, but they are thus spoken of Christ manifestatively, and instrumentally, and executively, and as he is from God, and made use of by God towards us, and in things that concern us, to be the whole Scene and Manifestation of God's Wisdom and Substratum of his Counsels concerning us, and so also the executive Power by whom God effects all he doth. And that this is the meaning, is evidently interpreted by that which follows vers. ult. God hath made him to us Wisdom, &c. And although it be a Maxim applyed to that particular of preaching the Gospel unto us Men, which is the Wisdom and Power of God to our Salvation ; yet it is a general Maxim brought in to confirm that Particular. Such Generals the Apostle often useth to alledg upon particular Occasions, as in Rom. 8. 29. our Predestination to be conformed to Christ's Image, is brought upon occasion of Afflictions ; so then Christ, in relation to what he is as a Medium between God and us, who are Creatures, is both the Wisdom of God, and the Power of God. Neither is it said of him simply as Second Person, but as Christ, God-Man, for so only he is made these to us.

Now these two, which as there spoken of Christ, in what he is to us as Saints, (which is the strict scope of the Apostle there) serves yet summarily and particularly to express, what he is as he is termed $\delta \lambda\omicron\gamma\omega\varsigma$, or the Word, by John, (as that Title relates to the manifestation of God by him, and instrumentality of him to us) both that he is the Wisdom of God, and the Power of God.

1. That it expresseth him to be the Wisdom of God, and is congenial with the proper import of the Word $\delta \lambda\omicron\gamma\omega\varsigma$, Ratio, Conceptus, the Mind or Counsel of God about the Creatures, or to be manifested to the Creatures ; those that are versed in the Languages the Old and New Testament were written in, will universally acknowledg, and the correspondency that Title of Wisdom, Prov. 8. with this of John, is an abundant confirmation of it.

2. And that the executive Power of God, as erected and put forth in the Creatures, is therein fitly comprehended also ; and thereby intended, that Observation evidently demonstrates, which Cameron, and many others, have made, by comparing Moses, Gen. 1. and this first of John together, which many things parallel lead to : That whereas Moses in the Creation mentions God the Father, and the Spirit, two of the Persons. That he veils the Son under that so often repeated Speech used of the Creation, that, God said, Let there be Light ; God said, Let there be a Firmament, which could not be without Mystery ; and what other than that Christ was that Word by whom God created all Things ; whom therefore when John speaks, referring to Moses's in the beginning ; and of the creation of all Things he terms $\delta \lambda\omicron\gamma\omega\varsigma$, the Word ; God's Power was erected and put forth by his Word, Psal. 18. 4, 5. He commanded, and they were created : As, where the Word of a King is, there is Power, Eccles. 8. 4. So God's Word, and his executive Power, are all one. When therefore Christ is termed the Word of God ; the meaning is, he is the Power of God, in being his Instrument and Agent in all he doth, or means to do.

I shall therefore distinctly insist on these two ;

1. How Christ, as thus God-Man, the Word, is the Wisdom of God.
2. How he is the Power of God.

And then proceed to add an Interpretation of the fore-part of this Chapter, unto vers. 14. which is all of Christ.

I. He is the Wisdom of God ; and that in a double respect.

1. In respect to the Manifestation of God unto us ; for Christ considered as God-Man, and through his assuming Humane Nature, was to be the sum of that Wisdom or Revelation, by which the God-head would make it self known, that whereas

whereas the Persons and Nature of the God-head were invisible, they should be uttered or revealed in him, as the λόγος, or the Word of God; and so he, by taking on him this Person of God-Man, became God's Wisdom, or best Image to express his Mind by, λόγος est mentis Imago, the Image of God's Mind and Thoughts. Now as that Christ should be God-Man, was the first great and most comprehensive thought of God to express himself by; so he assuming, or taking upon himself so to be, did accordingly become λόγος, or the Image of God who was invisible, but in him made visible, as hath been explained Col. 1. 15. This I take to be John's meaning, as appears by vers. 18. of this first Chapter, No Man hath seen God at any time, the only begotten Son, who is in the Bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

And, secondly, His being thus constituted the Wisdom of God, as God-Man then with God, imports how all God's Counsels, Thoughts, and Purposes which God took up, and from all Eternity was contriving of towards his Elect, they all depended and hung upon this as their Foundation, that he would become λόγος, the Word, or God-Man, to manifest God. Thus in Ephes. 3. as to that part of his Counsel, the Gospel; the whole Model of it, from first to last; vers. 10. is called, the manifested Wisdom of God; vers. 11. is said to be purposed from Eternity in Jesus Christ; because he from Eternity took on him that Person of being the Christ; and so in him considered as such, did God proceed to frame all his other Counsels, the whole frame of them depending upon that one Engine; thus God elected us, and bestowed all Things upon us before the World was, even in Jesus Christ, (Ephes. 1. 4.) as then bearing this Person of God-Man. And thus all the Promises which the written Word of God contains, were made for us unto Christ, as really bearing that Person; and 2 Tim. 1. 9. They were given us in Christ before the World began: So that Christ then, as sustaining the Person of God-man, (with promise one day to become Man) between him and his Father, was the Original Word or Wisdom to be revealed to us, and so more truly called λόγος, than the Word written, by how much the Original in God's Breast deserves the Name, better than the Extract or Copy. Notable to this purpose is that place, Tit. 1. 2, 3. where the Apostle first says; That God promised Eternal Life before the World began. A Promise is a Word given forth, and is more than a Purpose with ones self, for it is to another; there was a Promise made to Christ as then with him: Now as meerly Second Person, he is capable of no Promises, but only as he is God-Man. It is the Son of God as he is Jesus Christ, in whom all Promises are, Yea, and Amen. 2 Cor. 1. 19, 20. For the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, even by me, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, was not Yea and Nay, but in him, was Yea. For all the Promises of God in him, are Yea, and in him, Amen, unto the Glory of God by us. Secondly, The Apostle in that place to Titus, adds, That God hath in his due time manifested [his Word] through preaching. By Word is meant, that Original Word then given before the World began, which was founded on Christ, and his Undertakings for us: and further, as he did then sustain a Person, to whom the Promises for us were made, as a publick Person bearing our Persons, so was he likewise the Thing promised, and in both these respects called λόγος, the Word; and so is termed by John, 1 Epist. Chap. 1. vers. 1. the Word of Life; in Titus, it is termed, the Promise of Eternal Life; (for all Promises and Counsels of God were rooted in him, Ephes. 1. 4.) and so most properly called δ λόγος; then but still as God-Man considered, thus he was the Word, in respect of the Elect; even as he was the Wisdom of God.

II. But, secondly, He was the Word also, as he was the Power of God, in a general relation to all the Creation. This follows here, John 1. 3. All Things were made by him, and without him was not any Thing made that was made. And therefore, 1 Cor. 1. 24. as he is called the Wisdom of God to be revealed to us, so the Power; which though there specially brought in to the preaching of him in the Gospel, and the efficacy thereof, yet is a general Maxim applied, and specified to that Particular. The Power of God, that is, as undertaking to execute, and actually executing all that God ever meant to do, and in this respect as undertaking to be God-Man; and as bearing that part, he is termed God's Arm; Isa. 53. 1. and and Isa. 27. 5. Without him God could, or at least, would do nothing, no not first begin to Create, and he was then the Word, as taken for the Power of God, in a double respect.

1. As his bearing this Person, was in God's Mind, that which did uphold God's Purpose to Create, and this before the World was; so Prov. 8. 30, 31. I was by him, then before the World was, educans, fostering, and latificans Terram suam, (as Tremelius reads it) gladding his Earth, his bearing the Person of God-Man, one Day to be by him assumed, was it that made the Creatures exist in God's Purpose; God else would never have thought of them, but for his Sake, as God-Man: therefore he is said to be the First-born of every Creature, for whom, and by whom all things were made.

Yea secondly, when God came to make the Creatures, he did it by him as sustaining this Person: the Scripture says, God created all Things by Jesus Christ, Eph. 3. 9.

John having thus entiled him the Word, vers. 1, 2. Then goes on to shew how from him, as such it is, that all Things are, All Things were created by him: Yea it is added, Nothing was made without him, that was made; meerly to shew the instrumental general Dependance God had of him in this Work: He was his All in All, as we say of one that is a right Hand to another, [He does nothing without him.] Such was Christ to God; not that God had not Power Essential to have Created without him: For it is by that Power that Christ did it, but that this Power God's Will would never have put forth, but for his assuming to be God-Man; even as although God hath Essential Power to sanctify a Sinner: And Christ adds no such Power to God, or his Spirit, which they had not before, but because God without Christ would never have put forth that Power: therefore he is said to be the Power of God therein. Now therefore, he is said to create as God-Man, not only because he undertook or promised to become a Man, and so in virtue of that, God put his Power forth. But further, God created by him, as sustaining that Relation, and bearing that Title with God, (as in the Similitude afore-mentioned) one of a Society chosen Treasurer, lays the Corner-Stone of a Colledg, out of his own Purse. And many Interpreters, and others, do observe, that the Evangelist calls him $\delta \lambda \acute{o} \gamma \omicron \varsigma$, in reference to that of Moses, Gen. 1. That whereas Moses in the Creation, had made mention not only of God Creating, but as by a Word, God said, Let there be Light. God the Father he had been mentioned as the Creator, in those first Words, In the beginning God Created; and the Spirit, as moving upon the Waters: But the Second Person [the Word], is couched, personated, and signified, in Dixit, that [God SAID.]

The greatest Objection against this is from vers. 14. For if his being considered $\delta \lambda \acute{o} \gamma \omicron \varsigma$, the Word, had imported his being God-Man, how comes it after to be said, That he was made Flesh; for that argues he had been spoken of as Second Person only afore, the Man-hood not included?

Ans. 1. That Word [Made] imports evidently, His having now actually assumed Man's Nature; and so in distinction from his having hitherto but sustained that Person afore God, in Contract with God; which now in the fulness of Time, He, according to his Contract, did perform: and until this Performance de facto, he had born the Title of the Word, which he sustained at the Creation, and from thence on still until this Assumption. But now, though he bears it still, yet ever after, John speaks of him as Jesus and Christ, &c. For now he was actually made Man in frail Flesh.

The 2d Ans. lies in that other Word, Made Flesh, that is, a frail Man, taking a Tabernacle of Flesh; not a glorious Body as was his due, as he was $\lambda \acute{o} \gamma \omicron \varsigma$, the Word: and so it carries this with it, That whereas his due, according to that first designed Glory and Repute, which he had had with God before the World was, was to have had a glorified Nature, such as now he hath in Heaven; instead of this the Evangelist expresth it, That he took frail Flesh, he took that Nature in Frailties at the first, and dwelt with us in a Tabernacle, (as the Word is) which was to be taken down. And though he had had a Glory with God answerable swerable to his Place of God-Man, as his Due; yet he never shewed it (says the Evangelist) to us, but once, and that was when he was transfigured; at which Time we saw his Glory, (saith the Apostle) in that Nature such as could be in none, but the only begotten Son of God: Which Peter also brings as an Evidence of his being the Son of God; as John likewise here doth, who was also an Eye-Witness of it. The Glory of Elias and Moses was not such, for they saw theirs at the same Time; but this was so transcendent as they could easily discern with Difference, this to be the Glory of God's only begotten, and so to differ from that of theirs; as the Glorious Lustre of the Sun, in comparison of lesser Stars. And though Christ always manifested not such a Glory (and indeed but once); yet he always shewed himself full of Grace and Truth, says he, in all his Converse with us. Full of Truth, namely, in those glorious Revelations of his Father made by him, vers. 18. And full of Grace, that is Holiness, even a Holiness transcending Adam's, or any Creature's. Neither was this Fulness a plenitudo Vasis sed Fontis, and a Fulness to be communicated to Men; For lo, we all have received of his Fulness, and Grace for Grace. He presents all the Apostles as coming from a Dole, with their Laps filled with Grace, so to encourage others to go to Christ. Afterwards in the 17th Verse, comparing him with Moses, he opposeth Grace and Truth, to the Law of Moses: And then by [Truth] there, he means, that Christ was not a Figure, as the Law was, but the Substance of all Types. So Heb. 10. 1. Where Verum non opponitur falso, sed figuræ: And he is there called Truth, because he made good the Covenant and Promises, which the Law did not. Thus Rom. 15. 8. He was a Minister of the Truth of God to confirm the Promises. And then he is full of Grace too, which the Law was not, That had neither Justifying nor Sanctifying Grace annexed, but Christ had both.

And 3. When the Days of his Flesh are over, (as now in Heaven they are) then the same John seeing him in the Vision of a Glorious Conqueror, and coming and appearing at last to destroy all the Enemies of the Church: and bringing in the thousand Years. Then he appears as $\delta \lambda \acute{o} \gamma \omicron \varsigma$. Again, Rev. 19. and according to the Glory he had from everlasting in God's Designment and Repute. Rev. 19. 11, 12, 13. And I saw Heaven opened, and behold, a white Horse; and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in Righteousness he doth judg and make War. His Eyes were as a Flame of Fire, and on his Head were many Crowns; and he had a Name written that no Man knew but he himself: And he was clothed with a Vesture dipt in Blood: and his Name is called, The Word of God.

I shall now proceed in a brief Exposition of the following Verses of this first Chapter of John, unto vers. 14. as they relate unto the WORD; what follows in vers. 4. is to be understood in the same Coherence and Dependance with the other of Christ as God-Man.

·Vers. 4. In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men.

The Evangelist descends from the Creation in General, unto the giving of Life, both of Reason and Holiness, unto Men, at their first Creation, whiles they were in Innocency.

First, [In him was Life.] He speaks not of that Essential Life in himself: For that which follows in the next Words, where he calls him the Life, is so to be understood. But when here he says [in him was Life,] the meaning is, he was a Fountain of Life to us, being first Life in himself. It is one Attribute of Christ's as he is God-Man, yea as he is Man taken up into that Union, to have Life independently in himself, even as God the Father hath; Joh. 5. 26. For as the Father hath Life in Himself; so hath he given to the Son to have Life in Himself; and therefore he is called the Life; namely, to himself first: and so in Him is Life, for us.

Secondly, [The Life was the Light of Men.

1. [The Light,] That is of Holiness, or God's Image, which is called Light, in opposition to Darkness, which is Sin, (as vers. 5.) The Life of Grace is so called; and in Scripture, Light is often put for Life, and Darkness for Death.

2. [Of Men,] That is of Men in their Primitive Estate of Innocency. For 1. He joins it with the Creation of all Things. 2. He useth the Word [Was,] as noting a State past. Now Adam's Holiness was from Him; for he was made after God's Image. When Man was Created, all the Persons of the Trinity acted their several Parts; and the Son acted the part of God-Man: and so the Father eying him as such, and as him who was in that respect the Image of the God-head: He thereupon says, Let us make Man after our Image: Christ's Human Nature being the περστυπὸν, and Exemplar. And so he breathed in that Breath of Life, and Holiness, which he had at his first Creation.

Verf. 5. And the Light shineth in Darkness, and the Darkness comprehended it not.

When that Light of Holiness in Man was extinct, and Man by the Fall became Darkness, that is, full of Sin; then all that Light Moral, or the Light of Conscience in Heathens, (which is that Truth spoken of, Rom. 1. 18.) and the Light of the Law, (which the Jews had) to convince them of their Darkness, all this Light that shined in this Darkness, was from Christ: It ariseth not from any Sparks of the Old Light which was before the Fall, and now left in Man's Nature, but all Light being extinct, this is put in by Christ as the Word and Mediator. And therefore, because he speaks of Man's present Condition, he saith in the present [Shineth,] and in that respect Christ is said, vers. 9. to be That Light, which enlightneth every Man coming into the World. That Phrase [coming into the World,] argues that he speaks of what is infused by Christ from their Birth: For the Jews call Man as born into this World, Veniens in Mundum. And he says, [every one,] to shew that he excepts no Man. So Christ Mat. 18. 37. useth the Phrase; [For this Cause was I born, and came into the World.] So that it is all one as to be born, and therefore he speaks of a Natural Light from our Birth, which is all from Christ: he pityed Man's Nature so corrupted, and put into it all the Light and Comfort which Men now have. So as, not only all the Light of Holiness, which Adam in Innocency at first had, was from him considered as God-Man: but all the Light since the Fall, which the wise Heathens or Jews had, was from him, considered as the Lamb slain. They all did light their Torches at this Sun, and Fountain of Light. Yea, not only all Natural Light in Men fallen, but all the Light of Grace, and Holiness, that hath shone in the Hearts, Lives, and Gifts, of the best of Men sanctified, it was all borrowed from hence. To this purpose he instanceth in John the Baptist, for all the rest.

Verf. 6, 7. There was a Man sent from God, whose Name was John; The same came for a Witness, to bear Witness of the Light, that all Men through him might believe.

He was the most known and universally acknowledged holy Man in those Days and Times, whom all the Jews esteemed as a burning and shining Light, Joh. 5. 35. Yet it is said of him, that He was not that Light, but was sent only to bear witness of that Light, vers. 8. John was but a particular Light shining in Judea, and in that Age only; as a Lanthorn hung out in some Street: He was but as the Morning-Star to this Sun. But Christ was, and is an Universal Light (as is the Sun) in all Ages, and in all Places, and to all Saints. Yea, as John was not that Light; so if all that Grace, and Light, that ever was in all Saints, were gathered into one, yet all would not make that Light; who enlightned John and all Mankind universally, as the Sun doth the Stars above, and Terrestrial Bodies below.

Verf. 9. That was the true Light, which lighteth every Man that cometh into the World.

Chap. 12.

And so he is called the true Light, that is, which is naturally, and of Himself such, (ἀπὸ φῶς, as Plato called him,) not shining with a borrowed Light, as John, and all else do, and who in that respect are not true Lights; for Truth is opposed to what is obtained aliunde, and which is not natural. As you call that false Hair which is not, and that true Hair which is ones own. So Christ is called the true Son, 1 Joh. 5. 22. that is, the Natural, we being but Adopted. And all this is what Christ did, and 'twas before his Incarnation.

Now having proceeded thus far in this Chapter, as proper to the Subject I have in Hand; I will briefly go over the rest of the Verses, from vers. 10. to vers. 15. Wherein he shews his coming into the World himself, as before he had shewn, how he had done all in the World before he came into it. And therein,

First, He describes the manner of his coming: As, °

1. How he was in the World as one unknown. Verf. 10. He was in the World, and the World was made by him, and the World knew him not. Like Ulysses, who came as a Beggar disguised to his own House: So obscure was Christ's coming into the World.

2. He [was,] implying that he is now gone out of the World again; as having (as it were) secretly past through it.

Secondly, He sets out the Entertainment of him in this World. And herein,

1. He tells what bad Entertainment the most afforded him, with the Aggravation of this their Sin.

2. The good Entertainment that some gave him: To illustrate all which, he covertly compares the World unto a House wherein Men are the In-dwellers, but Christ the Owner of it, and all Things in it (as v. 11.) and that by a double Title.

1. Of Creation, Verf. 10. The World was made by him.

2. Of Purchase, insinuated Verf. 11. He came unto his own, and his own received him not.

Now when he came into this his House, and was in it, or conversed in it (as vers. 10.) His Entertainment was,

1. That some did not so much as know him, v. 10.

2. Others, tho they knew him, yet received him not, as v. 11. They shut him out of Doors, - not receiving him into their Hearts, which the Evangelist sets down as an Aggravation of the Sin of Unbelief; his Scope being to persuade to, and work Faith, or receiving of Christ into Mens Hearts, by shewing from what an one Christ is and was to us, what an inhumane Sin Unbelief is, both against the Law of Creation, and Bonds of Nature, and also of Grace. It is to refuse him whose own we are, as having made the World and us at first, and when we were fallen, bought us, and upheld us. So as the very Benefit of Creation, and the Propriety that Christ hath in us, as a Lord of us, and of all we have, doth oblige us to believe in him, and to own him at least, (even the Ox knows his Owner) otherwise it becomes an Aggravation of our Sin, as shutting Christ out of his own; for the Word [receiving] vers. 11. (being put for believing) is all one with owning him as a Lord and Saviour; as a King is said to be received in his own Dominions, when he is submitted to, and acknowledged, and owned for their King. I know some interpret the World, to be all Mankind; and his own, (mentioned, vers. 11.) to be the Jews; and his being in the World, to be in respect of the Light he gave of himself to the Gentiles. But for this latter, sure by his making the World, the Gentiles could not know him, tho the Godhead they might; and that natural Light which He gave, was only of the Godhead, not of his Person, as God-Man, nor yet of the Mystery of the Trinity, there being no Footsteps of it in the Creation. And I take it, his own is meant also and as well of the World, as made and purchased by him, as of the Jews, his own Country-Men: Therefore he says, [τὰ ἴδια,] as speaking of proper Goods, not Kinsmen, his own, that is, his Household-Goods and Servants.

Secondly ; Then follows the Entertainment of him by the Good, and the Privilege which he gave them. Even as great Persons, entertained well, use to bestow Rewards ; and as a King usually dubbts those Knights, or creates them Earls or Barons, who have given him Royal Entertainment : So did Christ to those who received him. By which the Evangelist does further set out Christ, shewing what he is to his Elect ; as before, he shewed what Christ is, and was to all the World. The Benefit given is Adoption to be Sons of God, vers. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he Power to become the Sons of God, even to them that believe on his Name: which he endeareth as the highest Favour that could be : So 1 Joh. 3. 1. Behold, what manner of Love the Father hath bestowed on us, that we should be called the Sons of God. Christ he was born the Son, vers. 14. but to Us it is given [to them he gave, &c.] And in being Sons, we become Heirs, and Co-heirs with himself of the World which he made, and of all that is called his : So Rom. 8. 17. And if Children, then Heirs ; Heirs of God, and Joint-Heirs with Christ : if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together. He gave them [ἐξουσίαν] that is, both the Dignity and the Power to become the Sons of God. So it is taken for Power, Col. 1. 16. Principalities and Powers : And it is also put for Dignity. Thus Rom. 13. 1. because a Magistrates Place of Power hath Honour likewise annexed to it, therefore the Word is put for Honour. And so, because this Honour of being Sons of God, hath Power annexed to it, even over all Creatures ; (as they are Heirs, and Co-heirs with Christ, and so Kings of the World) therefore he rightly calls it ἐξουσία, to import both, Power and Dignity : and both contained in that Priviledg of Son-ship. Only he shews by what means Christ doth convey this to them ; which is by their [being Born not of Blood.] Vers. 13. Which were born, not of Blood, nor of the Will of the Flesh, nor of the Will of Man, but of God. (Say not you have Abraham to your Father) ; this Dignity goes not by Greatness of Birth : [Nor of the Will of the Flesh.] Not of a Man's own Will, It is not to him that willeth, [Nor of the Will of Man ;] that is, of other Men : Holy Men cannot beget their Children Good, or make them such ; the meaning is, that no Friend, no Means could confer this Priviledg, but only Christ.

C H A P. XIII.

How Christ God-Man is subservient to God in all the Works of his Providence. He upholds, and supports all Things. He governs the World, and rules all Affairs in it. After his Government is expir'd, at the end of the World he will judge all Creatures, both Angels, and Men.

COL. I. 17.

He is before all Things, and by him all Things consist.

THUS we have seen the subserviency of Christ as God-Man, to the Work of Creation, and the highest Ends thereof, the Manifestation, and the Communication of the God-head the highest way. The next thing to be considered by us, is his serving God in the Works of his Providence, the upholding, governing this World, whilst it stands, and his Judging it at the last; unto all these Ends also doth Christ God-Man subserve.

First, For the upholding all Things that is evident in this Text of Col. I. 17. By him do all Things consist; He is the Corner-Stone that keeps the Building and all the parts of it together, Heb. I. 2,3. it is said, He upholds all Things by the Word of his Power, and it is spoken of him not simply considered as Second Person, but as God-Man, for so he is Heir appointed, not as Second Person, but so Heir naturally without a Decree, and that as such he should uphold all Things by the Word of his Power, is proper to him; and therefore it refers to it, for to the Heir it belongs to have a care of, and to see to his Inheritance, that it fall not into Ruine, and Decay. God, as it were, leaves it to him, seeing he hath given it him for his Inheritance, to keep it up in repair at his own proper Costs and Charges. And thus he upheld it virtually in the State of Innocency, for Joh. I. 4. he is called That Light that then was the Life of Man, even afore Man fell into Sin and Darkness, as well as after, as vers. 5. (as God made and created the World then upon the virtual Supposition of his coming into the World, though to a further End also) for the World was then upheld by virtue thereof, it was the Hoop held all together, God should not have cared else for any Creature; for to me those imperfect pieces of his Workmanship are alone not worthy enough of his Power and Wisdom, if this had not been to come, which he had purposed and decreed, as well as the making of the World. And since Man fell it is granted by all, that it is by virtue of his Redemption to come, that the World stood and was kept from falling about Adam's Ears: Christ took the shattered Condition of the World, as David did, and upheld the Pillars of it, and, as a Lord, promised to buy it, and did so, 2 Pet. 2. 1. because he had Elect to be brought forth in their Successions out of it; and therefore vouchsafed all those Mercies which wicked Men enjoy, and payed God a Price for his Patience towards them; he had this into the Bargain of his Redemption of his Church, God else in justice would have destroyed all.

Secondly,

BOOK III

Secondly, Whilst the World stands, he governs it, easeth God of that Burthen, and is his Prorex for him : All Judgment is committed to the Son, Joh. 5. 22. For the Father judgeth no Man ; but hath committed all Judgment unto the Son : And the Government is upon his Shoulders, Isa. 9. 6. For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the Government shall be upon his Shoulders : and his Name shall be called, Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. He entred upon the Kingdom when Man fell, for by virtue of the Covenant of Works given by the Father, at the Creation, it must have been destroyed ; but he undertook it, to order things so, that a greater Renew of Glory should in the end arise to God, out of the Confusions and Sins of Men in the World, and in executions of Punishments, and by Providences meeting with Men according to their own Ways, then should have risen to God out of the State of Innocency in a direct way ; and what infinite Wisdom, Power, Providence, Justice, Patience, &c. even all sorts of glorious Perfections doth he shew forth in this Administration, and Ordering Things, and the Affairs of this sinful World. This Lord raigneth, though the Earth be never so unquiet, as the Psalmist speaks, Psal. 99. 1. Rev. 5. 2. there is a Proclamation made, who would take that Book out of the Hand of him that sat upon the Throne, and that Book is a Commission to execute the Things decreed and written therein, and the taking of it was an undertaking so to do ; and Christ the Lamb having seven Horns of Power, and seven Eyes of Providence, sent out into all the Earth, by which he both views and governs all, he undertook it, and is God's King and the Executioner of all God's Decrees.

And then, Thirdly, When he hath thus governed the World with a greater Advantage unto God, then this Man Christ Jesus will judg it also at the last, and give all Men their Accounts, Acts 17. 31. He hath appointed a Day in the which he will judg the World, by that Man whom he hath ordained. The Decree or Ordaining Christ God-Man serves for this also ; the Father, Joh. 5. 22. is said to judg no Man, that is, visibly, sub persona judicis, but hath committed all to this Man Christ Jesus, who at present is ready, says the Apostle Peter, to judg the quick and the dead, having all the Accounts of the World afore him, 1 Pet. 4. 5. God would not employ a meer Creature in this Work, it was too great an Honour ; and yet it was meet it should be done visibly and audibly, and to the Satisfaction of all Men's Consciences, both concerning themselves, and others. God would have a Person in the Trinity, manifest in a Creature like unto us, to do it, armed with Power and Authority, because he is God, that every Knee shall bow afore him, both of Things in Heaven and Earth, and under the Earth (which to a meer Creature had been too much ;) and yet a Man, that should deal with Creatures in judging them in their own way, in a rational and audible way convince them, and visibly sentence them, so as they should be able to see and hear their Judg as Man, and yet fear and dread him as being God. And this is an high and great Service, which Christ as Man shall do for God, for a Man in a vocal manner to be able to clear the Accounts of the World, which, how entangled are they ! and punctually to give every Man his due in Righteousness. A Man that shall be able to convince all God's Enemies of all their hard Speeches they have spoken against him, as Enoch the seventh from Adam prophesied, able to give a full and satisfactory account of all God's Ways and Proceedings, which Men cavel at, to justify God's Decrees, which Men quarrel with, and think much at, and his Children whom Men despise and bear down : One able to bring to Light the Secrets of all Hearts, so as all Men shall judg of every Man, 1 Cor. 4. 5. Therefore judg nothing before the Time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to Light the hidden Things of Darknes, and will make manifest the Counsels of the Hearts : and then shall every Man have Praise of God. One able to search the deep Things of God, and bring forth his Counsels, (for the Books are then opened, Rev. 20. 12.) and lay open the Depths of his Wisdom, in suffering this and that to fall out ; this Man to be punish'd, and another, a greater Sinner than he, to escape ; this Kingdom to be ruin'd, and another, as sinful, to flourish ; and to make that glorious Comment upon the obscure Text of this World's Providence, which we understand not ; and to do this out of the Original Draught and Counsel held in Heaven, why this or that was done or not done so or so, or not so, and to do this openly and vocally as a Man ; and when he hath sent all Men convinced, non-plust, speechless, (as the Word is in the Parable) confounded to Hell, to give up his Kingdom, and himself visibly be subject to God his Father : 'Tis a Mighty Service this.

But yet, Lastly, After all this, He is the Founder of that other World into which he brings his Children, given him by God, which is his Inheritance for himself and them, and their Happiness is exprest by this, To be ever with the Lord. And Joh. 17. 24. Christ in his last Prayer, says, Father, I will they be where I am, and see my Glory ; and till then that Personal Fulness (of which I spake at first) that is in God-Man, Christ Jesus, is reserved by God, as a subject of that Depth and Glory, to take up, together with his own Perfections, the Thoughts of Men and Angels for ever. Our Happiness will lye in seeing God and Christ as he is ; (for unto both doth that Speech refer, 1 Joh. 3. 2. Beloved, now are we the Sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be : but we know, that when he shall appear, we shall be like him ; for we shall see him as he is.) And if the sight of Christ, God-Man, be not the highest means of the Happiness of the Saints, (because the Scripture mentions also God his being All in All ;) Yet I am sure it is a main part of it : Rev. 21. 23. And the City had no need of the Sun, neither of the Moon to shine in it : for the Glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the Light thereof. The Glory of God and the Lamb are the Light of it. And so Stephen saw the Glory of God, and Christ at God's right Hand, Acts 7. 56. So that when these two great Volumns, this of his Word, and that of his World, which now in this Life are put into our Hands, to read the Characters of his Glory in by Faith, when both these shall be folded up and clean laid aside, then will the Person of Christ, God-Man, as the Glory of the God-head, shining in, and communicating it self to us, through that Human Nature the God-head dwells in, be set forth to us, to entertain us for ever with the sight of the Glory of God in the Face of Christ ; and all our present Thoughts and Knowledg we have by Faith, will become vain and be made unprofitable and vanish, 1 Cor. 13. 8, 9. Charity never faileth : but whether there be Prophecies, they shall fail ; whether there be Tongues, they shall cease ; whether there be Knowledg, it shall vanish away. For we know in part, and we prophesy in part. And that Face will make an Heaven to us, when Redemption shall be forgotten through the present Glory viewed and possessed, and Sins remembered no more, but the Glory of God, and the Personal Glory of the Lamb, shall be our Light and Happiness for ever.

Use. 1. Let us admire Christ that thus serves to all, not our Ends only, to save us, but which is more, to all God's Ends and Purposes, and to accomplish all the Desires of his own Heart ; what an infinite Perfection must this needs be ? Nature and Art (says the Philosopher) makes but one Instrument to serve in a proper and direct way, but for one purpose ; but this is a Person whom God hath set forth for all Ends and Purposes whatsoever. If you should see an Instrument in Musick serve at once to supply the Use, and afford the Musick of all Instruments ; or a Mathematical Instrument so made, as all Conclusions in all Arts and Sciences might be demonstrated on it, and it to serve for all uses, in Arithmetick to cast exact Accounts, in Geometry to measure all Quantities, in Geography, Astronomy to give you the exact Proportion of all the Earth, and Stars in Heaven, how would you wonder and admire at it ! Oh wonder then at the Person of Jesus Christ ; Great is the Mystery of Godliness, God manifest in the Flesh, 1 Tim. 3. 16.

Use. 2. If Christ, that is our Mediator, is so useful unto God in all his other Businessses, and serves all his other Ends as well as this : This may then help our Faith, by persuading us ; that God cannot but be infinitely well pleased with the saving of Sinners by him, and that believe on him (he being as good, if not better at that, than all those Purposes forementioned) : for the Person (in whom we are graciously accepted) being pleasing to God so many ways besides this, must must needs move him the rather to accept his Work in this, and us for it. As for Instance, If a King willing and inclined to pardon a Traitor, if besides a Work of Mercy done, it could be demonstrated that the Means whereby that is to be done, would bring in a Mighty profit to the King, ten thousand Talents of Silver; as in another case Haman said to Ahasuerus, Ester 3. 8. Or as if when David's Heart was of it self set to pardon Absalom, only he would do it with Honour; if Joab (the Projector of his Reconciliation) could have propounded a Project, not only to have fetc'd Absalom in again, and reconciled him to David upon the King's own Terms; but so as withal, he should have all his other State-Ends compassed whatever he could desire, as to shew forth his Majesty, Power, Greatness, gratify all his Subjects, overcome his Enemies, hereby have his Kingdom governed in Peace and Righteousness, and have his Enemies subdued, overcome, and all his Revenues encreased; would not all the World say, that surely, the propounding this would mightily help forward the obtaining Absalom's Pardon and Reconciliation? And surely so 'tis here, the Work of Reconciliation in Christ's Hands (who serves God in all these and many Ways more) must needs prosper (as Isaiab says) and speed: And therefore, in the first of John, and in the first of the Hebrews, and in this Chapter, Coloss. 1. all his usefulness to other Ends, all his fulness to other Purposes, is prefaced and mentioned first, and then purging our Sins away by his Blood, and making Peace by the Blood of his Cross are spoken of all those other conducing unto this. And therefore, some Schoolmen, upon the consideration of these Things, give this Censure of it, Tanto aliquis modus aptior est ad consequendum aliquem finem quanto per ipsum plura comparantur.

Use. 3. It may invite us to come to him, as besides the work of Reconciliation, God had the Accomplishment of many other Ends in him, so may we: Besides pardon of Sin, and Peace with God, we may have all other overplus Ends acquired and accomplished. The Angels who are in Favour with God already, and stand not in any need that way, what would they give to have that near Relation to him which we have? You may come to him for Pardon first, but when you are come his Person will further take you. Fulness much invites, it is the aim of all our Desires to have a fulness of Riches, of Honours, of Pleasures, a πλεονεξία, as the Apostle calls it, Eph. 4. 19. that is, a having ones Fill, so the Word which is translated Greediness signifies. Now in Christ, and in Christ only it is to be had, in whom is Fulness, and all Fulness, Fulness for parts, of all sorts, and All Fulness for Degrees; which is never spent, for it dwells in him; Fulness for evermore, as the Psalmist speaks: Open thy Mouth wide, stretch thy Desires to the utmost compass, as Psal. 81. 10. may Christ say, and I will fill it. The Mind of Man is nothing but emptiness of it self, it is as the Stomack is, a Vacuity and Want, sharpened with Desire and Hunger; (Empty Man, as Job calls him, Job 11. 12.) unto which God hath fitted all Things, as suitable to its Desires one way or other, there is no Creature but it may take some pleasure in: But alas! the Creatures are Empty too, Vanity, that is, Emptiness, as Solomon calls them, Husks (as in the Parable) without a Kernel, and Adam made them more vain and empty, Rom. 8. 20. Subjected them to Vanity: and at best they serve but for some one particular Want and End, and not all Ends and Purposes; Riches serve against Poverty, Honour against Shame, but Christ he serves to all End and Purposes. God would have nothing full but Christ, that our Souls might rest in nothing else, and have him our Center. It pleased him that all Fulness should dwell in him, and he hath fitted him to our Wants; all we want he hath, and all he hath we want. And his Fulness is not ordained simply to dwell in him, but to be communicated, as the Sun's Fulness of Light, which though it resides in the Body of the Sun, and it carries it with it whither it goes, and leaves nothing but Darkness behind it, yet where it comes it is communicative, it diffuseth all its Light, and Heat, and Influence, and so doth Christ. Therefore as here, all Fulness is said to dwell in his Person, so elsewhere it is said, He filleth all in all, as Eph. 1. ult. as Adam emptied all, so He fills all, and is never diminished; His Fulness it is not plenitudo vasis but fontis, which is always full: Not as the Fulness of the Sea, which might be emptied, but as the Fulness of the Sun, or of Fire, which multiplies it self, and loseth nothing it self neither.

Use. 4. If Christ be thus full, then let those that love him fully, delight in him; and to that end contemplate all his Fulness. How will one that is in love with another, think over and over again all the Perfections in them they love, to confirm their Choice? So should we: And not only so, but take our full Delight and Contentment in him. And that Christ serves to all Ends else, besides those of our own, of being saved by him, will, if meditated upon, exceedingly encrease our Joys and Delights in him. A Wife that had a Husband eminent in all Perfections, which Perfections yet she had no great skill in, yet the thought of them would make her love him when once he is hers; when he is not only a good Husband unto her, but also a good Commonwealths Man, of eminent place in his Country, an excellent Souldier, Horseman, &c. Skill'd in all Learning, &c. these because they commend and endear her Husband unto others (though she hath not the Benefit of them directly) do yet endear him unto her the more, that all these are in her Husband: So this should do Christ to us.

Use. 5. See the love of Christ to us, that having all Fulness in him, was willing to empty himself for us. We were not only empty but bankrupt to God, and to redeem us and fill us again, he was fain to empty himself; it is the Apostle's Phrase, Phil. 2. 7. the Word we translate Of no Reputation, is in the Original, He emptied himself, that is, left himself nothing of all his Fulness: So Dan. 9. 26. Messiah shall be cut off, and shall have nothing, so it is in the Hebrew, as well as that which is translated Not for himself, and so varied in the Margent of your Bibles. He that had all that Fulness, and fills all in all, had nothing left, no Comfort in God or any Creature. If you should see the Sea ebb into some other World, and see not a drop of Water left, how would you stand astonish'd at it? How much more at Christ? He might say as Naomi said, Ruth. 1. 20, 21. The Lord hath dealt bitterly with me: I came from Heaven full, but he brought me to Earth empty, emptied of all. For us to leave and abate any thing of our Fulness, how loth are we! To leave a full Land, a full Diet, a full Table, a full House, fully furnish'd, a full Condition, and lower our Sail, though for Christ: Oh but Christ did, he left Heaven and all the Fulness of it, and removed to Earth, where is nothing but Vanity; and he who was Lord of Heaven and Earth, for our Sakes became poor, and left himself not worth a Foot of Land, not a House, to hide his Head in. By what a small abatement is to our Spirits, let us think what so infinite a Debasement, an emptying was to him.

Use. 6. See his Love yet further, that though he be in himself thus full, yet that his Love is such as he thinks himself not full or perfect without us, but reckons himself defective till he have us knit to him, and about him. As Christ said to him that had kept all from his Youth, One Thing is wanting: so I may say of Christ, that still one Thing is wanting. Why, what can he want that hath all Fulness? Even any one of his Members, and he would not think himself completely happy without them, for Eph. 1. ult. though he be he that filleth all in all, yet the Church is his Fulness; Which is his Body, the Fulness of him which filleth all in all. His Glory would not content him in Heaven, if he should want any of our Company there. Job. 17. 24. He prays therefore, that they may be with him where he is, to behold his Glory; Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my Glory which thou hast given me: for thou lovedst me before the Foundation of the World. As Haman said, when he reckoned up all his Riches, and Honours, and Glory, his Places and Favour at Court; what good will all these do me, says he, so long as Mordecai contemns me? So Christ in his Heart says, If I have not all mine Enemies down, my Children about me, his whole Tale and Number, if but a Benjamin or a Joseph were wanting, Heaven would be less to him. The first Adam when he had all Creatures about him, needed a Companion of all his Delights; and so Kings that have full Pleasures, yet love to have Consortes Imperii: So doth Christ, and till then reckons himself imperfect; and therefore, Heb. 10. 13. he is said to Expect, From henceforth expecting till his Enemies be made his Footstool: Expectation argues Defect. Now he had been alone in Heaven, if he had not died, John 12. 24. the Corn abides alone if it dye not; Verily, Verily, I say unto you, Except a Corn of Wheat fall into the Ground, and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much Fruit.

Use. 7. Let us applaud our own Happiness in such an Husband, and keep to him alone, and not dote upon any Vanity. Why? Because, as the Apostle argues against vain Learning, Philosophy, &c. Col. 2. 8, 9, 10. Beware lest any Man spoil you through Philosophy and vain Deceit, after the Tradition of Men, after the Rudiments of the World, and not after Christ: For in him dwelleth all the Fulness of the Godhead bodily. And ye are compleat in him, which is the Head of all Principality and Power. That all Fulness being in him, in him ye are compleat, you need no other Learning, no other Wisdom; for vers. 3. In him are hid all the Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledg, in comparison of which all the Wisdom of the World comes to naught. Like a Kingdom that hath all Commodities (as China:) Or a great Man that hath all about him of his own: So have you in Christ, you need go out to nothing for any thing. You go to seek for Light with a Candle, when you have the Sun in your Hand; whilst having Christ you seek to be happy in any thing else: You need borrow nothing, nor be beholden to any Creature, your Husband hath all Fulness. We needed not the Law to direct us, if we knew his Story, and could spell out all the Passages of his Life, by whom the Law was transcendently fulfilled in Instances of a higher kind; if the Lives of all the Saints, of Paul, Abraham, &c. and all the Law and Bible were burnt, all might be renewed in his Story, if that were enough known; they only serve to us to help us to understand him; we needed no other Motives than what may be drawn from him, and his Love, if our Hearts were holy enough and conformed to him. In a Word, if Christ serve fully to all God's Ends, (who hath vaster Plots than we) and is adequate to them, then much more to all ours, who have but low Contrivements. Let us therefore love him, and serve him, and make him our End, and think our selves compleat in him.

That the Creatures are not God, but the Works of his Power: They were not Coeternal with God. The infinite distance between him and them. pag. 1

Chap. 1. The Creatures are not God. The Absurdities of those ranting Opinions which assert it, expos'd. ib.

Chap. 2. The Creatures were not from Eternity existing in God. §

Chap. 3. The infinite distance between God and the Creatures, in respect that he is the Maker and Preserver of them: In that also he is Eternal, & so before they had being he dwelt alone in himself, and possessed all things in himself. He is the high and lofty One, and is so supremely excellent, as it transcends all other: His Name is Holy, and so is above the Creatures, and separated from them. The true name of Being is proper only to God; the Creatures are but the Shadows and Appearances of Being. 8

B O O K II.

Of the first estate of Men and Angels by their Creation. What were the Laws and Rights of Creation; and what was equitably due between the Creator and his Creature. Of the state of the first Man Adam in Innocence, and what were his Circumstances in that his Primitive Condition. 19

Chap. 1. What was the Law of Creation on God's part: It was but what became and was worthy of the great Creator to do all for his Creatures that such a Religion required. This consisted in two things: 1. To endow them with the Image of Holiness to qualify them to attain their designed end, which was to know, love and enjoy him. 2. To continue his goodness and favour to them, as long as they continued in their duty and obedience. The Condition of both Angels and Men, by the Law of their Creation, common and equal, for substance. ibid.

Chap. 2. The mutability of that first estate. By its constitution, and their own weakness, both Angels and Men were liable to fall from it. God was not at all obliged as Creator, to preserve his Creatures in that first condition effectually by his Grace. The causes of their mutability. To be changeable is the nature of a Creature, with difference from God, who only is Immutable. That the Creature being made out of Nothing, tends to a Deficiency. 15

Chap. 3. Of the first state men run through, viz. that of Innocency. A brief draught of all those several States or Conditions, through which God leadeth the Elect of Mankind. Together with a comparison of those States together. 31

Chap. 4. Containing a short view of the happiness of Adam's Condition, 37

Ch. 5. The Image of God in Adam, how it was natural, how explain'd, & how faith is supernatural. That knowledg of God natural, which is due and fit for a reasonable Creature to have, and which he acquires by the exercise of his Rational Faculties. That knowledg supernatural which goes beyond what Man, by the right of his Creation was to have. Adam's knowledge of God was in a natural

- way, though it sanctified him, and was joyned with Holiness. 40
- Chap. 6. That the Covenant of Works, the Justification of Adam by that Covenant, and the Reward of his Obedience, were all Natural. And that by Covenant he should not have gone to Heaven. 45
- Chap. 7. Whether Adam knew God by the Light of Faith and Supernatural Revelation, superadded to the Light of Reason. His Faith was natural, both in its motives and grounds, being an assent to God's Testimony as true, whose veracity he knew by the Light of Nature. Nor did his Faith discover to him things that were above his then present natural state. This proved by several Arguments. Our way of knowing God by Faith is supernatural, and in what respect it is so. 50
- Chap. 8. How Adam, and his state, according to the Law of the first Creation, was intended by God as a Type of one, who was to be a second Adam, Jesus Christ, and the Founder of a Supernatural Condition. Some things premis'd of the nature, and various division of a Type. Wherein Adam was a Type of Christ: As he was in his state of Innocency a publick Person and the Head of Mankind, and so derived to his Posterity the Imputation of his Disobedience; so he was a Type of Christ, as preordained before the World was, and without consideration of the Fall, to be the Root and Head of the Elect, and to convey to them the Supernatural benefits of Grace. 65
- Chap. 9. The Explication of the words of the Text: In what Particulars they make a Comparison of Christ the Type, and Adam the Antitype. In their Persons, as Adam had in him a Principle of natural Life, so Christ has of spiritual. As publick Persons, and Heads of Mankind, as Adam conveys his natural Life, so Christ his spiritual. 'Tis proved out of the same Text, That Adam before his Fall, was thus intended as a Prophetick Type of Christ to come, as the Head of the Elect, who as a publick Person,
- should advance them to the like glorious Condition as himself had in Heaven. The Glory of this Accomplishment was appointed for him, without consideration of the Fall. That interposing, he came and suffered, and died, to remove the Obstacles that the Fall had laid in the way of the Execution of the Work first designed. 71
- Chap. 10. A more particular comparison between Adam and Jesus Christ in their Persons: The Formation of Adam's Body by God's immediate Hand, typifies the Assumption of the Human Nature by the Son of God, whose Body was formed immediately by the Holy Ghost. The Union of Soul and Body in Adam, typifies the Hypostatical Union. In what there is an Agreement in the Comparison between them; wherein a Disparity. What was the state of Adam's Body: It comprized the Perfections of all Creatures: It was suited to take in all the Pleasures and Comforts which they could afford: It had a natural beauty in it: It was guarded from Injuries, and was immortal; yet in its Original 'twas but earth. It depended on the Creatures for its Subsistence, and was subject to many Alterations. To what a higher degree of Glory, the Divine Nature of Christ, united to the Humane, rais'd the Body of Christ, as he is One with God, and the Lord from Heaven. It was necessary that the Glory of his Humane Nature should excel all Creatures, even the Angels themselves. The glory of his Body was illustrated by his Transfiguration on the Mount; and yet that fell short of the Glory it has now in Heaven. 86
- Chap. 11. What a more glorious Condition then was Adam's in Innocence, Christ will raise us up unto, proved in the lowest Instance of it, viz. the glory our Bodies shall have at the Resurrection. Wherein that glory shall consist. A Comparison between that glory our Bodies shall then possess, and what Adam's had in Paradise: And in what respect ours shall far excel his. 103

I COR. VIII. 6.

—One God, of whom are all things.

CHAP. I.

The Creatures are not God. The Absurdities of those Ranting Opinions which assert it, Expos'd.

HERE hath risen up from out of the bottomless Pit, in this Age, a prodigious Opinion, which hath been vented and maintained with more daring Impudence than Men of themselves could have assumed, had not the Devil inspired and blown up their Fancies thereunto; viz. That all things (which God hath made) are indeed but pieces and parcels of God himself: And that, that which is called by the Creation, is but a Turquoising of God, or God Translated, as you do a great and large whole Cloth, when you cut it forth into Garments of several fashions, as some of them have spoken; whereas it is the Creatures, that are the Garment that waxeth old, Heb. 1. But God is without so much as a Shadow of turning: if in his love to us, (whereof that place speaks) much more in his Essence, which is the ground of the Unchangableness of his love. They say, the visible appearance is indeed, as of Creatures, but really, materially, and substantially, they are all but God; so as I may rightly express this Opinion of theirs; They would make a Transubstantiation of the Great God, such as the Papists, (though they in a contrary way to this) make a Transubstantiated Christ. For, what say they, but that the Creatures, or Elements of Bread, and Wine, are changed into the substance of the Body and Blood of Christ substantially, yea, into Christ himself, Soul, and Body present, and lying veiled under the appearance of Bread, and Wine. But these men would have the Divine Essence of God Transubstantiated into the outward appearance of several shapes of Creatures, the substance of which is God; lying as they would have it, hidden under that outward visibility. Thus they curiously crumble the indivisible simple Nature of God, into little fragments, and parcels; whereas that infinite vast distance between him and us, is, That we are the Clay, and he the Potter. They would have God to turn part of himself into Clay, and become that Clay; and then the rest of himself, to become the Potter over himself, and to Metamorphose himself into shapes, as the Heathens did their Gods: And to please himself in making himself (as Children do their clay) into clay Pies, or the shapes of Dogs, or Lambs, and the like, as their fancies lead them: And yet forsooth, they would seem to allow him the main Bulk of his God-head, to live abstracted from the Creatures, and separate from their Creature-existence, and appearance. For I do not find, that they affirm the whole of God, to be no other than what is shrowded under the appearance of the Creature, and adequate to it: Yet they do make up some part of him, dispersed into Creature appearance, (as hath been said) and so as both make up together but one God, partly visible, and partly invisible; even like as Peter says of the Earth that now is, That it partly stands out of the Water, and partly in the Water, 2 Pet. 3. 5. and both making but one Globe, so here they frame One GOD: Whereas the Scriptures set him forth, as a Being Eternal, Immortal, Invisible, the only Wise God, 1 Tim. 1. 17: Who dwelleth in light inaccessible, whom no man hath seen, or can see; 1 Tim. 6. 16. And again, Isaiab 42. 8. I am Jehovah, and my Glory I will not give to another. Now, that other is not, nor can be any other but the Creature; for it is only God, and the Creature that have any Being, or pretence thereto; when therefore God says, He will not give his Glory to another; the meaning is, He will not, in any sort allow, or endure the Glory that is proper unto him as God, to be given unto his Creatures, any of them, in any respect; much less hath he himself given that glory to them, that they should be God with himself, who are a different, yea, infinitely different sort of Being from him: And again, in Isaiab 40. 15. Having said, That all the Nations before him, are as nothing, and are counted to him, less than nothing, and vanity; the Prophets Inference from thence is this; To whom then will ye liken me? His next and immediate Scope is, to confound their imaginations and outward lineaments made of him in Graven Images: But then, his Argument for this runs higher, and reacheth deeper; My Being is such, and so Transcendent, that you cannot match me with all Nations, or the Souls of men; much less therefore, draw any outward shape in Graven Images; for, Who hath seen his shape at any time? Therefore also His Being, Wisdom, Power, Holiness, is of another kind than ours: The Souls of Men made Wise, and Holy, cannot match him. As therefore, God is called the only Good, and only Wise, and only Immortal; so by the same reason, [only Is] or hath [a Being]. And therefore the Glory of his Nature is, That 'tis Incommunicable; take his Essence, we cannot attain to dwell in it; as he dwells in himself, that Inhabith Eternity. 1 Tim. 1. 16.

Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light, which no man can approach unto, whom no man hath seen, nor can see: Much less therefore can reach to the participation of Him in his Being, and Glory, so as to be Himself. His Being is proper to Himself, and intire with Himself.

The Devil of this Opinion, that the Creature is God, or at least a piece of him, hath haunted the World in former Ages, as well as it walks now. The Philosophers had it up; the Poets amongst the Heathen, and Hereticks among the Christians, downwards in all Ages. My Brethren, consider what Paul hath uttered, Rom. 1. 25. speaking of the Heathen, he saith, They changed the Truth of God into a Lie (that is; the essence and being of God) and worshipped and served the Creature more than the Creator, who is blessed for ever, Amen. In which Speech at once, he puts a bar and Wall of separation between God's being, and that of the Creatures; and also Adores the infinite blessedness of that his being intire within it self, as is not communicable to the Creature; and also speaks in opposition to the worshipping of Creatures as God, upon any account, much less, as if they were essentially God. The Jews indeed, they would narrow God, by confining him to their Temple; and therefore God vindicates himself against that restraint, by this, Isa. 66. I made all things: And where will ye find me an house? But the Heathen, they fancied God was like the Creatures, and under that notion, worshipped him in the Creatures, And in opposition thereunto said Isaiab also, To whom will ye liken me? speaking of Heathenish Idolatry. And Paul had an eye to both, Acts 17. 24. 29. God that made the World, and all things therein, dwelleth not in Temples made with hands: And again Vers. 29. We ought not to think, that the Godhead is like unto Gold, or Silver, or Stone, graven by art and Mans devise. The Idolary of the Heathen did rise no higher (whatever the Opinion of some of them was) than this, that they changed the Truth (or essence) of God, into this Lie, by worshipping the Creature as like unto God; and yet thereby (whilst they know it not) they worshipped the Creature more than God: If God found fault with these, how must his jealousy rise up in fury against those, that not only make the Creature like to God, but make every Creature to be God himself? To these he might not only say (as to them) to whom will ye liken me, But who, more impiously do make Creature the same that I am? This is an Idolatry which the generality of the Heathen practised not.

Chap. 2.

Hermes Trismegistus l. 5. ad filiam Tatium. Nihil est in universo mundo quod non sit ipse. Deus est totum quod videt, totum quod non videt. Seneca. August. l. contra Secundinum Manicheum; speaking against the opinion of the Manichees, argues thus. Si Dominus ejusdem substantia Creator & Creatura essent, non reprehederentur qui servi erant creaturae potius quam Creatoris, quoniam cuique servissent ab eadem Natura & substantia non recessissent; Cum vero reprehendantur ab Apostolo, & detestabiles habentur qui & servierunt creaturae potius quam Creatori, satis ostenditur, illius & huius diversas esse substantias. Again in Gersons time, Gerhard. Quidam se imaginati sunt per contemplationem ita teneri Deo, ut re ipsa ipsorum natura in abyssali profundo submergantur; puta humanitas annihilatur, & toto transfertur in Divinitatem. Which also the Anabaptists which are called Methuists in Holland, have held of the humanity of Christ. Also Servetus, as Calvin hath it, held Deitatem in omnibus Creaturis esse substantialiter: So Calvin. Tract. Theolog. pag. 609. and 657. Also Sebastianus Franck, In trunculo, Deum esse truncum, in Porco Porcum, in Dabulo Diabolum: Libertin: Calvin. cap. 13. speaking of Lucretius (one of them) sum Deus (saith he) And since then, Wigelius: And of old, Dionysius, Esse omnium est ipsa Divinitas, Omne quod videt, & quod non videt: Lucan. l. 3. Jupiter is est quodcunque videt, quocunque moveris.

Are not we (as was said,) the Clay, and He the Potter? And are not those two distant enough, if we take but the distance between a Man that is the Potter and his Clay, when yet the Man himself, who is that Potter, is made as well as his pots are by him? (You find the comparison Jer. 18. 6. and Rom. 9. 20.) But, to make God the Potter, to turn himself to Clay, and then to make Vessels out of himself; and then, for him to say again unto his pots, as made out of himself, Return ye Sons of Men into God again, (as their fancies are) Is not this a goodly Religion? A goodly Religion indeed! Oh ye Potshards of the Earth, know your distance from your Creator; you are of a differing Metal: Let the potshards of the Earth Rant it against their fellow potshards of the Earth, as Isaiab hath it, Ch. 45. 9. and not think to vye with your Creator, as if you were pieces of him, yea, fellow-mates with him, when as you are less than nothing, Isa. 40. 17. They are Nothing; yea, less than Nothing. He hath much a do to keep himself from denying them a Name of being; and even that vanisheth whilst compared with him. And if they had bin a drop of him taken altogether, they could not have added to this Ocean; but if they be nothing, and less than nothing, then surely, they are no parts of him; of which afterwards,

Book I.

Again, to argue this from invincible Reason: If all things were God, all difference of Good and Evil would be taken away, and God should sin in all that is acted in and by the Creature, (which is that, these Men do aim at, to have their Consciences discharged of all Obligations :) If they can once persuade their Souls, that they are God; then as God sins not, so nor do they.

Again, if so, then there would be no Obligation between the Creator and the Creature; nor any law which they are obliged unto: which also, they would obliterate out of their own and other Mens Consciences; in saying, That it proceeds from the degenerate ignorance of the Creature, and their unbelief of what they truly are, that they think themselves Subject to a Law.

Again, there could be no Redemption, the Creature needed it not; for it could never be lost from God, it being substantially a piece of himself: Nor God could make no Election nor Reprobation among his Creatures; for himself were both that which is chosen, and what is condemned; and he would then be condemning himself, or self-condemned: And God should hate part of himself; whereas no Man ever yet hated his own flesh, Eph. 5. 29. but the Scripture says in the Name of God, Esau have I hated Ec. Rom. 9. 13.

Juven.

Again, all the idolatry of the Nations would be justified by this; yea, even such idolatry as the light of the wisest of them condemned. Ob sanctas Gentes quibus hæc nascuntur in hortis, Numina! Condemning the Egyptians worshipping Herbs for Gods: Yea, not only Herbs, but Serpents, forefooted Beasts and creeping things; which the Apostle Rom. 1. 23. And changed the glory of the uncorruptible God, into an image made like to corruptible Man, and to birds, and fourfooted Beasts, and creeping things; toucheth upon. Oh! these are the Gods, Oh Israel; and not only these, but the Devil himself, that old Serpent, for he is a Creature too. Yea, Men might worship their own draught, and so make a God of that, which God himself, in so much scorn, speaks of the Heathens Gods, by the Prophet, A Dunghil-God, Dij stercorarij, It might further be said that God Creates himself, and Creates nothing but himself, that Opus est Artifex: Himself the work of his own hand, and yet the Maker too.

'Tis true indeed, the Scripture says, that all things are of him, and all things are thine; as David in his panegyrick made to God: 'Tis also said of him, That he is above all, and in you all, and through all, Eph. 4. 6. 'Tis also said, that God is all in all; but it is no where said, that God is all things; or, that all things are God himself.

CHAP. II.

The Creatures were not from Eternity existing in G O D.

Some Platonic Divines, have fancied the Creatures to have been existent in God, and with God, from Eternity: And their Creation to have been but God's putting them forth of Himself into a visibility, who yet when they thus lay hid, were then in as true a way of Being, as now they are.

I will not enter into that Controversie, which the Schoolmen have stir'd, whether a Creature might have been from Eternity, or no.

Only first we say, that it is an Incommunicable Attribute of God, that He inhabits Eternity, as it imports, that he both dwelt Himself alone from Eternity, when there were none of these Made-things, to dwell in, or with him; no Heavens or Earth to fill: As also, that He is Eternity alone to Himself, and dwelt in Himself.

We do thus far acknowledge, that all things were in God's Foreknowledge and Decree; in Esse voluto, as Aquinas speaks. So also in Acts 15. 18. Known unto God are all his works from the beginning. And to say, That all things were in God virtually, (as they would mince it, and distinguish upon it; is but to say, they have a Being in the Power of God, as worms have in the Sun (which it will bring forth to Morrow) and so all things that never were, and that never shall be, but were and remain meer possibilia, things only possible may be said to be in God. But to the Point it self.

Eternity in God, and the Creatures being in time, is made a Vast and broad distinction between God and them. Psal. 90. 2. Before the Mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the Earth: Even from Everlasting, to Everlasting, thou art God: His Arms spanned both Eternities; (they are called, The Everlasting Arms, Deut. 33. 27.) whereas the best of Creatures have but half an Eternity, they are to Everlasting, but not from Everlasting; this is proper to God only, in opposition to the Creatures, for 'twas before they were brought forth. And their being to Everlasting, is derived from God, for of him it is said, 1 Tim. 6. 17. Who only hath immortality, that is, of Himself.

2. Upon the same account, it's made the difference between Christ and the Creatures, That he is from Eternity, not they; and this, because he is God. Psal. 102. 24, 25. (Which in the First of the Hebrews, is applied by Paul unto Christ) I said, O my God, take me not away in the midst of my days, thy years are throughout all Generations: Of old hast thou laid the Foundations of the Earth: Others Read it, [Before thou laidst the Foundations of the Earth.] The word Lepanim, or of Old, refers to the words afore, thus, Thy years are throughout all Generations, afore thou laidst the Foundations of the Earth. And here also is found, a general opposition to all Creatures; for as he had mentioned the Earth, so he mentions the Heavens, (as it follows) and the Heavens are the work of thy hands; now, the Heavens, and the Earth, comprehend all.

Again, 3ly This very same difference and distinction of the Creatures and Christ, is held forth in John 1. 1. compared with Hebrews 1. where these words of the Psalmist are cited. In John 1. Vers. 1. shewing Christ's peculiar dignity, and his being God, he says, He was in the beginning: The same Beginning which Moses meant, when he said, In the beginning God Created; which notes out Existence afore; and it is spoken in opposition to the World as made. So Vers. 10. the World was made by him: Which that in that first of the Hebrews fully clears and explains, answering both to John and the Psal.

BOOK I. Psalmist: Heb. 1. 10. And thou Lord in the beginning hast laid the Foundations of the Earth, and the Heavens are the works of thy hands; that is, he was so in the beginning of the making of all things whatsoever, so as to be the Founder of them, and therefore existing afore them. In which place of John's two things are said of him in difference from Creatures; 1. That he was with God before, which the Creatures were not, nor existent in him as he was. And further, Secondly, much less were they God before, as he was, but they all were made by him. Add to this, (to shew it was his peculiar Priviledge above the Creation, that he thus was with God;) that in Prov. 8. Vers. 24. When there was no depths, I was brought forth, when there was no Fountains abounding with water; before the Mountains were settled; before the Hills was I brought forth; while as yet he had not made the Earth &c. So on to the 30th Verse, Then was I with him as One brought up with him. This, Wisdom makes her boast of, as a Prerogative no Creature had; and Wisdom, in the Proverbs, is put for the person of Christ himself; So Luke 11. 49. compared with Luke 7. 34, 35. wherein Christ speaking of himself, says in that 11 Chap. 49. Therefore also said the Wisdom of God, I will send them Prophets and Apostles, &c. And in Luke 7. 35. he expressly says, This Wisdom is he who was the Son of Man: Vers. 34. The Son of Man is come eating and drinking, and ye say, behold a gluttonous Man, &c. But Wisdom is justified of her Children: So plainly affirming of himself, I my self am that Wisdom spoken of, which is justified of my Children: And in Matth. 11. 19. he says the same: And that speech, The Wisdom of God said, I will send Prophets and Apostles, &c. as it must refer in general, to some speech or other, somewhere in the Old Testament uttered by one that takes on him to be a Person, as the [I] imports, and that person stiled [The Wisdom of God] so particularly, it refers unto what Wisdom had said of her self in the Book of the Proverbs, Chap. 1. from Vers. 29. to the end, of sending forth Preachers, by whom she utters her voice in the Streets, and cries in the chief places of Concourse. And when our Saviour Christ speaks of that Union which he had with the Father, in that his prayer, John 17. he says, that he had a glory with the Father before the World was: And this he makes a peculiar priviledge of himself, as being then a person, who was then existing, and so were that Glory afore God the Father: Whereas if all the Elect had existed in God actually then, as well as Christ, this had not been peculiar unto him; And yet there also he speaks of their existence in God's Decree and Election, Thine they were, John 17. 6. And therefore, what he says of himself, of the glory that he had before the World was, must be spoken by reason of an Existence besides that which he had in Decree, which existence the elect had not:

Thirdly, by this, God doth set forth his own Greatness to humble Job, and in him, the whole Creation; and how poor a Job doth he make of him! And if that God himself should speak unto these Blasphemers of our days, as he did to Job there, how would they instantly shake and tremble; and fall to nothing, unless he supported them? You have (Job 38. 2, 3.) God steps in from behind the hangings, as one that had, undiscerned, overheard Jobs rantings and standings upon his points; Who is this, says God, that darkens Counsel by words without knowledge? Gird up now thy loins like a Man, if thou hast any Metal, or the Spirit of a Man in thee; And to confound thee, I will ask thee but one Question; For I will demand of thee, and answer thou me but this one thing; Where wast thou when I laid the Foundations of the Earth? Declare, if thou hast understanding. Nay, Canst thou tell who hath laid the measures thereof? Or who hath stretched the line upon it? Whereupon are the Foundations thereof fastned? Or who hath laid the Corner Stone thereof? God hereby shook up Job so, and gave him such a Ratling, and yet appeared not as he is in himself; but speaks all this out of a Whirlwind, which he took to cover him: And the issue with Job, of all this, was, as in Chap. 42. 2. I abhor my self in dust and ashes. You see this once, and first Query, which is home to the point in hand, and point-blank (as we say) against that wicked opinion, which asserts all things to be Coeternal with God. These God chose out of all other weapons, to overthrow Job with: Where wert thou?
Alas!

Alas! thou hadst no being then, much less knowledge of these things. But according to this wretched Opinion, risen up in these days, if true, Job might have answered boldly, I was with thee, and I was in thee, and in a happier state of Union with thee, than I am in Now: Not in a state of Union with flesh and blood, but one in Spirit with thee. Ay, indeed says God, (speaking ironically to him) Knowest thou it, because thou wast then born? Vers. 21. Thou art very old Job, and of great standing, and the Number of thy days is great, as it follows there.

Chap. 2.

Now, if the Creatures, or the Souls of Men had really been existent in God, and as truly as Christ himself, as to his Existence, no otherwise than they affirm themselves to have been; Then God might as well have said to Christ, Where wast thou when I laid the Foundations of the Earth? But, such a Question, Christ hath prevented, and put out of Question, saying, Prov. 8. 29. Then I was by him; yea, and was his Counsellour, as Isa. 40. 13. Both which are spoken there of Christ.

And whereas it is objected by those Men, That in that 8 Prov. it is also affirmed, That the Sons of Men who were his Elect, did then exist in God; in a sportful life in God, together with Christ, because it is said Vers. 31. That he was rejoicing in the habitable part of his Earth; and (it follows) my delights were with the Sons of Men: And that therefore, though Men did not exist under the appearance of flesh and blood, as now; yet they were existing in Spirit in him, and with him. And that they being put out of God, into the vail of flesh and blood; Therefore it was, that Christ came forth from God after them, and took flesh and blood also: For so they apply that of the Hebrews 2. 13, 14.

The Answer is clear, that it proves the clear contrary; out of the very Text: For Christ's Rejoicing then, is said to have been in the habitable parts of his Earth: Therefore it must be meant of Men as inhabiting the Earth; and not as existing with him from Eternity. Vers. 26. of Prov. 8. tells us, that they were not then made: Hence therefore, his rejoicing in them, must necessarily be spoken in respect of the foresight of what they should be, and so as existing afore the World but in God's Decree, in respect of what he would after make them to be, and thereby presented to him beforehand, as foreviewing what those Children should be, whom God hath given to him, when once they should come to inhabit this Earth: And such, to be sure, they were not actually then; for he expressly saith, Vers. 23. These his delights were afore the Earth it self was.

And had there been, as then, any other Existence of them, but in foresight and Decree, as the cause of that he delighted in them, he would much rather have mentioned that as the Object of his present delight, than this other which was so long after to come, when they should inhabit and dwell here on Earth below. And if all had been in God before in being, why then all might pray as well as Christ; glorifie us with that glory we had with thee before the World was. And then they might say of themselves, even as Christ saith of himself; you shall see the Son of Man ascend up where he was before.

And then likewise, that had not been true which the Apostle says, 1 Cor. 15. 46. where speaking of David's Creation, he says, that was not first which is Spiritual, but that which is Natural, and afterwards, that which is Spiritual: Whereas, had they had an Existence in God in Spirit, before the World was; then he had first been that which is Spiritual, and afterwards, that which is Natural.

And then again, that benefit of Creation, which yet we are taught to praise God so much for, had been a worsting of the Condition of these Elect Ones; a shooting them out of a Spiritual Condition, into a Natural, without any sin of theirs.

CHAP. III.

The Infinite Distance between God and the Creatures, in respect that he is the Maker and Preserver of them: In that also he is Eternal, and so before they had being he dwelt alone in himself, and possessed all things in himself. He is the high and lofty One, and is so Supreamly Excellent, as it transcends all other: His Name is Holy, and so is above the Creatures, and separated from them. The true Name of Being is proper only to God; the Creatures are but the Shadows and Appearances of Being.

ISAI. LVII. 15. and LXVI. 1, 2.

For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth Eternity, whose Name is holy: I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones.

Thus saith the Lord, the Heaven is my Throne, and the Earth is my Footstool, where is the House that ye build unto me? And where is the place of my rest? For all those things hath mine hand made, and all those things have been, saith the Lord: But to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word.

HERE is the highest and the lowest met dwelling together; the highest God, and the lowest and poorest of his Creatures. The Prophet had just in the Chapter afore, the 56th, verse ult. foretold a like wonder to this, the Wolf and the Lamb shall feed together; which in Chapt. II. 6. is varied thus; The Wolf shall dwell with the Lamb, and the Calf and the young Lion, &c. which, if literally understood, were a wonder in Nature: But, behold! a greater is here: The high and lofty One that inhabits Eternity, whose Name is Holy, dwells with the sinner, who is contrite and broken in heart for it. This is a wonder in Grace; or rather, The wonder of Grace.

The Language, the words are pen'd in, is God's, and could be no others for him: The thoughts of the Creature could not have invented such a stile to speak to him in; and God's scope therein is by lifting up and exalting his own greatness above all Creatures, withal to discover the height and depth of his Grace in so condescending to the meanest of Creatures, than which, himself accounts nothing more his glory.

As to my presently Scope, it is not to inlarge upon the description of a broken heart, or of Gods affecting, and delighting therein to dwell, or his Grace shewn thereby: But my present design is to inlarge upon the height and distance which God bears above us, and his whole Creation, considered as we are Creatures: Nor is my Scope simply to set forth, what God is in himself, but as here he is set out Comparatively with his Creatures; limiting my Discourse herein also only unto what description he makes of himself here in the Text: And the Use I shall put it to, will be to humble us as Creatures, even in our best Estate, and not as sinners only.

This comparative distance of this height above us, is set forth in these PARTICULARS.

I. The maker and Preserver: And these things were made and do exist by me.

First, THE MAKER] So in both places: In Isai. 66. All these have my hands made; The very tenour of this speech is a slighting them as Creatures, and being they are but made things, and will ye compare them to me? It is, as if an Artificer should speak of his works made by him, that are different from himself. These are the Clay, and My Pots, and I am the Potter. He speaks of them as a Potter would do of his Pot-sheards so distant from himself, The Maker: Or he speaks thus of them; with difference from his own internal acts of his mind within himself, whereas these are utterly External, and out of himself. These have my hands made; as an artificer would speak of his manufactures and works without him. And then in Isai. 57. the other Scripture, Vers. 16. The Souls (the Subjects of this my Grace) which I have made: In both, he speaks of them as made by him; and the Souls made altogether, i. e. the whole of their Being; as Psal. 33. 15. for Creation is productio totius entis: Acts 17, 25. He giveth to all life, and all things: And Vers. 28. Being it self, in him we live, and have our being: And Rom. 11. ult. Of him are all things; and therefore not so much as a first Matter was existing to his hands: But all these have my hands made.

Secondly; THE PRESERVER,] as giving and continuing. To give them existence; as those words in Chap. 66. 2. And all these things have been; saieth the Lord, Piscator renders, per eum existunt omnia; to which, that of Acts 17. 28. corresponds; In him we live, and move, and have our being: i. e. as the Original, so the Continuance of them: He gives life, Vers. 25. and then Preserves it: In him we continue to have it; thus both Paul and Isaiab.

II. INHABITING ETERNITY]; which he speaks, First, with exclusion of all things made, as things that have not, de facto, been from Eternity; and notes out, an eminent distinction put thereby between them and him. Psal. 90. 2. Before the Mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the Earth and the World, from everlasting to everlasting thou art God. And whereas some Creatures, as Angels and Mens Souls, have an Eternity of Existence to come, yet that is but derived: 'Tis he is said only to have Immortality; 1 Tim. 6. and therefore he is called the last as well as the first: That though they be Eternal for time to come, yet he is after them all: Which could not have been said, but in respect that Creatures their Eternity doth depend on him; and so he is the last, though they continue with him for ever. God hath Eternity both past and to come; and this is proper to him.

Secondly, the Phrase here [INHABITING] eternity, is unusual, and significant of far more, than simply that God is Eternal in both respects aforesaid. It imports over and besides, 1. That he hath dwelt alone, and shall dwell alone for ever apart, by and in himself; whether afore any Creature were or since, it is all one as to this; For himself is that Eternity which he dwelt in, and shall dwell in, 1 Sam. 15. 29. The Eternity of Israel will not lie, so 'tis varied in the margent: And since the Creatures was, he is his own proper Mansion-house, even as he was before:

BOOK I.

1. That afore any Creature was, he dwelt alone, that is evident; For they not being or existing, he must needs have had an Eternity past, alone to himself, which he says he dwelt in, and no Creature with him: Not only, there was no other God with him (as Moses) but no Creature with him (as Solomon) Prov. 8. from Vers. 23. to 32. So that what was said of Israel, that they were a people that dwelt alone, Deut. 33. 28. the same may be said of the God of Israel; he was utterly without all Society of any Creature.

The Jews call him Makom, Place, because he is Place to himself. His own Centre and his own Circumference

And secondly, it is all one after he hath made the Creatures; he still dwells in his own Eternity, apart by himself. It is one of the Attributes which Paul gives him, 1 Tim. 6. 16. Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no Man can approach unto; And therefore you see in Isai. 66. that since he hath made Heaven and Earth, how yet he speaks of the whole Creation; Where will ye find me a place for my rest? which imports, that since he made the World he dwells by himself apart in the same Eternity he did: His making of Creatures, was not to add or to enlarge his dwelling, that he might inhabit more commodiously, (as it is with Man, whose Person is one thing, and whose House is another;) No; Their Building is not a new piece of an House to him, who alone inhabits Eternity, that is, himself.

'Tis true, that now he hath made all these things, if he should not be every where, where any of them are, and through them all, as Paul's phrase is, Ephes. 4. he should not be God, the immense God; I fill Heaven and Earth, saith he, Jerem. 23, 24. seeing they are made, he fills them also: Yet so, as still he is not beholding to them for room or place: As the Sun filleth the Air, but is not beholding to it for the place it affords it, but the Air to the Sun that fills it.

Thirdly, that he inhabiteh Eternity, shews that he possesseth all things in himself; for himself is his own Eternity to himself; and that Eternity being an house to himself, is furnished with all things within himself: He went not then out of himself for any thing; nor needs he yet to do so, as Acts 17. 25. He needs not any thing: But was abundantly supplied with all things within himself, as a great Man in his own House; whose glory it is to have all things sufficiently about him therein and therewith.

Fourthly, that he inhabiteh Eternity imports that his being is so infinite, as he fills the immense expanse of all or both Eternities in one Moment. He comprehends and compasseth the whole, and all within himself, and extends himself thorough it all; he is the King of Ages, that is of the courses of Times, 1 Tim. 1. 17. and so as a King hath all Ages as subjects always extant afore him. In the 40th of Isai. it is said he spanneth the Heavens; and it is a good grasp that you will say; but that is spoken only of a thing that is now at present existing; but in Deuter. 33. 27. ye read, he hath everlasting Arms; a right arm to inviron Eternity, a parte ante, Eternity past; and another that to come: And so incircles both Eternities, past and to come, without succession of time to him: Eternity is but a moment to him: a nō vñ eternitatis, as the Schoolmen speak: For he comprehends it within the Arms of his infinitely extensive being: As he subsists not in place, per partes, so nor in Time by parts. He runs not through a Time Past, Present, and to come. His duration, is not measured by the differences of Time: For then it might be said, as to Time to come, he as yet is not. By the same Reason that a thousand years are but as one day to him; by the same you may say, that Eternity is but one instant. [He inhabites] that is possesseth even the whole Continually; he builds not one part of his Eternity in one Age, and another part in another, so as that he should dwell in it by piece-meal and successively: Nor yet removes he his habitation, as men that have great Houses do, from one part of their House, as in Winter (suppose) and to another in Summer, and the other part standing empty the while: No, but from Eternity to eternity, is but one intire individual, and compleat House for the whole of him at once to fill; who is fulness of being in the intenseness of Perfection. And hence he enjoyeth all blessedness in an instant; not as we, one part this moment, and another piece in another, which when put together, do make a compleat happiness, but in a succession,

The Philosopher said of him, that God doth αἰεὶ ἀπαλλῆν χαίρειν ἑδόνον.

Fifthly

Fifthly, His House is always one and the same, and never hath any decay, or needs the least Reparation in any part of it: His Eternity is an immutability and unchangeableness: He is semper idem; his stile is always [I am :] And [I will be] Ehiéh, that is, always the same, and the Cause of my own being. And by this also his Eternity is differenced from the Creatures: All of them wax old as a garment; and of themselves they would do so, did not God renew their being every moment. The Angels would wax old, as the Children of Israels garments in the Wilderness did not; but it was because God perpetually kept them as new. But of God it follows, Thou art the same, Psal. 102. 27. and therefore us and our years he compareth to a Flood, Psal. 90. 5. that is always running and in succession; but him to a Rock of Ages that stands (as the Phrase in the Original is, Psal. 102. 26.) immovable.

Chap. 3.

III. The high and lofty One.

The high One] For the transcendency and supream excellency of his Being: The lofty One] for the soveraignty and dominion of it.

The high] It is a common Title given him in the Old and New Testament; the high God; and the Lord on high; God most high. Psal. 83. ult. The most High over all the Earth. And in the New [the Highest] three times in one Chapter, Luke 1.

And to take the height of him, let us first take into consideration the course and way the Scripture (as condescending to our sense) useth, to set this forth by; which is by a Comparative, and rising up from one degree to another; and it begins thus.

1. In respect of place, which yet is the lowest kind of height: And for this take Eliphaz his staff in Job 22. 12. Behold the height of the Stars, how high they are: (How high is God then? so riseth he,) Is not God in the height of the Heavens? as it immediately follows thereupon.

2. In dignity and dominion; he is said to be higher than all Nations on Earth, (which are in dignity exceeding, and more high than the Stars) higher than all the people, Psal. 99. 2. whom (as elsewhere 'tis said) he rules and stills at his pleasure: And Psal. 113, 4, 5. The Lord is high above all Nations.

But yet you will say, So are Kings that are set over the Nations: And if you do suppose but one man to be King of all the World (as the Roman Emperors once) it may be said that he is higher than all the Nations.

But thirdly, He is over all the Kings of the Earth; that's another ascent: He is higher than the highest, and there are higher than they; i. e. who are between him and them, Eccles. 5. 8. For he is higher than the highest, and there be higher than they. The [they] are the Rulers of this Earth, (whom he there speaks of;) and those that are higher than they are the Angels: But he is the highest absolutely, singularly, higher than the highest, above the Angels themselves: All Principalities and Powers, both in Heaven and Earth, they are under his feet. He is the blessed and only Potentate, 1 Tim. 6. 15. and so in Psal. 97. 9. Thou Lord art high above all the Earth; it follows, Thou art exalted above all the Gods; i. e. Angels, whether good or bad, which the Heathens worshipped.

4. To shew the height and super-excellency of his Dignity and Dominion, he was pleased to give this demonstration; he did on purpose build a place for himself, separate from, and far above all things else which he had made; and calls it here, The high and holy place, in this 57th Chapter; and Heaven is my Throne, in the 66th Chapter, and that is the highest of Heavens, as a place separate, and an apartment for himself to dwell in after he had made Creatures, until Christ, that was made higher than the Heavens, pierced (as the Phrase in Hebr. 4. is) and broke up that separate place, prepared from the foundation of the world; which is to the rest of Heaven as the holy of holies was to the other parts of the Temple, which the High Priest only went into; which the Angels by the Law of their Creation, and right of their Creatureship, did not enjoy as the first place of their Habitation; and in which, had the Angels that fell, been Inhabitants, they had never fallen: For as it is the high, so the holy Book I. holy place wherein the immutable glory of God so shineth, as would immutably have fixed them in holiness unto God, that they should never have departed from him. God's height, even as in respect to this high place, is often set out thereby; as, that he is higher than the highest Heaven: Psal. 113. 5. His glory is above the Heavens; who is like unto the Lord who dwelleth on high?

5. Let us rise one ascent yet higher, which the Gospel affords us, of the Man Jesus united personally to the Son of God, who is gone into Heaven, and is on the right hand of God: Angels, and Authorities, and Powers being made subject to him, as they are said to be under his feet, Ephes. 1. 21, 22. and who therefore is said by that personal Union to be made higher than the Heavens, Hebr. 7. 26. and all this is spoken of the Man Jesus; for 'tis said he was made thus high: And yet lo! how afore this high and lofty one, he humbleth himself, I am a worm, which is lower than the footstool man treads on: Psal. 22. 3, 6. Thou art holy, but I am a worm and no man. Thus he speaks of himself before he ascended, and did thus humble himself at God's command: And now when he is ascended far above all heavens, as Ephes. 4. 10. He that descended, is the same also that ascended up far above all Heavens, that he might fill all things; He is yet but at God's right hand; the Throne is God's, who is higher than this highest, my Father is greater than I.

But all this hath been but a Comparative way of shewing his Highness.

2. His being the high and lofty One, notes forth the transcendency and super-excellency of his Divine being it self in it self; and that it is utterly of another kind from Creatures, and indeed that it only is being. In Psal. 83. ult. That men may know that thou, whose name alone is JEHOVAH, art the MOST HIGH OVER all the earth: He thereby argues his height from his Name, that his Name is alone Jehovah, and therefore he is most high, and in that very respect. Now Jehovah, we know, is the Name of his Essence [I am]; and here it is that men may know that thou, whose Name alone is Jehovah, art the most high; and therefore most high, in respect of such a glorious being as is proper alone unto him. In Ephes. 4. 6. he is said to be above all, and yet to be through all; i. e. his Creatures: His being above all, shews the transcendency of his being, spoken of separate from all ours; not intercommuning with ours, nor intermingled, although it is said he is through all too; but as the Sun beams intermingle not with the Air, though they shine through the Air, so nor doth God with Creatures.

Here I might amplify upon the glory of this his Title, that he is the most High in respect of his being, that he alone hath the Name Jehovah, as the Psalmist saith, and also of being; that all the Creatures are but the shadow of being, but he only is: But I shall defer it unto the Use.

IV. Whose Name is Holy.

First; 'Tis a Name that is proper to God; as Christ saith, Matth. 19. 17. There is none good but God, so nor holy. He is separate and alone in his holiness, as he is alone in his being: And if he only be good, then much more is he only holy; for holiness is the height and perfection of goodness; so in man, and so in God. And Rev. 15. 4. you have it express, Who only is holy; and the holy One, as elsewhere: Now of all that could have been said, or attributed to him, this sets up God the highest, and as most Sovereign: And this; of all others, layeth us low, both as we are Creatures, and as we are Sinners. Holiness is said to be his dreadful Name. Psal. 99. 2, 3. The Lord is high above all people; it follows, Let them praise thy great and terrible Name, for it is holy; and that makes him high: And again, at the 5th Verse, Exalt ye the Lord our God, and worship at his footstool, for he is holy; nay, the Margin varieth it, his footstool is holy; i. e. the ground he sets his feet on. The like you have in the 9th Verse.

Secondly; This separates him from the Creatures; for holiness imports a separation, as 'tis in common applied to any thing, person, place, or time. Christ was separate from Sinners, made higher than the Heavens; but God from Creatures.

Thirdly;

Thirdly; Holiness is that whereby God aims at his own Glory; as the Angels cry shews in that 6th of Isaiab, verse 3. Holy, holy, holy, the whole Earth is filled with thy Glory; as being that which the Attribute of Holiness in him aims at from his Creatures: And that being the only Attribute mentioned when his Glory doth there appear, Verse 1. and is beheld by Isaiab and the Angels; this, and the single conjunction to Holiness and Glory argues it. Now he being so great a God, his desires of Glory from the Creature are so vast, and so intensive, as the Creatures cannot come up unto, nor satisfie: for as Rom. 1. 21. hath it; He would be glorified as God; which the Creatures cannot reach to the height of. Two Scriptures put together do shew this, Job 15. 15. Behold! he putteth no trust in his Saints; yea, the Heavens are not clean in his sight; and he means the Angels, who are called Heavens: And they are the good Angels he means, is manifest, those who have kept their station in Heaven; and yet all their holiness, you see, makes them not clean in his pure eyes: Thus Job 4. 17, 18. Shall mortal man be more just than God? shall a man be more pure than his Maker? Behold, he put no trust in his servants, and his Angels he charged with folly. We sinners are unclean privatively, wanting that holiness we were created in, and positively defiled; but the best of his Creatures are negatively not clean, because they answer not, nor come up unto his immense desires of glory from them. He would have more, though it cannot be had: But of this deficiency, and falling short of Creature Holiness as to God, I shall speak in the Use.

U S E.

To humble you, as you are Creatures, afore this Majesty on high: I would humble ye, I say, as you are Creatures, as well as that you are sinners; which latter, I know, you do every day; I do not say, that you are to humble your selves as much simply, as you are Creatures, as that you are sinners, yet you are to do it as truly: It is to be an humbling of our selves, this, though in another way. We humble our selves as sinners by way of mourning and godly sorrow; but this as Creatures, by way of self-emptiness and sense of our own nothingness and vanity. They are both in the Text; he speaks of the humble, considering themselves as Creatures; and the contrite ones, as sinners: And God is therefore represented first as The high and lofty One inhabiting Eternity, to humble us as Creatures; and secondly as holy, to humble us as sinners, (though that will humble us as Creatures too:) I enforce this Use from this, that to teach you to humble your selves as Creatures, is a piece of the Gospel; and where you have the Gospel spoken of, there you have this also. As in Isai. 40. 3. the beginning of the preaching of the Gospel is prophesied of; The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, &c. which was John Baptists Ministry; and then follows the Prophecy of all the Apostles preaching, which succeeded John, O Sion, that bringeth good tidings, verse 9. Now among other things, what was it John was to cry, and the Apostles to preach? Even this, All flesh is grass, &c. Verse 6, 7, 8. The voice said cry: and he said what shall I cry? All flesh is grass, and all the godliness thereof is as the flower of the field: The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, because the Spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it; surely the People is grass: The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; but the word of our God shall stand for ever. Which the Apostle Peter applyeth unto that very Word and Gospel which was spoken by himself, and the other Apostles, 1 Pet. 1. ult. But the word of the Lord endureth for ever: and this is the word which by the Gospel is preached unto you. And and this was done by the revealing of the glory of the Lord Christ, namely, discovered in the Gospel. Isai. 40. 5. And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed: and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. Now observe, that there is in that Chapter a setting forth of God in his greatness, to the end thus to humble the Creature, such as you have not in all the Scriptures.

So

So as indeed we should lose a piece of our Religion, if we do not attend to this, and I will here suppose my self to have a Congregation of Adams and Eves, Men and Women in that pure and first estate; yea, and I will take the Angels in also before they fell; and some Angels are here at present this day; but if all were here in their original estate, or those that are now in their confirmed estate, I might preach this Sermon to them, reminding them of their estate by Creation, to humble them as they are Creatures in that estate.

And to inforce this the more, I take in that additional to my Text, Psal. 113. 5, 6. Who is like unto the Lord our God who dwelleth on high? [WHO HUMBLETH HIMSELF TO BEHOLD] the things that are in Heaven, and in the Earth? He represents him as so great a God, as it is an humbling to him, so much as to cast an eye upon any Creature now he hath made it; and yet he were not God, if he did not behold the least motion of every Creature, to the falling of a Sparrow to the ground without his cognifance. Further observe it, It is not only spoken of things on earth, but of things in heaven; his best Saints, and Angels, or whatever that high and holy place is furnisht with. Now my Inference is, That if it be an humbling to God to behold the best of these, it may much more be an humbling to us when we appear before this God. And that we may do so, let us take these Considerations.

1. Whereas God had the Idea's of infinite Worlds, he could have made, and so of Creatures reasonable, which lay before his eternal Counsels, as Candidates, and as fair to have been made Existent, as we that are made: (For not only all things were once nothing, (that will afford a second Consideration) but there was yet an higher remoteness from nothing, and that is, of things possible to be, which in respect of God's not willing to create them, never did, nor ever shall come into being, although, when they should have done so, it would have been out of nothing) yet God said of us, Stand you forth, I decree and will you to exist afore me, whenas an infinite number of like Creatures slept still, and to Eternity shall sleep in darkness, and Non-existence.

2. After God had decreed to make thee, and to give thee an existence and actual being, yet thou wert in reality still nothing, pure nothing in entity. Thy Pedigree is from nothing; thy Ancestry, and that not far removed, is nothing. Job in the view of his own rottenness and corruption, humbles himself, Chap. 17. 14. I have said to Corruption, thou art my Father; to the Worm, thou art my Mother and my Sister: But in rehearsing thy Original from whence thou camest, I may say that nothing, pure nothing, was thy great Grand-mother: Thy body was immediately made of dust; that was thy next Mother by that Line; but that Dust was made of the first rude Earth, without form, and that was thy Grandmother; but that Earth was made purely of nothing; so then nothing was thy great Grand-mother. Thus of thy Body: Then for thy Soul, that was immediately created by God out of nothing, and so by that line thy next Mother was nothing: And what was thy Soul twenty, thirty, or forty years ago, and so many years upwards? Plain nothing: It is observable how in the Scriptures, when God's confounding the Creatures is expressed, the Threatning runs in these terms, a bringing them to nothing. So in 1 Cor. 1. 28. he takes $\mu\eta\ \delta\upsilon\tau\epsilon$, Things that are not, (that is, are as if they were not, as to such an effect as God useth them for) even to bring to naught things that are, that is, to nothing, as the opposition shews: In these terms the Sentence of Confusion, and the destruction of things that are, is penned; as thereby reminding them, how that their first root and original was nothing; and so does speak in a way of reflexion upon what once they were: Even as when he threatned Adam to turn him to dust, Out of dust thou camest, says he; in a way of debasing of him, minds him of his descent and original. And in like Phrase of Speech Job utters their destruction, abeunt in nihilum, they go away, or vanish to nothing; that is, is, percut, they perish. The like in Isaiah 41. 11. and 34. 12. and 40. 23. He bringeth the Judges to nothing. And further, as if the Creatures had by instinct a common sense of their Nothingness, if God do but chastise them, presently we cry out to God, Bring me not to Nothing; so afraid are they of becoming Nothing: Yea, and in extremities of distress, are apt to wish they were nothing, nor had ever been. And in this Language the Prophet Jeremiah utters his fears, Fer. 10. 24. Correct me not in thine Anger, lest thou turn me to nothing: If we are but touch't, we apprehend that we are in danger of becoming Nothing. All miseries are smaller vacillations or reelings of the Creature towards their first Nothing; we are like those flight small green flies that creep upon leaves in Summer; we Men cannot touch them so gently but they dye. The whole Creation is built upon a Quagmire of Nothing; and is continually ready to sink into it, and to be swallowed up by it; which maketh the whole, or any part of it, to quake, and quiver, when God is Angry; as Jeremiah there did. The Foundation of the Creatures changeability to sin (when as at first made near to Holy) is by our Divines put upon this, That we being made out of Nothing, are apt to verge, and sink into Nothing, and so fall towards it in sinning: And truly sin is a great leap, or fall rather, and tottering towards it; and we may view our own Nothingness most by it: And did not God, in the just act of our reeling towards sinning, put a stop, and uphold our beings, we should fall to Nothing: But, then he should want an object, or a Subject to punish for sin, or to be sensible of sin.

Humble your selves therefore in the apprehension of this; and look, as in point of Sanctification, although God giveth so great a measure of it to his Children, and maketh them very holy; yet in the point of justifying them, he would have them for ever to look upon themselves as ungodly, because once they were such; as Rom. 4. 5. And Paul, whilst he did never so much, saith, yet I am nothing. Thus here; though he hath given us a being and Existence, yet because we once were Nothing, and that was the state (if a state) he found us in, he would ever have us account our selves as Nothing; though now by his Grace, having All Things, as the Apostle says.

3. This made Being of ours, when it is made and termed Being (as it is in Acts 17. 28. In him we live, and move, and have our Being;) Yet that Being is not only derived purely from him, and his efficiency, but farther it is but equivocally, and falsely called Being; as the Apostle speaks of the knowledge the Gnosticks boasted of, Science, falsely so called. It hath but the Name of Being; but in reality is but the shadow of Being: Even as the shadow, or picture of a Man is falsely and equivocally termed a Man: All of a Picture is but a shadow of the Man.

4. God and Christ only have the Name of Substance; as Prov. 8. 21. Being both Name and Thing is proper only unto God; who is $\delta\delta\upsilon$, as the Septuagint still renders the Name Jehovah: or as Plato from thence, $\tau\delta\delta\upsilon$, in truth is said of God alone: For which here the Psalmist, Psal. 83. 18. That Men may know that thou, whose Name alone is Jehovah, art the most high over all the Earth. And what other is the Scripture Language of Man, and the greatest of Men? All of Man, and about Man, are therein compared to a shadow; his actions, and courses, a shadow, Psal. 39. 9. Surely every Man walketh in a vain shew, (or Image, as in the Hebrew;) Leads an imaginary life, rather than life it self; so Ainsworth: And as his ways, so is himself; and that in his best and most flourishing Estate: Thus in the 5. Verse of that Psalme, Verily, every Man (both in his Person, his Being, the Circumstances of his life) take him at the best, every way, he, and his best Estate, is altogether vanity; all Vanity: Which Vanity is all one in account with Nothing, or no Being: As in the same Verse, My worldly time is as nothing before thee: [My substance] so the Septuagint renders it: [My Body] as the Caldee: As Nothing, not only as compared with God, but afore God, and in his judgment and valuation of him: And that he says it of his time in this World, that his days are nothing, it imports that his Existence, and himself are are such: For to say, a mans time in this World is such, or such, connotates his Existence and Being in the World: And to say a shadow, is all one as to say, it is but a Being in shew, and not in reality: And that we find abundantly said Job 14. 2. and Chap. 8. 9. and Psal. 122. 11. and 144. 5. and make the best you can of it, a shadow is but a Middle between Non-entity, and true Being.

Solum Deum revera esse, cetera vero videri. Marsilius Ficinus, Epist. 8. Dr. Twiss in his oppositions to Dr. Jackson on the Attributes; who discourseth this equivocal being of Creatures at large, objects this, That yet Picture is a true Picture, although not the Man; and so the Creatures, thought but shadows, and the best of them the image of God, yet still withal that they are vere entia, Truly Beings: But I reply. If God only be said to be Being it self, and to have both Being, Name, and Thing, proper to him alone, as the Scriptures speak; then by the same reason, That the Picture of a Man is not the man, allowing it yet to be a true Picture; so the Creatures are not true Being, but barely the shadow of it: And it is not enough to say they are not God; but if to be God be only to have being, then they are but the shadows of Being.

The Platonists said, God only in truth [is,] and all things else [seem but to be] which answers unto David's, expression, in a shew: And truly God himself speaks of all the whole Creation at no other rate: And his valuation and judgment is a righteous judgment, Isai. 40. 15. Behold, the Nations are as a drop of a Bucket, and are counted (Namely by God) as the small Dust of the Ballance: He first, in the ballance where-in he weighs them, lessens them, and compares them to things that are of no valew or regard with Men; things neither here nor there, as we say. The drop of a Bucket, when it falls from the Bucket upon the Earth, the matter thereof is so swallowed up into the Earth and the Dust of it, as it is not so much as seen any more, but vanisheth away as it were to nothing: The small dust of the Ballance hath no sway at all on the Beam, to stir it one way or other; it makes it neither lighter, nor heavier: And if they be severed from the Bucket, and the Ballance, they are not missed; they make no Vacuum, no emptiness in either.

But yet you will say, that however these speak some entity or being, though but small, and though of no moment or consequence, yet of entity they partake something. He goeth on Vers. 17. casting them yet lower; All Nations before him are as nothing, &c. And yet still you will say, that Particle [As] Nothing, is but a diminutive; that though in esteem and regard they are as nothing, yet still in some smaller kind of reality they are something; though compared with a greater, they are as Nothing. But I answer, That that kind of Speech speaks what a thing is in deed, and in truth: As in that Speech, John 14. The glory [as] of the only begotten Son of God; the import of that [as] is not a diminution, as if it were not in reality, what is said of it, the excelling glory of the Son of God in truth; but that it was truly and indeed such a glory as was proper to him, and proportionable to him that was the Son of God. And that he might here yet speak the reality of their Nothingness more plainly, he adds, they are counted to him less than nothing] Plusquam nihil, as the Hebrews hath it: Concerning which, if it be again said, That they were but nothing at the worst, but why less than Nothing? The account to me is this, that now when he made them, and had been at the expence and power to make them and uphold them, yet they had for any thing he acquires by them, been as good have been Nothing still; and so are less then Nothing, by reason of the cost he hath been at, and expectation (as speaking after the manner of men) he might look from them, they were not worth his producing out of Nothing; yea; it had been better they had been nothing still. Another account is, That this being a comparative of what the Creatures are unto the great God, there is, now that they are made, a less distance and disproportion between the Creatures and nothing, than is between God and the whole Creation. For if you measure the distance between the Creatures, now they are made, and Nothing, if God should return them unto it, it were but a finite distance privatively considered; for their annihilation would be but privatio finiti, the depriving them of a finite good and Being; but the distance between Gods Being, and theirs, is infinite, yea, and in excellency and transcendency, more distant than was betwixt Nothing, and the Creatures before they were made, Though Philosophers would ascribe an infinite distance negatively considered, yet no such as that wherein God is above us; and so they are less every way to God, than nothing is to themselves: And therefore to conclude this, if there could have been supposed a greater distance any any way imaginable, whereby to have expressed the distance of God and the Creature, which should have cast them down lower than this of being less than nothing, God would have expressed it thereby: But take them barely as Creatures, and you cannot speak lower of them. Oh the infinite Height and depth of God, which Zophar speaks of, Job. 11:8. to whom the Creatures are less than Nothing.

Chap. 3.

Our Divines therefore reckon not God in point of Arithmetick, together with us; they cast not God and us, into the same Numbering. They do not say of him, that he is Unus, or One; though he be the first, and great One, and so go on to Number the rest of things: No, they suffer not Creatures to bear or sustain the repute and account of Number after him, or when he is spoken of. They say of him, that he is Unicus, the only One, that stands apart by himself out of all Arithmetick; (as his transcendent being comes not under our Logick:) which is in effect the same that God by the Prophet Isaiab speaks. Our acuter Commentators on those passages in Chapters the 3d, 4th, 5th (wherein God sets himself out alone the true God, I am Jehovah, and there is none else; there is no God besides me: I am the first, and the last: And the like to these, which you find up and down in those (Chapters) do observe, that though his dispute, or rather an over-disputing discovery of his Creatures, be pitcht for the confusion of the Idol Gods of Heathens, that yet his arguings do rise higher than simply against those Idols, their being Gods: But involves in the confutation thereof, that as Creatures, they had no Being, much less as Gods. Thus Chap. 43. 10. compared with Vers. 13, Before the day was, I am he; and therefore accordingly still mentions his Name Jehovah, his Name that assures wholly the Name of Being to him; and as of them, speaks up and down of his being the Creator, and Former of them, as meerly out of Nothing; and will you take them, and make Gods of them? Thus his Argument lies: And when in Chapt. 45. 5. (as in the conclusion of that Discourse) he speaks thus, Vers. 5, 6, 7. I am the Lord, and there is none else; there is no God besides me: I girded thee though thou hast not known me; That they may know from the rising of the Sun, and from the West, that there is none besides me: I am the Lord, and there is none else: I form the light, and Create darkness; I make peace, and Create evil: I the Lord do all these things: He manifestly points the dint of his Speech in relation to them as Creatures; and not as Gods only set up by Men. And he was the Creator of all things, who only had therefore being in himself; and so did, or made all those things: As his saying is, Vers. 7. And that therefore there was not only no God besides him, but that their Gods (as Creatures) had no being but he alone, whose Name was being, or Jehovah. As to such a sense as this, I understand the order of those words in Vers. 5. (taking in all these things that stand round about it) I am Jehovah, and none else; there is no God besides me: That the forepart of that Speech is applied to the Point of Being and Existence: I am Jehovah, that is, Being it self only, and none else. For then over and above besides, he adds, There is no God besides me; that is, no Creature [Is] no God to be sure besides him. So as their swelling words used of the Creatures to be stiled [All things] besides him, doth in reality, and effect, come but just to the same account as if you would set down a multitude of Cyphers apart by themselves, and then say of the account of them, there is a Million, or many Thousands of them; which is a vast Number in sound of words; and reacheth a long way in Figures; but yet still they are but a Million of Cyphers; and what comes that to? Even to just Nothing; because there is not so much as one real Number of their rank or kind, to set afore them. All and every Creature being Nullius Numeri, as we say, bearing no account; all of them make not so much as an Unite, an One in truth; but they are empty Shadows, appearances of Being: All, and every one of them.

See Gataker in the English Annot. on the words.

To apply all this to humble you as Creatures: Look as this false and fictitious Name of Idols their being Gods, is but an imposed, and equivocal title; whereas an Idol is really Nothing: 1 Cor. 8. 4, 5. We know that an Idol is nothing in the World, and that there is none other God but one: For though there be that are called Gods, whether in Heaven or in Earth, (as there be Gods many, and Lords many:) It is no such thing: So in like manner we may say of the Book I. Creatures, There are Creatures many, that have the title of being, the Name; yea, are stiled All things, in that following 16th Verse; yet in reality, and truth, they are Nothing; as, and afore God; and humble your selves therefore for your Idolatry, and too high valuation of your selves; All is as nothing: This Parallel of our selves with Idols, in this respect to humble us, is not mine, but the Prophet Isaiab's, Chap. 41. ult. Behold, you are as nothing, and your works are nothing: He speaks there of their Idols. They had made Gods for themselves, and his intent and meaning is (thereby to humble them) as if he had said; Lo! here the Idols you make your Gods, and give a Being to;

 such as such, are really nothing, though fictitiously, in your imaginations made your Gods: Even so your very selves, (though you assume, and arro-gate the Name of Being and Greatness to your selves) your selves are nothing, if you be compared with the Great God, whose Glory you corrupt, and turn into a lye in your setting those Creatures like your selves up for Gods: And his Speech is similar unto that of the Psalmist, They that made them, are like unto them; even so Isaiab here: They are Nothing, and you are Nothing.

OF THE CREATURES, AND THE CONDITION OF THEIR State by Creation.

BOOK II.

Of the first Estate of Men and Angels by their Creation. What were the Laws and Rights of Creation; and what was equitably due between the Creator and his Creature. Of the state of the first Man Adam in Innocence, and what were his Circumstances in that his Primitive Condition.

CHAP. I.

What was the Law of Creation on God's part: It was but what became and was worthy of the great Creator to do all for his Creatures that such a Religion required. This consisted in two things: First, To endow them with the Image of Holiness to qualify them to attain their designed End, which was to know, love, and enjoy him. Secondly, To continue his goodness and favour to them, as long as they continued in their Duty and Obedience. The Condition of both Angels and Men, by the Law of their Creation, common and equal, for substance.

MY Design in this Discourse is, in the end, To magnifie the Supercreation Grace of GOD in Election, and the Glory of Christ as our Head, and a Saviour, which was to be revealed upon our fallen Condition, though ordain- ed afore all worlds. And I judged it greatly conducive to this end, to begin next to set out the right and true measure of our state and condition, by virtue of our first Creation, as we came forth out of God's hands first, with the dues and priviledges belonging to it; and not of ours only, but of the Angels by their first Creation. By the view and compare of which, we shall be capacitated and enabled to destroy an infinite weight of that Supercreation Grace added by Election, that was ordained us, as it were, over the head of meer Natural or Creation Goodness: And we shall find, that it is not only, That we are sinful and fallen that affords matter and occasion to exalt Supernatural Grace, but even our first original and best estate that preceded it.

This first Estate I would term, upon many accounts, the Estate of pure Nature by Creation Law; and as rightly as our Divines do call the Covenant we were by Creation brought into, Fædus Naturæ, the Covenant of Nature, which is founded upon an equitable intercourse set up betwixt God the Creator, and his intelligent unfallen Creatures, by virtue of the Law of his creating them, and as by their Creation they came forth of his hands. God dealing with the Creature singly and simply, upon the terms thereof, and the Creature being bound to deal with God according to that Bond and Obligation which God's having created him in his Image, with sufficient power to stand, and having raised him up thereunto out of pure nothing. lays upon him.

And in the Substance of it, the Law was one and the same in common to us Men, and the Angels, in and by their Creation.

Now, that estate of the Angels, the Apostle Jude calls their FIRST, or rather ORIGINAL Estate, which they were endowed with from their very beginning, and was by Original Justice, their due, or their natural estate, that is, which they had from, by, or with their Creation, and by the Law thereof: which Estate being alike common to the good Angels, as well as the bad, before they left it, as the Apostle Jude says, is one part of the distinction between the Estate which the Angels, which are still good and standing, have by Election, as in Timothy, and this other part, of the original estate of Goodness, which in common they had by Creation.

And according to the true intent and import of the same distinction, I may stile this Goodness by Creation mans original Estate, and ours, and Adam's first Natural estate, in that Holiness and Righteousness, as we did come forth of God's hands. And if Adam had stood, and his Children had been begotten holy of him, (which is supposable by the Law of Creation they might have been) it might have been said of them, That they had been Holy and righteous by Nature, as truly as the Apostle doth the contrary, speaking of men now fallen, That they are Children of wrath by nature: yea, this latter is founded upon the former. Now, what estate we his Children should have had (in that supposal) by Generation, the same, and no other, Adam he had by Creation. And as of us, it would have been said, That we had that Holiness by our Creation, although we had received it by natural Generation from him; yet it would have been the same, every way, and no other, (as to the state it self) which we his Children should have had; only the way of Production should have differed, that his was by Creation, ours by birth: Yea, and it was given him by Creation, to convey it to us by birth; and in that respect it might, and should have been termed their primitive, first, original, natural Condition in him, and his Children to be begotten by him.

The first Covenant of Works, under which Adam was created, is termed by Divines, Fædus Naturæ, the Covenant of Nature, that is, of Man's Condition, which from and by his Creation, was natural to him; yet I would rather call it, The Creation Law, Jus Creationis; or of what was equitable between God, considered meerly as a Creator, on one part; and his intelligent Creatures that were endued with understanding and will, on the other, simply considered as such Creatures, whether Angels or Men. The measure of which Law, in general, lay in an equitable transaction between God and them, a congruity, dueeness, meetness, on either part.

On God's part, I would call it a dueness, remembering how Paul prohibits the word recompence as any way challengeable by any, or all the Creatures, Chap. I. Rom. 11. 35. Who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompenced unto him again? and he says it to exclude all recompence. So that this dueness imports only what it became God to do, and was worthy of him, in such or such a case; as he useth the word, Hebr. 2. 10. For it became him, &c. so as the meaning is in this only respect, That if God would please to create two such ranks of Creatures, Angels and Man, it became him to do to and for them, what was worthy of such a Relation, of a bountiful Creator, to each in their kind, not yet exceeding what that Relation of a Creator, considered simply as such, required: So as if he did exceed it, it was but what was an Overplus, as his assisting them, in causing them to stand so long as they did; otherwise God himself condescended to make an Equity the Rule of his Will in that Covenant of Works, condescending to mitigate the absolute rigidity of it, and to moderate it unto the Jews, (who clamour'd him in Ezekiel) yielding from his Cursed is every one that obeys not in every thing. Upon this he Answers the Clamours of the Jews, Ezek. 18. 17, 29. Are not my ways equal, saith he: When he offered, that if one, who had been never so great a sinner, would turn from his evil ways, and the like, he would receive him, and abundantly pardon: As on the contrary, If having been so righteous before, he begins to turn away from it, he must lose the benefit of all his former Obedience. This was fair for God to offer, and his ways therein equal. Yet God knew that this was unpracticable by them; but to convince them, he tried them by that offer; as Christ did the young man in the Gospel, when he put him upon keeping the Commandments, and there left him.

And such like Equity may be considered in Gods first founding the Covenant of Creation: 1. In what he would bestow in and by the Act of Creation it self, in them. He gave all that was due, or convenient and meet for the Natures of such Creatures, to attain their End of Happiness in a proportioned Communion with himself. And although it was free for him, whether to have created them, or not created them; yet if he resolved so to create such, his Will regulated it self by what was meet for their Natures, as such, to receive from him, and for him as a Creator to give.

In every work of God's, he observeth a dueness or becomingness according to the kind of it: So in the work of Redemption in its kind, in which he was yet at a far greater freedom, than in this of the first Creation. And in this sense the Apostle is bold to use the Phrase of what becomes God in such, or such a Sphere to do: Thus, (Hebr. 2, 10.) it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many Sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their Salvation perfect through Sufferings. Now, in the work of Creation in its kind, as in other works in their kind, God regulates himself by the measure of a dueness and becomingness between him and the Creature. And although there could be no Obligation, simply considered, in him that works all according to the Counsel of his Will, freely; yet his Will regulated it self by what that same Counsel judged most becoming him to do, as that which his Counsel judged so to be: And so in this work of Creation, God would bestow such Faculties and Powers, as the Creature it self could any way judge requisite to his performing the work of a Creature of an Intelligent Nature. Thus, in case God resolved to do such or such a thing, he would do it suitably to the matter of it, and what the Nature of the thing required; and worthy and like himself, and the Relation he takes upon him, by doing such or such a work. The truth is, He observes it as his Rule in all things, as that Text forementioned insinuates; and of all other Works, let no man be offended to say, God set himself an equitable Rule or Law in this his first and bottom work of Creation, wherein yet he was most free to have begun it, or not begun it. Thus in General.

BOOK II. For the Particular Requisites on God's part, and but so far as is now enough to my present Scope; I shall mention but two.

First, That if God would create intelligent Natures out of nothing, it became him to endow them with his own Image of Holiness, &c. whereby they might be able to know, to love, and to enjoy a Communion with him, and Happiness from himself, as their chiefest Good. Which, as it was God's bountiful gift to bestow: So the very Nature of such a Creature required it as convenient, meet, and suitable to its Nature, and without which, it had been imperfect, yea, miserable: For otherwise, those vast Faculties of Understanding and Will, had been left empty, and like an hungry Stomack (of a Gyant, suppose) continually craving, when it hath only crumbs of Food, and drops of weak Water. Nor could they otherwise have attained their main End, or arrived at their convenient Happiness, which the very Natures of them were constituted and fitted for, which can be filled with Nothing, but a Communion with God: And all Creatures, and Creature Comforts, if alone vouchsafed without an Intelligent Communion with God himself, had been but as a Drop to a Cistern. That whereas God had provided for every Sensitive, or other Faculty in Man himself, and other Creatures, a meet Object suited in Nature to them; and for Mans bodily person, all comfort, a meet help, &c. as the Woman is termed; He had left Mens Souls, and in them those noble Powers of Understanding and Will, deprived of their chief Object; they had been shut out from the Communication of the Life of God, in which their happiness lay: Which blessedness also must arise from a Natural Suitableness concreated in those Faculties; and with them, whereby they might be enabled to know, love, and delight in God. And in such a Convenient Meetness to enjoy God, must this holiness consist; as also in an inward Principle, and Divine disposition in every Faculty suited to, and agreeing with every Law God had, as a Creator Commanded; Naturally carrying, and wholly enclining them to fulfill it, which was the Law of God written in their Hearts, in the full perfection of it, and as the due perfection of them; and thereby it did become their Natural perfection by this Creation Law. And surely, if the things of the Law, are said [by Nature] to be written in Mans Heart now fallen, this is but a shadow of that full and perfect, exact Copy of the whole and Holy Law which was then Mans Nature much more. These things therefore were to intelligent Natures a Creation due; and in that respect, Natural to them, or which the Nature of them required; and it became God as a Creator to give, them when he would Create them.

2. And Secondly, on God's part, as a Creator, it was requisite to continue his favour and goodness to them, and that happy Estate he had set them in, whilst he did continue their being, whether of Adam in Paradise, or the Angels in that Paradise above, the place of their Creation, which they should enjoy, if they continued to keep their first Estate of Holiness, &c. This was also a meet and equitable due, for God, as a faithful Creator, to give, and was correspondent to this their begun happy Condition, and was all the promise that I know of, made to such obedience.

That whereas God, in the view of his own heights of Holiness and Sovereignty might, after some time and experiment, have said; I see at best you are but unprofitable Servants, and so not have regarded their low Creature-Services, as any way coming up to the immense desires and aims of his great Holiness, yet he would continue his love and favour at the same height which he prosecuted them withal at their first Creation, and so they should live in keeping his Commandments.

And this alone was of it self a great Promise, and an abundant reward, though they had never been advanced to an higher Glory or Privilege. And this was all the Promise we read of, If thou do these things, thou shalt live, namely, in doing of them: And this was their life, and yet suitably, but Creation dues, and an Equity by Creation Law. For if Providence be a continual Creation, then a Providential Law from God, and the continuation of our first

Parents, and so of us, in that first Creation life and happy Estate, whilst they continued obedient, was but an extension of that first Creation goodness out of which God first put them in that Estate; and so, but a continuation of the same Law, and but a repeating, every moment they stood, that Complacency he had at first in them, when he made them; and it was but the like, in its proportion, unto what he continues to all his other Creatures in their sphere, that keep his Ordinances to this day: And it is a dueness that in meetness and equitableness is to be dispensed to his that worketh and continueth therein, out of that Justice that is in God, as a Creator, to his unfinning Creature, continuing holy.

This Condition of Angels by the law of their Creation, and of Man, for substance, is common to them both: However Men and Angels might and do differ in degrees of Excellencies, in respect of their meer Creation Holiness even as they differ in their strength (The Excelling wherein is given to the Angels) as also in their habitation proper to each, as Jude 6. the one Created on Earth, the other in some of the Heavens; yet it is a difference but of rank or degree, such as between Nobles and Commons, in an higher and lower House. God made Man a little lower than the Angels; That is in respect of degrees so far, as that Psalms is to be understood of Adams or Mans Condition by Creation. Though it hath an higher reference unto Christ Jesus, as Man; yet still this degree of lowness in the one, and height in the other, had for the substratum of it, in either, the same Common Law of Creation Perfections, and the Rules thereof do take hold of both alike in their several ranks, and with their several degrees. I will not therefore now debate what differing excellencies each of these had proper to themselves in their several Capacities and Spheres; or the differences of the Original Condition of both these, Angels and Men, from what their now present standing in Grace, and hereafter in Glory, do afford.

This we may safely say, That the difference of their Condition was not so great, as that they should see God's face in that manner, as Christ doth. The Angels, though created in one of the Heavens, by their Creation did not so enjoy God; 'Tis Christ's sole honour to bring that first up; Who hath seen God at any time? No Man hath seen God at any time, the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him. John 1. 18. This Grace and Truth came only by Jesus Christ, Vers. 17.

The Law was the same for substance that ours. That under a Law they were made, is evident, for else there had not been sin in them that fell: But 'tis express, they did; 2 Pet. 2. 4. and sin is a transgression, of not only a Law, as Rom. 5. 13. but of the Law, as being one in Common to all Creatures, 1 John 3. 4. And every Man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure. Whosoever committeth sin, transgresseth also the Law: For sin is the transgression of the Law. *That the first Commandment Duty is the Common Law to Angels and Men, as to love God, fear God &c. This is so plain as none may deny it.

2. The third, Not to take God's Name in vain; the Devil is a Blasphemer, and so breaks this Command.

3. If there be Superiour and Inferiour Ranks of Angels, as Michael an Archangel, Thrones, Dominions, Principalities and Powers, Col. 1. 16. Then a reverence from the Inferior Orders to all their Superiours must be due; and so the fifth Command is an Obligation upon them.

4. The Sixth Command, Thou shalt not kill, binds the Angels as a Law. For Satan is a Murthurer from the beginning; which could not have been said, if that Command had not been violated by him in seeking Mans destruction.

5. The ninth Command, Thou shalt not bare false witness, reaches the Angels themselves; for the Devil, as a breaker of this Law, is A Lyar from the beginning; and Michael, in Jude 9. as obliged by this Command, Durst not bring a railing accusation against Satan.

BOOK II.

6. The Tenth, Thou shalt not Lust, has a respect to the Angels; else why does Christ charge Lust on the Devil, as his sin? John 8. 44. You are of your Father the Devil, and the Lusts of your Father you will do. What are they but Pride, Envy, Hatred, Malice, &c. And the good Angels, in Obedience to this Command have a Love to the Saints; O Daniel, greatly beloved, says Gabriel, to that Prophet, Dan. 10. 11. They have also a zeal for the Saints, and joy in their conversion, Luke 15. 7. But if they should not have the same Laws in all things, that we Men have, yet it must needs be said, that they are under very many Laws, that are given to us Men.

Yet it is enough for what I intend, that their Covenant by Creation ran upon the same terms, that ours of works does; the tenor or terms of the Law is the same: So as suppose they had not altogether the same Laws, yet they were under the same fundamental Sanction of Punishment, and Reward. Upon one sin, all their happiness was to be forfeited, as upon ours it was: Their Estate was changed by sinning, as ours also was.

The same Punishments take hold upon them, though not the same bodily, as Death, unto which the Angels are not obnoxious, for they can never dye; But what death Spirits are capable of, we, and they undergo the same: We were both alike cast off from God; we were expelled paradise; They were thrown down out of Heaven into Hell; and at the Last Day, the same Sentence shall be pronounced against both, Go you cursed into Everlasting fire, prepared for the Devil and his Angels; Matth. 25. 41. As in a State there may be different Laws, yea, variety of Priviledges to Nobles, and others in a Kingdom, and yet the fundamental Maxims for Life, Death, and Forfeiture, be the same to them all.

They had also the same Mutability, that was in our Condition, and stood upon the same ground, and terms, that we did: It was their being made out of nothing, and so meer Creatures, as well as we, that was the cause of their fall: So that we are sure, they stood as ticklishly, as we; no more Assistance in their state, and proportion than Adam in his. We are sure, that God took the Forfeiture upon one act of sin committed by the Angels that sinned; for God spared not the Angels that fell, but threw them immediately to Hell, as well as he doth us Men: Nor had they such an high way of knowing God, or the enjoyment of him; as it is the highest Heavens, that might have kept them Infallibly from sinning, for that Christ only hath brought up to behold Gods face in such a perfection of Righteousness, as to exclude all sin acted, or the possibility of it.

CHAP. II.

The Mutability of that first Estate. By its constitution, and their own weakness, both Angels and Men were liable to fall from it. God was not at all obliged as Creator, to preserve his Creatures in that first Condition effectually by his Grace. The Causes of their Mutability. To be Changeable is the Nature of a Creature, with difference from God, who only is Immutable. That the Creature being made out of Nothing, tends to a Deficiency.

THere needs no other, nor more certain proof, both of the foregone, and of those following Assertions, than the Event.

1. That these two sorts of Creatures, Angels and Men, might fall from their Original estate of perfect Holiness; for, de facto, of both sorts did fall; and the Angels that did not, were of the same frame, of the same brittle metal with the other of their Creation, and the dues thereof, were common to both: The Angels that sinned, (says Peter, Epist. 2. Chap. 2. verse 4.) The Angels that kept not their first state, but left their own habitation, says Jude, vers. 6. How much more might this befall Man, who dwells in houses of Clay? as it is argued in Job, from the stronger, the Angels, unto the weaker, Job 4. 18, 19. Behold, he put no trust in his Servants, and his Angels he charged with folly: How much less on them that dwell in houses of Clay, whose foundation is in the dust, which are crushed before the moth? And that, de facto, we are fallen, we all, by sad and woful experience, have found.

2. The second is, That no Obligation was upon God, to keep either of them from so falling, by any Law of his having created them. This, the Event, also is a sufficient demonstration of; for if there had been such an Obligation upon him, his faithfulness is such, and love unto his Creature is such; as he would then certainly have kept them: That title of Faithfulness is annexed to his being Creator, 1 Pet. 4. 19. Wherefore, let them that suffer according to the will of God, commit the keeping of their Souls to him in well-doing, as unto a faithful Creator. The Argument then, from that he did not keep them, is invincible, That he was, as a Creator, absolutely free and disengaged from keeping them (without any breach of any due unto his Creature by the Law of his Creation) and doth sufficiently confirm all that is foregone in the former Chapter, concerning that Entercourse settled betwixt God and us, by Creation: Nor would the holy God have put that high Sarcasm, or bitter, (yet just) Retortion upon man when he had sinned, which struck at the very Spirit of his sin, Man is become like one of us, which had been the very inward pith and substance of his sinning, which compared together with the Tentation [ye shall be as Gods] shews, that that was it had taken them: God, I say, would not have upbraided them with that severe Sarcasm, if he had been engaged to preserve them from sinning, and yet was wanting to do it.

3. Nor must we lay upon God, any influence of his, into either of their falls: As God is not himself tempted with evil; so, nor tempteth he his Creature unto evil, James 1. 13, 14. Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man. But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed. He carried himself in that matter precisely, according to the exact dues of Creation: He dispensed all the influence that was due thereby; and more he did not vouchsafe, meerly because as a Creator, he was not obliged thereto. And God ordered it thus, that the difference between that Creation influence and assistance, and the efficacious assistance of Grace, which he gave the Angels that stood, and meant to give to his Elect, called Ones, might be manifest from that which was by Creation due only; that, what was God's, might be given to God and his Grace; and what was the Creatures, might be given the Creature: For it is certain, that had God either inhibited the Devil from tempting, or had cast in but a grain of assistance more than by Creation was due, into man's heart and will when tempted, and prevented but a meer negligence, or not-attendency to God and his Word, (for their sin began with these at first, and they were the primum momentum of their verging) they had not sinned. If when the eyes of their minds were next door towards a wink, God had given but the least jogg, it had kept them awake. Likewise, God forbore nothing, but he was not bound to give, and it was free for him to do, or not to do. And unto this, of God's not being bound thereto, as on his part, doth Arminius himself put it. Nor had, nor could man be aforehand with God by any thing he had, or could do: For, all must be only by virtue of what he had received by Creation from God: And so, the Apostle's general Proclamation made on God's behalf unto all his Creatures, reached Adam in that estate; Who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again. The sense whereof is, That God stands free, not upon Prerogative, but Equity, a Debtor unto Man; but at a perfect liberty, To give, or not to give, what he had not compacted for. And Christ says the same, on his behalf, to him that murmured, Matth. 20. 13. I do thee no wrong: Didst not thou agree with me for a penny? And that I have paid thee.

Hoc impedimentum Deus prestare non tenebatur. Thef. de primo hominis peccato.

But, besides this Argument from the Event, the Scripture says the same, with a Behold prefaced unto it, in two places: Job 15. 5. Behold, he putteth no trust in his Saints. And, that he had put no trust in them, is directly spoken in respect unto their Mutability, and the hazard of their failing him, in their serving him, if left unto themselves. So, as we have God's judgment declared, That they were such unstable Creatures, that he had no confidence in them as such: Which, if it be understood in the Present Tense, that, Now, since the fall, he putteth no trust in his Angels that stood, yet still it relates unto what in themselves they are, and were by Nature, and would be, if God did not continue to uphold them. The same is said in Chap. 4. 18. with another Behold again, Behold, he put no trust in his Servants, and his Angels he charged with folly. Which latter is spoken as of the time past; upon an experience of the fall of some of them, that shewed the same changeableness to be incident to the rest that stood; and that if God should deal with them only according to that Law of their Creation, and leave them into the hands of their own Counsels, they would be as foolish as the rest had been.

But, the greater Task of the two, is, to Evince what this Mutability was, and what the rise of it was, in the Creature.

I begin with the later, The Rise or Ground of it.

1. This changeableness in the Creature, is the condition of the Creature as a Creature, with difference from God. Of God, it is said, James 1. 13. That God cannot be tempted with evil: And evil there, is the evil of sin, with which the Creature is tempted, and is an opposite to that goodness, which is essential to God, whereof Christ speaks, Matth. 19. 17. God only is good, and thereby differenceth God's goodness from the Creatures goodness, by declaring, That God alone is essentially good; and it riseth to such a Consistency in his Nature, and height of transcendent Perfection, that it cannot admit of the least impression, touch, or tincture of evil to stain, yea, not to discolour it; and therefore James expresseth it by this, He cannot be tempted, James 1. 13. It being a Contradiction to his Nature, as being God; as elsewhere, That he cannot lye, Titus 1. 2. and, Cannot deny himself, 2 Tim. 2. 13. Now, if these things things be said of God, as he is God; then the opposite, (a capacity of being tempted with evil) must be intended thereby of the Creature, considered in its Creatureship.

If any one say, James speaks in the words afore and after, of and unto man fallen, that is, tempted with his own lust, vers. 14. And so it is not an Argument to prove that the Creature, in its Original estate, was thus liable to Temptation with difference from God.

Answer. 1. His saying, God cannot be tempted, being a setting forth an Attribute proper unto God; therefore, however in the occasion of it, it may be an Exhortation unto men fallen, &c. yet the Maxim extends further, and is not to be narrowed unto a Comparison of God's Nature, in this respect, with corrupted Man; but in that it is made proper unto God, it must needs, in its opposition, express the difference from all Creatures as Creatures.

2. It had been short of the Glory which is due unto God, in this purity of his; yea, dishonourable to have intended it, as a comparison only between a Man fallen that hath lust in him already, that may tempt him; and the infinitely holy Nature of God, that hath no such Principle in him, as thereby to set out the Perfection of God: For, it might be said, That a Creature unfallen hath nothing in him to tempt him neither. Therefore God, his [cannot be tempted] must extend further, in full opposition to, and exclusion of, any Creature, in its best estate considered.

3. It may be said of the strongest meer Creature in its best estate, That it is liable to be tempted of its own Lust, that may arise up in him, though he have no sinful lust as yet in him. The first sin of our first Parents, was a lust inordinate, to be as Gods; Self-love grew into a tumor, when once it heard but afar off, of such a Preiement. And so of Satan; 'Tis said, that when he sinned, he sinned of his own, John 8. 44. Ye are of your Father the Devil, and the lusts of your Father ye will do: he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lye, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the Father of it. Thereby also utterly exempting God from any the least influence into his sin.

The Socinians, who hold Man's Nature in his first Creation not to have been holy, but only indifferent unto good and evil, when we urge, That Man was created after God's Image, &c. They would retort this Absurdity upon us; That then he must have been made immutably holy; for God's holiness is an immutable holiness in him; and therefore if Man had the Image of it by Creation, then he should have had it immutably.

But, we easily answer, God could not communicate to us his Essential Holiness, whereby he is differenced from the Creatures: That must be communicated only so far as it is communicable to a Creature. And all the Images that are made of a Man, do not import a communication of his Nature, but of his likeness; that is, a communication accidental, artificial, and not substantial: And so God begat his Son indeed, who is his substantial Image; but the Image of God in Creatures is not so; we had, and have but the Lineaments of his Holiness.

A Second Ground of Mutability in the Creatures actings with difference from God, and his Unchangeableness in acting, is, That God is not Compounded of a Power to act differing from himself; i. e. his Essence; but himself is the Power wherewith he acts: He is Actus purus & simplicissimus; and therefore there is nothing can fall out or come between himself and his Power in acting, to weaken or hinder him in acting, nor to cause any failure in his acting, and specially in his activity of Holiness, which is in Scripture termed himself: And therefore, whereas in one Scripture you read, he sweareth by himself; in another you find; he sweareth by his Holiness; these are all one. His Holiness also is that in him, whereby himself is his own end to himself; God's own Good and Happiness is his ultimate End, and therefore he can never but act holily, for he acts by himself, and for himself; and so cannot fail in acting; but is holy in all his ways and works, and cannot be otherwise: For all in his acting, is himself, both his Power and his End, and all; yea, and are all one and the same : But the Creature, his Power to do or act, is one thing, and himself is another : He acts not immediately by himself, but by a Power given him to act ; and which is differing from himself, an accident in him, far differing from himself : Neither is himself his own End in acting ; but God, by his Creature, is to be his End to act for, and by which he is to be moved in acting ; and God, that is his End, is without him, and far above him : And therefore himself, with all these his Powers or Faculties, may falter in acting when they come to be used and put forth ; there may some deficiency come between his Power to act and his act itself : as either, a Cessation to act, (for he is but Agens in potentia) when he ought ; a falling short, in not putting forth all its Power to the utmost ; a remisness, a slackness, may befall it ; as in a Line stretched to the utmost, a wagling way fall out. As particularly, to instance ; First, the Creatures Understanding may fall into an incogitancy unawares, or a Non-advertency, or the want of Consideration ; in the twinkling of an eye it may be diverted from a steadfast act of eying God, as its truest good. And though God gave assistance, according to the due of Creation, whereby he had Power within himself to have kept attentive to God, yet take what was to be its own doing, its act thereupon, or duty ; there a Cessation might fall out, an unattendancy, a failing in its acting. Secondly, Also his Will, whose voice and office still is, Who will shew us any good? And thereupon it is steadfastly to cleave to God ; yet upon a Buz or Hear-say, of being put into a better Condition, even as Gods, knowing good and evil ; the Will, to which it is innate to aim at its own good, (though then in subordination to God, it might) did, by as suddain deficiency and remis station make an halt in his way and tendency towards Happiness : As one that in the putting forth his hand, unto what is as high above him, as is possible for him to reach, takes hold by the way of something that is lower and short, through a finding some present ease to its motion in reaching unto what is higher ; and the lower to suit his lower and inferiour ayms : And the Will was agog upon it ; and it fell into a tumour of seeking its own excellency : And then the Will might, influence the understanding to take in the Consideration, whether there might not be something in that New proposed way of Happiness ; and the appearance of it was so represented, as the yielding to the Temptation is plainly put upon this, That the Womans Understanding was deceived ; So the Apostle in 2 Cor. 11. 3. and 1 Tim. 2. 14.

And this Defectibility may well be supposed, seeing it is granted by all, That there was that difference between the Condition of Saints and Angels now in Glory, and of the Angels and Adam in their Creation Estate ; that in that of Glory, the manifestation of God to the Understanding of the Creatures, and the Communication of his Goodness to the Will, is so super-abundantly full, filling them with all the fulness of God, that these Faculties and Powers are swallowed up into God. God his being All in All, as it chains up, and unchangeably fixeth the whole of the Soul unto him, that it cannot cease or suspend to cleave Immovably, to him, who is their Incommutable Happiness, and so they cannot Sin. And had the Angels (who yet we cannot say, were in the highest Heaven of all) so enjoyed God, they could not have sinned. But, the law and measure both for Angels and Men by Creation, was that God should be so represented to them, as to give them a power to cleave to God as their chiefest Good, as they began to do : yet, in comparison of the former, in so inferiour a way of manifestation, that as for the Understanding, in its own amplitude, and that variety of Objects it might meet with, and that might be presented unto it, a room was left for a possibility, in its Creature activity, to cast an unhappy glance towards the entertainment of a Consideration of them. And, that Concurse was such with the Will, as the Will was still left to a possibility, to cease its going out from it self up unto God, who was without it self, and to begin to affect some other Excellency proper unto it self : And as that which was suited unto that lower aim of self-love, and self-excellency. And the Evidence, that they were so left, (besides the evidence the event gives) is, That God applied legal threatnings, Thou shalt dye the death, which in the life of Glory have no place nor influence ; and all this might and did did proceed from this, That according to the necessary constitution of a Creator, they were but Agents in potentia, they were not pure Act, and so might cease to act holily, whilst yet they had the posse, the Power from God to Act holily. And by the Law of Creation, God was not obliged to give the act of Willing holily, but the Power to will; and therefore also he might Not-will, when yet he ought; and so sinn'd. The act of Willing what was holy and good was not necessary in them, and therefore it might fall out, he might not will it. And the first Sin lay not in an act of willing something else than God; nor in a positive Act of refusing God; but a not willing, a ceasing to will, as it had thitherto done. And yet, this was not Chance or Contingency, but accompanied with an Act of Will; to cease, or forbear, to will that holy good thing it did. So as the first Sinning began not with a Motion of the Will; but with a defect, or ceasing to Move; as it ought to have done: Upon which, the Understanding was, withal, deprived of its Spiritual light to guide the Will; In that Leaven was in the Will; (which, though but one Faculty, yet was the proper Seat of Sin) the whole lump was leavened, and that small speck of taint, begun in the Will, fum'd up into the Understanding, and darkned it; and that spiritual light being gone, it began to judge what the Devil proposed to be their best Happiness; and was deceived, as the Apostle says. And then the Will, having been averted from cleaving to its true and only Good, fell into a Tumour (as I said) of affecting to be as Gods; and so Sin grew irrecoverably more and more upon them. This for a second Ground of this Mutability.

3. Add unto this, that farther Ground which the Fathers, (Austin especially) have run upon, viz. That these Creatures, though excellent, were made out of meer Nothing; their Root was Nothing, and the Sap would be drawing down towards the Root, and withering, if not continually watered by Efficacious Grace. The Creature as a Creature, would be mouldring towards Nothing again, and would do it every moment, if by the word of God's Power it did not consist. And although God hath by Charter endowed them with an Immortality (which is an Immutability, as to the substance of their being; which yet is by a meer participation; God, by Essence having only Immortality, 1 Tim. 6. 16.) yet still he left this token of Mutability, That they might lose their well-being, which Sin only could dispossess them of. And Sin is but an imperect tendency, or verging or Reeling towards Nothing; only in the falling, God keeps them in substantial Being still, that they might live to find and know their frailty, &c. To Sin, and to fail that way, is not indeed, says Austin, that which we call Nothing; but, says he, It is a tendency unto Nothing: And he gives this Reason, That, by how much any thing is excellent, and falls or declines, unto what is worse; Or, by how much a thing is become worse than God made it; by so much, it is become nearer unto Nothing; and so is in its degree, a falling towards Nothing: I would express it thus, That Sin is not a falling into pure Nothing, for Entity; but a falling besides, or Side-ways, into it: And yet, into what is worse than Nothing, the perfect destruction of the Well-being of it. And, God thought meet to preserve the Substance of their Being, that those he Rejects, might have a Being continued, to feel the demerit of Sin; and in them he meant to Recover, separating, in the end, their Sin and their Persons, yet, that all might see their Original, and the Defectibility, might see an experiment of their first Nothingness, (which also they know not but by Faith) in that so many of both sorts are cast into Sin, which is, if not lower than Nothing, yet next degree unto it; and know themselves to be but Creatures, that were Nothing; and that because by the Law of God's Creation, he was not bound to have preserved them in Being, he therefore suffered the Holiness he had endowed them with, and which was Concreated with them, and yet was the Flower, the Excellency and perfection of their Being, and of more Worth, than all their Beings without it, utterly to come to Nothing.

But yet further, the Holiness which by Creation, both Angels and Men had, were but Adjuncts, Accidents, and Endowments, perfecting the well-being of them; and bestowed upon them to perfect their Nature, as noble quaqualities and dispositions use to do: But they were not Ingredients constitutive of the Natures of them, or any part or ingredient into the Essence of them; and yet natural to them, as perfectives of their Nature: And such Creatures, or rather Concreateds with their Nature, may cease and be lost, without the ceasing of the Subject it self, that is endowed with them.

In the Controversie we have with the Papists, we rightly affirm, That the Image of God in true Holiness, was natural to man at his first Creation. But then, they put this Absurdity upon our Assertion, That what is natural cannot be lost; and that what was by a Supernatural act of God's, given the Angels and us, must be Supernatural.

We answer to the first, That there were three things in Man and Angels at the first, that made up theirs and our Nature: The substance of the Soul, which was, that it was a Spirit, and the seat or Subject of these other two that follow: As, 2. The Faculties of that Soul, that are essential to it, in this sense, that they are Principia Naturæ constitutiva, Principles that do constitute the Nature of a Man, and which, if taken away, a Man ceaseth to be a Man; and such are the Understanding, and Will, and Affections in the Soul; and so in an Angel, Understanding and Will. 3. There were further such Ornaments and Dispositions in those Faculties, as were for the perfecting the Nature of the Soul, and whereby it might attain and be preserved in Happiness and Blessedness. The two first are, through God's Ordination, immutably bestowed, both in Angels and Men; so as if either the Souls of Men should cease to be spiritual Substances, or the Angels to be Spirits; or come not to have an Understanding or Will, they would cease to be either Angels or Men; and therefore these two they retain, In omni statu, in all States, both false and unfalse Angels good and bad. But, the third, which was this of Holiness, which perfected their Natures, they were and are liable to a Mutation in: For it was, and is, but a perfection in the Soul or Angel, which may Abesse vel adesse sine subjecti merito, be lost and cease without the ceasing of the Subject they belonged unto, as pretious Stones or Herbs, may lose their virtue, and yet be Stones and Herbs still.

To the second, we Answer, That though the Image of God were concreated with the Soul by a supernatural Operation of God's; that hinders not at all, that it should be a natural Perfection to man's Nature, and natural in that very respect objected, That because man came forth of God's hands by immediate Creation; even therefore it was meet and requisite, yea necessary, that those his Rational Creatures should have this Image, as an endowment which was to enter into the Composition of their Nature: He had not else had that Perfection, which to the nature of their being Intelligent Creatures, was due: And, so though it were Supernatural in the production of it by God, as the Efficient; yet natural to the Subject that was made by God, It hinders this no more, than that because the Creation of the Soul, and the Faculties of it, and the Union of it with the Body, were by a Supernatural Operation of God's, that therefore he was not naturally a Man.

But, this last Demonstration proceeds upon this, That if these Creatures themselves, are in the Substance of them as Creatures, mutable, and apt to be changed, and would sink into their Nothing, if God upheld them not by the word of his Power: (And this mutability or aptness to perish, at least is affirmed of them, with difference from Christ, as is God, Hebr. I. 10, 11, 12. And, thou Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the Earth, and the Heavens are the works of thine hands. They shall perish, but thou remainest: and they all shall wax old as doth a garment. And as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed; but thou art the same, and thy years shall not fail.) Then much more are these accidental Perfections mutable, and apt to be changed, further than as God shall put a stability into them.

CHAP. III.

Of the first state men run through, viz. that of Innocency. A brief Draught of all those several States or Conditions, through which God leadeth the Elect of Mankind. Together with a comparison of those States together.

OUR most holy, wise, and gracious God had in his everlasting Purposes (as by the Event appears) fore-ordained several Estates and Dispensations (whereof some are inferiour and subordinate one unto the other; and whereof one is utterly contrary and perfectly opposite to that Happiness he intended) which he would lead his Elect of Men through, as so many several degrees they take, yea and oppositions and hazards they are to pass through, ere the last and most Royal Crown of Glory be set upon their heads: And this he chose to do, to the end to magnifie and set forth the glory of his own Grace at last, as also to carry and lead us still on with wonder, from one unto the other: And to prepare us to entertain that consummate Happiness at last with unalterable Astonishment and Adoration. God hath not dealt thus with the Elect Angels, who have had no changes; but us, the Sons of men, he shifteth from Vessel to Vessel, and shifteth us first from one condition, then another, till he hath brought us to that utmost refinement, which may render us in the highest manner meet and capable of himself immediately. To this end he at first created us in a pure natural condition in Adam, and he the first of Mankind; to let us see our Imum or bottom, what by the Law of Creation it was, that was our due; and how remote we were by that due, from that Glory he supernaturally in Christ, the second Adam, had intended; that since Grace freely had designed us an higher, the disproportion might appear, That so what was the gift of Grace might rise up to its full glory. Then he lets us fall into sin and wrath, which utterly spoiled and defaced that first native Beauty we had by Creation, and plunged us into a contrary depth of misery. But then after that again, he gives forth the Gospel, which discovers Christ, as a Redeemer from sin and wrath, who withal brings a Life and Immortality to light, which by Faith apprehended by us, puts us into the state of Grace, and a participation of Christ; such as is suitable to the Relation of the Gospel in this Life, far excelling Adam's state.

But then last of all; and after all this God hath a Reserve, a surpassing weight of Glory to be revealed in us; and that also admits of its degrees, of which anon.

And these I thought best in this place to give the brief entire view of; not only for the pleasantness of the prospect, when in brief set together, but because it will serve as the clearest Introduction or general Preface unto all the Treatises that are to follow, which have for their particular and set Subjects these several Estates and Conditions: This discourse being to handle the State of Adam in his purest naturals, with a Comparison between him and Christ, and his State, and our State of Grace under the Gospel. In other Discourses which are to follow, I shall, 1. Treat of Mans sinful and Corrupt Estate and the misery thereof, which serves further by way of Contraries, to magnifie the Glory of God's Grace, and his Christ, as revealed in the Gospel: Then, 2ly, the State of Salvation by Christ, which the Elect are brought and raised up into, by the Grace and work of all three Persons, which is rendred to us the more illustrious, both by the immediately preceding misery which we are are delivered from, and then by its surpassingly excelling, that first and best Estate. Then 3ly, I shall discourse of the last, and best Condition of the Elect, which is the State of Glory.

That which at present I am to do, is only;

1. To give an Account of Gods Dispensations herein,
2. Shortly to enumerate the particular States, and compare them in their comely Gradations or Subordinations of each to other.

For the first, the Account hereof consists in two things.

1. That it is and hath been the manner of God, in other works of his, to Proceed by like steps and degrees. To proceed from less perfect to more perfect; and to put great distances and disproportions, yea from Contraries.

2. The Reasons of it.

The first contains two things in it.

1. That it hath been his manner in other works, which will help us to understand his proceeding in these. Thus in making this Visible World; he first began with a rude Lump, that had no form, Gen: 1. 1. neither essential nor accidental; which was actually Nothing, potentially All things; therefore call'd Earth and Waters; but in truth a Darkness and deep Confusion without form. Then he divides that Lump into four Lofts and Rooms, and puts in forms thereto to perfect that Mass, and so makes the four Elements: then he finisheth and fits up those several Lofts and Chambers with inhabitants, garnisheth the fiery Heavens with Stars; fills the Waters with Fishes, the Air with Birds, the Earth with Beasts. And of these, those that had a more perfect Kind of Life, were still Created in order, after the other more imperfect; and still the latter containing in them the perfections of the former: And then last of all, Man, the End, the Existence, the Lord of all, that hath the Excellency of Angels, Sun, Moon, and Stars in him, as Eccles. 12. 2.

And whereas God had another Man to come, The Lord from Heaven, who is God and Man, and for him to make another World, a new Heaven and a new Earth, which he intended more than this; yet his Ordination in his Decrees was to make this first World more imperfect, as the Preludium and Preparative to this new World of Christ's: Which Ordination and Method of his, the Apostle hath expressly set before us, as heedfully to be noticed by us, 1 Cor. 15. 46. where speaking of both these men, Adam's, and their Worlds, That was not first which was spiritual; that is, That man Christ, and that Estate of spiritual Perfection he brings in, was not to be first, but last: But first that which was natural, and afterwards that which is spiritual. God laid that Estate of Adam but as the first rude draught, the ground work to be filled up. God proceeded ab imperfectiori ad perfectius, by degrees from natural to spiritual. And in the framing and rearing up this new second World, he observes the same Method.

1. In the very Prophecie and fore-signifying of it aforehand, God proceeded πολυμερως, by several parcels, and cast the Revelation of him into several shapes and representations: πολυτροπως, Hebr. 1. 1. proceeding from more imperfect to what is perfect, as a Preludium thereunto.

1. He makes a Covenant with the Jews, in outward appearance little better than a Covenant of Works (whereof it bears the name;) Then brings in that of Grace, established upon better Principles and Promises. The first at best, as the best of the Jews understood it, but imperfect to the end, as Hebr. 9. ult. That they without us should not be made perfect.

And that first Covenant, how doth he deliver it with all possible state and majesty? brings down Heaven to Earth, and makes an Heaven upon a dusty Mountain in Sinai? How gloriously speaks he in Thunder? By Angels how terribly? Makes Moses, a Mediator, approach to him with his face shining, how brightly? Erects a Ministry, how richly clothed? A Tabernacle, after that a Temple, how magnificent? A Worship therein, how costly? And intends all this but as an imperfect shew. For he finds fault with this Covenant, Ministry, Worship, and all, Hebr. 8. Disannuls it for the weakness and unprofitableness of it, Hebr. 7. 9. and then brings in a better Covenant, a more excellent cellent Ministry, Hebr. 8. 6. A greater and more perfect Tabernacle, Hebr. 9. 11. And even in that Carnal way he proceeded by degrees: First there was but Altars, then a Tabernacle, then a Temple: And then again in that worldly Temple, How was there first that which was imperfect? and then comes that which was holy and more perfect. Three Courts there were. The outward Court for the People, Rev. 11. 1. less glorious: The second for the Priests, wherein was the Candlestick, and the Table, and the Shew-bread: And after the second Vail a third, The Holiest of all, Hebr. 9. 2, 3, 4, &c. which had the golden Censor, the Ark overlaid with gold, wherein was the golden Pot that had Manna, and the Cherubims of Glory: And this was eminently called, The Glory, the Type of Heaven. And then; when God came indeed to erect the new World under the Gospel, Hebr. 2. 4, 5. How still doth he proceed from the more imperfect to what is perfect; e're he hath brought us to the height of all Perfection? Into how many Heavens, one after the other, will he bring us?

1. He makes a new Creation in his Peoples hearts, a new work there: so 2 Cor. 5. 17. Old things are past away, all things are become new in a Believer's heart; and this out of a Darkness, a Chaos, 2 Cor. 4. 6.

And 2ly, Then he brings that new Creature into a new World of the Ordinances and Things revealed and fitted to this new Creator, which are deservedly call'd, The Kingdom of Heaven: Whereby a man is said to have a being lift up to Heaven, &c. as Capernaum: And all the glory of that Revelation made on Sinai, is called but Earth to this, which is truly a Heaven in comparison of it, Hebr. 12. 25, 26. yet this Heaven he will shake as he did that Earth, and remove this Heaven as he did that Earth; so Hebr. 12. 26, 27. and bring his Elect into a new Heaven. New in comparison to this now, Rev. 21. When as once again all is to become new, vers. 4, 5. And then after that new Heaven and new Earth, where Righteousness dwells; the Epistles of Paul and Peter tell us, that he will bring us into an Heaven of Heavens, so call'd, not in relation only to natural Heavens, but spiritual Heavens foregoing it, which shall be the End, the Perfection of all. And so Rom. 6. 22. is call'd τέλος, [from τελω, perficio] The End, the Perfection; even as Christ is call'd, The End of the Law, Rom. 10. 4. And as the Law made nothing perfect but Christ, so even all these foregoing Heavens are (though in themselves, some of them comparatively to others foregoing, perfect, yet) compared to this last and utmost, but imperfect, which is the End of all.

The second is, That in all these gradual Representations of his, he so orders it, that the latter shall still exceed the former, and so exceed, as the former shall hold no comparison therewith; and therefore, the more of them we can find out, the better. Thus how did the World, ordered, garnished, and adorned, exceed the Chaos, which was Darkness and Confusion? The second days work exceeded the first; the third the work of the second? And as much did the little World, Man, the Epitome of all the great World, excel all, so as Heathens stood astonished at it: But infinitely more doth Christ; the second Adam, exceed the first, 1 Cor. 15. 45, 46, 47. &c. and his World, this of Adams; and likewise the Ministration of the second Covenant, the Gospel, that of the first, the Law. That, 2 Cor. 3. 10. It had no glory in comparison of this which excelleth. And then the new Heavens; and the new Earth to come, will so exceed this Heaven, even this Kingdom of Heaven we now, or the Saints enjoy, That the former shall not be remembered, Isa. 65. 17. And as it was prophesied that the Ark and Service of the Temple, Jer. 3. 16. should be so exceeded by the Gospel, that it should be remembered no more; so will the new Heavens exceed these, that all here shall be remembered no more, nor come into mind. An expression, shewing how much the former should be excelled by the latter; even so much, that as it useth to fall out in things and objects eminently excelling, they so swallow up the mind, that all other things are not thought on, but forgotten, as if they had never been. As the glory of the Sun puts out the glory of the Moon, so shall this exceed that former, that it shall not come to mind.

BOOK II.

Now to add a true Reason why God is pleased thus in his Works to proceed in general :

1. To shew the Perfection of his Efficiency and Workmanship. It argues a weakness in an efficient to do worse, when it hath done better; but Perfection, still so to exceed, and put down the former.

2. It shews his various and manifold Wisdom, πολυτροπικὸς σοφία, or his much or mighty varying Wisdom, as Chryostome expounds that Phrase, Eph. 3. 11. His Wisdom is in it self one, but we could not see it in it self at once. Therefore he shews it by several Representations of it and himself, in several effects; and that shews Wisdom also not simply various, but much, mightily differing and excelling, to shew the vastness of his Wisdom, who could cast himself into so many forms, and frame so many several Patterns of Worlds and Conditions, not only infinitely differing from, but as much excelling each other.

And thirdly, This is a way and course he knew would take the Creature most, for unto its Capacity hath God herein applied himself. Now we find, that our Spirits are taken and led on with much more pleasure, and brought into a greater wonderment and admiration of a thing transcendently excellent, when things of less worth, yet to our apprehensions (whilst we see no better) most excellent, are presented first. So we have heard, in entertainment of great Ones, their cunning Suitors have led them into stately Rooms, where sumptuous Banquets have been prepared, and from thence carried them into other far more exceeding, to set off the latter so much the more, and make it great indeed: So it is in Masques and Shews, in which there are several Presentments involved one beyond another. And thus doth and will God entertain his Children. And what can be more to draw the Creatures into wonderment, than first to present them with such a Work, so perfect in their Apprehensions, as they know not where any thing should be added to it, to make it more perfect, or taken away, as Solomon speaks of God's Works, Eccles. 3. 14. (though haply in a further sense also;) And yet then to bring them unto another frame and building differing, infinitely exceeding the other: What is there will wrap up in more astonishments? Now, never did the Art of Man present such a prospective piece, which as you know, carries the eye through several Rooms, one beyond another, as is this which God hath made, and the World reveals unto us.

As for the second Head propounded, the Scheme of these several Estates, and the Subordination of them.

1. The Scheme of them.

1. There is the Estate of Pure Nature, wherein Adam was created, and in him we, which he and we should have enjoyed on Earth, which had an Happiness in its kind most perfect and compleat.

The second, is the Estate of Grace we are brought into here by the second Adam under the Gospel, and the Priviledges enjoyed by Faith and Hope, which if it were made up compleat, (though but within its own Sphere, without addition of glory) would afford an higher and super-excelling happiness, than that of Adam.

The third is, The Estate of Glory hereafter, in which there might haply be found out in Scripture three degrees; whereof two are but steps to the highest Throne we shall be set in.

1. That of the Souls of Men separate, till joyned to the Body, during which time, though made perfect in Grace, and with addition of Glory, yet not with that degree, which at the Resurrection Soul and Body shall receive.

2. That Estate of the Soul and Body, when first joyn'd in Christ's visible Kingdom, and the day of Judgment, which transcends that of the Souls alone.

3. That of the Soul and Body, when Christ shall have given up his Kingdom to his Father, when God shall be all in all.

All which may further be cast into this Series: That whereas God, known and enjoyed; is the supream happiness of Man in all Conditions, God hath ordained several ways; differing not only in degrees, but kind of Knowing and enjoying of him. All which the Apostle reduceth to a Dichotomy, 1 Cor. 13. 12. Either, 1. In a Glass, or in a Riddle, darkly, now in this World: Or, 2. Face to face, in that to come. The one, we may call specularis cognitio; the other, Intuitiva; The one mediate and meerly, in alio, in another thing; that other immediate, in se, as in himself, Face to face. And answerable to each of these Knowledges of him, is there an enjoyment of him by the Will, goes along therewith, to delight and rest satisfied in him: For the Understanding and the Will are commensurated and proportioned each to other, according to that known Rule, In quantum cognoscimus, in tantum amamus; in quantum amamus in tantum gaudemus: So much, or so far as we know God aright, we love him; so far as we love him, we rejoice in and are made happy by him.

This specular or mediate Knowledge of God in this World, is either, 1. Such as that, which Adam had, seeing and enjoying him in the Creatures, which was his Glass, as it was said of old, Speculum Creaturae; or enjoying him in and by the Covenant of Works, the Glass of the law, accompanied with Peace of Conscience following the doing his Will; or at the best, but seeing and enjoying him in Visions and Apparitions, as the Father of old did. Or else, 2. It is that knowledge which we have of him by Revelation in the Glass of the Gospel, this Covenant of Grace, in which the Glory of God shines forth in the face of Jesus Christ, as in a Glass, as 2 Cor. 3. ult. and Chap. 4. 6. compared. Which is accompanied often with, Peace which passeth Understanding, Joy unspeakable, and glorious, as 1 Pet. 1. and but only as in this Glass. And if we compare either this Knowledge of God in Christ, presented in this Glass, with that of Adam, his will be found to be but as in a riddle; darker and obscurer far, for the kind and way of knowing him, though for degrees, in its own kind, it was more compleat. And in like manner, the least drop of Joy of the Holy Ghost, the droppings of Heaven, which he puts into the heart, will be found more than all Adams full Springs of Peace, which arose but out of his own Conscience, which was but as a Spring on Earth, in comparison of this other. And both these ways of knowing and enjoying God, which a Believer in part here hath, I take it to be the Apostle aims at, Vers. 8. calling the one, namely that by Relation in the Gospel, Prophecying, which is the means of revealing God in Christ by the Scriptures, which are the Glass and Ordinance that present God in Christ most lively to us: The other Knowledge, namely, that obtained by the Creatures, as some have differenced these two.

But then there is a Knowledge, which is Face to face, as being more immediate after this Life; whereof I take it, there are two degrees also, whereof the one shall exceed the other. The first, is the seeing and enjoying Christ the Lord personally in glory, Face to face, and so the Godhead in him. So as still the chiefest and eminentest way of knowing and enjoying the Godhead; should be in Christ only, which I take is the chiefest way both for the Souls separate, both before and at the Resurrection, till the day of Judgment be over, when we shall see him as he is, and be made like him; which infinitely transcends our seeing God in Christ here; when Christ himself is made known but imperfectly in a Glass, in Ordinances of Grace, and is truly a seeing Face to face, namely of the Lord Christ, being compared with our way of seeing him here absent by Faith, and not by sight, as 2 Cor. 5, 6, 7, 8. Yet so as there is a second and further degree of seeing God in himself, Face to face, far more exceeding, that is, for us to see him Face to face, as Christ himself now doth; when he shall have given his Kingdom up, by which only, as by him administred, God is more eminently to be known, till the day of Judgment is over: Then shall God become All in all immediately himself; which must needs exceed all else, as God himself exceeds all these ways of revealing him.

Thus hath God ordained to bring us by steps and degrees to that Participation of himself which Creatures are capable of: And in bringing us into his immediate Presence and Conjunction, to entertain us first with lower, though all most glorious Representations of himself; even as Kings are wont to do, in admitting Embassadors into their Presence; so God admits us, 1. By Creatures and Visible Apparitions; 2. In his Son revealed absent in a Glass; Then 3ly, by his Sons own Personal Entertainment of us; Who 4ly, shall deliver us up to God, to enjoy God, as himself doth.

And as I have given a brief delineation thus of the Particulars; so I will make the like brief Comparison of them each with other.

1. If we compare the first Branch of that last Division given with the latter, how doth the latter way exceed it? For to see God, and enjoy him, but in Creatures, as Adam did, and in the Ordinances and Revelations of the Gospel, is as in a Glass, and makes it at best but as an Accidental Happiness, as comparatively Divines call it; That only, of seeing God and Christ, Face to face; as in himself, essentially, is the truest happiness. The one, is but the shadow; the other, the Substance in which true Happiness consists.

But 2ly, more particularly the distance between each of these four degrees is such, that, 1. All the knowledge which Adam had of God in the Creatures, the Law and Apparitions, was but as seeing one in his footsteps and shadow, and in types and resemblances, as all these were Seculum Speculi, as was said of old. As in like manner were these Revelations under the Law; which were but the shadow, Hebr. 10. 1. and not the Image. 2. That Knowledge by Revelation in the Glass of the Gospel, in seeing Christ therein, which is said to be the Knowledge of God in the Face of Jesus Christ, 2 Cor. 3. ult. and Chap. 4. 6. compared, as yet but as seeing the Image of one that is absent in a Glass, and so but the Representation of him in his Son, who is his Image, and that but as presented in a Glass absent, which though nearer than the other, yet how remote from the real Communication of himself!

3. That after this Life ended, till after the Day of Judgment, will be but the enjoying God more eminently in his Son, who is not absent any more, but Personally present in his Glory, That they may see my Glory, John 17. 24. Which adds infinitely to both the former, and is the seeing and enjoying the Substance of that Image of God, the Image only of which we here enjoy: It is to view face to face the brightness of God's Glory shining in Christ, of which but the glimpse or reflection we here could see.

But then 4ly, To behold that Glory as in it self, and as this his Son, that before represented it to us himself, sees it; and for God himself to be his own Presenter of himself, will infinitely yet more transcend.

And thus each of these are to what succeed them, but as perfectibilia ad perfectivum; as ground-works and foundations laid for the other still to perfect them, and swallow them up: That still, as that which is more perfect, succeeds that which was before (and in comparison thereunto, was but imperfect) is done away. And as the Knowledge of God in the Creatures is swallowed up, and vanisheth, as it were, in the Presence of God in Christ presented in the Gospel, and so indeed would Adam's certainly have done, if Christ had been propounded to him. And so doth all Old Testament knowledge of God vanish before this same, as the Shadow, as Coloss. 2. 17. or as the morning Star, as 2 Pet. 1. 19. when the Sun appears: So will, much more, this of Christ now be swallowed up, and vanish afore the enjoyment of God in Christ, in his Glory and his Kingdom. And so the Apostle tells us, That Knowledge and Prophecy shall cease and fail; and this that is but in part, shall be done away, 1 Cor. 13. And so in like manner, the same Apostle tells us, 1 Cor. 15. That the Kingdom, or Eminency of Christ himself, shall in comparison cease, and be given up to the Presence of his Father, When God shall be all in all. 1 Cor. 15. 24, 25, 26, 27, 28. Then cometh the end, when he shall have deliv- red

red up the Kingdom to God, even the Father, when he shall have put down all Rule, and all Authority, and Power. For he must reign, till he hath put all Enemies under his feet: The last Enemy that shall be destroyed is Death. For he hath put all things under his feet: but when he saith, all things are put under him, it is manifest that he is excepted, which did put all things under him. And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all.

Chap. 4.

CH A P. IV.

Containing a short View of the Happiness of Adam's Condition.

ADAM's best Estate was but a Type and Shadow of that which Christ was to bring in, and according to the Law and proportion of that Type, an excelling difference must needs be in the latter above the former.

Let us but consider the height and true elevation of his state, simply and plainly, what it was in it self, without considering it as a Shadow or Type of the state of Grace by Christ, and it will appear, how short, and low, and mean his Condition was, in comparison of what even the state of Grace, now under the Gospel, brings us into, and makes us the Subjects of.

Many things are written concerning the Image of God in Adam, both internal in Holiness and Righteousness, and in Knowledge, &c. as also external, in dominion over the works of God's hands. My scope is only so to speak of these things, as may serve to the Illustration of Christ, and our estate of Grace and Glory by him.

The blessed Condition that Adam was created in, and estated into in Paradise, is, in the general apprehensions of all men, made the Object of their Envy, and conceived to have been such, as their hearts know not how to desire a happier: And ordinarily we can still scarce think of it as lost, but with a secret kind of regret, that it did so unhappily fall out, that Adam, and we in him, should fall from it; and, like great mens Heirs, be disinherited for their Father's Treason, we use to say within our selves, O, what men should we have been, if Adam had not sinned!

To give therefore a small tast of this Happiness of Adam:

No sooner did he open his eyes, but he saw himself most happy. He had a World about him new made, and in its freshness and best hue, and furnished with all sorts of Creatures, and all of them suited to his Body, (the Epitome of them all) and to his Senses, as well inward as outward, so to estate him in the fulness of all Contentment. And he was made the Center of all the goodness that was in those Creatures; unto whom each of them, as unto their Lord, was fitted to pay a Tribute of comfort: So suited was this little and great World together. There was not a desire could arise in him, but something or other he might find, to satisfie it; nor was there a Creature, in the Universe, towards which he might not find something in himself to be well pleased in it. God having placed the World in Man's heart, as Man in the World. And for this first Man, God seated him in a Garden planted by himself, in the richest and most pleasant Soil in the World, Eden, near Babylon, as the Court and Royal Seat of the King of this great World. A Garden, of all Nature's pleasures, the most delightful, (and therefore affected so by Solomon, Eccles. 2. 5.) planted by God himself, the best Gardiner for skill that ever was, (and therefore often call'd in Ezekiel, The Garden of God) and so, furnisht with all the choicest Rarities and Glories of the whole Earth brought thither together (which in all other places were but thinly sprinkled): seated in a Soil fertile and pleasant beyond expression, and therefore called Paradise, ἡ ἑδέω, as being the Garden of Gardens. And the greatest Monarch of Assyria is compared but to one of the Trees of this Garden, as other Princes that envied him are compared to other Trees, Ezek. 3. 6, 7, 8. And then God gave him a Soul, able to search into, and so, to know the Natures of all the Creatures, (for he gave Names to them all) which (as Plato said of him who first did this) argued him to be Sapientissimus; and much more able than Solomon was he to discern of all things, and so, to see God clearly in each of them; whom then looking into his heart, he found by the Covenant of Works (as before he had tasted his favour in all the Creatures) to be his God: From whence issued an immixed peace and joy, such as fully satisfied his heart in a fellowship with him, as thus known to be his chiefest Good, joyned with a Promise of having this God to be for ever his, whilst he should thus continue to obey him. The Promise to him was, That he should live by doing: by which was meant, not only not to dye, but to live to a life made up of nothing but of comforts and contentments. His heart did live, as the Phrase is, Psal. 69. 32. And besides this, he seeing and tasting Gods love and goodness in and by all the Creatures, he was made capable of a superadded Fellowship with God, which at times he was pleased to vouchsafe him by Revelations, in Visions and Apparitions, wherein God talked with him, (as he did with the Patriarchs after him) as appeareth in his Story, Gen. 2d and 3d Chapters: By which he was refreshed and cheered, and also instructed further, than simply by God enjoyed in, and by the Creatures. And surely we have now taken the height of that his happiness.

Now this Condition of his, infinitely surpassed the best state that since the Fall ever was, or can be supposed to be on Earth. Since Sin subjected both the Creature to vanity, and Us to vexation of Spirit; there never was the like enjoyed by any Son of Man. Yea, take but the contentment he took in the Creatures, and his Pleasures must needs as much exceed these which now men have, as the Pleasures of a man, sound and in perfect health, do exceed those of a desperately sick man, who wants all relish; as we now are said to be, Eccles. 5. 17. by reason of Lusts within us, (as Solomon compares it). But besides, the Creatures now are but a Husk, as they were to the Prodigal (who was the Type of Sinners) Luke 15. whereas then, God was as the Kernel of them, and with his favour tasted in them, fill'd them with a transcendent sweetness. Neither was there then, any cross accident added to this Emptiness: No stings of Conscience to cause any sadness in the midst of mirth; no contrary Passions to allay the Pleasures then enjoyed; but all in Man was subjected unto Reason, and that unto God. He enjoyed a perfect peace and security, and a Condition so happy, that God delighted himself therein when accomplished, and kept a day of Rest in memory thereof: which Estate of his the fallen Angels did envy and malign. And Man himself could not but think this World, and his Condition in it good enough; nor knew he how any thing could be beyond it.

Now, notwithstanding all this that hath, or may be said of it, this is the Position which I shall endeavour to assert and establish:

THAT ADAMS best KNOWLEDGE and ENJOYMENT was inferior, and of a lower rank, than is that KNOWLEDGE and FELLOWSHIP with God, which WE IN CHRIST, through FAITH, do here enjoy, in that Estate of Grace which the Gospel putteth us into.

Than which, (if well established) nothing will more tend to magnifie the Grace of God in Christ; and will abundantly serve to heighten our apprehensions about Heavens Glory, when we shall consider how infinitely transcendent that happiness must needs be, which God in the End doth beyond all this, advance us unto.

Now to present mistakes, and to clear my meaning, that I be not misunderstood in casting Adams Condition thus low, I Premise these two Cautions.

Chap. 3.

1. My meaning is not, as if his Condition did not then afford him a more sensible, constant felicity, and a more actual quiet ease and contentment, than a Believers in any constant way doth, now under the Estate of Grace; Which falls out so to them, because their Happiness is disadvantaged by two things (whatever else there may be) by which his was not. As,

1. From the annoyance of outward Afflictions from Men and the Creatures, and the Chastisements from God for Sin: In which respect, our Condition now is rendred more miserable than other Mens, and much more than Adam's, who had a fulness of contentment in God, and all the Creatures, and a perfect freedom from all miseries whatever.

2. In that, even that fellowship a Believer hath with God and Christ, (which should counterpoize these outward miseries,) is for the degrees of it, so imperfect, and allayed with the contrary admixture of ignorance, unbelief, guilt, and distress, and so often interrupted by these, that it cannot be supposed alwaies to bring in that full and constant happiness, and the enjoyment of contentment, that Adam's Fellowship with God did; which was sincere, without any such admixture, or privative imperfection, and was ordained to rise to a full perfection in its own Sphere, and was ever constant and uninterrupted, whilst he Sinned not: God not having ordained the State of Grace to give us that quietness, and security, and contentment, in a constant way here, hath left it on purpose thus imperfect, that so we might rather breath after that blifs to come, whereof this is to be but the tast and earnest.

Yet so, as, (2.) If the way and manner of Adam's knowing and enjoying God (though in its kind compleat) be compared with the way and manner of our knowing and enjoying God, thus imperfect; this of ours is unspeakably more divine, heavenly, glorious, and surpassing; and his more low, and Earthly.

So that now, would we make a supposition (as for this purpose in hand we may) That a Believers knowledge and enjoyment of God, were but compleated and filled up, though but within its own Sphere, without the addition of Glory and the Beatifical Vision of God; (so it be, without this mixture of Sin and Miseries, which are the Punishment of Sin;) and it would render us infinitely more happy, and more repleat with glorious contentment, than ever entred into Adam's heart; and would make this Estate of Grace below, a Heaven, in comparison of his Paradise.

CHAP. V.

The Image of God in Adam, how it was Natural, how Explained, and how Faith is Supernatural. That Knowledge of God Natural, which is due and fit for a Reasonable Creature to have, and which he acquires by the exercise of his Rational Faculties. That Knowledge Supernatural which goes beyond what Man, by the right of his Creation was to have. Adam's Knowledge of God was in a Natural way, though it sanctified him, and was joyned with Holiness.

NOW to state the true difference, and give the true disproportion between these two Estates, I must explain that known Distinction (so much used of all sides, both School-men and our own Divines) of Natural Righteousness and Supernatural Grace; or the Knowing and Enjoying God in a way Natural to Man, and tending to a Natural Happiness in God, and the knowledge of, and fellowship with God in a way Supernatural or above Nature, which tends to a Supernatural Happiness to be had in him.

Now when it is said, That there is a Natural way of knowing God; the meaning is not, of that Natural knowledge in Corrupt Nature, which Heathens have of God: But it hath reference to the pure Nature of Man in Adam uncorrupted; whereof that natural light left even in corrupt Nature, is but the Shadow. Which shews, that there was such a kind of knowledge of God in Adam, in an holy and perfect way: which Knowledge of his the Schoolmen call Adam's Theologia Naturalis, his Natural Divinity and Knowledge.

And (oppositely) a Supernatural knowing God, is not so called in respect of corrupt Nature, as being Supernatural to it; but in respect to pure Nature, as being above even the Natural way thereof.

Now the most radical and exact difference between these two, that I can search out, lies in these two things.

1. That way of knowing God in pure Nature, is, so far called Natural, as it may be supposed a Natural Due, meet and requisite to be in Man, by the Law of Nature, if God would at all make such a Creature, endued with Reason and Understanding: For if God meant to make two such Faculties, as are our Wills and Understandings, in their Nature and Capacities so unlimited, the Law of Nature required, that God himself should become the Object of them, and so to give Man a Power to know and delight in him; for otherwise it had been to make those Faculties in that vastness, in vain, and without their due end, seeing they could not rest, or be satisfied with all the particular truth and goodness in the Creatures, (as the Senses can,) they being vaster and more general Faculties: And therefore in a way that was due to the Nature of Man: If God would make him reasonable, God was to be both known and enjoyed by Man; so, as to satisfy both his Understanding and Will, and thereby to make him happy. And a Happiness in God, so far proportioned thus to the Nature of Man, is called Natural Happiness.

And so (oppositely) that which was vouchsafed to Man, over and above this Natural Due, and supra exigentiam Creaturæ, more than it was simply meet for God to give him, upon, and with his Creating him Reasonable, That (I say) is Supernatural, and is therefore called Grace: As being a free Gift, over and above that which was necessarily due to such a Creature.

Chap. 5.

Now for the present, to clear this in General, by an Instance; for God to have for ever confirmed Man, whom he thus made, in that goodness, and to have held him so to himself, that he should not Sin or fall, this had been a Supernatural Grace; because it is more than is due to any Creature, as Reasonable: For as it is a Creature, it is defectible, and (and may fail,) and it is Natural to the Creature of it self so to be; God alone being without shadow of turning: And therefore, though it was Mans due (if God would make him Reasonable) for God himself to become his Happiness; Yet to keep him from failing, was above the Due that the Creature, as a Creature, could challenge: Yea rather, it might become God to leave the Creature, to shew it self to be but a Creature, that would Fall.

The second Difference is, that That Knowledge and Enjoyment of God was Natural, which was suited, fitted, and proportioned to the Natural way of Man in his knowledge of things. So as, that light that enabled him to know God, was suited and made apt to close with the Natural way and his Understanding, only it did withal sanctifie it.

But that knowledge (oppositely) is Supernatural, which is by a light above the way of Nature, and the way of Mans Understanding things, as the Light of our Faith is.

Now then, to bring down this Distinction unto the thing in hand: I conceive that the ordinary way of Adam's knowing and enjoying God lay, (if not wholly, yet) for the most part, within the Sphere and compass of a Natural way; that is, so far as was simply due to a Creature reasonable, and was such as was also suited to the Natural way of Man's Understanding and Knowledge, though withal, sanctifying of him. And accordingly, the Happiness thence arising, was (comparatively) but a Natural kind of Happiness; so much as was due to the satisfying of Man's Understanding and Will in God, in their Natural Desires and Appetites, so far as might become their Object in such a Natural way.

For the clearing of which,

1. You know that the Image of God, which consisted in Knowledge and Holiness, wherein Man was at first created, is by our Divines (in opposition to the Romanists) argued to have been Natural to him, than in that state considered: Natural; not that it simply flowed from the Principles of Nature, (it being from God, who adorned Man's Nature with it); but Natural, in this respect, that it was a requisite and due, even in the order of Nature, that Man should be created with it: And so, as you could not suppose him created by God reasonable, but he must withal know God as his chiefest Good, and love God above all, and in that knowledge and love of him be happy. And this was the Law of Nature in his Creation; unto which, if he had not been framed, he had not had that Natural goodness in his Kind, which other Creatures had in their Kind. And such was the Image of God wherein he was created.

This Point I will not now dispute, but may well take for granted, it being Fundamental to all the Protestant Opinions about Original Sin, &c. wherein we differ from the Papists.

And 2ly, If thus the Image of God was Natural to Adam, then was it also such as was suited to that way of Man's Knowledge and Desires, running along therewith in the same Chanel and way that Man's Nature was to take, in knowing of other things: For otherwise, so far as it had been carried above its own way, it had been Supernatural.

Now then, let us consider what is the Natural way of Man's knowing things, and so, of his knowing God. The way and progress of Man's Knowledge Naturally lieth thus:

In having at first a glimmering Light, and common, yet obscure Principles and Glimpses of the Notions of things sown in the Mind by Nature; which then by observation and laying things together, and so gathering one thing from

from another, the Mind improveth and enlargeth, till it arife to a particular, clear, distinct, and perfect Knowledge of those things which it seeks to know. This is the Natural way of Man's Understanding in both Estates, both of Innocent, and Corrupt Nature; and that, in all things that are known by him in either of these Estates wherein common Principles (as that the Whole is greater than its Parts, &c.) νοῖναι ἔννοια (as the Grecians call them) hints, glimpses, (as I call them) (many of which are even in the Minds of Children, and as it were connate with them) these (I say) are as the Seed sown, and Reason and Observation are as the Tillage and Watering of them; and a full Knowledge arising from both, is as the Crop or Harvest that springs from both, and is reaped by us.

Now when God stamp't his Image upon the Understanding of Man, that thereby he might know God himself, and so enjoy him; he so framed it, as that it might suit with this Natural way of Man's proceeding in his Knowledge, in other things: So as the Mind of Man might proceed its own way in the Knowledge of God himself, and walk therein after the Rule of Nature. And unto that end God, in the instant of his Creation, did sow in his Mind holy and sanctifying Notions and Principles, both concerning his own Nature, what a God he was, and also concerning his Will; (even as he did the like common Notions of the Knowledge of other things). Which Principles were by rectified Reason to be improved, enlarged, and confirmed, made clear and illustrious, out of his Observations from the Creatures and the Works of Providence, as also from the Covenant of Works, till it arife to a full, clear, and distinct Knowledge of God, whom, as thus known, he should have enjoyed and delighted in; even as now we see Man's Mind hath the Principles of other Knowledge in it, which Observation and Reason do improve. And thus, as he was to till the Garden of Eden, so was he to till and manure his own Mind.

Two things it then concerned Man to know of God:

1. The Nature and Attributes of God; what a God he was; how Wise, Powerful, Eternal, &c.

2. The Will and Mind of God towards Man; both what God would have him do, and what God was, and would be to him, (even his God) if he did his Will.

And of both these he had the Knowledge through Natural infused Principles, which sanctified his whole Man then, as the Knowledge of Christ by Faith doth our whole Man now.

1. He had inbred, obscure Notions of the Attributes of God; which yet were not so full and distinct, but that from the Creatures and Works of God, he was to enlarge and confirm his Knowledge of them; and out of all laid together, to make up a perfect Knowledge of God, and of all his Attributes: For the invisible things of him are clearly seen from the Creation of the World, Rom. 1. 20. And if thus to be seen by Heathens (as the Apostle there argues) then much more by Adam, for whom they were ordained. Those holy Principles or Glimpses of the Knowledge of God in him, were like Letters written with the juice of Lemmons, or the like, which when they are held to the Fire, do become legible and apparent: So these, whom he came once to view the Creatures, presented God clearly to him. The Heavens declare the Glory of God, &c. (says the Psalmist, Psal. 19. 1.) Præsentemque refert qualibet herba Deum, (says the Poet). Adam's Reason was able, through the light of those Principles sown, to take God up as the Cause, from these Effects, and so to attain a perfect Knowledge of him: (perfect, that is, in its kind, and in that sense compleat).

2. He had in like manner the Principles of God's whole Mind and Will sown in his heart; even the Seeds of all that Moral Law which we find in the Scriptures, Adam had then sown in him in the utmost Spirituality thereof; the Notions of it grew up Naturally in his heart. So as, upon all Occasions, when he was to practise any part of it, he might come fully to know what he was to do; and it needed not to be revealed, or he to receive it by Faith. But the whole Law was to him even A Law of Nature written in his heart, Naturally known to him by common Dictates inbred in him. And thus in like manner was that Promise known to him, That by DOING he should live, together with that Threatning, that by Transgression of the Law, or any part of it, he should Dye the death: These were known to him by Principles written in his heart, though further confirmed to him by two Sacraments, The Tree of Life, and of the Knowledge of good and evil, even as his other Notions of God were helpt and enlarged by the Works of God: Yet so, as the Knowledge of this Covenant, and of the Promise and Threatning annexed to it was Natural, though it were strengthened and enlarged by those Two Sacraments.

Chap. 5.

And as an Evidence to us, that this was the Natural Primitive way of Mans knowing God in the Estate of Innocency, God hath put into Corrupt Nature a shadow hereof, and an imperfect Counterfeit of it in all Mankind, to remain as a Witness what an one his Image in Man at first was, and how stamped on him. He hath (I say) left some Instances, Prints, and Footsteps of either kind of Knowledge (above-mentioned) still in us; both concerning the Nature of God, and concerning his Will, (as we find them, the one, in the first to the Romans, and the other in the second.)

1. There are still in us some rude Notions of a God; which the Apostle shews the Heathens to have had, (Rom. 1.) which he calls τὸ γνωσθὲν τῷ θεῷ; Verse 19. That which might be known of God; that is, whereby they might have seen (as some of them did) the invisible things (or Attributes) of God; Verse 20.

And, 2ly, there are still like Notions and engrafted Principles concerning some parts of the Will and Law of God, written in our Hearts: So Rom. 2. 15. They have the work of the Law written in their hearts: And so, are a Law to themselves, (as is in the foregoing Verse;) And have also some glimmering of the Threatning, and so (by consequence) of the Promise, if they walk according to it: For Verse ult. of Chap. 1. They are said to know the Judgment of God, (thus by instinct) that they who commit such things are worthy of Death; and (by the Rule of Contraries) that they who obey the Law, are worthy of Life: And therefore their thoughts do as well excuse, in hope of Life; as accuse, in respect of Condemnation; (as you have it Verse 15.)

Now these common Principles engrafted, some Divines call the Reliques of that former Image; thinking them to be the same for substance, with those more perfect ones which were in Adam; as the Sparks of bigger Fire; or as the Ruins of an House razed and disordered, which for the Matter are the same that at first.

But I shall shew elsewhere, that these are rather wholly renewed, and again put into us by Christ, who lightneth (with this light, more or less,) every Man that comes into the World; as it is in John 1. 9. and so that they do in reality differ from those in Adam, of which we have spoken. For those Principles of the Knowledge of God, and of his Law, written in Adam's heart, and likewise the improvement of them by Reason, &c. were all holy in themselves and Spiritual, and made his heart holy, and Sanctified him. For the most Spiritual part of the Law, was no otherwise known to him, than by being thus written in his heart by Natural Principles, (as the rest also was,) and not by Faith, as in us it is: And so were as Natural then to him, as Moral Principles are now in Heathens. And thus to love God above all, to believe on him, &c. was to Adam but the Dictate of pure Nature, by a way of Common

BOOK II.

Principles, which met with answerable holy Dispositions which accompanied these Dictates in this Will and Affections: All which together made up true Holiness and Righteousness in a Natural way. And in like manner, those Notions which he had of God, and of his Attributes, by Nature, and that acquired Knowledge which was to rise out of them by observation of Gods Works, were all holy and sanctifying. Why, else are the Gentiles blamed for that, knowing God in a Natural way, even from his Works, they glorified not God as God, (Rom. 1.) and for that, they knowing the Law, walked not according to it; but because the knowledge of both these which Adam once had, and they in him, and which he should have acquired, enabled him thus to love God above all, and to glorify God as God? And on purpose did God put this imperfect Natural Knowledge into corrupt Nature, to shew us what was the way of knowing and glorifying God, One in Nature, Pure and Innocent. And this is the first Demonstration of it.

A second Demonstration, that the way of Adam's Knowledge was thus Natural, and by the light of common infused Principles, and by Observation of Gods Works to be improved, may be taken from the use and end of the Sabbath, which God himself sanctified, and upon it rested, to contemplate his Works of Creation; and this, to be as an Example unto Adam, how his mind upon this Day was to be taken up, even in the Contemplation of the Works of God. And that that was the Principle Duty of the Sabbath, under the Covenant of Works, appears, by Psal. 92.

And therefore, thirdly, the best of Adam's Condition (for of his Condition when first Created, the Apostle, 1 Cor. 15. 45. quotes that Speech in Genesis [The first Man Adam was made a living Soul]) is called Animal, and Natural, in the 46th Verse of the aforesaid 15th, to the Corinthians; but that State unto which Christ brings us, is there called Spiritual, or supernatural. Both the Condition of our Souls here, and of our Bodies and Souls hereafter, is Spiritual, and Supernatural. And such is, Christ whole Image; whereas Adam's was but Natural.

CHAP.

CHAP. VI.

That the Covenant of Works, the Justification of Adam by that Covenant, and the Reward of his Obedience, were all Natural. And that by Covenant he should not have gone to Heaven.

AS the way of his Knowing God, and the Image of God in him, were thus Natural, and no higher than was due unto Nature, and suited unto Man as Man; so were all things else which any way concerned him; they were of the same Elevation also, and reached no higher than the Sphere of Nature (in the Sense explained, namely) they were such as were due unto Man's Nature, or, were founded upon the Law of Nature.

For Instance;

1. The Covenant he stood under, was but Fœdus Naturæ, the Covenant of Nature; and such as for the Conditions of it, was due unto such a Creature, and such as it became the Creator to make with him, if he at all made him. And therefore the Foundation of that Covenant was but the Title of Creation, and the Primitive Integrity in which God first made Man; and there was nothing at all Supernatural in it.

2. The Righteousness whereby he was Justified, was no other than that Natural Righteousness in which he was created, and which was conserved and preserved by continuing to act holily, and by doing good according to the Principles of Holiness at first implanted in him. And so it was but such a Justification as was a Natural due to the Creature so obeying, that God should pronounce him just upon it: For it was but God's giving him such an approbation, that he both was, and did continue Good in his kind; as he pronounced of all the other Creatures in their kind, Gen. 2. ult. when God saw, that they were all good. Then likewise he viewed Adam, and pronounced him Good also in Holiness and Righteousness, which was the proper Goodness of his Creation. So that this approbation of him was but Natural, and according to a Rule of Nature common to other Creatures, and so a Due. Which may be the meaning of that place, in Rom. 4. 4. where the Apostle speaking of the difference between the Justification under the Covenant of Works, and that under Grace; he says the one is κατὰ τὸ ὀφείλημα, of Debt, the other κατὰ χάριν, meerly of free Grace. It is evident that he intends to affirm, That by the first Covenant of Works, the Reward was in a just sense due (of Debt) unto the Creature, and that, from God: whereas this New Covenant is of Grace. Now how is that other said to be of Debt? Not that God can owe any thing, or be obliged unto his Creature for any thing received from it: Nor is it to be understood, as if the Holiness that Adam had, was not from God's gift, as well as ours under the new Covenant is: But because, in a way of Natural Justice, or rather comeliness and dueness, such as is by the Law of Creation to be between a just Creator and an holy Creature, there is an approbation due unto him from God whilst that Creature obeys him, and that, as a Debitum Naturale, a Debt of Nature, and not a Debt of Retribution in a Mercenary way: Who hath given unto him, and it shall be recompensed again? Rom. 11. 35. (as the Apostle speaks).

3. Answerably, the Reward, the promised Life and Happiness that he should have had, for doing and obeying, was but the continuance of the same happy Life which he enjoyed in Paradise, together with Gods favour towards him. Which continuance in Happiness was Natural to him; even as our Divines say that Mortality was; namely in this Sense, That it was a Natural Due unto him, whilst he should keep from Sin, for God to preserve him in that State wherein at first he stood; and this Preservation of him in that State, and in the favour of God, was the Life promised, when God said, Do this, and thou shalt [Live;] and not the translating him, in the end, unto that Spiritual Life in Heaven, which the Angels have, and which the Saints shall have. And for this my Reasons are.

1. Because Christ in 1 Cor. 15. 47, 48. is called the Heavenly Man, and the Lord from Heaven; and that, in opposition to Adam, when at the best, whom the Apostle calls but an Earthly Man. And this difference in their Condition he there evidently mentions to shew, that Christ was the first and only Authour of that Heavenly Life which the Saints in Heaven do enjoy, and he himself coming from Heaven, he carries us thither. But on the contrary, Adam, as he was of Earth, so he was but an Earthly Man; (so Verse 47.) and his Happiness should have reacht no higher. The place forecited expressly sets the Bounds between what the one Adam should, and the other doth convey unto his Posterity. Yea, and the Apostle doth put our carrying to Heaven (as he there argues it) not so much upon the merit of Christ's Death, as upon his being the Lord from Heaven;] because Heaven was his Natural Due, and he descended from his Right, when he came down upon Earth: And so, because he was thus from Heaven, therefore he is now gone thither himself, as unto his Natural Place, and advanceth us up thither also: Whereas Adam was but a Man from the Earth; and therefore could never have come to Heaven. And that Place, John 3. 13. doth further back this Argument; No Man hath ascended up to Heaven, but he that came down from Heaven, even the Son of Man who is in Heaven. Christ there speaks of his revealing the Mysteries of Heaven; which no Man ever could do, because no Man had ascended up to Heaven, but himself, who came down from Heaven, and now is in Heaven; and this, as Son of Man. Now he is said to be in Heaven, through the communication of Properties and Priviledges of the Son of God; and to come down from Heaven, because his Due was to have been Incarnate there. And he expressly says, that [No Man] ascends up thither, except he who came down from thence, (and others by vertue of him.) And so that Text evidently holds forth this as the Reason why none went up thither, because none came down from thence. Which Reason makes against Adam, as well as against any Son of his now in Corrupt Estate: For he came not from Heaven; that was not his Natural Place; but he was of the Earth, and therefore but Earthly, 1 Cor. 15. 48. And if no Man but he, who come down from Heaven, was able to know the Mysteries of Heaven (for that is the Ascension there meant;) then much less to enjoy the Glory of Heaven. And therefore, Our going to Heaven is put upon his Ascension, as the fruit of it, John 14. 2, 3. [I go to prepare a Place for you] though it were prepared from the Foundation of the World; God having made Heaven perfect the first Day, and reserved it for his Elect in Christ.

2. That Paradise that Adam enjoyed, was but the Type of the Paradise above, and his Sabbath a Type of Heaven, as himself was of Christ. And therefore he was not to have entred into the Heavenly Paradise, except by this Second Adam Christ, whose Paradise alone it was. So that, take away the Second Adam that was to come, and there had been no Second Paradise for Adam, to come into, which that Paradise of his was the Type of. Thus Luke 23. 43. Christ foundeth the Thief's going to Paradise, upon his own going thither; This day (says he) shalt thou be with me in Paradise [With me,] that is, in my right. Even as also we are said to sit together with him in Heavenly Places, Ephes. 2. [with him] namely, as Our Head. And the aforesaid Thief answerably speaking of Heaven, says; Remember me when thou comest into [thy Kingdom;] and Christ in his Answer unto him, owns it as his; only he calls it Paradise; For this is Christs Paradise, as the other was Adam's. And therefore when Christ was first inaugurated into his Office, and his Father himself from Heaven first Preached him unto Men, saying, This is my Son, hear him; then did the Heavens first open, and not till then, for Men by hearing and obeying him, to come thither.

3. I observe, that the Moral Law (which was the Law of Nature) makes mention of no such Promise, as of Going to Heaven: It speaks no such Language; but only, Do this, and thou shalt [Live;] that is, Live as thou doest, in Gods favour; but yet still as on Earth enjoyed. And that is the reason why so little mention is made of Heaven in the Old Testament; and but only when the Gospel is promulgated, in that Old Testament; never when the pure Law of Nature is taught. And therefore Christ in the 16th Psal. ult. Verses, speaks of Heaven as being the purchase of his Death, and as bestowed only by his Righteousness, not that of the Law, Psal. 16. 10, 11. For thou wilt not leave my Soul in Hell; neither wilt thou suffer thine holy One to see corruption. Thou wilt shew me the path of Life, in thy presence is fulness of joy, at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore. And therefore, Luke 18. 18. when a certain Ruler asked our Saviour, What he should do to inherit Eternal Life? says Christ, thou knowest the Commandments, &c. and his replying, All these have I kept; yet (says Christ) thou lackest one thing; Sell all that thou hast, and follow me, and thou shalt have Treasure in Heaven. Concerning which Place, observe,

1. That it may be, here is a distinction intimated, between Treasure in Heaven, and Eternal Life: And that right to Treasure in Heaven comes by following Christ; but a Life Eternal, that is, a Living for ever in Gods favour, is promised to keeping the Commandments: And this Life is here ipoken of as a thing differing from Heaven.

2. If the Ruler did here, in his Question intend Heaven, in that Phrase [Eternal Life :] yet it may be observed out of Matthew, 19. 17. that Christ diminisheth it yet more in his Answer there, if thou wilt enter into [Life] (says he,) keep the Commandments; that is, into a State of Life; Christ in that Speech dealing with him upon his own Principles, who thought by the Commandments to Live. Yet he says not, Thou shalt enter into Eternal Life (if by that Phrase Heaven should be meant) but into Life: For do this, and thou shalt [Live:] was the Tenour of the Covenant of Works. And the commandment is ordained for [Life,] saith the Apostle, Rom. 7. 10.

3. Or else if the Ruler in his Question should by [Eternal Life] mean Heaven: Christ Answers him, Though thou hast kept all the Commandments, yet thou art to sell all, and follow me, or else thou canst not have Treasure in Heaven.

Reason 4. This accords with the like Law of Nature towards all the Creatures besides; who by observing their Laws, obtain not a higher Station than they were Created in; only thereby they keep their own. The Moon by all the constancy of her motion, attains not to the glory of the Sun. Nor should Man by the Moral Law (which was to him but the Law of Nature) have attained the Condition of the Angels, had he fully complied with it; as neither should the Angels have attained a higher Condition than their own, though they had been exact Ministers of Gods will according to the Law of their Creation. The Fall of whom is expressed by their not keeping their first Estate, but leaving their own Habitation, Jude. 6. and for affecting an higher Estate, they lost all.

Yea 5ly, I think that Adam's Covenant, and the Obedience unto it, was not able to do so much as confirm him, and secure him in that Condition he was created in; so far was it from being able to have transplanted him into Heaven. For,

1. I know no Promise for it, that after such a time, and so long Obedience performed, he should stand perpetually. And without such a Promise, we have no warrant so to think, or judge of it.

And 2ly, Surely, a Creature being defectible, the Covenant of Nature with that Creature (which proceedeth according to its due) and the Obedience of that Creature could never have procured indefectibility; for that must be of Grace: And he was more than a Creature that did that for Elect Angels and Men, even Christ God-man.

And if Men will say, That the Elect Men in Christ (and so Adam among the rest) should in the end have been translated to Heaven by Christ, although Man had never fallen; I shall not gainsay it: But then, it is by anothers Right and Covenant, and would have required a Supernatural Grace first wrought in them, to have owned and taken Christ for their Head.

And if it be Objected, That Hell, which the Devils are in, was the Reward of the Disobedience of that Covenant of Works; and therefore oppositely, the Heavens, where the Angels are, should be the Reward of the Obedience of the same Covenant,

The Answer is ready, (even That which we give the Papists in the like case, in the point of Merit; who argued, that because Sin deserves Hell, Grace therefore should merit Heaven) That there is not a like proportion between the sin of the Creature, which is an undue Act against the great God, and the grace of the Creature, which is a due Act from the Creature unto God; and so, that Grace deserveth not well, like as Sin doth ill. The [wages] of sin is death; but the [gift] of God is eternal Life, through Jesus Christ our Lord, Rom. 6. ult.

And if it be askt, What Reward should Adam then have had, if he had stood? I Answer; Much every way. As namely, That blessed Life in Paradise, which God planted for him; Communion with God in a Natural way, through the Creatures, and by the Light of the Law of Nature; frequent Apparitions of God, and Communications with him, (of which I am yet to speak); and also Immortality in that his state of Blessedness; which Immortality arose not out of the inward Constitution of his Body, which still was dependent on God's preservation and protection. And further, In his Conscience he should have had a Perswasion of God's favour, through Obedience, which was his Life. His heart should have lived in the sense of Gods Love; so as, indeed, much fruit he should have had in Holiness; but still, not the end, everlasting Life, namely, Heaven; which is not ex debito, is not due to Nature under the Covenant of Works. Heaven is the gift of God through Jesus Christ, Rom. 6. ult. and is the sole fruit of Election. And therefore the voice at the great Day will be, Come ye blessed of my Father.

But it may haply be Objected, That the Beatifical Vision being the highest perfection of Bliss, and the Understanding of Man being of capacity for it; the Mind therefore would have desired it, and not have been satisfied without it; and wanting such a satisfaction, it had consequently been not fully blessed.

I Answer, 1. That 'tis true, that Adam was capable of that Bliss, (for so are Sinners); but yet, by a way above his Sphere; his Body and Soul must first have been changed: For his flesh and blood could not have born the glory of it; and therefore in that state he was in, he could not have desired it, as being a Condition that would destroy him; even as for the same Reason the Eye hath no desire to look upon the Sun, it being excellens sensibile, such a transcendent Object, that it does destruere sensum, it destroys the sight.

2. If in that state he stood, he was not ordained to it, though it was a higher perfection, and so, desirable; yet it had been an unlawful and an inordinate desire in him, if ever he had put it forth: Even as that ambition of his was, to be as God: And as that of the Angels that fell, was, when they affected and aspired to a higher station than God had set them in. Had Adam desired this kind of Happiness, he had gone out of his Rank, and sat quite beside the Cushion. And what Angel, or Saint in Heaven dares desire the Hypostatical Union (the most transcendent of all Perfections), even to be joyned to the Godhead, as the Manhood of Christ was? And yet they are capable of it (say some). Those things which we know by God's Ordinance to be impossible, we are not to affect; nor do we desire them, when we conceive they are such. Who among the crowd of common People, has any vehement desire to be a King, when he looks upon himself, as one so inferiour to, and far off from such a state?

3. Neither had he been miserable, or his Blessedness at all lessened by the want of it. He had not been in statu violento, had he not had it; but in Naturali, in his Natural Condition, wherein he had all things suited to his Natural Desire. He had rested as a Stone in its Center, which desires not to go upward. His state had been perfect; and though not so absolutely perfect as theirs in Heaven, yet in its own Sphere it had been such. His Happiness had been suitable to his Condition on Earth, as ours shall be to the Heavenly Condition of our Souls and Bodies in Heaven. He had been perfect, Perfectione competenti, though not absoluta; with a Perfection suitable and fit for him, though not with a Perfection transcendent and absolute. And as a higher degree of Glory lessens not the Blessedness of any Saint inferiour, in Heaven itself (for He is full): So, nor would, nor ought this higher Order of Blessedness have at all diminished that competent Happiness which he enjoyed; for it was full unto him, whilst in that Earthly state. So that, (to conclude) as Adam's Covenant was Fœdus Naturæ; so his Happiness should have been a perfect contentment in God, enjoyed per modum naturæ; not in God himself immediately: Neither should he have tasted this Heavenly Contentment by Faith (which is a prelibation of Heaven, and of its Beatifical Vision); but only in effects. The Creatures should have revealed God unto him, and been as Testimonies of his Favour; which he should have apprehended as justifying and approving him in a Covenant of Works; which apprehension would have wrought peace of Conscience, joy, and security therein, through well-doing, so far as the perswasion of God's love, which Conscience and his own Spirit beget in him, (which was his Comforter) could work. And this Love apprehended was but hypothetical, and in a way of common Providence, namely, whilst he should continue in his good behaviour. The Creator and Author of Nature in that relation loving him, as being made righteous by him; he had not an assurance of a peculiar, unchangeable, and everlasting love, without Its and Ands; he had not the taste and earnest of Heaven by Faith Supernatural; which is that Heavenly Gift that gives a Taste of what it is to enjoy God in himself, which Adam did not: Neither had he the Testimony of the Spirit working in him joy unspeakable and glorious, in the hope of Heaven.

CHAP. VII.

Whether Adam knew God by the Light of Faith and Supernatural Revelation, superadded to the Light of Reason. His Faith was Natural, both in its Motives and Grounds, being an Assent to God's Testimony as true, whose veracity he knew by the Light of Nature. Nor did his Faith discover to him things that were above his then present Natural State. This proved by several Arguments. Our way of Knowing God by Faith is Supernatural, and in what respect it is so.

ALL that I have hitherto spoken of, as appertaining unto Adam's Condition, we have seen to have been but Natural, according to those limits which at first I did set; namely, no other than what was due to the Nature of Man, and what was suitable also unto that his Nature.

There remains only one thing, which may seem to have been Supernatural in him in both these respects: And whereby he is judged to have been elevated to the same way of knowing God, that we under the state of Grace are; and that is, a Principle of Faith, which Principle is wholly Supernatural; both,

1. In that the Objects or Things apprehended by it, are such as are made known by Revelation from God; and therefore over and above the Due of Nature.

And 2ly, In that the Light by which Faith is enabled to apprehend things, is above the Light of Nature, or of common Principles or Reason, it being infused. And so Divines account it, and do therefore call it Supernatural. Now it may also seem as evident, that besides that inbred Light of Nature and of sanctified Reason in Adam to know God by; he had another window and inlet of Knowledge, even Revelation from, and Communication with God. For we read of God's speaking to him, and revealing his Will unto him by word of mouth; both at his giving him dominion over all the Creatures, Gen. 1.28. and also at his giving him those Precepts about the Tree of Knowledge and of Life, (which also were Sacraments to him of his Condition). Thus also he knew the Law of the Sabbath; and likewise, when his Wife was made, he knew it either by inspiration or revelation from God, that she was made by God, of his Bone and Flesh. And he believing the Word and Threatning of God; that was the matter in which he was tempted, and in which he failed. So that, besides that forementioned Light of Nature, he had also (as may seem by all this) a Revelation, and that of Faith.

I confess, it is like to appear an hard and bold Assertion, to deny, That Adam had a Supernatural Knowledge of God by Revelation, or by the same Light and Principle of Faith by which we take God in, under the Gospel. Yet I find some Divines to have affirmed it, and I shall adventure it unto the Disquisition in the fear of God, and with submission to cogent Reason to the contrary. And,

First, I would propound it to be considered, That all this concerning his Faith, and the Things revealed to him, were still but within the compass of Nature. And those limits which at first I set to bound the Natural Knowledge of God with; so as it was neither above the due to Nature, nor the way and Sphere of it. Chap. 7.

For, first, In the Nature of Man there is such an Act, to believe and to trust one that is faithful, as well as there is to think, and to be. We find it in Corrupt Nature; a disposition of believing another man; so as to believe is not simply and wholly a Supernatural Act.

And secondly, That Man in his first Creation should have a Principle in him to converse with that God, whom he knew to be God out of Natural Light, and to have made Heaven and Earth; whensoever that God should speak and Communicate any thing to him, that might express his Will to him, so far as might concern his present Condition; was also natural in this sense, That it was a due to the Nature of Man. For Man being a sociable Creature, in that he was Reasonable, made in the Image of God which was natural, it was meet he should be able to converse with that great God by mutual Speech, as well as with his Wife, or any other Intelligent Nature: Speech is the ground of Fellowship. And therefore both Prayer, which is Speech to God, and to hear God speaking to us, are made Natural duties by our Divines, as well as to love him.

And thirdly, When God did thus speak; That Man should believe, and receive the Testimony of God as true, whatever it was that was revealed, was not above the Due of Nature, nor the way of Nature. Not above the Due of Nature, for else God had spoke in vain: Nor above the Light of Nature, to assent to it, for the Ground of Faith's assent is resolved into the Light of this, That God is true. For he knew out of the same principles and dictates of Nature, That God was true, faithful, and just in his word, as well as he knew he was powerful in his Works: For it was part of the Law written in his heart, in which the Image of God consisted. He should not lye, but speak truth; Therefore that God much more should be True. Truth was part of Gods Image in him: Therefore Ephes. 4. 24. Truth being made a part of Gods Image, it follows, Vers. 25. Wherefore put away lying: Therefore in God much more Truth is essential to his Nature. He might take that Attribute up out of his own heart by a Natural Light, as well as Gods Holiness, out of the righteous Image of it in himself; so as he needed not that to be laid in his heart by Faith. Therefore now to believe God when he speaks to him, and to receive his Testimony, was but from the power of an inbred light: Yea, and although, suppose the thing revealed should have been above the Light of Nature, yet the Divine Authority upon which his belief was to receive it, was acknowledged by no other Light than Nature, and the Dictate of it, That God must needs be true in what he speaks. And yet this is the greatest thing in Faith, the receiving Gods Testimony, John 3. 53. He that hath received his Testimony, hath set to his seal, that God is true.

And then fourthly; Whereas the Question might still be, By what Light he should know it was God that spake, when God did speak? I take it, In the way God used then to speak; it was but the Natural Light of Sanctified Reason, which might discern that also. It was with some such Evidence, as he might know it was God in the Voice given, as truly as he knew 'twas God by his Works: Such were the visible Apparitions and visions made. For otherwise it had been easier for Satan to have counterfeited Gods Voice and appearance, and have sooner deceived Eve thereby, as the old Prophet deceived the other with a false Command, than in that way he took. And it is more evident by this, That after his fall, when all holy light was extinguish't, yet he knew and discerned the Voice of God in the Garden, and was afraid, therefore much more afore. And it was a due to Nature, That if God did speak, he should so speak, as might evidence unto Nature, it was he that spake. Which was easie for God to do some way or other; For Balaam discerned the Difference, and wondred at it, when at first he thought to have convers't with his Devils.

And then fifthly, The Objects propounded to him to believe; were of themselves no way Supernatural; They were nothing more of Gods Nature or Attributes, but about some Precepts of his Will, or Priviledges granted to Adam; only such things as first concerned his Condition, and were within his own Sphere, of that World he was made in, and so suitable to his apprehension to take in, though confirmed to him by divine Authority. And therefore secondly, such as he might have some hint of by the light of Nature; besides the Revelation they were realized to him by Instinct or Sanctified Reason, though revealed and confirmed by Divine Testimony. Such were the Precepts about the two Trees, which were two Sacraments. The things which they confirmed were the promises of Life, and the Mutability of his Condition: Both which, as I shewed, the Light of Nature taught him, and made real to him: As also was that acknowledgment and Law promulged concerning his Wife, That being flesh of his flesh and bone of his bone, a Man should cleave to his Wife: Natural Light gave in the Equity of such a Conjugal Affection.

So as put all these five Considerations together, the Conclusion is, That all the Faith which Adam had, may well be resolved into Natural Light, as the first Principle and Foundation of it; although further revealing and confirming what else the Light of Nature could not, or would not so easily have known; and though we suppose the things had been such as were out of the reach of Natural Light; yet still the bottom of his assent to Divine Authority, had been but such a Natural Light aforesaid, and the Principle of Nature sown in his heart, which made him capable so to converse with God, and believe his Word, as to Understand God out of his Works: But it is otherwise in our Faith. And so far I conceive it is that wicked Men are blamed now for not believing the word of the Law and Gospel, so far, as such Natural Light as was in Adam would have enabled them thereunto: Seeing the Law given was confirmed at first by such Works and Voices, as evidently would have argued to that first Natural Light, that it was God that spake it; and they, if they had that Light remaining, would have owned in their hearts. And the Gospel also delivered by Christ, was confirmed by Signs and Wonders, Heb. 2, 3, 4. How shall we escape, if we neglect so great Salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him, God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will? And the whole word written derived to us, and then delivered, hath such peculiar Characters of Divine Authority engraven upon it, so as, even to Natural Light (if we had it pure as Adam had) would evidence it self to be of God; and so bind all Men to believe it. And therefore, Men are both justly commanded to believe it, and justly blamed for not believing it.

I am now to affix some Reasons and Demonstrations, that have prevailed with me to think that the way of Adam's Faith (call it so if you please) was in the sense declared but Natural, and ours comparatively Supernatural.

For the first, That his was but Natural.

1. Seeing all other things belonging to him were Natural: His Covenant, the Covenant of Works, was but Fædus Naturæ, founded upon the Title of what, as a Reasonable Creature, was due to his Nature, his Justification answerable, his Reward also, and all things else appertaining to him; and that the whole Image of God is affirmed so generally by our Divines to have been Natural; it were strange if the Principle of Faith in him, which then was not of general use, neither should alone be Supernatural; that the Image of God in him should consist of one part so heterogeneal to the other, of an higher rank than its Fellows. Yea, and seeing it is manifest that the main Foundation of that his Faith might be, and indeed was but that Natural Light, That God was true, which was inbred in him as fully; as That God was holy, as I shewed: It is strange, if his Faith should be made Supernatural by some other other small Addition only, when the Foundation was but Natural Light.

Chap. 7.

Reason 2. For him to have had such a Supernatural Principle of Faith as we have, was in him Superfluous, and to no end. The end that I find any Divines either Popish or others fix upon, for which they ascribe a Superadded Supernatural Grace, is, in relation to his Translation to Heaven, for which that Supernatural Grace should fit him, and prepare him. Popish Divines, who contend for a Natural way of knowing God, and a Natural Righteousness in Adam, yet with a superadded Supernatural one also, they make the use of that Supernatural Addition for him to merit Heaven by; and make this the difference between Natural Righteousness and Supernatural Grace and Faith; That Supernatural was given him to merit Heaven by. But I find them not so distinctly explaining any different Acts of Natural or Supernatural Grace in themselves. Some of ours, though not in relation to meriting Heaven; yet ascribe it to him to fit him to know God, so as to long after Heaven (as Faith doth) which they make the reward of his Obedience: And I confess, if the Promise given him had been that of Heaven, and the Vision of God, as there, then it had been necessary for him to have such a Supernatural Faith as we: But seeing it hath been proved, and I think sufficiently that his Covenant would not have brought him thither, neither that it was intended in that his Promise of Life: Therefore I know no use at all of such a Supernatural Principle, as an Optick Glass, added to Supernatural Light, to help it to see further into another World, when he was in his Condition, and desires to be confined to this. For Faith Supernatural is given to prepare for Heaven, and to supply sight or vision, till we come thither, to support us whilst absent from the Lord; 2 Cor. 5. 5, 6, 7. Now he that hath wrought us for Heaven is God, who hath given us the earnest of his Spirit also. Therefore we are always confident, knowing that whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord: For we walk by faith, not by sight. The meaning is, God here by his Spirit works us and prepares us for Heaven, and that by giving us light of Faith, which in this our absence supplies the room of sight; and so he gives us a confidence of our coming thither: And so it is to be an Evidence of things absent and not seen; and to give a present subsistence of things but in hopes further to be enjoyed: So Hebr. 11. 1. Now Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. Now Adam not being ordained to sight, and always to be at home in his Body; and so at no time to be absent from his Body, to be present with the Lord, (as we are to be, 2 Cor. 5. 8.) We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the Body, and to be present with the Lord: for his Body and Earthly Tabernacle was his natural only Home. Neither was God absent to him, nor presented as absent, as in relation to a further way to be enjoyed, not yet attained: And therefore to what end he should have Faith, that Faith which thus prepares for Heaven, whose Essence and Definition lies in giving an Evidence of things not seen, or enjoyed, but hoped for, I know not.

Yea thirdly, It would not only have been of no use, but have made him miserable. For the use and end of this Supernatural Faith, being to give us a taste of that way of knowing God in himself, as in Heaven, and so to stir up groans and desires after sight and vision of him, as 2 Cor. 5. 4. For we that are in this Tabernacle do groan, being burdened, not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life. We do groan, &c. and a confidence of it, as Verf. 6, 7. Therefore we are always confident, knowing that whilst we are at home in the Body, we are absent from the Lord. (For we walk by faith, not by sight). So that it is such a Faith as gives a taste of what it is to enjoy God by sight, and so stirs up groans and longings after it. And so it is a following after to comprehend, as Phil. 3. 12. a looking for, and hastning to, as in 1 Pet. 3. 12. Now if Adam had had such a Principle and Light thus to know God, and should have had desires thus to know him, and not have gone to Heaven, and so there, by a full Vision to have had this groaning satisfied, the Addition of such a way of knowing God, not satisfied and filled up, as by Faith it could never have been, this had been to have stir'd up desires in vain, and to have made his Condition, not in its own Sphere, perfect and compleat; yea, miserable in this, that he should have wanted that Confidence which our Faith stirs up in us, together with our longings, which stills our desires: Yea, it had left him despairing of ever doing so.

And therefore, fourthly, Our way of Faith must needs be Supernatural, and altioris ordinis, to his, and so our knowing God above his; because it is thus a Prelibation or taste of that Vision which is ordained to us in Heaven. Faith is an imperfect prelibation of that Knowledge of God we shall have hereafter, and the inchoation of it: So as by Faith, we come at least to know what an happiness it is to know God in his Essence, as in Heaven, and so to long after it. And therefore, according as we have more Faith, so there comes to be greater degrees of Glory in Heaven given, even in a like proportion as mens Faith was more stirring up earnest groanings, happiness being expletio appetituum, the satisfying our desires. And therefore Faith doth, in an imperfect obscure way, know God in himself; for it helps us to see and taste the happiness of knowing God so as he is, and so stirs up desires accordingly. Now that Knowledge of God in Heaven is acknowledged by all to be so transcendently Supernatural, that it is no way, in any respect, natural to any Creature, but only to Jesus Christ; as I shall shew hereafter. And therefore our Faith, that is the Inchoation of it, and is a beholding the Glory of the Lord Christ, 2 Cor. 3. ult. and eternal life begun, must needs be ejusdem ordinis, of the same Rank, and so doth differ from natural Faith and Knowledge of God in this, That the one is a seeing him in his Works and Effects, only from an inbred Light of his Attributes; the other is a seeing God, though obscurely, as in himself; though as presented in another, yet with a taste imperfect of what it is to see God in himself, which stirs up the heart to long after it. Which puts the truest difference between knowing God naturally and supernaturally, and between Adam's way and ours.

And therefore, as an Evidence of this our way, God hath ordained a Temporary Faith in men enlightned, as the counterfeit of our way, as he doth and did that Natural Knowledge in Heathens, and the Vision of old to the Forefathers, as the Representation of what Adam's way of knowing God was. And therefore these Temporaries are said to be enlightned, and to partake of the heavenly Gift of Faith, and the Holy Ghost, and to taste of the powers of the World to come, Hebr. 6. 4, 5. as a counterfeit of that enlightning and Spirit of Wisdom and Revelation through the Holy Ghost, whereby Believers know the hope of their Calling, 1 Eph. 17. 18. which work, even in them, is not Supernatural only to corrupt Nature, but to pure Nature, though not sanctifying, as Adam's was; yet working an assent to, and taste of the things of that World, such as Adam should never have had: Into which World Adam should never have come, and therefore he no ways tasted it. And therefore it is call'd the heavenly Gift, and wrought by the Holy Ghost, in a way above Nature.

To conclude: Thus learned Cameron, though he gives but a touch in a word, yet his Judgment falls this way, when differencing the Faith in Adam, and in us, he says, Fides in fœdere Naturæ est à Deo, ut loquuntur in Scholis, per modum naturæ: At fides quæ requiritur in fœdere gratiæ, à Deo est, sed per modum gratiæ supernaturalis. Thes. 14. de fœdere.

Now, as to the opposite Branch, That our Faith, and God's Revelation to us, is Supernatural, this will appear in three or four respects.

1. In respect of the Objects revealed to our Faith, which his Mind should never have arrived at.

2. In regard to the Light by which our Minds are acted and elevated, compared with that inbred Light by which he knew things, that Candle which the Lord set up in his heart, and was inbred in him.

3. In respect of the way or manner of knowledge, or assent raised up thereby.

1. For the Objects revealed to us: They are such as were utterly above the due and right of pure Nature in Adam. This comparison you have made (take in the whole Context from first to last) 1 Cor. 2. 7, 9, 10, and 11. Verses, where setting forth, and commending the excellency of the things revealed in the Gospel; 1. He calls it, The Wisdom of God, to shew how it excels human Wisdom, which he had called The Wisdom of Men, Vers. 4. and of the World, Vers. 6. this by the way of excellency, the Wisdom of God; and so excelleth Mans Wisdom, as God doth Man. Neither is it termed God's Wisdom in a general sense, such the Law is, and the Natural Knowledge of God given to the Heathen, Chap. 1. 21. Where also he had shewed the inefficacy of it; but this in a transcendent manner, so transcendent, as God appropriates it to himself. It is a Wisdom, proper and peculiar to God, which he arrogateth and taketh the Glory of, as having been hid and concealed in his own breast, not in any Creatures: And therefore is above the reach of the Wisdom of any Creature, Man, or Angel, and so meerly Divine, and of God, and no way Natural to any Creature, as due to be revealed unto it. And therefore, Ephes. 3. 9. it is the mystery of his Will made known according to his good pleasure, freely, and of meer Grace, no way as connatural to the Understanding of any Creature; Man or Angel. And in this sense, 1 Cor. 2. 11. they are called, The things of God; even as the proper peculiar thoughts in a mans heart, which are secret to himself alone are the things of a Man. For so he doth compare them in that 11th Verse, For what Man knoweth the things of a Man, save the Spirit of a Man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no Man, but the Spirit of God. They are all God's Notions, proper to him, the Light of which were not to become inbred in any Creatures heart; for then it might have been called their Wisdom, as the things naturally known by Men or Angels, is, and may be called. And therefore, though he mentions only the corrupt Wisdom of Man, in opposition to it, yet in that, upon occasion thereof, he particularly attributes it to God, he calls it his in opposition to all Wisdom attainable by the strength of Nature in Men or Angels, false or not: It is meerly Divine.

Further also, 2ly. He calls it a Mystery, which implies a thing so hidden, as cannot be known but by Revelation, Matth. 11. 25. At that time Jesus answered, and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. As none can know the things of a Man, but the Spirit of a Man; so nor these deep things of God, none but his Spirit; 1 Cor. 2. 11. For what Man knoweth the things of a Man, save the Spirit of Man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no Man, but the Spirit of God. He argues from the lesser to the greater; that if a Man's peculiar thoughts cannot be known by another, then surely not Gods private Cabinet Counsel thoughts, as these were. The heart of a Man is a deep Well, but a Man of Understanding will draw it out: But God's heart is so infinitely deep, as no Understanding could, by any inbred Light proper to it, have sounded it: So deep, that the phrase of Searching the deep things of God, is used of the Spirit himself, Vers. 10. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: For the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. This is to shew these depths, speaking after the manner of Men.

3. He says 'tis a wisdom hid, Ephes. 3. 10. To the intent that now unto the Principalities and Powers in heavenly places, might be known by the Church the manifold wisdom of God: to shew it was no way attainable by the light even of Angels, he says, From the beginning of the world it was hid in God: And then from the Angels, who knew it but by the Church. And then the Apostle proves all this, 1 Cor. 2. 9. for that Proof there brought out of Isaiab, may refer, as Interpreters refer, to the seventh Verse, as well as to the eighth and ninth; and indeed to both: As it is written, eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entred into heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for those that love him. If it refers to exclude the Knowledge

BOOK II. of the Wise of the World, yet it is an Argument fetch't à majori, not a bare Opposition only: For they are so far from having entred into the hearts of corrupt men, that not into innocent man; for him the words will reach. For, first, If we consult the Prophet Isaiab, Chap. 64. 4. whence the words are quoted, you shall find, he says, From the beginning of the world, ear hath not heard, &c. instead of which, the Apostle puts in, Nor hath entred into the heart of man; that is, not of innocent man; no man, from the beginning of the World when man was made. Secondly, The Apostle, in the Phrases he enumerates, excludes all the light, and power, and means of the knowledge of innocent man by Nature, by reckoning up all the means of Knowledge. For his Knowledge came in, either from the inbred Light of Nature in him, as was said, and so ascended out of his own heart, as the Phrase is here, which notes out the natural way of man's Knowledge from inbred Principles: Or else, was improved either by Observation of the Creatures by the Eye, or by Communication with God to the Ear. Now none of these ways should the things of the Gospel have been known and received by him; but it is meerly Supernatural, and so is said not to ascend, but to descend from the Father of Lights by Revelation: So James 1. 5, 17. If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not: and it shall be given him. Every good gift, and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of Lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning. He speaks of this Wisdom, and so it is above the way of Nature also. Thirdly, He excludes not the Knowledge of man only, but of Angels also, though he names Man only: For in Isaiab you have it, Isai, 64. 4. None besides thee have seen, O God, what he hath prepared for him that waits for him. The Prophet speaks unto Christ, whom he calls God, as a Person distinct from the Father, that prepared these things; Therefore he changeth the Person, besides thee, what he? no Man or Creature but he that was God as well as Man, and so was in God's bosome, could naturally have known these things. Therefore he says, No man besides thee, O God, whom therefore he calls God and Man, whom, Vers the first, he had called upon to come down, and be incarnate, and deliver this Gospel, as once the Law, when the Mountains melted, Vers. 1, 2, 3. Oh that thou wouldest rent the Heavens, that thou wouldest come down, that the Mountains might flow down at thy presence, As when the melting fire burneth, the fire causeth the waters to boil, to make thy Name known to thine Adversaries, that the Nations may tremble at thy presence. When thou didst terrible things, which we looked not for, thou camest down; the Mountains flowed down at thy presence. And he threw the Enemies out of Canaan, the Type of Spiritual Enemies to be destroyed by Christ, and by the Revelation of the Gospel: So that those Truths are Supernatural every way to the Knowledge of any Creature but to Christ, as the Vision of God also is. And therefore, the Apostle concludes there is no knowing them but by a Revelation of the Spirit, 1 Cor, 2. 10. But God hath revealed them to us by his Spirit; over and above the Light of natural Faith and natural Principles.

But of this Head I have treated more largely, in shewing the glory and riches of the Mystery of the Gospel. To which I refer the Reader.

The second thing, wherein our State excels Adams, is, That heavenly Light wherewith our minds are acted and Elevated to those Supernatural Objects; so far as the Light we are assisted with excels, so far must be the Knowledge. It is light which makes all things manifest, as Ephes. 5. 13. The foundation of all Adam's Knowledge of God was an inbred Light, or Candle set up by the Lord in the Chambers of the Belly, as Solomon speaks of the relics of it, Prov. 20. 27. which though Holy, was but Natural. But that Light whereby we see the things of the Gospel, is termed glorious, and so wholly Supernatural. When Christ converted Paul, Acts 22. Christ surrounded his Body with a light which dazled, yea blinded his eyes with the Glory of it, Vers. 11. I could not see for the glory of that Light, says he; which was but an outward sign, to shew the glory of that Light by which Christ did shine shine into his mind now at his Conversion: Even as 2 Cor. 4. 6, For God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the Glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ. The Light of the Glory of God in the face of Christ, is a further glory than what shined in the Creation, and therefore requires a further Light to see it. As is the Object, such is the Light we see it with. An Object that is Light it self, held forth in its glory, cannot be seen, but by a Light answerably glorious; for the Light it is seen by, is but the splendor of it, as the Beams are of Sun, which is seen in its self only by its own Beams and Light. And so is God in Christ: Which therefore, 1 Pet. 2. 9. is called a marvelous Light, yea, his marvelous Light: Marvelous or wonderful, because Superexcelling, Supernatural; for that is wonderful that is such, which Nature cannot comprehend, and is above the Course of Nature, δαύματος φῶς, and it is also called his Light, that is, Christ. Not only which he gives, as Ephes. 5. 14. Arise, and Christ shall give thee Light; Nor his only, that is, of him, as the Object of it; But his as the same which resides in him, and was in his heart, by which he saw things here when below: For 1 Cor. 2. ult. We have the mind of Christ, having the same Spirit with Christ, only he above measure. 'Tis called his Light, as his inheritance, Ephes. 1. 17. And Adam's Light, though Lighted at this Sun, yet but as the efficient Cause of it, as John 1. 4. It was but the Light of Men, as they are human, and proceeded, modo humano, and so lower. His was not the same with Christ's; but this Light of the Gospel, the Light of the Spirit that is in Christ, whose Spirit, so working, he had not: And so it was lower, as that Light of the Moon is to the Sun, or as the Light of Glory will be to this of Grace: Not as an Optick Glass only, which strengthens not the Sight only, but brings down the Object lower; but such as was added to Stephen's eyes, being full of the Holy Ghost, when he saw Christ in Heaven; there was added a Further Light and Ability, than the inbred Light of sight, or of the Sun, to see Christ by in Heaven, Acts 7. 55, 56. As also to Paul in his Conversion; Such is this Light of Faith to the mind, to see heavenly Objects by, superadded to natural Light, and that of Reason: So as if you could suppose Adam now alive, as in Innocency; for him to see these things, there must be an Elevation of his Light by the access of another Light Supernatural of the Spirit, as there was to Stephen's Eye. And therefore, our believing is attributed to the Spirit, as was said, and is call'd, The Spirit of Wisdom and Revelation, and The Spirit of Faith, 2 Cor. 4. 13. And 1 John 2. 20, 27. the Unction that teacheth all things; not only clearing the sight, but teaching it. Neither need it be strange, that there should be several ranks of Light from God to see himself by: That as in Heaven we see Light in God's Light, Psal. 36. 9. and so a further Light than any here: So here we see Christ and God by the Spirits Light and Representation, though of a lower kind than that whereby we shall see him in Heaven, and not by Natural Light, as it would present God to us, or take God up from the Creatures. And the more immediate the Light is from God, the more Supernatural, the higher is it, and we the more passive in it. The light of Glory will be God's light immediately; he both is the Object and Efficient, All in All; and so we shall be swallowed up with it, as when the Sun is seen by its own light. This of the Spirit in us is efficiently his, and therein we are more passive than active, though the Subject of it, and that of Adam's inbred light had less of God's light in it, he not being enlightned by his Spirit of Revelation, but left to that inbred light to judge and give an assent to the things objected afore him.

Add to these that place, Ephes. 1. 17. where he prays, That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of Glory, may give unto you the Spirit of Wisdom and Revelation, in or for the knowledge of him. Every Word and Circumstance makes to demonstrate what I intend.

1. His Scope is to reckon up in this Chapter the Blessings heavenly, which we are blest with in Christ the second Adam, peculiar to the Elect: So Ephes. 1. 3. they are all Blessings heavenly which we are blest with in Christ the second Adam. The Blessings we were blest with in the first Adam were but earthy, and served but for a Life on Earth; as the Opposition, 1 Cor. 15. 47, 48. evidently shews: The first man is of the earth, earthy: The second man is the Lord from Heaven. As is the earthy, such are they that are earthy, and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly. Now after Electiōn, Adoptiōn, Redemptiōn, he mentions the Wisdom and the Prudence which is in Christ, the second Adam, as one of those heavenly and spiritual Blessings peculiar to the Elect, God hath abounded to us in, when he made known the Gospel, the Mystery of his Will, that is, the secrets of his Will, which he purposed in himself, Ephes. 1. 8, 9. And then here in his Prayer, he shews the Heavenly supernatural rise and cause of it, even all the three Persons. The Vouchsafer of it is God the Father, 1. Not as the Author of Nature, but as the God of our Lord Jesus Christ: For it is a Blessing in Christ peculiar to his, and therefore call'd, The Faith of God's Elect, Titus 1. None ever had it but the Elect, and therefore Adam had it not; seeing men not elected had all he had once in him. And therefore, though he was Elect, yet he had not what he had then as Elect, but as the common root of all, both Elect and others.

And 2ly, He makes the Father the Fountain of it, as he is the Father of Glory. He praying for this peculiar Wisdom, mentions such Attributes (as the manner of the Apostles in their Prayers is) as have a more proper relation of Efficiency to the things prayed for. Elsewhere, when James bids them seek Wisdom, he directs them to God as the Father of Lights; and here, as the Father of Glory. For this Wisdom is so far from being the same in our primitive Nature, that 'tis glory, a glorious Gift, and therefore Supernatural, not to corrupt, but pure Nature, and is of that rank comparatively to Nature, as Glory in Heaven is of, it being the beginning of Glory: And therefore is call'd Eternal Life, to know God even as a Believer doth, John 17. 3. And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. It raiseth the mind up to take in a taste or hint, a glimpse, a prelibation of Glory, as it follows in the next Verse 18. of Eph. 1. The eyes of your Understanding being enlightned, that ye may know what is the hope of his Calling, and what the riches of the Glory of his Inheritance in the Saints: and so to desire and breathe after it. Now Adam's was not such.

3. It is from the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of Christ, given to us, and so working above the power of Nature: And in that respect he is call'd here, The Spirit of Wisdom and Revelation; as also elsewhere, The Spirit of Faith, 2 Cor. 4. 13. The way of Natural Faith I conceive to have been, That the object being provided with Evidence suitable to convince and perswade the Light of Nature of the Truth of it self, through an ordinary Concurrence of the Holy Ghost to a natural free Agent: It was left to the spirit of man to give its assent; so as then it was of, and for that spirit in man rather: But now it is attributed more to the Spirit of Christ in us, who both works Wisdom, the Principle capable of it, and revealeth and draws out an Acknowledgment by an over-pouring Light, For, I take it, that the Faith of God's Elect is not resolved into Principles inbred and begotten, as I said Adam was, but into a prevailing work of the Spirit working Wisdom, and a Testimony of the Spirit giving light, and sealing up what he would have us believe. A prevailing Testimony of the Spirit is the ground of all our Faith, of what kind soever it be: Not only when a perswasion is begotten of a man's Interest in Christ, which is because the Spirit witnesseth with his Spirit, which yet alone carries the name of the testimony of the Spirit; but when a man's Spirit prevailingly assents to any spiritual Truth, it is from the like over-pouring Testimony of the Spirit, sealing up that Truth with a light beyond the light pure Nature had, which was left to it self to give consent out of its own light, which was suited to the Object: But here a Divine light is superadded, that casts the Balance, lance, and this in believing there is a God, or that Christ is the Son of God, as well as in believing the Interest of a Christian in him. This I find 1 John 5. Chap. 7. 5, 6. speaking of believing not only a man's self to be the Son of God, but this truth, That Christ is the Son of God, verse 5. He says, That the spirit bears witness to it: And verse 10. He that believes hath the Witness in himself. Now his Scope there is to speak of the Witness, not only to a man's Interest in Christ, of which verse 12. but also of Christ's being ordained the Fountain of Life, vers. 10, 11. He that believeth on the Son of God, hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God, hath made him a liar, because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son. And this is the record, That God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is his Son.

It is necessary, upon occasion of this Discourse, to add a Caution in this place; which is, That all this is not so to be understood, as if the light of Supernatural Faith in us destroys that of Reason and Nature, yea, it subordinates it to it self, and restoreth it again, and rectifies it, and then makes use of it; even as the light of Reason doth subordinate and make use of Sense. God possesseth and cloatheth the natural Powers of the Mind, with an higher light than ever inbred in us, through the Revelation of the Spirit, and converts them all, as its Engines, to get a further knowledge by. We see it by this, That the word written (unto which the light of Faith is suited as Colours to the eye) though it reveals things, beyond reason and light natural, as are the Principles of the Gospel, yet it reveals them in such a way, as Reason enlightened by Faith may see the greatest harmony and correspondency in them, and receive as much satisfaction as ever in that other natural Knowledge. And the Principles being taken for granted once by Faith, there is use of Reason to see the dependence of all things revealed one with another, and the collecting one thing from another; so as God hath writ the Scriptures as to men endowed with reason, yea, and applyed it to the way of Human Arts and Sciences: Yet still so, as the light of Faith is a light beyond that of Reason; which appears,

1. In that the first Principles of the Gospel, as the Apostle calls them, Heb. 6. 1. laid in the Mind, are wholly above Reason, and made evident by this Supernatural Light wholly: They are wholly new; and Reason is incapable of them. So that there is much the same difference between the Principles inbred, and these by Faith revealed in the Gospel; that is, between the Principles of Sciences. Some Sciences take their Principles out of Nature, being such as are known by Nature, as Philosophy doth; and so did Adam's Divinity and Knowledge of God, the Principles of it were inbred: But others take their Principles from other Sciences, as Musick, having use of Numbers, borrows its skill in them from Arithmetick: So Faith doth fetch its Principles about Christ, &c. from Heaven, the bosome of God, the Spirit laying in the deep things of God's Counsel, as Principles wholly new, and wholly above Nature. And these it sees no other way, than by a Supernatural Light and Revelation of the Spirit; at first it is so, though reason may confirm them. Therein Faith and Reason differ, that Nihil est in intellectu, quod non prius in sensu; but here many things are in Faith, which were never in Reason.

And 2ly, It appears in this, That though Faith useth Reason to discuss the Truth of Deductions from those Principles, and to gather Conclusions from these Principles laid: As for example; the Word hath Motives which Faith makes use of in a way of Reason too, and it argues things in a rational way. It argues the Cause from the Effect, Gods Love from Signs. In interpreting the Scriptures, we use Reason to gather from the Connexion and Dependence, the meaning of the Holy Ghost: Yet still, even in these Arguings and Deductions, there accompanies a Light that Faith strikes in with, a Light beyond the force in the Reason: It seals up the Truth, collected by Reason, beyond the Power of Reason: It superadds a Light which casts the Ballance. It not only reveals the Principles we reason from, by an higher Light than Natural, but it confirms the Reasonings and Conclusions from thence by a Light more than Natural, of bare Reason; as the phrase in Job is, He sealeth Instruction, Job 33. 16. If we be moved to any Duty by a practical Reason or Motive, the Spiritual makes it effectually beyond what the Moral or Rational force that is in it, can set it on. If we be Comforted from any signs, the Spirit gives a Light of Revelation to cast the Ballance, and witnesseth with our Spirits, as Rom. 8. 16. beyond the power of the sign. If we read the Scriptures, and to get the meaning of them, observe the Connexion of one thing with another by Reason; yet there comes often a Light of the Spirit, beyond the hight of Reason; which by that Observation of the Connexion, seals up this to be the Holy Ghost's meaning: So as the Holy Ghost is to Faith still his own Interpreter. For else the Scripture were of private Interpretation; which it is not, 2 Pet. 1. 20. For such is Ratio humana to the Spirit. Yet as the Holy Ghost, in writing the Scriptures, writ them in a Rational way, because unto Men Reasonable; so in giving us Light to Understand them, he useth Reason, but joyns a Light beyond it. Some believe, says Christ to Thomas, that have not seen: And though God used Sense to confirm his Faith; yet his Faith was a Light beyond the Light of Sense or Reason from thence.

And 2ly, That this Light of Faith is above that of Reason rectified, appears in this, That it depends not on the natural way of Man's Understanding necessarily, but often proceeds above it. We see those that have low Understandings, little Reason in them, and are ignorant of the Notional Connexion of one Truth with another; cannot dispute for it, yet see further into things heavenly; see more in them than the greatest Doctors. What is the Reason? A Supernatural Light of Faith, a higher Light abounds in them. And being a Light above the way of Nature and Reason, reveals things to them beyond the power of Reason.

Yea, we may all see it in our selves, at several times, That the same Reasons, Motives, and Signs, considered by us at one time, perswade us not, as at another time they do, by reason of a superadded Light of Revelation that casts the Ballance: So that as the Light of Vision in Heaven is argued to be Supernatural, because it depends not on the Light of Nature, or power or strength of Reason, but takeing the lowest, meanest Idiot, raiseth and elevateth his mind above one of a larger Understanding naturally to see God more in Heaven; because the Light there, is above the Light of Nature, and proceeds without it; it raiseth not the Mind, according to the proportion of its Understanding, but according to the measure of its Light received, which is so glorious, as it wraps up the meanest Understanding to the highest Intention. Yea, Natural Understanding contributes no advancement unto it, but only an Obediential Faculty; so the Light of Faith also doth in a proportion: And that argues it supernatural. Strength of Natural Principles, and of Reason, may help forward that Knowledge, which is of its own Sphere notional and rational; And in a Believer, it may help to advance Knowledge of Spiritual things in a Rational way; but it contributes nothing to the Light of Revelation by the Spirit, who works, how much, and when he pleaseth. But in Adam's Children, their Light and knowledge of God, being natural, would have been proportioned to the strength of inbred Light and Reason, so as stronger Souls would have had more, and weaker less; for it ran in a natural way, but not so here.

The third Particular propounded, was this, wherein our Knowledge of God, &c. excels that of Adam's, and so is supernatural to it, is the manner or way of knowledge: This third flows from the former.

The Light of Faith is more intuitive, and so more comprehensive: But the way of Adam's Knowledge was discursive, by way of gathering one thing from another, which is more imperfect, and further about, and more at second hand. The perfection of the Angels Knowledge of things, is expressed above that of Man's, in this, That theirs is Intuitive; they use not Reason to gather one thing from another; So much Intuitive (say some) as they see at once the Effect and the Cause together, therefore called Intelligentiæ. The one is as knowing of a Man by his Works and hear-say of him, whereby the mind gathers what an one he is by way of Discourse: So did Adam what God was by his Works, and Visions, and Revelations made: But this is the Beholding the Glory of the Lord, John 6. 40. Seeing the Son and and believing on him: And 1 Cor. 13. 12. though it be but darkly, and in a Glass, yet it is said we see as in a Glass. So 1 John 3. 6. The like Phrase is used; He that sinneth, hath not seen him, neither known him: That is, not known him with this Knowledge of sight. And thus Faith is a Knowledge of God, as he is in himself, though in the face of Christ, and the Glass or the Gospel: But Adam's was but in his works by Collection. They gathered Hercules by his footsteps: So Adam collected Gods power, &c. from the works of Creation: But this is the presenting God himself, though as in a Glass, in the Gospel: So it is not knowing God, ex alio, by Collection from an other thing, but knowing God himself in alio, in an other thing, wherein by his own Light he presents himself as a Man doth in a Glass.

Chap. 7.

The Difference may be expressed by way of Similitude, by the several ways of Assurance of Gods love. Look, what difference there is between that way, when we know Gods love to us but by signs only, this is knowing and gathering his love, ex alio, by effect; Collecting it from another thing, and so is but discursive; as when the Cause is known by the Effects, though the Spirit secretly joyns a testimony in the Conclusion, and that other which comes from an immediate Light of the Spirits sealing up that Light, and the taste of it, and revealing Gods heart and mind in itself towards us; This is so transcendent, as it works joy unspeakable and Glorious; it is intuitive: Not so the other: Such difference is there between Adam's knowing God and ours. Or to set out the difference by another Instance. When Job, at last in the winding up of Gods dealings with him, had a more distinct intuitive representation of God to his Faith, comparing it with many of his former Apprehensions wrought, Job 42. 5. he compares them to second hand Knowledge, a Hear-say, by the hearing of the Ear: But now, says he, mine eyes have seen him. How distinct and differing is sight to hear-say? And it may be, that hear-say Knowledge Job meant, was, That knowing God by the Works of Creation and Providence, and by Visions, &c. He may compare that way of Knowledge, which was familiar in those times, even to Believers; God training them up, though they had a Principle of Faith beyond it, in the Elements of the World before the Law, to study him in his Works and ordinary Visions; which is called comparatively but the hearing with the Ear; both because the manner of the Godly then, was to talk together of God out of his Works, and communicate such Observations. And, as I find some Interpreters observe on Chapter 36. 24. where Elihu going about to instruct Job with a sense of the greatness of Gods Majesty, he calls upon him to look into his Works which men have Sung: So Sanctius renders it. He minds him of the common Songs men made of the Works of God; or else because the Heavens, and Day and Night, are said to have a voice, and utter speech, Psal. 19. 1. 2. as Man an Ear to hear their sound, to declare the Glory of God: To whose voice Job had lent his Mind to study God out.

Add unto this, that Phrase used in that 36th Chapt. 25. vers. when Elihu calls upon Job to see Gods greatness in his Works, which Sanctius makes the beginning of that Song which Elihu minds Job of, that holy men did sing. Every man may see what is the Work of God. Man beholds afar off; so 'tis in the Original; that is, God afar off in his Works. It is a remote, and but an obscure Knowledge, and yet how great doth it argue him? So it follows; Behold, God is great and we know not; or, but little of him thus by his Works. And therefore, Rom. 1. 19, 20. that Knowledge gotten by the Works of God, Paul calls τὸ γνωσθὲν τῷ Θεῷ, something that may be known of God; rather than the Knowledge of him in himself, as indeed it is not. And though the Godly then had Faith as well as we now; yet the Covenant of Works and Nature being more predominately the Dispensation under the Law of Nature, they were in that very first Infancy of the World very much kept to that School; at least in that form.

As

BOOK II.

As the Conclusion of this Discourse ; because I would not maintain a Dispute against a multitude of Divines, who are of another mind in their Writings : If we will grant and suppose, That there was such a Light of Faith vouchsafed Adam, as was Superiour unto the Law of Nature specified ; (whereby he knew God in his Works, and such Revelations as externally carried their own Evidence with them) even unto natural Faith, and to have been as Supernatural as ours : Yet still the Assertion I aim at, will hold true, That a Believers knowing of God, and enjoying of him, doth infinitely transcend that of his in many respects :

For, 1. If we consider the Uses of his Faith then to him, and of ours to us now, there is a vast Difference, for even the Apostle lived not always by Faith, as a Christian, Gal. 2. 20. The life I now lead is by Faith, &c. And Hebr. 10. 38. the Just are said to do so. And it is spoken of a Christian, in opposition to a legal Life, as appears by the Coherence, verse 19. of that Gal. 2. I am dead to the Law, &c. So not all, or the most of Adam's knowledge or enjoyment of God came in that way : But the ordinary way he liv'd, knew, and enjoyed God by, was by that sanctified Light of Nature, joyn'd with Observation out of his Works : And therefore, although he might have another Principle of Faith, for particular Occasions extraordinary, to know God's mind by, whenever God would now and then Communicate himself to him ; as also in case of Temptation when any part of God's Will was questioned, or reasoned against, as it was by Satan to Eve, then there was use of Faith above Reason to stick to the Word ; but still he walkt by Nature's Light, not that of Faith : Whereas the Apostle says of us, That we walk by faith, not sight, 2 Cor. 5. 7. Faith was then (what ever it was, whether Natural or Supernatural) but a private Grace, which at times he had use of, as he had of the rest : But now to us, it is a general Grace. All Knowledge is let in by it ; every Truth is sealed up by it ; 'tis advanced to the Supream Office, to be the general Instructor ; whereas the Light of Nature and sanctified Reason was then the predominant Principle : For Reason is predominant in man's Nature, as he is a Man, as Faith is in a Christian. The Just now lives by Faith ; not so Adam then. Again, Faith is now the Bond of the Covenant between God and us ; because it is a receiving Grace, Rom. 4. 13, 14, 16. But Love and Obedience from Man was then the Bond of his Covenant, because the Covenant was founded upon what Man returned to God, and continued upon his doing homage. In a word, Faith was then (supposing him to have had the same Principle with us) but as sense and joy in the Holy Ghost is now to Believers : 'Tis true, such a Communion, a Believer hath with God at times, when God will appear to him in an extraordinary manner ; but he ordinarily lives by Faith, without such sense. So Adam ; whereas he lived in the Works of God, studying God in them, conversing with God in them, his Task being, by Observation, to till the Seeds of Light sown in his Mind, as well as to till the Earth, ordinarily thus knowing and enjoying God but by the Light of Nature, and accordingly obeying and loving of him, God did now and then make an Apparition to utter some word to his Faith. Now therefore, if the Comparison be made between his Estate and ours (if it be granted he had like Faith with us) it must withal be granted, that the difference is as great, as between a Man that once a week makes a meal of more than ordinary Fare, and a King that fares deliciously every day : For we ordinarily do, or might (if the fault were not our own) live by the Faith of the Son of God, in the Revelations of the Word, as our proper Element : He ordinarily, but in the Works of God, and his own Works. What was extraordinary in him, is ordinary with us ; his Exceedings, our Commons. Which if it were compleat, and sin and unbelief fully subdued, how happy must it make us above him ? Look what difference there may be conceived now in the Estate of Grace, in respect of happy Communion with God, between the present Comfort of a Believer, liever, that alwaies lives in joy unspeakable and glorious, and another that wants it, and lives meerly by Faith: Such, if not more, will be found to be between Adam, who lived ordinarily by the Light of Nature; and but sometimes had a Revelation by Faith, and us, who live all our lives by Faith, and Communicate with God wholly by the Light thereof.

2. Consider that yet in respect of the Objects of his Knowledge and ours, whereby God was known to him and to us, we infinitely transcend him and his way, if our Faith were made compleat. For first the things revealed to him and to his Faith were but some matters of precepts and duty, which being for the most part Positivi Juris, arbitrary, and so were not so clearly written in his heart, as that of the Sabbath, and about the Tree of life (which was a Sacrament, and so must be instituted, and else he had not a second Command) so it was to be known Revelation necessarily: Neither could more have been revealed than was necessary and what could be known no other way. But still all the knowledge he was to have of God himself, and what a God he was, &c. which is the knowledge wherein happiness lies, this was still left to be obtained in that natural way forementioned. We read not of any descriptions God made of himself to Adam, as to us and Moses. For what might be known more clearly by natural Light out of the works, or written in his heart, God revealed not to Faith. But we know all these Attributes by Revelation unto Faith; and so in a clearer, distincter, and indeed a more immediate manner we take in by Faith that Description which God makes of himself: And hear what himself says, of himself; and this by the Light of Faith: Whereas he had the knowledge of these Attributes no such way, but from the Light of Nature, to be improved out of the works of God; as God had manifested himself therein. Again secondly, consider that all that he knew whatsoever by such a Natural Light, or by Faith either, whether of the Nature of God, or the Love of God in his heart, we know it all by Faith; And so to have the knowledge of all, he had in an higher way than he, and so more evident and Clear: Whereas he had the knowledge of Faith but about some few particulars. And the reason why we know all by Faith which he any way knew, is, because those things of God and the law which he knew by inbred Light, that Light being now extinct in us, it is necessary to be revealed by Revelation, and so to be let in by Faith. First he by natural inbred Light knew that there was a God, but we by Faith believe That God is, Heb. 11. 6. and a Rewarder of them that seek him. And so all that Theologia naturalis; that natural Divinity to pick God out of his works, and to see how the works of Creation and providence shew God forth and argue him and his Attributes the Rules hereof, we have now revealed and written. The Book of Job, and the Psalms, teach us how to fetch God out of the Creation, and to praise him: So as God reads to us his own Logick, and a Lecture on his own Works: Whereas, Adam was left to study the bare Text, but by natural Light: Yea, and this Lecture is read to Faith, a higher Principles, more capable than Nature is; God teaching us by Faith how to interpret his Works. So as out of the word, If we had Faith, enough might we learn more of God, even in his Works, reading the Text with that God's own Comment, than Adam ever could have done by his pleading and poring on them, and using his Reason and Natural Light.

2. By Natural Light, he knew out of the Creatures, that God made the World, Rom. 1. 20. But we know it by the Light of Faith and Revelation from God, how it was, &c. Hebr. 11. 3. By Faith we Understand the Worlds were made by the Word of God. He (for ought we read) knew but of a new World made, that which he saw; and whether he should ever have heard of Heaven, or Angels, is a question: But we Understand the Worlds were made the Heaven of Heavens, and this Visible World.

And

BOOK II. And then, last of all, Add unto all, that we have over and above what he had, a New Edition of God, and all his Attributes, and all his Mind bound up in one Volume in Christ, and the Revelation of the Gospel, the Mystery of his Will: The least tittle whereof Adam should never have known. Faith brings us into an other World, and the things of it, infinitely transcending Adam's; and revealing more of God in the least Creature of it, than is in all his Volume, and is as much vaster than his, as Heaven is above Earth; as much exceeds it, as the second Adam, Christ, doth him, who was the Epitome of his World, as Christ is of ours. We have the Addition of new Objects, and those glorious, heavenly, wholly supernaturall. In Christ a new Indies is discovered, a new Treasure broken up, which Adam should never have heard of.

CHAP. VIII.

How Adam, and his state, according to the Law of his first Creation, was intended by God as a Type of one, who was to be a second Adam, Jesus Christ, and the Founder of a Supernatural Condition. Some things premis'd of the Nature, and various division of a Type. Wherein Adam was a Type of Christ: As he was in his state of Innocency a publick Person and the Head of Mankind, and so derived to his Posterity the Imputation of his Disobedience; so he was a Type of Christ, as preordained before the World was, and without consideration of the Fall, to be the Root, and Head of the Elect, and to convey to them the Supernatural benefits of Grace.

Rom. V. 14.

Who is the Type of him that was to come.

When I first considered this, and other Scriptures in the New Testament, which make the First Adam, and the whole Story of him; both before, and after, in his sinning or falling, to be the Type and lively Shadow of Christ the Second Adam; likewise observing that the Apostle Paul stands admiring at the Greatness of this Mystery, or Mystical Type, that Christ the second Adam, should so wonderfully be Shadowed forth therein: As, Ephes. 5. 32. he cries out, This is a great Mystery: Which he speaks, applying and fitting some passages about Adam and Eve unto Christ and his Church; it made me more to consider an Interpretation of a Passage in Heb. 10. 7. out of Psal 40. 7. which I before had not only not regarded, but wholly rejected, as being too like a Postil Gloss. The Passage is, That When Christ came into the World, to take our Nature on him, he alledgeth the reason of it to be, the fulfilling of a Scripture written in the beginning of Gods book; [ἐν ἀρχῇ τοῦ βιβλίου] so out of the Original the words may be (and are by many Interpreters) translated, though our Translation reads them only thus, [In the Volume of thy Book it is written of me] It is true indeed, that in that 4th Psalm, where they are quoted, the Words in the Hebrew may signifie no more than that in Gods Book (the manner of writing which was anciently in Rolls of Parchment, folded up in a Volume) Christ was every where written and spoken of. Yet the word [ἀρχῆς] (which out of the Septuagints Translation the Apostle took) signifying (as all know) the beginning of a Book; and we finding such an Emphasis set by the Apostle in the 5th Chapter of the Ephesians, upon the History of Adam in the beginning of Genesis, as containing the Mystery, yea the great Mystery about Christ; it did somewhat induce, though not so fully perswade me to think, that the Holy Ghost in those words might have some glance at the Story of Adam in the first of the first Book of Moses:
K
And

And withal the rather, because so, the words so understood, do intimate a higher and farther inducement to Christ to assume our Nature; the Scope of the Speech, Heb. 10. being to render the reason why he so willingly took Mans Nature: Not only because God liked not Sacrifice and burnt Offering, which came in but upon occasion of Sin and after the Fall, and could not take sins away; But further that he was Prophecied of, and his Assuming a Body prophetically, fore-signified, as in the 40th Psalms, so even by Adams story before the Fall, recorded in the very beginning of Genesis, which many other Scriptures do expressly applie it unto. As in his first Formation, and the Condition of his Person; 1 Cor. 15. 45, &c. And so it is written, The first Man Adam was made a living Soul, the last Adam was made a quickning Spirit. So in his marriage with Eve, Ephes. 5. 32. This is a great mystery; but I speak concerning Christ and the Church. And then in his Sovereignty over all, Psal. 8. 6. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands: Thou hast put all things under his feet. And Heb. 2. 8. Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him. So likewise in the communication of his sin he typified out the Communication of Christs Obedience, as Rom. 5.

I shall choose to begin with this last Place of Rom. 5. as laying the general Foundation for all the rest. The words there, do (as you see) plainly affirm, that Adam was a Type of Christ to come; Vers. 14. and the occasion of uttering them was the comparing of Adam and Christ together (which the Apostle in this Chapt. doth at large) as they were both of them Publick Persons; the one conveying sin, the other Righteousness, to all their Posterity. And as the ground-work of that his Comparing of them, he brings in this Maxim, That Adam was a Type of Christ to come: That is, Christ being as surely to come after him, as Adam was then come already. Therefore God appointed Adam, as to be a Publick Person to convey to his Posterity what he should do, or be, so further also, to be a Type of an other Adam, who was to come after him, namely Jesus Christ: And said to be to come; not because that proved to be the Event of it, that Christ did do so; but because it was foreseen, aimed at, and appointed by God, even by the History of Adam. And hereupon it is the Apostle sets the one against the other, as the Type and Anti-type, exactly comparing them in what he had propounded to compare them in. And although in that Place it be but one Particular wherein he doth compare them, namely in Adams conveying sin, wherein he typified out Christ to come, who should convey Righteousness; yet this Axiom he brings as the warrant for it: For this Collation is more General and so extendeth to all Particulars else of Adams Story: As wherein he was also a Type, as well as in this. For it is usual with the Apostles (as it is with all other Discourfers) in arguing, to bring General Axioms for the proof of some one Particular. Thus for the comfort of the Saints in Afflictions, Rom. 8. 25, 28. &c. he brings in a General Axiom, which reacheth to all things else, namely That All things work together for their good, Vers. 28. And another, Vers. 29. We are predestinated to be conformed to the Image of his Son; which conformation reacheth to all things both of Grace and Glory: But he there alledgeth it only in point of Afflictions, and for a Conformity to his Sufferings; which is but one Particular. And so here, when he calls Adam a Type of him who was to come, he applies it indeed but to one Particular in this Place: But it is a General Maxim, extendible to many things more, wherein Christ was typified out by Adam; as by other Scriptures doth appear.

But before I explain any of those Scriptures, I will first shew what is meant by [Type] as here it is taken.

A Type of a thing to come, is a Prophetical resemblance wherein something more imperfect going before, is intended by God to signifie some other thing more noble and perfect to follow after. In the proper signification of the word, it signifies a Print, Stamp, or Impression, bearing the resemblance of that which made it. As the Letters wherewith Men Print, are called τύποι, Typis mandetur, says the Priviledge) because they leave the Print of themselves upon upon Paper, and the Letters Printed bear the resemblance of those Stamps which made them : So that ,

Chap. 8.

I. It notes out a Resemblance between two things ; which sometimes in Scripture are called Allegories : So Galat. 4. 24. the Story of Hagar and Sarah is made the Allegory of the two Covenants : That is, a continued Similitude. So likewise they are called παραβολαί, Heb. 9. 9. that is, comparisons made of things like, such as Christ used, and υποδείγματα, Subostensiones, obscure, underhand resemblances, (Heb. 8. 5.) and Shadows ; and Hebr. 7. 4. Melchisedech is said to be made like to Christ, as being his Type.

Secondly, When the thing typified is to come, then it notes out a Prophetic resemblance intended by God ; and so it differs from a meer likeness, or Allusion, or Pattern or Example. There are many Stories in the Scripture, which fell out exceeding like to many Passages about Christ. As the instance of Job in his Sufferings, which in as many Particulars resembles Christ's Sufferings, as any other whatever in Holy Writ ; as in his being emptied of All ; and from being One who thought it no robbery to be equal with the Princes of the Earth, in Riches and Honours, becoming Poor (even so poor, that it grew into a Proverb, and is currant to this day) and stript naked of all, being abhorred of his Acquaintance, mockt by those who had been his Vassals, and forsaken of his Friends, (as Christ of his Disciples) God himself hiding his Face from him, and holding him for his Enemy, Job 13. 24. as he did hide his Face from Christ, when he hung naked on the Cross, and cried out, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me. And yet for all this, that Job was herein a Type of Christ to come, we have no warrant to affirm, though some have done it : So likewise may many other Stories more hold the like resemblance : But Types they are not, unless they be Prophetically intended by God, so to signifie. Thus Hebr. 9. 2. the Apostle speaking of a Type in the Old, says, [The Holy Ghost thereby signifying, &c.] and therefore, Hebr. 8. 5. he says, they did serve as Examples, but, as instituted by God, for he alledgeth God's words to Moses on the Mount ; See (says he) that you make all according to the pattern in the Mount. Wherefore no more of the Histories, or whatever Institutions else in the Old Testament than we find applyed by the Holy Ghost, either in the Prophets, by way of Prophecy of what should be under the New Testament (they speaking of the worship, &c. of the New Testament under the Language of the Old Types) or which else in the New Testament it self are so applyed by the Holy Ghost, may we dare to make use of, or call Types. And the Reason is, because for things Historical to signifie, is ex instituto, they do it naturally ; therefore we must have a word of institution or warrant from God, that so intended them ; or otherwise we can found no matter of certainty upon them, neither will they be sanctified in the opening of them, to work upon the heart, as being human significations only, and as unlawful, as they are. Allusions, I grant, we may make of them, for illustration sake : As Amos 6. 6. the Holy Ghost laying forth their sin, expresseth it under the Similitude of Joseph's Story, and of the chief Butler of Pharaoh [They drink Wine in Bowls, but are not grieved for the Affliction of Joseph] yet none will say, it was intended as a Type of this Carriage of theirs ; but he aptly expresseth it by that. And so Isai. 1. 10. he calls the Princes of Israel, Rulers of Sodom. In like manner, Things in Nature we may make Similitudes of, by reason of a fitness in them to resemble : and so God intended them to help us (whose Understandings are tyed to our Senses here) in our apprehensions of Spiritual things ; for which reason our Saviour Christ abounded in such Similitudes and Parables. As in that Sermon to Nicodemus, where he expressed the work of Grace, by a New Birth ; and the working of God's Spirit therein, by the Blowing of the wind, John 3. 8. which Nicodemus not yet understanding, says Christ, If I have told you earthly things, and you believe not, &c. that is, have endeavoured by Similitudes drawn from earthly things, to make you understand heavenly. So that as they say, God hath made no kind of thing on the Earth, but it hath its like in the Sea ; so there is scarce any thing heavenly, but he appointed something in Nature to resemble it ; which notwithstanding is no Type (although it be a resemblance) of it, because not Prophetically intended by God to fore-signifie them as to come: Which Types do serve not only to help us to conceive aright of the things to come, but also are Predictions that they will come to pass, and so may help our Faith as well as our Understanding: So that, a word from God to explain these was needful, but those other are left to Man's wit to fit and apply them.

Thirdly, In the Description of a Type, I add [to signifie] which differenceth these Types from bare and meer Examples, which do only forewarn, or call to an Imitation: And therefore, though they be of things passed, yet are they not in this Sense, of things to come: although because they are Patterns, the word be used of them, as Phil. 3. 17. you have the word [τύπος] put for an Example: and so all God's dealings with the Israelites are called τύπος, Examples, or Types, as the Margent hath it: But how? not as fore-signifying, so much as fore-warning; and therefore it follows, They were written for our admonition. But so, Adam could not be a Type of Christ, for him to imitate, or to be fore-warned by, but to fore-signifie. Many things indeed in the story of the Old Testament were Types fore-signifying, as well as fore-warning; as their not entering into Canaan, and God's swearing in his wrath, is made a Type of not entering into Heaven, in Hebr. 3. 11. and Chap. 4. 3. and so I deny not, but that those Passages they recorded, might Typifie out the Hypocrisie of many professing the Gospel (which seems also to be the Apostle's scope) yet Principally they are to forewarn. And if so, yet it follows not that All things then fell out, as Types fore-signifying: For he says not simply [τις ἀρὰς] but [πάντα ταυτά] all these things] that is, those Particulars mentioned in the former Verses: so as, none but such things as God hath in some word or other declared to be Signs and Types, are to be so judged, though otherwise never so like in view.

Fourthly, I put in, That the Things that are thus made Types of things to come, are things more imperfect; and the things typified by them more glorious and perfect. Thus Coloss. 2. 17. the Types of the Law are called but The shadows of good things to come; and Christ signified by them, the Body; that is, He is as the Body of the Sun, and They but as the Shadow which the Sun makes: So the dwelling of God in the Temple was a Type, yet but as the Presence of a Man in his shadow: But oppositely it is said, In Christ dwells the fulness of the Godhead bodily; Coloss. 2. 9. So Hebr. 9. 24. Those things that are Typical, are but Figures of the things typified: And no other were all those brave men, who were made Types of Christ.

Fifthly, I inserted, That in a way of Resemblance the Things signified do answer fitly unto them that signifie, as the Impress does to the Stamp that made it. Therefore, 1 Peter 3. 21. Baptism is called ἀντίτυπον, that is, a like Figure.

Now sometimes they resemble, either

1. In a likeness or similitude: So Adam was like Christ; Ephes. 5. 32. This is a great mystery: but I speak concerning Christ and the Church.
2. In a way of Antithesis or Opposition: So Rom. 5. 18. Therefore as by the offence of one, Judgment came upon all men to condemnation: even so by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life. Adam conveyed Sin, and Christ conveyed Grace. Or,
3. In a way of Eminency or Transcendency: So Christ excels Adam; 1 Cor. 15. 45, 46. And so it is written: The first man Adam was made a living Soul, the last Adam was made a quickning Spirit. Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual: but that which is natural, and afterward that which is spiritual. Yet they some way answer, and are correspondent, as Type and Anti-type, which is enough.

Now having thus explained what a Type is, I proceed to shew, how Adam and his whole Story was intended by God as a more imperfect Type going before, to signifie and set forth Christ as to come. Now I find some, who do indeed acknowledge a Similitude between the first and second Adam, and that Adam may in that respect be called a Type of Christ; but yet only Naturalis Typus, and so to signifie him but as a natural thing or story, may be brought to represent and illustrate another like unto it; by way of Parallel, but not ex institute, as so intended by God in a way of Institution, as the Types of the Old Law were, which did serve to the Example and Shadow of Christ, Hebr. 8. 5. and were on purpose framed to that end: But so (says he) Adam was not intended by God; for that would insinuate that God intended Christ should be Incarnate, before the Fall, and ordained Adam but as his fore-runner. Now therefore the Point which I intend to manifest, and first to prove in the general only, is, That Adam and his Story are not only things which hold a likeness with things about Christ, and out of which Similitude may be drawn for Illustration; but which were intended by God to fore-signifie Christ to come; and to assume an Human Nature: And this not only in respect unto the Fall, but for other respects also. Wherefore Adam was ordained to be Christ's Type, as to come, and that not simply upon the Fall, but before, in his first Creation and estate of Innocency. And though it be true indeed, that he had not come thus in the form of a Servant into this world, but upon a Supposition of the Fall, nor had his Human Nature been the Seed of the Woman, nor he born of the Virgin Mary else: Which Promise of Christ was therefore, in respect of such a way of coming into the World, given after the Fall only. And though in the execution of things, Christ first took frail flesh, and came in the form of a Servant, and God so decreed it as he had done the Fall; yet in his primary Intention, his chief and primary Decree, his eye and first aim was at his Sons having such a state and condition in his Human Nature, as he hath now in Heaven glorified. This was first in God's Intention, though last in Execution. And of this state and condition of Christ's Human Nature glorified as to come, was Adam before his Fall the Type, as in the Sequel will appear.

Chap. 8.
Cameron in Myrothec. cap.
5. ad Ephes.

Now for the Proof of this, namely That Adam and all his Story before the Fall, was a Type of Christ in the Sense before given; not only by way of Illustration, (as any other Similitude or thing like may be brought to illustrate another) but by way of Ordination, as so intended by God, to fore-Typifie, and Shadow out Christ as to come.

First, Let us see what these words; Rom. 5. 14. (who is the Type of him that was to come) will afford: out of which this seems to be made plain.

1. In that Adam is called; not only a Type; which (as formerly hath been explained) imports more than a bare Similitude: But also a Type [of him that was to come] he says not, of him that was come; this argues him to be a Prophetical Type, and that Christ was intended as the Anti-type fore-signified thereby: And so Adam not to be only as a Similitude that would serve to illustrate Christ then when he is come. The like Phrase we have, used of the Ceremonial Types, whose institution (all grant) was more for to Typifie Christ to come, than to serve for a Present use in Worship (though so they also did;) Now of them it is said, Colloss. 2. 7. They were a shadow, or, Type [of things to come;] so likewise, Heb. 10. 1. and Heb. 8. 5. where they are said ἀσπίον, to serve in Worship to this end, for a double use they then had: 1. To make up a Worship to God in those Times: 2. As Types to fore-signifie things to come. Therefore Heb. 9. 9. they are called a Figure for the present time (then when in use, as parts of worship,) to figure out things to come; And that was their Primary use. Now the like, say I, of Adam and his Story, and the World made for him in Innocency; That although it was a glorious instance, and manifestation of many of Gods Attributes, as of his Holiness, in making him after Gods Image, so of his Power, and Justice, and Wisdom, more than all Gods other Visible Works (all which, God made for him) and this it was simply in it self considered, although God should never have intended any thing further thereby, but have rested in it: Yet I say further, That besides

besides this, it was intended as much, yea more, to be a Type, and a Figure of Christ and his World which was to come (as the Phrase is, Heb. 2. 15.) and of Christ here, Rom. 5. 14. that he was to come, and in comparison thereof, Adam was but as a Shadow to the Body of this Sun.

And in the second Place, for the confirmation of that latter part of this Assertion, (or rather the Appendix unto it) that Christ was appointed a Root to his Elect, before, or rather, without respect had unto the Fall: I argue out of this Place thus, and ask wherein it was, that Adam was a Type of Christ to come? Why (as it is plain by the Context) in his conveying Disobedience; So Vers. 12, 13, 14. In him all Men sinned; and so sin and Death came upon all: He shews how in a way of Antithesis or opposition (yet bearing a likeness and resemblance) he Typified out Christ in his Obedience, (So Vers. 17, 18, 19.) which comes upon all his Elect by the like imputation; and They are made Righteous by that One Mans Obedience, as Sinners by that One Mans Disobedience. Now if we examin the Ground why all sinned in him, and why his Disobedience made all sinners; it was in that he was a Publick Person, representing all Mankind, as Christ also was. And so the main Ground of the Apottles comparing them lies in this, That both of them, as Publick Persons, were Two Roots and Principles, and so Adam the Type of him, who was also (says he) to come and be a Common Head and Root, as Adam was. Now I ask when did Adam become a Common Person first; what, not untill the moment of his sinning? Surely yes; he was such before, even in the State of Innocency: For he had not in Justice been a Publick Person in sinning, if he had not first been such in standing; He had not been such for evil, if he had not first been such for good. And so he was therefore a publick Person in sinning, because formerly in Innocency he had been so considered by God: So as, in God's first Decree to Create him, he must needs have ordained him withal to be a common Person: And therefore at the instant before, or at the time when God made Adam, he says (Gen. 1. 26.) Let us make Man (it is in the Hebrew [Adam] according to our Image. In which words [Adam] or [Man] in the singular Number, is put for all Mankind; even as in that Promise, Galat. 3. 16. it was observed by the Apostle, that he had said, not unto [Seeds] as many, apart, of themselves, but to [Seed] as to One, a publick Person, for all the rest; which Seed was Christ, as including all the Elect in him. Now so he says (in that place of Genesis) not [Men] as speaking of them severally, in their own Persons; but [Man] or rather [Adam] that One, first Man, as the Root of All; in whom, as in a publick person, All were created. And therefore, that so he might be understood in that Speech, he adds (in the next words following) the Plural Number, saying, [And let them subdue, &c.] as speaking of All his Posterity considered in him. Thus therefore God looks at him in his Decree of Creation. Now from this Rom. 5. it is evident, that when he became to be a publick Person, then he began also to be a Type; for he was a Type, as he was a publick Person, and a Root of Mankind; that is the ground of it, and lies not in his sinning only: For he had not been a Type in sinning, if he had not first been a Publick Person, in respect of good and holy Actions, to have conveyed the benefit of them, as well as of his sin, to covey the evil of it: And so before this his Fall, he was a Type of Christ to come, as a Root to his Elect, to convey some benefit to them, namely, the Glory in Heaven, and this, before the consideration of Adam's Fall, as will afterwards appear out of another Scripture.

C H A P. IX.

The Explication of the words of the Text : In what Particulars they make a Comparison of Christ the Type, and Adam the Anti-type. In their Persons, as Adam had in him a Principal of Natural Life, so Christ has of Spiritual. As publick Persons, and Heads of Mankind, as Adam conveys his Natural Life, so Christ his Spiritual. 'Tis proved out of the same Text, That Adam before his Fall, was thus intended as a Propbetick Type of Christ to come, as the Head of the Elect, who as a publick Person, should advance them to the like glorious Condition as himself had in Heaven. The Glory of this Accomplishment was appointed for him; without consideration of the Fall. That Interposing, he came and suffered, and dyed, to remove the Obstacles that the Fall had laid in the way of the Execution of the Work first designed.

I COR. XV. 44. to 50.

—There is a Natural Body, and there is a Spiritual Body. And so it is written : The first Man Adam was made a living Soul ; the last Adam was made a quickning Spirit. Howbeit, that was not first which is Spiritual ; but that which is Natural, and afterward that which is Spiritual. The first Man is of the Earth, earthy ; the second Man is the Lord from Heaven. As is the earthy, such are they that are earthy ; and as is the heavenly, such are they that are heavenly. And as we have born the Image of the earthy, we shall also bear the Image of the heavenly.

THOSE words out of Rom. 5. I took but for a general Ground-work ; because they so expressly call Adam a Type of Christ to come. And though that Scripture delivers this general Maxim, which in many Particulars doth hold, yet it instanceth in nothing but the imputation of his Disobedience, which is indeed in order the last Particular, wherein Adam did sustain a publick Person, and wherein he was a Type of Christ, conveying the benefit of his most perfect Obedience : after which, he ceased to be a publick Person in all other Acts of his, & so that Particular is to be insisted on last in this Discourse. But other Scriptures do instance in many other Particulars before his Fall (at which time (as I shewed) he was a publick Person, as well as in his Fall) and do make him to have been the Type of Christ therein also, as pre-ordained by God to come ; which will more fully confirm that Assertion already laid down.

I

BOOK II. I will take the Scriptures as they lye in order: And first, this in 1 Cor. 15. 44, 45, &c. because indeed it makes Adam a Type of Christ from the first of his Creation, which is the highest that we can go. And as in that fifth of the Romans, the Scope is to shew, that Adam was a Type of Christ, as he was a publick Person, in respect of his Actions, to convey the Merit, or Demerit of them; as in like manner Christ by his Actions conveys Righteousness and Life: So here, the Apostles Scope is to shew, that Adam was also his Type, in respect of that condition and state of Life, and qualifications of his own Person, given him as a publick Person; and of what, at his first Creation before his Fall (even in his Formation) he received, to convey the like to us; which is the thing I out of this place shall chiefly urge.

The Resemblance between these two, in that fifth of the Romans, is (in respect of the things conveyed) a Similitude of Contraries, or Opposites:

By the One came { Sin, } By the other { Righteousness, with this Dissimilitude for the measure of what is conveyed; That Christ exceeds in his; he conveys abundance of Righteousness, and a better Life; whereof Sin and Death were the Privation.

But the Resemblance between these two, in this of the Corinthians, is carried on by a comparing the Condition of the One with the other, (which is the thing conveyed) in a way of Eminency and Disparity; which yet answer each to other, as Type and Anti-type. The One was made a living Soul, and the Other a quickning Spirit: between which for Excellency, there is as much disparity, as between Heaven and Earth; and yet an answering of each other in that Disparity, as Type and Anti-type use to do:

Living } answering to { Quickning } Verse 45.
Soul } Spirit.

Natural } answering to { Spiritual, Verse 46.
Earthly } Heavenly, Verse 48.

yet so, as for the Ground of conveying both, they agree alike, as in the former, That they were ordained two Roots, correspondent each to other.

Now in handling this Scripture, I shall observe this Method:

1. I will shew the Coherence, Scope, and Connexion of these words, and open those Phrases in them which most conduce to the understanding of them.

Secondly, When they are explained, I will raise Arguments from them, to confirm that Assertion already laid down, namely, That Adam was before his Fall, a Prophetick Type of Christ to come.

And thirdly, I will open those Particulars (which this Scripture holds forth) wherein he was ordained Christ's Type as then.

The Apostles Scope in that Chapter, is, (as all know) to prove the Resurrection, which he had by many Arguments done, unto Vers. 35. the main of which was drawn from the Resurrection of Christ, in whom all his Elect must live, as in Adam all dyed, Vers. 21, 22.

But then, if the Question be made, With what Body, or in what State and Condition of Life they shall rise, and afterwards live in? (which Question he puts Verse 35.) He answers, Verse 38. (as in the 36th and 37th he had done to a former Query) That for Matter and Substance, it is the same Body that they had before, [their own Body, Verse 38.] but for Qualifications and adornments, and so for the Condition of their Persons, and their State of Life then, these shall differ from what they are now, as much as a Clod of Earth, a Body Terrestrial, differs from a Star in Heaven, a Body Celestial. It is the the Apostles own Illustration, Verse 40. and so he goes on to difference them, unto Verse 44. where he adds another difference between them, calling the one a Natural Body, the other a Spiritual Body; which, though differing in terms, is notwithstanding the same with the former,

But because these Similitudes, though they illustrate this difference of Bodies, yet prove nothing; therefore from the 44th Verse, he proceeds to prove, that God had ordained two such differing Conditions of Life, and of Bodies, for the Sons of Men: The one Common to all Men, the other more glorious, peculiar to his Elect; which he Positively lays down, and expresseth in this Thesis or Proposition: There is a natural Body, and there is a Spiritual Body: that is, there are to be two such Conditions for some of Mankind; God hath ordained both these states for Men: or as some Copies have it, and as the Vulgar Translation reads those words, If there be a natural Body, then there is a spiritual Body; (so making the one the consequence of the other:) [οἱ ἐστὶ σῶμα ψυχικόν, ἐστὶ δὲ σῶμα πνευματικόν] which Assertion he proves, vers. 45, 46. and then forms up the Conclusion, verse 49. that as certainly as we see the one, we shall in like manner see the other. This Thesis, he proves from the differing Condition of the first and second Adam; the former being a Type of the latter, and both of them ordained to convey their likeness to Mankind. The Substance and Condition of Adam's Nature (the best of it) was but a reasonable Soul, becoming a Principle of Life to a Body created out of the Earth, and ordained to live in the Earth, which is meant by living Soul: But Christ's Person is the Godhead in the Person of the Son, or spirit quickning an Human Nature, ordained to live in Heaven, whereof he was Lord by Inheritance, verse 47. and his Argument lies in three Things thus; If the Soul can advance an earthly Body to such an excellent state of Life as Adam on Earth enjoyed; then what a glorious Spiritual Condition shall the Godhead, united to an Human Nature, raise that Nature up unto! And by consequent, his Elect also shall be raised to the like; for as Adam conveyed his Image (vers. 48, 49.) to his Posterity, so shall Christ transform his Elect to the Image of that Condition, which his Human Nature is raised up unto: which, if that of Adam's was but earthly, this must needs be heavenly; if that were animal, this must be spiritual. This is in brief, the Sum of his Discourse; which I shall make good by a larger opening, both of the principal Phrases, and of his Argumentation: For the ground upon which the Apostle builds the proof of both parts of his Assertion, are the words spoken by Moses of Adam, when he was first made; And so it is written (says he) the first Man Adam was made a living Soul; the last Adam was made a quickning Spirit. You see that for his proof, he boldly hath recourse to the words spoken of Adam's state of Life, and condition of Body at his first formation. Now e're that I can shew whereupon the Ground of the Apostles Argument from thence derived, is founded; I must explain what is meant by [living Soul] and [quickning Spirit]. [Soul] (as was said) is opposed to [Spirit] and [living] to [quickning].

Vide Flaccium in Var. Lett.

1. By [Soul] is primarily meant that more noble part of Man, by a Synecdoche (such as is familiar both with Jews and Grecians); thereby is also meant, the whole Man, consisting both of Soul and Body. The Grecians use the word [Body] for the whole; A Body hast thou fitted me, Hebr. 10. 5. that is, an Human Nature, consisting of Body and Soul. The Jews put the Soul for the whole; So many Souls came out of Jacob's Loins, Exod. 1. So as, the whole Person of Adam, the whole Nature; Substance of Man, he consisted of, is expressed by [Soul] putting that which was the most excellent part; to express the whole Man. So that, his Scope is first to compare the Substance of which Adam's Person consisted, with that of Christ's: Adam but a Soul giving Life to a Body; but Christ, a Spirit or God; quickning an Human Nature. He mentions the difference of them, quoad substantiam, because it was the foundation of the difference in their Conditions.

And so, 2ly, [living] Soul doth connote and import also that Animal state of Life which Adam's Soul enjoyed in his Body, far short of that which the Spirit in Christ raiseth the Human Nature to, yea, or such a Condition as pure Spirits, the Angels do enjoy. That reasonable Soul inspired into Adam being ing confined, and clogged with a Body taken out of Earth, depending in its Operations upon the Organs in it, and lived in it an earthly Life, depending on Meat, Drink, Sleep, &c. in its own proper works of Reasoning depending on Fancy, and joyned with a possibility of dying, though not then reduceable to Act, till after the Fall, the Curse said [Mortis]. And that living Soul is thus here to be taken, appears by that which he in the other Verses expresseth it by, calling it [ψυχὴν] an Animal Body, such as Beasts have, and [ἐπίγειον] earthly, vers. 47, 48. that is, a state and condition of his Soul in a Body suitable to this Earth, and assimilated to the things of the Earth, to take in help and comfort from them, and in working to depend on them. Now for the opposite Phrase of [quickning Spirit].

i. By Spirit, he means the Divine Nature or Godhead in Christ, which being ordained to assume an Human Nature, and therein to become a second Adam, he was made a quickning Spirit, namely, to that Human Nature, by raising up that Human Nature to a God-like Glory and Sovereignty, and exalting it to the form of God, to have Life in himself independently, as God hath; yea, even a fountain of Life within himself; and so, as to have the very Body of that Human Nature spiritualised, and advanced to a Glory higher than the Heavens, or Angels, who are Spirits.

Now that the Divine Nature of the second Person, or Son of God, as he is God, is called Spirit, we have many Scriptures besides, which give in their Testimony: Thus Hebr. 9. 14. it is said, He offered up himself, (that is, his Human Nature, as the Sacrifice) by the eternal Spirit, (that is, his Godhead, as the Priest). So 1 Peter 3. 18. it is said, He was put to death in the Flesh, (that is, in the Human Nature) but quickned by the Spirit; or his Divine Nature, being thereby raised up, and exalted to that high and glorious spiritual Life, which that Flesh of his, now in Heaven, enjoys. Thus also John 6. 63. It is the Spirit that quickneth: that is, the Godhead of Christ; it is that which hath that transcendent Power of giving Life and Glory; the Flesh (or Human Nature of it self) profiteth nothing, were it not quickned and raised by the Spirit, to which it is united. And so answerably, by [quickning] is meant, the communicating all that glorious Life and Power (in the utmost extent of it) which from the union of that Human Nature with the Spirit, or Divine Nature, must needs flow to it; even the dwelling of the fulness of the Godhead therein bodily, and communicating God-like Properties and Excellencies, and Glory, and a Life suitable to such an Union; and so as to have a Fountain of Life within himself, and of himself, and Power over all Flesh; and to live a Life above what earthly Souls do; yea, above what is enjoyed by Angels, the life of a Lord from Heaven, (as verse 47.) and so an heavenly life, unto which his Body was not only to be raised, but he to be the Lord of that life, having life and quickning in himself, not depending upon any thing else, as the life of Men on Earth does, and as the life of the first Adam was dependent on Creatures for nourishment, &c. and the acting and operation of his Soul, and motion of his Body, depending on Bodily Spirits, maintained and supplied by other Creatures. But Christ's Godhead supplies Life, Motion, Quickning, Vigour, Power, and all unto his Human Nature immediately from it self. And so the Comparison runs thus: If Adam's Soul caused his Body, made of Earth, and remaining such, to live, and put such a Glory upon it (above what is in Beasts) that the Image of God shined in it; then what a Life, what a Glory, must the whole Human Nature, both Body and Soul, of Christ, be raised up unto, whenas the Godhead, or Spirit, shall be (in a manner) unto both the Body and Soul, That which Adam's Soul was to his Body, the Quickner, and immediate Principle of Life, Motion, and Glory unto both? and dwelling therein, break forth in its fulness, and so cause such an Image of the Godhead to shine forth therein, as in a transcendent Proportion shall excel that in Adam, as much as the Godhead excels Adam's Soul, which was the Supreme immediate Principle of Life in him. Thus Christ and Adam are compared together in their own Persons, singly and alone considered: And in this Sense given, the One was but a living Soul, the Other is a quickning Spirit.

But, 2ly, There is a further Meaning or Look which these Phrases do cast, and that is, as they are considered as two Roots or Principles of the like Life they themselves have, which they communicate to those that are of them: Chap. 9.

Thus, 1. Adam is called a living Soul, not simply in respect to that Life which his Soul gave his own Body, and which his own particular Person enjoyed from the Union of both: But further, as he was to be a Conveyer of the like Life to his Posterity: And so, the Phrase here, of his being a living Soul, is such another as we use in Philosophy, whenas we speak of the General Principle of Nature, calling it Natura Naturans: So Adam, being to be a Root of Life to Mankind, he is called (as it were, Anima animans) a living Soul; to shew, that Adam had Power, through God's Ordinance, to convey that Life and Souly Estate which himself had received: (Living being taken actively, or causally; unto others) as shewing what he was to be the Root of to others, as well as subjectively; as noting out that Life which was in himself.

And answerably in the second Place, the word [quickning] which is attributed to Christ, may be understood, not only in respect of that glorious Life which the God-head quickneth, or raiseth the Human Nature unto (as yet in the Places quoted, 1 Peter. 3. 18. and John 6. 63. it is Principally taken, and so also here) but further, it is spoken of him, as he is to be the Means, or Principle of Life unto us; to quicken; raise or advance our Earthly Bodies, which we received from Adam, unto a Spiritual and Heavenly Condition: And further to import what he will make our Souls to be in a conformity unto himself: To be even quickning Spirits to our Bodies, so as that our Souls motion and Acting shall not depend on our Bodies, nor they on other Creatures, as Adam did, but the Soul it self through his quickning of it shall quicken, and move, and act the Body, of itself immediately, without the help of Bodily Spirits; and so (in a Resemblance) be unto it, as the Spirit or God-head in Christ is unto his Human Nature, even a quickning Spirit: And so [quickning] is here causally taken for what Christ is to others; and this the rather, because he speaks in this Chapter of raising our Bodies, when Dead, unto a Spiritual Condition; which the word [quickning] likewise imports, namely a giving Life to dead Men: And so shews Christ's further Power than Adam's; who could only convey Life to his Posterity, who were not before, but could not quicken or raise dead Men, as Christ can.

But although this be one extent of the signification of the word [quickning] yet it is not to be confined to this only, as noting out only and meerly a raising up of dead Men: For Christ is also a quickning Spirit to those who shall be Changed at the Latter day, who shall not Dye. So that it ultimately imports rather an advancing Mens Bodies and Souls to a more transcendent Spiritual Life, than such as depends on Creatures in an Earthly way, as Adam's Life (he being but a living Soul) did, and making us to have such a Life as the Angels have, [ὡς ἄγγελος] our Souls in our Bodies living the like Life independent on Bodily Spirits, or Creatures, as they do, being made wholly a Principle of Life and Motion of themselves to themselves, and the Body also; when our Bodies shall not need to eat and drink, to maintain Life and Motion, but shall be quickned by the Soul, and Christ our Life, immediately; our Bodies then shall not be Earthly, (as the Phrase is, Verse 47.) suited to Earthly Contentments and Comforts: The Belly (or the suitableness in respect of receiving comfort, and need of meat) being destroyed, as well as Meat it self: And the Body then, being suited with new Habits, and fitnesses to receive that comfort from Christ, which once it did from these outward and Earthly Things: The Body being ordained for the Lord, and the Lord for the Body, even as he had said, the Belly was for Meat and Meat for the Belly, in this World. This you have, 1 Cor. 6. 13, 14, 15. diligently compared. The Body then shall be turned Spiritual, as here, verse 46 and Heavenly, as vers. 47, 48. and so, fitted to Christ, and that Heavenly World, as afore to this Earthly World; Himself then becoming a Quickner to us.

BOOK II. And the word here used both of Christ and Adam, [was made] the one a living Soul, the other a quickning Spirit, will very well serve both these senses given: So First, when it is said of Adam, he was [made] a living Soul, it properly and fitly imports, what he was Personally in himself, and how that in his First Creation he was made a living Soul. And so, when it is said of Christ, he was [made] a quickning Spirit, the meaning is the same with that in John 1. 18. where it is said, The word was [made] Flesh: So here, he who was God before (and so not made) is yet said to be made quickning Spirit: For, for the God-head to become a Quickner of an Human Nature, was a New Work done in the Earth, and a Work of Power; he was made that which he was not before.

Or secondly, It will fit the other Sense also, namely to signifie what both were appointed to be, namely to others. For the word [made] to be] is often taken for [appointed] to be] as Heb. 3. 2. Moses was Faithful to him who appointed him; in the Greek it is, [who made him] as reserving to that Publique Office into which God had put him: So 1 Sam. 12. 6. God made Aaron and Moses: (so it is in the Hebrew) that is, advanced them to that Publique Office. Many such Instances might be given. So that the Words quoted out of that Place in Genesis, do imply, that God appointed that first Man Adam to be a Publick Person, a common Root to convey to his Posterity, that Condition of Souls and Persons which he had received. And that this is meant in those words of Genesis, the manner of Speech does further argue: For it is not simply said, that he became a living Soul, but thus in the Original, both Hebrew there, and Greek here, it is to be readred, He became, or was made [for] a living Soul, [εἰς τὸ εἶναι ζῶσαν ψυχήν] that is, causally so to others: As 2 Chron. 18. 21. I will be [for] a lying Spirit; that is, unto all Ahab's Prophets, making them to lye, and so deceive him. It implies not only what that Spirit was in himself, but what he became to them. So here, he became [into] or [for] a living Soul; that is, unto all other Men, in propagating that Life to them which he had received. And though it be true, that he was in himself a living Soul (as also in that other Place that the Devil was a lying Spirit in himself) is true, (for he is so in himself, as well as to others; and therefore whereas in the Chronicles it is said, I will be for a lying Spirit, in the Book of the Kings it is only said, I will be a lying Spirit) yet that also was spoken in respect of what he was to be unto others. And hence, because the Apostle knew, that the Holy Ghost's purpose in that Speech in Genesis, was to signifie that he was so to Us, and constituted a Publique Person herein: Therefore, by way of Comment, he is bold to add to the Text, that which more fully explains the Words quoted, saying, And so it is written, The First Man Adam, &c. Those words [The First Man] are not in Genesis: But he knowing it was the Holy Ghost Scope, adds them. And that that Phrase here imports him to have been a Publique Person, I shall shew anon. Now the same meaning of the word [was made] will suit with what was said of Christ also, He was made; that is, appointed to be a quickning Spirit, (in the Sense afore given) to his Elect, which is spoken, as if then, when Adam was appointed as a Publique Person, to be a living Soul to his Posterity, Christ was lookt at as appointed also, Adam being therein but his Type; and so, as more imperfect, ordained to represent what Christ in a more transcendent and perfect manner, was made, or ordained of God to be.

The Phrase here being thus opened, we may the better discern wherein the Foundation and ground of the Apostles Argumentation lies. The thing which he was to prove, was (as hath been said) that there is an Heavenly, Spiritual Condition for Mens Bodies, far transcending their present condition in Earth, There is a Natural Body, and there is a Spiritual Body. For the Proof of which, he alleadgeth those words in Genesis; So it is written, (saies he) the First Man Adam was made a living Soul: Which words, if you take them Literally only, and as meant of Adam alone, do prove no more but the first Part of that Assertion; namely, that there was to be an Animal Body, such as Adam had, which was to be communicated to all Mankind from him, he being being to propagate all in his Image : And that part these Cavillers against the Resurrection, made no question of; for to prove this, common Experience had been enough : But thence to argue that other Part that follows, That the last Man should be a quickning Spirit, and so raise up the Bodies of his Members to a Spiritual Condition, can no other waies be done but by making Gods intent in that Place of Genesis to have been, to make that first Adam a Type therein of Christ a Second Adam; and this is truly intended (in a Type) as the first Adam himself was, of whom only the words Literally do run : Yea, and further, Adam therein to be but such a Type as this other that was to succeed should excell; and he accordingly therefore should raise his Members to a higher and more glorious Condition; such as Spirit in him raised him unto, even above Soul, or that Estate which the Soul in Adams Earthly Body enjoyed. And upon this Ground the Apostles Argument will fully hold, to prove the one, as well as the other : This being supposed, that it was as much the Holy Ghost's meaning in those words of Genesis, to intend the one, as the other. And that was so evidently thus, that the Apostle hath a recourse to those words as a sufficient proof of what he said : Which is founded upon this, that Types may be alledged for proof (when we are sure of the Holy Ghost's intendment in them, as Paul (who had the Spirit, and wrote infallibly) here was) as well as any other Scriptures. It hath passed for a received Maxim among some Divines, that the Mystical Sense of Scripture cannot be alledged to prove Matters of Faith; and that therefore all such Mystical Significations serve only for Illustration : Symbolica Theologia nihil probat. And this Axiom is of use against the boldness of them, who turn all the Letter into Mystical meanings, not from any warrant from Scripture, but out of their own Fancies, where they found things that had any mutual resemblance. But when we know, and are assured, that the Holy Ghost hath made a thing a Type, and know his meaning therein, we may as boldly, warrantably, and efficaciously alledge it as any Literal Text whatsoever. For so that which is said of the Paschal Lamb, Exod. 12. that the bones were not to be broken; this being the Type, it is said, John 19. They brake not his Leggs, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, &c. So the Apostle alledgeth a Type, 1 Tim. 5. 17. 18. where urging the duty of honouring those who labour in the word, he says, [For it is written, thou shalt not muzzle the Ox that treadeth out the Corn.]

Vide Tenax in
Hebr. Prelud. 4.
92. Num.

To return therefore to the matter in hand; observe we farther, That the Apostle not only hath recourse to these words in Genesis for his proof, but is bold to add to the Text, (and to the Literal Sense there, to annex the Mystical meaning, as if it were therein as much intended as the Literal) saying, The last Adam was made a quickning Spirit : (which words are not in the Text in Genesis.) For he knowing this to be the Holy Ghost's aim in those words concerning Adam, supplied it (as if it were in the Text, and a part of what was written) so to make up the Sense and meaning full and complete.

2. And so I come to the second Head propounded, which from what hath been last said, riseth naturally up unto us, as the General Doctrine of this Scripture, namely, that former Assertion, That Adam was intended by God before his Fall, as a Prophetick Type of Christ to come, who as a Head or publick Person, should advance his Elect to the like glorious Condition as himself had in Heaven. Which Assertion, though it hath been the Natural Consequent of what hath been already said; yet it is further established unto us, by these Considerations out of the Text added unto the former; I shall make out the Proofs of the whole, by proving each Particular by peace-meal and apart; and all out of the words of the Text.

As, 1. That Adam was Christ's Type, is further evident to have been the Apostle's meaning; in that he calls Christ Adam, [the last Adam] of which there is no other Reason but this, that he calls him by the Name of his Type; it being usual in Scripture, to call the Thing typified by the Name of the Type.

So

BOOK II.

So Christ is elsewhere called the High Priest, &c. his Body the Temple, and his Blood the Propitiation.

2. He makes Adam to have been Christ's Type, as he was ordained a publick Person or Head of Mankind; and therefore he here calls Adam, The first Man. Now in what respect or relation was he the first Man? Not simply, as being first in order, (as the Scripture means, when it says, the first day of the Week) but as a common Root, who had received what he was, that he might convey it to all other Men: Which appears by the Opposition, in that he calls Christ the last Adam, in the following words, and the second Man in verse 47. And therefore, in relation unto Adam's typifying out of Christ, he calls him the first Man. Now if it had been spoken in respect of order, Cain was the second Man, and God knows who shall be the last. But this is so spoken of these two, as if God had made, and look't at two Men only, for ever to be in the World, because he look't at them as including All, and as two Roots of All, who had all Men at their Girdles, as being both of them publick Persons, set to convey what they were, and received unto their several Posterities.

3. He is made Christ's Type in respect of his conveying the like Condition of Soul and Body, as himself had, to those that came of him; in that Christ should in like manner convey the same glorious Qualifications which the Soul and Body received. Therefore, Verse 48. it is said, As is the earthy Adam, such are those of him; and as is the heavenly Adam, such are his Elect, even ordained to be heavenly, like him. These import likeness in the Qualifications of their Persons. And again, Verse 49. it is said, As we have born the Image of the earthy, so we shall bear the Image of the heavenly. So that, in respect of the Condition and Glory of his Person, he was a Type of Christ, as well as in his Actions.

And in the fourth place, He was herein a Prophetick Type of Christ; not only a Natural Similitude that may serve to illustrate, but as further intended by God to fore-signifie such another second Adam (yet more perfect) as certainly decreed by God for to come, as that himself then was made a living Soul. For the manifestation of this, (besides that which follows in the Fifth Head, which makes for this also) there are these two Things, evidencing it to us out of the words of the Text.

1. That the Apostle hath recourse to Adam, and his Condition, as a Proof and Argument to make good this Assertion; That the Elect were to be advanced in their Bodies unto a Spiritual Condition in Heaven, by Christ a second Adam, as a quickning Spirit, because it was written of the first Adam, That he was made a living Soul. Now if Adam had been but a Natural Type, by way of Similitude only, this had then been no Argument; for such Similitudes do illustrate, but prove nothing. It remains therefore, that he must necessarily be a Prophetick Type, intended by God to fore-signifie Christ to come.

Add to this, Secondly, The words of the 49th Verse, which are the Conclusion of his Argument, wherewith he winds up this part of his Discourse; affirming out of his former Allegations, That as we have born the Image of the Earthy, so we shall bare the Image of the Heavenly Adam: That is, as certainly the one as the other. He brings in this as an Inference that must certainly, and necessarily follow: That as we have born Adam's Image, we shall also bear Christ's. He mentions it as a support for our Faith, to make use of, as a certain Prediction, that this other will, and must come to pass: Whereas, had Adam, and his Condition, been only a Natural Type, or Similitude, as unto which Christ might be compared, and appear to hold Parallel; it could, nor ought not to have been thus far urged. It might indeed have been brought to help our Understandings, by way of illustration to evince how Christ might convey his like glorious State, even as Adam had done his; but it could not have been thus alledged to help our Faith in it, by way of demonstration and certain Proof, had he not been a Prophetick Type. And further, to confirm this, Let us but compare the words of the 48th Verse, and these in the 49th together, and we shall discern a very different use and improvement provement made by the Apostle, In the 48th Verse, he says, (speaking of Adam's Sons) As is the Earthly, such are they that are Earthly; and as is the Heavenly, such are they also that are Heavenly. See how in these words he makes use of Adam's Type and Condition but barely, as by way of Illustration and Parallel; (for Prophetick Types serve also to illustrate, as well as Natural:) But not content with this, he further adds, that As we have born the Image of the Earthly, we shall also bare the Image of the Heavenly. In which words he speaks a further thing, than in the former, by way of Inference, assuring our Faith from our having born Adam's Image, that we shall one day most certainly bear Christ's also in Glory; he makes use of Adam's Type, as an Argument to confirm it; and therefore it was more than a Natural Type, even a Prophetick Type also.

In the fifth and last Place, I add to all this, That Adam, was thus appointed and intended by God as a Prophetick Type of Christ to come, and this, before his Fall; he then fore-signifying Christ to come, as here he is parallel'd with him, even to be a quickning Spirit to this Elect, as certainly as himself was then made a living Soul:

For, 1. When was it, or wherein, that (according to what the Apostle here alledgeth of Adam) he was Christ's Type? (If you observe it) not in respect of conveying his sinful Image, when fallen, namely, the Qualifications he had by Sinning, as the Corruption and Mortality of his Body, and Sinful Image on his Soul; for though all that is said here hold true of these, and may by implication be inferred from hence, yet these are not the things here spoken of by the Apostle, but he is here brought in as the Type of Christ, in respect of conveying that Image and State of Life which he received at his Creating, before his Fall, as being then a Type of Christ to come, as a Lord from Heaven. For unto what he was, when he was at his best, even at the first formation of his Body, and the breathing his Soul into it, those words here alledged have reference; Adam was [made] a living Soul; as appears, Genes. 2. 7. wherein notwithstanding he is here alledged as the Type of Christ. And indeed, therefore it was, that he conveyed that corrupt Image acquired by his Fall, because he was ordained as a Common Person before the Fall, to convey the Image in which he was Created. And therefore it must needs be, that he was a Type of Christ to come, as well before his Fall, as after; even as well, as that he was a publick Person before his Fall, as well as after.

Secondly, It appears also, that he calls Adam his Type, as in his very first Creation he was, the first Man: and this, not only (as was said) in relation to all other Men (his Sons) who were to succeed him, and in respect of Order in their succeeding; but chiefly, in respect to this second Man Christ, as Verse 47, he calls him: and also the last Adam, Verse 45. in relation to this first Man, and first Adam, as he is called. So that the Opposition shews, That those Titles given Adam, do bear relation unto Christ. Now as the Apostle argues (Hebr. 8. 13.) out of the word [New] Covenant, an Old Covenant to have been, which is now to be abolished, [In that he says a New, he hath made the first Old], So in that he calls Adam (even as the first, when he stood up out of the Earth, and became a Man) the first Man, and that, (as the Apostle explains himself) in relation to Christ, as the second Man, it argues Christ to have been then, and as soon intended. For [first] and [second] are Relatives, and Relata sunt simul Natura; and so must be in God's Decrees. And that, which further strengthens this, is, That Phrase [was made] which in the time past he attributes alike to both, he says, So it is written, (referring to Adam's Creation) the first Adam [was] made a living Soul, the last Adam [was] made a quickning Spirit: speaking of both, with reference to the same time past; even when Adam was made, or appointed, then was Christ also appointed: So that, he was as ancient in God's purpose, as the other; and both, without any Consideration had to the Fall.

Yea,

Yea, Thirdly, Christ was first, and more principally intended of the two; for Adam being but as the Type, and so, the more imperfect every way; Christ, the second Adam, must needs be, not only at the same time with him, intended, but primarily, and in the first place; for so it is in all Types else: Their Anti-type is that for which they are ordained, and they are but Figures for the present, as you have it, Hebr. 9.6. and so are but subordinate to their Anti-type, as first and chiefly intended: And therefore, they are said but to serve unto the pattern, &c. Hebr. 8. 5. even as the House is more in the mind of the Workman, and intended before the Platform or Draught of it on Parchment, which only serves towards the Building of it. And therefore the Type is still rather said to be made like the thing Typified, than the thing Typified to be made like unto its Type: So Heb. 7. 3. Melchisedech being to be a Type of Christ, was said to be made like unto the son of God: God framed him, and his Condition, to resemble Christ, and not Christ to resemble Melchisedech: which holds in all other Types also, and therefore so in this; wherein God did intend Adam, and his Earthly and Souly Condition (as the more imperfect,) to fore-run Christ, and that Spiritual and Heavenly Condition by him. And therefore also Christ is called, the Last Adam, not in respect of Order; but, to shew he was the perfection of the other; as [Last] sometimes signifies, in whom all is bounded and determined: So Matth. 21. 37. Last of all he sent his Son, as the utmost remedy and compleatest. This always holds in other of Gods works, which are subordinate to each other, that the Last notes out Perfection: So here, [the First] notes out imperfection, [the Last] the Sum, Complement, and Perfection of all; as [τελος] signifies the [End] and [τελος] [Perfect] And that this is the Apostles meaning here, is evident by the Connexion of Verse 46. with what went before, in vers. 44. and 45. For having affirmed, verse 44. that it was Gods Purpose to make two Ranks of Men and Conditions of them, Animal, and Heavenly, (or Spiritual) [there is (that is, there is ordained to be) a Natural Body, and a Spiritual Body] and then having proved it to be Gods meaning, in that when he made the First Adam a living Soul, he then in him, as the Type also, made or ordained (as we said) Christ a quickning Spirit, verse 45. (thereby shewing, that in Gods Decree the one was as ancient as the other:) Then in verse 46. he adds, by way of Explanation (or Correction) Howbeit that was not first which is Spiritual, (that is, not first in execution, or in order of Time, because that was to be most perfect) but that which was Natural, (that was ordained to come into the world first) and afterward that which is spiritual, as the Perfection of the other; Gods manner of proceeding in his Works being to begin ab imperfectioribus, with what is imperfect, and so to go on ad perfectiora, to what is more perfect: He ordered that Adam should come first, with his Natural, or Animal Body, to usher in Christ afterwards, with his Spiritual Body. And that state which Adam brought in, being the first Draught (as that of a Coal in a Picture) that state which Christ brings in, is as the last Hand put to it, filling up the Peece with the brightest Colours of Perfection. And as Nature is a Ground-work to Grace, so was the Animal Substance to that which was Spiritual, even to be cloathed with it, and swallowed up by it; yet so, as the first Draught served withal, as a Shadow, to tell that the other more perfect was to come, and primarily intended. And therefore, in the 49th Verse, he brings in this as the closure of this his Proof, that, As (certainly as) we have born the Image of the earthy, so (certainly) shall we bear the Image of the heavenly.

I shall wind up all with a Consideration or two, which put together, will fitly serve, both as the General Conclusion of this whole Discourse, and particularly also further to confirm this last Branch in hand.

You have seen how Adam was a Type of Christ, both in his Falling (as hath been shewn out of Rom, 5. 14.) and before his Fall, in his first Creation (as here in this Place) And Adam, in both states, did as a publick Person, represent Christ: Now observe but how Christ his Anti-type doth in a correspondency, and answering to both these, run through two estates also, suitable to these two of Adam: And in each of these Estates, Christ, as a publick Person, son, representing us, doth two distinct things for us: 1. He, in our Nature, takes on him the form of a Servant, to Redeem us from that Condemnation and Misery which Adam's Fall had brought upon us: Which having finished, Then, 2ly, He assumes and puts upon his Human Nature that glorious Condition which was his due by Inheritance in the first moment that he should be made a Man: and by virtue of this Condition due to him by Inheritance, he will bestow upon us, who are in him, the like Glory which was ordained himself. Now then, that work of Redemption performed by him under the form of a Servant, (whereby he frees and delivers us from that guilt and condemnation into which we, through Adam's Fall, were plunged) and his restoring us to a state of Justification of Life, through his perfect Obedience, this was typified out by Adam's Disobedience imputed to us for Condemnation, (as you have it, Rom. 5.) And herein was Adam, in the evil he brought upon us, made Christ's opposite Type, freeing us from all that evil, even to his subduing the Power of Death, the last Enemy of all, which Christ did at his Resurrection.

But then, in that other work, his bestowing upon us that Spiritual and Heavenly condition of Life, in a conformity to his own Personal Glory, after this work of Deliverance perfectly performed at the Resurrection, (and which we receive, after all that Evil which Adam brought upon us, is removed out of the way, in this, Christ had for his Type Adam's Estate and Condition before his Fall, when at his Creation he was made a living Soul, and Lord of the Earth, to convey the same Privilege and Perfection he was created in, unto his Posterity: And This this Place hath held forth unto us.

And set but these things in their due order and correspondency, and how fitly do they suit and answer each to other! That so far as Adam had spoiled us by his Fall, so far he should be the Type of Christ's restoring us again: And then, that his Primitive, Original Estate which he had before his Fall, should be the Type of that glorious Estate which we shall have through Christ, after that Redemption of our Bodies in the Resurrection compleated, as being indeed their ancient and first intended Inheritance decreed unto them in Christ, as their Head, before the consideration of the Fall, but which Adam's sin falling out between, had kept them from, and hitherto had letted, which (this sin of his being now by Christ first removed out of the way) they are then stated in; how fitly and suitably commensurated and proportioned each to other are these two!

And to this purpose, you may further observe in this Place, (which is a second Consideration) that the Apostle doth here sound that Heavenly Estate of ours to come, meerly upon that Glory due to Christ, as the Lord from Heaven, and this upon the sole and single consideration of the Personal Union of that Human Nature with the Godhead, and therein ordained a common Person to us, and noted out that other Phrase, his being made a quickning Spirit; and that to us his Elect, that we may be made in a conformity unto him, he being ordained to that Union, and to that Glory, as a publick Person, whenever he should first assume it, and be made Man; even as Adam, in his very first Formation and Creation, was made a publick Person. And in these very respects it is, that Adam is here made his Type, even before his Fall, in his first Creation, as hath been declared. All which, to me, do more than hint, if not clearly evince, (taking in all the former Considerations with it) that this Spiritual and Heavenly Estate which Christ now hath in Heaven, and that Personal Union whereby he was made a quickning Spirit, was ordained and intended to Christ first, appointed as a publick Head; and so to the Elect in him, before the consideration of the Fall, and that, simply, and absolutely unto them, as considered in mass: pura; and so, that Adam's Fall, and Sin, and Death, and then thereupon Christ's Death and work of Redemption to remove these, came in in the order of God's Decrees, and were appointed but as Means to improve Christ, and to commend and set forth his love the more unto us, and also to render that Condition to which we were primitively in Christ ordained, the more illustrious and glorious by this Deliverance. And so, all Christ's work, until this spiritualizing of our Bodies, was but the raking out of the way (as the Apostles Phrase is, Coloss. 2. 14.) that which intended, and was cast in as an impediment of this their first intended Glory; which so breaks out from under this great Eclipse with the more brightness and lustre.

That I may more distinctly explain this last Consideration, you may observe that in this part of the Chapter, wherein the Apostle sets himself to prove, what manner of Bodies are ordained for us after the Resurrection, he maketh the rise of that their state to be, not so much the Death, or Resurrection of Christ, of which he makes no mention at all in this part of his Discourse, wherein he comes to speak thereof; but he alledgeth, as the highest and primary foundation hereof, this Ground, even the Personal excellency and glory due unto Christ's Human Nature, above that which was due to the first Adam before his Fall; which he brings as the sole Ground of this our intended Glory, as being first due unto Christ, meerly upon the Consideration of his Union with the Godhead, of which Glory of Christ in Heaven, he brings in Adam's Estate of Innocency in Paradise as the fittest Type; which is expressed unto us under that Phrase (as it hath been opened) [He was made (or appointed to be) a quickning Spirit] that is, the Godhead was appointed to become the Life and Quickner of an Human Nature, (even as Adam was made a living Soul: that is, to consist of a Soul giving Life to an Earthly Body) by virtue of which, he instantly did become the Lord from Heaven, (Verse 47.) that is, the Lord of Heaven; to whom by Inheritance, as to a Lord, Heaven and all the Glory of it was due, and so, he became an heavenly Man, as the Expression also is. And then he being withal, in and together with the ordaining him to this Union with the Godhead, ordained to be a Head unto us; hence it is that our Bodies are to be made Spiritual and Heavenly, like unto his. And this is the most ancient; primitive Title in God's Decree, that we have unto Glory; and therefore is in this place only and alone alledged. And although it be true, that the very Resurrection of our Bodies, considered simply, as it is the subduing that last Enemy, Death (as the Apostle speaks, verse 26.) is the fruit of Christ's Resurrection, as the Cause of it; (and therefore, in that former part of the Chapter, the Apostle argueth it from thence) yet still, that at the Resurrection, our Souls and Bodies should be raised up to so glorious and spiritual a Life, and that we should rise with such a kind of Body as we had not before, in Adam (which is made a distinct Query by the Apostle, from the 35th verse) this (I say) is founded by the Apostle here, only upon that Heavenly Condition which Christ was ordained unto, and which was his due meerly upon his very assuming an Human Nature; of which, we his Members were, together with him, ordained to bear the Image. And thus to shew, that he, and we in him, were ordained unto this Estate before, or rather without the consideration of the Fall: Therefore it is Adam's state of Innocency in his first Formation, is made the Type of Christ's Personal Union, and so, of that Glory to which, both he as a publick Person, and we, as his Members, are ordained.

Use 1. So then, that which is the Corolary from all, is this, that the Plot, or Order of Gods Decrees concerning Christ and us, was thus laid in Gods brest; That though unto Christ, and us in him, this Glory was simply intended (for God looks unto the end of his works at first, and so, first to what he meant, ultimately to raise Christ and us up unto, even that Glory which we shall have in Heaven) yet God withal decreeing, in the way to this Glory, the Fall of all Mankind, and so, of the Elect to Fall in Adam, as well as others; therefore Christ in the way to the execution or accomplishment of this Original Decree, was ordained, for their sakes, and in a respect to them, not to take on him first that glorious Condition, upon his first Union with our Nature (which yet was his due) but is said to condescend to come down from Heaven, even as Son of Man, (John 6. 38. and 62. compared) and to take on him frail Flesh and the form of a Servant, in stead hereof; and that, to this end, that he might first Redeem Us, his Members, from under that misery which the Fall had brought upon us; and all this to this end, that by this means this glorious Condition, both of his and ours, might be made the more illustrious.

illustrious. But then, after he should have taken out of the way that which hindred his Members elected in him, from the Glory originally designed to them, and so should thus first have made up what Adam had spoiled, then should he himself first cast off that Vail or Condition of frail Flesh, and endow the Human Nature with that Spiritual State of Body, which was by a right of Inheritance inseparably, and immediately annexed to the Personal Union with the Godhead: And then, by virtue of this, when he raiseth up his Members, he will bestow on them the like Spiritual Estate, which was also ordained them by an Inheritance (in being Members of him) as well as by the Purchase of his Death: And so we come to have a double Title unto this Glory; one by Inheritance, through our Election in Christ, which is this Original, Primitive Title, and before the consideration of any other in Gods intention; and another by the Purchase of that Death of Christ, which besides the restoring us out of that Estate into which Adam's sin had plunged Us, does by an overflow of merit purchase also this Life unto us: Therefore, Ephes. 1. 14. this Glory is called, Our Inheritance, as well as a Purchased Possession. And when Christ hath thus raised Us to this Glory, then, and not till then, are we restored to what at our first Creation we were ordained to: And then, and not till then, did God (as it were) account Christ to have been begotten [This day have I begotten thee;] It is spoken of him in respect of his Human Nature, and that, when Spiritualized at his Resurrection; and 'tis spoken by God, as if then first Christ were become that which he had primitively ordained him to be; As if, not untill that time; and so, God reckons him (as it were) then anew Begotten; because, not till then, did Christ's Condition answer, and become like to what, when he was first, as Man conceived in Gods Womb of Election by his Decree, he was appointed to be. And thus in like manner doth God reckon Us, to be such as he at first chose us to be, when he chose us to be Men, and primitively intended to make us in the end, (and for which indeed he ordained to Create us) not untill we be raised to the like Spiritual glorified Condition unto which, in, and together with Christ, we together were ordained to be. And so, all that befell Us in sinning, through Adam's Fall, and all that thereupon befell Christ in assuring frail Flesh, is to be lookt at as to have been but in transitu, in the way (as Psal. 110. hath it) to this intended Glory; and to have been decreed (as also the Elects several Conditions in this World are) as subordinate Means appointed by God to make this his Primitive and first-intended Decree the more Glorious, and (as it were) to add a deep Shadow to it, so to set off the lustre of it.

Use 2. Admire we at that which the Angels stand agast at, namely the manifold wisdom of God in his manifestations of himself, as you have it, Ephes. 3. 10. That being one of Gods ends of revealing this Mystery of Christ, that the Angels might see the manifold Wisdom of God [πολυσοφιας] many ways various, by reason of those several ways God hath gone about to discover himself and his Son by. The Story of the World, and of the Creation of it, what a glorious Contrivement was it, taken simply alone in itself; and how wonderfully did these visible things shew forth the invisible things of God, his Wisdom, power, &c. and how Proud were the wisest of the Heathen, of their Contemplations and Knowledge of its Story, whiles they searched out the harmony, and the secrets of this visible Frame! The Angels, who were made the First Day, as most conceive, with the Heavens, or the third day, as Piscator, whilst they stood by as Spectators to behold how God, by degrees, finished this Fabrick, and out of the Chaos drew the Elements, the first Lines and ruder Draught of all things visible; and then saw him proceed to garnish, embellish, and adorn those void spaces; the Firmament with Sun, Moon, and lesser Stars; the Air with Fowl; the Earth with Beasts, Herbs, &c. and the Water with Fishes; and last of all, brought forth Man, the Lord of all, and made him little lower than themselves, being Crowned with glory and honour, and (as it were) the Epitome of all; how did this Chorus, or Quire, shout out in joy and admiration at the end of every Act, and new Days work! Or to use the Metaphor which God useth in Job 38. 4, 5, 6. where he speaks in the Language of an Architect, to express how he reared this glorious Frame: When He laid the Foundation of the Earth and took Measure of all the Proportions, of every Creature which he made in it, then (vers. 7.) the Morning Stars sang together; and all the Sons of God shouted for joy; that is, the Angels, who are called Stars, because they are the Creatures appointed to live in the Third Heaven, their Element, as Fishes in the Sea, and Fowl in the Air: And but Stars, for there was a Sun to rise would make them hide their Faces, and pull in their Beams, even Christ; before whose Glory (for tis his Glory spoken of, Isai. 6. as appears by John 10. 12.) They cover their Faces, as the Stars, like Tapers are put out before the Sun. And they are called the Morning Stars, because they were up early, being Created in the Morning of the First Day. He that is early up is in Latin called Matutinus, and so in Hebrew. They both at the Foundation, and at the finishing of this Building (especially when they saw Man brought in, the owner of all) shouted for joy, admiring at Gods handy-works, and Wisdom manifested in them: God herein alluding to the custom of Men, who when they lay the Foundation of a work, and especially, at the finishing of some Great Building, have all their Friends with acclamations and shoutings about them; as at the first Stone of the Temple laid, Ezra. 3. 10. and Zach. 4. 10. the Last Stone was brought forth with joy and shouting, crying Grace, Grace, to it. Just so was it here. And as a Skilful and curious Artist will stand looking upon the exquisite workmanship of some one part (suppose upon an Eye or Hand in a Picture) many hours together, with much delight; so did the Angels greedily view every part of this World, admiring and praising Gods artifice in it: (Which likewise God himself did, as delighting to see how good all was that he had made) and whilst they were doing so, they might behold God (as if he had been displeased at the coarseness of this his work which he had Drawn) suffer all to be dashed by one unwary stroke of the pencil; suffering his Image in Man to be razed, and this whole Frame Subjected to vanity, confusion and disorder: Which made them wonder, in that they surely thought that this was all the works of wonder that ever God meant to make; especially, when they saw him at first, rest from all his works, and sit down, as delighted in them, and to appoint a Day for the Memorial of them: They could not chuse but wonder, to see that God should throw so costly a Piece away; being such a World as they could never imagine, how a better could ever be framed: And how Great a God must they needs think him to be, that regarded not the loss and spoiling of such a World! But alas! God had a further Plot, and Platform of another Adam, and another World, in his Head, whereof all this (though so perfect) was but the Type, and Shadow; and of all which they knew not one tittle, nor had the least inckling; Therefore, Ephes. 3. 9. it is called a Mystery hid in God: God had not spoken one word of it to them (as not of his Temple to David) In comparison of which, this World was but a Stage to Act a Part upon a while, and Man (the Lord of it) but as a King in a Play, a meer Type and resemblance of another King, the King of Glory; who when he should be brought into the World, these Angels must all down upon their knees and worship: Themselves are but the Stars, as Job calls them, and David too, in Psal. 8. 3. where he speaks (as was said) of Christs World, and the Creatures thereof, the Angels, who become Subjects of it, are but the Stars, and the Church the Moon; but there is no Sun mentioned, for Christ himself is the Sun, and the Light thereof; before whom these Stars were to lose their Light, with which at best they do but twinkle. And when Christ and his World shall appear, then this Moon shall be confounded, and this Sun ashamed, when he shall reign in mount Sion, and before his Ancients gloriously: Isai. 24. ult. And how must this needs shew forth the manifold Wisdom of God; that he hath plots beyond plots, though he begins with a ruder shew at first; as in the making of the World, in which the Wisdom that lies in it taken simply by it self, how glorious is it! It is called the Wisdom of God, 1 Cor. 1. 21. And if that even the Heathen studied, and admired this, when without relation to God, when his Wisdom in it was not discovered ed and discerned by them; How much more of Wisdom saw the Angels in it, who saw him that was the First Mover and Creator of all therein! Chap. 9. But there is yet a further Mystery in the Story of it, even a Great Mystery therein couched. The Moral of all being Christ the Wisdom of God, whom to illustrate, all the Creatures are not sufficient to be Similitudes, nor Man the Glory and Epitome of them, fit to be his Type. Here is Wisdom hid in Wisdom, a Mystery in a Mystery, a World in a World. And all this World and Adam the inhabiter of it, are but as the swadling-Clouts of him, who was once a Babe and lay in a Manger.

CHAP. X.

A more particular Comparison between Adam and Jesus Christ in their Persons: The Formation of Adam's Body by God's immediate Hand, typifies the Assumption of the Human Nature by the Son of God, whose Body was formed immediately by the Holy Ghost. The Union of Soul and Body in Adam, typifies the Hypostatical Union. In what there is an Agreement in the Comparison between them; wherein a Disparity. What was the state of Adam's Body: It comprized the Perfections of all Creatures: It was suited to take in all the Pleasures and Comforts which they could afford: It had a Natural beauty in it: It was guarded from Injuries, and was Immortal; yet in its Original 'twas but Earth. It depended on the Creatures for its Subsistence, and was subject to many Alterations. To what a higher degree of Glory, the Divine Nature of Christ, united to the Human, rais'd the Body of Christ, as he is One with God, and the Lord from Heaven. It was necessary that the Glory of his Human Nature should excel all Creatures, even the Angels themselves. The glory of his Body was illustrated by his Transfiguration on the Mount; and yet that fell short of the Glory it has now in Heaven.

HAVING thus in the General demonstrated Adam to have been Christ's Type, I come now to lay the Particulars together wherein this Typicalness consisted. For the fitting of which, each to other, (as also concerning all other Types) I will promise this Rule, which I take to be safe and warrantable, That although, for what are Types, and what are not, as also for the General Scope intended in them, we must find a special warrant by the Holy Ghost's own interpreting and applying of them, (as hath been said) yet so, as when once that Scope is found, we may for the Particulars wherein the Types agree with the things typified, take liberty (as in all other Similitudes) to enlarge them, and extend them as far, and to as many Particulars, as the likeness will hold in, (whilst that we keep to the Analogy of that their General Scope) although we have not an express word for each particular part wherein there seems to be a resemblance. For which Rule there is both this Reason and Instance.

The Reason is, because when God useth a Similitude to any purpose, all parts of that Similitude, wherein to spiritual Reason it is evident they are alike, as well in what is not so expressly applied by the Holy Ghost already, as in what it is, they all are sanctified to resemble it, and are so intended; seeing that the Similitude doth as readily and fully arise at the first blush, in the one, as in the other.

The Instance I would give, is in the Interpretation of Parables, in which this Rule holds good. Now, Hebr. 9. 9. the Types of the Old Law are called Parables [ἡ τῆς παραβολῆς] which was a Parable] rendered by our Translation [which was a Figure] Now concerning the Interpretation of Parables, you usually have the General Scope annexed by Christ in them all, but no more; he leaving us (according to the Analogy of Faith, and of that Scope given us as a Pole star to steer our Course by therein) to apply the several Particulars our selves, according to that resemblance that unto Spiritual Reason doth appear. This Rule therefore will I observe herein, and keep to it as sacred, Not to make any thing a Type, which the Holy Ghost hath not designed out for one: But in opening the Similitude between such as he hath designed, and the things signified, to take liberty for the fitting of Particulars, without once failing out of the sight of the General Scope given, or applying the Similitude of any Particular to signifie any thing concerning Christ, which otherwise I have not authentick warrant for, in the express Letter of the Word.

This Rule thus premised, I descend to the Particulars. Now the Comparison lies in two things:

1. In respect of their own Persons.
2. As they both are ordained publick Persons, to convey the Likeness or Image of their Condition unto their Posterity.

I. Their Persons are compared: And that,

1. In the Substance whereof each consisted: Adam was a living Soul; that is, a reasonable Soul giving life to a Body made of Earth, and to live on Earth; not a Soul simply, but a living Soul. And that Attribute of Living is given to Soul, as it communicated Life to that Body into which it was inspired, Gen. 2. 7. And so, Christ was a Spirit (or God) quickning an Human Nature joynd unto it. And that that was the Nature assumed for the Godhead to quicken, and give life unto, the Apostle declares, verse 47. calling him a Man.

2. In the infinitely differing Conditions of their Persons, or state of Life which that Human Nature, by virtue of that Union, must needs enjoy, transcending that which a Soul could convey to a body of Earth. This second comparison, namely, of their Condition, is couched in these words [Living, Quickning] as that other, of the Substance of their Persons, in those words [Soul, Spirit].

Now the first Particular of this Resemblance lies (as I take it) in comparing the Formation of Adam's Body, and the Union of his Soul with it, with the Formation of Christ's Human Nature, and the Hypostatical Union of it with the Divine; which is the Foundation of all, that Christ, as a publick Person, did for us.

For, first, This being the first Formation of Adam, by which he became a Man, must needs typifie out the first Formation and Assumption of our Nature by Christ, by which he became a Man.

And, secondly, The thing compared is the one's becoming a living Soul, and the others being a quickning Spirit; which notes out a Comparison of their Natures or Substances. Adam was made Soul, when into his Body the Rational Soul was inspired; which being united to it, used it as an Instrument to perform the Functions of that Life which it led on Earth. But Christ became a quickning Spirit, when his Godhead assumed the Human Nature to work and dwell in it, and to glorifie it. And the Apostle calls the whole Person of Adam now made, by that which was most excellent in it, the Soul; Mens cujusque quisque est: And so, the Person of Christ made Man, is, by that which which is most excellent in that Person, Spirit, or the Godhead, which is the Foundation of all that which Christ is made unto us.

Thirdly, That his Scope is, by Adam's Formation to signifie the Assumption of the Human Nature by the Godhead, appears by verse 47. where he calls the first Adam but meer Man [the first Man, &c.] but he calls Christ (as the second Man, so) the Lord (namely God) also, as being become God and Man. Therefore we may warrantably conclude, That to be the first thing typified by Adam's Creation. Let us now see how they agree.

The first making of Adam a Man, is described in Two things :

1. The forming of his Body.

2. The breathing in, and uniting the Soul unto it; which together united, do make up one Person. Now the forming of Adam's Body doth clearly typifie out the Formation of Christ's Human Nature assumed: which whole Nature is accordingly called his Body; for so, comparatively to the Godhead, it may be called. Thus, Hebr. 10. 5. a Body hast thou fitted me (that is, an Human Nature) says Christ there, of his coming into the World. And the Agreement lies in two things :

1. Adam's Body and Christ's do agree in this, That Adam's Body was immediately formed by God himself, without Man's help, he being the first Man. It was God who fashioned his Body, whereas it is vis plastica, the formative Faculty that doth it in ours, begotten of him. And so Christ's Body assumed, is also said (Hebr. 9. 11.) to be a Tabernacle not made with hands; not by the help of any Creature, not by Generation, as ours is, but immediately by God.

And, 3dly, As God formed the Body of Adam, even as a Potter doth mould or fashion his Clay, (as the word denotes) and as God did this immediately, even so the Holy Ghost did Christ's Body. That word in Hebr. 10. 5. which we translate [fitted me] signifies also to articulate, or form joynt by joynt; [καταρτίσω] And the Hebrew words in Psalms 40. (from whence this is taken) which we translate [My ear hast thou bored through] as having allusion unto the Servants under the Old Law. Genebrard says that the Ear is by a Synechdoche put for the whole Body; and that which we Translate [perfodisti] is rather [fodicasti] to fashion with the hand, as a Potter doth; and so the Apostle renders it, [a Body hast thou formed (or fitted) me. The Holy Ghost therein supplied that which the Plastick Faculty doth in our Conception (consisting partly in the Seed of the Man, and partly in the Nature of the Womb;) and this, that so Christ might be born without sin.

Therefore, 4thly, As Adam was without Father and Mother, so was Christ also; who Hebr. 3. 4. is therein made like unto Melchisedech; but he is much more like to Adam, who herein was a more perfect Type of Christ than Melchisedech was: For Melchisedech's having no Father nor Mother, was not that he had none indeed, but that in Scripture None were recorded; as appears by verse 6. But Adam really had no Man to his Father, nor Woman to his Mother: He was not born from the Conjunction of Man and Woman, which Melchisedech was.

Fifthly, As Adam was in a peculiar manner (in respect of his Formation) the Son of God, and that, in such a respect as other men are not; (for Luke 3. whereas others are in that Genealogie said to be the Sons of such and such Men (as Enoch the Son of Seth, and Seth of Abraham) Adam is said to be the Son of God, verse ult. because he was his Son by immediate Creation, which they were not; who yet in another respect, namely, as they were Elect, were Adopted Sons of God). This typified that Christ, even as having assumed an Human Nature, was in a transcendent manner God's Son; even as he was Man he was God's Natural, (not Adopted) Son: For else there had been two Relations of Sonship in that Person; the Person being the Subject of that Relation, not the Nature. So Luke 1. 35. because the Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, therefore that holy thing which shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God: that is, so the Son, as no man else: The only begotten Son of God, John 3. 16.

II. In the Second Place, The Uniting of the Soul and Body together (which was done at that breathing of Life into him) so as, they both made one Man, and the first Adam so became a living Soul; this of all things, doth the most lively set forth the Hypostatical Union of the Divine and Human Nature. And so I find all Divines acknowledge, that the nearest Instance that can in Nature be found, of this Mystery, is therein held forth. And therefore, 1 Pet. 3. 18. the Human Nature of Christ is called Flesh, and the Divine Nature, Spirit; which, in the very nameing of it, seems to bear an allusion to the Soul or Spirit in Man, conjoynd with his Body and Flesh. And it seems a fair Interpretation which is given by some, of that Place [——— The fulness of the Godhead dwells bodily;] that is, by a more near and firm Union, than a Mans Soul doth in his Body; as speaking by way of Similitude to illustrate this. And so I find the School-men labouring much, to shew how nearly this Instance resembles it: As Thom. Aqu. Lib. 4. cont. Gent. cap. 41. And Athanasius in his very Creed, taketh up this Similitude of all others, to express it. But I did not think to have found such a Ground in the Word, to have made this the Type of it, as this Place holds forth.

For, 1. Considering the distance that is between the Reasonable Soul (a Spirit immortal, more glorious than the Sun, but a step inferiour to the Angels, bearing Gods Image in its Substance and Faculties, and capable of Holiness) and a piece of Earth, that that should dwell in, and inform this; the conjoyning of two such Extrems best resembled the Union of the Divine Nature with the Human, God with Man. The Angels, they are Spirits without Bodies; and the Souls of Beasts are but Earthly, like the Bodies which they inform, and indeed, the Spirits of Elements only.

Secondly, The nearness of their Union does yet further help to resemble it: For this Soul dwells not in Bodies, as a Man in a House, or as Angels did in Bodies assumed, to move them, &c. but is conjoynd to them as a Form, that together with the Body, makes up a Person; whereas the Souls of Beasts, though they make a Nature, yet not a Person. And as the Rational Souls Union, so this Union of God and Man makes one Christ, one Person.

Thirdly, The super-eminent manner of Subsisting, that this Soul hath in the Body, is the highest resemblance of that of the Godhead in an Human Nature. Other Souls have their Being from the Matter; they are extracted out of its Passive Power, as Spirits of Wine are, out of Wine: But this is Gods Breath, and is from without: And in the Body it is Semi-Persona, it is not that only quo subsistit, but quod: Other Forms are but Principles of the whole, this is more; it can of it self Subsist; only whilst it is in the Body, it Subsists after another manner, namely in a Body: Therefore, Mens Souls are said to give an account for what was done in the Body: And it can Subsist, when severed from the Body, which the Souls of Beasts cannot, Eccles. 12. 7. It moreover bears the Name of the whole: Therefore Christ arguing the Immortality of the Soul, saith, that Abraham is alive; that is, the Soul of Abraham; for God is the God of the Living, &c. Thus the Second Person is a Person of himself, who Subsisted before a Body was assumed;] Before Abraham was I am;] and when this Person Subsists in the Human Nature, it is the same Subsistence that before, only he takes a Body up unto himself to partake of his Subsistence.

Fourthly, As the Body is but the Souls Instrument (its Members are called Weapons or Tools he acts by, (Rom. 6. 13.) Neither yield ye your Members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: But yield your selves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your Members as instruments of righteousness unto God. And the Sheath thereof (Dan. 7. 15.) I Daniel was grieved in my Spirit in the midst of my Body, and the visions of my head troubled me. And its House of Clay, Job 4. 19. How much less on them that dwell in houses of Clay, whose Foundation is in the dust, which are crushed before the moth. Such is this assumed Body unto the Godhead, which many Interpret that place of; The Flesh profiteth nothing, but the Spirit quickneth quickness, John 6. 63. And the thing is a truth, though there is another meaning given of the words.

Book II. Fifthly, As these two remain distinct, the Souls one thing, and the Body another; so are the two Natures in Christ.

Sixthly, As the Soul hath Faculties and Actions distinct from those of the Body. the Body hath its Appetite, which we call the Sensitive: The Soul a distinct Appetite, which we call Rational, the will. So the Divine Nature in Christ hath Powers, and Operations distinct and severed from those of his Human. The will of the Human Nature, is distinct from the Divine.

But yet this Comparison is not without a World of Difference in these Two: For,

First, The Godhead and the Human Nature are not as Two Parts of that Person, as the Soul and Body are of a Man: For though the Soul be of it self a Subsistence, yet it is ordained to be a Part of the Man, and hath not its full and Natural perfection and intended State, without Union with the Body. And although in respect of Holiness, The Spirits of just Men departed, are said to be perfect, Heb. 12. 23. Yet in respect of Gods Ordination to a conjunction with the Body, they are not for happiness so perfect, as when again united to the Body: But the Son of God was as perfect afore his assuming Mans Nature, as after, and nothing of Perfection is added unto him thereby: And if we could now suppose a Separation, he should lose none of his Perfection thereby, being of himself God Blessed (and so perfect in himself) for ever.

Secondly, Man is a third Thing different from his Soul and Body, though made up of Both: But tis not so here; the Person of Christ is God, and the Person of Christ is Man.

Thirdly, The Soul, though it can Subsist without the Body, yet did not alone Subsist before it was joyned to the Body: But the Divinity of Christ was from all Eternity, and was then as Perfect without this Human Nature assumed, as now it is: He is the Person, and the Human Nature but an Adjunct of it, and perfected by it.

Fourthly, This Hypostatical Union is more intimate, than that of the Soul and Body: For we cannot say of Man, that he is the Soul, or the Body: But the Son of God assuming our Nature, may properly and truly be called both God, and Man.

Fifthly, The Soul and Body may be, and are severed, but so cannot Christ's Divine and Human Nature be: No, nor were they in Death; but when Christ was in the Grave, that Union held.

Thus you have seen a Comparison made between the Person of Adam, singly considered in his being made up of Soul and Body united, to make one Person, and the Person of Christ singly considered as God, and Man, in one person also.

I come now to the second Head, which is the Conveyance of an Image by each of these Persons to the posterity of each of them, and the different manner of conveying it.

And as to that Point, the Text in 1 Cor. 15. 45, 46. shews the eminently transcendent difference held by God between these two. 1. That Adam conveys his Image as a living Soul, and by virtue of that Conveyance, we are merely made living Souls our selves, such as Adam was: We have barely that Animal Life conveyed. Thus all those that came of Adam were to be in Likeness to him, Living Souls: But Christ Conveys his Image and Heavenly Life and State, as a quickning Spirit, viz. the same Life which Christ himself hath. So that there is a different manner of these two Conveyances of Life. The one, that of Adam, is by Natural Generation, to make us Men, like himself: But Christ's conveyance is by immediate quickning and causation of his new Life. And therein there is this difference between Adam's Conveyance to his members, and Christ's to us: That Christ, the Lord from Heaven, is alone that quickning Spirit, and we are not to become quickning Spirits to others. We are quickned, not quickners; we are not made Living Souls Souls our selves to others, as in Adam his Sons were ; God blessed them to multiply, Gen. 1. 28. But the holiest men that ever were, could never convey the new Birth and Life to any : Abraham could not to Ishmael ; for it goes not by the will of Man, John 1. 13, Which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God. And this is to be understood not only of Christ's quickning at the Resurrection (though that only be here spoken of) but that of our first birth, is called a quickning us together with Christ, as the sole Author of it, Ephes. 2. 5. Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickned us together with Christ, (by Grace ye are saved). And in that respect for, and by the same reason, that Christ is a quickning Spirit at the Resurrection of our Bodies (which was there the particular Subject of the Apostles Discourse in 1 Cor. 15. 45, 46.) is Christ the quickning Spirit at our first Conversion, and it is answerably termed a Resurrection, Colos. 2. 12. Buried with him in Baptism, wherein also you are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead. And this is a work of no less Power than the other of raising our Bodies at last. And Christ is expressly termed that Spirit which quickens us, and changeth us into his Image, 2 Cor. 3. 17, 18, verses compared: Now the Lord is that Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. But we all, with open face, beholding as in a Glass the Glory of the Lord, are changed into the same Image, from Glory to Glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. It is spoken of Christ, The Lord is that Spirit, verse 17. The difference is in this, (as the very words here do shew) that it is Christ's Prerogative to have Life in himself, as the Father hath, and we are to live by him : And as the Personal Union in Christ, and this his Prerogative are inseparable, it cannot be communicated unto others.

Only this is to be understood, that the same Image in that 1 Cor. 3. 18. is as to a Likeness in Qualities, and a Similitude of what is in Christ, according to the sphere and proportion of that Union which is our Lot to have in subordination under him, and which, in a next degree unto him, is to be conveyed to us, both as to our Souls and Bodies.

Christ's and Adam's Communication in this respect are as vastly different, as the Communication of Light from a Candle to another, and the derivation of Light from the Sun to the Moon and Stars. The Communication of Light from one Candle or Torch to another, sets the Torch or Candle lighted, in as full a condition of Light, and to propagate Light to other Torches, as itself hath : And so it is that we are made living Souls from him, who was a living Soul, as fully as himself, both for our selves, and others our Children. But Christ, he communicates Light and Life to us, as the Sun doth to the Moon and Stars : He makes them light and bright, with that Light which is in himself ; but he makes them not to be Suns, as himself is. There is but one Sun still, the Fountain of Light, and the quickner of all things.

I might enlarge, to shew that Likeness we shall have with Christ in Glory, both in all sorts of qualifications of Soul, as well as Body. But I shall, by way of Inference, from the lesser argue to the greater, and so pursue only the glory our Bodies shall then have from the glorious Body of Christ. And it is the proper Argument of this 1 Cor. 15. to shew the vastly differing state of Adam's Body, as enlivened by a reasonable Soul, and that of the Glory of Christ's Body, as then in Heaven, unto which ours are in heavenly qualifications and endowments to be conformed at the Resurrection. Our Bodies are the vile part of us, as Paul terms them, Phil. 3. 21. which yet Christ will confirm to his most glorious Body : And he speaks this, to the end, that from the instance of this Body, we may infer, from that honour which the vilest part hath, what glorious, and heavenly, spiritualized Souls we shall have, and that by Christ, when we are glorified together with him in Heaven.

In handling of this, I am to perform Three things. To shew,

1. What was the state of Adam's Body when he was made a living Soul, that is, had a reasonable Soul that dwelt in his Body.

BOOK II. 2. How glorious the Body, the Human Nature of Christ was, being quickened by the Godhead, the glory of Adam's Body, and his Soul dwelling in it, being a Type of the Glory of the Godhead dwelling in the Human Nature.

3. That our Bodies, they were made and intended by God to be conformed unto Christ's Body and Human Nature, in that his Glory heavenly.

For the first, Will you take Adam's Body, as it had a reasonable Soul joynted to it, and in the dignity it was thereby raised unto, at the first Creation: The Body of Adam taken thus, with the reasonable Soul dwelling in it, abstracting and cutting off the Image of God which yet dwelt in it, for that is a fourth thing to be handled; It had,

1. All the World in it, subjective, and it had all the World in it, objective; that is, there is no excellency that is in the World, which he had not in him, inherent: Nor is there any excellency or comfort in the World, but he had something in him to take it in suited to it, and to take comfort from it.

He had, first, all excellencies in him subjectively: There is no Perfection in any Creature, but it is in Man, that's certain. In his Soul he partakes with the Angels. In his Body, and the Actions of it, and the perfections of it, he is the Epitome, the Sum of all the World; he is called therefore a little World. The Poets did feign, and they said well in it, only the story they tell is a Fiction, When Man was made, say they, then did God take a piece out of every Creature, and make Man out of it. The thing hath a truth in it; not that God indeed did take out of every Creature a piece, but he framed up man in an answerable excellency to what is in any of the Creatures. Preach the Gospel (saith Christ) unto every Creature, Mark 16. 15. that is, to Men; for Man is every Creature.

Then secondly, the Body of Adam, as it had this reasonable Soul dwelling in it, it was fitted and suited to take in comfort from all things in the World: It was capable of all the comforts in this World; and of them above, some taste of them: His Soul could look up to Heaven, to God; his Body, his Senses, were suited to the Creatures. This is a certain truth, there is no Creature, but go take the Original Institution of it, and it did some way serve for the comfort of man: And look as the eye is fitted to Colours, so there is something in Man, in his Body, suited to every Creature, in the Original Constitution of them. There is no Creature, but there is something in Man to answer it, and to take comfort from it, or an use in some way of it for Man's help. And there is nothing in Man, but there is some Creature made to answer to it. In a word, there is nothing that is in this Life, that we behold with our eyes, or hear with our ears; nothing in this World but was some way suited to something in the Nature of Man to make use of, to have benefit by. And was not this a great Glory and Dignity that was given to Adam's Soul, living in such a poor Tabernacle of Dust and Ashes, that it should have a whole World made for it, suited to it? And thus glorious a Creature was Man in his first Creation.

2. Go take the Beauty that God stamped upon man. The Beauty which we have now ariseth as from our Garments, from our Cloathing: But the Beauty that Adam's Body had then, it was innate; therefore it is said, they knew not that they were naked, Gen. 2. 25. Christ saith that the Lilies are clothed better than Solomon was in all his Royalty, Matth. 6. 28, 29. What is the reason of it? because Solomon, in all his Royalty, he was beholden to the Silkworm, beholden to his Clothes, beholden to the Earth, or Rivers, wherein the Veins of Gold do run, for the golden Crown he wore upon his head, and for the precious Stones that were in that Crown; but the Lilies wear their own glory about them, it is innate in them: So now there was a beauty in Adam and Eve innate, inherent in them, which was their glory and their excellency, and they had that then, which all the Kings of the Earth, in all their Royalty, and all the beauties of the World put in one, have not now.

3. This Body which Adam's Soul did dwell in, was made free from all hurt from all the Creatures without him. You use to say of some mens Bodies, that they are shot-free; why, Adam was shot-free, as I may say, from all hurt from the Creatures: There was not a Gnat to sting him, or a Flea, (I instance in these lower Creatures to exemplifie how free he was from all evil;) therefore though he lived in a hot Country (for Paradise was seated near Babylon, a very hot Climate) yet he could sleep quietly, though naked, he was exposed neither to Sun or Weather, to have received any hurt from thence, for he was naked, and he had as great a comfort in his Life that way, and a freedom from all injury, infinitely more than we have now. He had no sickness, nor no diseases, nor no suffering of any kind.

4. His Body had Immortality, it should never have died; for in Rom. 5. 15. it is said, that Death entred by sin; and therefore, if he had not sinned, he should not have died. These were the Perfections of Adams Body, as it was first Created; he had a World made for him; he had a World in him. He was free from all evil, free from pain. He was Immortal; that Soul of his, dwelling in that Body, should never have been parted. And he had that native original Beauty, which putteth down all the Additions of any kind whereby Man now acquireth a Beauty to himself. These, I say, were the Privileges of that Body, which by the reasonable Soul of Adam, having the Image of God, it was raised up to, by the Union of that Soul to that Body, and he should have conveyed this to all his Posterity as a publick Person.

Yea, but now let me tell you also, how short it fell of that Spiritual Body which Jesus Christ, the second Adam bringeth with him, whereof this Body of Adam's was but a Type, and so you shall see what will lose it notwithstanding it was thus perfect.

1. For the original of this Body; It was but an Animal Body, it was but Earth, and all the Senses in the Body, and whatever was in the Body and the Soul, as it was joyned to this Body, and working by the Body, and in the Body, was but Earth. It had actions as a Soul, which it works without the help of the Body outward, toward God; but the actions which it wrought in the Body, they were all but earthy; suited to earthy things: The first Man is of the Earth, earthy; and is no better. The Apostle in this 1 Cor. 15. 46, 47. &c. you see, speaks of Adam at his best; if you take his corporeal State, as the reasonable Soul did work, and did dwell in his Body, he speaks meerly you see of it, and as he calleth the Law the beggarly Rudiments of the World, in comparison of the Gospel, so saith he this State of Adam's Body, though it had this Soul in it, it was but earthy, and it was suited to take comfort from Earthly things, if you take the Animal and Bodily State of it. In Phil. 3. 21. We translate it Our vile Bodies; but the truth is, in the Original it is our humble Bodies, our mean Bodies, that depend upon, and are beholding unto eating and drinking, and the actions that follow thereupon, which humble them, and Lower them. Luke 1. 48. He had regard to the lowliness of his Handmaid; it is the sameword we translate vile Bodies, the lowliness of our Bodies, or our mean Bodies, whose Life and Subsistence depends upon such mean Actions as we do, and poor Creatures without us: And Adam did so too. His Body was an earthly Body, that had such earthly actions as these are.

2. His Body, though it was not exposed to hurt or injuries, yet it was in a dependence upon Creatures, it depended upon meat, and drink, and sleep, and upon all such things to uphold it self.

3. Though it was not Subject to dying, yet it was Subject to many alterations. If Adam had begotten a Child, it would have been little when it had been born; it must have grown in augmentation. He was Subject to expense of Spirits, to weariness, and therefore refreshed himself by sleep and by meats: So as though he had not a decay in the whole by death; yet he had a decay in the parts which was supplied and renewed again; even as we now have not the same Bodies we had, when we were first born; for our Spirits waft, and our Blood wafts, and new comes in the room; It is the same Body indeed, because cause it hath the same Soul, yet notwithstanding there is a wasting, so there was in his. A Man eateth more in a year than his own Bulk over and over again: Why? because he wasteth, and spendeth: There is a partial alteration still; and so it was in Adam.

4. It is true he was Immortal, as it is in Rom. 8. 10, 11. The Body is dead because of sin; that is, the reason why the Body shall die, is, because of sin; Had not Man sinned, he should not have died; therefore Adam having no sin, he was Immortal. And it is clear he speaks of Natural Bodies in that place; I will give you two reasons for it, because it is controverted: He saith the Body is dead for sin, or because of sin; if he had spoken of the Body of sin, he would not have used that Phrase, It is dead because of sin, for it self was dead in sin; therefore he meaneth a Natural Body, for the death cometh only by sin: And that he speaks of the Natural Body, is clear also; for in vers. 11. he saith, That God shall quicken, when he shall raise up our mortal Bodies; he speaks therefore of the mortal Body. Now, my Brethren, the temper of the Elements in us are unequal; as we have warring in our Lusts, (as James saith, James 4. 1.) in our Souls, so there is a warring in the Elements in our Bodies: There are contrary factions in every Mans Body: There is Fire against Water, and Water against Fire; (for we are made up of the Elements) and a Kingdom divided within it self cannot stand; and that is the reason why all men dye. Whereas in Adam's Body, in Innocency, the Elements were so poise that he should never have died, God did so temper them, so poise them. We do find this in Experience in Monuments that have been digged up in those places where the Romans have died, that there have been Urns digged up, in which they have made a perpetual Lamp in a double Glass, a continued Flame that was fed with Oyl, that hath lasted even to this day: Such a perpetual Lamp was the radical moisture in Adam, and if Man was able to make a perpetual Flame, God was able to make it much more; and so he did in Adam's Body: Yet though his Body was thus immortal, it was not immortal by virtue of its own Principles, his immortality was not natural to him; for he had the four Elements in him, the one fighting against the other; and had it not been for a Promise that God would poise them, it would in the end have wrought Old Age and Death. His Immortality was natural indeed, as a natural due to such a Creature Created in Gods Image, while he stood in that State; but it was not natural, as arising from the Principles of Nature, and from the natural constitution that was in his Body, but the contrary rather It was Gods Promise, Do this and thou shalt live, and his Protection over him that made him Immortal. Our Divines use to say this, That Adam had a posse non mori, that he could not have died, but he had not a non posse mori; that is, he had not such a Principle, as that no way he could die; for he might die and he might live, as he might sin, and he might not sin, he had but a conditional Immortality; he was not indeed moriturus, but he was Mortale; he should not have died for the act, but take the power, and he might have died. There was a possibility of Adam's being kil'd, if he had falln off from on high, as well as any of us; only the Promise was, That God would keep him by his Providence; and therein lay his Immortality; and he had the Tree of Life to eat of, for to repair nature, and so to live for ever. It is not natural to the Body of Man to live for ever, for the contrary Elements would bring a Man to ruin; Nor was it in the Power of the Soul to keep the Body; it was not like Salt to keep the Body from Corruption or Putrifaction; but, as I said afore, it was the promise that God did it, that if he did thus and thus he would protect him and keep him, he should live: And that it was by virtue of the Promise of God, that he was thus Immortal, is clear by this, that the Sacrament of the Tree of Life did seal up this Promise: He might eat of that Tree of Life, and it was a Sacrament to him that he lived by promise of God, that said, Do this and thou shalt live. So as now if you ask whether Immortality was natural to Adam? I answer, it was natural in this respect, it was a due to that Condition according to the Covenant of Works; it was a suitable Promise, and a due Promise to Man in that Condition: But it was not natural in that respect, as arising out of the Principles of his own Nature; for neither could the the Body have kept it self Immortal, nor could the Soul have kept that Body Immortal; The temperature of his Body would never of it self, and its own mixture, been so equally poised, but it would have been ruinated; only he was under Gods Protection, he was under Gods Promise, he was under the Covenant of the Tree of Life, and so he should have been Immortal. And to me, this is clearly hinted in those words, Thou art dust, saith he; that is, in that thou art not fain to dust again it doth not arise from the Constitution of thy Original, for thou art but a Dust-heap, and thou wilt easily mould, and fall to nothing, it is easy for dust to return to dust; but it is my Protection that hath kept thee from falling to dust; and therefore the Lord saith, Thou art dust, and to dust thou shalt return; I will now withdraw this Promise of Protection from thee, and then to dust thou shalt return. Which evidently implyeth, That he was not Immortal from the Union of Soul and Body, or from the Constitution of his own Body, but that the Covenant of Works, to which the Promise was made, that was everlastingly to keep him, so he was Immortal.

Here is the State of Adams Body, and so I have dispatched the first thing that I was to do, namely to shew you what was the State of Adam's Body in his first Creation, when he was made a living Soul.

I am, Secondly, to shew you unto what a glorious State and condition the Union of the Godhead must needs raise up the Body of Christ when he had performed the work of Redemption (for that is the Apostles Scope here) that as the Soul of Adam did advance a poor piece of Clay to so high and great a dignity,) as the Body of a Man is advanced by the Soul joyned to it, and did so ennoble it that it hath all things under it, hath all this World made for it, and suited to it, and it self was the Compendium and Epitome of the World, (as you have heard) and what a great deal of difference there is between the Body of a Man, having a reasonable Soul joyned to it, and dwelling in it, and the Body of a Beast, you all know; Answerably, and in a proportion infinitely greater (for the first Adam was but a Type and an imperfect Shadow of the second Adam) if that the Godhead shall become to a Human Nature that which the Soul was unto Adam's Body, will be the height, and dignity, unto which the Godhead will raise that Human Nature. If, saith the Apostle, the first Adam was a living Soul; that is, If that reasonable Soul which Adam had created for him, and put into his Body, upon which God stamped his Image, did so enliven a Body of Earth, raise it to such a glorious Condition; all which was but a Type and an imperfect Shadow of something more Perfect to come; Then, saith he, the second Adam must be a quickning Spirit; and by Spirit, he meaneth the Godhead of the Son of God, which did quicken or communicate a glory suitable (it must needs do so) unto the Human Nature it assumed; To what a glorious Life then must that Human Nature be ordained unto, which the Godhead becometh, as it were, the Soul, and is a quickning Spirit?

Now to shew you what that State of Body is that Jesus Christ is to have, and hath in Heaven, and is due unto him by virtue of the Union of the Human Nature with the Godhead; I shall only give you what Arguments the Text affordeth. And there are three things in the Text, from which it may be argued, which indeed do all three come unto one, yet there is by way of Argument something distinct in them all.

First, The Apostle argues it from the inhabitation of the Godhead in the Body and Human Nature of Christ, that it is united to a Spirit, to the Godhead, that shall quicken it and raise it up to a proportion suitable to it self. And his Argument, as I have said; lies thus: If that a poor reasonable Soul, created by God, having the Image of God upon it, raised up Adams Body to such a State; what shall the Spirit, the Godhead raise up the Body of Christ unto? For you must keep a proportion between the one and the other: The Union between the Human Nature of Christ, and his Godhead, is nearer and stricter than the Union of the Body and Soul, and doth therefore require in a proportion, that that Human Nature, the very Body of Christ, should be advanced ced to a State suitable. Adam, saith he, was a living Soul; but Christ is a quickning Spirit.

BOOK II.

I shall give you a wild Similitude, but indeed I do not know what Similitude else to use, and I do it meerly for illustrations sake. Suppose the Sun had a Crystal Case round about it, and there were a poor mean Candle in a Lanthorn, what a world of difference would there be between the glory of the Sun shining through this Crystal Case, and the Light that the Candle doth defuse through that poor Lanthorn? just thus, even in this proportion, and infinitely greater must the difference be between what Adam's Soul raised the Lanthorn of his Body unto, when it dwelt in it, and shined in it, and through it; and that advancement that the Godhead, the fulness of the Godhead, dwelling bodily or personally in the Human Nature of Christ, raised up his Body unto.

God hath made here a world, and God hath stamped a great deal of his glory upon it; but if we could suppose that which Plato and other Philosophers supposed, that God was the Soul of this world, what a world of glory must this world needs have beyond what it now hath! Even as much as the dead Carcass of a Man hath, when the Soul comes into it, from what it had when it was a dead Carcass. Why, but my Brethren, God hath made a little world, and that is the Human Nature of Christ, and he himself hath become the very Soul of it; and there is not only the manifestation of the things of God, as there is in the world, but there is God manifested in that Human Nature.

I shall exemplifie it unto you further, thus: There is a glorious Redemption to come of the Sons of God: And in Rom. 8. 19, 20. the Apostle tells us, that The whole Creation groaneth and travaileth in pain, to be delivered from the bondage of Corruption, into the glorious liberty of the Children of God: For the earnest expectation of the Creature waiteth for the manifestation of the Sons of God. For the Creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope. Now mark, see how he reasoneth; when the Saints shall be in their ruff and glory, for their sakes, and to grace their coming into the world at latter Day of Judgment, this world shall be new hung, and all the glory that is now, it will vanish and be nothing in comparison of that glory, the glorious liberty of the Sons of God, shall make the World partakers of, and that God shall do for their sakes. Shall the world be thus made glorious by the coming of the People of God into it, when they are in their glory at latter Day; How much more glorious must the Human Nature of Christ be made, when the Godhead shall put forth a full glory in it, whenas that Human Nature shall be made partakers of the glorious liberty of the Godhead, and of the Son of God?

Christ himself saith, That those that live in Kings Courts are cloathed in costly rayment. My Brethren, our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, he was to be God's Fellow, Zech. 13. 7. If he be God's Fellow, and to come so near him, nearer than all the Angels, and to converse continually with God in the greatest nearness that can be (for he is united to the Godhead) he must have costly rayment, for his Body is but rayment, and it shall be made a glorious Body; for he is to be God's Fellow, therefore he shall wear, and doth wear, a glorious Body in Heaven. That's the first Argument.

Secondly, The Apostle telleth us, That he is the Lord, 1 Cor. 15. verse 47. And therefore this Human Nature is to be advanced above all the Angels, and to be worshipped by all the Angels; Let all the Angels of God worship him, Hebr. 1. 6. Therefore his Body is to be raised up to a condition above Angels. You may judge what is due to the Body of Christ by this; Go take his Body when it lay in the Grave, his Soul was then out of it; yet notwithstanding then, when it was in the Grave, the Son of God was personally united to that Body, or otherwise Christ had not been said to be buried (as he is said to be in the Creed) when that Body was in the Grave, the Angels came into the Grave to worship him; it was his due that they should do so. Mary likewise when he was in the Grave, (at least as she thought) she called him Lord; Where have they laid my Lord, saith she? she meaneth his Body. Now therefore, this Human Nature of his, Body and Soul united thus together, is made high.

higher than the Heavens, saith the Seventh to the Hebrews, verse 26. It is said of us, That we shall be like the Angels; he is above the Angels; his Body is not turned into a Spirit, but is made Spiritual. And this must needs be because he is The Lord, his Human Nature, Body and Soul, is Lord above Angels; therefore must have a condition raised up to a greater glory than theirs is. And then,

Chap. 10.

Thirdly; By virtue of this Union of the Human Nature with the Godhead, he is the Lord from Heaven; mark the words: Its a strange Speech, that he should be called, the Lord from Heaven: Was ever the Human Nature of Christ there? No; not till such time as he did ascend. Upon this place, many have said, and been deceived with it, that Jesus Christ had a Human Nature in Heaven before the World was, and that he came down from Heaven into the Virgin by an elapse. No; that is not the meaning of the place, my Brethren, to shew that his Human Nature had its original from Heaven; in respect of the matter of it, for then he had not took the Seed of the Virgin, he had not took the Seed of Abraham, and so had not been that proportioned Redeemer to save us, which the Scripture telleth us he was. What is the meaning then of this, that He is the Lord from Heaven, speaking of him as he is Man? And in John 3. 13. No Man hath ascended up to Heaven, but he that is come down from Heaven, even the son of Man, (he speaks of himself as Man) who is in Heaven? He never came down from Heaven, in respect of taking his Body there, and so came into the womb of the Virgin. How is he then said, as he is the Son of Man, to be the Lord from Heaven, and to come down from Heaven? My brethren, the Riddle is opened thus, That ye take what was his due, when that Son of God should take a Human Nature, his right, it was to be in Heaven the very first moment: And therefore if he take Human Nature, with the frailties of it, this is to condescend from what is due to that Human Nature thus assumed; so as indeed, my Brethren, all the glory that he hath now in Heaven is connatural to him. It was suspended indeed for our redemption; he was ordained to take the likeness of sinful Flesh, as the Apostle saith, that he might redeem us, and till such time as that was finished he did suspend himself and his right; for he should never have set his foot upon this Earth, according to what is his due, if he would assume Human Nature; and therefore because he did condescend from this due of his, he is said to be the Lord from Heaven, and to come down from Heaven. Now hence it cometh to pass, that it being his due as he is the Son of God for to be in Heaven, the Human Nature that he assumed must one day be made heavenly, though it be suspended a while for Mans Redemption, and when he hath done that work it must be made heavenly by virtue of this very Union of the Son of God; his Body must up to Heaven and be made like to the Heavens; Flesh and Blood it cannot inherit the Kingdom of God, it will not bear it; Adam therefore because he was not in himself ordained to go to Heaven, he had but an earthly Body, that is, his reasonable Soul dwelt in a Body, suitable to this Earth, but this Man, Christ Jesus, saith he, is an Heavenly Man: And however, for our sakes he took the frailties of Flesh and Blood, yet his due is to be in Heaven; hence therefore (here lies the Apostles argument) he must have an Heavenly Body: Why? because that every Nature hath a Body suited to the place it liveth in; There is one kind of Flesh of Beasts, and another of Fishes, and another of birds: Why? Because they live in several Elements: Fishes; they live in the water, therefore they have Bodies suited to that watery Element they live in: Beasts and Birds, they living here in the Earth, and in the Air, they have Bodies suited likewise to those Elements they live in: Hence, saith he, if Jesus Christ be to be the heavenly Man, if he be the Lord from Heaven when he goeth up to Heaven, his Body must be made like the Heavens; therefore he must have a Spiritual Body. And so now you have the three Reasons couched in the Text, why that Jesus Christ being, a quickening Spirit, that is a God that quickneth the Human Nature, that Human Nature must needs be made Spiritual, and raised up (even his very Body) to a heavenly State and condition.

Book II.

Now I will give you but one Instance; because if I should lay open all that concerneth the Body of Jesus Christ; and the glory of it, it would ask a long time; I will therefore single out but one Instance which he himself did give, to shew how glorious his Body should be one day, and I will but argue from that to the glory he hath now in Heaven.

The Instance I shall give you, is, that of the Transfiguration of his Body upon the Mount, that you read of in Matth. 17. 1. and so on; and in Mark 9. 2. &c. and in Luke 9. 48. which yet was but a meer transient, flushing, of the glory of the Godhead appearing in him. You shall read there, that he was transfigured before those three great Apostles, Peter, James, and John, and that his face did shine as the Sun, and his rayment was white as the light, and there did converse with him in their Bodies, Moses and Elias, appearing in glory with him. And what was this, but to bring down Heaven a little to Earth, to make a mask, a shew of it? It was to shew what glory the Body of Jesus Christ should have in his Kingdom. That that is his scope in this Transfiguration, is most clear and evident; For if you read the Preface to this story in all the three Evangelists, you shall find it in them all to be this; The Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father, and then he shall reward every one according to his works: Verily I say unto you, there be some standing here which shall not see death till they see the Son of Man coming in his Kingdom: When he had told them what a great glory he shall come in at latter Day, saith he, there be some of you here shall see a glimpse of it: And hence, in relation to this Promise, after six days, saith Matthew and Mark, about an eight days after, saith Luke (namely after the mention of that Promise) he taketh Peter, and James; and John, and bringeth them up into an high Mountain apart, and there he fulfilled his Promise, giving them a glimpse of the glory of that Kingdom of his, which he had spoken of: And hence now, both Moses and Elias, they do accompany him, and they do accompany him in that glory which they shall have at latter Day; for Luke telleth us, They appeared with him in glory. And that this is the meaning too, is plain by what Peter saith of it, in 2 Pet. 1. 16. We have not followed cunningly devised Fables, when we made known to you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his Majesty, for he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him, from the excellent glory, This is my welbeloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. It's clear he speaks of this Transfiguration of Christ; and he makes it an Instance of that glory which he should have to come: And that he doth so, observe the words, saith he, We have not followed cunningly devised Fables, when we made known to you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, for we saw him coming in his Kingdom, according as his Promise was. And that Peter, when he saith, We made known to you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, meaneth his second coming, it is evident by this, because his scope was (as appears by Chapt. 3.) to confirm men in the faith of his second coming: And he saith, there should come in the last days Scoffers, that should walk after their own lusts, saying, Where is the promise of his coming? But, saith he, We have not told you Fables in this, for we had an instance of it, and we saw, and were eye-witnesses of his Majesty: They saw no more but the Transfiguration of his Body: And therefore the word in 1 Pet. 1. 16. which is used for the coming of Christ, is the same that is used for that coming of his in Chapt. 3. verse 4. and is no where applyed to his first coming. I speak this to take away the Interpretation of some Popish Writers that apply it to his first coming; but the Apostle's scope is clearly this, to give an instance of that glory he shall have, by that glory which he had then; the word which is used for his first coming is always another word. Peter, you see, makes a great matter of it, and so likewise doth John, John 1. 14. We saw his glory as of the only begotten Son of God; that is, such a glory as none could have but he that was the only begotten Son of God; we saw it, saith he: John you know, was one of them that was in the Mount, and Peter was another, and both these give testimony of it in their Writings: There was a third, James, not he that wrote the Epistle, but he that was put to death by Herod, and he dying so soon after, could give no Testimony of it, but the two Apostles that survived, both of them did. Now to confirm further, that this Transfiguration of Christ in the Mount, was on purpose to shew how glorious he should be in the latter day, and glorious in his Body; hence therefore did Elias and Moses, both of them, come and appear in their Bodies: God was pleased to raise up the Body of Moses, together with his Soul; and he appeared with Elias, and that in Body too; for Elias, you know, went to Heaven in his Body, and he was changed as those at latter Day shall be; and they were to testify to him his Resurrection, by their having their Bodies there, and that he also should come unto glory after he had suffered. Moses, he was in his Body too, not only because he was called Moses, which was argument enough, but they are said to be two men, Luke 9. 29. If Elias had his Body, certainly Moses had; and the scop: was to shew the glory of the body of Christ, and therefore both were in their bodies. The Lord had made two Promises to Moses, the one, that he should see his face; the other, that he would speak with him mouth to mouth: And here he hath made a second fulfilling of it; for the Son of God, whom he had prophesied of, speaks with him mouth to mouth, and he beholds his face in his glory. Now to speak a little of this glory that was thus appearing in the body of Christ.

It was an internal glory; it was not a glory that did shine about Christ, as if the Sun should shine upon a Glass, or upon a thing making it to shine, it was not extrinsical, it came from within, it was the Godhead quickning him; and therefore he is said to be transfigured, and his face to shine as the Sun: It was not that the Sun did shine upon his face, and made it to shine. And hence it was that his very Garments did shine; so saith Mark, Chap. 9. vers. 3. And his Raiment became shining, exceeding white as Snow: so as no Fuller on Earth can white them. Therefore the glory of his Garments was from the glory appeared in his Body, and his Garments did shine by a redundancy, by an overplus; for if it had been by an external light, it would have fallen first upon his garments, and then upon his body; but here it falleth upon his body first, and that is made the reason why his garments did thus shine. The glory that Moses had, who was Christ's Type, it was but an external glory put upon the face of Moses, by reason of his talking with God, but the glory that Christ's body had was from the breakings forth of the Godhead within it. And that is the difference (by the way) between worldly glory and heavenly glory; heavenly glory springeth from within, and so diffuseth it self to the body, from the Spirit's dwelling in the Saints, and from the Godhead dwelling in the Human Nature of Christ; but worldly glory is a meer external thing put upon men, it is but an outward splendour that environeth men. And his whole body was thus transfigured; and therefore Mark saith plainly, he was transfigured, Mark 9. 2. (not his face only) and his raiment became shining; implying that his whole body was transformed into a glory, which did shine through his very garments. My Brethren, if vile garments (for so I may call the garments of Christ, they were but mean garments) if they did shine so, what shall these bodies of ours do when they are transformed into the likeness of his glorious body?

Consider further the greatness of this glory that did shine in his body; for we do not read of any thing else. Peter calleth it Majesty, 2 Pet. 1. 16. We were eye-witnesses of his Majesty; the same word that is used for that great glory in Heaven, in Hebr. 1. 3. He is set down at the right hand of the Majesty on high. The Evangelists do compare it to the glory of the Sun; it is said, His face did shine as the Sun, Matth. 17. 1. If you say it did but shine like the Sun; I answer, the reason of that expression is this, Not that it was a light of the same kind with the Sun, but because there was nothing else to convey the glory, and the beauty, and excellency of it to Human apprehension, but the Sun. My Brethren, now that Christ is in Heaven, it is more glorious than the Sun. Paul, you know, he saw him from Heaven, saith he in Acts 26. 12, 13. I saw from Heaven a light above the brightness of the Sun (mark his expression, he riseth higher, above the brightness of the Sun) shining round about me; yet it was not the body of Christ in the Air, but the body of Christ in Heaven, and this brightness he saw, was but a Light that came from it, which yet was far above the brightness of the Sun it felt, though it was confined to that Company, and did not shine to all the World.

Consider the greatness of it likewise in this, that it made his garments to shine; so you shall find it in all three Evangelists; Matthew saith, Chap. 17. 2. His rayment was white as the Light; Mark, Chap. 9. 3. That his rayment became shining exceeding white as snow, so as no Fuller on earth can white them; Luke, Chap. 9. 29. That his rayment was white and glistening. They compare the Light of the face and Body of Christ to that of the Body of the Sun, and the Light of his rayment to the Light of the Sun, or of the Moon in the Air, which makes it white, or to the Sun shining upon Snow or the like.

Lastly, How infinitely did it affect the Apostles, though they themselves were not transformed into the same glory with him? What saith the Apostle Peter, poor Man? Master, saith he, it is good for us to be here; and upon what occasion doth he say this? when he saw Moses and Elias going away. So Luke, Chap. 9 Vers. 33. And it came to pass, as they departed from him; Peter said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles, one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias: not knowing what he said. He had but a little glimps of it, and yet notwithstanding, his Heart was infinitely affected with it: And yet he had a mixture of great fear and astonishment too, which must needs allay it: One that is afraid, you know, (and the Text saith, They were all afraid) would rather have the thing removed that he feareth; yet notwithstanding though he was full of fear, full of astonishment rather, his desire breaks out, Oh, saith he, that we might be ever here; and let us make three Tabernacles, saith he; The Text saith, he spake he knew not what: And why spake he he knew not what? Because he would stay there, and because he would have earthly Tabernacles, made of boughs, and booths, such as the Jews had, for to be a covering to glorified Bodies, that have Tabernacles made without hands, as the Apostle speaks, 2 Cor. 5. 1. For we know, that if our earthly house of this Tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hand, eternal in the Heavens. Our Saviour Christ had other work to do; for they had been talking of Christ's death, which he should accomplish at Hierusalem: And herein lay the folly of his Speech; yet so, as it shewed how mightily his heart was taken: Oh, saith he, let us be ever here, let us never go down to the World again: And yet poor Men, they were half asleep, they awaked on the suddain, and they heard Moses and Elias talking with Christ, and they heard them talking of his sufferings, an unpleasing Subject, yet, say they, let us go down no more; and yet they themselves were not made glorious, nay they were astonished, and that allayed their joy. How much then shall we be affected when we shall see Jesus Christ, as he is, and be made like to him, and have our Bodies transformed, able to bear all the glory, and to view him with open face, as the Apostle saith, with an allusion to it. 2 Cor. 3. 18. But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same Image, from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.

Here you see now, my Brethren, what a great glory it was; yet let me tell you this too, that this glory which Christ had at his Transfiguration, falleth short of that glory he hath now in Heaven; and that is as clear many ways; it was but a meer resemblance of it, a meer symbolical representation of it, in comparison of what that is. For,

1. He did not let the glory of his Body shine out to the full, for if he had, these poor disciples had not been able to have born it; Paul, you know, his eyes were put out with seeing it, Acts 26. 13. therefore he kept it in from what now shineth forth, and breaketh forth in Heaven. And,

2. It was but a transient glory; whereas that glory which is in his glorified body in Heaven, it is a permanent quality, that hath unchangeableness and unalterableness for ever, whereas this was but a blush of it. What saith the Apostle in 2 Cor. 3. 7, 8. But if the ministration of death written, and ingraven in stones, was glorious, so that the Children of Israel could not stedfastly behold the face of Moses, for the glory of his countenance, which glory was to be done away: How shall not the ministration of the Spirit, be rather glorious? He argueth that therefore Moses his glory, was no glory in comparison of the glory of Christ: By what? Because, saith he, the glory of Moses his Countenance was to be done away; and therefore it was no glory in comparison of the glory of Christ which continueth: So do I argue, the glory which appeared here upon the Mount in Christ's Transfiguration, is no glory in comparison of that he hath in Heaven: Why? because it was to be done away; for when the Cloud had taken up Moses and Elias, Christ was the same Man he was afore: Therefore now, the glory which Christ had in the Mount, which Peter magnified so, in comparison of what he hath in Heaven, it is but like the joy of the Holy Ghost, which in comparison of what the Soul shall have in Heaven, is but a little flushing of it: Yet you see how mightily it did affect, and what a glory it was. Consider,

3. His body was still subject to Infirmities, and therefore was not glorified; for Moses and Elias did talk of his dying while he was in this glory, and therefore now it was by a Miracle; it was not in that connatural way it shall be in the World to come, when his body shall be steel'd, nay it is steel'd with glory: For, my Brethren, the glory that is now in Heaven put upon him, it hath changed his body, so that it is impossible, he cannot suffer from any thing, and death hath no more dominion over him, nor any thing tending to death, nor the least alteration; but here he was to come down off the Mount, and to be crucified when he had done. And then,

4. These Disciples here could tell what they saw, and they could tell what the speech was between Moses and Elias, and him: But go, take Paul rapt up into the third Heavens, and he telleth us that he heard words that were unlawful, and impossible to utter; and so he saw sights, he saw the Human Nature of Christ in his glory certainly; but when he came down again, that vision which he had, he could tell no news of it: But these here, they could tell what they saw, and who they were, and what they said, They heard a voice from Heaven saying, This is my wel-beloved Son in whom I am well pleased.

5. Christ in this Transfiguration of his, did but give an instance of one property of glory, namely, shining, brightness, such as is in the body of the Sun; but there is likewise other as glorious properties of a spiritual body, that it can move up and down, as he did when he ascended up into Heaven; he was not long a going certainly, though it is a mighty vast space from Earth to Heaven; and he moved up and down after his Resurrection; and then he was impassible. But I will not stand upon that.

Thus I have shewn you what a great glory must needs be in the Human Nature of Christ, in his body: The grounds are in the Text, the instance is this which I have given you out of the story of his Transfiguration; and so I have dispatched the second thing. Before I come to the third and last, I will make a Use or two of this, and then proceed.

In the first place, my brethren, will you see and value the infinite love of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. As I said before, the glory of his Human Nature is founded upon the Union of that Nature with the Son of God; it was his due as soon as ever he should assume a Human Nature, and therefore he is called, The Man from Heaven, for it was his due to be there; it was a condescending for him to take upon him our frailties, our infirmities, and to have a passible body as he had: And therefore now for him that was thus in God's Decree in the very form of God, and was the Image of the invisible God, for so in his very Human Nature he is; he could have challenged all this glory as his due the very first moment; that he should first subject himself, and that Human Nature of his, to all these sufferings and debasements that he subjected it unto; unto; how infinitely should this raise up our hearts to see the love of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ! I shall but make this a little clear to you out of the very story of his Transfiguration. You shall find that when he was transfigured, the Evangelists tell us, that Moses and Elias did talk to him of his death and of his sufferings; They spake of his decease (saith Luke) which he should accomplish at Hierusalem. Our Saviour Christ, to shew what was his due instead of this suffering, he transfigureth himself; and whereas Moses and Elias went up to Heaven in their bodies again to that glory which they had before, he is left behind here below, and all his glory is gone, and to Hierusalem he must go, and there he must suffer. Why? He should have been in Heaven first if he had had his due. This glory of his, I say, and his death were both represented at once; Moses and Elias spake to him about his death at the same time when his transfiguration was, on purpose to set a value upon it, to take the hearts of the Sons of Men. This Christ, that was so glorious upon the mount, he might then have gone to Heaven as well as descended, and then where had been our Salvation? But he letteth Moses and Elias go to Heaven, Go you, saith he, and possess your glory; but as for his own glory, he sheweth what was his due, but layeth it aside for a while that he might suffer.

Again secondly, See whence the valuation of the Bodily sufferings of Christ before God doth arise. There were the sufferings of his Soul, and there were the sufferings of his Body. The sufferings of his Soul, the Scripture speaks least of, though they were the greatest sufferings of all the rest; As the Scripture speaks but little of the glory of the Soul, but speaks much of the glory of the Body, and would have us argue from that to the greatness of the glory of the Soul in the World to come. Learn I say, to value the sufferings of Christ at a due rate, consider whose Body it was that suffer'd; it was the Body of him in whom the Godhead dwelt Bodily and fully; of him that was life itself, was a quickning Spirit, (he was so in assuming Human Nature) his Body was ordained to another World; and the valuation of the Person was it that put a valuation upon every thing he suffered. Therefore, my Brethren, whenever you would put a value upon the bodily sufferings of Christ, I'll tell you what you shall do; First, look upon him as he is now crowned with glory and honour in Heaven, and then think with your selves, that all this was due to him when he was here below, when he was in the Mount, yea when in the Womb, to have taken that Body up and made it so glorious; And when you have brought him down from all the glory he hath in Heaven, do but think what a Man he was when he hung upon the Cross. This should make us put a valuation upon all his sufferings; This makes us see what it is that God doth value his Bodily sufferings for, they were the sufferings of his Body, whose due it was to be thus glorified, and never to have suffered; but God so ordered it that he must first suffer, and then rise and enter into, and possess his glory.

CHAP. XI.

What a more glorious Condition then was Adam's in Innocence, Christ will raise us up unto, proved in the lowest Instance of it, viz. the glory our Bodies shall have at the Resurrection. Wherein that glory shall consist. A Comparison between that glory our Bodies shall then possess, and what Adam's had in Paradise: And in what respect ours shall far excel his.

THE third thing that I am to handle is this, to shew you that our bodies shall be conformed to Jesus Christ's body, that as we have born the Image of the earthly, (which we all do in the bodies which now have) so we shall bear the Image of the heavenly: for so the Apostle reasoneth, verse 49. For the Apostles scope in these words is to argue that there is a spiritual body which the Saints shall have in the other World after the Resurrection; and he argueth it from this, because that Christ, who is our Head, he shall have a spiritual body; and he argueth that Christ shall have a spiritual body, by comparing Adam's body and Christ's together. Adam, he saith, was Christ's Type and Shadow, and therefore by way of eminency, if Adam was a living soul, that is, had a reasonable soul that dwelt in a body of Clay, which advanced it to such a dignity as all this World was made for it; then, saith he, Christ he shall be a quickning Spirit; that is, he shall have the Godhead to dwell in him, and quicken the Human Nature, and raise it up in a proportion to a higher degree of glory, than the reasonable soul of Adam raised up his body unto. And having proved this, he argueth from thence, that our bodies shall be like unto Christ's: Why? because those two were two common Persons and Roots of Mankind, and they were to propagate the like condition, the like state and qualification that should be in either of them, to those that should come of them: As is the earthly (saith he) (namely Adam) such are those that are earthly; and as is the heavenly (namely Christ, the Lord from Heaven) such are they also that are heavenly; and as we have born the image of the earthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. This, I say, is the Apostle's scope; his scope is not so much to hold forth the state of Adam's soul, taking it as having the Image of God upon it, having communion with God (for that is held forth sufficiently and abundantly in other Scriptures) but rather to compare that Animal condition, that is, that state that this soul had in this body, as it was suited to earthly things, as it was a living soul, quickning and giving life to an earthly body, partaking of all the comforts of things here below; to compare, I say, the state of this body, and this soul living in it, with the state of that glorified body which Jesus Christ hath in Heaven, and which he will raise up our bodies unto at latter Day. That I may distinctly express my self to all your apprehensions, let me say this in a word: Adam, you see, here is made a Type of Christ; his Condition wherein he was created, it is a Type or a Shadow of that glorious Condition that Christ will raise up his Members to. Now the glory of Heaven lies in two things, and the happiness of Adam lay in two things, whereof the one answereth the other. The glory of Heaven doth lye first in that immediate communion with, and vision of the Godhead which the soul hath, and whether it hath the body about it, or no, it would have; for, saith Paul, when he was wrapt up into the third Heavens, in 1 Cor. 12. Whether Book II. Whether I was in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell; nor was it any matter. But in the second place, because that this soul that thus seeth God immediately without the help of the body, hath a body that must be carried up thither to it; hence, besides the happiness that the soul hath by immediate communion with God, the body hath a happiness and glory, as the soul dwelleth in it, and the holy Ghost in both, that is proper and peculiar to it self. Just so it was with Adam, he had an immortal soul that was created with the image of God in it, the Image of holiness, by virtue of which he had communion with God, and his soul thus having communion with God, answereth to that vision of God which the soul hath in Heaven, although joyned with the body after the Resurrection. But then secondly, as this soul dwelling in this body, beside the communion it had with God, it had an Animal state, a Natural, an outward state of life, taking in the comforts of things here below, in and through the senses, both inward and outward, which here the Apostle calleth the Natural body, and interpreteth it by that in Genesis, a living soul, that is, a soul living or dwelling in an earthly body, having all the Creatures in the World suited to this body to comfort it, and the soul by it. Answerably there is in the World to come something that answereth to this spiritual body, and the spiritual state and condition of it. Now then, the scope of the Apostle, I say, it is not to compare the state of Adam's soul, as he had the image of God upon it, having immediate communion with God, to make him a Type of Christ therein, or of his Elect in Heaven; but to shew, even from that Animal, Natural, Earthy estate that his soul had in his body, what glorious spiritual estate the very bodies of the Saints shall have hereafter.

My Brethren, the design I had is this, to compare the state of Adam's body in innocency, with the glorious estate that the body of Christ hath, and that the bodies of the Saints shall have after the Resurrection: And I have endeavoured to shew how the state and condition of Adam's body, in which he was first created, it was a Type and a Shadow of the state and condition both of Christ's body and ours. To demonstrate this, I have,

First, Shewed what condition Adam's body was advanced unto by his being made a living soul, what an high estate that piece of Earth, that lump of Clay which God made Adam's body of, was advanced unto by being united to that reasonable soul which God put into him at first. I have,

Secondly, Shewn what a glorious condition the Human Nature of Christ, by being united to the Godhead (which is here in the Text called a quickning Spirit) this Godhead raiseth up this Human Nature unto. And now I am,

Thirdly, To shew that the State and condition of the Bodies of the Saints hereafter, at the Resurrection, shall be made conformable unto Jesus Christ's Body; and there I must also make up a Comparison between the State of Adam's Body at his first Creation, and our Bodies when they are thus raised up at latter day; and shew how the one was but a Type and an imperfect Shadow of the other.

That our Bodies at latter Day shall be conformed to the Image of Jesus Christ's Body, the Scripture is clear for it. I will give you but a place or two in stead of many others: In 1 John 3. 1, 2, 3. Behold what manner of Love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the Sons of God; Beloved, now are we the Sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know, that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. Now, how is it that we shall see Christ? Not only with our Souls, but we shall see him with these eyes, so saith Job, Chap. 9. 26, 27. And seeing of him with these eyes, we shall be made like unto him; As we shall see him with the sense of our Bodies, our Bodies shall be made also like unto him. Another place you have, is in Phil. 3. 21. We look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: As what to do? Who shall change our vile Bodies, (or our Body that in Comparison of that Body is contemptible (so I have opened it afore,) it is not a vileness in it self, but it is spoken comparatively) that it may be fashioned according to his glorious Body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself.

Our bodies, they have two patterns propounded in Scripture that they shall be conformed unto: The one is, they shall be like the Angels; The Sons of the Resurrection (saith Christ in the Evangelist Matthew) they shall be like the Angels. And there is a second pattern, we shall be conformed unto Christ's glorious body. (How glorious that was, you have heard). We shall be like him; It is not in equality, but it is only in respect of the same qualities that his body had. I would clear one mistake that some run into: When it is said, We shall bear the Image of the body and Human Nature of Christ in Heaven, and that Christ is a quickning spirit, some have run into this conceit, That as the Godhead is united in a Personal manner to the Human Nature of Christ, so it shall also be united to our bodies. But that is not the meaning, my Brethren: And my Reason is this, because if we come to Heaven by virtue of Christ, it is impossible we should ever be raised up to the same Union with the Godhead he hath; the Hypostatical Union is a thing of so high a Nature, as it can never be merited; but all that can be done is this, that we shall be made like unto him: He by virtue of being God, his body is made so and so glorious, as I have described it unto you; that as I said, Suppose the Sun should dwell in a Chrystal Glass, how glorious would that Glass be? So the Godhead dwelling in the Human Nature, He is the Lord from Heaven, raised up above Angels, therefore his body is glorious: Now we shall not be raised up to the same height and degree of glory he is: No; let Christ for ever enjoy that to himself; but all our happiness lieth in this, we shall be conformed to him, even in our bodies we shall be made like unto him.

Now the reason why I insist first upon this of the body, is this, because the Scripture speaks little of the glory of the soul, neither can it be conveyed to our Senses; but it would have us raise up our thoughts, how glorious the Soul shall be, by laying open how glorious our Bodies shall be. And so now I come to open to you the glory of that Spiritual Body we shall have after the Resurrection.

In laying open this, I shall do these four things by way of Premise.

1. To shew you that it shall be the same Body which we now have, that our Souls shall then dwell in.

2. That this Body shall have all its Parts and Members that now it hath.

3. That all these Parts and Members shall have some use or other in Heaven. And then,

4. That this Body shall be a Spiritual Body, and open and interpret what is meant by a Spiritual Body; and so I shall come to make out the Comparison between the State of Adam's Body at his first Creation, and our Bodies when they are thus raised up at latter day.

In the first place, It is the same Body for substance: For, my Brethren, when Adam's Body, the natural Body we now have, is said to be a Type of our Bodies in Heaven, the meaning is not that it is a Type of another kind of Body for substance. He calleth both the one, and the other, a Body; only, he saith, the one is a natural Body, and the other is a Spiritual Body. He doth not say our Bodies shall be turned into Spirits, as some have thought, but they shall be made Spiritual. As for example: Go take a piece of Iron, and put it in the Fire, it is one thing to have this Iron to be turned into Fire, and another thing to have it to be filled with Fire, and to be fiery, that if you look upon it, you shall not see Iron, but see Fire; yet Iron it is still: So is it here, it is the same Body, it is not changed into Spirit; it is only made Spiritual, it hath new properties, new qualities put upon it, as Iron hath when it is mightily heated with Fire, it is malleable when it is heated with Fire, you may bow it, or bend it, or work it, which way you will, though it is stiff naturally; and it is hot, if you touch it, you shall not feel cold Iron but Fire, though it is cold naturally. Therefore, in Scripture, it is not said we are made Angels, our Bodies are not made Spirits, but they are made as the Angels. I speak thus much; the rather because it is a great Heresie that is risen up in these latter times, that we shall not have the same Bodies in Heaven for substance, stance, that we have here below. The Apostle plainly saith the contrary; he BOOK II. saith, not that our Bodies shall be made Spirits, but Spiritual, and that the very same Body that we have now, and bear about with us, even that very Body shall be glorified. How is that proved? Out of this very Chapter, in vers.

 53. and 54. This same corruptible (saith he, mark the Phrase, in the Greek it is most emphatical) must put on incorruption; it shall not be another Body:
 Now he must needs mean the same Body for substance; for to say a corruptible thing, Quis corruptible, shall be incorruptible, is a contradiction: And he addeth also, and this same mortal must put on immortality; and he is not content with that, but he saith further; When this same mortal shall put on im- mortality, and this same corruptible have put on incorruption: There are four the same: The same mortal, the same corruptible is that that shall be glorified hereafter.

And, my Brethren, else we were not conformed unto Christ; For what body hath Christ in Heaven? The very same body he rose in; we must rise as he rose; for He is the first fruits of them that sleep. Now it is clear and evident, that Christ rose in the same body he died; for he saith, His body should not see corruption; it was kept in the grave, it rose again; Feel, saith he. It is certain that he did ascend with the same body he rose in; Acts 1. 11. say the Angels there to the Apostles that beheld him ascend, This same Jesus (it is a very emphatical place) the very same whom you see taken up into Heaven, shall so come in like manner; he expresth it every way, the sameness of the one and the other. I will not stand to mention, or open that place, which is commonly known, Job 19. 25. with these eyes I shall see him; I may self, (saith he) and not another. That's the first thing, The same body ri-seth.

Secondly, The same body shall have all its Parts and Members that now it hath; and that is plain and evident from our conformity to Christ, for still you see here, our bodies are to be conformed unto his, we shall bear his Image at the Resurrection. Now it is clear, that Jesus Christ rose with every part of his body that he had when he died; there was not a Member that saw Corruption. And in Hebr. 11. 35. compared with verse 37. it is said of them that were saven asunder, one piece of their bodies broken from another, they shall rise a whole body: Why? because, saith he, they shall obtain a better Resurrection: Now it was not a better Resurrection, if that all the Parts did not rise again, and if that all these Parts were not mended, or if they had any imperfection in them. And if you mark it, he speaks it of the Resurrection of the body, for he speaks of their being tortured, limb pull'd from limb, saven asunder; well, saith he, they shall not only have a resurrection, but a better resurrection one day.

Thirdly, It is as evident too, That all these Parts shall have an use in Heaven, some or other, in a spiritual way, and have Objects suited to them. I shall make this plain unto you:

1. By instancing in some Particulars. It is evident that some Parts of the body have an use in Heaven. It is evident in seeing; With these eyes, (saith Job) shall I see him. It is evident in speaking; in that Transfiguration which I have spoken of before, it is said that Moses, and Elias, and Christ did talk together: And at latter day, it is certain that Christ will speak so, as all the World shall hear him; he shall so judge all men, as that every man shall be able for to judge, therefore he shall do it audibly; for in 1 Cor. 4. 5. saith the Apostle, Judge no man before the time until the Lord come, (and he commeth as a man to judge) who will bring to light the hidden things of dark- ness, and make manifest the counsels of the heart; implying, Judge no mans heart afore hand, for one day you shall judge: And how shall you come to judge? Because the Lord will bring them all to light, and he will do it as a Man; for he hath appointed the Man Christ Jesus to judge the World. And when I say he shall pronounce the Sentence with a voice that all the World shall hear, it is not to be conceived that he shall speak so as to Thunder, but he shall have a spiritual voice, and they shall have spiritual ears; and how, we know not, as I shall shew you by and by. Steven's eye, his bodily eye, could see see up into Heaven, And he saw the Heavens opened, and the Son of God standing on the right hand of his Father; to see a Man of Christ's stature so far off, he must have the eye spiritualized, and so Steven's was. And so for all the World to hear the voice of Christ at latter Day, it is because they shall have ears spiritualized. Now, I say, if all these parts of the body remain, why should those have a priviledge and a prerogative more than all the rest of the parts of the body, which certainly shall serve for some use or other?

Chap. II.

2. I shall give you the reason which some Divines give for it, viz. That else it is not a Resurrection unto Life. The Resurrection is called a waking, for Death, you know, is a sleep. Now if there were not an imployment for all the Parts of the body in a spiritual way (what we know not) there were a Resurrection of some of them to sleep, rather than to waking, rather than to life; When I awake (saith he) I shall see thy face, Psal. 17. 15.

3. I shall propound you this Reason likewise for it, That the principal aim of God in decreeing men to Salvation, it did fall upon their bodies as well as their souls. He chose not the soul only to Heaven, and the body to come thither accidentally, but he pitched upon this soul as dwelling in this body, and therefore makes the soul stay for its full glory till the body is joyned unto it: And therefore he hath as well ordained that which shall be for the happiness and glory even of the body, objects suitable to it, being made spiritual; as he hath done for the soul it self.

Thus having explained, 1. That for the substance, it is the same body; and 2. That it is the same body with all the parts of it: And, 3. That all these Parts have their use: I must, 4. Explain what is meant by a spiritual body, and so make out the Comparison between the state of Adam's body in his first Creation, and our bodies when they shall be raised up at latter Day. There are three Interpretations, which being put altogether, make up the full scope and intent of what is here meant by a spiritual body.

1. Some say it is therefore called Spiritual, because that all earthly, animal, uses of it shall cease, such as the body hath now. The eye shall not be suited to colours or beauty; nor the ear to sounds, such sounds as now; nor the mouth and Stomack to meats and drinks. There is a very plain place for this, in 1 Cor. 6. 13. Meats for the belly and the belly for meats; but God shall destroy both it and them; that is, that suitableness that is between the body and meats, the eye and colours or beauty, the fancy and the things here in this World fancied, all this suitableness wherein God hath made the one for the other, as faculties for objects, belly for meats, and meats for the belly, God will dissolve, he will destroy, he will evacuate, he will make void all this suitableness, that the mouth nor the stomack shall not desire meats or drinks, &c. Why? Because God will destroy this suitableness, he will destroy both the belly and meats in the World to come. As the Angels, they are not taken with bodily pleasures, with beauty, nor any such thing, no more shall our bodily Senses, otherwise than as to that use they shall be then put unto. If you could suppose a Man to be taken out of Heaven in the body, he would find no pleasure in any thing here, he would not be taken with meats, or beauty or pleasures, or any such thing, he would be as an Angel. Here in this World God hath suited one to the other; There this suitableness shall be dissolved. Therefore you know our Saviour Christ saith, Matth. 22. 30. That they are as the Angels of God in Heaven, they neither marry nor give in marriage; and the pleasures that depend thereupon they shall not have, nor any such carnal thing, for their bodies are Spiritual: Though they have all the same Parts and Senses they had before, yet they are turned unto other objects, and put unto other uses. And hence therefore it is said, that Flesh and Blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of Heaven; that is, take these poor earthly bodies of ours, we are so unsuited to that glory that it would sink us, so that if a Man could be put into Heaven with this body as it is now, that glory would kill him, he were not able to bear it, he were not able to inherit. It is then a truth that they are called Spiritual bodies in this respect, that look, as Spirits cannot find a suitableness between worldly things and them : What do the Angels care for all the beauty in the World, or for all the pleasures of meats and drinks, &c. Nothing at all: No more shall these bodies of ours, when they shall be raised up at the latter day; God will destroy both it and them; that is, the suitableness between the one and the other.

Book II.

2. Others interpret a spiritual body to be a body able to pass, pierce, or move as Spirits up and down; That our Bodies shall be able to move from Earth to Heaven presently. Popish Interpreters say, That Christ's body did move even through the Grave-stone, while the Stone lay upon the mouth of the Sepulchre. But whether that be true or no I will not stand to dispute; our Protestant Divines are against it. Yet this is certain that that is not the whole meaning of the Apostle here, when he saith our Bodies shall be Spiritual, and that for this Reason clearly, because he doth oppose spiritual to the whole animal Life, the natural life that Adams Soul had in his Body in all the operations of it whatsoever; therefore to restrain a spiritual Body only to nimbleness and agility, it is too narrow an Interpretation; it is but to take in one property instead of all the rest. But then,

3. That which I especially pitch upon (though I take in all these in their degree) is this, It is called a spiritual body, because that the whole body, it shall be in a spiritual way suited to spiritual Objects made for it: And so, now I shall come to make out the Comparison between the state of Adam's body in innocency, and our bodies as they shall be after the Resurrection; and shew you how the one was a Type of the other.

The first Excellency of Adam's body, which is called a natural body, I told you was this; It had a whole world made for it, meats for his belly, colours for his eyes, sounds for his ears, &c. and as he had an animal body, so he had a world suited to it. So now likewise, there is a spiritual body we shall have, which shall be so changed, and have new qualities put upon all these Senses of ours, that there shall be spiritual Objects suited thereunto: That as the suitableness between earthly objects and it shall be taken away, meats for the belly, and the belly for meats, shall both be destroyed; so there will be spiritual objects which the body will be suited to. Thus you shall find in Nature, and you shall find it to hold in Grace too, that God hath always suited objects and faculties one to another: If he hath made an eye, he hath made colours for it; If he hath made an ear, he hath made sounds for it: And such as the faculty is, such are the objects; if the faculty be spiritual, the object shall be spiritual also: If he makes belly, he makes meat; and if he makes meat, he makes belly; and if the meat be earthly things, the belly shall be earthly too: If you could suppose a spiritual belly (but we cannot tell how to speak in such a language) you should have something spiritual suitable unto it. The Apostle, in 1 Cor. 2. 13. he saith of the Holy Ghost (he speaks it indeed of teaching men how to preach the Word) that as he hath made spiritual things to be taught, so he teacheth men to express those spiritual things in spiritual language, he suiteth (so the word signifies) he fitteth spiritual things to spiritual. So in Heaven, if God have made a spiritual body, which takes up all the parts of it, he hath suited spiritual objects to it. There are two instances in Scripture of the glory of the body; the one is of Christ's, when he was transfigured; the other is of Steven, when his face shined, as it had been the face of an Angel, and he looked up to Heaven, and he saw two things, he saw Christ, and he saw the glory of God; there was a spiritual glory which he saw with his bodily eyes made spiritual.

Now, I know you will ask me this Question, If that a Mans body, and all the parts of it, shall be carried up to Heaven, and shall have objects suited thereunto, what manner of objects shall these be? And what manner of Senses shall these be? And to what uses shall all these be turned? What Senses we have here we know, what we shall have there can you tell us?

The truth is, my Brethren, I cannot tell you, I profess it; I can no more tell you, than I can tell you if God should say from Heaven that he would add a sixth Sense to your bodies, and Create an object suitable to it, what this Sense, nor what the Object of it should be; neither could all Angels and Men, if they laid their heads together, tell you what Sense and Object thereof, that should be. Paul, you know, saith, that he heard words (when he was wrapt up into the third Heavens) that were unutterable, 1 Cor. 12. When he came down from Heaven, they were things of another kind, of such a nature, that he was not able to speak them, or make any impression what they were upon any Mans understanding in the World. Therefore, in 1 Cor. 2. (though it is meant principally of the things of the Gospel, yet as evidently too of the things of Heaven) The ear hath not heard, nor the eye seen, nor hath it entered into the Heart of Man, the things that God hath prepared for them that love him. I may as well tell you, how it is possible that our bodies should be Spiritual; the truth is, it is in nature a contradiction; for to say a Spiritual body, it is as if you should say a wooden stone: Were not this an absurdity? You would all think so. And therefore now to tell you what shall be the Spiritualness of this body, and yet a body still, and what shall be the objects suited to this Spiritual body, for my part I cannot; but out of the clear word of God, and this very Text, it is plain that as there was an animal body that Adam had, suited to animal things, so here shall be a Spiritual body, suited to Spiritual things, and so much we may safely say in the general. Luther when he took into consideration this Phrase, A Spiritual Body, saith he, Hic sermo est plane inauditus, here is a Speech never heard of; What a, Spiritual body! Yet so it is. It is a glory shall be revealed, that's the Phrase, Rom. 8. 16. I bring it for this purpose, to shew, that we know not what glory it shall be, for it shall be revealed. And that he speaks of the glory of the body, is clear by vers. 11. If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal Bodies. And likewise, at vers. 23. he saith, We wait for the redemption of our bodies: It is a glory therefore to be revealed, and for my part I cannot tell you what it is; only we argue one thing out of another, and so raise up our thoughts to think what it may be. My Brethren, suppose the Angels had stood by (as it is likely some of them did, for the morning Stars sang, as I shewed out of Job) and beheld when God was making Adams body, they saw him take a piece of Earth, and mould it to a head, to eyes, to nose, to mouth, & all those parts; what this body, while it was thus a making should be made for, (suppose the body was first made, as it seems it was, for God did then breathe the breath of Life into it) what those eyes, and that nose and mouth should serve for, all the Angels in Heaven could not tell. Ay, but when once God breathed a soul into it, then they saw that the eyes could discern colours, and the mouth could taste meat, and the ears could hear sounds. So will God do at latter Day; he will take up our bodies, and make them spiritual; put new Senses upon them, as I may say, or rather spiritualize these Senses we have, and then what these shall serve for in the other world, we no more know, than indeed and in truth, in this Supposition, the Angels could have known: But when the Holy Ghost shall come as a soul into these bodies (as he will do, for we are all the Temples of the Holy Ghost) and shall act all these, then those things that are in Heaven, they will know and see, and we shall find and feel them suited as truly to these spiritual bodies of ours, that we shall have there, as our animal bodies are to the things of this world. Let a poor plain man come into an Artificer's Shop, and there see a great many Tools, it may be two or three hundred several Tools, as some curious Artificers have, what this Tool serveth for he knoweth not, and what that Tool serveth for, he knoweth not; the Artificer, he hath a use for them all. So when we come to Heaven, what all the parts of these bodies of ours shall then serve for, we know not now, but he that made them, and made them principally not for this world (mark what I say) your bodies were not made for this world chiefly, that's clear in all the Scripture, this Text holds it forth, That which was natural (saith he) is first; first indeed in execution; and Book II. and afterward that which is spiritual; God's eye was upon the spiritual. Now he that did order our very bodies for Heaven, as well as our souls, and doth not bring the body to Heaven by accident, only because the soul is there, and will not part Company; but he pitched upon the one as well as the other; He knows what to do with all these Tools, though we do not. Our own experience will tell us, that there may be a great change in the use of things; we eat, and drink, and take in nourishment every meal; Is it not a strange thing that all this meat we eat, should within four or five hours after, hear, and see, and feel, that it should beget Spirits that shall do all this by the Instruments of it? Is not here a strange spiritualizing of these poor Creatures? Thus will God spiritualize eyes, ears, and all, and advance them to more noble objects ten thousand times there than here. So that, my Brethren, as God will make a spiritual body at the Resurrection, so he hath suited spiritual things in the other world for this spiritual body, as he made and suited this world to Adam's animal body in the first Creation: And there is nothing in the other world that is corporeal or bodily (and there must needs be many things corporeal there, for the place is a body) but it shall be suited to the body of man when it is thus made spiritual.

If you ask me more particularly, What one object there is that shall be suited to our bodies, for us to have happiness in our bodies by it?

I Answer, The Human Nature of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, it is a Notion that the Schoolmen had of old, That the body of Christ is the happiness of Heaven, and is suited to our bodies in Heaven, to be the happiness of them; as seeing of the body of Christ shall be the happiness of that Sense; and how he is otherwise suited to all our other Senses, we know not. I shall give you a place or two for it: 1 Cor. 6. 13, 14. Meats for the belly, and the belly for meats, but God shall destroy both it and them. The body is not for fornication, but for the Lord, and the Lord for the body; and God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise us up by his own power. The Apostle here speaks against unlawful pleasures and sensual lusts: And his Argument lies upon a twofold ground: First, It is taken from a common Argument, Why should you give up your selves to these Lusts, saith he, seeing your bodies were made for other things? Suppose inordinate eating and drinking were lawful, it is but for the belly, saith he, it is but for this world, God will destroy both belly and meats. Then there is a special Argument, The body is not for fornication, but for the Lord, and the Lord for the body. Now then, look as the belly is for meats, and meats for the belly here in this world, so in a spiritual way (which we know not of) is the Lord for the body, and the body for the Lord in the other world. There are other Interpretations given of this, I will but name them, and give you Reasons against them.

First, say some, the meaning is this; That the body is made to serve the Lord, and therefore because you are to serve the Lord with your bodies, give not your selves up to such lusts. That that is not the only meaning, is clear by this, because he doth not say only that our body is for the Lord, but he addeth, and the Lord is for the Body. Now Jesus Christ is not ordained to serve the body, that's certain. And then again, secondly, he speaks of our bodies what they shall be at the Resurrection. How do you prove that? By two reasons; For first, he saith, The body is for the Lord, and the Lord for the body; when the belly and meats shall be destroyed. Meats for the belly (saith he) and the belly for meats, but God shall destroy both it, and them: and then afterward, he saith, The body is for the Lord and the Lord for the body. Secondly, it is evident, that he meaneth what correspondency and suitability shall be between the Body of Christ, and our bodies, in the World to come, it appears by this, which he saith, And God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise us up by his own power; Implying, that as God did make the belly for meats, and meats for the belly, in a corporeal way, in an animal way here, so he hath suited, in a Spiritual way, our bodies for Christ, and and Christ for our bodies, in the other World; And therefore that God that made this ordination, he that hath raised up Christ already, and given him a Spiritual body, he will raise us up too, that so we being ordained one for another, our bodies may be for him, and his body for us. Chap. 11.
