3. He would present unto him what he knew would most of all please him, not Sacrifices, but a broken Heart, verse 16, 17. For thou desirest not Sacrifice, else would I give it; thou delightest not in Burnt Offering. The Sacrifices of God are a broken Spirit, a broken and a contrite Heart, O God, thou wilt not despise. And verse 19. with the Sacrifices of Righteousness. Then closing up the Psalms with the remembrance of the Church, even when himself was in this deep distress, such as one would think should have swallowed all the intentions of his Prayers for his own particular; yet he forgets not her. Do good in thy good pleasure to Sion: Build thou the Walls of Jerusalem.

In my Text you see the First-born of those Resolutions, and most genuine Dispositions that springs up in him, to be teaching Sinners Gods ways, in order to their Conversion.

For the Opening which, in order to what I am to make Observation of upon it.

1. This Redintegration of Love betwixt God and him, he in every passage utters in the Language, at least in the Materials of a new Conversion, such as the Soul hath at first; yet so expressed, as they carry with them strong and pregnant insinuations that the former work was not wholly extinct; nor the Spirit of God wholly taken from him, verse 11. Recovery after great falls falls hath in it all the Transactions and Workings that is in a New Conversion, and is indeed the same Work acted over anew in a Mans Spirit. And therefore saies Christ to Peter, When thou art Converted (speaking of the Recovery of him from his Relapse) Luke 22. 32. To manifest this by Particulars.

BOOK 10

1. Here is the same Humiliation or Conviction of Sin, sense of, and burthen for it, (verse 3, 4. My sin is ever afore me.) Together with a renewed sight and view of the Original of all natural Corruption, (verse 5. Behold, I was shapen in Iniquity, and in sin did my Mother conceive me.) And also of the deceits in the Heart, and Spirituel Contrarieties to Holiness, which v. 6. he termeth truth in the inward parts, which looking into his his own Spirit he discerned all sorts of Contrarieties thereunto, verse 6. Behold thou desirest truth in the inward parts. He speaks it, as having turn'd his Eye, come new from the sight of his own Corruption, v. 5, to the purity of God and his Spiritual Law. And Oh how opposite is my Heart from that sincerity thou requirest! Then you may observe also self-emptiness, and brokenness of Spirit, (which is the bottom-work of Humiliation) in discerning his own nothingness, verse 17. which Christ terms, Poverty of Spirit. This for the Work of Humiliation.

2. As for the works of Faith for Justification; here is as fresh and vehement goings out, and longings for washings by Christs Blood, (v. 2. Wash me thoroughly from mine Iniquity, and cleanse me from my Sin. And v. 7. Purge me with Hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than Snow) as ever were in a poor Soul when it first lay at the Foot-stool of Gods Throne of Grace, imploring pardon as a condemned man to die. And here is not only begging the thing it self, but the renewed assurance of it to his Soul, v. 8, 9. Make me to hear joy and gladness, that the Bones that thou hast broken may rejoice. Hide thy Face from my Sins, and blot out all mine Iniquities. And also v. 12. Restore unto me the joy of thy Salvation, and uphold me with thy free Spirit. Which few Converts at first do. But David had been enured to it. Here is also as impetuous seeking after the face and presence of God, verse 11. Hide thy face from my Sins, verse 9. But turn it upon me, and cast me not out of thy presence, verse 11. that is, Let me see thy face. This for the Workings of Faith.

3. For Sanctification and Holiness. He having seen the bottom-Corruption of his Nature, verse 6. he experimentally seeketh for a Sanctification of his Nature of the right kind; even the contrary frame of Heart to his Natural uncleanness, Create in me a clean Heart, and give me Grace of the true and right kind and Breed. Renew a right Spirit within me. Truth in the inward parts, Lord. Nothing else would content him, not outward Sacrifices, nor Performances, as you may perceive by verse 16. Yea, and he seeks this in a sense of his own inability to effect it in himself. And so gives up his Heart in acknowledgment of his utter and total dependance upon Gods Grace and Power to work it, Create in me, O God: Do thou do it; for I am no more able to work it, or the least degree thereof, than to Create a World. And as he prays for habitual Holiness in his Nature, so for the Holy Ghost to abide in him, vers. 11. to act that Grace and uphold him. Whom verse 12. he termeth the principal Spirit, or his leading Spirit. 'Tis read either of them, by some, as in distinction from inherent Grace, which vers. 10. he had termed Spirit. And the fruits and effects of it follows, seeking to turn others. This he did by opening his Mouth in Holy Conference to set out Gods Praise, praying for the Saints and Church of God, and studying and searching forth what would please God most, to the end to offer it up to him. These are all the dispositions of Hearts truly and newly Converted, and wrought upon. And such Conversions as these, and renewals of the whole work upon us, we must have in our Lives, if we go to Heaven; if not upon falls, yet upon some occasions or other. Except ye be Converted, says Christ to his Disciples, that were Converted already, ye cannot enter into the Kingdom of God. And these kind of Workings you have now heard of in David's Heart, may both help us to judge of our selves whether we have been Converted, or rightly Recovered after Relapses, and and comfort our selves if we have found the like, as face answering to face in Water. For David was a grown Christian before; and yet this great and second work upon him (greater than his first) rose up but to such dispositions as these. For Gods second Works always exceeded the former, and in all he is made a pattern of a Man after Gods Heart. 2. This having been every way as a new Conversion to him, Look what was the most natural disposition and motion of Spirit in him, the same (in their proportion) is in others converted to God. Now in David you see the very first bud that puts forth in this fresh Spring (for he had been as a Tree in Winter) is seeking to Convert others. And he being further a Prophet, and endowed with abilities to teach (as also Solomon his Son after him) this gracious Disposition, the spring of which is common to him and all other Converts, the stream of it seeks vent, and most gladly and greedily runs out into this Channel of teaching others to convert them; whereunto he had the advantage by his Gifts and Calling.

The Text hath Three Parts :

1st, A Gracious Disposition and Resolution of Spirit, flowing from Conversion, to convert others to God.

2^d, The most proper means to effect it, teaching Men Gods ways.

3^d, The promise of Success, and they shall be converted.

From the First, The Observation is, That in every truly converted Soul to God, this is one of the most Natural and Genuine Dispositions and Desires (according to its ability and opportunity) to Convert and win others to God.

The second Observation is, That teaching Men, and teaching them the ways and dealings of God with Souls, in converting of them, or in recovering them fallen, is the most effectual way sanctified by God to effect conversion.

For the Third, And they shall be Converted unto thee. Observe, That God more especially useth and blesteth the Endeavours of such as himself hath already converted, to turn others to God.

Fourthly, That he useth such, notwithstanding their falls and and corruptions, David still promiseth to himself, that God would yet use him and succeed his Endeavours, and bless his Example, yea, and perhaps more than ever afore.

For the First, I shall handle it as it is a common Disposition in the Hearts of all Men converted, and even all having some Ability and Opportunity of doing good to some or other they converse with this way, though according to proportion of Talents, Calling, Opportunities, in Men set apart to the Ministry of the Word this is chiefly incumbent upon them.

Now for the Proof of how great and strong a disposition in the Heart of a Saint this is, I give that Scripture, 1 Tim. 4. 16. For in doing this, thou shalt save thy self; and them that hear thee.

These Words have Two Parts. 1. A Summary of the Instructions given afore, Take heed to thy self, and thy personal Conversation. And 2. To thy Doctrine, or Preaching; for I take it by a Metonymy, that is it he intends. And this is the Epitome of all afore, v. 12, 13. &c. Together with an exhortation to persevere in doing both. 2. The Motives hereto, the greatest that can be. 1. Thou shalt save thy self 2. Those that hear thee. Now though the gift of Preaching was not common; yet these motions are but such as are common to all Saints, and upon these common motions doth Paul work upon Timothy's Heart, and no other, to diligence herein. Salvation of a Mans self, is Suprema Lex, in nature. The Salvation of others is the Supream Law in the New Creature. Therefore Two greater Motives cannot be spoken. First for saving a Man's self; If it were alone the privative part of Salvation, that is, to be saved and delivered from the Misery Sin deserves; all in Nature would put a Man to chuse it. If a Man were in danger of being drowned, and had a Crown thrown him, with a Title annexed to it, of being King of all the World, and at the same time throw him but a poor Rope or Cord, he will lay hold on the Rope, and let go the Crown; because that it will (tho' but) save him.

and

 So shalt thou save thy self. And to save others, is the supreamest Law in the New Creature. The Title of being a Saviour did toll and woo Christ down from Heaven to Earth. And the Name Jesus, or Saviour, is the highest Name in Heaven or Earth: And this Title, by discharging thy Duty faithfully, shalt thou partake with him in; thou shalt have both the Name and Reward of being a Saviour to others instrumentally: And Christ himself could have no greater. Paul's Instance argues the desire hereof one of the supreamest Laws in the New Creature. Rom. 9. 1, 2, 3. I say the truth in Christ, I lie not, my Conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost, That I have great Heaviness and continual Sorrow in my Heart: For I could wish that my self were accursed from Christ, for my Brethren, my Kinsmen, according to the Flesh. For both Love to God, and Love to others, do, in the fullest Stream and Channel meet in this. It was the salvation of such a Bulk of Mankind, in whom Gods Name was interested, as were the Jews; and the continuance of the Gospel to them in future Ages, for their Salvation, that he here prefers to his own Salvation. He wisheth himself accursed from Christ; and because, to have the New Creature wound up to so high a Note, without cracking and breaking Nature it self, that the Prerogative Law thereof should so prevail and over-rule the supream Law of Nature it self, would (as he knew) be a wonder, and incredible to the most of Christians: He therefore makes the solem-nest protestation that this was real in his Heart, that ever was made by man. 1. I speak the Truth. 2. I lie not. 3. My Conscience bearing me witness. 4. And that That deceives him not, He calls in Christ and the Holy Ghost as Witnesses of it. If ever Paul spake Truth, he spake Truth now; and what was it he utters? I could wish my self accursed from Christ. What, Paul! Think what thou sayst, accursed from Christ! We will give thee leave to be in Sorrow and Heaviness, for so are we, when we see men go to Hell: But to be accursed from Christ, and that Paul should say it! You find him in all his Epistles breathing more after Christ, than in the Acts you read he had ever breathed forth Threatnings against his Church. What from Christ! To me to live is Christ, to die is Gain, says he, Phil. 1. And again, Chap. 3. 8. Doublets (there is no demur upon it) I account all things but Loss, for the Excellency of the Knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: For whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but Dung, that I may win Christ. What and part with Christ! Yea, be accursed from Christ! His meaning is not, I wish the Condition of the Damned, in respect of Despair, Revenge, Blasphemy, &c. that had been a sin to wish; but look what state towards God, Christ himself was in, in separation from God, and sense of wrath, when he was made a Curse to save me; that Condition saies he I could be content to be in, having those exercises of such Graces, Submission to Gods Will, which Christ then also had. Well but Paul, think out, and think out again; why says Paul, I have,
 I speak the Truth, I speak the Truth again; He seconds it with, I lie not. Well but Paul, let that be granted, which yet perhaps some of us could do; to submit to it, if God would say it were his Pleasure, That if we would be accurs-ed, such and such should be saved: No, says Paul, that is not all, I find I could heartily wish it; to choose it should be my option. The highest Instance, that ever I have heard of any other, was on the contrary: A tender Mother, that had prayed long for her Son, once was brought to this, to think that she should re-joyce one day in his Damnation, and it converted him. But still Paul's is higher;
 he saies I would follow Christ, and Christ was made a Curse from God for me; and I would imitate him, and do the like for others. It was well he spake this in Christ, as a New Creature, created in Christ Jesus. I am assured the first Creature, the Image of God in Adam, would not have been drawn up so high. The Spirit of Elixir would have crack'd his Earthen Vessel: That Earthly man, as the Apostle calls him, 1 Cor. 15. 'Tis a Note beyond his Elab. And the truth is, take all the Mass of other Christians: God would but by this one Instance of Paul's shew what is in the Root, and may be extracted

tracted out of the New Creature, which is in them all; but Paul alone herein followed Christ. The highest Note of the New Creature, but far below this, (as it was also of another kind) was that of a Godly tender Hearted Mother who having prayed long, as Monica for Austin, for a debauched Son, and seeing no fruit of her Prayers, but the contrary in the highest, at last was by God brought unto this, that if God for his own Glory would rather Damn him, than save him, her Heart was put into that disposition it should be in at the Day of Judgement: To think that she should one day rejoice to see him Damned, even him whom she loved so dearly, and had prayed so much for. And the Relating of this Speech to her Son, when he was in the height of his Rebellion, broke his Heart and turn'd him. But still Paul's here exceeds hers and all others else. Yea, here when he speaks of Timothy, then whom he found none other like minded in naturally taking care of the Souls of others, Phil. 2. 20. he winds not Timothy up so high as himself was wound up, and the New Creature would bear. He prefers this Motive of Self, and puts it first; So shalt thou save thy Self, only next unto it adds, And those that hear thee. So as this we may gain warrantably from it, as suiting the Spirit and disposition of every Man Regenerate, especially Ministers, that next to saving themselves, the Conversion and Salvation of others, is the greatest and Noblest Argument that can be used.

Chap. 7.

I shall give you the Reasons of it: The common Foundation of which lies in this. That Grace which is a New Divine Nature, partakes of it (as the Nature of all things doth with those of a like Kind) in some Analogy with it.

Now 1. It is the natural Property of every good thing to diffuse and communicate it self, and as it excels in goodness, so it exceeds in that desire. God, who is Goodness and Blessedness it self, hath delighted himself from all Eternity, to think of his communicating his Blessedness to some of his Creatures, whom himself would set himself to Love. His Delights were with the Sons of Men, Prov. 8. and Exod. 33. 19. I will make all my Goodness pass before thee, and will be Gracious to whom I will be Gracious. He would not enjoy his Happiness alone, but have his Creatures the better for him. And the inferiour Creatures that partake of a Portion of Goodness from him, partake therewith of the like Property, Fire to diffuse its Heat; the Sun its Light. Now Grace in the Souls of Men is in that manner the image of Gods Goodness, Love, Grace, Mercy, &c. that the common goodness in the Creatures is not. And therefore answerably to the measure of its excelling them, it must needs excel in this, wherein a Man comes nearest unto God, which, as the Heathen Cicero said, is nothing more than in doing good to others. Yea, and we find in Scripture the New Creature compared unto all things that are diffusive of themselves, as partaking with them in this, which is the common property. Thus it is compared to Fire, one Coal that hath Fire in it, enkindles another. And every Man is either a Dead or Living Coal. Thy Word, says Jeremy, it was a Fire in my Bones, and I could not stay, Chap. 20. 9. It is also compared to Light in a Room, or set upon an Hill, to give light to all in it: To precious Oyntment, which as that of Mary's did, diffuseth its Odour to the whole Room.

2. It is the nature of every thing begotten by another, to beget and propagate another of the same. Tis the vehementest and strongest desire in Nature. Opus naturalissimum implanted as instinct by Vertue of that Law and Command given forth by God, Gen. 1. 22. Be fruitful and multiply, according to their kind. The Angels were not ordained to beget in their kind, for they give not in Marriage; but of all Creatures that are, to multiply in their kind, the more excellent the kind is, the stronger is the inclination. Now the Saints are a Royal Generation, 1 Pet. 2. The first fruits of Gods Creation, as being begotten of God; James 1. 18. Of his own Will beget he us with the Word of Truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of his Creatures. Every one that is born of Book 10 God, hath the seed of God in him; that is a Divine Nature, Joh. 1 Ep. 3: Chap. v. 9. and the Holy Ghost is also in that New Nature to provoke him hereunto. Yea, and therefore it is in them from the first, which is not in other Creatures. As soon as Paul was Converted, he consulted not with Flesh and Blood, but went to preach the Gospel, Gal. 1. 16. and this is proper to Men truly Converted.

3. Grace hath besides these properties, common to it with other Creatures, a transcendent Elevation of it to the Glory of God. Hallowed be thy Name; is the first Petition the Heart is taught to fall upon in the Lords-Prayer; And thy Kingdom come, is the next. Now it is Christs coming into the Hearts of Men is the foundation of all his Kingdom, for it brings in willing Subjects, when many Men are Converted unto Christ, in so many Mens Hearts, is the Glory of God set up as their cheifest end, and they are Vessels and Instruments of his Glory to all Eternity. The Glory of a King consists in the multitude of his Subjects, Prov. 14. 28. Now Christ is King of Saints, Rev. 15. and in the Multitude of them lies his Honour.

4. In the Regenerate there is Love to Christ and pity to the Souls of others. I join them both together for God himself hath joynd them together in our Salvation. And 2 Cor. 5. 11, and 14. verses. Paul joineth them together as motives to him to perswade Men to turn to God, v. 11. Knowing therefore the Terrour of the Lord, that is, what an infinite Treasure of Wrath is laid up for Men that dye in their sins, we cannot but tell and perswade Men, as Lot did his Kindred, to come out of Sodom. We perswade Men, ver. 14. for the Love of Christ constrains us. And this was a motive over and above the necessity of his Office. And he farther instructs others, Col. 3. 12. Put on, as the Elect of God, Bowels of Mercy. Now to the Elect of God, wherein are the Bowels of Gods Mercy shewn? In Mercy, delivering them from the greatest Misery, and that is the saving Men from Sin, and Wrath, and Hell: Christs Love lay in this: Answerably, you that have received Mercy from God, wherein is your Mercy to be shewn most towards others? In endeavouring to pull them out of Hell, and save them from Wrath to come, Christ in Mat. 5. enumerates the most inward dispositions of Converted Souls, and perhaps in order as they are wrought. He reckons up these two near one another, v. 7. Blessed are the Merciful, and v. 9. Blessed are the Peace-makers, that is, who out of a sense of Mercy, or seeing their need of it, do seek it at Gods hands for themselves; and laying to Heart the danger and misery others are in, endeavour to make Peace between an offended God and them, or seeing the terrour of the Lord perswade Men, as you heard Paul speaking his own disposition of Spirit. In like manner speak's Jude 22, 23. of some have compassion, making a difference, and others save with fear pulling them out of the Fire. The allusion seems to be to ones seeing poor Children, or impotent Creatures falling into the Fire, out of which they have no Heart or Power to deliver themselves. And it is an out-cry in such a Case. If you have any Compassion in you: Oh save them, and with Fear, as knowing the Terrour of the Lord: For fear lest ere you could perswade them, the wrath of God should seize upon 'em. And it is such an Exclamation as would be in a Family or Room, wherein one in a Lethargy or falling sickness is cast into the Fire; in which Case Men leave all Business, as of lesser moment, and run speedily to pull out such, and this Word pull them out of the Fire, imports Violence, as Christ said, Compel them to come in, so snatch them out by strong hands. Alas, they, poor Creatures are asleep and feel nothing; yea, they struggle against it, therefore pluck them out. My Brethren, the Terror of God is such as even those that are in Hell (as Luk. 16.) have so much compassion in them as to desire their Friends may not come thither: How much more should this work in your Hearts (that have tasted of the Mercies of God your selves, that are escaped through that Mercy) a compassion to the Souls of others.

I might add 5thly, out of Jude what follows in these words, hating the Garment spotted with the Flesh, that is, if no more should move you, let this, viz. the destruction of what you hate. You that love the Lord hate Evil, and if you do, seek to destroy it in those you love.

Use 1. Observe whether out of such Principles as these in thy Soul, thou hast found this so truly Noble, Generous, and natural Disposition in thee. Is this thy aim, thy set desire and endeavour? Hast thou not only a Spirit enclining, but also provoking thee unto it, out of a Bleeding Heart, over other mens Conditions? Is it the very delight of thy Soul to have any opportunity of doing good this way, when thou seest any hopefulness or comingness in any? Dost thou feel thy Soul rejoice as much, or more than in the addition of personal Comforts to thee? This was meat and drink to Christ, John the 4th. When he found a poor woman at Samaria, who began to listen to his Doctrine, He says, it was meat and drink to him to do this Will of his Father in this particular, John 4. 32, 34. 'Tis spoken upon that occasion, for this he afterwards owns to be the eminent will and command of his Father, to bring in those he had given him; so John 6. 37, 38, 39. And Paul, who followed Christ, became all to all; he would stoop to any thing, and that to win but some. You see, Acts 26. When he was at the Bar, and his particular Interest was to plead for his Life; he minds it not, but falls a perswading Agrippa, before whom he appears, and his Courtiers, to turn to God; and when he was somewhat stirred and perswaded half way, and said, Thou hast perswaded me almost to be a Christian. What do you speak of it only as almost says Paul? And what of your self alone? Though he had caught the great Fish, a King, yet it was not the saving of a Kings Soul contented him; his desires were Larger. I wish, (sayshe) not only that thou, but all that hear me, were not almost, but altogether as I am, excepting these Bonds. The truth and strength of this desire is one of the most sure and certain signs of Regeneration, and being Begotten again, of any other. For besides that it is certain that Satans Kingdom is not divided against it self, nor can Heartily desire the ruin of it self, and Members of a Body use to defend one another; and men may be zealous to convert men to particular opinions: It is more certaine that to make Disciples, and bring men throughly to Christ, to turn from all sin, to glorifie God, and delight in doing this, and seeing it done, as in their own Salvation is the distinguishing character of a Son of God. Mat. 5. 9. Blessed are the Peace-makers, for they shall be called the Children of God. This is proper to one Begotten. The spurious spawn of Professors hatched out of self-love, are not acquainted with such vehement desires, that yearning of Bowels, that pity to mens Estates; tis not the ultimate end and scope of their speeches or profession. Grace shews it self strongest in this, and that more early than in other dispositions. Commonly as soon as a Believer comes into the new World himself, and as one affrighted out of his Natural Condition, is brought into this marvelous Light and is environed about with it, he hath all things new in his sight, and apprehends; with an edge of affection, the danger of his former Condition, and Gods free Grace reach'd forth to pull him out: And the light of these things is fresh, strong, and vigorous in him: And he sees and wonders how all about him, are running headlong towards Hell. If he casts, but though meekly in Speech, but a word to stop any one: Yet with a strong apprehension doth he speak it; and thinks that things that are so clear to him, and move himself so much, should also move others, and wonders if they do not. He thinks, sure he should convert the whole World, if he had but the opportunity of speaking with them. The early buddings of this you see in Philip towards Nathaniel, John 1. 45. and Chap. 4. in that woman of Samaria towards that whole City. So it was in Paul, who consulted not with Flesh and Blood, but fell a preaching presently.

The 2d. Use is of Exhortation to all that profess themselves born again; that in their capacity and opportunity they would set upon this work, especially where there is a heap of living Coals in a Society together. This Exhortation is not to Ministers only, but to you all, young, as well as those of riper years. Oh see, if possible, that none of you appear at the day of Judgment afore God, without bringing some Benjamin or other with you. The Apostle perswades a poor believing Wife to dwell with, and co-habit with an unbelieving

ing, churlish Nabal; and to bear all the Burdens of so unequal a Yoke even with the hope of so great a consequent, if it so fall out, 1 Cor. 7. 16. For what knowest thou, O Wife, whether thou shalt save thy Husband? Or how knowest thou, O Man, whether thou shalt save thy Wife? It is a great encouragement, in James the 6th and the two last verses, Brethren, if any of you do err from the Truth, and one convert him; Let him know, that he which converteth the Sinner from the Errour of his way, shall save a Soul from Death, and shall hide a multitude of sins. And it is spoken not to Ministers only, but to private Christians; even to Brethren in common. And his Motives are strong. 1. That he shall save a Soul from Death, which also Paul useth to Timothy, 1 Tim. 4. 18. If a Man had a mortal Disease, and a Word of thy mouth would save him, what tender Heart would not effect it? He will owe himself to Thee, as Paul speaks of Onesimus. And 2. He covers a multitude of sins. Gets Gods Book cross'd of Debts, contracted from the beginning of his days: And what a great matter is that, and yet unto that end, thou mayst win others to God, and God may bless and succeed thee.

1. Be holy in all manner of Conversation. Else as Lot's Kindred thought of his Speeches, men will think thou art not in earnest. A Dart thrown, receives its force from the strength of the Arm that throws it. 1 Pet. 3. 1, 2. He exhorteth Wives to express an holy Chastity in converse with their Husbands, that they may be won thereby. Likewise, ye Wives, be in subjection to your own Husbands, that if any obey not the Word, they also may without the Word be won by the Conversation of the Wives, whilst they behold your chaste Conversation coupled with Fear. Chastity is but a moral Vertue, as is also that Fear or Reverence Wives are to express towards their Husbands: Yet it may be held forth and managed with such a Spirit of Holiness, as may convey and dart into their Consciences Beams of the Image of God, and enkindle the same into their Hearts it shines into. Walk in Light, that is, according to the Spiritual Light, God hath given thee; and hold forth that Light in the midst of a froward and crooked Generation, Phil. 2. 15. Shew other ends in common actions than other men do.

2. Be fruitful in Conference dropping good and holy Speeches, Prov. 11. 30. The Fruit of the Righteous is a Tree of Life. Such as the Fruit that grew on the Tree of Life that grew in Paradise, of which God said, after man was fallen, least he eat it and live for ever. If you had a Tree had such Fruit grew on it as would restore dead men to Life, how would you prize and value that Tree, and the fruit of it, and the more it bare, the more would you esteem it? Such are the Lips of a righteous man in order to Conversion. So it follows: He that winneth Souls, is wise. And tho' thou seest not a present effect of it, yet wait. The Kingdom of God is as a Sower that went out to sow, and the seed grew up from Blade to Ear he knew how. A man little thinks what God doth with occasional Speeches, and to what use he puts them, both for Conviction and Conversion. A man hears of them, as of Bread sown on the Waters, many days after. You may have heard of a Crow flying to let fall an Ash-key, which hath afterwards proved a Tree: Yet wait, and see how thy sowing good seed doth take and thrive, as one doth a Plant or Seed sown in a Garden; how often do they visit it, water it, and see how it thrives? The Husbandman waits, says James, Chap. 8. v. 5, 7. for the pretious Seed its coming up; and loseth the sight of it when a Winter, and cold Frosts nip it; yet he waits for its pretious Seed, more pretious than all the Gold and Silver Mines or Rocks of Diamonds in the World: For Mankind could not live on them; but if the Seed Corn should fail to come up, an universal Famine would be on the World. Now every holy Truth and gracious Speech, is much more pretious than Seed Corn, and proves a Plant that shall never be rooted up, but grows up to Eternal Life. Yea, if men oppose, yet still wait: So you are directed, 2 Tim. 2. 25. Instruct those that oppose themselves, if peradventure God will give them repentance. Opposition is often a sign that the Pill works. And suppose thou never shouldst convert them (as the Apostle gives not a certainty, only a what knowest thou? 1 Cor. 7. 16. a peradventure venture) yet know that as thou prayest for them, so thy instructions unto them shall return in Grace into thine own Bosom, as Mat. 10. their Peace is said to do: And thou wilt Glorifie God in the day of their visitation. Chap 7.

You that are young Students, and God hath turn'd your Hearts unto him; you have, in this Doctrine, a Foundation laid of the greatest encouragement to the work of the Ministry. For if to endeavour to convert Souls be the most natural and pleasant work to the New Creature, and the noblest endowment in you, and this suited even to the very essential constitution of it, then to have this work to be your very Calling, and a proper work of the Ministry which you are set apart thereby unto, must needs render it most acceptable and comfortable to you. For you see, that Parents use to observe what callings the natural genius of their Children inclines unto, and when they set them in that which is most suitable thereto, they do therein work with pleasantness, and prove eminent in it. Now as your Education helps to fit you with abilities, so your Conversion and the Impetus of the new Creature, you see carries your Heart this way. David, though a King, yet having the Spirit of teaching, dedicates much of his time and pains this way; and makes a vow of it, yea, the first-born of his vows upon this so eminent a Conversion. Whilst others are exercised in this World to get and heap up great Estates, in killing men, overturning Nations, and perhaps doing what they knew not, whether acceptable or not: You have the best, the surest, the comfortablest, the honourablest Trades of winning Souls, and may heap up Souls, bring in great riches and treasure to Christ, and a greater account to your own Souls: Though in the World you may have contempt, and it is fit it should be so, for 'tis mercy enough to be a Minister.

Observ. 2. That teaching Gods ways, and gracious dealings with men in converting and recovering sinners, is specially sanctified by God.

1. By Gods ways sometimes all his works ad extra are meant. So Prov. 8. In the beginning of thy ways. So Behemoth is the chief of Gods ways, but here the ways revealed by the Word are meant. And therein 1. In a more large sense, all the Laws and Statutes he hath commanded men to walk in. So often and usually, Deut. 8. 6. and 10. 12.

2. The right way of true Religion, and how a Soul shall be saved, is call'd a way, and Gods way, Acts 19. 23. And the way of God, Acts 18. 26. The Way of Righteousness, 1 Pet. 2. 21.

3. Sometimes more strictly, the ways of Gods dealings with, or wooing Sinners to himself. (As Solomon calls the wooings of a Lover, gaining the Heart of his Beloved, The way of a Man with a Maid.) Thus here, for David refers to those experiments of Gods Grace, which his Soul had, and should get by Gods recovering him again, and converting him a-new, which he would lay open to others, even all his gracious dealings to his. Psal. 10. All his paths are mercy and truth towards his. Thus the mercies of God in justifying and pardoning Sinners, God termeth his ways. Isa. 55. 6, 7, 8, 9. Seek the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the Heavens are higher than the Earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts.

4. The new Birth and Obedience that follows upon it, is the narrow Gate, and the way that leads to Life. Mat. 7. 14. Isa. 35. 8. an high way, a way, and a way of Holiness.

5. And the Israelites are said to have erred in their Hearts, and not to have known his ways: Where by ways, he means what was more eminently the object of saving Faith, for Heb. 3. where this is cited, it is interpreted of Unbelief; v. 10. 12. and 19. compared.

BOOK 10

Christ speaking of himself says I am the way, And his Flesh crucified and torn, is that new and living way God found out into the Holy of Holies. Heb. 10. So then, to teach men Gods ways, in order unto their Conversion, is 1. To discover to them their natural condition and unbelief to be a way of Error, and of Death, Jan. 6. 19. That converts a Sinner from the error of his way. For by Nature it is spoken of all men, That the way of peace they have not known, Rom. 3. Erring in their Hearts, and not having known his way. 2. To teach them Christ, and the way of Faith, and believing on him, and closing with the free mercies of God in pardoning. 3. To set out unto them the high-way of true Holiness and Obedience of Sanctification and the new Birth. 4. To shew them all the errors, the by and crooked ways men turn aside into, both in believing, and in turning unto God, and walking with him; which is call'd teaching them the good and right way, 1 Sam. 12. 20. 21, 22, 23, 24. And Samuel said unto the People, Fear not; (ye have done all this wickedness, yet turn not aside from following the Lord, but serve the Lord with all your Heart: And turn ye not aside, for then should ye go after vain things which cannot profit nor deliver, for they are vain) For the Lord will not forsake his People, for his great Name sake: Because it hath pleased the Lord to make you his People. Moreover, as for me, God forbid that I should sin against the Lord, in ceasing to pray for you; but I will teach you the good and the right way. Only fear the Lord, and serve him in truth with all your Heart: For consider how great things he hath done for you. And these were the ordinary Subjects of Christs Discourses, especially in the first fruits of his Ministry, in his first Sermon he speak's of Faith and Repentance; Mark 1. 14. unto which two Paul also reduceth the Sum of his preaching Acts 20. 0, 21. And how I kept back nothing that was profitable to you, but have shewed you, and have taught you publickly, and from house to house. v. 21. Testifying both to the Jews, and also the Greeks, Repentance toward God, and Faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ. And (Titus 2. 8.) he says, This is a faithful Saying, and these I will that thou affirm constantly. These things are good and profitable to men. And the true reason why men profit not, nor bring in mens Souls, is, That they divert from these great, substantial, and necessary Truths, Jer. 23. 22. If thsy had stood in my Counsel, and had caused my People to hear my words, then they should have turned from their evil way, and from the evil of their doings. In their discourses they tythe the Mint and Cummin of the Scriptures, and insist not on these great and necessary Principles of Religion. When our Saviour Christ was to send his Disciples forth to preach the Gospel to all the World, he promiseth the Spirit, as a Comforter, to their Persons, and an Assistant to them in their Ministry, John 16. And to shew what Doctrines that Spirit would bless and go with to the Hearts of men in converting of them; to the end that they accordingly should learn in preaching to the Nations, to insist thereon; He enumerates the work of the Spirit in mens Hearts, in all the parts thereof; setting it out by the object matter of each work: Thereby withal pointing to them what Subjects to treat on in their Sermons; the Spirit using Doctrines suitable to the work he is to do.

3. Observe, That in Converting others, God more specially useth the endeavours of those himself hath turned.

1. The Holy Ghost dwelling in them, he is more easily communicated; for themselves are anointed with him. Acts 11. 24. 'Tis said of Barnabas, That he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost, and of Faith, and much people was added unto the Lord.

2. Tho God may, and sometime doth use others to shew his liberty, yet God delights to use them in it, and usually doth, who are themselves Converted, and this he doth out of choice, Mal. 2. 5, 6. My Covenant (says God, speaking of Levi) was with him of life and peace, and I gave them to him, for the fear wherewith he feared me, and was afraid before my name. The Law of Truth was in his Mouth, and Iniquity was not found in his Lips: He walked with me in Peace and Equity, and did turn many away from Iniquity. Even as it was with Abraham,

Abraham, whom being Faithful himself, God chose to be the Father of many Nations. I gave them to him, saies God.

3. God rather useth such, because they have the Art of doing. For God useth meet Instruments for the work he imployes them in. Now there is an Art in Converting Souls, an eminent one. Therefore, saies Solomon, Prov. i. i. He that winneth Souls is Wise. Now an holy man is more Wise in it, because he hath experience in the ways of God, in Converting, Comforting, Recovering Souls. Then shall I teach Sinners thy ways, saies David, Psal. 51. 13. namely, which I my self have had experience of: As Paul was able to comfort others, with the comforts he had received: And as Christ said to Peter (Luke 22. 23.) Peter, When thou art Converted, strengthen thy Brethren, he then knew how to do it. Such an one knows the Heart of Man, and the windings of it by his own, and so knows how to make a Key to Unlock it, and that shall pass the Wards of it.

4. Observe, That neither Sins afore nor after Regeneration should prejudice one in the Ministry of the Gospel that truly returns to God, and recovers, as David here did. The Instances are clear: God used David to Pen Scripture, as he did in this Psalm, after his Murder and Adultery, and he promiseth himself as much success in doing good to others as ever. Solomon also the Son, you know how he fell, yet God still used him to Write Scriptures, and to teach the People. Witness that Book of Ecclesiastes, which he entitleth The Preacher, after his great and long departure from God. Peter also, you know, how he denied Christ, and also at Antioch dissembled: Yet God Converted by his Preaching, after that first great fall of his, Three Thousand at One Sermon, and poured forth his Spirit upon him notwithstanding and used him to the end of his Days, to write Scripture fuller of Holiness, that is, stronger incitements to Holiness than any other, and to Preach and Stir Men up to Remembrance.

And the Reasons are,

1. The Gifts of God, even those given his Elect, to do good to others, are of high value, and God will not lose the use and improvement of them for their sins, but will humble them for them, and so go on still to use and bless 'em.
2. His Pardons are Free Grace Pardons, such as they shall not invalidate by their sins. Free Grace is still the same towards them.
3. Their Hearts are the same to God upon Repentance, and often more enlarged than before. They shew themselves clear in that matter by Repenting, as 2 Cor. 7. the Apostle speaks. And so God forgives and Man forgives, and they are both as afore.

And 4. Have gained more feeling experience, and deep and quick sense of Gods Love and Gracious dealings than at first, Converted by renewed Repentance. And so are more able, as Peter was, to strengthen their Brethren.

If such returning sinners are both in respect of use, and their Gifts the USE. same to God, they should be so to men: men should not be prejudiced when God is not; specially seeing tis true of any that themselves also may be tempted. Now this takes away a great discouragement from what is in ones own Person, as well as what prejudice useth to be in others Hearts towards one, especially from sins gross and scandalous after Regeneration. This ought not, nor should not upon and after manifest renewed Repentance, discourage any one in this Work, as to think that God will ever after such sins leave him, and not use him more: Nor should it be a prejudice in the Hearts of others, for receiving what out of experience from such falls, God shall give forth by such an one.

F I N I S.

THE WORKS

OF

Thomas Goodwin D.D.

The Fifth Volume.

PART II.

CONTAINING,

- I. A Discourse of Gospel-Holiness implanted in the Heart, and continued in the whole Conversation of Life.
- II. A Discourse of the three several Ages which Christians do run through, in their Course of Faith and Obedience

L O N D O N ;

Printed by John Darby for T.G. M.DCC. III.

T H E
C O N T E N T S
O F T H E

Discourse of Gospel-Holiness implanted in the Heart, and continued in the whole Conversation of Life.

B O O K I.

THAT Graces and Holy Dispositions wrought in the Soul, are the Springs and Principles of Evangelical Obedience. The first Streams which flow from hence are inward Actions of our Souls in Holy Thoughts, and a lively Sense and Perception of Spiritual Things, and a due Approbation and Judgment of them as most excellent. That our Holiness ought to be sincere and blameless. That our Obedience ought to abound in all Fruits of Righteousness, and to continue until the Day of Christ,

- p. 1
- Chap. I. The Words of the Text explained; what the Apostle means by abounding in all Knowledge, and Sense, or Judgment, ibid.
- Chap. II. The Inward Effects of an Holy Disposition and Temper in the Soul, are an Ability in the Understanding, to discern, judge of, and approve Spiritual Things, and a Sincerity in the Heart inclining a Man to walk in God's Ways; what it is to be sincere and without Offence, 8
- Chap. III. What is meant by these Words in Phil. 1. 10. until the Day of Christ. The different Significations of those Phrases used in Scripture [unto the end] and [until the Day of Christ] 16
- Chap. IV. How we may be said to be kept blameless until the Day of Christ, 20
- Chap. V. What it is to be filled with the Fruits of Righteousness in our Course of Obedience, 27
- Chap. VI. Of what kind those Fruits of Righteousness are, with which our Obedience should abound; what is requisite to make them true and genuine, 32
- Chap. VII. That our Obedience ought to be continued; That a Man shall in the Day of Christ appear with all those Fruits of Righteousness, which he hath brought forth in Christ to the Glory of God, 36

B O O K II.

The Demeanour of a Christian, as it is expressed under the Notion of Friendship with God. The Example of Abraham's being the Friend of God. How in the sense of the Apostle James he was justified by Works. How great, excellent, and kind a Friend God is to us. How this Consideration should

- engage us in a sincere Friendship to him: What are the Duties and Offices to be performed by us, as proper and owing to such a Friendship. Of the Behaviour of a Christian, as it is named Service to God, 40
- Chap. I. The Obedience of a Christian expressed under the Notion of Friendship to God. The Title of being God's Friend is given to Abraham. The meaning of the Apostle James, when he says Abraham was justified by Works, ibid.
- Chap. II. How the Apostle Paul, and the Apostle James are consistent in the account which they give of Abraham's Justification, 42
- Chap. III. Abraham called the Friend of God, upon the Performance of that Act of Obedience in offering up his Son. That what is said of Abraham, is spoken of him as the Father and Pattern of all Believers. That true Faith works in the Heart friendly Dispositions toward God, 47
- Chap. IV. An Exhortation unto Friendship with God, from the Considerations how great, excellent, and kind a Friend, he from Eternity hath been, and perpetually, and for ever is to us, 51
- Chap. V. What the Conversation of a Believer ought to be in performing the part of a Friend towards God. That we should keep up an entire and near Communion with him. What this Communion is, explained in several Particulars, 56
- Chap. VI. What our Behaviour toward God, as his Friends, ought to be, with respect to his Providential Dispensations to us. We should ask his Advice and Counsel on all Occasions. We should make use of and depend upon his Favour and Assistance in all Affairs. We should have an entire Confidence in him without any Jealousy or Distrust, 61
- Chap. VII. What Obedience and Duty we owe unto God, as we are his Friends. We should be fearful of doing any thing to displease him, observe his Commands, and do all from the Principles of Love and Gratitude, 69
- Chap. VIII. Obedience to God described, as it is a Service performed to him. The Character and Properties of those who are his sincere and faithful Servants, 78

B O O K III.

Evangelical Motives to Obedience, drawn from the Obligation which God hath laid upon us, by his appointing us unto Good Works,

The CONTENTS.

Works, his Election of us, and by the Greatness of his Love manifested in the several Instances of it. Other Motives urged from the Consideration that Christ having by his Death conquer'd the Devil, and destroyed his Kingdom, we are by our Christian Profession engaged to hate him, and fight against him as a publick Enemy to Christ and us, and by all our Actions to endeavour the Ruin of his dark Kingdom of Sin. Other Motives deduced, from the Divine Presence, and Majesty apparent in our Holy Services and Performances: and also from God's Design in the Revelation of his Word, that we should not only read and know it, but practise it too, 86 Chap. I. A Motive to Love and Obedience, drawn from the Consideration, that this Obedience is a Business, an Holy Employment committed to us, which we should be careful to discharge. That the Doctrine of Free-Grace enforceth the Performance, and suites our Spirits to it; ibid. Chap. II. That God's Love in Electing us is a great Motive to all Acts of Love and Obedience: That in this his Election of us he hath ordained and appointed us to Love and good Works, 91 Chap. III. That the great Love of God in electing of us, should be a strong Motive and Incentive to Love and good Works, 93 Chap. IV. Another Motive to Obedience deduced from God's great Love, in giving his Son to die for us. That he requires nothing in requital of so inestimable a Gift, but that we should love, obey and serve him. Other Considerations of God's Love urged, as Motives to Obedience; that he delights in loving us, and therefore it should be our Delight to love and obey him. The Eternity and Immutability of his Love, urged as Motives to faithful and constant Obedience, 97 Chap. V. Motives against Sin, because it is Satan's great Work and Interest, who is Christ's greatest Enemy, 104 Chap. VI. A Motive to Holiness and to fight against Sin, drawn from the Consideration, that this Holy War is a Common Engagement, in which all Angels and Saints are Confederates, 112 Chap. VII. Motives unto Holy Obedience, and unto a Boldness in our Christian Profession, drawn	from the Majesty of the Lord that appears therein: With an Exhortation to preserve it, and the Means of maintaining the Honour of our Profession, 121 Chap. VIII. Motives to Evangelical Obedience from this Consideration, that it is the great Design of the Gospel to promote the Life, and Power, and Practice of Godliness, 135 B O O K IV. The Danger of a loose, careless and unfruitful Profession; or the Danger of Mens living under the Dispensation, and Enjoyment of the Ordinances of the Gospel, viz. the Preaching of the Word, the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and Church-Communion, if they live in Sin, indulge their Lusts, or be unfruitful. Two Cases resolved, 1. How far a regenerate Man is capable of sinning against Knowledg. 2. Wherein the Sin against the Holy Ghost differs from other Sins against Knowledg, 139 Chap. I. The Text in Heb. 6. 7, 8. explained, with some Observations from it, ibid. Chap. II. That our worthy and suitable Living under the Ordinances of the Gospel brings a Blessing, but the contrary a Curse on our Souls. The Danger of those who living under the Preaching of the Word of God, indulge their Lusts, or are unfruitful, 143 Chap. III. The Danger of those, who being Partakers of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, do by ungodly or unfruitful Lives act contrary to the Institution and Design of that Ordinance, 148 Chap. IV. The Aggravations of their Guilt, who live in a Course of Sin, and yet live in Communion of the Lord's Supper, 153 Chap. V. The Danger of those, who being in Church-Fellowship and Communion, yet their Lives are inconsistent with such a Relation, 158 Chap. VI. Two Cases concerning a regenerate Man's sinning against Knowledg. The first Case resolved. How far such an one is capable of sinning against Knowledg; and what is the difference between his sinning against Knowledg, and an unregenerate Man's sinning against it, 160 Chap. VII. The other Case resolved, wherein the Sin against the Holy Ghost differs from other Sins against Knowledg, 173
--	---

The CONTENTS of the Discourse of the three several Ages which Christians do run through, in their Course of Faith and Obedience.

CHAP. I. The Design of the Apostle in the Text explain'd. The Characters of the several Ages of Christians are drawn from what is found as an excellency in each of these Ages in Mens Natural Life, 177 Chap. II. Of Communion with the two Persons of	the Godhead, Father and Son; and how a Believer in his several Ages hath suitably Communion sometimes more with the one, sometimes more with the other, 181 Chap. III. The Character of Young Men, or middle-ag'd Christians in Christ, 198
--	---

O F

Gospel Holiness

Implanted in the H E A R T,

And Continued in the Whole

Conversafion of L I F E.

B O O K I.

That Graces and Holy Dispositions wrought in the Soul, are the Springs and Principles of Evangelical Obedience. The first Streams which flow from hence are inward Actions of our Souls in Holy Thoughts, and a lively Sense and Perception of Spiritual Things, and a due Approbation and Judgment of them as most excellent. That our Holiness ought to be sincere and blameless. That our Obedience ought to abound in all Fruits of Righteousness, and to continue until the Day of Christ.

Philip. I. 9, 10, 11.

And this I pray, that your Love may abound yet more and more in Knowledge, and in all Judgment;

That ye may approve things that are excellent; that ye may be sincere, and without Offence till the Day of Christ.

Being filled with the Fruits of Righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ, unto the Glory and Praise of God.

C H A P. I.

The Words of the Text explained; what the Apostle means by abounding in all Knowledge, and Sense, or Judgment.

THIS is one of Paul's Prayers, several whereof we find dispersed up and down in his Epistles, and they are put up to God for those he wrote to. The Prayers of Holy Men are usually the utmost, and choicest Expressions of their Graces; the Drawings forth, or Pourings forth rather of their deepest Affections and Desires for things, which the Light of the Spirit in them judgeth to be most excellent. And the Words of the Text are the Prayer of the Apostle Paul, who who was filled with the Holy Ghost ; and you see it is for Holiness, and the Increase of it.

This I pray, &c. so he begins. You that have very holy Hearts, if God should from Heaven bid you ask some one thing (as David speaks, This one thing have I asked) it should be, to be Holy before him in Love. That which concerning Holiness he prays for, may be reduced to three Heads.

I. Such Graces and Dispositions as are the inward Springs, or primary essential Principles of Holiness, which are three : 1. Love. 2. Knowledge. 3. Sense.

II. The next immediate Consequents of these ; the next Streams from these in their inward Man, are, That in their Judgments (which is τὸ νοεῖν of all both Holy Affections and Actions) they might, 1. Approve of Things most excellent. 2. Discern Things different. The Words import either. 3. That in their Hearts they might be sincere. These are inward.

III. The third Thing which the Apostle prays for, is, That Holiness be perfectly, and all sorts of ways held forth in their Lives ; 1. Negatively, Blameless, or without Offence, or without Accusation, as the word is used, 1 Thess. 5. 23. 2. Positively, That they might be filled with the Fruits of Righteousness. And yet 3. Because it is not the outward Appearance of Fruit, Bigness, Colour, Fairness, but the Kind, the Constitution and Relish of it that commends it : He therefore describes these Fruits (he prays for) in the highest Spiritualness of them. 1. That they are such, as are by Jesus Christ, which grow on that Tree, and on Hearts engrafted on that Root. Paradise, no, nor the Tree of Life knew none such ; that is, these are a more excellent kind of Fruit, than ever did or should have grown on Adam's Heart. 2. He describes them to be such Fruit, which are immediately and eminently directed to the Glory and Praise of God, that have Christ and Union with him for their Efficient, and God's Glory for their End. And as the End makes the Means lovely and desirable, so, this great End of God's Glory, gives the Relish to all the Fruit that comes from us, since none other is Fruit to God. (as the Apostle speaks, Rom. 7. 4.) that is, for God's Taste and Acceptation.

The third and last Thing is, the Extent and Continuance of this Holiness for the time of it. It is to be found in them, in the day of Christ, or until the day of Christ.

These are the main Branches, that the Bulk and Body of this Tree divides it self into ; and this is a gross View of what grows thereon. Let us but shake a little, and gather up what will easily and naturally fall.

The 9th Verse is such, that in it (as the Psalmist says) all our Springs are found, namely, the inward Springs of true Holiness. I may call them Springs, not without the Apostles Allusion here : the Word is πηγή, that it may abundantly flow, as from a Spring ; so Musculus. In ver. 11. he useth the Metaphor of Fruit and a Tree ; but here, of Streams and of a Spring. The Principles of Holiness in us, are in Scripture compared to both, to a Root from whence Fruit grows (Gal. 5. 22, 23. The Fruits of the Spirit) and to a Fountain ; John 4. 14. There shall be a Well of Water in him that believes, springing up into Everlasting Life.

1. Grace and Love to God should flow naturally, Springs do so : Trees must be watered. (that Metaphor is not enough expressive of the naturalness of the Workings of Grace) but Springs flow readily ; 1 Thess. 4. 9. I need not to write to you to love, ye are taught that of God. Out of his Belly (says Christ) shall these Waters flow. The Inwards he calls the Belly, which should have Love in them, as the Earth hath Water in the Bowels of it.

2. In a Fountain, as you take away, still more comes, and the faster it comes : and thus as a Spring retains not its Water to it self ; so Love keeps nothing to it self, but it flows to the Use and Benefit of God and Men.

3. As Fountains have their Rise in Hills, so this of Love is first in God's Heart in Heaven : We love God because he loved us first, 1 John 4. 19. It springeth up (says Christ) to Eternal Life, i. e. its Original. Aqua in tantum ascendit, &c.

I have done with the Metaphor, I come to the naked sense intended, ἐπι μᾶλλον more, and ἔτι μᾶλλον more still, may abound yet more and more. It had abounded already; the Love of the primitive Times it abounded, as you read, 1 Thess. 4. 9, 10. One River remains of the former Metaphor to convey this to us, which we have, John 7. 38, 39. He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his Belly shall flow Rivers of Living Water. But this (says John) he spake of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet glorified. When Christ was now glorified, the Graces of the Spirit were not Brooks but Rivers; he poured, not dropt down his Spirit, and Love made the greatest Channel: Ecce qui diligunt, was the common Observation of the Heathens, see how they love one another, speaking of Christians. It held till Tertullian's Time: Were there a Cause concerned the common good of Saints, their Principle was, they would lay down their Lives for the Brethren, 1 John 3. 6. Was it the Cause of God, they loved not their Lives to the Death, 'tis the Character of those Christians, Rev. 12. 7. Our Springs are not only dried up, but turned back as Jordan was; the Hatred among the Saints abounds yet more and more, and is like to swell higher yet. Oh my Brethren, Is not Christ yet glorified?

The Apostle adds these Words, yet more and more. To have said that it may abound, had an Emphasis with it; but he adds ἐπι yet, and adds to that μᾶλλον more, and ἔτι μᾶλλον more still. God can never have enough of your Love, nor you of Grace. Paul that knew him thought so, and therefore prayed so. Seest thou a Spark of Fire, lay Straw to it, and then add more Fuel, it abounds more and more according to its Fuel. This whole inferiour World will not be a sufficient Prey for the Fire one day; it will melt the Elements, as Peter says, yea the Heavens that now are it will consume. Such a thing is Grace and Love, all the Excellencies in God are ordained to be the Object, the Fuel of it; yet it can neither consume, nor be consumed, but abounds still yet more and more.

But why is Love first? Doth not Faith and Knowledge in order of Nature go before? You must remember (as I told you) he speaks here of the Principles of Obedience, and so Love is the more immediate, for Faith works by Love. 'Tis Love (says the Apostle, 1 John 5. 3.) makes all the Commands not grievous. Provoke one another (says the Apostle Paul, Heb. 10. 24.) to Love and to good Works. Kindle, stir up that Principle, and then good Works, as the Flame, will arise. When Christ would move Peter to take pains for him and feed his Lambs, and in doing so run through all the Difficulties that attended an Apostle's Work and Calling, what says he to him, Peter, Lovest thou me? he says no more. And what says Peter? Lord I love thee. It was enough between them two, to put him on to any thing. Faith is indeed the only Principle, by which we deal with God and Christ, for Justification and Communion with them; but Love is that which incites us to Holiness and Obedience. We are ordained to be Holy before him in Love; Holiness riseth from Love. Oh, therefore get your Hearts enflamed with the Love of God.

The Apostle farther adds these Words, That your Love may abound in Knowledge. Ordinarily Men had need pray, that their Love might grow up to their Knowledge; but Paul here prays, that their Knowledge might grow up with, and to their Love. Usually Mens Knowledge is larger than their Affections. It was it seems otherwise with these Philippians. There are usually extant these two sorts of Christians, Affectionate fond Souls of Christ, but less knowing; others more knowing, yet less passionate, tho' true Christians both: the primitive Times give Instances of both. The Corinthians were knowing Christians, 1 Cor. 1. 4, 5. I thank God that in every thing ye are enriched in all Knowledge and Utterance; but they were short in Love. 1 Cor. 8. 2, 3. If any Man thinks that he knoweth any thing (he speaks home to them) he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know. But if any Man love God, the same is known of him. And Chap. 12. 31, ult. They were for Gifts, but yet shew I unto you a more excellent Way; and what was that? LOVE. So in Chap. 13. 1. Tho' I speak with Tongues of Men and Angels, and have not Love, &c. throughout. But to return to that Chap. 8. 3. If any Man love God, the same is known of him. The Speech carries the highest Reproof with it; it is as if he had said, You take care to get more Knowledge, but God knows enough for you, if he knows you to Book I. be his. Take care to get more Love, for if any Man love God, the same is known of him. And conform your selves to God herein: God's loving of you is termed, his knowing of you; they are adequate, let them be so in you to him. But the Philippians, and the Thessalonians were a more plain, sincere, affectionate sort of Christians, whose Affections had been hitherto more than their Knowledge; he therefore prays that their distinct Knowledge might grow up with their Love; That their Love might abound in Knowledge, and both grow together: as 2 Pet. 3. 18. Grow in Grace, and in the Knowledge of Jesus Christ; not in blind Affections, but such which Spiritual Knowledge may stir up. What is Grace? It is but Knowledge concocted into the Affections, to have suitable Impressions, Dispositions on the Affections to the things known. 2 Cor. 3. 18. We are changed (by beholding) into the same Image.

3. The Apostle adds these Words, And in all Sense, ἐν παντὶ αἰσθάνσει, 'tis translated Judgment, but in the Greek Sense, and so in your Margents varied. The Apostle puts the Emphasis here, saying, IN ALL SENSE as the main, for 'tis such Knowledge as hath Sense added to it. We are to enquire what is meant by Sense, and why it is added to Knowledge. It is all Sense, let us therefore take in all Senses may be given of it.

1. Sense is here added to Knowledge, to express the true Nature of Spiritual Faith in two Words, added the one to the other, which is elsewhere expressed by one single Word. Faith, what is it? A Spiritual Sense of Spiritual Things, or things excellent (as it follows in the Text, Phil. 1. 10.) And the same Apostle speaking of grown Christians, says, that they have their Senses exercised, αἰσθητήρια, Heb. 5. 14. Tho he speaks this indeed of grown Christians, that they have their Senses EXERCISED, yet he supposeth that as Christians they have the Senses themselves, that is the Faculties of them: and he says not Sense only in the Singular, as here (Phil. 1 9.) but SENSES, making an Allusion of the new Creation of the Spiritual Man to the Outward Man; for as the Outward Man hath divers Organs and Instruments of Sense, so hath the new Creation. That look as God made an outward World, in which are all sorts of Objects, Beauty, Colours, sweet Smells, pleasant Fruits, so he placed in Man's Body αἰσθητήρια, Senses fitted to these, to take in the real Comfort from these; and there is no Creature outward, but there is a Sense fitted to it. So he hath made an invisible World, with variety of things Spiritual, and that variety is but the several Appearances of himself; and in the new Creature there are suitable Spiritual Senses made to entertain them, and take them into the Soul. In the Scripture you find, that there is no particular Sense, but Faith is expressed by it; you have Seeing and Tasting in one Verse; Psal. 34. 9. Taste and see that the Lord is Good: and both put to express Faith, for it follows, Blessed is the Man that trusts in him. To see God in his Beauty and Goodness, and in the Heart and Affection, and to taste of that Goodness (to which Peter alludes, 1 Pet. 2. 2.) are the Acts of Faith. Then for Hearing, I need not enlarge upon it. He that hath an Ear let him hear, with an inward Ear, Rev. 2. 7. For Men may naturally hear, and see Gods Wonders, and yet not with a Spiritual Ear: for Deut. 23. 3, 4. The great Signs and Miracles, which thine Eyes have seen, yet the Lord hath not given you Eyes to see, and Ears to hear to this Day. But Christ gives another Character of Believers, when he says, John 10. 3. My Sheep hear my Voice, that is, discern and distinguish his Voice by an inward Sense; for it follows, v. 5. The Voice of a Stranger they will not follow. As the Ear tries Words, says Job, so they by an Instinct know the Mind of Christ, 1 Cor. 2. 15. 16. Thus likewise as to Smelling; 2 Cor. 2. 15. 16. We are unto God a sweet Savour of Christ in them that are saved, and in them that perish. To the one we are the Savour of Death unto Death, and to the other the Savour of Life unto Life. We are, that is in our Ministry; he compares the effect of it, to that of Vapours or Smells. There are some Vapours and Smells, that as soon as they come into the Nostrils, suffocate the Spirits, strike dead, as in those famous Caverns in Italy. Such are the Threatnings of the Gospel to a Man that will not leave his Lusts, and believe, they are the Savour of Death, the occasion of his Ruin; and not only so, but his Conscience (which is a Principle fitted to the Threatning, as Smell is to Savour) smells the Savour of Fire and Brim-

Brimstone of Hell in them, and he goes away with Sense of Condemnation unto him, for those Courses he is resolved to go on in. But it is the contrary to those that believe and obey, for unto them this Ministry is the Savour of Life unto Life. Some Smells recover Men when in a Swound, so do the Promises quicken and revive Mens Souls, by their Scent from them. They send forth the Perfume of Heaven, of God's Love and free Grace: It is the Savour of Life unto Life. And as to Feeling, which is another Sense, what says the Apostle, 1 John 1. 1. What our Hands have handled of the Word of Faith. He speaks not of outward Conversion, but inward, as ver. 3. That which we have seen and heard, &c. of that Fellowship their Souls had had with him, as Seals on that of their Senses.

2. By Sense is meant Experience, as it is a distinct thing from Faith; for the Apostle, Rom. 5. after he had said, By Faith a Christian hath Peace with God, shews how Faith is improved and added unto, through God's Dealings with us, Tribulation worketh Patience and Submission to God, and Patience, Experience. So in such and such Afflictions, after we had submitted to God, God came in and delivered, or upheld with Comforts, and thereby Faith was strengthened against the next: for Experience breeds Hope, or Confidence of God's carrying us on to Life and Glory; when we have found God faithful in relieving us, and sticking close to us in all sorts of Trials, and so it grows up to assurance (as Hope is there, and 1 John 3. 1. taken in that Sense.) Now Experience is an acquired Knowledge in matters Spiritual founded on Sense: A Collection of Conclusions from what we have the Sense of, as all Artists gather Conclusions from Experiments made. A Man at first sets out to believe with Faith barely founded on the Promise; as suppose he relies on this, that God favours him and loves him, and will do him good, and that God is faithful in such and such Promises, afore ever he sees any Performance; a Man believes this with Spiritual Faith, and a Faith that hath Sense in it. (Take Seeing for the reality of the Things, as they lie in the Promise, and that God is the Promiser) But afterwards look as God performeth in Process of Time any Promises of his, there is then a Sense of Experience superadded, and a Collection from thence of the Truth of the Promise. Psal. 41. 11. By this I know that thou favourest me, because my Enemies do not triumph over me; especially when withal I find as it follows, that as for me, thou upholdest me in mine Integrity. A Man believes that there is a God, who is the Rewarder of them that seek him, a God that judgeth the Earth, and therefore comes to him, as a God that suffers not the Wicked always to prosper, but in the end heareth the Prayers of his poor People. And the Man hath learned this, first (as the Psalmist says, Psal. 73. 17, 18.) in the Sanctuary, that is out of the bare Word. But having now believed this, he afterwards sees with his Eyes a Vengeance executed, as in Psal. 58. 10. The Righteous shall rejoice when he SEETH the Vengeance. He sees the Vengeance by Experience, and so from Experience collects and strengthens Faith anew, namely in this great Point of Faith, which follows there. A Man shall say, verily there is a Reward for the Righteous, verily there is a God that judgeth in the Earth. Thus also David, Psal. 37. 34. Wait on the Lord and keep his Way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the Land; when the Wicked are cut off thou shalt SEE it, that is, have Experience of it. And David confirms this by his own Instance, ver. 35, 36. I have SEEN the Wicked in great Power, and spreading himself like a Green Bay-Tree: Yet he passed away, and lo he was not; yea I sought him, but he could not be found. Thus Promises brought home in Trials and Temptations breed Experience: Psal. 119. 50. This is my Comfort in my Affliction (says he) for thy Word hath quickened me. Here is a Conclusion, a Trial of a Receipt in time of Malady, with a probatum est, from Experience. And such was the Experience of a dying Christian: Is there not (said he) such a Promise? I will be with thee in the Fire and in the Water. Yes, said they, that stood by: read I pray (replied he) which done, Bear witness (said he) that I die, testifying that God is true in that Promise to my Soul, which is the similar to that of Dauids; This is my COMFORT in my Affliction, &c. Thus in hearing a Man's Prayer, what a world of Experiments hath an experienced Christian. The whole 116th Psalm is a Record of it, and so likewise the 18th Psalm; In my Distress I called upon the Lord, and cried unto my God: he heard my Voice out of his Temple, and my Cry came before him, even into his Ears. And

And how it doth set Heaven and Earth on work, the rest of that Psalm shews:
 Book I. And therefore as David learnt himself by Experience, so he teacheth others; Pf.
 66. 16, 17, 19. Come and hear all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my Soul. I cried unto him with my Mouth, and he was extolled with my Tongue. But verily God hath heard me; he hath attended to the Voice of my Prayer.
 Thus by experience, we know our own Graces, and Things given us of God; as 1 Cor. 2. and the 119 Psalm throughout shews. And Oh how good is it to draw near to God? says David upon a Taft and Experiment of it, Pfal. 73. 28. Of grown Christians we say, they are experimental Christians; and those that were Babes, the Apostle describes such to be ἀπειροί, such that have no Experience; whereas a grown Christian hath his Senses exercised to discern both Good and Evil. Such an one discerns the difference of things readily, not from Reason, but Skill, that hath been contracted from the sense of Experience: Thus of Christ it is said, That he LEARNED Obedience by the Things he suffered, Heb. 5. 8. Take a Man that hath naturally a wise Head, and the Grain, the Current of his Understanding lies and runs that way; yet if such a Man hath been further versed in the World, and hath been tumbled and tost up and down therein, and hath been used to Business of Affairs of State, &c. he will have an experimental acquired Wisdom added, if not to encrease, yet to confirm all those Principles naturally engrafted in him:
 and through both these, a Man proves a wise Man indeed, as Solomon throughout did. Thus Christ our Lord, tho his Manhood was furnished with all sorts of Abilities, Principles of Faith and Knowledg Spiritual; yet God did put this Great Scholar to School to learn (says the Apostle, Heb. 5. 8.) Knowledg of this other kind. And the Schoolmaster he sets him to was Patience, which breeds up Experience, as the same Apostle saith, Rom. 5. 4. The School was Obedience, that is he might have Sense added to his Faith and Knowledg. The Heart of Christ had an Ocean of Love naturally flowing in it, and yet he must learn Mercy and Pity to us, in a way of Sense; as 'tis said, in as much as he also was tempted, Heb. 2. 18. And this is the meaning of that Passage in the 10th ver. of that Chapter, He was made perfect through Sufferings. God would have his eldest Son educated in all sorts of Faculties and Learnings (whose Type was Moses) that so he might be perfect, and therefore he ran through all Courses as we Mortals run through, that he might be perfect in all sorts of experimental Knowledg; and especially because Sufferings teach most compendiously, he was therefore made perfect through Sufferings.
 And as Use (we say) makes perfect, so did Experience him: and thus as to us (as the Apostle says, Heb. 12. 11.) Afflictions bring forth the peaceable Fruit of Righteousness, to them that are exercised therein. The Word Exercised is the same that is used in that forementioned, Heb. 5. 14. concerning our Senses being exercised; and it is a Metaphor taken from the Knowledg that is obtained in Schools, whether either of Arts and Sciences, through exercising themselves therein, as Fencing, γυμναζε. Grammar, &c. by performing such Exercises whereby Youths grow up to such a Perfection. The same Word we have again, 1 Tim. 4. 7. EXERCISE thy self to Godliness; that is, get such a Skill by performing the Exercises of it, as Scholars at School do; run through all sorts of Duties, as Scholars do thro all sorts of Forms (which seeing the Holy Ghost so often alludes unto, to express the practical part of Godliness hereby; it is unfavory to call, as some do, the set Performance of such Holy Duties, FORMS and TASKS) But says the A-postle as in direct opposition to these, they diligently run through all parts of Piety, which will procure an exquisite Knowledg by Experience, which is equivalent to Sense here in the Text. So then when the Apostle here prays, they might abound in all Sense; his meaning is, they might run through all courses of Godliness, and be carried through all the varieties of God's Dealings and Dispensations; all sorts of Trial of Graces on their part, and Performance of Promises on Gods; that so having tried all Conclusions, they might be perfect Christians in experimental Knowledg, even in all Sense.

3. By Sense he means deep and glorious Impressions on the Soul, over and above the Light of Faith or Knowledg by ordinary Experiences: and such Impressions are truly rather SENSE than Knowledg, as all find that enjoy them, and they are therefore said to pass Knowledg, Eph. 3. 19. and are entituled, The Peace of God which passeth Understanding, Phil. 4. 7. And the same is hinted, Rom. 5. 5, Patience breeds Experience, and Experience Hope, and Hope maketh not ashamed, because the Love of God is shed abroad in our Hearts, by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us. A Man had before by Faith Peace with God (thus ver. 1.) but now he comes to have Experience with Hope or Assurance from the Love of God SHED; not manifested or apprehended by Knowledg so much, as SHED, whereof the Subject is said to be the HEART rather than the Understanding: and this is that which Christ promiseth, John 14. 21. And this the primitive Christians more generally enjoyed; 1 Pet. 1. 8. Whom having not seen ye love, in whom tho now you see him not, yet believing ye rejoice with Joy unspeakable and full of Glory. Thus were those Peter wrote to, and so were the Philippians and Romans, as you heard; as for the Thessalonians, the Word came unto them in much Assurance and Joy in the Holy Ghost, 1 Thess. 1. 5. And this high and Heavenly Sense and Enjoyment the Apostles used to pray for, in behalf of those they wrote to. Thus Paul for the Romans, Rom. 15. 13. Now the God of Hope fill you with all Joy and Peace in believing, that ye may abound in Hope through the Power of the Holy Ghost. And Peter exhorts those Christians he wrote unto to maintain and not to lose this: for having said, 1 Pet. 1. 8, 9. That they had been filled (as at Conversion, or soon after ordinarily) with Joy unspeakable and glorious, he exhorts them (Ch. 2. 2, 3.) that they would keep up that Sense and Taste, even as new born Babes; he would have them, tho Men in Understanding, yet always to be as Babes in their Appetites and Tastings of the Love and Goodness of God, and if they wanted it, to cry for it.
 of

Chap. I.

USE 1. Hath Faith and the new Creature these Senses joined to and implanted in them? then may a Christian, if it be not his fault, lead the most sensual Life (pardon the Expression) of any Creature. For as God hath made a World for Sense, so God hath prepared Christ, and all things Spiritual to the new Creature: You see what Pleasures are in the visible World, which the Senses let in; but the Soul is able to drink in more at one Draught in a Moment, than all the Senses can let in, or the World afford us in Ages. Now what the World is to the Body, that God and Christ are to the Soul. Of this Sense the Psalmist speaks, Psalm 36. 8, 9. They shall be abundantly satisfied with the Fatness of thy House, and thou shalt make them drink of the River of thy Pleasures; for with thee is the Fountain of Life, in thy Light shall we see Light. He instanceth in those Senses of Sight, and Taste, and the Objects thereof, which bring in so much Pleasure to the Body.

USE 2. See the Reason why the same Truth meditated on, or conferred on, or heard again and again to Hearts prepared to relish Spirituals, still affects with a new and fresh Sweetness. If our Souls only entertained, and took them in by bare Knowledg, it would not be so; but Faith containing all the Senses in it, hence if we receive them by Faith, a fresh and rich Pleasure springs out of them.

USE 3. See the Reason why Faith hath the greatest Certainty of Knowledg about its Objects, of any other Knowledg. The Philosopher says, Sensus non fallitur circa proprium objectum, the Senses are not deceived about their proper Objects (due Circumstances and Proportions of distance, &c. being observed) and that the Speech of Christ confirms it. When the Disciples thought Christ to be but a Spirit, he appeals for the final Determination to two Senses, Seeing and Feeling: For says he, hath a Spirit Flesh and Bones as I have? Now Faith hath not one only, but all the Senses conjunct with it, and implanted in the nature of it; so far therefore as we believe, we are certain of the Object, the Reality, the existence of it, tho of our Interest therein we may be doubtful.

The Inward Effects of an Holy Disposition and Temper in the Soul, are an Ability in the Understanding, to discern, judg of, and approve Spiritual Things, and a Sincerity in the Heart inclining a Man to walk in God's Ways; what it is to be sincere and without Offence.

THE inward Fruits and Effects, that flow from a Principle of Holiness, and do constitute and form such an habitual Frame of Spirit, as may practically fit a Man to walk holily, are next to be considered, and they are two.

1. In the Understanding, an Ability to discern upon all occasions the difference of things, and upon an Act of Discretion choose and approve what is best; or (as the Words may be varied) a Judgment to discern of the Excellency of Things in the Ways of Religion, what is more excellent than other, and to approve of and cleave thereto.

2. In the Heart (That ye may be SINCERE, which respects walking) a Sincerity to incline and direct a Man in his Way, to keep him so as not to turn to the Right Hand or the Left, and to preserve him from stumbling and falling from his course; and therefore it is joined here with ἀπερόσκοποι, which signifies both those that walk without wandring from their Scope, their Mark *, which in their Course they are bound for, as also that are void of Offence, or stumbling, or giving occasion to others so to do; and therefore I added, which practically fit a Man to walk holily.

* Metaphora
sumpra ab
iis qui aliquo con-tendunt.
Bez.

1. In the Understanding there are Holy Principles, εἰς τὸ δοκιμάζειν τὰ διαφέροντα: both Words here used have an Amplitude, a Comprehensiveness in them. I will open each apart, and fit them each to the other, and all to the thing in hand.

(1.) It signifies to try and discern the difference of things from their Counterfaith or contraries. A Word taken from Goldsmiths, as the use of the Word in 1 Pet. 1. 7. evidently shews; where he speaks of the Trial (δοκίμιον) of Faith, which is found more precious than Gold, tho tried with the Fire (the Goldsmith tries Gold and Metals either by the Touchstone or by the Fire.) And in an allusion to this Metaphor, it is applied to a discerning the difference of Doctrines, whether about things to be done or believed, 1 Thess. 5. 21. Prove or try all things. He had spoken of Propheying in the Words afore; in which ordinary gifted Men being not infallible, might mingle verisimilia, Errors like Truth, or Dross and corrupt Doctrine with Truth: he exhorts them δοκιμάζειν, to try, or prove, and so hold fast what is good.

(2.) It imports withal, an approving in Judgment of what is good, a savouring, relishing, closing with and cleaving to the Goodness of it, as good and best for him. Thus Rom. 12. 2, 3. Be renewed in your Mind, that you may PROVE what is that GOOD, that perfect Will of God ('tis the same Word) not only to discern the Will of God in its Truth from Falshood, in all the Latitude and Perfection of it (as David speaks, Psalm 119. 96. I have seen an end of all Perfection, but thy Commandments are exceeding broad, but to approve it. There is a vastness and variety of Duties commanded, Sins forbidden; and to discern those, especially the Spiritual Part of them, which is the Perfection, that gives the Acceptation. This no Man can do, but by being renewed in his Mind; but farther, so as withal to prove and close with the Goodness of that Will of God in each particular thereof, to like it, relish it, savour it (as Rom. 1. 28. the Word is used) under this Consideration and Respect, that it is acceptable to God, as well as perfect in it self, yea and also as good, yea best for a Man's self that is to do it, and all this out of a suitability; this to be sure is found only in, and from a renewed Mind. And thus in that former Place, 1 Thess. 5. 21. this Word δοκιμάζειν is to be understood, Try and prove all things, HOLD FAST what is GOOD. There is you see, 1. a discerning the difference, prove or try, joined with holding fast, or cleaving to the Mind mind of God as good, as good for me. That if I were to make my own Statutes I would live by, it should be those and no other, which I find revealed in God's Word. Psal. 119. 127, 128. Therefore I love thy Commandments above Gold, yea, above fine Gold. Therefore I esteem all thy Precepts concerning all things to be right; and I hate every false way. The Expressions are as full as full may be, I esteem, I love, yea, I esteem thy Precepts out of love to their Sutableness; therefore I esteem them, because I love them, and all and every one of them, and that concerning all things, as they direct me in all and each Circumstance of my Ways; as they concern any part of my Life, oppose my dearest Lusts, or cros my strongest Desires: And not content with this, he expresseth it by his Hatred of its contrary, I hate every false Way.

Chap. 2.

As these are the two Imports of the word δοκιμαζειν, namely, both 1. To try, and 2. To approve; so sutablely the other word, which here expresses the Object of these Acts, τα διαφεροντα, translated, Things that differ, is such a word, and so industriously singled out, as answers to both, clasps in with both; for it signifies either, 1. Things that differ, and so yokes well with to try or discern, the Object of which is the difference of Things. 2. They are Things that excel, and are more excellent, and so yokes with the other Import, to approve as best or most excellent. I need not give you an account of the first, that διαφεροντα signifies things that differ, αδιαφορα are things indifferent. But for the second import of the word take Luke 12. 7. Ye are of more Value, of more excellency in God's esteem, than many Sparrows. Yet 'tis the same Word that is used here. So likewise when it is said (1 Cor. 15. 4.) that one Star differs from another Star in Glory; that is, excels another. We say of things more excellent, compar'd with things less, that there is a great deal of difference. Christ obtained a more excellent Name, διαφοροτερον. So then let us take up the Apostle's meaning, as it comprehendeth both these Senses.

1. He prays, their Understanding may be so habited with Spiritual Judgment and Sense upon all occasions, whether of Proposals of Doctrines to them, Matters of Controversy, wherein there is an aptness to deceit, through a Likeness; that yet when they see Reasons on this side and on that side, they might be able out of SENSE, to say, This is Truth; that they might discern Truth from Falshood, and approve it: Or in Matters of Practice, in all Turnings of their Lives, or Cases of Conscience, they might quickly discern and judg what they were to do, to see and say, This is my way: and that they might know this clearly, so as not to be deceiv'd, but so as to walk comfortably, as knowing they are doing the Will of God. And this is one Frame or Constitution of Spirit the Judgments of God's People are clothed with. Of Christ 'tis said, Is. 11. 2, 3. The Spirit of the Lord, and a Spirit of Wisdom and Understanding (as the fruit of that Spirit) should rest on him, and he should be of quick Understanding in the Fear of the Lord; that is, he should be quick-eyed, nimble-sighted to discern the difference of things: and answerably every Christian is made more or less a sagacious Creature. He receives Wisdom in Matters doctrinal, Prudence in Matters practical (Eph. 1. 8. Col. 1. 9.) a Skill to know at the instant how to walk, which all the notional Knowledge in the World cannot stamp on the Mind; for that is not ad manum at every turn when a man is to act, but a Practical Skill is needful. If a Scholar had learnt all the Art of Fencing, in all the Postures of it, and had the Rules imprinted on his Fancy; yet a Fencer brought up to it hath a Skill beyond him, a Sagacity impressed (through use) on his Eye, his Hand, to spy out every Advantage. Such a practical Art in discerning a Man's Way doth the Holy Ghost stamp on the Judgment of a Man regenerate, which no Use nor Learning can ever enable unto. Then again apply the Use of this Word to a discerning a difference in things. When a Man is turned to God, how is this fulfilled in him? He is enabled to see a strange difference, as in Things and Persons both worldly and spiritual, so in the Ways of Men, and in the Difference of Ministrys. When a Man is unregenerate, he is Darkness, and to Men in the dark Color omnibus unus, all Colours are alike. Morality and natural Devotion in Men go for Grace and Holiness, Glowworms shine as well as Stars: But when a Man is converted, the Darkness is past, and the true Light shineth, as John speaks. And then he discerns and knows (as the same

C

John

John says, (1 John 5. 19.) that we are of God, and the whole World lieth in Wickedness. The Scriptures afford a thousand such Instances. And all this the regenerate Man discerns by a kind of Sense, and infused Sagacity. For the farther increase of such Light doth the Apostle here pray; for as this increaseth, so likewise Holiness increaseth in the Heart and Life.

2. He prays that their Judgment might be so habited, as to close with, approve, favour the Goodness and Excellency of things spiritual, according to their several Degrees of Excellency, as best for them: That they might approve the Excellency of Spiritual Things in comparison of Things and Persons worldly; and answerably esteem and value Christ, and all his Excellencies, so as to give up all for him, as Paul did, Phil. 3. 8. I account all things as Loss and Dung, for the Excellency of the Knowledge of Christ. And thus Peter speaks, To you that believe he is precious (1 Pet. 2.) whenas all disobedient ones refuse him. To such a Man the Saints of God are the excellent ones of the Earth, as they were to David and Christ, Psal. 16. Likewise the things of the Law are excellent things, as the Prophet speaks, and accordingly are valued by such a Man: And he so values them, as to chuse these as best, and best for him, Psal. 119. 30. I have chosen the way of Truth, thy Judgments have I laid before me. I have deliberately viewed and considered them all, and as deliberately chosen them, and that as my Heritage to live upon, V. 111. of that Psalm.

3. Besides approving in common the Excellency of things spiritual in comparison to earthly and carnal, the Apostle's meaning is of their approving among things spiritual those that are most excellent. Our Apostle praying for grown Christians (as these Philippians were) the aim of his Prayer was, that among those more excellent things they might still more and more (as he had spoken of abounding) approve of what was most excellent. In those Primitive Times, tho there were not several Forms of Religion, and all of them acceptable to God (as some have dangerously spoken) for there is but one God, one Faith, one Baptism (which latter is by a Synecdoche put for all other instituted Ways of Worship) yet according to the several Degrees of Light, there were in some Churches and Persons further and more excellent Attainments; and in this regard it is he prays for these Philippians, that they might be heightned to the approbation of what was most excellent, that they might abound in Knowledge, Love and Sense, so as to embrace and pursue after, of all other, what was most excellent, by perceiving the comparative different Excellency that was between spiritual things. Acts 18. 25, 26. You read of a Man of God, Apollos, who was instructed in the way of God, and one that was fervent in Spirit, that taught and spoke diligently the things of the Lord, yet knowing only the Baptism of John: you read likewise Chap. 19. of certain Disciples that were true Christians, and have that Testimony given them (both here in the Story of Apollos, Chap. 18. 27. and also in that succeeding Chap. 19. 1, 2, 3, &c.) and these had all been instructed in what was fundamental, for even John had taught them, that they should believe on him who should come after him, that is on Christ Jesus (so Ver. 4.) who yet, V. 2. are said not to have heard so much as whether there be any Holy Ghost; that is, either in those his Gifts which accompanied the Profession of Christ, as risen and ascended, or perhaps because they were not struck with any special intensive Apprehension of it, to take up their heedful regard to him: yet it was accounted sufficient that they and he believed on Christ; and therefore Aquila and Priscilla took Apollos (as Paul also those Disciples) and instructed him (as 'tis said) more perfectly, or expounded unto him more perfectly the Way of the Lord, Acts 18. 26. It was not teaching him a new way, but in a way of Superstruction of what he knew before. What says the Apostle, 1 Cor. 3. 11. Other Foundation can no man lay than what is laid, and (as you see) was unto them laid, even Jesus Christ; and yet, says Paul, I shew you a more excellent Way. Take the Apostles themselves; there were many things which they could not bear, their weak Stomachs would have cast them up again. John 16. 12. I have yet many things to say unto you, but you cannot bear them now. And that [them NOW] refers to an Alter-time, in which they should receive a Spirit of Truth, V. 13. To the Apostles there was a double Coming of the Spirit, as to us and them there is of Christ: The one secret, when when he regenerated them, as of Christ, when he stole into the World unknown. John 1. 10, 11. He was in the World, and the World was made by him, and the World knew him not: He came unto his own, and his own received him not. The other coming of the Spirit is, when he comes as a Comforter: John 14. 20. And in that day (says Christ) you shall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you. As you see an Instance of attaining things more excellent in the Apostles themselves, and Apollos, and those at Ephesus, so you may see the like in the Corinthians, 1 Cor. 2. 6. & 1 Cor. 3. 1, 2. The Apostle is bold to distinguish and put difference between them that are perfect, and what he taught unto such; and the Corinthians themselves he writ to. Of the first says he, we speak Wisdom among them that are perfect; so Chap. 2. 6. But as for the other, you read what he says, Chap. 3. 1, 2. And I Brethren could not speak to you, as unto Spiritual, but as unto Carnal, even as unto Babes in Christ; I have fed you with Milk, and not with Meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able. Nay after he had written and almost concluded that Epistle (that I may bring it to the very Language of the Text) 1 Cor. 13. ult. he says to the same Corinthians, AND yet I shew unto you a more excellent way.

This I insinuate, 1. To shew how remote those are from this primitive Spirit, that would include all within their Circle, and that Circle must be what a whole Nation, yea Churches of Nations agree upon, as if there were not room still for something more excelling, built on the former Foundations; tho indeed to destroy or alter Principles Fundamental, is to destroy the Church universal, both that which is now on Earth, and hath been. But soberly compare these Instances (if there were no other) with the Attempts and Principles of this and the former times: And let none of us exclude himself out of Paul's Prayers, that is, of professing our selves to be in a capacity still to approve of things more excelling, than yet we do; and let us pray to God daily to deprive us of no Manifestation of himself, which Saints in this Life are and have been capable of.

The only Observation (besides those which have been insinuated and scattered as I have gone along) I center on, is from the Coherence of those Words, ver. 9. and ver. 10. (That your Love may abound yet more and more in Knowledge, and in all Judgment; That ye may approve things that are excellent; That ye may be sincere and without Offence till the day of Christ, εἰς τὸ δοκιμάζειν, to the end you may approve, &c.) and it is this.

Obf. That the readiest and speediest way for any or every Christian to come to discern and judge aright of Things that differ (as matters of Doctrine controverted, Cases of Conscience, and also of ways that are more excellent in Religion) is this, that they abound in Love, Knowledge with all Sense, as was explained. This Observation is natural, from the Words εἰς τὸ δοκιμάζειν, to the end you approve, &c. Take Sense here in all the Senses I have mentioned; for Faith, as it hath all Senses annexed to it, and found in it (Heb. 5. ult.) Seeing, Hearing, Tasting, Smelling; so Faith conduceth to the discerning of things Spiritual, which are not taken in by Reason only, but by a spiritual Sense joined thereto. Job 12. 11. Doth not the Ear try Words, and the Mouth tast its Meats? Which Conjunction and Comparison signifies, that the discerning of Truths is as discerning by the Taste. The Understanding as made Spiritual, is the Palate of the Soul; The Spiritual Man discerneth all things, 1 Cor. 2. The Word φροεῖν, put for Wisdom, is savouring; and says Job, Job 6. 30. Cannot my Taste discern perverse Things? He appeals to Sense for things that are grossly perverse, as a Man by Taste discerns his Meat if it be stale or corrupted. Peter's Judgment having a vitiated Humour overflowing it, hereupon says Christ, thou savourest not the Things of God, Mat. 16. 22. My Brethren, the regenerate part hath all Truth and Goodness originally wrought, and interwoven into the Temper and Constitution of it, in self is nothing but Truth and Goodness; and so all Spiritual Things are but prepared (as 1 Cor. 2.) or suted and fitted for it, and so thereby a Christian hath a great Predisposition to judge of Doctrine and Practices. This sutes or this sutes not (says he) with the regenerate part; and however, tho that is not the sole determiner (for then there would be no want, nor need of Reason or others Teaching) yet when Reason hath done all it can, if this neither approves nor relisheth, there is a bearing off, a not closing with with what is propounded. Or if we take Sense for Experience, as 'tis superadded to Faith, Rom. 5. this is an Help to judg. The Apostle speaks, Heb. 5. ult. of strong Meat. The strongest Truths are suted to be digested, and taken in by those that have their Senses exercised, to discern both Good and Evil. He speaks of experimental Christians trained up in Temptations, and Cases of Difficulty; whereas one (as afore) that is unskilful in the Word of Righteousness (the Word in the Margent is, hath no Experience) will be able to digest only Milk. A Man discerns in things Spiritual the difference, not by Argument merely, but by Aim, that he presently says, this is crooked, that is streight. As a Merchant's Taft who is used to Wines, or an experienced Apothecary judgeth of Drugs, and as Jewellers judg even by Sense of Jewels. Or if we take Sense for extraordinary Impressions from Communion with God, and Sense his Love in the Heart, these mightily enable and guide a Man, confirm him, and lead him into Truth. How come Men to discern ἄδολον γάλα, the sincere Milk of the Word? 1 Pet. 2. 2. It follows, if so be you have tasted (says he) that the Lord is Gracious. Infants discern the Sweetness of their Milk, by Sense, not Reason: I cannot dispute but can die for the Truth, said that holy Woman Martyr. Thus John exhorts them to Communion with God the Father, shewing this as one Privilege of it, that being preinformed therewith, he tells them, Chap. 2. Ye have received an anointing that teacheth you all things; not that they needed not teaching, forthen why should he have written to them against them that seduced them? but he recals them in those Words unto that Principle, which would exceedingly further them in judging of Truths: even as Paul in the case of Justification by Works, bids them but to have recourse to the Thoughts they had at Conversion, when they were first humbled for Sin; Did you then trust in your Works for Salvation? this was enough to confute that wicked Opinion. This Persuasion came not of him that called you, says Gal. 5. 8. and so Chap. 3. 2. he appeals to Experience, in the same or like question to decide it; This only would I learn of you, Received ye the Spirit by the Works of the Law, or by the hearing of Faith?

Lastly, To grow up in Love. Working by Faith is the shortest way to know God's Will; there is a Blessing of God that guideth such a Man: John 7. 17. If any Man will do his Will, he shall know of the Doctrine whether it be of God, or whether I speak of my self. And David confirms it, Psal. 119. 98, 99, 100. Thou thro thy Commandments hast made me wiser than mine Enemies, for they are ever with me. I have more Understanding than all my Teachers; for thy Testimonies are my Meditation. I understand more than the Antients, because I keep thy Precepts.

Having shewed you what it is to approve the Things that are excellent, I come in the next place to explain to you what it is to be sincere.

1. Sincerity is opposed to what is counterfeit. Thus the Apostle joins Sincerity and Truth together, 1 Cor. 5. 8. That then is sincere which is genuine, which is right, which is true, as when we say this is true Gold. hath

2. Sincerity is opposed also to that which is void of Mixture. Thus Sincera in the Roman Language is sine Cerâ, without Wax mingled. We do not huckster the Truth (saith Paul) we do not mingle it with false Wares, but as in Sincerity, 2 Cor. 2. 17. Sincerity there is opposed to mixture. Now then apply it to Grace; a sincere Heart is (as the Apostle calls it) a true Heart, an Heart genuinely Holy. Heb. 10. 22. Let us draw near with a true Heart, true to God, faithful to him in all things, as David is said to have been. A sincere Heart is a sound Heart, 2 Tim. 2. 22. an Heart that hath a Principle of Life and Health in it, which works out all mixture of ill Humours, and purgeth it self from all Filthiness of Flesh and Spirit, and minglcth with no Sin in the Constancy of a Man's Course. He keeps himself that the Evil One touch him not, as sound pure Wine boaks and seeks to cast out the Scum.

3. Sincerity signifies that which may be brought to the Sun; so in 2 Cor. 1. 12. We have had our Conversation in this World, not in Fleshly Wisdom, but in Godly Sincerity, or in the Sincerity of God, that is, whereof God is Witness, which may be brought to him, be held up to the Sun, and be judged to be such according to that of Christ, John 3. 21. But he that doth Truth, cometh to the Light, that his Deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God.

Ἐπικρινεία Θεῶ.

4. But

4. But Sincerity hath a peculiar relation to walking with God (as the Word Chap. 2. shews with which it is joined, ἀπερόσμοτοι, without stumbling in his Way: For that Word is properly used only of the Feet) And so it importeth a sound Constitution of Spirit both towards God and the Commandments of God in walking with him, &c. (as David expresseth it) being upright in the Way. 1 Kings 9. 4. If thou wilt WALK before ME (speaking to Solomon) in INTEGRITY of HEART and in Uprightness, to do according to all that I COMMAND thee, and keep my Statutes and my Judgments, &c.

5. But Sincerity implies more particularly these two things.

1. A right Intention aiming at God; it is therefore called the Sincerity of God in that, 2 Cor. 1. 12. and it is opposed there to Fleshly Wisdom, whereby a Man seeks to bring the World and Religion together. No (saith the Apostle) I aimed at God sincerely, and that is the Testimony of my Conscience. In that 2 Cor. 1. 12. he joins with it Simplicity. Now in Mat. 6. 22. that which the Apostle calleth Simplicity, Christ there calleth Singleness; if thine Eye be single, saith he; it is the same Word. Now Christ his aim and scope is evidently in that Place to speak of Sincerity of Intention in aiming at God, and in throwing out Worldly Ends; for he speaks it in relation to a sincere purpose of not servicing two Masters. Men think to compound with both, to have the World and Religion too; no saith he, God will have all: He that serveth him must serve him singly, and his Eye must be single. And because Christ spake of the Aim and Intention which guides the whole Conversation, therefore he adds, if the Eye be single, the whole Body is full of Light. For a sincere Intention is to direct the whole Man in his walking, as the Eye doth the Body in acting; if this Intention be kept single, a Man will not err. John 7. 18. He who seeks his Glory that sent him (viz. God's) the same is true, sincere and upright, and there is no Unrighteousness in him, he having nothing to bias him, or to make him swerve. And then take Sincerity for such a Temper of Heart as can come to the Sun, and abide the Light of it: He who thus sincerely aims at God's Glory, comes to the Light (as Christ says) John 3. 21. that his Deeds may be manifest, that they are wrought in God, and for God, because such an Heart can bear all that the Word says.

2. It notes out a bent of Will to all the Commandments, that he knoweth to be such: I shall only name but one Place, Psal. 119. 112. I have inclined my Heart to perform thy Statutes alway, even unto the end. In such an Inclination of Heart that is thus constant to all the Commandments, lies Sincerity.

Which Sincerity ariseth, 1. From a Love to God and his Commands, therefore the Apostle prayeth that they may abound in Love. 2. It ariseth from a Sense and Tast that a Man hath of the sweetness of God (through Communion with him) and of that which he finds in his Commands; he tasteth how good God is, and how good the Word is. Oh how I love thy Law! says David. And 3. It ariseth from Knowledge; for, as David says in Psalm 119. 30. Thy Judgments have I laid before me, therefore (saith he, ver. 128.) I esteem all thy Precepts concerning all things to be right, and I hate every false way; as he also saith in the 112th ver. Read that whole Psalm. I may stile it a Mirroure of Sincerity. As the Holy Ghost hath used the Penmen of Holy Writ to utter Divine Truths scatteredly and apart, so some more special Subjects he hath been pleased to write set Treatises of. Thus Solomon's Song is of Christ and the Church, and his Ecclesiastes is of the Vanity of all Things. Thus John wrote an Epistle of an Union with God, and Jude wrote another of false Teachers; and so David wrote this Psalm of Sincerity and the Characters of it, and accordingly he begins, Blessed are they that are upright in the way of God. And this is called the Integrity of God, as to give one Instance concerning the meanest service done to God: Eph. 6. 5. Servants, be obedient unto them that are your Masters according to the Flesh, in singleness of your Heart, as unto Christ: That is, aiming at him, even as if you served the Lord Jesus, and as if he bid you do every thing. And do this not with Eye-service, as Men-pleasers, but as Servants of Christ, doing the Will of God from the Heart, with good will doing Service as to the Lord and not to Men. I instance in this, to let you see how a sincere Heart works towards God in one particular Condition and part of Obedience; that you may understand what it is to be sincere in any other part, be it Re-creation, Book I. creation, or whatever work God sets thee about. All these put together, make up this Integrity, this Sincerity, this right frame of Spirit towards God and his Commands, that here the Apostle prays for. This is that which Job saith he would not part with, that tho he was not able to answer God one of a thousand, that is, if he came to Actions and Thoughts, yet for this frame of Spirit, saith he, till I die I will not remove my Integrity from me, and let me be weighed in an even Ballance, that God may know my Integrity.

It remains that we explain what it is to be without Offence; it is to walk without Stumbling, as the Word signifies. That place in Acts 24. 16. (where the same Word is used) openeth it; herein do I exercise my self (saith Paul) to have always a Conscience void of Offence towards God and towards Men. That is, that I might not sin against Light in my inward Converse before God, or outward before Men, grossly and willingly against Light; for otherwise in all things we do offend, as James saith. And certainly Paul to the day of his Death lived so, for we find no Sin against Light, either in his Epistles, or in the Story of the Acts recorded of him, but rather the contrary. Elsewhere also you have it explained, as in Luke 1. 6. it is said of Zacharias and Elizabeth, that they walked blameless in all the Commandments and Ordinances of the Lord; that is, the Precepts of the moral Law, and also Ordinances of Worship. You have the like Phrase, 2 Cor. 1. 8. 1 Thess. 5. 23. That you may be preserved blameless, ἀμέμπτοι, without Reproof or Accusation, or just Cause of it, sine querela, without just cause of Complaint by Men, 1 Pet. 3. 16. or of Satan, 1 Tim. 3. 7. & 5. 14. who is called the Adversary and the Accuser, Rev. 12. 10. But he hath not power to accuse in such Cases where the Believer walks without offence.

To be without Offence is to be ἀπόβουκοποι. προσκόβη is put properly to signify the Errings, Mis-treadings, Stumblings and Bruisings of the Feet in walking. As afore in that of Sincerity, the Intention of the Mind signified therein was compared to the Eye, so this hath allusion to the Steps. I shall make up the full Comprehension of what this Word holds forth, by what Offences I find in the New Testament the Word is applied to.

Ἀπόβουκοποι, proprie ἔστιν ἡ ἀπόβουκος, metaphoricé de alijs. H. Stephens.

1. Heedfully to avoid all such Footsteps and Ways before others, as may induce them to Sin, or we know may prove an occasion to others of stumbling, or that edify them in their corrupt Principles; this is to be ἀπόβουκοποι, or void of Offence in walking. Thus 1 Cor. 10. 32. ἀπόβουκοποι γινέσθε. (the same Word that is used here) be not offensive, or be blameless, give no Scandal (the particular Instance he was upon, was eating in the Idol's Temple) neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the Church of God. He reckons up all sorts of Religion then in the World, to all which that one Action would be an occasion of Offence. The Jews would say, these Men profess to worship one God as we do, and yet partake with Idols as we do not. The Grecians would say, we may then lawfully sacrifice to our Gods, for lo these Christians join with us in eating the Sacrifices offered up to 'em in the Temples of our Gods; which we (as they know) intend as a part of our Worship and Religion performed unto them. The Church of God would be scandalized, 1. Passively, in that Religion was blamed for it; that it would allow Men any kind of Practices, tho contradictory to the Principles of it self. 2. Actively, That weak Ones would, and were thereby drawn and encouraged against the scruples of their Consciences (to avoid Persecution) to the like compliance, which also proved a Step to Apostacy in many. Thus when by our Footsteps and Example, we invite others to follow us in evil, or give occasion to others to stumble, we are not ἀπόβουκοποι, blameless or inoffensive.

2. To walk in any Action contradictory to a Man's own Principles he professeth before others, is to be offensive, and not ἀπόβουκος, in the Apostle's sense. Besides what the foregoing Instance contributes, that Phrase which Paul applies to Peter and his Companions in that Case, is the opposite to this. The Word here, as was said, properly regards ἔστιν ἀπόβουκος, and is properly applied to walking, and but metaphorically to other things; therefore inoffenso Pede, with an inoffensive Foot, say some, inoffenso Cursu, others. Most fitly therefore doth that of Paul; Gal. 2. 16. explain it, when he charged Peter, not to have walked with a right Foot, and that according to the Principles himself professed; therefore it follows, and not according to the Truth of the Gospel, that is, as the Principles thereof, and those professed by a Man's self do require. This was Peter's apparent Fault there, for he of all the Apostles was the first that by a Revelation given in and warranted by a Vision from Heaven, was himself the first who had been taught not to forbear eating with Gentiles as unclean, Acts 10. 28. Ye know (says he) that it is an unlawful thing for a Man that is a Jew to keep Company, or to come unto one of another Nation: But God hath shewed me, that I should not call any Man common or unclean: That Principle was, and had been a Partition-wall between Jew and Gentile, Acts 11. 3, &c. and so on in that Chapter; yea and himself glories of it, as a peculiar Honour vouchsafed him by God in a publick Synod, Acts 15. 7. yea and at Antioch himself practised it, and did freely eat with the Gentiles: but when certain Jews came thither, he for fear of them separated himself, Gal. 2. 12. This was a Contradiction so notorious and visible, and his Example had such Influence on others, and so justly offended them, that Paul could not forbear, but openly falls upon him; When I saw (says the Apostle) that they walked not with a Right Foot, I said to Peter before them all, that is, reproved him: for (ver. 11.) he was to be blamed; and so it comes home to the Text, to explain it in the very Phrase of it.

3. As thus to be void of Offence before Men, so not to do any thing contradictory to that Light, which a Man's own Conscience hath received to walk by, not between God and himself, is to be without Offence. In this sense also (Acts 24. 16.) Paul useth the word, applying it to himself, so as we may understand his Prayers for them here, from his own Principles in walking, instanced in by himself; Herein (says he) I exercise my self to have a Conscience void of Offence towards God and towards Men; ἀπερόκλονον συνείδησιν (tis the same word) a blameless Conscience, nil conscire sibi. He says not only a blameless Conversation, that others shall not be able to blame me, but a blameless Conscience, not to Men only, so as not to offend them, or give them cause of Accusation, but before God also. Conscience is that Principle, which is the Seat and Principle of all that practical Light, which is to guide us in our walkings with God, and is the receptacle of all the Guilt or Opposition to that Light in any Action of ours, which is refunded back into it. Now Paul's Conscience had received in more Light than any Man's in the World, and had therefore the hardest Task of it, that any Man ever had, to walk up to it, and needed the more Diligence and Study how to manage every Action, and the Circumstances of it (which is the greatest Study of the two) that not only his outward Conversation to Men might be without blame or offence, his Conscience bearing witness of that (as 1 Pet. 3. 16. Having a good Conscience, that whereas they speak evil of you, as of evil Doers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good Conversation in Christ) but so as if you brought his outward walking to his Conscience it self, and that Conscience to God, the Searcher of Hearts; he endeavoured so to walk, as that Conscience might not have a Spot, a Darkness, a contrariety in actings of Spirit or Converse, to that Light which shined into his Soul from God, no not in his actings between God and himself. I follow this Metaphor, because the Apostle's parallel Expression glanceth at it, 2 Cor. 1. 12. For our rejoicing is this, the Testimony of our Conscience, that in Simplicity and godly Sincerity, not with fleshy Wisdom, but by the Grace of God, we have had our Conversation in the World, and more abundantly to you wards. That εἰληπνεῖα θεῶν is a Metaphor from bringing fine Linen, as Lawn, &c. to the Sun, to view if there be any Spots in them, by putting them between our Eye and the Sun. Now says Paul, so have I done, and so I do, I hold my Conscience (for of the rejoicing of his Conscience he there speaks) to God, as to my Sun and Judg; and I am not conscious, says he, no not between him and me, of any Action in my Converse, wherein I made an interposition, or cast a shadow against that Light he hath seated therein to guide me. He brought his Works to the Light of God in his Conscience, to see whether they were wrought in God, John 3. 21. for thus Christ speaks of him that doth the Truth. Or if you will take it up in the Metaphor used in the Text, when a Man in all Duties between God and him, as well as Men, hath not dashed his foot against his Light, and so is free from all Bruises and Wounds which his Conscience would feel, and which a tender Conscience easily feels (and which all Mens Consciences one day shall feel, when the Heat of Lust, and Pleasure of Book I. Action are past and gone) it is then that Man is without offence. This Light of God in the Conscience, is (as Christ himself is said to be) a Stone of Stumbling, on which if a Man fall, it bruisseth or breaks him; and a Sin against Conscience is a dashing against it, a kicking against the prickings of it. But Paul professeth his Religion to consist in two things, 1. For matter of Faith and Opinion, and Way of Worship, he confesseth himself a Christian, Acts 24. 14. After the Way which they call Heresy (says he) so worship I the God of my Fathers, believing all things which are written in the Law and the Prophets. And herein (saith he, ver. 16.) I exercise my self to have a good Conscience. The Translation, I exercise my self, is methinks a little too low and flat, for it doth not reach the higher Emphasis of the Words in the Original, ἐν τῷ ἰσχυρῷ, i. e. In this, or unto this (as the main Study and Design of my Life and Soul) do I give up my self, devote my self. Those devout Christians were antiently called Ascetae, that gave up themselves wholly to God in Contemplation and Mortification therewith, and made it their Business. And as Paul made this his Study, so (as I take it by all that ever I have observed recorded of him) he made this his Glory; that he never after his Conversion sinned against his Light, no not between God and himself, which was rarely any Man's Glory before or since, to be sure it was not Peter's. He had set that down as an excellency he affected, to keep his Conscience a Virgin pure, and this made him so studious, and versed, and exercised in this Point. Unto this (says he) I give all my Study, Meditation, ἀσκησῶ (the best Study in the World) for Conscience unblotted is the best, yea only Book in the World, that will remain unburnt, and be opened and exposed, and we examined by it at the latter Day; and when a Man hath studied to get much Knowledge, he is thereby (if he will be answerably holy) further and anew put upon a far greater and more exact Study, Exercise, and Meditation; and that is, how to walk up to the Light of what he knows. And that this Paul made his Glory, the Scripture every where testifies upon all occasions: Acts 23. 1. And Paul earnestly beholding the Council said, Men and Brethren, I have lived in all good Conscience before God until this Day. So, 1 Cor. 4. 4. For I know nothing by my self, yet am I not hereby justified; but he that judgeth me is the Lord. It is as if he had said, I am not conscious to my self of anything, tho I am not hereby justified, that is, I do not say I am without Sin (for we must accord Paul with John, who says, he that says he hath no Sin deceives himself) because God knows that Sin in me, for which I cannot be justified; yet I have not to my knowledg in any Action gone against my Light. Also, 2 Cor. 1. 12. he thus speaks, For our rejoicing is this, the Testimony of our Conscience, that in Simplicity and godly Sincerity, not with fleshy Wisdom, but by the Grace of God, we have had our Conversation in the World, and more abundantly to you wards. And 2 Tim. 1. 8. I thank God whom I serve from my Forefathers with pure Conscience that without ceasing I have remembrance of thee in my Prayers night and day. And Heb. 13. 18. Pray for us, for we trust we have a good Conscience in all things, willing to live honestly. This Blamefessness himself having kept, he prays might be in these Philippians, and ought to be in all Christians, and possibly might be, for it was in Paul.

C H A P. III.

What is meant by these Words in Phil. 1. 10. until the Day of Christ. The different Significations of those Phrases used in Scripture [unto the End] and [until the Day of Christ.]

THE next Words to be considered in the Text Phil. 1. 10. are these, Until the Day of Christ. I should come next according to the Order of the Division of the Text given to the positive part of Holiness, being filled, &c. but these Words coming in between, I had rather handle them as the Holy Ghost hath placed them. And in deed these Words come in, in the midst between both, and so appertain in common to both, and that as to this Sense and Purpose; both, That you may be without Offence until that Day, or in that Day, and also that ye be filled with the Fruits of Righteousness in, and at that Day. This is inserted as a matter of greatest moment, both 1. in it self, as a necessary requisite, that Holiness in us be continued until that Day without interruption, and also crowned with Perseverance. And also 2. in that relation which Holiness hath unto that Day, or the Stead which in that Day it will stand us in: that Day is the special Time and Season, which Holiness and Blamelessness is ordained, and serves for; the Day when it will stand us in most stead, and shine in its greatest Lustre. Which therefore 3. we should have most in our Eye, as a great incentive to abound in it; that in and at that Day we may be found to have been blameless, that in and at that Day we may appear filled with the Fruits of Righteousness, &c.

Chap. 3.

Now 1st. to clear this Phrase it self, as the Words refer to that first import, being blameless until that Day, there is a Difficulty hath often presented it self to my Thoughts, which I will endeavour to asswage: Why the Apostle should not rather have said in his Petition, till the Day of Death; but still almost every where in his Epistles, should mention the Day of Christ. Now that he should assign that Day to bear the date of his Prayers and Consolation to expire at, not extending his Petitions to that Eternity after that Day; it looks as if he supposed even after Death, some Danger to remain until that Day, which after that Day they are for ever free from, and after which they would not need any such Petition, but were secure for ever.

1. Some make the Foundation of these and such like Phrases to be, that Paul was of the Mind and Opinion, that the day of Judgment would fall out in his and their Days. And that this was his Opinion they alledge other like Expressions, that seem to look that way, 1 Cor. 15. 51. where speaking of the Judgment-day, he says, as in the Person of himself, and them of that Age; we shall not all die, but we shall all be changed: why did he not rather say THEY then living shall not all die, but he says WE, &c. And he again utters himself in like manner; 1 Thess. 4. 17. Then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the Clouds, to meet the Lord in the Air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. And to the same purpose (say they) he supposing that Timothy might live to that Day, it was that he says, 1 Tim. 6. 14. That thou keep this Commandment without Spot unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ. All which is further backt with that of Christ's Speech, Watch ye, you know not what Hour, &c. And what I say to you, I say to all. He speaks not as if he would have those his Disciples then living and present, to apprehend the Day of Judgment might fall out in their Time.

But (1.) on the contrary it seems evident, that Paul did think and judge that the Day of Judgment would not be in that Age; and that therefore this is not the Import of this and the like Phrases: And to that end compare we but his Speech in two Epistles to the same Persons, the Thessalonians; in the first of which he maketh the same Prayer that is here, 1 Thess. 5. 23. he prays for them in the same Stile that here; I pray God your whole Spirit, and Soul, and Body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Yet again speaking to the same Persons, 2 Thess. 2. 2. he exhorts them not to be troubled, neither by Spirit, nor by Word, nor by Letter as from him, as that the day of Christ is at hand. That one particular enumerated, not by Letter, sufficiently cuts off any Expression in his former Epistle, written to import so much; and therefore cuts off too that forementioned Prayer, to keep them blameless to that Day. And this Reason is the same, by which we may argue the like even in these latter days, that this Day cannot fall out in this Age; because there is yet so much Business to be done in the World, for which there is express Prophecy unfulfilled, as it will ask more than the time of an Age. For that Day (2 Thess. 2. 3.) shall not come except there be a falling away first, and the Man of Sin be revealed, the Son of Perdition. And so we may say, the ten Kings must destroy the Whore, and the Jews be called, and the whole Earth be filled with the Knowledge of the Lord, e'er that Day come. As therefore as he says, so say I, they deceive you that tell you so; and for those Phrases, we that are alive,

Book 1. alive, &c. they are easily saved. He considers the Succession of Christians in all Generations as one Body, and Community, in distinction from all others reprobated, and accordingly says, we shall not all die.

But (2.) in the Original, the Word translated until, is not ἄχρι, as at the 6th ver. nor μέχρι, as 1 Tim. 6. 14. but it is εἰς, which is often put for ἐν, and so signifies in that Day, as 1 Cor. 1. 8. ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, in the day of Christ, and 1 Thess. 5. 23. kept blameless ἐν παρουσίᾳ, in the coming of Christ; and so it is all one as to say, in, at, or against that Day: A Day for which Holiness is mainly designed, when Blamelessness and Holiness will be at the highest value, and of more use to you than at all times else. And so there may be an observable difference made between the Phrase he had used in the 6th ver. of Phil. 1. where expressing his confidence, that God would perfect the Work he had begun, he says manifestly, until the Day of Christ, ἄχρι. For the Perfection of Glory (whereof Grace is the Foundation) is not till then, and there both in Body and Soul accomplisht; but here in 1 Thess. 5. 23. it is, That you may be blameless, in or at the Day of Christ. And in this sense, wicked Men are said to treasure up Wrath, ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, against that Day of Wrath, Rom. 2. 5. so 'tis there translated, and might be here.

There is only one Place, 1 Tim. 6. 14. hath μέχρι until: That thou keep this Commandment without spot, unrebukable, UNTIL the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ. But the answer to that one Place is ready and easy, and carries a great Truth with it. Paul wrote to Timothy as an Evangelist, who being set over Churches in that Age, when Churches were to be constituted to set them in order, they accordingly received Directions from the Apostles according to Christ's Institutions; yet so as their Offices ceasing (which whether they did or no, I will not here dispute) the same Directions were intended to all ordinary Officers of Churches settled. Now then in speaking to him, he in him speaks unto all Saints and Officers entrusted, how to guide and govern Churches in the ordinary way unto the end. 1 Tim. 3. 15. That thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thy self in the House of God. To instruct all Saints and Officers entrusted with the Government of Churches to the end of the World; and to shew he intended the Succession of Officers and Christians in what he wrote to Timothy, he gives him, and in him them, warning of what should fall out in several Successions, of the latter days of the Church. 1 Tim. 4. 1. Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some should depart from the Faith, giving heed to seducing Spirits, and Doctrines of Devils; wherein he forewarns them of the Apostacy of Popery, which fell out in the latter days, the middle Age of Christianity, when Paul and Timothy were Dust. He speaks here too of carnal Protestants that have a Form of Godliness, and he speaks too of all that fry of Errors that should infest the Churches; from all which his Counsel is to turn away, and separate from them, ver. 5. I alledg these Places for this, that he speaks to Timothy, as bearing the Person of them that should come after him many hundred Years (as Peter also did in receiving the Keys) and so that Charge (1 Tim. 6. 13.) is not barely personal, but to others after him to the end of the World: and so he might well lay a Charge μέχρι, until the Day of Christ, and the Commandment there is all the Doctrine in that Epistle; where Church Institution and Rules for Worship and Government take up a great part. Thus Commandment is taken for the whole Doctrine delivered, 2 Pet. 2. 21. For it had been better for them not to have known the Way of Righteousness, than after they have known it, to turn from the Holy Commandment delivered unto them. Thus also in Ch. 3. 2. That ye may be mindful of the Words which were spoken before by the Holy Prophets, and of the Commandment of us the Apostles of the Lord and Saviour. And the Truth which I said this Explication carries with it, is this great and manifest one; that Church Institution for Worship and Government, contained in that and other Epistles (I say other also, for who shall put the difference of these in this, from those in other Epistles?) are the Commandments of Jesus Christ, the charge of which lies upon the Churches of God to the coming of Christ. Similarly unto the stile of which Injunction here in Timothy, Paul elsewhere speaks, when he says of the great Ordinance of the Lord's Supper, ye shew forth his Death till he comes; and Christ answerably gives forth his Promise, reaching to the same date that Paul's Charge doth. And as he speaks to the Saints under Timothy's Name, so Christ under his Disciples Names speaks to all others, Go, teach and baptize (synecdochically put for all outward Administrations) I will be with you to the end of the World. So then Ordinances and the Command for them continues to the end. This we have only gained by the way, to give an account why μέχρι, until, is used in that Passage, more especially as noting out the whole continuance of time till the Day of Judgment, which yet is not in these other Passages of Paul's Prayers, which are rather to be understood of being kept blameless, in the Day, and in the coming of Christ.

Chap. 3.

But a third Satisfaction to the Objection mentioned is, that if the reading be retained until, as for usque ad (as Beza explains it) as noting the Continuance of their being preserved all the time until then (which because the Word may signify, I would take in) yet for the thing it self, both Phrases come all to one, as in the reality of the Event; and it is all one to say, to be kept till the Day of Death, or till the Day of Christ. And this Interpretation two Places do warrant: the first is Rev. 2. 20. Be thou faithful unto the Death, and I will give thee a Crown of Life; which manifestly argues that the Faithfulness which is continued until Death, hath an immediate Reward of a Crown of Life, and is compleated then, so as to admit no addition of Flowers to that Crown by any Faithfulness after; for only so much as till Death is rewarded, and no more accounted. And thus Paul reckons his account finished, his computes perfected at Death; 2 Tim. 4. 7. I have fought a good Fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the Faith. When I come to die, there is an end of a finishing of all, unto which any degree of Glory is accounted; when I come to die, I shall have done my part, I shall have finished my course. As for that τό λοιπόν (which we translate henceforth) that Remainder for ever after, that no way lies in me, it is God's part, I shall have done all mine; nothing remains but for him to give me a Crown of Life. So then to be kept blameless as to the Day of Death, as it is enough for our parts; so it is all one with this here, until the Day of Christ. The second Text is, 1 Cor. 1. 8. Who shall confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in the Day of our Lord Jesus Christ. Here is both the one and the other mentioned together, to that Sense which I have given; for to confirm to the end, is to the end of our Lives; and if we are so confirmed till the end of our Lives, we shall be blameless in the Day of Christ. For such we shall be found at the latter Day, as we were in our Lives to the day of our Death. And thus it is necessary to distinguish these two Phrases, to the end, as meant of Death, from that other, as of the Day of Christ, for else it had been a Tautology; when yet the latter is made the end of the former; and the Reason why yet these two are one in the Issue and Reality and Event is, because as the Tree falls it lies, qualis hinc exit, talis judicandus in isto die. There being indeed no account to arise from all that passeth between the Day of Death, and this of Judgment: For 2 Cor. 5. 10. we are to be judged only for what the Soul doth in the Body. For we must all appear before the Judgment-Seat of Christ, that every one may receive the Things done in his Body, according to that he hath done, whether it be Good or Bad. The account is not for what is done out of the Body, which is alike common both to Wicked and Godly men, to those that have done Good or Evil; and therefore Paul, Heb. 9. 27. makes no more between, but that it is appointed for all Men to die, and after this the Judgment; and he speaks of the general Judgment, for it is brought as a parallel Instance, to prove Christ's Coming the 2d Time, as it followeth there, ver. 28. So Christ was once offered to bear the Sins of many, and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second Time, without Sin unto Salvation.

But if the Question be asked why, since these two Phrases to the End, and to the Day of Christ, come both to one Sense in reality, he should chuse rather and more frequently to use this latter, till the Day of Christ? The Answer is, because Holiness is of more concernment to us at that Day, than at all Times else; therefore he contents not himself here, nor also 1 Cor. 1. 8. to have said, who shall confirm you to the End, viz. till Death, but adds also, in the Day of Christ.

How we may be said to be kept blameless until the Day of Christ.

THUS much touching the difficulty in the Phrase, there is another remaining in the Thing it self, which is concerning the blamelessness, or being void of Offence; How both in this and other places, as 2 Cor. 1. 8. 2 Thess. 5. 23. the Promise included in these Prayers to present us blameless in that day, is to be understood. For Men shall be presented such as they were in this Life; and in this Life in many things, as James says, we offend all; and many of the Saints after Conversion run into Scandals and Offences to others, and their own Consciences. How then are such Prayers and Promises fulfilled?

To this an Antinomian would be ready to give an easy Answer with respect to their Principles: That all this is accomplished in Justification; because Christ shall present us then to himself and his Father, clothed with his Righteousness, we shall be spotless and without wrinkle. But the blamelessness of the Saints here, and in other the like Places at that day, is not that of Justification, but Sanctification. 1. For here he speaks of Sincerity, being filled with the Fruits of Righteousness. 2. And elsewhere, 1 Thess. 5. 23. The God of Peace sanctify you wholly, that your whole Soul and Body be preserved blameless at the coming of Christ. 'Tis spoken of Sanctification you see; and as so taken, I find it sometimes uttered, (1.) as an absolute Promise which God undertakes to perform, as well as that the Saints shall persevere. 2. Sometimes as a Prayer for, and Exhortation to us to be found such, so here. And the several Consideration of either, will answerably afford a double distinction of blamelessness, even of Sanctification intended in this and the like Places. 1. We find absolute Promises annexed to the Prayers he makes for their being kept blameless to that Day that God will perform it: 1 Cor. 1. 8. Who shall also confirm you, to the end that ye may be blameless in the Day of our Lord Jesus Christ. And that it is an absolute Promise, the 9th ver. shews, God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the Fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord. And in more absolute Terms yet, 1 Thess. 5. you have heard how he prays, even as here in ver. 23. and yet ver. 24. it follows, Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it. He first engageth God's Faithfulness, and then doubles the Assurance, he will do it, yea also do it, as sure as he hath called you. Yea, and it is such a Promise, as shall be performed unto all Saints called, Small and Great; for the Promise is founded upon a consideration, that in common holds true of all the Saints, Faithful is he that calleth you; and all Saints are Saints by calling, in the same 1 Cor. 4. 2. Of Necessity therefore such a blamelessness, of that Latitude and Size, must be understood in these Places, as is a common Privilege to all Saints, that ever were, or shall be, and common even to those that have run into Offences, as many of those, he wrote to, also did. And to interpret this only of that perfect Sanctification, wrought just at the parting of Soul and Body, is too dilute; because Paul prays and exhorts, and accordingly promiseth from God, that during the whole course and time of their Lives, they be so kept, even blameless. There is therefore, Brethren, a Blamelessness and Sincerity in the Saints, some especially, in respect of all that vacuity of all sorts of Offences, such as in the Sense the word was interpreted. But in respect to those Principles and Laws, which the State of Grace is bounded with, and Men preserved in that State, notwithstanding such particular Offences; there are certain Principles, which are essential to the being and keeping of us in the State of Grace, as that a Man should live in no known Sin, but live in the constant practice of known Duties, seeking the Glory of God in all. The Apostle John hath everlastingly stated such Principles, as the bounds, the limits between both Estates; 1 John 3. 7. Let no Man deceive you, he that doth Righteousness, is Righteous, even as he is Righteous. He speaks not of particular Acts, wicked Men may do some things Righteous, and godly Men do things that are Evil. But his ἡ ἀρετή, is a Man's Course, Work, Business, to go on in an ill track, as the Devil from the beginning. Another like Principle

Paul inculcates, Rom. 14. 8. None of us lives to himself, but to the Lord, that is, maketh God's Glory the end of his Course and Ways. This is a Fundamental Maxim of our Livery, they are none of us that do not; we own them not, nor will Christ own them. To be kept then to the Practice of these and such like, is radically and essentially necessary to the being kept in the State of Grace. Again, if a Man falls into particular acts of Sin through Temptation, wherein a Christian offendeth his own Conscience or others: an essential Law to the being kept in the State of Grace is, to return and convert, humbling themselves, renewing their Repentance, as Peter did, whose Faith was recovered: I have prayed, says Christ, thy Faith fail not. He wept bitterly, Repentance was renewed, and he loved Christ more than ever: Lord, says he, thou knowest I love thee. Now then as in respect to such Principles as these, there is a blamelessness, a being void of offence according to the Rules of the Gospel; whereas in respect of acts there is not a blamelessness in Conversation: This is such a blamelessness, as that Perfection of Heart is said to be in David, 1 Chron. 28. 9. and in Asa all his days, 2 Chron. 15. 17. tho with a nevertheless (as there) of many foul Acts, the particulars of which you may read in Ch. 16. It was a comparative Perfection, taking their whole Course, and summing up the account of all their days, as 'tis there said; yea and further, when in respect of such Acts committed, a Man is to be blamed, (Gal. 2. 11.) yet if a Man renews Faith and Repentance, he is according to the Rules and Verdict of the Gospel (which is that Royal Law of Liberty) rendered pure and void of Offence. Again, this Paul upon these Principles pronounceth of the Corinthians, in a matter wherein they had been highly guilty (as in the Business about the incestuous Person, 1 Cor. 5.) yet in 2 Cor. 7. after he had related how they had sorrowed (for their Sin) to God, and after a godly manner (witness all those gracious Dispositions he rehearseth, ver. 11.) in the Conclusion he gives forth this gracious Sentence of the Gospel thereupon: In all things you have approved your selves CLEAR in this matter, ἀγνός (as high a word as any other, equivalent to that without spot or wrinkle) clear, not in respect only to other things in their Lives, wherein they had done worthily; but even in this very matter, wherein they had afore been so foully faulty. The Sin they had committed could not be undone, but yet they had done all (in all things ye have shewn, &c.) all namely, which the Law of Liberty, the Gospel, requires in such a Case (the particulars of which he had reckoned up) upon which it declares a Man pure. Neither speaks he of purity through Justification, that is only by Faith, not Repentance, but according to the Rules and Maxims which about Sanctification the Gospel holds forth, and according to which the Day of Judgment shall proceed.

So then we see one Sense, in which those Speeches of the Apostle (take them as absolute Promises) are to be understood; and this kind of blamelessness must needs be supposed at least to be intended in these Prayers of Paul, especially in that parallel Prayer of his (1 Thess. 5. 23.) where the Promise of keeping all the Saints in this respect blameless, is also annexed: and this to be sure his Prayers attained for them, that were true Saints among 'em.

But yet, my Brethren, this is the lowest, and if I may call it so, the worser sort of Blamelessness; tho indeed thus to be kept all a Man's days in the midst of many Offences, still within the Circle and Limits of the State of Grace, is an infinite Privilege, and high Specimen and Argument of God's free Grace, according to that of Hosea 14. 4. I will heal their Backslidings, I will love them freely. In the State of Nature, God gives Examples in various proportions and degrees, and sizes, how far in common Righteousness Men unregenerate may proceed, and yet remain unregenerate, and be still in that Estate: Some attain to the height of Morality, as Socrates; others of Legality, as concerning the Law blameless, as Paul, Phil. 3. 6. others attain to a degree of a Work Evangelical, yet not saving: 2 Pet. 2. 19, 20. While they promise them Liberty, they themselves are the Servants of Corruption; for of whom a Man is overcome, of the same is he brought in Bondage. For if after they have escaped the Pollutions of the World, through the Knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again intangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning. They do escape the Pollutions of the World through the Knowledge of Christ, who yet remain in their Nature; Swines Swines washed outwardly, yet not renewed, but returning to their former Vomit. Book I. And God in his Actings towards those in a State of Grace, to shew the Glory of his free Grace in the variety of Dispensations, doth preserve in and amidst several sizes and degrees of unblameworthiness those whom he saves. Some run out farther, others in lesser measures as to particular Acts of Sin, and yet still so as they remain within the Line of Communication of those Principles mentioned. And as it is a matter of difficulty to define, how far a Man unregenerate may go in external Acts of Vertue, and yet still continue within the Sphere and Dominion of that unregenerate Estate: so it is as hard to say, how far Saints may fall, or how often, into offence and blameworthiness; and yet this radical fundamental blamelessness, as to the Principles of the State of Grace, both for his whole course, and redgements by Repentance, be preserved. Some are more scarcely saved, tho certainly saved; some are suffered to put the sure Mercies of David to it. Thus the sureness of God's Mercies were exemplified in David and Solomon, for they tried, especially Solomon, how far they would hold. I sinned (saith Solomon) to the utmost of the Teddar, as far as the Lines of the Principles of Grace would reach, as far as would be consistent with them. Himself expresseth it thus in the sad Story of all his Vanities, in Eccles. Ch. 1. and 2. He inserts this, Eccles. 2. 3. that he yet acquainted his Heart with Wisdom; and his Redgements by Repentance are known to you, for the Title of his Book is a Testimony of it; and yet he was so scarcely saved, that it is a Controversy in the Church to this day, whether he were saved yea or no. And altho this may be an Encouragement to some Souls, who have had great Diversions from God in their Lives since their Calling, that the Prerogative Sovereignty, and the Faithfulness of that Grace they are under the Dominion of, hath reduced them, and hath in all their goings astray kept them within the forementioned Principles of this State, and hath reduced them from their Wandrings; yet whoever he be that having the Work of God upon his Soul, will think with himself, I will be sure to sin but so, as to keep within that compass; let that Soul know, that he into whose Heart this Thought enters, or takes any hold in, is at the next step to outsin those Principles, and to sink into eternal Perdition. For poor Soul, tho the free Grace that is in God may say it, I will suffer such an one to sin, and yet keep him blameless according to the Covenant of Grace; yet it is desperate daring for thee to say this, or to presume upon it; and it is indeed utterly against the ingenuity of Grace, and argues nothing but selfishness in thy Soul. Thus much of the first sort of blamelessness, which the absolute Promise is made to.

2. There is certainly, in the second place, another sort intended: for the Apostle prays not barely that they may be kept blameless, according to the Principles of the State of Grace; but this being a Prayer indefinitely uttered, therefore that sort of Blamelessness which is possible to be attained by Saints, must be intended here; and my Reasons are, 1. Because in Prayer we are allowed to seek for our selves and others the utmost good, which by any kind of Promise we judge they may possibly attain to. And 2. it is evident he stints not himself here, barely to pray for Perseverance, but for their abounding more and more; so ver. 9. and that they might be filled down, laden with the Fruits of Righteousness; and he aimed therefore at the highest Blamelessness in his Prayer for these. I will not dispute now, whether the Desires of our Prayer may not be extended beyond what we know God in his Decrees will grant, when yet his revealed Will propounds it as what should, and ought to be in us, and as what we should aim at, and endeavour to attain. Thus in Mat. 6. 10. Thy Will be done in Earth, as 'tis in Heaven: And also in 2 Cor. 13. 7. I pray God ye do no Evil. All which will one day be accomplisht on this Earth, when Christ comes to Judgment. But take this Blamelessness de facto, attained at the highest Pin (without breaking the Strings of Mortality) it hath in any been wound up unto; and as we descended to the lowest Degrees in the other Interpretation, so let us ascend up to the highest possible in this other. And such a blamelessness (we may well understand) he intended for these Philippians; and what was the Aim of his Prayers, should be the Aim, yet hope of our Endeavours: and to understand what blamelessness this is, let us take his own Example, 1 Cor. 4. 4. I know nothing by my self (not any Fact against Light, Light, and he speaks it as in relation to a censure of him by the Corinthians) and tho I am not justified (which belongs to another Court) by this kind of Blamelessness (for I do not say, I am without Sin) yet this Blamelessness I have (says he) that I never sinned against Light from the first of my Conversion, I know nothing by my self. If he had so sinned, he must have known it, and his Conscience have checkt him in the writing this.

So then from hence I gather, that besides the former there is a Blamelessness possible to be attained as a more special Privilege, and to be aimed at by Christians, even to be void of offence against Light of Conscience, all the residue of a Man's Days. I say it is a special Privilege for him who attains to it. The chief of the Apostles that forsook Christ did not attain it, yet Paul did; therefore propounds himself as an Example, Follow me, as I follow Christ. And it would seem that Paul was kept to the very end of his days, to his Offering up. For (2 Tim. 4. 18.) he expresseth his confidence in him that had hitherto kept him, That he would deliver him from every Evil Work, and would preserve him unto his Heavenly Kingdom. His meaning is not simply, that God would save his Soul, and accordingly keep him from such ways of sinning, as could not stand with the Principles of Grace; but further so to keep him in his Heavenly Kingdom, as he might be kept from every evil work; such as was contrary to the Principles which he professed before others, or which his own Conscience had the Impression of. And that Place is not so fairly or honourably enough to Paul's Spirit, nor rightly as to his Scope, interpreted of Deliverance from Persecution, and the evil workings of evil Men against him. For this Interpretation is grounded on that false pretence, that the occasion of that Speech was the Narrative of his being delivered out of the Mouth of the Lion Nero, in the Words before; and so as that confidence of his should intend only like Deliverances from the bloody Hands of Persecutors. No! for he was not so delivered, but died by the Sword of the same Nero, whose Power he had now escaped. But Paul's confidence had a further Deliverance in his Eye, which that very Deliverance was a Pledg of. His Case stood thus: I Paul (I speak in his Person to utter his Sense) have been often before the Bars of Kings and Great Ones for my Life in the Profession of Christianity (you read how before Felix, Agrippa, and the High Priest in the Acts) in all such pressures I never did any thing at any time (I thank God) unworthy of my Profession. You read how instead of pleading for his Life, he still endeavours at the Bar to turn them Christians he spake to. God still preserved him from every evil Work, upon all such sore Trials, he came not off halting. Now in my old Age (for so it was when he wrote this, now he was ready to be offered, and the time of his Departure was at hand, and this Story was then newly acted) I was called before Nero, and I was more put to it than ever. Ver. 16. At my first answer no Man stood with me, but all Men forsook me, I pray God that it may not be laid to their Charge. Yet as at all other times you have heard or read of, I have undergone great Trials: this time of Temptation is as great as I ever underwent, and yet notwithstanding, the Lord stood with me and strengthened me. The chief of his Intention you see, was not upon outward Deliverance, but how not to sin, how to carry it so as to credit Religion, to come off so, as to make a good Confession for the advantage of the Gospel, as elsewhere he had done; and that this is his meaning the next words shew, That by me the Preaching might be fully known, and that all the Gentiles might hear. Paul having thus as a Lion kept his Integrity in this great certamen in his old Age, and having made this his Glory, besides his being delivered out of the Mouth of the Lion, What was his Reward? God came in upon his Spirit with fresh Assurance, not only that he would preserve him unto his Heavenly Kingdom, so as not to fall away; but that he would from thenceforth deliver him from every evil Work. Oh that gladdened Paul's Heart! I shewed you formerly how Paul made this his Glory, but we could not tell certainly whether he might not blemish his Glory after; but this Scripture shews that as he had made it his Ambition not to sin against his Light, to be void of Offence all along, so he had now the Security of it as a special Privilege. An holy Man that affected the same exemption came once to me, and professed, he had read all the Scriptures over, and could not find one Promise to keep a Believer from a gross Sin as long as he lived: I thought of this, I know no other. I observe serve that upon eminent Trials, such as that was of Paul's, God useth to seal up something to a Man's Soul of special Grace to him. In the 28th of this 1st Chap. of the Phil. when Christians are called to bear witness for Christ, Be you in nothing (says he) terrified by your Adversaries, which is to them an evident Token of Perdition; but to you of Salvation, and that of God. God at such times, and upon such occasions used to give (ordinarily to Martyrs and Confessors of him) an Evidence and Token of their Salvation; as unto the Persecutors, a Consternation of Spirit, which is to them an evident Token of Perdition. Now therefore upon this occasion he gave unto Paul a double assurance at last, who had served him in so many Trials. 1. He gives him an assurance of preserving him to his Heavenly Kingdom, which is common to other Christians. 2. He gives him an assurance (which was more special) of delivering him from every evil Work, which he had so much desired; God said to him, As hitherto thou hast not, so thou shalt from henceforth never commit any evil Work against thy Light and Principles. I have been the larger in this, to set before you the Example, the possibility of attaining this kind of Blamelessness, for which he therefore prays for these Philippians. I would provoke your Spirits hereby to affect it, and endeavour it: It would seem attainable also by other Instances, as that of Elizabeth and Zachary, the Parents of the Baptist, Luke 1. 6. 'tis said, they were both Righteous before God, walking in all the Commandments and Ordinances of the Lord blameless. You profess to live in Obedience to Commandments, I beseech you do the same with respect to Ordinances, and all Ordinances; for they are all of a like Necessity; and the second Commandment commands you this Duty. From this Doctrine, tho the Papists would fondly gather their Perfection and Possibility of keeping all the Commandments without Sin (however John and James contradict it, saying, in many things we offend all) yet we may well allow them (their Errors having usually a shadow of some Truth, which they miss speaking either over or under) a possibility to be blameless in respect of sinning against Light; and so to have a Conscience void of offence before God and Man. And the Reason for it is this, because if an holy Man may be, and is often kept from such Sins a Week, a Month, a Year, then it is also possible with this State of Frailty to be kept all his Life-time; but for the Papists Perfection, a Man is not kept an Hour, a Moment, Sin cleaving to all we do. The Apostle Peter, tho he had not so lived from the time of his Conversion; yet from Experience now perhaps he had learned the Way how thus to be kept; and accordingly directs those primitive Churches he wrote to, 2 Pet. 10. 10. where exhorting them to all Diligence, &c. he adds this Motive; if ye do these things ye shall never fall. What fall away? There is no Danger to Men, Partakers of the Divine Nature, so to do; but as the word imports never, μὴ ποτε, not at any time. And that Doxology of Jude seems more clearly and fully to hold forth such a meaning, as I have put upon this Petition of Paul for these Philippians; and so withal to argue the possibility of obtaining it, which he would have those primitive Christians to have in their Eye, to obtain at God's Hands; Jude 24. Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the Presence of his Glory with exceeding great Joy, &c. I observe how the Apostle had afore made mention of very great Errors and Miscarriages in Doctrine and Life, which some Professors in those times had run into, and he had also spoken of the Day of Judgment; and to be kept faultless hath relation to those gross Sins in Judgment and Practice, which would be of infinite moment to them at that day; for it would cause mighty Exultation and a triumphant Joy. And as Paul prays here, so he there sets out God to them as able to keep them; to the end they should have recourse to him, and so to do with Encouragement; that as he was able, so that he might do it for them: For to that end is God set forth to them as able to do this for them, and so he concludes his Epistle.

Book I.

Obs. 1. The only Observation or Meditation I shall now make is, That the Solemnity of the Great Day ought to be continually in our Eyes, as that which should move us to be sincere and blameless. For therefore it is that the Apostle chuseth to use the Phrase, until, or in the Day of Christ (for either serves a bottom for this Meditation) rather than until the Day of Death. We should so walk and live, and die as if we were immediately mediately to go to Judgment at the very Hour of our Deaths. And tho both the one and the other import the same thing in the event, yet the consideration of this latter strikes a greater awe, and that is the true Reason (which is a remaining part of the former Objection) why Christ in his cautions to watch and be sober (under which he expresseth the highest care to be Holy) and to be continually ready, still mentions this day: Mat. 24. 42. Watch ye therefore, for ye know not what Hour your Lord doth come. Mar. 13. 35, 36. Watch ye therefore, for ye know not when the Master of the House cometh, at Even, or at Midnight, or at the Cock-crowing, or in the Morning; lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And ver. 37. What I say to you, I say to all in all Ages. And he speaks of the day of Judgment, and presseth this Readiness and Preparedness upon the uncertainty of the coming and approach thereof, both to them in that Age who knew it not, and to us, and those after, that did and do know it could not be in their or our Times: yet because Judgment finds us as Death leaves us, and as our Behaviour in this World hath been; therefore it is that Christ gives forth the Caution to all Ages; of watching for the day of Judgment, thereby to make the greater Impression: It always moves Men both as it contains a Promise sealed with Christ's last Prayer and Blood, and as withal it carries the greatest warning for our Care and Study; how to behave our selves in this World. Thus Christ at last, when himself was to go to God out of this World, as having seen and passed thro the Temptations of it, as a signal Instance of his Love for us, prays that we should be kept whilst in this World: Thus in his last Prayer, wherein you may see wherein his Solitude ran out most; John 17. 12. While I was with them in the World, I kept them in thy Name; those that thou gavest me, I have kept, and none of them is lost but the Son of Perdition, that the Scripture might be fulfilled. And ver. 15. I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the World, but that thou shouldst keep them from the Evil. The Time of their being in the World had all the Danger in it, and he had a special memento and occasion at that time to put up this Prayer; for Peter was to deny him, the Disciples to leave him. I have been glad that Paul in saying, that neither Death nor Life shall separate us from Christ, did put in Life; for I profess I fear Life and the Temptations of it, and how to go through this World comelily, more than Death. Now then as the time and concernment of danger is in this Life, so the consideration of a Judgment to come should have a great Influence to keep us blameless in this World, and free from the Evil of it; therefore here he mentions that Day, as also Christ doth, Luke 21. 36. Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these Things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man. To stand, namely in Judgment (as Psal. 2. the Phrase is) and thus Paul likewise aweth Timothy, and us in him, 1 Tim. 6. 14. That thou keep this Commandment without spot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ. The force of this Motive lies thus; as Christ appeared before Pilate (for that was God's Day of judging Christ standing in our stead) so thou, says Paul, must appear before Christ; therefore I charge thee keep this Commandment: and therefore the Apostles turned the Eyes of all the primitive Christians upon that Day, or the Coming of Christ. It was a great part of the Religion of the primitive Christians, to wait for the Coming of Jesus Christ; and they are described to us, to have been such as those that walk'd in view of it, as those that had that Day in their Eye, and should then be judged: and in this they are set forth as a Pattern to us; 1 Cor. 1. 7. So that ye come behind in no Gift, waiting for the Coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. He makes this an Evidence of their excelling in all other Gifts; 2 Tim. 4. 8. Which he shall give me at that Day, and not to me only, but unto them also that love his appearing. This latter you see is a Periphrasis, a Description of the Saints in those Times, and all Ages; and as he describes them by it, so he sets it before them, as his own Principle, which did keep him steady in his walking: 2 Cor. 5. 9, 10. Wherefore we labour, that whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him. For we must all appear before the Judgment-Seat of Christ, that every one may receive the Things done in his Body, according to that he hath done, whether it be Good or Bad. There is a Necessity of it, we must so appear, none can avoid it: and we shall not be present only as in a Crowd, so as to hope to shrink aside, and hide our selves

Book I.
 Non modo sicut praesentem, sed illic in nos inquiri, ut palam fiat qui fuerimus. Beza.

unseen; but we must be singled out, be presented (as Col. 1. 28.) and stand forth apart as at a Bar. Men that are personally called to appear, ought παρ᾽ ἑαυτοῦ σωματι, personally to answer, Rom. 4. 10. ἐμπροσθεν, in conspicuo, to be seen of all, 2 Cor. 5. 10. to the end they may be made transparent, and be seen through and through, what they are or have been in their Lives. φανηρωθῆναι; and this is then to be made apparent to Men, as now unto God, We are now manifest to God, and we trust also in your Consciences. However this place implies, that at that day we shall be made manifest one to another, even as now we are unto God.

It is a great Scripture and full of Majesty, in 1 Theff. 3. 12. he prayeth they may abound in Love more and more (as here) to the end their Hearts might be established unblamable in Holiness before God, even the Father, at the Coming of the Lord Jesus Christ with all his Saints. He presenteth before them the Solemnity of that Day, by all such ways as might strike their Hearts. 1. He tells them, they must appear before God the Judge of all, as Heb. 12. he is set forth. 2. Before Jesus Christ, who Heb. 4. is said to have a Sword in his Hand, to rip up every Man's Heart and Conscience, to divide between the Marrow and the Bones, and the Intentions of the Heart: and that Description of him referreth to Judgment, as the close of that Discourse shews. πρὸς ὃν ὁ λόγος, to whom we must give an account, as speaking of Judgment, tho' tis otherwise translated. 3. He tells them, that the Saints will be all present there, and the general Assembly of Angels, and Firstborn; and these as Witnesses, yea Judges, when all of a Man shall be ript up. And to this place add that of Jude, Lo he comes with ten thousand of his Saints (Jude 14, 15.) to execute Judgment upon all, and to convince all that are Ungodly among them, of all their ungodly Deeds, which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard Speeches, which ungodly Sinners have spoken against him. Now therefore when Paul had considered, what a Judicatory, a Presence there will be, and how that all Secrets shall be ript open and laid together, he falls a praying that their Hearts might be established in Holiness; for as I will shew you, God will make out every Man's State by his Works, and the casting of Mens Conditions shall according to an Evangelical Rule depend thereon. Now observe it, that this Prayer is plainly and directly for this; that then and at that day, their Hearts might be established in Holiness: now it would seem strange, that for Men who are to be in Heaven, a long time before that day, there should be supposed a need to pray, that their Hearts should be then thoroughly established in Holiness, which they should have here in this Life; to the end they might then be without wavering or fear established. Yet to me the Reason is clear, for they are not then to be judged; nor is their Condition to be sentenced by that Holiness they have had in Heaven, but barely by that which Men have had here on Earth, whilst in the Body, as you heard. All is put upon this, whether such Holiness accompanied here their Faith, as puts a manifest difference between them and Hypocrites; and by that Evidence it must and shall be made forth to others. Thus Jude, because he had said Christ comes with ten thousand of his Saints, prays, v. 24. Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the Presence of his Glory with exceeding Joy, &c. And thus I understand Peter, 2 Pet. 3. 14. Wherefore Beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent, that ye may be found of him in Peace, without Spot, and Blameless. In Peace, that is in their Spirits; and therefore John still makes a great matter of it to have Boldness at that Day; 1 John 2. 28. And now little Children, abide in him, that when he shall appear, we may have Confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his Coming. And again, Chap. 4. 17. Herein is our Love made perfect, that we may have Boldness in the Day of Judgment, because as he is, so are we in this World. And there will be a Confidence and a Quietness in the Soul, when Heaven and Earth shall shake.

C H A P. V.

What it is to be filled with the Fruits of Righteousness in our course of Obedience.

I Would turn Paul's Prayer (Phil. i. ii.) here for these Philippians into Exhortations unto you; his Prayer is for, and the bent of my Exhortation is unto Holiness, in all the eminent Parts and Principles of it; in Heart, ver. 9, 10. in Life, in this 11th ver. where I am now arrived, which holds forth the positive part of an Holy Conversation, being filled, &c. as being blameless did the Negative. There are three Things to be spoken unto, for the opening of these Words.

1. What it is to be filled with the Fruits of Righteousness.
2. The kind of these Fruits, such as are by Jesus Christ to the Glory and Praise of God. He prays for such, because he knew no other would be accepted.
3. The 3^d is, of what concernment it is, at or against that Day of Christ, that Saints be filled with such Fruits. For those Words, in that Day, coming in between the former Blameless, and this ver. 11. do indifferently refer to both; and so to the Words of ver. 11. in this sense, that look what Fruits any Man hath brought forth, he shall appear laden with at that Day, as a Tree in Autumn with all its Fruits.

1. To explain what is meant by Fruits of Righteousness, three particulars might be handled: 1. The Metaphor there used, Fruits. 2. The Generical Nature, Substance or Matter of them, Fruits of Righteousness. 3. What it is to be filled with them, which is the main thing that his Petition is directed to.

1. For that Similitude of Fruits, I will forbear to gather it from all the Branches of that Metaphor, tho it might afford good Store to be laid up. It is a Metaphor the Holy Ghost doth frequently delight, to set forth abounding in Holiness by; yet in such a variety of allusion, as is difficult to define, what more specially he aimed at. Instead of a large Prosecution or drawing out the Allegory in any one, I shall content my self to present rather the severals, which this Allusion may have respect unto. There are three sorts of Fruit, which the Holy Ghost is pleased to compare the good Works of Holy Men unto: 1. The Fruits of Trees. 2. The Fruits of the Earth. 3. The Fruit of the Body and Womb, Children. I shall give you express Scriptures for each.

(1.) As for the Fruits of Trees, you find Man thus growing up and down the Scripture, as whilst David (Psal. 1. 3.) compares him to a Tree planted by the Rivers of Water, that brings forth his Fruits in due Season; planted in the House of God, that brings forth Fruit in old Age, Psal. 92. 12, 13. And Christ compares himself and his Members to a Vine, when he says, Every Branch in me that beareth Fruit, John 15. 2.

(2.) As to Fruits that grow promiscuously out of the Earth: holy Speeches and Thanksgivings are called the Fruit of the Lips (Heb. 13. 17.) in allusion to the first Fruits of the Earth, all sorts of which were consecrated to God, as well as the first Fruits of Trees. And the Apostle (Heb. 6. 7.) compares (as Christ saith of him in the Parable of the Sower) a good Heart fruitful of Goodness, unto that Earth, which brings forth Herbs meet for the Dresser, or as Christ says (Luke 8. 4.) that brings forth Fruit with Patience.

(3.) As to the Fruits of the Womb, of the Body, or Children; Fruitfulness in Gospel-Obedience by Christ, is under that Metaphor presented. Rom. 7. 4. Wherefore, my Brethren, ye also are become dead to the Law by the Body of Christ, that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the Dead, that we should bring forth Fruit unto God. He compares Christ to a second Husband we are anew married unto (as the Law to a former Husband to whom we are dead) to the end that being married to him, we should bring forth all sorts of acts of new Obedience, as Children begotten in us by his Body. Which Fruits of Christ's Body, and of our Hearts the Wombs of them, he calls Fruit to God, as to whom they are born, the Grandfather of them all, even as Children are called the Fruit of

of the Body and of the Womb. Now whether unto all these, or unto which more particularly this Metaphor is directed, is hard to determine: there is none of them, but may put in for it, else I would not have so distinctly mentioned them. Of the allusion to that of Children, that Place last quoted seems parallel; for as there we are said to bring forth Fruit to God by Christ, so here it is expressed, which are by Jesus Christ to the Glory and Praise of God. And so at the latter day, as Christ shall say of all his Members, Lo here am I, and the Children that thou hast given me: So a Christian being encompassed about with all his good Works that follow him, shall have it said by Christ, Lo here is such a one, and the Children have been brought forth by him, and begotten by me; and blessed is the Man that then hath his Quiver full of them, he shall not be ashamed in the Gate. Psal. 128. 5. But then this makes it not so clear, for Children (when many) in the Scripture (when spoken of together in a Cluster) are not called Fruits, but Fruit; but the word here in Phil. 1. 11. is in the plural, Fruits; and the term Fruit, as given to Children, being it self a Metaphor in derivation from the Fruits of the Earth, it must be one Metaphor borrowed from another Metaphor, to call good Works Fruits of Righteousness, in allusion unto Children being called Fruits. And if we should carry the allusion to the Earth, where 'tis true there are plenty and variety of Fruits, yet that Metaphor here (Phil. 1. 11.) taking in Christ as the Root from whom they spring (which are by Jesus Christ) that Similitude of the Heart to the Earth, will not so pertinently afford a room or a meet ground for it. But these Words of Christ (John 15.) I am that Vine, and every Branch in me that brings forth good Fruit, are genuine, and proper, and agreeable to that Expression here (Phil. 1. 11.) Fruits of Righteousness which are by Jesus Christ. This suits also with the Apostolical Exhortations in their Epistles; be fruitful in every good Work, &c. I will not here (for it would be Fruit out of season) enlarge upon the Similitude of Christ the Root, the Heart of Man the Tree, every Faculty the Branch, the Holy Ghost the Sap, Opportunity of doing good the Seasons, God the Husbandman, Union with Christ the Engrafture, and many the like. But having thus fixt the Metaphor to its right Foundation, I come to that which is proper to my Text and Scope, to explain what it is to be filled with these Fruits of Righteousness.

2. Therefore secondly, to shew what it is to be filled with these Fruits. I will suppose that by Fruits of Righteousness are meant all sorts of Holy Actions both towards God and Man, springing from a Heart made Righteous, and conformable to, and brought forth according to the Righteous Law of God; no other are Fruits of Righteousness. But now the Enquiry is, what it is to be filled with them: 'Tis an Hebrew Phrase, to express abounding in them, as full of Children, Psal. 17. 14. A Land full of Silver, Isa. 2. 7. I shall in explaining it keep to the allusion, to a Tree full of Fruits, as that which will guide me.

(1.) A Tree is said to be filled with Fruit, when all its Branches are down laden with them, so as there is not a Twig empty, or thin-set therewith. Now as the Heart of Man is the Bulk and Body of this Tree, so every Power of the Soul, Member of the Body is a Branch, and is so to be understood in this allusion. When the Holy Ghost would set forth the abounding Wickedness in Ungodly Mens Hearts and Lives, he reads an Anatomy Lecture on every Part and Member, and shews how every Member (which are the Branches of these Trees) is full of that Wickedness that it is proper to grow upon; their Mouth is full of Cursing and Deceit ('tis the Expression, Psal. 10. 7.) full of that Foam and Filth to a flowing over. There is a superfluity of naughtiness continually issues thence: and so in James 3. 8. Their Tongue is an unwholy Member, full of deadly Poison. 'Tis also in 2 Pet. 2. 14. Eyes full of Adultery: And Isa. 1. 15. Hands full of Blood; that is, of all sorts of Oppression. In a word, the Heart is said to be full of all readiness to Evil: Acts 13. 10. The whole Man to be filled with all Unrighteousness (Rom. 1. 29.) Fornication, Wickedness, Covetousness, Maliciousness, full of Envy, Murder, Debate, Deceit, Malignity. So on the contrary, a good Man should have all Members and Faculties filled with all Righteousness proper to them; the Mind, the Understanding, and meditative part filled with all Knowledge (Rom. 12. 14.) with a full Stock and Treasury of Gracious Thoughts and Instructions, which might enable him to do spiritual Good to others upon occasion; so it follows (Rom. 15. 14.) Able also to admonish one another. In the first Psalm the Psalmist compares a godly Man to a Tree, among other Fruit he instanceth in the continual buddings of Thoughts: He meditates on the Law of God day and night. He is a Man whose Mind deviseth Good, Prov. 14. 22. He contrives with himself how most acceptably to serve and please God: for such as the Man is, such are his Devices, Isa. 32. 8. And thus the Memory is stor'd with the Word, Promises, Commands, Directions laid up to guide and comfort a Man in his Way: Psal. 63. 6. When I remember thee on my Bed, &c. And thus when the Will and Affections are full of all Goodness (Rom. 15. 14.) there will be fresh Love to God every day, as his Mercies are renew'd every morning. He will keep himself in the Love of God, as the Phrase is, Jude 21. He will keep the Heart steep'd in it, and will put fresh Liquor to keep it quick and sweet every day. He will dwell in Love, John 4. 16. He is full of Mercy to the Souls and Miseries of others, James 3. 17. And if so, he is then full of good Fruits (as these will follow) and he is full of Joy and Hope, Rom. 15. 13. Now the God of Hope fill you with all Joy and Peace in believing, that ye may abound in Hope through the Power of the Holy Ghost. As thus the inward, so the outward Man, and every Member of it, will be so many Weapons of Righteousness (which is an allusion to our Christian Warfare, Rom. 6.) and Trees of Righteousness too, Isa. 61. 3. The Tongue (to instance in that one Member) will be a Tree of Life; Prov. 15. 4. A sound Tongue is a Tree of Life. He compares that one Member to a whole Tree, and of all Trees to that which was in the midst of the Paradise of God, the Tree of Life; to which Isaiah alludes, when he calls them the planting of the Lord: for so those Trees were in a special manner, Gen. 2. 8, 9. whereas other Trees were left to grow wild. And when this Holy Tree bears such communicative Fruit that may minister Grace to others (as the Apostle speaks, Rom. 11. 30.) then it is fruitful indeed. Solomon tells us that the Fruit of the Righteous is a Tree of Life (Prov. 11. 30.) because the Fruit of his Lips, the Fruit of his Actions do become Trees, from whence do often other Trees arise, and Souls are won and converted to God: for so it follows, He that winneth Souls is wise. If any of us should gather all the Fruit that grows but in one day on this Member the Tongue, and (as the Prophet saw in his Vision) put it into two Baskets, the one of good, the other of bad; how little good should we find in the one, how much that is rotten and naught in the other? If the Story of all the outward Actions were written on each Member, and appeared at once, as at the latter day they shall; what a world of Evil would be found in each, when the Tongue is a World of Evil, as St. James speaks?

might

(2.) A Christian is then filled with Fruit, when Good Works of all sorts do, and have grown there. Col. 1. 10. Unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good Work, and increasing in the Knowledge of God. In all pleasing, that is, all the ways whereby God is pleased; in all, that is, the Will of God concerning us, to be done by us. And we must be fruitful in every good Work, that is, of all kinds and sorts, not to be wanting or barren in any. What says the Apostle, 2 Cor. 8. 7. As you abound in every thing (else) in Faith, Utterance, Knowledge, all Diligence, Love to us, so that ye abound in this Grace also. They had been more empty in the bringing forth of this Grace. So then a Christian should look back, and think with himself, What Duty, what Grace, what Part or Course or Practice of Godliness is there which I have been hitherto deficient or scanty in? I have abounded in such and such, but not in Fruitfulness of Speech, or the like: O I will set my self to abound in this also, that I may be found fill'd with all sorts at that day. And herein indeed a Christian differs from other Trees; unless, as was said out of Solomon, we consider every Member of him, as a Tree of Life; and the whole Man a Paradise to God. Take any one natural Tree; and tho' every Branch may be filled with Fruit, yet but with Fruit of one kind (said God, Let every one bring forth according to its kind) for the Seed by nature limits it to one. But here the Holy Ghost is the Seed and Sap, and finally, yea eminently containeth all that is holy in Himself: and so doth the Spirit of Regeneration begotten by him; Eph. 5. 9. The Fruit of the Spirit is in all Goodness, Righteousness and Truth.
And

Book I. And accordingly you find a Variety of them named as Fruits of the Spirit, Gal. 5. 22, 23. But the Fruit of the Spirit is Love, Joy, Peace, Long-suffering, Gentleness, Goodness, Faith, Meekness, Temperance; against such there is no Law. And let me add this as a Reason and Incentive; God loves a variety of Good Works, tho some be of an inferiour kind and sort, rather than that we should abound in any one sort that is more excellent. Tho God would have us lay out our Strength most in what is most excellent, and we are most fitted for; yet we must fulfil (as Christ did) all Righteousness, one part as well as another, and this God delighteth in. It is better to perform Duties of every kind, tho we do the less of some others. 2 Pet. 1. 5. the Apostle exhorts to this Variety, which he calls adding Grace to Grace: Add to your Faith Vertue, to Vertue Knowledge, to Knowledge Temperance, and to Temperance Patience, and to Patience Godliness, and to Godliness Brotherly Kindness, and to Brotherly Kindness Charity. And he is exceeding vehement in this Exhortation, to set it home, καὶ αὐτὸ τὸ ὅ, περὶ or περὶ is to be understood; and then his meaning is, Bend your Minds unto this, this very thing, mainly and eminently, give your Diligence and Study, and all Diligence unto it. παρεισενέγκαντες, the Jesuits observing a double Composition, καὶ εἰς, take advantage of the addition of this Particle καὶ, besides, to prove, that besides the Grace of God, Man's Will must co-operate καὶ, sub, or prater, &c. But, as I take it, there is another Emphasis of it, suitable to the Apostles Scope; which being to exhort to add one Grace to another, his meaning is, they should still apply their Study to some things besides: That tho they had exercis'd this, and that, and the other Grace, yet still they were to reckon that there was something besides to be done by them. Our Translators have taken the Particle off from its own Place, the Verb it stands on, and have put and joined it to the Pronoun, besides this; and so made the Emphasis less: But Peter's Scope is, as Paul's, to exhort to forget what is behind, and to press to what is before; never to think they had done all, but that they had something besides still to do: And says he, if you will bend your minds, πρὸς αὐτὸ τὸ ὅ, if you have this Rule in your eye, you will never be barren or unfruitful. So then you see 'tis proper to what I am upon, namely, to exhort you to add Grace to Grace; and still some Grace besides, and over and above what you have had hitherto. Add to this the Force of that Phrase, Add Grace to Grace, and it will be evident that this is one way to be fill'd with Fruit. As Men heap up Land to Land, buy whole Towns to lay one to another, so do you add Grace to Grace. This should be the Ambition of a Christian: and go to God to enable you to it; for he is, as Paul says, a God that is able to make all Grace to abound towards you, 2 Cor. 9. 8.

(3.) To be fill'd with Fruits of Righteousness is to be fill'd with them at all times, to have (if possible) no time of our Lives barren, always filling up our time with some Fruit or other. Other Trees, when young, bear no Fruit, but a Christian from his first Conversion doth. Col. 1. 6. the Gospel is said to have brought forth Fruit among them, since the first day they heard of it, and knew the Grace of God in Truth. They fell instantly on acting holily, and for God, and staid not a day, a moment after their Conversion, Rev. 22. 2. and Ezek. 47. 12. And these Trees of the Lord's planting are not only said to be such whose Leaves fade not, whose Fruit withers not, but to bring forth Fruit every Month, twelve sorts of Fruit, says the Revelation (there is that Variety afore spoken of) new Fruit according to their Months, says Ezekiel; that is, all sorts in their Seasons. In Nature some Fruits are in season one Month, others in another, but no Time is barren in a holy Heart, it bears the whole twelve Months, the whole of the Year, which is the Epitome of Time: They bear Fruit all their Lives continually; and if so, they will be found fill'd with Fruit.

Now when I say at all times, it may be enlarg'd to three Particulars.

1. That our whole Time be fill'd up with some good Fruit or other. Now there are these things our Time is to be fill'd up withal, our Callings, Recreations, Holy Duties: And we are to subordinate the one to the other, and then we are holy in all. A Man brings forth Fruit in Recreations, as well as in holy Duties, if his end be to have Spirits to perform holy Duties with. Blossoms that fall off and wither, yet prepare for Fruit. Now it is impossible to give certain Rules what time is to be allotted for each of these, the Conditions, Tempers, Constitutions of Men do so vary. Poor Men that live by their daily Labour are necessitated to spend more time in their Calling, than in Recreations and Duties. Men that are of weak and fiery Spirits, and have Callings that are Exhausters of them, are as much necessitated to spend more time in Recreations, than in their Callings or Holy Duties; tho perhaps if such Men had Grace enough, even the most serious Duties might be a Recreation to them. Rich Men that are strong and vigorous, and want Employments, they may and ought to spend the more time in Holy Duties, their Strength and Leisure will afford it: But if a Man proportions wisely and conscientiously forth his Time, according to his Conditions between all these, and puts Holy Ends on all; he will be found for the circumstance he stood in, and the ground he was planted in, filled with Fruits of Righteousness. This the Apostle gives us as a Rule, to be Holy in all manner of Conversation, be it whatsoever. The Mower that hath occasion often to whet his Sithe, and cease his Work with many Interruptions, shall be paid for his Time therein (if he otherwise loiter not) as well as for doing the Work it self. This Rule is certain, a Man is to spend that time in Duties, as may serve to keep his Heart up with God, and not to spend that time in Recreations, as may dull and flat the Heart unto Holiness. My Brethren, the Holy Ghost sets a Price, a Value upon Time and every moment of it, when he says, redeem the Time: now Time hath its pretiousness from the things to be done and acted in it. And because the Fruits we bring forth are said to be pretious (as James calls the Fruit of the Earth precious Fruit, Jam. 5. 7. as also Paul the Fruits of the Spirit; for Phil. 4. 17. they are termed Fruit that abounds to our account, namely, at that day, that is, with Infinite Profit and Advantage) we should therefore improve every moment. There are twelve Hours in the day, saith Christ (John 11. 9.) to work in, but Night comes, and no Man works. Christ you see reckons every Hour as to be employed in working, and why are you idle in the Market-place? Luke 26. 6. Buy thy Time out, let the Time past suffice for Lusts, says Peter, 1 Pet. 4. 2. and the Time remaining is short, 1 Cor. 7. 29. and we have much Ground to ride, much Work to do. Peter therefore, 2 Pet. 3. 11, 12. exhorts, What manner of Persons ought we to be in all Holy Conversation and Godliness; hastening unto the Coming of the Day of God? He doth not say only, that the Day of the Lord hastens, to affright them to turn to God, he supposeth that Work done; but do you, says he, hasten against that Day. He speaks to them as to Men, that were to do Work against that Day, which will require the utmost Intention and Improvement of Time, making account they had done already so little towards it; and that therefore the rest of their Lives should be a continual hurry towards it: as Men that are making a great removing at such a Day, how full of Business and Hast are they?

2. In the time of a Man's Life, there are special Opportunities; and to bring forth that Fruit in that special Opportunity, God calls for it, that makes it doubly acceptable. Psal. 1. 3. A good Man is compared to a Tree, and is said to bring forth his Fruit in due Season: New Fruits according to their Months, as you heard out of Ezekiel. There is a time of Fruit, as Christ speaks, Mat. 21. 34. many Men lose not Time, that yet lose special Opportunities; and tho they be found doing of good, yet not that good at that time God calls for. Do with all thy Might, says Solomon, what thy Hand finds to do, not what thou thy self hast rather a mind to do. And says the Apostle, Heb. 12. 1. Let us run the Race set before us. God chalks out our Works, our Journal every day, and we should heedfully attend it; to omit doing of Work at such a Season God calls for, is to be in a great measure unfruitful. I have judged it the more special meaning of that Passage, Titus 3. 14. Let ours also (that is, those of our Profession) learn to maintain good Works for necessary Uses, that they be not unfruitful. Besides a general Scope which the Words have, in reference to all good Works; he had a particular Aspect, by comparing the Words immediately afore, upon that Duty of bringing two Evangelists Zenas and Apollós on their Journey, that nothing might be wanting to them; and then subjoins as the Reason of it, and let ours also learn, &c. as well as Heathens, who perform such Duties of Humanity. And let Christians, says he, look upon all such Occasions, as Opportunities of expressing a Grace,

Book I.

Grace, which if they omit when put into their hands, they are rendered so far, and as to that special Season unfruitful. Parallel to which is that Text, Gal. 6. 10. Whilst we have Opportunity let us do good to all, especially to the Household of Faith. That which puts a value upon Fruit is their Season, and this is a great part of that Duty, so often inculcated, Watch, as Merchants for a Bargain, ἐξαγοραζόμενοι τὸν καιρὸν, buying out our Time, Eph. 5. 16. 'tis a Metaphor from Merchants that watch for Bargains, and their chiefest Skill lies in taking Seasons to buy Commodities in. Of Christ 'tis said, Acts 10. 38. That he went up and down doing good, that is, he sought out Opportunities.

3. To be fruitful, is in all Ages and Conditions to bring forth Fruit more proper to that Age; as young Men to fly youthful Lusts (2 Tim. 2. 22.) the Lusts proper to that Age: Old Widows (1 Tim. 5. 5.) to give themselves up to Prayer, as their very Callings proper to that Age do require; the younger Women to guide the House (1 Tim. 5. 14.) Rich Men to be rich in Good Works (1 Tim. 6. 18.) poor Men to be humble, content with their Wages, as John said to the Soldiers.

Lastly, Let Men endeavour to be filled with Fruits toward their end (Psal. 92. 14.) to bring forth Fruit in their old Age; there is a special Blessedness put upon it: Blessed is the Man, whom his Master when he comes shall find so doing, Luke 12. 42. Else we shall be in danger to lose what we have wrought (2 John v. 8.) and not to have a full Reward. Of Christ it is said, John 4. 14. that it was his Meat and Drink as to do his Fathers Will, so to finish his Work. And in the last Week of his Life, when he saw he should die, he did nothing else but spend himself; he went out in the Nights to pray, and in the Morning taught the People, knowing it was his last; he took his Fill, insomuch as he was so spent, that he could not carry his Cross alone, but for fear he should faint and die, they called in another to help him. The Fruit of old Trees is most concocted and pleafantest.

C H A P. VI.

Of what kind those Fruits of Righteousness are, with which our Obedience should abound; what is requisite to make them true and genuine.

HAVING thus shewed what it is to be filled with the Fruits of Righteousness, I come now to explain of what sort or kind these Fruits are.

1. The Man who performs them must be a Righteous Man, he must have an inward frame of Righteousness in his Heart; whence these grow: Make the Tree good (saith Christ, Mat. 7. 17, 18, &c.) and the Fruit will be good; for can an evil Tree bring forth good Fruit? Can you gather Figs of Thorns? So that unless the Heart be made Holy and Righteous, it cannot bring forth the Fruits of Righteousness; and they are therefore said to be Fruits of Righteousness, because they spring from a Righteous Frame of Heart, a Workmanship created unto good Works, Eph. 2. 8. And that which is said in Isa. 37. 31. of the Kingdom of Judah, expressing its continuance, it shall take Root downward, and bear Fruit upward that I say of the Fruits of Righteousness, that as there should be Fruits growing upward, so there shall be a Root growing downward, which is the Root of those Fruits. And as a Man doth grow and hold forth Profession outwardly, so he should grow inwardly Holy and Righteous, having the Image of God, which is created in Holiness and Righteousness, renewed in his Heart; and Works proceeding from thence, are Righteous Works.

2. They are called Righteous Fruits, which are agreeable to the Law of God and which have the Word of God for the Rule. The Commandments of God (Deut. 12. 9.) are called our Righteousness (so it is in the Original) and answerably every Work, which a Man hath a Rule and a Warrant for, which a Man doth in obedience to a Law and a Word; it is a Fruit of Righteousness. The Apostle John doth answerably exhort us to such Holy Obedience, 1 John 3. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 7, 8, 9, 10. That good old Apostle, who writes about Communion with God, and knew best what it was, and what was the Fruit of such Communion, doth not take Men off from the Righteous Law of God, as the Rule of Obedience; tho there were those that went about, even in his time, to take Men off from attending to the Law as a perfect Rule, and that because God dwelt in them, and they had Communion with him. No, saith he, ver. 7. Let no Man deceive you, he that doth Righteousness is Righteous, even as he is Righteous. And ver. 4. Whosoever committeth Sin, transgresseth also the Law, for Sin is the Transgression of the Law. Answerably therefore the Righteousness which he intended, is a Conformity to that Law. And saith he, besides the Motive that you have from Christ (for mark it, so the Context clearly runs, he was manifested to take away our Sin, and he that hath this Hope in him, that hath any assurance to be saved, and hath any Communion with God, he purifieth himself) but besides that (saith he) whosoever committeth Sin, transgresseth also the Law. The Righteousness therefore of a Holy Man that is truly Righteous, is that which is a Conformity to the Law; and the Law as a Rule of Righteousness standeth to that Man, and ought to stand, and he ought to act according to that Law, and then it is a Fruit of Righteousness.

3. These Fruits must be such as are by Jesus Christ unto the Glory and Praise of God. The Scripture insisteth much upon the kind of our Actions, as well as upon the Actions themselves. It is not enough for them to be conformed unto the Law outwardly, yea (if it might be) inwardly too. 2 Tim. 2. 5. If a Man strive for Masteries, yet is he not crowned except he strive lawfully. The meaning is this, it is an allusion to those Games usual amongst the Greeks, which were for Crowns, where there were certain Rules set for the manner of doing them; and if a Man did not keep to the manner as well as to the matter or thing to be done, he had not the Laurel given him. It is not therefore striving only, but doing of it lawfully. The same Apostle discourseth to the same purpose, Rom. 7. 4. Ye are become dead to the Law by the Body of Christ, that ye should be married to another, even unto him that is raised from the Dead, that we should bring forth Fruit unto God. And saith he, ver. 6. We are delivered from the Law, that we should serve in newness of the Spirit, and not in oldness of the Letter. It is not the having a Conformity to that old Letter of Moses's Law, which will make a Fruit of Righteousness; but it is (saith he) serving in the Newness of the Spirit, that is, of the Gospel: for clearly there, Spirit is opposed to Letter, and to perform such Obedience and bring forth such Fruits of Righteousness, as the Gospel does suggest and require; this, saith he, is to bring forth Fruit according to the Newness of the Spirit, and no other Fruit is accepted of God. And therefore whereas before, the Law brought forth Fruits of Righteousness in us, we are now dead to the Motions of it, tho it is a Rule still; yet for begetting Fruits of Righteousness upon us, so we are dead to it, and we are married on purpose unto Jesus Christ, that by him we might have Fruit, that is, Children unto God, for he useth a Marriage Phrase here. Before, when we were in the Flesh, the Motions of Sin which were by the Law, did work in our Members to bring forth Fruit unto Death; but now being married unto Jesus Christ, we serve in the Newness of the Spirit, and by him bring forth Fruit unto God. And he calls it Fruit, because good Works are Children begotten upon the Heart by Jesus Christ; for Fruit you know is not only taken for the Fruit of a Tree, but there is the Fruit of the Womb and the Fruit of the Loins. So that the Fruit which is accepted of God, must be such as is by Jesus Christ. And agreeably to what hath been said, the Apostle speaks (2 Tim. 3. 12.) of our living Godly in Christ Jesus. And in the same Chapter he speaks of a mere Form of Godliness, as insignificant. Godliness therefore in Christ Jesus is that alone, which is the distinguishing Character from the Form of Godliness, which is a Conformity to the old Letter.

Now then for the kind of the Fruits of Righteousness, he saith two things.

1. They must be by Jesus Christ.
2. They must be performed by the Heart, so as to be directed to the Glory and Praise of God.

1. They must be by Jesus Christ. Now Fruits are by Jesus Christ in all these respects.

Book I.

(1.) Because they are from a Workmanship created in Christ Jesus. And certainly the Image of Holiness, which is created in Christ Jesus, is of an higher Strain than that Image of Holiness, which the Law could stamp upon the Heart of a Man. It is of another kind, for it is suited and fitted to Gospel-Motives and Considerations, unto which Holiness in Adam was not suited, Eph. 2. 10.

(2.) Because they are such Fruits as do arise from the Spirit of Jesus Christ, received from him, and dwelling in the Heart: Love, Joy, Peace, Long-suffering, Gentleness, Meekness, Temperance, &c. all those excellent Vertues are called (in Gal. 5. 22.) the Fruit of the Spirit; and against such (saith the Apostle) there is no Law, there needeth no Threatning of Condemnation to such Men as are led by the Spirit, as you have it ver. 18. If ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the Law. There was Temperance, and Meekness, and Gentleness, and Long-suffering in divers of the Heathen, but they were not Fruits of the Spirit of Christ, and therefore they were not Fruits of Righteousness by Jesus Christ, and from his Spirit dwelling in their Hearts; neither were those Men led into them by the Holy Ghost, and acted by the Holy Ghost as dwelling in them, and united to them, and becoming one Spirit with them.

(3.) Fruits of Righteousness are by Jesus Christ, because they are the Fruits that follow upon a Man's apprehending the Righteousness of the Lord Jesus Christ for his Righteousness. And indeed so some do interpret this Place; say they, they are Fruits of Righteousness, that is, of the Righteousness of Christ imputed to us by Faith; they being both joined here in the Text, of Righteousness, and that by Jesus Christ. It is evident and clear by the Scripture, that the great Spring of Holiness and Obedience is Faith in the Righteousness of the Lord Jesus; I will give you one Scripture for it, it is in Tit. 3. 8. where the Apostle having spoken in the former part of the Chapter, how that we are saved not by Works, and that we are justified freely by Grace, and made Heirs according to the hope of eternal Life, he saith, These Things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God, may be careful to maintain good Works. So that to believe upon Jesus Christ for Righteousness, and to be effectually convinced that all our own Works will stand us in no stead, and to go to Christ for his Righteousness, is the greatest Spring of good Works, and the best Stock to maintain them.

(4.) Fruits of Righteousness are by Christ, because they are so by Motives drawn from Christ. When a Man feels the Virtue of his Resurrection (as Paul saith, Phil. 3. 10.) that is, when he considereth that Jesus Christ is risen as a common Person, and that he arose for him, as he died for him, or he believeth on him that his Death and the Fruit of it may be his; when a Man feels a Virtue coming to his Soul from the Consideration hereof, which quickneth him to Holiness and Obedience, to die unto Sin and to live to Righteousness: When the Love of Christ thus constrains, when these are the Motives of the Fruits of Righteousness, these Fruits are likewise by Jesus Christ. When the Grace of Christ teacheth us to deny all Ungodliness and worldly Lusts, and to live soberly to a Man's self; and righteously to others, and godly in this present World, in all the Duties that concern God, a Man's self and others; as knowing that Christ hath redeemed us to be a peculiar People zealous of good Works; when the Redemption of Christ makes a Man zealous of good Works; when these are the Motives (which are the Gospel-Motives) whereby a Man is acted, and the Peace of God ruleth in his Heart, and the Love of God ruleth in his Spirit, and the Love of Christ constraineth him; then his Holy Actions are Fruits of Righteousness by Jesus Christ.

(5.) Fruits of Righteousness are by Christ, because they flow from our Union with the Person of the Lord Jesus; and therefore the Apostle speaks of our growing up into Christ in all Things (Eph. 4. 15.) and of our increasing with the Increase of God, Col. 2. 19. The Way to grow up in all Things, is to grow up in him, in to nearer Union and Communion with him, and his Person and Fellowship with him; and when from such a Union and Communion with Jesus Christ, and growing up herein, a Man grows more Holy: Abide in me. (saith Christ, John 15. 4. 5.) and In you, that you may bring forth much Fruit. When, I say, from this Union there flow Works of Righteousness, these are Fruits of Righteousness by Jesus Christ.

(6.) They

(6.) They are Fruits of Righteousness by Jesus Christ, when the Example of Christ is before me to move me to the like Righteousness. He that professeth he abideth in him (saith the Apostle, 1 John 2. 6.) ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked. Chap. 6.

(7.) Then my Actions are Fruits of Righteousness, when as I look for all my Acceptation of all my Fruits of Righteousness in Jesus Christ; or when I expect that they should all be accepted of God in and through Jesus Christ, and not as they come from me. Thus our Services are expressed (1 Pet. 2. 5.) to be Sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ, as they are found in him, and as God relisheth Christ in them. I say, when the Heart is thus carried out to bring forth Fruits of Righteousness, tho the Law be the Rule that guideth me for the matter, what Fruits of Righteousness to bring forth; yet I say, when they are thus brought forth (for the kind of them) by Jesus Christ, then they are accepted by God, for God accepteth nothing out of the Lord Jesus.

Thus I have shewed you, that those Actions are the Fruits of Righteousness, which are done in, and by Christ Jesus. But,

2ly. Then our Actions are the Fruits of Righteousness, when they are directed by the Heart to the Glory and Praise of God. This the Apostle plainly intimates, 1 Pet. 4. 11. where, speaking only of giving of Alms (which is one Fruit of Righteousness) he saith, If any Man minister, let him do it as of the Ability which God giveth, that God in all Things may be glorified through Jesus Christ. He must do it to that end, that God may be glorified through Jesus Christ; for Christ himself is ordained to the Glory of God, and all the Fruits of Righteousness are to be presented to God in and through Jesus Christ, and God is to be glorified through Jesus Christ. He speaks it you see of an Action, a Deed of Charity; that in all things (saith he) God may be glorified through Jesus Christ. But it may be asked, why he doth not only say, to the Glory of God, but to the Glory and Praise of God? Is there any difference between these two? To resolve the question we must consider that those Things are done to the Glory of God (as you will have it in a way of distinction from the Praise of God) when as a Man personally between God and himself, endeavours to glorify him; and those things are done to the Praise of God, which are done by a Man before others. That is properly Praise, which is the shine of Glory, for Praise is the Manifestation of Glory; therefore that which is done in the Heart, or personally between God and a Man's self, that is properly to his Glory: what cometh forth in the outward Conversation of a Man before others, that is properly to the Praise of God. But it is usual in the Scripture to double Things thus, to put the more Emphasis upon them; to shew that all we do, ought to be to the Praise and Glory of God, that our Eye should be sure to be upon that; and therefore the Apostle useth two Phrases, not unto Glory only, but unto Praise also. To shew the abundance of a thing, it is doubled often in Scripture; I will give you but one Instance, which is pertinent to the thing in hand, it is in 1 Pet. 1. 7. where he speaks of the great Glory, which our Faith shall have in that Day, as here he speaks of the Glory our Works give God in this day of ours; he saith, it shall be found unto Praise, and Honour, and Glory. He heaps up those Words to shew the Abundance of Glory, which God will give our Faith at the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ. And let me add this, that the greatest glorifying of God, that is done by the Creature, none knows but God himself and the Soul of a Man. I say none knows, nor is privy to it; and therefore those Works are the most acceptable Works unto God, which are in a Man's own Spirit, whereof the outward Works are but the Fruit: Why? Because therein a Man so glorifyeth God, as no Creature can see it, and that is Glory indeed; and all secret glorifyings of God in a Man's own Heart, and also between God and a Man's self, whereof God alone is the Witness, they are those that God especially accepteth; he seeth in Secret (saith Christ, Mat. 6. 4.) and shall reward thee openly. And indeed therein lies the Glory of God, that he is so respected by his Creature, that a Man doth glorify him so, as God himself only is the Witness of that Glory; and that is properly by what is done between God, and a Man's self, and in a Man's Heart. Therefore the greatest
P 2
Glory

Book I. Glory God hath from the Saints and Angels, is that which no Creature can give a Witness of. Now then to do a thing to the Glory of God, is to do it so, as to please God, aiming at him, moved by his Glory, referring it to his Glory, and intending it so: and this is necessary to every good Work that is a Fruit of Righteousness. I shall give you but a Place or two, Col. 1. 10. He prays that they might walk worthy of the Lord unto all well-pleasing, being fruitful in every good Work. A Man never walketh worthy of the Lord, that is, as becomes one that hath Communion with God, unless he aims at him in all things to please him. The like Scripture you have in 2 Tim. 2. 5, 6. compared (for I still chuse out such Scriptures as near as I can that have the Metaphor of Fruit in them) The Husbandman that labours (saith he) must be first Partaker of the Fruits, so must God. And saith he, ver. 4. No Man that warreth, intangleth himself with the Affairs of this Life, that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a Soldier. It was the Law of the Militia of Rome, and of that Empire, that they should do nothing else but give themselves up to the Commands of their General, and unto matters of War; they were not to be sent of an Errand by their Captains, nor employed by them in any private Business; and all was that they might please him that had chosen them, that they might please their General, to whom, and unto whose Service they were assigned. Thus now to give a Man's self up wholly unto God, to aim to please him in all things, and to act all to the Glory of God, to make that the chiefest Guide and Rule of all my Actions, this is to do all to the Praise and Glory of God.

C H A P. VII.

That our Obedience ought to be continued; That a Man shall in the Day of Christ appear with all those Fruits of Righteousness, which he hath brought forth in Christ to the Glory of God.

THERE is only a third thing to be explained, and that is, what is meant by the Words of the Text, Phil. 1. 10. Till the Day of Christ.

Now as in relation to that reference, I do observe from thence:

1. All the good Acts and Fruits of Righteousness, inward and outward, that any Man hath done by Jesus Christ to the Glory and Praise of God, tho in never so weak a measure, he shall appear with them all at the Day of Christ. It shall not be with him as with other Trees that have long born Fruit, and at the last have none appearing on them; but all the Fruit that a Man hath born successively in his whole Life, he shall appear withal at the latter Day. Wicked Men shall appear with all their bad Works, and Godly Men shall appear with all their good Works; and therefore the end of the World (Mat. 13. 39.) is called a Harvest; and it is called a Reaping, (Gal. 6. 5, 6, 7. where the Apostle alludeth to the Day of Judgment, tho he speaks of our Liberality) what a Man soweth that shall he reap; and at the Harvest the Crop comes in all at once, whatsoever a Man soweth, tho he sow Barly at one time, and Wheat at another, and Rye at another, yet at the Harvest all the Crop comes in. He goeth forth (saith the Psalmist) carrying precious Seed with him; but when the Harvest is, he shall come again, bringing all his Sheaves with him, Psal. 126. 6. All the Works that he hath done, he brings them with him at the Day of Judgment. Now then that which the Apostle prays for in the behalf of these Philippians, is, that at that Day they might appear filled with all the Fruits of Righteousness, and Fruits of that kind, which are by Jesus Christ to the Glory and Praise of God. And the Reason is this, because a Man's Fruit remaineth, John 15. 14, 16. and remaining for ever, they meet him there at the Day of Judgment: Charge them that are rich (saith the Apostle, in 1 Tim. 6. 17, 18, 19.) that they be rich in good Works, laying up in Store for themselves a good Foundation against the Time to come. It will be a Store and a Treasury, which a Man shall meet withal at that Day.

2. As a Man shall appear thus with all his Fruits of Righteousness, so to appear at that Day filled with the Fruits of Righteousness, which he brought forth in the whole course of his Life, shall be of exceeding great Moment and Concernment. It will be of Concernment every way then, besides all the Uses of it now. For,

(1.) As all these Fruits were by Jesus Christ, so there will be a great deal of Honour arise to Jesus Christ, who shall then come to be glorified in his Saints (as you have it in 2 Theff. 1. 10.) and to be made wonderful in them that believe, For Jesus Christ shall present us to the Father at the latter Day (Col. 1. 22.) and our Fruit will be found on him: All thy Fruit is found in me, saith he in Hos. 13. 7. All our Fruit, I say, will be found on him, and he will have the Glory of all; therefore to have brought forth Fruits of Righteousness which are by Jesus Christ, will be infinitely to the Glory of Jesus Christ: As he will say, here are the Children which thou hast given me, so here are the Fruits these Children have brought forth. We are married unto Christ (saith the Apostle) that we may bring forth Fruit unto God. I am the Husband (will Christ say) and these are the Children of those unto whom I am married; and therefore a Saint is called the Glory of Christ, 2 Cor. 8. 27.

(2.) As this will be for the Glory of Christ, so for the Glory of God the Father, to whom all this was done. Therefore the Apostle Peter, 1 Pet. 2. exhorts them, to hold forth the Vertues and Graces of Jesus Christ, to have their Conversation honest amongst the Gentiles, that whereas they speak against them as evil Doers, they may by their good Works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of Visitation; that at that great and general Muster, as I may so call it, when every Man shall shew his Arms, God may then be glorified. So that in respect of the Glory that shall arise to God the Father at that Day, and that even before others also, it is of great use to be filled with Fruits of Righteousness; not only that God may be glorified here in this World (as you have it, Mat. 5. 16. that they may see your good Works, and glorify your Father which is in Heaven) but that there may also a great deal of Glory arise unto God, and Confusion of Face unto wicked Men, even in that Day of Visitation.

(3.) It is of infinite use likewise unto us; for I do believe it to be a great Truth in the Word of God, if I had time to open it, that there are degrees of Glory, and especially at that great day of Judgment, which will be according as a Man hath been filled with Fruits of Righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ to the Glory of God, here in this World. The Prophet (in Jer. 17. 8, 10. verses compared) compares a Man that trusts in the Lord, and so out of Faith worketh and bringeth forth Fruit, to a Tree planted by the Waters, and that spreadeth out her Root by the River, that hath her Leaf green, and is not careful in the Year of drought, neither doth cease from yielding Fruit. And ver. 10. saith he, The Lord shall reward every Man according to the Fruit of his Doings; that is, by an Hebraism, according to their Doings, which were their Fruits. Compare the two Verses together, and you shall find them pertinent to the thing in hand: and answerably in Gal. 6. 8, 10. saith the Apostle, as a Man soweth so shall he reap. Now a Man soweth either to the Flesh, to his Lusts, or to the Spirit; all his Thoughts and Affections are laid out either upon Things Spiritual, or else upon things carnal; or else (as others interpret it) either on things of the Soul and the Eternal Glory thereof, or on things of the Body. Now (saith the Apostle) whatsoever a Man soweth that shall he also reap, both according to the kind and according to the measure: look what a Man sows to his Lusts, to the Flesh, he shall of the Flesh reap Corruption; even to a godly Man, whatsoever he sows to the Flesh will be all lost. But what is sown to the Spirit, it will rise up to Eternal Life; he that soweth to the Spirit, saith he, shall of the Spirit reap Life Everlasting. He compares every Action that a Man doth to a Seed; every Action hath a Seed (let us look to it, my Brethren) a Man sows a Seed in every Thought, in every Affection, in every Word, in every Action that he doth in any kind; and there will either come up Corruption if it be bad Seed, or it will come up to Eternal Life if it be good. Be not deceived, saith he, God is not mocked, for he seeth and observeth every Seed that is sown, and it is he that makes the Harvest (for so I take those words in Gal. 6. to refer to that coherence) Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a Man soweth, he shall also reap. He will look to that, he seeth every Seed you sow, every Thought, and every Affection, and every Action, and he will be sure to make the Harvest accordingly. James speaketh in the same Language too, Chap. 5. he exhorteth them there to Patience in well doing, and he doth it under this very Metaphor I have now spoken of. Be patient (saith he, ver. 7.) till the coming of our Lord, do but stay till then. Whence hath he his Similitude? What shall we expect at the coming of our Lord? Behold (saith he) the Husbandman waiteth for the precious Fruit of the Earth, and hath long Patience for it, until he receive the early and latter Rain: Be ye also patient, stablish your Hearts, for the Coming of the Lord draweth nigh. He compares the Coming of the Lord to the Harvest, and the time of this Life to sowing of Seed. The Husbandman waiteth (saith he) for the precious Fruit of the Earth. It is called precious Fruit, because indeed the Fruit of the Earth is more precious than Gold, for a Man cannot eat Gold; Gold, and Silver, and Pearl, are not so precious as Corn. And sometimes it is precious Seed which is sown, because it cost him a great deal of Mony, and he saves it out of his own Belly to sow it in the Earth; and when he hath done, he endureth all Weathers, and still waiteth and hath long Patience for the Harvest. Do you also (saith he) wait for the Coming of the Lord, because then is the Harvest, and he will reward every Man according to the Fruit of his Doings. And hence therefore you shall find (still that I may speak in the Language of the Metaphor) in this Epistle to the Philippians, Chap. ult. ver. 17. whenas they had sent him a Benevolence (saith he) It is not that I desire a Gift, or that I rejoice in what you have done, but I desire Fruit that may abound to your account. He compares it to Merchandizing; there is, saith he, so much set upon your account in Heaven for it, it is a Fruit of Righteousness, and a Seed sown, which you will have an account of at the latter Day. Certainly, my Brethren, God as he will reward every Man according to the kind of his Works, that is, those that have done good shall go into Eternal Life, as the Expression is; and he will make it out by the kind of the Works, that this Man is a good Man, and the other not; so he will reward according to the proportion, the proportionality. But why should I call it proportion, since it holds no proportion with degrees of Glory? You have a place very considerable, Rev. 22. 11. It is Christ's last Speech from Heaven, his last Sermon that he makes; He that is unjust let him be unjust still, and he that is filthy let him be filthy still, and he that is righteous let him be righteous still, and he that is holy let him be holy still. The Reason why he speaks thus of wicked Men, he that is unjust let him be unjust still, is because, that notwithstanding all that he had said in this Book, and in the whole Book of God, they would go on in their Wickedness, and because the day of Judgment is deferred, they would be more wicked (as Daniel also had foretold in his Prophecy, Chap. 12. 10.) but he not offended at it, But he that is righteous let him be righteous still, and he that is holy let him be holy still; let him continue and increase in Holiness: And why? Behold, I come quickly, and my Reward is with me; that is, I have it ready (for so in 1 Pet. 4. 5. he is said to be ready to judge the quick and the dead) I have every Man's Account in my Head, and I have the Reward he shall have, for I have summ'd up all the Holiness that is in the Heart and Life of a godly Man, and my Reward is with me to give every Man according as his Work shall be, not only for the kind but for the degree. Why? Clearly, because he that is righteous let him be more righteous, he that is holy let him be more holy; for my Reward is with me, and I will give every Man according as his Work shall be found at that Day. Therefore doth the Apostle here (Phil. 1. 10.) pray that they may be filled with Fruits of Righteousness; for the more they are filled with such Fruits, the more will there be Fruit come in then to their account. Truly they hold no proportion with what shall be then, that's certain, none at all: yet as a Man that is casting up of what is due to him, may do it with Counters, when the Money that is paid holds no proportion with the Counters, and yet may truly say, the Money that is paid him is according to that account made up with the Counters; so here, tho all the Fruit we bring forth here, all the Works we do here, are not worthy of that Glory that shall be revealed, they have nothing in them proportionable to it; yet notwithstanding standing it shall be according to that account. How this stands with free Grace, Chap. 7.

words

and is not of Works, I have shewed in my Sermons on Eph. 2.

How should these Thoughts make us for ever grow up in Holiness, and to endeavour to be filled with the Fruits of Righteousness? Every Man (saith the Apostle, 2 Cor. 3. 8.) shall receive his proper Reward. It is a Reward proper to his Work, to his Labour. And to the same purpose is what the Apostle says, 2 Cor. 5. 10. For we must all appear before the Judgment-Seat of Christ, that every one may receive the Things done in his Body, according to that he hath done, whether it be Good or Bad. In the Body, that is, proper to the Body, as some read it; or as it followeth, as he hath behaved himself in the Body. And he speaks fitably, 1 Cor. 3. 8. Now he that planteth, and he that watereth are one, and every Man shall receive his own Reward, according to his own Labour. It is meant of Heaven; for (saith he, ver. 13.) he shall be saved, yet by Fire; he shall suffer so much Loss, for the Spirit of God will reveal all. Consider also another Place of the Apostle, Eph. 6. 8, 9. he speaks upon occasion of ordinary Duties, of the Duties of Servants that do Service in their Callings; but you may apply it to any thing else that is good, that hath any Ingenuity in it, that is done through Christ to the Glory of God. Servants (saith he) be obedient, &c. not with Eye-service (he speaks not only of holy Duties, but of all that a Man doth, of Servants serving their Masters) knowing that whatsoever good thing a Man doth, the same shall he receive of the Lord. A Man doth such a one a good Turn, and he doth it out of a Principle of Grace and Holiness; whatsoever good thing any Man doth, whatsoever Ingenuity any Man sheweth of any kind, the same he shall receive of the Lord. He would never condescend to particulars else, to a Cup of cold Water, as he doth in Mark 9. All yield, even those that are against degrees of Glory, that at the last Day there shall more Approbation be given to one Man than to another; but why not for ever, seeing a Man's Righteousness remaineth for ever?

And therefore, my Brethren, how should all these things make us endeavour after Holiness, as Peter saith (suffer the Words of Exhortation, for these things the holy Apostles pressed upon the Hearts and Spirits of Men) 2 Pet. 3. 14. Seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in Peace, without spot and blameless (which is the first part) and seeing that these things must be dissolved, what manner of Persons ought ye to be, in all holy and godly Conversations? so it is in the Original. The Apostle Peter, who doth in his Epistles sparkle forth so much Holiness, yet he hath so great and so vast a sight of Holiness, which yet he would attain to, that he knows not how to express it: What manner of Men (saith he) ought we to be! It is a word of Admiration, as when Christ did still the Sea in Mat. 8. 27. what manner of Man is this! (say they) so here, what manner of Holiness should we use, Looking for and hastning unto the Coming of the Day of the Lord, that is, dispatching and doing all we can for our Lives against that Day; and if we have neglected our time, let us begin now to hasten, and to be holy in all manner of Conversations. It is expressed in the plural number, to instruct us that in all Ways, towards a Man's self and towards others, and in all Duties towards God, we should be holy. Our Lives should as it were be in a hurry after the Day of Judgment; as those that are to remove at the Quarter-day, they hasten to do all against the time. Let a Man think with himself, I must have all my time filled up, with every Grace I must abound, and hold forth Christ in every thing, in every condition, and in every relation; and the more fruitful I have been, I shall appear so at the latter Day, and it shall all rebound to my account. Let a Man consider this, it will make him to be like one in a continual hast, dispatching as much Business as he can for his Life.

B O O K II.

The Demeanour of a Christian, as it is expressed under the Notion of Friendship with God. The Example of Abraham's being the Friend of God. How in the sense of the Apostle James he was justified by Works. How great, excellent, and kind a Friend God is to us. How this Consideration should engage us in a sincere Friendship to him: What are the Duties and Offices to be performed by us, as proper and owing to such a Friendship. Of the Behaviour of a Christian, as it is named Service to God.

James II. 21, 22, 23.

Was not Abraham our Father justified by Works, when he had offered Isaac his Son upon the Altar?

See'st thou how Faith wrought with his Works, and by Works was Faith made perfect?

And the Scripture was fulfilled, which saith, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for Righteousness; and he was called the Friend of God.

C H A P. I.

The Obedience of a Christian expressed under the Notion of Friendship to God. The Title of being God's Friend is given to Abraham. The meaning of the Apostle James, when he says Abraham was justified by Works.

MY present Subject is the Obedience of a Man already regenerated, and this the notion of Friendship with God will in a large manner serve to illustrate unto us. Friendship is the Strength of Love, and the highest Improvement of it: Thy Friend (says Moses) that is as thy own Soul, Deut. 13. 6. Friendship is common to, and included in all relations of Love: A Brother is (or ought to be) a Friend, 'tis but Friendship natural. Husband and Wife are Friends, that Knot is but Friendship conjugal. See one instance for both, Cant. 5. Christ had first called his Church Sister, and then Spouse. And as not contented with both, tho' put together, he adds another Compellation as the top of all, Oh my Friends! ver. 1. This Friendship to God will therefore most perfectly and compleatly serve to express the Love and Obedience of the Saints to God, which is here set forth in the Text, in the Example of Abraham; the State of whose Person, and Temper of Heart is herein made the Common Standard of all Believers.

This Phrase of being Friends to God, is not only expressive of the first Work of God upon us, but it is sufficient to instruct and direct us; and (as the Holy Ghost speaks upon another occasion) to make the Man of God perfect. The whole of that Charge given to Abraham (who is here made our Pattern, Gen. 17. 1. Walk before me, and be thou perfect) is summarily comprehended in this Testimony of his Carriage, whereby he made good the Character of a Friend, and so was called the Friend of God. Other Titles given us do more express our Privileges, as to be called a Son, an Heir; but this of being a Friend to God (the essential Constitution and Essence of which Regeneration first gives us) expresseth more of Duty, and of the inward Disposition of a Christian towards God, tho it also be as high a Title for Dignity as any other. God writ upon the Palms of his Hands, and as a Signet, and a Memorial on his right Hand, the Name of Abraham his Friend; he remembers him and his Seed by it again and again, as if all were spoken in that one word. Our Privilege by it I will not insist on, but the Duty, the Dispositions of it I cannot omit, having gone so far in it, which Christ also insinuates, John 15. 14. Ye are my Friends, if ye do whatever I command you.

That I may arrive at this portion of Scripture (my Text) as it stands in coherence with the foregoing Words, I must necessarily open the Aim and Intent of James therein, which hath had so much Controversy upon it. The Point which he pursues in this Chapter and this Epistle, was to convince loose Professors; who building themselves upon Paul's Doctrine (which if it had not been current in those times, there had been no Colour for their mistake) that Faith alone being that which saved us, and justified us without Works, they thereupon had taken up a looseness of Profession in Practice, not judging inward Holiness in their Hearts, or an outward strictness in their Lives necessary; seeing it was Faith alone that saveth. Now in this Chapter there are two Mediums, by which he evinceth the Vanity of that Deceit.

1. That even under the Gospel, universal respect to all the Commandments, one as well as another, is required, and upon the same ground to all, as unto any one: Yea, and that at the latter Day, God will judge every Man according to this Rule, which he terms the Law of Liberty, ver. 12. The Gospel requires a sincere respect unto all Commandments; this you have from ver. 8, to the 14th. If ye fulfil the Royal Law according to the Scripture; Thou shalt love thy Neighbour as thy self, ye do well. But if ye have respect to Persons, ye commit Sin, and are convicted of the Law as Transgressors: for whosoever shall keep the whole Law, and yet offend in one Point, he is guilty of all. For he that said, Do not commit Adultery, said also, Do not kill: Now if thou commit no Adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a Transgressor of the Law. So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the Law of Liberty. For he shall have Judgment without Mercy, that hath shewed no Mercy; and Mercy rejoiceth against Judgment. What doth it profit, my Brethren, tho a Man say he hath Faith, and have not Works? can Faith save him?

The second part of his Discourse, and which he prosecutes to the end of the Chapter, is, 1. That true saving Faith hath always Works of Holiness, or such a respect unto all the Commandments, accompanying it both in the Heart and Life. And, 2. on the contrary, that Faith which hath not these Fruits is but a dead Faith, and not the true genuine Faith, such as all Believers have that are saved. Yea, and 3. That every Man's Faith (and so together therewith every Man that professeth himself to have true Faith) must one day be put to an open Trial to justify the Truth of it self, and of his Profession, and this afore all the World. And the Believer also will be put upon the Justification of his having had such a Faith as God (ex consequenti, or in the Sequel) professeth only to justify Man upon; for at the latter Day it is Faith is the Grace that must be tried and found unto Honour and Glory, 1 Pet. 1. 7. And the Man that shall plead Justification by Faith alone (which James contradicts not) and that he had a saving Faith, must undergo this Examination, whether his Faith produced such Works yea or no, as the Nature of true Faith with difference from false and unfeigned Faith (which James disputes against) doth note.

Book II. These three Assertions he intermingledly lays down. The first, ver. 14. What doth it profit a Man, tho he say he hath Faith, and have not Works? Can Faith save him? The second is in ver. 17. Even so Faith which hath not Works is dead, being alone, and but such a Faith as the Devils have, ver. 19. The third is in ver. 21, & 24. A Man is justified by Works, and not by Faith only. The Issue of all which comes to this, that true Sanctification and Holiness of Heart and Life is required by God unto the Possession and the Enjoyment of Salvation, as well as Faith, and serves to justify the Truth of the Faith, by which he hath alone the right to it.

Now for the Confirmation of all this, he alledgeth the Instance of Abraham, as an undeniable Conviction and sufficient Evidence, as his Preface to it shews; Wilt thou know, O vain Man? (says he) ver. 20. He gives such Professors the Title of vain Men, because they are vain in their Imaginations (Rom. 1.) and deceived in what they build on, and their Religion will prove vain (as in Chap. 1. 26. he speaks) such a Man deceives his own Heart, and his Religion is vain.

Now wilt thou know, that is, shall I give thee an invincible Demonstration for all these things? Both that that Faith which is without Works is a dead Faith, a counterfeit Faith, and so of another kind from saving Faith. And 2ly, that who ever pleads he hath Faith, must have a Justification (in a right and true sense) by Works, &c. For this, take that Instance of our Father Abraham, Jam. 2. 21. Was not Abraham our Father justified by Works, when he had offered up his Son Isaac upon the Altar? We must understand him here closely to prosecute those assertions he had begun, whereof one was, that it was not enough for a Man that would be saved to say that he had Faith; but he must make this good, and shew it forth in his Works. And accordingly as to this Sense, the Apostle must be understood to speak this of Abraham (for he speaks pertinently to his own Conclusions laid) that if Abraham our Father were now alive, or to appear at the Day of Judgment, and would say or plead that he had Faith, upon which God had imputed Righteousness unto him; that yet even he, as well as any other, must shew that he had such a Faith by his Works, or he had not approved himself to have been a true Believer. And so to be justified by Works, is but to approve himself a true Believer, in difference to a false Faith (which is the main Point, which James his Scope was to disprove) And accordingly there is recorded (to which James his Words do refer) a Justification of him that followed upon that Work of his: ver. 22, 23, 24. Seest thou how Faith wrought with his Works, and by Works was Faith made perfect? And the Scripture was fulfilled, which saith, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed to him for Righteousness, and he was called the Friend of God. Ye see then how that by Works a Man is justified, and not by Faith only.

C H A P. II.

How the Apostle Paul, and the Apostle James are consistent in the account which they give of Abraham's Justification.

IF you ask how this is to be reconciled to what Paul says, Rom. 3d & 4th Chapters, where he says the clean contrary, that Abraham was justified by Faith without Works? The Answer (besides what hath been now said) is clear out of the Scope of both Places compared. There is a double Justification by God, the one authoritative, the other declarative, or demonstrative; tho this is all before God, yet it is that which is to be made before all the World by God: And in order thereunto, the one is the Justification of Mens Persons coram Deo, before God, as they appear before him nakedly, and have to do with him alone for the right to Salvation; and so they are justified by Faith without Works, either a look'd at by God, or by themselves. God therein passeth an Act of Christ's Righteousness, out of his pure Prerogative; as a King, when he pardons or creates a Nobleman, and the like. And this part of the distinction Paul himself puts in stating it under the Example of Abraham; that coram Deo, before God, nor Abraham, nor any Flesh shall be justified by Works: Rom. 4. 2, 3, 4, 5. For if Abraham were justified by Works, he hath whereof to glory, but not before God. For what saith the Scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was counted to him for Righteousness. Now to him that worketh, is the Reward not reckoned of Grace, but of Debt. But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the Ungodly, his Faith is counted for Righteousness. Observe it, he saith, not before God, that is, not in that justification, which is an Act past between God and a Man's own Soul, and in respect of the private Transactions between both.

But God at the latter Day is to proceed as the Judge of all the World (as Abraham calls him) and as such to put a difference between Man and Man, and that upon this account; that the one were true Believers, when he justified them; the other were unfound, even in their very Acts of Faith, which they did put forth: And so he is to shew forth a difference between those whom he hath justified thus out of his Prerogative, and those whom he hath left under Wrath. He is to own the one, with a come ye Blessed, and reject the other, with a go ye Cursed.

Now God hath ordered it so, that he will not put the possession of Salvation upon that private Act of his own, without having any thing else to shew for it. He shews Grace and Favour to a Man without Works; but yet he will go demonstratively to work, and difference believing Abraham from unbelieving Ishmael and Laban; and this by such Works as the other had not to shew for themselves: He will justify his own Acts of Justification, of this Man, and not of that; and he will justify the Faith of him he had justified (which is James's main Scope) or if you will the Person himself, as he professed himself to have had Faith. And this is as evidently James's Scope, as the other is Paul's. In a word, Abraham's Person considered singly and alone, yea as ungodly, is the Object of Paul's Justification without Works, Rom. 4. 3, 4, 5. But Abraham, as professing himself to have such a true justifying Faith, and to have been justified thereupon, and claiming right to Salvation by it; Abraham as such is to be justified by Works. Now that this is James's Scope is evident; for,

1. It agrees with the Language he useth, which imports his meaning to intend but an outward Demonstration in this his Justification, which he intended, ver. 18. Shew me thy Faith without thy Works, and I will shew thee my Faith by my Works. And ver. 22. Seest thou how Faith wrought with his Works? So then he speaks of a visible demonstrative Justification, as the Words seeing and shewing import.

2. This Instance of Abraham's Justification (he saith) was after he had offered up his Son. Now what was that Justification, but that famous Testimony of God himself, given him thereupon? Now know I (says God, Gen. 22. 12.) that thou fearest God, which is no more but this, I have now a visible Evidence and Demonstration of it; so that whereas before I, upon a private Act of my own, justified thee upon believing, I can now own thee to all the World, and have an Evidence to give upon certain Knowledg. And this Testimony was Abraham's Justification.

3. The 23d ver. also tells us, that he had that Character or Title of Honour given him thereupon: 1. That he was called the Friend of God, which is spoken in relation unto that Act. 2. He is spoken of also as one whom God was not ashamed of to be called his God, nor to own him as a Friend; for he had had upon an Experience what would justify his doing so.

4. And yet further, he herein prosecutes what he had said (ver. 12.) that we should be judged by our Works, and so speaks this in relation thereunto. And look in what sense a Man may be said to be judged by his Works at the latter Day; in the same sense, and that sense only, he intends this his Justification by Works, and in no other, for all judging and passing of Sentence must have either Justification, or a Condemnation, as the Sentence of it in the close. So as there is no more danger to say, a Man at the latter Day shall be justified by his Works, than to say he shall be judged according thereto; and the one is to be taken in a similar or like sense unto the other. Now to be judged according to Works (when it is spoken of a good Man) is meant demonstratively, stratively, as they are Evidence of his Estate. The Apostles Scope being also to shew by God's Approbation given Abraham, upon the Story of his offering up his Son in his Life-time, what like Approbation or Justification Christ will declare and hold forth concerning true Believers, when the Story of their Lives and all the Good they have done, or was wrought in them, shall be ript up; I was naked, and ye clothed me: And so gives them the Testimony of his knowing that they had done so. As on the contrary, to them that regarded not good Works, he says, I know you not, Mat. 7. 23. And David speaking of standing in Judgment, useth the same Phrase, Psal. 1. 5, 6. The Lord knows the way of the Righteous; that is, justifies and approves: As in that Speech God did Abraham, Now I know thou fearest me, &c.

And in relation to this outward Judgment at the latter day, our Sentence of Salvation is termed expressly a Justification; and this very thing is asserted by Christ himself, Mat. 12. 36, 37. I say unto you, that every idle Word that Men shall speak, they shall give an account thereof in the day of Judgment: For by thy Words thou shalt be justified, and by thy Words thou shalt be condemned. Neither is it any where said, that God will judg Men according to their Faith only; nor will it be a sufficient Plea at the latter day to say, Lord, thou knowest I believed and cast my self at thy Grace: God will say, I am to judg thee so, as every one shall be able to judg my Sentence righteous together with me (1 Cor. 4. 5.) Therefore shew me thy Faith by thy Works; let me know by them thou fearest me: for as I did judg Abraham, and gave thereupon a Testimony of him, so I must proceed towards thee. And this God will do, to the end that all the Sons of Israel, yea the whole World, may know that he justified one that had true Faith indeed

So then, Paul's judging according to Works, and James his Justification by Works, are all one, and are alike consistent with Paul's Justification by Faith only. For in the same Epistle where he argues so strongly for Justification by Faith without Works (as Rom. 3. 4.) he in Chap. 2. also declares, That he will judg every Man according to his Works. He doth so to the Good, v. 7. To them who by patient Continuance in well-doing seek for Glory, and Honour, and Immortality, Eternal Life: As well as to the Bad he pronounceth a contrary Judgment, v. 8, 9. But unto them that are contentious, and do not obey the Truth, but obey Unrighteousness; Indignation and Wrath, Tribulation and Anguish, upon every Soul of Man that doth Evil, of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile.

Now then to proceed in the Exposition of James, Thou seeest how Faith wrought with Abraham's Works. Which imports, First, that his Faith was a working Faith, which is the principal Point that James drives at. And Secondly, that his Works did proceed out of Faith, and so were accepted. Thus in Heb. 11. 17. By Faith Abraham offered up Isaac, says the Apostle there. And by Works Faith was made perfect; that is, declared and manifested to be true and perfect Faith. Thus we are said to bless God, when we shew his Blessedness: And thus in 2 Cor. 12. 9. God's Power is said to be perfected in Weakness; not that it receives any Perfection from us, but because it is manifested in its Divineness and Perfection. And this the Reason of the thing also enforceth, for the Cause is not perfected by the Effect, but is declared perfected. Fruits perfect not, or make not the Tree good, but shew the Goodness of it. Now Faith is the Cause of Works; and so his Faith was perfected by Works, by being manifested upon Trial (as Heb. 11. 17. the Apostle speaks to be perfect Faith, that is, true and genuine Faith (for so perfect is taken by James, Chap. 1. v. 17. Every perfect Gift) in distinction from Faith that prove it self Hypocritical in the Issue. Thus you say of a true Dye, it is a perfect Colour.

Again then, a thing is said to be perfected when it hath attained the end which it was ordained for, or which was aimed at. Thus in 1 Job. 2. 5. Whoso keepeth his Words, in him the Love of God is perfected. Understand it either of the Grace of Love in us, it is perfected when it brings forth the Actions and Fruit of Obedience it was ordained to bring forth: Or take it in respect of God's Love towards us, Holiness is the End and Aim thereof. It receives its intended End and Accomplishment in a Man that keeps the Commandments, for we were chosen to be holy before him in Love.

But let us proceed in the Exposition of James's Words, James 2. 23. And the Scripture was fulfilled, which saith, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed to him for Righteousness; that is, upon this his offering up his Son there was a fulfilling of that thing, which aforehand had been spoken of Abraham, whereof the Scripture is the Record. First let us consider the thing. 2. The Phrase fulfilled.

1. Let us consider the thing in other Passages of the New Testament, where it is said, A Scripture is fulfilled when it is first done or accomplished, with reference to some Scripture, or Prophecy recorded and written long afore the thing was accomplished. Now that cannot be James's his meaning here, for Moses's his Books (and so this Book of Genesis) were written after, both this Imputation of Righteousness by God, and that offering up of Isaac by Abraham. The Intent of this Saying then must rest upon this, that what is recorded in Scripture, as said long before of Abraham's Faith, was afterward fulfilled and demonstrated, tho both Passages were at one and the same time written by the same Hand of Moses long after both. And so it refers to the Priority of Matter, that one Passage fell out afore the other, not to the Writing it self. Now it is evident by the Story, that about thirty Years before Abraham offered up his Son, God had (as the Scripture records it) imputed Righteousness to him upon believing (Gen. 15. 6.) Yea and upon a bare and naked Act of believing was it that God did impute Righteousness to him. But then, as hath been said, God that justified Abraham as his Elect, gave him such a Faith, and such an Act of Faith was then put forth by Abraham, as God (to use the Words said of Christ) knowing by Intuition and Foresight the kind of it (he also out of Election having given him such a Faith) to be true and genuine, justified him upon it; it being such a Faith as he meant to follow with all these good Works, that which Abraham afterward out of Faith wrought: And indeed Abraham's Faith after so many Years brought forth those many Acts of Obedience, Heb. 11. 17. There was an evident Demonstration or making good, a fulfilling or justifying of what God had done, and of that Faith he had justified him then upon; clearly shewing that God in justifying him upon that, tho a single Act of Faith, yet had kept to that eternal Rule of his, in justifying any; that such a Faith should be operative and working of Holiness. This Abraham in the Sequel fulfilled and made good, and God foresaw he would: And it is observable that in the 15th of Genesis, God gave forth the Promise absolutely unto Abraham first, and then he put forth that Act of Faith towards it. The Promise was a Declaration of God's immediate Counsel towards him, not founded on any Work precedent, nor Faith, but uttered for him by Faith to receive; v. 1. I am thy Shield and exceeding great Reward. And Ver. 6. As the Stars shall thy Seed be; (in which Abraham spy'd out Christ.) And he believed in the Lord, and he counted it to him for Righteousness. Therefore Paul argues that God justified him; as considering him an ungodly Person; neither therein respecting his Works nor his Faith, as that for which he justified him. Now then, upon that eminent Act of Obedience, the offering up his Son (which is recorded Gen. 22.) doth God renew the same Promise, confirming it with an Oath; I say, he renews the very same Promise for Substance given afore; Ver. 16, 17. By my self have I sworn, that because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy Son, thine only Son, That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy Seed as the Stars of Heaven, and as the Sand which is upon the Sea-Shore; and thy Seed shall possess the Gate of his Enemies. Now the fulfilling here is in part interpreted by the Word the Apostle useth of this very Speech, Heb. 6. 17. That it was a Confirmation of a Promise formerly given by an Oath. Referring to the Declaration of himself, Gen. 22. as by the 13th and 14th Verses appears: For when God made Promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, he sware by himself, saying, Surely blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee. So then, as this renewing the Promise was but a further Confirmation of what was sure afore on God's part there; so here in James, this fulfilling was but a making forth, or open Verification, or Demonstration, or shewing forth on Abraham's part, that his Faith God had justified him upon was true and real perfect Faith, such as God only profess'd to justify Men upon. And as the first Promise given Gen. 15. was sufficient alone to have assured us; and the addition of that Oath made it not more true or full in real

Verity

Book II. Verity than it was afore, only ex abundantia was added for Confirmation: So Abraham's Justification upon that bare Act of believing was as full and compleat in the thing it self, as it was now upon the offering up of his Son. Only hereupon a new Ratification was made to his Faith thereof. And so the Saying was but fulfilled, and Abraham's Faith (upon which it was first utter'd) justified and declared true; namely, by that Testimony of God's then given, Now I know thou fearest me.

2. And Secondly the Phrase well bears it; for in this Sense a thing is said to be fulfilled in Scripture when declared and ratified by some eminent Signal of it. Acts 13. 32, 33. When Peter brought the Jews Tidings that they should have God's own Son for their Messiah (for which he quotes Psal. 2. Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee) says he, God hath fulfilled the same unto us, in that he hath rais'd up Christ from the Dead. Now Jesus Christ was not made any whit more God's Son by his Resurrection than he was before; how is it then said by his Resurrection to be fulfilled? Paul hath resolved us, Rom. 1. 4. He was declared to be the Son of God by the Resurrection from the Dead. It is he that was the Son of God by Eternal Generation, and there was no other such a Son of God, and of whom it was accordingly said in Scripture, This day have I begotten thee. This Scripture is said to be fulfilled, when this is manifestly made forth and demonstrated: And this is but the same which God doth every day; when upon occasion of some eminent Act of Self-denial or Suffering he renews Assurance of his Love, and of the Justification of them that have afore believed, as Job. 14. 21.

Now then, that Justification, which in reality, and for the thing it self was as compleat upon a bare Act of believing as ever it shall be to all Eternity, (and the very Words import it, in that thirty Years before Abraham's offering up his Son, Righteousness was imputed to him by believing) yet is said to be fulfilled when demonstratively and signally held forth: And as the Resurrection of the Son of God added nothing to his Sonship that was essential thereunto, so neither did this Justification of Abraham by Works (James 2. 21.) add any thing to God's real imputing of Christ's Righteousness, but was the Signal of it.

So then, let us conceive aright of God's Proceedings herein. Says God of a Man that now but begins to put forth a naked Act of Faith, I do here justify this Man, and I do justify him for ever, and I will never recal it. But a carnal Heart might object, Will God before hand thus rashly give forth an eternal Justification of a Man? Will he not stay until he sees Works to spring from it? No says God, I will adventure to do it now; for when I mean to justify according to my Decree of Election, I give him Faith, the Faith of my Elect: And I see (for he sees all our Thoughts and Wants afar off) this Faith I justify this Man now upon, this sole Act of believing for Justification, to be so genuine, so true and unfeigned Faith, and of the true and right Breed, that I will adventure it, or rather undertake for it, that in the future course of this Man's Life it shall bring forth in his Heart and Life Acts and Dispositions suitable, which shall justify this my justifying of this Man: Which when it shall do, then is God's Sentence of justifying him said to be fulfilled.

When a Man first believes upon a bare Word of God, God in like manner justifies upon that bare Act of believing: And as he trusts God, so God trusts his Faith, or rather undertakes for it, and pronounceth such a Sentence upon him of Justification as he hath sworn (as he did to Abraham) never to recal. And yet the Case is such, as if in the future course of his Life that Man did not walk so, as by Works and Dispositions of Holiness accompanying that Faith, to give Demonstration of himself to be a true Believer; God at the latter day must recal that Sentence, as pronounc'd upon a dead and empty Act of Faith. When therefore in his future course he walks suitably, he is said to fulfil or make good that first Act of God; for he gives sufficient Proof and Demonstration that he had, and hath that kind of Faith upon which God alone will be sure to justify a Man, even a working Faith that is lively. And in this sense is that Saying of James here to be understood; And the Scripture was fulfilled which says, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed to him for Righteousness.

C H A P. III.

Abraham called the Friend of God, upon the Performance of that Act of Obedience in offering up his Son. That what is said of Abraham, is spoken of him as the Father and Pattern of all Believers. That true Faith works in the Heart friendly Dispositions toward God.

THE Apostle James withal adds, And he was called the Friend of God.
 1. Some ado there is where in the Old Testament to find this Saying. Some think it not any where uttered in Words, and must therefore be fetcht from such Passages, recorded betwixt Abraham and God, as argued he owned him for his Friend, as that Promise, Gen. 12. 4. I will bless them that bless thee, and I will curse them that curse thee. And to be a Friend to ones Friends, and an Enemy to all ones Enemies, is the strictest League of Friendship that can be. Also those familiar Conferences and Colloquies vouchsafed to Abraham, do argue it. God in reality used him as a Friend, and so did in effect call him so. But over and above there are two evident Testimonies of God, in exprefs Terms giving this Title to Abraham by God, 2 Chron. 20. 7. Isa. 41. 8. The Seed of Abraham my Friend. And this honourable mention of him, compared with those real Transactions of Friendship, does put all out of question, as to the Authentickness of this Quotation.

2. For the Scope and Pertinency of James in this Quotation to the purpose he had in hand, it must be considered,

1. That he joins and couples (you see) two several Testimonies, fetcht out of several Scriptures concerning one and the same Person; Abraham (whose Instance he had before him to make forth his Assertions out of it:) One in his Story in Genesis, the other in the Chronicles and Prophet. And thereby he would prove and shew that which he intended; That in him Justification, or justifying Faith, and Sanctification, or Works answerable, did meet: Yea, and that from his Faith by which he was justified, did flow true Holiness and Love to God. So as that from his Instance (who is our Pattern) he argues, that where God imputes Righteousness by believing, the Person is made such in Heart and Life, as God may approve of him as a true and real Friend. Abraham believed, and it was imputed to him for Righteousness: There is the one. And (says James) take this in too, He was called the Friend of God; that is, approved by God as such; and he really was such, for God calls things as they are. Now a Friend to God in James his Interpretation of it, imports such inward Dispositions of Heart, and such a Behaviour and Deportment in Life towards God, as a true Friend beareth to a Friend; and so is set to exprefs Sanctification in its distinction from Faith, and as inseparable from Faith.

2. He pertinently mentions this Title, of Abraham's being God's Friend, as given him more especially upon that Act of offering up his Son. A Friend we know is known in Trial; now God tried him in the dearest thing he had, in requiring that he himself should sacrifice his own Son; which God took so kindly at his hands, as he ever after upon mention of him termed him Friend; this having been so high an Act of pure Friendship toward him.

3. The Apostle pertinently alledgeth it upon this Discourse of true Faith, to shew what a powerful working thing it is, where it is. You see how it wrought in Abraham's Heart, it framed and changed his Heart into Friendship with God. Abraham believed God, and he was called the Friend of God. You see then what a Faith his was.

4. And lastly, It indeed interprets what James meant by Abraham's being justified by Works; not the imputing of Righteousness, but the calling and owning a Man as God's Friend. And in the same sense that God called Abraham Friend, upon that Act of offering up his Son, in the same sense he is said to be justified by Works in the Verse before. You use to say, such an one is an approved Friend; such Book II. such did Abraham demonstrate himself to be, and God owned him, and entituled him such for ever; which is a clear distinct thing from either Paul's or James's Interpretation of Righteousness, and justifying the Ungodly.

I have but this to add in the close, which I began with in opening this difficult Scripture, that all this is spoken of Abraham, not as a Person extraordinary, but as a Pattern and Father unto all Believers. For 1. else James's alledging his Instance had not come home to his Scope, to shew that all Professors must have that Faith and Sanctification that Abraham had. And therefore, 2. in the 21st ver. when he begins to alledg it, he says, Was not Abraham our Father thus and thus? And therefore we that profess our selves Sons and Children of Abraham, must be herein like and conform to him. Yea, 3. it is observable, that in the Places to which he here refers us, That Abraham was called the Friend of God; it is still spoken of him in relation to us his Seed and Children: You have it in two Places, Isa. 41. 8. 2 Chron. 20. 7. and in both it runs thus, The Seed of Abraham my Friend. It is given him when his Seed is mentioned, and the Entail to them is from him, because they all are to be Friends to God as well as he.

So then to conclude; look as that Glory, that Heaven which we all expect, and which is the common Receptacle of all Believers, is termed in this very respect the Bosom of Abraham, Luke 15. And we are said to sit down with Abraham, &c. because both he and we go to one and the same common Place: So that same kind of Faith, the same Effect and Fruit of Faith, Sanctification and Friendship to God, is to be wrought in us here, if we be saved with Abraham. Now Friendship being put here to express Abraham's futable Carriage towards God, in the actings of his Heart and Life after believing, the Deductions from hence are two, and they are proper to his Scope.

1. That true Faith where-ever it is, worketh and frameth the Heart to friendlike Dispositions unto God, and brings forth friendlike Carriage in the Life towards God. This the 23^d ver. holds forth, And the Scripture was fulfilled, which saith, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for Righteousness, and he was called the Friend of God. This the Stream of this Text fully carries along with it; James his Scope is not only or chiefly to shew, that whom God justifies he doth reconcile them to himself, or works in their Hearts friendlike Dispositions towards him; but that a friendlike Deportment, that is, sincere Obedience, is thereby signified, and doth flow from thence, and accompanies it in their Hearts and Lives. And to this very End and Scope it is, that this is cited out of the Old Testament, and again and again repeated: so that however Reconciliation elsewhere mainly imports the Work of God upon us at first in the alteration of our States; yet Abraham's being a Friend, properly and mainly relates to Obedience and a Behaviour futable to Friendship, as witnessing and testifying that Work and Alteration.

2. Another Inference is, That every Man's Faith, whether it be true or feigned shall and must have this Trial, whether it hath brought forth Holiness in Heart and Life; and every Man is thereby to be declaratively justified, and differenced from all Men that shall be damned.

I shall insist now on the first of these Inferences, to shew how true justifying Faith works this friendly temper to God, which is the Apostle's Scope here. I shall give you a Reason or two for it.

1. From the Ingenuity of Faith, if it be true and genuine, that is, futable and answerable unto the Object it apprehends; for in a futableness thereunto the Truth the genuineness of Faith consists. For what is indeed the Aim of Faith? when it comes to God and Christ, believing on him, what would it have? What is the thing it looks for from God? And what would it have at his hands? The Mind and Intent, and Scope of my Faith (when I come to believe) is to have God out of an infinite Love (the same out of which he gave his Son to die, and which would yet move him to give him, if he had not done it) out of such a Love to pardon me all my Sins, and to justify me, and to become an Everlasting Father and Friend unto me, and to love me with that Love he loves his Son with, and out of that Love to bestow all things on me. If you ask your Hearts, and your Faith could but tell you, what the meaning of it is (as the Scripture, Rom. 8. speak speaks of the Spirit in Prayer) what is its Errand, what its Business is with God, when it casts it self upon God in Christ for Salvation, you will find the very bottom-reach of it to have been spoken in what hath been said; and that this it would have of God, or it is never quiet. Now then if this Faith be but genuine and true, honest and unfeigned (as Christ in the Parable, and the Apostle speaks of it) and so is answerable to its own Aim: If it have any Truth, Honesty, Justice, Equity, or Reality in it, How is it possible it should come to God for such a great Love from him, such a large Fruit and Effect of such an entire Friendship on God's part; but it must work the Heart to a correspondent, an answerable frame in some Sincerity towards God again on our parts? The Faith that justifies us is called a working Faith (ver. 22.) and surely if it work any thing, it must needs work a suitable Disposition to God, such as it expects from God towards it self. So 'tis evident from the Example of Abraham here; look what his Faith expected to have from God, it wrought in a way of Ingenuity the like in his Heart unto God. Abraham when he believed unto Righteousness, it was founded upon the Promise God had made him of his own Son, his only Son, in whom God told Abraham, he and all Nations should be blessed. Now doth Abraham believe to have God's Son given to him and for him? (For Abraham saw his Day and rejoiced, Abraham being a Prophet, Gen. 20.7. and the Father of the Faithful, to whom the first Promise of Christ, the blessed Seed, was made) He must then be understood to have had the same temper which David had, of whom it is said, Acts 2. 30. That being a Prophet, and knowing that God had sworn that of his Loins according to the Flesh he would raise up Christ; he seeing this, before spake of the Resurrection of Christ. So Abraham, I say, must necessarily be understood, upon the same account, to know and apprehend Christ, and his Offering up, and Resurrection represented in that of his Son's; which is expressly affirmed, Rom. 4. & Heb. 11. 17, 18, 19. By Faith Abraham when he was tried, offered up Isaac; and he that had received the Promises, offered up his only begotten Son; of whom it was said, that in Isaac shall thy Seed be called: Accounting that God was able to raise him up even from the dead, from whence also he received him in a Figure. And Abraham considering these things, said with himself, Why then God shall have my Son, now he calls for him, my only Son, or whatever else is dear to me: Seest thou not then how Faith wrought with his Works, when he offered up his Son Isaac on the Altar? If his Faith would have God be so great a Friend to him (as God in that Promise had declared himself to be) then Faith frames his Heart to be a Friend to God. He believed (this namely, which hath been now discoursed) and it was imputed to him for Righteousness, and he was called the Friend of God; that is, this Effect the Faith that justified him did work in him. And if Faith be but equal, if Faith be but faithful, if it be but honest (as Christ himself speaks, he calling the Heart, by which the Promise is savingly received, an honest Heart, in the Parable of the Sower) if it be but a Principle of Humanity, and deal with God but according to the Principles of Men, as a Man, a sinful Man deals with Man, it must needs work this frame. For this is made by Christ (Mat. 5. 46.) a common Principle of Humanity, to love those again that love us. And Solomon speaks the same, That he that hath Friends must show himself friendly, Prov. 18. 24. Now Faith is an higher Principle than Humanity; it is a Divine Principle of the Operation of God (Col. 2. 12.) and therefore must needs by the same Power of God (which from first to last accompanies it) frame the Heart it is seated in unto this Ingenuity of Friendship unto God. And it is seated in the whole Heart, as the Scripture tells us, Rom. 10. And that Faith works in this manner to return to God what it receives from God, that Place likewise holds forth, 2 Cor. 5. 14, 15. The Love of Christ constrains us, because we thus judge, that if one died for all, and that when all were dead, to the end that they might live; that then they should not live unto themselves, but unto him that died for them, and rose again. This the Law of Common Equity requires, to live to him, that should have given his Life unto us, especially by his own Death; and this (if you observe it) is put upon this Reason, because we thus judge, which Judgment is the Product of this Principle and Act of Faith, which both believes these things, as of and from God towards us, and withal hath in it an equity, an Ingenuity to make the like returns to God; and therefore it must needs constrain us, when we thus in earnest judge.

Book II. And this holds true of the Faith of Dependance, as well as of Faith of Assurance (if it be genuine) for even Faith of Dependance expects this great Friendship at God's hands, desires it, waits for it, and is not quiet without it. Surely because it so judgeth, and waiteth for and desireth this, it must needs frame the Heart to the like again. And this is the first Reason.

2. The second Reason is from what hath been noticed, That to be sure God accepts of no other Faith, but such as in the kind of it is such as will bring forth Holiness, and works by Love; neither doth he justify upon any other, this being the Faith of God's Elect. Where his Election bestows Justification, there and then, and in them he works that kind of Faith. That there is such a distinction of Faith, James holds forth; and God, to whom all his Works are known, from the beginning knoweth where he worketh such genuine Acts of Faith, and where there is such a Root as will bring forth according to its kind, Holiness in Heart and Life, and that works by Love. God foreknows whom he justifies, and knows things in their Causes, and the properties of Causes. Souls of all sorts come with their Faith unto him, and do alike cast themselves upon him and his Grace. And he knows what is in Man, even their Thoughts afar off; and as a skilful Herbalist knows the differing Roots of Herbs and Fruits e'er they have brought forth, so doth God know of what kind that Faith is wherewith Men come unto him, and so never errs in bestowing his Justification upon an unsound Faith, that hath not Love to accompany it. God doth not justify any Man rashly, or inconsiderately, so as if afterwards he sees a Soul to withdraw, and not answer his Faith in Works and Obedience, he should then call back his Grant. No, he makes sure work, and whom he foreknew or chose unto Faith, in them he works true Faith, and in them alone; and them he justifies upon their believing. The Just is said to have his Faith, which is proper to him, in distinction from that Faith, which those that withdraw have, Heb. 10. compared with that of the Prophet Habakkuk: The Just shall live by his Faith, but he that makes hast (tho he seems to believe) his Soul is not upright in him, that is, his Faith is not sound, and of the right breed. We are not of those that withdraw, but that believe to the saving of the Soul; that is, we are of the number of those that so believe, as to be infallibly saved; 'tis spoken by way of distinction of their Faith, for the other believe too, as the Opposition implies: So as tho many come to God, and put forth Acts of Faith, yet their Faith being not spiritual, nor genuine, God justifies not upon it; for he hath not given them a Faith to the saving of the Soul. He knowing what manner of Faith it is, bestows not that Grace of Justification upon it. I may say of it, as of Christ it is said (John 2. 24.) upon his like discerning beforehand, the ineffectualness and unsoundness of their Faith, Mary believed on him, but Jesus committed not himself into their hands, because he knew them all. So God doth in this Case.

3. A third Reason: is, God's end in saving us by Faith, was not to lose by us a whit of that Love and Holiness he expects from us; but rather he chose Faith, because whilst it gave all to free Grace, and his infinite Love, it might withal reflect and carry all that Love down unto the Heart again, and shed it abroad in the Soul, and so cause Love to God to spring up with a redoubled encrease and advance. He did not chuse Love immediately, not because he regarded it not, but because if it had not sprung from Faith, as first apprehending his Love, it would have boasted it self, for it had returned something of it self unto God. But whilst Faith is made the Receiver of all from God, and thereupon the Worker of Love in us; upon that account, God's free Love is at once exalted and magnified, and our Hearts quickned, and enflamed with Love to him again.

C H A P. IV.

An Exhortation unto Friendship with God, from the Considerations how great, excellent, and kind a Friend, he from Eternity hath been, and perpetually, and for ever is to us.

MY Exhortation now shall be unto those that are reconciled, and become (in respect of their States) Friends to God already. You see your high calling Brethren, you have the Honour to be called, as Abraham was, the Friends of God. You are entred into a Covenant of Friendship with God, make something of it: And indeed it is the Scope even of that Place also, 2 Cor. 5. Be YE reconciled to God. For he speaks unto the Corinthians, who already believed, and were converted and reconciled: But be you, even YOU, reconciled more, for even you have need of it; and at the best your Friendship is but imperfect: and as you know but in part, so you love but in part. As Christ says to his Disciples, except ye be converted (Mat. 18. 31.) so say I, except ye be reconciled, that is, except you more and more renew your Covenants with God, ye cannot be saved. And besides, you make many Breaches with God; and tho the Covenant through his Grace and Goodness notwithstanding holds, yet you had need to make those Breaches up again: Amantium ira Amoris redintegratio est, and Reconciliation is but the renewing of Love.

Consider that those who are perfect Enemies and Rebels to God, whilst they are in that Estate, do but their kind: but you know what it is to offend God, and how it grieves him, his Spirit hath at times set it upon your Hearts, how unkindly he takes any Sin from you. You have felt in part what it cost him to reconcile you, and have tasted how good the Lord is, and you have a Principle of Love in you which needs but stirring up. Consider what Solomon says, Prov. 18. 24. A Man that hath Friends must shew himself friendly; and there is a Friend that sticketh closer than a Brother. It is the Law of Friendship you see to answer it with Friendship again, mutuis Officiis vivitur.

And besides, the sweetness that is found in reciprocal Friendship, loyally and sacredly maintained and kept up, it should move you. God will find a sweet Savour in you, and you again will have pleasure in Communion with him. Friendship is the sweetest, and of all Comforts the greatest: therefore Solomon, tho he were a King, and had the Sum of all Delights, yet he would have one in an especial manner be his Friend, 1 Kings 4. 5. And God, tho he need no Comfort nor Happiness to be added to him, yet he would have Friends to delight himself in, and that should delight in him. 'Twas this that moved him, and therefore that the Comfort of his Love and yours be not much of it lost or impaired, demean your selves as Friends. It is Christ's own Argument in his last Sermon to his Disciples, in which he treats them, and admires them by this sacred Name of Friends, John 15. 13, 14, 15. and amongst other Arguments, he useth this in exhorting them to Obedience; So my Joy shall be in you, and your Joy shall be full, ver. 10, 11. There will be mutual and reciprocal Joy and Delights in the Intercourses of it. You will add to Christ's Joy, whose Joy is yet full; and to be sure yours, which is imperfect, will be made full by it. As we use to say, if People do not mean to love, let them never marry; so if Men do not set themselves to walk with God, let them renounce this sweet and obliging relation of being Friends to him: especially this is to be done, if a Man find one, who is a Friend indeed, so says Solomon in that Place, There is a Friend is nearer than a Brother: That will do more for thee than one that cometh out of the same Loins. And therefore Moses (Deut. 13. 6.) seems to prefer the Love of some Friends to that of some Wives. If thy Wife (says he) entice thee, yea if thy Friend who is as thine own Soul. Now to such a Friend, if you meet with him (says Solomon) shew your self friendly. And truly as Faith, so Friendship is rare on Earth: It is hard to find a good piece of Stuff indeed to make a Friend of.

I have two things therefore, which will make up the measure of this my Exhortation full. 1. What a Friend God is, and hath been, and will be unto you. And 2. Wherein you are to express Friendship again unto him. You find them both in that Exhortation of Christ; what a Friend he was, Joh. 15. 13. Greater Love than this hath no Man, to lay down his Life for his Friend. And from thence he presseth this on them, If ye be my Friends, do what I command you.

1. Consider, first, that God hath been your antient Friend, even from everlasting. The older Friends are, the more we ought to prize them. We esteem of an old Servant, but especially of an old Friend. Therefore saith Solomon, Thine own Friend and thy Father's Friend, forsake not, Prov. 27. 10. That is, leave not one who hath been an old Friend to thee, and thy Family before thee. Now God hath been thy Friend and Father from everlasting, therefore forsake him not; he hath loved thee ever since he loved himself. Now if one had loved another ever since himself was, how would this endear him? God hath done this.

2. He is such a Friend as never had his Thoughts off from us. There is not a moment in which he hath not loved us, and had his Thoughts upon us. Other Friends sometimes think and speak of you, but not always; But God withdraweth not his Eys from the Righteous, Job 36. 7. And Cant. 8. 6. We are said to be set as a Seal upon his Hand, so as he continually looks upon us. It is an Allusion to that Type, Exod. 28. wherein Israel is engraven, First, upon two Stones placed on the High Priest (Christ's) Shoulders and Arms, Ver. 11. 12. then on a Breast-plate, or (as 'tis there interpreted) upon his Heart, Ver. 29. Upon his Arms, to shew his Power is engaged; upon his Heart, to shew that his Love is; and placed visibly on both for a Memorial: Isa. 49. 15, 16. Can a Woman forget her sucking Child, that she should not have Compassion on the Son of her Womb? yea they may forget, yet will I not forget thee. Behold, I have graven thee upon the Palms of my Hands, thy Walls are continually before me. Jerusalem (the Type of his Elect) her Walls are continually before him. And in the like Type (Deut. 11. 12.) they are termed a Land (for Selection of People) which the Lord thy God careth for. The Eyes of the Lord thy God are always upon it. Therefore David also saith, How many are thy Thoughts to us-ward? they cannot be numbred. If a King casteth but a glance upon a Man, and thinks of his Suit and Business, he counts it a great favour. What is it then for the great God never to have had his Eye off thee to do thee good? And think with your selves, what, and how old are your Thoughts towards him? they are but of Yesterday. Your Friendship began but the other day, but his hath been from everlasting.

3. As it is from everlasting, so to everlasting. The one is called choosing us from the Beginning, Ephes. 2. 13. The other is called loving us to the end, Whom he loved he loved to the end, Joh. 13. 1. For a Couple to have been twenty Years married, and to hold out in loving, how great a wonder is it amongst the Sons of Men, especially when many Unkindnesses have past?

4. The first moment he took up as much Love, as he hath ever since had, or can manifest to Eternity. This is high, Brethren, if ye consider it. God loves not as Man, as he is not as Man that repents of his loving: Not as Man that begins to love a little, that hath a Velleity at first, an Affection stirring, and having his Heart inclined, is drawn on to do what at first he meant not to do. No, but all the Grace and Favour, which in time is bestowed on us, was given us in one Lump from Eternity, and all to Eternity is but the Manifestation of it: 2 Tim. 1. 9, 10. The Grace which was given us before the World began, but now is made manifest in Christ, who hath brought Immortality to Light. And so that Immortality serves but to manifest, or bring to Light the Grace which was given at the first; or (as it is 1 Cor. 2. 9.) which was then prepared for them that love him. So as all that is done since, is but a Show Love hath prepared to entertain you with, and is set out with new Inventions, and studied ways to take your Hearts. And therefore the very giving Christ is termed but the Commending, that is, the setting out his Love, Rom. 5. 8. And John in plainer Terms says, In this was the Love of God manifested, 1 Joh. 4. 7, 8. The Love in Solido, in Bullion, was all (the whole Mass of it) in his Heart before. And all he doth to Eternity is but the coining of it, stamping this or that particular Mercy, and so paying it forth unto us; Psal. 138. 8.

The Mercy of the Lord is for ever. The Lord will perfect that which concerns me. The Connexion of those Words is this, That God having beforehand set down with himself, what he would do for him, his Mercy which was for ever, was but a perfecting, a limning out that Happiness Love did conceive the Idea of, and that perfect, from everlasting. And because an Eternity of Time was required to this vast Work, therefore 'tis he adds, Thy Mercy, O Lord, endureth for ever; for so much time to perfect what concerns me (a poor Atom placed in the Eye, or because of thy Love) will take thee up. And will not this affect your Hearts; that have any Love in you to him, or Hopes or Pursuits after such a Love?

5. Consider what his Love hath caused him to do for thee. He first gave thee a Paradise, but that was not good enough. He prepares Heaven, not as that which thou wert worthy of from thine Original, but which he thought meet to bestow, to shew how great a God he is: Heb. 11. 16. He was not ashamed to be called their God, for he prepared for them a City. Yea he was not contented with the ordinary direct means of loving; but, as those that are vast and lavish in Entertainments, he must have uncouth, artificial ways to love such as are extraordinary. To love us only the plain direct and downright way, and to give us Heaven the first day, as he did the Angels that never sinned; this was too low, too mean. His Love must have Meanders, Windings, Difficulties, yea much Water to encounter it, and so endanger the quenching of it: all this to commend the Greatness and Transcendency of it: Love is as strong as Death. And much Water cannot quench it, Cant. 8. 6. And Rom. 5. 8. In this God commends his Love, that whilst we were yet Sinners, Christ died for us: So says St. Paul. And Christ that was to perform it, knew what he did lay down, Greater Love than this hath no Man, that he lays his Life down for his Friends, Joh. 15. 13. And yet, O dear Redeemer, at how low a Price dost thou set thy Love, whilst thou entrest into comparative Suppositions of one Man (a mortal sinful Man) dying for another? Greater Love than this hath no Man: And in that Supposition art fain to put in this too, as the highest Elevation of Man's Love in supposition, to lay down his Life for his Friends, to be sure not for his Enemies. But yet because there could be no higher Supposition made, he is therefore fain to represent his Love to us hereby. Paul makes the supposition thus, Rom. 5. 7. For a Righteous Man will one die? yet peradventure for a good Man (that is, one eminently and publickly useful to such a Proportion, as his Life (as 'tis said of David's) is worth ten thousand of other Men) a Man would even dare to die. Well, let all these Qualifications meet, and when they do, 'tis yet but a scarcely, but a peradventure, that any would be found to die for such a one. 'Tis but a supposition of one that is otherwise weary of Life; and yet if he comes to the point, he will shrink at it: therefore 'tis added, To dare to die, it is so great an Evil. But to do it not for Friends, but Enemies; and to this end, to make them Friends when he could have created new ones cheaper, and enough of them; yet to die for Ungodly Sinners, Enemies (as Paul exaggerates our Case and Condition there) and for him to die that had such a Life to lay down, is an admirable Instance of extraordinary Love. For a mere Man, a sinful Man to die (the Case which both Christ and Paul do put) is but to give up a Game that must be lost a little after, to restore a Forfeiture, a Debt that must be paid; but my Life (saith Christ with an Emphasis) none can take from me (Joh. 10. 18.) I lay it down of my self. Let me say it (which he hints there) his Father could not take it, but that himself consented to it: For his Father had given him to have Life in himself, Joh. 5. 26. And will ye know the Value of that Life he laid down? It is the Dignity of the Person gives the Worth to the Life. You have it, and you cannot have more said; 1 Joh. 3. 16. Hereby we perceive the Love of God, that he laid down his Life. Well, thus dear it cost Christ who was God: And was this nothing to God the Father too, think ye? Was it nothing for God to see one that was God, of the same Nature, and his Fellow, so debased? As it moves Man to see any of their Nature despised, so it moved God to see God the Son, God equal with him, to lay down his Life: It touch'd the Godhead in common, as in the three Persons. But for a Father to give and offer up his Son, is a Love above our Thoughts to conceive, or our Words to express. Your Father Abraham, tho he had too big an Heart to weep for it (you see no Tears in his Eyes, nor mention of them them when he was about to do it) yet he knew full well what it was to offer up a Son, an only Son. To be sure God knew it, and measured it by his own Heart to his own Son, out of the sense of which God uttered those Words to Abraham, Now I know thou fearest me, seeing thou hast not withheld thy Son, thine only Son from me, Gen. 22. 12. And was not God's Son's Life proportionably dear to him, inasmuch as he is his Father by a more substantial and transcendent Generation? My God, my God (says Christ Mat. 27. 46.) why hast thou forsaken me? Thou who art in so special a respect my God and my Father: (See Eph. 1. 3.) And he speaks thus, knowing it would strike and affect his Soul. And yet he speaks but the half of what God did in it; and yet in that consider how he parted with, yea forsook an old Friend, a Bosom Friend; and how Christ also forsook Father and Mother for his Wife, the Church, Eph. 5. 25. And do you think God to be so insensible, or impassible, or without natural Affection to such a Son, as that all those Speeches should be but Rhetorical Figures, and feignings of a sorrowful part? When, as you have it inculcated 1 Job. 4. 9, 10. In this was manifested the Love of God towards us; because that God sent his only begotten Son into the World that we might live through him. Herein is Love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the Propitiation for our Sins. And you have the same also in Rom. 8. 32. He that spared not his own, but delivered him up for us all. Yea, further think with your selves, that his Father was himself obliged to be the inflicter of his own Justice, to bruise and break him; when he made his Soul an Offering for Sin, Isa. 53. 10. For no Creature could strike Strokes hard enough to satisfy for Sin. He laid the Wood of the Sacrifice, viz our Sins about his Soul; for he laid upon him the Iniquities of us all: and he blew the Fire too. All Earthly Bellows would themselves have been burnt, at least not been able to have made the Furnace hot enough; yea his Wrath against Sin was the Fire. Think but with your selves if his Mother Mary must have been the Crucifier of him, and must have knock'd in every Nail with her feeble trembling Hands (whilst at every Stroak a Sword is said to have pierced through her Soul) what Excess of Sorrow would have oppress'd her! But now, even what Man did against him is said to be by God the Father's own Hand and Counsel. And yet to what end was all this Grief and Loss? I might say it, and could defend it, It might have been spared. God in his Prerogative could have saved Sinners without it. That Outcry of Christ cries thus loud in mine Ears, Let this Cup pass: all things are possible to thee. In which Prayer we must suppose it entred not into Christ's Heart to desire the Elect might not be saved, when he uttered it; and yet supposeth it consistent with that Cup's passing from him. But Love was set upon it to have our Salvation thus, and no otherwise transacted. If Justice might have permitted it, and have let that dismal Cup pass, and slip; yet Love was engaged and resolved to manifest it self this way rather; and the more possible another way might have been, the more should Love be commended in taking this, That when we were Sinners, Christ died for us. It was an Extravagancy, a superabundancy of Love, Loves Device, an Invention of Love, that knew not how to shew Love enough. And, my Brethren, these are not Notions or Ideas; these are the greatest Realities and Existencies, which are only to be understood with our Hearts, and not by our Understandings; for the Love of God and Christ passeth Understanding, (Eph. 3. 19.) and so is not taken in, but by the immediate Impress of the Holy Ghost, who is the Shedder of this Love of God abroad into our Hearts (not so much into our Understandings) as the Apostle speaks.

Book II.

6. I come next to God's Dealings and Dispensations towards us; and herein all the Ways of God are Ways of Love and Friendship: He is never but doing us good; Psal. 25. All his Ways are Mercy and Truth. He is never out of the Road of fulfilling one Promise, or Truth, or of bestowing one Mercy or other. In his very afflicting he fulfils a Promise, In very Faithfulness hast thou chastis'd me, Psal. 119. And Faithfulness is the Performance of some Trust, or Promise, out of Love.

7. All he doth, he doth freely for us, and thinks not much at it. A Man must hold Pace with other Friends, and do one kindness for another: But says God (Hos. 14. 4.) I will love thee freely, and heal thy Backslidings: And he will (says (says Zephaniah, Zeph. 3. 17.) rest in his Love. He is glad and rejoiceth to do his People a Kindness: Jer. 32. 41. I will rejoice over them to do them good, with my whole Heart and my whole Soul. In James 1. 5. it is said, he giveth freely, and upbraids not; the word is ἀπλῶς, that is, simply or singly, that is, for no other end than to give, for who can recompense him? So true Liberality, even in us, is termed ἀπλότις, 2 Cor. 8. 2. He doth it merely to do good, rejoicing in so doing: And therefore when he hath done, upbraids not; and doth not use to say, I have given thee thus and thus. Often in case of great Provocations indeed, thou mayst hear of him (as David did) but it was but to melt his Heart (2 Sam. 12. 8.) but otherwise he is silent: whereas other Friends will be ever and anon twitting you with Kindnesses.

8. His inward Valuation and real Esteem of you is answerable to, and more than his outward Kindnesses; and really to do so is the greatest attractive of Friendship. He prizeth you above all the World: Isa. 43. 3, 4. I gave Ægypt for thy Ransom, Æthiopia and Seba for thee. Since thou wast precious in my sight, thou hast been honourable, and I have loved thee; therefore will I give Men for thee, and People for thy Life. And he gave real Testimony of this in giving his Son, which was more than a thousand Worlds; Mat. 10. 30. & Luke 12. 7. Even your very Hairs are all numbred, the Hair which is the meanest unvaluablest appurtenance of Man, and which in a Proverb the Latins express as a thing of no value, ne pili estimo, as we say, I value it not a Straw. Things of worth use only to be numbred, and things that are not are said to be nullius numeri. David made it a great occasion of God's Love to him, That all his Members were written in God's Book, Psal. 139. 16. But Christ descends to our very Hairs; and not your Hair in the Comb, the Bush of them, but every one the smallest, all are numbred, how much more our Persons.

9. Other Friends will be ashamed of you when you fall into Disgrace and Poverty, tho they knew you never so well before. Prov. 19. 7. All the Brethren of the poor do hate him; how much more his Friends that go afar off from him? But the Great God is so far from being ashamed of us, that he takes his Denomination from us, and takes us into his Stile; witness that Expression, the God of Abraham, &c. to which that of Heb. 11. 16. refers.

10. In all thy Afflictions he will stand thy Friend; when thou art in greatest Trials and Distresses, then he will shew himself most to be a Friend, which indeed is the time for the Trial of a Friend: Prov. 17. 17. A Friend loves at all times, but a Brother is born for Adversity. That is, the special Season that a Man hath use of a Friend for: In time of Adversity (saith Job, Chap. 6. 14.) a Man would have pity from his Friend. But usually it falls out (as Solomon says, Prov. 19. 7.) A Man follows them with Words, and they are wanting to him: But then will the Lord own thee most especially, if thou followest him with Words, with Prayers, and seekest earnestly unto him. Therefore David (Psal. 31. 7.) says, Thou hast known my Soul in Adversity: And David speaks it out of the sense of his Love, that he did it then most, when others would not know him nor regard him. And whereas other Friends may be absent, and not able to help thee or advise thee, he is a present help in Trouble, Psal. 46. 1. Yea there are Cases, wherein all thy Friends in the World, if present, could stand thee in no stead, but would be miserable Comforters, as in case of Scandal, &c. and then will God break in and own thee: Yea further 'tis said, Psal. 41. 3. That he makes our Bed in our Sickness. It is put to express the highest tenderness in Distress, a condescending to do the meanest Office, a readiness to supply all Wants and Deficiencies: and in that, he says, he will make all thy Bed; it imports utmost and universal Diligence and Care, in that which is committed to Servants of the lowest Rank. He will as a Friend sit by thy Bed-side, lay thy Pillow for thee, make thy Bed easy, that is, make a distressed Condition comfortable, fetch thee any thing, take care of every thing, apply himself so to thee, that thou shalt then say, thou art in ease in the midst of Trouble.

11. God will not cast thee off when thou art old, and wantest Strength to serve him; but (as it is in Jer. 3. 2.) he then remembers the Kindness and Pains taken in thy Youth. David prays (Psal. 71. 9.) Cast me not off in time of old Age, forsake sake me not when my Strength faileth. You know God's Answer, long before he prayed it, and since, is repeated with five Negatives to assure us of it, I will never, at no hand, upon no occasion, leave thee, or forsake thee.

12. Other Friends, for an ill turn will forget all former good Turns and Kindnesses done, tho never so many; but God on the contrary will forget all thy Sins, and remember them no more (Isa. 43. 25.) but not one good Deed or Office of Love, no not one good Thought from the first to the last shall be forgotten, but it sticks in him, and takes deep Impression. Those things thou hast forgotten, at the latter Day he will remember them, and that to requite them. Every Cup of cold Water shall have a Reward: God is not forgetful of your Labour of Love to his Name, Heb. 6.

13. Yea when thou art dead, he will remember thee and thine. Other Friends bury their Friendship in the Graves of the deceased, but God not only will take care of thy very Bones (Psal. 34. 20.) but remember thee in thy Seed, as David did Jonathan's Posterity. Thus he remembered Abraham's Seed for their Father's sake: The Seed of Abraham my Friend, says he, Isa. 41. 8. and so he remembered David's Seed, 1 Kings 11. 34. & Rom. 11. They are beloved (and 'tis Gospel) for their Father's sake.

Lastly, Whatsoever he hath, thou shalt have part of it; nay all he hath thou shalt inherit, Rev. 21. 7. God himself can have but all things, and thou shalt have all that he hath: John 17. 24. & John 12. 24. Christ speaks with an Heart, as if his own single personal Glory would do him no good, unless we should be with him, and have part of it. All his Attributes shall be for thy Happiness, as well as for his own Glory: his Power, Wisdom and Mercy shall be set on work for thy good; and tho all these Attributes serve for his own Glory, yet they shall as truly and really serve for thy Comfort as for his Glory. All within him and without him shall be set on work for thy good. What canst thou have more of a Friend?

Now if God hath been, is, and will be such a Friend to us, what manner of Persons should we be in returns again unto him? My Brethren, this is your Calling; you are called to be Friends of God, see you walk worthily and answerably unto it, so as to fill up the measure of that Relation, and observe as far as possibly the Laws of Friendship, that ever were or can be feigned to have been between two Friends, for God full well deserves it at thy hands. And it should move you that you were a long time before Enemies, and had nothing but Wars in your Thoughts against him, and therefore you had need now endeavour to make him amends.

C H A P. V.

What the Conversation of a Believer ought to be in performing the part of a Friend towards God. That we should keep up an entire and near Communion with him. What this Communion is, explained in several Particulars.

I Come to that main and principally intended Subject, which is, the Conversation of a Christian towards God, in performing the part of a Friend: I shall insist on some Particulars, wherein these returns of Friendship do consist.

1. The first and primary Head (which will contain divers Particulars in it) is pursuing after, and preserving entire Communion with God. Mutual Communion is the Soul of all true Friendship, and familiar Converse with a Friend hath the greatest sweetness in it. Sometimes Solomon compares it to Honey, which as it is pleasant to the Taste, so enlightneth the Eyes, Prov. 25. 16, 17. compared, reading, as Cartwright doth, for Neighbour, Friend, ver. 17. Sometimes it is compared to Perfumes and Odours, which refresh the Brain and animal Spirits, Prov. 27. 9. Quintment and Perfume rejoice the Heart, so doth the sweetness of a Man's Friend.

Friend. And he calleth it Sweetness in the abstract rather than Sweet; for it is certain, where it is found close and entire, it is the most Spiritual Cordial of Man's Life. And indeed Communion is that which distinguisheth this of Friendship from the Intercourses that are in other relations, unless it falls out that Friendship be intermingled with them, as in Conjugal it often doth. Parents take care for and love their Children when young, and they again do honour their Parents and obey them, when yet during their Non-age there is not much Communion nor Acquaintance between them. Between Masters and Servants there is an Intercourse by way of Command and Obedience. Masters maintain their Servants, and Servants render Fear and Service to their Masters, but yet there is not a mutual Communion and Acquaintance between them: And by this doth Christ distinguish Friends and Servants, when he sets himself to heighten the Privilege of this relation, and to endear it to them: John 15. 15. Henceforth I call you not Servants, but Friends. For I have unbosomed my self unto you; whatever I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you: But the Servant knoweth not what his Lord doth, that is, there is no Communion between them.

Now altho God beareth all these relations of Father, Lord, Master, &c. which his distance between him and us exacts, yet he also hath condescended to admit us to Communion with himself. John seems to speak of it as with an holy boasting of the eminent Privilege which himself and others, that lived up to their Principles, enjoyed. 1 John 1. 3. And truly our Fellowship is with the Father, and the Son. The Rise of it lies thus, Christ was God's Fellow (Zach. 13. 7.) which Privilege he hath, by being a Son equal with God. And God found this Fellowship so sweet, as he calls us up to the participation of it. 1 Cor. 1. 9. God is faithful, by whom ye are called unto the Fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord. He speaks of it likewise, as that which is the height and top of our Calling as we are Christians: And this Fellowship with the Lord Jesus, doth not only consist in his and our sharing jointly in the same Privileges, as in his Graces, Glory, &c. but it is the Fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ; and so also of his Person in all the Sweetnesses of, and Converses with, and Relations to him. And yet, lest in too much Familiarity we should forget our distance, he adds, our Lord; as in the Psalm forecited upon the like occasion, having called us his Fellows (ver. 7.) he adds (ver. 11.) He is the Lord, and worship thou him. Now this Communion, as on our part it is to be transacted, is summed up in these things.

1. Besides the common Tribute of daily Worship you owe to him, take occasion to come into his Presence on purpose to have Communion with him. This is truly friendly, for Friendship is most maintained and kept up by Visits; and these, the more free and the less occasioned by urgent Business, or Solemnity, or Custom they are, the more friendly they are. It is made a diminution, tho in his own People; Lord, in Trouble have they visited thee, they poured out a Prayer, when thy Chastening was upon them, Isa. 26. 16. A Stranger will visit one whom he hath a Suit unto, and Business with; and we used to check our Friends with this upbraiding, You still come when you have some Business, but when will you come to see me? David who hath this Testimony from God, To be a Man after God's own Heart, which is equivalent to this of God's, concerning Abraham's being his Friend, hath this Disposition of Spirit recorded of him, Psal. 63. 1, 2, 3. O God, thou art my God! He embraceth him at first word, as we used to do Friends at first meeting. Early will I seek thee (says he) my Soul thirsteth for thee, my Flesh (that is, my self) longeth for thee in a dry and thirsty Land, where no Water is. Surely David had some extraordinary Business now with God to be done for himself, which made him thus eager after him; no truly, nothing but to see God himself, as it follows, ver. 2. To see thy Power and thy Glory, so as I have seen thee in thy Sanctuary; where God had met him, and manifested himself to him: To see thee, hath the same Emphasis here, that those Words, against thee have I sinned, have elsewhere. And further, what was it in God, that specially drew forth his Heart, and was the Object of his Inquest? ver. 3. Because thy loving Kindness is better than Life. And ver. 4. thus (if I have no other Reason) will I bless thee whilst I live. It is all along the pure Language of Friendship, the very sight of a Friend rejoiceth a Man: Prov. 27. 17. As Iron sharpneth Iron, so doth a Man the Face of his Friend. It alone whets whets up Joy by a Sympathy of Spirits: and in answer hereunto it is characteristically to God's People, called the seeking of God's Face; that is, himself, for so his Face is taken: Thou shalt have no other Gods before my Face; that is, thou shalt have my self, or none but my self. Personal Communion with God is the end of our Graces; for as Reason and the Intercourse of it makes Men sociable one with another, so the Divine Nature makes us sociable with God himself; and the Faith we live by is but an Engine, a Glass to bring God down to us: And as for Duties, the Journies end of them is Fellowship with God; and our backwardness to them, if you resolve it into its Original, is a backwardness to entire Communion with God; the Soul therefore saith it hath no pleasure in them. But this Communion was the Apostles Eden, and proper Walk; John calls us all up unto it, as that which we are alike born to, 1 Joh. 1. 3. It was Moses his Perfection, as he was Christ's Type, Exod. 33. 11. And the Lord spake to Moses Face to Face, as a Man useth to do to his Friend. You see the Scripture lodgeth this in the Notion of Friendship, therefore attempt, if thou hast not yet tried, this way of seeking God. I have known those who have come to God, as for nothing else, so when they have been come, could mention nothing else; but scorned to blur or soil the noble and royal Intention of their Visit of him with any lower Request, than that of obtaining Communion with him. And take my Counsel, when the Spirit at some by-time moves thee, and it is merely a Motion of his; go and stand in the Presence Chamber, that is, put thy self on Duty with this Aim and Design mentioned, and see if he hold not out his Golden Scepter to thee. This shall prevail with him more than the Sacrifice of Rams.

2. A Second way of Intercourse and expressing Friendship to God is this: When thou comest into his Presence, be telling him still how well thou lovest him; labour to abound in Expressions of that kind, than which (when founded in a reality in the Spirit) there is nothing more taking with the Heart of any Friend. That famous Pair of Friends, David and Jonathan, when they met they spent the most of their time (they had got by stealth, and with hazard of their Lives) in vying and revying, and therein seeking which of them should utter and declare most Love, and manifest most Faithfulness. They weep over one another's Necks, as overcome with the overflowings of each others kindness. The Story affords the pleasantest contention of Love and Friendship, and strivings for Masteries; and accordingly, as to the passionate part, the Victory is decided on David's side, 1 Sam. 20. 41. They both wept one with another, until David exceeded, says the Text. And yet again, for the real part and Demonstration of Friendship Jonathan had the advantage to outvy David; Jonathan had a Kingdom to lose for his sake, being Heir apparent by Birth; yet he ventures his own Life to save his, who he believed should be King in his room: And let me but live, saith he, and not die, v. 14. And let me be the next in the Kingdom, Chap. 23. 17. But David had another and greater Friend, even God: And how his Affections overflowed the Banks towards him, the Psalms do shew. How often have we him breaking forth, I love thee, Lord! And O how do I love thy Law! And how eloquent is he in that his solemn, and his almost last Thanksgiving, 1 Chron. 29. Now the Truth is, the real part is God's; the fond affectionate part of Friendship it should be ours. He had a Son to give away; and his Son a Life, a Kingdom; and both of them agreed to do it. We have little to lose, and can do less for them: O yet let us love them, and love to tell them so. Hast thou ever yet lain in those everlasting Arms? Or, when thou at any time dost, and his Banner of Love is spread over thee, what hath thy Heart meditated concerning God at such a time? As a liberal Heart is said to devise liberal things, so a loving Heart will devise loving things. I us'd to say, whatever Ingenuity, Wit, Rhetorick any one hath (and I speak of those that excel therein) there are times wherein God hath the Flower, the Eminency of them vented in Strains of Love to him in Prayer. He hath at one time or other every Mans Strength and Prime. What Affections or Expressions thou hast to bestow on Friend, or Wife, God will have them from thee to himself; and if thy Spirit be narrow, and shut up to such a way, yet thou wilt and mayst be able to vent that Love thou bearest him, in blunt and downright Expressions: Lord (said Peter) thou knowest I love thee, if I ever loved any thing. Yea

I have known some bad and churlish Natures to their other Relations, in whose Spirits, upon observation of them, you should scarce find any Strains of pure Ingenuity pass from them to any other; yet in their Narrations of what hath been between God and them, they have been brought to the lowest Submission; the highest Resignations of themselves for him and his Glory, and as great Strains of Ingenuity as any other. As Physicians say of a Child in the Womb, if there be any good Blood or Spirits in the Mother's Body, the Child will have it; the nutritive and formative Virtue doth and will attract it: So if there be any good Nature in thee, God will have it at one time or other. Yea how often falls it out, that even Souls that want Assurance of God's Love to themselves, yet can please themselves in blessing God, or at least admiring him for that Goodness and Blessedness which is in him, and which he enjoys, for loving himself, and aiming at his own Glory; for his so dearly loving his Son (whom also their Souls love) and for his being good to others? And they find it real in their Souls to do so: Yea, and sometimes when they come to pray, and are shut up for want of vent in other Desires, they yet can fall a telling God how well they love him, and what (if he would be pleased to enable them) they would do for him: And they can do these things when they can do nothing else. Yea, and because in real Performances they find they can do little, and are not satisfied with the Opportunities they have in view at present; the Heart will be venting it self in Suppositions and Feignings with it self, what in Case of God's condemning them at the latter day; so that should they lose their labour, they would say in way of Ingenuity, what Farewell they would then take of him, how they would demean themselves in Hell, when their Souls should be filled with the Noise of others Blasphemies, how they would speak well of him, and rebuke their Fellow-Thieves, as that good Thief did. And because in Suppositions higher Strains of Love may be vented, than God will ever put us really to act; therefore the Heart often seeks vent for its vast Desires this way. Thus Christ, to shew his Love to his Father, in submitting to his Will and Love, made a Supposition of the Cup's passing from him, which yet he knew could not by God's Decree. And thus Paul wished himself accursed from Christ for his Brethrens sake. Or else the Heart will go about to do it, by separating Acts of Obedience from self-respects; and this in a way of Supposition of such things as will not fall out: But yet suppose they should; Yet Lord (say they) I will trust thee. As Job, Tho he kill me, yet will I trust in him. It was a Supposition of the worst. Or else the Heart will be chalking out within it self, what it would do for God, if it were in such a Power, in such a place of opportunity of Service: As Herbert in his Poems speaks. At these, and a thousand other ways, Love will be creeping out when it cannot go, nor (alas) is ever able to perform. And these stirrings and ventings of Love God is infinitely taken with, and knows the Mind of the Spirit in them. These Strains are pleasant, this is Melody and Music in his Ears. Know this, that Communion with God lies not only μετὰ ἀλλήλων, as John speaks of it, 1 Job. 1. 7. (as I understand the place) when 'tis mutual; he telling us his Love, and so drawing forth ours, when there is an Æstus, a Reciprocation of Love from him to us, and so from us again to him: But also when he doth not shed abroad his in our Hearts, to an overcoming Assurance, and yet strongly draws forth ours to him (as hath been expressed) and that is true Communion with him as on our parts, and affects the Soul accordingly. For tho it be true that we love him because he loves us, as to the reality of the thing; yet it is not always so in our Apprehension, nor necessary to the drawing forth of our Love to him.

3. Delight much in him. Friendship well plac'd affords the highest Delight: Besides what I noted out of Solomon, of the sweetness of a Friend; David the Father also had experimented it (2 Sam. 1. 26.) in his beloved Jonathan, Thou hast been very pleasant to me, says he there. And again of Jonathan 'tis said, He delighted much in David, 1 Sam. 19. 2. If therefore God and thou be Friends, retire thy self into him, and make up thy Delights in him. And thus both Christ and his Church do mutually express themselves touching each other; O how fair and pleasant art thou, O Love, for Delights! Cant. 7. 6. says he of her. Behold, thou art fair, my Beloved, yea pleasant, says she of him, Cant. 1. 16. Psal. 37. 4. Delight thy self also in the Lord. Yea and the Psalmist prescribes it as the readiest, speediest way to get Dispatch of all our particular Suits and Requests. So it follows, And he shall give thee the Desires of thy Heart. As it is said of God, that to the Pure he will shew himself pure. (Psal. 18.) So to the Ingenuous he will shew himself ingenuous. A Soul that hath many Wants and Requests to put up to him, and yet comes to him and really says, Lord, tho I want these and these things in my outward Condition, yet I am well-pleas'd, for I have enough in thee alone; tho I had nothing, and tho thou hast made me these and these Promises, besides the making over of thy self unto me; yet thou art my Portion, mine Inheritance, and my Lot is fallen in a pleasant place in thee, Psal. 16. Thou art my exceeding great Reward. Whilst God sees that thou thus fettest thy self to delight in him, he at once grants thee all else thou wouldst desire. This is the most compendious Art of Begging. Be acquainted with him (saith Eliphaz to Job, Job 22. 21.) and thou shalt have thy Delight in the Almighty, v. 26. And thou shalt have Gold, v. 24. And thou shalt have Silver, v. 25. Thou shalt have any thing of him, take but that Method. Art thou in any great Distress? Go alone, think of his Love, think of himself, what a God thou hast whom thou servest and lovest. His Love, and himself apprehended, embraced and meditated on, affords the greatest Delight. Psal. 104. 34. My Meditation of him shall be sweet, I will be glad in the Lord. Little we say is sweet, and Death is bitter (as Agag's Speech implies, the bitterness of Death is past:) But thy loving-kindness, O God, is better than Life, and hath the Sweetness of all good in it, if the Holy Ghost gives thee but a Taste of it. Christ's Love was such as sweetned Death it self to him, which we account so bitter: It was stronger than Death (saith Solomon) Cant. 8. 6. How sweet then must that Love in it self be, and to the Soul that tasteth it? Therefore rejoice in the Lord, and again, I say, rejoice; Let God be your chiefest Good in the most prosperous days, and he will be your only Good in your worst days. A Friend is for Adversity; and therefore tho the Fig-tree blossom not, &c. and all things fail me, yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my Salvation, Habakkuk, Chap. 3. 17, 18. What is the Reason Men pray not often, nor much, and in the end perhaps do give it over? You have the Reason, Job 27. 10. They delight not in the Almighty. But yet content not thy self with the Performance of Duties, Isa. 58. 2. They take Delight in approaching to God; that is, in the outward Performance of it; but let thy Delight be in God himself. We rejoice in God, saith the Apostle, Rom. 5. 11. And let not Delights derived from God only content thee; but let thy Delight be in God, and the Excellencies that are in him.

4. A fourth Particular wherein the Communion of Friendship lies, is unfolding Secrets. There is a kind of civil Shrift between Friends, saith Verulam; the Style of Friend is a Man of my Secret, Job 29. 19. That which is translated my inward Friends, is in the Hebrew, and varied in the Margent, The Men of my Secret. A Friend is as a Man's own Soul, Deut. 13. 6. As in respect of Love, so in respect of laying up all that is in a Friend's Soul, all that is ones own: And this Use and Advantage, or Improvement, a Man is to make of his Friendship with God, to unburden his Mind, and spread his Heart before him. In Scripture, Prayer is termed, A pouring out ones Soul to God. So 'tis spoken of Hannah's Prayers, 1 Sam. 1. 15. which is interpreted by that in Lamentations 2. 19. A pouring out the Soul like Water, before the Face of the Lord. She had as it were wept it out at her Eyes, and poured it forth in Tears. The same is eminent also in David, Psal. 142. 2. I poured out my Complaint before him, that is, (as it follows) I shewed before him my Trouble. And this is done in case of Distress, when the Heart is overwhelmed, as in v. 3. And in the very same Words the Title of the 102d Psalm expresseth it, A Prayer of the Afflicted, when he is overwhelmed, and poureth out his Complaint before the Lord. If thou hast some great Affliction of Secret, which is not fit to trust Man, no not thy nearest Friend with, and yet thy Heart is ready to break with it; the Heart in that Case is apt to tell it to Man, that it may have some present Ease: But take my Counsel, try God alone first, and hereby shew how only a Friend thou makest of him, by telling it alone to him, easing thy Heart to him alone. He thinks himself honoured by it, and takes it well at thy hands; and if he encourageth thee, or necessitates thee to tell it to another another (as in some Cases, James 5. 16.) then do so. As for Distresses thou art in, so for thy Sin; the more Communion there is betwixt God and us, the more secret Sins will God discover to us, and the more will we again disclose to God. This is made an absolute Consequence of holding Fellowship with God: for the Apostle having spoken of Fellowship with God, 1 John 1. 3, 6, 7. he adds ver. 9. If we confess our Sins, he is faithful and just to forgive. He speaks it, as without which none can preserve Communion with God entire; for whilst we labour to walk in nearer, so closer Communion with God, yet if we say we have no Sin, we deceive our selves, ver. 8. Now then, here lies the coherence of the 9th ver. with the former, Confess your Sin, if you say you have Fellowship with him; for the Law and Nature of true and entire Communion and Fellowship, between two as Friends, requires, that if the one sins against the other, he should disclose and confess it; this Friendship cannot hold else, and 'tis well we can have Pardon so. Now says John, we do all sin; therefore in order to hold Communion with God, confess thy Sins: And a further Reason is, that one great part of God's Friendship towards us is seen in pardoning Sins: John hints it, He is faithful to forgive; as a Friend is faithful to perform his Promise: And if he should not, none could retain Friendship a moment with him; but if he pardons, he will have the Score acknowledged, even as tho he promiseth, he yet will be fought to, as the Prophet speaks. And the more the Soul finds that God pardons, the more willing and free it is to confess (Ezek. 16. 61, 63.) knowing it is to a Friend that will not take advantage of the Acknowledgment. Likewise lay open all thy Jealousies thou hast of his Love; another Friend would never bear it, but alas! God knows them all already, and is used to them, and will ease thee of them. Tell him all thy Doubts, Scruples and Objections thou hast about thy Estate, and of his Love; spread even all, lay open thy Case plainly without Guile (as David speaks, Psal. 32.) and he will answer them all, and discover to thee that Sincerity of Heart that is in thee towards him, and how well he loves thee notwithstanding; and this other Friends will not do.

C H A P. VI.

What our Behaviour toward God, as his Friends, ought to be, with respect unto his Providential Dispensations to us. We should ask his Advice and Counsel on all Occasions. We should make use of and depend upon his Favour and Assistance in all Affairs. We should have an entire Confidence in him without any Jealousy or Distrust.

I shall now begin a new and second set of Duties, which our relation of Friendship with him brings upon us; such as do respect his Providential outward Dispensations towards us, as the former related to Communion with his Person. As much of God's Friendship unto us is given forth in his ordering all things that fall out unto us for good; so much on our part lies in observing those his dealings, and applying ourselves to him therein. And for that I give these following Directions.

1. First ask his Advice and Counsel upon all Occasions, and in all (especially great) Turnings of thy Life. This is an Improvement of a Friend, whom we count wise and faithful. Thus David sets out a Man who had been his Friend; Thou, O Man, my Guide, (says he, Psal. 55. 13.) and we took sweet Counsel together, says he, ver. 14. Yea, when one that we have chosen for our Friend, and is a Friend indeed, is yet below us in Parts and Wisdom; yet we love to see how our Thoughts look in the Glass of his Mind and Apprehensions: You may see it in God himself; who is the most perfect Pattern of Friendship, as of all Relations else. He, you well know, needs no Advice; for who is his Counsellor? Rom. 11. 34. Yet when he was to do a great Act, whereof the whole World would ring, and

Book II. and when he knew it would certainly come to Abraham's Ears, tho it did not concern Abraham's Particular at all; yet says God with himself, I have singled forth this poor Man to be my Friend, and shall I do so great an Act, that will make such a Report, and not tell Abraham of it? Gen. 18. 17. Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do? That Ingenuity that works in the Heart of a Friend, wrought in the Heart of God, infomuch as he could not do a great thing, but he must tell his Friend of it. He speaks as one shackled and restrained by the Laws of Friendship; and upon that Law he had an inward regret, when he came to the Execution of it. The Ground and Account thereof the Text gives you, Abraham was the Friend of God: And Abraham followed God in the same Path, and upon the same Principle, tho hand passibus aequis, not with equal Pace, he stired not a Foot without God's Direction, Isa. 41. 2. where'tis said, God called him (that is, Abraham) to his Foot. Which the Apostle in Heb. 11. 8. interprets thus, he went out, not knowing whither he went, but gave up himself and every Step unto God's Direction and Appointment. And we have the like Instance of Friendship to God in David; Psal. 73. 23, 24. Nevertheless I am continually with thee, thou hast holden me by thy Right Hand; thou shalt guide me by thy Counsel, and afterwards receive me to Glory. That word Nevertheless, brings this as a Lesson and Experiment he had learned from the contrary: He had had the Reins laid upon his own Neck for a while, and was left to the Counsel of his own Heart, and so he had miscarried. So foolish was I (says he) and as a Beast before thee; ver. 22. Nevertheless thou holdest me by my Right Hand, that is, I have found by this Experience, that when I being left to my self, am gone out of the way, yet thou secretly and invisibly holdest me by the Hand, to reduce and bring me back again. And what Lesson learns he from it, and what Conclusion issues thence? You have it in ver. 24. Thou shalt guide me with thy Counsel, and I will never more follow my own, but give my self up to thee (as Herbert well expresseth it in his Poems) only give me thy Hand, since both mine Eyes are thine. Neither doth the Psalmist mean his Hand merely to guide, but to support and strengthen: Thou holdest me by my Right Hand. And I also observe it, that God's guiding of us by his Counsel serves us but in this Life; but afterwards he is said to receive us to Glory: he pulls us up by the same Hand, which here guided us, unto that Glory above. You have seen an Instance or Example of this: See a Promise also on God's part for this, which calls loud upon us for this Duty: Isa. 30. 21. And thine Ears shall hear a Word behind thee saying, This is the Way, walk in it, when ye turn to the Right Hand, or when ye turn to the Left. God had promised in the words before to give them Teachers, who doctrinally, or by the delivery of the right Rules, should teach'em the good and right Way, Thy Teachers shall not be removed from thee, &c. Well, but we poor Christians are to put those Rules and Instructions our Teachers give us into Practice and Execution; and when we are personally to act, we have not our Teachers and Tutors by us, and (God wot) we through Ignorance (as the Psalmist, Psal. 73.) or Forgetfulness, are, when we come to act, at a loss, and know not which way to turn us. Hence therefore at the Voice of thy Cry, when he shall hear it, he will answer thee, ver. 19. And upon such Outcries and Occasions, promiseth his Spirit, who can be, and is always with us: Thine Ears shall hear a Word behind thee, saying, This is the Way, &c. The Psalmist had said, Thou holdest me by my Right Hand, unknown to me, and wilt guide me by thy Counsel. The Prophet says, Thou shalt hear a Word behind thee: Wherein he compares him to a Friend, or Companion, that secretly watcheth aloof off another Friend he takes care of, whom he lets go to see how he will order his Steps of himself; yet in great Straits and Turnings, or (as the Text expresseth it) when he turns to the Right Hand, or the Left, comes stealing behind thee; so the Phrase is, Comes behind thee, and whispers (for'tis called a Word) This is the Way, walk in it. The Prophet compares him to a bonus Genius, who doth Aurem vellicare, pull him by the Ear, and brings things practicable to our Remembrance, as Christ hath it. The Psalmist compares him to a Companion that never leaves us, but gives Strength as well as Guidance. Thou art continually with me, and holdest me by the Hand. These things are evidently spoken of guiding us in Practice, as these Phrases, This is the Way, walk in it, as also Turning to the Right Hand and the Left, do import. They declare declare the various Occasions and Affairs of Man's Life, his going hither and thither, as elsewhere 'tis expressed. This for the Promise of God. Now then that God de facto effectually performs when he is sought to by thee, that other Passage of the Psalmist assures us, Psal. 37. 23. The Steps of a good Man are ordered by the Lord. Which is spoken in respect of that happy Issue and Success which good Mens Actions are through the Blessing of God accompanied withal. But what if he falls into any Disaster? It follows, v. 24. Tho he fall he shall not utterly be cast down, for the Lord upholdeth him with his Hand. Therefore in all thy ways take Solomon's Counsel, Prov. 3. 5. In all thy ways acknowledg him, and he shall direct thy Paths. To acknowledg God in all thy Ways, doth in Solomon's sense import,

(1.) To come to God in a sensibleness of a Man's own Inability to guide himself in any of his ways; which the same Solomon pathetically utters, How can a Man understand his Ways? And Jeremy having by Vision understood that great Calamity that was in his time to come upon his Nation, not knowing what might become of himself, nor which way to take to help himself, comes to God, and cries out concerning his own Person, Jer. 10. 23. I know that the Way of a Man is not in himself, it is not in Man that walketh to direct his Steps. And therefore seeing I must be involved in a common Calamity, I submit to thy correcting Hand; Correct me (if thou pleasest) but not with Judgment, not in Anger. And God dealt with him accordingly, he had the best Quarter from the King of Babel of all the Jews.

(2.) It imports that we should acknowledg him, by giving our selves up to his Direction, as is evident from what follows, He shall direct thy Paths. His meaning therefore is, so to acknowledg him, as to give a Man's self up to his Direction: Or if you will have it in the Terms this Aphorism was first expressed in, Take his Advice and Counsel. And so the Opposition both before and after carries it: Lean not to thine own Understanding, and be not wise in thine own Eyes. Often, tho Man knows not his own way, yet having distrusted his own Understanding, and coming in simplicity to God for Counsel by Prayer, either God in Prayer leaves a biasing Impression on his Heart, which is the Voice behind him, or by Providence casts him upon it. And truly when a Soul hath thus come unto God, he may blindfold cast it on him. I end this Direction with this great Consolatory, That look as Jesus Christ is thy Priest to obtain and accomplish thy Salvation, so he is thy Prophet; that is, his Prophetical Office is in its kind as much for thee and thy good, and for ordering thy Ways, as his Priestly Office is for thy Salvation hereafter. And he being the mighty Counsellor that knows all Events and Issues, will, if thou hast address'd unto him under that relation, put forth his Abilities and Power given him in that Office for thee; to direct thee as effectually as to save thee; therefore present all to him.

2. When thou hast thus asked and sought his Advice, be sure thou follow it. To that end, observe the Impressions which God upon seeking him maketh upon thy Spirit in Prayer. Observe the most swaying weight that God casts into the Ballance, when otherwise the Scales are even. Observe especially what Spiritual Motives that are purely for God, are cast into thy Heart (for they are from God which are most for God) and follow them fully, as Caleb is said to do. Our Lord and Saviour Christ is in this (as in all things else practicable by us) a Pattern to us. He was (as you know) to die and offer up himself to God, and to enter into a Conflict with his Wrath for Sin. He saw the black Cloud and the Storm coming, and some Drops had been let fall upon his Soul; Joh. 12. 27, 28. And Nature (as you know) wrought in him; and you have heard the Voice and Cry of it, Lord let this Cup pass. Now you read in Psal. 16. 7. Christ blessing the Lord for giving him Counsel; I will bless the Lord who hath given me Counsel, my Reins also instruct me in the Night-seasons; I have set the Lord always before me, &c. Therefore my Flesh rests in Hope: thou wilt not leave my Soul in Hell. Concerning which Passages in this Psalm Peter hath plainly instructed us (Acts 2. 25, 29 to 37. that they were immediately intended of Christ, and not of David at all, as his Type or Shadow; as in other Psalms and Passages of Prophecy. And they are (being thus applied unto Christ) the inward workings and Discussions of his Soul when he was to give up himself to that great Encounter and Adventure, the greatest greatest that ever Creature was to undergo. You have the inward Agitations of his Spirit, and the Considerations that heartned him to give himself up unto it, v. 8, 9, 10, 11. He mentions the Night-seasons, in which his Reins instructed him. Now you read, Luke 21. 37. That immediately before his Passover (Chap. 22. 1, 2.) he spent the Mornings in preaching, but the Nights in Mount Olivet, to pray all night to God, according to his Custom, Luk. 6. 12. And the Context immediately before this, v. 37. of Luk. 21. shews it, Watch ye therefore and pray, v. 36. for which his Example is propounded, v. 37. Thus he spent the Night before his Passion: For Jesus knew before hand all that should come upon him, Joh. 18. 4. But thus especially he spent that Night in which he was betrayed and taken. You know how he spent the time in Prayers and Conflicts, with strong Cries and Tears, being heard in that he feared, Heb. 5. 7. Great Fears and Conflicts were upon him, he was at a stand; Father, if it be possible let this Cup pass from me. And when his Soul was thus wrestling it out, God evidently came in with a new and peremptory Declaration, that he would have him go through with it; which that Speech that immediately follows shews, Not my Will but thine be done; which (say I) was Christ's Motto. Why now that which I aim at to my purpose in hand is, that Christ blesteth his Father for giving him this Counsel, and supporting him with this Advice, I will bless the Lord who hath given me Counsel. To be sure we have cause to bless God that gave him that Counsel, 'twas good Counsel for us; and you hear of this conflicting no more: But after that, tho he knew all that should come upon him, he went forth, and said unto them, Whom seek ye? Joh. 18. 4. Peter had given him other Counsel, Master spare thy self; but God that was his antient Friend, gave him this Counsel, and he thankfully receives it, follows it, and blesteth him for it, that ever he gave it him. My Brethren, such Advices in great and difficult Cases God gives us in Prayer, and by the Word; and the Flesh comes and gives the contrary. Solomon (Eccles. 7. 16.) brings in a Man solicited by Flesh and Spirit, by contrary Counsels. Says the Flesh, Be not righteous overmuch, not too strict; why shouldest thou destroy thy self, wast thy Spirits in Duties, and bring Miseries and hazards of Ruin to thy Name, Estate and Life, which attend ordinarily a living godly in Christ Jesus? On the contrary replies the Spirit, Be not overmuch wicked, why shouldest thou die before thy time? Loose Ways and Courses will bring thee to thy Grave sooner than the Course of Nature, A Dart will strike through thy Liver, &c. and thou wilt go to Hell when thou hast done. And Paul speaks similarly unto this, Rom. 8. 12, 13, 14. Therefore, Brethren, we are Debtors, not to the Flesh, to live after the Flesh: For if ye live after the Flesh, ye shall die; but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the Deeds of the Body, ye shall live. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God. The meaning whereof is, follow not the Counsel of the Flesh, it is the Counsel of a Flatterer, an Enemy. It adviseth thee as the young Men did Rehoboam, for thy hurt: Or its Advice is like that of Job's Wife, Curse God and die; or like that of Peter to Christ, Master spare thy self. Where had our Salvation been then? And where will thine be if thou followest it? But on the contrary, Paul exhorts them to give themselves up to the Spirit to be led by him as God's Sons, v. 14. His Advice is the Advice of a Father, of a Comforter; and tho his Advice for the present may lead thee into such a Way and Course, as for which thou mayst hazard Life, yet consider (saith he v. 11.) That he that raised up Jesus from the Dead, and as you heard gave him Counsel to die, will raise up thy mortal Body again: Whereas, if you follow the Flesh's Advice, and mortify not the Deeds thereof, ye shall die. Above all, take heed of rejecting his Counsel when thou hast askt it; as the Pharisees are said to have done against themselves (Luk. 7. 30.) and the People in the Prophet Jeremy did. The Heathen, when they enquired of their Oracles, durst not go and do contrary; nor would Socrates act against what his Genius dictated: Much less let us act against the Counsel of God and his Spirit, for this breaks Friendship with him. Yea let me cast in this, take his very Re-proofs kindly; Prov. 27. 5, 6. Even the Wounds of a Friend are faithful. He speaks it of Rebukes, v. 5. Let the Righteous smite me (says David, Psal. 141. 5.) it shall be a kindness; let him reprove me, it shall be an excellent Oil, which shall not break, break, but cure my Head. If therefore the Righteous God shall smite thee; if the Holy Spirit, who is that holy anointing, rebukes thee in thy way, it is to save thee, to heal thee, and to comfort thee in the end: He went on frowardly in the way of his Heart, and I smote him, says God, Isa. 57. 17. But it was to heal him; I will heal him, and restore Comforts to him. Chap. 6.

Book II.

3. Make use of his Favour and Friendship in all Businesses, and depend thereon alone. God would have all kindneses run through his hands, for he would have all your Thanks: as David said to Barzillai, 2 Sam. 19. 38. Whatever thou requestest of me, that will I do for thee; that doth God say to us. Great Men in Power that are Friends, take it ill if it be a Suit (wherein they can stand us) if we use or trust to other Friends beside them: For by doing so, we either question their Power or their Love.

There are two things which this Direction holds forth: 1. To use God in small matters as well as great. And 2. To make use of his special Favour and peculiar Love in all.

1st. Let us make use of God in small things as well as great, even all. It is said (Isa. 26. 12.) he works all our Works in us and for us. 'Tis read both ways, for we have two sorts of Works to be done: 1. Inward in our own Spirits. And 2. Outward, which are for us in the course of Providence: And of the two, the inward is of the greater concernment, not to fear what we shall suffer, but what we shall do. We are to use God in small things, and herein God's Friendship exceeds that of Mens; for Men are shy to use great Friends about Trifles, but reserve their Interest for greater; for they are both loth to be troubled, and cannot mind us therein, and their Stock of Favour is soon spent; but God doth not deal so with us. I observe in the Parable made on purpose (as one Evangelist hath it) to encourage us, and provoke us to pray, Christ represents the πρότασις, or Story of it thus, Luk. 11. 5. That a Man having a Friend, goes to him at Midnight, and says to him, lend me three Loaves. What! trouble a Friend for so small a matter as three Loaves, and that at Midnight, and those not for himself neither, it is for his Friends Friend; v. 6. For a Friend of mine is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him. Christ shews the Disposition of a Man in this Case, v. 7. He from within shall answer and say, trouble me not, the Door is now shut, and my Children are with me in Bed, I cannot rise and give thee. They are loth to be troubled in such a Case, tho they are Neighbours and Friends, and may themselves need the like at another time. And yet (v. 8.) for Importunitys sake, tho not for Friendship, he will rise and give him them. Now the Reddition or Moral of this is, that much more God that professeth himself a Friend and Father (v. 13.) will bear you in whatever you ask, even the smallest; if a Man asks an Egg, or asks a Fish, as Christ insinuates, v. 11, 12. or daily Bread, as he had taught them, v. 3. And he thinks it no Trouble, at all Seasons, upon all Occasions to be visited: Come to him at Midnight, come to him for thy Friend's Friend for what thou wilt; this is an Honour to him, he is hereby acknowledged to be God that ruleth and governeth all things, even the least.

2^{dly}. Make use of God's peculiar Love in all, Outward Providential Mercies do come to the People of God out of peculiar Love, as the Connection of Rom. 8. 28, 29. tells us. The Love of Friendship in God is the Fountain and Spring of all; out of that he bestows all, and therefore will have it acknowledged in all. If therefore in thy outward Affairs thou seekest God for a Mercy, and thou hast found a particular Promise which mentions the very thing thou needest; yet let me advise thee to go to Eternal Love, and treat with it to bestow it on thee; and treat with it in all, as well as for thy Salvation. My Brethren, the effectualness of this Cause is not known enough; to be sure the thing is not enough practised by Saints.

1. It is utterly a fault, that either, even in great matters they treat not with God, or walk rashly whilst they are in dependance on God for them, that is, they leave the Issue and casting of such a matter to all adventures, and seek him not in it; which often provokes God to give a Man a sound Stroak, a shrewd Blow, e're he is aware, in what is most near to him, as if he cared not where he did hit him. The Israelites would have a King; but God gave him in his Anger, and took him away in his Wrath.

Book II. 2. Or else they treat not his special Favour, but leave it to bare ordinary Providence; and things which accordingly come out of ordinary Providence, are by the Course of that Providence turned into bitter Crosses, even to God's own People: tho when they are taught otherwise, and humbled, his Love at last turns them again into Blessings. But those wherein eternal Love is sought, prove pure Blessings, and God adds no Sorrow with them. The Israelites did seek a King at the hands of God, and yet God complains, Hos. 8. 4. They have set up Kings, but not by me; they have made Princes, but I knew it not. And yet how could so great a matter be done without him, by whom Kings reign, and who knows all that is done in the World? But they carried it so as they sought not God in it, nor acquainted him with it: They did it ipso inconsulto, without advising with him, or interesting him in them; and without having Recourse to, and Dependance upon his Favour. If a Man should see his Son or his Friend stand among the Croud of Beggars that wait at his Door for a common Dole, and that he casts his Lot for his Meals with them; to be served as his turn comes, as they are; would not this provoke him, would he not say, what do you mean thus to stand there, are you not at Home? Why do you not come to me for Money for all Necessaries? Or why do you not come in and sit down at Table, and eat with me as become Sons and Friends to do? Thus doth God take it ill to see his own Children carelessly stand at the common Door of Providence, when they should come in and seek what they want by Prayer, and interest his Fatherly Love in the Business. The truth is, that those Blessings only prove pure, stable Blessings, which are fetch'd ex ipso Dolo. As God gives, so he would have you receive; now he gives out of Eternal Love, and that therefore he will have us apply unto.

4. Yet I add, take some seeming Denials of particular Requests of thine kindly from him. Remember it is Friendship with a Superior, who is only wise, knows what is best for thee, hath many great and vast ends in the Government of this World, and some things thou hast earnestly desired for thy particular, may and do cross some other, and greater Designs for his Glory. As Kings that have large Interests, Multitude of Persons, and things to deal with, are forced to deny some things which their dearest Favourites ask of them, as crossing some other Engagement, or more general Project. But if God deniest thee, he will be sure to remember thee in some other thing.

The Truth is, we shew our selves unfriendly to God, and usurp upon the Privileges and Dues of Friendship, if we expect every thing should be as we would have it: Should it be as thou wilt? as God said to Job. God denied Moses his Request of entering into Canaan, and it was a great Request of him, and yet he murmurs not, but quietly goes up and dies, when God bad him.

5. Trust God especially in great Exigents, and take heed of being jealous of him. Mutual Confidence is a great part of Friendship, therefore David speaking of his Friend saith, Tea mine own familiar Friend whom I trusted, Psal. 41. 9. If a Man were to procure the Friendship of another, he would deal with him in his kind: As if you were to deal with a Covetous Man, ye would bring him Gold; if with a vainglorious Man, you would flatter him. But now the way to deal with God, and to procure Friendship with him, is to trust him; and the Reason is, because he doth all his kindneses freely: And one that doth all freely desires to be trusted, before he doth the Benefit, and to be thanked after. Since I knew what Love and Friendship was, I have the less wondred why God chose our Faith rather than our Love to save us by, and that he calls so much for it. The Reason is plain, that one that loves much, desires rather (and prefers it far) to have the Party he freely loves, to believe much that he loves him, than that he should love him, for he desires to magnify his own Love to them. Now that is God's distinction, for it is his main end in loving us to commend his Love. The Holy Ghost exhorts, Psal. 37. 3. Trust in the Lord, and cast all thy Care upon him. Friends are Participes Curarum, They are Partners in Cares. There are two eminent Places for this, 1. Pet. 1. 7. Cast all your Care upon God, for he careth for you. & Phil. 4. 6. Be careful for nothing, but in every thing by Prayer and Supplication with Thanksgiving, let your Request be made known unto God. Be careful or solicitous in nothing; he doth not say, God leaves small things unto us, or that we should should not be anxious, but avoid τὰς μερίμνας, those Cares that divide and distract the Soul. Great momentous Care is God's work, not ours: Cast all your Care upon him (says Peter) for he careth for you. He speaks it of the forest Trials under God's mighty Hand, ver. 6. He quotes Psal. 55. v. 2. Cast thy Burden on the Lord: So much Care as is a Burden on thy Thoughts, lay it on God. What a friendly part is this, that God loves us so well as he would have no Burden lie on our Spirits, but is willing to take that Burden on himself? Let me have all the Load (says he) like a Friend that travels with another, and for his Friend's ease carries and takes off all the Baggage. God is not only willing to bear it with us, but to take it wholly off from us on himself. He doth not only offer to take one end of it, and so ease us (as the word is, Rom. 8. 26. συναντιλαμβάνεται) to help us only by taking it together with us at the other end of our Burden, but he takes it wholly off; Cast thy Burden on him, for he careth for you. The Truth is (says he) whether you trust him or no, he careth for you: Or 'tis spoken thus, his is the great Care; as if we should say to a Wife that hath a good Husband to her Comfort, he takes all the Care, and is so wise as you need take none, but may sleep quietly and take your ease; so doth God say to us. Qui habuit tui curam antequam esses, quomodo non habebit cum jam es, says Augustine. He took care how to redeem thee from Sin, and he will for all things else: Yea he takes such care for every one, as if he took care of none else. Only indeed this Paul requires (Phil. 4.) That in every thing our Requests should be made known to God. He would not have us so much as troubled, only says he, come and tell me, that's enough, and it is but what a Man would do to a Friend, when burdened, if it were but to ease his Mind: not that God needs that we should make known our Requests to him, for he knows (says Christ) you have need of these Things; but that there may be a recourse to him, that he may be acknowledged to be the Carer for you, and also your Dependance on him may be owned (Prov. 3. 5, 6.) Trust in the Lord with all thine Heart, and lean not to thine own Understanding. In all thy Ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy Paths. He speaks it as a Friend, that would have his Friends but come and tell him when they want: 'Tis as if he said, come, and but communicate your Wants and your Necessities to me, and I will supply them. Thus our Abraham in the Text did trust in God as a Friend, when he went to offer up Isaac: Oh Father, says Isaac, but where is the Sacrifice! Take no care Son, says he, God will provide, Gen. 22. 8, 9, 13, 14. Hence that Proverb went amongst the Jews, when any one was afflicted, that in the Mount the Lord will be seen, and provide as he did for Abraham and Isaac in their Straits. Let your Heart therefore in all Occurrences be quiet, and repose it self safely in him; trust him at all times, Psal. 62. 8. and trust him in all things, and in small things as well as great; make use of him, and come to him for every thing, for he thinks you account him not your Friend else, and he thinks it no Trouble but an Honour to him.

I add to this as an Appendix of it, Be not jealous of him. There cannot be a greater wrong done to Friendship; Trust hath made many a Friend, and so on the contrary, Suspicion hath broke many fast and entire Friendships: Hence Charity, or Love to Men binds us to interpret all things well: 1 Cor. 13. 5. Charity thinketh no Evil, believing all Things for the present, hopeth all Things for the future. And if this Rule hold of Men who are a Lie, as the Scripture speaks, and of whom a Suspicion may be that they are false, and a Lie is in their Ways; Then much more is this true in Love, and much more ought we to act thus to God, who is Truth it self, Rom. 3. 4. and Love it self, 1 John 4. 16. And accordingly as his Nature is Love and Truth, so all his Ways are Mercy and Truth, Psal. 25. 10. They are Mercy, in respect of aiming at our good; and Truth, in respect of fulfilling his Promises, and faithful Carriage to us: therefore whatsoever befalls thee, tho it be clean contrary to thy Expectation, interpret it in Love. Many Actions of Men are such, as a good Interpretation cannot be put upon them, nor a good Construction made of them; therefore Interpreters restrain those Sayings of Love, that it believes all, &c. that is, Credibilia, all things believable; otherwise to put all upon Charity, will eat out Charity. But none of God's Ways are such, but Love and Faith may pick a good meaning out of them. A bono Deo nil nisi bonum, from a good God there comes nothing but what is good; and therefore says Job, tho' he kill me I will trust in him. Endeavour to spy out some end of his for good at the present, and if none ariseth to thy Conjecture, resolve it into Faith, and make the best of it. To be jealous provoketh God exceedingly, for no faithful Friend can endure to be suspected: It breaks amity between Man and Wife, when they love never so entirely; and the Reason is, because one that loves and makes a Business of it to shew himself a Friend, and counts it one of his greatest Excellencies (as God doth, for all his Attributes seem but to set out his Love) cannot therefore bear to have it questioned. Take a Man that is both wise and loving, and he had rather be thought unwise by his Friend, than unloving or false to him. It provoked God much, well nigh as much as any thing, that the People of Israel said that he brought them into the Wilderness to destroy them: which Sin moved him to destroy many of them. And yet thus, and worse, do many wrong God, who tho' God hath humbled them, and given them many evident Tokens of his Love, and everlasting good Will; yet still they suspect it to be but a common Work, that God hath enlightened them to make their Damnation greater. He hath brought us out of Egypt indeed, say they, the gross Sins that others lie in, but it is but to destroy us: Jer. 29. 11. I know the Thoughts that I think towards you, saith the Lord Thoughts of Peace, not of Evil, to give an expected End. It was when the People were carried away Captive into Babylon; they thought God carried them thither to destroy them, these were their Thoughts; and therefore in opposition unto their Thoughts, saith God, it is no matter what you think, I know the Thoughts I think, even to give an expected end, that is, as good an end as you could wish. God speaks like one suspected, and is fain to comfort himself as it were with the consciousness of his own Thoughts toward them, against the hard Thoughts and Speeches they had of him: Well, but I know mine own Heart, says God. His Eyes were as much and more upon the end of their Deliverance and Peace after seventy Years, than upon the Captivity it self, as appears by the Verse going before; for the End is first ordained, and chiefly in an Agent's Eye. Let but God alone, see the end he made with Job (says James, Chap. 5. 11.) whilst God was pulling down Job's Estate and House piece after piece, Job, nor no Stander by could have known what to have made of God's purpose in it; but the Issue was such, as was evident to the Eye of all Beholders, that all this was in Love. Therefore he useth this Phrase, Ye have seen the end of the Lord in it. He did but put down the old House to set up a new one; some interpret it of Christ's Passion, you have seen the end of the Lord Jesus. Whilst the Apostles and Believers beheld him on the Cross, yea the Angels themselves, they might wonder what God meant to do with him, what should be in his thoughts to hang his Son there; but ye have seen the end of the Lord (saith he) For we have seen Jesus thro' the Suffering of Death, crowned with Glory and Honour, Heb. 2. 9. This was fresh News in those Days, for 'twas new done, so as they saw it: When thou art in Affliction, thou art apt to think that he is a destroying thee, but thou knowest not his Thoughts. If a Man be poor and down in the World, then he is apt to say, if God did love me, he would not suffer me to be so low; if rich, he is apt to say, that God puts him off as Abraham did his younger Sons, and reserves his Inheritance for others. So likewise young Christians are often jealous that God will one day take advantage against them for their offending him and Backslidings, and take his Favour from them, and cast them off; but do not suspect him, for he is a constant Friend. It is a slander Papists and Arminians have raised on him, That he should cast away those are entered into Friendship with him, and discard his old Friends; and therefore (Isa. 55. 4.) God's Mercies are called the sure Mercies of David. If others have Comfort, Joy and Peace, which such an one wants, the poor Man begins to be jealous of God, as if God did not love him; as when the Gentiles were called, Zionias jealous, and took it amiss, Isa. 49. 14. and says, God hath forgotten me.

6. Study his Favours, how to find out his loving Kindness in them. God would not willingly lose his Kindness in what he doth: As a wise Man would not his Notions on one that is not apprehensive or capable of them, and a Man's Love is dearer to him than his Notions; this is the least Receptation of Friendship that can can be expected. God doth study how to contrive all the Circumstances of his Mercies, so as to make them Mercies, and to shew his Love in them, and accordingly orders them. He thinks how to bring them in best, to make them take, when and where they will be best placed and bestowed, and most seen, and taken notice of. He waits to be gracious, Isaiab tells us: even as a curious Orator orders all his matters, brings in this after this, and sets out all with Metaphors and Elegancies, and all to make it take and please his Hearers; so doth God strow Mercies through thy whole Life, and you should study them and the Circumstances of them (as you would study and delight to read a curious Speech) and observe all the Art that Love hath bestowed upon the whole. As you shall have a World of Wit and Matter couched in a Word, a short Sentence, so God casts out sometimes a Sea of Love in a drop of Providence, in a small by-passage that a Man would scarce take notice of. Psal. 139. when David considered but that part of it, of his outward and ordinary Providence only, in creating and conserving him, he wonders; Marvelous are thy Works (says he) and that my Soul knows right well, ver. 14. David had studied them, he was verft and skilful in them? How precious (saith he) are thy Thoughts, or the Thoughts of thee unto me? O Lord, how great are the Number of them! And Psal. 111. 2, 3, 4. The Works of the Lord are great, sought out of all them that have Pleasure therein: His Work is honourable and glorious, and his Righteousness endureth for ever: He hath made his wonderful Works to be remembred, the Lord is gracious and full of Compassion. His Goodness and Compassion he would have observed by us; more especially, The Lord is gracious and full of Compassion, so it is in the close of all, and therein lies the Glory, that is the Conclusion of all. And as in searching into any Experiments in Nature, there is an infinite Pleasure that accompanies such a Study to them that are addicted thereunto: So to him that hath Pleasure in such Works of God, and is addicted to spy out his Kindness in them, there is nothing so pleasant as the Discovery of such or such a new Circumstance of Mercy, that renders it glorious and honourable. Get therefore Skill in his Dealings with thee, and study thy Friend's Carriage to thee. It is the end why he raised thee up, and admitted thee into Friendship with him, to shew his Art of Love and Friendship to thee, how well he could love thee.

C H A P. VII.

What Obedience and Duty we owe unto God, as we are his Friends. We should be fearful of doing any thing to displease him, observe his Commands, and do all from the Principles of Love and Gratitude.

THE next thing to be treated of concerneth what in Obedience we owe unto him, what Correspondencies, what Returns, Observances and Compliances are due to him in our Walkings with him, upon the account of Friendship. Now the general Consideration I would premise to all that follows, is, that this Friendship being contracted between an Infinite God, and Creatures subjected perfectly to his Sovereign Power; he might exact all from us, as simple Obedience due from absolute Servants and Vassals. But he hath been pleased to quit (as it were) that Consideration: John 15. 15. Henceforth I call you not Servants, but Friends. As if he were content on his part to forget the relation of Servants, and take up all from us as from Friends, provided he hath the same that as Servants we owe to him; which must needs so sweeten all Obedience to him, as not to make the Commandments grievous, and it also puts the stricter Obligation unto Obedience, due as Servants, and superadds some Strains and Dispositions thereunto, upon the pure account of Friendship. So respectful is he of us, that he is content to vail and cover this hard and severe Tax, and to take it up from us under the Notion of Gratitude and Thankfulness. And this Notion will run along, and accompany us thro the whole. Now of such Compliances and Returns of Obedience,

Book II.

Obedience, there are two Branches, which are a known and common trodden Place by every Tongue and Pen.

1st. There is a Fearfulness to displease or offend him as our Friend.

2^{ly}. All possible Care to please and render our selves friendly and respectful to him. I must not instance in particular Duties, nor be large in any thing; only hint such Considerations, as not the Notion only, but the Power of Friendship doth bind us to.

1. There is Fearfulness to displease him, as a Man is fearful to displease a Friend. This is to fear the Lord and his Goodness, as the Prophet speaks. Every Sin by reason of Friendship to him, comes under the Crime and Guilt of Falshood and Petit-Treason: When thou sinnest, then think with thy self that God's Spirit looks back, and says to thee as Absalom to Hushai, 2 Sam. 16. 17. Is this thy Kindness to thy Friend? Or as God himself, Deut. 32. 6. Do ye thus requite the Lord, ye foolish and unwise? Is not he thy Father that hath bought thee? Hath he not made and establisht thee? If it had been mine Enemy, I could have born it, but it was thou my Friend, Psa. 55. 12. said David of his Friend. And says God again of David (who had felt the smart of Wounds received in the behalf of his Friends, and therefore every Word pierced him) 2 Sam. 12. 7, 8, 9. I anointed thee King over Israel, delivered thee from Saul, gave thee thy Master's Wives: Yea, gave thee the whole House of Israel and Judah to be thy Subjects, and to reign over; and if this (which for this World might well content the largest Heart) would not have contented thee, I love thee so well, that I would have given thee such and such Things. And you know how the Sense of his Ingratitude brake his Heart. Now translate this word for word into the Stile and Language of the New Testament: I have loved thee (may God say) and chosen thee my Friend in Christ Jesus afore the World began. I have delivered my Son unto Death for thee, and with him how shall I not give thee all things? Heaven, and Glory, and an Everlasting Kingdom I have prepared for thee, not to tell thee how many Sins I have pardoned, when thou first comest to me and since; and wilt thou serve me thus? Is this thy Kindness to thy Friend? This grieves God. Against his Enemies he hath a Relief, he can ease himself, Isa. 1. 24. I will ease my self on mine Adversaries: but on his Friends he hath no Remedy, no other, but having seen their Ways, to heal them; for he cannot, must not ease himself by Revenge. Such things as these should move us. Oh! when thou art about to sin next, and hast the Cup of Pleasure at thy Mouth and Lips, think with thy self at the instant, that it is the Price of thy Friend's Blood, and pour it upon the Ground; you know I allude to the Story and Passage in 1 Chron. 11. 19. Think what was in that Cup which he trembled at: Let this Cup pass (cried he) Dost thou begin at any time to sip of Pleasures Cup? Oh cry out thou likewise! Let this Cup pass from me; my Saviour drank all these as turned to Gall and Vinegar, and shall I make that my Pleasure, which was such Horror and Bitterness to him? And of Sins, take heed of presumptuous Sins, which is a making bold with his Friendship, and the continuance of his Love still notwithstanding. These strike directly at the Root, the Soul, at the Marrow of Friendship; this is a Strain higher than Treason. David a King, might have aggravated Ahitophel's Fault, in that he was his Prince, his Sovereign; but it was, Thou my Friend, which he upbraids him with, and lays to his Charge, his Treason against Friendship. And Ahitophel was therein the Type of Judas, whose Sin to this day is branded with the Name of Treason: Treason the highest that ever was, That he who eats my Bread (says Christ) should betray me. Oh keep me from presumptuous Sins! (saith David, Psa. 19. 19.) for they are the next Step to the great Offence, so shall I be free from the great Transgression, than which nothing is higher, or nearer than the Sin of presuming on God's Love. The Oppression of good Nature in any good and sweet Soul we stand in relation unto, is the greatest Oppression in the World: and what oppresth good Nature more than under presumption of Friendship to abuse it? So also upon the same account take heed of Sins that wound the Name of God in thee; How doth one cast Shame upon all his Friends, when he runs into an Enormity? Noscitur ex Socio, &c. they account all his Friends and Companions such. David's Sin is aggravated by this, that he made the Enemies of God to blaspheme; and nothing puts God more into a strait how how to acquit himself toward you, and save his own Honour, than in such a Case, either to lose the Service you may yet do, or to dishonour himself by using you any longer therein. Chap. 7.

2. The second Branch of Obedience is (as you know) keeping his Commandments. Ye are my Friends if ye do whatsoever I command you (says Christ) Job. 15.

Thus also says Jonathan to David his Friend, 1 Sam. 20. 4. Whatsoever thy Soul desireth, I will even do it for thee. Yea Friendship will turn that Sovereign Word of Commands into that more easy Stile, Whatsoever will please him, Isa. 56. 4. And yet Yours to command is Stilus Amicitie, the Stile of Friendship. A Man can requite a Friend but two ways, either by profiting him, or by pleasing him. Now profit God we cannot; What is it to him that thou art Righteous? (says Job) Christ himself could not profit God, witness that Speech spoken of him, My Goodness extends not to thee, Psal. 16. But yet please him he did in all things; Job. 8. 39.

1. Let us study with our selves what in our way, and in his Will concerning us, will most please him; and let us make it the Pleasure of our Souls to do it. Let us think with our selves as David did, Psal. 69. 31. This also shall please the Lord better than an Ox or Bullock that bath Horns and Hoofs. Let us do what is done by us out of a free Spirit, and not only or barely as commanded. Let us think that of Paul's looks fully this way, 1 Cor. 9. 16, 17. Tho I preach the Gospel have nothing to glory of, for Necessity is laid upon me; yea wo is unto me if I preach not the Gospel. Ver. 17. For if I do this willingly, I have a Reward; but if unwilling, Dispensation is committed to me. The plain Result of which Place is this, 1. That to do the best Work for God that can be done in this World, is to preach the Gospel; therefore by way of supposition, he heightens and greatens it, Tho I preach the Gospel, than which the Angels themselves have not a better Work committed to them. Yea 2. If I outwardly do this Work (says he) with all the Pains and Diligence that Flesh and Blood can perform it with, even to the utmost of the Dispensation and Commission enjoined me, as v. 17. implies: Yet 3. To do this, having this only in my Eye, that I am commanded by God to do it, is not enough, that this was his Scope, is clearly acknowledged out of these his Words, For Necessity is laid upon me. This Necessity was not of any outward Restraint; no Man could have compelled him, no more than they could Demas, who left his Preaching, embraced the present World, and fell a Merchandizing, taking the advantage of growing rich at Thessalonica, 2 Tim. 4. 10. It was not for Maintenance and Livelihood, for it was that he was speaking of, that he refused it for Preaching. Yea the Necessity he in these Words intends, is sever'd from that other Necessity of being damned if he did it not, for so it is emphatically expressed by our Translators. Yea (tanquam aliquid amplius) Wo is me if I preach not the Gospel. He adds it as some further thing, so that the single Necessity of the Command was first considered by him; which therefore v. 17. he thus expresseth, A Dispensation is committed to me. But to have preached the Gospel out of such a Necessity only, had not been matter of Glory or Acceptation with God. Yea to have preached it upon these or such grounds only, had been to preach it à non unwillingly. The unwillingness being to be interpreted by what he opposeth to it, namely, willingness out of Choice, heartily and freely to chuse the Work out of Love to God chiefly, and the Souls of Men: As one well observes, unwilling is not invitus, Grotius: but jussus; and our Translators have shot that Bolt too far to translate it against my Will. So then to conclude this, to do a thing merely upon the Necessity of the Obligation of the Command, tho of God, and only because such a Dispensation is committed and laid upon one; altho in it self the greatest Service in the World, is not with God acceptable alone, in the Terms which we stand in with him, which are of Friendship and not of mere Servants: And therefore over and above there must be a freeness and willingness out of Ingenuity to God, which is to do it for him, as to a Friend. Which that Paul might manifest, he did preach the Gospel freely; to which yet others (he says) were not obliged, but it had been his Profession so to do. And in doing this out of this Principle, and in this manner, the Work had a Glory, that is, a Grace, an acceptableness in it, which else it would have lost. Peter thus expresseth it, 1 Pet. 2. 19, 20. That it is Thank-worthy; worthy, and that from God, τὸ χάρις παρὰ θεῶ; which in the same Verse he also terms Glory; what Glory is it? He speaks it upon the like Occasion of doing Noble, Free and Heroical Acts of Obedience unto God: To be patient and quiet, to be buffeted for what is truly faulty; this is good (says he) but this comes merely under the Notion of Justice, and Duty, and Command, and so what Glory is in it? But if when you do well and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is Thank-worthy before God. The Stile and Language imports, that such Actions God takes not only well, as a Master that commands things as a Duty, but also as a Friend doth from the hands of a Friend; not only with an Acknowledgment, Well done good and faithful Servant; but with Thanks, which we use not to give to Servants, but to Friends, as having done us free Courtesies: So that altho there are not Works of Superrogation (as in respect of what God doth and may command, Luk. 17. 19. Doth he thank that Servant, because he did those things that were commanded him? I trow not, says Christ) Yet there is such a performing of things commanded for the manner of it, as is over and above the Force of the Command, even out of Freeness and Ingenuity as Friends. And there are some such Noble and Heroical Acts of Obedience, as carry in their very Appearance a Principle above that of Service, which respect the Necessity of the Command, that God thanks them for them, as a Man doth his Friend for a matter of Courtesy; and they come to have a Glory, a special Grace in them, which simple Obedience hath not. And they also have Thanks, which not the Inter-course of Servant and Master, but between Friend and Friend requires; and which chiefly respect the freeness and nobleness of the Mind we do it with. Now that Christ should use the same word that Peter doth, χάρις, Thanks: And that Peter should say, that to such and such Actions Thanks, and those Thanks from God, were due or suitable: And that Christ should on the contrary say, Will that Master thank his Servant? I know not how otherwise to reconcile than thus, that when we shall lift up our Obedience out of the Croud and common Rank of Services (which God might stand upon, since he as Lord and Master could so command, and we must be forc'd to say, We are unprofitable Servants, when we have done, as having done nothing but what was commanded us) and shall perform it to God upon Terms and Grounds of Gratitude and Thankfulness, yea as Friends then God condescends also to accept it as 'tis given, not as Duty only, but as free and gives Thanks for it; so Gracious is he if we be thus noble. And all these Places shew, that otherwise (suppose we be saved) yet we lose that Glory, Splendor and Lustre which might be found in our Obedience, if we thus perform'd it.

Book II.

2. We should study and search out Works so excellent for the manner of Performance, or seek a Heart so noble, as should render such common Actions extraordinary. God hath studied how to commend and set out his kindness (witness the Death of his Son) and prevent us with his loving kindness, as the Psalmist speaks: And we should (if possible) study out some free-born Acts of Obedience and prevent him with them. Thus David unspoken to by God, out of his vast Desires to glorify him, thinks of building a Temple for him; and says God, never spake a word of it, 2 Sam. 7. 7. Yet because what was in God's Heart rose up so nobly in David's, ('twas an ingenuous Thought occasioned it, I dwell in an House of Cedar, but the Ark of God dwells in Curtains, v. 2.) God took this kindly; Tell him (says God to Nathan) I will build him an House for it, v. 11. In Services we do let us study to put an Emphasis of Love upon them, as Paul who (when he might have done otherwise) preached the Gospel for nothing.

I shall mention some special Seasons (instead of other Particulars) which thou mayst take the advantage of, to render a quick and diligent Obedience exceeding acceptable to him as a Friend, and Thanks-worthy as from a Friend, παρὰ τὸ θεῶ even by God himself.

(1.) One Season is, when after great Falls you are anew reconciled to him, and he hath pardoned you great Sins. You know what Vows David made after his Falls, Psal. 51. 13. He vow'd to convert others, to celebrate his Praise, and to offer the choicest of Sacrifices, a broken Heart. This made Peter bestir himself, but upon two Words spoken by Christ after his Fall, Lovest thou me? Politick Friends bid you take heed of a reconciled Friend that hath been treacherous, and done you a mischief, but God delights in such to choose; He therefore chose forth his entirest Friends, (and he knew what he did in doing it) out of the Sons of Men that had offended him, rather than make new ones, for he knew they would love him better. A Friend that is in his radical Disposition of a good and ingenuous Nature, and hath wrong'd you, such a one when reconciled, and you have pardoned him, is the best and fastest Friend in the World. And God will in the end be sure to make those good natured, and true hearted to him whom he pardons; Psal. 32. 2. Blessed is the Man whose Sins are forgiven, in whose Heart is no Guile. He couples these two for ever together; hast thou sinned, and hath God pardoned and loved thee freely? This is a new Conversion to thee, a redintegration of a new Love between you; love much, and obey much, as Mary and Peter did.

(2.) Labour then most, when in view thou art in least Dependance on him for outward Mercies, and thinkest thy Mountain most strong. In some times of a Man's Life he is set in an enlarged and free State, so as he looks over the present Horizon of his Condition, and sees not one Cloud that any way threatens Rain. He is hedged about (as Job) and sees not whence a Breach should come: At such a time meditate (if ever) to act in a more extraordinary manner for God's Interest and Honour. When was it that David meditated that forementioned high and generous Act of testifying his Love in building God an House? It is prefaced thereunto, 2 Sam. 7. 2. That it came to pass, when David sat in his House, and the Lord had given him rest round about from all his Enemies. The Coast was clear (as we used to say) and then the King said, v. 2. He would build God an House. He took this special Season to express his Love towards God in; and God took thereupon that special Advantage to confirm his House to him. Hezekiah on the contrary, whilst Zenacherib lay with his Army before the City, and the ten Tribes were carried captive before his Face, walkt with a perfect Heart: But when his Kingdom was settled, and a Lease of his Life freely sealed for fifteen Years; you know then how he forgot God, and how God took it at his Hands. Josua (who was a Man God honoured to bring his People into Rest, having that Testimony given him, that he followed God fully) you see a long time after (Josb. 23. 1.) that God had given rest unto Israel from all their Enemies round about, how he engaged afresh all the People to serve God, Chap. 24. and himself especially, v. 15. I and my Household will serve the Lord. This was friendly, and God took it accordingly, and recorded it for ever.

(3.) On the contrary, when God afflicts and crosseth thee in thy Desires, and hath denied for the present the Requests thou hast made, apply thy self most unto him. These, tho contrary Seasons, are yet times alike of winning upon God by Obedience; Eccles. 7. 15. In the day of Good, or Prosperity, be in good; that is, as our Criticks explain it, Be conversant, and exercise thy self wholly in what is good; and in the day of evil, see to thy Ways and consider. Thus he calls for Holiness alike in both. That was also true Ingenuity which they expressed, Psal. 44. 17, 18, &c. All this is come upon us, yet we have not forgotten thee, nor our Steps declined from thy Ways. Paul glories more in the Obedience he did in his Infirmities, than in all his Revelations.

(4.) Tho thou hast served him long, and waited, and perhaps he hath done little for thee, in comparison of what for others; yet take occasion still to serve him, and that the more diligently, and be far from thinking much. Amicitia non est revocanda ad Calculos; Friends are not as Partners that keep Accounts of their Receipts and Expences from each other. God gives Mercies, and upbraids not, James 1. 5. And we should return Obedience, and not repine. Paul served God many Years, did more than all the Apostles, as himself says; and yet (says he) I forget what is past and behind, Phil. 3. and reach and roame after still what is before. And tho many Years were past already, yet he thought not much at it, that his Condition was not bettered, nor his ways mended; 1 Cor. 4. 11. Even to this present Hour we both hunger and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have not certain dwelling Place: And labour, working with our own Hands; being reviled we bless, being persecuted we suffer it, being defamed we entreat: We are made as the Filth of the World, and as the Off-scouring of all things unto this day. You see he puts it into the Account, that to that Hour (v. 11.) to that very day (v. 13.) he and his Fellow Apostles

Book II. W Apollles (the greatest Saints that ever the World had, or was to have) had done such high and so great Works of Service for God, as the World did then, yea doth to this day, and shall to the end of the World owe their Salvation, and Christian Religion to them; and yet tho they had run out so many Years, they were not a whit amended as to their outward Condition. They had neither Meat to put in their Mouths, nor Houses of Abode to dwell in; yea and which still heightens all this, other Christians that were saved as well as they, that had less Grace, and done far less Service, yea for whose sakes they had been employed to do all this, were gratified by God with these kind of Accommodations. The Apostle on purpose sets the Instance of such by this other, v. 8, and 10. Now ye are full, now ye are rich, ye have reigned as Kings without us; and I would to God ye did reign, that we also might reign with you. We are Fools for Christ's sake, but ye are wise in Christ; we are weak, but ye are strong; ye are honourable, but we are despised. Yea and v. 9. I think that God hath set forth us Apostles last, as it were appointed unto Death. You that are Scholars know what he alludes to: It is to the Roman Spectacles, either those in which Men were thrown to Beasts, as the last and lowest sort of Men, to make sport unto the common sort of People (which is Tertullian's Interpretation;) or rather to those Gladiators or Sword-Players, who came up last: Of which there were two sorts, 1. Of such as fenced to shew skill, as now adays. 2. Of those that fought but to wounding, and then were fetched off. But the 3d and last sort was of Slaves, or Men condemned to die, who were to fight till they had killed their Fellows, or were killed. And thus God had preordained to his dearest Friends and Servants, his Apollles, whilst they lived, to run through all these Difficulties and Wants, and at last to be killed: And all this too to make them Spectacles to the World, yea both Worlds, Angels and Men, and set them all aghast at them. God had provided a greater Stage and Theater than that at Rome, and he sets and brings these poor Men forth to play their Prize for his Glory; that he might only say to them all (as he said to Satan of Job) See you not my Servants Paul and Peter? But what! doth God deal with his best Friends, that do most for him, thus? Then who will serve him? That will I, says Paul, I know whom I have trusted, and I have fought a good Fight, and will die in the Quarrel. They thought not much at this, they know whom they served. And let that Consideration at first specified, cheer thy Spirit in this Case, which surely was it that carried on the Apollles themselves. They knew and considered, that their radical and original Subjection by the Law of Creation to God was such, that God might command all this, and exact it of them as pure Servants to him, and give them no Wages; that (as it is in v. 7. of that Chapter) whatever they had they had received: And therefore they owed all they could do for him, upon that account; as David says, 1 Chron. 29. 6. Of thine own we have given thee. Our Saviour had laid in this Consideration in the Hearts of his Apollles, whom afterwards he meant thus to use. He spends one Parable on purpose to let them know their Native Condition as they were Creatures, and what Subjection they stood in to God, as mere and perfect Servants, yea and unprofitable too, when they should have done never so much. He made them know this, that being humbled and prepared hereby, they might see the infinite Grace and Favour in God towards them, when afterwards he should adopt, own and admit them to be his Friends (Joh. 15. Henceforth I call you not Servants, but Friends) and how upon that account he would accept of all they should do, the utmost of which they owed, as unprofitable Servants: The Parable you have Luk. 17. from the 7th Verse to the 11th. But which of you having a Servant plowing, or feeding Cattel, will say unto him by and by, when he is come from the Field, go and sit down to Meat? And will not rather say unto him, make ready wherewith I may sup, and gird thy self, and serve me till I have eaten and drunken, and afterward thou shalt eat and drink. Doth he thank that Servant, because he did the things that were commanded him? I trow not. So likewise ye, when ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, say, we are unprofitable Servants, we have only done that which was our Duty to do. He lays before them the common Condition of Servants unto Men, and what was expected from them after the Customs of Men. A Servant that hath been doing hard and laborious Work, as plowing, or keeping Cattel abroad in the Fields, in all all Weathers, Winds and Storms; and this all day, when he hath done these long and tedious Works, might seem to expect when he comes home, to have his Supper prepared and ready dressed for him, that he might eat and go to rest, after so tedious a Travel. No, says Christ, none deals thus with his Servants, but he must yet stay, tho weary and an hungry (To this Hour, says Paul, we hunger and thirst, nay have not so much as an House in this World to come to) he must yet do another Work, and dress his Master's Supper, but yet then he might expect to sit down, or eat at the lower end of the Table. No, but after he hath dressed it, and served it up, he must stand and wait at Table, run hither and thither, see his Master eat the Meat which himself dressed before his Face, and perfectly stay till he hath eaten and drunken, and afterwards he shall eat and drink; so as he must not do one, but all sorts of Services. And what when all this is done? Doth his Master thank him? I trow not, says Christ. Nay he teacheth him to say he is an unprofitable Servant, and hath but done his Duty. How then should this move us? That God should take us up out of this servile Condition, which not our Sins, but our Creation hath condemned us to, and constitute us Friends to himself; and profess (if performed with such an Heart by us) to own and accept all these our Services as Acts of Friendship, for which he will thank us and reward us in the highest measure. Who would not be content to serve so great, and withal so good a God as this?

I shall go on to mention other genuine Properties of Right and true Friendship in the Point of their Obedience to him.

4. Manage all with all Simplicity and plain-Heartedness towards him, in all thy walkings, which is the truest and rarest Jewel in Friendship. A reserved cunning Politician never makes a good Friend, who is an Israelite indeed (as Christ says of Nathaniel, John 1. 47.) in whom is no Guile. Our Saviour not only puts a value, but a Rarity upon him; therefore points him out with an idē, Behold, an Israelite indeed; such as you should not find amongst a Million of Men: And he entitleth him an Israelite in this respect, because this is that, which made Jacob's or Israel's Commendation (Gen. 25. 27.) That he was a plain Man, ἀπλῶς, of a sincere Heart without false or cunning ends, and reaches in his way; whereas Esau was a cunning Hunter, a cunning Gamester, as you say, in his. Now let a Man naturally have what Guile or Cunning he will, real Converse and Acquaintance with God will put him out of it, with respect to God himself, whatever God alloweth him to exercise towards Enemies that seek Advantage. For a Man knows he hath to do with a God, that cuts up to the Marrow, and to the Joints, the socket Bones, and the Heart, and all the Wheels it turns upon: He wriggles his anatomizing Knife through them, Heb. 4. David had carried the Business of Uriah cunningly, as to Men; but when his Heart was set in God's Sun, in the Light of God, that Light discovered this Work to be a deceitful close-spun Web of Wickedness, a plotted and continued Villany, which made him upon that occasion cry out, Psal. 51. 6. Behold, thou requirest Truth in the inward Parts, and in the hidden Part thou shalt make me to know Wisdom. The inwards of a Man are the Seat of Guile, as well as of Truth and Plainness; and upon the discovery of this his Sin to him, he entitleth Grace by the Name of Truth, or Plainness, in the inward Parts, and acknowledgeth such a plain Spirit to be the only wise Spirit. David thought himself to be very wise, in ridding his Hands so handsomely of Uriah; but he must not think to carry it thus, and escape God so: he now saw it to have been the greatest Folly in the World, and that it should teach him Wisdom for hereafter; In the hidden part thou shalt make me to know Wisdom. And again you have him at it, Psal. 32. 3. when he hid his Sin and kept silence, he had Distinctions to fence with, and endeavoured to distinguish himself out from being a Murderer, and Day and Night lay roaring; but in the end he confesseth it, and then God pardoned it, ver. 5. I acknowledged my Sin unto thee, and mine Iniquity have I not hid; I said I will confess my Transgressions unto the Lord, and thou forgavest the Iniquity of my Sin. And from thence he ever learnt this Lesson, that whom God pardons, and receives to Grace and Favour with himself, from them he takes out that venomous Vein or Sting, that runs thro the Backbone of Guile and Deceit towards himself. Therefore at the second Verse, he couples these two for ever together:

Book II. together: Blessed is the Man whom thou pardonest, and in whose Spirit there is no Guile. It is observable that the Apostle makes these two equivalent; to do a thing heartily, and to do it as to the Lord (Col. 3. 23.) Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto Men. And in the Words before, he says, Not as Men-Pleasers, but in singleness of Heart fearing God. That which I observe out of it is this, that nothing will fix the Nature of Man, and make it void of ends, but this knowing God, this Fear of him, and conversing with him. If a Servant would propound to please his Master, yet his own purpose will not make him constant in what is his Duty both absent, as well as present: It will be an uncertain Rule, he will be a Weather-cock in his Actions, observing the Wind, and turning uncertainly with it. Now you walk not plain-heartedly, when you seek out Excuses to put off Duties, and are glad of them; and when you labour to find out Distinctions, to make good those Sins you are loth to leave; and when you walk unevenly in several Companies, as Peter did: Gal. 2. 14. He walked not with an even Foot. When also you use your Wisdom to hold Correspondence with God and the World; as they in Gal. 6. 12. When ye have ends of the Flesh in all; and yet would make as if ye did much for God, as Jehu did, See what Zeal I have for the Lord of Hosts. To magnify Kindnesses, when we design only our own ends, and to make them seem greater, is Guile in Friendship. Friends often lay aside some things they would else do, merely to avoid the Suspicion of by-ends to their Friends. Paul walked in Simplicity, or with a Spirit without folds, or doublings, as the word signifies, 2 Cor. 1. 12.

5. Be faithful to him, in whatever is committed to thy Trust by him, and let thy Friendship move thee. This is the special Epithet of a Friend, that he is a faithful Friend, Exod. 33. 11. God treateth Moses at the first Entry into his Office, as a Friend: The Lord spake to Moses Face to Face, as a Man speaketh to his Friend. And this obliged and endeared Moses to that Faithfulness, he shewed in all and every particular about his House. Compare with this, Numb. 12. 7, 8. My Servant Moses, who is faithful in all my House, with him will I speak Mouth to Mouth, that is, Face to Face, as a Man with his Friend. Which manifestly refers to what God had before done, and said of him, Exod. 33. 11. to which also the Margent doth refer us. There is none of us but God hath entrusted with something; with Pupils who are precious Ware, and their Souls as well as their outward State are committed to their Governors; with Riches, Be faithful then in the unrighteous Mammon; with his Name, keep it unspotted in thee; with Gifts and Talents, improve them to his Advantage; with Power, let it be used and turned for God; with thy Voice in Elections, let God dispose of it, and let those that are God's Friends and godly, have it rather than any other: If God hath entrusted thee with the Truth, keep that good thing committed to thee (as Paul speaks to Timothy) Be faithful unto Death, and he will give thee a Crown of Life. Let not God be a loser in what is committed to thee, whatever thou mayst be; thou mayst in the management of what is for God, perhaps lose a Friend, disgust this or that Person. It is no matter, be in all things faithful to God, as Jacob was to Laban, and served him fourteen, yea twenty Years Day and Night; and if there were any Loss he bare it, Gen. 31. 39, 41.

6. Deny him nothing, and yet take his Denials kindly. Friends that are critical in Friendship, if they think they shall be denied, will not so much as ask, for 'twill trouble them. Abraham spared not his Son, when God called for him, and he was called the Friend of God. God (to endear thy Friendship to him) sometimes will seem to stand in need of something thou hast. When Christ was on Earth he was poor, and good Souls ministred to him; another time he sends to a poor Man for his Ass, with this Message (which was a strange one, Luk. 19. 31.) The Lord hath need of him, tho the Cattel on a thousand Hills are his: It was but to fulfil a Prophecy, else we never read he rode, but went afoot many a wearisom Step, from Galilee to Jerusalem, to and fro unto the Feasts. God hath Business in this World, that concerns his Glory, needs thy Help against the Mighty, needs thy good Word in a good Cause, and thou perhaps art sluggish, or loth to appear in it: think nothing thou hast too dear for him, when he calls for it. I count not my Life dear to me (says Paul) to fulfil my Ministration with Joy, Acts 20. 24.

20. 24. And take this for a Rule to guide thee to know what he calls for from thee. When either thou canst not hold that which thou hast, without sinning against him, or when the laying of it down tends to promote his Glory, then God calls for it, and deny him not, he is a special Friend. Remark that Speech of Christ, he that forsakes not Father, Mother, &c. for my sake and the Gospel's, is not worthy of me, that is (Mat. 10. 37.) of my Friendship; he is not worthy to be held in correspondency withal by me. Chap. 7.

7. Stick close to him in the time of Trial. A Friend, tho he loves at all times, yet is specially born for a time of Adversity (Prov. 17. 17.) as in a great Case of Distress it is said of Hester, she came to the Kingdom for such a time as that: 'twas the greatest thing God had in his Eye, when, and for which he advanced her. There are special Times in our Lives, in which God hath ordained to try us, and bring us to offer up our Isaacs, as he required of Abraham. Think with thy self, I was converted, born again for such a time as this; shall I sail God now, and bid farewell to his Friendship, when there are such Obligations between God and me? Ah no! they are as Bills of Exchange, and you break all future Correspondencies, if you pay them not.

8. Suffer for him (if there be occasion) gladly, and be greedy of such Opportunities, when brought upon thee by others. As the Wounds of a Friend are faithful (as Solomon says) so for a Friend they are honourable; and Paul calls 'em Christ's Marks and Scars. The Apostles thought they had a Kindness done 'em, when they suffered for him, and the primitive Saints loved not their Lives to the Death, Rev. 12. 11. Do thou stand for him among his Enemies, and take his part. This we expect of those that profess an Eminency of Friendship; and in what Company soever they be, if they are silent at such a time, when they hear their Friend reviled, they strengthen his Enemies in their evil Speeches of him. See how Jonathan shewed the part of a Friend for David, 1 Sam. 19. 4. how he pleads for him to Saul, when his Life was in danger at every word, for he threw Javelins at him. And do thou vindicate God and his Ways the rather, because thou shalt have Opportunity to do this for him only in this Life; at the latter Day he will appear to defend himself, as Jude says. You glorify God amongst his Enemies only here. He that confesseth me before Men, that is, here, Him (says Christ) will I acknowledge, namely then, at that Day.

9. Be affected at all things done to his Dishonour, as if it were thine own, nay more than thou wouldst at thine own. Thus Jonathan did for David, 1 Sam. 20. 34. 'tis said, he grieved for David, because his Father had done him Shame. Friends are like Lute-Strings tuned to each, which will stir and tremble, if one of them be struck. Was God displeased at the Sins of the Israelites? It is added, Numb. 11. 10. That Moses was displeased also. And in another place it is said, that he stood weeping in the Tent-Door, and knew not how to help it, when God was so openly dishonoured by Zimri leading Cosbi. Paul's Spirit was stirred (Acts 17.) when he saw their Idolatry. And as thou art to moan on occasion of Sorrow, so to rejoice on occasion of Joy: When Souls are converted, and the lost Sheep and lost Goat are found, he calls his Friends to rejoice with him, says the Parable, Luk. 15. 5, 6. John being a Friend of the Bridgroom, rejoiced that he should decrease, and Christ encrease, John 3. 29.

C H A P. VIII.

Obedience to God described, as it is a Service performed to him. The Character and Properties of those who are his sincere and faithful Servants.

R O M. VI. 17, 18.

But God be thanked, that ye were the Servants of Sin; but ye have obeyed from the Heart that Form of Doctrine which was delivered you.

Being then made free from Sin, ye became the Servants of Righteousness.

IN these Words (as of old in the Types of Isaac, Ismael, the one the Son of a Bondwoman, the other of a Free, Gal. 4. 24.) you have set forth unto your view the twofold Condition of those two contrary Estates, the one of Nature, the other of Grace; and that in the Example and Pattern of these lately converted Romans, to whom the Apostle wrote, that had Experience of both: Who first while in their Estate of Nature, had been Servants to Sin; but now their Condition being altered by Grace, they were made free from Sin, and became the Servants of Righteousness; where by Righteousness is meant that universal Spiritual Strictness and Exactness which the Word of God requires. For it is here opposed to Sin, and therefore to be taken as largely as that is. And it hath reference unto the word Doctrine in the former Words, as being the whole entire Matter and Substance which that Doctrine commands, and which Christ gave in Charge to his Apostles, To teach all that believe in him, to do whatsoever he commanded, Mat. 28. 20. And the Apostles coming among these Romans, and teaching them that Righteousness which is required of them, God so wrought by their Preachings, that their Hearts were framed and fashioned to the Obedience of it; like as a piece of Clay or Metal cast into a Mould is fashioned to the likeness of the Prints in that Mould, and made serviceable to some use. Thus it was with their Hearts: For God that hath the Hearts of all Men in his Hands, like a skilful Artificer, used their Doctrine, the words of weak Men, as a Mould of Righteousness (as I may call it) whereinto casting and delivering thereinto, casting and fashioning their Hearts, they had the same Image and Prints of Righteousness stamped on them, and were made as serviceable and fit Instruments to be employed therein: They became Servants of Righteousness, shewing and manifesting this in their Lives, obeying that word of Righteousness to the utmost of their Endeavours, and this from the Heart being thus changed and framed thereunto. This is the meaning of the Words, as both the Words in the Original, the Scope of the Apostle, and the best Interpreters do manifestly shew.

Observ. The Condition of God's Children is to be Servants of Righteousness, or (which is all one) Servants to God in Righteousness, or according to that strictness which he requires in his Will. For what he calls here serving of Righteousness, he calls ver. 22. serving of God; please but God's Law, and you please him. 'Tis true indeed, that the Estate of God's Children is an Estate of Liberty, inasmuch as they are made free from Sin, in regard of Bondage to it; but there are two Masters, which, as we cannot serve both, so we must serve one of them; and if we are free from the one, we become Servants to the other, Mat. 6. 24. And also, altho it be true, that (as Christ saith) Henceforth I call you not Servants, but Friends, John 15. 15. yea Brethren and Sons also in other Places; yet Christ speaks not as exempting them from the Obedience of Servants to his Command: For he tells them, they are not his Friends in the 14th ver. unless they do what he commands. And he speaks that to shew his Love to them, in that he would deal with them more graciously, than the Lords of the World do with their Servants (tho they be Men like themselves, and he is God blessed fed for ever) for he would reveal all his Secrets to them, make them his bosom Friends, as it follows there; for the Servants know not their Masters Will (that is) are not of their Council, as you are, my Favourites, my Friends, my Privy-Counsellors. For all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known to you. God indeed hath other Servants, that are the Servants of his secret Will and Righteous Judgment; and so the Devil is, and all wicked Men, Isa. 44. 28. but such Servants the Saints are not, but of his revealed Will, they are Servants of his Righteousness. They are indeed rather Sons than Servants, he useth them so kindly. God serves himself of wicked Men, but the Saints do serve God in Righteousness and true Holiness.

For the proof of this, why should I heap up Scripture which is so plentiful? To be the Servants of the Lord, was the Title that all the old Patriarchs delighted in so much, boasting to wear God's Livery: So David, Psal. 116. 16. And 'tis the Title that the Apostles prefix in all their Epistles, as esteeming it most honourable: Yea the Angels themselves do make it to be the top of their Honour, Rev. 19. 10. I am thy Fellow-Servant to Jesus Christ. I will omit also the Reasons which may be drawn from our Creation and Regeneration. By the first Creation, every Creature is bound to be the Servant of its Maker: By virtue of our Regeneration, and being created again, as also of our Election, we are to be the Servants of Righteousness. For we are his Workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good Works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. In which Words observe, first that God's giving us a new Frame of Heart at our Regeneration, is to that end, it is to the Obedience of Righteousness, to good Works. Every Creature is created to an end, and tied, by virtue of its Creation, to that Work and Service it was created unto, and therefore never rests till it hath attained that End: So all the Creatures serve, yea and rejoice to serve God in that Employment he hath created them in. And then 2^{ly}, observe, That by virtue of our Election we are bound unto these Works, we were ordained to walk in them, and we are indeed chosen Servants. But I shall insist more particularly on these following Reasons.

Eph 2. 10.

1. We are obliged to God's Service, because it is the End, and Fruit of our Redemption by Christ. Tit. 2. 14. Christ is said to have given himself for us, that he might redeem us from all Iniquity, and purge us to be a peculiar People to himself, zealous of Good Works. I pray mark the Scope of the Words.

(1.) 'Tis said, that Christ gave himself for us; that is, resigned up himself, devoted himself in all that ever he did here upon the Earth for us: 'twas not for himself, since himself was given for us: he became our Servant, Phil. 2. 6, 7. He took upon him the Form of a Servant, and was obedient to Death; and in his Death, submitting himself to obey all Righteousness, he was Righteousnesses Servant, and in that our Servant. And why was this? It was to make us a peculiar People to himself, and to be peculiarly laid up for himself; to be set apart, devoted, and given up wholly unto him. And therefore in that Place of the Philippians, the Apostle exhorts in the 5th ver. that the same Mind should be in us; that we should become Servants of Righteousness for him, as he hath been for us.

(2.) Observe in that Place of Titus, that Christ giving himself for us, redeemed us; that is, bought us, purchased us out of our Enemies Hands. We are redeemed Ones to God, by the Blood of Christ: Now the Law of Nations gives it, that the Redeemed should be Servants to the Laws of the Redeemer: You are not your own (says the Apostle, 1 Cor. 6. 20.) For ye are bought with a Price; therefore glorify God in your Bodys and in your Spirits; for you are God's by the Right of Redemption. But yet because it might be thought, that tho' God's Children are thus redeemed and bought; all the Question is, whether they will, or do become Servants yea or no; for many out of Unthankfulness deny the Lord that bought them, 2 Pet. 2. But do any of his Redeemed Ones do so? No, they are made willing to serve him.

(3.) And therefore 3^{ly}, observe out of that Place of Titus 2. 14. that they are said to be redeemed; that they might be zealous of Good Works; not only willing, but earnest, forward, zealously and hotly pursuing after Good Works of Righteousness; and were it not so, he would lose his End in redeeming us: And there-therefore God brings home this Redemption of Christ to their Hearts, how he became a Servant to Righteousness, yea to Death for them, and so frames the same Disposition in them to Christ, that was in him to us, Phil. 2. 5. And therefore the Apostle Peter (1 Pet. 1. 14, to 18.) exhorting them to be as obedient Children to God, and to walk in Holiness and Righteousness, useth this as an Argument in the 18th ver. Knowing that you were redeemed not with corruptible things, but with the Blood of Christ; as if he had said, if you did but truly know and believe, that Christ did this for you, and that you have a part in this Redemption, it would frame your Spirits to the like willingness of Obedience unto him, yea, if Mens Hearts did but seriously make account to have Salvation by Christ, and did seek after it truly, they would be willing to obey him in any thing.

Book II.

But tho they are made willing, yet still the Question will be whether they are made able thereunto, yea or no, and so do really become his Servants, and obey him? Therefore,

4. Fourthly, Know that those whom God calls to be his Servants, he doth in some measure enable them thereunto. Every ordinary Tradesman when he takes an Apprentice, binds himself to teach him his Trade, and therefore how much more God? And therefore old Zachary (Luke 1. 74.) speaking of the Fruit of Christ's Redemption in his Redeemed, says, that it is not only to deliver them out of the Hands of their Enemies, but to grant them to serve him in Holiness and true Righteousness all their Days. To grant them, that is, to vouchsafe and give Strength and Ability thereunto: and to that end we are called by the Apostle (Eph. 2. 10.) A new Workmanship created to Good Works, which he had ordained that we should walk in them. Here I pray observe three things.

1st. That God creates a new frame of Heart which was not before.

2ly. Observe the End to which he created it, unto Good Works. The Phrase implies a giving a Power and Ability in some measure to do them: For as when God is said to create the Heavens to move, what is meant by it, but that he gives a Power to do it, Abilities and Endowments tending to that End? When an Artificer makes a Clock to strike, what is meant by it, but that he so frames it as it shall do so? When God created any thing, he had it to be, and in that gave Powers to act.

3ly. Observe that God had ordained that we should walk in them; his Decree was for it long since, and he cannot be frustrated of his End.

These things being thus cleared, what use shall we make of them?

USE 1. The first Use shall be for Trial, whether we be in the Estate of Grace or no, namely by this, whether we are the Servants of Righteousness or no? Are we the Redeemed Ones, as we all profess our selves to be, when we receive the Sacrament? This Inquiry is the more necessary, because this is the usual Plea of Men, that they are the true and dear Servants of God, and do serve him Day and Night, come to his Service and to Church, and think that is enough. I will name a few Properties of a Good Servant, which I desire you to examine your Hearts by, whether they be in you or no.

1. It is a necessary thing in a Good Servant to know his Master's Will and Humour, and what will please him: and tho I confess there are unprofitable Knowers of God's Will spoken of, that do it not, and who therefore shall be beaten with many Stripes; yet necessary it is that he that doth it, should know it, and that not only for the matter, for so wicked Men do, but for the manner, so to do it as it may be pleasing to God. A Clown that goes to the Court to serve his Prince, if he do not know the Fashion of the Court, will do but untoward Service. And therefore Eph. 5. the Apostle exhorting to Holiness of Life, and walking circumspectly, or exactly in that strictness God requires, adds these Words, not as Fools but as Wise; that is, not going about good Duties as Fools and Bunglers that do they know not what; but as cunning and wise Artists that know what they do. And therefore at the 10th & 17th ver. of that Chapter he, expressing his meaning, bids them understand what the Will of the Lord is, and what was acceptable to him; and to know this aright it is requisite to know truly what a God he is, whom we have to serve; and therefore in Gen. 31. 33. the knowing of God is made as it were the groundwork of all his Service in the new Covenant. To come therefore to the lication of the Sign, all Men in their natural Estate having but low conceits of God, do also fall short in their Apprehensions of that Righteousness which would please him (even as Fools out of their shallow conceits can never please wise Men) and hence they never come to be the Servants of God in true Holiness and Righteousness. For the Apostle (Rom. 12. 1, 2.) requires a true Work of Grace to discern what that good, and perfect, and acceptable Will of God is. Now by this Truth therefore it is easy to shew, that the most sorts of People in the World are not the true Servants of God, because they never dream of, or do follow after that true Righteousness that he requires. To omit the Righteousness of the Pharisees, consisting merely in carnal, sensual Pomp and Ostentation, in their Masses, Musick, Crosses, Holy-water and the like; I shall consider the outward Righteousness of those sorts of People who live among ourselves.

(1.) There is the Vulgar sort of ignorant People, that think they serve God well enough with their good meaning, and by mumbling over their Creed and ten Commandments, and saying the Lord's Prayer without Understanding. Here is a poor blind Sacrifice indeed. Alas poor People! You worship you know not what; for what God do you think he is, that will be thus served, with saying even what you know not, nor understand aright? Your God must needs be a sottish God, an ignorant God, a foolish God, that would be put off with such ignorant, blind and sottish Service.

(2.) There are profane Persons, that will drink, swear and blaspheme God, rail upon him and his Servants in every Tavern; and yet because they come to Church, and there bow themselves to God, think they serve him well enough. But I pray, consider, what manner of God do you make of him, whom you think you may thus easily deceive, mock and cozen with fair Words and outward Compliments? Tell me, wouldst thou own such a Servant thy self for one Minute, that should rail, conspire against thee, and only now and then come into thy Presence (as Gehazi did into Elisha's) and there complement thee with good Words?

(3.) There are civil Men that live in the Bosom of the Church, and think by their just dealing and giving content to Men, and by carrying themselves smoothly and evenly in the World, to please God. Will this Righteousness thinkest thou carry thee to Heaven? God must then be such an one as thy self, that careth not much for his Sabbath, his Word, his Sacraments, or his Children, but will be put off with the little Morality which thou contentest thy self with. Didst thou never hear that God was an Holy God, and that thou oughtest to follow after Holiness, or thou shalt never see the Face of God with Comfort? Remember the Righteousness of the Pharisees, which if thou exceedest not, thou shalt never enter into Heaven.

(4.) There is a formal Righteousness in Professors of Religion, who because they side with good Men, make a Shew, perform Family Duties, tho' deadly, carelessly, perfunctorily, yet think thus to please God well enough; if they hear the Word, delight in it, speak well of the Preacher, and say of him, that his Voice is pleasant, Ezek. 32. 33. and Ezek. 31. last. But alas! Bodily Exercise profiteth nothing, that is, fleshly and outward Performances slubbered over, prevail nothing with God without true Godliness; Faith in Christ and a new Nature aims at his Glory, 'tis Godliness must do the Deed. The Hypocrite in the 50th Psal. thought to please God with Multitudes of Sacrifices, which was the outward Worship of the Law; and these he offered up, tho' without Faith, Zeal and Sincerity of Heart. He thought it would please God well enough, and what was the Reason? You have it at ver. 21. he thought God like himself, and what pleased his own carnal Fancy, he thought would please God. I say to these, that think to please God with a Half-righteousness, a dead dull Righteousness, as God says to the People, Mal. 1. 6, 7, 8. A mortal Man would not be served so, and yet they thought God would. I desire every one to look into his own Conscience, and let him but ask his Heart this Question, whether he thinks that that measure and pitch of Obedience which he performs, will pass for current in God's Acceptation at the Day of Judgment.

Book II.

2. A good Servant will be careful of his Master's Business, bear it in his Memory, and not let it slip: Some Servants when they are sent of an Errand, if they be careful to do it, they will be thinking of their Message all the way; and so it is with a Servant of Righteousness, the Duties which God hath enjoined him in his Word, he is careful of them. What says David? Psal. 119. 15, 16. I will meditate on thy Precepts, and consider thy Ways, and I will not forget thy Word. And tho' other Business comes in, it shall not put that out of my Head. And therefore as God commands, he remembers the Sabbath, and hath it in his Mind all the Week to plot and contrive his Business, so as that he may attend alone on that Day.

3. A good Servant will stand for his Master's Credit, and not be ashamed of his Livery. He will stand in defence of his Master, and will not hear him wronged; and so is a good Christian, he is for Righteousness wheresoever he comes, and he will take its part, turn him whither you will, and is not ashamed to make Profession to all the World, whose Servant he is. He will practise that strictness, which the World cries down so much; and therefore no wonder if he gets so many a Scoff, and Snubs, and Wry-looks for his Master's sake: And if Men break out against any of the ways of Righteousness, he'll be for the defence of it with all his Might; and if he be called to it, will spend his dearest Blood in the Quarrel. What shall we then think of those meal-mouth'd Professors, that are only for Goodness in the Company of their Fellow-Servants, but when they are in the Company of their Master's Enemies, turn their Coats, and will serve Righteousness, but so far as it may stand with the good liking of their Friends, Parents, Masters, or Neighbours; and for fear of displeasing them, cut themselves short, and will go no further, then may stand with their good liking?

But did Men know and consider, that God whom they serve, is a just God and righteous in all his Laws; How durst they content themselves with a Half-obedience, seeing the same God that gave one Precept, gave another, as James saith? No, they would have a respect to all his Commandments, if they had a respect to him, for it is universal Obedience which he requires. Again, did Men consider God to be a Holy God, and to be most delighted in such Duties, wherein we have to do with him in his Ordinances, as his Sabbaths, Word, Sacraments and Holy Meditations, they would labour to please him herein most, and would strive to be holy as he is holy. Did Men also consider him to be an Almighty God, they would come with Fear and Reverence, with Hearts broke and humbled in all their Performances. If God had delighted in Sacrifices (says David) I would have given it him, but he knew his Delight, viz. a broken Heart, such (saith he) thou wilt not despise; and this he therefore brought with him in all his Performances. If Men did but consider God was a Spirit, they would labour to worship him in Spirit and Truth, as our Saviour says, that is, with changed Hearts and renewed Spirits, and durst not bring their old Hearts with them, which they had from Adam. And if Men did also but consider him to be the Searcher of the Heart and Reins, they would in all their Performances have an eye to their inward Man, and humble themselves for their secretest Corruptions therein. And did Men consider God to be a God jealous of his Honour, they would not dare to rest in things done out of Self-love, and for by-respects, tho' never so secret, but would labour to work their Hearts in all their Performances, to have an eye to God's Glory, and to deny their own Interest and Honour.

4. A good Servant is content to submit, and to be subject to his Master's Will in any thing he commands. Speak Lord (says Samuel, 1 Sam. 3. 9, 10.) for thy Servant heareth. Let God say what he will, he is his Servant, and must and will obey, and is content to hear, and willing to yield any part of that Righteousness God hath revealed in his Word: Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? says Paul, Acts 9. 6. To do, Why? he undid all that ever he had done, and took a clean contrary course to what before he had walked in. Yea, and what wilt thou have me suffer? he might have said as well, for what Imprisonments did he undergo, and all for Righteousness-sake? I count not my Life dear, says he, so I may fulfil my Ministration with Joy, here was a good Servant. We'll suppose now God calls thee to offer up thy Isaac, to cut the Throat of thy dearest Son, to part with with that Sin which before thou didst love as thy Life, art thou willing to do this? Thou art a good Servant. Or suppose he call thee to deny thy Credit and Reputation in the World, for the despised Profession of his Truth; and tho thou beest trampled on, so he may have Glory, thou carest not, thou art a good Servant. And so likewise when he calls thee, as he doth us all in his Word, to deny thy Correspondencies with thy former Company, in the unfruitful Works of Darkness, and to fall a reproving them rather, and to gather up thy self from Conformity with the World in their Corruptions, and thou obeyest, tho against the liking of all thy Friends, thou art a good Servant, and shalt not lose thy Reward. And thus also he calling thee to the Spiritual and constant Performance of such Duties, as thou formerly didst neglect, or slightly perform: As to hear the Word, and to repeat it, and so pray it into thy Heart, and to pour out thy Soul in daily faithful Prayer, and to deal plainly with God in confessing thy Sins to him in private Prayer, and to tell all, and to deal as honestly in confessing and forsaking, as thou wouldst have God deal with thee in forgiving; and to turn thy Heart inside outward to him: Art thou herein also willing and careful to obey? Thou art a good Servant. And God also requiring thee to sanctify the Sabbath, and to be at more cost than ordinary, in a strict Care of Thoughts, Words and Actions, Isa. 58. 13, 14. Art thou willing to submit? Thou art a good Servant. And God also requiring thee in outward Conversation, not only to avoid such Actions as are scandalous before Men, but to beware of unprofitable Speeches, of spending away of Time, as also to have an eye to the Carriage of thy Heart, watching over it continually, to see how it is within doors, searching and ferreting thy Corruptions out of their Lurking-holes: This Strictness God requires, and it is that great Commandment given, Prov. 4. 23. Above all keeping, keep thy Heart. Art thou careful to do this? Thou art a good Servant. I could name an Abundance more of that Spiritual Strictness and Righteousness, but I should be too long. By all the Instances mentioned, examine your selves, whether your Hearts have been brought to stoop and submit, to be made subject to the Will of God: Rev. 8. 7. 2 Cor. 10. 4. Is every Thought brought into the Obedience of Christ? that is, is it made pliable, willing, ready and glad to yield, whatever comes of it? Dost thou come to God, saying, Lord, what wilt thou have me do? O how many are there in the World, that would go for the Servants of God, whose Hearts yet will never yield to half of this, that never left any of their old Sins for God, nor set themselves in a true earnest Course to do any of these good Duties; nay, whose Hearts are so stout and proud, as they stand out against, and are at Enmity with all these? They cannot endure this Strictness; tell them of sanctifying the Sabbath, and what a waspishness, a peevishness, frowardness and perverseness appears in them, for they can't endure to hear of it!

5. A good Servant is he that sets himself apart from all other Mens Business, yea even his own, to follow his Master's. We use to say of Servants, that they are not their own Men, much less other Mens. If I seek to please Men (says Paul) I am not the Servant of Christ, Gal. 1. 10. 1 Pet. 3. 4. That is, a good Servant lives no longer to the Lusts of Men, no longer squares his Life, so as to please them, by living in the same Lusts as they do: No, but he lives to the Will of God, 1 Pet. 3. 4. We must not do our own cursed Wills in any thing, we are not our own, that we should live unto our selves, but to him that paid a Price for us. If any Man serve me (says Christ) let him follow me, John 12. 26. And you know what elsewhere follows upon the denying of a Man's self: A Man must deny his own Will, his own Business, and not follow the strain of his own Heart, in doing what he pleaseth, and leaving undone the rest. How far short do Men come of this, as those that will not deny themselves in their carnal Credit, Ease or Sloth, for the performance of good Duties. They will serve Righteousness, but so far as it may stand with the good liking of their Parents, Friends, Wives, Husbands, Masters, Neighbours, and for fear of displeasing them, cut themselves short, and pluck in their Hands.

6. A good Servant, as he knows and is content to submit, so he makes a Necessity too of doing his Master's Will; and whatsoever comes in the way, is not so necessary to him, as this. David, a tried Servant of God, says of himself, Psal. 119.

31. I have stuck to thy Testimonies; it is not meant only in regard of defending them, but practising them; he sticks to it as a Conclusion, this must be done, this Sin must not be committed, this Duty must not be omitted constantly, whatsoever comes between: as Paul thought that a Necessity lay upon him to preach the Gospel; and whenas his Friends persuaded him not to go, because of Persecution at Jerusalem, I count not my Life dear (says he) die or live, I will go. Daniel also is an Example without all contradiction in this Case; when the Decree was made, that no Petition should be put up to any God but the King only, for thirty Days, Daniel would not balk a whit of his praying thrice a day, tho it should cost him his Life; he made therefore you must think a Case of Necessity of it, he could not live thirty Days without private Prayer. Every Man's Heart pitcheth upon some Cause as necessary for him to follow, and to it he sticks, and will not be beaten off of it. Thus a covetous Man layeth this for a Conclusion, that he will be Rich ('tis the Apostle's own Phrase) and an ambitious Man is for Applause, and a voluptuous Man is for Pleasure, let the Commandment do what it will: What care they? There is no wicked Man but sticks to false Necessities, and they hinder his Heart from turning. One Man is hampered with Correspondency with Friends, another entangled in the World, and his Heart hath Interest in many things, and when he thinks of turning to God, he sticks to these things as more necessary. But those that are Servants to God in Righteousness indeed, and in Truth, count Obedience to God the one thing necessary, and that in comparison to it, it is not necessary to be rich or learned, &c. There is in every Man's Life, yea even in every Day, a Time that falls out, wherein a Man's dearest Lusts will be hazarded for Righteousness Service. Observe now in such Passages what it is your Hearts stick to, as most necessary; is it either the obeying thy Lust, or doing thy Duties? Let Men have a Calling, in which they must uphold many unlawful Practices, or they cannot live, what doth the Man plead? 'Tis necessary (says he) that I must live. When Men are cast into Straitness, that either they must sin, or lose their Credit, what is the usual Plea? 'Tis a Case of Necessity (say they) what would you have had me do? Our own Lives afford many of the like Instances to them: examine now your selves, what in these Cases you usually do. Do you rather lay this Conclusion, Let things be how they will, howsoever God must be obeyed; thy Will, O Lord! not my Will be done. Hath thy Heart such an Eye to the Will and Command of God? Thou art then a good Servant, and tho thou failest sometimes in a particular Action, yet still thy Heart in thy Course is firmly set for the Commandment, and makes account so to be, where-soever thou goest. Thou knowest what thou meanest to do, and all the World shall not beat thee from it. I confess a Child of God may have a great deal ado in his own Heart to deny himself in some Cases, yet still his Heart cleaves to the Commandment, and still thinks that to be more necessary; whereas a wicked Man's Heart flights the Commandment in such a Case, and thinks much it should stand in his way, and he leaps over the biggest of all, if need be, for his Master Lusts commands.

7. Another Property in a good Servant is to expect warrant from his Master for what he doth, and not to go about his Business hand over head, or to do so much as he lists, and leave the other undone. Those that are Servants of Righteousness, should look into the Word, as the great Counsel, and should enquire of the Lord, and of his Word. Servants use every Morning to come to their Masters, and know what their Will is; and so should we in all our Actions, that we may have warrant for them. He who in Micah 6. thought to serve the Lord with Will-worship, says, Wherewith shall I come before the Lord? Shall I offer up Rivers of Oil, or a thousand Rams? What says God there to him? He hath shewed thee (saith he) O Man, what is good, and what the Lord requireth of thee in his Word. Mariners that sail at random, often cast their Ships away, whenas if they would sail by Compass and Chart, they might safely arrive at the Port. That which is called in Scripture walking with God, is to do as Enoch did, who had God ever in his Presence, had an eye to his Commands, and observed his Orders in every particular Case, directing him, This thou shalt not do, this thou shalt now do. As the Eyes of the Handmaids were upon the Mistress (as David speaks in the Case of Salvation, tion, Pfal. 123. 2.) so should our Eyes wait on the Lord in the case of his Service. The Apostle condemns Eye-service in the Servants of Men, because their Masters are not always present with them, and can't behold them always; but it is commendable in the Servants of God, because they are always in his Presence, and his Eyes behold whatever they do; and therefore they should do all, as seen of him.

8. The last, and indeed chiefest Property of a good Servant (which must be added to all these) is not only to know his Master's Will, and to be content to submit to it, but to do it effectually. You know there was one said, he would go work in the Vineyard, but yet did not, Mat. 21. 30, 31. It is not enough to enter into the Profession of God's Service, and to call him Master, and give him good words. For not every one that saith, Lord, Lord, but he who doth the Will of God the Father, shall enter into Heaven, Mat. 7. 21. For the same purpose John speaks, 1 John 3. 7. Little Children, let no Man deceive you, he who doth Righteousness is Righteous: And as he that doth sin (as in John 8. 34.) is the Servant of it; so he that doth Righteousness, that is, that makes it his Trade, constant Practice, and his Course (for the word ποιεῖν notes out an Habitual continued Practice) is the Servant of it: And herein (says John, 1 John 3. 10.) are the Children of God and the Devil manifest; he who doth not Righteousness, is not of God. There be many that in their good Mood will come and profer their Service, and set their Hand to God's Work, but they look back again, and as those in Hosea 6. their Goodness is as the Morning-Cloud, and as the early Dew it goes away, like as a Mist or Dew fallen in the Morning, and seems to water the Earth, but when the Sun ariseth, it vanisheth away. When they had heard a powerful Sermon, and had Judgments threatned, being hewed by the Prophets (as 'tis at the 5th ver.) and being wounded, pricked, terrified by the Word of his Mouth, then they would come and submit themselves, and do God a spurt of Service. But yet alas! their Reformation was but as the Lightning (as 'tis at the 8th ver.) that flasheth, and is soon gone again. For (as 'tis at the 7th ver.) still they broke their Faith, and dealt treacherously in God's Covenant: Thus Traitors when they are in Prison, will do any thing till released; but their traiterous Heart remaining still, they are as bad as ever, when at Liberty. These are not Servants, but Runaways, and God will not own them, for he can scarce keep them for one day together.

Nor is it enough to do Service to God constantly, and to abide by it, but we must do it throughly, having a respect to every Commandment: This is God's Testimony of David his Servant (Acts 13. 22.) That he did perform all his Will; and 'tis Paul's Prayer for the Colossians, that they might walk worthy of the Lord, and please him in all Things, being fruitful in all good Works, Col. 1. 10. To walk worthy of him, is so to walk, as God may not be ashamed of us, but may say, rejoicing in us, as he did in his Servant Job (Job 1. 8.) Seest thou not my Servant Job, an upright Man, one that feareth God and escheweth Evil? We must endeavour to please him in all things, to obey him in one thing as well as another. A Man will not own a Servant, who doth but what he lists, and what pleaseth himself, and leaves his Master's chiefest Business undone, who insists on tithing Mint and Cummin, and leaves the great things of the Law, as sanctifying the Sabbath, and constant private Prayer unperformed. And we must be fruitful in all good Works too, that is, making trial and doing some of all sorts, always abounding in the Work of the Lord. Let us look to ourselves, for there are many (Titus 1. 16.) that profess they know God, and acknowledg him for their Master, wear his Livery, but yet in Works they deny him. When a Man in a Constancy acts contrary to what God wills, he denies him. For if his Course was but trac'd, it would be said, surely God is none of his Master, he will own no such Servants; and therefore in Works they deny him.

B O O K III.

Evangelical Motives to Obedience, drawn from the Obligation which God hath laid upon us, by his appointing us unto Good Works, in his Election of us, and by the Greatness of his Love manifested in the several Instances of it. Other Motives urged from the Consideration, that Christ having by his Death conquered the Devil, and destroyed his Kingdom, we are by our Christian Profession engaged to hate him, and fight against him as a publick Enemy to Christ and us, and by all our Actions to endeavour the Ruin of his dark Kingdom of Sin. Other Motives deduced, from the Divine Presence, and Majesty apparent in our Holy Services and Performances: and also from God's Design in the Revelation of his Word, that we should not only read and know it, but practise it too.

Titus III. 8.

This is a faithful saying, and these Things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they who have believed in God, might be careful to maintain Good Works; these Things are good and profitable unto Men.

C H A P. I.

A Motive to Love and Obedience, drawn from the Consideration, that this Obedience is a Business, an Holy Employment committed to us, which we should be careful to discharge. That the Doctrine of Free-Grace enforceth the Performance, and suits our Spirits to it.

MY Design is to consider the Motives, which the New Testament affords to invite Men regenerate to Holiness, Obedience and Fruitfulness in all Good Works; and to this purpose I have chosen this Text as the most eminent, which hath in its Coherence and Connexion, a Comprehension of many the chiefest things that might move us thereto included in it. The Introduction in those Words, This is a faithful Saying, refers to what forewent, of which he gives that Encomium, and should rather close the former Verse than begin this, as Luther and others observe. But because the Apostle's Scope is to bring upon those he would exhort to Good Works, Works, the weight of all said in the foregoing Verses; therefore it is fitly joyned to this in this coherence, and is as if the Apostle had said, that which I have now spoken is of all Sayings or Doctrines the most faithful, and tends the most of all others to provoke them that believe it, to be careful to maintain Good Works; therefore, says he to Titus, affirm these things constantly. E'er I insist on those Motives, which this so faithful a Saying affords to Good Works, I am to speak to four things which serve to open the Text.

1. That the Exhortation to good Works and Obedience, follows their having believed, That they which have believed in God, &c.

(1.) Faith then is clearly founded upon no Work in us or upon us, which is the Apostle's Scope to prove, as appears by the 5th ver. where treating of that which is the ground of Faith for Salvation, he says, Not by Works of Righteousness, but according to his Mercy, hath he saved us. What God doth to save us, that is the only Foundation for our Faith; and a Man therefore clearly and nakedly believes on God without consideration of Works, That they who have believed in God, &c.

(2.) It is in vain to exhort any to Good Works, till they have first believed. Papists slander our Doctrine, that by crying up free Grace and Faith, we deny good Works; and upbraid us, that our Doctrine affords not any Motives thereto sufficient; and because (forsooth) we do not urge them to that end, for which they would have them, namely, to merit Heaven, therefore they reproach us, that we proceed not upon sufficient grounds. But we do indeed proceed in the right Order, first we teach Men to believe on free Grace, as if there were no Works, and then to fall a doing, as if there was no Faith to be justified by: That they who have believed in God, may be careful to maintain good Works. Yea, we add further, we urge good Works upon a higher ground, for a better and more noble end than they can pretend to, who assert, that we are justified by them. You'll say, what's that? It is to glorify God. All the World must needs grant, that to glorify God is a higher end than to justify Man: John 15. 8. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bring forth much Fruit. That is the Motive which Christ urgeth. Again, they say, we proceed not on good Ground, because we do not good Works to merit by them. Ay! But we go on a better Ground, which is Love and Thankfulness: whereas theirs is a Motive suited only to Self-love. The Devil endeavoured to blemish Job, Job 1. 9. Doth Job serve God for nought? And indeed Religion founded wholly on Self-love and Interest, would be mercenary and base; but to serve God from a Principle of Love and Gratitude, is a noble Act of Friendship. John 15. 14. Ye are my Friends, if ye do whatever I command you. But of the others it might be said, you are my Hirelings only, you only seek to merit by your Services, and do all to merit Heaven. When Paul (Rom. 6. 22.) exhorts to Sanctification, he gives this as a Motive, that the End is everlasting Life; but yet this Life is a free Gift of God, not what we merit, but what he freely bestows. That's a poor Religion, in which when Men have done all, they are Workers of Iniquity: But now if Men work only for self, they are Workers of Iniquity, for setting up a Man's self is Original Sin; and therefore if we live according to that Principle, we rise no higher than corrupt Nature.

2. It is to be considered, what is the Import of that Phrase, maintain good Works. The Words are, προσάδειν καλῶν ἔργων. Beza renders it, that they excel, or go before others (namely Heathens) in good Works. The same Word is used, ver. 14. and that sense of comparison is favoured by that Expression, Tit. 3. 14. Let ours also, &c. speaking of Christians, as in distinction from Heathens; and so then they that have believed (in the Text) are set in opposition to Unbelievers. It were the greatest Dishonour to Christian Religion (which the Apostle boasts of to be so glorious and faithful a Doctrine) if it should produce less, or not eminently more of Good Works, than moral Principles in Heathens have done. What singular Thing do you? (says Christ) for these Things do the Heathens and Publicans, Mat. 5. 47. τί περισσόν, what over and above other Men, yea what, that is abundant in comparison of them, and which they think superfluous? Christ had used the Verb of the same Noun (ver. 20.) concerning the Pharisees, who were so full of Works, that they lookt to be justified by them. But

Book III.

But says Christ, except your Righteousness doth $\pi\epsilon\rho\iota\sigma\sigma\upsilon\epsilon\upsilon\upsilon$, overflow, exceed their Righteousness, you cannot be saved.

Another meaning is, that they should take care of Good Works, as their Business, Function, Office, which they are set over, so the Word more naturally signifies; as in 1 Thess. 5. 12. Know them that are over you (speaking of Officers) 'Tis the same Word, and doth govern a Genitive Case, as here also; so likewise the Apostle (1 Tim. 3. 5.) when he speaks of ruling ones Family well, useth the same Word to express a Man's being over it as chief Orderer, Governor and Disposer of it, as a President, which is applied to being over things, as well as Persons. Take any Office of Charge or Trust, especially such wherein one hath others under him, and it hath such a Name in the Greek and Latin Tongues, as to express the matter committed to his Charge; and so we in English express the Office in the Title of the Officer, when we call him, the Treasurer, Master of the Ordnance, or Ammunition. These Names import an Office, and a Man's having a great charge committed to his Trust to manage, and this not as a petty Under-Officer, but as in chief. And so the Word $\pi\rho\sigma\acute{\alpha}\delta\epsilon\upsilon\iota$ in the Text, is an elegant Metaphor, and is as if he had said, Exhort them that believe in God to consider what Office and Function by so doing they have taken on them, and are hereby engaged in, even to be in chief over Good Works. And thus it imports three Things.

1. That they have all sorts of Good Works committed to them, as their Business and Employment.

2. That they have them committed to them, as the Ware, the Goods, the Treasure they deal in, to see to it that no kind of Good Work be wanting (as one when any thing is committed to his Charge, is careful of it) and which they are to improve and manage, as the most precious Treasure committed to them as a Trust by God. They are to husband it, and to have the Care of it; and therein they are in chief too, in comparison of all other Men, and are therefore to excel all others by far in Faithfulness, Care and Diligence therein. Moral Civil Heathens, and formal Christians may pretend to this, but you are in chief; you are bonorum operum prefecti, the Foremen, the Presidents of the good Work-Office; and God will require that at your hands, which he will not at theirs (as States and Princes do of their chief Officers the account of such things) and therefore as your Place is, so let your Care beto abound and excel therein. And this Interpretation, as it is more natural to the Greek Phrase, so it is more genuine to the former Words, that they be careful. That which such Places and Offices of Trust do properly require, is Care; and therefore the Apostle using this Metaphor that he might answer the Force of it, useth also the word Careful, and both together do urge with a doubled Strength, this that is required of them. And with this falls in (tho expressed here with a more emphatical Addition) that which is used as a more ordinary ground of Exhortation to Holiness so frequently in Scripture: 1 Thess. 4. 7. He hath not called us to Uncleanness, but to Holiness; you are to make Holiness your Vocation, your Calling, Trade and Business: And so in 1 Pet. 2. 21. Whereunto you are called, and every one is to walk in his Vocation. Thus Good Works are the very calling of a Christian.

3. The 3^d Thing to be considered is the Motives, the Incentives here used, which the former part of the Words does direct us to, when he saith, This is a faithful Saying, these Things I will that thou affirm constantly, that, &c. It directs us to the Words or Sum of Doctrine afore-delivered: now that Doctrine delivered afore is the Doctrine of free Grace, as it is set out to us in the Work of Father, Son and Holy Ghost, which he had insisted on to this very end in the Verse immediately before, and in the foregoing Chapt. ver. 11, 12, 13. all which came in under the comprehension of these Things in the Text, and all which he himself here brings in (as, if you read what is afore and after, appears) to this end, to urge all sorts of Good Works upon all sorts of Believers. Now the Doctrine of Free-Grace is that, to which in an eminent manner the Apostle useth to give the Stile of a faithful Saying. Thus, 1 Tim. 1. 15. This is a faithful Saying, and worthy of all Acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the World to save Sinners, whereof I am chief. Which Doctrine he would have Ministers most frequent in, to affirm constantly, and to affirm with a special Certainty and Assurance; for so the word to affirm imports, to speak of them as things that hath the greatest reality in them, and which when so delivered and so uttered, do mightily work upon Men. And so I come to the main Doctrine intended, which shall be made good out of this Context and Epistle, viz. That the Doctrine of the free Grace in God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, doth afford sufficient Motives and Inducements to Men, already saved by Faith through that Grace without Works, to cause them to be careful to abound (above all others) in Obedience and good Works.

1. The Doctrine of free Grace, is that faithful saying here intended, as that which he sets his probatum est upon, to be effectual to this end. These Things (saith he, namely to teach) are good and profitable unto Men.

2. You have here the free Grace both of God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, in their several Works; you have them all here.

(1.) You have the free Grace of God the Father: ver. 4. After that the Kindness and Love of God our Saviour towards Man appeared. He intends the Father of our Saviour Jesus Christ, viz. God (so in the Greek) whom he calls Saviour in distinction from Christ, ver. 6. for he (saith he) namely, this God our Saviour, ver. 4. through Jesus Christ our Saviour, &c. Therefore these are two distinct Persons, and both our Saviours, the one the Father, the other the Son; and he speaks of this his Grace as an hidden Mystery, which we knew not of, being of old concealed in his Breast towards us, and therefore used the word appeared, ἐπιφάνη, broke out suddenly, unexpectedly, as Joseph's Love to his Brethren did.

(2.) There is the Grace and Love of Jesus Christ, and his Work, whom he therefore calls our Saviour; and he says no more there, because he had told us (but seven Verses afore, Chap. 2. 14.) That our Saviour Jesus Christ gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all Iniquity, and purify to himself a peculiar People zealous of good Works.

(3.) There is the Grace of God seen in the Holy Ghost, and his Work.

1. The Gift of him and his Person unto us to dwell in us, ver. 5, & 6. The Holy Ghost, whom he shed on us richly, as the word is, and 'tis indeed the richest Gift that ever was given.

2. In his Work upon us, that he regenerated and renewed us; ver. 5. By the washing of Regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Spirit.

3. In the concomitants of the Gift of him unto us, expressed first in general and comprehensive Terms, saved us, estating us into the whole of Salvation, absolutely and indefeasibly, fully and compleatly, in respect of the Right to it, and this not of Works, but according to his Mercy, mere Mercy. And then secondly, it is particularly expressed in the parts of it: 1. Justification from all Sin, and a Fulness of Righteousness, ver. 7, 8. And 2. a perfect Title to eternal Life, he then made us Heirs of eternal Life; not Children only (which is Peter's Motive) but Heirs of eternal Life according to Hope, for so the Words are to be divided from the other: Heirs of eternal Life being Relatives one to the other, these intermediate words, and according to Hope, being intended to distinguish our being made Heirs here in this Life from that hereafter. Here it is in Hope, we are Heirs according to Hope, but not according to Possession; for as the Apostle says (Rom. 8. 24.) What a Man sees (or possesseth) why doth he yet hope for it? Yet so as it is as sure as if we had it, for 'tis an Inheritance, and we are saved (ver. 5.) fully, compleatly already; and so the last Clause of this Doctrine is made good out of the Words, That to Men already saved through Faith, or of Grace without Works, the Doctrine of this Grace affords Motives to all good Works.

Now before I come to demonstrate this in each particular, I shall premise this general Proof concerning the whole of the Grace of God in all three Persons. 1 Pet. 1. 13. when he would exhort them to behave themselves as obedient Children, and to be holy in all manner of Conversation (ver. 14, 15.) to move them to this, he had said before, ver. 13. Trust perfectly in the Grace that is brought unto you in the Revelation of Jesus Christ. So do I rather read the Words, than as our Translators have rendred them. Trust, τελειῶς, is perfectly, not by halves, (so in the Margent) for this Grace affords a perfect ground and stay for Faith to rest upon; and then it is plain that φερομένῃν, which they translate, in the Grace

Book III. which is to be brought (as in the future and for time to come) may more naturally be understood, is brought, it noting what at the present is brought, and so is to be read. It was the word Hope, and the Syriack Translation together, that diverted this reading; whereas Hope is often put for Faith and Trust, both in the Old and New Testament. In the Old, Job 13. 15. that known Place, Tho he kill me, yet will I trust in him, I will hope in him. And in the New, Eph. 1. 12. That we should be to the Praise of the Glory of his Grace, who first trusted in Christ. In the Margent it is hoped, and so in the Greek. Thus then the words, 1 Pet. 1. 13. may run, Trust perfectly on the Grace, which is brought to you, or (as the Vulgar) is offered to you. And the other Phrase, rendered at the Revelation (as if it were at the Day of Judgment) is manifestly ἐναποκάλυψε, in the Revelation of Jesus Christ, in whom this Grace is made known, and is termed a Revelation, in respect of the former hidness and secrecy of it, compared to the Manifestation of it now, God having kept it secret in the times of the Old Testament. Thus in Rom. 16. 25. the Preaching of Christ is called the Revelation of the Mystery, which was kept secret since the World began. And at this Peter hath as evident a Name in using this Word here, having (in the Words before, ver. 12, 13.) said, that it was kept hid from those of the Old Testament, yea the Angels, who desired to pry into it; but is brought to you, even home to your Doors, in the Revelation of Christ, namely, through the Gospel. Now having thus restored this Scripture in 1 Pet. 1. 13. to its right meaning; that which I produce it for and apply it unto, is, that the trusting perfectly in this Grace should make us obedient, yea and the more perfectly we trust, the more we shall be obedient; and you can never trust enough or too much upon it, and upon it alone, whilst (as it follows) you are obedient Children, or as the Children of Obedience, made up of nothing else, you carry your selves towards this Grace. For why should the Apostle upon this Connexion and Coherence mention their relation of Children, when he would have the Grace of God to move them, but because there is the sweetest Connexion and Comprehension of these two in the Heart? for no Man rationally is moved to any thing, which he hath not a Principle within him futed to, and which answers that Motive, and which is to be the Life and Soul of it. If a Man be a Slave, one of a mere servile Spirit, this Grace speaks not Reason to him; for that is practical Reason to every one, that futes his Spirit. Now one under the Law (as the Apostle opposeth it to Grace, Rom. 6.) can find no Reason, no Strength, no Efficacy in such Cords of Love and free Grace, no more than a Beast doth in Principles of common Reason; but if one be a Child, and have the Spirit of a Child, and is under Grace (as the Apostle speaks) then this Grace, that is his Sovereign, teacheth him this Obedience, and he obeys it naturally; for he is a meet Scholar and Disciple to be taught this Lesson. And this another parallel Place in this Epistle to Titus confirmeth, Chap. 2. 11, 12. The Grace of God that brings Salvation hath appeared. Which is all one with what Peter had said, 1 Pet. 1. 13. Which is brought to you in the Revelation of Christ. And because that this Grace, that is in God himself is the Subject of the Gospel, therefore that Doctrine of it is called Grace; as likewise because withal it is the Object of our Faith, it is called Faith, Teaching us, μαρτ' εὐσ'α, teaching and instructing us, as Children are taught by their Instructors and Tutors. Now therefore as in the Old Testament, they were under the Law as their School-master, as their Tutor and Governor (I put two or three of the Phrases together used by the Apostle, Rom. 6. Gal. 3.) so being under Grace, their Spirits are taught and disciplined by it, formed and framed to the Principles thereof, and the Lessons it reads, which do all teach denying of Ungodliness, and Subjection to all Dispositions and Duties to God; as he is holy and gracious, which may make him perfect to all and every good Work of all sorts; which he owes to himself in Temperance, to live soberly, to his Neighbour in Justice, to live righteously, and to God in living Godly. That is, it teacheth perfect Holiness to all we owe any kind of Duty unto; for all we do, or can be supposed to owe, are either what is due to God, our Neighbour, or our selves: and it teacheth (as for the Motive or Incentive thereto) all these in one Lesson, the Grace of God appearing to the Heart, and being made manifest to a Man's Soul.

C H A P. II.

That God's Love in Electing us is a great Motive to all Acts of Love and Obedience: That in this his Election of us he hath ordained and appointed us to Love and good Works.

I Come now particularly to demonstrate that the Grace and Love of God, manifested in our Salvation, engageth us to Holiness, Obedience, and Service.

The proper Work of God the Father is Election, and his Grace shines most eminently there. Thus in the mention of all three Persons, and in the ascribing the proper Work to each, the Apostle (1 Pet. 1. 2.) attributes Election to the Father. Now therein I consider two things: 1. The Act it self. 2. The Love, the Greatness of the Grace and Love shewn in it, and how strongly by both we are obliged to Holiness and Obedience.

1. That God should choose and single, and design thee forth to this Prefecture, to this Office of Care over good Works, engageth to all Diligence and Faithfulness: The Apostle judgeth it but reasonable, and upon that ground urgeth Timothy to give himself wholly up to that Office the great God had chose and designed him unto; and he urgeth his Engagement to do so by what Obligation is found amongst Men: 2 Tim. 2. 4. No Man that warreth entangleth himself with the Affairs of this Life; but gives over all other Callings whatever (as the Law of a Souldier then was) that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a Souldier. Paul when he was chosen to the greatest Service that ever Man underwent but Christ, was told by Ananias, Acts 22. 14. The Lord God of our Fathers (that chose them) hath chosen thee, that thou shouldst know his Will, &c. and hear the Word of his Mouth; that is, obey him: And the sense of this fired Paul's Heart. And Christ also (Acts 9. 15.) calls him a chosen Vessel; to what end? To carry my Name; that is, to bear my Name about the whole World, and unto all Ages after, in Holiness of Life, and Purity of Doctrine; a Vessel singled out to do it, purged and made meet for his Master's Use, prepared to every good Work; God having known, owned, and set his Seal upon him for his own by Election, as Paul speaks, 2 Tim. 2. 19. alluding to that in Isaiah; Be ye pure; ye that bear the Vessels of the Lord touch no unclean thing, Isa. 52. 11. much more the Vessels themselves chosen to bear his Name, ought not to do so. It was a great and effectual Argument to Cyrus (tho an Heathen Prince) to perswade him to give Leave and Commission to the Jews to build the Temple, even this, that God had so many Years before designed him by Name, that God had said (in Isaiah's time) of Cyrus, he is my Shepherd, that shall perform all my Pleasure, Isa. 44. 28. This thus written of him long before he was born, and this coming to his Knowledge; he was moved and effectually moved hereby to perform it: Ezra 1. 2. Thus saith Cyrus King of Persia, The Lord hath charged me to build an House at Jerusalem which is in Judea: How much more should it move thee that hast found, or hast good hope of (or thou hast hope of nothing) that God hath writ down thy Name in his Book from all Eternity, as a chosen Vessel, that should know and perform his Will? Paul in like manner strengthens this Charge to Timothy with those Prophecies that had been given forth of him at his Ordination, when he had Hands laid on him by the Appointment of the Spirit of Prophecy: 1 Tim. 1. 18. This Charge I commit unto thee, Son Timothy, according to the Prophecies which went before on thee, that thou by them mightest war the good Warfare. By them, that is, to be stirred up the more by them, because it was thus foretold of thee; much more should we be stirred up to our Holy Duty, when from everlasting God hath chosen us hereunto. Now (Eph. 1.) Paul expressly tells us, that God hath chosen us before the Foundation of the World, that we should be holy and blameless before him in Love.

2. Holy Obedience being found to be the main thing pitcht upon by God in those Decrees of his, as the principal end under his own Glory unto which he designed us, we should be the more excited to it. The first and primary, yet so in that place the Apostle makes it; for the Apostle's Scope is (ver. 3.) to enumerate the Blessings, and the Acts of blessing, with the proper Designments of them as we are blessed with them in Christ, and to set them in their Order. He begins with Election; ver. 4. According as he hath chosen us in him before the Foundation of the World: And withal, lays forth the proper principal Designment of Election, as the first Act of all other towards us; and the first and principal is Holiness, to be holy and unblameable before him in Love. So that as the Act of Election is distinguished from Predestination, and is the first of the two; so the primary and first Aim God in that first Act of Election had, was Holiness, as essential to the Person who was to be in Christ; and then Adoption, or Sonship, or Right to eternal Life and Glory (which is the Act of Predestination, as 'tis distinguished from Election) is but as an outward Privilege or Dignity superadded. When God chooseth a Man, he chooseth him for himself (Psal. 4. 3.) for himself to converse with, to communicate himself unto him as a Friend, a Companion, and his Delight. Now it is Holiness that makes us fit to live with the Holy God for ever, since without it we cannot see him (Heb. 12.) which is God's main Aim, and more than our being his Children. As one must be supposed a Man, one of Mankind, having a Soul reasonable, e'er we can suppose him capable of Adoption, or to be another Man's Heir. As therefore it was the main first Design in God's Eye before the Consideration of our Happiness, let it be so in ours. It is not only the means through which God hath chosen us to Salvation: 2 Thess. 2. 13, 14. Who hath chosen you through Sanctification, &c. So Sufferings are also said to be the Means; but this is the End also, and that more than our Glory and Happiness; and therefore Holiness for ever remains, and Love (1 Cor. 13.) and we are chosen to be holy before him in Love. This Portion has made me understand the reason of that Order, and placing of those Benefits and Fruits of Election; namely, why Election to Sanctification is put first, and so sprinkling of Christ's Blood put after it, yea after Obedience: 1 Pet. 1. 2. Elect according to the Foreknowledg of God the Father, through Sanctification of the Spirit, unto Obedience and Sprinkling of the Blood of Jesus Christ. It is not to shew that Sanctification; Obedience should go before the sprinkling of the Blood of Christ upon us, which is our Sanctification; but his speaking of Election sheweth (as Paul also doth) what was the most eminent and principal Designment and End whereto we were elected, even Sanctification unto Obedience. Election was unto Holiness immediately and primarily, and was first and chiefly intended, (I do not say it is greater in the worth of the thing, so Christ's Blood is of infinite value) as that which God ultimately aimed to bring us unto: And tho Christ's Blood is of infinite more value, yet this is more than the sprinkling of that Blood on us, for it remains for ever in Heaven, when we need no more sprinkling of that Blood.

3. To make this Obligation laid on us by Election the stronger, let us consider that as God hath chosen us unto Holiness, and unto good Works, so it is said reciprocally, that he hath ordained good Works for us. Thus the Scripture, that it might inform us, turns it both ways, that as he ordained us to good Works, so he ordained good Works for us to walk in: even as when Election to Glory is spoken of, to shew the Certainty, and God's Love in it; the Scripture doth not only say, we are ordained and prepared to Glory (as in Rom. 9. 23. and elsewhere) but that this Glory is prepared for us; Come and inherit the Kingdom prepared for you, says Christ: And so says the Apostle (1 Cor. 2.) Eye hath not seen the things prepared for them that love him, suted aforehand to make them happy. The same we find of good Works, that a chosen Vessel is said to be prepared for every good Work, as you heard out of Timothy. And so in Ephes. 2. 10. good Works are said to be prepared for us to walk in; not ordained only by way of Precept, for so they are ordained to wicked Men; but by Decree and Predestination, set out as a Man's Work and Way; whence that Phrase of Solomon is, What thy Hand finds to do, do with all thy Might. A Godly Man's Work (as Christ's was) is given him; and the Apostle speaks it to shew what Ordination good Works have in our Salvation, yet so as they might not derogate from Free Grace, for by Grace we are saved without Works. God that made us new Creatures, and suted us to good Works, had prepared and ordained all sorts of good Works, to which this new Creature was fitted: As when he made Man, he made Paradise for him to walk in, and set out his way beforehand. Thus God hath chose out Work for us, and (as Christ says, Joh. 15. 16.) hath ordained us to bring forth Fruit, and that our Fruit should remain; for both are of eternal Purpose.

4. The Consideration that he hath chosen you, not others, how doth it call for Holiness? 1 Pet. 2. 8, 9. Christ (says he) is a Stone of stumbling to the Disobedient, whereunto also they were appointed; that is, with that kind of Appointment, which is to permit them to act as Creatures, and to shew themselves such. He needed not have added that (for he brings it in with an Also, or over and above) but to that end, to move them the more to Obedience: Now then to move them he adds, But you are a chosen Generation, that you should shew forth the Praises of him that called you (which follows:) So that he chose you (as in the former Words;) and this is spoken as in manifest opposition unto appointing others to Disobedience: The like you have, 2 Theff. 2. 13, 14.

C H A P. III.

That the great Love of God in Electing of us, should be a strong Motive and Incentive to Love and good Works.

I Come now to the Love shewn in these Acts, and shall demonstrate that all the Mercies and other Graces or Love that are to be found in Election should move us to Obedience: Rom. 12. 1. I beseech you therefore Brethren by the Mercies of God, that you present your Bodies a living Sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable Service. It is a Transition from Doctrinal Points to Practical Duties; and the Illative therefore sends us to Justification, Sanctification (handled in Chap. 3, 4, 5, 6.) but it especially sends us to Election, and the Mercies in the Bowels of it, of which he had treated in three Chapters immediately before. This Love of God bestowed on us, in and at Election, the Scripture makes use of a double way to work Holiness and Obedience in us.

1. By way of Imitation, it some way or other teacheth all sorts of Graces, and is the lively Pattern of them to us.

2. By way of Incentive or Motive: So as in such things wherein it doth not so fully serve as a Pattern to be imitated (as in all it cannot) yet in those it serves as Motives and Inflamers thereunto.

(1) By way of Imitation. God's Love in electing us is propounded as a Motive to Obedience: Eph. 5. 1. Be ye therefore Followers of God as dear Children, and walk in Love. He speaks it of God's Love as distinct from Christ's, for of that he speaks as a further Motive in the next Words. I confess he speaks it upon occasion of God's Love in Justification there, that we should imitate it in forgiving others, as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven us, Eph. 4. 32. Yet the Force of the Argument therein holds as strong, yea more strong, in all Considerations about his Eternal Love, which was the Original, the Spring, the Fountain, the Cause of Justification, and all else; yea out of which he then justified, adopted, bestowed all Blessings upon us in Christ. And as the Vertues in a Sovereign Water are stronger in the Spring than in the Streams, so is this Love in God's Heart; and tho it be applied only to Love to Brethren, yet it extends to all Obedience, the Fountain whereof is Love to God; and the Terms he expresth himself in this are Generals, which will reach to all in his Love, and to all Compliance therewith in us unto all Commands. For when we are exhorted to be Followers of God, it is a general that comes in upon occasion of that particular Act of Love shewn in Forgiveness; as often general Rules, and Reasons, and Promises are brought in upon occasion of particular Instances, to confirm and enforce them. Then when it follows, Walk in Love: What, doth he mean it in this one Act of it, of Forgiveness? (which is a going forth of Love;) No, but in all the Duties of Love besides. And tho the Apostle instances in this, as a more broad and conspicuous way of God's Love in in forgiving us, and thereupon more particularly exhorts us to chalk out the like Path to our selves to walk in, of forgiving others; Yet this is but one of those Walks his Love delights in. He hath dwelt in Love (as John speaks) walkt in Love within his own grounds, within himself, (which I speak as warranted by that Phrase, which he purposed in himself to us, Eph. 1. 9.) with infinite Delight from all Eternity; and in all these (all so far as he hath made known to us, the head ways of them) we should be Followers of him, as well as in Forgiveness, or the Duties of Love to Brethren. Thus we should walk in Love, and out of Love to him in all those ways which he hath chalked out for us; and this we should do to shew our Love unto him by it. This word, be ye Followers of God (that is, as one that follows another in the same Steps) is too dull, too flat a Word, falls short of what the Apostle seems to intend; and therefore is to be taken in, corresponding with those that follow, And walk in Love, that is, in the same Steps. In the Original it is, Be ye Imitators, μιμηταί. This farther Sense is also aimed at, that we should be like unto God in his Love, as Children are to their Parents in Feature and Disposition; let our Love answer to his, as Limb to Limb in a Parent: Therefore he adds these Words, as Children, that resemble the Father, yet often the Grandfather most. And everlasting Love is as the Grandfather that beget, and brings forth all these Effects and Fruits of Love, Adoption, Forgiveness, &c. Yet still this word μιμηταί would speak something more, viz. we should act over to the Life the Love of God, as Actors do Stories; we should not only have in our Hearts the Image of it, but we should act to the Life the Postures, the Passions, the Gestures, the Looks and the Casts of that Love of God: And we should have all these continually (as far as may be) before our Eyes, to imitate them in our ways.

Book III.

(2.) We should set up God's Love, not as a Pattern only to us, but as an Incentive to inflame us; and therefore he adds these Words, as dear Children. The Words are in the Original, ὡς τέκνα ἀγαπητὰ. 1. As Children to imitate, to act over his Love in all your walkings towards himself and others. And 2. As beloved Children, to take in his peculiar Love to you, to invigorate and act you. Children are to imitate their Parents, as they are their Parents and their Superiors; and so Christ urgeth it (Mat. 5. 48.) Be ye perfect as your Heavenly Father is perfect. And so the Apostle urgeth it (1 Pet. 1. 14.) as obedient Children, fashion not your selves, that is, imitate not your former Lusts, μὴ συζηματιζόμενοι; that is, be not cast into the Garb, the mode of them, frame not your selves to them; but be holy as I am holy, imitate me your Father. But the Apostle (in Eph. 5. 1.) was enforcing a point of Love. 3. And therefore he adds, as beloved Children, as Darlings, whom God loved and delighted to love; this is put in to make God's Love the Enkindler and Incentive of this Divine Fire in us. Consider but how beloved, how dear you are, and have been to him; consider the Endearments of his Love in all the Singularities and eminent Properties of it: What Love was it you were wrapt in when brought forth? Everlasting Love. What Womb of Love was it in which you as Children were first conceived? It was in everlasting Love. By what Love were you chosen and predestinated to the Adoption of Sons, before the World was? Eph. 1. 5. It was that Love which made you Children; neither can any come to know how dear you are to God till they come to discover, and drink of this Love, the Fountain, the Original of all. And indeed it is with respect to having been beloved with this Love, that they are called beloved Children. As also (in 2 Thess. 2. 13.) he gives them this Title and Compellation on purpose, in reference to Election, We are bound to give Thanks always unto God for you, Brethren, and beloved of the Lord, because God hath chosen you from the Beginning. He contents not himself to have called them Brethren, but on purpose adds the other word, Beloved, because it was in Election they were first and chiefly beloved. And (in Col. 3. 12.) Paul joins both, and makes them an Argument to all Graces of every kind: As the Elect of God (says he) holy and beloved, put on Bowels of Mercy, Kindness, Humbleness of Mind, Meekness, Long-suffering. It is easy to conceive how Bowels of Mercy and Kindness are required of us as Resemblances of that Love which was accompanied with such infinite Bowels, and Heroick Kindness in God towards us; for out of these God

God chose you at first. It is also to be considered how much Kindness, Meekness, Riches of Long-suffering, and Forbearance, and Forgiveness, God ordained in Election to shew forth toward you. The Fountain of them all was electing Love, and in electing Love were found all these, or it designed to shew forth these: only how humbleness of Mind was shewn therein as a Pattern to us, may be a doubt; but it may be easily resolved, by what I have said on Eph. 2. where I shewed the Greatness of God's Love, in this respect, that it was an humbling Condescension in him the great God to look down on Creatures. Psal. 113. 6. Who humbleth himself to behold the Things that are in Heaven and in the Earth. If to look on them is condescending Goodness, much more to love them, and ordain them Sons, and Friends, and Companions with himself. And it was yet a greater Condescension, to ordain his eternal Son to dwell in humane Nature, and that Nature to become one Person with him, which was the fundamental Decree of all, for we are chosen in Christ as in our Head, Eph. 1. 3. Look therefore, whatever Singularities, Particularities there are of Graces of any kind to be found in this Love, they should either be Patterns or Motives unto us, to answer them in Love and Obedience: Eph. 5. 1. As dear or beloved Children, be Imitators of God. Take the Words as a Motive, and judg within your selves how forcible it is to any Heart possessed with Childlike Love to God. Suppose God from Heaven should say, what my Child (as that Mother to Solomon) my beloved Child, yea as thou art my beloved Child do this or that, and therein obey me, how would this move any of you? Set this before every Command, and think, that God speaks thus to thee, As thou art my dear Child, thou shalt have no other Gods, thou shalt not commit Adultery, Murder, &c.

Chap. 3.

In Vol. 1. of his
Works.

Let us now run over all those special Properties and Singularities by which this Love is commended to us, and see how they all enforce and perswade to Holiness and Obedience, and the giving of all Love to God.

1st. Let us view the Priority of this Love, that he loved us first, not we him. Upon this ground Christ first, then the Apostle John, enforceth all Obedience to all Commands.

First, Christ doth it, Job. 15. 16. When Christ would move his Apostles to that great and hazardous Work of preaching the Gospel over all the World, when he was gone (as he moved Peter in those Words, Lovest thou me?) he urgeth this, that he had loved them first, You have not chosen me (says he) but I have chosen you. He mentions Election to them, and therein this endearing Consideration that he had first chosen them, not they him; and then subjoins that he had ordained them to go all the World over, and bring forth Fruit, and that their Fruit should remain. It is as if he had thus spoke to them, You did not first provoke me to set my Heart on you, and single you out; but I freely chose and loved you. Then John (1 John 4.) insists on the same Argument, which he expresseth more takingly thus, not that we loved God, but that he loved us (ver. 10.) and loved us first (ver. 19.) and we loved not him at all for a long while after his Love and Pity shewn to us. All the Commandments are by Christ reduced to two Heads: Mat. 22. 37, &c. Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy Heart, and with all thy Soul, and with all thy Mind: this is the first and great Commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy Neighbour as thy self: on these two Commandments hang all the Law and the Prophets. Now John's Scope also (in 1 John 4.) is to exhort to both, and to move to both. He useth this as the Argument twice in that Chapter: 1. In vers. 10, 11. Then 2. In vers. 19, 20, 21. At the 10th ver. he heightens the Love of God, herein is Love, that is, herein is Love indeed; and he doth this on purpose to draw from us Obedience to that Command, and Love to our Brethren. Ver. 11. Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another. Therein are comprehended all the Duties of the second Table: Rom. 13. 8, 9. He that loveth another hath fulfilled the Law: for this, thou shalt not commit adultery, thou shalt not kill, thou shalt not steal, thou shalt not bear false Witness, thou shalt not covet; and if there be any other Commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this, Thou shalt love thy Neighbour as thy self. Then again says John, 1 Joh. 4. 19. We love him (so ours render it) or let us love him (so others render it, and indeed the word ἀγαπᾶμεν, is indifferent to both, and and favours both alike) because he loved us first, and from thence (ver. 20, 21.) he infers Love to our Brethren, and that as a Commandment from that God that so loved us: ver. 21. This Commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God love his Brother also. So that Love to God the Sum of the first Table, is enjoined, or rather sweetly flows from what the Law of Love requires, and we are bound to requite Love with Love to one that loved us first, and so highly loved us too, ver. 11. The other Argument is fetched from a superadded Commandment (1 John 4. 21.) from him that thus loved us; and it is enforced from what Christ had said (John 14.) If ye love me keep my Commandments. Now in the midst between both these Arguments, he inserts this Axiom (1 John 4. 17.) As he is, so are we in this World. This belongeth to the Argument, why we should imitate God. The coherence carries it to God in his Love, especially that Love before all Worlds, which he had treated of so largely before; ver. 16. We have known the Love that God hath to us, God is Love, &c. And herein is Love, that he loved us first, &c. If then, as he is, so are we in this World, we shall have Boldness at the latter Day, because we behave our selves so as to be like him. Because as he is, that is, as he is in loving us first, and giving his Son for us, such we are in this World in loving others in imitation of him; or as he is, we are in this World, that is, we being Imitators of that everlasting Love of his, we shall have Boldness at the Day of Judgment; it being impossible God should disapprove of those that are like him, in that which is most dear to him, viz. his Love and the eternal Acts of it. Thus Piscator and others interpret it.

2ly. Consider the Peculiarity of his Love, that he hath loved you above all others, in which there is another eminency of Love: Deut. 10. 14, 15. Behold the Heaven, and the Heaven of Heavens is the Lord's thy God, the Earth also, with all that is therein. Only the Lord had a Delight in thy Fathers to love them, and he chose their Seed after them, even you above all People, as it is this Day. He here sets out the special Love of God in chusing them.

(1) He had choice enough, Heaven and Earth lay all before him, and all things in both, and he could have made every Star, every Pebble so many Sons to Abraham. As in the Mass or Chaos, the matter of all Creatures, which lay alike before his Power, out of the same matter he made the dull Earth, he might have made the vigorous and shining Sun; so he had all Creatures in Heaven and Earth, out of which to have made Sons to Abraham (as John the Baptist speaks) but he chose them out of Mankind, the Seed of Mankind.

(2) He had before him all People of Mankind, made all of one Blood (Acts 17.) and out of all he chose thy Fathers and their Seed, out of all (as choice implies) yea above all.

(3.) And 3ly. He made this choice, not out of a bare Act of Will, as one resolved to chuse some Persons, with a Delight to love them, and delighting to shew this peculiar Love to them.

(4.) And 4thly. That Love and Delight was all, and the alone Cause thereto him moving, as that word Only (in Deut. 10. 14, 15.) implies. Only the Lord had a Delight in thy Fathers, &c. Now to what end is all this electing Love thus set forth to us, but to the point I have in hand? Deut. 10. 12. And now Israel, what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to fear the Lord thy God, to walk in all his Ways, and to love him, and to serve the Lord thy God with all thy Heart, and with all thy Soul, to keep the Commandments of the Lord and his Statutes, which I command thee this Day for thy Good? This Lord, the God of Gods, Lord of Lords, a great God (ver. 17.) who is withal so good, so full of Love, of all Love to thee, what doth this God require of thee? (the Hebrew signifies also to ask, request, entreat; so 1 Sam. 1. 17, 20, 27. in the Petition which Hannah put up to God, the same Word is used) What doth this glorious God after all this Love manifested; fall a petitioning thee for? (as the God did beseech, as the Apostle hath it, 2 Cor. 5. 20.) What doth he ask again of thee, as in answer to all this Love? Nothing but thy Love and thy Obedience, which by the Law of Justice is a Debt from Equals, namely to requite Love with Love, Rom. 12. 8. He requires nothing but Love, which (as Christ says) Sinners, the worst of Sinners, the most notorious Sinners in the World pay mutually; Publicans and Sinners love those that love them, Mat. 5. Luke 6. 32.

C H A P. IV.

Another Motive to Obedience deduced from God's great Love, in giving his Son to die for us. That he requires nothing in requital of so inestimable a Gift, but that we should love, obey and serve him. Other Considerations of God's Love urged, as Motives to Obedience; that he delights in loving us, and therefore it should be our Delight to love and obey him. The Eternity and Immutability of his Love, urged as Motives to faithful and constant Obedience.

THE greatness and immenseness of God's Love in electing us was such, that he designed to shew it by a Gift answerable, and that was the Gift of his Son to Death, to be a Propitiation for our Sins; and for this let us return again to that Scripture in 1 John 4. 10. Herein is Love, not that we loved God, but God loved us, and sent his Son to be the Propitiation for our Sins. And then it follows, Beloved, if God so loved us, &c. he puts a [SO] upon it, as leaving it to the Holy Ghost to heighten this [SO] by him unutterable. Our Saviour had done the like: John 3. 16. God so loved the World, that he gave his only begotten Son. A Gift so great, that he hath nothing now left he values; He that spared not his Son, how shall he not with him give us all things? Rom. 8. 32. Now then consider O Man, what doth this God, that designed to give so great a Gift merely to commend his Love, require of thee again? What! Thousands of Rams, ten thousand Rivers of Oil, thy first-born in requital of his first-born? He twice renounceth all or any of these, both in Psal. 50. & Micah 6. What is it the Lord asks of thee? (says Moses also, Deut. 10. 12.) it is all a diminutive: alas! as good as nothing to him: It is but thy Love, thy Service, which when thou hast returned to him to the utmost thou art able, fall down on thy Knees, and say, thou art an unprofitable Servant. All of it is that which he hath no need of, of which he might say as of Sacrifice, If I had need thereof, would I ask thee? It is that God who asks thy Service, who might command it, and 'tis a Favour that he gives thee leave to love and serve him. And 'tis but that Love and Service, which the worth and excellency of this God, if known by thee (tho his Love to thee were as yet unknown) would draw it from thee, and move thee to fear him that is so great (ver. 17.) to love him that is so good and loving (ver. 15, 16.) and to serve him, namely in outward Obedience, by walking in his Ways, who commands all he doth command for thy good (ver. 14.) and so thou servest, providest for thy self most, in serving him. And as for that which he desires thee to part with for him, what is it but what is merely an Hindrance to this Love and Service of him according to his Greatness and Excellency? and to part with it is for thine own good: Circumcise therefore the Foreskin of your Hearts, and be no more stiff-necked, Deut. 10. 16. It is an Inference from what he had said before. Now what is that Foreskin that makes thee thus stiff-necked? It is inordinate Self-love: Self-love is the Sum of the Law of Sin, as Love to God is the Sum of the Laws of God. The Laws of Sin tell thee, Thou shalt not fear God, nor worship him; thou shalt take his Name in vain, thou shalt kill, steal, or commit Adultery, &c. And if there be any other Commandment of Sin, it is briefly comprehended in this Saying engrafted so deep in all Mens Hearts, Thou shalt love thy self above all Things whatsoever. But the Law of God commands Love to God, and Obedience to him springing thence, and requiring the whole Soul and Strength (as Christ speaks) to love God above ones self, as by the proportion Christ sets is evident, Thou shalt love thy Neighbour as thy self, therefore God above thy self. Hence this Self called Flesh, which opposeth true Love to God, is Enmity with God and his Law (Rom. 8.) and must be therefore cut off and cast away, e'er we can love him, and be subject to his Law, as the Apostle there speaks. And to this purpose, the same Moses preaching the Gospel in another Place, speaks, Deut. 30. 6. The Lord will circumcise thy the Heart, to love thy God with all thy Heart, and all thy Soul. What is it, that Book III. this great God that hath out of his Love given a Gift so great, and so to dear to him, require of thee? not any part of what is truly and substantially Love unto thy self; he permits the whole of it in Substance still to remain, and requires only the superfluity of it. The Hebrew Word used for the Foreskin, which is to be cut off, signifies a superfluity, as that part of the Skin which the Jews in Circumsition did cut off is. And therefore Ainsworth emphatically translates it so here, and usually elsewhere, circumcise the superfluous Foreskin; and by the choice of that superfluous Skin to be the Subject of Circumcision, was fitly signified how little and small a matter it is that God requires of Self-denial in us. What doth the Lord require of thee? Not to cut off self entirely, but only the inordinacy the excrescency; and so some have understood that of James 1. 20. Lay aside all superfluous of Naughtiness. God requires no more than that thou shouldst part with what will hinder thy loving him above thy self: and the word in its Signification setteth this also, for it signifies a Stoppage that hindreth, and so is to be cut off as that which letteth thee in thy loving and obeying him. And upon the whole to conclude, consider that in Deut. 10. 12, 13. it is expressed, that it is for thy good, that thou art to serve the Lord with all thy Soul, to keep the Commandments which he commands thee for thy good. These Words for thy good, are added to this thy loving and serving him; and so to bring this further home to the thing in hand, here in thy Love and Obedience unto God doth but fitly and meetly answer, as an Imitation of that his Love in Election, and the Contrivements of it, as was observed. For as God in that his loving us, had eminently and above all a respect to his own Glory (Eph. 1. 16. to the Praise of the Glory of his Grace) yet so as he did withal take in such conspicuous Affections of Love to our Persons, that he is said to have delighted to love us, and to love us most in this, that he makes himself, and his Love and Glory, our Happiness and highest End, and accordingly so contrived his Designs therein, as to hold forth both these, decreeing all for our good, as well as his own Glory. Thus in the like proportion and subordination, in imitation of this Love of his, he allows us to love our selves in loving him, and to that end hath given all his Commands for our good, as out of Moses was observed; yet so as to set him up above our selves, and make his Glory and the Praise of it, our chiefest end and greatest good. And thus Moses concludes that 10th Chapter of Deut. v. 21. He is thy Praise, and he is thy God.

Let us proceed on to whatever other Singularities or Rarities are to be found in this Love, and shew how we should answer them all in Love and Obedience, and that all and each should become the highest and most enflaming Motives to us.
 Concerning all which let me premise this general Consideration once for all, That by the same Reason that the Apostle urgeth this Circumstance in God's Love, viz.
 the Priority of it, that God loved us first as a Motive to Obedience to his Commands, 1 John 4. 19, 20, 21. and as Moses urged the peculiarity of this Love, Deut. 10. by the same Reason may and should any other Consideration that commends it, move us.

Therefore consider, that God in chusing thee, not only love thee, but delighted to love thee. 'Twas not barely an Act of Will, that he would chuse some, he cared not whom, as being indifferent about it; but it was an Act of Love, and not of Love only, but of good Pleasure (Eph. 1.) and of Delight too, as you heard, Deut. 10.
 How should the Consideration of this sweeten Obedience to thee, not only to do his Will, but to do it willingly? This Love should make not only the Commandments not grievous (1 John 5.) but a Delight. It is hard to find an Instance of this in the Hearts of the ordinary Sons of Men, only in Christ our Head we may find and have the great Example. How ready and willing did the foremen-tioned Consideration make him to do God's Will in all things, to fulfil all Righteousness, and to make this Work his Meat and Drink? I have a Baptism to be baptized with (says he) and how do I long till it is accomplisht? And what was one Spring and Motive hereunto? It was even the Consideration, that God had chosen him and delighted in him, which made him his Servant and Obedient:
Isa. 42. 1. My Servant whom I uphold; my Elect in whom my Soul delighteth. And therefore he took Courage and Resolution to go thro with the Work he was chosen

sen to. Thus it follows, He shall not fail nor be discouraged, ver. 4. The Sense and Apprehension which Christ had, that God had written his Name as the Head, at the top of his Book of Life, and that his Name was also engraven deeply on his Heart, made him speak thus in Heb. 10. 7. Then said I, Lo I come, (in the Volume of the Book it is written of me) to do thy Will O God. But if you consult the place this is taken out of, there is more of the Disposition of his Spirit added: Psal. 40. I delight to do thy Will O God: And in both places this it was that moved him, In the Volume of thy Book, thus it is written of me. God had predestinated him as Man before all Worlds, 1 Pet. 1. 20. God had delighted in him, as thus decreed before his Works of old, Prov. 8. 30. And now that his time came, to shew his Love to God, and Work for him, this infinitely quickned him; and therefore having run his Race and dispatcht his Work, he says, Joh. 17. 4. I have glorified thee on Earth, I have finished the Work which thou gavest me to do: And it follows, ver. 5. And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the Glory which I had with thee before the World was: Which is interpreted by that ver. 24. The Glory thou hast given me (and so ordainedst it) before the World was, for thou lovedst me before the Foundation of the World. You may easily discern by the Connection of the 4th and 5th Verses, interpreted by the 23d, what had set him on work, and what he had in his Eye, in dispatching all his Work on Earth so willingly, so eagerly: It was God's everlasting Love, that had designed to him so great a Glory, which therefore as soon as now his Work was done, he utters as that the Thoughts of which, and of his having been eternally ordained unto it, out of so great a Love had set him awork. Now then hath God rejoiced over thee from everlasting, in his Intentions to do thee good, with his whole Heart and his whole Soul (as Jeremy speaks) how should this Consideration draw out, suck out thy whole Heart from thee, to love and serve the Lord with all thy Heart, and with all thy Soul? Was his whole Soul thus delighted to love thee? (Deut. 10. 12, 15.) Was it a pure Act of good Pleasure in him? O how shouldst thou strive (Col. 1. 10.) to walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good Work?

5. Consider that this Love hath been from everlasting, Jer. 31. 3. This Antiquity of it, that it is of so long continuance, of so long a standing, should have its distinct Influence also upon thee. This is therefore inserted (Eph. 1. 3.) who hath chosen us before the Foundation of the World, to be holy before him in Love. Paul minds the Theffalonians of it also, to move them to Holiness, 2 Theff. 2. 13. God hath from the Beginning chose you to Salvation, through Sanctification of the Spirit and Belief of the Truth: From the Beginning, that is from everlasting, 1 Joh. 1. 1. The Word of Life, that was from the Beginning. This Consideration hath much in it to move us.

(1.) When one hath had his Eyes and his Heart long upon a thing which he desires to see accomplisht, how greedy of it, how delighted in it is he, when he sees it begun to be accomplisht? As Christ sitting in Heaven, and expecting till his Enemies be made his Footstool, when he sees any new Degree of it accomplisht, how doth it rejoice him? If God hath so long since, even from Eternity, designed out Holiness for his Children, he expects earnestly to have holy Obedience and Service from them.

(2.) Consider, that as this hath been in his Eye so long, so how little a time it is since thou wert holy, or beganst to look towards it. His Eyes and Heart were toward thee before the Foundation of the World: and it hath been half thy time perhaps before thou beganst to look after him or his ways; or to set thy self to be holy before him: And when thou didst begin after so long time, thou didst find thy self enwrapt in the Designs of Eternal Love upon thee, that ordained thee to this very thing before the World was. O! how should this quicken thee to hasten thy Work, and to make speed as one born out of time. God loved and chose thee from the Beginning (2 Theff. 2.) and had no other Thoughts nor stirrings of Affections, but of Love and Kindness to thee: But thou from thy Beginning hast had no other but Thoughts of Provocation and Enmity against him, for thy Thoughts have been only evil from thy Infancy, Gen. 6. 5. As therefore when David would move God not to cut him off in the midst of his Days, what says he? Pfal. 102. 24, 25. I said, O my God, take me not away in the midst of my Days; thy Years are throughout all Generations: of old hast thou laid the Foundations of the Earth. This Speech of David I turn into an Exhortation unto thee. His Love hath been to thee before he laid the Foundations of the Earth, and throughout all Generations; thy Being and Existence was but as this Morning unto him, and it was the midst of thy Days e'er thou brokest off thy Iniquities by Repentance. Thy time of Love is short, and thou hast already shortned it; O now fall to work, and ply thee, and make, if possible, the rest of thy Life an whole Life to him. Peter had a touch of it (1 Pet. 4. 2.) yet without upbraiding; for our God is so good as he upbraideth no Man that turns to him from his former Sins. Well, what says Peter? The time past of our Life may suffice us, to have wrought the Will of the Gentiles. He says no more, yet it is enough to quicken us, yea 'tis the Scope of the Apostle to do it. The Consideration of this, with the other of God's Love, he sets together on purpose to press this Exhortation, that those that have believed should maintain good Works. He fetcheth his Rise from the third Verse, We our selves were sometimes (too long a time) Foolish, Disobedient, serving divers Lusts: And yet God loved us all that while. So ver. 4. When the Love of God appeared that had been hidden, &c. You therefore that served nothing but Sin before, should be the more diligent now in serving God, &c.

6. Consider, that this Love of God hath been constant to thee and unchangeable, ever since and all along from the Beginning, the same (2 Theff. 2. 13.) and so continues to the end, Job. 13. 1. Yea it is such as nothing can separate from it; Rom. 8. 38, 39. I am perswaded that neither Death, nor Life, nor Angels, nor Principalities, nor Powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor Height, nor Depth, nor any other Creature, shall be able to separate us from the Love of God, which is in Jesus Christ our Lord. And this should move to Constancy and Continuance in well doing always, in which we should suffer nothing to interrupt us, nothing to separate us from it. The Apostle (in that 2 Theff. 2. from Verse 13. to the end, and Chap. 3. 5.) improves this Consideration of the Everlastingness, Unchangeableness of God's Love (for this place speaks at once to both) to move them to Stability in every good Word and Work, and to cleave fast to all the Doctrines and Commandments both by Faith and Obedience. He had spoken before how God would give up the reprobate number of Professors of Christianity to Antichristian Doctrine and Unrighteousness (in plain words) that they might be damned. But (says he v. 13.) We are bound to give Thanks to God always for you, Brethren, beloved of the Lord, because God hath from the Beginning chosen you to Salvation, through Sanctification of the Spirit and Belief of the Truth: Both these two being necessary to Salvation. 1st. It is necessary to believe the Truth as it is in Jesus. 2^{ly}. To be sanctified, and made holy Men by it; and God from the Beginning hath chosen you to be saved through both. Therefore says he, ver. 15, 16, 17. Stand fast, and hold the Traditions which you have been taught, whether by Word or our Epistle. Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting Consolation, and good Hope through Grace, comfort your Hearts, and stablish you in every good Word and Work. It is therefore an Exhortation seconded with a Prayer for their Establishment in Faith and Holiness (ver. 16, 17.) manifestly founded upon, and deduced from what he had spoken ver. 13. now alledged, God hath from the Beginning chosen you. In ver. 16. he makes use of it as a Prayer, God even our Father, who hath loved us, and given us everlasting Consolation, stablish you in every good Word and Work. The Sum of which is, that God hath out of Love chosen us from the Beginning or Everlasting, and thereby hath given us Consolation everlasting; the Object of it being this his unchangeable Love, his Love which hath been from everlasting, and will be to everlasting. Consolation is put chiefly for the object matter, that might and doth afford everlasting Consolation, as the Doctrine of Faith is called Faith. And thus it is rather to be taken, because his Petition thereupon in the 17th Verse is, comfort your Hearts; namely, with this which is so comfortable a ground of everlasting Comfort. As also because he adds in the 16th Verse, And good Hope through Grace. He might well say so, for the matter and ground of Consolation is founded on the Pillars of Eternity, on that unchangeable Love of God, of

of which he speaks, whose Love and Gifts are without Repentance. Now the things he suitably exhorts to and prays for, as that which is and should be the Fruit and Operation of that Love in our Hearts, are two. The first is (ver. 15.) to stand fast against all Opposition made against the Truth delivered, as Souldiers that keep their ground. The second Exhortation is, to lay hold, sure hold, and hold fast with Strength, κρατέετε; therefore the Syriac adds Fortiter, as Judas bad them hold Christ; Mat. 26. 40. Whom I shall kiss, hold him fast. Be you as stable, fast, and immoveable in your Faith and Obedience, as God is in his Love, who hath loved you from the beginning, from everlasting. God hath held you fast, and none can, or shall pull you out of his Hands; do you hold as fast to his Commands. The Word signifies also studiously and carefully to observe, Mar. 7. 3, 4. and so it relates to Commands given for Practice and Obedience, and imports withal Constancy therein. And by the way, as for their Direction to know what was Truth to hold, and Duties and Ordinances to be observed by them, what to stick to, when in those times Antichristian Dreamers should come to draw them away from the Truth with all Deceivableness of Unrighteousness, he refers to what they had been taught either by Word or by Epistle, so leaving nothing to Revelation immediate as their Rule. Now they had then the Apostle's teaching by Word of Mouth; we wanting that, are left to stick to what is written, as sufficient for us, and as having nothing else to have recourse to, and therefore we must not leave the Scripture, or admit any other, during all the time that Antichrist is to deceive the World (for this is the only Direction that is given for the whole of those times) and we are sure Antichrist is not yet out of the World. Now this standing fast in the Doctrines, and holding fast the Observation of these Traditions given them, he further interprets to be constancy in well-doing: Chap. 3. 4. And we have Confidence in the Lord touching you, that you both do and will do the things which we command you; that is, will be constant and immutable in your Obedience, which still in the Enforcement of it hath a Correspondency with, an Aspect upon, and an Inference from that Love of God from the Beginning. This is in his Exhortation. Then 2dly. in his Prayer, by which he further insinuates their Duty, this Inference may yet a little further also appear; for he grounds his Petition upon those Acts of God's eternal Love, God even our Father that loved us; and hath given us everlasting Consolation and good Hope through Grace, comfort your Hearts, and stablish you in every good Word and Work. And Chap. 3. 3. he interprets this establishing to be keeping them from Evil: But the Lord is faithful, who shall stablish you and keep you from Evil: And he adds in ver. 4. And we have Confidence in the Lord touching you, that ye both do and will do the things which we command you; that is, will be constant, immoveable, uninterrupted, in the doing of them. You both do and will do, as God hath loved you and will love you evermore; so then to be stable in every good Word and Work, is to keep themselves from evil, both for the present and for time to come for ever. This becomes those who profess to hope that God hath chosen them from the Beginning, that God hath loved them with everlasting Love, and thereby given them matter of such everlasting Consolation. And look what Arguments Paul in Prayer useth unto God, to grant this to them, which are thus suted to the matter of his Petition, as you may discern. The same may be turned upon us as Motives to move us thereunto; for what we would move God with in Prayer, God expects should move us in Practice. Now it is the Eternity, Stability, and the Immutability of that Love, which he useth as a Motive to him, to stablish them in every good Word and Work.

The very same Exhortation to Constancy, Diligence, and Unchangeableness in well-doing (if I mistake not) the Apostle in like manner foundeth upon the Immutability of God's Counsels towards the Heirs of Salvation, expressed in his Promises to them, out of the Coherence of Heb. 6. 11, 12, 13, 17, 18 Verses compared, We desire (says he v. 11.) that is, exhort, that every one of you do shew forth the same diligence, (which out of Love they had formerly, and at first shewn, ver. 10.) to the full Assurance of Hope to the end. He provokes them to Diligence with Constancy, that they be not slothful but laborious (ver. 10.) in every good Work, and Followers of them, who through Faith and Patience (or Constancy Book III. in well-doing, joined with patient Suffering for it) inherit the Promises: And what Promises are they he lays before them, and what is more eminently held forth in the Promise? As he had exhorted them to Diligence and Constancy without slackening, so suitably he lays before them that in the Promise which answered thereto as on God's part, citing the great Promise made to Abraham the Father, in the Name and for the behalf of all the Heirs of Promise, ver. 13. For when God made Promise to Abraham, who after he had patiently endured, obtained the Promise, ver. 15. And in the Promise the Apostle to quicken them hereto singeth out (with an eminent Observation) the Faithfulness and Immutability of God's Counsel (which is the point in hand) and unfoldeth in the Tenor of the Promise the Oath annexed to it; wherein (says he) God willing more abundantly to shew to the Heirs of Promise the Immutability of his Counsel, confirmed it with an Oath, ver. 17. As God therefore cleaves to us in his Love without Separation, we should in Obedience cleave to him therein with full purpose of Heart, Acts 11. 23. As God hath stuck to us, and would suffer none to divert his Love, we should inviolably stick to his Commands, as David did, Psal. 119. 31. I have stuck unto thy Testimonies. And as nothing shall, or can separate us from the Love of God in Christ, as on his part; and as none of all those Millions of Heroes far excelling us, that have been in all Generations, so took his Heart as to alter his Purpose of Love towards us, or to allure him from us; so neither let any thing ever separate us throughout our course, from pursuing after Communion with that Love in keeping his Commands. Let not Wife, Children, Honours, Riches, Pleasures, Temptations on the left hand or right hand, or whatsoever can fall out, or present it self unto us, ever separate us from the Love and Service of God. He that forsakes not these, being wooed by so great a Love (as hath been described) he is not worthy of him and his Love, nor of the least Beam of it. An Heart enflamed with this Love will do or suffer any thing. I make a great Observation of this in the Instance of Paul, when Christ had brought him first upon his Knees, and had humbled him, having struck him off his Horse; Lord (said Paul then) what wilt thou have me do? but when afterwards this Love of God had fired his Heart, then what was it he was not content to do and suffer? And when (in this Rom. 8.) the Tide and full Sea came in and overflowed his Heart, insomuch as he crys out, Who shall separate me from the Love of God in Christ? Then it was that he was willing to have been himself separated from Christ, accursed from Christ (as Christ was from God on the Cross) for the Glory of God in the Conversion of his Brethren. Now nothing but this Love could have raised up his Heart thus high.

I shall conclude this part of this Discourse with what Paul concludeth his in the 2d and 3d Chapters of the 2d Thess. He had exhorted them to Constancy, prayed for Stability in every good Word and Work, laid before them the eternal Love of God to move them, and also put the Lord in mind of it, to move him to grant it to them, and had expressed his Confidence herein; Chap. 3. 4. And we have Confidence in the Lord touching you, that you both do and will do the things that we command you. But how should we attain this (might they say) and what is the best, the readiest way of all other to arrive thereunto? He immediately adds, And the Lord direct your Hearts into the Love of God. So prays he, and in praying thus for them suggests the most effectual way to attain to this Obedience. By the Coherence before-mentioned, I understand it of the Love of God towards them, that Love spoken of Chap. 2. 16. And this is that single, and only, and all-sufficient Direction Paul gives them unto all Obedience, viz. to have their Hearts guided into that Love, and the Comprehension of the Heights and Depths of it, as elsewhere he prays for the Ephesians. And this is to be obtained no way but by Prayer to the Lord to lead them into this. When you hear any Duty prescribed, you presently call for Directions; and those are usually as difficult to practise and attain as the things or Graces they are prescribed for. Paul here prescribes but one, but it is a Sovereign one, and withal the only way to attain it, viz. Prayer. The Lord, or Person he prays unto is the Holy Ghost, manifestly distinguished from God, namely, the Father, and Jesus Christ. The Love of God the Father, and the longing after and waiting for the Revelation of Christ in his Glory, at are here made the subject Matter, the Journies end, the Sight, the Enjoyment, the Object of the Spirit's giving them. And so elsewhere it is made the proper Office of the Holy Ghost, to lead us into all Truth (Job. 16.) to guide our Feet into the ways of Peace; and as meetly it is appropriated to him here, to direct our Hearts into the Love of God, and Longings after Christ. For as he it is who is given us of God, to communicate the Love of these other two, who sustain the Consideration of Objects to be revealed and communicated by him: So (Rom. 5.) The Love of God is said to be shed abroad in our Hearts by the Holy Ghost, whom he hath given unto us, as on purpose to that end. So then you have all three Persons in this small Verse, and a Prayer is made to the Holy Ghost, under the Title of Lord, which some deny to be found in the Scripture. The Word that is here translated to direct is κατευθυναι, that is, to guide you by a strait way, or by a right Line. It hints this further to me (which hath been in my Heart from other Considerations) that of all ways and means that tend to work and keep us, the Love of God apprehended, and enflaming Love in our Hearts to God again (for so I take the Love here, both Passively and Actively, for he leads us into Love unto God, by discovering the Love of God) is the direct straightest way of all other, the shortest cut (as we use to say) for it is by a strait Line. There are other Motives and Perswasives that have done victoriously, but this excels them all: As I use to say of that way of living by Faith immediately, in comparison of poring upon Graces in our selves, and importing Assurance therefrom; that this latter is rather a going about, and fetching a Compass with a great deal of Difficulty and Uncertainty: But that other way of Faith is as the North-East Passage to the Indies, the shortest and speediest way of comforting and upholding the Heart when found out. The Love of God shed abroad will contribute more in a Moment towards our Comfort and Peace, than all other Considerations in a Man's whole Life. And therefore pray as Paul did, that the Holy Ghost would direct your Hearts into the Love of God. And withal, this Prayer informs us, that our Hearts do of themselves seek out other ways to encourage and uphold them in Obedience, and other Motives are more suted to the natural Disposition of them, and we are apt to neglect these Considerations of God's Love; therefore it is that he so solemnly prays to the Holy Ghost, to guide and direct them into it, because otherwise they would never find this way, or light upon it.

And observe lastly, that the Subject of this the Spirit's Guidance is said here to be the Heart, for indeed that is the proper Seat and Vessel for God to shed abroad his Love into, as (Rom. 5.) the Apostle doth in like manner express it. It is the Heart and not the Understanding (for this Love passeth Knowledge:) And I having upon occasion of handling the Greatness of this Love (on Eph. 2. 6.) viewed all that I could find in the Scripture, to set out the Greatness of this Love by, found little to what might have been expected, to exaggerate and greaten a Subject of that Magnitude this is of. I resolved the reason of it into this, that it is left to the Spirit to make an immediate Report of this Love by Impressions of it, rather than by Notions, or rational Arguments, or Inferences. It is left to him to speak that to the Heart, which can be but whispered unto the Mind. It is too big for Words, and too Glorious to be clothed with Man's Apprehensions, much less Expressions, and it is fit only to speak it self; and that may be a reason also, why we find so little of rational Inducements drawn from this eternal Love to enforce Obedience. (I have given you all I could find in the New Testament.) I attribute it to this, that this Love spoken by the Spirit to the Heart, persuades to it without any more Arguments, and will not take in the Assistance of Reason or Notions, or Inferences to urge the Commands of it self, but will it self do it, and doth it abundantly. It remains that I pray as the Apostle doth, 2 Thess. 3. 5. The Lord direct your Hearts into the Love of God.

C H A P. V.

Motives against Sin, because it is Satan's great Work and Interest, who is Christ's greatest Enemy.

1 John III. 8.

He that committeth Sin is of the Devil: for the Devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the Works of the Devil.

THE Subject on which I intend to discourse, is Motives to Holiness and against Sin, drawn from such Arguments as the New Testament affords; such as arise from the Thoughts of Christ and his Love, and from the consideration of the End and Design of his Death.

In the Discourse of Christ the Mediator, Vol. III. of his Works.

One great end of his Death, I have already shewn in another Discourse, to be his overcoming Satan thereby, and so redeeming us from the Power of him, that had the Power of Death. What Motives to Holiness the consideration hereof will afford, is the thing now to be considered, and what use Faith may makè hereof to strengthen and help the Heart against Sin. Now the Scope of this Text is punctual to it: The Apostle's Scope is to give an Exhortation unto Holiness and against Sin, and to this end he sets forth Christ and Satan as two Opposites and Antagonists; Satan, as is denoted to us, having set up Sin as his Work, and Christ is described as the Founder of Holiness, and Destroyer of Satan's Work. These two have drawn after them all the Sons of Men into two several Parties, who are here, and shall be hereafter distinguished for ever, by the Poise and Inclination of their Spirits, and Course and Sway of their Lives, as they stood to Sin, or Righteousness, and shall accordingly be judged to belong to either Christ, or Satan. Little Children (says the Apostle, ver. 7.) let no Man deceive you; he that doth Righteousness, is Righteous, even as he is Righteous: and he that committeth Sin is of the Devil, for the Devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose was the Son of God manifest, that he might destroy the Works of the Devil, ver. 8.

Christ the Son of God, is the Fountain of Holiness and Righteousness to all that hope for, or expect Salvation from him: Ver. 3. Every Man that hath this Hope in him, purifieth himself, even as he is pure. And, ver. 5. In him is no Sin. And, ver. 6. Whosoever abideth in him, sinneth not; whosoever sinneth, hath not seen him, neither known him. So as (ver. 7.) He that doth Righteousness, is Righteous, even as he is Righteous. Christ requires of all he justifies (although he imputes a Righteousness of his own to them) that they themselves be so truly and really Righteous in their Hearts and Lives, as rightly from thence to be denominated Righteous, as truly as all other Denominations are from what Qualifications are in a Man, from which he acts accordingly. A Man is termed a wise Man, that hath a Principle of Wisdom, and acts wisely, tho he may have Mixtures and Strains of Folly; so giving the like allowance to a Holy Man, he that doth Righteousness, makes it his Business, Work, Trade and Study to do so, is Righteous. Let no Man deceive you with the Doctrine of the imputed Righteousness of Christ, as if it discharged you from having a true inherent Holiness of your own, such and the same for kind as he had. No, it obligeth you unto it, to be your selves Righteous, even as he is Righteous.

Now to sharpen the Exhortation, and make it yet more pungent, he sets forth withal Satan, Christ's Enemy and Opposite, and the contrary Head, Fountain Leader and Author of all Sin, and Opposer of all Righteousness, who sinned from the beginning, and was himself the first that brought Sin into the Creation perpetrated it himself, and was the Cause of it in all others. And who not only when sinned and diffused it, but he sinneth from the beginning, that is, hath continually made it his Trade to sin, and to cause others to sin. Tho' Adam brought it in among Men, yet it was but by one Act, and of that Act Satan was the Designer; but Adam was not the continual Cause of Sin to others, and is dead long since, and ceased to sin, but Satan sins still from the beginning. He sins not only personally from the beginning, but by provoking and tempting others continually; for so the Devil's sinning from the beginning is here principally to be understood, as he is the Causer of Men to sin, as at the beginning he did to our first Parents, and he thereby makes the Sins we commit his Works: For our Sins, or the Sins in us, as caused by him, are called his Work.

Chap. 5.

1. Our Apostle brings in this of Satan's Interest to Sin in a distinct, yea a farther Motive to the Saints against Sin, to be superadded to the former. He had said, that Sin was a Transgression of the Law, ver. 4. That Consideration is to move you as Creatures and Subjects to God; for you are therefore to be such as live under Law and Obedience, but that is denied now-a-days to be any Obligation, tho' to John it was. But consider your selves as Persons redeemed by a Righteous Saviour, bearing your Sins, who took Sins away (ver. 5.) and in whom is no Sin; he could else never have taken Sin away in us, nor could he have any other end in dying, than to take Sins away, seeing himself had none. Will not the Ingenuity of this move you? Then (as the Apostle John says) consider whose Interest, and whose Cause Sin is; it is the Devil's Work, and if the Law of Subjects will not move you, let the Law of Arms. That Sin is the Force and Strength of the Kingdom of Satan, Christ's Enemy, is an higher Aggravation of it, than it is a Transgression of the Law. What is but Felony in time of Peace as a Breach of the Law, is Treason in time of a common Engagement: And to gratify a professed Enemy at such a time, is as Witchcraft and Rebellion.

2. As he thus sets forth Sin as the Devil's proper Work, thereby to deter from it, and exhort the more powerfully to constant Holiness; so he pronounceth every one that commits Sin, to be of the Devil, and that hereby the Children of God and Satan are manifestly distinguished: Ver. 10. In this the Children of God are manifest, and the Children of the Devil; whosoever doth not Righteousness, is not of God, neither he that loveth not his Brother. He instanceth in that one Duty, and he turns it both ways, either to Omission or Commission; and the Reason he gives is full, for the Devil sins from the beginning, that is, makes a Trade, a Practice of it. He interprets it to be meant of a Way or a Course of sinning, as by the other he signifies a Course of Righteousness. Of the Devil he saith, he sins (not hath sinned) from the beginning; he hath made it his Work without Interruption, without Ceasing: therefore whosoever he be that continues in Sin, commits it, makes a Trade and Practice of it, is of the Devil, for he sins as he doth. As a Gentleman may do an ignoble Work of a Tradesman, but yet ceaseth not to be noble by it, for he lives upon his Lands, and not upon his Work: so may a Godly Man do a piece of a Sinners Work, and he doth it too often, but he doth not make it a Trade, nor live on it; he lives on higher things, and if he belongs to Christ, Christ will not suffer him to continue in Sin, for Christ came to dissolve the Work, as the Trade, the Haunt of the Devil in him; and he would wholly lose his End, if he preserved not his own, if he broke not that haunt, that way of sinning, and the Dominion, the Rule, the Work of Satan in him, and so defaced that Character wherein the Children of Satan resemble their Father, in being Workers of Iniquity, as Christ calls those (Luke 13. 27.) that have been the greatest Pretenders to him. They shall be found to have been (if you take their whole course) such Workers of Iniquity, Luk. 13. 27. And in this sense he that commits Sin is here taken, as by the Opposite afore, he that doth Righteousness is Righteous. Where not one alone Act of Righteousness, but he that worketh Righteousness, that makes it his Study, Business and Life, is meant: He that lives in Sin is of the Devil. He speaks of the differing States of a Believer and Unbeliever; because Christ was manifested to do this (or to do nothing) namely, to dissolve the Devil's Trade and Work in us. He hath spoiled the Devil's Business, and he will suffer no Man (whom he died for) after he is ingrafted into him, to be the Devil's Factor.

1 John 1. 10. & 2. 1, 2.

Egyptus

Book III. 3. The Apostle holds forth Christ and Satan to be two Fountains, the one of Sin, the other of Righteousness. All Mankind (according as their Courses and Ways are) fall either to the one or the other, and are either of God or of the Devil. Tho Men consider it not, they hold of the one or the other in Capite, as of their Head: yea they are Children of one of these. John 8. 44. You are of your Father the Devil, and his Lusts you will do. Their Indoles, Genius, Disposition and Practices are the same that his are, and he is their Prince, their Sovereign, their natural or rather unnatural Lord; and in this the Children of God, and of the Devil are manifest: even as here the Apostle says, He that commits Sin is of the Devil, and he that doth not Righteousness is not of God. He knows not Christ, nor ever truly saw him, or was acquainted with him, ver. 6. for he came to take Sin away, to dissolve the Works of the Devil, &c. and therefore all you that profess the Name of Christ (says John) look to this, and examine your selves by it, deceive not your selves, but walk by this Example.

I have thus given you the general Scope of the Apostle's Words: and the Design of my following Discourse, is not now to urge that point of the distinction of a regenerate and unregenerate Man, by their several Courses of Sin and Righteousness; but to exhort Believers in Christ unto all Practices of all sorts of Righteousness, and to dehort them from all Sin upon all Occasions. Now unto this end (which is also John's Scope) I shall present unto you (which this Scripture is so great a ground for) the great and dividing Interests of these two Opposites, Jesus Christ and Satan, in respect of Sin and Righteousness. The Devil sinned from the beginning, and drew Men after him, and set up this Design; and Christ was promised from the beginning, and in the end appeared to break this Design of Satan. The Devil had always a Faction for him, and for Sin from the first; and therefore John instanceth (1 John 3. 12.) in the eldest Son of Reprobation, Cain; Not as Cain (saith he) who was of that wicked One, and slew his Brother. So that if you profess your selves to belong to Christ, you are thereby instantly engaged to set upon the Practice and Advancement of Holiness and Righteousness, and to oppose and destroy Sin upon this Interest and Account, that you are engaged together with Christ, and so his Interest in this became yours. And to put an Addition of Strength hereto, and to encourage you the more therein, I shall joine to this another Scripture, which is the close of Peter's first Epistle, 1 Pet. 5. 8. Be sober, be vigilant; because your Adversary the Devil, as a roaring Lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour. The things which out of this Text I have designed to handle, are principally two.

1. That there is a general Engagement of all Christians against Satan, as against a common Enemy, against whom as such they should all direct, intend, and point their Opposition in fighting against Sin, and the Force of that Engagement.

2. I shall propound the Encouragements we may take to our selves in this great Conflict.

1. There is a general Engagement of all Christians against Satan as their common Enemy.

(1.) The Devil is a common Adversary (so Peter speaks of him) a malicious Enemy seeking whom he may devour, making that his chief End and Business, to destroy and devour Mens Souls as a Lion doth his Prey: An industrious Enemy walking about, and spying out Advantages privately and particularly against every Soul.

(2.) Satan's chief Work and Business, wherein he shews himself our Adversary, lies in drawing us to Sin. This the coherence of the Apostle Peter shews, for his Exhortation is, be sober and watch, which evidently hath respect unto Lusts, inordinate Affections growing upon a Man's Spirit, and those are the Advantages which Satan seeks; and by the prevailing thereof it is, that a Man is devoured by Satan, and to effect this it is, that he walks up and down to do this his Business.

(3.) The Saints resistance of Satan herein is a common Engagement. He is your Adversary (ver. 8.) and not yours only, but of all the Brotherhood (as the Word is) that are in the World, who suffer and are in danger and jeopardy in this respect from him; who therefore as one Man, are all engaged against him to resist resist him. And in fighting against Sin, they should point, and direct, and intend their Opposition against Satan also (whom resist, says Peter) and have an aim at him in their resisting of Sin, sharpening and whetting up their Spirits against

Chap. 5.

(4.) The Force of this Engagement is to be considered.

1. For the first, that the Devil is our Adversary, and a common Enemy, I will not insist on it.

2. That to draw us to Sin, and to preserve our selves from Sin, is the great Interest on both sides; namely to draw us to Sin, and to move us to yield to loose Affections, is the Devil's Interest; and to be sober and to resist him herein is ours. Heb.

12. 4. You have not yet resisted unto Blood, fighting against Sin. To what purpose comes in that addition fighting against Sin? It is to shew that the eminent matter of Contest, and Contention, and Scope of a Christian is to fight against Sin, which every true Believer hath set up as the principal Business of his Life in this World. A Christian is Sin's Antagonist, as the word here rendred, fighting a-^{Ανταγωνιστι}gainst, is in the Original. Well, but how is it connected with the former Speech? Ζημερον.

He had minded them (Chap. 10.) how they had already in their Goods and Names been prejudiced and spoiled: What was the bottom Cause of it, but fighting against Sin, because they would not deny Christ, or forsake their Profession, and to sin against Christ? On this account the Apostle puts all those their former Sufferings. Now (says the Apostle) for this Principle and Resolution if you continue in it, as it is indeed your End and Interest, you may be brought to Martyrdom, unto Blood, which yet you have not been, as many others have afore you. And it hath not been resisting Authority, or Opposition to Men, and a contending with them about a worldly Power, or Interest: but the World through Satan's instigation comes upon them, to urge them to a compliance with sinful Customs and Practices, and they hold fast to their Principle, to fight against Sin (that they would not sin, was the bottom ground of their Opposition) and so chose to suffer rather. So then not to sin, to fight against Sin, is at once the Interest of all Christians, and the Cause of all Persecutions, which by sinning they might avoid;

but (as it is in Chap. 11.) They chose rather to suffer Affliction with the People of God, than to enjoy the Pleasures of Sin for a Season. This is our Part and Interest;

but then on the contrary the Devil's part is to sin, and to draw Men to sin is his Interest; yea it is the main End and Design of that other part of his Power, viz.

the bringing Persecutions on the Saints, for he doth it to draw and tempt them unto Sin; that is in his Eye and Design more than to vex them, or to bring an outward Misery upon them.

That Subject therefore which I shall a little insist on, is the Demonstration how much, and how properly and peculiarly our sinning is both the Work of Satan, and also the Interest of his Kingdom: to set forth both which, that Place 1 John

3. 8. doth most fully serve of any other Scripture.

1. That Scripture tells us he hath sinned from the beginning, therein charging him, as he that was the first that brought it into the Creation of God. He was the first that sinned himself, John 8. 44. he is said to speak a Lie of his own, for none tempted or tempteth him to sin; and he is the Father of it, as the first In-venter of any Trade is termed in Gen. 4. 20, 21. And moreover he was the Cause of it in all others, and that in a far different manner than Adam was, or any of Mankind have been to others, as Jeroboam or the like. Adam brought in Sin by one Act traduced down to us, but himself is long since dead, and hath ceased to sin; but the Devil sins from the beginning, and hath made it his Trade continually to sin, and draw others to sin: and they are the Sins in us Men, as caused by him, that are termed his Works, for they are those Works of the Devil, which Christ came to dissolve and to take away, ver. 5. But Christ was not manifested to take away the Devil's Sins that are personally in himself, nor shed a drop of Blood to hinder him from sinning; but his Sins and his Works as in us, these Christ came to dissolve, these Sins which are his wicked Work in us.

2. Sin is in a peculiar and proper manner termed his Work more than ours, and is owned by him accordingly; and thus tho we are the Actors of these Sins more immediately, yet it is Satan who loves Sin, as it is a Work of Iniquity: He is

Book III. the very Inventer, and loves the very Workmanship of it in us, as Christ loves in a Believer the new Creature, which in Christ Jesus is created unto good Works, Col. 2. 10. A Mechanick that works to get his living, loves not so much the Work he makes, as the Livelihood that comes by it (as of the makers of Diana's Shrines it is said, Acts 19. 24.) and so Men love Sin for the Pleasure, that cannot be enjoyed without it: but there are principal Artifts (as they are termed) the curious Painters and Inventers, who when they have invented a curious piece that pleases their Fancy, love the Work it self. Thus doth the Devil love Sin as his own Work: and as God having made the World, upholds it, gives Virtue to Nature, and works hitherto (as Christ says) so Sin being the Devil's Creature, he preserves it, upholds it, diffuseth it, and so sins from the beginning in tempting and provoking us. Adam poor Man, when fallen (by whom it is said that Sin entered into the World, Rom. 5.) as also our Mother Eve, but look'd upon all the Sins, he or she saw any of their Sons commit, as Evils of which themselves were the Cause, and viewed them with a sad and heavy Heart, and with this mournful Reflection, I have made all this Work in the World. But the Devil looks with another Eye upon all the Sins which are done under the Sun; and says as Nebuchadnezzar, This Babel and Confusion in the World have I built for the Honour of my Majesty in my opposition to God. He looks as God did upon his Works, and is refreshed, for it is merely, purely his own.

3. It being his Work, and he the Inventer, he hath the Monopoly of it, the Gains of it (and let him enjoy them, as by the ordinary Law all first Inventers use to do) and all we Men work but under him, tho we are also said to seek out many Inventions (as Solomon speaks) but so as he hath the chief Business and Affair in it. Sinners take pains, like the Merchants from far that travel Sea and Land; that is, go over all things delightful in this World, the Delights of the Sons of Men, and seek to and fro to bring in Pleasures from them to themselves, and fall into many Snares and Temptations, that pierce their Souls with many Sorrows: but the Devil hath the Custom out of all, and they bring in but the Bullion to this great Sovereign's Mint. The Coinage, the Prerogative thereof is his, and 'tis his Stamp and Supercription the Works bear. Sinners like the poor Israelites gather Straw where they can find it, do burn (1 Cor. 7. 2.) and are enflamed with Lusts, but it is his Brick which they make. If you ask how his Glory, his Kingdom, his Greatness is increased by it: I answer.

(1.) The Power, the Glory of his Kingdom lies in sinning; for Sin, as Sin, is his Interest, and Sin (as it opposeth God) set him up at first to build Pyramids and Trophies for his own Glory in dishonouring of God. You are busy like Bees flying to and fro to a thousand Flowers; and poor Souls, you aim at Honey, but then you return with it unto his Hive, where you, and he, and Honey, are all burnt together. Look as Christ's Kingdom consists in Peace, Joy, Righteousness (Rom. 14. 17. Heb. 7. 2.) so the Devil's Kingdom consists in Sin, and his Throne is establisht by it. Eph. 6. 12. The Devils are called Rulers of the Darkness of this World, and the World is the bound of his Dominion; but that wherein properly his Rule lies, is the Darkness, the Sin of the World, which he is the Ruler of; insomuch as that, which is his top Interest, is Sin, and his Throne is establisht by it, and founded and built upon it, as Christ's Scepter and Throne is a Scepter of Righteousness, Heb. 1. 8. A Scepter is an Ensign of Power, and Kings Scepters are made of Gold; but Christ's Scepter is formed of Righteousness, pure Righteousness: and this is that Interest of his Kingdom, so of Iniquity is the Interest of that of Satan.

(2.) Our sinnings through his Temptations are the greatest, if not the only Delight and Pleasure he hath. They are as Meat and Drink to him, his Food and Nourishment, and we thereby become Caterers and Providers for the Devil's Banquetting. This is founded on 1 Pet. 5. 8. for wherefore is it that Peter gives him here the Character of a roaring Lion, and compares him thereunto, but to represent him as one that seeks for a Prey? for roaring is here attributed to him, as to terrify in respect of the dreadfulnes of the Danger, so in relation to his own hungering after a Prey; a Soul acting Sin is his Prey, Psal. 104. 22. The young Lions roar after their Prey, and so the Devil doth too; for it follows in 1 Pet. 5. 8.

5. 8. that he seeks whom to devour, and to that end walks up and down, and seeks a Prey both by spying out a Christian's looseness of Spirit, and also by eyeing God to have a Commission from him to fall upon him. In Psal. 28. 5. a roaring Lion is translated by the Septuagint λέων πένων, the same word which Peter here useth for devouring. When a Lion is hungry, he roars more terribly: and as roaring is from the Speediness and Impatiency of Desire, so the Satisfaction of that Appetite is Delight, and devouring the Prey is his pleasing Enjoyment; sutablely his Pleasure is Sin, that is his Prey, and when you sin much, and draw others to sin, you feast the Devil with the Blood of your own Souls. His Curse was to eat Dust for his Food, Gen. 3. 14. being banisht Heaven, he lives on Mens Lusts, and on things earthly, in which yet he delights not, for he tasteth not Meat or Drink; but to tempt others herewith, and to draw them to sin, this delights him, and is a Joy to him. The Apostle termeth all our Righteousness σκύβαλα, Dogs-meat; but the Sins are the Devil's Meat, and therefore he walks to and fro seeking it, as Lions do their Food, Psal. 104. 22. yea he calls other Devils to feast with him. Plutarch says, the manner of young Lions is, when they have their Prey, to roar, to invite other Lions to come and eat with them; so the Devil brings seven other Devils worse than himself; and as there is Joy in Heaven if a Sinner be converted, so in Hell when a converted Sinner falls into sinning.

4. Let us but view what Expressions the Scriptures use of Mens sinning against God, and turning aside from him to serve any Lust, and we shall see that they evidently argue, that our sinnings are the Devil's Interest. Thus the Apostle (1 Tim. 5. 15.) speaking of younger Widows marrying again when they had vowed themselves to Christ, as was the Practice then, says, that they had already turned aside after Satan. If we never so little decline from Christ, return to Satan; and if we give way to any Passion, it's to give place to the Devil, Eph. 4. 27. And what he says of Anger, Wrath, &c. he intends also of any other Sin or Lust, Let him that hath stoln, steal no more, as giving place to the Devil. Thus also when Peter would exaggerate Ananias's Sin (Acts 5.) he saith not only, Why hast thou sinned? but why hath Satan filled thy Heart? Thus he that commits Sin is of the Devil, 1 John 3. 2. He is of his side and Party, yea of the Devil as of a Father, John 8. 44. Yea the measure of Mens Wickedness more or less is expressed, by their having fewer or more Devils in them; Mary Magdalen had seven Devils, Mark 16. 9. And the Devil is said to return to an apostate Backslider with seven Devils worse than himself, to express that his latter Days should be more wicked than his former; yea the Scripture calls a Sinner Devil, John 6. 70. And as Judas joined with the Devil in betraying Christ, the Devil is said to have entred into him, Luke 22. 3. Yea (consider it Brethren) tho a Man be a good Man (as Peter was) yet in any foul Act or Sin he puts off the Christian, and turns Devil for that time. It was the sharpest word that ever Christ uttered to a Man that was Holy, Get thee behind me Satan, thou art an Offence to me, Mat. 16. 23. It was the worst Word that could be given him, and yet Christ, who is Truth, spake it; and he exceeded not in Passion above the merit of the thing, for Guile was not found in his Mouth. And he speaks it with Indignation, as of one he abhorred, Get out of my Sight, I cannot endure to look on thee. It doth not signify, that Christ loved him not, but Christ spoke thus, that he might the more pungently and piercingly set on his Sin upon him. Thus the incestuous Corinthian, tho a good Man (1 Cor. 5. 13.) is called τὸν νόπερον, that wicked Person: The Man was good, he had Spirit or Grace in him to be saved (ver. 5.) yet in the Act he was a Devil; for ὁ νόπερος, is the Stile of the Devil in John, and elsewhere. And therefore it is that Excommunication is to be a delivering up to Satan; and the Apostle would have him delivered up to Satan (ver. 5.) as a sutable Punishment. Thus you say, when you turn an untoward Servant, or Child out of doors, Now go to your Companions. And thus an excommunicated Person is delivered to Satan, as it were in these Words, You acted the part of the Devil in sinning, he entred into you, and you cast your Lot with him (as Solomon speaks) and therefore let the Devil keep you Company a while, and asright and torment you, that so you may learn what it is to have the Devil again. And accordingly at last wicked Men, as having followed the Devil's Delign, are cast into the Fire prepared for the Book III. the Devil and his Angels, and they and he are tormented together in the same Lake of Fire and Brimstone common to both, because the Cause, the Engagement was common to both. All these and many more Expressions, which might haply be gathered together, evince this, that Sin is the Devil's great Interest, and that to sin is to maintain the Devil's Quarrel, to fight Satan's Battels against the Lord, to build up his Kingdom, to strengthen his Cause, to side and take part with him.

USE 1. If it be so (as I have proved) that Sin is the Devil's great Business, and the Interest of his Kingdom; then we may be sure, that in every Sin to which we are indulgent, we have dealings with the Devil: whilst we are in this World (as Peter speaks) we are subject to be tempted (as Paul says, Gal. 6. 1.) and therefore let us be sober and watch, and (as Christ exhorts, Mat. 26. 41.) watch and pray, lest you enter into Temptation. Our dear Lord had then taken three of his strongest Disciples to assist him in his Temptation, the forest that ever was: they fell asleep; Well says he, you will have your turn, your time of Temptation will come, and you had need watch better for your selves than you have done for me, or you will be undone. And in that Compendium of Prayers our Lord gave us, he puts in two Petitions much to one purpose, Lead us not into Temptation, but deliver us from that evil One (so in the Greek) the Head, the Author of all Evil. That Particle $\alpha\lambda\lambda\alpha$, but, shews its Coherence and Conjunction with the former Petition; and so the meaning is, that God would not so give us over to Satan, as that he should devour us, or undo us. He doubles this Petition, and twines it both ways, because Temptations to Sins are all our Lots; and therefore we should eye the Devil in them, as one with whom we have to do. And tho it is true, that no Man is tempted but of his own Lust (says James, Ch. 1.) yet there is no Lust stirs, but this Tempter blows it up. He observes which way the Stream is inclined to run, and he applies his Winds to blow in accordingly: there is no great Sin, but he hath a hand in it, if not by beginning it, yet by promoting it. This you may learn of the same James, From whence come Wars? says he, James 4. 1. 'Tis true that they arise from our Lusts, that war in our Members, prone enough to rise up in Arms upon every Occasion, and from thence is all inordinate Love of the World. And the Spirit that is in us, lusts after Envy fast enough of it self; but yet there is over and above a Devil that acts and inflames all these; and therefore when he gives Counsel against all these, he closeth all with this, ver. 7. Resist the Devil as the great Leader of all these warring Lusts. If you have bitter Envyings and Strife in your Hearts, this Spirit is not only earthly and sensual, but the Devil is in it, 'tis Devilish. Are there Divisions and Offences in Churches? (Rom. 16. 17.) the Devil is in them; so Paul suggests (ver. 20.) comforting them, that the God of Peace, that loves Peace, and is among them, would tread down Satan the Head, the Ringleader of them, shortly. Doth Anger arise? Take heed, the Devil stands at the Door watching to enter, Eph. 4. 26, 27. Be angry and sin not, &c. neither give place to the Devil. A Lust given way to, opens the Door for him to enter, and fill the Heart; and what he speaks of Anger, is true of all those Sins he there names afore and after, viz. Lying, Stealing, Uncleanness, &c. Is a Man covetous and resolved to be rich? he falls into Temptation and into a Snare, 1 Tim. 6. 9. Whose Snare it is you may easily know, by what it is joined with, viz. Temptation. It is the Snare of the Tempter, which in 2 Tim. 2. 26. is called the Snare of the Devil. Thus every Lust is, and by it he entred into Ananias's Heart and filled it, Acts 5. Hath a Man an evil Tongue? Tho it is bad enough of it self, yet the Devil heats it in his Forge, enflames the Lust of it, and sharpens the Wit to it: James 3. 6. The Tongue is a Fire, a World of Iniquity amongst our Members; it defileth the whole Body, and setteth on fire the course of Nature, and is set on fire of Hell. In like manner with respect unto Uncleanness, this unclean Spirit takes all Occasions to tempt us, 1 Cor. 7. 5. The Apostle exhorts Man and Wife not to be a long time afunder (but upon absolute Necessity) lest Satan (says he) tempt you for your Incontinency; that is, whereas the most of Men have not that Gift of Continency (which, ver. 7. he says he had) and therefore to avoid Fornication and Burning, are supposed to marry (ver. 2.) Satan spies out all Advantages to stir up that Lust e'er you are aware (you having that in you which the Apostle calls your Incontinency) and to provoke you to some unclean Act. All Lusts else are the Devil's Snares; and in a word, in all these Cobwebs there inhabit Spiders, and every stragling Love of inordinate Affection that goes out, and is fastened to any thing in the World, is the Spiders Dancing-Rope, to go in and out of his House upon.

Chap. 5.

USE 2. What Weight should the serious Consideration hereof have upon our Spirits, both to preserve us from sinning, and to humble us for having sinned.

1. To preserve us, and to be a Motive against sinning. Doth any Lust begin to boil within thee? Think with thy self, and say, this is Satan's Scout, he is in Ambushment not far off, and the Devil is now approaching, for lo I feel his Darts, his fiery enflaming Darts, as Paul calls them. These Darts cast into my Heart, came out of his Forge, I feel them as Fire in my Bones; and as in War Darts use to be thrown at the first onset, when the Enemy is approaching, so are these; but he will come on with sharper Weapons and forer Assaults, and enter into me, if I take not heed. Our Saviour Christ espied him afar off, Now is the Prince of this World a coming (says he) so mayst thou, as one Army doth another, when their Forelorn is approaching. Christ indeed could say with Comfort, He hath nothing in me, but thou canst not say so, for he hath that in thee will betray thee to him, and join with him against thee. Think then with thy self, Now I have to do with the Devil, and now resist, and give not place to the Devil. If thou wert sure thou hadst to do with the Devil, thou wouldst avoid him; if he took a Shape and appeared to thee, thou wouldst not deal or truck with him: but know, that when thy Lust, thy Passion, thy Pride or Covetousness is up, he is surely at thy elbow. As therefore the Apostle (Heb. 13. 2) exhorts to Works of Hospitality, because thereby some unawares have entertained Angels, as Lot and Abraham did; so for certain thou by letting in this or that Sin, lettest in the Devil, and entertainest him, tho thou seest him not. And tho thou yieldest but to one Act of Sin only (as thou thinkest) yet thou serveest the Devil, and dost his Work; yea and hast Communion with him. The poor Prodigal aimed but at Husks to fill his Belly (Luke 15. 15.) but he could not enjoy them, but by joining himself to the Farmer, the Devil, whose all the Swine and Pleasures of Sin in this World are. Oh consider this! I would not (says the Apostle, 1 Cor. 10. 20.) that you should have Communion with Devils. All Men, especially Christians, abhor that; he takes that for granted, and yet 'tis in the Nature of the thing it self: by yielding to Sin, you become Companions with the Devils, as they in eating things sacrificed to him did. In eating his Dainties of sinful Pleasures, he seems to feast you, but really and indeed you entertain him. In sinning we have Communion with Satan, as in Righteousness we have with God, only with this difference: In Works of Righteousness we have Communion with God, in a Work that is God's (for as Christ saith, we work the Works of God) and then further, we have Communion with his Person by Faith eyeing him, and walking in the light of him, and in so doing he often manifests himself to us; but tho we have not such sensible Communion with the Person of Satan, as with God by Faith, yet having to do with his Works wherein he acts us, we have remotely to do with his Person. For as Merchants (each with other) we have to do with his Wares, and his Commodities, not only for the present, but for hereafter. Now then, in the entrance to any Sin consider upon what is said, that it is the Devil, who is thy Guide, and wilt thou follow him? Thou makest thereby a kind of Covenant to serve him, e'er thou art aware of it. All Men do it implicitly (as we say of them that go to cunning Wizards) but in such a Case thou wilt do it explicitly.

2. Hast thou sinned, and therein acted the Devil's part? Humble thy self greatly, and that upon this consideration, that thou hast sided with Satan, and the Devil hath cause to say, thou hast manfully or rather devilishly took my part this day. The Apostle James having shewn, that in yielding to their Lusts they closed with the Devil (Chap. 4. 1, 2, & 7. compared) exhorts them to renounce Satan, and to draw nigh to God, and then to be afflicted and mourn. Humble your selves (says he) in the sight of the Lord. Would it not break thy Heart to hear Christ from Heaven,

Book III. Heaven, after such or such a Sin or Fact, to call thee Devil, and to bid thee get thee behind him, as he did to Peter? Now Christ hath the same Affection in this respect whilst he is in Heaven, and when he was on Earth, not only to turn away his Face, and withdraw the Light of his Countenance from thee; but with Indignation (for that present) to reject thee, and cast thee behind his Back, and to remove thee as an accursed thing in his Sight. Christ said thus to Peter, and thou deservest it, but humble thy self and be not discouraged; for at another time when the same Peter had played the Devil worse by far, in forswearing his Saviour, and had acted the Devil in his Colours (for the Devil is a Blasphemer and the Father of Lies, and Peter had done both by lying and forswearing Christ) yet then Christ turned not his Back but his Face upon him. Christ looked back, and one Look of Christ cast the Devil out (as the Believer doth experience, that when Christ appears by Faith in the Heart, the Devil is gone) and Peter went forth and wept bitterly. Be not therefore discouraged, for Christ still loved and prayed for this Peter, and exercised these varieties of Dispensations to the same Peter, to shew us that he useth both upon occasion to his Children, and we should have the one in our eye to humble us, the other to encourage us. We have an Enemy on Earth, Satan, but an Advocate in Heaven, 1 John 2. 1.

C H A P. VI.

A Motive to Holiness and to fight against Sin, drawn from the Consideration, that this Holy War is a Common Engagement, in which all Angels and Saints are Confederates.

I Shall now demonstrate, that there is a common Engagement of all Believers against Satan, in fighting against Sin, and that they are to point and direct their Opposition against him. My purpose is not to enlarge upon the Warfare of a Christian, the Subject of so many Tongues and Pens, but my Scope is to whet and edge your Spirits against Sin, whenever you find your Spirits tempted and Lusts high, and to animate you unto an Opposition to the Devil.

I shall give you the Story of this War against Satan, and shew how antient, and how long a continued and universal an Engagement this is.

1. God in Paradise proclaimed this War, and stated it there, so old is it; it began there, and 'twas proclaimed there. I will not for the present go so high to say, that it began before between the Son of God, and these evil Angels in Heaven, tho some affirm it. This Devil he affronted our great God in both his Courts, his Court in Heaven where Angels are, and his Court on Earth, Paradise, which God himself built for Adam personally, as the Seat of him who was made King of all the Earth, and Father of all Men. The Devil by tempting our first Father and Mother was the Cause of their first Sin, which was the Original and Fountain of all ours. Because thou hast done this (says God, Gen. 3. 14.) and done it enviously, maliciously and subtilly, knowing what would be the consequence of it to all Mankind, thou art therefore accursed. The Man and Woman were deceived as Birds by the Fowler, but the Devil was the Deceiver, and therefore he is cursed above all. It is therefore the common Quarrel of our Nature, as we are Men, to make War against him.

This engaged God himself, God laid it to Heart on our behalf, and shall not we? Yea it drew in all the three Persons, who appeared in making Man, and said, Let us make Man after our Image, which this Devil sought to deface. They are all answerably disgusted at this destroying of their Image, and are resolved to renew it.

1. It was God the Father, who dealt then personally with the Devil, and who cursed him; for it was he that gave the Law to Adam of not eating the Forbidden Fruit, as appears by this Discourse; and it is the same Person that curseth Satan, and he it is that is that God of Peace who treads him under, Rom. 16. 20. And

Chap. 6.

And it is the same God of all Grace that helps us against him, 1 Peter 5.

9, 10.
2. God the Son was he that was to become the promised Seed, and who was on purpose designed out by God to deal with him. It was he who was instantly proclaimed the General upon the Place of the Affront, and the Head of this Quarrel; and so he was then professedly engaged, and that by his own Consent standing by.

3. The Holy Ghost, tho not mentioned, yet to be sure we may find him to be there, as he must needs be Satan's Opposite hereupon. For the Devil spoiled that in Man, which is more properly his Work (Holiness being the Work of the Holy Spirit) and their very Titles ever hereafter shew their Opposition. Thus the one is called the Holy Spirit, and Satan is termed the unclean Spirit in the Evangeliſts and in the Acts, no less than two and twenty times; and so he is called too in the Old Testament, Zach. 13. 2. and he and his Angels are frequently called Evil Spirits both in the Old and New Testament. And the Opposition of these two is seen in every Saint's Heart every day. These Words also in Gen. 3. 15. I will put Enmity between her Seed and thy Seed, do involve the whole Seed of elect Men as well as Christ, as I have shewn in another Discourse. Thus it is an universal Engagement: yea, and as you see God's Heart was so upon it, and his Councils and Resolutions in this Point so ripe and ready, as he stands not deliberating; but upon the very Place in Paradise where the Mischief was done, and well nigh as soon as it was done, he proclaimed War. He stays not so long as till he had turned Man out of Paradise: yea and he professeth himself to be the Beginner, Contriver and Undertaker of this War; I will put (says he) Enmity, &c. It is a War then of God's own making, and properly his, more than ours. Thus great and solemn it is, not a Quarrel only against Sin, but against the Devil, between thee and the Serpent, that is, the Devil.

Of Christ the Mediator, B.V. Ch. 17. in Vol. III. of his Works

As the War was thus early proclaimed, so you read how accordingly it was carried on from the first, that Men began to multiply in the Earth, even by the two first Sons of Men, Sons of Adam, that were in the World; the Devil took the one, Cain, and God took the other, Abel. This early Division and parting of the Seed, John takes notice of, 1 John 3. 10, 11, 12. In this the Children of God are manifest, and the Children of the Devil; whosoever doth not Righteousness, is not of God, neither he that loveth not his Brother. For this is the Message that ye heard from the beginning, that we should love one another. Not as Cain, who was of that wicked One, and slew his Brother; and wherefore slew he him? Because his own Works were evil, and his Brother's righteous. As if he had said, this different Seed and Quarrel, which in Gen. 3. was spoken of, caused Arms to be taken up presently. The Devil as he had set up, so he carried on his Design, and drew Men after him from the beginning. He had a Party for him from the first of the Sons of Adam, Cain: and God carried on this Quarrel in like manner, against Sin and the Devil in the Heart of the next Son, Abel. Sin was the Interest that made the Division, for Cain killed him, because his Works were evil, and his Brother's righteous, says the Text. And these two, Cain and Abel, led on all that followed under the whole Old Testament, all under it fell the one way or the other. The Elect then, as they had the promised Seed in their Eye, so withal they had Satan as their Adversary in their Eye, whom they should oppose; for by their being instructed in the one part of the Promise, they were also in the other. And hence the word Satan (or Adversary) was the usual Name both antiently and frequently in the Old Testament given to the Devil, even from Job's time, Job 1. 6. & Chap. 2. 1 Sam. 29. 4. 1 Chron. 21. 1. Psalm 109. 6. & Zach. 3. 1.

In the end the General himself came down into the Field, and he was manifest to destroy the Works of the Devil, yea and he died in the Quarrel (I need not repeat what I have said at large about this) and when he had by Death destroyed him, he triumphed over him, and left it to you ἐπιτελεῖσαι, (as Peter's word is) to accomplish the Victory. So then unto that War, which against Satan and Sin as his Work was proclaimed by God in Paradise, Christ founded the Alarum, and upon his Cross set up his Royal Standard thereon, appointed that the

In the Discourse of Christ the Mediator, in Vol. III. of his Works.

Q

ren-

Book III.

rendevouz to draw elect Men to him when he was lift up, John 12. 32. and unto it and him hath been the gathering of all the Saints ever since. Know then, that Christ in redeeming us, not only intended an Obedience to his Father, and Glory to him, and our Salvation with it, but withal he aimed at the Destruction of Satan: he acted not only the part of a Son that learned Obedience, and of a Saviour, but also of a Warriour, an Avenger and Destroyer. Now the Saints are to fight in this Quarrel, out of the same Interest Jesus Christ doth, and they ought to be spirited with his Aims and Ends; therefore (1 Pet. 4. 7.) we are exhorted to arm our selves with the same Mind that was in Jesus Christ our General, and therefore to direct our Opposition as Christ did: and whereas (Heb. 2. 14.) he is said to have destroyed him that had the Power of Death, in the 10th ver. he is set before us as the Captain of our Salvation, ἀρχηγός.

No sooner was Christ gone to Heaven, but unto this Standard all the Saints and Brotherhood on Earth, the Church Universal, have and do flock in all Ages, and enrol their Names. We (says the Apostle Paul) wrestle against Principalities, &c. Eph. 6. 12. We, he speaks it indefinitely in the Name of all the Saints; and so Peter speaks too, Resist your Adversary (says he) knowing that the same Afflictions (that is, the same Temptation from him) are accomplished in your Brethren that are in the World, that is, this is the common Cause, in which all Saints are engaged, not one excepted; and is not this a great Engagement then? That which is translated Brethren, is in the Original Brotherhood, ἀδελφότητα, shewing that they are engaged, not only all and every Saint, nor singly all and every one, but as a joint Body, they all strive together as one Man: so then, these are the two eminent parts of the Communion of Saints, namely to love the Saints, and to resist this common Enemy, and the whole Brotherhood is engaged in both. And the same God that hath put in Love into the Brethren, hath put into all their Hearts also an Enmity against Satan, in fighting against Sin. The Apostle adds in the World, and so speaks of all Saints in all Places, and in all Times present and to come. The Catholick Church, and the Communion of Saints are joined together in the Creed, and are of equal extent in this.

Your Baptism is the Sign and Sacrament of this universal Engagement, so the Primitive Christians understood it: Hi sunt Angeli quibus in lavacro renuntiamus. In the Common-Prayer-Book it is made Sacramentum Militare, manfully to fight under Christ's Banner against Sin, the World and the Devil, and to continue Christ's faithful Soldier; and again particularly it is interpreted to be a Promise, to forsake the Devil and all his Works; and the Scripture is not averse to this very Notion, if the whole Coherence of the sixth Chap. of the Rom. be observed. The Apostle speaks of our being baptized into Christ, and our Conformity to him professedly avowed in Baptism, ver. 3, 4. to the 12. and what is his Inference from thence? ver. 12, 13. Let not Sin therefore reign in your mortal Bodies, neither yield you your Members, as Arms, or Weapons of Unrighteousness, but yield your selves unto God. So then through Baptism, they were Milites Sacramento obstricti Duci, in allusion to the Roman Custom of being by an Oath (which was called Sacramentum) engaged to their General. And whereas he says, yield your selves unto God, add but that of James 4. 1. and it carries it to this Engagement against Satan I insist on: for whereas the Apostle (in Rom. 6.) had in Military Language expressed it thus, Let not Sin reign to obey it in the Lusts thereof, but yield your Members as Weapons to God; James following the same Metaphor (Chap. 4. 1, to 8.) thus speaks, Whereas Lusts war in the Members, yield your selves to God, resist the Devil. The Devil is the Leader, Lusts are but the Common Soldiers.

All Men therefore must of necessity fall to one side or the other, either be subject to God and so resist the Devil, or be subject to that evil Spirit. He supposeth every Man when tempted, to be set in the midst between God and the Devil, putting themselves under God's Protection, or yielding themselves unto God; they are engaged in a War, as against their Lusts, so against the Devil, and are thus to direct their Opposition in fighting against Sin. Calvin * hath a good Speech on those three Passages of James, as they lie, whereof the first concerns our Duty to Men, Humility, God gives Grace to the Humble. 2. Submit to God. 3. Resist the Devil. He shews (says he) whither or against whom we should

Tertull.
de habitu
muliebri,
c. 2.

* Ostendit
quorsum referre debemus nostram contentio-nem, ubi erga Ho-mines Mo-destiam, erga Deum Submissionem docuit, Sa-tanam proponit Hostem, inquiens
surgere
debemus.
Calvin. in Epist. Jacobi.

should direct our Opposition; for whereas he had taught Modesty and Humility towards Men, and Submission towards God, he with the same Breath sets Satan as our professed Enemy, whom we should rise up against and resist, and give no Quarter to him; but whenever thou wouldst mortify a Lust, in laying the Knife to the Throat thereof, thrust it down even unto the Devil's Heart also, give that one Blow, and all with the more Violence as spighting him therein. Reach him in thy Intention and Aim, for God warrants thee to do it in that blessed Curse, I will put Enmity between thee and the Serpent; and Christ loves that you should do it (for himself did so) for his sake, and in his Quarrel.

The last thing to be considered is, what Force and Efficacy this Engagement against Satan should have upon our Hearts to make us Holy, to resist the Devil, and to fight against Sin, as it is Satan's Interest; which if you please, you may take and turn into the use of the former. We have lived in times, in which we have all felt more or less the Power of a publick Engagement in our Spirits, and have seen by Experience of what Efficacy it is. Let me speak to you then in the Language of the Times you have run through. When after thou first gavest up thy Name to Christ, thou didst oblige thy self in this so solemnly a stated and publick War, yea and further from that Time, every one of you was then set as in a Garison, to keep his own Soul, and to preserve it from Lusts which fight against the Soul; so as it's not to be looked at by thee only or singly, as thine own Soul, and thine own Salvation, but also as now made a Castle and Fortrefs of Jesus Christ delivered up unto thee to be kept as with a Garison. This Allusion is warranted by all these Scriptures put together, Luke 11. 21, 22. and Peter's words 1 Epist. 5. kept as with a Garison, and Paul's words, Phil. 4. 7. to which may be added that of 1 John 5. 18. He that is born of God keeps himself, that the Evil One touch him not. So then thou hast in Charge, as John speaks, to keep thy self that the Evil One touch thee not, nor come within thee. Now think what a Trust this is, not only of thine own Soul, but of a Garison of Christ's, and what a Wickedness must it be at any time to betray it, or to hold Correspondency with the Enemy; yet so in every Indulgence unto Sin thou dost. And moreover, consider that thoa Transgression in time of Peace is but a small matter, as to steal some trifle, or for a Servant or Apprentice to run away; yet to run away, yea to step aside in time of War, is Death. Adam's sinning at the first was a Transgression of the Law, but it was but as in time of Peace: yea, all thy sinning in unregeneracy, was but as in a time of Peace, in comparison to this now (when Satan kept his House, thy Heart was in Peace, says Christ, Luke 11. 21.) but every Sin now is against the Law of Arms; it is a sending Supplies to the Enemy, or a letting in a Foreign Power into Christ's Quarters and Dominions.

1 John 5: 18.

But to urge more particularly the Force of what hath been but even now discoursed, Peter's Exhortation here you see is to resist the Devil, which is done in resisting Sin, and in doing that we must have our aim at Satan, and be moved the more with an Opposition unto him; and what Spirit truly exalted would not the consideration of each of those Particulars move and raise? The next time then that thou art tempted to Pride, Uncleaness, Envy, Revenge, Covetousness, or any other Lust (in which the Devil is always at the Head) make use of these Considerations to strengthen thy Spirit against both them and him.

1. Is it nothing to thee to consider how antient a War this is, and hath been, an old Feud descended from hand to hand, till brought down to thee from Paradise, and an old Hatred tho in a successive Body, as a Nation whets on to pursue the Destruction of the Enemy? Ezek. 25. 15. The Devil as he is the old Serpent, so he is the old Enemy. As Solomon says, to sharpen Friendship, Thy Friend and thy Father's Friend forgot not: So say I, to sharpen thy Hatred against the Devil, thy Enemy and thy Father's Enemy forget thou not. Satan is thy Enemy, thy first Father's Enemy, the Empoisoner of our Nature, the Adversary of all the Saints, remember this and resist him. Therefore when the next Temptation from him riseth, think with thy self, shall I ever yield to such an Enemy?

2. All that is Holy in Heaven or Earth are combined with thee in this Quarrel, thou art environed not only with a Cloud of Witnesses and Spectators, but with a Crowd of Fellow-Engagers. All the three Persons were drawn in, and espou-fed this thy Quarrel; all the Holy Angels have fallen in, and in respect of their Opposition unto Satan it is, that they are termed an Heavenly Host, the Militia of Heaven, Luke 2. 14. and their Opposition to the Devil is on our behalf, as appears from Rev. 12. 7. And as these engaged with thee are greedy and curious Spectators and Beholders of the Issue of every Temptation; and as I told you there was an Invisible World you shall one Day judg, so there is an Invisible World that beholds you in all your Actings with, or for Satan. We are Members of that other World, and in fighting against Sin do carry on that general Cause of that other World, striving to do God's Will on Earth as 'tis done in Heaven. God hath made us a Spectacle to Angels and to Men herein, 1 Cor. 4. 9. When Christ had to do with Satan in the Wilderness, and in the Garden, he had Angels both times to view him, and to guard him, and minister unto him. I have shewed in another Discourse, how Christ had made the Devil a Publick Example before the World, Col. 2. and if the Devil gets thee to sin, he makes thee a Publick Shame before the same World. I charge thee (says Paul to Timothy) before Jesus Christ and the Elect Angels, walk so and so, 1 Tim. 5. 21. and as the Things of this Life are made small matters in comparison of those of the other World by the Apostle (1 Cor. 6.) so thy Sin, as it is known amongst Men (which is but Man's Day) is a small matter unto the Blot thou hast in thy Reputation before God and Christ, and the Angels in that other World. And God himself and Christ, are the greatest Spectators of all: 2 Chron. 16. 9. The Eyes of the Lord run to and fro through the whole Earth, to shew himself strong in the behalf of them whose Heart is perfect towards him: herein therefore thou hast done foolishly, said Hanani the Seer unto Asa. Thou hast shamed thy self quite before the great God: you may behold this in the Case of Job (and it is worth our considering) how both God's Heart wrought, and how the Devil's, concerning Job. That Conference between God and the Devil about him is carried so, that you see the Heart of each how they are affected with this Spectacle: you find God begins and boasteth of Job, as one he loved to talk of; Job 1. 8. Seest thou not my Servant Job? there is none like him on the Earth, fearing God and resisting Evil. Which the Devil could never fasten on him or bring him to, as you may see by his Conversation, Job 31. throughout. God boasts of him, as a General would do of some eminent Worthy, that was never yet foiled or taken Captive; or as a Master or Tutor would boast of some eminent Scholar: and O how this pleased God at the very Heart, as I may speak with Reverence! Well, when he had given Satan leave to bring all these Evils on him, and Satan came before God another time (Chap. 2. 10.) the thing God again spoke of, was still concerning Job (ver. 3.) And the Lord said unto Satan, hast thou considered my Servant Job? there is none like him in the Earth, fearing God and eschewing Evil, and still he holds fast his Integrity. And tho thou hast moved me against him, yet all thou hast done hath not moved him: those words, And still he holds fast his Integrity, God let fall on purpose to vex and confound the Devil, and to shew how much he gloried in it; and the Devil, as put to the foil in it, puts it off upon want of some further and greater Trial, in which God lets him use his Skill. The Result of both maketh this apparent, how much it confounds the Devil to think I have tempted this Man, and I cannot for my Heart get him to yield, and on the contrary how much it rejoiceth God to see Satan so often assault a Man, and yet (still) to hold fast his Integrity. God puts the Emphasis there, as on the other side he observes with Grief how often a Man hath been foiled: This they have done these ten times, says God, Numb. 14. 22. It mightily heightens the Spirit of a Soldier to fight in the view of his General, that (as Paul says to Timothy) he may please him who hath chosen him to be a Soldier, 2 Tim. 2. 4. True Stories have many Instances, and Romances imitate the Truth herein, and bring in Great Champions fighting in the sight of their Lover, whose Honour and Service they have undertaken. Let us look to Jesus the Author, Finisher and Crowner of our Faith. Blessed is he that endureth Temptation, for when he is tried, he shall receive the Crown of Life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him, Jam. 1. 12. This Paul had in his eye, I have fought (says he) a good Fight; henceforth is laid up for me a Crown of Righteousness, which God the Righteous Judg shall give me at that Day, 2 Tim. 4. 7, 8.

In Discourse of Christ the Mediator,
B. V. in
Vol. III. of his
Works.

7, 8. He eyed God (as they in their Olympick Concertations did the Judges) to see how he stood with a Crown and a Shield, Psal. 5. 12. Thou Lord wilt bless the Righteous with Favour, thou shalt crown him about as with a Shield (so in the Original) God both assisting as with a Shield in the Combat, and ready afterwards to crown him that overcomes. O! whom would not the Consideration of these things hearten, to stand out against Sin and Satan therein. O! where are Job's and Paul's to be found on Earth, that hold fast their Integrity?

3. Consider how the General came down into the Field, was tempted in all things as you are, and at last died in this Quarrel, to overcome on your behalf. Now the Death of the General enrageth the Soldiers (as was seen in the Battel, where Gustavus Adolphus King of Sweden lost his Life) and they make their Enemies Lives go for it; and by his Death Christ hath begun to make thee free, and hath (as was said) entrusted thine own Soul to thee, as a Castle for thee to defend. If a Town or Castle hath cost Blood, the Blood of many Soldiers to win it, and he to whom it is entrusted should yield it up, how heinous would the Action be? So much Blood as it cost the gaining, so much will be reckoned to the Betrayers of it. But hath it been the Life of ordinary Soldiers, or your own Conquests that gained your Liberty? No, it was the precious Blood of Jesus Christ, which redeemed you from your vain Conversations; and shalt thou now give it up to his utter Enemy whom he came to destroy, and whom he by Force threw out? and wilt thou do this for a few good Words, for Husks, and such wretched Allurements?

4. Remember how it was told thee, that thy Saviour perfectly triumph'd for thee over this Devil, as conquered in thy Name and Stead: now this is a great Incentive; as the Apostle reasons from his Death against Sin (how shall we that are dead, live any longer therein?) so I from his Triumph. Thou art more than a Conqueror in him, and Conquerors fight with other Spirits than other Men, as those that know not how to be foiled. This know, that it is thy Duty by Faith, and thou oughtest and art bound to triumph in Christ, and to give Thanks for the Victory as already past. Paul in the midst of the Conflict, falls a thanking God, Rom. 7. ult. I thank my God through Jesus Christ. And, 1 Cor. 15. 51. Thanks be to God that giveth us the Victory through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Now then, 1. if it were but barely betraying what Christ triumph'd for, how dishonourable were it? In so doing, look as Christ put the Devil then to open Shame, thou puttest Christ to open Shame before the Devils: as Heb. 6. the Apostle speaks, Thou makest what in thee lies Christ's glorying void, which Paul professeth he would rather die than do. But it is more especially so, when thou thy self hast also given Thanks for the Victory through Faith. View this in the Glass of the times, if Publick Thanks have been given for a Victory, or the gaining of a strong Hold, and a Triumph made upon it, and the great Guns let off; for the same Persons to yield up, what themselves thus joined in Triumph for, how dishonourable and hateful were it? As thou art to shew forth Christ's Death till he comes, so Christ's Triumph also, and so to act as a Conqueror, as to be able to say, I have overcome that Evil One. Nay let me tell thee, in case thou yieldest to thy Lust, thou givest occasion to Satan to triumph, and that not only against thee, but against Christ also; and so thou not only failest Christ, but shamest him. O that ever Satan should with an easy Suggestion win that from Christ, which he so triumph'd for! The Reason why the Devil and Wicked Men rage so in open Scandal, and a Saints known Falling, is, because he remembers the Shame Christ once put him to; and now, thinks he, I am revenged for it: and so with the greatest Joy he spreads and multiplies the Report of it, so infinitely doth he please himself with it. You find in the Psalms how David still prays, he might not be made a Scorn to his Enemies, nor that they should triumph over him: the same holds much more in respect of Spiritual Enemies.

Add unto this, the further baseness of it in this respect, to yield to, and to be overcome by a routed Enemy rallying again, by a stigmatized Enemy (for remember how Christ used him) by an Enemy thrust through. If a known Cheater should come to your Shop, whose Nose is slit, or Ears cut off, would it not be accounted the greatest Folly to be gulled by such an one?

Book III. Last of all, let it something move thee, that we are to be his Judges. You are to judg the fallen Angels, how will you be fit to do it, if you sin with them? How dishonourable is it for Judges to be found to have cast their Lots with Cut-purses and Thieves, or for Judges to leave their Seats (now you sit with Christ in Heavenly Places, Eph. 2.) how unworthy and unbecoming is it?

I shall conclude with a few Words of further Direction and Incouragement, drawn from what Peter says, 1 Pet. 5. 9. Whom resist.

1. From the word Resist, consider that Satan who tempts you, is an Adversary without you, the word ἀντίστη doth import this. Peter speaks of them in whom Christ dwells, and bids us understand our selves herein, that when Satan tempteth any of us, he is but as one that stands without us, and we are to withstand him as one that attempteth to come in upon us. Compare this 1 Pet. 5. 9. with Eph. 6. 13. Take unto you (says Paul) the whole Armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand those Principalities and Powers, spoken of ver. 12. Not only the like word ἀντίστημι, withstand, imports this, but the other Metaphor here also; for it were in vain to exhort a Man that had his Enemy in his Bosom, to put Armour on (which is a thing he is clothed with) to withstand him. It is the Case indeed of every unregenerate Man, to have the Devil within him, who is therefore in the first place to be exhorted to turn from Satan to God, and to have Satan cast out of him; but a godly Man is assaulted by Satan from without. That other Exhortation also (Eph. 4. 27. Give not place to the Devil) argues him without us, seeking to come in, and to get room or place in our Hearts. If you give way to a Lust, he enters in: yea it is made one eminent Difference between a Man unconverted and converted, that Satan is within them whilst unregenerate. Hence Christ is said to have cast out of Mary Magdalen seven Devils that were within her, dwelling as in their own House, Luke 12. 24. So in 1 John 4. 4. this Difference is put between the World and Godly Men, that Christ is in one, Satan in the other; Stronger is he that is in you, than he that is in the World. He doth not only work in Wicked Men effectually, but he himself is in them: yea as Christ is said to be in us, and we in Christ mutually; so of the World 'tis said, that the Devil is in them, and that they are in the Devil, 1 John 5. 19. the whole World lieth in Wickedness, the Words in the Original are ὅλος ἐν τῷ πονηρῷ κείται: he had said before, he that is born of God keepeth himself (that is, take his whole Course) that the Evil One, ὁ πόνηρος, toucheth him not; which evidently argues, that Satan is not in him but without him, much less is he in Satan; and then he adds these Words, the whole World lieth, ἐν τῷ πονηρῷ, in that Evil One (as he had done in the former Verse) that is, the Devil the Author of all Wickedness. And John in this Epistle had designed out the Devil by ὁ πόνηρος, that Wicked One, Chap. 2. 13, 14. Chap. 3. 12. Cain was of that Evil One. And this is a deeper Phrase than to say they are under his Power; for it implies in its Analogy, that as of their natural Life it is said, they live, move and have their Being in God, so of their Life as sinful, that they lie and move in Satan, and he is their Element as it were. They are all as young Ones in his Belly, and are quickened and nourished by that Wickedness they take in from him, as the Child is by the Mother. But it is a great Advantage to a Believer, that his Enemy is without him. A strong Party may be kept out by a few that are in an House, and will stand to defend it; and therefore give not place to the Devil, but if he knocks, open not to him, for if he sets in his Bill, he will turn the Master out. Yea let me strengthen this yet further, that there is a Stronger within us than is without us: 1 John 4. 4. Ye are of God, little Children, and have overcome them, because greater is he, viz. Christ, that is in you, than he that is in the World. And so it concerns Christ to help us to keep possession more than it doth us, for we are his House, and he as a Son is to take care over his own House, Heb. 3. 6. and Christ's Graces in us are the Goods. Now it concerns the Governour that hath a Fort committed to him, and is in possession, most to defend it. It concerns him in point of Honour, tho the Goods within be of little worth, to defend and maintain his own, especially whenas he hath already triumph'd over the Enemy. All our Conflicts therefore, are mainly to shew forth Christ's Power the more in us. 'Tis true, that against these Ships that launch forth with Christ in them, the Devil (who is the Prince of the Air) will be be sure to raise up Storms, but be of good Comfort, Christ is in thee, tho thou art but a poor Cock-Boat, ready ever and anon to be overwhelmed, and Christ will never suffer himself to be cast away. Julius Caesar said to the Mariner in a Storm, Tecum fortunam Caesaris vehis; but a greater than Caesar is in thee. All those Storms and Waves are but to shew his Power in rebuking them, go to him and awaken him, and he will do it for thee.

2. Another Encouragement is, that if thou standest stedfast and fixed in thine own Will, he cannot hurt thee; this both Words, resist and stedfast, do imply. There can be no greater Security given to combat with any Adversary than this, that he cannot wound thee, unless thy self will. I shall but add this Illustration to it, when Christ was tempted by Satan, and he had had Power to carry his Body up to the top of a Pinnacle of the Temple, from whence a Child with a push might have thrown him down with ease, yet the Devil could not; which is the more observable, in that he could hurry and bring his Body to the very Place (as he can us to an Object, that shall tempt us and bring us into ticklish and tottering Circumstances) yet still throw him down he could not, he must have his own Consent to that, and he could do nothing but persuade. Thus it is with thy Will, for Christ's Temptations are the Patterns of ours. Austin makes this the Wonder, that whereas the Devil is a Dog in Chains, yet lo how he doth prevail! when yet he can only bark and sollicite, but hurt and bite none but him that is willing, and joins himself to him. The like hath Bernard, Videte Fratres quam debilis est Hostis, qui non vincit nisi volentem.

Neminem potest mordere nisi cum qui se ei conjunxerit; latrare potest, sollicitare potest, mordere omnino non potest nisi volentem.

3. Be but stedfast in believing, and thou art victorious. Have but an inward Courage, let not thy Heart fail thee, and thou conquereest. I have prayed (saith Christ) that thy Faith fail not. Keep up thy Heart but in confidence (so saith the Apostle, Hold fast your Confidence) for Faith supports it: yea it is but having a Eye, a Look unto Christ, the Author and Finisher of our Faith, and unto God, the God of all Grace (as the 10th ver. points out) It is but to cry out to him for help in time of need (as the word signifies, and as the Apostle, Heb. 4. 16. directs us) it is but to see our own Weakness, and to look out for a Strength in the Grace that is in God and in Jesus Christ, and we overcome. 2 Tim. 2. 1. Above all take (says the Apostle, Eph. 6.) the Shield of Faith, wherewith (alone) ye shall be able to quench all the fiery Darts of the Wicked One. And the Reason the Apostle here puts the Article, ἐν τῇ πίστει, is not to note out Religion in general, but the eminent use of that Grace in this Victory. This is your Victory, even your Faith, 1 John 5. 4. I enlarge not on this, only observe the easiness of such a Victory, as an Encouragement to us, as Christ says, Fear not, only believe, Luke 8. 50.

I go on unto what is more directly propounded by Peter, purposely for Encouragement, in those Words, Knowing that the same Afflictions are accomplished in your Brethren, that are in the World. It ought to be a Comfort and Encouragement to us, that to be thus tempted is the common Lot of all the Brotherhood, universally in the World. They are all Fellow-Sufferers with us in this kind, not from Men only, but from Satan by fore and grievous Temptations; and this will afford unto us a double Consideration for Encouragement against Temptations.

1. That there are all sorts of Temptations dispensed amongst them. If they have not that which thou hast, they have some other, yea and every one hath that which shall be personally most grievous to him. There are manifold Temptations, as James and Peter says, and God exerciseth all with one or other; and the more to lead thee through them, is the more to make thee perfect, for Christ was thus made perfect, that he ran through all, therefore be not discontented with thy Lot. Yea the Apostle intimates that the same, the very same that befall any one, do befall some other in the World (which is a wide Place, and hath many Saints in it) τὰ αὐτὰ τῶν παθημάτων, the same of Sufferings, that is, the same sort or kind of Sufferings that befall one, befall some other, they have all sorts amongst them. We have heard Job complaining (says Calvin) did ever the like befall another? (in his 3, 4, 5. Chapters) But the Apostle here on the contrary saith, that nothing doth befall us in this, which we may not behold in some or other Members of the Church. In 1 Cor. 10. 13. the Apostle comforts the Corinthians thians with this, There hath no Temptation taken you (saith he) but what is common to Man, but God is faithful, &c.

(1.) He speaks to them as Believers, and as considered in the State of Grace, and as those that were under the Protection of God and his Promises, why else doth he comfort them with this word, but God is Faithful? &c.

(2.) He speaks of Temptations to Sin, yea of their having been overcome of Sins, and great Sins, Idolatry, Fornication, Murmuring: and he had laid before them great Punishments for such Sins, Let him that standeth (saith he) take heed lest he fall, namely, into Sin for time to come. And then to comfort them for their having fallen, he adds, there is no Temptation hath befallen you, but what is common to Man, that is, to the Saints of God, as clothed with humane infirmity, by reason of which a Saint may fall into Sin. Camero says, Sins cannot be meant, because the Promise is, they shall be able to bear them; now it is not a Promise to the Saints to be able to bear Sins. But I answer, that Promise imports two things.

1. That Sins are Sufferings to the Saints and the greatest, why else doth he speak of bearing them, and speak of this as proper to a Saint?

2. The Promise is not that their Spirits should bear them, that is brook them, as being contented with them as Sins; but that they should be able to submit to the Providence of God under them, and not despair (as Calvin saith); and Submission to God in point of Sinning, and bearing up ones Heart not to despair, is the greatest Patience.

A second ground of Encouragement is from this, that all the Brotherhoods being involved thus in Temptations, is part of the Communion of Saints. Consider how not all singly, but all jointly as one Man are engaged with you in the same Strivings; and so helping one another, ye strive together as one Man, and multorum manibus grande levatur opus; one is fighting in one Place, another in another, one against one Lust, another against another, and this should hearten all and every one. This mightily encourageth Soldiers that they fight together: Now thou hast the Hearts of all the Saints with thee, yea every one helps each other by their Prayers, by their Victories; yea by virtue of this Communion of Saints, all the Prayers thou puttest up for thy self are for the whole, and what thou lovest is lost to the whole Party. How doth this move the Jesuits in their Undertakings every where in the World? What thou winnest is won to the whole Party; every Prayer thou puttest up for thy self, is put up for the whole, as Christ in that his Form of Prayer hath instructed us. And at the latter Day you will all rejoice together, and Stories will be told, who did most valiantly at such and such a time, how thou wert stormed and the Devil's Mine sprung, which he had been a long while a contriving, and how thou stoodest it out against all.

C H A P. VII.

Chap. 7.

Motives unto Holy Obedience, and unto a Boldness in our Christian Profession, drawn from the Majesty of the Lord that appears therein. With an Exhortation to preserve it, and the Means of maintaining the Honour of our Profession.

Mark VI. 20.

For Herod feared John, knowing that he was a Just Man and an Holy; and observed him: And when he heard him, he did many things, and heard him gladly.

WE have here a great and strange Wonder, a Wolf (or as Christ called him, a Fox) afraid of a Lamb. Herod a King, is afraid of John Baptist, which shews a plain Contest between two Majesties which should overcome. We have here a King reverencing a greater Majesty than his own in a Subject, and in a Subject too of the meanest outside, clad not in Silk, as those in King's Houses (as Christ said of him) but in Camels Hair. I may upon such a strange Encounter say, What ailest thou O Herod, that thou fearest John? Look on him, what is it thou viewest in him to work the least degree of Fear? Art not thou a King? Take Heart, reassume Spirit. Ay, but he is an holy, and a just Man, and overcomes me (says Herod) and that is all the Reason indeed. Herod feared John, knowing him that he was a Just Man and an Holy, and revered him; and when he heard him, he did many things, and heard him gladly.

There are two Doctrines natural to this Scripture.

1. That there is a Glory and Majesty shines in the Graces, and Lives of Holy and Just Men, so far as they are Holy.

2. That there is a special Majesty and Authority discovers itself in the Word of God preached, when it is delivered and administered by Holy Men. Here is both Fear and Reverence, as the Effects assigned to a double Cause: (1.) Reverence to his Preaching upon hearing of him. (2.) Fear, because he knew that he in his Person was a Just and Holy Man.

I say there is, as an Authority, so a Majesty, for it encounters here with the Majesty of a King, and outshines it to an Awe and Reverence; and therefore must be in its Kind, a Majesty greater than what was stamped upon him. There are other Proofs of it, as in Isa. 26. 10. The Majesty of the Lord is said to shine in a Land of Uprightness. And these two Sentences are strictly to be conjoined, as to this sense, That where Uprightness in righteous Men dwells; there, in those upright Men, the Majesty of the Lord shines and appears, which wicked Mens Consciences, tho' glimmeringly, do discern, altho' they will not behold, that is, acknowledg it. The Reasons of the Doctrine are,

1. Because God is in them, and darteth eminent Beams of his Majesty out from them, in their Conversations: 2 Cor. 6. 16. I will dwell in them and walk in them, and I will be their God, and they shall be my People. And, 1 Joh. 4. 16. He dwelleth in God, and God in him. God is said to be in them; therefore as the Body hath a Majesty in it (which appears in the Subjection of Beasts to the Face of Man) because a reasonable Soul dwells in it, and a Majesty answerable to such a Soul, appears in it, so it is here. And as Solomon's Temple, wherein God manifested his glorious Presence, is therefore said to be glorious, in the Scriptures; much more are these living Temples of the Holy Ghost, wherein God keeps his Court and Residence. The King of Glory cannot come into the Heart (as he is said to come into the Hearts of his People, as such, Psal. 24. 9, 10.) but some Glory of himself will appear; and as God doth accompany the Word with Majefty, because it is his Word, so he doth accompany his own Children, and their Ways with Majesty, yea even in their greatest Debafements. As when Stephen was brought before the Council, as a Prisoner at the Bar for his Life, then God manifested his Presence to him, for 'tis said, his Face shone as the Face of an Angel of God, Acts 6. 15. in a proportionable manner it is ordinarily true, what Solomon says of all righteous Men, A Man's Wisdom makes his Face to shine, Eccles. 8. 1. Thus Peter also speaks, 1 Pet. 4. 14. If you be reproached for the Name of Christ, happy are you; for the Spirit not only of God, or of Grace, but of Glory resteth upon you. And so in the Martyrs, their Innocency, and Carriage, and Godly Behaviour, what Majesty had it with it? What an Amiability in the sight of the People, which daunted, dashed and confounded their most wretched Opposers? So that, altho the wicked Persecutors did eat up God's People as Bread (as 'tis Psal. 14. 4, 5.) yet it is added, that they were in great fear upon this very account, That God is in the Generation of the Just. God stands as it were astonish'd at their Dealings, Have the Workers of Iniquity no Knowledge? (so in the words afore) That eat up my People as Bread, and make no more ado of it, than a Man doth that heartily eats his Meat. They seem to do thus, they would carry it and bear it out; but for all that they are in great fear whilst they do thus, and God strikes their Hearts with Terror then, when they most insult. Why? For God is in the Generation of, or dwelleth in the Just; and God gives often some Glimmerings, Hints and Warnings to the Wicked (such as Pilate had concerning Christ) that his People are righteous. And this you may see in Phil. 1. 28. And in nothing terrified by your Adversaries, which is to them an evident Token of Perdition, but to you of Salvation, and that of God. In that latter Passage I observe, that an Assurance of Salvation, and a Spirit of Terror, and that of God, is given to either. In the Old Testament it is recorded of David, 1 Sam. 18. 12. that altho Saul hated him (ver. 9.) and sought to destroy him (ver. 10, 11.) yet Saul was afraid of David, because the Lord was with him, and was departed from Saul, which is the Reason in hand. God manifested his Presence in David, and struck Saul's Conscience with his Godly and Wise Carriage, and that made him afraid.

Book III.

2. The second Reason is, that God hath subjected the Consciences of all Men to the Graces and Uprightness that is in his People, which will appear by three Things.

(1.) There is an assenting to and approbation of their Courses in Mens Consciences. There appeareth to them an Amiability and a Beauty therein; so as they cannot but say, their Ways are good. Thus Paul says of himself, who yet was spoken against more than any Man; 2 Cor. 4. 12. We have renounced the hidden things of Dishonesty, not walking in Craftiness, but commending our selves to every Man's Conscience, in the sight of God. His Conversation was such, as any Man that knew his ways and manner of Life, could not but in his Conscience approve of what he did, as Good, and Holy, and Just. And thus David was so upright in his Actions, that Achish the King of Gath, an Heathen, acknowledgeth it: 1 Sam. 29. 6, 8. Surely as the Lord liveth, thou hast been upright, and thy going out, and thy coming in, is good in my sight, and I have found no evil in thee: yet the Lords (for their Envy at thee, and their own particular Interest) favour thee not. The like he says too at the 9th ver. Thou art good in my sight, and as an Angel of God. And such Trust did he repose in him, he made him Keeper of his Head, and committed his Life to him, 1 Sam. 28. 2. And the Reason of all is, because Holiness is Light, and so is to the Conscience as Light is to the Eye: Eph. 5. 8. Ye are now Light in the Lord, walk as Children of the Light. If you ask what that Light is which is in them? He answers, That the Fruit of the Spirit is in all Goodness, Righteousness and Truth. So that their Godliness, and what is the Fruit of the Spirit in them, is Light. And as sore Eyes that cannot endure to behold the Light, yet cannot but say, that the Light is good, 'tis amiable, 'tis glorious and beautiful; so 'tis here, an Holy Profession and Life is as Beauty is to the Eye; if the Eye be opened, and Beauty laid before it, it cannot but acknowledg it such.

(2.) An Holy Profession and Life hath not only an amiability in it, but an Authority also to reprove Wicked Men. Eph. 5. 11. By walking in the Light, you (the

(the Saints) shall reprove their Works that they are evil. And this Authority ariseth thus, that Holiness doth manifest Sin and the Vileness of it in evil Men, and lays open their Consciences to themselves, by the Light shining in a Believer's Profession and Life, and so reproves them, for their Consciences have in and of themselves a Light that shews them their Villanies, and therefore they practise their Wickedness in secret: Eph. 5. 11. It is a Shame (says he) to speak of what is done in secret by them. There is a Shame in it, a Guile in their Courses, which they avoid by Secrecy; but by the coming in upon them of the Light of a contrary Holiness, which hath a Glory in it, the Shame of their secret Wickedness riseth up with the greater Power upon them.

Chap. 7.

(3.) Holiness in the Saints hath the Authority of a Judg, as to the Consciences of Wicked Men, and it is a Forerunner of what Authority they shall one Day exercise; for they have the Honour to be Judges in the World to come, and they do begin in their Lives here. So Lot was among the Sodomites, and therefore the Saints are said to bind Wicked Men in Cords (Psal. 2.) And Wicked Men look upon a Godly Man as a Judg, and fear him as a Judg; and as they fear the Word, so they dread the Lives of the Saints, as Herod feared John, because he was a Just and a Holy Man. And thus so far as any Severity of Righteousness did appear, the wise and grave Men obtained Authority amongst the Heathen upon this very Principle. God gave them restraining Graces of his Spirit, and an Authority accompanying them, insomuch as we read of Cato being a Man of immovable Justice and Austerity, that the generality of the People would cease their Plays, and such sinful Spectacles, till he was passed by. 'Tis the Counsel Seneca gives, that a Man should set before his Eyes a Cato, or a Lelius, as a Judg of his Actions; Cogita Catonem Judicem. Now if these Glow-worms that shined in the dark had this Authority on Mens Consciences, what Honour have all Christ's Saints, if they endeavour to hold forth Holiness, who ought to be burning and shining Lights in a crooked Generation?

Lastly, True and genuine Holiness is the lively Image of God; and so much as there is of the Image of God, so much Glory and Majesty is there: 2 Cor. 3. 18. But we all with open Face, beholding as in a Glass the Glory of the Lord, are changed into the same Image from Glory to Glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord; The Image of God, according to the proportion of its Appearance, in any Kind or Degree, hath a Majesty in it, as God himself hath; and still so much of the Image of God as appears, so much Majesty. As for instance, in Man, tho fallen, there being left some Prints of the Image of God, and Superiority over Beasts, answerably there is a Majesty in Man, by reason of which Beasts do fear him. Thus also there is an Impression of Majesty upon Kings and Magistrates, of whom God hath spoken, I have said ye are Gods, as in relation unto Men; and God accompanies them with a Majesty, and an Authority answerable. And so far as God doth back this his Image, so far they reign, and rule, and their Subjects Hearts are touched to obey them, as Saul's Subjects were, when he was made King. So of David'tis said, That God had subdued the People under him (Psal. 45.) and the Church is called the Queen, as being the Spouse of Christ, and her Children are stiled Princes: and as Christ is said to have Glory and Majesty in the third and fourth Verses, so in like manner (ver. 9.) she is said to be all glorious within. As Queens participate of Majesty with their Husbands, so the Church with Christ.

The Doctrine thus proved, an Objection is to be prevented. You will say Experience confutes all this; for there are no People counted viler then the People of God, and their Ways are esteemed Foolishness, and they are insulted over and opposed; where then is this Majesty you have spoken of?

1. I answer, that some, tho brought up in the Church, yet never saw the Light, nor were acquainted with the Power of Godliness, or the Profession of it, but have lived as Men in Vaults, and were never brought forth to see the Light, and so speak against what they know not, Jude 10. Peter also attributes it to Ignorance, that foolish Men speak against the People of God, 1 Pet. 2. 15. That you may put to silence the Ignorance of foolish Men.

Book III. 2. Godliness is yet further prejudged to many such by Misreports. Men look upon it through false Mists, and distorted Mediums, false Glasses, false prejudicate Suggestions, which Enemies have instilled unto them: Even as Bernard a Holy Man did upon the Waldenses, whom he wrote against. Report (say they in Jer. 20. 10.) and we will report it. Thus of Christ Men spake by hearsay, some one way and some another, John 7. 12.

3. The real Scandals, yea the utter Fallings away of many professing Godliness, confirm them in this Opinion; so as indeed the Majesty of God's Ways, and of the Profession of them, by this means comes to be much obscured; yet so as it still appears. For tho many withdraw and fall back, yet they may see some who are true, that hold out, and rejoyce as a Giant to run their Race.

4. Godliness being clothed with so mean an Outside (as it was in Christ, that there was no Form nor Beauty in him, Isa. 53.) is therefore obscured; for the World looks for the Kingdom of God to come with Pomp, as did the Pharisees; but the best of the Saints are said to have worn Sheep-skins, Heb. 11. They were Leather-Coats, of whom yet (says that Scripture) the World was not worthy, who (as that insinuates) dealt unworthily with them, because they discerned not their Worth, by reason of the meanness of their Condition. And Christ says, Because the Poor received the Gospel, therefore, blessed are they that are not offended in me.

5. The Blame lies much upon true Christians themselves, who do not labour to express the Beauty of Holiness, and to put forth that Majesty, as they ought and should. They soil it by too many Infirmities, and suffer their Hearts and Lives to lie bedusted, till all the Glory is covered over therewith. There is too much Indifferency, not a due Resoluteness and Peremptoriness for the Ways of Grace. There is too much Self-seeking and Earthly-mindedness, and conforming to the the World; and carnal Men view only (as the Egyptians did) the dark side, are intent upon the bad that is in them, but despise and turn away their Eyes from their Graces.

6. Tho all Men should see it, the Holiness of the Saints, and have Glimmerings of it more or less, yet God (Isa. 26. 11.) tells us, that they will not behold it, that is, acknowledg it, but deal unjustly with it, oppose, scorn and deride it, for it is the Majesty of God shining in Uprightness; which they are said to deal (oppositely) unjustly with, which also is in the next Verse interpreted to be, their Envy at God's People.

And this will easily appear, if you consider but two Principles that are in the Hearts of Men.

1st. There is Conscience, to which Godliness approves it self more or less, as Conscience it self is enlightened.

2^{ly}. But there is withal another Principle more prevailing in the Hearts of carnal and unregenerate Man, viz. a Wisdom devilish, earthly and sensual, as James speaks; by the Dictates and Principles whereof Men are guided and ruled, imprisoning that Light of Truth in the Conscience, labouring to blind it and put it out all that may be. Now these Lusts and sinful Dispositions making Men drunk (as the Phrase is, Deut. 29. 19. they are said to add Drunkennes to Thirst) tho they have some Glimmerings of this Majesty, yet whilst this Drunkennes lasts, they stand not much in awe of it; and therefore it is no wonder they are so neglective of it. A Servant, over whom his Master hath a great Hand and Authority, and he fears him exceedingly; yet if he be drunk he is regardless of his Master, is not afraid to abuse him: And thus whilst Men are drunken with Lusts, they mock, and contemn, and slight Godliness and Godly Men. But observe them on their Death-beds, and in their Month of Pangs of Conscience, as the Prophet speaks; when their Lusts are allayed, and the Heat gone, and the Drunkennes over, and they are a little sobriified, as at the Day of Death, or Sickness they will all be; then the Remembrance of their Ways and Carriages, and their Revilings and Misusings of Godly Men, dashes them and confounds them: And then they will send for a good Man, as Pharaoh sent for Moses at Midnight, and desire them to go and serve their God, and to bless them also. You will all be made sober one Day, 1 Pet. 4. 1, to 7. the Apostle there useth this Phrase of living to the Lusts of Men; for it is one thing to live and please their Lusts, and another to live to their Consciences. 7. And

7. And lastly, Their opposing of Godliness doth not argue but they may have some Glimmerings of the Majesty of it, and yet not sin against the Holy Ghost in their Opposition. For they may hate it out of Love to their own evil Works. John 3. 20. Every one that doth evil, hateth the Light, neither cometh to the Light, lest his Deeds should be reprov'd. For Sin causeth Rebellion, and puts all out of Order; and so as Beasts, tho there is an innate Majesty in Man over them, yet at times they will (as Christ says) turn upon you, rend and devour you; so 'tis here in this Case, Psal. 14. And have they no Knowledg? (says the Psalmist there) who eat up my People as Bread. And so in Psal. 2. Let us cast away their Cords from us. And truly thus Men deal even with God himself; there is no Principle more rooted in the Heart, than that there is a God, and that he is a Judg, Yet the Fool says in his Heart there is no God, and there is no Fear of God before his Eyes. Yet it cannot be denied, but that the Majesty of the Lord himself appears to Mens Consciences.

USE I. Is there such Majesty stamped upon the Graces and Lives of upright Ones? Then first this may be an Encouragement to them to go on, and persist in these Ways, and to abound in Holiness, and to strive to get a reality and excellency therein: For look, how much more real, serious Grace, Sincerity and Holiness appears in you; so much more Majesty and Authority appears also. Be bold in that Holy Profession, which hath been grounded upon the Rock, and which hath a Spring of Regeneration and Sanctification to maintain it; for there is such a Majesty annexed to it, as will bear out it self, and dash, and confound and muzzle its foolish Opposites in the end. This is a great Motive unto Godliness, and so the Prophet useth it, Isa. 58. 8. Thy Righteousness shall go before thee, that is (as Calvin hath it) the Testimony of thy Goodness and Uprightness, shall appear before God and Man, and be an Usher to make way for thee in the Hearts of Men. And the Glory of the Lord (that is, the Majesty of the Lord) shall be thy Reward, fighting for thee in the Consciences of Wicked Men, or shall environ and encompass thee round, as that Light did Paul when he was struck off his Horse. As the Apostle makes this a Discouragement to sinful Ways and Courses, that Shame attends them, and is the Fruit and Issue of them (Rom. 6. 2.) so on the contrary it may well be an Incitement to Holiness, that Majesty, and Glory, and Honour, and Fear, and Reverence in the Consciences of Men, doth accompany it even here in this Life. And so the Apostle makes it his concludent Motive to the Philippians, which he shutteth up all with, Phil. 4. 8. when he had exhorted them to walk in those Ways they had heard and seen in him (ver. 9.) see with what Elo-gies he adorns them, Whatsoever Things (says he) are true, and to be revered (for so the word is, ὅσα σεβόμενα) veneranda; whatever are pure and lovely; or amiable; If there be any Virtue or Praise, that is, any thing worthy of Commendations (as all Virtue and Godliness is) think of these Things. By these Epithets the Apostle allures them to Godliness, Holiness and Purity, even because they are amiable, lovely, drawing Reverence and Praise with them. So he calls them, because they are so in themselves, and they are thus to the Consciences of Men. And it is their Consciences, that is, the noble part that is in them, and chief Relick of the Image of God: and therefore tho by reason of their Lusts they distast and despise you, as being contrary thereunto; yet in the highest, noblest part, and most retired Thoughts, they do approve and praise you: Cant. 6. 9. The Daughters saw her and blessed her, and the Concubines they praised her. And the Testimony of an Enemy is the best Testimony in the World, as Moses argueth it, Our Enemies being Judges; Deut. 32. 31. Be therefore encouraged to hold forth the Word of Life, as Lights in a crooked Generation: Phil. 2. 15, 16. That ye may be blameless and harmless, the Sons of God without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse Nation, among whom ye shine as Lights in the World; holding forth the Word of Life. Altho the Majesty of true Godliness be under Clouds now, yet the time will come, when the Sun shall break forth as at Noon-Day. Psal. 137. 6. And he shall bring forth thy Righteousness as the Light, and thy Judgment as at the Noon-day. And even in this World when thou art dead, the Envy of Wicked Men against thee will cease: Post mortem cessat Livor. But thy Name will live, and be precious, for the Rust will wear off, and the precious Metal appear. Read throughout

See Beza
on both Words.

Book III. out the Scriptures, and the Stories of all Ages of the Church; and look what a Man, or Company of Men professing Piety and the Truth were in any Age, such in the end will their Name be, and be owned in after Ages to come: and the reason is in Micah 7. 8. When I fall, I shall arise; when I sit in Darkness, the Lord will be a Light unto me. And, ver. 9. He will bring me forth to the Light, and I shall behold his Righteousness. And the Reason of all is, that there is a Truth in thy Holiness (as the Apostle John in his 2d & 3d Epistles styles it) yea and the greatest Truth: for if the word written be such a word of Truth, as Heaven and Earth shall pass away, sooner than the least Tittle of that shall fail, and therefore God preserves it in the Truth of it for ever; then much more the Truth written in Mens Hearts and Lives, not with Ink, but by the Spirit of God, will be verified and ratified by him in thee; and God thinks himself obliged to back Truth, being the God of Truth, and cause it to obtain and prevail. But there is another Reason, that is, the Glory of God that is in thee; Isa. 46. 13. For Israel my Glory. And the Saints are the Glory of Christ, 2 Cor. 8. 13. and Christ will see to his own Glory, as it is engaged in them: and therefore in Isa. 26. he says, They shall see and be ashamed for their Envy at the People. However know this, that by a bold holy Profession of Christ, and his Ways in Sincerity, tho intermingled with very many, and perhaps great Infirmities, you make work for the Day of Judgment: 1 Pet. 2. 12. Having your Conversation honest among the Gentiles, that whereas they speak against you as evil Doers, they may by your good Works which they behold, glorify God in the Day of Visitation. They now speak evil of you, for what they espy to be faulty in you, and wickedly pervert your best Actions, and brand you with Hypocrisy and carnal Ends, yet they shall be forced to glorify God then; and all the glimmering Convictions or Suspicions they had darted into them, will rise up against them in that Day. And tho now the Seeds of these Convictions are sown in Weakness in their Consciences, and pass thorough them but as ordinary, cursory and common Thoughts, yet they will rise in Power, when Christ shall revive them.

USE 2. Let me exhort those who are invested with this glorious Profession, to manifest, and preserve and maintain this Majesty, and not to suffer it to be soiled and justly debased in the Eyes of Men. It is not considered by Godly Men as it ought, what they have committed to their Trust, even the Majesty of the Lord, and that they carry the Majesty of the Lord about with them, and that therefore they should be careful how to behave themselves (as we see Men of Place and of Authority are) lest they should do any thing unworthy of it, so as to debase and vilify it. For were this considered, our Lives and Carriages in the World would be other than they are: What manner of Men should we be in all Holiness of Conversation? But Professors do not consider this, that they have that in them, which if it were maintained and preserved as it ought, and in that Purity it might be, would not only reprove the unfruitful Works of Darkness (Eph. 5. 11.) but put to silence also the Opposers (1 Pet. 2. 15.) yea cause them to be ashamed who speak evil of the Ways of God, as it is 1 Pet. 3. 16. It would plainly dash and put out of countenance, the Pomp, Glory and Splendor of all unregenerate Mens Courses, whose Glory when it is at the highest top thereof, is but their Shame. That therefore you may have this consideration of, and respect unto, the Majesty of the Lord in you, consider but these Grounds and Motives.

1st. If you consider it but barely in it self, as an Honour put upon you, you ought to have a regard to it and a care of it; and therefore the Apostle (1 Cor. 6. 19.) when he would dehort them from Uncleanness and Fornication, he puts 'em in mind of the Honour that was in their Bodies, Know you not (says he) that they are the Temples of the Holy Ghost? As if he should say, if you considered the Honour that is put upon your Bodies in that relation, you would not debase them and defile them, and take the Members of Christ, and make them the Members of a Harlot; and therefore (1 Thess. 4. 4.) he speaks of possessing a Man's Vessel in Holiness and in Honour, that is, they were to labour to keep it undefiled, in respect of that Honour that is put upon it. As Fornication is thereby aggravated, that it is the defiling the Honour of the Body, which ought to be preserved; ved; so likewise by the same Reason, all Soil, and Scandal and Filth in you, above what it is in other Men, may be aggravated by this Consideration; That it is a debasing of the Majesty of the Lord in you: and therefore also this is made one of the chief and main Aggravations of Drunkenness, that it debaseth the Glory and Honour that is put upon Man, and the Image of God in him, and lays a Beast in a Man's room. Take Example from Customs among Men: You see Kings having Majesty stamp'd upon them, how careful are they to preserve it inviolate, and undiminished and undebased, tho they are Men subject to Infirmities as others, Heaps of Dust as well as we? therefore what Actions of State and Distance are invented and observed, merely to preserve the Dignity of their Character?

2ly. But 'tis the Majesty of the Lord, it is not yours, but his put upon you by him. Magistrates have an especial Care and Endeavour to preserve their Authority; and therefore tho they would put up many things, were they only personal Wrongs and Debasements, yet if that Authority they have comes to be debased, they will stand to maintain and preserve it, especially when one represents a King, as Ambassadors do. They use strictly to stand upon all Points, to advance the Majesty of their Master, and take that on them which otherwise they would not, and forbear to do, not what is unworthy of them, but of the Person they represent. Now therefore consider this, you that are Saints indeed, you that bear about you the Divine or Godlike Nature, 2 Pet. 1. 4. Consider that God's Majesty is stamp'd on you, the Beauty of the Lord is on you, Psal. 90. 17. You are his Glory, Isa. 46. 13. You represent him in this World, and are in his stead. Consider therefore what manner of Persons you ought to be in all Holiness of Life and Conversation, 2 Pet. 3. 11. and therefore endeavour so to live in the World as God would, if he were now amongst us as in the Days of his Flesh, according to that Speech, 1 John 4. 17. As he is in the World, so ought we to be in this World.

3ly. If the Interest God hath in it will not move you, then let your own engage you to have a care to maintain the Majesty of your Profession.

1. Consider that you are to be the Judges of the World hereafter (1 Cor. 6. 2.) and therefore how ought you to behave and demean your selves, that you may have that Authority in Mens Consciences therein, and that you may be a Witness against them without exception? But if you are guilty of the same Crimes whereof other Men are, they may except against you as incompetent Judges. As therefore you look to be honoured with this Prerogative at the latter Day, lay the Foundation of it here.

2. If you look no further than this Life, you have need to look to maintain this Majesty, for you will else be unfit Instruments in doing good to the Souls of others; you cannot rebuke, nor can you exhort, unless you have Authority and Acceptation in Mens Consciences. And therefore Paul bids Titus rebuke and teach with all Authority, Let no Man despise thee (Titus 2. 15.) that is, preserve thy self from all just Contempt, and occasion of Men despising thee in their Hearts, that thou mayst be fit to reprove, and rebuke, and teach others, and do good to their Souls. One that keeps himself without Rebuke and Reproof, blameless, may with Authority rebuke another, and it will be taken well; and the Rebuke will stick the faster, as being thrown by a powerful hand. For as God first accepts the Person, then the Offerings, so do Men; if the Person be not accepted with them, and in Authority over them, their Reproofs and Rebukes will be the less acceptable also: and therefore the Apostle requires that a Minister, because he is to be employed in bringing home of others to God, should be one of a good Report even among them without, lest he fall into Reproach, and so his Ministry do little good upon them. So that if Ministers or others would do good to the Souls of others, they must labour to preserve the Majesty and Beauty of Holiness.

3. Suppose you will not be moved by these Considerations, yet if you respect your own Safety, and would preserve your selves from the Injuries of a malicious World, and from the Strife of Tongues, so as to muzzle Mens Mouths, and silence them from speaking evil of you, or chain their Hands from Violence towards you, then preserve the Majesty of God in your Profession, for it will preserve you. This kept Herodias and Herod's Fingers off John from killing him, tho tho they itched to be at him, Mark 6. 19, 20. 'tis said, she had a Grudge against him, and would have killed him; and Herod (as 'tis likely) had a mind to do so too. But 'tis said she could not; for Herod feared John as a Just and a Holy Man. And when he did murder him at last, it was with much Reluctancy, Grief, and Sorrow of Heart. It was this kept Christ safe a long while also. The Rulers of the Jews would have often laid Hands on him, and would have spoken against John, but that they had by their Holiness won such Authority in the Hearts of the People; therefore it is often said, when they would have attempted this, they dared not, because they feared the People. And therefore if Rulers Hearts were set against you, yet this might be a means to keep you safe, and keep off many Attempts and Abridgments of Liberties, which else would light upon you. And the Truth is, it is one of the greatest Wonders, that the World and Devils, being such strong and deadly Enemies to God's People, should keep their Hands off of them, they being so few and the other so many. But it is this Majesty of the Lord appearing in them, that is a Curb upon Men; and God's being with them casts a Fear upon their Hearts. There is an excellent Place for this, Psal. 105. 12, 13, 14, 15. where speaking of the Preservation of the Patriarchs in the midst of the Canaanites their utter Enemies, he brings it in as a Wonder, that when there were but a few Men in Number, yea very few, and Strangers also, exposed to Indignities, yet God suffered no man to do them wrong, yea secretly reprov'd Kings for their sakes, speaking and suggesting to their Hearts and Consciences, that they were his Anointed, namely, his People anointed with the Graces of his Spirit (as all Christians are, 1 John 2. 20, 27.) and that they were Prophets: The Conscience of this restrained Abimelech from doing Abraham wrong, Gen. 20. 7. yea and this was a means at the first, for the Primitive Christians to have Peace (Acts 2.) there being some converted by the Apostles, who continued stedfastly in their Doctrine and Fellowship, and breaking of Bread and Prayers; and ver. 43. it is said, Fear came upon every Soul, so as they were a Terror to the Wicked amongst them. Ah! my Brethren, were the Majesty of the Lord but advanced and preserved in this Kingdom by continuing the Word and Ordinances, and giving them full Scope and Liberty to make the desert Places of this Kingdom to see the Excellency and Glory of our God (as it is in Isa. 35. 1, 2.) then should our Enemies bow down before us, and lick the Dust of our Feet (Isa. 61. 14.) and as the Fear of the Lord fell upon the Nations, when the Israelites came into the Land of Canaan, so it would now on our Enemies. But because it is so much depressed among us, and the Majesty of the Lord not beheld, acknowledged and advanced, therefore God goes not out with us. See this in Jehoshaphat's time, 2 Chron. 17. 7. because he sent his Princes and Priests into all the Cities of Judah with the Book of the Law, the Priests to teach, and the Princes to back the Word, and cause the People to yield to it; therefore the Fear of the Lord fell upon all the Kingdoms of the Nations that were roundabout, so as they made no War against him. This is the Way to secure the Kingdom, by thus advancing the Majesty of the Lord.

4. To conclude all with this as the last Motive hereunto, consider these opposing times, wherein there hath been long a great Battel fighting in Heaven (that is, in the Church) whether Godliness, or Civility and Formality, &c. should get the Victory, as of old between Michael and his Angels, and the Dragon and his, whether Gentilism or Christianism should prevail. Now you have a Weapon in your own Hands if you would but use it, viz. the Majesty of the Lord that is stamped upon you. Draw it forth and unsheath; as Christ, when the Soldiers came to take him with Staves and Spears, did but exert his Majesty, and they fell all to the Ground. And tho your Enemies be more in number, and have more Swords and Staves than you, yet if you would but hold fast that Majesty that is in you, they would not be able to stand out. You are an Army of Kings, and a few of them against a Multitude of Slaves are likely to get the Victory. When the Russian Bondslaves had rebelled, and gathered a great and mighty Army, their Masters agreed to meet them with no other Weapons than their Whips, whereby they used to lash them; and all lashing them together, the Remembrance of their Authority over them, and of the Smart of the Whip formerly felt, struck such Terror into them, as they fled like Sheep before the Drivers. You therefore that are the Ensign-Bearers of God's Majesty, be exhorted to fight it out, and to contend with wicked Men, and Godliness at length may prevail. The Majesty of the Lord is your Reward, and therefore till the Glory of the Lord departs from Israel, never despair of Victory. Know that there is a Promise made to the Church under the Gospel, giving this Hope, Isa. 61. He speaks of Christ, and his coming to preach the Gospel, which Christ himself (Luke 4.18.) interprets of himself, and of the Church under the Gospel. In the 6th and 9th ver. there is this Promise made, Ye shall be named, that is, acknowledged the Priests of the Lord. And 'tis added, Men shall call you (even the Standers by) the Ministers of our God. And at the 9th ver. 'tis said, Their Seed shall be known among the Gentiles, and their Offspring among the People; all that see them shall acknowledg them, that they are the Seed which the Lord hath blessed.

But now it will be asked what you are to do, what means there are to manifest and preserve this Majesty of the Lord in your Souls and Lives?

Unto which in general let me premise but this, That then you do it, when you so far approve your Hearts and Lives to Mens Consciences, by walking in this World as God himself walked; that Men are convinced and judged, and say, of a truth God is in you. This Description in general, I take out of that 1 Cor. 14. 24. and what there is said of Prophefying in the Assembly of the Saints, I apply to their whole Lives. When you so walk and demean your selves, and so in all things approve your selves to Mens Consciences; that whereas now it is in Report and Profession that God is among you, and Men are in doubt whether it be so or no; Men are convinced that it is so, and that of a Truth (as it is there) God is in you; then the Majesty of the Lord appears in you.

1. I say, approving your selves to Mens Consciences, for that is the subject Party, or the Territories of that Majesty. That you may not conceive amiss of it, I do not exhort to Surliness, Pride, Stateliness, keeping aloof off and at a distance, which is a thing the World objects to Godly Men. No, this is the Devil's Majesty, and of the Princes and Great Ones of this World, which comes to naught, as the Apostle says (1 Cor. 2.6, 7.) distinguishing between the Wisdom of this World, and that which is of God, and between the Majesty of the Lord, and of the World. Now as the Kingdom of Jesus Christ is not of this World, so neither is the Majesty of his Kingdom. And therefore, 'tis not heaping up of Riches, Learning, worldly Respect and Authority, that is a means to advance this Majesty, but 'tis endeavouring to be Holy as God is Holy, 1 Pet. 1. 15. Therefore,

2. I add, it is by living holily, as Christ would if he were here. It is to be merciful as he is merciful, kind, faithful, true as he is, pardoning of Injuries as he doth, purifying your selves as he is pure; in a word (as you have it, 1 John 4. 17.) it is demeaning your selves here as God would if he were in the World: and therefore think not, thou canst no way advance the Majesty of the Lord, because thou art poor, or contemned and despised, and not regarded in the World for thy poor outward Condition. For Christ was all these, and yet the Majesty of the Lord appeared in him, and Peter says they were Eye-witnesses of it, 2 Pet. 1. And thou in all these Estates, mayst approve thy self to the Consciences of Men, as Christ did. If thou art poor, yet if thou keepest thy Sincerity, and dost not use shifting base unlawful means, but walkest faithfully in thy Calling, and manifestest that thou livest by Faith, and dependest on God, and shewest a contentedness in thy Condition, and that thou livest a more comfortable Life by the help of thy Faith, delighting thy self in the Almighty, than those that have most Abundance: The Majesty of the Lord appears more in thee than a Professor, that glisters more in the World in regard of outward things. Or art thou in Disgrace, and in Reproaches, abused and contemned? labour to approve thy Heart to God, seek the Honour that is of him, be patient and revile not again; only take heed that thou sufferest not as an evil Doer, and be not discouraged from practising all the Duties of Godliness with Constancy and Chearfulness, and thou shalt then approve thy self to the Consciences of Men, and the Spirit of Glory shall rest upon thee, 1 Pet: 4. 14. Keep but thy Innocency, and let them do what they will, thy Light shall break forth as clear as at Noon-day. And that that Majesty which shall appear in thee, shall melt all the Disgraces cast at thee as the Sun doth Snowballs cast at it before they come half way; or they shall all fall off like Burs cast upon a Looking-Glass. For still know this, and build upon it, that nothing from without can debase the Majesty of God in a Man, no outward Condition whatsoever (as Christ says of Defilement, that nothing from without defiles a Man, but all Defilement is from within, a Man's own Heart) nothing from without can foil the Majesty of God in him, but all that Men lose is from within, from Sin, and sinful, ungodlike, unchristlike and unfaintlike Carriages in their several Conditions.

Book III.

But I shall now shew some particular means, whereby Christians may maintain and keep the Majesty of the Lord from being foiled and debased in them, and preserve Holiness in the Beauty, Lustre and Brightness of it, so as to commend it to Mens Consciences with Authority.

1. Christians must be innocent and harmless. I premise this, not as tho in itself simply and alone, or chiefly the Majesty of the Lord did appear (for many are so, in whom the Beauty of Holiness doth not appear) but yet it is a thing that is fundamentally and mainly necessary thereunto, and which serves much to commend it and approve it to Mens Hearts. For as in all Pictures and Paintings there are Ground-Colours laid, which tho simply in themselves have little gloss, yet must first be laid, or else the Brightness of the other Colours, and Oil and Varnish, in which all the gloss lies, will not so eminently shine and appear: So, nor will the Beauty of Holiness and Majesty of the Lord appear to be in you, or come to be approved of in Mens Consciences, without Innocency and Harmlessness. And therefore when the Apostle (Phil. 2. 15, 16.) tells them, that they were to shine as Lights in the World, in the midst of a crooked and perverse Generation, and they were to hold forth the Word of Life, that is, to hang forth that Holiness the Word requires, as a Light in a dark Night: He withal admonishes them, that if they would shine thus indeed, they must be harmless and blameless, which tho simply it be not the Light, yet 'tis the Lanthorn as it were, through which it shines; which if it be not made of some diaphanous and perspicuous matter as Glass, and that kept clear too, the Light is dimm'd, tho never so great, and is kept from shining: and therefore if they would shine as Lights, and hold forth the Word in their Lives, they must be blameless and harmless, they must keep their Innocency, they must keep their Lives clear, pure and undefiled, and from being spotted in the World, as James says, Jam. 1. 27. And he adds also this Motive as the effect of this, That ye may be the Sons of God, that is, manifest that you are of him; that as he in this World doth no Man wrong, so neither do you injure any Man: and by this, you shall both manifest your selves to be Children of your Father, and approve your selves to Mens Consciences. And tho a Man hath never so much Holiness and Sincerity in him, yet by any failing in this kind, he shall never approve it to Mens Consciences, for Men look upon this Light through this Lanthorn. As Magistrates when they are not innocent, but Oppressors in any kind, or Bribe-takers, and do Men wrong, are made obnoxious by it, and lose their Authority by it, and their Hands are often tied by it in punishing Sin and Wickedness, and they cannot execute Justice as they ought and should: No more will ever Holiness uphold its Majesty and Authority in Mens Hearts, when you are thus obnoxious to Men. And therefore Samuel contesting with the Israelites for rejecting him who had been their Judg, professeth his Innocency, 1 Sam. 12. 3. Whose Ox or Ass have I taken, or whom have I defrauded or oppressed? Or at whose Hands have I received any Bribe? If he had indeed been guilty, then to have despised, and rejected his Authority had been the less Offence. You therefore that have this Majesty of the Lord committed to you, should have a care so to carry your selves in Dovelike Innocency and Evenness to Men here, that God may expostulate with those men at the latter Day, who now reject and contemn his Majesty stamp'd upon you. Whom of you all, then God may say, did they wrong, or deceive or defraud, that you did so much speak against them? Is it merely that they were holy and zealous in my Service, and in those Duties I require? In the 5. Nehem. when some of the Jews had oppressed their Brethren, by letting Corn to use, and had taken Mortgage of Lands of their Brethren in a time time of Dearth, and the like cruel uncharitable dealings were among them ; see what he says at the 9th ver. in this Case. Is this good that you do? Ought you not to walk in the Fear of our God, not to dare to do this? Why? Because of the Reproach of the Heathen their Enemies. They had the Name to be the People of God, and how durst you do it (says he) knowing that God would be reproached, and your Religion reproached by it? And he good Man professeth, that because he would credit Religion, and shew the Fear of God was in him, he had not been chargeable as former Governors were, yea had not taken that which by Custom he might. At ver. 16. But so did not I, because of the Fear of the Lord. He required not his Due (ver. 18.) because of the hardness of those times ; even that Allowance which was appointed to him as Governor he required not, and all this for the Fear of the Lord. His meaning is, that he did it in reference to God, whom he feared, that he might honour him, and credit his Religion in him the more, and that there might be no Cause of reproaching it, as it may be expounded by the 9th ver. And this was it which made old Jacob say to his Sons, his cruel Sons (Gen. 34. 30.) who oppressed the Sichemites, that they made him stink in the Nostrils of the Inhabitants. And so Injuries done to Men that are Enemies to the Gospel, by Revilings, or Defraudings, or by Violence in any kind, will cause Religion to stink ; for Men being so great Lovers of themselves, and Haters of Holiness, are sensible of Injuries done unto them in any kind, and revenge all upon the Religion you do profess. And as the Injurious Carriages of the Sons of Eli, in taking of the Flesh of the Sacrifices where they pleased against the Law, caused the People to abhor the Sacrifice of the Lord : So if you be found wrongful to Men, and justly provoke their Self-love in them by any means, it causeth them to abhor all your other Profession, and all the Duties of Holiness, which otherwise they could not but approve.

Chap. 7.

2. Labour to do good to all as much as lies in your power. This is a second means to help to commend that Grace that is in you to Mens Consciences, to cause them to think well of it. This you may see was the means, whereby in the Primitive Times, the Christians at first got favour with the People, notwithstanding their cleaving to the Apostles, continuing in their strict Doctrine, and separating themselves from the World, and meeting together and praying, Acts 2. 44. All which are Matters, at which the World so much storms ; yet because they parted their Goods to them who had need, and brake their Bread freely, it is said (ver. 47.) they had favour with all the People, whilst they did thus strive to honour their Profession. And this is one thing that credits God himself much to the World, and wins good Words from Men of him, whom tho they hate, and truly hate him as Holy and as a Judg, and cannot endure that Majesty of his which appears in the Word, yet because he doth good unto them, and gives them Rain and fruitful Seasons, and thereby bears witness to their Hearts of his Goodness to them ; therefore they speak well of him, and many say they love him, because he is good to them : whereas should they only know him by his severe and strict Commands in the Word, and by those glimpses they have of his Majesty therein, they would assuredly express Revilings of him, and would not have that Esteem of him that now they have. So when wicked men see and view in you nothing but Zeal for God and Duties of Holiness, and feel none of your Goodness extended to them, they will more purely hate you ; but if besides your Zeal to God, they find you do good to them, then out of Self-love Men would be drawn to approve good Courses, and to see and acknowledg that God is in you ; for they love those that do good to them, and speak well of them : insomuch as the Heathens used to ascribe Divine Honour to those Persons, and thought something more in them than Men, who did them some great, extraordinary, publick Good.

Nihilo proprius homines ad Deum accedunt, quam salutem hominibus impertiendo. Cic.

Having dispatched the preparing means to make Godliness to be approved of Men, and acceptable to them : I come secondly to such things, wherein it may appear and be put forth.

1. Shew forth the Graces of the Lord Jesus Christ, as Peter exhorteth : 1 Pet. 2. 9. Shew forth the Virtues or Praises of him, who hath called you out of Darkness into his marvelous Light, being holy in all your Conversation. In your eating and and drinking, in your Callings, express other Ends, doing all in such a manner, that it may appear all is done for God and to God. Whether you eat or drink, let all be to his Glory: and as Zachary prophesieth, let Holiness be written upon the Bells of the Horses, and upon your Bowls, Zech. 14. 20, 21. that is, when you go to plow or cart, or sit down to drink, or go to War, let all these be done in a holy manner, that Men may read upon your Drinking-Bowls as it were this Inscription, Holiness to the Lord; that you dedicate them your selves, and all you have to God; that these Vessels of common Use, may become as truly dedicated to God in a Holy Use of them, as the Bowls in the Temple were: and even in these common Actions, endeavouring to express Holiness, and Fear, and Reverence and rejoicing in God, you may make as great a Difference appear between them, as performed by you and others, as is between a Picture varnished and oiled, and another that hath but bare dead Colours. Moral Virtues sanctified have a Holiness, a Glory put upon them; therefore Peter useth the same word, to express the Graces of Christ in that place, that Aristotle doth to express his moral Virtues by. Express you Christ in them, let his Holiness appear in you.

2. Abound much in Holy Duties (Isa. 61. 3, 6, 9.) in praying, in mourning and humbling your selves for Sin, in sanctifying the Sabbath, &c. In the 3^d ver. 'tis said of those that mourn in Sion, and are broken-hearted Christians, and fruitful Trees of Righteousness, that God may be glorified; that they at the Altar shall be named the Priests of the Lord, for the Holy Sacrifices they should daily perform and abound in; and Men shall call them the Ministers of our God, when they are diligent in praying with their Families, instructing them, and whetting the Word upon them. Men shall call them so, and give that Report of them; and ver. 9. All that see them shall acknowledg them, that they are the Seed whom the Lord hath blessed. Therefore as Paul says to the Philippians, Ch. 1. 9, 10, 11. Be filled with the Fruits of Righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ unto the Praise and Glory of God; that God may be glorified, as Isa. there says, and so Christ also, John 15. 8. and then God will thus glorify you according to his Promise, Those that honour me I will honour: So to abound much in private Prayer, tho in secret, and none knows it, yet it will add a Lustre to thee in thy Conversation. Conversing with God so familiarly 40 Days, caused Moses his Face to shine, when he came off from the Mount; and so conversing much with God will make thy Face, thy Presence to shine. As Wisdom is said (Eccles. 8. 1.) there to make the Face to shine, so much more will Prayer; for a Man by much Prayer keeps close Communion with God, God walketh with him, and he with the Lord. Let all thy Actions too, shew forth thy Meekness and Humility, &c. The meekest Man by Nature must learn another kind of Meekness of Christ, Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly. Forgive Injuries because God hath forgiven you, you were sometimes injurious to others. That which did win Christ's Authority, was Holiness and Meekness, Psal. 45. 4. In thy Majesty ride prosperously, because of Truth, and Meekness and Righteousness. Meekness did add Majesty and Grace to him; he that is holy God will exalt, and others will exalt the Man who humbleth himself: Be patient in wrongs, nothing overcomes and wins Ground more. It is the best Victory, you overcome in the Heart of the Party that wrongs you, you melt it, dissolve it, and heap Coals of Fire upon his Head; you overcome in the Eyes of others, and are in their Esteem above him, and he under you. So David overcame Saul's Conscience, 1 Sam. 24. 17, 18. when he had Saul (his Enemy that sought his Life) at an advantage, and some bid him kill him when he was asleep, yet he spared his Life and forgave him. This mightily convinced Saul, and drew this Confession from him, Thou art more Righteous than I, for thou hast rewarded me good, whereas I have rewarded thee evil, ver. 17. And, ver. 19. For if a Man find his Enemy, says Saul, will he let him go well away? He looked upon his own Heart, and saw he could not have found in his Heart to have done this, and few Men else would have done it. Such Bowels of Mercy are proper only to God's Elect. Such a Person indeed will favour and smell of Prayer, and having gotten God into his Heart, the Gleam of his Presence with him will appear in every thing he doth. It will compose the Heart, and compose the Countenance also and thy Conversation, and cause all to shine. That Men shall say of thee, the contrary to what Job's Friends said of Job, when they saw him impatient (they said, surely this Man restrains Prayer from the Almighty) but they shall say of thee, surely this Man prays much, and is abundant in it, his Carriage all day long is so heavenly. Chap. 7.

Labour also to humble thy self, and to mourn, and confess thy Sins with much and daily godly Sorrow; for Humiliation removes the Shame that comes by Sin, which covereth anothers Face, and which daunteth anothers Heart: but thou wilt shew thy self thereby clear in this matter, as 2 Cor. 7. 11. and God also dwells in an humble Heart, and draws nigh to him; and so God's Presence appears more in such an one, and God also will lift up him that humbleth himself under his mighty Hand.

Labour also to make Peace betwixt others and God: this will make thy Steps beautiful in their Eyes, when they discern thou aimest at their Souls good, and sanctifiest the Sabbath strictly; for that Day, by reason of the Duties of it, is a Glorious Day, Isa. 58. penult. that Day is as a Christian Parliament-Day, wherein he rideth in his Robes as it were, and the Majesty of God will appear in thee all the Week after. So also be much in Holy Conference of the things that belong to the Kingdom of God. Psal. 145. David speaking of the Saints, says, they shall speak of the Glory of Christ's Kingdom, and make known to the Sons of Men the Glorious Majesty of his Kingdom. Speak great Words of God, your Interest in him, Privileges by him, and what Glorious Things are laid up for those who love him.

But then 3. be sure you say and do: for the want of this the Pharisees lost their Authority in the Hearts of the People, and Christ won and gained it from them. As Paul says of himself, that he would make it appear, that he was powerful not only in Writing, but that he was so in Presence also; so do you endeavour to express more Power in your Lives than in your Speeches: As Christ did not often in plain words tell them so much that he was the Messiah, but says he, Let my Works testify. As Man never spake as he did, so never any Man did the Works he did. Endeavour to be mighty in Word and Deeds also, Luke 24. 19. As Kings will not dispute but do, so do you, do not stand talking only of the Majesty of his Kingdom, but as David said to Solomon, do it, 1 Chron. 28. 10. That all may come from you, tanquam in Verbo Regis & Sacerdotis, you being Kings and Priests to God your Father; and let all your Principles of Holiness appear to be with you, as the Laws of the Medes and Persians, which you never turn or go from, but are irrevocable. This will preserve and maintain Majesty indeed, as it doth Majesty in a King.

4. Do all you do with as much Reality and Fervency of Spirit as you can (Apollus is said to be a mighty Man, not only in regard of his Eloquence, but Fervency of Spirit also, Acts 18. 24, 25.) that Men may not see Light only shining before them, but feel Heat, and Vigour, and Energy also in you. John was a shining and a burning Light: It is not shining Light only, but it must be burning Light that confoundeth Wicked Men. There is Light in the Work it self when it is done, but the Heat lieth in the Spirit and manner of doing it; be fervent in Spirit, serving the Lord; contend earnestly, put forth your Might in whatever you do, as Solomon says, Eccles. 1. Be zealous of good Works. Press to the Mark, as aiming and endeavouring to reach as far as possibly you can: labour not to do much only, but to have your Spirits shine much in that which you do, that as the Darkness of Agypt was not discerned only by the Eye, but was felt also, so let the Light of your Works not be seen only, but let them be felt also; express Seriousness and Reality in all, else they will think as they do, that you act but a Part. Actors on the Stage, tho they act the Parts of Kings upon the Stage, yet who fears them? There appears no Majesty because they do but act, and have not the Spirit of Kings, nor the Affections of Kings, tho they take on them for a while the Person, State, Actions, and speak the swelling Words of Kings.

5. Endeavour to do all with Sincerity, aiming to manifest Holy Ends in all, and manifesting and laying aside of your own Ends and Aims. Thus Paul did approve himself to Mens Consciences, 2 Cor. 4. 2. we have renounced the hidden things of Dishonesty. He had no secret Ends and Aims, no underhand Projects for himself: nor have we walked in Craftiness (unless it were to win their Souls, as he says elsewhere) but by Manifestation of the Truth, commending ourselves to every Man's Conscience, and to God also, in the Sight of God. And therefore, see how he endeavours to manifest and clear to them through that whole Epistle, that he sought not theirs but them, and did preach the Gospel freely to them: And so also in the 1st Chap. of that Epistle, ver. 12, 13. Our rejoicing, says he, is this, the Testimony of our Conscience, that in Simplicity and Godly Sincerity, εὐκρίνεια, perspicuitate animi, with a Mind you might see thro, we have had our Conversation in the World, and not in Fleshly Wisdom: that is, we have endeavoured to shew we have had no Ends of our own (for fleshly Wisdom will still be propping for it self; as Job says (Job 22.) a worldly wise Man is profitable to himself) but still the Event hath shewed that God was our Aim, and we have walked in Godly Sincerity; and this with such plain-heartedness and cleanness of Mind, that you might see through us in all our Actions. And we write no other things to you, than what you read and acknowledg; that is, what we now say of our selves by Writing, you have formerly read in our Actions and Conversations; and you do acknowledg it, αναγινώσκετε, recognoscitis, you may remember it was so, you know so much already, and may now remember that this is true; and so I hope you shall acknowledg, that is, have cause to do so unto the End.
the

6. Be constant and even in your Courses, walk not unevenly but steddily. The Primitive Christians, who, as I said before at the first, won so much upon the Hearts of the People, are said to have continued in the Apostles Doctrine; and that Welldoing, whereby (1 Pet. 2. 15.) we should put to silence the Ignorance of foolish Men, notes out a continued Act of welldoing. Kings, who sometimes take State on them, or any Superior else, and then neglect it as much another time, lose Majesty by it: Qui servat Constantiam, servat Dignitatem, vincet aliquando pertinax bonitas. Gamaliel gave this Sign and Aim, to know whether they were of God or no, if they go on and hold out; if not, they will come to nothing, says he: and Constancy therefore overcomes and convinceth, because it argueth Reality; for it is impossible long wholly to dissemble, and act a mere part. The Heathen could say of their Fabricius, by reason of his Constancy, that Virtue was incorporated into him, so as it was as possible to turn the Sun out of its Course, as him out of his way of Virtue.

7. Let Christians be unanimous and communicative each to other; this we have commended to us by the Example of those Primitive Christians, who grew in favour with the People; they continued in the Apostles Doctrine and Fellowship, and in breaking of Bread and Prayers, Act. 2. 42. and Fear came on every Soul, v. 43. For (as David says, Psal. 14.) God is in the Generation of the Just. God is in every one of them; but when there are more together, there is more of God among them, and he shines more. An Army of Kings bandied together, strongly cleaving and entering into mutual Leagues (as when the People of Israel came out of Egypt) a Fear must needs fall on the Nations about them. They fear your Face, and they fear your Prayers as Cannon-shot from Heaven. Hereby shall all Men know that ye are my Disciples, if you love one another, if you cleave together; by this they shall know that God and Christ is in you.

Last of all I will give you a Caution or two.

1. If you would preserve Authority in wicked Mens Hearts, have no Fellowship with them in the unfruitful Works of Darkness: Distance reproaches them, and keeps Authority in their Consciences. But reprove them rather, says the Apostle, Eph. 5. Nimia familiaritas contemptum parit, they will espy out your Weaknesses, and work upon them.

2. Take heed of violent Passions, rash Anger, Impatiency: as they come from Weakness, so they will weaken you in their Hearts; such Passions make Servants controul their Masters, Children their Parents. As Drunkenness is to Reason, so are violent Passions to Grace; they are a short Drunkenness, and so exposeth you to contempt: as Noah when he was drunk, Cham mocked him though he was his Father, for he then discovered his Nakedness and Shame, and so dost thou in thy Passion.

3. Take

3. Take heed of Earthly-mindedness; it were Debasement to a King, and would lose of his Esteem and Majesty, to load Muckcarts every Day: so you who are Heirs of Heaven, it must needs debase you to lade your selves with thick Clay. Let your Affections, your Conversation be in Heaven, where your Treasure is; magnify not Earthly Things above their own Rate, as the World doth. Alexander knew Porus to be a King by his contemning all things: Do not fear Men, as Kings do not; contemn the Pleasures of Aegypt, as Moses did. Nebuchadnezzar left his Throne and fed among Beasts, his Glory then departed from him.

4. Take heed of falling into scandalous Sins; like Dalilah it will shave thy Hair, and then thou wilt be as another Man, and the Philistines who revered thee before will mock thee. Going up to his Father's Bed, did lose Reuben his Excellency. As Thamar said to Amon, thou wilt be as one of the Fools of Israel, and they all will laugh at thee as at a Fool, and whither will thy Shame go? Thou thereby strengthenest the Hands of the Wicked, and they will say, behold he is become as one of us.

C H A P. VIII.

Motives to Evangelical Obedience from this Consideration, that it is the great Design of the Gospel to promote the Life, and Power, and Practice of Godliness.

James I. 23.

But be ye Doers of the Word, and not Hearers only, deceiving your own Souls.

Holiness of Heart and Life is urged upon us, as we stand in relation to the Word of God, as written and engrafted in the Heart, which Holiness in other Scriptures is called, obeying from the Heart that Mould of Doctrine, that is, answering it in the Life. Here in the Text it is called doing of the Word. James spends most of this Epistle upon it, to urge it, and to shew the Vanity of that Religion which is destitute of it. Now by doing the Word in a large sense, not simply outward Obedience is meant, but the whole Conformity to the Will of God in the inward and outward Man: it is a Conformity to all that the Word exhorts to. Now the Word exhort to Faith, to change of Heart, to inward Sanctification in the Will, as well as to a Godly Conversation, and so all inward holy Dispositions and Motions are doing the Will of God. Thus the whole Building from top to bottom, Faith, and both inward and outward Holiness, are called doing by Christ: Mat. 7. 24. Hearing my Sayings (says Christ) and doing them, is to build on a Rock, namely, on himself. The Reason is, because doing hath relation to Command. Now his Command is to believe, 1 John 5. 23. Faith is therefore called the Work of God, John 6. 29. (it is indeed the Work of all Works) and so to increase in habitual Grace, Faith, Knowledge, &c. is called doing; 2 Pet. 1. If these things be in you (says he, ver. 8.) but he says ver. 10. If ye do these things. When Paul disputes (as we do against the Papists) that no Man is justified by Works: What! doth he mean external Works only? No, but he excludes from our Justification our whole Righteousness, both Root and Branch, the inward as the Root, and outward as the Branches, because under Works of the Law is comprehended a compleat Conformity to the Law, and to what the Law requires, and so he means hereby inward as well as outward Holiness. For when the Law says do this, it therein commands inward Holiness in doing; as the Root of doing, or the Law is not fulfilled. And thus when the

the Law forbids any evil Work, it forbids Original Sin as well as actual, for Book III. Law binds the whole Man.

1st. It is the end of the Word to enjoin such entire Holiness. 1 Tim. 1. 5. Now the end of the Commandment is Charity out of a pure Heart, and a good Conscience, and Faith unfeigned. The Apostle in that Chapter reckons up many Particulars, and concludes (as if he had not mentioned all) If there be any thing else contrary to sound Doctrine, according to the Glorious Gospel. He concludes in general, to involve all Particulars not enumerated, and he calls it the Glorious Gospel, as that whose Glory would not love Iniquity. Now says he, the end of this Commandment is Love to God and Man, out of a pure Heart sanctify'd inwardly, and rightly directing it, and for pure ends, all which unfeigned Faith worketh in him that believes. This you see then is the end of the Command, and this is one end of believing the Gospel if in Truth. And his Scope is to compare this Doctrine with Jewish Fables, and Tradition (ver. 4.) which consisted in Speculations and Disputes; whereas all our Doctrine in every part of it tends to Practice, and this is the Glory of our Religion, that all the Truths of it tend to Holiness and Godliness, and are practical or strengtheners of us in Practice. The Incarnation of Christ, God manifested in the Flesh and ascended to Glory, is termed the great Mystery of Godliness, and the whole Doctrine of the Gospel is called the Doctrine which is after Godliness, Tit. 1. 1. 1 Tim. 6. 3. For that is it, which it all tends to, and all Truth is practical; therefore John calls it doing the Truth (1 Joh. 1. 6. a strange Phrase to a speculative Philosopher) and walking in the Truth, John 2. Ep. In the Epistle to Timothy, the Apostle Paul had spoken of exhorting Servants and Masters to their respective Duties; for indeed every Truth in the Gospel savingly known, will have Influence into the Actions of all Relations, to make Men conscientious in performing them, and holy in them. He instanceth but in one kind, to shew the like in all the rest, and to shew the Glory of all sound Doctrine in that respect. The same Apostle (Tit. 2. 1.) calls the Gospel sound Doctrine, because it tends wholly to Soundness and Integrity, and to make the whole Man such in all and every part of him, and to keep every one in their Duties; as Aged Men (ver. 2.) Aged Women (ver. 3.) Young Men (ver. 6.) Servants (ver. 9, 10.) for the Grace of God, namely the Gospel of Grace, teacheth Men all these Duties. And because this is the professed End and Scope of all the Doctrine of Christianity, and of the Word held forth by the Professors of it themselves, and in the nature of the thing it self; therefore if Men profess the Truths of it in any kind (thereby differencing themselves from other Men) and yet prove faulty in their Lives, presently the Word is blamed by others: Tit. 2. 5. Let Wives be obedient to their Husbands, that the Word be not blamed. Or as you have it, 1 Tim. 6. 1. That the Name of God and of his Doctrine be not blasphemed. Not only the Name of God, but even his Doctrine is mentioned; and why? But because 'tis expected all his Doctrine should tend to Holiness, and to make all Relations (for of Servants he there speaks) holy: And on the other side, walking holily in all Relations, is said there to adorn the Doctrine it self, as well as to glorify God. Thus every Defect and Miscarriage lights on the Word, and the Truths professed, as being such Truths which teach Men otherwise; and all Holiness tends to glorify the Word, as that which is the great Design of it. And indeed all Holiness and Obedience is but the holding forth in the Conversation, that Word of Life which is in the Heart, and changeth the audible Words into a visible Work. The Saints are as Lights in the World, holding forth the Word of Life, Phil. 2. 15. As Grace is but the Word ingrafted, so Obedience is but the Word held forth. When the Apostle says you shine as Lights, he makes use of the same Word used by the Septuagint (Gen. 1.) for the heavenly Lights: for as the Light that is in the Stars is ordained to be held forth to the World to quicken things below; and as the gathering together of that Light (which was scattered by the first Days Creation over all the Mass of Matter) into those bright Globes, the Subjects of it, was the Work of the 4th Day; so God in the new Creation hath taken that Light which is diffused through his Word, and hath gathered it into the Hearts of his Saints, to give Light to a dark World. The Word in the Heart, is as the Light seated in the Stars, which is called Lux, and the shine of it it Lumen is the outward Splendour of it; and as Light in the Stars is ordained for shining to others, so is the Word to be held forth in Obedience, that it might the more enlighten Men. And unto this difference of Lux and Lumen, Light and Shining of that Light, the Grace in the Hearts of the Saints being as the Light, and good Works as the Shine of it for which that Light is ordained, Christ's Speech imports (and the Apostle, as some think, alludes to it) Ye are the Light of the World, let your Light so shine before Men, that they seeing your good Works, may glorify God the Author of that Light, and that so you may glorify your Father which is in Heaven, Mat. 5. 14. The like Expression we have, Jam. 3. 18. If any Man be endued with Knowledg, let him shew out of a good Conversation his Works. A good Conversation full of good Works is the best Demonstration of Knowledg; it is a Knowledg shewn forth, and therefore it hath the same effects that preaching the Word hath: 1 Pet. 3. 1. If not won by the Word, they may be won by their good Conversation. So God tells us also, Isa. 29. 24. When they see my Children, the Work of my Hands (God's Workmanship in them created to good Works) they that erred shall learn Doctrine, shall come to Understanding by it. The end of the Word is, not to fill Mens Brains with Knowledg or Speculations, but it is altogether practical. It gives Rules for all Actions of Men: 2 Tim. 3. 17. The Scripture was written that the Man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished to all good Works. The Scripture is not like a Philosopher's Lecture that discourseth of the Heaven, and the Earth, and Nature of all things; but it is a School of Action, that gives Directions and Rules for all sorts of Life, and Motives enforcing them. God in his Word hath condescended to give Directions and Prescriptions about the meanest lowest Actions of Man's Life; and to what end, because the Religion it teacheth consists in doing, That you may hear and do, Deut 30. 12. And God singeth out the ignorant and foolish of the World for his Scholars, and hath revealed this Mystery unto Babes, and concealed it from the Prudent. Had he intended only to teach matters of Knowledg and Speculation, he would have singled out the rarest Wits of the World, and have poured out all sorts of Knowledg to fill them: But he hath stuffed his whole Word with Exhortations, Directions to Practice, and made all Knowledg and Mysteries in it, but subserve to it; and he hath Scholars answerable, the foolish of the World. And why? because they are as capable of doing his Will as the wisest. They can love, fear and obey him, as well as the wisest. It is therefore Practice he aimed at in all the Word he hath delivered; and He (says Christ, Mat. 12. 50.) is my Mother, Brother and Sister, that doth the Will of my Father.

2ly. To do, and to be active in God's Word and Law, is the End and Perfection of the reasonable Creature, and of all the Abilities God hath given Man, Eccles. 12. 11. To keep the Commandments is the whole of Man. So it is in the Original, which is more emphatical than to say, the whole Duty of Man. It imports, that this is the adequate End and Perfection of Man, all he serves for, all he was made for. Man's Soul is an active Spirit made for Doing and Action, and never doth, nor can lie still from that instant it first began to think, or desire. As the Heart in the Body sleeping and waking never ceaseth Motion, the Soul much less, but the Pulses of its Thoughts and Desires are always beating. God himself is pure Act: John 5. 17. My Father worketh hitherto, and I work. And the nearer any Creature comes in its Degree and Rank of being to God, the more active we see it to be. Heavenly Bodies that are in place nearer to God, the third Heavens being his Throne, how active are they, they never cease moving, the Sun rejoiceth as a Giant to run his Race. Now the Perfection of the Activity of all these lies in this, that they all are in their Actions subject to a Law, an Ordinance, a Statute of God, which they keep: and from this Consideration concerning them and other Fellow-Creatures doth David raise himself and others unto Obedience, Psal. 119. 89, 90, 91. his Scope is in that Psalm and round about those Verses, to shew that himself a King, and all that are truly righteous, do live and act by the Law and Word; and he confirms himself and them in their Obedience and Allegiance, by what is common with them to the whole Creation. God hath not (says he) given a Word, a Law and Ordinances, and Institutions only to Men, but his Word is established in Heaven, and all the Stars observe his Or-

Book III.  dinances, and are his Servants; and which is the Wonder of it, they continue to this Day according to his Ordinance. These heavenly Peers from the Sun to the least Star, never transgressed the least Constitution of his, during three thousand Years (as this Place gives Testimony in David's time) nor during two thousand and an half to our times. There is not a Star hath crept an Hairs breadth out of the Stage and Course God set it into run; the Sun nor Moon never failed (but when God once or twice extraordinarily commanded them in Josbua and Hezekiah's time) of the Minute appointed them for their going down: it knows its going down, Psal. 104. 19. it moves, it winds about from one end of the Heavens to the other, from South to North in a Peer; and yet when it comes to the Tropic, 23 Degrees from the Equinoctial, which is twice in the Year, in Summer when at the highest, in Winter when at lowest, it stirs not an Hairs breadth further, but returns back again (as a Servant or a confined Person that is limited in his Walk and Pale) tho' it hath the whole Heaven before it to expatiate in, yea and tho' it walks about the World in a Day; David gives the Reason of it, 'tis God's Servant. And the Souls of Men as they are more active and more noble, so they needed more Rules and Laws to regulate their Actions. The Soul hath as spacious a Course as the Sun in the Heavens: The Law of God is exceeding broad (says David) to sport and delight our selves therein (as the great Waters are to the Whales to play, and tumble up and down in them) and yet this noble Creature which in activity exceeds all other of this World, is not lawless; but its Perfection lies in this, that all its Activity be exercised in the Law and Word of God, as the Rule of it.

3^{ly}. It is the end of inherent Grace in the Soul, and of our Union with God, that we should be Doers of the Word; as Needles are touched with a Loadstone, that they may point due North. Sin is a Weakener, and yet we see how active it is, how mad are Men of their Sports, they sleep not if they have not done Mischief, and commit Uncleanness with Greediness, Eph. 4. 18. and yet the Life of Sin is but Deadness. But Grace is Life, You hath he quickned, Eph. 2. 1. It is Strength, Strength in the inward Man, Eph. 4. a Likeness to God, and therefore active, A Workmanship created to good Works, which he before ordained we should walk in, Eph. 2. 10.

4^{ly}. As an holy Activity is the Nature of Grace, and the Soul of it, so the Perfection of it; as it is the Health of the Body to act and stir according to the Laws of Nature, as to eat, drink, &c. Grace is called the perfect Law of Liberty, James 1. 25. and it makes the Man of God, so that he who continues in it is blest in his Deed: Prov. 16. 17. He that keeps his Way keeps his Soul, he that goes out of it is robbed of it. His Fruit is in Holiness, and in keeping the Commands is his great Reward. Yea the Word it self so far as you receive it into your Hearts is an active thing. If you have it but in your Consciences you cannot be quiet for it, it will put you upon doing, and it will accuse and excuse accordingly, as you obey or disobey it. Rom. 2. 15. It shews the Work of the Law written in their Hearts, and it works there, and all Truth would break out in practice, if Men did not imprison it (so Rom. 1. 18. the word imports) But if it have a place in the Heart and the Affections, it shews it self to be the Word of Life indeed (Phil. 1. 15.) that would break out into the Life. It is quick and powerful, Thy Word was as Fire in my Bones (says the Prophet, Jer. 20. 9.) and I was weary of forbearing, and could not stay. You carry Fire in your Bosoms, and Fire will not be smothered.

B O O K I V.

The Danger of a loose, careless and unfruitful Profession; or the Danger of Mens living under the Dispensation, and Enjoyment of the Ordinances of the Gospel, viz. the Preaching of the Word, the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and Church-Communion, if they live in Sin, indulge their Lusts, or be unfruitful. Two Cases resolved, 1. How far a regenerate Man is capable of sinning against Knowledg. 2. Wherein the Sin against the Holy Ghost differs from other Sins against Knowledg.

C H A P. I.

The Text in Heb. 6. 7, 8. explained, with some Observations from it.

Heb. VI. 7, 8.

For the Earth which drinketh in the Rain, that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth Herbs meet for them by whom it is dressed, receiveth Blessing from God.

But that which beareth Thorns and Briars is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing, whose End is to be burned.

MY Design is to convince Men of what great Moment and Consequence the Ordinances of God are to the Souls of them that live under the Dispensation of them, for a Blessing or a Curse, according as they are fruitful and obedient under them and improving of them, or remiss and negligent; and by this Consideration to move them to all Strictness and Holiness of Conversation. To this end I have taken this Text.

1. The Apostle speaks to Professors that had long lived under the Doctrine and Means of Salvation, who yet had made but small Proficiency. Thus he speaks in the foregoing Chapter, ver. 12. When as for the time ye ought to be Teachers, you have need of one to teach you again which be the first Principles. Yea and they were fallen back to this (as those Words imply) to become such as have need of Milk. Whereupon he exhorts them (Chap. 6. 1.) To go on to Perfection, namely, both in Knowledg and Holiness.

2. And he lays before them the Danger that Professors are in, if the means of Grace have not their due effect; and this Danger he sets before them in the Example of many that have been enlightened and fall away, and are never renewed again to Repentance.

Book IV. 3. He represents the Condition of Men under a Similitude of the Earth (to which he compares Mens Hearts) when it either proves fruitful or barren. Those Hearts that drink in the Rain and bring forth Fruit, have a Blessing to bring forth more Fruit; and on the contrary, that Earth or those Hearts that bring forth Thorns upon often drinking in that Rain, are rejected and then cursed. The Equity of this Proceeding is taken from the same and like Law, that by the same Reason the Fruitful should receive a Blessing, by the same the Unfruitful should have a Rejection, for so both God and Man use to do with the Earth in like Cases. When Man hath bestowed his Pains to till it, and God seconding Man's Labour hath sent his Rain upon it, and it brings forth nothing but Thorns; then it comes to pass, and that deservedly, that Man rejects it (as the Word is) and God curseth it; and the End or Issue of it, is to be burned together with its Thorns.

I shall now open the Particulars of this Similitude, and unto what the Allusion thereof should refer. Here is Earth bringing forth of Thorns, upon having the Rain falling on it, rejected, cursed, and whose End is to be burnt, and the Estate of Men that fall away compared thereunto. What is there in other Scriptures?

No one Place will help us to understand all of these jointly, but some Places will give Light unto the one, some unto the other.

More immediatly Paul had in his Eye the Parable of our Saviour concerning the thorny Ground: Mat. 13. 22, 23. He also that received Seed amongst the Thorns, is he that heareth the Word, and the Cares of this World, and the Deceitfulness of Riches choke the Word, and he becometh unfruitful. But he that received Seed into the good Ground, is he that heareth the Word and understandeth it, which also beareth Fruit, and bringeth forth, some an hundred fold, some sixty, some thirty. The thorny Ground (the third Ground, as 'tis termed) notes out the highest sort of Temporaries that fall away; and answerably, it is the highest sort of those Temporaries, and the eminentest Gifts of them, Paul had been speaking of: Ver. 4. For it is impossible that those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the Heavenly Gift, and were made Partakers of the Holy Ghost, &c. And as Christ there differenceth a good Hearer's Heart (the fourth Ground) from this thorny Ground, that the good Earth receives the World, brings forth Fruit sixty, and an hundred fold; so answerably in this Place, the Earth that is fruitful is said to be blessed, that is, to bring forth more Fruit, but that which doth not, is cursed and rejected. And again, as in the Parable of the thorny Ground this is added, that they bring not Fruit to Perfection, that is, mature, kindly ripe (Luke 8. 14.) so upon this Place Interpreters have generally made the like Observations, that of the good Earth it is here said, τιωρεσα, it begets its Fruits, brings them forth, as a mature Birth; of the other, the thorny, it is said, εκφερασα, it casts them out as abortive, so Grotius. And the different Cause of these Events in both Places, is in like manner resolved into the difference of the Soil it self; for in all these sorts of Grounds, the Seed sown is the same, the Rain that falls the same: But there are said to be Thorns in the one, that is, the Roots of Lusts remaining unpulled up, and these grow up again after the tops have been cut off, and insensibly draw away the Sap, and so their Hearts are never regenerated. The other is a good Ground or Soil, where Lusts are parted with, and the Heart changed (2 Pet. 1. 4.) and made Partaker of the Divine Nature, having escaped the Corruption that is in the World through Lust. And thus Paul distinguisheth of these here, declaring professedly, that those that fall away never had true and saving Graces: We hope better things of you, and things that accompany Salvation, instancing in their Labour of Love, which the Enlightnings in those other had not. Paul's Hope of these Hearers, that the Issue of them would be different from the other, lay in this, that altho their standing at a stay and not thriving was a shrewd ill sign, yet notwithstanding that, he believed that they should never so apostatize as those others had done, because this Apostacy befalls only those that never had honest and changed Hearts, nor a Work that had Salvation in it; but he hopes better things of them, and to have been wrought in them, and things that have Salvation annexed to them: as if he had said, When I consider that first Work upon you, how sound and and thorrow it was (Heb. 10. 32, 33, 34.) When I but call to remembrance the former Days, in which after ye were illuminated ye endured a great Fight of Afflictions; partly whilst ye were made a Gazing-stock, both by Reproaches and Afflictions; and partly whilst ye became Companions of them that were so used. For ye had Compassion of me in Bonds, and took joyfully the spoiling of your Goods, knowing in your selves that ye have in Heaven a better and an enduring Substance. He knew God would certainly revive them again, but yet in the mean time to quicken them, he lays before them, and minds them of the Example of those that fall away.

2. That other part of the Similitude, The Earth that brings forth Thorns is nigh unto cursing, alludes manifestly to the State of the Earth before the Fall, and after the Fall compared together. Before the Fall, the Earth was so blessed of God, that it was fruitful with very small Pains, by virtue of that first Word of Blessing, Gen. 1. Paradise is termed the Garden of God, because so eminently blessed of God. And thus it is with Man's Heart, his Soul was planted in the Original Constitution of it, a Paradise unto God, planted with a right Seed, out of which all Graces rose up and grew, and Man so long inherited a Blessing from God: But falling from God, then on the contrary, to shew how cursed Man himself was, God cursed the very Earth it self to bring forth Thorns. Now as Adam was a Type of Christ, and his World of Christ's World, so even this Instance also represents what falls out under the Dispensation of the Gospel. Altho Man be fallen in Adam, yet to them that live under the Gospel, God sends his Word and Spirit to manure them once more, and try if they will be fruitful (so you have it both in Isa. 5. and in the Parable of the Vineyard) God sends Messengers and Dressers early and late: And if now the second time of it self it brings forth Thorns, then (as of Trees Jude says, ver. 12.) it is twice dead, and so twice curs'd, first in Adam through his Fall, then by their falling from a second Work which they have lost.

3. For that other piece of the Similitude, Whose End is to be burnt: It may be an Allusion to the Condition of the Earth in Sodom and Gomorrhah; for as the Inhabitants of those Cities are made Types of Men under the Gospel (Jude 7.) so here their Land or Earth may also be supposed to be so. Now (Gen. 13. 10.) it is said of that Land for the fruitfulness of it, that it was watered as the Garden of God. So then as the Inhabitants of that Land, the Men of Sodom are in Jude made Examples of the Vengeance of Hell-fire; so the Curse that befel that Earth for their sakes, that was once the nearest Resemblance of the Earth in the State of Innocency, may be considered to have been singled out by God, to make it the shadow of the Hearts of those most eminent Professors, whom proving unfruitful God above all other curseth. For so this Place and Soil is not only turned into a barren Wilderness, as the Psalmist threatens, but into a Lake (as Hell is called) of Brimstone. The Vapours which arise out of it, do kill all the Birds that fly over it; and the Apples that grow on the Banks thereof to this Day are a Proverb, Apples of Sodom, looking fair, but falling to Dust when touched, and all things burnt and blasted. And unto this Earth thus cursed and burnt up, doth the Apostle here compare the Hearts of Apostates cursed for being unfruitful, and unworthy, abusing the means of Grace.

4. There is one thing yet more, that in prosecution of this Similitude, he compares the means of Grace which these enjoy, unto, (1.) Rain; (2.) The Tillage or Manurement of it, The Earth that oft drinks in the Rain, and is dressed. This of the Rain I know some apply to the preaching of the Word, which is compared by Moses to the Rain, Deut. 32. 2. & Isa. 55. yet I rather take it that here the Apostle doth in this Place intend two sorts of means vouchsafed to Mens Spirits, whereof the one he compares to the Rain which comes immediately from Heaven, the other to that of Man's Work in manuring and tilling the Earth; so noting out distinctly inward Influences, Illapses, and Dews of the Spirit by the Rain; and denoting means outward dispensed by Man's Ministry by the other, as Sacraments, Preaching, Admonition, or the like. And my Reason is, because look as the things themselves in the Similitude it self are different, the Rain is from Heaven which God alone can give (who is thereby distinguished from the Idol Gods that cannot give Rain) whereas the dressing, plant.

planting, yea watering with Waterpots (Paul plants, Apollos waters) are the Works of Man, and so a different means from that of the Rain which God gives immediately: So answerably, in the Means or Dispensations vouchsafed by God, signified by these unto Men living under the Gospel, I observe how Paul doth as distinctly mention two sorts of them in the former part of his Discourse: 1. Inward, a being enlightened, a partaking of the heavenly Gift, and of the Holy Ghost. 2. Outward, teachings by Men (Heb. 5. 12.) which also that Passage, having tested of the good Word of God, that is, of the Gospel as preached by Men, implies. And so the two parts of the Similitude of my Text (ver. 7, 8.) correspond fitly with those two parts of Dispensations by God vouchsafed (v. 4, 5, 6.) for even unregenerate Men partake of the Holy Ghost, as Rain and Water from Heaven, and it falls as the Rain both on the Hearts of bad as well as good.

I shall now add two sorts of Observations, whereof the one concerns the Ground that is cursed, the other the good Ground, where true Grace accompanying Salvation is wrought.

Obser. 1. First concerning the bad Ground that is cursed, observe, That in carnal Hearts all Influences from Heaven and Means outward administred, do but nourish Self, and in the end their Lusts, altho by accident, as Paul speaks of the Law's causing Sin, Rom. 7. 7. The Rain causeth Briars to grow as well as Corn and Fruits, and a poisoned Plant turns the Rain into Poison. Thus Men turn Grace into Wantonness and Presumption, and the Power of Mens Lusts prevail over all such Enlightnings. The Thorns did not only overtop, outgrow and choke the Gifts and Graces given, but did convert and turn the Actings of those Gifts into Thorns. The Rain rots dead Oaks in the end, and so do the Means these.

Obser. 2. That God in rejecting such as are more deeply enlightened, proceedeth by Degrees, and not until they have oft drunk in much means. So also the Parable of the Figtree holds forth, Luke 13. 8. he first stayed two Years, then afterwards one Year longer, and digged and dunged it. He goes on by degrees; as 1. He deserts it, which is here intimated by being nigh to cursing, that is, by Withdrawments, in comparison unto what he once afforded in drawing nigh to them. Then 2. he curseth with final rejection, if they become such as God hath no pleasure in, which he shews by being more strange to them; yet he doth not presently curse them, tho they are next door to it, as the word (nigh) here implies, and as it is elsewhere taken, Luke 21. 30, 31.

Obser. 3. That in this Life God may curse such Men, when 'tis a long while after that they are burnt and cast to Hell. That indeed is the end of all, but it may come long after cursing. Thus the Fig-tree (Mat. 21. 19.) stood aboveground after it was cursed, and thus God sware against the Israelites in the Wilderness long afore they died, That they should not enter into his Rest.

The second sort of Observations are concerning the Elect, those that here are supposed to have good Hearts.

Obser. 1. That altho they may stand long at a stay, and seem to go backward, yet God will not take the like advantage of them in the end. This is evident from this Instance here. Many of these Hebrews that still professed were such, as for the time they might have been Teachers; and yet they still needed Milk the lowest Nourishment, they needed even the first Principles to be taught them. Yea it is added in that 12th ver. That they were become such as needed Milk. Even as old Men that are decayed, come to live most on Milk again, their Stomachs are so weak, and so are these too decayed in Strength and Appetite to things holy. These deserved that Cursing that was executed upon those others, that by such degrees fell off; but yet the Apostle says, We hope, better things of you, for God is not unmindful of your Labour of Love, &c. which they formerly had. They had such a Work, which (as he loved) would again revive, and yet he sets this severe dealing of God's with others before them to quicken them; this being in it self an ill Sign in any, and shewed they were nigh unto Cursing, and had best look to it. Solomon committed the same Sin against Jeroboam, whom God set up, that Saul did against David, and yet God pardoned the one, and cast off the other. And the Reason is, because God treats in his Dispensations of Grace to the one according according to the Tenour of a Covenant of Works, but with the other according to the Covenant of Grace, which (Heb. 8. 9, 10.) is differenced thus, Not according to the Covenant that I made with their Fathers, in the Day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the Land of Egypt, because they continued not in my Covenant, and I regarded them not, saith the Lord. For this is the Covenant that I will make with the House of Israel, After those Days, saith the Lord, I will put my Laws into their Mind, and write them in their Hearts; and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a People. Chap. 2.

Obser. 2. That even to good Hearts, the Blessing of much Fruit is not at first or presently vouchsafed, until they have oft drunk in the Rain, and then a Blessing from God comes, as it is said, (Heb. 12. 11.) of Affliction, that afterwards it yieldeth the peaceable Fruit of Righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby. 'Tis afterwards, not presently, and after having been exercised thereby long.

Obser. 3. That the heavenly Influence by Ordinances compared here to the Rain, is not always violent or sudden, but gentle and sweet. It sends down, τὸ ὑπερὸν, molliores & minores Guttas (so Hyperius observes the Word here used is) signifying that smaller Rain that falls softly, wets and soaks in by degrees, as Moses in Deut. compares the Word, Deut. 32. 2. My Doctrine shall drop as the Rain, my Speech shall distil as the Dew, as the small Rain upon the tender Herb, and as the Showers upon the Grass. And in Isa. 55. 10. the Word is compared both to the Snow and the Rain; the Snow always falls gently and so soft, that if a Man were blind, he would scarce discern its falling. The Rain sometimes falls more violently, and the Snow lies often long upon the Ground unmelted as it fell; but then a Thaw comes and melts it, and it soaks by degrees into the Earth, and serves to make it fruitful as well as the Rain. So Ordinances work often not so much by Violent but still Impressions; as they alter the Habit of the Mind, as a diet Drink doth that of the Body, and work not as Vomits, Purges, or such like violent Physick. For Impressions that are violent, have their Violence from the stirring of Self in Mens Hearts (which is an impetuous Principle when once raised) and not from Grace.

C H A P. II.

That our worthy and suitable Living under the Ordinances of the Gospel brings a Blessing, but the contrary a Curse on our Souls. The Danger of those who living under the Preaching of the Word of God, indulge their Lusts, or are unfruitful.

THE last and main Observation is this, That our Worthy or Unworthy living under the outward Ordinances of the Gospel and those Dews that accompany them, especially the Word of God, is of Infinite Moment and Consequence for Blessing, or a Curse unto Mens Souls; and therefore Men should be wary how they deal with them.

I take in both sorts of Means, 1. The Rain; 2. The Labour of the Husbandman; and add especially the Word, for he speaks there especially of the Doctrine of Salvation. There are those that look for Rain immediatly and alone from Heaven, but they shall never have the Benefit of it, if they neglect or despise the means that are needful to make the Ground fertile. Paul plants, Apollos waters, God gives the Increase, but by their watering and planting; and therefore they are said to be Co-workers with God, 1 Cor. 3.

To make the main Observation good, I shall go over the Instances of all outward Ordinances of the Gospel, and shew the Danger of neglect in making due Improvement of any of them.

1. In the beginning of the Gospel and the first dawning of it, when the Kingdom of Heaven was but at hand, John Baptist came preaching and baptizing. The Law and the Prophets were until John, but now the Gospel is preached, says Christ, Christ, Luke 16. 16 and one Seal thereof, and but one, viz. Baptism, was administered together with it. Now see and consider what a more severe Warning John gives thereupon, both to the Receivers or the Rejectors of it: Now bring forth (says he) Fruits worthy of Repentance. Now nothing will do but Fruits worthy, that is, suitable, answerable to the Profession of Repentance, which by so powerful a Means and Ordinance God called for and required. By Fruits worthy is meant, that they should behave themselves like to true Penitents (as Luke 12. 36. the Phrase is) like unto Men that wait. The Words here in the Text, Fruits meet, help to expound it. Fruits meet are such that are proportioned to the Cost; as when he elsewhere says, Walk worthy of the Gospel, because now God will not bear so long as formerly, for now the Ax is laid to the Root. If before, when you sinned against the Dispensation of the Law and the Institutions of it, God punished with Temporal Punishments, and did only lop off the Branches, and did not smite the Root, the Spirit, but the outward Man was then perhaps smitten, and it may be it was long first too; yet now the Ax is laid to the Root, that is (as I take it) to Mens Souls: for he compares the Persons of Men to Trees, and the Soul is the Fountain of Life, as the Root is to the body of the Tree. In the old Law, Men were cursed in the Field, and in the Bushel, but now they are cursed in the Church at a Sacrament or Sermon. And he says now, to shew that God will not stay long with the most of Men, e'er he strike their Souls with Hardness and Impenitency. Every Word is in the present, the Ax is laid, not shall be; every Blow, inward Check and Motion tends to ruin, if there be not Fruitfulness. The unfruitful Tree is cut down, is cast into the Fire, as elsewhere 'tis said, He that believes not is damned already, John 3. God takes less time to dispatch Mens Souls, makes quick work with them, and either hardens or softens them. These Threatnings (I take it) are not spoken of Jerusalem's Destruction, and rooting up the Nation, that was 40 Years after; but this here is threatened more speedily to the Persons he speaks to. Every Tree in particular shall be cut down, and cast into the Fire, even to Hell. All this John says of his Baptism, and the Doctrine that accompanied it, to rewarn them, that if they took that Engagement upon them, they should consider what they did. But then the Pharisees thought with themselves, if your Baptism be such an Edg-Tool to cut to the Roots, we will not meddle with it, and so avoid the Curse you threaten. Hear what he says of them, and let all learn to fear and tremble: Christ says of the Pharisees (Luke 7. 30.) that They rejected the Counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of John. This Baptism, thus requiring and obliging unto true Repentance and Regeneration those that received it, was called the Counsel of God, because it was that which by God's Counsel or Institution was appointed for their Salvation. But seeing that in the End and Intent of it as appointed by God, it required Repentance and Fruits worthy of Amendment of Life, they chose to reject it, they slighted or rejected it, it was against themselves they did this, and to their own ruin: and so their rejecting of it God took more heinously at their hands than others Unfruitfulness and Impenitence that received it.

2. Of Christ's Ministry that followed upon John's (Luke 3. 16, 17.) 'tis said, He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with Fire, whose Fan is in his Hand, and he will thoroughly purge his Floor, and will gather the Wheat into his Garner, &c. That fanning there is in this Life, for 'tis of the Corn whilst in the Floor (if you mark it) afore it be laid up in the Garner, Heaven; and by it is meant the speedy Discovery and Separation that Christ makes by his Spirit, of the Spirits of Men by Spiritual Judgments, for neglecting the means, and thereby severing Temporary Believers from true, leading them forth with the Workers of Iniquity. Others take this fanning for that Discovery which shall be made at the Day of Judgment; but to me it seems clear to be in this Life, whilst the Corn is in the Floor, as the several Degrees of this Comparison do shew. The first whereof is the bringing in the Corn into the visible Church or outward Profession, which in the Analogy of this Comparison is as the Harvest. Answerable is that Speech of Christ, the Harvest is great (that is, many are to be brought in) but the Labourers are few. The Regions (saith he) are white to the Harvest; this was spoken when Men yet stood as Corn in the Field, not reaped but ripe for it, and the Harvest was the brig.

bringing them in. The next to this is that fanning here spoken of; and the threshing and fanning in the Floor are the means used after they are come in: then the third and last thing is the laying them up safe in Heaven till the latter Day, which is called, Gathering them into his Garner. Now this fanning or severing here in the Floor is more expressly intended of Temporaries, than of Men loose or worldly; for 'tis the Chaff, whom the Fan there is said to deal withal, not the Tares. And the Harvest to which the preaching the Word is compared, calls Men out from the World; but this Fanning is of the Chaff brought in by the Harvest, and it is severing it from the Corn. So then Christ prepares in this Life for the Day of Judgment, severs, discovers Men here; and he does it by the Fan in his Hand, the Spirit accompanying his outward Administrations. I shall close this of Christ's Ministry with that dreadful Prophecy of Malachi, prophesying of the Ministry of John Baptist that forerun, and also of Christ that followed. How terribly doth he speak of both as of a Day of Judgment? Who may abide the Day of his Coming, and who shall stand when he appeareth? For he is like a Refiner's Fire, and the Fuller's Soap, Mal. 3. 2. And in ver. 5. saith he, I will be a swift Witness against the Sorcerers, and against the Adulterers, and against the false Swearers. And Chap. 4. 1. he says, Behold the Day cometh that shall burn as an Oven, and all the Proud, yea and all that do wickedly shall be Stubble. This bright and hot Season of the Gospel's Ministry and Ordinances, concluded the Rejecters under a State of Hardness and Condemnation, more than Ages before had done.

3. As to hearing the Word preached by Ministers to the end of the World, Christ in many Parables gave great Warnings concerning it, but more eminently in Luke 8. 18. Take heed therefore how ye hear, for whosoever hath, to him shall be given; and whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even what he seemeth to have. Compare this with Mark 4. 24. Take heed what you hear, with what measure you mete it shall be measured to you, and unto you that hear shall more be given. He had shewed in the foregoing Parable (as here in the Text) the State of the stony and thorny Ground, Hearers and Professors, and his Conclusion or Inference from thence is; Therefore take heed how and what you hear. I may add from the Drift and Connexion, Take heed what kind of Hearers you be.

(1.) What kind, for of four sorts but one is good; and therefore be solicitous that you have good and honest Hearts, such as the fourth Ground had.

(2.) Take heed what you hear (Mark 4. 24.) that is, take heed to give answerable Attendance to the weight of the matter, according as it falls out to be delivered, for these are the great Things of the Law. And he adds a Reason, with what measure, &c. God deals in a proportion: look what from a Sermon one gets, and brings again with him to the next, that will cause an Increase by the next; else there is danger of a Decrease.

(3.) Take heed how ye hear, and Christ's Reason in Luke is, To him that hath (that is, useth that which he hath received by hearing well) to him shall be given. For so Matthew speaking of the Talents warrants us to interpret it, Whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away what he hath, Mat. 25. 28, 29. He that used not his Talent is said not to have it, which is thereupon given to others, even what thou shouldst have had, but through careless neglect hast missed it.

Unto this so grave and solemn a Caveat of our Lord and Saviour, add the consideration of these dreadful Properties and Efficacies, and Operations of the Word set before us by the Apostle, on purpose to make us know and understand of what moment and consequence it is unto us, how we shall have to do therewith: Heb. 4. 12. For the Word of God is quick and powerful, sharper than any two-edged Sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of Soul and Spirit, and of the Joints and Marrow, and is a Discoverer of the Thoughts and Intents of the Heart. In the 2d and 3d Chapters and beginning of this, he had given abundant Warning to take heed of neglecting the Word that was preached to them; and to enforce it in this Ver. bids them consider what a Word they had to do withal, it is a living Word, it is a quick Word, and an eternal Word. And therefore as the Apostle says, Chap. 10. 31. 'Tis a fearful thing to fall into the Hands of the Living God: So say I of the Living Word, it revived the sense of Sin; when the Light of it came came into Paul's Conscience ; then I died, says he, Rom. 7. As some Metals will not melt till some other Metal be put to them, so nor will Sins melt or dissolve into the Conscience, till the Word comes as Fire, and mingles with them ; and when God sets it on work again, then it runs through the Soul like Hail-shot, or like Quicksilver.

It is a living Word also in this respect, that it is eternal. You may think it vanisheth with our Breath, but it lives for ever, and your Thoughts will have to do with it for ever : 1 Pet. 1. 23. The Word of God abides for ever. And if you ask what Word it is, even that (says Peter) which we preach to you. What if the Word is convey'd and set on in that Ordinance of Preaching, if it is written in the Heart, it goes to Heaven with you ; if 'tis neglected, yet the Holy Ghost will bring it to your remembrance, and so it will abide and go to Hell with you. You shall repeat Sermons enough there, and the Sermons will be the Doctrine, and all your Sins will serve for matter of Uses, of Terror and Dread for ever : J/3. 55. His Word shall not return empty or in vain.

2. The Apostle adds in Heb. 4. that the Word is mighty in Operation ; as in its own nature it is all Life and Spirit, so it is in Operation. It will exquisitely torture, and become an Executioner of Men in Hell : it divides (says he) between the Marrow and the Bones, which expresth the most exquisite Pains. God's Wrath and his Word do torment Men for ever in Hell ; 1 Cor. 10. 6. It hath in a readiness to avenge all Disobedience, when your Obedience is fulfilled. He compares it there to an Armory of Weapons and Instruments of Death of all sorts that are made ready (as the Psalmist speaks) and laid up to be brought forth. And the Apostle there suggests to Mens consideration what mighty effects it will at last have in avenging all Disobedience, by what in the mean time it hath in converting and bringing the Godly into Obedience, and in subduing their Lusts. It is mighty (says he there) in casting down strong Holds, and high towering Imaginations. Have you seen hurricane Winds or Earthquakes, as they are in some parts of the World, that overthrow Towers to the very Foundations, tear up Hills by the Roots, and throw them into the Sea ; toss up Ships riding at Anchor like Tennis-balls, and hurl them upon the Dry land ? Or have you considered the Power of Lightning, when it breaks the Bottles that hold it, or Thunder when it roars in the midst of Heaven, blasting every green thing where it lights, and withering them to a deadness in an instant, shivering the mightiest Trees to Splinters, disheveling and tearing off the Bark, drinking up the vital Sap ? Such and so great (tho not so visible to the outward View or present Sense) is the Power of the Word. The Voice of the Crier cries, All Flesh is Grass ; and instantly, The Spirit of the Lord blows upon it ; withers all the Glory of the World to a believing Soul, and every Vally is filled, every Mountain is brought low. It tears Mens Hearts rooted in evil (as low as the Center of them) from their dearest Lusts, it makes their Consciences to boil as a Pot, and the Waves thereof to roar, and then with one word stills them, and calms the Winds and the Waves, and they obey it, and the Heart is pacified. As an Hammer it breaks the Rocks, and as Fire it melts the Elements with fervent Heat, melts and dissolves the most rocky, stony and stubborn Heart to Water, and works it to such a softness as fits it to take any Impression. Now the Apostle from hence argues (as you see) the Operations upon the Godly in this World in their Conversions to bring them to Obedience, and the same Word will be as mighty to revenge, when your Obedience is fulfilled. The Word hath had its full Work upon all the Saints, until then these Energies of it upon the Hearts of wicked Men are suspended ; but then it will work as powerfully another way, yea more powerfully in avenging, because it will take hold of the whole that is in them, which is nothing but matter for it to work upon ; and it will work at once, whereas on the Godly it works gently and but by degrees. Look as strong Physick, if it works not to purging out Humours, works to Death and Tortures ; so in the Godly their Lusts are purged by the Word here, but in the Souls of others it works Pain and Anguish. He shall slay the Wicked by the Breath of his Mouth. This Sword which comes out of Christ's Mouth (Rev. Chap. 1. & Chap. 19.) will cut (Acts 7. 54.) to the Heart, and divide between the Marrow and Bones, and will be directed by his Skill that gave gave it, and that knows how to torture exquisitely by it, and who knows what parts are most sensible, and who will apply it to them. Both the Word of God and the Wrath of God are compared to Fire: Jer. 5. 14. I will make the Words of thy Mouth as Fire, and this People as Stubble, and they shall devour them. Fire came out of the Witnesses Mouths (Rev. 11. 5. the Word spoken by them) which kindles the Fire of Hell in Mens Souls, and devours the Adversaries; and therefore take heed how ye hear. If you were to take some desperate Remedy that hath a Danger in it, ends or mends (as Quicksilver in some Cases) how wary would you be to take it right? Such is this Word and every Portion of it, therefore take heed how ye hear. Men feel not this now, nor do they imagine what a Design God hath upon Men in this Dispensation of hearing and preaching. He prepares and lays a Train for the other World, yea and this instrumentally serves to all his Designs upon the Ungodly that obey not his Word.

1. It prepares for the great Assize at the last Day, by sending out Hue and Cry after wicked Men, whose Damnation pronounced slumbers not, nor lingers, 2 Pet. 2. 3. It also makes Inquisition for Blood, Adultery and all other Sins, finds them out, and in God's Name arrests the Offender: These Things hast thou done, and thinkest thou to escape? It is a swift Witness against the Adulterer and Forswearer (Mal. 3.) because when they go to commit these Sins, it comes in and says, thou shalt not commit Adultery, &c. Also it serves to bind Men over to Hell, even whilst in this Life. As the Truth of the Gospel makes the Believers free indeed, as Christ says (John 8. 32.) so it claps Irons upon others, and binds them over to the great Assize. It is as the Coroners Inquest that prepares the Inditement for that Day: As the Devils are reserved in Chains (as Jude speaks) so wicked Men by the Cords of this Word; for whose Sins we bind (if they repent not) they are bound in Heaven. The Word makes Mens Mittimus's for Hell, that Prison Peter speaks of; and wicked Men resent this sufficiently, which causeth their Opposition against it. It is to them the favour of Death unto Death, which strikes them dead even here, as many poisonous Vapours in Caves and Caverns use to do.

2. At the latter Day the Word will do its Office yet farther.

(1.) Then the Word will be the Discoverer of all Sins known and unknown. It searcheth the Heart and Reins, Heb. 4. It penetrates the Thoughts and Intents of the Heart, and as a searching Drug, gathers all the Humours into the Stomach; so will this Word gather the sad remembrance of all Sins into the Conscience: or as Angels will gather together Mens Persons, so will the Word gather thy Sins from all the four Corners of the World, in what Place soever committed.

(2.) It will be Mens Judg: John 12. 48. He that receiveth me and receiveth not my words, the Word that I have spoken, the same shall judg him at the last Day. As if Christ had said, I shall not need to judg, my Word will do it.

Book IV.

C H A P. III.

The Danger of those, who being Partakers of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, do by ungodly or unfruitful Lives act contrary to the Institution and Design of that Ordinance.

1 Cor. X. from ver. 1. to ver. 13.

Moreover Brethren, I would not that you should be ignorant, how that our Fathers were under the Cloud, and all passed through the Sea; And were all baptized unto Moses in the Cloud and in the Sea: And did all eat the same Spiritual Meat; And did all drink the same Spiritual Drink (for they drank of that Spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ) But with many of them God was not well pleased, for they were overthrown in the Wilderness.

Now these things were our Examples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted.

Neither be ye Idolaters as were some of them, as it is written, The People sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play.

Neither let us commit Fornication as some of them committed, and fell in one Day three and twenty thousand.

Neither let us tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of Serpents:

Neither murmur ye, as some of them also murmured, and were destroyed of the Destroyer.

Now all these things happened unto them for Ensamples, and they were written for our Admonition, upon whom the ends of the World are come.

Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall.

THE proper Scope of this Scripture is to set forth the high Provocation and Extremity of Danger for Men to live in their Lusts, while they profess and partake of those two great Ordinances, Baptism and the Lord's Supper. The Coherence and carrying on of his Discourse was this: In the 6th & 8th Chap. he had setly by many Arguments dehorted them, both from corporal and spiritual Fornication, the spiritual was the eating in the Idols Temple. Then making a Digression in the 7th Chap. to decide Cases about Marriage (which was appointed as the Remedy against Fornication) in the 9th Chap. he also closeth with a vehement Exhortation unto the subduing and keeping under of every Lust, ver. 25, 26, 27. Every Man that striveth for the mastery, is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible Crown, but we an incorruptible. I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the Air: But I keep under my Body, and bring it into subjection, lest that by any means when I have preached to others, I myself should be a Castaway. And this is (as you read) of necessity unto the partaking of Salvation. Now then to enforce both those two particular Exhortations against those two Sins, as also this general Exhortation occasioned thereby unto an universal Strictness and Watchfulness; he lays before them (and insists upon it) the great and solemn Obligation which their Profession of having been baptized, and their usual Partaking and Communication of the Body and Blood Blood of Christ did put upon them; yea and he prosecutes this up and down, and leaves it not till unto the end of the 11th Chap. And he enforceth the Obligation which lies upon us Christians, from the evident Example of the Israelitish Church in the Wilderness. And here I observe, how throughout the Epistles of Paul, Jude and Peter, the State of that Church, when in the Wilderness, is more eminently set out, as the most lively Shadow and Type of the Condition and State of the People of God under the Gospel, because the whole time of our Lives after Conversion, is a Passage from out of the State of Nature to the heavenly Canaan. Now these Israelites enjoyed for substance the like Ordinances unto those two of ours, Baptism and the Lord's Supper, and yet indulged their Lusts, yea those very Lusts, from which he had in those forementioned Chapters so earnestly dehorted these Corinthians, namely, Idolatry (ver. 7.) Fornication (ver. 8.) remonstrating how God had in Wrath, upon that very consideration of their living under such Ordinances, broken forth upon them, had overthrown and destroyed them; and that therefore under the Gospel, the Neglecters and Prophaners of these Gospel-Ordinances, must proportionably expect a sorer and severer Punishment, by how much our Ordinances exceed theirs in Glory, Evidence and Spiritualness. This Scripture therefore is punctual to this Argument in hand, and is indeed here handled tanquam in propria sede, as all other Truths of Concernment for the most part are in some one designed Scripture or other.

I shall draw forth all the several Particulars therein, unto these five Ranks or Heads.

1. That the Jewish Church in the Wilderness did enjoy for the Pith and Kernel of them (altho the fleshly Rind or Shell was thicker and more gross, and of a larger bigness than ours) the same Ordinances of Baptism and the Lord's Supper, as we do now under the Gospel, for he terms them twice the same in substance, ver. 3. They all did eat of the same spiritual Meat, and did all drink the same spiritual Drink, ver. 4. This sameness of them was then represented in a near outward likeness and distinct resemblance, even of the very two parts of our Lord's Supper, as well as in a resemblance of that of Baptism. Our Lord's Supper hath two parts, or rather a distinct reiterated Representation of Christ, in his Body as Food, in his Blood as Drink, 1 Cor. 11. 24, 25. So in like manner, he finds out both these as distinct in their Dispensations then; for the Manna, the Type of Christ's Body, who is the Man from Heaven, was their Food, and their Drink was the Water out of the Rock, the Type of that Water and Blood which came forth of Christ's Side, as John for the History of it avers with a great solemn note of Observancy in his Gospel, and interprets it for the Mystery of it in his Epistle. And you may observe again here, how that to the end he might thus more evidently hold forth this sameness, and the parallel of their Sacraments to ours; he omitteth the mention of Circumcision and the Passover (which yet were the standing Ordinances of that Church, both in the Wilderness and afterwards) because these, though the preceding Types of our Sacraments, yet in respect of an outward Likeness were more dark and cloudy: And he chuseth rather those which were but occasionally and extraordinary, and only in the Wilderness. For as I said afore, that the Estate of that Church, whilst in the Wilderness, was the liveliest and most momentary Type of the Gospel-times; so also those Sacraments extraordinarily and peculiarly to them administered, were Types of these of ours. They came near the Life, both in the distinction of the parts of them, and outward resemblances to every common Eye and first View. The sprinkling or mizling of the Rain in the Cloud, and going through the Water of the Red Sea, was even to the vulgar View a visible baptizing. It had the Resemblance and Appearance which Circumcision had not, unless to a more spiritual Artift's Eye, that could discern the Proportions of the one and other. And again, their eating Manna as Bread from Heaven, and their drinking of that Rock, doth bear and carry more of likeness to our Bread broken, and Cup we drink of, in the outward appearance thereof. And it is an Argument of no small weight against the Papist, both for the number of Sacraments that there are but two (because the Jews had but of these two sorts answering to our two, but all whether ordinary or extraordinary are reduced unto two) as also for the Cup or Communication of this Book IV. this Spiritual Drink as well to all the People of God, without confining it to the Priests or Levites, as of the Bread, for so in their Dispensation of it 'twas typified. They did all eat the same Spiritual Meat, and they did all drink the same Spiritual Drink, even as well as all were baptized, &c. which ingenious Estius seems to acknowledg to be the mind of that ensuing Passage, 1 Cor. 12. 13. By one Spirit we are all baptized into one Body, and have been all made to drink into one Spirit. It alludes (says he) to the Cup in the Sacrament.

2. The Apostle sets before these Corinthians, how greatly God was displeas'd with these Israelites, that lived and continued in those Sins, aggravated and made far more sinful by the Participation of such Ordinances, ver. 5. With many of them God was not well pleas'd. He says indeed no more, but thereby means to express the highest Displeasure; as in like Phrase he speaks of Apostates from God and Christ, Heb. 10. 38, 39. If any Man withdraw, my Soul shall have no pleasure in him. But is that all? No, but of all other Men in the World, God's Wrath and Fury doth smoke against such a Man (Deut. 29.) as of all Men an Apostate is most hated by him. And as the Reason of this so sore a Displeasure, he insinuates withal that one Speech, that that Manna and Rock, &c. were CHRIST, ver. 4. That Rock was Christ, that is, it signified, represented and exhibited our Christ to them, and it is therefore called a Spiritual Rock. As our Sacraments are not Christ bodily or personally, but spiritually, that is mysteriously in signification and representation to our Faith, as was also the brazen Serpent. Jesus in the Heavens, and that hung on the Cross, is Christ personally: The Church his Body, of which he is the Head (1 Cor. 12.) is Christ mystically; the Sacraments are Christ mysteriously or spiritually, so as in them we see and behold Christ really and spiritually, partake of him, and have to do with him, as if we were present with him: Gal. 3. 1. Before whose Eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth crucified among you, that is, as really as if he had been crucified among them, as he was once at Jerusalem. One would wonder that so plain and express a Saying, that Rock was Christ, should not have decided Christ's meaning in that like Speech of his touching the same thing, This is my Body, this is my Blood, both being spoken in the same sense and no other. Now that Rock was Christ significatively and mysteriously, and the Papists themselves dare not say the Rock was the Flesh and Blood of Christ transubstantiated. Hence then it was, that the Israelites in all their sinnings offer'd an open Affront and Contempt to that Christ, whom sacramentally they did eat and drink every day, and discerned not the Lord's Body in it; and therefore (ver. 9.) they are said to have tempted Christ: so as hereby it came to pass their Sins were not barely Transgressions of the Law which was given them, but they were aggravated by this, that they therein undervalued that Christ, who was held forth to them, tho' but in those shadows.

3. He sets before them the Severity of the Punishments that besel them, which he alledged as Tokens how highly God was displeas'd with them. For in those Days God shewed and manifested the Proportions or Degrees of his Wrath upon Mens sinning, by the visible and extraordinary Punishments he executed. His Expressions of those Punishments are, They fell (ver. 8.) They were overthrow'n (ver. 5.) both do import violent Deaths, as of twenty three thousand in one day. They died not as other Men, but were taken away in heaps by the immediate Hand of God. Then again it is said, for murmuring they were destroyed of the Destroyer, ver. 10. Now Heb. 11. 28. compared with this, tells us that the Destroyers were some of the Angels (whether good or bad I dispute not) who killed the Aegyptians outright at the Passover; you find it also Exod. 12. 23. and thus in like manner is this to be understood.

4. He plainly applies and bringeth all this home to the Corinthians, as living under the same and more spiritual Sacraments that represented Christ.

(1.) That he applies all this to them his Preface imports, ver. 1. Moreover Brethren, I would not have you ignorant, how that all our Fathers were baptized, &c. that is, moreover, or over and above other Considerations afore delivered to move you to Strictness, I would have you lay to heart deeply the Examples of God's former dealings with others, yea of those that were therein your Fathers, and you you their Children, in whose Sins therefore if you tread, you as their Children shall be sure to reap from God Punishments answerable; as the Threatning in the second Commandment given about Ordinances runs, I will visit the Sins of the Fathers on their Children. And then in prosecution of this he further urgeth, that they and these Israelites had the same, the very same Ordinances for substance, which he inculcates twice, ver. 3, 4. And indeed the whole Discourse is bottomed upon that supposition, and had otherwise not been to the purpose, his Scope being, that they therefore must expect the same or sorer Punishments, committing the same Sins, aggravated by this, that they lived under the same Ordinances. But yet moreover he brings all home to them, ver. 6. Now these things were our Examples (or Types of us) to the intent we should not lust after evil things. This Nail driven thus home, fastens all upon them. These things ταύτα, were τύποι ὑμῶν, Types.

(1.) Prophetical, for Types have the nature of Prophecies to be fulfilled (as Adam was a Type of Christ, Rom. 5. 14.) and so did foretel, that under the Gospel many professing Strictness of Religion and Conversion (which was as a coming out of Aegypt) and boasting in their Privileges in these Ordinances, should fall into the like Sins, and so incur like Punishments. To which sense that first part of ver. 11. strongly leans: All these happened unto them for Examples, that is, God brought them upon them as Types to us, he aiming therein at what should be again acted over, and more fully, under Gospel times afterwards to come.

(2.) They were Types monitory, that is for Admonition or Warning, which the Apostle expressly urgeth in that other part of ver. 11. And they were written for our Admonition, as Buoys or Seamarks to warn us that we dash not upon the same Rock, Christ, manifested to us under like, and far more glorious Ordinances.

2 He insinuates that God will be far more severe towards them that live under Gospel-Ordinances.

(1.) Those, he says, were but Types, which word is twice used; that is, all these things that befel them were, rudiores imagines perfectionis, such as a Draught with a Cole is to a Picture, embellished and drawn to the Life, ὡς ἐν τύπῳ, as Aristotle's Phrase is.

(2.) These their Sacraments he speaks of, tho for substance the same with ours, yet for their manner of Administration were inclosed about with an Husk or Rind of a fleshly Dispensation, which made them but Shadows of ours in comparison. They drank of the Rock which was Christ, but their Beasts drank of the same, and so it served to another purpose besides that of representing Christ. Their Baptism was cloudy, 'twas as in a Cloud; and instead of its being said to be into Christ (as the Gospel runs, Rom. 6. 3.) the Apostle says, they were baptized visibly but into Moses (ver. 1.) and so into Christ but as at a second and remote hand, typified forth by that Moses. In like manner their Passover primâ Intentione, and nextly and immediately, signified to them their Deliverance out of Aegypt; but that being the Type of our Conversion from Satan to God, Spiritual Deliverance came therefore to be thus signified thereby at second hand, secundâ Intentione, and remotely (tho yet mainly and in its primary Intention designed) but yet that out of Aegypt was the next and immediate Deliverance signified. Now as their Ordinances, as enclosed in this Rind, were more outward and fleshly than ours, which have that Rind now shaled off, and Christ is thereby immediately and only held forth; so,

(3.) The Punishments for neglects or profane sinnings under them were visible, but outward and temporary, as by bodily Death, &c. which is but the breaking the Shell, the outward Man: But our Gospel-Ordinances being more spiritual, have answerably Punishments that are so. As God blesteth in Spiritual Things now, so he curseth in Spirituals also, and they are the Curse in Solido. Of how much sorer Punishment shall he be thought worthy (says the Apostle, Heb. 10. 29.) that profanes Christ as revealed in the Gospel? For example, were they stung with Serpents (ver. 9.) and destroyed of the Destroyer (ver. 10.) by a bodily Death inflicted; we under the Gospel that live in such Sins, are given up to Satan (1 Cor. 5.) either by Terrors to drive the Elect to Christ, or by Seduction and a Curse to drive Reprobates to Hell; as the Devil entred into Judas whilst he received the Sop : I cannot say he received the Lord's Supper, but the Fall-Book IV. over he did, and Christ sealed up his Rejection at that Ordinance.

(4.) The Apostle having spread these things before them, his conclusive Inference is, Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall. Men use in their Thoughts and Speeches to boast themselves of their Enjoyment of such Privileges as these, and do bolster themselves up in them ; but know, that they will not guard you from the Curse, nor privilege you at all in that respect. Yea let every such Man know, that this sacramental holy Ground is the most slippery Ground that Men can stand on, as Ice is ; and therefore if he falls, he falls most dangerously, he falls upon the Rock Christ, and he that falls on this Stone shall be broken, Luke 20. 18. And also together therewith all the Sermons he hath heard and Sacraments he hath received, fall upon him. The Fall of that House was great, (says Christ also, Mat. 7. 27.) Therefore let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall, that is, fall under the participation of such Ordinances. And this Coherence of these Words with the former Discourse is manifest, and the proper drift of them. Nay, and the Apostle judgeth not this one Caution enough, but seconds it with another : ver 15. I speak to wise Men, that is, Men that know how to apply all this, and how fully it suits your Case and Condition ; and ῥητέετε, see to it, consider or take heed unto what I say. Neither hath he done with this Exhortation, but heaps on another, The Cup we bless is the Communion of the Blood of Christ, the Bread we break is the Communion of the Body of Christ : And ye cannot drink the Cup of the Lord and the Cup of Devils, and ye cannot be Partakers of the Lord's Table and the Table of Devils, ver. 19, 20. Which Speech or Reasoning, I know, is more particularly intended against that idolatrous Practice of sitting in the Idols Temple (which he had discoursed against, Chap. 8. and which was one particular Sin he gave instance for in the Israelites, ver. 7. for which God had punish'd them) yet for the ground and extent of it, it doth by way of Application come home against Fornication, or Indulgence to any other Lusts, feeding on the Objects of them as Anima pabulum, and worshipping them as God, and sacrificing the dearest of our Intentions to 'em. These are Idolatry, says the Apostle, as some Copies have it : Col. 3. 5. Mortify therefore your Members which are upon the Earth, Fornication, Uncleanness, inordinate Affection, evil Concupiscence and Covetousness, these are Idolatry. A Man hath therein Fellowship with Devils, for they are the Devil's Dainties. They that feed on these Husks, eat of the Table of Devils, have Fellowship with Devils, whose Works these are, 1 John 3. I would not, says Paul, you should have Fellowship with Devils, it is an utter Inconsistency, and will overthrow your Profession and Religion, and eat it out. Ye cannot drink the Cup of the Lord and the Cup of Devils. Well, the Apostle prosecutes it yet further, for his close is ver. 22. Do we provoke the Lord to Jealousy, are we stronger than he? Jealousy is the Rage of a Man, says Solomon, Prov. 6. 34. And it is the height of Anger and Displeasure in God ; and if any thing put him into it, it will be to find thee that professest to lie in his Bed of Love, in his Bosom, such is the Lord's Supper, then going from it to lie in Bed with the Devil, engendring Lust, Malice and Mischief. If the Veil could be taken away, Men would see that whilst their Souls brood upon their Lusts, they are entwined close and coupling with Serpents, yea with Devils. Do you provoke the Lord to Jealousy? You may observe that God doth only (at least above all other) profess himself a jealous God, when he gave forth the second Command, that is the Ordinances of his Worship forbidding the contrary. Now the Lord's Supper being the top Ordinance of the second Commandment under the Gospel, to profane it by nourishing Lusts, provoketh God to the greatest Jealousy, and sets God at defiance ; and therefore those Words are added, Are you stronger than he? that is, Can you encounter him? Which you must make account to do, if you go thus on.

C H A P. IV.

Chap. 4.

1 Cor. X. 1, to ver. 13.

Moreover, Brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our Fathers were under the Cloud, and all passed thro the Sea, &c.

Concerning the Danger of unworthy receiving the Lord's Supper, either in being unfruitful, or living in Lusts under the Participation of it, I shall add some Considerations that both aggravate the Sinfulness hereof, and so heighten the Danger of it. Both which will appear, if we consider the Nature and Intent of this Ordinance in the Institution thereof, either on God's part, or what is to be done by us or ours.

1st. On God's part, it is to represent and exhibit the whole of Christ as crucified for us, in the most direct, immediate, adequate and expressive manner.

2^{ly}. On our parts, it is publickly to solemnize and shew forth his Death, and erect a fresh Memorial of it, with Profession of our Interest in his Person, his Death, and all the Benefits thereof. Now to sin against so great Obligations arising from both, how much must it aggravate our Sin?

1. On God's part in the Institution of it, it represents these things to us.

(1.) It represents Christ in the most immediate and expressive manner, which will appear if we compare it with the other Ordinance of the Word read or preached. In the Word read or heard, we have directly and first to do but with some Truth, and so with Christ considered but either as the Author and Deliverer of that Truth, or at most but as that particular Truth concerneth him and treats of him, or of some particular Benefit of his, or some Excellency of his, or some Action of his for us. And these are singled out to be treated on by piecemeal, unto which our Thoughts are required immediately to be intent, according as the matter thereof is: yea further often, some point of Duty on our part, yea some discovery of some Sin by the Law and our Sinfulness, with the Threatning annexed thereto, are treated of. All which are remote from Christ, and but as a Schoolmaster to drive us, and that too upon second Thoughts, rising up unto him and his Person. Even as the Sick thinks of the Physician upon a second Thought, after the sad Apprehension, and a long and deep Consideration of his own Malady. But in this Ordinance of the Lord's Supper, we have to do with Christ himself, his Person, &c. We are put upon him, let into him immediately and directly, and are to converse with him, as a Spouse with her Husband in the nearest Intimacies. He is the Image in that Glass, and not a glimmering collateral Beam of him only which casteth a Shine; but the Sun of Righteousness it self is the direct and adequate Subject of that Representation, and our Eyes are called to view him with open Face. The Word preached is termed the Word of Christ, Col. 3. and elsewhere, but it is no where termed Christ; no, nor is Prayer or any other Ordinance so named, but the Rock was Christ, the Bread is Christ, of which he says, This is my Body, and of the Wine, This is my Blood; yea and it is Christ entire, whole Christ. We have to deal with the whole of his Person, the whole of his Death, the whole of his Benefits, Promises, yea all that was purchased or procured by him. Yea, and we have to deal with all this in the most expressive real manner; it is whole Christ represented as to the Eye: whereas a Sermon, if it did represent whole Christ, yet it would be but to the Ear; and you know things by the Ear strike more dully and slowly, but by Sight more really, and make a lasting Impression. Mine Eye affects my Heart, as the Psalmist speaks.

(2.) It represents Christ also as crucified, which is the top and eminent Subject of the Gospel, 1 Cor. 2. 2. we see Christ glorious, and sitting at God's right hand in Heaven, and yet we see him too as one dying and crucified: Yea and it is that

M
W
W
 Christ who is now in Glory, who is represented as crucified. It is his Death that is shewn forth herein (1 Cor. 11.) his Body broken and his Blood shed. Whilſt one Eye of Faith is called to look up to his Perſon as now in Heaven glorious, and we ſee Jeſus crowned with Glory, &c. Heb. 2. (which is neceſſary, for where elſe can the Soul find his Perſon as exiſting, and ſo make an Addreſs unto Heaven, but where he now is alive in Heaven?) with another Eye we look back upon him as formerly hanging on a Tree, bearing our Sins in his Body, bearing, and repreſenting and undertaking for our Perſons. Now what a Sight is this? and what a ſtrong mixture of Affections muſt needs accompany a Sight ſo ſtrange?

Now to raiſe up your Thoughts a little, let me ſpeak unto you in that Language, wherein Chriſt ſpake to the People concerning their going forth in Troops to ſee John the Baptiſt, as a Sight of Novelty (Mat. 11. 7, 9.) thereby at once to reprove their common ſlight Eſteem of him, as alſo to raiſe them up to a true value of him: When you come to a Sacrament, conſider what do you go forth to ſee? A Thing of ſmall value, a Trifle, a Reed ſhaken with the Wind; or that which is of ſome more moment, as you would go to ſee an Ambaſſador or gaudy Courtier making his Entrance in State and ſplendid Apparel. No, ſays Chriſt, I tell you, you ſaw a Prophet, yea more than a Prophet. But this here is a Sight of more than all Prophets, than that of all Angels and Saints (which we ſhall have of them as aſſembled together at the latter Day) if we could ſuppoſe it without him, yea than of the Glory of Millions of Worlds, if that could be repreſented in the twinkling of an eye.

Let me ſay further, Men uſe to flock to other Sightſ, either that are real, as to an ordinary Execution, or ſome rare Invention of Mens Art, or elſe that are in ſhew, as the acting over of ſome Story that hath ſome deep Plot in it, or of ſome noble and heroick Perſon; the Sum and Height whereof comes to this, that ſuch an one paſſeth through the loweſt Debaſement, leaving it and deſpiſing it with an unheard of Greatneſs of Mind, to the end to ſave his Country, and to reſcue his contracted Spouſe fallen into the utmoſt Gulphs of Dangers and Miſeries, and then after that himſelf riſeth up to that Glory, which as a King or Lord was his Inheritance originally: And then to the Participation thereof he pulls up his Spouſe, and crowns her with Glory and Honour in the ſight of all the World. How are Mens Fancies tickled and filled with the bare ſhew, outward and empty Appearance of ſuch a Story acted to the Life? How long do they ſtick therein? How are their Thoughts and Diſcourſes taken up therewith a long while after? Yea and this where all that is preſented concerning ſuch a Perſon, doth nothing concern themſelves. The Perſon had no relation by Race or Country, or any way to them, yea it is but a very Fiction. But here behold the greateſt Act or Thing, that ever the great God did, or means to do for ever, ſet forth but once in this World, actually performed in a few hours ſpace, containing in it the deepeſt Myſtery, Plot and Contrivement that ever lay in the Breſt of God, or that his Wiſdom can bring forth, and in which all his other Counſels are bottomed and centred; wherein alſo you have repreſented the King of Kings, the Lord of Glory coming diſguiſed in the Likeneſs of ſinful Fleſh from Heaven, to redeem his Church, his Spouſe, from Sin, Death, Hell and Wrath, hanging on a Tree, ſuſtaining her Perſon, bearing her Crimes and Miſeries, and for her ſake encountering with and conquering thereby all his and her Enemies, and triumphing over and making an open Shew of Devils led captive, becauſe they were her Enemies and great Seducers; and then flinging off that Form of frail Fleſh, and in an inſtant appearing in the Form of God, ſitting down at the Right Hand of the Majeſty on high, in ſo great a Glory, as only the only begotten Son of God and Lord of Glory was capable to be arrayed withal. At the ſight of which and his firſt taking that Place in Heaven, all the Angels of God fall down and worſhip him. Is there any ſuch Sight elſewhere to be ſeen on Earth? Yea, Doth Heaven it ſelf afford ſuch another, unleſs it be of him? And is this a bare Sight, an outward Shew made to ſtrike thy Fancy? Yea, Is it not over and above of the greateſt Concernment to thee? This Perſon who fills this Scene, and whoſe Story it is, is of the neareſt Relation unto thee that ever any was, thy Saviour, Head and Husband.

band. Yea, and these Actings of his that are therein presented, are of the highest moment to thee. Is not thine Eternal Redemption, the cancelling the fatal Sentence of thy Condemnation, the taking away thy Sins by his bearing of 'em, acted over before thee in thine own View? Tua res agitur. Thou committest new Sins every Day, and still seest anew how the Book is crossed by the Lines of his Blood drawn over them; but these cross Lines are like to those which are drawn with the Juice of Onions or Lemons, not appearing until they are brought to this Light of the Word, and then upon this Occasion they rise up either more dimly or more conspicuously unto Faith's View. Either these things are true, and true of thy Soul, or thou art undone, thou art lost for ever, for thou hast an Heart like to Gallio (Acts 18. 17.) and regardest none of these things, and wilt not go over the Threshold to see a thousand of such Sights.

But take a farther Prospect, and consider, Is all this in the Intendment and Institution of it, a mere Presentation to the Fancy and Memory, as those of other Stories are? No, they are real, and the most real unto Faith, as much as any Sight thou seest of a thing when it is first done. The Holy Ghost is the Presenter of this Scene, and to a believing Soul makes substantial and subsisting Demonstrations of all these, and a thousand more concerning him; for Faith is the Substance of things not seen, Heb. 11. 1. See how the Apostle speaks (Gal. 3. 1.) Before whose Eyes Christ hath been evidently set forth crucified among you, as if you had indeed stood and seen it. There is such an Emphasis in those Words, crucified among you, that some have interpreted this Scripture to mean their crucifying Christ by their Apostacy, answerably to what he says, Heb. 6. 5. But it is spoken of the Reality of the Representation which the Holy Ghost makes. And Christ tells us as much concerning this Ordinance of the Lord's Supper, John 6. 55. My Flesh is Meat indeed, and my Blood is Drink indeed. It is not fancy only, as when a Man dreams he eats; but if ever thou hast found a Reality, a Solidity, a Subsistence in any Meat thou hast ever eaten and digested; there is (according to Christ's Institution) a greater Reality unto Faith in this Sacrament. The Apostle also calls Faith, A discerning the Lord's Body, 1 Cor. 11. 29.

Tell me then now, canst thou come to, and daily live under such a sight as this (which was on purpose appointed by God to renew the Impression often, and to draw all Mens Hearts unto him, John 12. 32. & Chap. 3. 14, 15. compared) and then go away and sin, and live in thy Lusts? Or if thou dost, is it not an infinite Aggravation of thy Sins, if they be willingly indulged unto, and can the Danger be other than answerably great? I shall but urge upon you that which Paul doth, Gal. 3. 1. Who hath bewitched you that ye should not obey the Truth, before whose Eyes Christ hath been evidently set forth crucified among you? He aggravates all by this, that it was a Representation (or lively picturing, as the word signifies) of Christ, and him as crucified; and that so to the Life, as it ought to affect them. Yea, the thing in the nature of it was such, and so great, as should have made an Impression never to be impaired. Paul stands wondring and aghast at it, looking on them as Men that had not their common Senses, Who hath bewitched you (says he) your Stupidity must be from the super-addition of some evil Spirit more than ordinary. Suppose thou hadst been an Ocular Witness and Spectator of Christ's being crucified at Jerusalem, as Mary and John were, and thou hadst with all them known what had been the Intent and Purpose of God and Christ in his being crucified, yea and thou hadst believed it had been to take away thy Sins and to save thy Soul, or it could never be saved, and thou hadst known all this, and meditated so on it upon the Place all the while it was a doing, and hadst seen the Nails knock'd in, and thoughtest withal, such a Sin which I have so often committed, is the Hammer that reiterates these Strokes till they are driven unto the Head; and suppose Christ had said unto thee then (as he did to his Mother, Woman, behold thy Son) Sinner, behold thy Saviour; All this is for thy Sake and Sins, I hang here bearing thy Person, and thy Body of Sin is with mine nailed to the Cross, and is crucifying together with it: Couldst thou have gone away from this Sight, and sinned again as formerly? Yea, would not this Sight have so stuck with thee, as whenever thou wert about to sin, the Thought and Impression of it would still have risen up, and quelled it more than all the Prohibitions and the Threatnings of the Law? Let me now make an home Push upon thee, Hast thou been at a Sacrament, and hadst thou true and real Faith, that Faith did or would have set thee down by the Cross, as Mary was; and thou mightest stand by and behold all, and not only go over it in a way of fancy as over any other Story, but in a way of subsistence of things not seen, as well past, as present or to come. Conclude therefore (as Paul doth, Gal. 3. 1.) that it is some extraordinary Spirit of Wickedness and Fascination, which hurries thee to go afterwards and sin again.

2. Let us consider the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, as on our part celebrated. It is a publick shewing forth by us his Death, one to another, that partake in it; and it is doing it before all others in remembrance of him, with Profession that we hope and believe we are the Persons for whom he hath done all this. This you have, 1 Cor. 11. 24, 25, 26. And when he had given Thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat, this is my Body, which is broken for you, this do in Remembrance of me. After the same manner also he took the Cup when he had supped, saying, This Cup is the New Testament in my Blood; this do ye as often as you drink it in remembrance of me. For as often as ye eat of this Bread and drink this Cup, ye do shew the Lord's Death till he come. We do therefore avowedly give our selves up to him, as his professed Followers and Disciples; Who thus judg, that if one died for all, then were all dead; and that he died for all, that they who live, should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him who died for them and rose again. This is the Nature of your Act in it. His giving himself to Death was his own Act, but this is yours, viz. to celebrate and perpetuate the Memorial of it. Compare this a little with the Passover instituted upon their coming forth out of Ægypt: Exod. 13. 8. Thou shalt shew thy Son in that Day, saying, This is done because of that which the Lord did to me, when I came forth out of Ægypt (commemorating all the Deliverance) and it shall be a Sign upon thine Hand, and a Memorial before thine Eyes, that the Law of God may be in thy Mouth, &c. And when a Jew had taken a Passover, and understood this to be the Intent of it, and then look'd but upon his ten Commandments (the Preface whereto is this, I am the Lord that brought thee out of Ægypt, and so in the Force thereof sets on every Command, both against Sin and for Duty) What a renewal of solemn Obligation did that Ordinance of the Passover, the Seal and Memorial hereof, rise unto? Now then, a Christian, who joins in celebrating the Lord's Supper (and therein, in a clearer manner than the Passover, shews forth the Lord's Death) cannot but discern that the Action and Intent of it speaks, that this is done because of that which the Lord did to Christ for me; and this is a Sign and a Memorial I am to carry with me ever in my Eye, that the Love of God may be in my Heart, and held forth in my Life in futable Obedience. This is, and ought to be the Preface writ over every Duty, or Prohibition of every Sin; and thy Conscience necessarily dictates to thee, I must carry the Memorial of this in my Hand, lest I put forth that to Wickedness, which I stretched forth to lay hold on that Sacramental Christ. This is to be continually in mine Eyes as a Remembrancer, that look as if a dead Father, who at his Death had given such and such Instructions and Commands to his Son, should often appear to him, or appoint a Glass in which, when he looked, he presently would appear to him therein, on purpose to mind him of his Commands, and oblige him to them: This is the Nature of that Ordinance concerning Christ to me. What says Christ? John 15. 14. If you be my Friends, keep my Commandments; and it is edged with this, No Man hath greater Love than this, to lay down his Life for his Friends. O how would we carry in our Eye, the Apparitions Christ makes and gives at a Sacrament, or offers to give unto us if we brought Faith? And if we are about to sin, the Thoughts of Christ crucified, as renewed at such a Sacrament, do or should come in and haunt us. And if we should notwithstanding indulge Sin, and not divert from it, how do we aggravate thereby our Sins against him, and provoke and tempt him? For if Christ crucified thus so oft, appears and stands in our way, and yet we go on to sin, it is worse than what the dumb Ass did at the Apparition of an Angel, and as bad as Balaam's Course was, who was reprov'd. This we are apt to do, and therefore he bids us to renew often this Remembrance of him, As oft as ye do this, 1 Cor. 11. 27. As the Apparitions made to the Patriarchs, triarchs, all the Ordinances of the Old Testament, and the Obligations of them, are nothing unto this in comparison, by reason of the Knowledg we have of Christ that accompanies this Sacrament. And yet you read how heinously God took the sinnings of Solomon, that had appeared to him twice, 1 Kings 11. 9. And what sad Punishment for transgressings after Ordinances, or Obligations for temporal Mercies held forth thereby, did the Israelites incur? But now all the wondrous Works and Deliverances out of Aegypt are but Trifles unto this, our Salvation by Christ commemorated in this Sacrament.

2. Add to this, that on our parts we take an Oath of Fidelity to Jesus Christ in the most solemn manner, and we do it upon these Considerations and Obligations specified. You know the Name of Sacrament was given to this Ordinance by the Antients upon this account; and (as I think) there is some Aspect from Scripture that looks that way. For Paul having discoursed of Baptism, and the Import of it as an Obligation to Holiness and Obedience (Rom. 6. from the 3^d to the 13th) he then subjoins thereto as the consequent thereof, how every such Christian had as a Soldier and Servant yielded up himself and his Weapons or Arms (so he calls his Members, ver. 13.) as Weapons of Righteousness unto God and Christ, as his Captain. You know what was the Law of a Soldier, 2 Tim. 2. 4. he gave himself up, and that by Oath, to please him that had chosen him to be a Soldier. You know the Severity and Danger of Martial Law in the Case of running away, or stepping aside. Now at every Sacrament thou art drawn into an Oath to Christ, thou avouchest him to be thy Saviour, as they (Deut. 26. 17, 18.) are said to do at the offering the first Fruits. Thou hast avouched the Lord this Day to be thy God, and to walk in his Ways, and to keep his Statutes, and his Commandments, and his Judgments, and to hearken unto his Voice. And the Lord hath avouched thee this Day to be his peculiar People, as he hath promised thee, and that thou shouldest keep all his Commandments. Thou forswarest all thy Sins, and you know the Danger of Perjury, especially when it is the Breach of such an Oath so oft renewed, and upon so solemn Occasions.

3. I shall now spread the Danger before you, as the Apostle hath set it forth, 1 Cor. 11. By going on in thy Lusts, thou becomest guilty of the Body and Blood of Christ, 1 Cor. 11. 27. That is; thou dost in effect do that which the Jews did in crucifying him; and how heavy a Sin that was to that Nation, the Curse ever since shews. What an heavy Imprecation was that? His Blood be upon us and our Children. The Blood of any Man is valuable, the Blood of a Saint is much more precious to God, Psal. 116. but the Blood of Christ, by which God redeemed us all as with a sufficient Price, is much more precious. Now to have the Guilt of this lie on thee, O think what it is! By this thou becomest guilty of his Blood, both by evacuating the shedding of it (as Paul says, then Christ died in vain) and also by fostering that which was the Cause of his crucifying, viz. thy Sins, whereby thou makest thy self an Abetter of that barbarous Murder. Also by profaning that Blood in undervaluing it, by preferring thy Lust before it, thou puttest Christ again to open Shame, Heb. Chap. 6, & 10. for as by thy joining in the Sacrament thou didst undertake publickly to shew forth his Death as undergone for thee and thy Sins; so by scandalous Sins, thou dost as publickly contradict thine own Act, and shamest him by doing the contrary unto what that Death was intended for by him, and unto what thy Celebration of the Ordinance tended on thy part: thou defilest not only the Temple of God on Earth, the Church of Christ, and Body of Saints (and such an Offender will God destroy, 1 Cor. 3. 17.) but thou disgracest the Person of Christ, in whom the Fulness of the Godhead dwells bodily, and who is the Tabernacle of God in Heaven, Heb. 9. 11. This is the height of Popish Blasphemy, Rev. 13. 6. The Blood of the Sacrifices under the old Law, which were in their signification an Holy Thing, were made by Mens sinnings that offered them but as the cutting off a Dog's Neck, and so but as Dog's Blood (as Isaiab says) But now in the New Testament, the Blood which thou dishonourest is Christ's Blood, that hath been sacrificed first for thee; and by living in thy Lusts, thou dost shew that thou accountest it but as Dog's Blood. Thou art guilty of that Blood also, by making that Ordinance (appointed to so high Ends) to represent a mere nullity, and of none effect. For in the like Case says Paul, 1 Cor. 11. 20. this is not to eat the Lord's Supper, and Book IV. (ver. 27.) it is termed but eating of Bread, not the Body of Christ, for 'tis but bare common Bread to such an one; even as he accounted that Body and Blood but as a common thing, in still preferring his Lusts thereto.

Yea, such a Man eats and drinks Damnation to himself, ver. 28. of that Chap. Temporal Judgments are often inflicted on the Godly, and on the Wicked Eternal: I will curse your Blessings (says God in the Prophet) and 'tis a certain Truth, that what is intended as the greatest Blessing, if abused, is turned into the greatest Curse. And to have the Fulness of the Blessing of the Gospel, which Christ by being made a Curse purchased, turned into a Curse, how great a Curse must that be? Thou eatest and drinkest Poison if thou comest in thy Sins, or if thy Participation of the Ordinance doth thee no good against thy Sins, and so thou art guilty of thine own Death and Soul's Blood also, as well as of Christ's Death. It will rot thy Soul, as the Water the Woman drank did her, Numb. 5. 27, 28. So shall thy Soul be cursed if thou returnest not. And whereas thou professest to come to remember Christ, and his Death and Suffering, God is provoked thereby to remember all thy Sins: Hosea 8. 13. At their Sacrifices now will he remember their Iniquity.

C H A P. V.

The Danger of those, who being in Church-Fellowship and Communion, yet their Lives are inconsistent with such a Relation.

THE fourth Ordinance of the Gospel is the publick Censures of the Church, consisting of Admonition, Rebuke, and Excommunication. There is a great Danger of a Man living in Lusts, having put himself under the Capacity of these; for God is engaged the sooner to bring thy Sins to light. 1 Tim. 5. 19, 20. he had given Directions to Timothy to deal impartially in Church-censures (ver. 19, 20.) and not to be rash in laying on of Hands; and then he concludes of both, ver. 24, 25. Some Mens Sins are open aforehand to Judgment; Aforehand, going before to Judgment: and some Mens Sins follow after, namely, eis neion, unto Judgment, ver. 25. Those that are otherwise cannot be hid. As I take it, 'tis spoken not of the Day of Judgment, but of that Judgment that is made at receiving in an Elder, or a Member, which was antiently done by laying on of Hands. Who-so sins, tho they have escaped the Cognizance of the Church, yet because they have adventured to take upon them so great and sacred an Office, they cannot be long hid, if they repent not and forsake them. In like manner, Men living under the Peril of the Censure of the Church (which he had spoken of, ver. 19, 20.) if they will venture to go on to sin, and think still to escape the Knowledge of Man, yet because they live and have put themselves under so great an Ordinance, as is the Judgment of the Church (which he there also speaks of) and fear not that God by his Providential Discovery may bring them under it; therefore if their Sins be not such as go before to Judgment, for a long time through God's Patience, yet God will in his Providence order it so, that their Sins shall follow after, eis neion, unto Judgment. And so the meaning is, that if Men have lived long in a Sin, and have escaped the publishing of it to a Church, which doth profess the Exercise of exact Discipline, and is accordingly heedful of Miscarriages as it ought to be; God engageth himself (if the Person repent not) the sooner to give him up to such Sins as shall follow after to Judgment, so as their Iniquity, by reason of this Dispensation, will find them out and cannot be hid. And upon the equity of that other Coherence, namely the Respect to Ordination and Admission, this Rule will in a proportion hold of this Censure also. Now how dangerous a thing it is to be given up to the Censure of the Church, the Apostle tells us, when he calls it a delivering up unto Satan, 1 Cor. 5. Now if any will say, we will avoid this Danger, and keep our selves out from such a Bond, let them consider what follows (1 Cor. 5.) Those without God judgeth, and will do it sufficiently. I take it, those Words do insinuate a great Privilege that those within a Church, who live in a subjection to a Judgment, if they sin, have in comparison of those that live without, be they Heathen or Christian Professors. For if they be within, God forbears to judge them personally, till that means of the Church hath been used, which if neglected, he then falls on both, 1 Cor. 11. A Man is under a Protection (as it were) and God takes not the matter into his Court, because it is under Trial in another, which is a means to reclaim him: but those that live without, are immediately exposed to God's judging them, who will deal with them accordingly more severely, As Whoremongers and Adulterers God will judge, Heb. 13, &c. So that if any Man will stay out to avoid being judged, he falls under a more severe Court.

Chap. 5.

Take the last Ordinance of a Church, viz. Church-Contribution and Collection for the Saints, it being not a Civil Matter (as giving Alms is) but an Ordinance religious. It is a Ministration, λειτουργία, 2 Cor. 9. 13. and it is reckoned up with Prayers, and Preaching, and breaking Bread, Acts 2. 42. for so I understand that Word, which is translated Fellowship, and is carried in the Translation, as if it were the Fellowship of the Apostles that were there intended. But it is κοινωνία, Communication, namely of Goods, more largely mentioned in the Verse after; and also in Heb. 13. 16. Be not forgetful ἐν ποίαις ἢ κοινωνίας, of doing good, and of communicating. 'Tis the very same word, as also in Rom. 15. 26. where it is translated, Contribution to the Saints.

1. I say, it being thus a Spiritual Ordinance and Sacrifice, as all Church-Offerings are (as Heb. 13. 6. it follows, for with such Sacrifices God is well pleased) therefore if Men deal unworthily herein, they are in danger of having a greater Curse hereby, perhaps not upon their Estates, but in their Spirits. If you will take an Estimate how heinously God takes dealing falsely in this, because 'tis a matter of Worship; you may see it in that first Example of a Judgment in those Primitive times executed on Ananias and Saphira: And thereby, as you may see how heinously God takes it, so also why it was so, not that they were bound to have given all their whole Estates, ver. 4. Whilst it remained, was it not thine own? And after it was sold, was it not in thine own Power? But they having dedicated the whole in an open Appearance to God, to withhold part was a lying, not to Man, but to God. It was not in a matter merely human between Man and Man, as the Promise that makes a Debt is, or as a Bargain between Man and Man, but the Holy Ghost (ver. 3) was the Person, with whom in that Work they dealt, and with whom in all Works of that nature we also deal now. And tho God inflicts not such extraordinary Punishments now upon Mens Bodies, yet you may from thence gather, how much he is displeas'd at the like as a Sin, and in what Danger Mens Spirits are in such cases, of a Spiritual Judgment and Curse, which is more usual under the Gospel, and which accordingly Men shall find at the latter Day. Mat. 10. 15. he threatens those who should contemn the Gospel, not with a Temporal Judgment, but (as if forbearing such under this Dispensation) he threatens them with a greater and worse. Sodom and Gomorrah (says he) were punish'd with visible Judgments, tho extraordinary: But it shall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah, than for these in the Day of Judgment. Till when he may defer it. When therefore thou drawest near to God in this lowest Duty of Worship, yet because it is an Offering to God (Mat. 5. 23.) E'er thou bring thy Gift to the Altar, reconcile thy self to thy Brother. And by like reason, if thou be guilty of, or livest in any Sin, reconcile thy self to God, otherwise even this Act of Worship will provoke him the more.

C H A P. VI.

Two Cases concerning a regenerate Man's sinning against Knowledge. The first Case resolved, How far such an one is capable of sinning against Knowledge; and what is the difference between his sinning against Knowledge, and an unregenerate Man's sinning against it.

THAT a regenerate Man may sin against Knowledge, we will take the Instance of Solomon only to prove it, who sinned against his Knowledge, yea and that the experimental, clear and tasting Knowledge of God and his Ways, yet remained Godly. That he sinned very far against Knowledge, see 1 Kings 11. 4, 7, 8, 9. where we read that his Wives turned his Heart away after other Gods, that is, so far as to build high Places for all his Wives, ver. 7, 8. and this for them to sacrifice and to burn Incense on to their several Gods, ver. 10. And this Sin of his is brought in by way of Aggravation, that God had given him a special Commandment against this Sin, and so he had had a special Light against it; yea (ver. 10.) it is added, He (therein) turned his Heart away from God, who had appeared to him twice, that is, after he had strong Revelations, and Impressions and Appearances of the true God upon his Heart, after he had known him, not only with a common Knowledge of Education, as others do, nor by Faith only, as all Believers do, but had superadded to it an especial appearing and drawing nigh of God to him, with a great Acceptation of his Person and Prayers, manifested by God to him, and this twice. Thus he sinned every way against an expressive, clear, experimental Knowledge, the best and purest of Knowledge he could have, unless he had been took up to Heaven (as Paul was) and yet he says, Eccles. 2. 3, 9. that his Wisdom remained with him, namely, his Grace and Knowledge, for he speaks not of his Gifts of Wisdom (since that they should remain was no wonder, such common Gifts remaining in the wickedest of Men) but of that Wisdom, which in his Proverbs he so commends: yea and he says, that He acquainted his Heart with Wisdom, ver. 3. tho it took hold of Folly, that is, closed with Sin; and therefore in the Opposition, by Wisdom he means true Grace, so that he sinned against Knowledge, and yet still remained a Godly Man. Yea and again, when for this the Prophet had appointed Jeroboam, as from God, to be King over the ten Tribes, when Solomon heard this (1 Kings 11. 4.) it is said, that therefore Solomon sought to kill him, which was as directly against God's Will revealed by a Prophet, as was that of Saul, when for the same Cause he sought to kill David, because he was assigned his Heir and Successor in his Kingdom. But God had established his sure Mercies with David and Solomon his Child, and not with Saul; and therefore God pardoned Solomon, and turned him fully again unto himself, as his Book of Ecclesiastes shews, whenas he rejected Saul. Having given you this Resolution of the Question in the general from this one Instance, I shall endeavour more particularly to explain the Truth by Answers to several Questions.

The Questions may be made concerning either some particular Acts of Sins committed, or concerning a regenerate Man's whole Course, as either of them do relate unto sinnings against Knowledge.

Quest. 1. If the Question be concerning particular Acts of Sins; we grant, Affertion 1. That a Godly Man may, against actual Light and Knowledge, commit particular Acts of Sin, and omit the Performance of some Acts of Duties. Thus David had some Light against the numbring of the People when he did it, for Joab reasoned the matter with him, and reprov'd him for it, 2 Sam. 24. 2, 3. and in the 4th ver. All his Captains shewed their Dislike (namely, of his Pride in it) yet still he persisted and would have it done. But yet this was not such a strong smiting Light, as that which came upon him after he had done it, then it did strike upon his Conscience, ver. 10. and altho he saw it to be a Sin afore, yet he saw it not in that manner; for it is said, that then his Heart smote him, which shews that before it had not thus smote him; he knew it before, but minded it not much, was not attentively apprehensive or struck with the sense of it; but now his Heart smites him, and he cries out, I have sinned greatly, and so recalled the doing of it. Chap. 6.

Quest. 2. But then the Question will be, May he not sin, when he hath a strong Pulse of Conscience against a Sin, a smiting Light, as I may so term it?

Affertion 2. Yes, he may sin against a strong Pulse of Conscience. Holy Peter without question had a strong Light to the contrary, when he denied his Master; and for the clearing of this, know that a regenerate Man's Conscience being sanctified but in part, there is much Light in it that is not sanctifying Light, all his Knowledg about Sin and Grace is not the Light of Life; so as he hath a Remainder of mere natural Light of Conscience in him, as well as a regenerate part of Conscience: and hence it may fall out, that natural Conscience in him may stir strongly, and beat much against a Sin in a natural Way, but upon such Motives and Considerations, as are common to him with carnal Men; when yet true Light is not so fully stirred up against it, it being as the good Pleasure of the Holy Ghost to work in us how and as he will: 'tis a new and peculiar Work of the Will and Spirit to do that, viz. to stir the regenerate Part. David had a strong working, and buffling of natural Conscience in him, when he lay roaring under Terrors of Conscience (Psal. 32.) yet still it prevailed not with him to confess his Sin: the natural Light of Conscience was then stirring in him, when yet the regenerate part of Conscience was not; for if that had wrought thus strongly, as the other did, it would have made him kindly to have confessed and mourned for his Sin, as it did when he confess'd his Sin to Nathan. By the like Reason, before a Godly Man commits a Sin, natural Conscience may have a strong Work, when yet true Light against the Sin hath not: There may be Thundrings and Lightnings in his Conscience, which God's sanctifying Spirit is not so much in, and so he may sin against much Blustrings of that common Light, when yet true Light, which should cause him to hate it, and strengthen him against it, is calm and down; for the Light of natural Conscience is as the Light of Straw or Sedg, it makes a great Flame of a great Blaze, and so glareth much in Mens Eyes, terrifies much but heats not; whereas true Light when it is kindled, is the Light of solid Fire, wherein there is less Flame and Flashing, but more Heat and Efficacy upon the Heart to restrain it from Sin. No question but the Apostle Peter's Conscience strongly wrought in him, his Heart throbb'd within him, when yet it prevailed not to keep him, but one Look of Christ convey'd the Spirit to him, and so stirred up sanctified Light, and broke his Heart presently. So when Nathan came to David to reprove him for his Murder, tho his Conscience had strongly wrought afore, as appears by the 32d Psalm (which is thought to be made upon that Occasion) yet the Spirit of Grace came not on him to stir up sanctified Acknowledgment, till Nathan came to him; and then how easily did he confess it at the first? I have sinned, said he.

Quest. 3. But you will further say unto me, May not a regenerate Man sin against a strong, smiting and checking Direction of sanctifying Light, and of the Spirit of God moving to the contrary, and striving with him, by Motives suitable to the regenerate Part?

Affertion 3. I answer yes, Why else doth the Apostle say, Eph. 4. 30. Grieve not the Spirit, whereby ye are sealed? Now then a Sin is properly against the Spirit, when against that which is his proper Work, which is to excite to good, to restrain from evil; and then we grieve him when we sin against such a working of his, as wherein, like a Father, and as a Friend, he gives Counsel and Direction to the contrary. We grieve him in going against such Works of his, wherein he shews himself a Father to us. When Wicked Men sin against the common Workings of the Spirit, they indeed vex him and provoke him; but when a Godly Man sins against those peculiar stirrings of his as a Spirit of Grace, then it is that properly they are said to grieve him: and yet herein they may go so far, even his own People, that they are said to rebel and vex his Holy Spirit, Isa. 63. 10. he speaks it of his own People. Now Rebellion is a Sin against Knowledg and Light, and such Light, wherein as a Friend he sweetly admonished them, for the Punishment is, he turned their Enemies and fought against them, in rebuking them in Wrath. But

Book IV.

But yet these things are to be considered in this Case.

1. That then the Spirit doth not put forth an overcoming Light in such Cases: for tho in all such Acts, whereon the Salvation of his People depends, as their Conversion at first; and his not suffering them to depart from him, therein the Holy Ghost works overcomingly and effectually in all that shall be saved; yet he works not so in giving Light or Strength in every Act of resisting Sin, or in persuading to Duty, therein the Spirit doth not always put in Strength enough into our Light, to prevail against the Temptation, but only to bear a strong Testimony against it, to the end that our Weakness might so much the more appear. For as the Holy Ghost doth not sanctify you as perfectly at first, as he could do if he pleased, but in part only; so neither doth he persuade us effectually in every Act or Motion of Grace, as he did not Hezekiah, but left him to himself, that he might see what was in his Heart. The Holy Ghost, even when he stirreth up the Light of the regenerate part, yet often doth it not so effectually as to prevail; he doth sometimes stirare, but not persuadere, often movere, but not permovere; as he stirs not up all his Wrath against us, so often not all his Grace in us, and then we fall. In the 6th of Gen. 3. there is a striving of the Spirit mentioned, which Man's Corruption overcomes: the Holy Ghost, being a free Agent, putteth not always that full Weight into the Scale that might weigh down the other, tho it moves it much; but Gen. 9. 27. there is a persuading Japheth mentioned, wherein he puts such Weight into his Light, as it prevails with a Man, whereby the Lord makes a Motive, an Apprehension to prevail upon the Mind, as he made the Counsel of Hushai to prevail against the Counsel of Ahitophel (2 Sam. 17.) and so preserved him.

2. The second thing to be considered is, that when a regenerate Man sins against such Motions of the Spirit, and of true Light stir'd and acted, that always then he is in a Passion, some strong Lust and Motion of Sin, and Law of the Members is risen suddenly upon Arms in him. And tho he may sin deliberately, when Passion is not so much up, or when his Spirit is bound and becalmed (as I shall show afterwards) yet if such powerful Light be stirring in him, if right Motions and Gales of the Spirit be breathing on him, it must be a strong Tide of Passion then that carries him against it, which yet it may: as Aza a Holy Man, after a good Sermon of the Prophet's (wherein 'tis probable that the Spirit breathed) wherein the Prophet had reprov'd him for his Sin, was in such a Rage with it, his Passion and Choler being provoked by that Reproof, that he cast the Prophet in Prison; and the Reason is, because a strong Lust or Passion doth break the Intention of Judgment, and weakens it, and so diverts it, to consider in a more intimate manner the Pleasure of Sin, which his Mind hath a present Impression of, rather than to attend to the Counsel of the Spirit. So Anima dispersa fit minor, the Strength of the Soul is dispersed and weakened, and so soon overcome, as Vapours ascending in Sleep, bind up the use of Reason and Senses, and then Fancy prevails. In like manner, a strong Lust and Motion of Sin, lays Judgment asleep, that it is not fitly it self, but hath an interrupted, broken Working and Operation. And again, a strong Lust doth alter a Man's Judgment, as a Fever doth a Man's Tongue. The Things he knows hurtful are relished as best, whereas good and wholesom Food he hath no pleasure in; and therefore tho the Physician be by and adviseth to the contrary, yet often he will have what is hurtful: for qualis unusquisque est, talis ei finis videtur. We judg of Things as they fute with our Desires, therefore when a strong Desire is up, Judgment is perverted against it self; and therefore when Passion is up, tho there may be Light enough to discover the Evil and the Sin to us, yet not enough to dispel the Mist and clear up the Mind, and so a Man errs and is misled.

3. Yet thirdly, this is to be added in such a Case, that tho the Passion carries it, yet that Light is not in vain, but hath an answerable effect upon the Heart in working an inward Resistance there; and tho it hath not its perfect Work, yet a proportionable effect, so far as it stirs it works, so much stirring of Light, so much Reluctancy in the committing of it: for tho that regenerate Light prevails not to hinder the outward Act of Sins, yet it breaks the Force of the Blow and Strength of the Lusts within, it causeth a contrary Lusting and Reluctancy in the whole whole Man against it even in the Act, and so hath a proportionable and good effect. So that tho Passion carries it, yet but by a few Voices and with much ado, it finds a strong Party of Grace in every Faculty against it, in the Understanding disallowing it, in Will hating it, in the Affections lusting against it; a strong Impression over the whole Man, a strong Stream running another way; so as he cannot do that evil in that full manner that others do, so as that Light in the working of it avails so far, that he may still be able to say, It is not I that hath done it; so as thereby the Holy Ghost doth manifest the Goodness of the Heart, even in the midst of Infirmity, that by their sense of that inward Combat, and of a Seed of God that cannot sin, the Saints have as much Comfort often, as Discouragement in the Fall.

Quest. 4. But you may further enquire, May not a regenerate Man sin against Light when he is out of Passion, and so sin deliberately against Light?

Affertion 4. I answer yes, David did so in the matter of Uriah, wherein he went soberly on: and tho it be true he was in a great strait, being afraid of Shame and Scandal, which he thereby sought to hide; yet that Passion had time enough to cool. It was not properly a Passion, which is a subitaneous Flushing: indeed that of his Adultery was from such a Flush of Passion; but this of Uriah's Murder was a more continued Distemper, sedately stirred, and retained and considered. And so Isa. 57. one that is the Child of God, is said after God had smitten him for his Covetousness, to go on frowardly in the Way of his Heart, and therefore without Passion.

1. But then when a Godly Man thus sins, it is when he hath been already disadvantaged and brought low, and into Captivity by some former Passion, which also was David's Case. This more settled Distemper began at his Adultery, which was but a Passion; but yet that having interrupted his Communion with God, and his Soul being thereby spoiled and left empty of Spiritual Comfort, God's Spirit was already grieved and withdrawn from him, and he left naked; and the regenerate part was knock'd down with so horrible a Sin, and lay under Hatches manacled, and was thro the Deceitfulness and Guilt of that Sin exceedingly hardned from God's Fear, as a Godly Man may be, Isa. 63. And he being thus already weakened, no wonder tho he be quietly carried on to further Wickedness: and tho a sudden Passion is not, nor was not much up, yet the Spiritual Part being so much down, and Corruption flesh'd, and he put into so great straits, no wonder if he was bold to proceed to further Abominations. A wise Man being made suddenly drunk, may be transported to do strange Acts in that drunken Mode, yet but whilst that Drunkenness lasts; when it is over and he comes to himself, he wonders at himself. But suppose further, that tho the Drunkenness be over, yet it may leave him so enflamed, as to cast him into a more violent lasting Distemper of a Fever, which doth more continually distemper his Brain. This was David's Case indeed, the Passion that cast him into this Fit was over, but it left him in an universal Distemper; it had weakened Grace, enflamed all corrupt Lusts and Humours in him, and now his Spirit was fit for any Abomination, which he should by any strong Temptation be put upon.

2. Or else, tho a Man is not fallen into any gross Act of sinning, yet by long insensible neglects he may be brought into some Consumption of Grace, having neglected to stir and to keep up Spiritual Apprehensions; so as his Light is as a Candle burning blew, or in the Socket, and he sleeps (which was the Case of the five wise Virgins) insomuch as tho a Man hath many Glimmerings, and actual Apprehensions come into his Mind (and so his Sins are against Knowledg) yet they are not quick, fresh and vigorous, but wan and stale. I say, when by reason of this, Spiritual Affections are brought very low and weak, starved as it were in regard of any Communion with God, heavy and dull in regard of any Endeavours after it: In this Case also, no wonder if Men deliberately steal out for Comfort elsewhere. And some have understood this to be the Case of the Prodigal, as being meant not of one, a new converted out of a profane Course, but of the returning of one who hath been converted already; but whose Affections thro Fellowship with the Pleasures of Sin have been estranged from God; and thus he being starved in regard of Comfort from God, deliberately joins himself to another for Husks.

Book IV. Quest. 5. Now if in the last place, the Question be concerning a regenerate Man's Course, Whether in regard of his whole Course, he may be said to live and practise according to his Knowledg?

Affertion 5. The Answer is, that not only no unregenerate Man lives according to his Knowledg, but that no regenerate Man, neither doth live fully and exactly answerably thereunto, nor doth he, nor can he fill up the measure of it with Practice answerable in his whole Course.

Which Proposition I yet limit and explain by these four Cautions.

1. That indeed it is true that he lives not (take his whole Course) in any one track of sinning, or way of Wickedness against his Knowledg; There is no way of Wickedness in me (says David) it must be understood, none that he knew of, for he speaks it after he had now come from an exact and diligent Search made into himself and Ways. Search me Lord, says he, for he himself had search'd himself and found none; which Search must needs be, by bringing his Course of Life and Ways, and his Light together; but yet it is as true, that thro his whole Course and the tract of his Life, he doth continually fall short of what he knows in all his Actions.

2. But then, when we say he falls short of, and lives not according to his Knowledg, the meaning is, he falls short of doing the things he knows in that full Latitude, whereto he sees the Commandment which is Holy and Spiritualextends; for by Knowledg in the Assertion must be understood, not only the Knowledg whereby a Man doth know, but the things themselves which are known, in the extent of their being known: and so it is used in ordinary Phrase of Speech, for Fides est vel qua creditur, vel quae creditur, it being taken both for the Faith whereby we believe, or for the things we do believe: so is Knowledg taken also; and as the things believed are called Faith, so we sometimes express the Objects known, calling them Knowledg. Now if by living according to his Knowledg be meant, that he lives exactly according to all the Latitude of what he knows concerning the Commandments, and the utmost Strictness revealed to him, which as David says (so far as he saw into them) are exceeding broad, and broader than his Life could extend to; so no Godly Man doth live according to his Knowledg, he knows more for the Object of his Knowledg, than he can reach in Practice. Thus Paul, Rom. 7. comparing his Heart and Life with the Law, saw a further Spiritualness in the Law, than he could answer in his Heart and Life. And so Phil. 3. 12, 13, 14. I reach (says he) to the things that are before, not as if I had already attained it; he speaks it of a Christian Course, he had Light which discovered still a further Horizon of Godliness, mightily beyond and distant from that, to which at present he had arrived; a vaster Latitude before him than he was able to stretch unto, a higher Pitch than he was able to reach unto: as a Child may have Knowledg to discern what a fair Copy that is which is set before him, and be able to read it and like it, when yet he wants Skill to write after it. A Man knows he should love God with all his Soul, and all his Heart, that he should pray constantly, fervently without Distraction: but how do we fall short of all this? But if living according to his Knowledg be understood, of the Knowledg it self, by which he knows them, that Axiom of Divines will here take place, That so much as a Man knows he practiseth; and he that says he knows God, and keepeth not his Commandments, is a Liar, says John, 1 John 2. 4.

3. But then this must be understood of true, real, practical Knowledg, The Light of Life (as Christ calls it) such Knowledg as the Apostle calls, Knowing as we ought to know: for otherwise we have much more Light about the Ways of Grace and Holiness, than is sanctifying in us; much of that Light of Conscience, which is in a regenerate Man's Mind, remains in a great measure un sanctified, seeing Conscience is but in part purified (as I said before) and then a regenerate Man hath often a large Addition of Gifts of Knowledg, for the good of others, more than would otherwise serve his own particular only; as Stewards have more Money than for themselves: and therefore if we take measure of all such Knowledg as is in him of Gifts and Conscience, it must needs be too big, and too wide for his Practice.

4. And then, if Practice be confined and meant of the outward Performance only, then so Rom. 7. 8. Paul himself says, He was not able to perform all he knew; but if by Practice be meant a continual serving of the Law in the Mind, more or less, as true Knowledge is active in him; as he there speaks in the 25th ver. which in the same Chap. is expressed by doing, and is so esteemed in God's Account: So it is always true, that so much true Knowledge as is stirring in the Heart, so much Practice is found throughout his whole Course; and tho he knows more than he is able outwardly to perform, yet the best of his Will is to do as much as he knows, ver. 18, 19. and his Will therein is as large as his Knowledge, and both to keep the Law exactly only. As his Knowledge is intensive imperfect, tho extensive and objectively much larger, as extending it self to all the Commandments of God, and the utmost strictness of them; so also his Will, tho it be intensively imperfect, and weak or not able to bring all he knows into Performance; yet it is extensively as large as what he knows, aiming and stirring after the highest Perfection: So that look how far his Knowledge reacheth, so far doth his Will also which is the Principle of Action; and therefore his Practice may be said to be likewise as large as both, tho all imperfect.

And now we have explained how far a regenerate Man may sin against Knowledge, and fall short of it in his Course; it will be needful to add some Differences to all this, between his sinning thus against Knowledge, and an unregenerate Man's, lest Wicked Men be hereby encouraged, or Godly Men themselves made presumptuous. And herein my meaning is, not to handle all these Differences which may be given in their sinning, but only their different Carriage towards their Knowledge; and these Differences we will severally fit to the main of the foregoing Assertions.

And first we will begin to difference this which we brought in last, concerning falling short of his Knowledge in his Course, which tho it be common to regenerate and unregenerate Men, yet with these Differences.

1. That tho a regenerate Man fall short of his Knowledge in his whole Course, yet he preserves and fosters all his Knowledge still in the utmost extent of it, and keeps up his Assent to all that Strictness he knows, and which he hath been convinced of, and labours also to wind his Heart up to it, and this still he endeavours to do; as he goes on to know more, he preserves the same Opinions of the Strictness of God's Ways, and studies to confirm himself in the Truth of them, and lets not his Light to settle, keeps it as his Standard, which he measures his Heart and Actions by. But now an unregenerate Man, when he sees his Heart and Life cannot agree with Strictness, he labours to cut the Standard, and makes it even with his Bushel, to bring his Opinion to his own Heart and Ways. And what is more than he is able to do or means to do, he reckons it too much preciseness. The former Instance of a regenerate Man you may see in Paul, and what he says of himself is true of all regenerate Men in their measure, as it was true of him in his measure; only his measure was larger, in which respect indeed he puts a wide Difference between a lower sort of Christians and himself in that same Place. I see the Mark (says he) and what is before me. Now (says he) I look not to what is behind, but endeavour to reach to what I want. Phil. 3. 13. I do stretch to the utmost. And, ver. 14. Press to the Mark. He sets up to himself the highest Pitch of Strictness (he knows to be so) as his Mark, and that he alters not; he moves not that to himself, but moves himself to it. And as many as are perfect (says he) are thus minded; that is, whose Hearts are perfect with God. Now because it would be said, but some do not think God's Ways so strict as you, have not so large Apprehensions as you have of them, and are not so strict as you: It may be so (says Paul) but yet two things he says.

(1.) That God will by degrees reveal it to them, who are Spiritual, in time, as fully as to me.

(2.) And he exhorts that nevertheless whereto we have attained, let us all walk; that is, so much Knowledge more or less that thou art convinced of, proportion thy Endeavour unto, and not thy Knowledge to thy Endeavour.

(3.) And he insinuates as much as if he had said, Whereas I may seem too strict for some of you, and to have attained to more than you, therein follow me, says he;

he, think not to have me come back to you, but come up to me; whereas an unregenerate Man now will persuade one, that is more strict than himself, to come to his Pace, or else he hates him.

Book IV.

2. Tho a Godly Man falls short in many particular Acts of what he knows, and so can't make his Life and his Knowledg adequate and even, yet take his whole Course, he brings his Heart to subject it self to all he knows, makes it answerable and conformable to every particular thing known, and hath a care to do so and keep it so from day to day, but especially at such times, when he more solemnly reneweth his Covenant with God, and sets himself to make his Heart perfect with God; which Perfection lies in this, in a willing Subjection to all he knows. This you may see to be the Fruit and Effect of David's Knowledg, Psal 119. 104. David says there, He had gotten much Understanding; by the Word he knew more Sins than others, had a larger Insight into Duties commanded than others had: and as he says in another Place, Thy Commandments are exceeding broad. Now what was the Fruit and Effect of this Knowledg in his Heart? He says, Therefore do I hate every false Way. You may observe, that as his Knowledg was such a Knowledg as wrought Hatred to the Sins he knew, so he had compared particularly his Heart with his Knowledg, and surveyed the one and the other, and remark'd all the particular Sins he knew, and of them all he says in particular, I hate every one: He goes over to Particulars, makes his Heart and his Knowledg even, and brings it to a Hatred of every false Way, which he knew to be such; and so for Duties he doth the like, ver. 106. He brings his Heart in subjection to every Duty he knew; and tho he had fallen often, yet he takes and renews often an Oath of Allegiance of his Heart, to submit to every one, I have sworn (says he) that I will keep thy Commandments diligently; he will not suffer his Heart to stand out as a Rebel against any: but (as the Apostle says) 1 Cor. 10. 4. He brings every Thought into Obedience, to the Knowledg of Christ; and so makes his Knowledg and his Heart in the Subjection of it to every Command, to be even of adequate Extent. So that suppose in a Godly Man, that some Duty and his Heart have been Strangers for some while, yet he brings them together again, renews his Acquaintance, makes them Friends ever and anon; and when they are brought together, tho he hath omitted a Duty, and hath been a Stranger to it, yet after a little Conference with his Heart and it, they are as good Friends as ever, he finds his Heart is in it again. So on the contrary, if he hath admitted any Familiarity with any Sin; yet he makes his Heart and every Sin to break Friendship, and so makes his Heart and his Knowledg adequate; so as he can look about them, run over all, and go through every Particle of his Knowledg, and can truly say there is no Sin I know to be such but I hate it, and can part with it, no Duty but I have a Heart willing to submit to it, and is agreeable to it. And this making the Heart perfect is that which should be done from day to day, when a Man prays and renews his Covenant with God; so David did when he came to pray, Psal. 66. 18. He made a Separation between his Heart and every Sin he knew such, and especially when he came to the Altar with his Offering, as you to the Sacrament; so as ever and anon, he doth as at his first Conversion (every new Act of renewing the Covenant between a new Conversion) go over all particular Sins, which either he hath lately been tempted unto or may be, and breaks his Heart off from them, and so he views all Duties either he is called to, or may be called to, and brings his Heart into Obedience to them; so as he hath a care to make all adequate, and to walk so, to subscribe to all often, as I may so speak, tho he hath failed in that full actual Conformity required at all Times and upon all Occasions: but there is no Wicked Man in the World that keeps his Heart thus, and makes it thus correspondent to his Knowledg, but either he neglects to do it, or if he goes about it, he cannot get it to part with every Sin, nor to submit to every Duty; it stands out, and will not take the Oath of Allegiance to every thing, at least doth not this ordinarily in his Course.

3. In regard of particular Acts of sinning; tho a Godly Man may commit a Sin against a smiting strong Light in Passion (as in the former Assertions was discovered) yet these Differences may be assigned.

(1.) There is much in his whole Heart, that takes part with his Light and backs it, and speaks on its side; and tho his Conscience threatneth, terrifies, reproves and checks, yet still there is something in his Heart is glad of all this, and rejoiceth in it: so says the Apostle, *Rom. 7. 22. That he delighted in the Law, and the Light of it, and this as it wars and fights against his Lusts; for there is a regenerate part suitable to that Light, and is glad of all the Buffets and Blows that Conscience gives the Heart for the Sin, for the Light that is in him fights and speaks of his side; but Conscience, Knowledg and Light in a wicked Man hath nothing to back it and uphold it, Rom. 1. 28. he likes not to retain the Knowledg of God. Indeed to know the Truth, and view it, and the Beauty and Harmony that is in it, may be exceeding pleasant to him (John 5. 35.) but when this Truth being once received, begins to be busy with him, and to intermeddle in every Action, as such Light will, and to tell his Heart, this Pleasure of Sin ought not to be enjoyed, and this Duty ought to be done, and so applies it self and sticks in to guide him in every particular Action; this reproving Light he likes not, and so desires not to retain it, nor to carry it along with him where-ever he goes: tho he was delighted with the bare shining of the Truth, yet the reproving of the Truth in his Heart, he likes not. But a godly Man having a Heart suitable to his Light, delights in all the Checkings and Reproofs of it, as speaking on its side and against his Enemies. Here now a wicked Man, who in a particular Act, dares not commit the Act it self against Light, yet his Heart is against the Light it self. As Baalam, *If thou wouldest give me this House full of Gold, I would speak no other than God speaks; yet his whole Heart was against this Light, would have given another Message, and would have reversed his Blessing, and went with such a Hope and full Desire, so as his whole Heart was against the Light and Truth, tho he obeyed it. But now on the contrary, a Godly Man, tho he may commit the Sin which is against his Light, and the Truth of the Law in his Conscience, yet still his Heart is for the Light, and says, the Law is Holy and Good, Rom. 7. 14. and this, not with an Assent which he cannot but chuse to afford it, but so as he is glad there is such a Law, tho it condemns him and Sin: any Truth of Christ that is revealed to him, which crosseth his Aims never so much, he doth not only assent that it is true and good, but is glad it is a Truth, and says it is best it should be so, and so takes part with it.

(2.) Hence ariseth a second Difference between the Carriage of a Godly Man's Heart towards his Light, and a Wicked Mans, viz. That a Godly Man's Heart is active in using the Light he hath against his Sin, and in provoking and stirring up his Heart to Duty; but a Wicked Man, tho he may be active in getting Light, yet is passive rather in the use of it in his Heart against Sin or to Duty. It is common indeed to both to have Light come in against a Sin, both before and after, yet so as a Wicked Man's Heart is but rather a Patient in regard of it; but a Godly Man's Heart is an Agent, that endeavours to bring it in, and to use it against his Sin. This you shall find, John 3. 19. where Christ distinguisheth a Wicked and a Good Heart by this, by coming to the Light. A Wicked Man comes not to the Light, but the Light to him, Christ puts the Difference not in not having, or having Light; but in their coming, or not coming to it; which notes out, that Wicked Mens Light comes in upon them, the other call it in, and come to it, and gladly bring their Hearts, Lives and Estates to it. For instance, before a Wicked Man commits a Sin, whilst he is addressing himself to it, Light of Conscience may break in upon him, it being appointed as a Controuler and a Watch over him and his Ways, and not suffer him to sin securely and untaken notice of. But now a Godly Man when he is tempted to sin, he himself stirs up that Light which is in him to withstand it. When he hears the Thief knock, he lights his Candle presently, gathers his Thoughts together, muffers up such Considerations as he can think of as Weapons to resist it with, considers what Motives, what Arguments are against it, calls up such a Place of Scripture as had lain sleeping in him, remembers such a piece of a Sermon, in such a Corner of his Heart laid up against this time; and armed with this Light, all he could muffer up on the sudden, he encounters his Enemy: So Joseph did, How shall I do this, and sin against God? He considered what God was, and what Sin was, to keep him from it; whenas

Book IV. a Wicked Man on the contrary, when he would enjoy his Sin, he useth his Light to find out Shifts rather than Arguments against it; he would shut the Windows, but that there are some Crannies at which Light will come in, and find him out, even as Eliab found out Ahab, Hast thou found me O my Enemy? Such he judgeth his Light, he would imprison the Light that is come in, that it might not interrupt him; and so when he hath sinned, tho' Light be brought in as a Witness, and terrifies and checks, and whilst it follows him, he judgeth himself, confesseth it to God; yet otherwise he would be content to pass it over, nor would set his Thoughts to consider, what he had done to the end to humble himself, but that such Thoughts are set upon him, as they were upon Cain and Judas, when he repented himself, and upon Darius when his Thoughts troubled him; but he would not go about to trouble his Thoughts about Sin, but that Sin troubles his Thoughts, being set on by the Spirit of Bondage. But now when a Godly Man hath sinned, he stays not till his Thoughts be troubled about it, but he sets his Mind awake to consider his Sin; he stays not till a Writ be served upon him, but sues out for one, useth his Light to examine it, searcheth into every Corner and Circumstance of it, sits as a Judge on himself, judgeth himself lest he be judged, calls in his Conscience as a Witness, and so goes and humbles himself kindly and willingly before his Father; so they, Lamen. 3. 4. stir up themselves to set their Light a work, Come let us search and try our Ways, and turn to the Lord. They stir up the Light in them, light the Candle, and go down into every Corner: As David did, Lord (says he) I have searched. He used all Knowledge he had in it, and when he had done, he sets the Windows and Doors open, desires God to bring in Light and search also.

(3) The third Difference is, that tho' a Godly Man may commit an Act of Sin against Knowledge, and on the contrary a Wicked Man thro' Knowledge and Conscience abstain from sinning; yet in a Godly Man Knowledge will overcome, and be too strong and powerful for his sinning, and not let him depart from God: but in the other, in the end his Sin will be too headstrong and overpowerful for his Knowledge, so as to make him to depart from God, and to go on in Sin. So 2 Pet. 2. 20. those who through Knowledge had escaped the Defilements of the World, were again overcome. Whereas, Rom. 6. 14. Sin hath not Dominion over a regenerate Man, who is under Grace. Which Places expound each other; for to be overcome is to yield a Man's self a Servant again to Sin, Rom. 6. 16. so as to be pleased and rest in that Condition, and so to go on in it: but a Slave's Spirit never returns upon the Child of God, but the Knowledge of his former Condition rescues him again, and will not suffer Indentures to be drawn between them and him, to become a constant Servant to it.

Now the Reason of this Difference is, because Knowledge in an unregenerate Man hath the whole Frame of the Heart, and all the Strength of the Will and Affections armed against it, so as it governs, but as a Tyrant, by Threats, &c. But Grace and sanctifying Knowledge hath a great Interest and Party in the Will and Affections for to back it, so as it fights not alone; but there is a whole Man to fight with it, if it be but mustered up by Knowledge. And now therefore, tho' Knowledge in the one, ruling only as a Tyrant, may for a time overcome a whole Country, and keep them under, and so Conscience in a wicked Man rules the whole Man, and restrains it from Sin for a time, yet this cannot hold long; for the Power of every King lies in the Law, Hearts and Agreement of his Subjects, and willing Obedience to his Laws. Now therefore Knowledge and Conscience in an unregenerate Man, having none other than a tyrannical Power; therefore (as all Tyrants are) it is hated of all the whole, whilst it doth rule and curb unruly Lusts, and in the end they rise up and overcome it, and depose it and imprison it (so Rom. 1. 17.) as Herod did John, tho' he feared him. And in the end they begin to slight his Threats, and so overcome Knowledge, going on in obeying the Lusts of their Hearts, let Conscience say what it will; and by how much the more they were overawed with it, so much the more they slight it now. But Knowledge in a regenerate Man hath an Interest in the whole Heart, even as it's a natural Prince; it hath the Hearts of the chiefest and the Strength of the Subjects, namely, of the Will and Affections, and and therefore tho it may be foil'd in a particular Combate, lose a Field or two, the Man carried Captive, yet Knowledg in him musters up its Forces again, having such a natural Interest in the House, as it rescues the Heart again; and therefore tho he be overcome in an act of sinning, yet he pitcheth another Battel, challengeth it into the Field again at new Weapons, Prayer and Confession, and never rests till it hath overcome Sin again, so as what it loseth at one time it recovers at another; if Sin overcome one way, Grace will overcome another, yea and still wins Ground, so as the Believer never continues to go on in a Sin, or is overcome of it.

Chap. 6.

3. Whereas it was said in the former Assertion, that a Godly Man might deliberately and presumptuously sin, when he is out of Passion; there are these two Differences, between his sinning, and that of a Man unregenerate.

(1.) Altho a Godly Man may break a particular Commandment again and again against Knowledg, yet his Knowledg never suffers him to go on so far as to venture knowingly to break the Covenant of Grace with God, and to depart from him; when he hath gone on so far in a Sin, as he comes to apprehend he must break with God, and lose him, if he goes on any further, this Apprehension stays him, stops and brings him back again; he may presumptuously venture (tho seldom and always to his Cost) to commit an Act of Sin against Knowledg, because he may withal think, that by one Act the Covenant is not broken, nor all Friendship and Love hazarded between God and him, nor his Interest in the State of Grace nor God quite lost by it, tho he may well think he would be displeas'd with him: but if he should begin to allow himself in it, and to continue to go on again and again in it, then he knows the Covenant would be broken, it cannot stand with Grace; and when this Apprehension comes, and comes in strongly, he cannot sin against it, for this were to cast away the Lord, and to depart wickedly from him, now so he doth not. So David tho he sinned highly and presumptuously, yet, says he, Psal. 18. 21. I have not departed wickedly from my God; that is, I have not so far departed from him, as tho I apprehended I should utterly lose my Interest in him, yet I would go on. No, for he is my God, there lies the Consideration that kept him from departing from him; so Psal. 44. 17. We have not dealt falsely in thy Covenant, says the Church there. Many Acts of displeasing him may pass and be ventured; but if the Holy Soul thinks that the Covenant lay at stake, that God and he must utterly part and break off, thus far he will never go. And hence it comes to pass, that a Christian finds it often harder to deny himself in small matters, than in the great Trials and Turnings of his Life: for usually in great Trials a Man looks upon them as Passages appointed of God on purpose to try him; and if he should fail him then, he thinks he should lose him quite, never look him in the Face more, nor be owned by him: and in these Cases, and when such Apprehensions are set on, the Heart sticks close to God, and returns from sinning, for God hath put his Fear in their Hearts that they should not depart from him, Jer. 32. 40. But now a wicked man lying in a Course of sinning, and being in the pursuit of his Sin, altho he apprehends he loseth God thereby by going so far and longer in it, and breaks quite with him, yet he will venture to go on still, as those that defer their Repentance do, and such others; as Esau when he sold his Birthright, wherein he is made a Type of such. So also Saul did, he knew God would cast him off, if he destroyed not all the Amalekites, yet for fear of the People he ventured to spare the best of them, 1 Sam. 15. and rejected the Word of the Lord, and cast God away by that Act. And so many when they have gone so far in an Estate of sinning, that they apprehend and are convinced that they are in a damnable condition, yet venture still as securely to go on as ever; these sin against the very Covenant and the Terms of it, break the very fundamental Condition of it: but this no Godly Man, apprehending or knowing it, can do, nor be false in the fundamental

Book IV
 Parts of the Covenant, for such a Violation of it would shut Men out of the State of Grace, for it is not compatible to it. As God keeps the Believer from doing so, so his Knowledg and Fear doth, as Jeremiah says, Jer. 32. 40. A Wife that is loving may venture sometimes to do many things she knows displeasing to her Husband; but if she should apprehend he would certainly divorce her and cast her off, she would not venture on them, she would not lose her Husband. Now to continue in any Sin a Godly Man knows would break the Covenant, and cause an utter Divorce, this the Fear of God in his Heart, and the Knowledg of the Goodness of God, and of his Interest in him, as the Church reasoneth, Hosea 2. 7. will not suffer him to do. So also for the Performance of a Duty, tho a Godly Man may neglect to perform it, and that long, against his Conscience (tho it is dangerous so to do) yet herein he acts as a Man that hath a Bond in a Friend's Hand, and may neglect such a Day of Payment, because he may hope to excuse it and humble himself; but in the end when he shall come to apprehend, that if he takes not some Order about it, his Bond will be sued, all his Estate of Grace mortgaged, an Execution come out; when this is served upon his Conscience, this rouseth a Godly Man; when an unregenerate Man will go on for all this, as Deferrers of Repentance do.

(2.) Tho a Godly Man may deliberately commit a particular Sin against his Knowledg, and therein despise the Commandment of God, that is, make bold with it for that Act (as David did, which is most fearful) 2 Sam. 12. 9. yet he doth not reject or cast away the Commandment, which he thus knows, so as to forsake or renounce Obedience to it as to a Commandment, which he cannot nor will not bring his Heart to be subject unto, as a wicked Man in some one Commandment or other usually doth. So Saul is said to do, 2 Sam. 15. 23. Thou hast rejected the Word of the Lord, and therefore God hath rejected thee from being King; because he cast off the Government of the Commandment, and would no longer be subject to God, therefore God took away his Government over others. He stood out as an Outlaw and a Rebel in that Act, and so the word intimates in that same Verse, for his Act is call'd Rebellion and Stubbornness. Now tho David made bold with the Commandment, and did so much despise it, yet he stood not out as an Outlaw, as one that would not come in to obey it, or that rejected it. A Subject may presume in a particular Act to transgress a Law, and so David did, but yet intends not to shake off the Yoke of Obedience in any thing to his Prince, becomes not a Rebel, an Outlaw to any Commandment, as every Wicked Man doth in regard of some Command or other. Tho Wicked Men know that the Sabbath ought to be kept strictly, they will not only in Particulars make bold with it (which is a high kind of sinning) but their Hearts cannot be subject to it, yea will not, and so stand as Outlaws; they say in their Hearts, This Man shall not reign over us; such a Commandment they will not be subject unto, and so go on from day to day, not despising it only but rejecting it, as the Jews did Christ for being King. So also did they, Luke 7. 30. who are said to reject the Counsel of God within themselves; they knew they ought to subject themselves to John's Doctrine and be baptized, but they scorned to seem to follow a poor Man. And so in the 50th Psalm, the Hypocrite is said there, tho he knows God's Will (for he takes it into his Mouth) yet to cast the Law behind his Back. Now when a thing is cast behind a Man's Back, he hath no more an eye to it, but leaves it behind him; but a Godly Man, tho in a particular Act he passeth by the Law, yet he sets it before him, looks to it as a Mariner to the Loadstone to sail by it, he turns not his Back on it: But (as Paul did, Phil. 3. 14.) he sets this Mark before him, and aims at it in a course of constant Obedience. Whereas those did the contrary, of whom the the Prophet speaks, Jer. 5. 5. These (saith he) have broke the Bands and the Yoke. Every Commandment which a Man knows, becomes a Bond to tie him to God, and as a Yoke to keep him in his Compass and Rank, and bring him into Subjection. Now a Wicked Man breaks the Bonds and Yoke in pieces, will not be subject to some Commandment or other; but a Godly Man, tho he may go astray against his Knowledg, and run away, yet still he hath the Yoke about his Neck, he hath a Resolution and Heart still to be subject, and doth not break the Bond in pieces, and give himself a Liberty and Allowance to be free from any Commandment, tho sometimes he make escapes: as an Apprentice, tho he breaks the Conditions, yet tears not the Indentures as a Wicked Man doth.

USE 1. The first Use is rais'd from the differences between a Godly Man's and an unregenerate Man's sinning against Knowledg. Which is to exhort you to examine your selves by them, my Brethren; all here have some Knowledg, all know some Sins and some Duties. Go and examine how thy Heart carries thy self to thy Knowledg: It is a short way to convince Men by, used by the Apostle in Rom. 1. for tho the Gentiles had lived according to Knowledg, it would not have saved them; yet it might negatively demonstrate their Estate naught. Dost thou not desire to grow in Knowledg, to the end thou mayst know how to glorify God more? And as thou dost grow, dost thou not still desire to bring thy Practice answerable to it, and to run the faster, the further off thy Practice is from what thou knowest thou shouldst do? It is well with thee. But dost thou rest a in pitch and course of Duties, and say, This is enough to save me, and what needs more? Thy Estate is naught then. Hast thou not a care to keep thy Heart even with thy Knowledg, to make it perfect, when thou prayest and receivest the Sacraments? Hidest thou not thine Eyes from any Command, as it is said they in the Prophet did from the Sabbath? And when thou knowest it, dost thou not rest till thy Heart be loosned from thy Sin, and made subject to all Duty, to pray, read the Word, and sanctify Sabbaths, and to examine thy Heart, to confer holily? &c. Thy Heart is naught, if thou dost not and wilt not be found perfect before God. Art thou afraid of any Truth, and sorry that it is a Truth, when thou knowest it, because it crosseth thy Lust? Art not glad of that busy Light that is in thee? but dost thou wish thy self rid of it? Art thou overcome of any Sin, and tho thou knowest it to be a Sin, yet in the end goest on and allowest thy self in it, let Conscience say what it will? Hast thou a Heart can defer Repentance when thou art persuaded thy Estate is naught, and go on in sinning when thou seest thou must lose God if thou dost? thy Heart is naught then. Dost thou reject any Commandment, and daily walk, as if there were no such thing to be minded by thee, as if it were not to be put into thy Memorandum to have a care of? Dost thou pass Sabbaths thus, and Praying-times over thus? thy Heart is false with God then. My Brethren, believe it, at the latter Day the first Course God will take in his Order of convincing, and condemning Men, will be to reckon and account what Knowledg they had, and so then to examine how they walk'd accordingly. Rom. 2. Those without the Law shall be judged without it, for it will afford matter of Conviction sufficient to take what Sins they knew to be Sins, and yet finned in them: And therefore in the first Chapter of the Epistle to the Romans, the Apostle goes no further, but instanceth in such Sins as natural Light taught them. Do thou so of what thou knowest, and see how thou answerest that Knowledg.

Book IV.

And as for you that are Professors, and know more, I here charge you, either leave professing to know God, leave noting Sermons, and repeating them, or else make your Hearts perfect, and your Lives answerable: For St. John says plainly, He that says he knows God, and keeps not his Commandments, is a Liar, 1 John 2. 4. an Hypocrite. Wherein lies the Power of Religion, but in ruling and moulding the Heart to what you know?

U S E 2. Tho a regenerate Man may sin so far against Knowledge, yet this is not to encourage any to go so far, and presume they may still be in the State of Grace. No, but as the Apostle says, These things we write to you, that you sin not. Nor do I speak these things so to you, that you may be discouraged, presently to think all is naught, and to call all into question. I would have such as would presume on what hath been said, not to make so bad a use of so true a Doctrine, but consider the heinousness of sinning against Knowledge, and withal the fearful Consequences of making bold with the Commandments of God. A Sin of Knowledge will stop thy Mouth both to God and Man. When thou goest to pray to God, it will clap a Lock upon thy Heart and Lips; so it did on David's, as appears from Psalms 51. where after that great Sin, he prays to God to open his Lips, for that they had been sealed up: Besides, it will cause God to give thee up to Terrors, to lose the Comfort of all thy Grace. And as thou sinnest against Knowledge, so Knowledge and the Guilt of thy Sin shall fight against thee; and tho he will not give thee up to thy Lusts, as he gave up these Gentiles, and to a reprobate Mind, for thou art his Child; yet he will give thee up to a terrified Mind: And as seven Devils enter into one that falls after Knowledge that belongs not to God; so in thy proportion shall seven Devils be let loose to terrify thee: And as their latter End is worse than the beginning, so shall a worse Humiliation cease on thee than at thy first Conversion. If thou wilt go to the utmost of what is compatible with the State of Grace in sinning, God will answerably bring thee to the utmost Border of Hell, as far as thou canst go and not go in, to the depth of that Despair which may stand with Faith. This often he doth: yea happily he will shorten thy Life, cut thee off before thy time; for he that sins presumptuously, Numb. 15. 30, 31. should be cut off. And the Laws of Men not now taking notice of thee, God will cut thee off, at least in thy Apprehension, from the Number of his People; thy own Thoughts and Speeches shall excommunicate thee, thou shalt lie roaring and cry out, thou art none of his. Therefore take heed of doing any thing presumptuously by what hath been said, but make this use of it, that if in time past thou hast thus sinned, and art therefore now in the Dungeon, and so thinkest because thou didst sin so grievously against Knowledge, that therefore thou wert never truly regenerate, to comfort thee, consider what hath been said.

U S E 3. Is it so heinous to sin against Knowledge? This should teach us to be valiant for the Truth, if evil times come. Those Truths which you are now assured of, flinch not from them: remember what St. Paul says to Timothy, 1 Tim. 6. 12, 13. Fight the good Fight of Faith, that thou hast professed before many Witnesses. And I give you Charge in the Sight of God, who is able to quicken you if you die for it, and of Jesus Christ who himself witnessed a good Confession before Pilate, and denied not what he knew was Truth, that you do so too; tho others will say with Pilate, What is Truth? and make a Jest of it: but never deny deny it. Be ye cast in Prison, the Truth will make you free, John 8. 32. and pay all thy Charges: and therefore do not thou imprison it, as the Gentiles; for the Children of God can do nothing against the Truth not heartily; they cannot deny it, and stand out denying it, as the Martyrs could not, it will break Prison-Doors; for when they had subscribed, they could not be quiet till they had torn out their Names again. We can do nothing against it, but for it all we can, 2 Cor. ult.

Chap. 7.

C H A P. VII.

The other Case resolved, Wherein the Sin against the Holy Ghost differs from other Sins against Knowledg.

THERE is yet another Case or Question to be answered concerning sinning against Knowledg, and that is, what difference may be between any other Sin against Knowledg, and that great Sin of all other only impardonable, which is in an especial manner called a Sin after receiving the Truth, and after enlightning, Heb. Chap. 6. & 10. And this is necessary to speak a little of, for it is homogeneal to this Head, it being an essential Ingredient into that Sin, and a necessary Circumstance of it, that it is against the greatest Light; and so the Apostle in both Places expresseth it, as also because many poor Souls that sin after Enlightnings, or have fallen off from the Practice of what they have professed, think therefore they have sinned that Sin, because against so much clear and tasting Knowledg: And indeed there is no Man almost, that hath been enlightened, but those Places have had a Blow at him, or may come to have. Now therefore as I have given you differences between a regenerate Man's sinning against Knowledg, and an Unregenerate Man's, so I will also between ordinary Unregenerate Mens sinning against Knowledg and this, there being a Peculiarity in it: for it is not simply sinning against and after tasting Knowledg, for then the Saints should sin it, Solomon and David had done it: nor the resisting of the Spirit in the Motions of it; for then they, Isa. 63. 10. who were God's People, should be guilty of it: nor is it simply hating the Light as contrary to our Lusts, for then every one that doth evil should be guilty of it, as John 3. 18, 19. nor hating God as he is considered a Judg, commanding such strict Laws, for so the Gentiles should have sinned it, who never knew the Gospel (Rom. 1. 30.) and then every Unregenerate Man, whose Mind is Enmity to God and his Law, Rom. 8. 17. should be guilty of it: no, nor is it speaking evil of, or injuring those we know to be Saints, for then Manasses should have sinned it, who slew the Prophets, and filled Jerusalem with Blood, who yet was brought up well; for Hezekiah being a Godly Man, surely had him instructed, and he was twelve Years old e'er he died: and at 2 Chron. 33. 10. it is said, the Lord spake to him, so as he had notice of all. And also Herod had sinned it who put John to Death, whom he revered and knew to be a Holy Man: But yet he did not sin the Sin against the Holy Ghost, for he was sorrowful. Therefore to clear this to you:

First, It is not sinning against any kind of Knowledg of things in the Word, that makes this Sin, for it is not sinning against the Knowledg of the Book IV. the Law, to commit Adultery, or blaspheme God against Knowledge, which is this Sin; for Heb. 10. 28. the Apostle makes it a further kind of sinning than despising any part of the Law: yet to despise the Law was to sin presumptuously, and to reproach the Lord therein, Numb. 15. 30, 31. and is opposed to sinning ignorantly: And Christ says, every Blasphemy shall be forgiven but this. But it is a sinning against the Light of things revealed in the Gospel, the Light of the Offer of Grace, of the Spirit accompanying that Light, with tasting of the Goodness of that Offer; so Heb. 6. Heb. 10. 29. and against the Work of the Spirit in themselves and others; and it is not γνωσις only, but ἐπιγνωσις, a Conviction and Evidence wrought of the Truth and Goodness of them.

Secondly, It is not every kind of despising the Truths of the Gospel, but such as is accompany'd with a despiteful causeless Contempt of 'em, and Indignation against them. It is not the undervaluing of the Offer of Grace to the Pleasures of Sin; so the young Man did, who yet was sorrowful. So many do who defer their Repentance, prefer their Lusts to Christ and Mercy, who yet are converted after; for this Contempt is but because they cannot enjoy Christ and their Lusts; if they could have him with their Lusts, they would: 'tis but comparatively they thus contemn it, joined with some Esteem of it and Desire after it. But this Sin includes in it a simple Contempt; therefore the Holy Ghost expresseth it, by trampling underfoot Christ's Blood, and esteeming it as a common thing: If they had a Cup full of his Blood, they would pour it on the Ground, not only preferring other things before it, but trampling it as Mire and Dirt, as the Jews did Christ, saying that he was a Devil, yet knowing him to be the Messiah, (as appears Mark 3. 28. Christ speaking of that Sin) debasing it in their Esteem, and so also doing despite or contumely, as the word signifies, to the Spirit of Grace; contemning, not resisting only, his Work in themselves or others; not opposing the Saints only, but having no reverence of them.

Thirdly, Their Hatred to God and Christ, and the Light and Work of the Spirit, and his Saints, is a revengeful Hatred, therefore called a crucifying of Christ again, and doing despite to the Spirit: for you must know there may be a twofold Hatred of God and Christ, and the Saints; one primary, direct, and hating them as such; another secondary, occasioned and stirred up, because they are crossed by these and vexed by them: as Abab hated Micaiab, not as a Prophet, but because he said contrary to what he would have had him; and so Herod against John Baptist, because he preached against his Lust, it was not as he was a Holy Man, not sub eo Nomine.

Now all unregenerate Men may come thus to hate God secondarily, and indirectly, because they look on him as a Judge, and to hate the Saints because their Light reproves them and vexeth their Consciences, and they cannot be quiet for them; for it is in Hatred as in Love. And as a Wicked Man may love a Godly Man, yet not as Godly, but for some Amiability and Profitableness by his Godliness to him, as Darius loved Daniel, Pharaoh loved Joseph, and Achish loved David, for the Usefulness and Benefit they had by their Grace: So Wicked Men hate Grace also, and they generally do it as being contrary to their Lusts, and therefore speak evil of the Saints: But now this revengeful Hatred which is bounded primarily against the Person of God and Christ, this causeless Hatred (as Christ expresseth this Sin, John 15. 24, 25.) seeing and hating causelessly all the Saints, he knows such, in relation to the Covenant of Grace established with them, because they are Saints and God's Children, this may seem to be the Form of this Sin; therefore they are said to crucify again to themselves the Lord Christ; for were it in their Power they would do it; and that which is the Devil's Master Lust is theirs also, John 8. 44. His Lusts ye will do, says Christ, speaking of the Pharisees, who desired to kill him out of a revengeful Disposition, and so they sinned this Sin. It was a revengeful Hatred set them awork, and thus they also are guilty of this Sin against the Holy Ghost, who do despite to the Spirit of Grace, Heb. 10. 28. and so against all Saints as Saints: for seeing they cannot be revenged on God, they persecute them; and so these love Sin, not only secondarily for the Pleasures that come in with it, but as Sin, because it provokes God, because they know it will anger him; which Revenge is made their Bosom-Lust, and all resolved into it, and is stirred up in them, by reason they apprehend God to have cast them off; therefore they are said to have εὐδοχῆν κρισεως, to receive Judgment, Heb. 10. 27. whereas others standing in Terms of Treaty for Grace with God, have not this revengeful Disposition stirred up in them, but those other malicious Sinners are desperate.

Chap. 7.

F I N I S.

A

DISCOURSE

Of the three feveral Ages which Christians do run through,

In their Course of

FAITH

AND OBEDIENCE.

1 John II. 13, 14.

Ver. 13. I write unto you, Fathers, because ye have known him that is from the Beginning: I write unto you, Young Men, because ye have overcome the wicked One: I write unto you, Little Children, because ye have known the Father.

Ver. 14. I have written unto you, Fathers, because ye have known him that is from the Beginning: I have written unto you, Young Men, because ye are strong, and the Word of God abideth in you; and ye have overcome the wicked one.

C H A P. I.

The Design of the Apostle in the Text explain'd. The Characters of the several Ages of Christians are drawn from what is found as an excellency in each of these Ages in Mens Natural Life.

THIS holy Apostle, who had an advantage for Holiness in this Life above many of his Fellow-Apostles, in that he liv'd the longest of them, and so to grow up therein; and in the Course of his Life had run through all the several Ages or Seasons that any Christians do pass through; and having had experience in other Christians of what was eminent in, and proper unto each Age of Men in Christ; writes distinctly unto all sorts accordingly, and sets down what Eminency in things Spiritual, and therewithal what Duties belong'd unto these several Ages.

Chap. 1.

These Ages in Christ he divides into three, according to what Nature divides them into; tho' the Custom of Speech speaks four.

1. Fathers in Christ.
2. Men grown up; which is translated Young Men.
3. Babes, or new Converts, not yet grown up; but true Believers all.

But this must be notic'd by the way, for the right apprehension of these three Ranks or Classes of Christians (which hath to our English Readers occasion'd a confounding of what the Apostle intended should be differenced) The word Little Children, twice so render'd in ver. 13, and 14. by the Translators, seems as if Little Children in the 12th verse were the same with Little Children spoken of in ver. 13. whereas the Words in the Greek differ: τεννία Little Children in ver. 12. is Filioli, or little Sons; but παιδα Babes or Infants, in ver. 13. is another word. The first, τεννία, ver. 12. is the common Appellation of Saints in this Life, involving the whole Church, both Fathers, Young Men, Babes and all. Our Lord himself first us'd that word Little Children of and to his Apostles, John 15. 33. and Chap. 21. 5. for they are all Sons, as Gal. 3. 26. and but little Children all of them whilst in this Life, in comparison unto what in the other World they shall be; unto their elder Brethren in Heaven made perfect. See 1 Cor. 13. 10, 11. When that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away. When I was a Child, I spake as a Child, I understood as a Child, I thought as a Child; but when I became a Man, I put away childish things, &c. But in the 13th Verse our Apostle John distributeth those Little Children that are Christians, into three sorts, express'd by three Ages in Christ, and terms the new converted ones Infants or Babes; which are but one rank or sort, distinguish'd from Fathers and Young Men.

So that this first, this Title of Little Children, ver. 12. denotes the whole Church on Earth jointly and in common; the second in ver. 13. the whole Church distributively cast into three Ranges. In that first he mentions a Privilege common to all three; namely, That their Sins are forgiven them, in the Name of Christ. As also Eph. 4. 3. This belongs to them all first and last; even Babes have all their Sins forgiven at first, as the Colossians from their first Conversion, Colos. 3. As the Title Sons or Children is common, so is this Benefit of Forgiveness.

This I pass, and handle not.

The three several Ages are my Subject.

By which the Ages of Christians, according to their Years as Men, are not so strictly and chiefly intended: For if the Discrimination be meant according to Nature, that is, their Ages as they are Men, then very Infants, that are sanctified, should be intended; but not so: for it is those only that were capable of understanding this Epistle, written by John; or else it were frustrate to have said, he wrote unto such Babes: therefore he means not Infants according to the Course of Nature. And besides, it may and doth fall out, that some old Men may be Babes in Christ, that is, New Converts; and that Christians long converted who should (for the time) be, as the Apostle says to the Hebrews, of a full Age, yet continue to be Babes in Christ, Heb. 5. 12, 13, 14. Tho' then they are even old Men, as Men; and if they be in Christ, are to be treated and reverenc'd by all others as Fathers, 1 Tim. 5. 1, 2. because old Age is found in the way of Righteousness in them, as Prov. 16. 31. But these are not the Fathers that are here meant by John.

So that these sorts of Ages are three degrees in Christianity, or in Christ; sorted by their Stature in Christ. There is a Stature in Christ spoken of, Ephes. 4. 14. and these three are the Degrees unto that Stature: And therefore the Apostle is principally to be understood of what several Ages Christians are of as they are grown up into Christ, according as their measure is of the true saving Knowledge in them of Christ: For according to that measure we find their Ages computed. Thus the Corinthians, whom the Apostle calls Babes, and adds, in Christ, 1 Cor. 3. 1. to shew how he meant it, namely as they were in Christ; for otherwise as Men they were grown up in Years, yea and had been some years converted; and suitably as he says these Babes in Christ, so you may add the same here to and of these whom our Apostle speaks of, and say, to you Fathers in Christ, old Disciples, cles, as in the Acts, of much standing and long Experience: and in like manner, young Men in Christ, and Babes in Christ.

My Scope in handling these is to shew the peculiar Appropriation that belongs to each Age, which here the Apostle schematizeth them in; to the end that you may have some help to discern what Age you are of in Christ: many are to seek as to the knowledg of their Age in Christ. My Scope is also to direct what each sort should aim at, and apply themselves to seek for at God's hands; that they computing the time they reckon upon for their having been in Christ (tho the exact time many know not) yet by several workings may guess at, and have liv'd such or so many years in having had such workings on them, so as for the time they might well be out of their Babeship; they may see what for the time they ought to have attain'd, and seeing themselves to fall short, to humble themselves accordingly: perhaps when old in Years, yet Babes in Christ still. 'Tis a great part of Wisdom to know the Times, so in Esther; and Christ speaks of discerning the Times: but this is more, to know what the seasons that our particular Persons are under, to the end to provoke us still to forget what is behind, and to seek further.

I come now to open these three Characters of the three several Ages in particular.

Towards the understanding the Difference of these Characters in particular;

First, some Cautions are to be premis'd, to prevent a misunderstanding either of the Apostle's or my Intent.

1. The first and principal one, and which is to be remember'd and taken all along, both as a note and guide of Interpretation, and finding out the Apostle's Scope, and to prevent mistaking in judging our selves or others, is, that in designing forth these special Characters or Notes to these several Ages, his meaning is not as if what is attributed singly, were appropriated to the Ages mention'd, in such a manner, as that the same are not at all to be found in the other two. For instance, 'tis the Character of Babes, to know the Father; this is not to be understood as if that old Christians did not also continue to know the Father. The like of that other of middle-ag'd Christians, as if they only were strong, and as if they only did overcome that wicked one. No; for that Knowledg of the Father that is in Babes, may be and is continued in them when grown up to be Young Men; and grows up in Fathers to a higher degree than in either. And in like manner, spiritual Strength to overcome is continued also, yea and increas'd in old Christians. We see that Love of the Father, and so the Knowledg of him, is common to Christians of all Ages, Ver. 15. If any Man love the World, the Love of the Father is not in him: that is, he is not a Christian. Likewise, whereas young Men are said to have overcome Satan, that is, his Tentations; noting also, how that Age is incident to them: Yet Babes also have their Tentations to Sin, and sometimes are enabled to overcome; they have their Deliverances and Victories; and Babes and Sucklings have Strength to still the Enemy and the Avenger, Psal. 8. which Christ applies to the little Children that cry'd Hosanna. So as it is not the meaning, that any of these Attributes are so peculiar to any of these sorts; but that there may be found the same in some degree in each other: but his Design is to set forth what is more singular in every of these Ages, what more eminent.

Again, these three appropriated Notes are to be understood with a potius, with a Rather: As that Babes do at that Age rather apply themselves to pursue after, and are fond of the Father and his Love; and so of the rest in theirs.

Again, nor as if when they were Babes, they had only this Grace of knowing the Father, and not of him that was from the beginning. New-born Babes, says Peter, 1 Epist. 2. 1, 2, 3. have tasted that the Lord is gracious: and that Lord there meant is Christ, as it follows Ver. 4. To whom coming, as to a living Stone, chosen of God, and precious: 'tis Christ he speaks of.

Moreover, when I say, what is more eminent in any Age, I speak it not comparatively to the other two, as if the other two had less of the Love of the Father, as they grow to be young Men or middle-ag'd Christians, than when they are Babes; but 'tis specially in comparison of all other Spiritual Excellencies in themselves, at that Age that this special Character, that is appropriated thereto, Chap. I. is found eminere, and to abound in the practice of it. As for instance, Babes (which are the lowest) have their Victories as well as young Men, and the Knowledg of Christ who was from the beginning, as Fathers are said to have: yet if you would know what their Hearts and Affections are taken up with most, it is the fatherly Mercy of God; to cry Abba Father to him, and to seek of him as such the Pardon of their Sins; and perhaps also further, to have the Apprehension of the Love of the Father, in his Love and Design in sending his Son to be a Propitiation for Sins (which in the fourth Chapter is treated of) so that this Comparison is (not more or above the other two, but) in respect of other Spiritual Workings of Heart in themselves, and which is often more stirring than any other.

Again, the meaning is negatively, that in comparison to those other two, Babes have not yet attain'd to the Excellency of the other two, that is, they are not grown up to that Strength, as to go thorough those Conflicts and Tentations that young Men are exercis'd withal, nor to know Christ in that manner which Fathers have attain'd unto.

Again, it may also be that not simply what their Hearts do most abound in at that Age, more than in any other Age; but what is the top Excellency which at that Age they arrive at, in comparison to whatever else is in them; and so to the Excellency of the thing it self at that Age, he aims to set forth. The Thoughts of Babes may perhaps be exercis'd more about Humiliation for Sin, or the like; yet this of knowing the Father is the top Excellency of any other Exercise of Grace they have in them.

Again, there is to be an allowance given to the Liberty which God's free Grace, in his various Dealings with his Children, is pleas'd to reserve to himself, and doth take and will take, according to his good Pleasure; and his free Grace will not be bound to such accessory Rules as are not simply essential to our being Christians, nor of the Essence of that Being, in the State of Grace, and concern the bene esse, the well being of them only; but his special Grace will break in, where and how it pleaseth him. Some are begotten strong Men in Christ (which is the Property of the young Men here) as Paul was from the first. He can ripen his Corn soon, for his gathering them into his Floor; as is seen in many Converts, who shoot up to a strange degree and stature of Holiness and Communion with the Father and Son, when God means to take them to Heaven to himself. Enoch attain'd to a higher Strain of Perfection in three hundred Years, than his Fellow-Patriarchs in nine hundred: it is therefore what in the ordinary Course of God's Dispensations falls out, plerumque, and for the most part. And to shew in what seasons Saints converted grow up into; there are several Seasons, for Buds to shoot forth in one Month, then Blossoms in another, &c.

Lastly, these Characters, altho they belong not simply unto Christians, according to their Ages as Men, in this World (as was said) but to their degrees of Stature in Christ; yet the Characters are borrowed from, and assimilated unto what is found as an Excellency in each of these Ages, in Mens natural Life; and not without a great Elegancy transfer'd to the like falling out, in these Ages in Christ.

1. Wisdom and experimental Knowledg and Remembrance of things long since past, is that which old Men delight in, and is eminent in Men wise; answering to which is, Fathers, you have known him who is from the Beginning.

2. The Glory of young Men, and Men grown up, is their Strength; Prov. 20. 29. The Glory of young Men is their Strength; Wrestlings and Victories: answerable to which is, Young Men, you are strong, and have overcome that wicked one.

3. Infants, they rejoice in the sight and presence of their Fathers and Parents, and in their talking of them; answerably, Babes you have known the Father.

A second thing to be premis'd, is an account touching my Method in handling these Characters, because I shall not keep to the Order the Apostle hath set them in; which we see is Fathers first, and the Condition of young Men or middle-ag'd Christians

Christians in the middle, and Babes last; he proceeding and keeping to the Order of Time, and the due Honour to be given, as to Fathers first. But my aim in handling them being only to set out the just difference of the distinct Characters appropriated here to them; especially between those two of Babes and Fathers; whose Character in common is to know, and have Communion with one of these two Persons; but distinguish'd by some special Acquaintance, with the Father the one, or with Christ the other: Whereas in his mention of the middle-ag'd, he doth not at all speak of their Communion with either of these two Persons (tho it is to be suppos'd such a Communion with each is, in the measure of their Age in Christianity, found in them also) but their Character carries us only to consider their Conflicts with Sin and Satan, and their Overcomings, to set them forth by. Hence I judg it meet, as to my now mention'd purpose, to link the handling the Characters of those two, Babes and Fathers, together; finding it also to be the fairest and best way to come to discern the difference between them, in respect to the difference of their Communion; whilst we view and compare them together: The Knowledg of, and Communion with the Father in the one; and of and with Christ by the other. And then after this Dispatch to treat apart, and singly by it self, that of middle-ag'd Christians last, but these other two first.

And thirdly, because a Fellowship and Communion with one of these Persons, in a more eminent manner, is the difference the Apostle intendeth, when he says, Babes know the Father, and Fathers Christ; I shall therefore inlarge my Discourse, and take into my Method the point of Communion with these Persons, not in the Latitude thereof; but especially the point of Inequality of Communion with these Persons (which is apparent from the Instances of these two Ages in the Text) which Christians may, and do often meet withal in successive times of their Lives (and not only at those two Ages) sometimes to be more with one Person, sometimes with the other; as God is pleas'd to dispense it. And then in the end to give a more special account how, and why Babes know the Father, and Fathers Christ. The whole of what concerns these things, to which I limit my self, I shall proceed to prove by God's Grace, and explain by these gradual Approaches, fetcht from out of the third and fourth Verses of Chap. 1. compar'd with the Words of this 13th Ver. of Chap. 21.

C H A P. II.

Of Communion with the two Persons of the Godhead, Father and Son; and how a Believer in his several Ages hath suitably Communion sometimes more with the one, sometimes more with the other.

IN successive times of a Christian's Course he doth come to have more eminent Communion with one of the Persons, than with the other; as with the Father more than with Christ, or with Christ more than the Father, in Vicissitudes. This shall be treated and explain'd in several gradual Proposals, with the Reasons and Uses thereof.

That which is common to both these Ages of Christians is to have known either, or both of these Persons: and to know, is not a literal doctrinal Knowledg only, that floats aloft in the Understanding, and rests there; but which takes and overcomes the Heart: Prov. 2. 10. When Wisdom enters into thine Heart. And is that Knowledg which the Apostle calls the Excellency of the Knowledg of Christ, Philip. 3. 10. And in our John here, ch. 4. 7, 8. 'tis a Knowledg wrought by Regeneration and being born again; Every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God: and ver. 8. He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is Love: and Chap. 3. 6. Whoever sinneth (whose whole Heart is in some Sin or other) hath not seen him, nor known him. So as to know either the Father or the Son, is to have our dearest Affections and Desires after, our Love to, Delights and Rejoicings drawn forth to them; to have Faith on them, They that know thy Name,
* will

Chap. 2. will trust in thee, Psal. 9. 10. to have the multitude of our Thoughts running still upon them; How precious are thy Thoughts to me! So David, I am continually with thee. Also 'tis to have our wonted special Recourse unto that Person we know, in all Wants and Needs; John 4. 10. Jesus answered, and said to her, If thou knewest the Gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, give me to drink, thou wouldest have ask'd of him, and he would have given thee living Water. Also to hold an intimate Converse, Communion, familiar Fellowship with these Persons, in our Treatings with them about our Salvation, for the obtaining of it, upon those Considerations which are most proper to that Person, whom we treat withal about it: as either according to what his Person is, or his special Work and Hand in our Salvation is; according to what he hath done for us, and the Relations he bears to us of God as the Father, and Christ as the Mediator for us. Which latter in the former Chapter the Apostle had express'd in one Word, to have Fellowship; and that Fellowship mutual between us and them, [one with another, ver. 7.] For thereby he means not the Communion other Saints have one with another, as the fruit of that Fellowship with God; he is not speaking of that there at all: But it is a Communion of God with us, and of us with God; and of Christ with us, one with another. And of that he had spoken immediately before, ver. 3. and 6.

Obf. The Height and Prime of Christian Religion lies in Fellowship and Communion with the Persons of God the Father and Christ. This the Apostle openly professeth to have been the Top of his own, and his Fellow-Apostles Religion; for in their Names he speaks it, and commends it to us, in saying, Truly our Fellowship is with the Father and the Son. And therewith (as their Religion) commends it to all Christians, to the end of the World. In that Word [our] Fellowship, he speaks of themselves, the Apostles; who also were those [we] who have heard, &c. ver. 1, 2. And certainly what was the Top of the Apostle's Religion, must be accounted the Height of our Christianity in this Life. And therefore the Apostle also proposeth it at the beginning of his Epistle, as the ultimate Scope thereof; and thereby to draw on all sorts of Believers to make it their Mark also, and to bring them to such Fellowship as themselves had.

The Height of Popish Religion, and of many others also, is to converse with Maxims and Articles of Faith: and take we the soundest of those Truths they profess, yet their Faith of them is but a Fellowship as with so many Propositions Theological; with a general Knowledg of, and Assent to them. And this Faith they set up instead of Faith justifying; which first draws our Souls unto a Communion with the Person of Christ, and to the Father, and to seek his Grace and Face through Christ, to justify us, as Persons that are in our selves ungodly. This first brings us into Fellowship with the Father. This Faith is the first occasion of, and begins our Acquaintance with either of them. But that other general Faith is that which they cry up as the Catholick Faith, as they call it; without drawing our Hearts unto the Persons themselves, and our applying our selves to both or either; leaves us without intimate Acquaintance with them at all: which that justifying Faith, as we teach it, doth; and it is the Nature and Property of it so to do. But to believe on the Pope, and on the Church as the Judg, and formal ground of all their Faith, which they term believing as the Church believes; and so they finally issue in Fellowship with the Pope as their Head. And the utmost end they have of exacting this kind of general Faith, is to bring Men into, and retain them to hold Communion (forsooth) with their Church: and that's the main they drive at.

And then in their Worship also, whom have they Communion with, but Saints departed? whom they pray to more than to Christ, or the Father: and in Prayer is exercis'd our highest Communion; and theirs with God and Christ is convey'd mediately through them. And which falls lower yet, this Communion in this Worship is with the Images of those Saints; and accordingly they have but a dead lifeless Communion: for their Images are dead, and their Worship of them is like unto them; and at best but the Image of what is true Worship, and Fellowship with the Person of the Father and the Son.

Others ask them their Religion; they declare it to be a Belief of what the Scriptures say to be true, and to give assent to them (which we do also, and receive with all acceptation all the Sayings and Truths deliver'd in the Word of God) as to believe that there is a God; That Christ is the Saviour of the World, and died to save Sinners: And unto which general Faith they add a Devotion (which is in all naturally towards a Deity) out of which they worship him; having this good hap, to be cast upon the true God and Christ, as the Objects of that Devotion. And then they stir up the Principles of Vertue that are in them naturally, edg'd by Gospel-Motives of Heaven and Hell; which, with the Aids of the Spirit assisting these Principles in the Will, is the whole of their Religion. But to have personal Communion with the Father and Christ, and to keep such ado about getting Christ, and to hold and preserve Communion with God the Father and Christ, and to make them the great Aim and Work of Faith; this they think to be at least needless.

But let them and all the World know, that the Top and Summit of our Religion is to obtain, and then to retain and hold Fellowship with the Person of God the Father, and of Christ; and that hereunto we exercise our selves night and day: That tho the general Faith is our Faith also, and that we make use of that great Principle of Faith, as the great Engine, Instrument, and Means, whereby to have Communion with these Persons, and that to live in a Converse with them as Persons; yet our Faith rests not, can no way content it self with the Belief of the things, Truth or Propositions, tho about Christ and God the Father, or the Spirit; that is, those Divine Truths or Maxims about them. For our Communion is not with Propositions, but the Persons; and aspires and carries us still to come at, and to the Persons. We seek continually to have their Love manifested, their Hearts won to us; and behold the Glory of God in the Face and Person of Christ, as the Apostle speaks, Phil. 3. That I may win Christ. And have the Father and Christ made ours: They are our Rest; the Center of our Souls. We make use indeed of the Faith and Belief of the things or Truth aforesaid, to affect our Hearts to the Persons the more, whom they are spoken of; as that, it is God that justifieth, it is Christ that died: And therefore the Love of Christ constrains us, because we thus judg, that Christ died for us, who were all (in our selves) dead, and condemn'd to Death of Soul and Body: and this affects us, and draws forth Love out of us, to live to him that died for us. But the Objects that ultimately terminate our Faith, are the Persons of the Father and Christ themselves, to find and obtain their Loves to our Souls. They are not the things abstracted from Communion with their Persons that satisfy us, or which we live upon. Our Faith makes use of them as Helpers and Inducers, and the Bringers of our Souls to them; and then Soul and Person treat together: and we plead and urge those things spoken of them Persons in the Scripture, in our Treatings with them. But it is their Persons, and their Hearts or their Desires to be towards us, as the Spouse speaks in the Canticles; that we seek. Also we pray, and are conversant in all Ordinances of publick and private Worship, serving God night and day; we seek, we pour out our Souls, we repent, and turn from Sin, and set our selves to all known Duties: but these are not our Rest, no not in this Life. But all we do is in a tendency to arrive at an acceptable Access and Reception by those Persons, even before we come to Heaven; and thereby to keep up Communion with them, as holy Jude, ver. 20, 21. But ye, Beloved, building up your selves on your most holy Faith, praying in the Holy Ghost; keep your selves in the Love of God, looking for the Mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto Eternal Life. If God would send Angels down to us, or Mary the Mother of God to converse withal, whom the Papists make their greatest Object of Converse, and would not vouchsafe a gracious Intercourse with his Person, that would not satisfy our Hearts: Yea, if God should take us up to Heaven it self, and there are many glorious things and Privileges to be had there, Rest, Felicity, Joy, the best Company of all the Angels, and Spirits of Men made perfect; we profess that our Souls in the midst of the Enjoyment of all these, if looking about us we should not spie out Christ, and the Glory of the Father, we should cry out, O but where is Christ! we see not him yet: we should be at a loss

Chap. 2. loss for want of him. Col. 3. 1. Seek those things which are above : and so we profess to do ; but how ? Because Christ is there, to whom our Hearts run : Where Christ, says he, sits on the Right Hand of the Majesty on high. 'Tis he draws our Hearts upwards to the things above. And if he would continue (as now to our Faith) being hid in God, when we come thither, we should be damp : But if he appear once, who is our Life, our Hearts would live, and we should appear in Glory with him. All the things there would not content our Souls, were he not there ; Whom have I in Heaven but thee ? you know who said it. And not Christ only, but God also is the Object of our Aspiration, ver. 3. Your Life is hid with Christ in God. Even Christ's Life is in God, and therefore ours much more ; and to them by Faith we go for it, even to their Persons continually.

And our Apostle John puts the reason for this upon the very same account that Paul doth there in that Third of the Colossians. For having term'd Christ the Word of Life (ver. 1. and in ver. 2. that Eternal Life which was manifested, and who was with the Father ; that is, who himself had his Life in, and personal Converse with the Father, during all Eternity) hence therefore our Eternal Life also lies in Communion with these Persons of Father and Son : and therefore Christ in his last Prayer to his Father, to move him towards us, proposeth this as the summary End of that Errand, of his being sent by him into this World, John 17. 2, 3. As thou hast given him power over all Flesh, that he should give Eternal Life to as many as thou hast given him. And this is Life Eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. And this Life is not enjoyable only in that Life to come, but this Fellowship is begun and attain'd (for so it may be) in this Life, and hath a Fulness of Joy, as the Product of it ; ver. 4. And these things write we unto you, having of this Fellowship, that your Joy may be full. I say to be enjoyed in this Life ; for to that end it is he says he directeth them to these things, which he wrote whilst in this Life ; even whilst we walk with God here, as ver. 6. And our Apostle expressly says, Christ who is our Life, Col. 3. 4. And these Persons are always living, for us by Faith to have access unto, Eph. 2. 18. For through him we both have an access by one Spirit unto the Father. And we find them to be alive, and to give forth that Life to our Hearts, when we come and make our Addresses to them : and it is the Converse with their Persons, which puts Life into the Truths we believe ; as without which they would be but dead things to our Souls.

Let our Opposites content themselves with their general Faith, for Faith, and despise that Faith of Application and Recumbency, and cry up their moral Vertues, of which they boast, that they are the Principles and Seeds of gracious actings which are found in any ; and that the whole and main of their Salvation in this Life, is but the Restitution of them by Christ, unto that State of Holiness which Adam was created in : unto which by the Improvement of those vertuous Dispositions left in corrupt Nature, through an aid of the Holy Ghost, which is but external to the Soul, they hope by their own Endeavours, with imperfect steps, to attain unto. And in their Catechisms, let some of them give this account why they omitted consulto to have put in the Doctrine of the three Persons, because forsooth they wrote a practical Catechism ; as if the Notion of the three Persons influenceth not at all the Practice of a Christian. No, that is with them no part of their active Exercise, but a mere contemplative Speculation. Whereas we profess with the Apostle in this Epistle, that the Knowledg of and Communion with these Persons, is both that which is the ultimate End and Tendency of all the other part of our practic Religion ; as also which all along quickens and gives life to our Souls, in all that is of practice whatsoever ; and also into all other the Doctrines that are found in that our Religion. And observe but the Scope and Procedure of this Holy man in this Epistle, whose Method in our Religion and Practice we profess to follow. Now he proposeth this Fellowship as the supreme End of his writing, at the very beginning ; and therewith propounding the Doctrine of the Father and Son, against all Errors then extant, ch. 2. he then exhorts to Holiness, and keeping the Commandments, as the means to obtain, and keep our Souls in this Communion. We profess we can no longer enjoy this Fellowship with either Father or Son, than that thus we walk ; even as he thus thus expressly chap. 1. v. 6. affirmeth, If we say that we have Fellowship with him, Chap. 2. and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the Truth. And chap. 3. 3, 4, 5, 6. Hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his Commandments: He that saith I know him, and keepeth not his Commandments; is a Liar, and the Truth is not in him; but whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the Love of God perfected: hereby we know that we are in him. He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked. I need refer to no more Passages, for you meet with this Doctrine of his up and down the whole Epistle: and this is the Order and Method of the Practice which we profess in our Religion.

I only add, to the end none may be discourag'd, that Christians either enjoy this Communion, or have their Spirits restlessly carry'd on to seek it, and cannot sit down quiet short of it; and so are of that Generation that seek his Face, as Psal. 27. 8. which must necessarily proceed from God the Father's or Christ's having first made himself known to them: and so it is affirm'd, God (first) said, Seek ye my Face, and my Heart said, I will seek thy Face, Psal. 27. 8. And the constant seeking of Communion with him is sanctified effectually to cause such Souls to keep his Commandments, as well as to rejoice in the sensible Enjoyment of that Communion.

Obs. It is a Property common to all the Saints, to have had from the first some knowledg. of, and to hold and maintain some Fellowship, in some measure and degree, with both these two Persons, God the Father, and the Son. This is in common to all more or less, plainly or obscurely, either implicitly or explicitly; therefore John in this Epistle is not only peremptory that those who shall deny the one of them, doth consequently deny the other, ch. 2. 23. Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father; but on the positive too, ch. 4. 15. Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God. [He that confesseth] that is, believes on Christ, and receives him as a Saviour, and treateth of his Salvation with God in and through him (according to that in Rom. 10. 9, 10. If thou shalt confess with thy Mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine Heart that God hath rais'd him from the Dead, thou shalt be sav'd: for with the Heart man believeth unto Righteousness, and with the mouth Confession is made unto Salvation) and then it follows in that of John, that God, that is, the Father (as in the Verse before) dwells in him, and he in God; which Dwelling, in John's wonted Phrase, notes such a mutual Fellowship, as two that dwell in one and the same House, and under the same Roof together, use to have one with the other: and therefore he that knows the Son, knows also the Father; and vice versa. And truly when these two Persons are in the Heart, the Spirit must be also: read the Verse before that last, ver. 13. Hereby we know that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit. It is not therefore, nor can it be that any true Christian should be utterly a stranger unto either, but if he knows the one, he must know the other; although with Philip they may not so distinctly reflect upon that Knowledg.: God the Father to save through Christ, and Christ to save as sent by the Father, are those fundamental Points of New-Testament Faith; and both compriz'd by Christ in that Summary, the famous and ordinary Sanctuary of Believers; John 3. 16. For God so lov'd the World, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoso believeth in him should not perish, but have Eternal Life: unto which the 14th Verse of our John the fourth Chapter answers; And we have seen and do testify, that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the World: And the mind of that Speech, Whosoever believeth on him, in that third Chapt. v. 16. is thus to be understood on Christ as sent, and given out of such a Love by the Father; and therefore Christ joins both, John 5. 23, 24. He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father that sent him. Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my Word and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting Life, and shall not come into Condemnation, but is pass'd from Death unto Life. So then both Father and Son are the Objects of our Faith, if we be sav'd; and therefore some knowledg. of both is requisite in every Believer: as if their Faith be chiefly or more explicitly carry'd forth to God the Father, yet it is God the Father in Christ. God was in Christ reconciling the World, is the Substance of the Gospel Ministry; and in Christ comes in and must come in, as God's Instrument, sent to merit our Salvation.

Chap. 2.

The fourth Assertion from the Words of the Text is, that although it is common to all New-Testament Christians to have a true distinct saving Knowledge both of the Father, and of the Son Christ, in some measure or degree; yet that then the Knowledge of the one may abound, more than of the other: But specially that in their growing up into Acquaintance and Fellowship with both, it may and doth fall out, that in successive times of their Lives, through God's Dispensations therein, they are led into, and have and enjoy a more intimate Fellowship, free and open-hearted, and enlarg'd Converse with some one of these three Persons, more than they find to be with the other of them; that is, both on those Persons part whom they converse with, they find one of them more accessible, more free and open-hearted towards their Souls, more ready to entertain them, and receive them graciously; and also on their own part, as they find themselves more dispos'd, according to their various Ages, to treat with one more than another.

Now to the end I may explain this Point of successive Communion with the several Persons, thus at times and in this manner, indefinitely to be understood; I shall still continue to have recourse for Help and Light unto the third and fourth Verses of the first Chapter, which I have already made so much use of, and join'd with this my Text of Chap. 2. and shall give those Animadversions upon those Words, comparing them together with these Words of my Text, as will conduce to this my proposed aim.

1. That it is that Fellowship and Communion (which I term the After-Fellowship) which Christians hold after Conversion, that this Interchangeableness I intend falls out in, in the Course of the whole of their Christianity till Death. I am not inquiring now into what falls out, as to the inequality of the knowledge of Father or Son, at first Conversion; for it is this After-Fellowship the Apostle intends, and which he here exhorts those he wrote to, when he says, that you may have Fellowship with us, and truly ours is with the Father and Christ; that is, the same Fellowship which himself and his Fellow-Apostles, whereof some were yet alive (in whose names, or at least in his own, he speaks) who had been long since converted, and had grown up into a high and steady continued Converse and Fellowship with both Persons; in which they had liv'd to that day, and now enjoy'd. And that is the Fellowship he invites all unto (as being capable of it) being already Believers, as he supposeth them he wrote to; and it is such a Fellowship, which in process of time would produce in the Course of it a Fulness of Joy, ver. 4. which at first Conversion usually falls not out. Lastly, it is that Fellowship which Christians have in their Walkings, that is, their Course of Christianity, which he speaks of: for in ver. 7. If we walk in the Light, that is, in Holiness, &c. we have Fellowship, &c. having oppositely refuted and discovered false Professors, ver. 6. If we say that we have Fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the Truth. The mind of his Invitation therefore is, that all you that have an Entrance (which is Solomon's word in the Proverbs) or a Beginning of the Knowledge of God and Christ, set your Hearts and Endeavours with your whole Might, by and with holy Walking, to grow up into a further and higher Fellowship and Acquaintance with these Persons; and then your Joy will at length be full, when your Communion comes to be with both.

2. The second Animadversion from these Words is, that our Apostle John, and the rest of the holy Apostles, had attain'd unto a Fulness (so far as in this Life men are capable) of this equal or like Fellowship with both the Father and Christ, in their daily Walkings; and therefore it is attainable at once in this Life by us Christians: for else he would not have propos'd his and their Example to provoke us to Communion with both. And when he speaks of himself and them, he speaks indifferently, you see, of this Fellowship with both; not mentioning either with any Pre-eminence of one above the other. And his adding, that their Joy may be full, confirms it; for unless it be with both unto a like Fulness, it would be but Joy in part, not full Joy. We find also the Apostle Paul prays for the Thessalonians, for their Communion with both, in 2 Thess. 2. That both Father and Son might comfort their Hearts, ver. 16, 17. Now our Lord Jesus Christ

Christ himself, and God even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting Consolation and good Hope through Grace, comfort your Hearts, &c. And to them that are grown up into much Holiness in the diligent and faithful keeping the Commandments, Christ promiseth, John 14. 23. If a Man love me, he will keep my Words, and my Father will love him; and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him. Hence therefore Christians in their future course of Walking are capable of intimate Communion with both (as to the Thessalonians) through the distinct Manifestation of the Love of both to their Souls, as that in John shews.

3. Yet thirdly de facto, or in the Event it so falls out, that in the long progress of God's more slow and ordinary Dealings with Christians, by reason of, and through their like uneven, unequal, and imperfect Walkings with God, they attain not to a full enjoyment of Fellowship with God and Christ, in an Eminency, in a Constancy, and at once together: for unless it be thus with both, their Fellowship ariseth not to a full Joy, here spoken; which ariseth not unless an eminency of Fellowship be held with both. But God with great Intermissions vouchsafes it imperfectly, and what he doth is by turns and vicissitudes; sometimes more with one, sometimes with another. One time Christ doth personally more openly visit the Soul with his Presence and Love; sometime the Father, and that singly. This seems plain to me, from comparing this Text and that other, ch. 1. that whereas in the first Chapter he utters this as a general Maxim, These things I write to you (meaning all) that you may have Fellowship with the Father and Son: which is a general Encouragement given unto all Christians, and belongs to all to entertain it, as that which they were all capable of, and was their duty to seek. Yet, mark it, here in this place coming to the particular sorts of Christians, severally and apart consider'd, that then he should in such a sever'd manner say of Babes, I write to you, for you have known the Father; and of Fathers singly, I write to you, because you have known Christ the Son. This his attributing it specially to Babes to have known the Father, without mentioning their knowing of Christ; again in a special manner to Fathers to know Christ, omitting the mention of their knowing the Father; argues that in the Course and Progress of the Communion which Christians ordinarily do enjoy, it proves usually that Babes do especially know the Father; and Fathers, Christ the Son: And that de facto it had so fallen out in the Apostle's Observation ordinarily. The Apostle writes thus out of Experience, and upon a Survey of Christians in his days, which were Patterns of the like ordinary Dispensations in after Ages. However, I acknowledg, there might and may be some special Exceptions, and more frequently in such as live not many years after Conversion, and so are ripen'd thereby for their compleat Communion with all the three Persons in Heaven; growing up unto much Holiness in a short space: As also in such whom God out of his good Pleasure vouchsafes extraordinary Dispensations of Grace unto, above what he does to many others.

This Assertion thus stated, and for the present indefinitely only propos'd, as to particular times and seasons, without defining that Communion with the Father unto Babes, or with Christ to old Christians, or confining the one and t'other to either of these Ages; I shall endeavour to prove by Instances.

1. Take a view of God's general Oeconomy, or Dispensation to his whole Church, comprehensively taken in one Prospect and set together, that is, of his Church in the Old and New Testament, from the first to the end of the World; and perhaps it may serve aptly to represent unto you some Image or Pattern of his dealing with particular Souls, the Members of that Church, and afford some Semblance at least of the various Manifestations of himself and his Son unto them. In the Old Testament, you know how God manifested himself as the Father, far more abundantly and clearly than he did Christ his Son; and their common frequent Converse vvith him, did accordingly far more exceed that of theirs vvith the promis'd Messiah, vvhom they yet all look'd for to come into the World. Their Thoughts, Affections, Hearts, Prayers, Addresses, and Recourse, ran out to God under the Title of Father; yea and directly, and plainly, and expressly

Chap. 2. pressly to him, as such by name, and under that Notion ran out unto the Father with a full and open stream. Moses speaks it of him as a relation that was commonly known, and taken for granted among those in his Times, Deut. 32. 6. Do you thus requite the Lord? is he not thy Father that bought thee, and made thee? thus speaking to the whole People. A Father by a double Title; of Creation, that made thee; of Redemption, that bought thee: which in the Type is New-Testament Language: And they had it by Tradition; for Moses speaks it as generally receiv'd. And so it follows, ver. 7. Ask thy Father, and he will shew thee; thy Elders, and they will tell thee as much. It was the common Profession of that Nation, Mal. 3. 10. Have we not all one Father? of that whole Church, which therefore our Translators in their Margin parallel with that in the New Testament, Eph. 4. One Body, one Spirit, one Lord Christ, one God, and Father of all, &c. ver. 4, 5, 6. And upon that account God as owning it, urgeth them with it, for Obedience from them, Mal. 2. 6. A Son honoureth his Father; if I be a Father, where is my fear? And when they, or any of them were in any distress, they us'd to urge that same upon God for help; Jer. 3. 4, 5, 6. Wilt thou not from this time cry unto me, my Father, thou art the guide of my Youth? Will he reserve Anger for ever? Will he keep it to the end? Behold thou hast spoken, and done evil things as thou couldest. The Lord said also unto me in the days of Josiah the King, Hast thou seen that which backsliding Israel hath done? She is gone up upon every high Mountain, and under every green Tree, and there hath play'd the Harlot. This the wickedest Hypocrites had learned, but the truly Godly; when they began to repent, and turn truly and in reality to God, their Conversion is set out by this, that they avouched him to be their Father indeed, and in another manner; renouncing all their Sins, and cleaving to him as a Father: for in the same Chapter, ver. 19. But I said, how shall I put thee among the Children, and give thee a pleasant Land, a goodly Heritage of the Hosts of Nations? And I said, thou shalt call me my Father, and shalt not turn away from me. They cried Abba Father as well as we, and in the same sense that we: this was the foundation of their turning to him. And again on God's part he avowedly declares that to be the ground and motive in his Heart, why he did work a saving Work upon them, even that he was their Father, Jer. 31. 9. They shall come with Weeping, and with Supplications will I lead them; I will cause them to walk by the Rivers of Waters, in a streight way wherein they shall not stumble: For I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is my First-born. Who from everlasting had lov'd them, ver. 3. The Lord hath appear'd of old unto me, saying, Yea, I have lov'd thee with an everlasting Love, therefore with loving Kindness have I drawn thee: And that I am sure is the Father in the New-Testament Language, Eph. 1. 4, &c. And unto these Passages in that Chapter of Jeremy do our Translators refer that Promise, 2 Cor. 6. 18. And I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my Sons and Daughters, saith the Lord Almighty: the same Person God the Father intended in both; which I observe to prevent an Objection, that God as God is only so call'd in the Old. And after Conversion, their Converse and Fellowship with God was maintain'd, as with a Father to them, they claiming an Interest in him, knowing him to be such, and pleading it with him, Isa. 63. 16, 17. Doubtless thou art our Father, tho Abraham be ignorant of us, and Israel acknowledg us not; thou, O Lord, art our Father, our Redeemer, thy Name is from Everlasting, O Lord! why hast thou made us to err from thy ways, and harden'd our Heart from thy Fear? Return for thy Servant's sake the Tribes of thine Inheritance. Their Hopes of Mercy and Forgiveness lay therein, Psal. 103. 12, 13. And the Mercies of God (which are so specially attributed to the Father, and he as the Father of them) are more often and more largely dilated on, and set forth unto us in the Old Testament, as the other Attributes of the Godhead are, than in the New. And unto those in God they mostly had recourse, as expos'd to them in the Promises and large Declarations thereof to them; and convers'd with God under the Apprehension and Faith thereon. 'Twas a current Character of an Old Testament Saint, One that hoped in his Mercy, trusted in his Mercy: and you find the Pleas of it in every eminent Prayer almost; as by Moses, Num. 14. David, in the Psalms, and others of the Prophets; read Nehem. 9. Ezra 9. Dan. 9. Also in their Thanksgivings, we know the constant Song

Song of Praise in the Temple was, for his Mercy endures for ever, &c. and of Chap. 2. Isaiah the Prophet, Isa. 64. 1. And in this manner was their Communion with God, distinctly and by name the Father, managed and transacted, and God's with them. Mercy's Gates had all the Suitors, the Addressees went this way. All Flesh came to him, because there was Mercy with him, that he might be feared. Whereas Christ the Son was rarely in a plain explicate manner nam'd, that is, by his Name spoken of; and his Redemption was involv'd most in obscure Types: which tho they pointed their Faith towards him as to come, yet their Fellowship and Converses with him were rare; as his also with Men were extraordinary, and vouchsafed but to extraordinary Persons, upon extraordinary occasions: as to Abraham, in the case of Sodom; to Jacob, when Esau came with four hundred Men to seek his Life; to Joshua, under the Title of Captain of the Lord's Hosts, to encourage him to those Wars with the Canaanites. Nor did they put up their Petitions in his Name unto the Father; none that I remember of them, unless Daniel in his for the Lord's sake, ch. 9. and David (as some interpret it) for thy Word's sake, 2 Sam. 7. 21. Or unless that in the Sacrifices they offered, when they worshipped, which was a Converse with Christ at second hand, and but in outward Shadows and Figures, as in the Epistle to the Hebrews: Types of Christ's Sacrifice, and hiddenly signified thereby, which the carnal Jew understood not, and but as something understood by the Godly themselves remotely; but not so clear and professed as the Father.

There may perhaps an Objection start up in some Mens minds, which I pre-occupied even now, by paralleling some of those Scriptures alledg'd at first in the Old Testament, with others out of the New.

The Objection is, That it was the Godhead, or God in the three Persons was he, whom as so consider'd the Old-Testament Saints had recourse unto, under the Relation and Title of Father; but not with the Father, as in the New-Testament sense Christ reveal'd him, the first Person of the Trinity, the Father of Christ, and in him our Father: and therefore this Instance will not hold, as to the present Argument in hand.

But besides what I animadverted to prevent this, I further answer.

Ans. 1. That it is one and the same Person bore the Relation of Father in the Old, and whom Christ came more clearly to reveal under the New, John 1. 18. No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the Bosom of the Father, he hath declared him. It is God, as the Father of Christ the Son, who is especially spoken of there; and 'twas he, one and the same, who bore the Title of God and Father under the Old. There is but one God and Father under both, as Eph. 4. who had been honoured with that Title commonly (and no other Person commonly but he) by the Jews: unto which Christ gives testimony, in saying, John 5. 23. That all Men should honour the Son, as they had honoured the Father. He speaks it to Jews of the Old Testament, who had all along in an open Profession honoured the Father, who was the Father of Christ as the Son, and had committed all Authority to him; that now under the New Testament, they should honour the Son as professedly and knowingly, as the Jews had done the Father.

Ans. 2. That under the Old he was known as the Father of the Son, and so as distinct from the Son, as the Father of him. To this Assertion two Scriptures, Psal. 2. and Prov. 30. give witness. Prov. 30. 4. What is his Name, and his Son's Name, canst thou tell? And the same is evidenc'd by Promise to Solomon, 1 Chron. 22. 10. which in the Type was God the Father's Speech, spoken to his Son (Heb. 1. 8.) and as a distinct Person, as the Father is from the Son; the like to which see in Psal. 89. 26.

2. The other Instances of some Primitive Christians, that long after the Apostles had diffus'd the Knowledge of Christ upon the World, and it had taken root, and brought forth fruit over all the World; there yet continued upon divers Christians of these times, a very dim and obscure Knowledge of Christ, through their being addicted to the Old Testament way: And this not only upon the Jews converted to Christianity, which the Apostle Peter insinuates, when writing

Chap. 2: writing to his Countrymen, Jewish Christians, his second Epistle, as he had also done his first, chap. 1. 1. And it was in the latter end of his Days too, when the Gospel had long been preach'd by himself and his Fellows, as in the 2 Epist. 1. 14. he declares, Knowing that shortly I must put off this my Tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath shew'd me. And Christ's Words to him were, When thou art old. He thereupon tells them, ver. 19. that tho' they did well to take heed unto that Word of Prophecy, viz. the Old Testament prophesying of Christ; unto which they were so addicted, that they would entertain no more of Christ than they found fore-prophecy'd concerning Christ therein, as Paul before Agrippa testified of himself, Acts 26. 22. that he said none other things than those which the Prophets and Moses did say should come: Yet that that Word, Peter tells them, was but as a Light that shineth in a dark place, until the Day-dawn, and the Day-star arise in your Hearts: and that Day-star is Christ, Rev. 22. 16. And the Day-dawn is the clear Manifestation of the Gospel, revealing Christ as it had been preach'd, in its full Brightness, by himself and other his Fellow-Apostles. And the reason of their shortness herein was the want of an inward Light of the Spirit and Manifestation of him, that was yet further to arise and visit their Hearts; whereby (as in 2 Cor. 4. 6.) God who commanded Light to shine out of Darkness, hath shined in the Apostles Hearts, to give the Light of the knowledg of the Glory of God in the face of Christ. Whilst yet the Knowledg of God as Father, shining more brightly in that Old Testament, which they attended more unto, must needs accordingly be ascendant to them, in comparison of their Knowledg of Christ from thence.

Nor did this Divine Knowledg of Christ, and an Old Testament Spirit, abide upon these Jewish Christians only, but among many new converted Gentiles also; which I have formerly shewn, from the third Chapter to the Philippians (who were Gentiles converted) where the Apostle having made discovery of his own personal Exercise of Spirit in his daily Communion and Fellowship with Christ, from ver. 8. to the 11th. Yea doubtless, and I count all things loss for the Excellency of the Knowledg of Christ Jesus my Lord; for whom I have suffer'd the loss of all things, and do count them but dung that I may win Christ; and may be found in him, not having my own Righteousness, which is of the Law, but the Righteousness which is by Faith of Christ; even the Righteousness of God, which is by Faith: That I may know him, and the Power of his Resurrection, and the Fellowship of his Sufferings, that I may be conformable to his Death; if by any means I may attain to the Resurrection of the Dead. And how much his Soul was fir'd therewith, you may read in the Verses that follow. But the Close wherewith he shuts up that his Discourse, may seem strange; ver. 15. As many therefore as are perfect, let us be thus minded; and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you: which manifestly refers unto that whole foregone Narrative, how and what his Mind and Heart was, and had stood towards Christ, and the excellent Knowledg of him; so as to win Christ and have Fellowship with him, even in his very Sufferings: wherein as many as were perfect and compleat Christians, he says were like minded with him herein; and were addicted and affected towards this Knowledg of Christ and Fellowship with him, as himself was. But there were but few of these (as his Complaints, and Usage of that Speech in other Epistles shews) and if in any thing of what I have now profess'd, says he, of the excellency Knowledg of Christ, ye be otherwise minded (not in Opinion so much as in the Affections and Exercise of Spirit) otherwise, as the Word in Col. 3. 1. is us'd, addicted, affected, and carried out more towards other things reveal'd, so as that your Minds should at present be diverted, the Stream running in other Channels more; God shall reveal even this to you. Now I could not, when I consider'd the Coherence of this Text, and that how the occasion of the Apostle's writing that Epistle having been that the Leaven of the Doctrine of the Circumcision, and thereby cleaving to the Mosaical Law in force, had been urg'd by false Teachers to be received by them; the Doctrine of which, tho' we read not that it had taken place in their Opinions, yet there remained so much of an Old Testament Spirit in them, and so much Effect; that noise of the Circumcisionists Doctrine had upon them, as to draw their Eyes to look more wishly upon the Old Testament way in the moral Parts of it, as to incline and dispose their Spirits more and more attentively that way:

way: When I consider'd these things, I could not, I say, put any fairer Interpretation upon this Passage and that in the following Verse, or give any other account about these otherwise-minded, who were true Christians (for that he plainly supposeth and distinguisheth them from Circumcisionists) but that an Old-Testament Spirit did so abide upon them, as they entertain'd not, nor took in that excellent Knowledge of Christ, as it shone in the Gospel, in that eminent manner that the Light that had shin'd about them did require: which tho they had receiv'd and profess'd, yet in so remis a degree, as caus'd him thus to speak. Their Spirits were addicted unto the way of the Knowledge of God, and the exercise of the Fear of God, and Motives to his Commandments, which they met with in the Old Testament, which damp'd much their practical Light towards Christ; and to live by the Faith of the Son of God, and from being so kindly affected and acted by the Motives of the Gospel drawn from Christ.

And the reason was, that although all Truth belonging unto the whole of our common Salvation, was once for all deliver'd unto the Saints, as Jude ver. 3. even the whole Body and System of Faith, by Christ the Son, Heb. 1. and his Apostles, as fully as ever it was to be; yet in respect to the setting it on, and bringing home that Faith unto their Hearts (and we may say to Ours, of many to this day) in respect to such a sealing Instruction (as Elihu in Job) and in some with a deeper Impression than other some, and even those Points of Faith that are of necessity to Salvation it self (as the Knowledge of God the Father and of Christ are) God is therein pleas'd to go over them in some Hearts with a slighter hand, and but as the first Draught of a Picture, with dim Colours and less bright; and so lets them abide for a while: tho yet he makes a true Resemblance, such as that you may know the Person by, whose Image it is. Whereas in some other Hearts he goes over the same again and again, and ceaseth not, but works it up unto a far greater Life and Glory. God takes several pauses, so as we may say of these Teachings, that he doth it at sundry times; even as well as under the Old 'tis said he did. And herein God and his Spirit useth a liberty to whom and when, and knows not a certain Method, 1 Cor. 12. 8. For to one is given by the Spirit the word of Wisdom; to another the word of Knowledge by the same Spirit. And hence the Apostle speaks of Supplies of the Spirit, Phil. 1. yea, of perfecting what is lacking in our Faith, 1 Thess. 3. 10.

2. I shall give the reasons of this Dispensation.

1. These two Persons are both in themselves and in their works for us distinct, and would therefore accordingly be known distinctly of us; and to be so fully known, as to be honour'd by us in the most ample manner, in which they are in the New Testament reveal'd to us, John 5. 23. That all Men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father: from which place I observe,

1st. That it is the design of the Father, that both himself and his Son be honour'd by all Men, yea and the Son [as] the Father; and this is the design of his sending his Son into the World, and of his committing that power of quickening, v. 21. and of judging Men, ver. 22. unto him.

2^{ly}. I observe, that this is yet effected at and by successive times (which is the Point before me) The Father's being honour'd by Men, he speaks of in the present time, as they honour; as at that time when Christ spake this, the Jews generally did: but of the Son, as of that which was yet more and more to be done; That they should honour the Son, even as, &c.

2. If they come to be known as fully as they ought to be by us, and as they are reveal'd in Scripture unto us. There are a great many things concerning them, and belonging to either of them, to be known by us, which for us to do fully and distinctly will require successive times and successive Impressions for either; and such as to have our Thoughts to dwell upon them too: As

1st. For the Father.

(1.) There is the Person of the Father, as the Father of Glory, Eph. 1. the Fountain of the Deity, the Begetter of his so great a Son, and from whom the Holy Ghost proceedeth: This as to his Person.

(2.) We ought to know the Riches of his Mercy, Love; for these are more properly attributed to the Father, as in the same Eph. 1. so 2 Cor. 13. 14. The Chap. 2. The Love of God (the Father) spoken with distinction from Christ and the Spirit; and Father of Mercies, 2 Cor. 1. 3. said of him who is the Father of Christ.

(3.) We should know the whole of his Work and Hand in our Salvation; as in chusing us in Christ, Eph. 1. sending his Son into the World, which Corinthe in John's Gospel so dilates on, and our John in this Epistle, Chap. 4. 8, 9, 10. He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is Love. In this was manifested the Love of God towards us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the World, that we might live through him. Herein is Love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the Propitiation for our Sins: and all spoken of the Father. And ver. 14. We have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the World.

(4.) The bestowing on us all spiritual Blessings ought to be known by us. 'Twas he was the Contriver, and is the Donor of them all, Eph. 1. whereof that one of Sonship and Adoption, wherewith we have a right to glory, our Apostle in this Epistle also so admires, and sets out with a Behold, in chap. 3. 1, 2, 3. of this Epistle; Behold! what manner of Love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be call'd the Sons of God; therefore the World knoweth us not, because it knew not him. Beloved, now are we the Sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is: And every Man that hath this Hope in him, purifieth himself, even as he is pure. There are multitudes of other things more, like to these, whereby the Father's part is set out, as in justifying us, Rom. 4. Drawing us to Christ, John 6, &c. And to know the Father in and by all these distinctly, and to have our Minds to dwell upon them, will ask time and multitude of Thoughts, both to take them in, and then to be answerably affected with them: to dwell in God, in the Intuition of all these, which is our John's Phrase up and down this Epistle; but especially upon this Theme and Argument of the Father's Love, ch. 4. 16.

2ly. The like may be said of Christ; that we are to know and have Fellowship with him, viewed in the Excellency of his Person; to know and have Communion with him in his Offices, Priest, Prophet, King: also to contemplate what he did for us, in that he took Flesh, bore our Sins, suffer'd Reproach, all Sorrows, died, bore the Curse and Wrath of his Father, rose, ascended into Heaven, and there appears for us, and brings us to God; intercedes for us continually, pleads the Fulness and Over-sufficiency of his Righteousness, his Ability to save to the utmost: then his Mercy, Grace, likewise in all these, Bowels to receive Sinners; his Gentleness, Meekness, Lowliness of Mind to converse with them, after they come to him; his Long-suffering to bear with them that come to him, his Faithfulness to stand by them in all their needs; his avowed Resolvedness not in any wise to cast them out that come to him, but to raise them up at the last Day.

I mention these on the Persons parts, and proceed unto those on our parts.

2. On our parts; we are in our Capacities narrow-mouth'd Vessels, and cannot take in all at once, all these things of either; which was seen in the Apostles, as Christ tells them, John 16. 12. I have many things yet to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now: even the Knowledge of the Father, wherein of the two they excell'd in; yet thereof he says, John 16. 25. These things have I spoken to you in Proverbs; the time cometh when I shall no more speak to you in Proverbs, but I shall shew you plainly of the Father: In Proverbs, that is, but obscurely. We in this Life are Children, 1 Cor. 13. and our Capacity of being taught is but as of Children, here a Line, and there a Line, as the Prophet saith; and we say of the Mind, Intuitio est tantum unius, as the Eye looks wisely but on one thing at once, so our Minds. But these things, the Mystery of God the Father and of Christ, are so great, as the Mind need go over them by parts; one piece of them to be presented and set on upon our Hearts at one time, other of them at another; as in your great Optick Glasses, the Eye is fain to go travel over the Body of the Moon by parts and quarters. This Scantiness and Clungness, that the Intention of our Minds is but upon some one thing at once, we find in our knowing and minding of other Divine Objects and Duties or Exercises. As in Humblings for Sin, our Thoughts are swallow'd up therewith abundantly at some times, and are as it were wholly in in it; then at another time we are all upon seeking for Grace and Holiness; then at a third season, for Faith and Assurance, &c. We are as wholly intent on these by fits (if I may so speak) so as to be less on other Dutys and Exercises. And so it may and doth fall out in our Communion with the Persons, as if we did cease to value the one as well as the other; or so as if we were wholly taken off from the other: but our actual Intentions for that present are lessen'd through our Narrowness, whilst they are intended and heighten'd towards the other.

But this Deficiency on our parts is not simply to be understood in respect to that disproportion of our Understandings, only consider'd as naturally, unto these so transcending Divine Objects; but from that dimness of a true Spiritual Light in us, without which supernaturally given, the natural Man understands nothing at all of Communion with these Persons, nor any other Divine Objects. Concerning which dependance upon Spiritual Light, I propose these few things to clear this Point to us.

1. We must know that there is a double sort of Knowledge of spiritual things in the Hearts of Men. There is first a true spiritual Understanding (which is proper to the Regenerate) as the Apostle, Col. 1. 9. by way of distinction terms it; as likewise in ver. 6. he calls it a Knowledge in Truth: and either Phrase is us'd with connotating a difference from another sort or kind of Knowledge; namely, a literal speculative Knowledge of them. The first Spiritual Understanding is to be understood, not in respect of the Object only, as because it is of spiritual things; but further, from the manner of Knowledge, to know them spiritually: and so the Apostle accurately distinguisheth, to shew the difference of it from that Knowledge of them that is in natural Men, 1 Cor. 2. 14, 15. And in like manner the second, knowing them in Truth; which is when the Mind doth really attinge, and take in spiritual things, as they are in themselves; being represented by the Holy Ghost to the Minds of spiritual Men in their real Nature and Excellency: and that only is a true Knowledge. The same you have in Eph. 4. 20, 21. to know the Truth as it is in Jesus; even as in Col. 1. the knowing the Grace of God the Father in truth: both which import a Knowledge that is otherwise, and may justly be termed Counterfeit, because it reacheth not to the reality of the things, but only entertains Pictures of them. And the differing Character and Truth of this spiritual Knowledge is, that it is operative, and carries on the Heart with it unto the things spiritual it apprehends, and as they are represented and apprehended in their real spiritual Nature; and as such attracts and draws the Heart to them: which is by a Divine Seed of Light cast into the Heart, that hath a formative Virtue accompanying it, and that forms Christ really in them; whereas natural Light forms but false Conceptions, as they are call'd; whereof the Wombs that go with them do always miscarry in the end.

2. The second Proposal is, that even in Persons truly regenerated, especially that are knowing, there may be and is much of such literal Knowledge of things that are spiritual, that yet is not true spiritual Knowledge (in that sense it was explained and stated) but mingled with what is spiritual. This you may see in the Corinthians, 1 Cor. 1. who were Saints, ver. 2. and sanctified in Christ Jesus; of whom he gives this Elogium, for their Knowledge of spiritual things, in ver. 5. and 7. In every thing ye are enrich'd by him in all Utterance and in all Knowledge; so that ye come behind in no Gift. And yet of those Persons of them he thus sets out for Gifts, he gives the true Character of Saints; Waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. And yet of these Saints he in ch. 3. 1. speaks thus; And I, Brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal; even as unto Babes in Christ: which could not have been, unless it be allowed that their knowledge in Gifts and Utterance about spiritual things far exceeded their true spiritual Knowledge; of which spiritual Knowledge he had discours'd in the latter Verses of the foregoing Chapter, ver. 14, 15. which I even now cited. And then this immediately follows, and in respect thereunto he plainly says they were not spiritual: which if that Knowledge he speaks they had, had been such in the total of it, it would have made their Hearts answerably spiritual; which they were very far from, as if you read on in that Chapter you will easily acknowledg. And the reason why, and how it comes to pass it is so, is clear: for as you all acknow-

Chap. 2. ledg that in a regenerate Man there is in every Faculty a great part that is unrenewed, a mixture of Flesh and Spirit; so by consequence it follows that there is such a knowledg of spiritual things as is common to other Professors that yet remain unregenerate. And that part of Understanding in Men regenerated but in part, so far as it is unregenerate in them, is yet capable of a knowledg of them by common Gifts spiritual, as well as those that are not truly as yet renewed are. Therefore the Apostle distinguisheth in those believing Corinthians, Spiritual Gifts, and saving Love and Charity, 1 Cor. 12. 13.

'Tis true that this difference of Knowledg being most conspicuous in what is in the several Persons of Men regenerate and unregenerate, in that in the Unregenerate there is no true spiritual Knowledg at all, no not in the lowest degree, but it is but notional and literal; whereas in the Regenerate there is by Regeneration a principle of this real Knowledg inlaid; and therefore we difference the spiritual Estates of the one and the other by the difference of their Knowledg, as well as by other Characters: Yet there is a mixture of notional Knowledg with spiritual in the same regenerate Person; which tho it prejudiceth not his being in the Estate of Grace, no more than his having Sin in him, and Darkness in his Understanding doth; yet still that mixture is from a distinction and difference of the Knowledg it self that is in him. When therefore we difference the Knowledg of a Man truly regenerate from that which is in a common Professor and temporary Believer, our meaning is not as if all and the whole heap and bulk of Knowledg of spiritual things, that is in a regenerate Man, were in the total of it all of it holy and sanctifying, affective and effective, according to the full extent of that his knowledg of them; whereas in the other, the common Professor, it is wholly un sanctified: Nor is it that the Height, Breadth, Depth of a regenerate man's Affection towards those spiritual things he any way knows, should be adequately answerable to the Dimensions of his Knowledg, every way consider'd; no, but knowledg by Gifts for the good of others and himself, and knowledg of saving Grace are distinct in such a Man regenerated: And both being mixt and put together in his Understanding doth bear the name of Knowledg, or the Knowledg which that one Man hath and is the Possessor of; we may as so consider'd in the general affirm, that his Knowledg compounded of both, doth far exceed his holy Affections, and that his Heart is not in a measure sanctified according to the measure of his Knowledg. And to that Christian that discerns by experience the difference of these two Knowledges in himself (which is a great and true sign of Grace to discern it) it becomes the greatest matter of Humiliation to find that his knowledg of hol: things objectively, doth exceed the Holiness of his Heart affectionately and effectively, his Life falling so short of it: yet still take it with this Caution to be added, that their Knowledg objectively consider'd, doth extend with some degree of spiritual Affection accompanying it even unto all things which they know; and which in respect of the Sincerity of their Hearts they have a respect and affection unto all which they know. But yet this is no more intensive, than according to that degree of true spiritual Knowledg, more or less, that is blended with that notional Knowledg; so as in respect of that additional of speculative and gift Knowledg, their Hearts fall so much short, and are not adequate unto that Knowledg.

If it be reply'd; But is not all the Knowledg a godly Man hath sanctified to him?

Ans. Yes, in that sense that all other things are sanctified to him, to be some way or other for his spiritual Good. But it is not all of it sanctifying Knowledg, and directly operative: And yet it hath this more near and appropriate Tendency unto the Sanctification of him, than other things have, that it is in his Heart as fit combustible matter, as Tow and Flax that lie near Sparks of Fire, ready to be enkindled by that true spiritual Knowledg that is in him: and his case is, as if we suppose as if Tow and Flax encompass Fire in the same Hearth, and there wanted but a blowing up the Fire, and it readily enflames the Tow presently, and assimilates it into Fire; and then both work together upon the Heart. Yet this falls out but as the Holy Ghost shall vouchsafe a special Assistance; and stir up the spiritual Light and Fire in a Man; which Similitude agrees with the Apostles

Apostle's Phrase in his Exhortation to Timothy; Stir up the Gift that is in thee: which is done by the Holy Ghost's Assistance. You have commonly heard that word stir up, is in the Original, as you do a Fire. And the Gift that was in him, was that additional Knowledge, which is always larger than a Man's gracious Knowledge, and lies in a great part of it like Materials unkindled, yet laid upon the Fire, to the end to be kindled by it: and so that Gift Knowledge becomes spiritualiz'd and sanctifying Knowledge together.

The use I put these Premises to, and the Corollary I draw from these two Proposals, is to prevent a great Objection, which might be otherwise made against what was alledg'd in the former Instances. The Objection may be this; That the Doctrine of Christ and his Apostles, having as fully discover'd Christ as the Father, and the Father as Christ, unto their Disciples in the primitive Times; and that they were affected in some degree to either of the Persons according to that Doctrine: yet how should it come to pass that their Spirits should be carried forth and addicted to Communion with, and towards one, rather than the other?

The Resolve of this appearing Difficulty lyeth in this, that tho their literal, notional Gift Knowledge, by the Doctrine of the one, might be equal with their Knowledge of the other, yet the true spiritual Knowledge, which affects and turns the Heart, was unequal: the Holy Ghost did not blow the Fire to enkindle the one, as much as the other. And so they came not to have that intimate, affecting, operative Knowledge towards Christ, as towards the Father; and so their Hearts were not drawn out to a like Communion with both of those Persons at once. And then it was they were otherwise minded, as to the knowledge of Christ (as the Apostle's Phrase is in that Philip. 3.) that is, otherwise affected, addicted, &c. as I open'd it; unto which the third Proposal being added, will further clear.

3. The third Proposal; That indeed the Holy Ghost doth direct, draw out, and intend more or less, that true spiritual Knowledge in the actings of it towards spiritual Objects, that yet are of equal weight and moment, according to his own good Pleasure: And therefore an unequal Communion of Believers with the Father and Son, at one and the same time, may and doth often fall towards them. This is certain, that the degrees of our spiritual Communion with either of them, depends upon a more large, or less degree of true spiritual Knowledge; and that as it is at the instant time acted, and drawn forth more or less by the Holy Ghost. And the Holy Ghost may enlighten us with such an affecting and enflaming Light, in a more intense degree to the one, whilst to a lesser degree towards the other. I added, when it is acted and drawn forth, &c. and the reason is, that tho every regenerate Man hath an inherent Principle or Habitude of spiritual Knowledge, capable alike of all and each of spiritual Objects; yet that which makes them more or less manifest, is a Divine Light which God causeth to shine into the Heart, and hereby to actuate that Principle: It is Light (says the Apostle) that makes things manifest. And as the degree of Light about them is, accordingly are our Apprehensions of them; and according to our Apprehensions of them, our Hearts and Spirits are affected; our Communion with them is higher or less intense. We see in Nature that it is not only the less or greater Vigor in the Eye, which is the Principle of seeing inherent in us, which causeth the difference in seeing; but 'tis the Light also shining more or less, doth actuate and bring forth things to a visibility, to a greater or less degree; which if wanting, the clearest Eye in the World, if in the dark, sees nothing: or if the proportion of Light be dim and small, it discerns less. Now the vouchsafing of this spiritual Light, and the degrees of it, doth depend wholly upon God's good Pleasure; who takes a liberty to dispense it as he pleaseth: and the reason of this is, because we of our selves are not sufficient to think one good or holy Thought. And that tho we are not totally in habitual Darkness, but have a spiritual Principle of seeing spiritually; yet in respect of true actual sight and the degrees of it, in that respect we should be continually but Men in the dark. And therefore in the same place the Apostle says, 2 Cor. 3. 5. Not that we are sufficient of our selves to think any thing, as of our selves; but our sufficiency is of God: we are not able to educe one good Thought.

Chap. 2 Thought. And ch. 4. 6. For God who commanded the Light to shine out of Darkness, hath shined in our Hearts, to give the Light of the Knowledge of the Glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ. It is not that God did at first once shine into our Hearts and enlighten'd us, or that we have an abiding Principle of Light in us; but he must give us every moment Light to see withal. And we are no wiser, nor spiritually know any more of things spiritual, than at the instant he gives it; which is the Apostle's Phrase to the Ephesians, Christ shall give thee Light: yea command it, or create it continually, as he did Light out of Darkness.

And, which is yet more to this purpose, whereas other Light of the Sun, Moon, or from any other lightsome Body, do alike irradiate all the Objects that are near them in a House or other open place; this of spiritual Light from God doth not equally enlighten all, or any spiritual Objects, but doth in a more especial manner irradiate some one particular Divine Object at once more than another; which he casteth Light upon more than others, and terminates the Eye of the Mind thereto; or like as a Hand that manageth the Light in a dark Lanthorn (and such is his spiritual Light shining in our dark Hearts) that he opens and shuts (as the Phrase in the Revelation is) as he pleaseth. And the Spirit of God, who is given to reveal these deep things of God, is the freest Agent in this, and takes a liberty, dividing to every Man as he will, 1 Cor. 12. 11. Even as in John 3. he is said as the Wind to blow where he listeth, and as to what Person he pleaseth, unto what light or degree thereof he pleaseth: and hence also comes this inequality in the Point in hand. These reasons are from what is on our parts. I return again to such as concern the Persons of the Trinity, to be now added after those that concern us; for I said, I should sort and handle the one and the other intermingledly.

There are these farther Reasons that concern the Persons that move them to this Dispensation of this alternate Communion with themselves.

1. They are willing and content to take their turns and vicissitudes of manifesting themselves, sometimes the one, sometimes the other, in our narrow Hearts; to the end that each of them may have in the issue, the fuller and more distinct Manifestation of themselves: They are pleas'd to give way one to the other in their Communion. From hence it was, as we said, that the Son suffer'd himself to be so much and so long conceal'd, during the time of the Old Testament; and the Father had the vogue in the Church then. And under the New, altho all Judgment is originally the Father's, yet hath he committed all Judgment to the Son, and judgeth no Man, but in and by the Son; to the end that all might honour the Son, &c. John 5. 22, 23. We may observe likewise the Spirit under the New: Also the third Person conceals himself; insomuch as tho 'twas he who indicted all the Epistles of the New, and therein wisheth Grace and Peace from God the Father and from Christ, not mentioning himself, from whom yet Grace and Peace do proceed equally with the Father and the Son: And altho 'tis true that both Father, and Son, and the Spirit also, be in some measure and degree known by every Believer, which the Words of Baptism shew; In the Name of the Father, Son, and Spirit, as having a joint and equal Interest in our Salvation: yet are they content that our Intentions of Mind and Affections should run with a shallower stream at times towards some one, than they do towards another: Altho appretiative, or in the esteem of them in their Judgments, all Christians value and honour all three alike, as one God, three Persons blessed for ever. So that it must not be understood as if I meant that our Minds were quite taken off from the one, whilst they are carried forth to the other, whilst thus our Affections are more intentionally taken up with any one of them.

Yea, these Persons are so far from Jealousy in this case of one another, lest one should have more of us than himself, that they do help forward and advance the glorifying of one the other unto us. Jesus Christ the Son, when he hath once been thorowly reveal'd and made known to any Soul himself; 'tis he when once believ'd on by it, that reveals the Father unto us, Mat. 11. 27. No Man knows the Father, but the Son, and he to whom the Son reveals him. And, vice versa, when Christ is reveal'd and made known to you, and your Hearts drawn to him, and and your Hearts taken up with the Communications of him; you must know it is the Father that concealedly doth this, John 6. 45. It is written in the Prophets, And they shall be all taught of God: Every Man therefore that hath heard and learn'd of the Father, cometh unto me. So Gal. 1. 25. And then Christ taketh his turn afresh and anew to reveal the Father; John 16. 25. The time cometh that I will shew you plainly of the Father. And the Spirit is as zealous and forward to glorify both; John 16. 14. He (the Spirit) shall take of mine and glorify me, (and take of the Father's too, and glorify him also to your Hearts) by shewing it to you. And I say, he glorifies the Father, as well as Christ; for so Christ intends his Speech, ver. 15. All things that the Father hath, are mine; therefore said I that he shall take of mine, and shall shew it unto you. Herein they take their turns also; John 17. 1. The Hour is come that thou, O Father, shouldst glorify thy Son, that thy Son may glorify thee: in their Courses to glorify one another. And they having an Eternity of Time to glorify themselves unto us in, are not hasty for themselves; they have time enough afore them to do it in, and take their seasons. And however in Heaven they will be sure then to manifest themselves to us at once, to the full, and together.

2. Seeing that by reason of our great Sinfulness that remains in us, and through want of growth to a perfect Holiness, we are long a growing to be fit, prepar'd, and dispos'd to enjoy an eminency of Fellowship with both at once, and together alike (which is yet attainable) yet till then, each Person is pleas'd to take a singular Contentment in such sole single private Visits, with a Soul by turns. And the very Privacy, that it is done alone, doth afford a special Delight to the Person; and the Privacy of them, in that they are single thus alone, doth afford a special Delight in the mean time to that Person that communes with us, till we grow up to be meet Company for both. This the whole Book of the Canticles shews, wherein Christ hath those Intercourses with his Spouse, he and she alone. You may see how he caresteth her, and talks to her, and she again to him, I am my Beloved's, and my Beloved is mine; as if none's else: when as yet she was the Father's as much as Christ's. But Christ was her Husband, and by that relation having a special and appropriate Interest in her, thence a peculiar private Converse with her, came to have an answerable Solace in it. The Sweetness of a Friend when alone enjoy'd, hath some Advantages in it in some respects, which a joint Society of others with him, tho' Friends also, hath not. As that alone one can be more free and enlarg'd in Expressions of mutual Love one to the other, and more particularly direct his Love to that one Friend alone, and the like. As in the way of our Friendship we often do; when we would enjoy a special Friend indeed, we invite him to Supper alone, to have his Company alone. And there is a Resemblance of some such thing, as affected as it were by Christ himself, in that Overture of Christ's, Rev. 3. 20. If any Man hear my Voice and open the Door, I will come into him, and will sup with him, and he with me: That Reduplication [and he shall sup with me] denotes an Aloneness of them two together, supping hand to hand, as we say: And he names no other but himself, to come with him in that eminent way that he himself came. It denotes also that 'tis mutual; that she entertains him, and he her, and each bring their Cost with them. He sups with her, and she with him: He feeds her with his Fruits and Viands, and his Love better than Wine; read Cant. 5. 1. I am come into my Garden, my Sister, my Spouse; I have gather'd my Myrrh with my Spice; I have eaten my Honey-comb with my Honey; I have drunk my Wine with my Milk: Eat, O Friends, drink, yea drink abundantly, O Beloved. And she again invites him to eat of hers, Cant. 7. 12, 13. Let us get up early to the Vineyards, let us see if the Vine flourish, whether the tender Grapes appear, and the Pomegranats bud forth; there will I give thee my Loves. The Mandrakes give a smell, and at our Gates are all manner of pleasant Fruits new and old, which I have laid up for thee, O my Beloved; there will I give thee of my Loves: 'Tis all of it her Speech to him. And thus this private Intercourse of Loves, proper to them two alone, doth in the interim serve to please, till the Fulness of God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, come together in upon the Soul.

Chap. 3. 3. They are all there in the mean while stay'd and contented with private Transaction, during our Narrowness and Non-age: even this, that when we have a more eminent Communion with any one Person, we have a secret under-Communion with the other two; tho' implicitly with the other, and more distinctly with some one. And 'tis well it is so; for otherwise we should be guilty of a forgetting the Holy Ghost in the most, whilst we have Communion with the Father and the Son objectively; that is, as the Persons whom our Souls are taken up with, as the Subjects of our Converse, whilst the Holy Spirit is content to be the Revealer of both, and to have the honour of that; as also that he knows he is honour'd in their being honour'd by us. And the reason is, because the Foundation of our Comfort in our Communion with any one Person lies in this; that that Person we have the joyful Fellowship with, is God; that is, it makes our Joy a full Joy, as chap. 1. in such a Fellowship. That's the Spring, the Source of all Comfort, that in that Person the Fulness of the Godhead is; without which our Converse would be empty, and but as with a shadow. Now if our Fellowship with one of the Persons, be fundamentally with him as he is God, and all three are but one and the same God; then in having Communion with that one, we have it with the rest. The common Interest of the Godhead (which is one and the same in all) is glorified thereby in us, to us, and by us; and some give that as the full Intent of the Apostle's Speech, 2 Cor. 4. 6. We beheld the Glory of God in the Face or Person of Jesus Christ. For why, because both he is look'd upon by us to be God, and as in whom we apprehend (whilst we exercise our Faith, &c. on him) that the Fulness of the Godhead dwells personally in him, and so we have Communion with him as God; and in beholding him, we behold the Glory of God the Father also. Yet because this Enjoyment of all three in some one is but impliedly, therefore hath God order'd a further special distinct Fellowship with each. And hence the Love of the Spirit is made mention of, Rom. 15. as well as of the Father, or of Christ. The Spirit is God, and he that dwells in God, dwells in Love with any of the Persons. And so in having Communion with the Holy Ghost in his Love, or with any other Person in their Love, we have Communion with God. And therefore in this case it is not a leaning to one Person more than to another; for they are all but one God, and each one glorified as one God: I and my Father are one, says Christ. Likewise in honouring the Son, we honour the Father who hath such a Son; a wise Son is an Honour to his Parents, as often in the Proverbs.

C H A P. III.

The Character of Young Men, or middle-ag'd Christians in Christ.

1 John II. 14.

THE Word here translated Young Men, says Grotius, notes out Men militaris Aetatis, that have attain'd to the Age and Fitness of being Soldiers; and in that semblance is here apply'd unto Men in Christ, those that in a special manner are drawn out into the Field against Satan. And this Condition being the middle between that of Babes, new Converts, and that of old Age in Christ, who in nature use to be exempted from War; hence therefore all that space between an old Age in Christianity and that of Infancy in Christ, is comprehended under the Title of Young men, who are in a special manner military Men. By this rule the Christian Aera, or account of Ages in Christ, is measur'd here: whereas in Nature, according to our wonted Division, we reckon four, Babes, Young men, middle-ag'd, and old Men; whereas here but three: and upon this it is, that the greater space of time is allotted to this of Young men. New Converts in Christ, tho' Men grown, are not young Men in Christ presently the first hour; and there is a middle Age besides to be pass'd thorow, e'er they come to be Fathers; and thence all that time between those two, of Babeship in Christ, and and old Age in Christ, must be understood and meant by what is translated Young men; comprizing and taking also in, that which answers to what in nature we call middle Age, even all that time from Babeship, till old Age in Christianity comes, as a time of more usual Conflict and Fighting against Lusts (which are the bloody Battels) and it ordinarily falls out, God converting Men more generally whilst young in natural Years, that that middle Age in Nature is co incident with this middle Age in Christianity.

There are two things to be handled, as touching this Age.

1. That during that Age, or space of time, Christians are most assaulted with Lusts.

2. How it is that they are said to have overcome, and that this should be attributed to them in so special a manner.

For the first.

1. The Condition of a Christian is describ'd to be a Warfare; Fighting against Sin, Heb. 12. 4. Their Interest is to fight against Sin and the Tentations of it: And that is the ground of all other Quarrels with the World.

2. Satan and his Angels are at the head of this Battel; That wicked one, says the Text: and Eph. 6. 12. We wrestle not against Flesh and Blood, but against Principalities, against Powers, against the Rulers of the Darkness of this World; against spiritual Wickedness in high places.

3. There are special seasons for War; so in the World, as Solomon says, Eccles. 3. 8. A time when Kings go forth to Battel; and so in Christianity.

4. The special time of this Conflict against fleshly and worldly Lusts, is this middle Age of Christians in Christ. 'Tis true that old Men to the last become not wholly Emeriti, are not discharg'd from this Warfare (as Solomon's Phrase is of Death) for Eph. 6. 13. the Apostle speaks to them that have fought to the last, That after you have done all, you may be able to stand. There are therefore Assaults upon old Christians to the last to cast them down; even those who have yet done all that good Christians are suppos'd they ought to have done, in the foregone part of their Lives: yet when you have done all, says the Apostle, it is well ye have Grace given to stand, and keep your Posts at last. And above all, their Danger lies, that the World is apt to ensnare them; and therefore the Exhortation here in the 15th Verse, Love not the World, &c. is made unto both the middle-ag'd Men and the Fathers, according to their several Inclinations. Piscator hath observ'd this. But to take heed of Errors in Faith, and the way of believing, is incident to Babes; and therefore that Exhortation, ver. 18. is more peculiarly made to them, παιδία, Babes, &c. The Thessalonians were new Converts, Babes, when he wrote his Epistle. And what was Paul's fear of them at that Age, but lest their Faith had been assaulted? 1 Thess. 2. 5. For neither at any time us'd we flattering Words, as ye know, nor a cloak of Covetousness; God is witness.

5. Yet this middle Age is the eminent time of Warfare unto Christians, during that Age of their Christianity. Overcoming importeth a Fight, a Warfare; and in that Overcoming is attributed in a special manner to them, it argues the Assault to be fiercest then, then to be the heat of the Battel with the Adversary.

The Reasons of this.

1. They are in a middle Condition, between that lower of Babes, and that of old Age; and so they partake in a great proportion of both. The working of Corruptions doth follow mens Inclinations in Nature; and middle-ag'd Christians in the posture of their natural Inclinations, are precipitant of both; of Lusts of Youth, as the Apostle calls them, because of their Violence and Predominion, which is most in them, that flow from Fancy, Heat, Vigor of Nature; as Mirth, Jollity, Frolickness of Youth, as you call them. And truly I think Christ had some little Reflection upon such as these, in what he said to Peter, John 21. 18. When thou wert young, thou girdest thy self, and wentest whither thou wouldest. Peter had shewn a forward Youthfulness in ver. 7. in casting himself into the Sea with his Coat girt on; 'twas a youthful trick, and what of Folly and Ostentation was in it, Christ seems to reprove. Pride of Parts also, and of Gifts; Let him

Chap. 3. him not be a young Novice, lest he be puffed up. Voluptuousness, Incontinency, Intemperance, overmuch Delight in vain Company, and such Lusts as these, are not yet so abated and cool'd in these middle-ag'd ones, but that they retain a great Inclination to them; and then they partake of old Mens Lusts. Pride and Lusts of carnal Wisdom, Love of the World, and Honour, and Riches, are already begun to grow up in them; for they are come to a ripeness of Temper: Cares likewise begin to enter, and to come about a Man, and to grow up with the Word: their Heads are full of business, intent upon things earthly. Children grow up, and call for a Provision for them. And thus being in the middle of both, when it falls out as middle Age, as they are Christians, doth contemporize with a middle Age in Nature, as often they do; they are then under their Æquinoctial, under which Climate mens Bodies are incident most unto Distempers.

Babes are more obnoxious unto Doubts and Tentations about their Estate in Grace. The Sun's rising is accompany'd with Clouds and Mists, which, as it ariseth higher, are scatter'd: and Christians in their Infancy, are by the mixture of the Remains of the Spirit of Bondage, with some dawnings of Faith, and Hopes of God's favour (which they are usually yet fully assur'd of) kept more awful of yielding to Sin, and Indulgence to Lusts; which by John Baptist's work of Humiliation, had stounded them more than mortified them: But the middle Age having somewhat outgrown those Fears, and attain'd more quietness of Spirit, as to the Hopes of their spiritual Estate, the Spirit of Bondage being much worn out; and yet perhaps those are not grown up to a full and settled assurance neither, so continually actuated in them, as to keep Lusts down. Their Lusts therefore are apt to gather up much of their crumbs again; and assurance not being full and spiritual enough yet in them, they walk in a greater Exposedness to the rising up of Lusts, and Satan's stirring them up in them.

Then 2. their Adversary the Devil, he is let loose more by God upon Christians in that Age, as to the point of stirring up Lusts (for so still I state it) In the Parable, at the first when he is cast forth of a Man, he is much restrain'd as to entering into a Man again, when he is thrown out for a while: and the measures and methods of his assaulting are order'd and dispos'd of by God; his times are in God's hands: Satan shall cast you into Prison for ten days. Now in the Parable, Mat. 12. 43. He walks a while in dry places, seeking rest, and finding none: being put out of trade and dealings with that Man he's cast forth of, as he had afore; not having power over and upon the Man, as he had wont, in point of carrying him to Sin and several Lusts. This Confinement thus against his will, notes a restraint of him from God, that in a Punishment interdicts him to places that are dry, and as a Wilderness to him; even as 'tis thought that when Satan hath tempted a man to actual Murder, or to perpetrate some such great Villany, which cannot be known by Man; God often in that case confines that Devil that tempted him to the house or place where 'twas committed, till by the disturbance he makes (which you call haunting the House) notice is given to some of Mankind, whereby it may be known both that, and sometimes what the Murder was, and where the Man murder'd was buried: that being come to Mens cognifance, then let Man look to it to search it out. Then the Devil is releas'd; God having made that promise, that by whom Man's Blood is shed, by Man shall his Blood be shed. So is it here: God for a present Punishment to that Devil, who had so long born rule over a poor Sinner, whom he had taken captive at his will, and been the Tempter of to so much evil, throws him out and banisheth him; takes away his power as to the violence of such kind of Temptations, as formerly he had wont to use, namely unto grosser Evils of sinnings; puts him out of that Employment; lessens his trade that way with his old Customer, tho he may permit him to tempt in another kind, as to Despair or Presumption, but not this way; which is the worst and most grievous of Temptations, when a Man is overcome by them.

And it is as to such Defilements in point of Lusts, that Satan is thus restrain'd; for the Man had reform'd greatly upon the casting out of Satan, and there is both time and season allowed and allotted by God to do it in: for he sweeps the house, throws out the filth and dust, and garnisheth it with the outward Paintings of many many new Vertues and Gifts: inſomuch as Peter (referring to this) ſays, 2 Epift. Chap. 3. 2. 20. That he is clean eſcap'd the Deſilements of the World; or which the World lieth in. And by the Co-incident of the Matter in both places, of Chriſt's here, and Peter's there, 'tis evident the Apoſtle refers to this Parallel of Chriſt's: compare but the Apoſtle's words, ver. 21. 22. (For it had been better for them not to have known the way of Righteouſneſs, than after they have known it, to turn from the holy Commandment deliver'd unto them. But it is happen'd unto them according to the Proverb, The Dog is turn'd to his own Vomit again, and the Sow that was waſh'd, to her wallowing in the Mire) with Chriſt's words in the Parable, ver. 44, 45. Then he ſaith, I will return into mine Houſe, from whence I came out; and when he is come, he findeth it empty, ſwept, and garniſhed. Then goeth he, and taketh with him ſeven other Spirits more wicked than himſelf; and they enter in, and dwell there: and the laſt ſtate of that Man is worſe than the firſt. Even ſo ſhall it be alſo unto this wicked Generation. So as they are worldly and miry Luſts he aſſaulted them with, to turn them from the holy Commandment.

And this is for ſome time alſo, that the ſtate of this Man continues in this freedom from Satan in theſe reſpects; for when he hath walk'd his walk through dry places, vext and melancholy at his Diſappointments, he after a while thinks thus with himſelf, to return to his old exerciſe and employment, and makes trial (but ſo at firſt, ver. 44.) then he ſaith, I will return to my houſe, from whence I came, &c. and finding a Man yielding, he takes more and worſe Devils to aid him.

If the Objection be, that this Inſtance is of a Man that falls away, and ſo not applicable to true Chriſtians that hold out.

My Answer is.

1. 'Tis true, that in the point of falling away, theſe two, a true Chriſtian, and this Inſtance, agree not.

2. My Aſſertion ſtands good in this, that if God reſtrains Satan from tempting, or prevailing over ſuch temporary Profeſſors in groſſer Evils, at their firſt reforming for a time, then he doth it much more unto true and real Converts of his own.

3. Satan's new invading and returning upon this Man, who after apoſtatizeth, is not from this, that he knew him to be not a ſincere Convert, with difference from one that is ſincere; No; God reveals no ſuch thing to him. Nor can he diſcern that ſoon; but the one and the other are alike at firſt in his eye. And ſo he returns upon the ſame Opinion, and Apprehenſions that are common and alike of either, one as well as t'other; he makes his aſſault upon the like ground, hoping to prevail upon the one as well as t'other, not knowing which God will preſerve and cauſe in the end to ſtand, and which not. And therefore the Argument I have us'd from that Scripture doth hold good; and the caſe of a ſincere Convert and another, comes all to one, in reſpect to Satan's renewing his aſſaults: for the reaſon for his new aſſaulting the one, is the ſame for the other; and he is by God alike reſtrain'd from the one, as he is from the other, and let looſe again by God in a like manner upon either. For otherwiſe, if God ſhould therein put and diſcover a difference, Satan would have knowledg afore-hand, who are ſincere and who not; if any conſtant difference were obſerv'd by God in this particular.

And 4. God thus orders it in a tender gracious Diſpenſation towards his own, whoſe Condition at firſt needs this; They fall into Temptations, if need be, 1 Pet. 1. 6. But truly there is no need of the falling into, much leſs prevailing of ſuch Temptations at firſt; for they would utterly put them off, and ſplit their Faith quite: God reſerves them till they are habitually grown ſtronger in Grace, as the Text here; I write to you, young Men, for ye are ſtrong. God ſuffers not his Eaſt-wind to blow upon tender Plants, at their firſt ſhooting forth, Iſa. 27. 8. In meaſure when it ſhooteth forth, thou wilt debate with it: he ſtayeth his rough Wind in the day of the Eaſt-wind. Nor lets he out any Temptation they are not able to bear. This holds in point of ſinning, as well as in point of ſuffering; yea much more.

(4.) This Diſpenſation is in conformity unto Chriſt. When was it that Chriſt began to be tempted (and indeed he with all ſorts of Temptations by Satan Chap. 3. at once) but when he arriv'd at the years of the middle Age of Man, at thirty years? You read not that during his private Life he was tempted afore (tho we cannot affirm that he was altogether free and devoid of them) but there is an Intimation that sometimes afterwards Satan did return; he departed from him, says the Story, for a season. And to be sure that all along after his entrance into that publick Life, he was exercis'd with continual Temptations from Satan and the World; insomuch as himself notes that time, whilst he had walk'd with his Disciples, to have been his special time of Temptation, Luke 22. 28. Ye are they who have continued with me in my Temptations. And at, or about those Years of natural Age, unto most Converts, may the account of their middle Age of Christianity begin.

Thus much for their incidency unto Temptation, insinuated in that there is a Conflict; an Overcoming, which was the first thing singled out.

But there is a second, and of greater difficulty, and that is, How and in what respect they are said more eminently to have overcome Satan? For are they not in their Conflicts apt to be overcome, and to yield to corrupt Affections? and how far they may be overcome, is not to be determin'd by Man.

Gualter
uti maluit
præterito, propter certitudi-nem victo-
riæ.

1. This as a difficulty Calvin and others have took notice of; Vicisse dicit, qui adhuc sunt in ipso bellandi; alia conditio in hoc bello, Mars enim aliis dubius, & eventus belli anceps: Nos priusquam congregiamur, jam sumus victores; quia Caput nostrum Christus semel totum mundum vicit. "He saith these have overcome, who are yet in the very Act of warring; the case is otherwise in this War, for the Battel to other Warriors is doubtful, and the Event of the Battel uncertain: whereas we, before we encounter, are already Conquerors; because our Head Christ at once hath overcome the whole World.

2. If Christ maintains a Conflict in thy Heart against Sin, that there is a Seed of God yet abiding in thy Heart, that doth never, can never yield to Sin, or an Act of Sin; although the corrupt Law in the Members carry them to the outward Act, yet this reluctancy is a keeping the Field, a not laying down the Sword: thus our Apostle in his third Chapter, ver. 9. Whosoever is born of God, doth not commit Sin, for his Seed remaineth him; and he cannot sin, because he is born of God. And Rom. 7. ult. when you hear that Outcry in your Hearts, O miserable Man that I am, who shall deliver me? As Jehosaphat cry'd out, when environ'd with Chariots, fighting against him, 1 Kings 22. 32, 33. and 2 Chron. 18. 31. And it came to pass when the Captains of the Chariots saw Jehosaphat, that they said, it is the King of Israel; therefore they compassed about him to fight: but Jehosaphat cry'd out, and the Lord help'd him; and God mov'd them to depart from him. So that Man there in Rom. 7. ult. cries out, and by Faith gives thanks afore-hand, in the assurance of the Victory; I thank God, through Jesus Christ our Lord. When it comes to be a confidence, God hears our Cry; we then have the Petitions we ask of him. 'Tis our Apostle's rule, though the performance be delay'd, and thou mayst still be actually overcome. Here this Passage is added, The word of God abideth in you: and ye have overcome the wicked one. Whence I gather, that if the word of God (which is that Seed of God; chap. 3. 9. as Peter tells us, 1 Epist. 1.) abideth in thee unexcused; not shaken out of thy Heart, UNCHOAKED (as I may difference the case of true Believers from others, the thorny ground, from Christ's Word us'd in the Parable, in saying that in the thorny ones Lusts CHOAK the Word in their Hearts) but in thee it remains rooted; and as a Spring works out the Mud that stopt it, and humbles you, and reduceth you to God again: This is a Victory. Join these two together that are in the Text; The Word of God abides in you, and you have overcome that wicked one; to this sense that this is an evidence you have overcome, because a Seed of God still abides in your Hearts unconquerably, so as the Assaults of Sin and Satan have not, cannot totally prevail against you.

But you will say, these are but Generals, common to all Ages of Christianity: They all, yea Babes, in these respects may be said to have overcome, as well as young Men.

The answer is; That this last-mention'd Consideration may in a more special respect be attributed unto middle-ag'd Christians, rather than Babes: for by that time time this Age is come and gone, they must be suppos'd to have run through much, and a long space in fighting against Sin, and to have had many bloody Noses given and taken in those Conflicts: and yet that they should be able to say after so many wounds receiv'd, I have still the same spiritual Life of Christ abiding in me, I am yet alive, I am still heartned to fight it out, I will never lay the weapons down; this is an evidence to them, namely that after so long a time, the Word of God is still abiding in their Souls: The root of the matter is in them. A signal evidence it is that there is that in them that cannot sin, nor close with Sin. Conscience alone will not keep the field so long, nor hold out; at best it doth clamour against Sin, but will soon be flatted, and the edg of its resistance be taken off. But this is a constant Principle of Holiness abiding in them, that really fights against Sin, which can never be still'd nor return thither. And this is a Pawn and Pledg of a certain Victory in the end; and a surer Pledg thereof, than that which young Beginners, who have not run through so great a time in so fore and so re-iterated Temptations of all sorts, can have experience of; such as these middle-ag'd Christians have: and therefore this Honour is rather attributed unto them, than unto Babes. That Grace is preserv'd in the midst of violent Assaults, tending to extinguish it; that a drop of Oil should maintain it self above Water, or in the end still get uppermost, notwithstanding all the stormy Surges of the Sea, when they rage most to overwhelm it.

5. Take the most of Christians, and their Experience will tell you, that in their Conflicts against grosser Evils and Lusts, they oftner not yield to the Act, than are overcome into it: for which I refer you to other Writings.

6. Instead of many other Answers, I will add this; That the estimate of Overcoming, lies not in accounting how oft thou hast been foild, rather than overcome, by not yielding; but in this, that if thou hast had many times in thy Life, yea and at any time thou canst remember (for such Overcomings as I shall now mention, are more rare and less seldom discern'd, than in reality they fall out and occur) that thou hadst a clear Victory, out of pure Motives and Considerations, which are proper to true Grace; as which were drawn from the Interest that God and Christ have in thy Soul, and thy Soul in them; as from the Grace of God, Union with Christ; the Power of his Death apply'd, through Faith its having recourse to it; and the power thereof brought home to thy Heart thereupon; Thou that hast overcome, shalt overcome. There fall out often to God's Children many frustrations of Temptations from Lusts and Satan's assaults, by providential Occurrences and Motives, whereby God restrains his own in the nick of opportunity, as he did David by Abigail; which we are indeed to bless God for, as David there did, 1 Sam. 25. 32, 33, 34. for they are out of Grace and Favour towards us, when not out of pure Grace in us: And therefore David blesteth God for that of his there, and so should we. Yet these are not so evidential to us of our overcoming, or of Victories on our parts; they are ways to escape (as 1 Cor. 10. 10.) rather than Victories: But such as are purely from our having had recourse to Christ for Strength against them; and then Motives that arise precisely from our Converses and Communion with God and Christ, as aforesaid, with Strength coming in, with downright Blows to dead them; and not per modum diverticuli, by way of diverting the Mind: for so any other Thoughts that get in do; they may take off and turn aside for the present the Mind from a Lust, a Fancy, a strong Incurfion: but such Overcomings mention'd are signal, in open Field, and by force of Arms, spiritual Arms; and may be recorded Exploits of spiritual Chivalry, and among the famous and wondrous Works that God works in us, and for us.

Use 1. The first Use is an Admonition to middle-ag'd Christians. 'Tis an hour, or rather a long season of Temptation; and no Man knows what Trials he may in Temptations to Sin run through, nor at what time most: we are therefore call'd to stand upon our watch continually, and to be sober, as in 1 Pet. 5. 8. where at ver. 10. But the God of all Grace, who hath called us into his eternal Glory by Jesus Christ, after that ye have suffer'd a while, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you. Suffering a while is not only or mainly in a time of Persecution for Christ, whereof he had spoken chap. 4. 17. but from Temptations to Sins, which are Chap. 3. are the greatest Sufferings; and the Devil watcheth that he may devour or drink up a man's Soul (as the word is) he swallows down some Professors, as we do a Draught; and so Judas was serv'd by him. He springs a Mine, and suddenly blows them up. Cities besieg'd stand upon their guard, when an Enemy is at the Gates; and keep double watch and ward, and especially in the seasons, as in the Nights, when the season is for Onsets and Assaults; and countermine their Mines. This middle Age is the time wherein most Temporaries fall away, as the thorny Ground, in whom Lusts grew up with the Word, till they had chok'd the Word; so that there was some long time of Profession pass'd first. Whereas the stony Ground presently gave out; when the Sun of Persecution was up, they withdrew in the infancy of Profession, and did not stay till their middle Age: These were as rath ripe Fruits, and are nipt with an April Frost before Summer comes. Those other, the thorny, abide longer, for their Humiliation was deep; yet not so deep, but that the sense of the Bitterness of Sin went off and decreas'd, and so they prov'd unfruitful for some time before they died: They are wither'd Trees, as Jude compares them; autumnal Fruits, as his Expression is. They fall as Leaves in the Autumn, in the declension of their Years, before the Winter of old Age comes; and seldom or never continue till then.

Use 2. Again, you middle-ag'd Christians, set your selves to overcome at that season with all your might; for as it is the special season of Temptation, so of Overcoming. Make it your Glory to obtain Victory, during that season; The Glory of young Men is their Strength, Prov. 20. 29. Which was seen in the Wrestlers and Strivings at the Olympian Games, where Crowns upon the publick Charge were given unto the Overcomers; unto which the Apostle alludeth, 2 Tim. 2. 5. And if a Man also strive for Masteries, yet is he not crown'd, except he strive lawfully. And if you will know what 'tis to strive lawfully, read 1 Cor. 9. 25. And every Man that striveth for the Mastery, is temperate in all things: now they do it to obtain a corruptible Crown, but we an incorruptible. Therefore go on thus to fight that good Fight, that you may lay hold upon eternal Life, 1 Tim. 6. 12. And tho you be often foil'd and put to the worse, yet rise up, and to't again. And there are two Motives: 1. 'Tis a good Fight, wherein you are to overcome, if you continue to fight, and faint not. 2. Lay hold on eternal Life; this is the Reward, the Bravium in your Eye. He that is slow to Anger, and ruleth his Spirit; that is, overcomes himself; is better than he that takes a City, Prov. 16. 32.

Use 3. Reckon with thy self how many Victories thou hast had; how oft you have overcome, and how often been foil'd; how many set Battels thou hast fought, wherein the Archers have shot sorely at thee, but thy Bow abode in its strength: these do turn greatly to thy Glory at last at the Day of Judgment, and thy Comfort now in this Life. The Promise that concludes all the Epistles to the Churches, runs thus, To him that overcometh. The Indians in New England fighting with short Hand-clubs, wherewith they knock down their Enemies, look how many Men they have kill'd in several Fights, they set down at the Club-ends so many Notches; which they keep and shew for their Glory. How often thou hast kept thy self from thine Iniquity, and how often thou hast been overcome, keep an account, to the end to humble thy self the more.

I come now to the opening of the first Character given to these young or middle-ag'd Christians; I write to you, Young men, says he, because ye are strong. There is a double spiritual Strength; one that is radical in the Soul it self, consisting in the strength and vigor of habitual Graces: The other assistant thereto from the Spirit, according as he is pleas'd to arm and fill the Soul with himself, joining with it by strengthening the Graces in us; which you read of Eph. 3. 16. That he would grant you according to the Riches of his Glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit, in the inner Man. And this latter accessory Strength is there meant, as that which is granted by God, as we have need of it, which we have every moment; but in special Assaults and Temptations, so as to overcome, 'tis a Strength given to help in time of need. There is some likeness in both these, in the Strength of the Body; there is an inward and abiding Hability in the Limbs and inward inward parts; a sprightly Vigor fit for any Action, whereto Strength is needful to be put forth; which others that are Children or sickly want: and this is abiding in them when asleep, as in the Body of a Lion or Elephant, in Job 40. 17, 18, 19. He moveth his Tail like a Cedar, the Sinews of his Stones are wrapt together; his Bones are as strong pieces of Brass, his Bones are like Bars of Iron; he is the chief of the ways of God: he that made him, can make his Sword to approach unto him. And there is an assistant Strength, which strong Wine, or some spiritul Cordial gives, over and above the natural. The Psalmist's similitude of a Giant, implies both; like a Giant (who is stronger than other Men in his natural Hability) refresh'd with Wine, which adds thereunto, and makes him more potent to act: so there is an habitual Strength in the inner Man of a Christian, grown up from a Child to be a Man, to a full age; which here the Apostle hath in his eye. That as in nature Babes are weak, Children are weak, but middle-ag'd Men are strong, in respect of such an inward abiding Strength in them; and so 'tis here intended. And in respect to this habitual Strength it is, that in other Scriptures some Christians are term'd strong, others weak, as in the 14th and 15th Chapters to the Romans, and the Prophet Zach. 12. 8. of the times of the New-Testament Saints; In that day shall the Lord defend the Inhabitants of Jerusalem, and he that is feeble among them at that day shall be as David; and the House of David shall be as God, as the Angel of the Lord before them. The Angels, they are said to excel in Strength, and so the opposition runs between weak and strong Christians. But then the assistant Strength of the Spirit filling that inward Man, whereof Eph. 4. 18. Be not drunk with Wine in excess, but be fill'd with the Spirit: who filling you, strengthens, cheers you as Wine; and wherein is no excess, but an access of a mighty Power, when he mingles with our Spirits, and is as Wine that flushes our natural Spirits. And that is the Strength that Petition Eph. 3. especially intends; and the main Strength also, in respect of which these middle-ag'd Christians are said to be strong, and by which to overcome: for therein it is that indeed our Strength now lies.

But although this habitual Strength of the inward Man may be intended here by John, yet we must know that the Compare of our spiritual Strength, with that of the Body, instanc'd in, runs upon unequal feet; for our spiritual Strength lies principally in the Supplies of the Spirit, as Phil. 1. they are stil'd, and not in our habitual Graces: whereas the chief of bodily Strength lies in the Body it self and natural Spirits; and the additional Strengtheners are small comparatively. I would therefore for illustration sake of this great Point, fetch my Parallel or Comparison from such Persons, whose Bodies, tho by natural Constitution strong, yet had that Strength intended and elevated by the Spirit's coming upon them, enabling them to act, and fight, and overcome; which was Sampson's case: and that indeed will serve to set forth this. Sampson had no doubt a natural Strength, far exceeding other Men, in himself and in his Limbs, such perhaps as Giants, which yet we find not that he was: But then he had superadded to that the Might of the Holy Ghost, falling upon him at times, and upon occasions; as when he pull'd down the Pillars of that Play-house of the Philistines, like as 'twas afore said of him, Judges 15. 14. And the Spirit of the Lord came mightily upon him, and the Cords that were upon his Arms became as Flax that was burnt with Fire, and his Bands loosed from off his Hands. And ver. 15. He found a new Jaw-bone of an Ass, and put forth his hand and took it, and slew a thousand men therewith. And chap. 13. 25. And the Spirit of the Lord came upon him at times, &c. And this Assistance he sometimes had by Faith and Confidence in God, that he would vouchsafe; as in the story of that 13th Chap. he ventures unarm'd, yea bound, to meet more than a thousand Philistines, that were resolv'd to kill him; and the Spirit came not in him till he was amongst them: yet he ventur'd it afore. This was therefore in Faith (whereof the Apostle speaks, Heb. 11.) that such an Assistance would come upon him: and so in the other case of the two Pillars.

And this extraordinary Supply of strength by the Spirit, sutes best to set forth spiritual Strength here; though withal I profess not to compare such extraordinary Exploits and Atchievements, wherein Sampson was made to excel all other Men whatever, and himself at other times, by the Spirit's coming on him, with those ordinary

Chap. 3. ordinary Overcomings here; as if I intended that the middle-ag'd should be acted by such miraculous Excesses and Actions, comparatively to other Christians, the Spirit's coming on them. No; but I make use of it to this purpose, to illustrate how as Sampson's strength to do what he did, lay not in his own inherent Strength, but the Spirit's assisting him with his Power, hiddenly joining with his and elevating of his; and that therein it was his Strength did lie: Thus so here, in the Spirit's supplies it is, that these middle-ag'd mens Strength doth also lie, or any others in spiritual Actings and Overcomings; and that it was not the habitual Strength of their own Graces. And the Scriptures are express in it, 2 Tim. 2. 1. Thou therefore, my Son, be strong in the Grace that is in Christ Jesus. It were to contradict this Passage, and dishonourable to Christ our Head, to narrow this Grace that is in Christ Jesus, unto that habitual Grace inherent in us from Christ; as if that were our Strength. No; 'tis that which is in Christ Jesus his Person, in his keeping, and his giving forth, as we are to act: for when he exhorts, Be ye strong, &c. he speaks it as in order unto doing and acting, and the increase of Strength. And it would soon be ill with us, if we should be left to that kind of Strength alone, to act withal, as Adam was: No, ours is in the Person of Christ, the Power of an endless Life residing in him, and assisting us according to his Strength, which by Faith going to him for, he gives forth to us. For as he is our Life, Col. 3. 4. so he must be acknowledg'd our Strength: for what is Strength, but Life in an active Vigor? And this the Apostle tells us, from his own Experience, was it that enabled him to do all things, Phil. 4. 13. I can do all things through Christ who strengthneth me. 'Twas a Strength in and for the act, that strengthneth me; and 'twas in what he was to do, I am able to do all things through Christ that strengthneth me in the doing. Let us walk therefore in an habitual emptiness of Self-confidence, waiting on Christ for Strength, remembering that of the Apostle, that when I am weak, then I am strong; and be in this sense weak, that the Power of Christ may rest upon you. There was one King, of whom it is said, he was help'd till he was strong. Peter's Confidence in the present sense of his own Grace, though all Men leave thee, I will not, was the ground of his Fall; he went out in his own strength: Isa. 45. 24, 25. Surely shall one say, In the Lord have I Righteousness and Strength; even to him shall Men come, and all that are incens'd against him, shall be ashamed. In the Lord shall all the Seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory. We all profess that Righteousness of Justification (and that is meant there, as appears by ver. 25. In the Lord shall all the Seed of Israel be justified) that's alone in Christ, the Lord our Righteousness. Now the same is said of Strength: Our Strength lies in him, and as he will give it forth, we have Strength; and as he with-holds, we are weak. And there is the same reason for this, as for that other, in their several proportions, wherein they may differ; that in him we should glory, as it follows there: therefore look out to him for it, as the word is, ver. 22. And unto him shall Men come. Ver. 24 Surely shall one say, In the Lord have I Righteousness and Strength; even to him shall Men come. Therefore go to him, come to him for Strength; he will strengthen you.

But you will say to me, If you interpret this of middle-ag'd Christians, because you are strong, to intend chiefly the strength of the Spirit of Christ, in respect of assistance to act; and not so much that inward Strength, which is in themselves, wrought by Christ and the Spirit; how could he make this to be middle-ag'd mens eminent Property? for this Strength, tho it works in us, yet is extrinsecal to our Spirits. And again, even Babes may be influenc'd as much with such a kind of Strength, as middle-ag'd Christians may be suppos'd to be; for it is wholly what is without themselves, till sent in at the time of acting: and Babes are as capable and receptive of this kind of Strength to overcome Temptations (which is the matter whereto we speak) as the middle-ag'd, if the Spirit of the Lord come upon them. And what can the middle promise themselves more thereof, than Babes may do; or the Apostle for them, that he should say comparatively to Babes, ye are strong? Doth not the Prophet, speaking of the Messiah's times, Isa. 35. 3. 4. say, Strengthen ye the weak Hands, and confirm the feeble Knees: Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not; he will come and save you. And at ver. 6. Then

Then shall the lame Man leap as the Hart; even from the first-hour that the Power of Christ, and the Spirit comes upon him. Which is spoken not of the Miracles in such mens Bodies only, but of spiritual Strengthenings also. For those words in ver. 3. Strengthen ye the weak Hands, and confirm the feeble Knees; that precede these other; are applied by the Apostle in the Epistle to the Hebrews, unto spiritual Feebleness and Strength. Chap. 3.

'Tis true that the Dispensations of assisting Grace in the acting our inward Man, is depending wholly on God's good Pleasure, as Phil. 2. 13. and he can, and doth sometimes ordain, that is, vouchsafe Strength unto Babes and Sucklings. Psal. 8. and they are often carried at first, as with a Spring-tide of extraordinary Assistance; which yet afterwards, when that Land-flood extraordinary is run and spent, the Stream is contracted to an usual Channel, and falls unto, and becomes Ebb-tides, and greatly decrease: as in my Treatise of Growth in Grace I have observ'd. Yet for answer to the Objection.

Ans. 1. That God more ordinarily vouchsafeth adjuvant efficacious Grace to overcome Temptation, according to the measure of Grace habitual or inherent: and therefore when men are grown up to more radical inward Strength, he gives more effective assisting Strength; he meteth forth Temptations to the ability our inward Man is furnish'd withal, as that we are able to bear them, as 1 Cor. 10. he declares his measure to be. And then he vouchsafes his actual supply of aiding Strength, according to the proportion of that inherent stock of Ability he sees in the inward Man; which if it effectually assist us, will prevail: And then as the Conflicts grow greater, our additional Aids are together therewith increas'd. Now if it be thus, then the Objection comes to be in a great measure solv'd; for the additional is ordinarily proportion'd to the inherent habitual Grace, and so the measure of both comes to one. It falls out in this, as it was with Sampson; the Spirit assisted Sampson when grown up to the full strength of a Man, far more than when he was a Child, and naturally weaker; although when of younger years he at times fell on him and by Fits, as we heard out of Judges 13. ult. yet not to perform such prodigious Exploits, as after he was grown elderly. The Spirit observ'd a Decorum of his Assistance, proportion'd to his Years.

The Grace of God works freely indeed, and will shew his Freedom; he obligeth not, nor ties himself absolutely to such Rules and Measures as these always, and to all Persons: but at his good Pleasure takes liberty to withhold his supplies from such as have most of this inherent Grace we speak of, to shew the Weakness of all our Grace, as it is in us, without his further active influencing Grace, working the Will and the Deeds, and also that his Grace is tied to none. This we see in David, when he was left to sin more foully in his middle Age, than in his first days (as they are call'd) and so in like manner Hezekiah, both grown up to a middle Age in Grace. Yet this Assertion of ours concerns only what his more ordinary Dispensations are. And truly of those I may say, that although God's Grace is free, yet it delights to observe set rules in those Dispensations; as to give promise, that he that bringeth forth much Fruit, he will purge to bring forth more Fruit, John 15. 2. That is one rule with himself likewise, He that is justified, let him be justified still. Yet more and more, Rev. last. And to him that hath, shall be given: and the like. For therein his Grace is seen to give Grace, that he may be mov'd to give more Grace: and thus it come to pass, that habitual Grace being increas'd by the exercise and using of it it self, where it is once begun by Regeneration; that then the Influences of active and overcoming Grace from God come to abound more, as habitual Grace through long exercise hath abounded. 'Tis like God's blessing some Men in their outward Callings (and 'tis God that gives power to get Wealth) the Promise being, that the diligent hand makes rich. God giving a Man power to be diligent, superadds Riches as cast in, over and beyond that diligence, as the Reward of it. This we see in some Merchants, who through Diligence having obtain'd a large stock for Trade, God in his good Providence vouchsafeth their special Hits (as they call good haps) singular overplus Advantages that fall out in their way: and thus it is here. And that God increaseth the inward stock of habitual Grace within us, by gracious Diligence in holy actings, I have long understood to be the mind of Chap. 3. of that, in Rom. 6, 22. If ye be Servants to God, you have your Fruit unto Holiness. To be the Servants of God, is to be holy; the Fruit therefore of serving God, is a Communication of more Holiness. Fruit imports what is of the natural growth of a Tree according to its kind. If the good Tree increaseth in bulky Holiness, the Fruit thereof will be more and larger Holiness. And which is strange in Nature, the Tree will grow bigger in the Body and Sap of it, by how much it bears more Fruit. The Fruit it brings forth in holy Actions, causeth the Stock to grow more in quantity still greater. The ground I interpret that place thus, is, that in the foregone Ver. 19. 'tis said, that yielding our members Servants to Righteousness unto Righteousness; that is, that our active Righteousness in our Walkings and Obedience, or Righteousness acted and exercis'd, is Righteousness unto Righteousness; that is, tends to an Increase of habitual intrinsecal Righteousness, which is the Principle of further acting.

Whereunto I add, that God gives assisting Grace in proportion to the measure of Grace acquir'd and gain'd: He crowns his Graces in us with more Grace: Ten Cities to him that had increas'd his one Talent to ten; he crowns habitual Strength, gotten by exercise of Holiness, with more enlarg'd Strength. And so the Apostle might well say of them, who through long exercise of Grace, had acquir'd much inward Grace, that ye are strong; and that in both these senses of a being strong, in comparison to Babes.

Nor doth that Objection wholly or universally enervate this Assertion, viz. That he suffers some in their middle Age much to decline and fall away in Strength; for still it often in experience proves to be in the issue, that they are recover'd to their wonted Vigour again, and act more strongly than ever: as Sampson did at last, when his Hair was grown again; which was the Signal, and as a sacramental Token of his recovering the Spirit again, as it had been before the cutting of it. And it may perhaps prove the truth, that by Falls, and great and long Languishments, and gradual Decays in actings of Grace in some middle-ag'd Christians; it proves there is not so much a decay of the stock it self of habitual Strength in the Root and Principles of it, but in the exercises of it: such as we see in strong-bodied Men, that fall into a Consumption, or some other Infirmity, that occasions a present languishing, that they become for outward Motion as weak as Children; when yet the radical strength of their Constitution, and of that which they were grown up unto, recovers again, as Sampson's Hair did; and they die in a far greater spiritual Vigor than ever: as Sampson at his death was empower'd and cloth'd wsth a far more mighty strength by the Spirit, than ever he had in his whole Life, after the recovering of his Hair.

Ans. 2. Middle-ag'd Christians have through long Use and Experience learnt Self-emptiness in their acting Holiness more, so as to make them not to be so confident they can do this or that, in the strength of Grace inherent. And this is a Lesson long a learning, and perhaps more hard to be learnt, than to go out to Christ for the Righteousness of Justification. And it is taught by long Experience; for as Experience breeds Hope in the way and course of believing, so Experience of having so often been foil'd, through going about to act from the strength of inherent Grace in our selves, doth at last teach us the most effectually this dependence on Christ.

And truly there are divers things that concur upon and after our first Conversion, that give occasion to us, if not to think it is from the strength of inherent Grace receiv'd by Regeneration, that we do then act; yet so far at least, as to divert our Thoughts from so attentive looking out of our selves for a further efficacious assistance from Christ, to work in us both the will and the deed. As,

1. They find in themselves, as other Men, a Will, which by God is appointed to be the free Principle of its own Motion, and of our actings.

Then 2. upon Regeneration we find a new Principle of Holiness wrought in us by Christ; which, as another Nature, possesseth and inclineth our Hearts unto what is holy, and residing in our Wills, disposeth them in some measure, tho imperfectly, so to act; there being by reason thereof, a natural Agreeableness and Suitableness between our Hearts and such Actions, as such, so far as we be regenerated.

3. Christ leaves not this his new Creature to it self, but himself with his Spirit dwelling therein, cherisheth and acteth it, as the Mother doth the Child in her Womb, and nurseth it as when she hath brought it forth; yet this he doth unknown that it is he that doth all. He is a God that hides himself in these his actings at first, as in other things he useth to do; whether the Soul puts forth acts of Faith, and dependancy for his special help in the acting of it, yea or no. Christ bears from the Womb, as well as to the hoary Age; as the Prophet Isaiah under this similitude expresseth it: and it is said of Ephraim, when he was a Child, God holding him up in his Arms, taught him to go. In which case, though a Child useth his own strength, else it were not a teaching him to go; yet the Weakness of his Limbs is such, as it is the strength of him who holds him up, in the virtue of which he goes: and yet when it is thus holden up, it takes no notice of the other's supporting of it, but is ready to ascribe it chiefly to its own Ability, and so to be confident in venturing to go alone, and then it falls. And yet Christ bears us, and carries the Lambs, and those which are with young in his arms: Thus assisting, because he would encourage it in our Weakness, and also to make a discovery of the Quality and kind of this new Creature, acting it self in us.

And 4. This new Creature thus assisted, being a Divine Nature, and inclining us, as a Nature useth to do, unto good Works to walk in; although we cannot but be sensible that the Infusion of that new Principle it self, has been wholly from the Power and Efficiency of Christ, and not of our selves; the new inward frame of our Hearts being in a good degree so contrary to what was formerly in the unregenerate Estate we had liv'd in: Yet still as to the actings of that new Creature, after it is wrought, we are not presently made so sensible and aware of that great Power that carries it on, and so not of dependance on Christ without us, as of our Head that influenceth all those our actings also, but are apt not to look on it further than that it is, or as if it were the Pondus and Sway of that new Creature, which as a new Creature carrieth on our Wills and Affections, as in a natural way, so far as we are regenerated: even as in sinning we had found afore and do after, that our corrupt Inclinations naturally carried us unto the contrary. And this new infus'd Nature we look upon working as a contrary Nature to that other of Sin, as two contrary streams running cross, as indeed they are. And having been but newly brought acquainted with Christ, that acquaintance begins at first chiefly in our seeking out our Righteousness of Justification in him, and receiving from him therewith this inherent Principle of Holiness, which is his Image; as both being absolutely necessary to that season, and the Condition of a new Convert, who having come forth newly from a state of sinning with full Career and Consent of Will, and made sensible of Sin and Damnation, and possess'd with fears of Hell and Wrath, the grudging Fits of which we for a long time are not quite rid of: the strength and intention of the Mind is swallowed up with these so necessary things, at that present to be had from Christ, as the sole Remedy to the present case. And then the Spirit secretly supplying us with that Assistance, we by Faith should from the first go to him for it, but he hiddenly performing that in us and for us, without our minding it or looking out for it; the Spirit mingleth his Power (unperceivably to us) with the Activity of our Wills, in the new Creature. And further, we being as then fresh-water Soldiers, not train'd up enough to the observation of the many Ebbings of this Stream, and the flowings again thereof, to be from the Spirit of Christ, we do not discern his either increasing and raising up the Flood, or his with-holding so to do, to be the Causes of such a Variation in our actings, according to his good Pleasure.

These things consider'd, it is no wonder if we be more Strangers for a while at the first, unto this great point in our Christianity (and all of Christ is not learnt at once) of this continual dependance on Christ for acting, than we were of his Power in regenerating us. For at Regeneration we were convinc'd of that total contrary Corruption that had invaded, possess'd, and fill'd our Souls, so that we saw no one spiritual Good to have been in us; but now the Activity of our Will being thus furnish'd anew, with that new stock of habitual Grace to set up withal, and so vigorously assisted (though insensibly to us) by the Aids of the Spirit; we are prone to think that we have a spring of Good within our selves, that bubbles up

Chap. 3. continually what is good ; and so our Thoughts are far remov'd from the sense that we are not able to think one good Thought within our selves, but that all our sufficiency is of God. And although it may be suppos'd we might more easily be brought to receive the Doctrine, of this our Emptiness and Insufficiency to act ; yet practically to discern it, so as to set our Spirits a-work upon it, and enure our Hearts to the exercise of it, it is no wonder if (considering what hath been said to be our case) we be in the course of our Spirits apt and inclinable to put much of that hidden assistance the Spirit supplies us with, upon the natural Tendency and Activity of the new Creature, as a Divine Nature in us : ascribing the power and force of the Wind we see not, that carries on and drives the Stream, unto the natural Pondus and Propenseness of the Stream it self to run that way ; till we come to have had the experience of such Interchanges, Ebbings, and Flowings mention'd, and thereby come to see and judg what little Strength we of our selves have, with all our inherent Graces, and when left never so little by the Spirit, and his ceasing to act us, and what difference there is when we are enlarg'd by Christ and his Strength, to run the ways of his Commandments.

But 5. There is yet a further thing at the bottom of this matter, and is the ground of our aptness to be misled in this point ; which is, that we are prone to it by Nature, both that corrupt Nature by the Fall, yea and pure Nature also, as it was in Adam's first state by Creation ; for in that pure Estate he and we his Posterity, if he had stood, had been under the Covenant of Works in all its differences from the tenor of the Covenant of Grace ; whereof this was one part, to work and act from what is in our selves. And tho by Conversion we are brought into the Covenant of Grace, yet the Principles of the Covenant of Works do mightily abide in us, and the secret unperceiv'd Influences thereof greatly prevail in us, and at least obstruct us and keep back our Hearts from the clear Knowledge, at least Practice and Exercise of Gospel-principles : although they be by Conviction entertain'd by our Judgments, yet the Principles of the Covenant of Works cleave as the Skin to our Flesh ; for they are the Law of Nature. This needs not to be largely insisted on.

'Tis evident enough, that corrupt Nature in Men unregenerate, but enlighten'd and endow'd with excellent spiritual Gifts, gratis given them, together with some supernatural Assistances vouchsafed in, and for the exercise of them in holy Duties ; doth convert them all, both Gifts and Assistance, to its own selfish ends predominantly, and from the Strength of such ends moving and acting them, they perform what they do in holy things. I need not insist on this neither. But I carry up my Demonstration higher, and deduce it from that of pure Nature in Adam afore the Fall.

1. Now Adam had first a Will, that was to be the free inward Mover and Author of its own Motion, and of those imperate Acts his Will should command to be put forth by him.

2. He had a full and perfect stock of Holiness, and of Love to God, concreated with, and residing in his Will ; posing it only unto what was holy.

3. He had a Concourse (as they speak) or Concurrence (which we better understand) of an Aid and Strength from God, giving sufficient power to will and act what was holy and good ; a posse si vellet, a power if he would act holily.

And these he had from God, as due by Creation, or, which is all one, by the Law of pure Nature, which it was meet God should furnish him withal : if he would create such a Creature reasonable, it was meet that then God should at, and by virtue of his first creating him, furnish him with all these ; especially giving withal Promises of Life and Threatnings of Death according to his holy actings, or the contrary. And if we suppose him not sufficiently furnish'd with all these, his Fall, or Deficiency had not been imputable, as Sin to him.

Now he that hath those two first Principles of a Will ; 1. Its being the Mover of it self from within it self ; and 2. a compleat Holiness swaying that Will only to what is holy ; 3. Join'd with a power of Assistance from God, as shall excite the Will, and give his Will sufficient power to act, if he will, he may and must be said to act and will from himself, when he acts or wills ; for the Will is his own, the Holiness he acts from and with is his own due, and in that respect natural to him by Creation-Law; and the concurrent Assistance from God, that is, so much and so far as to have power to act and to will, is no less his Creation-due likewise. And God in vouchsafing such an Assistance requisite to enable him to will, did therein no more for him in his kind; that is, according to the natural Law and due of a free-will Agent, which was to be its own Mover from within it self, unto the Act; than he did in his Concourse with each and every one of his Creatures in their actings in their kind, who keep his Ordinances to this day, through that Concourse God gives them. But Man through his Free-will, not using that Power, fell by what was purely his own. Chap. 3.

But my Scope in this recital of these three Principles, which may be stil'd Adam's own Strength, due to him by the Law of Nature, is to shew that these Principles of acting from our selves, naturally sticking in us, as νοῦναι ἐννοῦναι, common Principles of Nature use to do, are so prevalent, even after we have been enter'd into the Estate of Grace, and receiv'd the knowledg of Christ, that we are exceeding apt and obnoxious to those Principles still, and to be misled and misguided by them in the actings of Grace, and to go their way in seeking of Salvation; and that therefore it is no wonder if new Converts do so, when they find they have a Will that must still be the immediate Mover within it self of its own Action now when regenerate; and that by Regeneration they have a new principle also of Holiness, the very same for the bulk and matter of it that Adam was created in after the Image of God, Col. 3. 10. and find that Principle to be fitted, suted, and dispos'd agreeably to every good and holy Work; and tho when they act and have efficacious Assistance, that works the will and the deed in them, they have it all from Christ living in them, effectually working in their Hearts, beyond giving them a bare posse, power to act holily; yet this exceeding greatness of his power they discover not; and therefore, Eph. 1. the Apostle prays that the Eyes of their minds may be more and more enlighten'd, to know the exceeding greatness of his Power that works in them, whilst they act holily and spiritually, and yet conveying its Influences so hiddenly, that they are apt to think it the Efficacy of a new Nature. For they finding they are, tho supernaturally, yet secretly assisted by the Spirit in holy ways, so as to think, and to find that it is as a Nature in them, that they do it naturally with delight, &c. such is the Suitableness between their Hearts and the Duties of Holiness, when they are drawn out to them; I say, it is the less wonder that their Hearts should think they act in that manner that Adam did, from this Strength as if it were their own (tho indeed wholly receiv'd) and from themselves: or that they should attempt to act from those Principles within them, and put so much Confidence therein, so as to omit to look out for a continual renew'd Assistance from Christ, their new constituted Head. We see the like Ensnarement lies in the point of Justification. Men find they have good Works, perform holy Duties, &c. and the Scriptures term it a Righteousness; and the Principle of pure Nature in Adam having been, that he was justified by that Righteousness of and in himself, how doth this Principle, because it is the Law of Nature, adhere and cleave to mens Souls, and caus'd Paul to be afraid of his own Righteousness, lest he should be found in it? so that it is a long time that Believers stick in those Weeds clinging about them, and obstructing them in their way of believing on Christ's Righteousness alone. But so it falls out, that when they have through long and often Renunciation of their own, and wonted endear'd Embracements of Christ's Righteousness alone, got free of that Intanglement, they yet remain longer incumber'd and obstructed in this other I treat of, of acting in their own Strength. And as in a Tree that is to be pull'd up by the roots, after that some greater Roots, whereby it was naturally fastned in the Earth, are loosened and cut, yet it will stick still by some other lesser Fibres, smaller Strings that have no less hold fast than those other had; even so it is here. And till all whereby we cleave to old Adam's state be broke, which is long a doing by degrees, we are not grown up into that Compleatness in Christ which we ought to have, and which Union with Christ affordeth. And although I dare not say, the Holy Ghost may not secretly act them efficaciously beyond these Principles, whilst they discern it not, and so help them to overcome; and that the acts of Holiness, which the Holy Ghost draws

Chap. 3. draws forth of them, according to these Principles, may not be acceptable to God; being in reality and truth from the Image of Christ, wrought in them by Christ; and Christ effectually working in them, though they have not the cognizance of it, nor recourse to him for it; as hath been the case of many true Professors: yet still there is this wanting to make them strong indeed, to act steadily and constantly.

And this hath been the case of many true Professors at first for some time, and was of the Apostle Peter; till by the woful Experience of so dreadful a Fall, he saw his own utter dependancy on Christ, as without whom he could do nothing, and therefore was to abide in him: as Christ in his last Sermons a little before had instructed him, which he then understood not. And his Sin lay not in this, that he had not a true and real Resolution at that present time never to forsake his Master; (yea, to me it seems certain, that it was a Resolution sprung from out of true Grace, and cleaving to Christ at that time, and drawn forth by the Spirit, and it was not feign'd: And take that purpose of his abstractedly consider'd, and it was acceptable so far) But his Sin lay, 1. In that he discern'd not that it was Christ and his Spirit, who was the Author thereof at that present, and was to be the Maintainer of it and Finisher of it in him; and ought to have, in the sense of his own Insufficiency, pray'd as David did for the People, 1 Chron. 29. 18. Keep, O Lord, this purpose in the Heart of thy Servants. 2. His Sin lay in the Confidence he had for the future, or time to come, that he should ever retain that Spirit; whereas a Man is no further holy, than at the instant God makes him so to be. 3. In vain boasting of his present Strength, comparatively to all others; If all Men forsake thee, yet not I: and for this cause Christ let him fall with this reserve, praying his Faith might not fail; that he might learn what Paul did in another case, not to trust in himself, but in Christ to strengthen him. And in like manner thus it is and hath been with many Professors, till in the end through Experience of their own Inability, they come to see and know what it is to have Christ a supernatural Head to them as Members, for Motion, and a spiritual Root to them as Branches; and thus as Branches to bring forth Fruit in and by him, Phil. 1. and in him all their Fruit is to be found, and therefore Juice, and Sap, and Strength to bring forth, is to be fetcht from him. And that therefore they in spiritual Actings are to walk in an habitual Self-emptiness, and a daily Renunciation of this active Power of their Wills, as strengthened by inherent Grace alone, though wrought in them by Christ; and still to be saying within themselves, that which Isaiah prophesied of, One shall say, In the Lord have I Strength, Isa. 45. and sensibly to acknowledg, that that Power that is in Christ as their Head, united to them, must give the effectual casting stroke in holy Actings, and carry on the Will to them with Power. And this is the Strength the Apostle Paul, Phil. 4. and John here speak of; which Christians, till grown and beaten out of Self-confidence in their Wills and inherent Grace, do not learn sufficiently, and for want of this they come so much to fall, as Peter did; God having pronounc'd that in his own Strength no Man shall prevail. Now the Experience of the Saints failings, through the want of these things; as also on the contrary, the Experience positive, that when they are weak in respect of their own Strength, Christ's power doth rest upon them; these two Experiments, besides other Lessons given them by Christ in time, cause middle-ag'd Christians to live in a greater dependance upon Christ's Strength to be communicated, as without whom they find they can do nothing; and that all their Fruit is found in him. And this, I say, caus'd the Apostle here in both respects, whether of habitual Grace, or assisting efficacious acting Grace, to say of them, Ye are strong.

For 'tis a certain truth, that the more we walk in a constant sense of our own Weakness, and Dependance and waiting for Christ's strength to be put forth in us, the more strong we are: not in our selves, but as the Conies are in their Rock, as Solomon says. And this justly and deservedly is to be said, in comparison of Babes, who like young Boys, in fighting with their Fellows, have more eagerness and stomach, but find themselves weak, and easily overcome: whereas to say in our Hearts, as David did against Goliath, I come against thee in the Name of the Lord of Hosts, confirms our Strength.

Answ. 3: God vouchsafes occasional Helps and Assistances, according as our Temptations do grow and increase; according to the rule of Paul the Apostle, that as his Distresses abounded, so his Consolations abounded also. And this proves true in Temptations to Sin, our greatest Sufferings, as well as in any other. Now God having (as the Doctrine was) allotted Temptations greater to middle-ag'd Christians, than unto Babes; hence he is graciously pleas'd in the end and issue, to afford Strength to overcome: and in the view of this, the Apostle might deservedly say of them rather, Ye are strong.

FINIS.

THE WORKS

OF

Thomas Goodwin, D. D.

The Fifth Volume.

PART III.

CONTAINING A

DISCOURSE

Of the Blessed State of Glory, which the Saints possess after Death.

LONDON:

Printed by Sam. Bridge for Tho. Goodwin, M DCC III.

T H E

C O N T E N T S.

- CHAP. I. Of the Blessedness of a Dying Believer, Page 1.
- Chap. II. That the Soul of a Believer doth not Sleep, or is not in a State of Inactivity till the Resurrection. p. 6.
- Chap. III. That the Souls of Believers immediately, after their Separation from the Body, Live an Happy Life in the Enjoyment of God, Prov'd from the Account, which we have of the State of dying Saints both in the Old, and New Testament. p. 8.
- Chap. IV. That the Souls of Believers do, immediately after the Death of the Body, pass into a State of Glory, demonstrated from the Design of the Apostle Paul, in 2 Cor. 4. 17, 18. To encourage the Saints to endure all Afflictions and Calamities of this Life: And from his Design in 2 Cor. 5. 1, 28. To Comfort them against all Apprehensions of Death. p. 16.
- Chap. V. A State of Glory for Believers upon their Dissolution Demonstrated from those Vehement and Earnest Desires, which God hath implanted in them after such a State. p. 30.
- Chap. VI. That the Cloathing mentioned in the Text, 2 Cor. 5. 3. Doth Import the Spiritual Cloathing of the Soul in this Life, as a Preparation unto Glory. p. 36.
- Chap. VII. What is meant by the Phrase, 2 Cor. 5. 3. Of being found Naked, p. 40.
- Chap. VIII. The Words of the Text Explain'd, and their Coherence with the First and Second Verses. p. 47.
- Chap. IX. The True, and Eminent Grounds of a Christians Groanings after Dissolution, severed from the false Grounds of other Men: That a Christian doth not desire Death meerly on this alone Account, that it will give him ease in freeing him from all the Miseries, and Sorrows of this present Life. p. 54.
- Chap. X. The Positive Ground or Reason why a Christian desires Dissolution is; That the Weak, and Sinful Life, which he now lives, may be swallowed up of an Heavenly, and Eternal Life. p. 59.
- Chap. XI. That as the Soul is the immediate Subject of Grace, which is a Preparation to Glory, and capable of it: So the Soul is instantly after its Departure out of the Body receiv'd into that State of Glory. p. 65.

Chap.

The Contents.

Chap. XII. The Glory, into which the separate Soul is receiv'd, demonstrated from this Consideration, that God is the Efficient of it. P. 77.

Chap. XIII. Whether the State of Glory, into which separate Souls enter after Death, and in which they Live until the Resurrection, be not different from that, which they shall possess after that glorious Day, and in what the Difference consists. P. 90.

Chap. XIV. A Particular Enumeration of the Glories of that State, into which the separate Soul enters immediately after Death. P. 98.

Chap. XV. Of the Glories of Heaven, and the Happiness of glorified Saints therein. P. 105.

A

DISCOURSE

OF THE

Blessed State of GLORY

WHICH THE

Saints possess after Death.

C H A P. I.

Of the Blessedness of a Dying Believer.

Revelations, XIV. xiii.

And I heard a Voice from Heaven saying ; Write, Blessed are the Dead which Die in the Lord from henceforth : Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may Rest from their Labours, and their Works do follow them.

MY design is to Discourse from this Text concerning Death, which is the shooting the Gulph into the separate State of Souls.

1. It is apparent from the Words immediately preceding, that the Season, and so the Occasion of these, was an imminent Danger of Saints suffering unto Death ; and all other Persecutions accompanying the keeping the Commandments of God, and the Faith of Jesus. This is pointed at as with the Finger, and that Twice in that 12th Verse. Here (says he) are they that keep the Commandments of God, and the Faith of Jesus. That Particle Here in historical Narration, is set to Note out the Time, when some observable Thing fell out, as well as it doth a Place ; wherein Piscator glosseth upon that Word thus, in hac parte Prophetia ; for an historical Prophecy began a New at the 12th Chapter ; which from thence goeth over all Times, viz. from the Primitive, till the Day of Judgment. And this Particle Here, accordingly Points at some special Succession, and Occurrent that falls out in a particular Time ; as a Time wherein there would be extraordinary Trials of the Patience of Saints to the utmost ; the Word Patience by a Metonymy, signifying the Objects, or Matters of the Exercise of Patience ; the Particle Here likewise, Points at such sad Occurrences to fall out at that Time, as would try every Vein of their Hearts, who kept the Commands of God ; and also Denotes, that God would then Vouchsafe such Measures of Patience to his People, as should be signally Eminent, and Singular; and deserving this Remark, Here is the Patience.

If you be desirous to know the Time wherein these things are to fill out, look back to, and Compare herewith, another Passage in the 13th Chapter foregoing: Wherein you have at once an entire Scheme, or Representation of the Rise, Power and Cruelty of Christian Rome, when turned Antichristian; and of her Followers and Adherents. And there you find a Note of Animadversion inserted, ver. 10. He that leadeth into Captivity, shall go into Captivity; he that killeth with the Sword, must be killed with the Sword; here is the Patience and Faith of the Saints. And suitably to this next ensuing 14th Chapter, there is given another like entire Map, and Representation of an opposite Company that followed the Lamb, in a Succession all along Contemporary with the Times of that Beasts Reign; and of his Associates. And you find in the middle Part of that Story there, the same Reflections for Substance, that are here given, and there first uttered; and here in the appointed Time marked out, when Death, and all Cruelties were to be Executed on these Saints. It is again repeated here in ver. 12. of this Chapter; as that which occasioned these Words of my Text, in ver. 13. where you find Death, and Dying also spoken of; answerably to their being killed in that Passage of the former Chapter. So then, we know where we are; and the Persons whom the Words concern: And withal a punctual Designation of the Time; all which the 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, verses, do instruct us in; teaching us to reckon from the beginning of the breaking forth of the Light of the Everlasting Gospel, in the height of Antichristian Darkness that went afore, Preach'd by Three Angels, each after other; Age after Age; and more clearly the latter, then the foregoing, discovering Rome to be Babylon; and ordained to Ruine: And crying Louder, and Louder against their Idolatries; and calling upon Men to worship God alone: And also detecting their unwritten Traditions; which they had mingled with the Gospel. All which you may observe to be apparently reflected upon, in those Verses 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. And I saw another Angel flie in the midst of Heaven, having the Everlasting Gospel to Preach to them that dwell on the Earth; and to every Nation, and Kindred, and Tongue, and People: Saying with a loud Voice, Fear God, and give Glory to Him; for the Hour of his Judgment is come: And Worship him that made Heaven, and Earth, and Sea; and the Fountains of Waters. And there followed another Angel, saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen; that great City: Because she made all Nations drink of the Wrath of her Fornications. And the Third Angel followed them, saying, with a loud Voice; if any Man worship the Beast, and his Image; and receive his Mark in his Fore-Head, or in his Hand: The same shall drink of the Wine of the Wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture, into the Cup of his Indignation: And he shall be tormented with Fire, and Brimstone, in the Presence of the Holy Angels; and in the Presence of the Lamb: And the smok of their Torment ascendeth up for ever, and ever: And they have no rest Day, nor Night, who worship the Beast, and his Image; and whosoever receiveth the Mark of his Name. And the Notice of this, as the special Season will conduce towards the understanding some Things of Moment in the Text; as you will more clearly discern when I come to open that Word Henceforth, in the Text. This for the Season, and Occasion.

2. The Scope, and Ultimate Design of the Words was to Comfort, Hearten, and Strengthen those Saints in their suffering Death; when any of them should be called thereunto; for Christ. And as to Comfort, so withal to Direct, and Excite them, that in their Dying for the Lord, and his Cause; they should especially look to this, to Die in the Lord. And that also all other Saints, who were Expectants of Death every Moment should Live as Dying Men; and put, and keep their Spirits into a Posture of Dying daily; as those that might be hurried to Death, they know not how soon: And therefore ought to be daily in the continual Exercise of Faith in the Lord Christ. And though it might be their Lot to Die in their Beds a natural Death, yet they should see to it; that they exert and put forth all sorts of Dying Graces, whereby to glorifie Christ their their Lord and God in their Hearts in their Dying; to the utmost they were able: As much as possible, as if they were Dying at a Stake for Christ.

3. The Substance of the Matter it self spoken, sufficiently sheweth this to be the Scope of the Words. Blessed are the Dead (says he) that Die in the Lord, &c. Which Matter is summarily resolved into these Three Things.

1. That there is a State of full, and perfect Blessedness to be entred into, and possessed by the Souls of Saints, as soon as they are Dead; which is the Mind of that first Saying, Blessed are the Dead. Which Blessedness is further amplified in the latter Clause, because they then shall Rest from their Labours; and their Works follow them. Unto which the Voice from Heaven super-adds, a pronouncing them Blessed that Die in the Lord: That is, that Die in a lively Faith, and stedfast Hope in the Lord.

2. That this might be effected in the Hearts and Spirits of Dying Believers; and thereby that full Blessedness, promised in the first Saying, attained; and Believers Hearts established in it: The Holy Spirit hath passed a Promise of his own, to make it good in those suffering Times; and from thenceforth to bless Multitudes of his Dying Saints so to Die in Faith, and Hope, and the Exercise of other Dying Graces. Yea, saith the Spirit. Which I take to be an Engagement, and further Promise of the Comforter himself; undertaking more than ordinarily to accomplish in Believers Hearts, what the Voice had spoken, testifying to the Truth of it; and engaging his Word to see it performed.

3. With all these, take in the Importance of that small Word, from henceforth: As denoting a special Priviledge of suffering Saints, in those persecuting bloody Times: And so running along thorough the succeeding Gospel Times downwards.

All these Things mixt together with, and digested by Faith; having been spoken, and thus spoken: 1. By an immediate Voice from Heaven. 2. Commanded to be registred into the Sacred Canon. And, 3. Attested over and besides, by a Personal Warrant of the Holy Ghost, may perhaps be esteemed as one of the strongest, and most spiritfull Cordials, that ever was Compounded for Men that are a Dying; or that live in a continual Expectation of Death, they know not how soon. And perhaps it may come to be so valued by those, if not in this, yet in following Generations; whom the Efficacy of this following Word [from henceforth] takes hold of, it reaching, and extending to the end of the World, and for ever, for our Comfort; (if we would apprehend it:) But for certain unto theirs upon whom the latter Ends of the World are a coming: In which the Light of the Everlasting Gospel will grow. So as what the Apostle says upon his own having Discoursed of the Resurrection, and Glory that follows thereupon; in 1 Thes. 4. Comfort one another with these Words: The same you may Write upon this Alabaster Box of Cordial; the Outscription on it; Comfort for dying Saints. And the pretious Ingredients within do speak it. 'Tis no wonder then, that this Voice from Heaven should so solemnly Command the recording of this Saying: The Voice said unto me, Write: Which puts a singular Remark of Honour upon it, in that this single Passage should have so particular a Command concerning it, to write it: Whereas in Cap. I. II. at the Entrance of this whole Revelation, there had been a general Command, WRITE, once for All: And by Vertue of that Command it was, he still did write what he saw, or heard revealed to him; unless once when he was forbidden to Write, Chap. 10. II. But this; and none but Two more other, have such an indigitated redoubled Command for them. And the one of them is the Invitation of the Lambs Bride to her Marriage with Christ: Rev. 19. 9. And he saith unto me, WRITE, Blessed are they which are called unto the Marriage-Supper of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, these are the true Sayings of God. And the other is, when the Marriage is Consummated, Rev. 21. 5. And read with them the Verses afore, and after; for they contain the Sayings he was to Write, ver. 3, 4. And I heard a great Voice out of Heaven, saying, Behold the Tabernacle of God is with Men, and he will dwell with them; and they shall be his People, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God: And God shall wipe away all Tears from their Eyes, and there shall be no more Death;

Chap. I. Death; neither Sorrow, nor Crying; neither shall there be any more Pain; for the former Things are passed away. Then ver. 6, 7. And he said unto me, it is done; I am Alpha and Omega; the Beginning, and the End; I will give unto him that is a thirst, of the Fountain of the Water of Life freely. He that overcometh shall inherit all Things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my Son. This is the Blessedness of the New Jerusalem, which John saw come down from Heaven, ver. 2. And I John saw the Holy City, the New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of Heaven, prepared as a Bride adorned for Her Husband. And this in my Text is the Blessedness of Souls separate, who in the mean while, go to Heaven: Both are proclaimed by a Voice from Heaven: And I believe it is the Voice of God Himself, that sits upon the Throne, that uttereth both. And if, of the whole Scripture it be said, That whatever was written, was written that we through the Scriptures might have Hope; as Rom. 15. Then surely this single Piece the Words of my Text (which is commanded to be Written) above many other Scriptures; for over and besides its coming from Heaven immediately, it hath also the Broad-Seal of the grand Witness on Earth, The Spirit, (1 John 5.) set to it; after it is Written, and Spoken; Yea, saith the Spirit, &c. And it so directly, and solemnly speaking to the Point of Blessedness in Heaven, to be presently enjoyed by dying Souls; must needs be intended to give us Hope, the Hope of all Hopes; That Blessed Hope, Tit. 2.

OBSERVATION.

That for dying Saints to have their Souls enabled to exercise Faith, and Hope on the Lord Christ in the Hour of Death, is a singular, and superadded Blessing over and above that of being Blessed in Heaven.

Blessed are the Dead, that is the common Inheritance of the Saints in Light: But Blessed are those that Die in the Lord, is an additional Priviledge. Even as to believe is a Gift common to all Saints, but to you (says the Apostle to the Philippians, Phil. 1. 29.) is given not only to Believe, but to Suffer: And yet to Believe is far the greater Gift of the Two, for in that is our Salvation, and it is absolutely necessary thereunto: But so is not Suffering, for a Saint may be sav'd without it, tho' not without Believing. Yet in that Manner, and upon the same Account that the Apostle magnifies Suffering, when added to Believing, and that it is a farther special Priviledge, over and above Believing, so it is here in this Case of the Blessedness of a Believer, who dieth in the Lord. I do not say, that to Die in the Lord, is in it-self a greater Blessing, than the Glory that follows in Heaven: Or that no Saint comes to enjoy the Blessedness of Heaven, unless he Dies in the full Exercise of Faith. There are many Cases fall out to the contrary, and it may in that respect serve as a Relief, that the Blessedness of Heaven is spoken of, as distinct from this of Dying in the Lord. But yet still, it is a Blessing in it-self alone consider'd, to whomever it is vouchsaf'd, and it is a Blessing over and besides that of Heaven. And we may Comfort such a Saint, so Dying, with this Thought, that God hath given him not only to enter into Heaven, when he Dies, but hath bless'd him in his Dying with a lively Faith, and stedfast Hope in the Lord Jesus.

1. It is a great Blessing comparatively to the Case of many other Saints in Dying, whose happy Lot it is not to have such vigorous actings of Faith, and Hope at that Hour. And therefore such Dying in the Lord, is pronounced as a Blessedness in the Second Place, after the declar'd Blessedness of all Believers, who Die in a State of Salvation, and as Additional to it.

2. It is a Martyrs Blessing, who are the Eldest Sons of Blessedness among all the Sons of Adoption, and unto them it is generally vouchsaf'd. The Design of this Voice from Heaven (Rev. 14. 13.) is to speak unto Martyrs, and to Comfort, Encourage, and Direct them in their Dying, and to make a Promise to them of their being extraordinarily Blessed in the most violent, and torturing Death. And to bring a Christians Heart (especially in Time of youthful, or manly Years) to be cheerfully willing to Die in the ordinary Way, there is need need of great Supplies of the Spirit; And the Apostle had great expectation of them, whether he lived or died, Phil. 1. 19, 20. And therefore, to be in any measure assisted at such a Moment, is a special and singular Blessing to a Man. But to have Faith Overcoming Unbelief, and Triumphant in the Victory, and to have the whole Soul filled with Joy unspeakable and full of Glory; not only to hold his Trust and Confidence in Christ to the End, (Heb. 3. 14.) so as to Die Quietly and Composedly, having his Heart stay'd on the Lord Jesus, as knowing on whom he hath believed; but to be fill'd with all Joy and Peace in Believing, and to Abound in Hope, (Rom. 15. 13.) this is a Martyrs Privilege and Portion. And now then, for any Christian to have a Martyrs Confidence, and Joys, without a Martyrs Sufferings: How inestimable a Blessing must this be?

3. The Soul is Bless'd who dies in the Lord, because in that very Hour Christ admits him into the actual Possession of the Eternal Inheritance, which he had purchased; it was this Reception which Stephen pray'd for, Acts 7. 59. Lord Jesus receive my Spirit. And he not only receives it into his own Bosom, but he brings it to God, and Presents it to him with a Joy infinitely more Abounding, then can be in us. So that then it is, that Christ is Glorified, and Rejoiceth in us; and so we may be said rather to Die to the Lord and his Interest, then to our selves. And therefore,

4. The Believer is Blessed who Dies in the Lord; that is, who Dies in the lively Exercise of Faith and Hope; because Christ is Infinitely more Glorified upon us by such our Dying, then ever he was in our whole Lives. We do not only then take up from him a New Estate, and are remov'd into it, and as truly admitted by him, as our Gracious Lord, unto that Eternal House Above, not made with Hands, as ever any Tenant is admitted by the Lord of the Mannor: But, He then makes us compleatly Qualified for our New Glorious Habitation. He consumes all our Lusts, and makes our Spirits perfect, and perfectly meet for the Eternal Inheritance; 2 Cor. 5. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.

5. The Believer is Blessed who Dies in the Lord, because he hath the Spirit to support him in that Hour which would otherwise be Dark and Gloomy. The Spirit was given us for that Hour, as a Friend is said to be Born for Adversity, Prov. 17. 17. And certainly He who was given for a Comforter to thee all thy Life-long, and hath delivered thee out of all thy Distresses and Fears, will certainly carry thee through this: And though thy Heart should for a while fail thee together with thy Flesh, yet God and His Spirit will not fail thee, Psal. 73. 26. And truly, the Interest of the Spirits own Glory, (besides that He is that good Spirit to do good to us) His Interest I say moved him. No Merchant more rejoiced to bring his Adventure home into the Haven, after he had carried the same safe through so many Storms, than the Spirit doth rejoice to bring a Soul He hath Wrought upon, and who was committed to his Trust safe to Heaven: If a Christian be but reproached for the Name of Christ, happy are you; for the Spirit of Glory and of God resteth upon you, (1 Pet. 4. 14.) that is, the Spirit of God becomes a Spirit of Glory upon them, and in them, viz. as he enables them to bear it with a Glorious Joy, surpassing what the Greatness and Heroickness of a natural Spirit would do: Yea, exceeding that extraordinary Assistance the same Spirit gives upon other Occasions to the same Persons. And thus the Spirit of Glory rests upon the Soul of a dying Believer, and this is made good in many Believers with Joy at their Death; and yet it is more ordinarily seen, in supporting at the least the Spirits of all; and in giving supplies of the Spirit to the most, as the Apostles Word is, Phil. 1. 9. And he speaks it in relation to Death as well as Life, as will appear by comparing, ver. 20, 21.

Use I. Let us look to it, that we Die so as to be Blessed, that we Die in the Lord. To Die is a Business no Man doth but once, and is a Business of the greatest Moment of any, we ever performed; and therefore, to be directed and assisted in it, is answerably a great Blessedness. If we miscarry, and fail much in some Acts that are of great Consequence in our Lives, (as who hath not done) yet we relieve our selves with this Thought, that we hope to be more assisted, and to do better at other times in our following Course. And oftentimes times Errors in our Lives, are Sanctified by the Spirit to be a good Warning, and Provocative to do better afterward. But if we miscarry in Dying, we shall never have an Opportunity to amend the Fault. If we were indeed to revive, and Die a Second time, the Error might be rectified and repaired; but alas! It is appointed for all Men but once to Die; and therefore to Transact that well, must needs be a Blessing indeed.

Use II. Let us regard it as the End, and the last Act which will finish the whole. Let us regard it as the Conclusion, that shuts up the Story of our Days past, and through which we enter upon Eternity. Let us regard it as the Centre of all the Promises, that are made to us for this Life, in distinction from the Life to come. Let us look on it as the Point, whereon we stand, between the Life we have pass'd, and that other we are entering into. It is the End that Crowns all, which is foregone in doing well; yea, dying in the Lord is the Crown of Perseverance. That and Conversion, are the two greatest Blessings; and as the one is the Alpha, so the other is the Omega. Conversion puts us into Christ; but Death, and holding our Confidence to the End possesseth us of Christ, Heb. 3. 14. For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our Confidence stedfast unto the End.

CHAP. II.

That the Soul of a Believer doth not Sleep, or is not in a State of Inactivity till the Resurrection.

John II. xxv, xxvi.

Ver. xxv, Jesus said unto her, I am the Resurrection and the Life; he that Believeth in Me, though he were Dead, yet shall he Live.

Ver. xxvi. And whosoever Liveth and Believeth in Me, shall never Die: Believest thou this?

THERE is no Truth but hath in this Age, amongst us, been either Controverted, Contradicted or Questioned: And; among others, that great Fundamental One, Concerning the Active Life, and Glorified State of a Believing Soul after Death. Some saying, it perisheth until the Resurrection; others, that it liveth not a Life worthy of the Name of a Life, nor of so much Activity as it hath now by Faith; but tantum non, or in Effect in a State A-kin to Death: It sleepeth all the time, until the Day of the Resurrection, when it is awakened with the Body. And this they Argue upon occasion of those Speeches in Scripture, of the Saints sleeping. Now our Lord and Saviour hath, upon occasion of Lazarus his Death, and his then present State after Death; and also in relation to his Resurrection, which Christ meant to effect afore their Eyes; uttered something home unto this Point.

First, Christ Himself had termed his Death a Sleep; ver. 11. for ver. 13. It is Interpreted by John to be spoken of his Death. Now, then in Christ's Sense, to Sleep and to Die is manifestly all one; the one being a Metaphorical or Similitudinary Expression; the other a Literal, Plain, Real Expression, of one and the same thing; which is manifestly what is said, ver. 14. Jesus said plainly to them, Lazarus is Dead. Infomuch as Death is in plain Terms, the same that Sleeping was in the Metaphor, which he was occasioned thus plainly to Express; because they, his Disciples, Dream'd of no other Sleeping as meant by our Lord, then of one who is still alive, and takes bodily Rest; as appears by ver.

ver. 12, 13. Then said his Disciples, Lord, if he Sleep, he shall do well: Howbeit, Jesus spake of his Death; but they thought that he had spoken of taking rest in Sleep. Hence in Christs Intention, that part of Lazarus only, that is, his Body, which plainly Died; that only is said Metaphorically to Sleep: And so Lazarus is said to Sleep, as in respect thereof only. So as those that will affirm the Souls of Just Men to Sleep, must affirm that in plain Terms, their Souls do also Die: For Christ, (who began that Expression, which the Apostles after Him used;) intended both to be one, and the same; and so Lazarus his Sleep to be really a Death: And therefore both the one, and the other, were intended but of, and in respect of the Body; unless they will affirm that Souls do Die.

Now our Saviour Christ further, to vindicate his meaning for such a Sence as I have assign'd; doth at the 25th verse affirm Two Things of himself, and correspondently Two Things of us Believers, by Vertue of our Union with Him; that are Members of Him. 1. Says He, I am the Resurrection. And, 2. The Life. Both which he speaks of what He will be effectivly to us; as elsewhere John 14. 19. He speaks, Because I live, ye shall live also. And from these Two, Christ draws two distinct Assertions, concerning us.

1. The First concerning the Resurrection: He that believeth in me, though he were Dead, yet shall he Live. So as if ye should suppose both Body, and Soul Dead; yet I must not lose them says Christ; but raise them up: And so what ever of them, any may suppose to Die; (as the Body doth,) I will be sure to raise it up, for I am the Resurrection.

2. But then Secondly, Christ assures you, and delivers it for a certain Truth; that the Noble, Chief Part of every Believer; and which is indeed Himself, doth never Die; after his Believing: So it follows, And whosoever liveth, and believeth on me, shall never Die. That Life which he had by Believing, which is his proper Life; he shall never loose: Nor shall that Life ever Cease, or Sleep: Even as Christs own Life doth not, nor shall not; For I am the Life, (says he) a continual Principle, and Fountain of Life; that never ceaseth communicating Life, unto those that are mine: I am the Life, as to mine own Soul, so to His; and therefore there is that in Him shall never Die, and therefore not Sleep; (for in Christs Sence, Sleeping is one and the same with Death;) and that is his Soul: And again at the Latter Day, it is not his Soul that is raised up, as it was not his Soul that Slept; or Died; but his Body only; or the Man in respect of the Body: And further it is said of Christ, that he now lives a more glorious Life then when on Earth (as in Rom. 6. 10. it is said of Christs Life, after his Death; In that he lives, He lives unto God;) and that likewise we are to reckon our selves alive unto God, thorough Jesus Christ our Lord; that is, to be for ever alive unto God as He was: For He is the Life, and the Pattern of the Life; and so there shall be no Cessation of it; as there was not in his Soul, in, or upon his Death.

And this says Christ, as it is a certain Truth in it self; so likewise so necessary a Truth for you that are Believers, that I would have you put it into your Creed, Believest thou this; (says He to Mary;) and accordingly it was put into the Creed of all Believers, by the Primitive Saints. The Resurrection of the Body, they limited only to the Body; and so Death, and Sleeping to the Body only; but as to express the State of the Soul, they added Life Everlasting: Amen.

So then, this is the Result; That a Believer, in respect of his Soul, doth continue to Live, after Death, a Life of Activity, and Blessedness; and never Dies, nor Sleeps. Christ pronounceth it in Lazarus his Case, whilst as yet Dead; as a distinct Thing from his Resurrection: and speaks so, not in respect of any new Life at the Resurrection. And indeed seeing that by Death, Faith is done away (1 Cor. 13.) that which is Perfect comes in the room of it; and then for certain the Soul is not in a worse Case; enjoies not a lower Life to be sure, after Death; but is made perfect with that, which is the Perfection of Faith; and therefore with a Life that is far more Perfect then that of Faith; for Chap. III. for the Spirits of Just Men are then made Perfect; and this of Life, Faith is stiled but imperfect, and therefore done away.

CHAP. III.

That the Souls of Believers immediately after their Separation from the Body, Live an Happy Life in the Enjoyment of God, Prov'd from the Account, which we have of the State of dying Saints both in the Old, and New Testament.

Discourse of the Creatures, and the Condition of their State by Creation. Book 2. Ch. 11. in Vol. 2. of his Works.

OF the Glory of the Body after the Resurrection, I have Discourfed largely in another Treatise: The Design of my present Discourse, is to prove that the Souls of dying Saints do live a Life of perfect Holiness, and Blessedness in the Enjoyment of God, and Christ in the Heavens, until the Resurrection.

1. It is a Life.
2. It is a Life of Perfect Holiness.
3. It is a Life of Blessedness in the Enjoyment of God.
4. It is a Life of the Saints living in a Company together.
5. As for the Place, it is in the Heavens.

No one Proof will comprehend all, and each; but one will arise out of one Proof, another out of another. Neither will I range the Proofs to the Method of these Particulars as Heads, but rather go over the Scriptures from First to Last, which opened, you will sometimes see one of these Particulars arise; sometimes another, and out of the whole each, and all of these.

1. I shall concerning this Estate, produce Proofs out of the Old Testament.
2. Out of the New.

In the Old Testament, I shall Instance only in Abraham, because it will carry the Condition of All other Believers of the Old Testament with it; he being the Father, and so the Pattern of all the Faithful.

I observe, that Christ and the Apostles affected (if I may so speak) to Use the Instance of him to prove the greatest Foundations of Religion. Christ used it to prove the Resurrection and the Souls Immortality against the Sadduces, who denied both; Mat. 22. 32. Have you not read, that which was spoken by God to you, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. God is not the God of the Dead, but of the Living. And the Instance of Abraham is also alledged by Paul in the Point of Justification; by James for Sanctification: In like Manner our Divines have had their first Recourse to Abrahams Case, to prove this State of Blessedness to the Souls of Men, that Die in the Faith immediately after their Death. It is evident, that God Preach'd to him the Foundations of the Gospel in plain and real Terms: And so it falls out, that in one and the same Chapter (namely, Gen. 15.) God delivers to him.

1. The Great and Fundamental Point of Justification by Faith; and that by Imputation, then which the Gospel knows no higher. So ver. 6. And he believed in the Lord, and it was counted or imputed to him for Righteousness: Which Paul invincibly urgeth in Two Epistles.

2. And Secondly, What Heaven is, and wherein Mans Happiness consists. He declares it plainly, Gen. 15. 1. I myself am thy shield, that is, in this Life, and thy exceeding great Reward, after this Life ended. For Reward is after the finishing of Work; and therefore having said before, Walk before me, and be Upright. What is this Reward, but the Blessedness of Heaven without Types or Metaphors, nakedly, and in the Substance and Quintessence of it expressed. Christ himself (of whom, and for whom the 16th Psalm was professedly Penned) says no other, nor no more of it, Psalm 16. 5, 6. The Lord is the Portion of mine Inheritance, &c. For the Joy of which was set afore him, it was, that he laid down his Life, endured his Cross, and his Heart was glad, and his Flesh did rest in Hope, as in the Psalm it suitably follows verse 9. For in thy Presence is fulness of Joy, at thy Right Hand there are Pleasures for evermore, ver. 11. all in God alone.

3. Thirdly, God takes in the same Chapter a fit Occasion to acquaint him for his Comfort, what the Condition of his Soul should be, Thou shalt go to thy Fathers in Peace, thou shalt be buried in a good Old Age.

Now the making forth, of the Happy State of his Soul after Death (then to have God his exceeding great Reward) as also of the rest of the Souls of Just Men in the whole Old Testament, is absolved in these Four Particulars.

1. By a more narrow Consideration of the Coherence of these Words, as here they stand circumstantiated with those Observations, which the New Testament makes upon these Words afore and after. The Promise to Abraham was made in a Vision given him, and is circumstantiated afore and after with the Promises of Canaan to his Seed after the Fourth Generation. And also that Nation, whom they shall serve, will I judge; and afterwards they shall come out with great Substance. And thou shalt go to thy Fathers in Peace; thou shalt be buried in a good Old Age. But in the Fourth Generation they shall come hither again, for the Iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full. And Stephen plainly commenting on these very Words (Acts 7. 5, 6, 7.) takes Notice, that as for Abraham himself, God gave him none Inheritance in it, no not to set his Foot on; yet he promised that he would give it to him for a Possession, and to his Seed after him, when as yet he had no Child. And God spake on this wise, that his Seed should Sojourn in a strange Land, and that they should bring them into Bondage, and intreat them Evil Four Hundred Years, ver. 5, 6. Which is the Summ of these very Verses in Genesis. And Paul, afterwards further opening the Mystery of this, shews; That God would thereby signifie, that he meant and intended him, and those succeeding Patriarchs Isaac and Jacob, a far better State and Condition, expressed by Country or City fill'd with Inhabitants, which in the mean Time was to be enjoyed by them, seeing that they to whom the Promises were first made did not yet possess Canaan, but their Seed. So *Heb. 11. 9, 10. ver. 9. By Faith (Abraham) sojourned in the Land of Promise [as in a strange Countrey] (observe that) dwelling in Tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the Heirs with him of the same Promise. For he looked for a City, which hath Foundations, whose Builder and Maker is God. And ver. 13. These all died in Faith, not having received the Promises, and confessed that they were Strangers and Pilgrims on the Earth. For they which say such Things, declare plainly (observe that) that they seek a Country. It is evidenced by this, that they, to whom the Promise of Canaan was first made fell short thereof, ver. 16. But now that is upon this Declaration of Gods, that they should not possess Canaan, it was that they desire a better Country, that is an Heavenly. The meaning is, it was shewed hereby, that their Expectations were diverted and pitched by God on a State of Blessedness in Heaven in the Enjoyment of God. For it follows, God is not ashamed to be called their God, according to that elsewhere, I am the God of Abraham, &c. And here it is said, I am thy exceeding great Reward. Which Speeches of God were greater Words then the Promise of Canaan, and God should have been ashamed to have spoken these Things, if he should have disappointed them of the Promise of Canaan, and given that to their Seed after them, and if he had not reserved some greater, and more excellent Thing in the mean Time to be possessed by them, which was worthy of that Title, I am the God of Abraham, &c. Yea, their Seed should have been in a far better Condition then they, if they must have stayed for that Heavenly Country; till the general Resurrection; for then these to whom the Promises were first and chiefly given, would have had far the worst of it in Comparison of their Seed. For their Seed should have possessed the Land, and yet have as soon* been possessed of the Glory of the Resurrection as Abraham and Isaac were. Then observe, how in the Entrance to this Paragraph, Heb. 11. v. 13. there is this Clause these all dyed in Faith. Why is that so specially put in, for it had been said, that whilst they lived, they had professed, that they sought, another Country, and desired an Heavenly, v. 14. 16. But over and above you see, it is added, They dyed in the Faith; because, upon their Deaths it was, that God Promised their Entrance into that Heavenly Country, and they accordingly in dying believed to Enjoy it; which they had here seen afar off, but by Faith, and pursued after but by desires.

Chap. III.

Now to return again to Genesis the 15. 15. After God had declared Himself His exceeding Reward, and declared him justified from all Sins, and gave forth, that not he but his Seed should possess Canaan; then to quiet him, he declares what should be his State after Death, that so he might Die in the Faith thereof. For thy bodily Estate thou shalt Live long, and to a good Age and be Buried: This was an outward Blessing. 2. Thou shalt go to thy Fathers, in Peace, or as some Read it into Peace; this for thy Soul. And, 3. Thou shalt pass into a Country and City already better Inhabited: Namely, with all thy Godly Forefathers. And this God mentions; First, because the height of his Comfort and Expectation lay in that. And this says God, shall be thy Condition in the mean time, whilst thy Seed are possessing the Earthly Canaan, instead of thine own Personal possessing of it.

This, by comparing all these things together, serves to Illustrate in the General the Scope of these Words, and this Assertion out of it. More particularly, there are two Phrases to be attended to. 1. Thou shalt go to thy Fathers. 2. in Peace; or, as some Read it, into Peace: And both these Phrases were first used of Abraham about his Dying, by way of Promise; they are the first in all the Book of God.

So then the Second thing, for the making forth of this, will be the opening this Phrase, thou shalt go to thy Fathers. By which some would have no more meant than this, thou shalt Die; so Vatablus and others. And it is certain Death is always thereby meant; and when ever it is said; they Slept with their Fathers, (which is up and down in the Books of Kings and Chronicles) it certainly doth signifie Death only, the Sleep: Namely, of their Bodies in the common receptacle of the Earth. But when it is said they go to their Fathers, or are gathered to their Fathers; the just Query will be, whether further, what concerns the Soul and the State thereof is not thereby principally intended. Now, so it falls out, that when Abrahams dying it self cometh to be Recorded; this here promised, [of being gathered to his Fathers] is distinctly and apart, and over and above his dying mentioned, as importing some further thing after Death; and that besides his Burial also. And this being the promise beforehand, must be supposed to intend one of the greatest Comforts, God could give him against his Dying, and his not possessing personally that Land; And so it is to be Interpreted, by what we find in the Records of his Death. Now, Chap. 25. 8. It is thus said, then Abraham gave up the Ghost (as of Christ it is said) and dyed, and was gathered to his People, (which Interprets this here of going to his Fathers) and his Sons buried him. Here are enumerated (as I take it) all that concerns Death distinctly or apart. 1. A giving up the Soul into the Hands of God. 2. The Death of the Man, or Dissolution of the personal Union between Soul and Body; Namely, that he dyed and ceased to be a Man as before. 3. And was gathered to his People; and this is a thing distinct from Death, for he mentioned that before, and it follows after his dying, and is distinct from his Burial also; for, that follows after this ver. 9. His Sons buried him. So then that gathering to his People, which is distinct from giving up the Ghost from Death, and Burial, Imports something besides all those other.

Again, as this was then first promised, and spoken of Abraham's Death; so we find all these Four things in the the same Words and in the same Order, even the very same said of Isaac, Gen. 35. 29. And Isaac gave up the Ghost and dyed, and was gathered unto his People, being Old and full of Days; and his Sons Esau

Esau and Jacob buried him. The like is said of Moses and Aaron, in Deut. 32. 50. Die and be gathered unto thy People, even as thy Brother Aaron died and was gathered to his People. So that to be gathered to his People in Abraham, and the rest of these Holy Ones, was a distinct thing from Death and the Consequent of it.

Chap. III.

If next the Enquiry be, what more especially this means, To go to his Fathers, and to be gathered to his People; taken thus, distinct from dying Burial, &c. The Account lies fair, that it respected his Soul, and the State thereof after his Death. For to be gathered to his Fathers and People, imports a Company of People not only Extant, but selected and gathered together already, to whom he goes, and is gathered. Our Saviour Christ, speaking of this our Abraham and all the Godly departed, says, that, now they live unto God, (Luke 20. 38.) When as to the Worlds Eye they are not. There is then a People, a Company of Souls that live unto God, whom when an Holy Man gives up the Ghost, his Soul is gathered unto, whilst the Body lies buried in the Grave.

1. Gathering imports a Careful Sorting, or Collection of things that were Confusedly dispersed: (as Isa. 57. 8.) And so that though all Sorts are in this World mingled, both Good and Bad together, as Tares and the Wheat; yet, now the Good are Gathered, Sorted, and Reserved, and kept Safe together. The same Phrase is indeed used in common, of Bad as well as Good; as of Ishmael in the very same Chapter, the Phrase is used as well as of Abraham (of which Ishmael, where you will Rank him I will not Dispute; you know he persecuted Isaac, and is made a Type of the Covenant of Works, if supposed wicked) in the same, Gen. 25. 17. It is said, And he gave up the Ghost and died, and was gathered to his People. But, though the Phrase is in common use of Good and Bad, both having Immortal Souls to be gathered; yet, each is to be understood in their respective Sense. The one went to his People; the other to theirs, according as their Condition was when they Died.

Gatakers Sermon on that Text, Gen. 15. 15.

2. More especially, the Souls of God's Saints may well be said to be gathered to their People, and their Fathers when they Die; because, they go to that peculiar Place where all their Godly Countrymen and Ancestors are. Nor, doth it hinder to be understood of Abraham, albeit, the most of his Countrymen, and many of his Fathers might be Idolaters, seeing many of both Ranks were Pious, and went to God when they Died, and might be stiled His People, though little of Kin to him, that were the People of that God whom he Served. Yea, as well might all the Faithful that were before him be termed his Fathers, whether Carnally he were Descended of them or no; as all the Faithful that came after him be termed his Sons.

Smith on the Creed, p. 600. on this Text. It could not be meant of the Bodies of his Fathers, for they were buried in another Country; nor of their Souls, for they were Idolaters; But, it was meant of the Fathers of his Faith, to such as he was, Holy and Good Men. For such as a Man is, and Converse with in Life, he shall be gathered to.

And indeed, if there were such a gathering of Souls unto a Company in the other World, that they all went to one and the same Place, and to one and the same Company; this would destroy what is here first spoken of Abraham, as a Promise and a Blessing, as also of the rest, Isaac and Jacob, Moses and Aaron. It had been a Loss and a Disadvantage, to have gone into the Popish Limbus, which differs little from Hell with them for Place; it having also the Punishment of Loss accompanying it, which is the worst part of Hells Punishments.

Abraham had a great Company of Holy and Godly Fathers, Adam, Enoch, Noah, &c. Forerunners in Holiness, (which are termed our Fathers) Abel and of the Seed of Seth, which had been gathered afore him in the other World, whom God promiseth him here, that when he Died, he should go unto.

And, the Consideration of its Opposite may greatly Conduce, to Confirm and Illustrate this different respective gathering of Souls to their several Companies, as intended in that Phrase; though common to both as, Judges 2. 10. For this Serves that Notion of Mr. Mede, that in the Old Testament, the first and most Ancient Phrase to Express going to Hell, was, to go to the Company of the Gyants; so he renders it of many Places of the Proverbs, Prov. 9. 18. He that goes into the strange Woman knows not (or Considers not) that the Gyants are there; and that her Guests are in the Depths of Hell. And, Prov. 21. 16. The Man that wandreth

Diatribic Part I. on Prov. 21. 16.

Chap. III.

wand'reth out of his way shall remain in the Congregation of the Dead. The Original is Rephaim, of the Gyants. This Atapide and others, have taken Notice of also. The Gyants were those Men eminently wicked, that lived afore the Flood; upon whom, the Flood came and swept them to Hell; for, by Reason of them, the Iniquity of the Earth was great. Gen. 6. And, because Hell had a flush of them, and was Replenish'd at once with such a numerous Addition: Hence from their Company, it bore the Name of the Place of the Gyants. Yea, and they were those of whom Peter Instanceth in, when he speaks of the Spirits in Prison, or in Hell, to whom in the Ministry of Noah Christ Preacht, 1 Pet. 3. 20. So then for wicked Men to be gathered to their Fathers (namely, in Wickedness) was all one, as to go to the Gyants; that is, eminently wicked, who were Men of Renown for Wickedness.

Now then, if wicked Men are gathered to the Congregation and Company of wicked Men, as severed from the Godly; then answerably, when Abraham and Isaac and Jacob dyed, and are said to be gathered to their Fathers, it is meant of their Predecessors in Holiness. And, that it is said of Abraham first, was because, he was the Father of all the Faithfull to come, and because by this time, Heaven had a considerable Company of the Spirits of just Men, made Perfect from Abel's time, even the Godly out of many Generations. And truly, if we Consider the Importance of that, which in the first Introduction unto this Discourse, was asserted; that Abraham and these Fathers whilst they lived, are said to have sought and desired a better Country and City made by God. It comes all to one, for that was to go to a City and Country plentifully Inhabited, and Replish'd with those of their own Kind, Tribe and Affinity. This a Country or City speaketh and supposeth, and so differs not from going to his Fathers, or being gathered to his People; that is, to his Countrymen and Kindred.

And which yet more, adds to the Confirmation of this, our Saviour when he would Express the Gentiles being gathered and going to Heaven; he doth it thus, Mat. 8. 11. They shall sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, in the Kingdom of Heaven. Their going to Heaven, is set out by their going to these renowned Fathers, to their Company, to their Place and Enjoyments, to whom the Promises of Heaven more Eminently were made; and, therefore it is in Effect to say, that they should go to their Fathers, even as wicked Men do to theirs.

3. It was promis'd to Abraham, that he should go to his Fathers in Peace, or into Peace, Gen. 15. 15. By Peace you know the Jews expressed the whole of Blessedness, the Affluence of all Happiness. Answerably, in the New Testament, Peace is wisht as the Effect, and the total Effect of Grace, or the utmost that Grace in the Heart of God hath designed to us. The Jews ordinary Wish at parting was, go in Peace, which is all one with that usual Phrase, I Wish you all Happiness. When therefore God promiseth this to Abraham at his Death; look as Gods Well Wishes and Promises, must be supposed of Greater good Things than Man can Wish or Give; so far doth this Promise made by God exceed all, that Man can be supposed to Desire of Happiness unto another his Friend, as Abraham was to God? And so this also Phrase intends a future Happiness after Death, unto his Soul, when his Body should be laid in the Ground; as the next Words shew:

I know the Phrase of Dying in Peace, is sometimes used in Scripture, to Express such a Death or Departure hence, as in a Man, the great Desires of a Mans Heart are Accomplish'd; so as there is nothing left to detain him. As when Jacob saw Joseph, now let me Die (says he, Gen. 46. 30.) and as (Luke 2. 26. 29.) in the Case of Simeon; It was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see Death before he had seen the Lord's Christ. ver. 29. (says he) Lord, now lettest thou thy Servant depart in Peace according to thy Word. Whose Speech may yet, be well supposed to have this meaning, now let me depart hence into that Peace in Heaven, which Thou hast provided for those that wait upon Thee, from which I have hitherto been detained to see this Sight of my Saviour, and according to thy Word. For else, his Soul may well be thought to have desired desired still to live and to see his Works, and hear his gracious Words, which Kings, and Prophets (Christ said) did Desire to hear and see: Whereas he now leaves him in his Swadling Clouts to go into this Peace we speak of, on which his Hopes were fix'd.

But that which more confirms the Assertion, That this great and first Promise to Abraham (besides what hath been said, that it was made to his Soul, distinct from that made to his Body) was intended not of an outward, quiet Death only, but of going to Rest and Happiness, Is the Correspondency which this holds with that Promise, which, in Analogy to this made to Abraham, we find made to every Believer, that walks in his Uprightness, as Abraham did; Gen. 17. 1. The State of all after Death, who walk in such Uprightness, we have express'd, Isa. 57. 1, 2. The Righteous perisheth, and no Man laieth it to Heart; and merciful Men are taken away, none considering that the Righteous is taken away from the Evil to come. Their State after Death follows, He shall enter into Peace, they shall rest in their Beds. Whoever he be that walketh in his Uprightness: Or each one walking, or that walketh, &c. Which Words are evidently spoken of the Happiness of Souls after Death, and so do fitly Interpret this Promise he made to Abraham in the like Case. It is their State after Death is spoken of, for their Death is spoken of, ver. 1. in their perishing (as to this World) and being taken away: And as the Comfort and Consequent thereof, 'tis said, He shall enter into Peace. He (to be sure) shall be Blessed. The Prophet Isaiab speaks of it, as of a new State or Condition succeeding the Former, for it is entring into it; and it holds Correspondency with that of Christ, Enter into thy Masters Joy, Mat. 25. 23. And it agrees also with another Phrase of Entring into Life, Mat. 18. 8. And the Words of Isaiab are exactly Parallel to that which was said of Abraham, and in the same Order. 1. He shall enter into Peace and Blessedness, as to the Soul. 2. They shall rest in their Beds, that is, their Graves; Death being the Sleep of the Body, as often 'tis expressed in the New Testament. unto which the Words of the Prophet Answer in another Place; Isa. 26. 19. Thy dead Men shall live, together with my dead Body shall they arise: Awake and Sing, ye that dwell in Dust: For thy dew is as the dew of Herbs, and the Earth shall cast out the Dead. And this Entrance into Peace, is therefore meant of the Souls entring into Joy and Peace, during that Time that the Body rests in it's Bed, namely the Grave. Nor is it spoken of Martyrs only, that Die in evil Times by Persecution, but on the contrary, of those that Die afore such Times approach; yea, and universally of every one that walks uprightly.

4. Now Fourthly, For a Confirmation of all this, Christ in the New Testament hath Termed (whilst yet the State and Language of the Old Testament was in force) that State of Bliss which Souls then departing had, Abrahams Bosom, Luke 16. 21. And their being gathered thither, as expressed in the Old, is stiled by Christ, A being carried by Angels thercunto. And indeed Abraham having been set up as the Father of all the Faithful, as their State on Earth is named, A Life of Faith common to him and them, so the Estate of their Souls also in Glory, until the Resurrection is expressed by the State of his Soul as the chief Guest, in whose Bosom they all are to Lye, or sit down as Guests with him at the same Feast.

Now though that Story of Lazarus and the Rich Man be but a Parable, yet as every Parable, so that, must have a principal and substantial Scope, and main Drift it Centers in; and from that Drift we may as safely Argue (as from any other Scripture. Now it hath no Scope, but what is utterly Insignificant, if this be not the Scope of it; namely, to shew the different State of Godly Men and Wicked Men after this Life. It signifies nothing, if not this; and if so, again it is as evident, that that State of the Soul afore the Resurrection is there intended. For the Time of the opposite Rich Mans Torment, was whilst his Body lay Buried, and the Time of Lazarus Happy State immediately followed on his Death. So ver. 22. And it came to pass, that the Beggar died, and was carried by the Angels into Abrahams Bosom: The Rich Man also died, and was buried. It was also, when Dives had Brethren on Earth, capable of being warned to avoid coming into that Place. See ver. 27, 28. Then he said, I Pray thee thee therefore Father, that thou wouldst send him to my Fathers House: For I have five Brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this Place of Torments. It was also afore the general Resurrection; for ver. 30. He Pleads, that if one went from the Dead, they would Repent. Lastly, It was whilst they had Moses and the Prophets to attend unto, as the Means of Salvation to whom Abraham refers them, ver. 31. And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the Prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the Dead. And therefore also was it a State of Souls, as supposed under the Old Testament, when Moses and the Prophets were the chief Means of Salvation, and no Scripture else Extant. And that Lazarus his Lying in Abraham's Bosom, was Heaven and an Heavenly Condition, may be Confirmed by these Two Things.

Chap. III.

1. That he was carried into it by Angels. Now their only Walk is between Heaven and Earth, ascending and Descending upon Christ; John 1. 51. They go not to Hell. It is also the Place which the Angels belong unto, for themselves are the Inhabitants of Heaven.

2. But Secondly, and more expressly, the Saints of the Old and New Testament are said to sit down with Abraham in the Kingdom of Heaven, Mat. 8. 11. Which is not the State of the Gospel, for Abraham lived not in those Times; but a State of Glory. For oppositely 'tis said, ver. 12. That the Children of the Kingdom shall be cast into utter Darkness. So then, put altogether, Abraham's Soul upon his Death went to his Godly Fathers into Peace, Adam, Enoch, Noah, and the rest of the Saints in the Old Testament after him, are said to enter into Peace, each of them after the Example of Abraham; Isa. 57. Yea in the New Testament, to be carried where Abraham is to be laid into Abraham's Bosom, as the common Receptacle of Souls, Gathered to their Fathers, says the Old Testament; and Carried to their Fathers, says the New. And this Place is the Kingdom of Heaven, as Mat. 8. 11. Hence then the Argument riseth strong, That all the Godly of the New Testament, from the First to Last, from Abel to Lazarus were upon their Deaths carried to Heaven. And further, that they were all found there that were Dead, when Christ hung on the Cross, appears by Col. 1. 20. And (having made Peace through the Blood of his Cross) by him to reconcile all Things unto himself, by him, I say, whether they be Things in Earth or Things in Heaven. In which Speech it is certain, that those of Mankind in Heaven are meant, however the Angels may come in; for Men are properly Subjects of Reconciliation (the Angels but Analogically) for they are Men, and not the Angels who Sing, Thou hast redeemed us by thy Blood, Rev. 5. 9. Compare the Angels Song with this, ver. 12. And indeed tho' the Patriarchs were all in Heaven already, yet Christ paid for their Attonement; For He Died for the Redemption of Sins, that were under the Old Testament, Heb. 9. 15. And I will say, that they must all have come down from Heaven again, if his Sacrifice for their Redemption had not been offered up.

Now that which in the Old Testament was Abraham's Bosom, and sitting down with Abraham, that in the New is call'd being with Christ, and Paradise, and the Kingdom of Heaven. The Stile indeed is altered. The God of Abraham, said the Old Testament. The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, says the New, Ephes. 1. 3. So to be gathered to their Fathers, to be with Abraham, was the Old Description of Heaven; to be with Christ, which is best of all, is the Character of it in the New. This Day shalt thou be with me in Paradise, says Christ, to the dying Thief.

The Scriptures of the New Testament speak more punctually and abundantly this Point, Christ having brought Life and Immortality (and all the gradual Advances of it) to Light.

1. There are some which are so plain, that I shall not insist on them, viz. The Example of the Converted Thief, to whom Christ said, This Day shalt thou be with me. And the Instance of Stephen seeing, when he was to Die; the Heavens opened, and therein the Glory of God; and saying, Lord into thy Hands I commit my Spirit, Acts 7.

2. Another set of Instances is in Luke 16. 9. And I say unto you, make to your selves Friends of the Mammon of Unrighteousness, that when ye fail they may receive you into Everlasting Habitations. And in 2 Cor. 5. from the 1. to the 11.

1. I shall Explain that Instance, which we have in Luke 16. 9. Those Everlasting Habitations, there mentioned, manifestly are in Heaven, where are many Mansions, and the Words are the Moral Part of the Parable of the Steward. That look, as that Steward, when he saw he must quit his Office of Stewardship, and be put out, considered with himself, What shall I do? ver. 3. And resolved to make Friends of his Masters Debtors, ver. 5. That, when he was put out of his Stewardship, they might receive him into their Houses, ver. 4. And this was wisely done says Christ, ver. 8. And do you imitate this Wisdom of his, tho' not the Wickedness of it. As if Christ had said, in this World ye are but for a Time, the Places and Stations, Riches, Power, &c. you must give over. And what will ye do then for the next World?

1. Christ expresseth Death and the Souls going out of this World by our failing, that is, either as of a Steward, turn'd out of House and Means, or as a Merchant that Breaks, that hath a Statute of Bankrupt Sued forth against him. Such a Statute is Death, Statutum est omnibus semel Mori. When Spirits fail, Friends on Earth fail, Riches fail, and cannot deliver; when a Man's Soul goes Naked out of this World into another, even as he came Naked into it; then the Rich, the Great, the most Potent, and honourable are Bankrupts. And this Time, when you fail, is not the Day of the Resurrection, for then we are set up again and restored. The Body is sown in Weakness at Death, there, and then is the failing; But it riseth in Power.

2. Christ shews, that at that Time the Soul is put to it, what it shall do, and whether it shall go? ver. 3. The Steward said within himself, What shall I do? The Soul hath Reason (and Christ adviseth it) to consider, what it should do next upon its failing; for the Soul is Immortal, and must go some whither. Animula vagula quæ abibis in loca. Said the Emperor Adrian, when Dying. Spartianus in ejus Vita.

3. He compares the State of the other World in Heaven, to a City or Country, where are many Inhabitants gathered, already replenishing of it; and accordingly many Houses built, and all Accommodations. Abraham and the other Patriarchs are said in the Old Testament to be gathered to their Fathers. It comes all to one with what is said in the New, Heb. 11. 10. For he looked for a City which hath Foundations, whose Builder and Maker is God. And ver. 14. it is said, That they sought a Country, that is, an Heavenly. As every City supposeth Inhabitants there Dwelling; and there in Houses, &c. and suitable Accommodations for Inhabitants: So Christ in Analogy expresseth it here, that when we fail, and are to be gathered to our Fathers gone before us, They may receive us into Everlasting Habitations. That we having done good to them, or those of their Kind and Country, now gone to Heaven, they may receive us, and welcome us into House and Home. He expresseth it after the Manner of Men. When one comes to a Strange Country, what is more desirous, then that a Man should have Friends there, that should as it were welcome a Naked New-comer. What kind Hospitality is it in God, that he should receive a Man into his House, and Home, for the good which he did here! And this Habitation is no other then in Heaven, for 'tis call'd an Eternal, Real, Habitation. First, For the Soul without the Body, then for Soul and Body too, 2 Cor. 5. For where the Souls and Persons of Just Men live for ever, there to be sure is Heaven. Now that after the Day of Judgment they shall live in Heaven none ever denied: And if when they Die and Fail, they are received into the same, then they are at that present admitted into Heaven and Heavenly Habitations, as well as afterwards. If the Souls of Just Men were admitted into any other then what is Heaven, afore into Heaven only; after their Bodies were united, then the Place, which first received them, could not be call'd Eternal Habitations.

USE. Do good then especially unto the Elect and Household of Faith: Do good to these above other, for thou wilt be gathered to them, and they will acknowledge knowledge it, or God at least on their behalf: And it will be a Joy to thee then, and may be a Comfort to thee now, to think that there are those in Heaven, to Whom, or to their Children, or Relations for their Sakes, thou hast done Good.

Chap. III.

C H A P. IV.

That the Souls of Believers do, immediately after the Death of the Body pass into a State of Glory, demonstrated from the Design of the Apostle Paul, in 2 Cor. 4. 17, 18. To encourage the Saints to endure all Afflictions and Calamities of this Life: And from his Design in 2 Cor. 5. 1. 28. To Comfort them against all Apprehensions of Death.

II Corinthians IV. xvii. xviii.

Ver. xvii, For our light Affliction, which is but for a Moment, worketh for us a far more Exceeding and Eternal Weight of Glory:

Ver. xviii. Whilst we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: For the things which are seen, are Temporal; but the things which are not seen, are Eternal.

II Corinthians V. i, ii, iii, iv.

Ver. i, For we know, that if our Earthly House of this Tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an House not made with Hands, Eternal in the Heavens.

Ver. ii, For in this we groan earnestly, desiring to be clothed upon with our House which is from Heaven:

Ver. iii, If so be, that being clothed, we shall not be found naked.

Ver. iv. For we that are in this Tabernacle do groan, being burdened: Not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that Mortality might be swallowed up of Life.

ONE Eminent part of the good News of the Gospel is, the Blessed Estate of Souls Instantly, upon the Dissolution of their Bodies; and this, in the Name of all the Primitive Christians, doth the Apostle here utter, as their Faith; we know, &c. So then we have it not as Pauls Doctrine alone, but as the common Faith of Christians. And that,

In these Two Points.

- I. That our Bodies shall be raised at the last Day. And,
- II. That in the mean time our Souls shall Live.

In these Two did Christ Instruct Mary in the 11th Chapter of John: The First is in ver. 25. He that believeth on Me, though he were Dead, yet shall he Live; there's the Resurrection of the Body: The Second is in ver. 26. And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never Die; Believest thou this? In Answer to the Resurrection of the Body Christ had Prefaced, ver. 25. I am the Resurrection; in Answer to the Living of the Soul, he says, I am the Life: Believest thou this? Says he: Put this into thy Creed, as the Primitive Believers did into theirs.

In Correspondency to both these Two so positive Assertions of Christ, I observe our Apostles Preface in the foregoing Chapter, ver. 13. We believe and therefore speak; and what are those Points, we Believe, and therefore utter with Confidence? 1. The Resurrection of the Body with the Glory that follows thereupon. The ultimate Object of our Faith, ver. 14. Knowing that He which raised up the Lord Jesus, shall raise up Us also by Jesus, and shall present Us with you. 2. The Glory of the Soul in the mean Time presently after Dissolution, this is in ver. 1. of this Chapter, For we know that if our Earthly House of this Tabernacle were dissolved, we have a Building of God, an House not made with Hands Eternal in the Heavens.

This is certain, That the Holy Ghost hath penned in the latter Part of the foregoing Chapter, and in these Words, more Lines about the State of Glory than in any one Scripture again, together, in the whole Book of God.

And the Controversie is, what State of Glory it is, that in these Words, is meant.

I shall fix the State of this Controversie by these few Premises.

1. That the Apostles punctual and proper Scope is, to Comfort himself and all Believers against Death: For he puts the Case in such Terms, If this Body be dissolved; he speaks but generally afore, &c. in Chapter 4. but he in the 5th Chapter particularizeth the Case of Death: And again, he utters this Comfort, in the Name of all Christians in the World. We know, if our earthly House of this Tabernacle were dissolved, &c. And it is intended to shew, what Comfort and Cordials Believers have against fainting at the Thoughts of Death, for this Verse by this Word [FOR,] &c. carries us up to the 16th Verse, as a Reason, why we faint not, always being delivered to Death, &c.

2. The Question then next is, What it is should be that proper, special Matter of Comfort against Death in this 5th Chapter ver. 1, &c. And hereupon, comes the Difference of the Opinions to be stated.

1. Whether only, that if their earthly Bodies be now dissolved, their Souls should have instead thereof other manner of Bodies, as compared to another House for their Souls to dwell in; namely, those Bodies which shall be made glorious at the Resurrection?

Or 2. It may be Queried, Whether the whole Glory of the Soul, either whilest without the Body till the Resurrection, or with the Body after the Resurrection, is meant? Yet so as that, However immediately upon Dissolution, the Soul should have a Glory, which is ready prepared for it, which the Apostle calls here Our House: And which after Dissolution it presently should enter into, and is entertained in; and takes as it were Possession first of, until both Body and Soul shall be joined again together, to a more full and compleat Possession of the same Glory for ever.

So as the difference in General, between these Two Opinions is, That the one Confines the whole only to the Glory the Soul shall have in the Body; the other Opinion of ours enlargeth it self to the Glory of all States from the Instant of Death, and so through all Eternity; and affirmeth, that according to the intent of this Scripture, this Glory commenceth or beginneth from the

Chap. IV.

Time of Dissolution: So as their Opinion excludeth, or cutteth off all that Part of the Glory of Men's Souls out of the Body; and not to be meant in this Place, but ours takes in all; only it doth particularly Contend for this, That the Glory of the Soul out of the Body being that which is next, and of general Concernment to the Saints till the Resurrection, and that being a space for so long a Time to come, even almost Two Thousand Years from the Time of the Apostles writing, this meaning should therefore be intended by him.

But yet more particularly, to the End that the State of this Difference of Opinion may be understood, and thereby also, what the Conduct or Steerage of our ensuing Discourse is to be, it must be further related concerning that Opinion of those, that makes the Glory of the Body, the Subject of the Apostles Discourse.

1. How that some of them seem to Interpret the whole of the Paragraph, from ver. 1. to ver. 10. of the Glory of Soul and Body only, when joined together. Yet it may be withal observed of those Interpreters, that when they come to give the meaning of the 6, 7, 8, and 9th Verses, they there fall flat; or as treading upon Ice do slide them over, not openly affirming of either which is meant: When yet they had openly Interpreted the Four First Verses of the Glory of the Body, when joined to the Soul only. For indeed the Words in those 6, 7, 8, Verses are so clear for the Souls Glory apart, without the Body, and for its Presence with the Lord when separate, that they could not oppose that meaning: Only I find Grotius so daring, as to Interpret those Words present with the Lord, ver. 8. to be meant of the State after the Resurrection; when yet the Words speak of that Presence which falls out, when we are Absent from the Body in the very Words afore.

Estius in Locum.

2. Estius therefore an ingenious Papist halves the Matter, and takes Part with this first Opinion for the Bodies Glory, so far as the five first Verses go; but then when he comes to the 6 Verse, he falls in with the other Opinion: And says, that all the next Words from thence are meant of the State of the Soul after Death till the Resurrection, and accordingly he begins his Comment upon the Words of that 6 Verse thus, That because some might say (upon this Discourse of the Apostle hitherto, in the first five Verses held) That this Glory of the Body (which you comfort us withal) is not presently attained after Death, but perhaps is a long while yet to be expected: That therefore now, in the 6 Verse (the Apostle subjoins, and falls upon) the Glory of the Soul separate. And from thenceforward, Estius is as fully ours (as to this Point) as could have been desired. He might have been so sooner, even from the very first Verse; There was Reason enough for it.

3. Calvin upon the first five Verses, being to Interpret what was meant by our House in, and from Heaven; plainly says, 'tis uncertain whether it signifies a State of Blessed Immortality, which befalls (immediately) after Death, or whether the Body made glorious, such as it shall be after the Resurrection. There is no Inconvenience in either Sense (says he) but in the End he closeth with this Sense; That the Blessed State of the Soul after Death (so then he prefers that of the Glory of the Soul when separate to be meant) should be the beginning of this Building, but the Consummation should be the Glory of the last Resurrection. And this Exposition (says he) the whole Context doth best make Good. So that he also carries it to both States. This is his Judgment of the five first Verses. But then for the 6, 7, 8, 9, Verses, he is fully in it. That the State of the Soul after Death is only meant. Thus both in his Comment on that Place, ver. 8. as also in his set Treatise de vivis against the Souls sleeping; he argues it, from the whole of this our Apostles Discourse here, as a most Plain and Cogent Scripture, which to resist (he says) were to resist the Spirit of God in it.

I profess to be of Holy and most Judicious Calvin's Mind, in this his Sense of this Scripture; and shall endeavour to make forth, that the whole of this so large a Discourse is meant of the State and Glory of the Soul after Death, not excluding, but taking in that also after the Resurrection; which that one Word, if no more doth invincibly Argue and take in, when he Terms it Eternal in the Heavens: And therefore the whole from First to Last, even to Eternity nity must be intended. Only I shall, in this Discourse of mine, plead alone for the separate Souls Glory, leaving the State after the Resurrection, to those, that will read their Comments. Or any other, that will Contend for it.

4. It is meet also, to take Notice of what is the proper State of the Question between Us, and other Interpreters, whilst we shall be upon the first Verse, distinct from what will be the State of the Question, when we come to the 2, 3, 4, Verses. In the first Verse, they of that first Opinion, well near universally say, The Apostle, for the Comfort of all Saints against Death, delivers this Doctrine, of their having one Day spiritual renewed glorious Bodies, instead of these Earthly; yet so, as with all, they acknowledge his Scope in that Verse to be, That it is God's more general Appointment for all Saints first to Die, and to be Dissolved, and then by a Resurrection of their Bodies, to have new Bodies restored, at and by the Resurrection: Thus they Interpret the Matter of this first Verse, We know, &c.

But then, as for the 2, 3, and 4th Verses, they affirm his Scope to be, that the Saints Knowing, that by the ordinary Dispensation they cannot have such Bodies glorious, unless first they Die; yet this DYING being abhorrent to Nature. The Apostle expresses thereupon the Saints desire, rather to be cloathed upon with Glory, whilst they continue in their Bodies alive, and so to be immediately Changed without Dissolution; but yet with this Correction or Supposition, that they be found of the Number (if it should fall out to be God's good Pleasure) of those Saints that are alive, and Cloathed with Bodies at the Resurrection; and not Dead or Naked, as the generality of the Saints will, at the Approach of that Day, be found to be. Thus they Interpret the 3d Verse. So then with them the Doctrine of the first Verse is, That we shall have glorified Bodies by a Resurrection after Dissolution first, and that as the general Case of Believers: But that notwithstanding, the Object of the Saints desires expressed in the 2, 3, and 4th is, to have the Priviledge to escape that Dissolution, and have a Glory put upon their Bodies without it, as an Exception to that general Rule: And to have that Change, which indeed is spoken of to be at the Resurrection, of them that shall be then alive, at the same Time, that those that are Dead do rise.

Now 5ly, The State of the Question which I propose to the Proof, is, whether the Apostles Scope be not to Comfort these Corinthians, and the Generality of the Saints with this, That when their Bodies are Dissolved, they shall have a Glory in the mean Time until the Resurrection; and further my Undertaking is, that he carries this great Truth (as his Scope) uniformly on, throughout all the following Verses to ver. 10.

Ere I do begin with the first Verse. It will be very conducive to Consult, whether this had not been his Scope likewise, in the last Verses of the former Chapter, immediately preceding this first Verse, which I the rather choose, because in doing so, I shall by Degrees make Approaches, (beginning thus further off) which I Hope will in the End surround and carry this difficult stronghold of Scripture, which hath been so often taken and wonne by Parties of different Perswasions, as each have imagined to themselves. The Connection between those Latter Verses of the former Chapter, and this first Verse is so Innate and Congenial, as we should loose some of our Strength in this Argument, if we did not take along with us, what they aforehand have spoken.

The Words of the latter Verses of the former Chapter are these, 2 Cor. 4. 16, 17, 18. For which cause we faint not, but though our outward Man perish, yet the inward Man is renewed Day by Day. For our light Affliction, which is but for a Moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of Glory. While we look not at the Things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: For the Things which are seen, are Temporal; but the Things which are not seen, are Eternal.

Which Words, suppose they were considered absolutely, and singly, and as cut off from their Correspondency with this 5th Chapter, do yet contain strong Evidences, that not only the Glory of the Body at the Resurrection, but the whole of the Glory both of the Soul separate afore, as well as after is aimed at in them.

Chap. IV.

1. In that whilst we live, and continue here in this World, our inner Man is said to be renewed daily, that is grows Young within us, whilst our outward Man, that is our Body, and outward Condition of Estate, Name, and what-ever else thereto belonging perisheth. So as though we loose every Day on that Hand, yet this inward Man, every Day grows up stronger and more vigorous. And what is, or can be intended hereby, other then to make way and lay a Foundation for this Truth, (as by an evident Token) that between that utter perishing of the Body by Death, that will in the end befall us, and that Restauration of it by the Resurrection (spoken of ver. 16.) this inner Man is ordained to live in the mean Time without that Body or outward Man, and therefore is growing up of it self alone unto a Maturity, as that which is intended to live another Day (as we say) when severed and apart. To evidence which, you see (says he) how unto Sense the Body goes down, and the Soul thrives (as the 3 Epist. John 2. ver. hath it) as being that whose Estate God hath a Care of; it being to live with himself during that interfittum or mean Time, even as the Chicken grows in the Shell unto a Maturity, and then breaks it, and lies away into another and better Estate, which is the Prophets Comparison, Psalms 90. 10. And can you think, that this inner Man thus nourished to a Virility, by God shall be turn'd into a Languid Condition, when severed? Or have a dead Sleep or Palsie take it, and so Chill until the Resurrection? No, it is in a tendency to Perfection, as Heb. 12. shews

2. Consider in the Words, how during this Life (wherein the outward Man is a perishing) that Glory to come is all the while a working for this inward Man; and this inward Man also, is all that while a Being wrought upon, and making ready for that Glory, and both fall out together, but during the space, only, of this Life. The one you have in the 17th ver. of the 4th Chap. and the other at the 5th ver. of the 5th Chap. It is said, that God himself works us; For the self same thing. And Gods renewing our inward Man in the 4th Chap. is the same thing with Gods working us, Chap. 5. And working us for that self same Glory spoken of in Chap. 4. 17. Which is wrought for us by Afflictions; yea, and (which is Gods Artifice in it) the self same Afflictions which Work, that, so exceeding weight of Glory, are used by God to Work our inward Man for that Glory. And (which is most observable to our Purpose) both these Workings, the one of Glory without Us, the other of renewings of Grace within Us, are but in the space and during the Time of this Life, and both continue all the while and cease together. The Afflictions work best in that Moment; and our Souls they are also wrought upon but during that Moment; and the determining of both Ends with our Lives. For as it is but the Afflictions of this Moment that Work the Glory: So it is the Dispensation of God in this Life only that renews the Soul, and but whilst in the outward Man: And at Death, and with Death all such workings of either are at an End. And what doth this mean and argue, but that the working of both ending in that one Period, that therefore these Two, the inward Man, and Glory that had gone as together, tho' divided, should at, and upon Death (the common Period to both) meet, and be Joined or Married together, the inward Man being made ready for that Glory as fully as ever it shall be; and that Glory made ready for it. What then shall let, or who shall forbid, that these Two should not be Joined together. Surely this is the Time, the full Time for this Souls Enjoyment, and first Entrance into that Glory it was wrought for.

3. Add to this Account of the Apostle the Series, Order, and Succession of Time he sets for these Things. The Time allotted for these Workings, He says, is but for a Moment, and that Moment is but the Term of each of our Personal Lives; so expressly, Rom. 8. 18. they are call'd the Sufferings of this present Time. And the next Stage he sets is an Eternal Life and Glory, without any mention of any other Space coming between. He mentions these Two, and but these Two, and these Two immediately succeeding each the other; and Comforts us, not only that our Afflictions are but for this Moment, but withal chiefly to Note the Shortness of the Time, unto the beginning or entrance into Eter-

Eternal Life and Glory, which is ready wrought for the Soul, and the Soul for it during that Moment: And that the Ending of that Moment, is the beginning of that Eternity, and that, that Ceasing and Afflictions therewith, Eternal Glory succeeds, so that these Two divide Time betwixt them. But if there had been so long a space as Two Thousand Years afore that beginning of this Eternity to come, between this Moment and the Resurrection, he either would have excepted it, or not have put this Moment and Eternity so together. It is the Account of Times which he here maketh. And Believers that Groan as they Count and Reckon the greatness of the Glory (as Rev. 8. 18.) So in these Groaning, they do reckon or account the Time, till their Freedom and Inlargement: And the Thought of the shortness thereof doth Comfort them, as well as the greatness of the Glory expected. No Apprentice or Servant counteth his Time more till he is Free, and shall set up for himself then a Believer doth; and then the Apostle doth for them, both in this Place, and that other in Rom. 8. And to be sure, that Term of Two Thousand Years, if these Souls had been to stay for this Glory so long (which the Holy Ghost who wrote this foreknew, and we have the Prospect and Experience of Sixteen Hundred Years being now past) is not to be reckon'd as a Moment. Therefore the Apostle would not have reckon'd this Moment and Eternity in so successive an Order, and have left out the Account of Thousands that were to come between them, when he intended thus to Comfort them, even to a Moments Time, when the very Thought of Two Thousand Years stay would have been a long Time indeed, unto such eager and groaning Souls; as ver. 2, 4, of this Chap. 5. They are set forth to be, unless the Apostle had some way satisfied them about the Interim, as appeareth by the cry of How long! Of those separate Souls, Rev. 6. Nay, if these Souls here wrote to (supposing them to Exist, and to be after Death) should have had an Intermision of Injoyment of God for Two Thousand Years to come, this Time of so long Interval, that would have proved to be unto such Souls, who had been inur'd unto Communion with God already, during this Moment of Afflictions, and some times had injoyed the Earnests of Heaven (as in the 5th ver. of this 5th Chap. you have inserted as an Argument for separate Souls Injoyment) a far greater weight of Affliction, then what the Afflictions of this present Time amount unto, which is but for a Moment; and the Apostle might rather have indigitated and termed them the Afflictions of that Interval to come, then those of this present Time, as in Rom. 8. he speaks.

4. The like Division of Things connoting the same Succession of Time in the 18th ver. (which is the last of this Chap.) Seconds and Confirms this. While we look not at the Things which are seen, but at the Things which are not seen: For the Things which are seen, are TEMPORAL; but the Things which are not seen, are ETERNAL. In this Division of Things, he Sums up the whole of what we are to run through, or which can be supposed we should run through in and under all Times for ever, or that shall befall us from that instant wherein, any Saint at present is, for they are all either Temporal or Eternal. The Temporal he also calls Things which are seen, Visible here, in this World, by our worldly Eyes or natural Eyes; the Eternal which are not seen; That is, not otherwise, then by Faith, Which is the Evidence of Things not seen, and Substance of Things hoped for, Heb. 11. 1. By Temporal then he means, the Good or Evil Things injoyed or suffered in this Life or World; and by Eternal All, and the Whole that are to come, as the Reward of what was done in this Life, in the other World to come; which are Things as yet unseen otherwise then by Faith, and Hope; and therefore the Things that are wholly to come are unseen, according to that, Rom. 8. 24. Hope that is seen is not Hope. And further, by distinguishing, or opposing these Two Temporal and Eternal. He with all Connates and Divides the whole length of Time we are to run through, even as he had afore more plainly done, by his Moment and Eternity in the Words of the 17th Verse. Now I would ask unto which of these Two doth the State of the Soul (of an Holy Soul) till the Resurrection belong? It is certain not to Temporal, though it should be cut off from the Account of that Time, which follows after the Resurrection. It might indeed be said

Chap. IV.

said Temporal as in respect to the Time, namely, of its Duration, merely for the Term of its Widow-hood from the Body, which ends with the Resurrection; yet to be sure, it is none of those Temporal Things, which the Apostle here Terms Temporal, for they are such Things only as are for the Term of this Life, and so stiled because they last but for this Time, in Distinction from those other to come. And besides this State of the Soul, after this Temporal ended, is unseen (in this Life by us) otherwise then by Faith, as well as what shall be after the Resurrection. So then, that State of the Soul after Death, must be cast, as that which belongs unto Eternal; and both that, and all after makes up together but one entire Eternal, whether of that State of the Soul separate, or that of it after the Resurrection. For so, and not otherwise is the Distinction or Opposition unto the Temporal Enjoyments of this Life made up Full, and Exact, and Compleat, whereas if this State of the separate Soul were not included, and comprehended under that of Eternal, this Division were utterly imperfect; unless any will say, That there are Two Temporal States of the Soul afore the general Resurrection, and that from that Time only Eternal Things do Commence and Begin, which no Man will dare to affirm. So then, as Eternal doth begin (as we say) a New Account; so the State of the Soul separate, and that of the Resurrection are made up, as to that one New Æra or Account; and are summed up into one Total of Eternity. And we in common Speech use to say, that when a Man Dies he enters into his Eternity; because it is the beginning of a Man's Reward, whether of Punishment or of Glory, whether whilst his Soul remains severed, or is join'd again to the Body. Now if this separate State must be put unto that Part of the Account of what is Eternal: Then you must necessarily take in Glory too, for so in the 17th Verse he had said, An Eternal weight of Glory; and again, Chap. 5. 1. An House Eternal in the Heavens. So then, we must not exclude this separate State from Glory; for after Temporal is ended, it is an Eternal which succeeds, and that Eternal (saith the Apostle) is Glory; and an Eternal House also stands ready to receive the Soul, which is all one with Glory. And although the State of it out of the Body be Temporal in this Sence, that is but for a Time, yet this separate State being a Part, yea, the beginning of the Possession of that Glory, which shall never end, but be more perfectly and tully Consummated, when the Soul, and Body are re-united: Therefore the Glory in both States is termed Eternal, because from the Time of the first Possession of it, that Glory is continued to all Eternity; and is the same Glory for Kind, though not for Degrees.

So then, the Argument riseth strong from all these Things. As we use to argue against Purgatory, that there being but Two Ways mention'd in Scripture, the Broad and the Narrow; and but Two Bounds and Endings of those Ways, Eternal Life, or Eternal Death; there are but Two Sorts of Passengers, Righteous and Unrighteous which the Scriptures speak of, and therefore no Third or Intermediate Condition between: So I Argue (out of our Apostle) there being but these Two Stages and Measures of Time, Temporal of this Life, Eternal in the other mentioned by him, and when and where the one Ends, the other must be reckoned to begin, there being no State or Space between, and also this Eternal State being so expressly termed Glory, Eternal Glory, and the inward Man, or Soul it self being Eternal, and to Exist when the Body the Outward perisheth, and this Soul being wrought for that self same Thing; shall not such a Soul invincibly Conclude, when it comes to Die, my Now, my present Moment, and all Temporal Things are ended with me: Welcome Eternity, and the Possession of Things not hitherto seen, but hoped for, which the Apostle tells me, is no other then An Eternal Weight in Glory, which now begins, the other being ended.

A Second Head of Arguments may be taken from the special Connection, and Coherence which the Words of the Text, 2 Cor. 5. 1. hold with these foregoing Words in Chapter the 4th. Which the Particle For, doth carry us back again unto. For we know that if, &c. 'Tis an Account (says Musculus) given given, why that we Christians look so intently upon Things Eternal, and on that same Eternal Weight of Glory; for we full well know, that if this earthly House were dissolved, we shall enter upon them. The Things that are Temporal cease, and our Eternity then begins. We come then presently to be Partakers of that Eternal Weight of Glory; or, which is all one, of that Eternal House in Heaven. And therefore, we have good Reason to look upon, and intently to Mind those Things Eternal, so as to over-look the other. For there is but this little, so little a while, between Us and our Enjoyment of them, even but till our Dissolution. This Faith brings Eternal Things to us, and not to look at them as Things afar off. And it is the nearness of Things, and not the greatness only, if apprehended far distant, that doth affect Men. Faith is a Telescope, an Optique Glass (to which the Allusion may seem to refer) that brings them near to us, as Glasses use to represent Things otherwise greatly Remote: And because they are so near as our Death is, therefore we are affected with them.

These Words, For we know, &c. carry us also to the 16th Verse, and so bring in a New Reason, why we faint not at the Thoughts of Dying, ver. 16. Therefore we faint not, no not at Death, For we know, &c. 'Tis a Continuation of Reasons thereof, now observe the Parallel between his Comforts, or Reasonings to Comfort Christians both there and here.

1. There against the Miseries of Life; this is made a Reason, why we faint not; inasmuch as our outward Man only doth perish, but then the inward Man is renewed. But then further to shew Gods uninterrupted Care towards us in this Life, in this Renewal of the inward Man. He further adds, Renewed every Day.

2. Answerably here (Verse 1.) And in as Congruous an Harmony comes in this Cordial against Death: That even, when this outward Man is dissolved, our inward Man shall from that instant of Time, without Interruption or Discouragement have entrance into Glory. As there was not a Day past over their Heads in this Life, in which their inward Man was not more or less renewed, so when Dissolved, or upon Death in like Manner they shall not stay a Day, not from being renewed only, but from being swallowed up of Life, (as our Lord Christ says to the Thief on the Cross, Luke 23. 43. To Day shall thou be with me in Paradise) and to insinuate this, the Apostle adds these Words Eternal in the Heavens in an opposite Parallel unto that other Expression Day by Day, Eternity is a Continuation of Time for ever, without Succession of Day by Day, as the Schoolmen have observ'd. Eternity is spoken of here to shew, that as upon Dissolution, there is a beginning of it to the inward Man; so there is a Continuation without Intermision, in like Manner, as there had been in this Life a continued renewing of them Day by Day. And it is therefore, that he heartens us not to faint any more at Death, then at Afflictions; because God is proportionably as much careful over us in one State, as in the other. That as he did not renew us for one Day only, and then suspend his Work for a Year, or many Years, and then Visited us again; but every Day renewed us in this Life, so likewise when this outward Man comes to be Dissolved, this inward Man hath an Eternal House. For God stays not forbearing to Glorify us for many Thousand Years, or until the Resurrection. The Days of Darkness are many (as Solomon says of Lying in the Grave) until then: But here is an Eternal follows upon Dissolution, a beginning of a continued Ævum, when Time shall be no more, as to this glorified Soul.

Now then to bring it home to the Point in Hand; were there not an entering into Glory for that inner Man, as instantly to succeed Dissolving without Suspence, as the renewal of that inward Man is that accompanies Afflictions, and which was continued without Interruption; the Souls of Believers would not have had so full Consolation against Fainting at the Thoughts of Death, and at its Approach, as it had against those other Miseries of Life. But if we take the Apostles Words in the Sense which hath been given, there is full and abundant Consolation against all fear of Death. For the Believer may say, it matters not how soon I Die, since whenever I Die I enter presently into into Glory, and therefore, I will not faint at Death. I need not Care when, or how, I lay down my Life, seeing there is a present Provision made. This one Thought renders the Consolation home and compleat every Way: Where that other Opinion, that he should Post us off to the Resurrection reached not to this, for Hope so long deferred would make the Heart faint and sick. Whereas here the nearness of it, and the greatness of that Glory, both of them coming upon a Man's Soul, both at once do swallow up all Thoughts of Trouble, or Discomfort any Way. And this Reason did in Part cause Musculus to incline to our Opinion, as it hath been Stated.

Chap. IV.

And now e're we go on, let us take a Pause and consider a little, that after the Apostle had forelaid all the Things. 1. Of an inner Man (in Distinction from the Body) which sure God had such a Care of to preserve, &c. And, 2. That these Afflictions (which are but the Perishings, the Mouldrings of the outward Man) Work an Eternal Glory: And for whom, but for this inner Man on Purpose renewed to enjoy it. 3. That these Afflictions are for the Moment of this Life; namely, whilst this inward Man dwells in this outward Man, which is going to Destruction. And then, 4. That this Eternal succeeds, when this Temporal Life ends: Unto which Eternal, he calls all their Intentions to be fixt upon it. I say, when he had thus forelaid these Things, and brought down the Series of his Discourse thus far, he then immediately upon all this, brings in the Supposition and Mention of Death in this first Verse. What (says he) if not only our outward Man perish, but be utterly Dissolved, the whole House pull'd down. What then? Call but in a Jury of all Men, and of all Saints, and what would their Expectations be upon, certainly upon this; what should upon that Dissolution become of that inner Man, he talkt of, when left a Widdow, and alone, and separate from the Body. If a Sage Heathen, as Plato, or Socrates had been discoursing so sadly of the Immortality of the Soul, how it grows Wiser, as the Body grows Older, and then had fallen into the Supposition of the dying of the Body, and had but said, if this Body be dissolved: Surely all his Auditors would expect and desire instantly to hear something of what should be the State of that Soul, he had prædicated to be Immortal, which, when this Body is dissolved, shall still subsist. But our Apostle had much more engag'd himself from the Materials of his former Discourse, to Answer our Expectations in this, for he had not only instructed them with the Knowledge of an Immortal Soul, but how that Soul was preparing, to be furnished, fraught and fitted with Graces every Day, and how an Eternal weight of Glory was working for it. And he had call'd off their Eyes from all Things in this World, and fixt them on these Eternals; and then after all comes in with the Case and Supposition of Death. He doth certainly therefore in his following Answer speak Home and Close to that which should be the common Expectation of all Men in such a Case. As 'tis the Voice of all Men in general. Who will shew us any good? (Psalm 4.) So more especially, when we come to Die, what will then next befall us, and come unto us. This the Parable of the Steward shews us, I must (says he) be turn'd out of House and Home, What shall I do? Luke 16. 3, 4. That is, what shall I do next, Animula vagula quæ abibis in loca? But above all Men, this would be the special Expectation of Saints: The Apostle Paul therefore, being to give an Answer in this Case himself, having started the Question: He for the Comfort of all Saints may well be thought to frame his Answer unto what is the more general Care, the pressing and next Thought or Sollicitude of all Saints.

But then add to this, the Periphrasis, or Circumstance of Speech, by which the Apostle chose to express the Supposition of Death, and it will still induce us to think, that the Answer or Resolution he gives should be to this very Point; namely, The State of the Soul when separate. To this End observe, how he expresseth Dying. He saith, not in plain and short Words; If we Die, which is the usual Way of Speech, but frames it thus, If our earthly House of this Tabernacle were dissolved. Which Circumlocution of Speech, I look upon as the Sluice between the Apostles former Discourse, (Chap. 4.) and what he

he here Discourseth (Chap. 5. ver. 1. to ver. 10.) concerning what is to follow with Respect to the State of the Soul after Death. As Death it self is the Passage between both Worlds, so he Lets in, and applies all, he had spoken but indefinitely of Eternity; and Glory (in the latter Part of Chap. 4.) and brings it all down definitely ad articulum Mortis, as we say, to the Point and Supposition of Dying, as the Time designed by God to be the Epocha, from whence all those Glories fore-mentioned in that 4th Chapter are to Commence, and begin, and take Place in that same inner Man; and so the Stream onward unto the 10th Verse carries on a more Particular Discourse concerning the State of this inner Man after Separation from the Body.

It is I say most remarkable, that by this Circumlocution, If our earthly House, &c. he doth most lively represent Death to be such a Separation of this inward Man from the outward the Body, as that this inner Man doth survive and still exist, as it did afore. And to that end look as in the former, Finit duo Homines (saith Gualter) He represented the Condition of the Soul in the Body by Two Men, an Inward, and an Outward, on Purpose to set forth how whilst the outward perished, there was still an inward Man, was still renewed during this Life: So in like Manner now that Death comes to be expressed, Fingit duo Domicilia, He sets up the Comparison of Two Houses, which this inner Man removes from, and unto: Thereby manifestly declaring, that it subsisted still; yea, and but shifted its dwelling House at Death. Which could be to no other end done, then still to make Way, to shew what would become of this inner Man after this Separation. Now to this end he termeth this outward Man an House, as unto which the Soul is the Inmate: And who knows not that the Indweller doth, and can live and survive without his House; neither his Life nor Livelihood depends upon it, nor none of his inward Worth or Wealth, which he personally carries about him, it is but his removing out of it. And that Word, OUR Earthly House, plainly intimates, that this inner Man, the Indweller bears away the Name of the Person, assumes the Title of Lord, and Owner, and so carries it away alone from the Body, as the Lord of a Mannor-House doth from his House. As if the Soul should say, my House is dissolved, but I my self am still safe, and as I was. I my self am not Dissolved, 'tis but my House. Yea, which more fully demonstrates this, he termeth it a Tabernacle, when 'tis elsewhere termed an House, yet but of Clay dissoluble, and whose Foundation is in the Dust, soon thrown down as the House built on the Sand. But least that should signifie too much dependency of this Inmate upon it, that by tenderneis and obnoxiousness to Cold and Weather; when exposed, it might Die (as Shell-Fishes, and Snails, when their Shell is crushed, and they are separated from it, Die:) He therefore adds, it is a Tabernacle. Now a Tabernacle is a covering, that hath not so much as a Foundation which Houses have, but it is merely a Covering; and is set up but as for present Conveniency for a Shelter, and he that dwells in it, is himself so little Dependant on it, that he can take it, and carry it on his back, and pitch it when, and where he pleaseth: And it is used by Pilgrims, and Wanderers, and Souldiers, as you know, that least of all depend upon these Tents. Heb. 11. 9. It is said of Abraham, That by Faith he sojourned in the Land of Promise, dwelling in Tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, for he looked for a City, which hath Foundations, &c. They were Sojourners that dwelt in Tabernacles, and Tabernacles had not Foundations. And this was a Type, and a Shadow to them, and to us in them; that both they then, and we now (that is, our Souls) do dwell in Bodies, that are but Tabernacles. For the Apostle tells us, Ver. 13. That by this, and other their Speeches, They confessed, they were Strangers and Pilgrims upon Earth, declaring plainly (namely, by these as Types and Sayings of theirs) that they sought a Country, ver. 14. Doth not this Paralel further argue the Apostles intent to be to speak to that Point, What should become of this inner Man, now it comes to subsist alone; certainly he doth not ablegate us to the Resurrection, when it shall have its Body again: But means to shew what God will do with it in the mean Time, in this Interim of Subsistence by it self out of the Body.

Chap. IV.

Another Head of Arguments is drawn from the Terms in which he forms and shapes his Resolution unto this Supposition of Death; or, If we Die.

1. We have,] &c. As this inner Man is the Person, and bears the Title of it; so when by Death it is turn'd out of House and Home, we can comfortably say exouev [We have] that is, instantly, presently, an House prepared ready. It is not Habebimus, We shall have; namely, at the Resurrection. Look as the next Thought of every Man, Good and Bad upon the Supposition of Death [If we Die], is what is next, so as readily, as roundly the Apostle Answers to it, and says, We have, &c. And truly what needed more Words, to perswade any that this was his meaning? If he should say, We have, and yet intend Habebimus, We shall have, which is the Sence, that other Interpreters would put upon it, he had, when so great an Expectation had been raised of what should be next and immediately, greatly disappointed us. Yea, and though you suppose that sometimes in the Phrase of the New Testament, the Present Tense is put to express the Future; yet in this Case, the Apostle would not have made use of such a Criticism Sure, if ever he would speak plainly, and in the most direct Sense, then surely now. As Christ in the Case of comforting his Disciples with the Promise of Heaven; says, If it had not been so, I would have told you, (John 14: 2.) So here the Apostle would not have held them under-hand with an Expression of We have, when yet he meant no more then We shall have, retaining them under Hopes of a Reversion, for Distance of Time is a great Matter in the Case. Now he intends their Comfort here, as in 2 Cor. 5. Even as Christ did there, in John 14. And he intended the utmost of their Comfort: And so surely speaks as plainly, as to the Point of Time, according to the Tenour of his Expression; as Christ did, as to the reality of the Thing it self. So then Estius is very Dilute in his Interpretation, when he says, that the Apostle by the Words, We have, only means, We shall have. For it is certain, that now we have the First-fruits, and beginnings of Eternal Life, and he that Believes shall never Die, John 11.

2. Put the Particle [If] and the Words [We have] together, and Consult the Analogy of Speech in all Languages.

1. Such a Posture and Form of Speech ordinarily importeth [When] and so to say, if it be dissolved, is all one as to say, when it is dissolved. And this Speech here, and that of our Saviour (Luke 16. 9.) insisted on, is Paralel as to the Phrase, as well as in the Subject Matter (now Christs Words are, When ye fail, they may receive you into Everlasting Habitations.) Only this here of the Two is more Significant, and Punctual. That if it so fall out, (fall it out, when 'twill) we have a present Provision. And it is, as if a Man should say, I have at present a mean Cottage, a Country House I dwell in, but if Changes come by Fire or Tempest, Wars or Plunderings, that this be ruined; I have another dwelling, a City House (to which Heavens Glory is compared, Heb. 11. 10.) ready Built and Furnished to remove unto. Insomuch, that it is the same, as if in like Speech, the Apostle had said, We shall never want an House; but if we be driven hence, we have another. But if his meaning were, that for that other House we must wait the Resurrection; we should in the mean Time have been left at a loss in our Thoughts for an House.

2. The like Frame of Speech to this, If this were Dissolved, we have, &c. We ordinarily use, when we look at the present Condition as an hindrance to what, if that were removed, we should presently enjoy as more Happy, and more Desireable. So that it is, as if he had said (pursuing his begun Discourse, and the eager Intention and Working of his Mind, and its fixing on this Eternal State, of which in the last Verse afore) we should have Possession of this Glory presently, instantly, were it not for this same Body that stands in our Way, and keeps us from it. If it were but Dissolved once, we have a Glory ready. The Apostle hereby expresseth, how a Christian looks at this Body (as at present) as an Impediment, as that which Lets (as the Apostle speaks in another Case) us in our Way; and till it be taken out of the Way we are detained. Thus we speak of one that hath a great Estate in Land, which is out in a Lease to another, or of a Widdows Estate in in a Copy; if that Lease were out, and expired, or that Widow Dead, I have instantly the Possession of a great Estate to fall to me, I have it, it is mine already; there is nothing but a little Time, or such an ones Life between me and it, if they were but Dead once, I have it. The like you say of an Heir under Age, and so here, if this earthly House were dissolved, and the Lease of this Life but expired, I have another to enter into.

Now that which strengthens this to have been his Scope in this Form of Speech, are Two Things.

1. That he maketh the Demonstrative Effect of this to be a Groaning, ver. 2. For in this we groan, earnestly desiring, &c. Now Groans are Expressions of earnest Desires, that are obstructed, hindred, and oppressed, and kept from their Attainment. Groans superadd that unto Desires simply considered, and that Phrase ἐν τῷ [in this] we Groan, either refers to earthly House, that is, whilst we are in this Tabernacle, or it serves to express Time, ἐν τῷ χρόνῳ, in-terea Temporis, in the mean Time we Groan. And both these come all to one, Beza in locum. in Acts 14. 16. to shew the ground of Groaning; namely, because either during the Time of our being in the House, till the Time of that Lease is out, Time hinders us; or that whilst this Body lasts, and remains undissolved, we cannot arrive to that other House, but we are kept from it, and hindred: Or else ἐν τῷ is for this, or upon this Account we Groan; namely, because we are detained from the Enjoyment of our Desires. These Interpretations fall all in to our Purpose.

2. In the 6 and 8. Verses, He expressly makes a being at Home in the Body an Absence from the Lord, and a Man's own People; and he makes these to be the Two Peregrinations, such as whilst the one lasteth, the other is not attainable, nor doth, or can begin: So as in plain and express Words, he teacheth them to look at our being in the Body, as an Hindrance and a Let to the Enjoyment of the Lord. And therefore, we desire rather to be absent from the Body, and we Groan saith the 2d Verse, in this Body, as that which hinders us, and keeps us from our other House, For if this were dissolved we have, &c. Now if either of these Two Senses given of this Form of Speech, hit the Apostles Intention, as both lie fair, either that, if (as noting Time) it were dissolved we have, &c. Or that further our being in the Body, is an Impediment to the other: If either of these (as 'tis hard if one or both do not) it carries the Point in Hand.

3. Let us consider those Two Metaphors of an House, ver. 1. And of a Garment, ver. 2, 3. Under the Notion of which he shapes the Substance of his Answer. And by which the Holy Ghost chose to signify the Condition we are to have, if dissolved. We have (saith he) a Building of God, an House not made with Hands, Eternal in the Heavens. And we Groan to be CLOATHED upon, ver. 2, 3. And we shall find by the Coherence of this Place and other Scriptures, that they fully fall in with, and serve our Assertion; namely, they serve to express the Glory it self, which we are to have in the Heavens, as well of the Soul whilst separate from the Body, as when again joined to the Body.

Now those that would exclude the Glory of the Soul whilst separate, as having been in this Place intended, they with all do narrow these Metaphors to the Body it self, when it shall be made Glorious. And one great Argument of theirs is taken from the Opposition used here, That if by our Earthly House of this Tabernacle be meant our Bodies, then by our House made without Hands in the Heavens must be intended also our Bodies, as they shall be made Heavenly at the Resurrection; 1 Cor. 15. Even as their Earthly Man, and Heavenly Man are set in Opposition. And in this lies a great Part of their Strength, but now I turn it otherwise, not only by way of Answer, but by Way of Argument to the contrary. That if by the Metaphors of House, and Garment, or Cloathing, the Glory of Heaven it self, whether of Soul separate, or of Soul and Body, be meant in Scripture, and not necessarily the Body alone as an House made glorious with, and for the Soul to dwell in, then there is an open way, and the Plea lies fair for the separate Soul's claim to this House and Cloathing

Chap. IV.

Cloathing upon, in the mean Time. But that under these Metaphors the Glory of Heaven it self abstractly considered is meant, is evident,

1. From the Context, for what is this Eternal in the Heavens here, but that, which but Two Verses afore it, he had stiled an Eternal Weight of Glory.
2. It is evident from other Scriptures.

An House, Luke 16. Receive you into Heavenly Habitations, Ver. 9. And John 14. 2. In my Fathers House are many Mansions. And the Glory it self is compared to an House, because a Man enters into it, and dwells in it, Enter into thy Masters Joy, for it is too great to enter into the Master himself. It is called too, A Building of God not made with Hands. The same is spoken of the Glory it self, of Heaven; and not of the Body. It is a City which hath Foundations, whose Maker and Builder is God, Heb. 11. 10. A City is an Aggregation of Houses and Buildings; of Houses, that are not Tabernacles; but are fixt and have Foundations for Perpetuity, which in the Text is Eternal in the Heavens, in Opposition unto this Tabernacle House, and is the Opposition made there also, Ver. 9. Dwelling in Tabernacles.

3. That other Phrase of a Garment, you have Rev. 6. 11. used to express the Glory of the Saints in that other World. Yea, those that are for that other Sense, and Interpret this House from Heaven to be our Bodies, are yet forced; or at least must acknowledge that Phrase twice used, Ver. 2. and 4. [Being cloathed upon] to be meant of Glory, for it cannot be meant, that we remaining in these Bodies, should yet be over and above Cloathed upon with other Bodies over them. It were absurd to say, He should mean a putting new Bodies for Substance over these we have already. As Musculus hath observed: So as even according to their Interpretation which they would put upon it, Glory abstractly considered, must be intended as that wherewith we are Cloathed upon: And if under that Phrase [Cloathed upon] Glory abstractly considered, is intended by their Sense; then under the Word [House] also the same must be intended. For the Apostle joineth both as one, ver. 2. To be CLOATHED UPON with our HOUSE that is from Heaven. And again in Ver. 4. It is [Life] that is said to swallow up the Mortality, and therefore Glory simply considered is the Thing, the Apostle intended in his Discourse. And if so: This of an House, &c. are applicable as well to the Soul to be Cloathed upon therewith without the Body, as when it is in the Body. For that the Soul separate is capable of Glory none can deny.

In the Fourth Place, to come yet nearer and more Home to the Point in Hand. The Glory of the Soul when separate from the Body is in the Scriptures (yea it falls out in those very Scriptures fore-mentioned) plainly and directly intended under these Two Metaphors thereby expressing that State of Glory Men's Souls have, when apart from their Bodies.

1. That the Soul when separate from the Body hath an House of Glory, or a glorious Condition compared to an House, provided for it. This is clear by that of Luke 16. That when ye fail, they may receive you into Everlasting Habitations. Which must be our House in Heaven; for 'tis that House in which Everlastingly the Soul dwells both out of the Body first, and with the Body for ever.

2. The other of being Cloathed upon, we have Rev. 6. 9, 11. And when he had opened the fifth Seal, I saw under the Altar the Souls of them that were slain for the Word of God, and for the Testimony which they held. And white Robes were given unto every one of them. You see they are the Souls of them that were slain, and that whilst going naked out of their Bodies, that have Robes given to cover and array them, as a Reward; (as the Word given imports,) The Gift of God is Eternal Life, Rom. 6. White Robes; Ensigns of Glory and Blessedness. When they come to Heaven they are a new installed, both Kings and Priests (as this Book hath it) and accordingly cloathed with new Robes.

1. As Kings: So David, 1 Chron. 15. 27. Joseph as Governor, Gen. 41. 42. Mordecai, Esth. 6. 11.

2. As Priests: Who when first brought into the inner Court of the Temple, had their Vestments put on; so these Souls when first entred into the Holy of Holies, Holies, that is, Heaven (as the Epistle to the Hebrews speaks) are Cloathed in their Robes. This is more plain, Chap. 7. 13, 14, 15. These have washed their Robes, and made them White in the Blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the Throne of God, and serve him Day and Night in his Temple, and he that sitteth on the Throne shall dwell among them. 'Tis an Allusion to the Custom of the Priests, when a-new admitted into the Temple.

3. And Thirdly, White Robes are an Ensign of Glory. The Angels of Glory, when they appear, they do appear Cloathed in long White Garments, Mark 16. 5. John 20. 11. The same is said of these Souls, because now made like the Angels.

4. For Souls separate to be thus Cloathed upon, agrees with the Phrase Naked, used in the Text; as alluding unto the State of the Soul new coming out, from being Cloathed with a Badge; and so having Robes put over it: And this more properly, than it could be spoken of Souls continuing in their Bodies without Dissolution, of which more anon.

In the last Place; It may be observed, That he speaks of this House and Glory as now ready, and built, standing empty as it were, and waiting for its Inhabitants. It is a building of God not made with Hands. And that you may see, I do not observe this without Ground; Compare with it that Parallel of Heb. 11. 10. Abraham looked for a City, whose Maker and Builder is God. And ver. 16. Wherefore God was not ashamed to be called their God, for he hath prepared for them a City: And had done so when he first called himself his, and their God. And Christ in like Manner says, I go to prepare a Place for you: In my Fathers House are many Mansions. Now of the Body, that Spiritual Body to come, it could not be thus said, that it were built and prepared already: For it is as yet to be raised up, and it lies in the Grave until that Day, as Peter speaks of David, Acts 2. And again, when is this declared concerning Abraham and those Patriarchs? The Words are spoken of what was provided and prepared for their Souls against their Death; as that which comforted them against their not possessing Canaan, but dwelling in Tabernacles, and so also against that their Deaths, as I shewed, and as the Matter indeed evidenceth of it self

And the Parallel and Correspondency of that Place, concerning those Saints of the Old Testament; and of this my Text concerning the Hopes of the Saints of the New is very great and strong. In the Verse afore, Ver. 9. It is said, Abraham sojourned as in a strange Land, dwelling in Tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob. Types both of their own, and of our dwelling in the Term of this Life, in these earthly Houses and Tabernacles. For when the Jews his Seed were possessed of this Land, and dwelt in Houses of Stone, yet they were to keep a Feast in Tabernacles once a Year, to shew they dwelt but as in Tabernacles at the best, shortly to be pull'd down: And yet looking all that while for a City, whose Maker and Builder is God; when their Tabernacle Condition should be ended. And God to Comfort these Patriarchs against this their Tabernacle Life at present, and their Dying without the Possession of Canaan, Tells them he had already prepared a City (which is an Aggregation of Houses) for them. And in the styling himself their God and their great Reward, (as to Abraham he doth) he thereby sheweth at once both that their Souls should still live (for as Christ says, God is the God of the living) and also that he had took Care of them, made Provision for them, and would not for the least space of Time leave them destitute: But had prepared another Countrey and Houses to entertain them in. Wherefore saith the Text twice, God is not ashamed to be called their God: Even because he had made such abundant Provision for them, like to the great God indeed; if but a Man should have a Friend that were turn'd out of House and Home, and should not have an House to entertain him instantly upon it, he would be ashamed: And so would God says he, if he had not prepared a City for them. Abraham is call'd the Friend of God, even as God stiles himself his God. And Abraham therefore shall not want (no not for a Moment) Entertainment when his Tabernacle Condition ceaseth. May God hath prepared another aforehand on Purpose for him.

C H A P. V.

A State of Glory for Believers upon their Dissolution, Demonstrated from those Vehement and Earnest Desires, which God hath implanted in them, after such a State.

II Corinthians V. ii, iii.

Ver. ii. For in this we groan earnestly, desiring to be cloathed upon, with our House which is from Heaven.

Ver. iii. If so be, that being cloathed, we shall not be found naked.

THE Sense of the First Verse being thus fixed, to specifie the Glory of the Soul upon the Bodies Dissolution; our next Work is, to Examine, whether the following Words do give up themselves there-to; yea, or no: For, if they should be found averse to, and not correspondent herewith, or favour another Sense in the Second Verse; we profess, we must relinquish it in the First Verse also: Although we may safely and assuredly, take the Sense of the 1st. Verse, as the Cynosura, or Pole-star, to steer us in the Ensuing Interpretation of the rest. This First Verse, as it leads on the rest, so it holds the Balance; which is evident by this, that he there utters what is the Faith of a Christian concerning the Glory to come, when he is dissolved: And in Ver. 2, &c. he proceeds to shew the Effects, or Workings of the Heart and Affections towards this Glory, as flowing from this Faith. True, Saving Faith or Knowledge, always works upon the Affections suitably to the Object believed or known: For we know, &c. says the first Verse; There is the Act of Faith: For we groan, earnestly desiring, Ver. 2, 4. There are the Affections flowing from this Faith, and flowing from it as the Effect from the Cause. Hence then, it will evidently follow, That Look what Glory it is, that in the first Verse, he hath proposed as the Object of our Faith, the very same we aforehand conclude, to be the Object of our Desires and Groanings; Ver. 2, 3, 4. which is evident again by Ver. 5. Now he that wrought us for the self-same Thing is God, &c. This is the Conclusion of his Discourse from Ver. 1. as from thence, He draws a Thread through the whole afore, and ties a Knot of it at Ver. 5. by telling us that the Self-same Glory, which he had spoken of (Ver. 1.) as the Object of Faith, and as the Object of our Desires (Ver. 2, 4.) was the End aimed at in Working all these, and whatever else Effects of Grace in us: I say, then (in the Apostle's own Phrase) it is one and the self-same Thing of Glory, which still he professeth to carry through all these Verses, from the first to the last. Let this be our Rule then, and let us keep to the same, the Exposition of all that follows.

But although (as I said) we might safely conclude, and take for granted, that this is the Sence of these Second and Third Verses, the same which is of the first: Yet we will still put the Issue upon a particular Examination of each Word in the second and third Verses. I shall go from Word to Word, and see how all will comply with this Interpretation, that the Glory of the Soul after Death is first in Order here intended.

For we groan. He had said afore, We know, if this Tabernacle be dissolved, we have, &c. This Particle, For, leads on a Demonstration from the Effect. It is a Demonstration or Evidence.

1. That There is such a Glory for the Soul: For God's Spirit would not otherwise have stirred up such groaning Desires (which is Aquinas his Note upon the Place, and it is a good One) for if there be no regular Desire in Nature, says he, but that by God's Ordination there is an Object existent for it, it, then surely not in Grace, and therefore it must be so here, that if the Spirit of God doth work such vehement Desires after such a Glory, that then there is such a Glory extant or ordained to be; Blessed are those that thirst, for they shall be satisfied; Mat. 5. 6.

2. It is an Evidence, that our Faith is real Faith, and that we Christians do truly know, and really believe so much; Why? For we constantly groan after this Thing we thus know, Desires following upon Knowledge.

3. This Particle, For, with what follows, comes in as an undoubted Sign and Evidence, who they are, that are the Persons here, that shall be Partakers of this Glory, they are such, as upon the Faith and Knowledge they have of this Glory, Do groan earnestly after it Day and Night, and thereby do particularly come to know, and are personally assured thereof, because they find their Desires constantly maintained in them after it, and so the Words run, as to this Sense, We know; and we know it by this, For we groan after it. For such continual Groans are the infallible Effect of True and Sanctifying Faith, and so tokens and evidences to the Persons in whom they are, that this Glory is ordained for them; yea, and as the Apostle says (Rom. 8. 23.) They are The first Fruits of the Spirit, and so the very Beginning and Earnest of that Glory, as the 5th. Verse also speaks.

This may serve for the Opening of the Connexion; now for the Point it self afore us, I argue for it, out of what hath been said. This Second Verse being thus intended, as a Demonstration, that There is a Blessedness estated upon Holy Souls upon Dissolution (which hath been proved to be the full scope of the 1st. Verse) and that Demonstration being founded on this, that if God hath wrought groaning Desires after an Object, he hath also designed that Object to be existent, wherewith to satisfy those Desires, and if so, then certainly this Blessedness of Souls, we speak of, must be the very Thing groaned after, and desired in this Second Verse. For it is made the Object of our Faith, Ver. 1. whereas if we take the Interpretation, Others give of this second Verse, the Demonstration would then lye cross to it self, viz. That upon Dissolution, there is such a Glory ordained the Soul, because God daily stirs up Desires in Christians after a Glory, to be put upon their Bodies without Dissolution at all. Now this were most incongruous and utterly improper, for not only the one followed not from the other, but the latter doth run upon a contrary Supposition to that other, and therefore can never be made a Demonstration of the former. I would exemplifie the Absurdity of this by a like Instance. Suppose, a Woman hath an Husband condemned to dye, would this be taken as a Legal Evidence, that the Prince hath estated on her a Dowry or Widow's Estate If her Husband dye; because, forsooth, it can be proved he set her on Work to petition, and desire of him that her Husband might not dye, but have an Estate settled on him and on her, both living still together; certainly, she could make no Claim at all of an Estate, or Widow's Dowry after her Husband's Death thereby. For the latter runs upon a Supposition of what is clean contrary to the former. It might indeed be morally argued, that the Prince did bear a good Will and Respect to the Woman, to take Care of her, if her Husband were dead, but legally she could not plead, that such a Jointure, or Dowry were his declared Intendment; and the like Invalidity of Evidence would be found here.

But if we understand it, that this Groaning is a Demonstrative of the Truth and Reality of that Faith, which a Christian is said to have (v. 1.) concerning that Glory, and of his Propriety in it upon this Ground, because these Groanings are wrought by God in his Heart, as the sure and proper Effects of such a Faith, which carrieth his Soul out in Desires after that Glory, he believes: This doth absolutely and necessarily require, that that very same Glory, which is the Object of this Faith for Knowledge, should also be the Object of those his Desires: For Knowledge worketh upon the Desire in the Vertue of the Object known, or at least it must be granted to work it towards the Object known. But now in this Case to say, we know, and know by Faith, there is a Glory for our Souls when our Bodies are dissolved (as intended in the 1st. Verse) because we are carried out to desire a Glory of our Bodies and Souls, without any Dissolution of our Bodies dies (as intended in the 2d. Verse.) Here is no Consequence at all between these two as Cause and Effect, for they have several Objects; it must therefore necessarily remain, that it is one and the same individual sort of Glory is believed and also groaned for, insomuch as if the Glory of the Soul upon Dissolution of the Body be in the first Verse intended, as that which is believed, it must be the same and no other that is groaned for, v. 2. And indeed the Object of both is therefore specify'd, and set out under one and the same Expression in both Verses; namely, Our House. Thus much may suffice for what this Demonstrative Particle, For, doth afford.

Chap. V.

2. The Next Words are, IN THIS, ἐν τῆτῳ, we groan.

There are three Interpretations put upon this Phrase, and each and all of them will comport, and fall in with my Argument in Hand.

1. Εν τῆτῳ, In This, is put (says Beza) for Interea Temporis, ἐν τῆτῳ χρόνῳ, In the mean Time; he referring us to Acts 24. 16. for the like Usage of the Phrase. And so taken the Words of both Verses will look at one another thus, We know, if our Earthly House be dissolved, we have a Glory then at that time to be given us: For in the mean time, namely, until that our Dissolution, We groan for it. This Interpretation so connected evidently points out the Time of Dissolution to be the last Period of that Groaning, and the Beginning of the Enjoyment of that Glory. There is only an Interim, or Space of Time till then.

A Second Sense given is, that the Phrase, In this, signifies, In this Tabernacle; as ver. 4. seems to explain it. But yet even then, if unto this you joyn but that Clause, If this Tabernacle were dissolved (which will still be sure to follow us, and enter its Claim to be taken in as the Terminus and Occasion of our Groaning) then certainly it falls most naturally to this Sense, That in this Tabernacle, we groan for that Glory, which when it is dissolved, we shall have in a Condition that is out of it; and that whilst we are in this Earthly Tabernacle, we therefore groan until it be dissolved upon the assured Knowledge, that if once it were dissolved, we have a Glory in Heaven ready to be given to us.

The Third Sense given is, Unto this we groan, or, For this. Thus the Oriental Versions, the Syriack and Arabick render it. A Lapid out of the first of them gives this Sense in those plain Words, that we groan for this, that our Mortal House were dissolved; and so the Sense runs clear, That seeing we know, we cannot in the Ordinary Course, set by God (v. 1.) attain this Glory unless dissolved, we groan out of an Eagerness of Desire. even for that Dissolution it self in Order, and in a Tendency thereunto; even as Paul says (Phil. 1. 23.) I desire to depart (as our Translators have render'd it) namely, in Order to be with Christ. And truly, although Dissolution is not in direct Words made the Object of our Groaning here, yet take the whole Contexture, and it is tacitly, and perhaps necessarily supposed and implied in this place: And to that End it was, the Apostle made that Correction and Limitation of his Meaning, v. 4. We Groan being burthened, not that we would be uncloathed, that is, whereas I had said, even we groan for this Alteration, being burthened, yet not simply, or for its own sake, or the natural Consequent thereof, Ease from Burthens, or the like, but to the End to obtain that Glory, which cannot be had without a Dissolution.

3. The next Words are, We Groan. The Apostle having pitcht the Date of our Expectations to be Dissolution, there appears therein a special Reason, why we should be said To groan (that's his first Word) as well as to Desire (which he adds) which how it makes for our Sense I shewed upon v. 1. The Effect of which lies in this, That because this Earthly, Vile Body stands in the Way between Us, and the immediate Enjoyment of this Glory; this therefore, gives us just Occasion of Groaning in this Tabernacle. Groans, we know, are properly Desires obstructed and hindred; and we In this Tabernacle (till it be dissolved) looking upon our selves as hindred and detained all that time from that desired Glory, Hence we groan. And further perhaps it is said, that We groan in this Tabernacle, or, in the mean time of this Life for this Dissolution, as in a Distinction from the Desires, which separate Souls in Glory have for that Greater Fulness, of Glory to come at the Day of Judgment, which are Desires in in them indeed, but not Groans; they being satisfied and quieted in the mean Season, with a Glory suitable to that Condition of Separate Souls, they being made Spirits perfect, as perfect as the Spirits of Men separate from their Bodies can be. A white Robe being given every one of them; (Rev. 6. 11.) they are bidden therewith to Rest. But in Saints on Earth there is A Groaning, until their Change from this burthensome Life shall come, and their Pilgrimage, and Apprenticeship be out. We that are (that is existent) in this Tabernacle, we do groan, and we only, v. 4.

And hence a new Argument may be added, strengthening and confirming what hath been urg'd, That if the Souls of Saints departed had not such Robes, that is, a Glory instantly given them when out of this Tabernacle, truly it would occasion after their Departure hence New Groanings, or the same to be still continued; and then the Apostle would not have terminated our Groaning only unto our being in this Tabernacle, or in this mean time, nor would he have confined it only to this Life: But if We groan here being burthened; (as v. 4. hath it) we should have had Occasion to have groaned a second Time in the other World also, if Glory had been suspended, and we had been still delayed, especially withal considering that Eagerness of Desire, which the Apostle there expresseth to be in us, after a being cloathed upon. But, says our Apostle, In this we groan, and in this only: And therefore, there is a Blessedness in the other World, that waits for our Souls against our coming thither, which is bestowed presently upon the Soul which satisfies it, and prevents all Groanings for ever, after Dissolution.

Unto all this, it is Objected by those of the other Opinion, that in Rom. 8. the Object of the Groaning of the Saints is expressly said to be that State of Glory, that follows upon the Resurrection, and therefore, that also is here intended. The Words there are, Even we our selves groan within our selves, waiting for the Adoption, the Redemption of our Body: Ver. 23.

Objection.

For Answer, 1. Neither We nor They can deny, but that both that Fulness of Glory at the Resurrection, as also this Entrance into and Beginning of Glory, which the Spirits of Just Men made perfect do in the mean time enjoy, are, and ought to be the Objects of Christians groaning for here in this Life: And if both are, and ought to be, then look, as some Scriptures mention the one more eminently as the Object of our Desires, so some other Scriptures must also be supposed to do the other, and so that hinders not at all, that this should be the Meaning of the Apostle here; yea, it would rather seem, that as that of the Romans speaks of our Groaning for the Redemption of the Body, so it leaves room for this here to speak more eminently of that, which is for the Soul's Glory in that mean time, 'till that of the Body be added.

Answer 1.

2. Secondly, I Answer, There is a Different Ground, or Occasion mentioned for that Groaning there, and for this here; which distinct Characters are engraven upon each to mark out the one for that one Sence, the other for this other. The Occasion of their Groaning, Rom. 8. is the Doctrine of the Restitution of all Things, the Revelation and Glorious Liberty of the Sons of God, v. 19, 21. to be MANIFESTED to all the World, and to be accompanied with the freeing the whole Creation from that Vanity and Bondage they are now in, and for them to have a Participation of some Priviledge in a suitable proportion. And so that Groaning, which the Saints have thereupon, is after that which is common with the whole Creation, in the universal Perfection of it, and of Us Saints, as the Object of it there: But this can no way be drawn, as a necessary Instance, that should give A Law to the same Intendment of this Groaning here, where the Occasion is upon another Thing, which in the mean time falls out, What if our Earthly House be dissolved, which falls out to some Christians or other every Day: But what then? why then We have an House, &c. A Glory in the Heavens ready for us, and this Groaning here coming in upon the mention of Glory in the Interim (v. 1.) Hence it hath for its Object the State that is next, even of the Soul upon its Dissolution: So as the Ground of this Groaning is a particular Case, and upon an Occasion different from that other in Romans 8.

Answer 2.

Chap. VI.

Answer 2.

Again, 3. If they urge that Place as parallel to this, because of the Word Groaning. We must take Liberty to urge another parallel Place, because of the Word Desiring; which is in Order of the next Word in this Verse to be taken Notice of. We groan earnestly, Desiring. Now elsewhere the Object of our Desires in this kind is made that Glory, the Soul hath upon Dissolution, Phil. i. 23. Having a Desire to depart, and to be with Christ, which is far better: Yea, and to Depart first, as it is in Order to our being with Christ; that is the Object of his Desires there. So then set one against the other.

4. The next Word is, Desiring. The doubling of these two shew the instant Eagerness of Desire; as in Gen. 31. 30. Longing, thou longedst; or, Desiring, thou desiredst. Thus also in Luke 22. 15. With Desire have I desired; as a Woman longing, or groaning in Travail to be delivered, and desiring to bring forth a Child. Now such vehement Longings, and double Desires are usually, if not always pitcht upon, What is to be had presently, and not long delayed. When we see not much Time in View betwixt, then it falls out that Desires are quickened, and doubled, and sharpened, even by what is near, and very near. Now the Glory at the Resurrection, although greater in it self, yet is and was to them afar off, and is so yet to us. But if we were once but dissolved, we should have an House. This Salvation is near (as the Prophet speaks) there are but a few Moments between, but a few Inches. It is this Proximity, or Nearness that moves, and stirs up a Desiring. We desire, &c.

But further Consider 'tis with a Groaning we desire. There is some Emphasis, both put together, to our purpose. Groaning respects the present Condition of Misery and Frailty, v. 4. We groan being burthened: And Desiring, respects the Glory that is to follow Dissolution. Take a Woman in Travail, Groaning under Pains, and withal suppose her being told, and assured, or to know assuredly, that when she is delivered, she shall have a Son, a Man-Child, which Man-Child shall thirty or forty Years after, become a Great Emperor over many Dominions; but for the present upon her Delivery, he shall be born a King, and made Happy and Glorious: Certainly, her groaning Desires in this Case would be pitcht upon this, that is next, and more immediately to follow upon her Delivery. Her very Pains and present Throws, and Groanings, would rather so direct and guide her Thoughts and Desires, rather than to cheer her self meerly with what should be many Years after. For, alas, she is in present Pain, and in that Case to think of a present Deliverance, and thereupon withal of a present Greatness and Glory; though less, would move her much more in groaning to desire.

That which is desir'd, is, To be cloathed upon with our House, which is from Heaven; as it follows in the next Words. That by Our House from Heaven, which is also here compared unto a Cloathing, that under the Notion of us, both these Metaphors or Similitudes The Glory of the Souls departed afore the Resurrection was clearly expressed in the Scriptures, I shewed in opening the 1st. Verse. Therefore, I shall not at all insist on those Words any more, but my Business now is to be taken up about this Expression, Cloathed upon; and so I shall shew why the Glory of the Soul even afore the Resurrection should be termed A Cloathing upon, implying An upper Garment unto the Soul when separate from the Body. And hereupon begins a second Controversie; from what hitherto hath bin prosecuted (upon Ver. 1.) This Word, Cloathed upon, being used twice by the Apostle here, and those other Words that follow as in Explication of it, Cloathed, and Naked putting us upon a new Disquisition. Those that understand the first Verse, to speak (under the Metaphor of An House, &c.) of our Glorious Bodies to be given us at the Resurrection, do similarly, or in correspondent like manner interpret these Words, Cloathing and Nakedness, (v. 3.) to refer unto our Bodies. The Soul of a Saint dead, and separate from his Body, is said (say they) to be naked. But we that stand for that other Interpretation given of Ver. 1. That the Glory of the Soul presently upon Dissolution is intended, do in a suitableness to that Opinion say, That these Metaphors of Cloathed and Naked, are used in reference unto the Cloathing by Grace, Holiness, or the Righteousness ness of Christ. And so our being Cloathed upon with Glory, doth respect a putting of Glory over that Soul that is first found Cloathed with these, here in this Life. Chap. V.

And accordingly, either as the Soul at Dissolution wants, or is devoid of these, it is said to be Naked; as having put on these, 'tis said of it, that it is Cloathed, and so in a prepared Disposition unto Glory: And answerably it is either left for ever utterly Naked, and exposed to Gods Wrath, or it is Cloathed upon with that Glory in Heaven, provided for all such, who are Cloathed with Christs Righteousness. Whereas the other Interpretation says, the Glory of Heaven, and Immortality put upon both Soul and Body, is the Cloathing upon, that is here intended; our Bodies say they, being the natural Cloathing to the Soul.

As to their Opinion, they to carry it on throughout are constrained to make some Variation in the Sense, of the 1st, 2, 3, and 4th Verses, as I observed at my Entrance into the 1st Verse. For they say, that in that first Verse, the Apostle intends to utter the general Faith of all Christians to be this, that if they Die, and their Bodies be Dissolved; yet however, they are sure to have their Bodies restored with Glory by the General Resurrection: But then as for the 2, 3, 4th Verses, they say, his Scope should be, that in Consideration they must thus first Die, and have their Bodies Dissolved, and their Souls and Bodies first to Part (which is so Abhorrent a Thing to Nature) therefore Christians do generally Groan, rather to have their Souls continue still Cloathed in the Body; and so without Dying both of them together, to be Cloathed upon with the Glory from Heaven, which one Day our Bodies shall have: And this they make the meaning of the 2d Verse, For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be cloathed upon with our House, which is from Heaven. And yet, because such desires are not Regular, nor such as they ought to be, if carried out to Things impossible, or which God never willeth; therefore the Apostle adds a Correction to these Desires, as grounded upon a Supposition of what is Gods Ordination towards some Saints; Ver. 3. If so be, that being Cloathed, we shall not be found Naked; namely, that seeing it will be the Lot of some Saints, to be found alive at the Day of Judgment: Who shall not Die, but have their Bodies on the sudden Changed and Cloathed upon with Glory (as you have it in 1 Cor. 15. 51, 52. and 1 Theff. 4. 15, 17.) and this being then a known and common Notion, possessing the Hearts of all Believers in those Primitive Times: Accordingly these Interpreters do suppose, that Paul here utters his own, and directs all their Desires, generally to groan after this Privilege, that they might not Die; but that, without being Dissolved, their Bodies might be Changed into glorious Bodies, without any more ado. And unto this Sense, they Interpret the 3d Verse, If so be, that being Cloathed, we shall not be found Naked; that is, (say they) our Desire or Groaning is limited to this Supposition; or with this Correction (saith Piscator) If so be, it prove to be our Lot to live till that Day, and so being then still Cloathed with our Bodies, or, alive, we be not found Naked; that is, in the number of those Saints that are Dead: So that being Cloathed, they Interpret, found Cloathed with their Bodies; and Nakedness, they oppositely Interpret to be Death; and to be found Naked, to be of the Number of the generality of the Saints, who will be Dead; and their Souls separate, and naked from their Bodies just at the Resurrection. And then the Words of the 4th Verse, do (as they suppose) with full Stream fall into their Channel. Ver. 4. For we that are in this Tabernacle do Groan, being burthened (with daily Miseries and Infirmities) not for that we would be uncloathed; that is, we would not Die, Nature causeth us to abhor that, but we would be Cloathed upon Alive; that is, living in our Bodies until that Day. We would rather have our Bodies (which are but as a Garment to the Soul) Cloathed upon with that glorious State, that so Mortality which is now the Condition of our Bodies might be consummately, and once for ever swallowed up of Life, as at that Day it will be to those that so remain, yea, unto all else, that then shall rise, as in 1 Cor. 15. you have it. This is the brief Summ of their Opinion.

Hammond.

Vorstius.

Piscator.

Est igitur quæ-dam correctio,

quasi dicat non tamen affirmo

fore ut superin-

duamur, sed

tum demum su-

perinduemur si

reperiemur [sc.

in adventu Domini] indui

scilicet corpori-

bus id est vivi;

non autem ex-

uti, i. e. mor-tui, Calv. in verba.

Chap. VI.

In which Interpretation of theirs, there is this apparent Variation (I might say Deviation, for such it will be found anon) between what they deliver to be the Sense of the first Verse, and of the other that follow, that the Apostle should intend in the first Verse, the Resurrection it self of glorious Bodies after Dissolution, and Death first supposed; but in the following Verses, they divert to another Supposition; namely, unto a Glory of our Bodies without Dissolution or a Resurrection, and under that Consideration make it the Object of all Christians Groans, and Desires.

But we on the other Hand frame our Interpretation uniformly, as to one and the same Thing being the Object both of our Faith and Groans, thus.

1. That the Saints know by Faith, that if once these earthly Tabernacles were Dissolved; they have, instantly upon that Dissolution, an House and Cloathing of Glory prepared, and ready built to entertain them, both then, and so for ever; whether in the Body, or out of the Body, afore, or at the Resurrection; and they knowing this assuredly by Faith, do therefore.

2. Groan for the Time of their Dissolution, as the next and first Stage of that Glory; as Job did, Job 14. 14. All the Days of my appointed Time will I wait, till my Change come. They Groan out of eagerness of Desiring the Possession of that Glory, which is thus to begin, when this miserable Life is ended, and then a Life will begin, which shall never have an end.

3. Those, who thus Groan, and expect, are yet with all admonisht to be careful, and earnestly solicitous to put on more and more the inner Man, to be Cloathed with Grace, and to be found having the Righteousness of Christ; and to keep their Garments close about them to the Last, lest they be found Naked, which is the Case and Condition of Multitudes of Professors, when God takes away their Souls; and unto that end it is, that the Apostle inserts this, by way of Caution or Warning. If so be, that being Cloathed, we be not found Naked, ver. 3. And to put them in continual Mind of this, and to make way for this Caution, as expressed under these Metaphors, it was, that he on Purpose chose that other Metaphor, of being (whereby to express the Possession of Heavenly Glory) Cloathed upon, as that which supposeth, a being found under Cloathed with Grace and Holiness: The Necessity of which Cloathing by Grace, he illustrateth by the contrary Condition of these Mens Souls, that depart this Life devoid of this Cloathing. How unconceivably miserable must they be, that are found Naked, not of their Bodies only, but of all spiritual Cloathing; and thereby lie exposed to the Wrath of God, driven out of all Shelter, House, and Home, and covered with nothing but Confusion of Face?

C H A P. VI.

That the Cloathing mentioned in the Text, 2 Cor. 5. 3. Doth Import the Spiritual Cloathing of the Soul in this Life, as a Preparation unto Glory.

THE Difference of Interpretation being thus Stated, there are Two Things to be Treated of in the 2d and 3d Verses.

1. That Cloathing, and answerably Nakedness here, are similitudes that do refer unto to spiritual Cloathing of the Soul while in this Life, as it is a Preparation unto Glory or to a being Cloathed upon.

2. I shall shew the Incongruities that accompany that other Interpretation, which asserts that Cloathing and Nakedness should relate simply to our Mortal Bodies.

The Account and Demonstration of the first, will be dispatcht by these ensuing Conclusions or Considerations.

1. No Man can deny, but that the ordinary and frequent Use of these Two Phrases in the Scriptures (when they are used as Metaphors, and applied to the Soul, both which is the Case here, what ever Sense be taken) is intended of spiritual Cloathing, or Nakedness, especially when thus conjoined, and set as in Opposition together, Cloathed and not Naked, as here, which Doubling of it must have a special Emphasis in it, and that as to our Sense; and against theirs, of which more in the Sequel. I Counsel thee (says Christ, Rev. 3. 18.) to buy of me White Raiment, that thou mayst be cloathed, and that the shame of thy Nakedness do not appear. And in Rev. 16. 15. Blessed is he that keeps his Garments, lest he walk Naked, and they see his Shame. He turns it both Ways (as it is here) Cloathed, and not Naked. This last Place I cite, because in many Copies and Scholia's upon this 3d Verse of my Text, it is found in the Margin thereof, and thereby we are referred unto it, as a Comment upon the Words. Æstius.

2. If the next Enquiry be, what more particularly the Scripture holds forth, to be our Spiritual Cloathing to be obtained, first in this Life, in order to that other: It is to be considered, that the Scripture last cited, mentioned Garments in the Plural; as indeed in Use amongst Men, the ordinary Apparel of every Man consists of more Garments than one; and that in Distinction from his uppermost Garment he is Cloathed upon withal. So that the Cloathing of the Soul in this Life, though consisting of Two Garments, is reckoned but as one Cloathing, in Distinction from that Glory we are Cloathed upon withal in the other World. Now, this Cloathing in this Life are (as Calvin observes upon this Place) Two, 1. Christ's Righteousness. 2. Sanctification of the Spirit.

1. Christ and his Righteousness put on by Faith, Gal. 3. 26, 27. For ye are all the Children of God by Faith in Jesus Christ. For as many of you, as have been Baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. Which is fitly termed a Clothing, for a Cloathing serves for a covering of Nakedness and Deformities, and sometimes Sores and Defilements. And our Justification by Christ's Righteousness, is in that respect stiled a Covering to us, as well as an Adorning of us, and making us Righteous in the sight of God. Therefore in one, and the same Place, Righteousness is said to be imputed, and thereby Sins to be covered, as the Apostle clearly argues it, Rom. 4. 6, 7. By his comparing the Words used of David's Justification (Psalms 32.) expressed by covering Sin; and of Abraham's Justification, which was an Imputation of Righteousness without Works of our own; it is apparent that this Righteousness, with which we are cloathed, must be anothers; for also it is said, to be imputed to us. And whose but Christ's Obedience (Rom. 5. 19.) is said to make us Righteous, whose Name is Jehovah our Righteousness, as the Prophet hath it. This his Righteousness also is that fine Linnen clean and white, given the Church against her Marriage, Rev. 19. 7. The Marriage of the Lamb is come, and his Wife hath made her self ready. And ver. 8. To her was granted, that she should be arraigned in fine Linnen, clean and white: For the clean Linnen is the Righteousness of Saints? This is Christ's, and not her own Righteousness. For 1. It is given her over and above her being made Ready, under which is meant that readiness, or her preparedness of Sanctification for Glory, (as after will appear) to shew that it was her own, for it is said, she her self made her self ready, by the help of Grace: But of this other Righteousness it is said, that it is granted unto her, as a further Gift and Donary of her Husband. The Spouse, the Woman useth to send fine Linnen against Marriage to the Husband of her making: But here the Husband sends the Wife a Cloathing of his own making. Yea, and it is not only said, that fine Linnen was given her; but that it was granted, she should be Cloathed with it, importing a Righteousness merely put over her, and so put on by Faith, and not wrought by her self. And besides all this, what I Assert is evident from another Reason. Our Righteousness is not fine, and clean, and white, but as menstruous Raggs, entermingled with Defilements: But this Righteousness imputed, and with which we are Cloathed, is both clean, without Impurity, and white, as estating unto Glory.

Chap. VI.

ry. Unto all this it may be added, that he (in Rev. 19. 8.) by way of Eminency points at it, for he says, that this is the Righteousness of the Saints. In the Greek it is, This fine Linnen are the Righteousness of the Saints. Which Brightman, with Vehemency urgeth against the Popish Justitiaries, and layeth it at their Door. He asserts not (says he) The Righteousness of the Saints is this fine Linnen, but, This fine Linnen, thus granted her to be cloathed withal, is that, which is the Righteousness of the Saints; that only Righteousness, which they stand righteous before God withal; even they that are most holy need to be cloathed with it, to come to the Prefence and Enjoyment of their Husband, and to be cloathed with it over and besides their own Righteousness. And what I have asserted is also evident from this, That every Saint in particular is justified by this Righteousness, hath a share in it, yea, hath the whole of it for his Justification, therefore it is termed δικαιοσύνη, in the Plural. So then Christ and his Righteousness, is a Cloathing put upon the Soul in this Lfe, in Order to that other Life.

2. The Second Thing is our own Inward Holiness, and our Walking holily. You find both in Ephes. 4. 22, 23, 24. That ye put off concerning the former Conversation the Old Man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful Lusts: And be renewed in the Spirit of your Mind: And that ye put on that New Man, which after God is created in Righteousness and true Holiness. And to the same Effect the Apostle speaks (Col. 3. 9, 10.) Lye not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old Man with his Deeds: And have put on the new Man, which is renewed in Knowledge, after the Image of him that created him. And further, both Places affirm; The Image of Holiness in Man was at his first Creation to have been a Cloathing to his Soul; so as it might have been said of him then, He was cloathed, and not naked. Which accordingly appears also by him, that when by Sin he had lost that Image, he fled even from God, as naked in Soul, as well as in Body; Gen. 3.

But let us in the mean time observe not a little of Resemblance, or Parallel between these two Places now cited, and this of our Apostle that is afore us; which is something to the further carrying on the Proof, what should be the Apostle's Scope here. You may remember, we observed (as in Order to our Opening the first Verse of this fifth Chapter) how the Apostle, by way of Introduction thereto, had spoken of our Soul's (considered as distinct from the Outward Man of our Bodies) as an Inward Man, which was renewed from Day to Day (so ver. 16. of Chap. 4.) and then we made some Parallel between these Words, and some Particulars in this first Verse. Now observe, how further, this is carried on in these Scriptures now cited, under the Metaphor of being Cloathed. For he useth the very same Language. An Inner Man, there is made the Subject of this Cloathing; also that Inner Man, there, by being cloathed is still said to be further renewed: The Words are exprefs, Put on the new Man, which is renewed in the Spirit of your Minds: And that is the most Inward Part of our Souls in distinction from our Outward Man. Now then let us first take and put these Things mentioned in this Place, in like manner together. I. An Inward Man renewed, whilst the Outward perisheth: And, 2. When this Outward Man is dissolved, we, that is, our Souls Be cloathed, and not found naked: And then let us bring these two alledged Parallel Places unto these, and they will readily inform us, That the Soul cloathed with the Image of God, and found such at the Dissolution of the Outward Man, is all one with that Inward Man, which in our Life time was daily renewed, whilst the Outward Man did moulder, and perish: Which as you know is the plain Sence, that hitherto hath been driven at: So as he useth but a new Metaphor, in this second Verse, Chap. 4. of Cloathing; to exprefs what he had afore spoken of this Renewing.

II. The Second Consideration is, That this other Phrase of being cloathed upon with Glory, is fitly, and congruously spoken in relation to this of our Souls being first cloathed with Christ's Righteousness, and with Holiness in this Life; as in Order to our being Cloathed upon with Glory in that other, which will appear from those Reasons.

1. Take the Thing it self, 'Tis evident that Grace and Christ's Righteousness are in this Life in Order unto, and a necessary Preparation unto Glory, as an Under-cloathing, fitted and suited to an Upper-cloathing upon. That looks, as if you will lay Varnish, you must first lay some Colour capable of it, or it loseth its Gloss and Verdure; so 'tis here.

1. Our being cloathed with Christ, and his Righteousness, is a necessary Pre-requisite to Glory; because it gives the Right to it as to an Inheritance: So in that place, cited for that purpose, Gal. 3. 27, 29. Those that have put on Christ are Heirs; and so in many Places more.

2. Holiness in Heart and Life, that other Part of our Cloathing in this Life, which is next us; is every where termed a Preparation to this Glory, Without which no Man shall see God. Heb. 12. 14. Yea, without which no Man can see God. John 3. 3. The Church therefore, by her decking her self with Holiness, is said to make Her self ready for the Meeting of Her Husband, in that forcited Rev. 19. 7. which in Rom. 9. 23. is termed A Preparation to Glory. And thus likewise, in Ephes. 5. 26, 27. Christ sanctifieth and cleanseth his Church, that he might present it to himself a Glorious Church. And it is not to be past over, That what is in 2 Cor. 5. 2, 3. spoken in a way of Metaphor, of being Cloathed, in Order to Cloathing upon, our Apostle in the fifth Verse of the same Chapter, as to the Reality of the Thing utters thus, He that hath wrought us for the self-same Thing is God. That is, he that by working Grace, and Holiness in us hath fitted us for this Glory: Which in the Phrase of this 3d. Verse is expressed, Hath cloathed us to be cloathed upon: Or, if you will have it in the Language of the Psalmist (Psal. 45. 13. The King's Daughter is all glorious within. Her Cloathing is of wrought Gold, she shall be brought into the King (and his Palace, ver. 15.) in Raiment of Needle Work; which how that answers to this, He that hath wrought us for the self-same thing, is God: I leave to any Man to judge. The Context then confirms the Reality of this Metaphor.

3. The Metaphor it self tells us, That Glory is A Cloathing upon; as a Garment put over these Garments first had in this Life, that is, it is an Upper Garment; which among all Nations hath been made Use of Pro Veste honoraria, as a Sign of Difference of Persons of Honour from others. Every Man hath his Ordinary Cloaths, but Men of Honour and Rank have besides upper Garments to shew their Dignity, Superiority, &c. Kings and Nobles have their ordinary wearing Apparel for every Day, but when they go to be Crowned, or to be invested Kings or Nobles, or go to Parliament, they have Robes or Mantles, upper Garments proper to their Greatness. Thus Joseph, when advanced Second in the Kingdom was arrayed in Vestments of fine Linnen (Gen. 41. 42.) Pharaoh commanding them to bow before him. Thus Daniel was arrayed by Belsazzar, Dan. 5. 29. and thus also was Mordecai cloathed, Esther 8. 15. He went out of the presence of the King in Royal Apparel (as his Upper Garment) Being in a Garment of fine Linnen and Purple (as his Ordinary Garment besides) And to this Day the Kings of these Eastern Nations do put (as a Sign of Honour) an Upper Garment on those they favour. The Great Turk lets no Ambaffador with his Followers come afore him, but he gives them Upper Vestments out of his own Ward-robe, and lets them wear their own ordinary Apparel besides. Thus the Saints, when they are first actually installed Kings in Heaven have Christ's Righteousness, and their own Holiness, which they had obtained and worn in this Life. But these are but as their common Apparel, worn every Day, that is, both in this Life and the Life to come. And as ordinary Apparel, though consisting of two Garments, is yet reckoned but as one sort of Apparel, taken in distinction from those upper: So both Christ's Righteousness, and our Holiness are in that respect reckoned but as a Cloathing, because 'tis that in this Life we are cloathed withal; and this Robe of Glory also unto which Sanctification prepared, and Christ's Righteousness gave Right, is an Upper Garment, A Cloathing upon: Though indeed Christ is our Cloathing in both: Christ in Glorification is as an upper Garment, but in Justification he is an under Garment, because in this Life, but yet still Christ is All in All in both.

And

Chap. VI.

And this Notion, That Glory is as an upper Garment, that Place seems to favour. Rev. 6. 11. White Robes were given unto every one of them (speaking of Souls in Glory) given them now when new come to Heaven (as the Context shews) and yet they did come cloathed to Heaven, with Garments dipt in the Blood of the Lamb, which they had in this Life (Rev. 7. 14.) yet now anew are Robes given them: Glory must therefore be said to be A Cloathing upon. And truly let it be considered by Criticks, if ῥοαί, Robes, especially White Robes, doth not sometimes in the use of the Word, properly and peculiarly import upper Garments of Honour and Dignity, which great Persons are cloathed upon withal: And if at any time the Word is strictly used to express such, I would then say, That it means so here: For he speaks of Robes of Glory, and those granted anew. Sure I am, that ῥοαί is so used restrictim, sometimes, as the Word Robe amongst us is used, both pro Veste Senatoria, the upper Robes that Senators wear (and so among the Greeks) and also pro Veste Sacerdotali, for Priests upper Garments; in both which respects, the Pharisees affected to wear such Garments. Luke 20. 46. Mat. 12. 28. Which Places we Translate, They desire to walk in long Robes ('tis the same Word) the Ensigns forsooth, of their Dignity, Rule and Greatness.

C H A P. VII.

What is meant by the Phrase, 2 Cor. 5. 3. Of Being found Naked.

THE Third Consideration is about the Import of this Addition, And not found Naked: It must have an Emphasis in it. For he contents not himself to say, If being Cloathed; but he illustrates it also by its opposite, And not be found Naked. One Reason was, to knock off the Hands of many Carnal and Temporary Professors of Christianity found in all Ages, who pretend to this Hope of being cloathed upon with this Glory when they dye, as well as sincere Professors, for whose sakes he reasonably puts, Us, If we be not found Naked. This is spoken in relation unto Persons, and it is but a partial Reason, but chiefly it is added to express the perfect Contrary Condition of such as are not cloathed, namely, to connote the woful and miserable Condition of such. It notes out not only a bare Vacuity of that Cloathing, though that Fundamentally; but further the Damage, the Detriment and Misery, that is the Consequent thereof; namely, that they shall not only for ever be deprived of that Glory others are cloathed upon withal, but as naked Souls be opposed to Wrath, and have no Fence or Shelter from it. And this carries it far beyond, what that other Sence of theirs talks of. Now to strengthen this Sence of Nakedness Spiritual, There are Three or Four Things help forward the arguing of it.

1. It is argued from the further Analogy of the Story of Adam. As to understand that Phrase Of being cloathed; we had Recourse to the Image of God in Adam at his first Creation: So now suitably to find out what it is to be found naked, we must have Recourse to him in his fallen State. Thus Beza, though to another purpose, sends us thither, and says, there is here an Allusion to that Nakedness of his: And so he illustrates, how the Body at the Resurrection is naked, if found without Glory. But I shall have Recourse to it, and to the Identity of it, as shewing the Condition of the Souls Misery in appearing before God destitute of Righteousness, in relation unto which appearing, the Word Found, is here added.

We read, Gen. 3. 7, 8, 10, 11. That their Eyes were opened, and they saw (or) knew they were naked, and were afraid, and hid themselves from the Presence of the Lord because they were naked; as really, so also in their own Sense. Though were were bodily Naked afore; yet now, and not till now, they discern this Nakedness Spiritual, and are sensible, not that of Want of bodily Cloathing, they needed not have fled from God's Presence for that; Who will harm you, if you do that which is Good? To be sure, God will not: But they found they had now lost the Image of God. But that was not all, for that Loss simply alone considered corrupt Man laieth not to Heart, but the Consequent Misery ensuing hereupon was that which amazeth them. Their Consciences found themselves now laid open to Confusion and Shame afore God's Presence, and exposed unto his Wrath, his Image being gone: And therefore, they out of Horrour hid themselves from God, being afraid, as the Text there hath it.

2. A Second Evidence of this is, that in other Scriptures, wherein Cautions about Spiritual Cloathing are given (as also here) there the like Caveat of taking heed of being found Naked, is in like Manner given; even as here, If being Cloathed, we be not found Naked: And to my Knowledge, to no Sense else are the Words thus turn'd both Ways. I shall mention the Places, Rev. 3. 17. Thou knowest not, that thou art Wretched, and Miserable, and Blind, and Naked. I Counsel thee to buy of me White Raiment, that the shame of thy Nakedness do not appear; namely, when thou comest thy self to appear afore God. So then, it is not the want of that Cloathing simply, but the Consequent of it, the Shame of that Nakedness, for which that Nakedness is mentioned. And who upon considering this, will not be ready to say, That this to be sure is spoken in Allusion to our first Parents spiritual Condition, reproaching those to have been more wretched then their first Parents. For in Genesis 'tis said, That their Eyes were opened, and they knew they were Naked: But, thou knowest not (says Christ here) that thou art Naked, yea, and Blind too, in that thou art not sensible of thy Nakedness, as they were. To the same Effect (Rev. 16. 15.) He presents to them the Misery, and the woful Consequence of not keeping their Garments; Lest he walk Naked, and they see his Shame; the like is in Ezek. 16. 4, 5, 7. Their spiritual Nakedness is set forth by their being cast out to the loathing of their Persons in the Day that they were born.

3. And indeed otherwise the Addition Cloathed, and not Naked had been superfluous. For if it were intended as in our ordinary way of Speech it is; not to be Cloathed, and to be Naked, and so e contra, are all one and the same. So he had spoken in this Phrase, but the same Thing which in that other of being Cloathed he had done. But thus taken it puts a further and higher Matter upon it, namely; That look as those, who are Cloathed in that Manner that hath been spoken, shall be Cloathed upon with Glory: So they that are found Naked, are exposed unto Shame, and cast into utter Darknes. It imports an opposite State of Misery, unto that Glory which the true Saints are Cloathed upon withal.

4. But that, which when added to these, chiefly Argue the Word Naked to be taken in this spiritual Sense, is the Word Found, which the Apostle would needs also put in, and not simply say, and not be Naked, but be not found Naked. Found! I would ask of whom? Of God? Yes surely. We have a building of God (so ver. 1.) For to be Cloathed upon withal by God; according as we are found of him, if we be not found Naked (says the Text) namely by God. Which the Apostle Peter thus expresseth, 2 Pet. 3. 14. That ye may be found of him (God) in Peace. It is a judicial finding of God, as a Judge now coming to dispose of Us to Life or Death, according as he shall find us Naked, or Cloathed: And it is put to the worser Part, if found Naked. 'Tis a judicial Word to this Day, you say, the Jury found it so, or so upon Trial, namely. So the Phrase is in the Scripture too; Found a Liar, Prov. 30. 6. Found Guilty, ver. 10. So when God punisheth, he is said; to find out Iniquity, Gen. 44. 16. As also in Relation thereto, he is said, to make Inquiry or Search for Blood, Psalms 9. 12. And truly as the Instance of Adam hath helpt us to understand, what to be Cloathed, and to be Naked, is: So also, it will help to find out, what 'tis to be found Naked. God staid a while, but in the cool of the Evening he came, and came to make Inquisition in what State Adam was. Adam where art thou, Gen. 9. 9. Adam had lost God's Image, and Naked God found him, and cast him out of Paradise. The Phrase is yet more express, when Christ cometh to judge of Men's Conditions, in order either to Life or Death, this is that very Thing, which (as in terminis it is held forth) God makes the Subject of his grand Inquest, Cloathed or Naked. Mat. 22. 11, 12. When the King came in to see the Guests, he saw there a Man, which had not on a Wedding Garment. If you will have it in the Words of the Text. He was found Naked. Friend (says he, as to Judas) how comest thou hither, not having a Wedding Garment? And you know what follows, Cast him, where weeping and wailing is. Christ hath a Time when he purposely Visits, When the King came in, says ver. 11. And 'tis a Day wherein he adjudgeth to Hell, Ver. 13. And his Eyes search narrowly, and pry into every ones Condition. He Spies out a Man, which had not on a Wedding Garment, not one escapes him. And so on the Contrary, one that hath put on Christ, and is Cloathed with his Righteousness, and with Holiness of Heart and Life, which is the Cloathing we speak of, he is said to be found in Christ. Which was Pauls aim against that Time, Phil 3. 9. That I may be found in him, not having mine own Righteousness, but that which is through the Faith of Christ. Against that Wedding Feast it is granted, the Believer to be arruied with this Robe, as you heard out of Rev. 19. 7. And now all these Things, how far do they shut off that other Interpretation?

Chap. VII.

IV. The Fourth Consideration shall be about the Time of Gods finding Men, and making Inquisition, whether Cloathed, or Naked in Order to Glory or Shame. Now if the Time of our Dissolution be a Time, in which this solemn Inquisition is made, and at which every Soul is Found, and Viewed, whether Cloathed, or Naked in order unto Shame, or Glory: Then this Interpretation still lies fairer: For it is the Point in Hand. Let us consider, 1. As to the Thing it self, whether this be not a Time of such a Judicature? 2. Whether any Hints make for it in the Text?

1. As to the Thing it self, The Time after Death is the first most solemn Time, wherein God makes this Inquisition. For first, Then it is, that God takes solemn Cognizance of Souls, and their spiritual Condition: When he calls for them, and they appear solemnly afore him. This the Instance of Adam is a Preident to us of: It was a Private Day of Judgment, as this also is. God staid a while, and was Patient, but when he call'd Adam Personally unto him, and he appear'd afore him, Adam was found Naked: And God past a Trial, and a Sentence upon him. Why now at Death it is, that God takes away Mens Souls, Job 27. 8. 'Tis God that doth it, whether it be he sends for it by a good Angel as he did to Lazarus, or by a bad one, Luke 12. 20. God said, this Night they shall require, or call for thy Soul back again; for alas, it was but Lent. You see there, it is God gives the Particular Commission, and sends for the Soul to himself, God said, &c. His Children he sends for Home (as the Phrase, Ver. 8. of this 2 Cor. 5. imports) as Men for their Children at the University, or in Travel. And Wicked Men he sends for, as a Justice doth to apprehend a Felon, to clap him up in Prison against the Assizes: So says Mercer on that Word in Job, He shall take away his Soul; that is, hale, and pull it out of its own dwelling, unto Prison, and Judgment. So 'tis, that it is said of all Men, The Soul returns to God that gave it, and Lent it, Eccles. 12. 7. It returns to God, then, or at that Time, when the Body goes to the Earth. I find in that great Assembly that glorious Presence (Hab. 12. 23. Where Angels and Spirits of Just Men are made Perfect; that is, Souls are swallowed up into Life) that in the next Words, there is this Description of God, even as he sits amongst these, and to God the Judge of all. For even now, afore the Great Day of Judgment; and whilst Men's Souls are in a separate Estate, he sits as a Judge of all both Good and Bad, amongst those glorious Spirits. Which is seen in this, That the Spirits of Just Men are taken up by a Judgment past on them, ere they sit down there: And in like Manner he is a Judge of others also (for of All it is, he is said to be the Judge) and so by the like Judgment, the Souls of Wicked Men are cast into Prison: As it is expressly said, of the Souls of the Old World, after after God had taken them away by Death, 1 Pet. 3. 19. Now it is a certain Rule, God never judgeth, or casts into Prison, until he hath past a Trial upon those he so commits, and hath found them so or so: You find it in the Case of Sodom. But especially, he casts no Soul into Prison, until he hath found him Naked. This the Parable shews, when the Guests appear'd afore him, he then saw a Man without a Wedding Garment: He then took Cognizance of it, and him: And further, he examines him, and convinceth him, he wanted it, and then, and not till then cries, Cast him into utter Darknels, where weeping and wailing is. So then, if upon Dissolution Mens Souls are cast by him into utter Darknels, and Prison, it is, and must be, because they are then and at that Time found Naked, and Judged so by him. And though there is a Publick Judgment at the great Day to Manifest, Justifie, and Publish this afore all the World: Yet at Death there is a more Private and Personal Judgment, and a finding of Souls, whether Cloathed or Naked: And a disposing of them accordingly, either to a being Cloathed upon with Robes of Glory, if found Cloathed with Grace (as the Souls of Martyrs, Rev. 6.) or cast into Hell, as the Rich Mans Soul was, Luke 16. The one is as the Assizes, the former as the Private Cognizance and Commitment of the Justice of Peace, perhaps long afore the Assizes.

If now, surrounded with this Light, we will but with an impartial Eye look round about the Words here, and the Context, we may easily discern, that they are most naturally accommodate to express the State of Souls after their Dissolution. Certainly, if they suit, or fit any Time, or Season, that can be supposed; they are eminently applicable unto this, and therefore so intended, as may appear by some Characters in the Text.

1. To begin with what was last spoken of, there are Two Judgments, one at Death, the other at that great Day: Why may it not then be rationally conceived, That after his Discourse of this separate State of the Soul ended, Ver. 9. he therefore purposely brought in the mention of that Publick Judgment, Ver. 10. For we must all appear before the Judgment Seat of Christ, that every one may receive the Things done in his Body, according to that he hath done, whether it be Good or Bad. Having in the beginning of that his Discourse, (Ver. 3.) spoken of this other, that is more Private and Personal at Dissolution; and so of both Judgments, this as precedaneous unto the Souls Glory whilst separate; that Latter as foregoing that ensuing Glory of Body and Soul conjoined: Surely, the setting the one thus with the other hath a great Comeliness in it, and makes an Harmony in this Structure of his Discourse.

2. But 2dly, The Apostle himself had set for us, and pointed us unto the Time of Dissolution, as the Time when our Hopes are; that if our Bodies were Dissolved, we have a Glory to be Cloathed upon withal. And in these Words he puts in a necessary Caution, if so be, we be found preparatively Cloathed, and not Naked; which no Man can deny, but that as to the Thing it self, complies fully with that Time. It hath therefore been a Wonder to me, That any should pass all this off to another Time, and say, that of this Time, this is not to be meant at all. Truly, I will take the Apostles Time afore any other, when all Things thus correspond and agree with it. Nay, if he had not set it, I should have been induced to have applied it to that Time. If you had any Prophecy, and saw all Things punctually to agree, and to Center in such a Point of Time; would you not say, this surely is the Time, and these the fulfilling of it?

3. But 3dly, The very Metaphor used by the Apostle, and chose out here as ex proposito to express himself by, viz. Not to be found Naked, doth secretly, and yet most elegantly Connotate (together with, and over and above all that else hath been spoken of the import of it) the very separate state of an ungodly Soul, now come out of the Body, to be the very Subject he is a speaking of. Such a Soul at Death goes Naked forth of the Body; for which I do not urge, that we go Naked out of the World in Job's Sense, for that is meant of the Body, as well as the Soul: For he had said afore, Naked I came into the World, and that to be sure is meant of Body and Soul conjoined, yet so, as of the Two in worldly Respect, the Wicked Man comes less Naked into the World, then he goes out of it; for at coming in, many Children come Cloathed with right to Inheritances in this World, and there is a great Difference of Persons in that Respect: So as by Virtue of their Birth, they have all good Things in a readines for them richly to enjoy. Besides, that the Soul is then Cloathed with a Body, which makes it capable of the Enjoyment of all Things in this World, therefore the Apostle comparing both Conditions together (1 Thess. 6. 7.) says of the Latter only, as more undoubted and apparent, that tis certain, We carry nothing out of this World: For the Soul then is stript of the Body also, and no such Respects attend it into the other World. Nor will I urge, that Death is as a Birth; namely, into that other World, and so the Soul it self now goes Naked, as Soul and Body once did into this, stript of all. I will not follow the Allusion, that the Sorrows or Pangs of Death are usually termed Birth-throws, midwa, nor how that Angels (Good or Bad) attend the Delivery, as Midwives, to catch the Poor Naked Soul, and carry it to the Father of Spirits, as God is call'd (Heb. 12.) Who, if it be a true Son, owns it, blesseth it, covers it with Glory; but if it be a Bastard, rejects it. But I go upon that better Warrant, That the Apostle hath here a glance at the State of Souls stript of their Bodies, inasmuch as at the 4th Verse he expressly termeth Death, a being uncloathed, as in Relation to the Body, which none can deny: But yet still (observe it) when he speaks of Godly Men (as there) he Terms it, but a being uncloathed, that is, a mere want of the Body, for he is still Cloathed with Grace: But speaking of Wicked Men's State when Dead, he Terms it Nakedness, not only or barely in respect of their Bodies, but chiefly in respect of a Nakedness every way, that doth accompany their Souls, in regard of the want of Grace, and of Christ's Righteousness; and in regard also of Shame, Wrath, and every Thing else, that Nakedness in Scripture can, and doth spiritually import. Now the taking of Uncloathed, Ver. 4. to be all one with Naked, Ver. 3. is one cause of the Mistake in our Interpreters: Whereas the being Naked, is spoken by way of Ignominy, as hath been said; and so shews, how from that Time such a Soul is exposed to Shame and Misery. Yea, and thereby actually enters into that Misery; and that because, it is now separated from the Body. And that is the genuine Notion I insist on, for Explication of which, though indeed it is true, that the Soul was really Naked, when in the Body (as Moses seeing God, that is Invisibile, did view the People of Israel Naked, Exod. 32.) yet the Miseries of its Nakedness do not break in upon it until now, when it is dispoiled of its Body; nor doth this appear till then, for Confirmation of which consider,

1. That by God's own Ordination, the Time of this Life, and of the Souls being in the Body, is ordained as a Screen betwixt God and Men's Souls. The Body is as a Midst Thing between him and the Soul: And so it becomes through God's Ordination, a Time of Patience, Long-Suffering, as to those in Noah's Time it is said to be, and yet when they were Dead, their Spirits were cast in Prison. And answerably, Men's Soul whilst in their Bodies are said to be preparing for Wrath, (Rom. 9.) with much Long-suffering on God's Part, Rom. 9. 22. There is a Sluce betwixt Gods Wrath and them, but in the other World when out of the Body, the Naked Soul and God himself do meet. The Soul then, and not till then, returns to God immediately; though in this Life the Apostle tells us, he is not far off from any of us, Acts 17. Now the Soul lies Naked to all God's Wrath, the Cataracts of Heaven are set open, and it hath no Shelter, for the Sluce of God's Patience is with the Dissolution of the Body pull'd up. And this following upon Death, the Apostle did most elegantly so express it, as Connotating at once all these Things.

2. As there is this Truce betwixt God and Men's Souls in the reality of the Thing: So at the Dissolution of the Body, and not till then, it is that Men find themselves Naked. When is it, That the Hope of the Hypocrite, is said to Perish, but when God takes away his Soul. To the very last Moment, he in the Parable was Ignorant of this: And therefore upon the Challenge, that he wanted a Wedding Garment, 'tis said, He was Speechless. Till then, Many Men know not, they are Naked, Rev. 3. 17. And therefore in respect of their Eyes being then, and not till then opened to discern it, they may be said to be found Naked, as in the Text.
the

5. The Fifth, and last Consideration concerns the Manner of these Words coming in here, Ver. 3. If so be, that being Cloathed, &c. eye, some express it by way of Limitation, that is of restraint unto the truly Godly and Believers, to shew this Priviledge of being Cloathed upon with Glory, to be proper and confined to them alone, with Difference from all others, that are found Wicked and Ungodly. I would rather call it, an wholesome and necessary both Condition, and Caution, given by the way to the Saints themselves, together with Relation specially had unto carnal and presumptuous Professours, who pretend Assurance, and profess to know and groan for Death with the same Expectations, as the Apostle brings in the Saints.

1. It is by way of a necessary Condition, Col. 1. 22, 23. Christ will present you Holy, and unblameable in his sight, eye, if so be, ye continue grounded in the Faith, &c.

2. It is by way of a necessary Caution unto Saints, to keep and hold fast their Garments: In which Manner, that useful Parenthesis comes in, Rev. 16. 15. Blessed is he that Watcheth, and keepeth his Garments, lest he walk Naked, and they see his Shame. 'Tis usual to insert such Admonitions, so in this very 2 Cor. 5. 9. Wherefore we Labour, that whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him.

3. It is by way of holding forth to all, the Truth and Genuineness of Christian Profession in their Expectation of Glory, If so be, that being Cloathed, &c. Even as Eph. 4. 21. The same Words is used. Ye have not so learned Christ, if so be, that ye have been Taught by him, as the Truth is in Jesus.

4. It is spoken with special Respect unto presumptuous Professours, That there being a Faith and Hope in them concerning these Things, that is not genuine but counterfeit, they might be put in Mind to search into themselves, whether they had this Wedding Garment, yea, or no. There were wise Virgins that had Oil in their Vessels, and Foolish, which had not, and so were shut out, so here is the same Case. Thus Rev. 3. 17, 18. That Admonition comes in, Thou saist I am Rich, and increased with Goods, and have need of nothing: And knowest not, that thou art Wretched, and Miserable, and Poor, and Blind, and Naked. I Counsel thee to buy of me Gold tried in the Fire, that thou mayst be Rich; and White Raiment, that thou mayst be Cloathed, and that the shame of thy Nakedness do not appear, and anoint thine Eyes with Eye-salve, that thou mayest see.

And truly this in the Close, for the Confirmation of that Interpretation we have given of Cloathed, &c. as that which respecteth Grace, as a prerequisite to Glory, or being Cloathed upon; I may add some Remarks on those Words, If so be also, that being Cloathed. 'Tis not eye barely (as in the Places cited) but et also is added unto Cloathed. 'Tis Calvin's Observation (and for ought I have elsewhere found) his alone. This Sense, (says he) namely of being Cloathed with Grace and Christs Righteousness, is fetcht out of the Particle etiam, or also (as it ought to be Translated) which for Amplification sake was without doubt inserted, as if Paul had said, there is and shall be a new Garment upon Death ready for Believers, if so be in this Life also, they have been Cloathed. And I must Confess, the Emphatickness, that this Etiam or Also puts upon this being Cloathed, did as much serve to put my Mind off from all those other Interpretations, as any Passage else whatsoever in the Words. And when I went to let down in my Mind their Senses, of being Cloathed with a Body; and then put but these Words, if so be also in therewith, they seemed all dilute unto me, and there appeared not any Thing, that should deserve such a notoriety, such an Exaggeration or Amplification. But if we Interpret it of Grace and Christs Righteousness, they are so Rich, so noble a Cloathing as are worthy of such a Mark of notoriety express'd by the Word Also, and being Pointed Atque hic Sensus elicitur ex particulâ etiam, quæ amplicandi causâ laud dubiè inserta est. Ac si dixeret Paulus novam vestem fidelibus amoret paratam fore si quidem in hac etiam vita vestiti fuerint. Calvinus in verba.

Chap. VII.

at thereby, as prerequisite to Glory. And in the like way of Exaggeration, or Eminency doth this Word et or Also come in, Ver. 5. Who hath also given us his Holy Spirit.

Objection.

There are Two Objections, I find, made against these Words being made a Condition, or Caution given to Saints.

Answer 1.

1. That in the foregoing Sentence, there being no Promise made, nor no positive Declaration of any Thing, as requisite to be done, or to be in us; but only the common Desire of all Saints expressed, viz. to be Cloathed upon, unto which as so expressed, a Condition or Caution to be added seems not proper.

Answer 2.

It is True, it is not a Condition of the Desire, or Act of Groaning it self, as it comes from them, but of the Object or Thing it self desired; namely, being Cloathed upon, which shall be (says he) if we be also Cloathed.

Answer 3.

Whereas there may prove an Over-weening and Mistake in some that pretend to Desire or Groan after this, or a Negligence in the best, to take heed to be fitly qualified: Such a Caution is in that Case seasonable to be made to them; though it be not properly a Condition of the Desire it self.

And 3dly, We may carry up the Reference of these Words also higher, even to relate to, Ver. 1. as thus. We have an House in Heaven, if this were Dissolved; if so be, that being Cloathed with Grace, &c. And so it serves as a Condition thereof.

Objection.

The Second Objection is this, That he speaking these Things of the most eminent of Saints, as himself and other the Ministers of the Gospel (Chap. 4.) And so of all Saints, whereof many were assured of their present Condition in Grace, and so of Salvation (We know, &c.) or at least of such Persons, as he takes for granted are Holy: In this Case to add, If so be ye have Grace, and be not found Naked, was for him to Detract from what he had supposed already of those, He spake of.

Answer.

1. I Answer, It is to shew the necessary Connection that is betwixt Glory and having Grace, and Continuance therein to the End. Although the Persons be such as have the Things that accompany Salvation, yet Paul of himself says, I est, when I have Preacht to others, I my self be a cast away, 1 Cor. 9. last. And to the sincerest Colossians reconciled by the Blood of Christ, (Col. 2. 21.) He yet puts in this Caution or Condition (Chap. 1. 22.) Unto their being presented at the latter Day by Christ, If ye continue in the Faith, &c. And thus too in Rom. 8. There is no Condemnation to them that are in Christ. So he begins, and in the end of the Chapter (says he) None shall separate us from the Love of God, and yet (Ver. 13.) He gives this Caution unto such, If ye live after the Flesh ye shall Die: But if ye through the Spirit mortifie the Deeds of the Flesh ye shall Live. Other Answers might be framed out of what hath been spoken afore.

Nor doth this Interpretation, that it should be meant of the Time of Death, exclude the Glory at the Resurrection, as if being Cloathed with Grace, and not found Naked were only a necessary Condition at a Mans Death: But would stand a Saint in no stead at the Resurrection (which might be made another Objection) No: But all this is true, first of the Soul at Death, and then at the Resurrection; again, also, for as then, there will be a new and open Judgment afore all the World: So a new Inquiry, by ripping up our Hearts and Lives to be, Whether we had been Cloathed or Naked in this Life before, and at our Deaths. And Grace, and Christs Righteousness that we had here in this Life, will then stand us in as much stead, as they did at Death.

C H A P. VIII.

The Words of the Text Explain'd, and their Coherence with the First and Second Verses.

II COR. V. iv.

Verse iv. For we, that are in this Tabernacle, do Groan, being burthened: Not for that we would be Uncloathed, but Cloathed upon, that Mortality might be swallowed up of Life.

THE First Verse expresseth the Common Faith of the Primitive Christians in this great Point: That, when their Bodies should be dissolved, they expected a Glory for their Souls afore the Resurrection.

The Second Verse expresseth, the lively and vehement Working of their Affections, in groaning Desires thereupon, by, and through Dissolution to arrive at that Glory: Which Groans are the immediate Effect of that Faith.

The Third Verse is a Caution intermingled by the Apostle, as by the Way, unto all that professed this Expectation, To be sure to get, and keep their Garments, lest they be found Naked at their Dissolution, and so frustrated of that Glory, and exposed unto Shame and Wrath, Rev. 16.

In this Fourth Verse, he returns a-fresh to sigh forth the groaning Desires of himself, and other Saints after the same Glory with a greater Vehemency and Enlargement of Affection, then was afore expressed. That he assumeth the uttering the former Desires expressed in Verse 2. is evident in the very reading of the Words; and confirmed by this Parallel between them.

1. He had said, Ver. 1. If this Earthly House of this Tabernacle, &c. Here in Ver. 4. He says, We that are in this Tabernacle, &c.

2. He had said, Ver. 2. We in this do Groan to be Cloathed upon with our House. He speaks the same in Ver. 4. So that he brings down, we see, the First and Second Verses into this Fourth Verse: And therefore the Substance, Spirit, and Scope of both Verses is by Infusion soaked into, and contained in this Fourth Verse, and is further impregnated and heighen'd.

If the Question be, What in this Repetition of his, is added to what had been expressed afore in Verse the Second?

The Answer is, that in this Fourth Verse he farther gives the true and genuine Account, upon which a sincere Believer is moved thus to Groan, with a most accurate Distinction from what are the false Grounds, whereupon all other sorts of Men are moved to Wish, or Groan for Death, as Christians use to do: And so the Thing, which is New in this Fourth Verse, is both the Manner of these Desires, together with the explicite Ground thereof, neither of which had been so nakedly and distinctly expressed in that former 2d Verse.

The Scope, which by many Interpreters is put upon the Words, is, that many Christians knowing and believing that, in that ordinary Way and Course, which is set and appointed by God we are to wait until the Resurrection, for the Accomplishment and Perfection of our Glory. And also, that in the mean Time our Bodies must first be Dissolved, e're we can come to, or arrive at that consummated Glory of Soul and Body together: And that Nature in us thinking at this Dying (all Men naturally abhorring Death) that therefore it should be here intended, that the Saints do Groan as being burthened with the very Thoughts of Dying, and therefore do secretly Desire not to Die at all. Which (say they) is expressed in those Words, not to be Uncloathed, that is, not of their Bodies at all. But instead thereof, their Desires do vehemently Soar to this; that they might both Bodies and Souls (whilst they remain main yet unparted) be glorified together without any more ado: And that thus at one leap they might without taking the Degree of Death be Cloathed upon with their House from Heaven, in full consummated Glory the first Instant, whilst yet they were Cloathed with their Bodies; and this they would have effected, and by Virtue of such a Change as is mention'd in 1 Cor. 15. We shall not all Die, but we shall be Changed in a Moment, in the Twinkling of an Eye. And this Change, which is answerable to the Resurrection of others from the Dead, will swallow up all Mortality of the Body so, as we shall be at once compleatly swallowed up of Life. This Interpretation they give under the Countenance of the foresaid Change, which will yet be but the Lot of some Saints, and indeed of those only, who shall be found alive at the Instant of the Resurrection, which Priviledge yet these would have to be the Desires of all the Saints here, as that which they would rather wish? As also, because of that seeming Paralel between those Two following Words of the Apostle there, 1 Cor. 15. 53, 54. For this corruptible must put on Incorruption, and this mortal must put on Immortality; and then shall be brought to pass the saying; Death is swallowed up in Victory. Which Words they judge exactly Paralel with these Words here, Cloathed upon, that Mortality might be swallowed up of Life.

Chap. VIII.

But the Scope and Sense, which I contend for, runs upon a clear contrary Supposition (which Supposition the Apostle did begin his Discourse with Ver. 1.) founded on those Words. If our Bodies be dissolved, &c. Wherein he doth not only tacitly imply, that the ordinary Course, set by God for the Saints arrival at Glory, is the Dissolution of their Bodies: And that the Saints generally know, and make Account of this: But he further makes the Supposition of this, as de Facto in the Event, that when that this shall once be done, and come to pass, That our Bodies be dissolved, that then we have an House, &c. And this he laies as the Foundation, whereunto he suits the rest of his Building in this following Discourse to their Relief against the Time of this their Dissolution; and the Groanings and Desires after the Glory which shall follow that Dissolution. And as in the Second Verse, he had begun to express their general Desires after it; so here in this Fourth Verse he persisteth with a reiterated Vehemency to set out their Groanings continued still upon the same Supposition, that if their Bodies be dissolved once, they know they have an House to be Cloathed upon with; they looking upon Dissolution only as the common Gate and Passage appointed by God, whereby their Souls in their several Ages and Generations shall first and soonest come to that blessed Attainment, which is their first Entertainment in Heaven.

Now that the Words of this Fourth Verse will comply with and give themselves up to this Sense and Interpretation, and fully suit with it, will appear, when I come to open every Particular in the Words. In the mean while, we may aforehand take up a new general Reason, for the confirming this our grand Assertion, that the Glory of the Soul separate upon Dissolution is in this Fourth Verse continued by the Apostle to be set out as the Object of a Believers Groanings, as well as it had been in the Second Verse. And the Reason hereof is drawn from the Series and streight Current, that runs thro' all in a Succession from the First Verse, with the other Verses down to this Fourth Verse, and likewise which this Fourth Verse retains with the former, and then descendeth down to the Fifth Verse also: Which Reason you may frame in this Mould. That look what Glory it is, and what Subject in Man it is, that is the Object of a Christians Faith in the First Verse, and of a Christians Groanings in the Second Verse: The very same Glory, and the same Thing in us is, that which the Apostle intends as the Object of a Christians Desires and Groanings here in this Fourth Verse. But the Glory of the Soul separate upon Dissolution is that Glory, which is held forth in Verse the First and Second, &c. Therefore the same is intended in this Fourth Verse also. That the Glory of the Soul separate, &c. is the House intended, Ver. 1. I have before largely, and I hope invincibly proved. And that the same Glory (in Ver. 1.) is intended also, in Ver. 2. as that which we Groan for, desiring to be Cloathed upon with our House, which is from Heaven, is evident also.

For

For as in the First Verse, he declares what their Faith was; We know, that if this be dissolved, we have, &c. So in the Second he shews, what their Affections were pitcht upon, this their Groaning being the Effect of that Faith: And indeed, it is impossible in this Condition, but that the Glory which by Faith they expected (Ver. 1.) it should be the very same they Groan for, Ver. 2. For Affections follow Knowledge home to the Door of that Object, which Knowledge apprehending doth propose unto us. And the other main Proposition, viz. that the Glory, we are said to Groan after (Ver. 2.) is the very same with the Object of our Groaning here (Ver. 4.) is evident.

1. Because this Fourth Verse is, a re-assuming (for the Substance) of what was said in the Second Verse, and also in the First Verse, as uttering the same Groaning Desires, though with a fresh renewed Vehemency. But yet it is a Groaning after one and the same Glory, which Glory is therefore in the Fourth Verse continued to be expressed under the same Metaphor he had used afore Verse Second, namely, to be Cloathed upon; even as Ver. 2. Desiring to be Cloathed upon with our House, which is from Heaven; of which House also he had first spoken, in Ver. 1. We have an House in the Heavens. Although herewith he over and above adds a further, and more plain Explanation, what that House and Glory we are Cloathed upon with is, even a swallowing up this Mortality of Life.

2. Again Secondly, He utters the present Condition of the Saints till Dissolution, under one and the same Metaphor, which he had used in Ver. 1. and Ver. 2. In Verse the first, he speaks of Our Earthly House of this Tabernacle; In Ver. 2. he says, in this (namely, this Tabernacle) we Groan: And then he useth the same Word again here in Ver. 4. more indigitately, We that are in this Tabernacle, still to refer us to the first Verses, as speaking to the same Thing, which this Fourth Verse speaketh to. For otherwise, he might have simply said, we that are in the Body; but by repeating this Metaphor of Tabernacle, He again would mind us of the Short Continuance of the Souls abode therein; and also, of that Existence the Soul, the Indweller is to have, when that Tabernacle shall be Dissolved.

3. And thereby Thirdly, He shews he would have us carry down those Words, in Ver. 1. We knowing, that if our earthly House of this Tabernacle were Dissolved, &c. As in common to be repeated, and supplied in the Fourth Verse. And then the Connexion will thus run Current through all the Four Verses: We, who are in this Tabernacle, knowing that, if this earthly Tabernacle were Dissolved, we have a House in the Heavens to be Cloathed upon withal, do therefore Groan to be Cloathed upon therewith: And therefore do also Groan for Dissolution in order therunto; for we know, that if this Tabernacle were but once Dissolved, we have another House ready, &c. Thus those Words in Ver. 1. If this Earthly Tabernacle were Dissolved, will still follow us down hither into this Fourth Verse, and will Challenge, that it should be admitted and taken into the Interpretation thereof: And thereupon this will inevitably follow, that the Glory of the Soul upon Dissolution is that, which is the Object of this Groaning in this Fourth Verse.

4. Lastly, That one and the same Glory is steadily and Homogenially thus carried along, through 1, 2, 4th Verses, the very first Words of the Fifth Verse do conclusively shew: He that hath wrought us for the self same Thing, is God. What is this, but that one and the self same Glory before spoken and treated of, whether under the Metaphor of an Heavenly House; and being Cloathed upon therewith, or more plainly expressed, as a Life that swallows up Mortality? This Glory is one and the self same Thing, that he had been speaking of in the Fourth Verse, and in all the rest of the former Verses. The Apostles whole Discourse is a Woof of Thread, and one and the same runs through all: And the want of Attendance unto this strict uniform Connexion of the Matter of these Verses one with the other hath been the Cause of those Mistakes in those fore-specified Interpretations; wherein some Expositors have taken Liberty to interpret these Verses of several sorts or subjects, rather of Glory, as of the Soul separate in one, and in another Verse of the

Chap. IX.

Glory that shall accrue upon the Resurrection of the Body, and of that Glory only: And then in another Verse, they interpret it of a Third Way of coming to Glory, viz. that Change of Body and Soul without either dying or rising again. Whereas the Apostles Discourse doth speak of one and the self same Thing, as in Ver. 5. He on purpose and professedly speaketh. And so the whole Discourse is spun of an even Thred, and 'tis apparent, that he speaks of the Glory of a separate Soul all along.

Only I shall premonish the Reader in this Place once for all, That this Plea of mine put in of the Glory of the Soul separate, as now it hath been stated, is far from excluding that consummated Glory at the Resurrection to be also intended. For a Believer may have in the first Place, as next in Prospect, the Glory of his Soul, when separated in his Eye and Desires, and yet withal he may have ultimately in View that further Glory of the Resurrection, to come after, as that which he expects and longs for also, but yet each in their due Order. These Two, both the Things themselves, and our Desires after them may, and do well successively both stand together: And therefore I oppose that Opinion of the Glory at the Resurrection, no further, then as any would have that Resurrection Glory solely to be meant, and would exclude altogether the Apostles Intendment of the separate Souls Glory in the mean Time. But as for the other Sense of a Believers having Desires not to Die at all, but to be Changed: If this Sense I have now given be the genuine Purport of the Words, it will indeed (I Confess) perfectly overthrow and exclude that other Interpretation of a Desire of Non-Dissolution, for that is contradictory to this of mine: And indeed unto the Apostles Supposition at first, If our earthly House be Dissolv'd, that leads on to all that follows, as hath been observed.

I shall now give a general Division of the Words of this Fourth Verse. The Groanings of a Christian after Dissolution being the common Scope and Subject of this Verse, the rest thereof as belonging to, and setting forth those Groanings may be divided into general Parts, whereof some will admit of lesser Divisions after.

1. The Persons, that Groan, are set out with their present Condition, We that are in this Tabernacle.
2. The occasion of their Groanings, and the Cause why they Groan is express'd to be their being Burthen'd.
3. There is a Vindication of Christians in their Groanings after Dissolution, with Difference from all other Men, in these Words, Not for that we would be unclothed.
4. There is the true Account it self why they Groan, Being burthened, not that they would be Unclothed, but Cloathed upon with their House in Heaven.
5. That Glory is signified by that Metaphor more plainly expressed; That Mortality might be swallowed up of Life.

I shall first consider the Persons, and their present Condition as represented in those Words of this Fourth Verse, We that are in this Tabernacle. Some restrain the Word We, unto the Apostle himself, and his Brethren the Apostles, and those eminent fellow Labourers with him in the Ministry, because of these he had spoken in the Persons We, and Us, and Our, all along in the Fourth Chapter, in his setting out their Sufferings, Labours, and Persecutions: And this, which with some Difference (as to the Frequency and Hazard of them) from other ordinary Saints (as appears in Ver. 12, 14, 15.) And so proposing themselves in all their Sufferings, and in this their Confidence of Glory, as Examples unto the Vulgar Ordinary Christians. And truly, if we should measure this by the ordinary Temper of Christians in our Times, we would be induced to think, that what the Apostle speaks of Groanings and Desires after Dissolution, and the Glory that follows should have been intended only of some of those eminent Saints then: Who had received the first Fruits of the Spirit (Rom. 8.) beyond what in Comparison other Saints have receiv'd. And indeed, how remote are Saints now a Days from those Desires to be dissolved: But on the Contrary are fearful of Dying. But yet considering, dering, that the Apostle speaks of, and sets out those Persons or Subjects, who were intended by the General Character common to all Saints in the next Words, We that are in this Tabernacle: And also holds forth that Assurance of Salvation, and a Joyful Waiting for that Day: And also considering, that an Establishment, and Anointing, a Sealing, and the Earnest of the Spirit, were Priviledges common to those Corinthian Christians, and other Primitive Christians, together with the Apostles (as he expressly says, Chap. 1. 21, 22. of this Epistle) this warranteth us to judge, that this Word We was intended of the Body of Saints in those Days, and if there be any (as in our Days there be many) that do not thus desire and groan, it is yet their Duty in this their Condition, as well as it was the Duty of the Apostles: We, for unto the Saints he had both intended it and appropriated it, all along appears from these Words, We know we have an House; expressing the Common Faith of Believers: And in Verse the 2d. he says, We groan after our House; and he terms it Our House, as being the proper Demains of them as Saints, their Free-hold, and distinct Property, and accordingly he annexeth their present Condition in common, as was said; We in this Tabernacle. The Truth is, the Popish Commentators would fain carry it unto Apostles and Eminent Christians alone, who they say, went immediately to Heaven. And they assign a middle Place, Purgatory, for the Vulgus Sanctorum, for the Common, Vulgar Saints; whereas if the Scripture should be intended generally of them, and of their being taken up into Glory at Dissolution, that Middle State would utterly fall to the Ground.

We that are in this Tabernacle: That is, that have our present Existence, or Being in the Body, which is our present Tabernacle: We that lead as yet a Tabernacle Life. He says, not meerly we groan in this Tabernacle, but We that are in this Tabernacle do groan; putting a further and more especial Emphasts upon it. And thereby he doth not only tacitly insinuate,

1. The Soul to be the Person, that indwells in that Tabernacle our Bodies, at the present for a while.

But, 2. He intimates withal, that there is another State, Existence and Condition of other Saints, namely, of Souls out of this Tabernacle upon Dissolution: Whose Condition these Tabernacle Saints had in their Eye, whilst they utter their Desires after such a State, as far more desireable, and which they are aspiring unto, and thereby they are provoked the more to groan after the same, and indeed our Attendency to this very Discrimination of one sort [We] in this Tabernacle, and of another sort implied, expressed by the Word [We] in the Word They, who are out of it, may have a great Influence into this our Interpretation, and add a mighty Confirmation to it.

And to this purpose it is to be noticed, that as, by that fore-mentioned Character of the Ground and Manner of their Groanings, he intended to distinguish Saints from other Men, as has been said, and will be demonstrated: So by this Periphrasis; We that are in this Tabernacle, he intendeth to difference the State of Saints on Earth from their Brethren and Fellow-Citizens in Heaven, so styled Phil. 3. 20. Rev. 6. 20. 'Tis as if he had said, some of us are already housed in Heaven, in our Standing-House there. (as Ver. 1. and Ver. 4. he calls it) Whilst others of us dwell yet in Tabernacles to be dissolved. GOD's Family is said to consist Of some on Earth, and some in Heaven, Eph. 3. 15. The Words there, Of Whom (namely, Christ) the whole Family in Heaven and Earth are named, speak of two Parts of the same Family, whereof some are in their Country-House, some in the City-House. Thus in like manner here, He by way of Discrimination setting out that one Part or Company of them abiding on Earth, [We] We that are in this present Tabernacle; He thereby insinuates another Part or Company that are in Heaven, both making up the whole Society and Fraternity of Saints belonging to God. And there is a further differencing Character, and Note of this Distinction, which follows and confirms this, viz. That we only in this Tabernacle are those that groan, whereas the other have their Desires satisfied in a great measure (Rev. 6.) and do not groan, not being burthened, as we on Earth are.

And this Difference of State between the Saints on Earth, and those in Heaven, other Scriptures do in Phrases similar to this in like manner insinuate. Thus in this very Chapter, Ver. 10. He says, Every Man shall receive (at the Day of Judgment, namely) the Things done in this Body. That Clause of Limitation imports, as another State to be of their Souls out of their Bodies till that Day of Judgment; so that they shall be responsible, and answer only for the Things done whilst in their Bodies, and not for what they shall do when out of them in that separate State. Between Mens Deaths and that Judgment-Day there doth intervene a long Space of Time, as for Instance, take Cain's Soul, it hath been perhaps five Thousand Years out of his Body in Hell, and during all that time, both his or others Souls so existing separate out of their Bodies have not ceased to act some way or other; but yet (says the Apostle) He, or they, shall answer only for what was Done in their Bodies, in Distinction from what they do in the separate State of their Souls: And thus the Distinction of; We in this Tabernacle, is in a like Analogy to be understood.

Chap. VIII.

And now if in this Place e're we go further, we shall look round about us, and set all Things together, but so far as hitherto we have gone, unto what other Intent or Purpose more imaginably Congruous, and more Artificially fitting one Thing to the other in this his Discourse should the Apostle insert; yea, reiterate and inculcate this Clause, We that are in this Tabernacle, then that which we have been proving. For having begun his Discourse in Ver. 1. We know, if this Tabernacle were dissolved, we have an House or Glory ready for us: He (in this Ver. 4.) doth again once more remind them of their Souls being the Inmates, and that their Bodies were but Temporary Tabernacles, shortly to be taken down and dissolved; and that then their Souls are to exist out of them. And he also makes this superadded Insinuation, that other of their Brethren who have been dissolved, have taken Possession of these Eternal Habitations, whilst themselves remain still in this Tabernacle Life, burthened and groaning, And why should they be brought in hereupon (in Ver. 2. and in this Ver. 4.) again groaning, and groaning again: But because they have in their Eyes and Hearts, whilst they thus groan, that other State of Glory, which those blessed Souls, that are out of those Tabernacles, are in Actual Enjoyment of? And if they sigh and groan, because themselves are burthened, they put forth another in the Consideration thereof. And besides, What Glory is this they groan for, but that which at the first was begun to be set afore them, as a Mark of their High Calling? We know, that if our Earthly Tabernacle be dissolved, we have an House in Heaven. And what other House is it they groan to be cloathed with (as it there follows) but that same very House which upon Dissolution, their other Brethren, that are out of this Tabernacle, have already taken Possession of afore them, and with the Thoughts of which House ready for them, they in the first Verse had comforted themselves: That if this (their) Tabernacle were (in like manner) dissolved, we have, &c? For it stands prepared for us, were we but once dissolved and absent from the Body, as in Rom. 8. we find it more plainly spoken. And the Consideration of those Things do whet our Desires, and make them more eager to be at home (as the 8th. Verse expresth the State of Glory of the Soul separate) at Home, that is, in our afore said Houses of Glory, and in our own Country, as that Word importeth. How Congruous and Concinnate are all those Passages round about us, from first to last in such their mutual Reflections one upon another, and Connexions one with another as to this Sence, we contend for?

We do groan earnestly, as ver. 2. 'tis translated. And have we not reason think you, when not only by Sense we feel such heavy Loads, as we that are in this Tabernacle do hourly sustain and suffer; and whilst withal by Faith we know, what Blessedness there is ready for us in the other World, and which we know, our Elder Brethren are admitted into, and do now enjoy (they having got the start of us, by their being dismissed, and got out of this Tabernacle afore us) and have their Mortality swallowed up of Life, whilst we (poor Souls) are the oppressed Ones of the Earth, under all sorts of Miseries, and do carry about with us a Body of Death, and are restrained the while from that other Enjoyment, only by our Existence in this Tabernacle; and nothing else lets, or is between us and so great an Happiness, which is our Inheritance?
else

Chap VIII.

The fresh and renewed Thoughts of these Things set together (as by the Apostle they are on purpose penned.) How mightily (may we well think) would they move the Heart of Christians, that are assured of their Salvation! No wonder, if he says it once, We groan, desiring, v. 2. and then says it twice in this 4th. Verse again. Even as on the contrary he doubles it, Rejoyce, and again I say Rejoyce; as with a Joy of all the most intense and vehement. Oh! thinks such a Soul, if I were but dissolved once, it would not barely quit me of these Burthens; but it would instantly put me into that Possession, my Fellow Brethren are already in. And what is Dissolution, it is but the shooting the Bridge, the Gulph between the one State of a dying Life here, and that other of Glory, when the Mortality of this dying Life shall be swallowed up of that, which is Life in the Fulness of it. And thus, upon those Terms as it is thus stated and apprehended, the Saints being surrounded with those Thoughts, A Dissolution becometh the joyful Object of their Groanings, as it is of the Apostle's Desires; Phil. 1. and though Dissolution be not explicitly said, yet it is virtually and implicitly in the Scope, or in the Strength of all manifestly intended, and desired as a Means to that further End. [We that are in this Tabernacle] and the rest that follow, from the making a Not-dying at all, or an absolute Non-dissolution to be the Object of their Desires in this place, which the other Interpretations would put both upon it and us. Thus much for the Description of the Persons that groan, &c. and what may be argued therefrom; I shall now consider the Occasion of their Groaning, Groan being burthened; That's the Second Head, and is brought in here as the approximate Occasion of their Groanings, but chiefly as conducing to his illustrating that Difference (which follows) between the Saints and others in their Groanings after Dissolution. The Words; Being burthened, come in between these two Speeches. 1. After the Words We that groan. And, 2. Before those latter Words, Not for that we would be unclothed; and so pays Contribution to both, and hath its Aspect to, and Influence upon both. That is, first it hath a respect unto their Groaning as some Occasion of it, though a less principal One: For then, having done that Service, it serves another, viz. That from thence the Apostle should take rise to explain How, and Why it is, and How, and Why not, that we Christians do groan for Dissolution, with Difference from other Men.

Two Things are herein to be attended.

1. A Tacit Concession or Grant, that indeed a Christian is a burthened Creature. And comparatively to other Men, the most burthened of any other; which in the foregoing Chapter he had related of himself, and others his Brethren

2. That they are sensible enough of those Burthens, and are unto their own Sense and Feeling thus burthened. For hereupon they groan, which must be out of a Sense thereof.

1. There is this Concession or Grant, that indeed of all other sorts of Men a Christian is the most Burthened in respect of the Multitude, Variety, and Greatness of his Grievances: We having not only all the Miseries, that are Tributa vivendi, the common and ordinary Taxes and Tributes of Life in this World, that come upon us in common with others, as Sickness, Loss of Friends, and the like; but further, we have all sorts of Persecutions, that are Tributa Christi, the Double, yea Centuple imposts for our Religion. As to our Names all Men speak Evil of us, and we are as the off-scouring of the World to this Day. And then, in real Damages, in Estates, &c. we are by Reason of Persecution without a certain abiding Place, we suffer Hunger, Nakedness, Imprisonments, Banishments, Deaths, (all which he recites in Chap. 4.) And all which he sums up into that Total, in 1 Cor. 15. 19. In this Life, we are of all Men most miserable. Not to mention the Burthen they carry about with them in their own Souls from Sins, which other Men make the greatest Comfort fort and Happiness of their Lives, and therefore are said to live in them, but which make us to cry out, Oh! Miserable Men that we are, &c.

Chap. IX.

2. He would have all Men know, that they are as sensible of those Burthens, as any other Men are or can be supposed to be: And that the Reason why they do bear them so patiently and silently as they do (only with Groanings and Sighings) is not from a sturdy Stoical Principle, as if they professed a want of Sense and Affection, which was the Counterfeit, and Palliated Profession of their wisest Philosophers, who would be esteemed eminent and singular for Wisdom and Vertue amongst Men. No, (says he) in Opposition hereunto, we acknowledge that we are Burthened, and are sensible to the Quick; and Groan after Death, yet not like unto other Men, but have another kind of Relief which supports us.

CHAP. IX.

The True, and Eminent Grounds of a Christians Groanings after Dissolution, severed from the false Grounds of other Men. That a Christian doth not desire Death meerly on this alone Account, that it will give him ease in freeing him from all the Miseries, and Sorrows of this present Life.

OF all other sorts of Men that were, or had been ever heard of in the World, the Christians in those Primitive Times were observed to be the greatest undervaluers of Life, and ambitious Aspirers after Death, and Dissolution. 'Tis made the common Character of them, Rev. 12. 11. They loved not their Lives to Death, and it was our great Apostles Publick Profession of, and concerning himself: I count not my Life dear to me, so that I might finish my Course with Joy, and the Ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the Gospel of the Grace of God, Acts 20. 24. It was observed, that those first Christians came to Martyrdom, as Young Men and Maidens use to do to their Weddings; yea, as to their own Marriages. They cheartully being called thereto, exposed themselves to Death. As we are always delivered to Death, says the Apostle (2 Cor. 4. 11.) So we are willing, says he (2 Cor. 4. 8. And those Heathens that were Observators of this, being Strangers to the Principles of Christianity, not knowing the Grounds and Motives which inspired their Souls hereunto; imputed these high most raised Actions and Aspirements unto false Principles, or such Causes as they found in themselves, and that might any way be supposed to be in the Hearts of Men. And as in judging of a Christians Ways and general Course of Life, they attributed the singularity thereof unto Pride, Hypocrisie, Affectation: So in like Manner in this Point, of not loving their Lives, they ascribed this Eagerness after Dissolution, partly to Stoicism, and Insensibility, which some of their own Philosophers professed (of which Sect you read, Acts 17.) or to a wearisomness of Life, because they were so persecuted, and spoken against, or (as the Apostle hath spoken their Condition) because they were in this Life of all Men the most miserable: And so they were lookt upon in that respect as Men that wisht for Death, and could not find it. And this (besides what might therein concern the Spirits of Christians themselves) gave a just Occasion to the Apostle to lay down here that Account of the Principles, Christians go upon in this Particular, with Difference from what are, or were found in others, who at any Time wish and Groan for Death. But although the Apostle also acknowledgeth that these Burthens have some Influence (as there

For these things I refer you to Heathen Writers of the Primitive Times, as also the Apologies made for Christians.

there is all Reason they should) into their Desire after Dissolution, yet then take the Case as it is truly Stated in our Hearts, and all these Burthens arise not so high, or prevail not so far upon us, as to cause us to desire Death simply, (as the Heathens or others use to do) for an avoidance of present Miseries, but know (says he) that our Religion, and that alone presents us with, and holds up to our Faith, and assures us of, a Glorious Crown and Estate of Life, when this Mortal is ended, whereby Mortality shall be swallowed up of Life, whereof we have the earnest (Ver. 5.) and this is it, that raiseth and enobles our Spirits to this height of confident willingness to Die, as in the following Verse 6. expresseth.

He presenteth such a Principle (Ver. 4.) in the Name of Christians, as never was found in any carnal Heart, nor is, nor can be understood by them. He presenteth this Principle in these Words, Not for that we would be Uncloathed, but Cloathed upon.

These Words shew Why, and Why not, How, and How not, a Christian Groans after Dissolution, and so do of themselves fall into Two Parts.

1. Negative, or a removal of what might be supposed the Ground, Not for that we would be Uncloathed, or not that, that alone would ever Cause such a desire in us.

2. Positive, or the true prevailing utmost Ground, Why, and from which it proceedeth, But for that we would be Cloathed upon. And this Centers in the highest Thing, that the Object of their Aims could Center in, That Mortality might be swallowed up of Life.

It is of Moment to know the meaning of the Phrase, For that, since it is the Hinge upon which both the Negative and Positive do turn: Concerning which observe Two Things.

1. That in the Greek ὅτι, For that, is so Placed, as it indifferently pertains to either of these: For the Tenor or Station of the Words in the Greek runs thus, For that, not we would be Uncloathed, but to be Cloathed upon. And thus read it, having first served the Negative (which is the first Part) it stands as fairly ready, and was in its Posture reserved to be carried to, and joined also with the Affirmative or Positive Part, and is so to be joined therewith thus, But for that we would be Cloathed upon.

2. The true Import of the Phrase is known to render the Reason or the Because, why an Act or Action is said to be done, or not done. It Imports the ὅτι propter, or the ὅτι propter, For the sake of which, or the Respect upon which, or the End or Aim for which any Thing is done: And so here it serves to set forth the genuine Aim, or meaning of the Spirit of a Christian; and the true Reason or Inducement, whereby he is prevailed upon as to the Point of desires of his Dissolution. We ordinarily use the like way of Speech. Suppose a Brother, or some other near Relation, presenting a Suit against a Murderer of his Friend or Relation, should by way of Account or Vindication of his Act and his sincere Aims therein, utter himself at this Purpose. I prosecute this Suit being thus nearly related and concerned in the Person, not for that I seek the Death of this Man simply as a Man, nor for that I have been injured by him, that so I might be revenged, but that Publick Justice might be done, and that both Divine and Humane Law, that he that sheds Mans Blood, by Man shall his Blood be shed, may have its due Course and be satisfied. In this Speech this Particle [For that] though it be Placed in the Fore-front, viz. the Negative Part of his Speech, yet is what in common is carried to the other; But for that I would Justice should be done, &c. The Parallel between that, and this in the Text is easily discerned.

1. Now then, I shall first consider the Negative, Not that we would be Uncloathed, These Words are a professed Renunciation of such lower Ends and Motives, from having the sway in a Christians Desires of Dissolution, by which other Men are induced thereunto, and which yet they finding no other in themselves, were, and are apt to impute unto Christians. The Motives Negative herein, are Two.

See Stephens Thesaurus upon the Preposit. cum cum Dat (as here) put for ea Lege, ea conditione. Et cum for propter. See also Franciscus Vigerius in Prepositi- one cum: Also Glossus Philologia, Lib. 3. Tract. 6.

Chan. IX.

1. In these Words, Not to be Uncloathed; being taken singly and alone, That is, we Christians do not Groan to Die merely to be uncloathed or rid of our Bodies, which was one of the noblest and highest Grounds, the wiser and great Spirits among the Heathens did pretend unto, and gloried in, as that which made them willing to Die. They had such Valuation for that Diviner Part, their Souls; and thought so contemptuously of the worst Part, their Bodies; that they looked on Death, as a Freedom from the cumber of them. And thus under the Metaphor of being Cloathed, the Apostle hits and meets with that Principle, which the Sagest of them cheerfully embraced Death upon, which was to put off the Body, as a Man would do a heavy Garment, that clogs and hinders him, to the end to be more Agile, Nimble, Lightome, and Active; as they Thought their Souls would be, when they had their mittimus from their Bodies.

σῶμα, i. e. Corpus quasi σῶμα, i. e. Sepulchrum.

They taught the Immortality of the Soul, as well as we Christians, and also the free-acting of the Soul without the Body, but with all they taught their Disciples to contemn the Body, and complained of the Conjunction or Immersion of our Souls with it and into it, as if the great God had done it wrong, to put so Divine and Vigorous a Spirit into so dark and damp a Dungeon or Prison (that was their ordinary Word σῶμα quasi σῶμα so Plato) and in the Book of Wisdom you may see, how the Effects of this Principle had tainted the Jews themselves, for Solomon is brought in there saying, was a Soul put into a defiled Body. They thought the Souls high-born Aspirments, and Soarings, to be Captived, Depress'd, Obstructed, and kept down (as a Soaring Bird kept in a Cage) and its Activeness to be confined, and interrupted by the Souls Conjunction with the Body. Like as a Man in Prison sees but out of a Loop-hole, or through a Grate, so (thought they) the Captived Soul, takes in Things by outward Senses; and therefore they look upon being uncloathed and out of it, and look consequently upon Death as a Goal Delivery, or as the Letting a Bird fly loose in the open Air, the Native Element for it. The Apostle contradicts this Principle, and insinuates that we Christians have Learn'd otherwise, that the Conjunction of the Body and Soul was a Happy Match, when God first made it; and made Man a Living Soul, (Gen. 2.) That is, a Soul ordained to live in a natural Body. This was that which originally from the First and for ever the Soul was ordained for, although we do find, that by being fallen into Sin, it is not only appointed for all Men once to Die, and were it not for our Hope that is renewed in the Soul, and for the Glory which, upon Separation from the Body, it shall be therefore Cloathed upon, the Soul of it self subsisting alone, would be a most Lame, Weak, and Imperfect, and Unactive Creature. And further, that the Body is thus a Clog to the Soul, is but accidental through Mans own default: And hence we Christians dare not simply wish for a Freedom from our Bodies, or Groan for Death. Therefore we dare not in our desires wish for Death, and so Contradict and Blaspheme God's Ordination, as their best Philosophers have done; but we wait God's Pleasure to whom we Live, and to whom we Die. That the Apostle in this Passage should have some Glance, and Eye upon those Principles of the Heathen, we perceive by the honourable Elogium he presently gives of the Souls dwelling in the Body, whiles he Terms it a being at home in the Body, for so indeed it is in the Ordination of God, and its natural Institution and Make: And therefore to be rid of it, and simply to be Uncloathed is not, for that, or for which we desire to Die. This is the first Motive disclaimed in this Negative.

But it will be replied, that the Burthens that you otherwise bear in the Body (which you confess) do yet raise up these eager Desires in you. For Answer to this there is,

2. A Second Negative, wherein this other low, and under Motive more common to Man, and which was more ordinarily imputed to Christians is disclaimed, and that is, Not for that we are burthened; that is, our being burthened is not the reason, whereupon alone we would be uncloathed. Which Word had immediately preceded, and now put that into the Ballance with the former, yet yet both that and the former weigh not unto such a Prevalency, as would alone excite, and draw forth those vehement Desires in us.

Chap. IX.

This Word Burthened is placed (as you may well observe) purposely between these two; We that are in this Tabernacle, the Words before it, and those that follow, Not that we would be unclothed. It is placed so on purpose, (I say) that it might illustrate the more, and render the Genuine Desires and Aims of a Christian herein the more Illustrious. It first, referring unto our being in this Tabernacle, declares, that whilst we are in it, we are and shall be burthened: But then again, its Reference unto these Words, Not that we would be unclothed, serves to this Sence, that although we be thus burthened, it is not upon the Load hereof, that the Saints do determinately desire to be unclothed, no, if that were all, this alone would not be prevalent with us: And so it is, as if he had said, we groan being burthened, not that we would be unclothed simply for Ease from them, not upon that Consideration alone or chiefly. Thus Beza renders the Coherence, Non tædet nos vitæ ipsius; Not that we are weary of Life; viz. by reason of our Burthens, Sed futura desiderio ardemus, but we are enflamed with Desires after that other Life to come. So as though it be said, we groan being burthened, as we have reason, and that may also be taken in to help forward such our Desires, even as lesser Aims, that alone would not be effectual to move unto such or such a thing, do yet contribute together with a greater One: So here, our Burthens are but the less principal, they are not that, which alone or chiefly do sway, they are far from making up the full Motive, why we should desire to dye. They indeed may and ought to be considered, and it was fit the Apostle should make mention of them, for the Reasons before specified, when we opened the Import of what was in that Word; yea, they are some kind of Ingredient Motives thereunto, especially when we have so great a Glory as the certain Consequence of Death in our View; but yet otherwise these hold no Ballance. And you may observe, how these Words, Not for that we would be unclothed, come instantly in as treading upon the Heels of the before-mentioned, Being burthened, as a Correction and Allay; as if he had spoken too much, in saying, We groan being burthened. And this would seem, as if he were there upon the Point of calling in again that Word, at least, that though he let it stand, being (as we say) out, yet that he might not be misunderstood in it, as if that did cast the Ballance; he corrects the Sence of it, no, says he, we would not be unclothed, for that we are burthened, since that bears no Weight comparatively in the Scale: But more Generous and Glorious Aims in the positive part weigh most, viz. that Mortality should be swallowed up of Life. As if he had said; that of our Burthens is not worthy of Consideration in comparison of the other; They are but the smaller Dust of the Ballance, too light to cast the Scale, but it is that Eternal Weight of Glory, which being dissolved we shall be assuredly possessed of, and which we have in our Hearts, and eyes that mainly turns the Ballance; whereas other Men, especially the Heathens in those Times, if they were in a Distress, and burthened, there was no other Ho with them, but presently to dye, so to avoid and escape out of their Burthens, and so in a pett they were wont to dye. This was ordinary amongst the great Spirits among them.

But the Christians, who are more Noble, have not so learned Christ, who himself gave us an Example in this particular, who though a Man of Sorrows more than all other Men, yet waited, until he had finished the Work, his Father had given him to do, and until his Time was come, yea, and also prayed not that we should be taken out of this World, namely, until the Time appointed by the Father. Therefore, we that are in this Tabernacle by GOD's Appointment, set, and placed there, as Centinels or Perdues in War, are patiently to endure those Burthens as Chastisements for our Sins, which God brings upon us, or which by sinning we have brought upon our selves. We are to endure them also to honour the Profession of our Religion, and with Submission to the Will of God to wait his Time of Deliverance, which we ought not to anticipate, we ought to attend the time which he hath fore-appointed, being well assured that of all things outward (which GOD hath taken upon him to determine in this World) the Time of Saints, their being in the Body is the most wisely set, and fixed of all others. For if of Men in general it be said Job 7. 1. Is there not an appointed time to Man upon Earth? then especially of Holy Men, that are so dear to God, whose Death is said therefore to be precious to him, and therefore the Time of their Lives must needs be so too; for in relation to their Lives their Death is said to be precious, when, and how he will appoint it. My Times are in thine Hand, (says David) Our Breath, and all our Ways (says Daniel.) Thus of all Mankind the Saints, Whether they live, or, whether they dye, are the Lords. Rom. 14. 8. The Lords in a special manner, and by a special Propriety, and Interest in them. He is a Sovereign Lord both of Time and of them, as he that is the Grand Master, and Lord, and Disposer of Life, Who Hath the Keys of Death, and to Whom Belong the Issues of Death, and therefore the Saints are quietly to Wait all the Days of their appointed Time; and for this Cause they do not, nor dare not, out of a Weariness, or Burthen of Life, desire to be unclothed: Though when Death shall come, and God's Will therein be manifested, they then will, and do relieve themselves with the Thought of being eased from those Burthens, which are therefore in this Argument here mentioned. And this, as it is the true Posture of a truly instructed Christian (especially when assured of God in Christ), so it is the Meaning and Drift of the Apostle in this Place.

Chap. IX.

It is to this purpose observable, how to the End to shew that those Persecutions and Burthens are not the predominant Incentives, or Fomentors of such vehement Desires of Death; he in the 6th. and 8th. Verses doth in his own Name; and in the Name and Behalf of true Christians in the Conclusion utter their Spirits thus. Therefore we are always confident, or Daring as the Word imports. Then he says it a second time, v. 8. That is, our Spirits do indeed rise up the more, and are steel'd against all Encounters, come what will come through the Will of God upon us. Indeed we have a Boldness in all, because if the worst come, that can come, we know the certain Issue. So far then are true Christians from Pusillanimity, or Shrinking of their Spirits into that Hole of Death, as an Evasion from their incumbent Burthens, that there is a Boldness and Erection, or Insurgency of Spirit raised up against all these, as more than Conquerors in them; and all by reason that we know (as he had said v. 1.) If our Earthly Tabernacle be dissolved, we are secured and insured, we have an House in Heaven. And this Speech in v. 6. and v. 8. doth come in as an Inference from his Doctrine, taught from the first Verse downwards.

We being then set in this World by God to live to him, and unto his Glory, and to abide his Time and Will for so doing, as Christ did: Nay, we being set in the midst of Sufferings ought to eye him, his Will, his Glory, and to have our Desires so poiz'd by our Judgments, that tho' our Desires run out in Groanings to be swallowed up of Life for our own Happiness, yet our Wills, as they are thus poized by our Judgments, will return this modest Answer which immediately follows in Verse 8. We are willing rather to be absent from the Body, though as it follows there, it is to be present with the Lord. Unto this last Issue and determinate Upshot doth all come, To be willing rather. Indeed the Affectionate Part in their Groans is vehement and ardent; but the determining and resolving Part in their Wills is moderate, and is uttered but by a rather, a little more than Indifference. And therefore, as if he had uttered too much Confidence in the other Word, We are always confident, he corrects it by a softer Expression, We are willing rather, for this Consideration, after-mentioned by their Wills, deliberately rises in the greatest Vehemency by the breakings in of Glory upon them, as being Men in a Streight between two, like as a Needle equally distant between two Load-stones: As the Apostle speaks of his own Desires, Phil. 1. There is such a Mixture of Considerations meet in it; as though they have great Affections rise up one way, yet they are checkt again with the Thoughts of God's Will, that they should do him Service by their Lives, which make them but willing rather.

And the Opening of this Negative Part of the Apostle's Vindication, and Renunciation of these lower Ends argues a more Noble, Elevate, and Generous rous Temper and Frame of Spirit. And we gave a Character of a true Christian, worthy of the Profession of our Christianity, whereof all other Professions do fall short: And answerably this Interpretation, that I have driven in this 4th. Verse, speaks of far greater Spiritualness, suited to a Gospel Spirit by far, than that they should be supposed to desire a Change without dying at all, such a Desire having a Foundation only in that Loathsomeness to dye, which is so Natural to us.

C H A P. X.

The Positive Ground or Reason why a Christian desires Dissolution is; That the Weak, and Sinful Life which he now lives, may be swallowed up of an Heavenly, and Eternal Life.

THAT, which is next to be consider'd, is, the Positive Account of what is the predominant Reason and Respect, upon which we Christians groan for Dissolution. But for this we have in these Words, That we would be cloathed upon; that Mortality might be swallowed up of Life: In which are two Things to be attended.

1. His expressing of that Glory upon Dissolution, under the same Metaphor he had before taken up in V. 2. and in the same Sence and Extent he had there used it in. It is as if the Apostle had said, The Aim of us Christians is not simply to dye, and be uncloathed; but that our Souls be cloathed upon, with that Glory; which upon our uncloathing is prepared for us: He intending Cloathing upon in the same, and no other Sence in this Verse, than he had used it in the second Verse; This Verse being a Repetition of the Substance of that. How Being cloathed upon in that second Verse respects the Glory of the Soul at Dissolution; and is thus termed A cloathing upon, in respect unto the Soul's first having been cloathed with Holiness, in the Time of this Life; as the Preparation to it; I have before largely explained and proved, in the Opening of that Verse second; to which I refer the Reader.

2. The second Thing to be considered is, What is the Issue or Consequence, and likewise what is the Aim of being thus cloathed upon. It is, to have the Mortality, in which we live, swallowed up of Life; which doth more really explain, what is the Substance of the Soul's Aims in its Groaning, than what describ'd under the dark Metaphor of being Cloathed upon. Herein he speaks plainly, and not in Parables or Metaphors; and interprets what he means by Cloathing upon. For indeed this latter Clause, Mortality being swallowed up of Life, doth swallow up into it self all, that had been said of Glory in the former Words. For, 1. It oppositely answers unto the Words, We groan being burthened. In the Substance thereof is this Word Mortality, which is the opposite to this of Life; and it includes, and takes up into it self All those Burthens, the Soul had under that Word, Burthened, complained of; as the Subject Matter it groans to have swallowed up, and abolished.

2. These Words, Swallowed up of Life, speak the whole Spirit, and Quintessence of that Glory, which that other Metaphor, of Being cloathed upon, can be supposed to intend. This Life, says the Apostle, Pure Life; a Life so Rich, so overflowingly abundant, as by the overcoming Vehemency thereof, it doth in an Instant consume All that is Evil, or Mortal in the Soul, and all Misery, and Imperfection appertaining to that Condition, which it had whilst in the Body.

There are Two Principles in a Holy Soul, fore-mentioned, which do carry it forth unto these Aspirments.

Chap. X.

1. The Grace and Holiness it is cloathed withal (v. 2, 3.) which, being but an Imperfect Preparation to Glory, maketh it restless to be cloathed upon fully with that, which is its sole Perfection: Even as naturally as Matter prepared and disposed, useth to long after that Form, which it is prepared unto. And this is more plainly insinuated in the next Verse, v. 5. Now he, that hath wrought us for the self-same Thing, is God, who also hath given unto us the Earnest of the Spirit. It is, what hath been wrought in us by God, that puts us upon this Desire of being cloathed upon.

2. The Second Principle, upon which a Christian desires Dissolution is, The Taste, which a Soul hath already had of an Heavenly Life here, which the Word Groaning, and Desiring do import, that Taste being the Drawer forth of those Desires, after a more full and perfect Enjoyment of that Life in God. Thus speaks the Psalmist, If so be you have tasted how good the Lord is; and to the same purpose he says, in another place, Thy loving Kindness is better than Life. These sweet Sippings the Soul hath had; A little further Lift (says One) would have lift my Soul to Heaven. They do enthrust the Soul unsatisfiedly to desire to drink down the whole of that Sweetness and Blessedness that is in God, or rather (as the Word here in the Greek signifies) to be drunk up of that Life it self; as a Drop is by the Ocean.

Thus you have seen the Inwards of a Christian, the secretest Workings of his Heart and Affections in his Desires of Death cut up before you, as by a two edged Sword, that divides between the Negative, What not; and the Affirmative, which declares, What are a Christian's principal Motives herein. This gives Demonstration of the Nobleness of a Christian's Spirit; and the Apostle turns this flaming Sword both ways. And indeed then a Matter comes to be fully cleared, when that which is spurious, false and counterfeit, and yet hath an Appearance of Truth, is separated from what is true and genuine: Which our Apostle hath here performed, even as in other Affections (to discover the Spiritualness of them) it is his Wont to do. Thus in point of Godly Sorrow, and Mourning for Sin, (which is a most spiritual Disposition, when rightly stated; as it flows in a Christian's Heart) in this very Epistle, he thus speaks, Chap. 7. 9, 10. I rejoyce not, that ye were made sorry, but that ye were made sorry to Repentance; for ye were made sorry after a godly manner. 'Tis turned both ways you see (even as here) Negatively, and Affirmatively, so to express with all Clearness the Genuine, Spiritual Temper, of that Grace with difference from all other Sorrow, though for Sin: And both alike are distinguished: This here, and that of Godly Sorrow, there. I rejoyce (says he) not simply, that ye were made sorry. Although it were for Sin; and in like manner, says he here, Not for that we would be uncloathed, as simply so considered, or meerly to be eased of our Burthen; so the Negative in both are Paralel. And then, there giving the true and proper positive Ground of that Sorrow, he says; that he rejoyc'd; That they sorrowed after a godly manner. And here in this Text, he answerably gives the positive Ground of a Christian's Groaning, viz. To be cloathed upon, and swallowed up of Life. And thus the positive Principle in both are paralel also: And so that Text of 2 Cor. 7. 9, 10. most aptly serves to illustrate this Text of 2 Cor. 5. 4.

The Interpretation of these Words, That Mortality might be swallowed up of Life, will best be managed by way of Affoiling, or Answer to one of the greatest Difficulties, or Objections, that doth, or may occur against this Interpretation of mine, which I have again and again given: An Objection, which hath even almost universally induced Interpreters to another Exposition.

The first Difficulty or Objection lies thus; that this Phrase is used of the Resurrection of the Body: 1 Cor. 15. 54. When this Mortal shall have put on Immortality, then shall be brought to pass the Saying that is written, Death shall be swallowed up in Victory. And therefore say they, this Verse must be intended of the Change of the Body at the Resurrection; (for that is the Argument the Apostle treats of in that Chapter; and thereunto is this Speech, of Swallowing up, applied;) even then when there will be the Last, and Total Change, and Consummation of all Mortality whatsoever. And the Word Swallowing up, imports ports with it also both a sudden, and a complete Change, A Totality, a Consummation; which is not made of all Mortality until the Resurrection: And I confess, that Æstius his so pungent urging the Paralel of the Phrases there, and here, that the Phrase there carrying it to the general Resurrection, therefore it should be so here, did the most stick with me of all Objections else to move me to think, that the Glory of the Resurrection should only be intended in this Place also. It is also to be consider'd, that it is the Body, which is in common Acceptation the sole Subject of Mortality: (As here the Word is translated.) As also that until that Day there is not a final swallowing up of Mortality.

But on the other Hand I found, that there is at Death a Mortal; τὸ θνητὸν, and that, which truly and in a most just Sence is to be Termed a Death, which at Dissolution is done away; yea, and a far greater Death, then what is remov'd at the Resurrection of our Dead Bodies: And this Death is then swallowed up with as much suddenness, and with as great a vehemency of Power, as shall in the Resurrection be put forth upon our Bodies: And this Death is then swallowed up by a Life, which is transcendently such, and only deserves (in some respects) the Name of Life; and into which now at Dissolution the Soul is taken up, and swallowed up withal. These Considerations made me still adhere to this my Interpretation. It may be farther added, That this Phrase Swallowed up, &c. here is at least as applicable unto the Change made upon the Soul at Death, as it is unto the Change made upon our Bodies at the Resurrection: And indeed is to be applied, and intended of both. For if Calvin says, it is uncertain of the Two, which was meant (although he professeth to incline unto our Interpretation) throughout the whole of the Apostles Discourse; then I dare be bold to say, if both may be meant, then both should be. It is, and hath been a certain Rule with me, that when a Scripture doth equally, or some way alike perpend, or incline towards Two Acceptations of the Words, and so may take in Two Senses, that are not repugnant, that then it is to be in a Latitude taken in both.

I shall therefore demonstrate that at Dissolution, there is a Mortality swallowed up of Life; and so the Words are applicable, as well unto the Condition of the Soul then, as at the Resurrection they are applicable to the Condition of the Body.

1. In these Words, this Mortal, we have the Thing said to be swallowed up: And by Reason of this Word, those who are for the other Interpretation think, they have an Advantage for them; because the Soul is Immortal, and so it cannot be said of it, that Mortality is swallowed up of Life: But most properly of the Body at the Resurrection, that Phrase, or Words may be used.

But although the Soul in the Substance of it be immortal; yet take the Condition of Life which it now leads whilst in this Tabernacle, and it may be most truly said, it hath a Mortality adhering to it, yea, inhering in it, as the Adjunct of it. There is a Mortal State the Person is in; there is an Animal Life, (as one calls it); there is a Dying Life, a Life of Death, in which as to a great Part the Soul now Lives: And it is the present State, or this dying Life of the Soul, which he here speaks of. For,

1. He speaks of that, which we have in this Tabernacle: (We that are in this Tabernacle;) and so whilst we are in this Tabernacle, we have a Mortal Body, which we carry about with us, which shall be swallowed up. It is the present Mortal Body afore Dissolution, as much as that Future Mortality after in the Grave, He first Points us unto.

2. What he had in the foregoing Sentence expressed by Burthens, that accompanied this Life, the same he intends, and comprehends under the Notion, and Name of Mortal: And it is, as if he had said, it is this Mortal Life; that so Burthens us. What is implied in both these Expressions is, that one and the same Thing, though under Two several Words, which we Groan at, longing to exchange them for the abundancy of that other Life: And thus all the Frailties, and Miseries that are now the Adjuncts, or Tributes of this Life, come into the Total of this Mortal Life. For,

3. It

Chap. X.

3. It is termed so, as it is set in Opposition unto that other Life (of which it is swallowed up) that which is Life only, and only deserves the Name of Life: The true, and Eternal Life: Life indeed. And as all those Happinesses, and Blessednesses, that are the Concomitants of that State, are termed Life, so all the contrary Miseries of this present sorry Life, we lead in the Flesh, are comparatively termed a Mortal Life, or a dying Condition. And you may observe, how in that 1 Cor. 15. Mortal there is set in Opposition unto Immortality; because the Subject there, that is said to be Mortal, are the dead Bodies of Saints, which are by the Resurrection made Immortal: But here it is opposed unto Life in the quintessence of what is Life: 'Tis opposed to pure Life, to the Substance of Eternal Life, whereof the Soul we all know, is the immediate, and most proper Subject: And therefore oppositely this Mortal, or miserable Life, which the Soul leads in this Body, (whilst we are in this Tabernacle) is that, which is stated the Mortal here. Inasmuch as though the Soul it self is an immortal Spirit, yet the Life it leads, and lives in this Body is (set those small Twinklings of the Life of Grace aside) but a Mortal, Frail, Dying Life, that deserves the Names of Death, rather than of Life which a gracious Soul, being sensible of, therefore Desires, and Groans after this next Change. In our ordinary Language we use to say of Dying, that it is the Change of a Mortal Life, for an Immortal Life.

Other Proofs out of other Scriptures, for the Analogy of this Phrase, are many. Consult that first fatal Sentence against us, Gen. 2. 17. That Day thou eatest, thou shalt surely Die: Did not Adam live after his eating the forbidden Fruit, Nine Hundred and Thirty Years; how is he then said to have Died that very Day? The meaning is, that from that Day he entered into a State of a Mortal Life, inasmuch as his whole Life was but a lingering Death, in regard of the Frailties, Miseries, and Sorrows of it. It is the Language also up and down in this very Epistle: Every Danger a Man is exposed unto, is termed a Death. In the very Chapter afore my Text; We that live, are always delivered to Death: Chap. 4. 11. In Deaths oft: Chap. 11. The like we have 1 Cor. 9. 10. Every Sickness is a little Death, for it tends to Death: So every Cross: All Worldly Sorrow of Heart is a Mortal Thing, and so expressed, 2 Cor. 7. 10. Worldly Sorrow causeth Death; and sometimes it presently kills: As Nabals Heart died within him, 1 Sam. 25. 37. Every worldly, carnal Sigh and Sorrow is a step towards Death: Every Infirmity hath a Mortality in it, and gives a stroke at Life: For it is not the last Blow fells the Tree, but each; yea, every small one, that takes away the least Chip. Solomon hereupon plainly Terms this present Life, a sick Life; yea, (Eccles. 4. 2.) He Terms it a Life worse then Death: Wherefore (says he) I praised the Dead, which are already Dead, more then the Living, which are yet Alive: That is, I commended, and valued the Condition of a Man that is out-right Dead, and put out of his Pain, rather than of Men Living, but as between Death, and Life, All whose Motions are but Throws to Death: As those of a Fish out of the Water, its Element. Now forasmuch as he prefers Death, his meaning evidently is, that their Life in respect of the Miseries that accompany it, hath in a true estimate more of, what may be justly termed Death, than the Mortal State of their Tabernacle. So then to be sure, there is Mortal enough in both these Respects, which is fit Matter to be swallowed up of Life, and this at a Godly Mans Dissolution.

I shall next consider the other Phrase, Swallowed up, which also is as fitly applicable to this Change at Death, whether we consider the suddenness of it, or, the Perfection of the Attainments of the Soul thereupon: Both which this Word imports as fully, as it can be supposed to import them both at the Resurrection, in 1 Cor. 13. 10. When that which is Perfect is come, then that which is in Part shall be done away. The Word καταργηθήσεται, is elsewhere Translated, Destroyed, Abolishd. Thus in Rom. 6. 6. The Apostle speaking there of the Body of Death, which was Crucified with Christ, says, it is to be destroyed, which is at once, suddenly, totally, perfectly done at Death: And in the 8th Verse of this 1 Cor. 13. it is rendered, Vanisheth: As the Shadows do, do, when the Light comes in upon them, They disappear suddenly, in a Moment, and perfectly: Thus that Phrase there, done away, and swallowed up here, are in Effect all one: Only there it is applied unto a doing away of what is imperfect, by a full Perfection coming in upon it: Even as the imperfect Light of the very first dawn (if the Sun were supposed to rise the next Moment after that dawn) would be done away, and swallowed up into perfect Light in an Instant: But this swallowing up here is applied also unto Miseries, and Frailties, and Corruptions: But the Thing, or Matter it self comes all to one: For if there come in upon us such a Perfection, as doth away in an Instant all Imperfections of Gifts, and Graces, and renders them Perfect; (whereof that Speech, 1 Cor. 13. is intended;) then to be sure Corruptions are done away together therewith; or else their Graces would not be made perfect, as at Death they are said to be by this Life succeeding.

If the Question be, Whether what is spoken in 1 Cor. 13. be intended of the Time of Dissolution?

The Answer is fair on our side: For he speaks of that Time, when Faith ceaseth, and is turned into sight; Ver. 12. Now we see through a Glass darkly (namely by Faith;) but then Face to Face; now I know but in Part, but then shall I know, even also as I am known, and now abideth Faith; but then Faith, and the Knowledge by Faith, are done away; Ver. 8. Now bring these Words, to the Words of the Apostle, in what follows my Text, 2 Cor. 6. 7. Whilst we are at home in the Body, we are absent from the Lord: For we walk by Faith, and not by Sight: And so are absent; not seeing, as we are seen, Face to Face: But when we are Absent from the Body, and present with the Lord; as Ver. 8. Then as those that are present we see Face to Face. So then, both Places do speak of Dying, and of the Change that is made then; in the one, Imperfections are said to be done away, by what is perfect; and accordingly their Souls are termed, Spirits made perfect; Heb. 10. 23. In this other, all Miseries, and Burthens of a Mortal Life, and Condition are swallowed up. Thus then the Phrase is matcht, and that by the like; (and indeed, for Substance the same) and that too in respect of the Time of Dissolution.

What is it, that this Mortal is swallowed up of? It is swallowed up of Life. And upon a strict, and narrow View and Consideration it will appear, that it is more proper to apply this to the Change of the Soul at Dissolution, then to that of the Body at the Resurrection: For what Life is it? the Sons, that Life; the Text calls it; that which only is true Life: This is Eternal Life, to know Thee the only true God, and Him whom thou hast sent; John 17. And 1 John 5. 20. This is the true God, Eternal Life: God, and Christ is this Life, who is the Fountain of Life: And your Life is hid with Christ in God, Col. 3. And of this Life it is; that the Soul, the Immortal Spirit in Man is the immediate, and proper Subject, and capable thereof. The Body hath but an overflow of it; viz. the shine of that brightness of Glory, which is in the Soul; as the Lanthorn shines with the Light that is put into it: Within the Body is but a Glory suitable to its Capacity, as it is a Body; but it is our Hearts shall live for ever: As Christ promiseth, as the Effect of his Death: Psalm 22. 26. Now if it be such a pure Life, that is here said to swallow up this Mortal (in the Sense it hath been interpreted in) then that Change, which is made upon the single Soul it self at Death, when the Soul alone Exists, lies more fair to be intended. For this Expression of Life nakedly, and barely speaks the very Spirit, and Quintessence of that Happiness, which it then singly enjoies. It is a pure Life of Living in God; as knowing him, and seeing him Face to Face. You may observe in that 1 Cor. 15. when the Change of the Body is insisted on; (whether the Change of them that are Alive, or of them that are Dead, raised by a Resurrection out of the Grave) that there he expresseth that Change of the Body by an Adjunct; that is proper to the Body: This Mortal, says he, shall put on Immortality; this corruptible, Incorruption: Which are the opposite Attributes of the Old, and New Bodies: Mortal, and Corruptible, of the Old; and Immortality, and Incorruption, of the New: But here, he instead thereof, says, Life:
That

Chap. X.
 Forſius in Locum.

That Life, (as hath been ſaid;) which is the proper Happineſs of the Soul: Forſius, who is of the other Opinion, and would draw this Verſe, and all the reſt unto the Change of the Body, becauſe of this Word Mortal, ſeems yet aware of this, and therefore takes on him to correct the Apoſtle in his Speech, or ſaying; being ſwallowed up of Life. It ſhould be rather (ſays he) ſwallowed up of Immortality; becauſe that Word, would carry it to the Change of the Body: But by his leave, the Apoſtle as on Purpoſe changeth the Word in this Second Epistle, from what he had uſed in his Firſt Epistle; and ſays, ſwallowed up of Life: And Life imports the Subſtance, the Eſſence of Life; but Immortality, a Continuance of that Life: The one is the Subject, the other the Adjunct, and therefore theſe are mentioned as diſtinct, 2 Tim. 1. 10.

And it doth indeed moſt elegantly, and lively let out this great Change of the Souls Life made at Death: That whereas whiſt it was in this Tabernacle, it lived a Sick, Dying, Mortal Life; for it is then taken up into the great Element, and Fountain both of Souls, and of Life, to live in God, who is the Father of Spirits, and great Element of Souls; from whom they came, and unto whom they return: (As Sparks do to their Native Element of Fire) And who is the Fountain of Life (as the Psalmiſt calls him) ye, Life it ſelf. So as by their being taken up into him, they are of Him, and by Him, and into him ſwallowed up; even as Darkneſs is ſwallowed up of Light; and indeed, in Him is Light, and no Darkneſs at All; no Death, no Frailty, no Sin. And therefore no ſooner is a poor Soul, coming forth of the Body; having yet had in it ſelf (to that very Inſtant) a Body of Death cleaving to it (like one of the Palsie, half of him is Dead, yea quite Dead) but this Abundancy of Life, that is in God, inſtantly ſhales off, Works out all that Filth, Frailty, Miſery, and Purifies, and makes the Soul White, and Perfect; and renders it to be all Life and *Joy*s, and Activity in God; and it doth this in an Inſtant: Even as on the Contrary, Mens natural Spirits are lickt up by a blaſt of Lightning; or as if you ſhould ſee a Lump of Mettal, full of Droſs cleaving to it, caſt into an hot Furnace, (made ſo vehemently hot, as thoſe are, when Bells are caſt;) you would ſee that Fire in an inſtant purge away, and conſume all that Droſs, ſwallow it up, and aſſimulate the Mettal unto it ſelf, that the Mettal it ſelf would appear all of it, as Fire it ſelf. My Brethren, this Life of Ordinances, and that Communion we have with God therein, is but a dull Furnace; our Luſts melt ſlowly; yea, it is long e're we can get our Hearts to melt in Sorrow for them: But this Furnace of Gods immediate Preſence arrived unto at Death, is a quick, and fiery Forge; melts, diſſolves, ſeparates the Soul from all its Droſs, Imperfection, Corruption, and quits it of all in an inſtant; and further, makes as great a Change in it, as if you ſhould ſee a Diamond taken out (if you could ſuppoſe the Sun had that Vertue) of Mud, and from a Sink, and made to ſhine a glorious Star in Heaven: To expreſs all which, the Apoſtle moſt happily choſe out this Word; ſwallowed up of Life.

I ſhall conclude, That if we will rightly, and truly Judge in this Matter, between theſe Two; 1 Cor. 15. And this of 2 Cor. 5. We muſt be ſure to take, and put theſe Two together; both, Mortal, and Swallowed up, &c. And if we compare that Mortal that is ſwallowed up at Death, with that Mortal that is ſwallowed up at the Reſurrection, we ſhall find that at Death there is a greater Mortal (obſerve, how I pitch on that;) that is as a Sacrifice to be ſwallowed up then, then there is by the Reſurrection: For here is a Body of Sin, and Death ſwallowed up, beſides all the Casualties, Calamities, Miſeries, Obnoxiousneſſes to Sorrows, which as ſo many Mortal Wounds, that Feſter, will make an End of, and ſwallow up this poor Life in the End. But at the Reſurrection all the Mortal that is ſwallowed up, is but the Body taken out of its Duſt. There is no other Mortal, but this to be done away then: For all theſe other Mortals were taken away afore, at, and upon the Souls departure from the Body; and there is no other Mortality then remaining to be ſwallowed up, but this of the Body only. I confeſs indeed, that in this Reſpect, That Change at the Reſurrection will excel, inasmuch as it is the Laſt Act, and and the Consummation of all; and that then both Soul, and Body will have a greater Access, and State of Life and Glory, than the Soul whilst separate had: Yet still there will not be so great a swallowing up of so great Mortality, as there is at Death; nor will it fitly be said, that the Life of the Soul (that had a Perfection of Grace and Glory afore the Resurrection;) is then swallowed up of Life, in so high Comparison unto what it had afore: But with respect of sinful Corruption, and Mortality Abolish'd, and so of spiritual Life induc'd into the Soul, there is at Death that Difference, as will justly bear the stile of a being swallowed up of Life; and it is as sudden a Change, and by as strong, and vehement a Power wrought in us; as at the Resurrection.

Chap. XI.

C H A P. XI.

That as the Soul is the immediate Subject of Grace, which is a Preparation to Glory, and capable of it: So the Soul is instantly after its Departure out of the Body receiv'd into that State of Glory.

II COR. V. v.

Verse v. Now he that hath wrought us for the self same Thing is God, who also hath given unto us the Earnest of the Spirit.

There is no Point of more Moment to All, nor of greater Comfort to Saints, than what shall become of their Souls when they Die: 'Tis our next Stage; and Things that are next, use more to affect us. And besides, it is the beginning, and a taking Possession of our Eternity.

That these Words should aim at this self-same thing, cannot be discerned, without consulting the fore-going Part of the Apostle's Discourse: And yet I cannot be large in bringing down the Coherence, having pitch'd upon what this fifth Verse contributes unto this Argument; which alone will require more than this Time allotted, having also very largely gone through the Exposition of the fore-going Verses elsewhere: And I now go but on where I left last. But yet to make way for the Understanding the Scope of my Text, take the Coherence in Brief thus

In the 16th Verse of the fore-going Chapter (where the Well-head of his Discourse is to be found) he shews the extraordinary care God hath of [Our inward Man] to renew it Day by Day; where inward Man is strictly the Soul with its Graces, set in Opposition unto Our outward Man [the Body with its Appurtenances] which he saith daily perisheth, that is, is in a mouldring and decaying Condition.

In the first Verse of this Fifth Chapter, he meets with this Supposition: But what if this outward Man, or earthly Tabernacle be wholly dissolved and pull'd down, what then shall become of this inner Man? And he resolves it thus, That if it be dissolved, we have an House, a building of God in the Heavens. And what is the [WE] but this inner Man (he had spoken of) renewed Souls, which dwell now in the Body as in a Tabernacle, as the Inmates that can subsist without it? And it is as if he had said, if this inward Man be destituted of one House, we have another. God that in this Life was so careful over this Inner Man, to renew it every Day, hath made another more ample

Chap. XI.

Provision against this great Change. It is but it's removing from one House to a better, which God hath built. As your selves (to speak in your own Language) if Wars should beset you, and your Country-house were plundered and pull'd down, you would Comfort your selves with this, I have yet a City-house to retire unto.

Neither is the terming the Glory of Heaven, and that as it is bestowed upon a separate Soul, an House, alien from the Scripture-Phrase, Luke 16. 9. That when you fail, they may receive you into EVERLASTING HABITATIONS. Death is a failing ('tis your City-phrase also when a Man proves Bankrupt) A Statute of Bankrupt comes forth then upon your Old Houle (Statutum est omnibus semel mori) and upon all you have; and then it is that there is a receiving or entertaining that otherwise-desolate Soul into Everlasting Habitations, that is, into an House Eternal in the Heavens; as the Text.

Nor yet is the Phrase of terming Heaven a City-house, remote neither: For Heb. 11. ver. 13. Abraham and the Patriarchs died in Faith, (Mark that!) in Faith or Expectation of what? He had told us, Ver. 10. He looked for a City whose Builder and Maker is God. What is a City, but an Aggregation and heap of Houses and Inhabitants? Multitudes had Died afore Abraham, and gone to Heaven, from Adam, Abel, Seth, downwards; and God promiseth him Peace at his Death, and a being gathered to those Fathers, Gen. 15. 15. There was then a City built, and already replenish'd with Inhabitants; and amongst others, an House provided for him, that is, his Soul built of God, and ready furnished against this removal.

In the Second Verse he utters the working of the Affections of Christians towards their being Cloathed upon with this House; and so in Order to this Enjoyment of it, their DESIRING even to be Dissolved: Which Paul also utters of himself, Phil. 1. Now if the First Verse speaks of the Glory of a separate Soul when he calls it an House, this second Verse must intend the same.

In the Third Verse he gives an wholesome Caution by the way; and with-all insinuates, why he used the Word Cloathed upon, in the fore-going Verse, thus, speaking of the Glory of such a separate Soul, even because it is absolutely necessary that all our Souls be found Cloathed first, and renewed with Grace and Holiness, and not be found Naked at our Deaths, that is, not devoid of Grace, and so exposed to Shame and Wrath, as Rev. 16. 15.

The Fourth Verse gives a genuine and sincere Account, why a Christian doth thus groan, and that after Dissolution it self, in order to this Glory; which he sets out with an accurate Distinction of their Desires of Dissolution, in difference from like Desires in all other Men: First, Negatively, not for that being burthened we desire to be uncloathed, or dissolved; that is, simply for ease of those Burthens: Nor out of a despising of our Bodies we now wear (as their Heathen Wise-men and Philosophers did, and others do) No. But Secondly, Positively, For this, as the Top-ground of that desire, That we would be Cloathed upon with that House (spoken of Ver. 1. and that still taken in the Sense, spoken of in the 2d. Ver.) to the end that this Mortal, Animal Life which the Soul (though Immortal in it self) now leads in the Body, full of Sins, clogg'd with a Body of Death and Miseries; (each of which hath a Death in it) and so it lives but a dying Life; that this Life may be Exchanged, yea, swallowed up by that which is Life indeed, The only true Life, the knowing God as we are known, and enjoying him: All which, as to our Souls, is truly performed at our Dissolution; although the final swallowing up the Mortality of our Bodies also, doth yet remain to be accomplish'd: Which will be done at the latter Day, at that Change both of Body and Soul, though in respect of the Body, it will be compleated as then more fully.

The Current of the Four former Verses running thus steadily along in this Chanel; the Stream in this Verse continues still the same.

There is one Word in this Verse; [ἡς αὐτὸ ἔστιν, For the self-same Thing, God hath wrought us] which serves as a clue of Thred drawn through the Windings of the former Verses, to shew us, that one and the same Individual Glory Glory hath been carried on all along, and still is in this Verse also. So then we see where we are.

Chap. XI.

What this self-same Thing should be, ask the first Verse, and it will tell you, it is That House Eternal in the Heavens, a Building of God, prepared by him against the Time that this earthly House is dissolved. Ask the second Verse, it is The same House we groan to be Cloathed upon with, when the other is pulled down. Ask the Fourth Verse, and more plainly: It is that Life, which succeeds this Mortal Life the Soul now lives in this Body, and swallows up all the Infirmities thereof. And then here it follows, Even for this self-same Thing, &c. So then, if the Glory of the separate Soul be the Subject of any of these Verses, then of all, and so of this Verse also.

And to be sure it cannot be that extraordinary way of Entrance into Glory by such a sudden Change, both of Soul and Body into Glory at once, without Dissolution, should be the self-same Thing here aimed at. For it was not the Lot of any of those Primitive Christians (of whom the Holy Ghost here speaks this) [He hath wrought us for this Thing] that they should be in that manner Changed, and so enter into Glory: But the contrary. For they all, and all Saints since for these 1600 Years, have put off their Tabernacles by Death, as Peter did, and speaks of himself, 2 Pet. 1. 14. and therefore the Scripture (or Holy Ghost) foreseeing, as the Phrase is, Gal. 3. 8. This Change would be their fate, would not have uttered this of them, [God hath wrought us for this] whom he knew God had not designed thereunto.

Neither is it, that those groaning Desires spoken of in the fore-going Verses, 2, 3, 4. is [That self-same Thing] here (as some would) for indeed as Musculus well: If the Apostle had said, He that hath wrought this Thing in us, &c. That Expression might have carried it to such a Sense: But he saith, He that wrought us for the self-same Thing: And so 'tis not that desire of Glory in us is spoken of: But us, our Selves and Souls as wrought for that Glory.

If it be asked, what is the special proper Scope of these Words, as touching this Glory of the Soul? The Answer in general, it is to give the Rational Part of this Point, or demonstrative Reasons to Evidence to Believers, That indeed God hath thus ordained and prepared such a Glory afore the Resurrection. And it is, as if the Apostle had said, Look into your own Souls, and consider Gods dealings with you hitherto, viz.

1. The Operation of his Hands. For what other is the Meaning or Mystery (says he) of all, that God is daily so at Work with you in this Life? What else is the End of all the working of Grace in you, and of God that is the Worker? This is his very Design, He that hath wrought us (that is, our Souls) for this very Thing is God.

Besides the Evidence the Work gives, there is also over and above the Earnest of the Spirit given to your Souls, now whilst in your Bodies, in Joy, full of Glories of the same kind (as Earnests are) of what fulness of Glory they are both capable of then, and shall be filled with, when severed from your Bodies, Who hath [also] given us [the earnest] of the Spirit.

We Preachers have it in use, as to alledge Proofs of Scripture for the Points or Subjects we handle. So to give Reasons or Demonstrations of them. And so doth our Apostle here of this great Point, he had been treating of: And such Reasons or Demonstrations run often upon Harmony and Congruity of one Divine Thing or Truth kissing another. Also upon Becomingnesses or Mectnesses, that is, what it becometh the great God to do. For Instance; in giving an Account, why God in bringing many Sons to Glory, did choose to Effect it by Christs Death, rather than any other way. It became him (says he) Heb. 2. 10. For whom are all Things, and by whom are all Things, &c. And so in the Point of the Resurrection, 1 Cor. 15. 21. Since by Man came Death, by Man came also the Resurrection of the Dead; that is, it was Congruous, Harmonious, it should thus be; the one answering correspondently to the other. The like Congruity will be found couched here, in Gods bringing Souls to Glory, afore that Resurrection.

Chap. XI.

Now there are two sorts of harmonious Reasons couched in the fore-part of these Words, He that wrought us for this, is God.

I. That it is Finis operis & operantis, The End of the Work it self upon us; and of God as an Efficient working for an End: God hath wrought on us for this very Thing.

II. It is Opus Dignum Deo Authore, A Work as he is the great God, and as a Thing worthy and becoming of God as the Author of it: He that hath wrought us for this Thing, is GOD.

There is a Third Point to be superadded, and that is, It is the Interest of all Three Persons: Which how clearly evidenced out of the Text, will appear, when I have dispatched these former Doctrines.

Observation.

That it is a strong Argument, that God hath provided a Glory for separate Souls hereafter, That He hath wrought us, and wrought on us a Work of Grace in this Life.

Ere the Reason of this will appear, I must first open Three Things, natural to the Words: Which will serve as Materials, out of which to make forth that Argument.

I. That the Thing here said to be wrought, is Grace or Holiness; which is a Preparation unto Glory. (1.) Grace is the Work. And so, Phil. 1. 6. termed, The good Work. A frame of Spirit, Created to good Works: Eph. 2. 10. We are his Workmanship, created unto good Works. The Text here says, Who hath wrought us: There similarly, We are his WORKMANSHIP. And (2.) Secondly, This Work is a Preparation to Glory. For, for one Thing to be first wrought in Order to another, is a Preparation thereunto. Now saith the Text, He hath wrought us for this Thing; and Rom. 9. 23. It is in terminis, The Vessels of Mercy, which he had AFORE PREPARED TO GLORY; which was by working Holiness: For it follows, Ver. 24. Even us whom he hath called. Likewise, Col. 1. 12. Who hath MADE us MEET to be Partakers of the Inheritance of the SAINTS in Light. Meet, by making us Saints. So then, Had prepared, Hath made Meet is all one with, Who hath wrought us for this Thing.

2. What is the principal Subject wrought upon, or prepared and made meet for Glory? 'Tis certainly the Soul, in Analogy to the Phrase here. We use to say (when we speak of our Conversion) Since my Soul was wrought on. And though the Body is said to be sanctified, 1 Thess. 5. 23. yet the immediate Subject is the Soul; and that primitively, originally: The Body by Derivation from the Soul. And hence it is, the Soul (when a Man Dies) carries with it all the Grace by inherency: All Flesh is Grass which withers; that is, the Body with all the Appurtenances, saith Peter, 1 Epist. c. 1. v. 24. But you, having purified your Souls, being born again of incorruptible Seed (our Bodies are made of corruptible Seed, which is the Opposition there) by the Word of God, which lives and abides for ever: And this is the Word (he says, he means) which by the Gospel is Preached (every Day) unto you, Ver. 25. And by Preaching is engrafted in your Souls, purifying [your Souls] Ver. 22. In no other Subject doth that Word (as Preached) for ever abide. For the Body rots, and in the Grave hath not an inherent, but a Relative Holiness, (such as the Episcopal Brethren would have to be in Churches consecrated by them) because once it was the Temple of the Holy Ghost, who dwells in us.

And that it is the Soul the Apostle hath here in his Eye, in this Discourse of his in my Text, as that which he intends the Subject here wrought upon, appears, if we consult the Well-head of his Discourse about the Soul, which is the 16th Ver. of the 4th Chap. Our inward Man (says he) is renewed, &c. (there is your wrought upon here) whilst the outward (the Body) perisheth. Which Soul, in being call'd the inward Man, connotes at once both Grace and the Soul Conjunct together, and distinct from the Body, as well as from Sin and Corruption. Elsewhere it is declared the Subject first and originally wrought on, Eph. 4. 23. Be renewed [in the Spirit of your Minds.]

Minds.] Look round about the Text, and what is the [U.S] wrought on? Plainly this Inward Man, by the Coherence afore and after. Ask Ver. 1. If our Earthly Tabernacle (that is, our Bodies) be dissolved, WE have, &c. that is, This inner Man, our Souls, have; for the Body is supposed dissolved. So likewise, Ver. 4. [WE] in this Tabernacle, that is, our Souls in these Bodies. More expressly after, ver. 8. our very Souls, not only whilst in our Bodies, but when separate from our Bodies, have the [WE] given them; We are willing to be absent from the Body, and present with the Lord. The We present with the Lord, and absent from the Body, is, nor can be no other, than a separate Soul in its Estate of Widowhood. And so here, Ver. 5. Hath wrought U.S: The Soul bears the Person, carries away the Grace with it.

3. Add to this, the Time here specified in the Text, in which we are wrought upon: It is but this Life, and during the Term thereof. Hath wrought us, says the Apostle; not in the Future, Who shall Work us for it: That [hath wrought] referring to the work of Conversion at the first, Who [HATH MADE] us meet to be Partakers, &c. Col. 1. 12. And who doth continue still to Work us; the Preterperfect being often put by the Apostle for the Present, God renewing the inner Man DAY BY DAY, Chap. 4. 16. So working upon it, in order to this self-same Thing, continually. Unto which Words there, these here have an evident Aspect; yet so, as that Time of Working is but during this Life: For it is whilst the outward Man is Moulding, and that by Afflictions, which during this Moment Work an Eternal weight of Glory, Ver. 17. And that is expressly said to be but this present Time, Rom. 8. So then, there is NO PARABIT in that other World: But as Solomon says of Man, There is no Work after this Life; No remembrance, says David: Namely, which hath any Influence into a Mans Eternity. So there is no working upon us in order thereunto, after Death: God hath done his Do [hath wrought] and Man hath finish'd his Course; as Paul of himself, and in this Chapter of my Text, Ver. 10. Every Man receiveth the Things done in his Body, be they Good or Evil. Those Things that are done in this Body only; therefore only what in this Life he hath wrought. And for this he hath wrought us (says the Text.)

These Things premised, I come to the Argument to be raised out of them, to prove the Point in Hand.

1. That because Grace or Holiness are immediately wrought in the Soul, therefore when the Body dies the Soul shall be taken up into Life. That this is a meet and congruous Ordination of God, the Scripture it self owns, and seems so to pitch the Reason of it, in Rom. 8. 10, 11. And if Christ be in you the Body is Dead, because of Sin: But the Spirit is Life, because of Righteousness. But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the Dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the Dead shall also quicken your Mortal Bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. He gives an Account of what is to become hereafter both of the Bodies and Souls of them in whom Christ is. (1.) For the Body, that is condemned to Die, The Body is Dead because of Sin. By Body I understand the same which he in the 11th Verse Terms the Mortal Body to be raised up, which (says he) is Dead that is, appointed to Die, as one Sentenced to Death, you Term a Dead Man. And this [because of Sin.] It was meet, that that first threatning of dying should have some Effect to Evidence the Truth of God therein. Only God is favourable in his Ordination in this, that he arresteth but the Body, the less principal Debtor. But that (to be sure) shall pay for it: It is appointed to all Men once to Die, even for Men that are in Christ, as this Place of the Romans hath it. Then (2.) Follows, what remains, the Soul of such an one when the Body dies. [But] says he, (speaking by way of Exception, and contrary fate too) The Spirit is Life, because of Righteousness. The Spirit is the Soul in Contradistinction to the Body. This, when the Body Dies, is [Life] He says not Living only, or Immortal; but is swallowed up into Life: And why? Because of Righteousness, which is Christs Image; and so preserves, and by Gods Ordination upon Dying, elevates the Soul, which is the immediate and original Subject of it, (which

Chap. XI.

Observe quod non in futuro dicit, Parabit nos. Nondum parabitur; ubi iam induendum est, &c. Musc. in locum.

Ecclef. 9. 10. Psalm 6. 5.

Chap. XI.

(which is the Point in Hand.) For this Thing it is, God hath wrought it. But then, because the Query would be, Shall this Body for ever remain Dead, because of (this first) Sin, and bear this Punishment for ever? No: Therefore (3.) He adds, He, that raised up Christ from the Dead, shall also quicken your Mortal Bodies. So at last, and then bringing both Body and Soul together unto compleat Glory.

And the congruity of Reason, that is for this Appointment, is observable, something like to that 1 Cor. 15. As by Man came Death, so by Man came also the Resurrection from the Dead. For that Sin that condemned us to this Death, we had from the first Adam by bodily Generation, as the Channel or Means of Conveying it, who was (as other) Father of our Flesh.

The Arrest therefore goes forth against the Body, which we had from that Adam, because of that Sin, conveyed by Means of our Bodies: For though I must not say the Body defiles the Soul, or of its self is the immediate Subject of Sin; yet the original Means or Channel through which it comes down, and is derived unto us, is the Generation of our Bodies. The Body therefore congruously pays for this, and the Death thereof is a Means to let Sin out of the World, as the propagating it was a Means to bring Sin in: But an Holy Soul or Spirit which is the Off-spring of God, having now true Holiness and Righteousness from the second Adam communicated to it, and abiding in it; and being not only the immediate Subject thereof, but further, the first and Original Subject, from and by which it is derived unto the Body. The Womb, into which that Immortal Seed was first cast, and in which the inward Man is formed, and in respect of a constant abiding in which it is, that Seed is termed Incorruptible. Hence therefore, says God of this Soul [It is Life] It shall live when this Body Dies. There is nothing of Christs Image, but is ordained to abide for ever. Charity never fails, His Righteousness endures for ever; and therefore is ordained to conserve and elevate unto Life the Subject it is in, and that is the Soul. This, as a Foundation of the substantial Parts of this first Reason, out of this one Scripture, thus directly and explicitly holding this forth.

1 Cor. 13. 8.
2 Cor. 9. 9.

I come (2.) To the Argumentation it self, which ariseth out of these Things laid together. (1.) That the Soul is the immediate Subject of Grace. (2.) The first and Primitive Susceptive thereof. (3.) And it self is alone and immediately capable of Glory, which Grace is a Preparation to. And (4.) That God afore our Deaths hath wrought all of Grace he intends to work, in Preparation to Glory. Out of all these a strong Argument doth arise, That such a Soul upon Death shall be admitted unto Glory, and not be put to stay till the Time of the Resurrection, when both Soul and Body shall be joined again together. And that this holdeth a just and meet conveniency upon each, or at least, all these grounds, when put together.

1. Consider the Soul as the immediate Subject of this Working and Preparation for Glory. Hence therefore this Will at least arise, That the inherency or abiding of this Grace, wrought in this Soul, depends not upon its Conjunction with the Body; but so as it remains as an Everlasting and Perpetual Conserver of that Grace stampt on it; yea, and carries it all with it self, as a rich Treasure innate unto it where-ever it goes, when separate from the Body. I say, it either hath in it, or appertaining unto it, all that hath been wrought for it, either in it, or by it. Rev. 14. 13. Blessed are the Dead which Die in the Lord: [And their Works do follow them] They go to Heaven with them, and after them. And in what Subject else is it that the Seed of God remains incorruptible, or the Word of God abides for ever? Or how else comes that saying to be performed, 1 John 2. 17. He that doth the Will of God endures for ever? Having therefore all these Riches by it, and as compleat (as, here, it shall be;) Meet it is, it should partake the Benefit thereof, and live upon them now it is single and alone, and in its Widows Condition. And it is an opportune Season, that by a Glory given it for that Holiness, this should now appear, That it was the Soul which was the sole intrinsic and immediate Receptive of all this Holiness. This the first. Add also,

1 Pet. 1. 13.
Ver. 25.

2. Its being the First and Primitive Subject of Holiness, from which it is derivatively in the Body. Meet it was this Soul should not be deferred till the Appurtenance of it be united to it, but be served first, and admitted into that Glory ordained; and by having it self first Possession given of that Inheritance, the Body might in its Season be admitted derivatively thereinto from it, after that renewed Union with it by the Resurrection. Reason good, that look, as, in Priority, Grace, the Preparation unto Glory, was wrought: So, in that Order of Priority, Glory it self should be communicated. And therefore seeing its Fate is to abide awhile alone; therefore first to enjoy, and drink both the Juice and the Fruit of that Vine it is the Root of.

And (3.) It being in it self, when separate, as immediately capable of this Glory, as when it shall be again United to the Body: For what is the Essential of Glory, the Substance of that Life that swallows up all? But (as we said on ver. 4.) Gods immediate Presence, and our knowing him Face to Face, as we are known. Now of this the Apostle doth in the 6, 7 and 8 Verses, expressly inform us, That the separate Soul is not only capable thereof, but that it then begins to enjoy it: Therefore (says he) we are always confident, knowing that whilst we are in the Body, we are absent from the Lord; (For we walk by Faith, not by Sight.) We are Confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the Body, and to be present with the Lord. Where to be present with the Lord, and to live by sight, is expressly made the Privilege of a Soul absent from the Body; which can mean no other State, than that of the Soul between the Death of the Body, and the Resurrection. For whilst it is present in the Body afore Death, it is absent from the Lord; and when it shall be present with the Lord, after the Resurrection, it shall not then be any more absent from the Body. This Conjunction therefore of absent from the Body, and present with the Lord, falls out in no State else, but only in that interim or space of Time between. And let us withal view this Place in the Light, (by bringing the one to the other) which that Passage, 1 Cor. 13. 12. doth cast upon it: For now we see through a Glass darkly, but then Face to Face; now I know in part, but then shall I know, even as also I am known. [To see as in a Glass darkly] there, is to [walk by Faith] here: But to see Face to Face, and to know God as we are known (so there) is all one; and to attain to sight, and to be in Christs presence (here.) And to be sure, the Body is in no Estate whatever capable of knowing God, as we are known of him: None durst ever affirm that. For besides that, the Spiritual Knowledge of God is proper to an Intellectual Nature: Further, So to know God, as God knows us, and so to be elevated to the similitude of Gods Understanding, is not communicable to the Body. We may as well dare to affirm God himself to be a Body, as that our Bodies are capable of ever being raised up thus to know God. Hence therefore, whether the Soul be out of the Body, as after Death, or so in the Body, as it shall be after the Resurrection; yet still it is the Soul that is immediately alone capable of that Sight and Knowledge of God. And therefore seeing it depends not on the Body, it is as well capable of it afore the Resurrection without the Body, as after the Resurrection in the Body.

Only this must be added, That whilst indeed the Soul is at home in this Body, (this earthly Tabernacle) it is not capable of this sight, of the Glory of God, that is, so as to continue in the Body, and enjoy it; for it would crack this earthen Vessel: as 1 Cor. 15. 50. Flesh and Blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God. And although Paul, as a stander by, was an over-hearer, and an Eye-witness (by way of Revelation and Vision) of what the Spirits ^{2 Cor. 12:} of just Men in Glory do enjoy: Even as on the contrary, the Angels are often standers-by on Earth, and Overseers of us, what is there in done, (as the Phrase is, Zech. 3. 7.) yet he was not estated into it, or admitted a Possessor thereof himself, no more than Angels into an earthly Estate; and therefore could not say, whether the Revelation vouchsafed him, might not be in the Body, as well as out of it: Whereas God had otherwise long since peremptorily determined that Question, That no Man could see God, and live; that is, at once continue in this Body, and see him Face to Face. And Paul here in my

Chap. XI.

Magis conveniens videtur ut anima in quibus per prius fuit culpa & meritum, prius etiam vel puniantur vel premiantur. Aquinas cont. Gent. Lib. 4. cap. 91. Sect. 3.

Chap. XI. my Text also determines it, That whilst we are at home in the Body, (as now) we are absent from the Lord: They are two incompatible Estates. But still when that which, thus, lets (this Body) is taken out of the way, the Soul itself is sufficiently capable, as truly as ever it shall be.

4. But if this Argument from these be yet judged not home enough, but short; Then let us in the Fourth Place add what force the Third Premise will give to it, concerning the Time of Gods working on us, to drive all closer home; namely, That God hath wrought upon the Soul in this Life, all that he ever means to work, by way of Preparation for Glory. For this Thing God [hath wrought us] which though it might with the Enlargements and Sub-arguments that now shall follow, be made an Argument alone; yet I choose to cast it into this Total, to make the whole the more strong.

Therefore (4.) Gather up the Demonstrations thus: If the Soul be the immediate and first Subject of Grace, which is a Preparation to Glory, and capable of this Glory, when out of the Body; And God, the great Agent, or Worker, hath wrought all that ever he means to work in it, this way, by way of Preparation to Glory: Then, as Peter said in the Case of admitting the Gentiles to Baptism, What should hinder that these Souls should not be glorified, instantly, when out of their Bodies? If indeed, as the Papists, and corrupted Jews and Heathens have feigned, there were any Work to be after wrought, a Purgatory, or the like; Then a Demurre or Caveat might be yet put in, to suspend this their Admission into Glory: But the contrary being the Truth, then, &c. Now the Strength of the Argument from this latter, superadded to the rest, stands upon two strong Grounds.

First, If we consider what is common to God in this with all other, but ordinary wise Efficients or Workers, that are intent upon their Ends, which must be given to him, the only Wise, All-powerful God, (who is here said, as an Efficient, to work us for this End.) When any ordinary Efficient hath brought his Work to a Period, and done as much to such or such an End as he means to do, he delays not to accomplish his End, and bring it to Execution; unless some over-powring Impediment do lie in his way to it. If you have bestowed long and great Cost upon any of your Children, to fit and prepare them for any Employment; The University suppose, or other Calling; Do you then let these your Children lie Truants, idle, and asleep at home, and not put them forth to that which you at first designed that their Education unto? Will you suffer them (in this Case) to lose their Time, Do you know how to do good to your Children? And doth not God? We see God doth thus in Nature. We say, when the Matter is as fully prepared as ever it shall be, that the Form enters without delay: Now Grace is expressly termed a Preparation to Glory. Also God doth observe this in working of Grace itself, when the Soul is as fully humbled and emptied, and thereby prepared for the Lord, by John Baptists Ministry, as he means to prepare it; the Work of justifying Faith presently follows. In all his Dispensations of Judgments or Mercies, he observes the same. When Mens Sins are at full (as of the Amorites) he stays not a Moment to execute Judgment: So in answering the Faith of his People waiting on him for Mercies. And thus it is for Glory; I have glorified thee on Earth, (the only Place and Condition of our glorifying God) I have finished the Work thou gavest me to do: And now (what now, and presently now remained there, follows) glorify me, &c. Thus spake Christ our Pattern.

Secondly, There is this further falls out, in this Case and Condition, of such a Soul, as doth indeed call for this out of a kind of Necessity, and not of Congruity only. For whereas by Gods Ordination there are Two ways of Communion with him, and but Two, unto all Eternity; either that of Faith, which we have at present; and of Sight, which is for hereafter. Into these Two, the Apostle resolves all Gods Dispensations to us, Ver. 7. of this Chapter, We walk by Faith, (namely, in this Life) not by sight. And again, 1 Cor. 13. 12. [Now] we see in a Glass [Then] Face to Face. These Two [Now] and [Then] do divide the Dispensations for Eternity of Time to come. The like like in Peter, 1 Epist. 1. 8. In whom though [Now] you see him not (as you one Day shall) yet believing: If therefore when the Soul goes out of the Body, that way of Communion with God by Faith utterly ceaseth, that Door and Passage will be quite shut up; God having fulfilled all the Work of Faith (The Work of God) with Power, that ever he intendeth: Then surely Sight must succeed according to Gods Ordination, or otherwise this would inevitably follow, That the Soul would be for that interim, until the Resurrection, cut off from all Communion with God whatever; having yet all its acquired Holiness of Sanctification abiding in it, and Righteousness accompanying of it all that while. Look therefore as a Child hath Two, and but two Ways of Living, and when the one ceaseth, the other succeeds, or Death would follow; in the Womb it lives by Nourishment from the Navel, without so much as Breathing at the Mouth: But it no sooner comes into the World, but that former Means is cut off, and it liveth by Breath, and taking in Nourishment by the Mouth, or it must instantly Die. So stands the Case with the Soul here between Faith and Sight: So that we must either affirm, That the Soul dies to all spiritual Actings and Communion with God until the Resurrection, which those Scriptures so much do contradict, He that believeth hath Eternal Life, &c. and shall never (no not for a Moment) Die; (and in those Promises it is not simply a sluggish Immortality, but to Live, and Act, and Enjoy God (which is our Life) must needs be meant:) Or we must on the other side affirm, That the Life of Faith ceasing, and God yet having that way wrought all that ever he intendeth, That then, Sight of God Face to Face must come in its Place: Which indeed the Apostle in that 1 Cor. 13. affirms, in saying, Ver. 10. When that which is Perfect is come, then that which is but in Part is done away. There is not an utter ceasing of the imperfect, and then an interval or long space of Time to come between; and then, that which is Perfect is to come: But the Imperfect is done away by the very coming of that which is thus Perfect. And in the 12th Verse he explains himself, That the imperfect is this our seeing [Now] in a Glass darkly, that is by Faith; and that Perfect, to be that seeing God Face to Face, as that which presently entertains us in that other World. Nay, the Apostle admits not so much as a Moment of Cessation, but says, That the imperfect is done away, (ver. 10.) and vanisheth, (as ver. 8.) by the coming in of the Perfect upon it: And so the imperfect, namely [Faith] is swallowed up of the Perfect, namely, [Sight.] Now if we thus grant (as we must) this separate Soul to have this sight, or nothing now left it to enjoy God any way by; then it is no other than Glory, it is admitted unto: For, the sight of God Face to Face, and to know as we are known, is the very Effence of Glory, as it differs from Faith. Neither indeed is that ultimate Enjoyment, or Happiness in God, which Souls shall have after the Resurrection, any other (in Name or Thing) than the sight of God, as it is thus distinguished from Faith; and therefore the Soul is now admitted to the same Enjoyment it shall be Then for Kind, although it shall be then raised and intended unto far higher Degrees of Perfection.

And for a Conclusion, that which follows in that Place lately cited out of 1 Pet. 1. ver. 9. Receiving the end of your Faith, the Salvation of your Souls, may as fitly serve for the Confirmation of all these latter fore-going Notions, as to any other Sense Interpreters have affixed.

I am aware how these Words, Receiving the end of your Faith, the Salvation of your Souls, are Interpreted of that Joy unspeakable, and full of Glory, which the Verse afore had spoken of, In whom, though Now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with Joy unspeakable and full of Glory; so as in those Joys vouchsafed the Saints are said to receive the Salvation of their Souls, as being the Earnest of it in the same Kind, and so a Part of the Reward of Faith received in Hand, (as we say) and vouchsafed over and above the ordinary way of living by Faith. This Interpretation I no way gain-say, nor will go about to exclude: For I know, it doth consist with that other I am about to give, and is subordinate to it: But if this Sense should obtain, that it were, Directly, alone intended, yet by Consequence, and at the rebound, it doth strongly argue the Point in Hand. For if whilst Faith continues, God is pleased to vouchsafe such Joys, much more, when Faith ceaseth, He will vouchsafe a fuller Enjoyment: For why else are these present Joys termed Salvation? That is, in a sort Part of the taking Possession of Salvation afore-hand, and that as distinct from the Right to Salvation, which Faith in ordinary gives, without such Joys at all Times to all Believers: They have the Name given them, as being an Earnest of the same Kind, of that greater Sum. And again, why are these present Joys termed the Salvation of their Souls? But because they are intended by God, being also, now wrought immediately in the Soul, without the Bodies influence) to be an Earnest, that it is their Souls, when without their Bodies, shall have that fuller Possession given them; and so this Earnest assigneth this Payment to be made to this Legatee, the Soul, specified as the first Receiver of it. [2.] Every Payment having a Day, or set Time appointed for it, which the Earnest obligeth the Trustee unto, as well as to make Payment it self, and useth to be at the end of the Performance on his Part to whom the Contract is made, this therefore is as elegantly designed to be the End of their Faith; there's the Day of Payment. And [3.] It would be hard to think, that God should give forth Joys whilst Faith continues; and then for so long a Time as till the Resurrection withdraw all Communication of himself, both of Faith and Joy (through Sight) also. Surely they are not left worse than in this Life they were.

Chap. XI.

I also know, the Soul, being the eminent Part of Man, is often in Scripture by a Synecdoche put for the whole Person. And I must not deny, but that ultimately it is intended here, it extending it self to the whole of Salvation first and last after Faith ended. Which Sense on the other Hand many Interpreters are for.

I only Contend for this, That the Salvation of the Soul is intended also of that Salvation, which falls out in the midst between these Joys (the Earnest) in this Life, and that ultimate Salvation at the Resurrection, that is the Salvation of the Soul, whilst separate, as being the next. It hath a weight in it, that Salvation and Damnation should so often be said to be of the Soul by Christ himself, as Mat. 26. 16. What shall it Profit a Man to gain the whole World (and so provide for his Body) and lose his own Soul? And again, in speaking of the Soul, as considered apart from the Body, Mat. 10. 28. Fear not them that are able to kill but the Body, and are not able to kill the Soul. But that which is more Conjunct to my Purpose; it is observable, that this our Apostle Peter should choose to use in this Epistle, more than any other Apostle, this Phrase of [Soul] in relation to Salvation, either as being the eminent Subject, and sometimes as the single Subject both of Grace and Salvation: So in this Chapter, You have purified your Souls, &c. as the immediate Susceptive of the incorruptible Seed (as was observed.) Then again, in Chap. 2. 11. Abstain from fleshly Lusts, which War [against the Soul] and 8. 25. Ye are returned to the Bishop of your Souls. Which he speaks as being the eminent Part, and (upon Separation from the Body) the special Charge he hath Pastoral Care of. And more directly to our Purpose, Chap. 4. last ver. he Exhorts them when they come to Die, to commit their Souls to God, as then being to be separate from their Bodies. Now it were hard to think, that this Salvation to come should bear the Title and Name of the Salvation of the Soul in this and other Scriptures; and that yet when this Soul shall in the other World come to subsist for a long Time single and alone, and then be properly and without Figure: A meer Soul without a Body, a lane-some Soul: That during that State it should not be the Subject of this Salvation, and so intended here, when more properly and literally, if ever, it is the Salvation of the Soul. And it would be yet more strange, that the Phrase, Salvation of the Soul, should be wholly restrained unto that Estate of the Soul, when remitted to the Body at Resurrection, and only unto that. And that Word the Soul should serve only synecdochically, as a Part put to signify the whole Man, as then it is to be raised up: But especially, it were strangest of all, if it should be confined and limited in this Place of Peter, wherein this Salvation of the Soul is set forth

Heb. 10. v. last.
Jam. 5. v. last.

forth for the Comfort of such as were to lay down their Tabernacles of their Bodies for Christ (as this Peter speaks of himself in the next Epistle) and whose Faith was then to cease with their Lives, whose Expectations therefore he would in this Case certainly pitch upon that Salvation of the Soul next, which is this of the Soul separate. To Confirm all which,

That, which further invited me to this Place, was this Phrase [The end of your Faith] especially upon this Consideration, that he speaks it unto such Christians, who in these Times were (as he foretels, Chap. 4. ver. 4.) shortly to be Martyred; and at present were sorely tried (ver. 7. of this Chapter) and in the last Verse of the Fourth he thereupon instructeth and exhorteth them to commit their Souls (when they Die) to be kept by God: And so understood in a proper and literal Sense, this Salvation of their Souls is in all Respects termed, The End of their Faith.

First, In that it is the next and immediate Event that Faith ends and determines in, as Death is said to be the end of Life. So noting forth, that when Faith ends, this Salvation of the Soul begins and succeeds it. The end of a Thing signifies the immediate Event, Issue, Period thereof. As of wicked Men it is said, whose End is Destruction, Phil. 3. and Heb. 10. last ver. Apostatic and Unbelief are said to be a drawing back unto Perdition. And on the contrary, there Faith is termed a believing to the Salvation of the Soul: And both Note out the final Event and Consequent of each, and Salvation of the Soul to be the end of Faith, when Men continue and go on to believe, until their Faith arrive at, and attaineth this Salvation of the Soul. To this Sense also, Rom. 6. 22. You have your Fruit in Holiness, and the [End] Everlasting Life. And the Apostle Peter having in the foregoing Verses celebrated the Fruits and Workings of their Faith in this Life, as in supporting them gloriously under the forest Trials, Ver. 7. and then sometimes filling their Hearts with Joy unspeakable and glorious, ver. 8. he here at last concludeth with, what will be the End or Issue of it in that other Life, when Faith it self shall cease; and what it is that then they shall receive, Receiving (after all this) the end of your Faith, the Salvation of your Souls, Κομιζόμενοι in the present, by a frequent and usual Enallage of Time, being put for the Future: For ye shall receive (or being about to receive) to shew the Certainty of it: That when Faith shall end, you may be sure on't, even of that Salvation (that great Salvation so spoken of by the Prophets, Ver. 10.) of your Souls, which as it hath no end to be put unto it, as Faith hath: So no Interruption or space of Time to come between (during which your Souls should not be actually saved) a Salvation of your Souls singly (whilest through Death they shall so Exist) as well as of the same Souls primarily, and more eminently, when both Soul and Body shall be reunited.

Secondly, The End of your Faith, that is, of your Aims and Expectations in your Faith: The End importing the Aim or Expectation, which is also a proper and literal Sense of that Word. And upon this Account also the Salvation of the Soul, when they should Die, that being the very next Thing their Eyes must needs be upon, is therefore here intended.

And 3. The End of your Faith, that is, as being that for which the great God (who keeps us by his Power through Faith unto Salvation, ver. 5.) hath wrought this Faith in you. Accordingly we find it termed the Work of Faith, 1 Thes. 1. 3. Which when God hath fully wrought, and brought to that degree he aimed at in this Life; (or to use the Apostles own Expression of it, 2 Thes. 1. 11. When God hath fulfilled the Work of Faith with Power, he then crowneth it with this Salvation of the Soul without End. As James speaks of Patience, when it hath had its perfect Work, Chap. 1. 4. compared with Ver. 12. and so speaks my Text, for this self-same Thing he hath wrought us. And therefore when this Faith shall cease which he wrought for this, he will attain his End without delay: And you (says he) shall attain your End also: And Faith thus ceasing, if this Salvation of the Soul did not succenturiate and recruit it anew, the End of this Faith were wholly and altogether present destructive Loss unto the Soul, in its well-being until the Resurrection.

Chap. XI.
 τέλος προ π-
 λείωσις.

4. The [End] signifies the Perfection and Consummation of any Thing, as Christ is said to be the End of the Law, Rom. 10. 4, And so the meaning is, That your Faith, which is but an imperfect knowing God, shall then, when it ceaseth, be swallowed up of Sight, (which is all one with that Salvation here) tanquam perfectibile, a Perfection, as that which is imperfect is said to be by that which is Perfect, 1 Cor. 13. 10. Thus much for the literal and proper Import of the Word [End.]

Now then, if we take the Word [End] in its proper Meaning, and the Word [Soul] likewise in its native proper Meaning also, which Sense in Reason should be first served (when the Scope will bear it) then it makes for that Purpose, more fitly, which we have had in Hand.

That nothing may be wanting in this last Place cited, to make up all the Particulars in the fore-going Sections insisted on: So it is, that the Apostle Peter doth further plainly insinuate, That this Salvation (here) consisteth in the Sight and Vision of Christ (which was one Particular afore-mentioned) accompanied with Joy unspeakable, and glorious. The Coherence (if observed) makes this forth clearly: For whereas in the Verse immediately fore-going, he had commended their present State of Faith by this, Whom [NOW] though you see not, yet believing, rejoice with Joy unspeakable, and glorious. That [NOW] you see not, (in this Life) is set in Opposition, and carries a Promise with it of a Time to come, wherein they should see, even as Christ said to his Disciples, John 13. 33, and 36. compared, Whither I go, I [NOW] say to you, ye cannot come; but thou shalt follow me [AFTERWARDS]. So here [NOW] believing, (which is the Principle at the present which you live upon) you see him not; but when the End of your Faith shall come, you shall then see him; and in this it is consisteth the Salvation of your Souls. So that still it carries on what I have afore spoken unto, That when Faith ceaseth, Sight cometh; yea, perfects and swallows it up, as was said even now, out of 1 Cor. 13.

And let me add this, That the Apostle on Purpose doth bring in the mention of this supereminent Fruit of Faith, (Even Now when we see not) that believing, ye yet rejoice with Joy unspeakable and glorious: On Purpose, I say, to make way for the raising up their Thoughts and Apprehensions, how infinitely transcending that Salvation of their Souls must be, when Faith ending, they attain to Sight, To see him Face to Face, whom their Souls have loved: It is implicitly as if he had said unto them, Oh! Think with yourselves, what Joy, what Glory that must needs be, which exceedeth and surpasseth this that now accompanies your Faith, in an answerable Proportion, as much as sight of Christs Presence, and Face to Face, must be supposed to excel the Knowledge of him by Faith, which sees him but as Absent, darkly!

And further, give me leave to improve this Notion: You may take this assured Evidence, That your Souls shall then see and enjoy God, when your Faith shall CEASE, which will be, when once your Souls shall come to be separate from your Bodies by Death: In that, even now, in this Life, it is your Souls and Spirits that are the immediate Receptives, or Partakers and Subjects of such glorious Joys.

The Soul enjoys them (though in the Body, yet) without the help or concurrence of the Body, or the Phantasms of it: Yea, such Raptures do pass Understanding, that is, the common way of Understanding, which by the use and help of the Body, or Images in the Fancy, the Mind exerciseth in other Things, and which do concur with the understanding ordinarily in Faith. But this Joy falls into, and is illapsed within the Soul it self immediately; yea, the weakness of your Bodies, and bodily Spirits, will not permit you to have so much of this Joy, as otherwise the Soul is now capable of by Faith. And therefore by this experimental Taste aforehand in your own Souls, you may be ascertained, That your Souls, when separate from your Bodies by Death, as well as when united again unto their Bodies, shall enjoy this great Salvation.

And thus much for the first Point raised out of the Words, which did undertake an Argumentation for a separate Souls Glory and Happiness. (1.) From the Condition of the Soul, as the immediate Subject of Grace wrought in it. (2.) From Gods Ordination of the Work wrought; to raise the Soul up to Life, whilst Sin should bring Dissolution upon the Body. (3.) From the Scope of the Worker, God himself; who as an Efficient will accomplish the End, when his Work for that End is finish'd. And all these, as comprehended in what the very first View and Front of the Words of my Text hold out, God hath wrought us for the self-same Thing.

C H A P. XII.

The Glory into which the separate Soul is receiv'd, demonstrated from this Consideration, that God is the Efficient of it.

BUT lo! a greater Matter is here. It is not simply said, God hath wrought us for this; but, HE that hath wrought for this Thing, is GOD: Thereby calling upon us to consider, How great an Hand or Efficient is here, Even God, who hath discovered in a transcendent Manner his Glory, in the Ordaining and Contriving of this Work unto this great End. Take it Not therefore as a bare Demonstration given from Gods working US to this End, such as is common to other Agents (as hath been said.) But further, a Celebration of the Greatness and Glory of God, in his having contrived this with so high an Hand, like unto the great God: And is as if he had said, There is a design in this, worthy of God; HE hath shewn himself in this, to be the great God indeed. He that hath wrought us for this, is God.

When Gods ordinary Works are spoken of, it sufficeth himself to say, God did Thus, or This: But when Gods Works of Wonder, then often you find such an illustrious Note of Reflection upon, and pointing at Him, to have done as God. And it is ordinary among Men, when you would commend the known worth of the Artist, to say, He that wrought this, is such a Man, so to commend the Workmanship.

And thus both when the Holy Ghost speaks of this Glory it self, (which is the End for which here) His stile is, Whose Builder and Maker is God, Heb. 11. 10. And in like Equipage here of Preparation to that End, he saith, He that hath wrought us [for this Thing] is God. In this very Chapter (2 Cor. 5.) (to go no further) when the great Work of Salvation, in the whole of it, is spoken of, he Prefaceth thus to it, All Things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself, &c. that is, in this Transaction he hath appeared like that God [of whom all Things else are] and so more eminently in this than in all, or at least, any other Work. What there is said of Salvation in the whole, is here of that Particular Salvation of a separate Soul. You have the like Emphasis put Heb. 2. 10. Of bringing many Sons to Glory [it became him] says the Text. Now put all together, and the result is:

Observ. That to have provided a Glory for separate Souls of just Men, wrought upon in this Life, is a Dispensation becoming the great God: Yea, and that there is an Artifice and Contrivement therein worthy of God, and like unto himself, such as he hath shewed in other his Works of Wonder.

There are two Branches of this Doctrine, which I set otherwise out thus:

1. That it is a Thing becoming the great God, thus to deal with such a separate Soul, having been wrought upon.

2. That

Chap. XII.

2. That God hath designed, and brings forth, therein, a glorious Artifice and Contrivement, such as argueth him a God Wise in Counsel, and Wonderful in Working.

1. It becomes God. The Account of this becomingness is best made forth, by comparing and bringing together into an interview, both the inward and outward Condition of such a Soul, and then the Relations which God bears to it, such as should thereupon move him (through his good Pleasure) thus to deal with it.

You know I at first undertook chiefly Reasons of Congruity or Becomingness, and such always consist of Two Parts, and when the one answereth and suiteth to the other, then the Harmony of such a Reason is made up.

1. Let US therefore consider, on the Souls Part.

1. The Species, the Kind, and intrinsic Rank of being, which this Creature (we call the Soul) thus wrought upon stands in afore God.

2. The outward Condition or Case this Soul is left in upon its parting with the Body, unless God takes it up into Glory.

1. For its Rank or Kind of Being, there are Two Things.

1. This Soul was by its first Creation a Spirit; and that in the Substance or Native Kind thereof; and in that Respect (considered apart for its Union with the Body) is in a more special Manner allied unto God, than all other Creatures (but Angels) are. You have the Pedigree of Man, both in Respect of Body and Soul, set out, Acts 17. the Extract of our Bodies, in ver. 26. He hath made of one Blood all Nations of Men: So then on that side (as we say) in Respect of our Bodies, there is a Consanguinity of all Men, being made of one Blood, between one another: But then in Respect of our Souls, we are Gods off-spring, ver. 28. And so on that side there is an Alliance (not of Consanguinity) unto God, upon the Account of having been Created immediately by him, and IN the very Substance of our Souls, made like him, and in his Image; and yet we are not begotten of his Essence or Substance, which is only proper to His Great Son: And in a Correspondency unto this, God is stiled Heb. 12. 9. The Father of our Spirits, in Distinction from the Fathers of our Flesh or Bodies: (see the Words) which Alliance or Fatherhood, take it as in common with all Mens Spirits, lieth in this, That he not only created our Souls immediately out of nothing, but in his own Image, as to the Substance of them, which Image or Likeness other Creatures did not bear, which yet were made out of nothing, as the Chaos was; both which appear, by putting two Places together, Zech. 12. 1. He frameth their Spirits (speaking of the Souls of Men) and that [altogether] saith the Psalmist, Psalms 33. 15. (so Ainsworth and others read it) that is, both, each of those Spirits; and also wholly and totally, every whit of the Substance of them: Creatio est productio totius entis; for Creation differs from Generation in this, that it is a raising up or producing the whole of a being out of meer nothing, that is to say, [altogether] whereas Generation presupposeth pre-existent Matter; as in the Generation of our Bodies, which are not wholly and every whit of God immediately, but the Parents afford the Stuff, the Matter, and the Formative Virtue besides, by which our Bodies are framed. So then, in respect of our first Creation, our Souls (apart considered) are thus allied to God, which our Bodies are not; being Spirits in the very being of them, that altogether do owe that their Being to him.

But there is a taint come upon the Souls of all Men by Sin, so as this Alliance is thereby worn out, yea forfeited, until it be restored. Now therefore these Souls (the only Subject of our Discourse) being such as God hath wrought, and so are become his Workmanship by a new and far nobler Creation, and thereby Created Spirit anew, according to what Christ says, That which is born of the Spirit is Spirit. Hereupon these Souls are Spirit, upon a double Account: As you say of Sugar, it is double-refined; so this is now become a Spiritual Spirit, or Spirit spiritualized and sublimated; yea, and thereby the inward Sanctuary, The Holy of Holies, the Seat of Gods most Spiritual Worship; which the Body is not, but only as it is the outward Temple or Instrument of this new-made Spirit.

John 3.

Rom. 7. 22, 25.

And

And hereupon that original Affinity to God of Spirit is not only restored, but endeared; for now there is both the Stuff, or the Ground-work, and then the Workmanship, or Embroidery upon it, and both of them the Works of God; that so look as the Gold wrought upon commends the Enamel, and then again the Enamel enhaunceth the Value of the Gold, so as both are considered in the Price; so it's here with this Soul wrought by God in both Respects.

2. Consider we now again the Case and outward Condition of such a Soul, that of it self would fall out to it upon the Dissolution of the Body.

1. It fails of all sorts of Comforts, it had in and by its Union with the Body in this World, Luke 16. 9. When you fail, says Christ, speaking of Death, 'tis your City-phrase when any of you break, and perhaps are thereby driven into another Kingdom, as the Soul now is.

2. Then, if ever, a Mans Flesh and his Heart fail, Psalms 73. 26.

3. And (which is worse) a Mans Faith faileth or ceaseth after Death, and all his spiritual Knowledge as in this Life, 'tis the express Phrase used 1 Cor. 13. at the 8th Verse, and which is prosecuted to the End of that Chapter. And so all that Communion, it had with God in this Life, is cut off: It is of all Creatures left the most destitute and forlorn, if God provides not.

And yet Fourthly, It is now upon Death (which it never was afore) immediately brought into the Presence of God. Naked Soul comes afore naked God. Eccles. 12. 7. Then shall the Dust return to the Earth, as it was: And the SPIRIT shall RETURN UNTO GOD that gave it: It is put out of House and Home, and turned upon its Father again. Thus much as to the Souls Condition.

2. But Secondly, Let us consider what it becomes God on his Part to do. This is a special Season for God to shew his Love to such a Soul, if ever afore or after, an Opportunity, such as falls not out, neither afore, whilest it was in the Body; nor after, when it is united to the Body again at the Resurrection: If ever therefore he means to shew a Respect unto a poor Soul, which is his so near Kindred and Alliance, it must be done now. We read in Psalms 73. 26. My Flesh and my Heart faileth (as at Death to be sure it doth) but God is the Strength of my Heart, both in this Life and at Death to support me [and my Portion for ever] in the Life to come, without any Interruption or Vacant space of Time, as that [ever] imports: And that David spake this with an Eye unto the Glory to come, when Heart, and Flesh, and all in this World he fore-saw would fail him, is evident by what he had immediately meditated in the Words afore, ver. 24. Thou shalt guide me with thy Counsel, so in this Life, and afterwards (that being ended) shall receive me unto Glory. The Contemplation whereof makes him cry out again, Ver. 25. Whom have I in Heaven but Thee? For all Things else will fail me one Day, when my Flesh utterly fails me also: And There is none upon Earth (where he had at present many Comforts and Comforters) in Comparison OF THEE. You see God is the Portion of the whole of his Time, even for ever, as ver. 26. and his Estate in Heaven and Earth divide that Time and Portion between them, and no middle State between both, but when the one ceaseth the other begins, for between them Two must be the [for ever], and when all fail him, which he had on Earth, then God alone becomes his Happiness in Heaven. But this only in General shews, what God is and will be to a Soul in this Condition.

But I having undertaken to proceed by way of Congruity, I must further, more Particularly shew, how in a Correspondency to this inward and outward State of this Soul, he shews himself God, and how meet and becoming a thing it is for God to receive it into Glory, upon the Consideration of many Relations, which he professedly beareth to such a Soul.

1. God is a Spirit, and thereupon in a special Manner (as Wisd. 11. 26.) The Lord is a Lover of Souls above all his other Creation. So it is there, Thou art merciful to all because they are thine. O LORD THOU LOVER OF SOULS [God is a Spirit] when therefore this naked, and withal sublimated Spirit (by its being Born again by his own Spirit) and so assimilated to God himself, a pure spark now freed and severed from its Dust and

Ashes,

Chap. XII.
 Luke 16. 22.
 Heb. 1. ult.

Athes, flying up (or is carried rather by Spirits, the Angels, out of their like spiritual Love to it as a Spirit) unto that great Spirit, that Element of Spirits, it will surely find Union and Coalition with him, and be taken up unto him: For if, as Christ speaks, John 4. 23. God being a Spirit, therefore seeks for such as Worship in Spirit and Truth, that is, he Loves, Delights in such as a Man doth in a Companion or Friend, who suits him. And doth God seek for such whilest they are on Earth? Then surely when such Spirits shall come to him, and have such a grand Occasion, and (indeed) the first Occasion in such an immediate way to appear before him, in such a manner and upon such a Change as this; as they never did before; these Spirits also having been the Seat, the inner Temple of all this spiritual Worship and sanctifying of him in this World: Surely God who sought such afore, will now take them into his Bosom and Glory: We also read Isa. 57. 16, 17. Of the Regard he bears to Persons of a contrite and humble Spirit, to revive them upon this superadded Consideration, that they are Souls and Spirit, and so thereby allied to him, the lofty one. Hear how in this Case he utters himself, The Spirit would fail afore me, says he, and the Souls which I have made. He speaks of their very Souls properly and respectively considered, And [them] it is which he considering, and it moves him unto Pity; for he speaks of that in Man, whereof God is in a peculiar manner the Maker or Creator [The Spirit which I have made] (says he) and it is one of the eminent Titles he takes into his Coat, The Framer of the Spirit of Man within him, Zach. 12. 1. as in many other Places: This is argued also, in that he speaketh of that in Man, which is the Subject sensible of his immediate Wrath. I will not contend for ever; nor will I be always wroth. (This I have observed in what is Publick of mine.)

Child of Light
 walking in Darkness.

Now what moves him to remove his Wrath from such an one? The Spirit would fail (says he.) Now doth God thus profess to have a regard to them in this Life, and that upon this Account, that they are Spirits, lest they should FAIL, or Faint; and shall we not think that when indeed otherwise they do fail (as after Death you have heard (even now) Christ himself expresseth they would) and would upon all these Considerations before-mentioned, sink into utter Desolation, unless they were received into Everlasting Habitations (as Christ there also speaks) Do we think that God will not now entertain them? The Time is now come, the full Time to have Pity on them.

2. God at this Season forgets not, but full well remembers his Relation of being [THEIR CREATOR] both by the new, and also first Creation (the new reviving and ingratiating the remembrance of the first) [The SOULS which I HAVE MADE] said he in Isaiab. But in our Peter this is more express, and mentioned as that, which indeed moves God (and should be accordingly a support to our Faith) to take Care of our Souls, when we come to Die, even upon this Account, that he is the faithful Creator of them, 1 Pet. 4. last. Wherefore let them, that suffer according to the Will of God, commit the KEEPING OF THEIR SOULS to him, in well-doing, as unto to a FAITHFUL CREATOR. He speaks this specially unto such as were continually exposed unto Persecution unto Death for Christ in those Primitive Times; which therefore, ver. 12. he Terms the fiery Trial, and ver. 17. forewarns them of a Time of Judgment which was begun, and going on upon the House of God, such as they had not yet felt; who yet Heb. 10 32, 33, 34. had suffered Reproach and spoiling of their Goods (as Peter writes to the same Jews) hereupon Peter pertinently instructs them to commit the keeping of their Souls unto God. At Death you it is that, when Mens Bodies are destroyed, and so the Season, when their Souls to be separated therefrom, should be committed to Gods Care; as our Darling (as our Translation) or lovely Soul, when separate (as others) as Christ in David speaks, Psalms 22. And Peter had in his Eye Christs Example, and Pointed them thereunto, who at his Death committed his separate Soul or Spirit into the Hands of God, Luke 23. 46. And the Word commit is one and the same in both these Places: Only there is this Difference, that whereas Christ says, Father I commit, Peter substitutes another Title of Gods (there being more than one Relation moving

Psalms 22. See
 Ainsw.

παρατίθηται.

ving

ving God, and strengthening our Faith to this) even of faithful Creator. And I understand not the first Creation only or chiefly here meant by Peter; but the second Creation chiefly (which brings into Repute and Acceptation with God the first again together with its own) and so God is thereupon engaged to be faithful in his Care and Provision for such Souls, according to his Promises: And faithfulness doth always respect and refer unto Promises; and my Reason why thus I understand it, is, because I find Gods Faithfulness still annexed unto his Calling of us, that is, Converting us, which is all one with this new Creation: Faithful is he that hath called you, that is, made you new Creatures, 1 Cor. 1. 9. 1 Thes. 5. 24. And I find that David also urges it upon God as a Motive, as in other Psalms. So Psalms 138. 8. Forsake not the Works of thine Hands, that is, this double Workmanship of thine of the first; and then superadded unto that, of the Second Creation, which he urgeth thereby to move him to Perfect the Work begun, and to be merciful unto him for ever, in the former Part of that Verse.

3. God professeth himself the FATHER of SPIRITS; which relation, though it speaks his being the Creator of them, at the first, yet hath something more of Bowels in it: It says withal something further, when it falls out that such Spirits as he is a Father unto by the first Creation, are also the Subjects of His Eternal Love, by Grace and Election unto the Adoption of Children, as Eph. 1. 3, 4, 5. See the Words. Which Love, having accordingly taken hold of their Souls by a Work of Grace wrought upon them in this Life, thereby owning them as his, in this Case, that God that is a Father of their Spirits by the Law of the first Creation, is in a more transcendent Manner become the Father of the same Spirit by Grace, and the second Creation superadded: Hence it falls out, in as parallel way, that (as was said) such Souls were become [Spirit] upon a double Account, that is Spirits for the Substance of their Being, and again Spirit, by being Born again of the [Spirit] so answerably it is, that God stands in relation unto them as a Father of their Spirits upon the like double respect. And this is equitable upon a very great Account; for his relation of Father is more eminent to his Grace by Election, and then again by the Grace of his second Creation, then it could be any way supposed to be by the first Creation. And therefore is set and pitch'd in like singularity and eminency upon the same Object, that is their Spirits. And hence it may well, yea must be supposed and acknowledged, That if God did make such a darling of the Soul, such an Account of it by Creation, as to entitle himself so specially the Father thereof, then certainly this Love of Grace much more hath in like Equipage taken up the same gracious special Relation in its kind of Father thereunto: Not only because Nature shall never be found to exceed Grace in its Favours; but that indeed the Motives are far greater, that God should extend the like and greater Priviledges where he meant to Love by Election and Choice, then he did where he loved only by a due and meet Law of Creation: So that when God shall profess himself a Father to their Spirits, speaking to such as are his Elect, he strongly insinuateth thereby, That he is by Grace likewise the Father of their Spirits in a peculiar Manner. And truly that Speech of our Saviour at his Death confirms it, Father into thy Hands I commit my Spirit: It was not barely as a Father of his Spirit by Creation (as you all know) but by Everlasting Love, and so in that respect also in a peculiar Manner the Father of his Spirit; and therefore as to a Father he commends his separate Spirit unto him. And this he did, although he was to rise again in less then Three whole Days space.

Now we read Heb. 12. 12. The Apostle to hold forth this very relation of Gods being a Father of Spirits, with this Promise thereunto annexed, That they should live: Which relation of Father, &c. although it be their explicitly spoken in respect of their first Creation (which is common unto the Saints with others) yet being uttered of and unto Men in the State of Grace (as those were supposed, whom he there exhorteth, and that to move them to be Subject unto him as such; with Promise, that they should live) it evidently dently respecteth not merely the Relation of Father in respect of what was past the Act of Creating them, but it looketh to the Future, That they depended upon him (as Children do upon Fathers for their Future Livelihood, so these) for to Live in him, and with him as a Father to their Spirits by Grace. For I take hold of that Word [and Live] this Life is well interpreted by ver. 14. They shall see God, that is, be glorified, and so I conclude all thus, that if he would have them be subject unto God in Holiness, as upon that Relation, as unto the Father of Spirits, with this Promise, That they should Live; then surely one special aim of the Promise is answerable, and hath this Eye, That God as a Father of their Spirits will therefore take Care of their Spirits singly, and so when separate, that they shall Live. And that accordingly he will give Demonstration of this special Relation Born to their Spirits (when the Occasion shall be) considered apart in bestowing this Life on them: And truly when its more proper for him to shew himself a Father, then when their Souls after their Subjection to him in Holiness here accomplished, and when that as naked Spirits they come to stand in need, and stand afore him in his Presence, being now turned out of House and Home, and quite Cashired out of this World, and come stript and naked of all but Holiness unto their Father (for it is said, They return to God that gave them) who proves to be their Father by Grace. And doubt not of it, but he will certainly then own them, and give them a Fathers Blessing, and not reject them as if they were but Bastards and no Children (as that Chapter to the Hebrews speaks) but as Spirits, who as Sons that have served him, and been Subject to him.

Chap. XII.

Add to this, Fourthly, God his being our God, which is more home to the Demonstration of this Point then all the former. The Text says, He that wrought us for this, is God. I add, he is your God. And this alone, if we will take the Scriptures Verdict, will carry it, and lo, as he is stiled, The Father of Spirits in common, and yet withal a Father of their Spirits out of special Love: So in like Manner, he is stiled both, The God of the Spirits of all Flesh, (that is, of Man, Job 12. 20.) thus in Common; and also to his Elect, I am your God by Grace. And these two Relations, God and Father, are commensurate, and exactly paralel, whether they be applied unto all Men Numb. 16. 22. Common, or to the Elect in special, he is termed, The God of the Spirits, and likewise, The Father of the Spirits of all Men: So in common, answerably he is Your God, and Your Father by special Grace to his Elect; both which in this latter respect you find yoked Hand in Hand, John 20. 17. Look how far he is a God of the one, so far a Father also extendeth in the other: And look how far that he is our God, so far reacheth also that he is our Father. If therefore the God of our Spirits to provide for them, because he is our God, then answerably the Father of our Spirits in the like peculiarness, because our Father. And so the Proof of this Fourth Particular will add further Strength and Confirmation to that we presented in the former.

Now that his being our God (which is the Substance of the Covenant of Grace) doth engage him to provide Glory for separate Souls, That one Instance of Abraham (The Father of the faithful, and we all his Sons personated in him) is a sufficient Evidence, God did profess himself, The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and unto Abraham, Gen. 15. 1. personally, I am thy abundant Reward, (which respected the Life to come) and his Friend, 2 Chron. 20. 7.

Now the Scriptures of the New Testament do improve this Relation of Gods unto us, unto Two Inferences drawn from Abrahams Instance: Whereof the one is the Point afore us.

The first is Christs Inference from thence, That therefore Abrahams Soul lives, and Abraham both Soul and Body shall rise again, For God is not the God of the Dead, but of the Living, Mat. 22. 31. Thus Christ.

2. Paul's Collection from the same Promise is, that God had provided in the mean Time for Abraham's Soul afore the Resurrection, a City, and an House therein for him. Thus Heb. 11. 16. But now they desire a better Country, that is, an Heavenly: Wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God,
 for

for he hath prepared for them a City. To give Light to this, Paul had represented the Story and Case of Abraham, and the rest of the Patriarchs, in the Verses afore, to have been this; That God had indeed promised the Land of Canaan to him and them, ver. 8, 9. whereupon, ver. 13. it is said, That these all Died in Faith, not having received the Promises, being Strangers in the Land; yea, not having a Foot of Land in the Land of Promise, as Stephen speaks, Acts 7. 5, 6, 7. And also Paul, in the 9th Verse of this Heb. 11. Now then, when they Died, what was it their Faith expected in stead thereof? The 10th Verse tells us, He looked for a City whose maker and builder is God. From which compared, observe, That when he Died, his Faith was thus pitch'd to look for this City, in stead of that Land of Canaan promised. This was the Expectation of their Faith on their Part. Well, but how doth it appear, that this flow'd from Gods having professed himself to be the God of Abraham, &c. his Reward, and his Friend? You have this clear in the 16th Verse, where you have the whole summ'd up as the Conclusion of the Story, and as the Proof and Ground hereof; but now they desire a better Country, that is, an Heavenly: There is their Faith and Expectation when they should come to Die. Then it follows, Wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God, for he hath prepared for them a City; which is spoken in full Answer to that their Expectation at their Deaths, to shew, that God in professing himself to be their God, he had thereby engaged himself according to his own intent in that Promise, to make this Provision for them at their Deaths: The Words are express, Wherefore God is not ashamed; what should this mean in this Coherence, but that his declaring himself to be their God did import and carry this with it, That he had provided this Estate for them at their Death, even an Heavenly; and, that otherwise (as the Apostle glosseth upon it) he had not come up unto the amplitude of, nor filled full this Covenanted Engagement and Profession of HIS BEING THEIR GOD. Will you have it in plain English, (as we speak) if he had not made this Provision for their souls, he would have been ashamed to have been called their God: Thus deeply doth this oblige him, That he is our God and Father, which is the Point in Hand.

And judge of this in the Light of all that Reason we have hitherto carried along; and again, let this Inference of the Apostle mutually serve to confirm us in all that Reason. For poor Abraham to be driven out of his own Country by God, who called him to his Foot, and said no more, but as a Master to his Servant, Take your Cloak, and follow me (who must presently, without more ado, trig and Foot it after his Master) as Isa. 41. 2. and then to live a Stranger in the Land of Promise upon the Faith, that God would be his God: Which Faith in him was also to cease when he came to Die. If this God in this Case should not have taken Care to Answer his Faith in some greater way, in stead of the Possession of Canaan; and that after, upon his being turned out of that Country too, which he sojourned in during this Life, if God had not provided another House, or Country, or City for his Soul, that was to live, to bring it into, when it should be deprived of all in this World; The Apostle tells us, God (in this Case) would have been ashamed to have been called his God: Which now, having provided so abundantly for him upon Dying, there is superabundant Cause to say, God is not ashamed; for that is a diminutive, implying, That he infinitely exceedeth that their Expectation could be supposed to be.

Let us but view the force of this Inference of the Apostles (and so of all the reasonings hitherto read) But according to Man, or what is found amongst Men, (and God will be sure infinitely to surpass Men in his Ways of Favour.) Take an ordinary Friend, if his Friend be turn'd out of House and Home, Plundred, Banished, driven out of all, as the Steward in that Parable, Luke 16. was, and comes to his Friend at Midnight, as in that other Parable, Luke 11. 5, 6. Will not his Friends entertain him into their Houses; as ver. 9. of Luke 16. yea, and rise at Midnight to do it, as ver. 5, 6. in that Parable of Luke 11. shall Profession of Friendship engage and oblige Men to do this, and shall shall not Gods professing himself to be our God, Father, and Friend, engage his Heart much more? Nay, will he not so entertain them, as shall exceed all wonderment? What need I say more than this? Wherefore He is not ashamed to be called their God: He will therefore give you an Entertainment that shall be worthy of his being your God.

Chap. XII.

Heb. 11. 6.

Gen. 15. 1.

The Fifth and Last Consideration is, That these separate Souls having done and finished all their Work, that in order to Glory God hath appointed them for ever to do, they now at Death appear afore him as a JUDGE AND REWARDER. And that is the Fifth Relation moving God to bestow at this Season such a Glory on them. How that then the Soul returns to God, you have heard again and again out of Eccl. 12. 7. and that it is upon the Account of his being the Judge thereof at the End of their Work in this Life. The Chaldee Paraphrase hath long since glossed upon it, It returns to God, that it may stand in Judgment afore him. In this Life it came unto God by Faith, as the Apostle speaks, believing that God is, and that he is a Rewarder of them that diligently seek him; and now at the end of its Faith it comes unto God for the Reward of its Faith, as some Interpret that 1 Pet. 1. 9. (which we so largely have insisted on.) This is certain, That in that Promise to Abraham, To be his God, he intended and included, his being to him an exceeding great Reward. And so we come to Connect this Fifth Head with the fore-going. And therefore if the being his God, moved him to prepare that City against his Death (as hath been said) Then surely his being his Reward, doth also then take Place. I shall not omit it, because it falls in the next Chapter, Heb. 12. 23. That in that stupendious Assembly of Heaven, God the Judge of all is mentioned between the Church of the First-born which are written in Heaven; this afore: And the Spirits of justified Men made perfect; this after it: For there are none of these First-born, or the Spirits of just Men do come to sit down there, but they pass the Award of this Judge first, for they sit down by him; and surely, having done all their Work in the Time of that Day is allotted to each Man to work in, it is a righteous Thing with God to give them a Reward in the Evening of this Day, (which is Christs Time set for rewarding, and it is the Twelfth and Last Hour succeeding the Eleventh of the Day, Mat. 20. 6, & 9. compared) which is when the Night of Death comes. Now there is a Law given by God, that the Wages to a Man hired should be given him (by him that set him a-work) in his Day, that is, says the Septuagint, the very same Day, so as his Work, or the Wages of his Work, Abide not with thee all the Night until the Morning, says God, Deut. 24. 15. Did God take care for Hirelings, when their Work was done not to stay any space of Time, no not a Night, and doth he not fulfil this himself unto his Sons that serve him? Surely Yes: He defers not, nor puts them off to the Morning of the Resurrection, as the Psalmist elegantly calls it, Psalms 17. last. It abides not with him all that dark and lonesome Night, or space after Death, in which their Bodies rest in the Grave, which is termed Mans long home: And, The Days of Darknes are many (says Solomon) no; he Rewards them in the Evening of the Day, besides what he will add to it in the Morning. It is observeable, that Rev. 6. 9, 10. concerning the separate Souls slain for Christ, that whilst they cry for Justice on their Enemies only, And when he had opened the fifth Seal, I saw under the Altar the Souls of them that were slain for the Word of God, and for the Testimony which they held. And they cried with a loud Voice, saying, How long, O Lord, Holy and True, dost thou not judge and avenge our Blood on them that dwell on the Earth? That they had white Robes given them to quiet them in the meantime; Ver. 11. And white Robes were given unto every one of them, and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little Season; till they heard that Vengeance also was executed on that Roman Empire for their Blood-shed. And thus to deal is a righteous Thing with God.

See Burgenfis, Maldonat. &c. Lev. 19. 13.

Deut. 24. 15.

Eccles. 12. 5.

Thus you have seen the Point confirmed from all sorts of Relations that God bears unto us, by congruous Reasons, that so it becometh God, the great God to do — He that hath wrought us for this Thing, is God. And so much for this first Branch of this second Doctrine.

2. The Second Branch of it is this, That there is a glorious Contrivement and Workmanship carried on in this Dispensation of his, like unto the great God indeed. This carries on this Point yet higher. For, it is not only an Ordination becoming God, (upon the Respects mentioned) but there is an Artifice, a Workmanship in it, such as he useth to shew in his Works of Wonder, even in this, That he should work upon Mens Souls in this Life, and then bring them into a Glory, he had in the mean space been a working also for those their Souls. This is the great God indeed.

Chap. XII.

When God secretly bestows Cost and Curiosity in preparing Matters for such or such an end; and then again as hiddenly hath laid out a greater Art, Skill and Workmanship upon that End it self; and then hath exactly suited and matched the one to the other: When all comes to be finish'd, and both wrought and brought together, then will an Infinite surpassing Glory arise unto God out of all, which deserveth to have this Notoriety (that is here) put upon it, He that hath wrought this for that, is God: And lo, this is found here, which is demonstrated, if we view,

1. Each of these Workmanships singly and apart.

2. Jointly, as designed and fitted each to the other.

1. Each singly: If there were no such Ordination of the one for the other, yet so considered, they deserve to have, each, an [He that hath wrought this, is God] to be written under it.

1. For his Artifice, in working us in this Life. Learned Cameron hath but one Note upon this whole Fifth Chapter, and it falls to be upon this very Word [Who hath wrought] and it is this: This Word (says he) as used by the Septuagint, signifies Rem expolire rudem & informem, To polish a Thing that is Rude, and without Fashion: For which he gives Instance out of Exod. 35. 33. in Bezaleels Work (whom, as the 31, 32, Verses speak of him, God had filled with his Spirit in all Wisdom, in all Workmanship, to devise cunning-work.) And again, the same Word is used of the Temple-work (that other was for Moses Tabernacle) 1 Kings 6. 36. by Solomon, which how transcendent a structure it was, you have all read or heard. An infinitely surpassing Art then hath the Spirit himself (who is the immediate Worker in this) shewn in the framing, and hewing, and curiously Carving and Engraving those living Stones, that grow up into a Temple unto God, 1 Pet. 2. 5. especially considering the utter remoteness, indisposedness, yea crookedness and perverseness in the Matter wrought upon (our Souls, fill'd with the contrary Form and Workmanship of Satan) Ye are his Workmanship, says the Apostle, Eph. 2. 10. And truly, if we could enlarge upon all the varieties of Dealings God useth to each Soul to work it, the several sorts of gracious Dispositions he impresseth and carveth upon it; the manifold Actings of every Soul drawn forth by him, you may take a view of some in the very next Chapter to that of my Text, 2 Cor. 6. from the 4. ver. In much Patience, in Afflictions, in Necessities, in Distresses. Ver. 5. In Stripes, in Imprisonments, in Tumults, in Labours, in Watchings, in Fastings. Ver. 6. By Pureness, by Knowledge, by Long-suffering, by Kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by Love unfeigned. Ver. 7. By the Word of Truth, by the Power of God, by the Armour of Righteousness, on the right Hand, and on the Left. Ver. 8. By Honour and Dishonour, by evil Report and good Report: As Deceivers, and yet true. Ver. 9. As unknown, and yet well known: As dying, and behold, we live: As chastened, and not killed: Ver. 10. As sorrowful, yet alway rejoicing. As Poor, yet making many Rich: As having nothing, and yet possessing all Things. Ver. 11. O ye Corinthians, our Mouth is open unto you, our Heart is enlarged. What a glorious Embroidery upon the Soul of a poor Believer will in all these Things appear, when finished! Psalms 45. 13, 14. The Kings Daughter is all glorious within, her Cloathing is of wrought Gold: She shall be brought unto the King in Raiment of Needle-Work.

In his Myrothecium.

ὁ ὁ κατασκευασ-
μενός.

2. For his Art and Workmanship bestowed in the Glory of the Soul in the other World; if any Work (but Christ, God-man) be his Master-piece, it is the framing of that House, and Building spoken of ver. 1. of this Chapter;

We

Chap. XII.

We have a Building of God, a House not made with Hands : And the 11 of the Hebrews 10. exprelly useth two Artificial Words, τεχνίτης the Artificer in it, and δημιουργός the Artificer in it, and the Builder of it, that is, who hath shewn his Art and Skill in Building of it. So then in each his Workmanship appears. I do but add this towards the Confirmation of the main Point in Hand.

Hath the great God perfected both Works upon the Soul, as much as he means to Work in Heaven? Also prepared a Building for it? And will he then (think we) let both lie empty? Of the one, says Heb. 11. 16. [He hath prepared for them a City] of the soul, in like Manner [He hath wrought us for this self-same Thing] Will God (think we) leave this his House to stand desolate, when he hath been at such Cost in both? Doth any Man or Landlord build or repair an House, and then let it lie empty, when he hath a Tenant fit for it? God is said not to be a foolish Builder in respect to perfecting; and he is much less a careless Builder, to neglect to take his Tenants into it, when both are ready and fitted each for other. This for the first, viz. the Consideration of each singly.

Let us consider them next Jointly, that is, as they are in such a manner wrought apart, so as to suit and match one the other, when brought together in that manner, as it must be said of them. [For this Thing hath God wrought us] Yea, and therein it is he hath appeared to be the great God.

For therein, even to wonderment, doth the Glory of God in his Works appear, and that he is wise in Counsel, and wonderful in Working, when he hath hiddenly contrived one Thing for another, when as each are in themselves, and apart glorious. It is said by David of himself (and it is true of all Men in their Measure) Psalm 139. 15. I was made in secret, and curiously wrought in the lowest Parts of the Earth; that is, in my Mothers Womb, as the Context shews; which are termed the Lower Parts of the Earth, as when Christ is said, Eph. 4. To have descended into the lower Parts of the Earth; that is, to be conceived in the Womb of a Virgin; when a Child is born, a lump of Flesh animated with a Soul comes forth curiously wrought, &c. but wrought, for what? In Davids Person (in which this was spoken) it was for a Kingdom, the supreamest Condition of Enjoyments in this World. But in every other Man (that is Born) it is, that he was curiously wrought, in a fitness and capacity to all Things that are in this World, made and prepared exactly for it, long afore it came into the World; you may see it in Adam (our first Pattern) more lively. God was busie for Six Days in making this World, the Angels all that while stood wondring with themselves, to what end, or for whom all this was prepared. At the end of the Sixth Day, they saw God to set down into the World this little Thing called Man; and then they ceased their wonderment; for they saw all this World (prepared aforehand) set in Mans Heart, and all in Man curiously wrought and fitted for all Things made in this World, richly to enjoy, as 1 Tim. 6. 17. We may apply that in the Text to this it appeared, That he that hath Man for this self-same Thing is God; both Works of wonder apart, and yet as fitted to each other: All wonderment exceeding — I might much more enlarge upon the suiting of Christ the Head and Husband, and the Church his Body and Wife, wrought and growing up to him in all Ages, both apart, secretly and hiddenly prepared, and each so glorious in themselves, and yet put together. Let us refer our Admiration hereat until the latter Day. Just thus it is in fitting the Soul for that Glory: And again, that Glory in Heaven for that Soul: God works the one for the other apart. — The very similitude in the former Verses do import so much; he stileth Glory in Heaven a being Cloathed upon, and Holiness here he compares to an Under-garment, which that of Glory is to be put over, or upon: There was never a curious Artist in making Garments that ever took measure of the Proportions of an upper and under Garment, to fit the one to the other, as God hath in proportioning his work upon us here, and his Preparation of Glory for each of us in the World to come: He hath took exact measure, and his Law is (that designed his own workings on both Hands afore-hand) that every Man shall receive his own Reward according to his own Labour, 1 Cor. 3. 8.

(that

Chap. XII.

Now the Artifice of God in both these lies in this, That each are hiddenly contrived apart, and yet so gloriously matcht as wrought one for the other; which is an Argument as of two Artificers, the one in the East Indies, the other in the West; should the one make the Case, the other make the Watch, unknown each to other, and both Workmanships of the highest curiosity in their Kind, and when both brought together they exquisitely fit the one the other.

And what? Have I been telling you all this while an artificial pleasant Story? Doth not this Scripture tell the very same? For a Close, Do but now at last take a view and prospect of our Apostles whole Discourse. The Round and Cicle whereof begun at ver. 16. of Chap. 4. and endeth with my Text; and do you not find it speak (to use the Texts Language) the very self-same Thing.

1. He tells us there of an inward Man renewed, whilst the outward is a perishing, to the end it may live and subsist alone, when the Body is wholly dissolved; (there he laies his Foundation.) And is not this all one with what the Text says? God works us (these Souls) Day by Day: Even as the Child is curiously wrought in the Womb, to subsist of it self alone in this World, so this inward Man in that other.

2. He then immediately subjoins ver. 17. that all Afflictions (which are nothing else but the Perishings of this outward Man) as also all Things and Dispensations else that do befall us, they are secretly at Work too, all that while; to set to Work by God (who works the inner Man daily unto such a Measure of Grace) and these to work, and by his Ordination procure a proportionable weight (for God works all these Things in weight and measure) our light Affliction works for us a far more exceeding and eternal Weight of Glory — as shall in a comely and in the exactest Manner answer and suit that curious workmanship on the inward Man; and it is observable that the same Word for (working) is used in that Verse, that is used in my Text: But yet these are but outwardly a work, as inferiour Artificers or Instruments: Therefore,

3. He further declares, 1. verse of this Chapter, That God himself is at work about this Glory, who as the Master-workman, that hath the Draught and Platform of all afore him, drawn by his own designing, he viewing the inward Work on us, the outward Work of Means and Dispensations; and knows afore-hand what Degree of Holiness to bring us ultimately unto, he according unto these, as Patterns, is a framing a Building for us in Heaven, exactly suited to the working of all the other; which building he prepares and makes ready for this inner Man to entertain it, when the Body is Dissolved: If our earthly House were dissolved, we have a Building of God, an House not made with Hands, of either Men or Means, or of our own Graces; but of God. But every Soul hath a State of Glory proportioned to all these, 1 Pet. 1. ready built for it against this Time; even as Statues in Stone are framed and carved, to be set up in such a curious Arch framed for them by the Builder. Now then,

4. Add but the Words of my Text, which is the Close of this his Discourse: And it opens all the Scene, He that wrought us for the self-same Thing is GOD. The Apostles Conclusion answers his beginning; he began in ver. 16. Chap. 4. And the Circle ends in my Text. And this is God, who is wise in working and wonderful in Counsel.

Observ. III. That it is the Interest and Engagement of all Three Persons to see to it, that a righteous separate Soul be brought to Glory at Dissolution.

And this carries it yet higher, even to the highest, and gives the most superabundant Security and Assurance of this Thing that can be given and superadds above all the former. But you will ask me, How I fetch this out of my Text? Thus:

1. You

Chap. XII.

1. You see here are Two Persons expressly named, God [the Father] namely, and the Spirit. This is a Rule, that where the Name God, and then some besides other of the Two Persons, Christ or the Spirit, are mentioned together, as distinct; there God is put personally (not essentially only) to express the Father: Now here the Spirit or Holy Ghost is mentioned distinct from God; for it is said, that this God hath given the Spirit; which also Christ so often speaketh of the Father, as I need not insist on it.

2. It is another Rule, That in any Scripture where Two Persons are mentioned, as concurring in any Thing, or Matter; there the other Third Person also must be understood to have his special share therein also; as when he wisheth Grace and Peace from God the Father, and from Jesus Christ; 'Tis certain, the Holy Ghost is as specially understood; as indeed we find him in that Apostolical Blessing, as distinctly spoken of as the Father or Christ. Thus it must be here, Christ must be taken in, who also in John is so often said to give the Spirit, when the Father gives him, as it is said here he hath, For this same Thing.

But 3. You have even Christ also not far off interested in this self-same Thing in the next Verse, and ver. 8. Absence from the Lord, whilst in the Body, ver. 6. and Presence with the Lord, when separate from the Body, ver. 8. This Lord is Christ; the Phrase of the New Testament concerning Christ runs in this Stile, To be with Christ, This Day with me — To be where I am, and see my Glory: So Christ. To be with Christ is best of all, and we shall be ever with the Lord. So Paul.

USE I. Doth God work Us for this Thing ere he brings us to it? What hath God wrought hitherto upon Thee or Thee, in order to this end? 'Tis a blunt Question, but the Text puts it in my Mouth: How many Souls are there living in the Profession of Christianity, that know not what this means, to have a work wrought on them (a-new upon them) over and above what moral Honesty (which was Nature's Portion) and the common Profession of Christianity adds thereunto, by Custom and meer Education. An honest Turk professing also and observing the Principles of his Religion, upon the Ground of his Education only (and a Religion every Man must have) will as soon go to Heaven as Thou; for all thy Religion is founded but upon the like Foundation that his is. I tell thee, that Christian Religion is not a Thing so cheap; nor Salvation by Christ at so low a Rate. Thou must have a work upon thy Soul suited unto all the Truths, thus professed in the Power and Efficacy of them. They must enter thy Soul by a spiritual Faith and Frame, and mold it anew to a Likeness to them. Carry home therefore the Caveat our Apostle hath put in ver. 3. If so be that being cloathed, we be not found naked of Grace and Holiness wrought, and Christ's Righteousness by spiritual efficacious Faith applied, (Faith in earnest) bowing the Soul to be obedient unto Christ, as heartily and as honestly, as it expects Salvation by Christ, as without which thou wilt never be saved. This is our Religion; and when at Death thy Soul (thy poor lonesome Soul) being stript of all Things in this World; even the Body and all, shall come afore the great God and Jesus Christ, what will the enquiry be? as Mat. 22. 11. When the King came in to see the Guests, he saw a Man had not the Wedding-Garment; he spied him out: And the Man was speechless, ver. 12. Take him and bind him, (says he) and cast him into utter Darkness, ver. 13. The other, that were Cloathed, were admitted unto the Marriage; and, (as the Psalmist, the Words of which are here alluded unto) She was brought unto the King (the very Title which in both these Places is given to Christ: See ver. 11.) in Raiment of Needle-Work, and this cloathing is of God's working; and so my Text falls in with both: There is no Admission unto Christ without it — This is the first Use.

USE II. Hath God begun to Work this good Work in thee? He will perfect it: Whereof the Text gives this Assurance, that he hath wrought it for this Thing, that is, for this End, and God will not lose his End: Besides, he says he hath given Earnest.

USE III. Thou Saint, be content to Live, for whilst thou livest, thou art under Gods working, in order unto Glory. Value Life; 'tis a Season of being wrought upon: And to be sure, thou shalt live no longer, than whilst God is some way or other a working this. What an Advantage is it, that all thy Sins, occasioned by living long, shall surely be forgiven, and nothing of thy score be uncut off for thee, but all the Righteousness that is wrought upon thee, and wrought by thee, (and therefore wrought by thee, because upon thee; for, being wrought upon, we work, and all is rather, God hath wrought us, than that we have wrought) All thy Righteousness (I say) shall remain for ever. All the Time thou remainest in this Life, thy Soul is ripening, or maturing for Glory.

How great a Comfort is that? In explicating the Doctrinal Part, I gave Instance of a Child in the Womb curiously wrought all that Time, in order to its living and subsisting afterwards in this World. 'Tis a dark Place, the Womb which the Child is wrought in; and it lives there in a stifled Condition, it cannot Breath, it takes Nourishment but at the Navel, (a way invented and prepared of God meerly for that Season) it lies boiling, tossing and tumbling, and sleeping away the most of its Time, and gives now and then a faint stirring, to shew it is still alive; and it is a Life scarce worth the Name of Life: Well, but all this is a being wrought and fitted to live another, freer, and braver Life in this World. And this is your present Case, your Life is hid, it is to come; all that you find in this World, is but [that God hath wrought you for the self-like Thing] And if this Child we spake of should be forced out of the Womb afore the due Time, it would have the more imperfect Life in this World: So here, if you could suppose a Saint should die afore the full Birth of his Souls being wrought on — Therefore be content to wait Gods leisure, until your Change shall come.

USE IV. No Matter what befalls thee, so it works towards this End; let whatever be, so thou findest God to go on with this Design, that he Works upon thy Soul; be it upward, in Communion with himself, or downward, in disowning thy self, thy Vileness and Corruptions, so it works. Thou hast Afflictions that break thy Heart (as Reproach broke Christs Heart, says the Psalmist in his Name) no Matter, so they work upon thy Soul. Know then, that they are set awork by the Hand that sent them, to Work a far exceeding weight of Glory for thee: If by any means, (says Paul) no Matter what, so the Work go on. A Carver comes with his Chissels, and cuts off this Piece, and cuts into that Part of the Stone: No Matter; a stately Statue bearing the Image of some Person of Honour is to be set up for Perpetuity, and is accordingly a framing: So though God carves his Image out of thy Flesh, no Matter. Comfort thy self, and think not much at any Condition, whilst (as Paul says) it turns to thy Salvation. Election sent thee not into this World to have a great Name (perhaps God will load it) nor to be Rich, or to have Power, but to work thee for this self-same Thing; and if thou seest that Plough a going (though it makes deep furrows on thy back, yea Heart) yet so, that this Seed be sown therein, rejoice, For thou shalt bring thy Sheafs with thee. For my self, so that I find Election pursuing its Design, of making me Holy, and Blessing me with spiritual Blessings in heavenly Places (as Ephes. 1. 4.) I care not (I would not care) what befalls me in this World.

C H A P. XIII.

Whether the State of Glory, into which separate Souls enter after Death, and in which they Live until the Resurrection, be not different from that, which they shall possess after that glorious Day, and in what the Difference consists.

BEfore I can set forth any positive Particulars of their Blessedness, I find it is necessary to Discuss this Question, Whether there be not Two several States of Glory after this Life.

1. Of Souls separate differing from that, which is,
2. After the Day of Judgment.

Towards the Resolution of this

1. I give this Explanation, that I intend not this Difference simply of Degrees of Glory, but of something further, although I confess I know not what Term to express it by, as whether I should call them several removes from Glory to Glory, or several Conditions of Glory rather than States. However I think there is more than a Difference simply of Degrees for this Reason; Because differing Degrees of Glory in the several Persons that are glorified do Accompany each of these States (if so I may call them.) As for Example, one Degree of Glory is given to Paul, another to Apollos, or to any one is given to Ordinary, another to more eminent Saints; Such Degrees of Glory are supposed to Accompany them with a various Difference, according to their Works. The Souls of Men that Die in the Lord, have in their separate Condition a Variety of Degrees of Glory among them, according to their Works: For of them it is said, (Rev. 14.) That their Works do follow them, which is all one as to say (as of the last Reward of Judgment it is said) they have a Blessedness proportionable to what that Condition will bear and suite to, or according to their Works. For to rest from their Labours, is equal and alike to All, but of the positive Reward it is said, That their Works follow them (as the measure of Gods Dispensation) and follow them to procure an answerable and suitable Reward unto that Condition, which such Souls are then in. This Difference therefore of Degrees runs along through all, from First to Last unto Eternity: But differing Conditions, or differing States of Glory is another Thing, and of that is the Query to be understood.

The Propositions therefore which I assert are these,

- I. That there are several States after the Separation of the Soul, or after Death, which the Souls of Saints do run through.
- II. That they attain not their fulness of Glory, for all sorts of Glory, till after the Day of Judgment.

It is evident from the Instance or Example of Christ himself our Pattern and Fore-runner in all; (for that Rule which Christ utters upon the Point of Persecution is General, and will hold true here.) That the Servant is not above his Master, who purchased all that the Servant is to enjoy. Now 'tis evident, that Christ himself as to his Soul did not attain a Glory during its separate Estate, in any Proportion like unto that he had when risen again; nor such as he had after he Ascended, and was received up to Glory, as Paul's Speech is, 1 Tim. 3. 16. Nay, his Soul could not have attained it, for although

although all that which his Soul was to suffer, was, as Himself said, It is finished (and unto the Consummation of the Sufferings of his Soul doth that Speech refer) yet his whole Person, yea, and his Soul remained still under a State of Humiliation; because his Body, and in Respect thereof his Person had not yet satisfied for the utmost Farthing, which remained still to be Paid, and therefore it had been improper for his Soul to have entred into a Fulness of Glory, whilst that Part of the Man Jesus, viz. his Body, the Copartner of that Soul; yea, of that Person was under that first Curse, which was, To Dust thou shalt return: His Soul also was in its Widowhood or Separation, and thereby as yet so far Partaker of that first Curse, viz. of being severed from the Body, which was a Part of the Curse, and is a forlorn Estate of it self, in Respect to the Primitive Ordination of God at the first Creation of Man.

Yea, Christ when ascended had not his full Glory, neither hath it, until that great Day of the Resurrection; for he is in Expectation of his Glory, being more compleated in the entire Conquest of all his Enemies, Heb. 10. 13. Likewise till then He wants his Body, which is the Church, which is his Fulness (Eph. 1. 23.) and therefore doth come then to be admired in all his Saints (2 Thess. 1. 10.) When he shall come to be glorified in his Saints, and admired in all them that believe. Only this Priviledge indeed falls on his Part, as He is Lord, and the first Fruits of all, that as He rose on the Third Day to the End he might not see Corruption; so being ordained our Forerunner (Heb. 4.) and to prepare a Place for Us, He therefore was first in the mean while to govern the World, and to enter into Glory long afore us; He yet expecting our Accomplishment, and we being Expectants of that full Glory, He in the mean Time enjoys. Hence therefore, it may well become Us, and it may well be entertained by Us poor Creatures, as to follow our Lord wherefoever He goes, so to pass through whatever Conditions he run through; and that not only, whilst our Souls are Widows to that other Part of Manhood, according to Nature (and it is becoming, that the Soul without it should not be perfect) but withal in Respect of that (Curse, I will not call it now, but) Sentence of Death pronounced against Us all in Adam, which arrested the Soul when it was first separated from the Body, and is continued during its separate Condition. The Soul therefore cannot be supposed in this Estate, to have that full Enfeoffment unto Glory, whilst the other half of Man, and it self too, remains under such a Sentence.

Hence the Stream of the New Testament Runs and Centers in the great Day, as carrying away the Glory from all afore it; and also, as being that Day for the Misery of the Wicked, as if there were none else till then. All is every where almost referred unto that Day, both for Punishment to the Wicked, and Reward to the Godly. The Bad are but as kept in Prison, (1 Pet. 3. 19.) though with some Torment (Luke 16.) but the great Punishment is to follow afer the Resurrection and Judgment, which is called therefore, The Resurrection of Damnation, John 5. 29. I will name but one Scripture common to both, 2 Thess. 1. 7, 8, 9. And to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from Heaven with his mighty Angels. In flaming Fire, taking Vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall be punished with Everlasting Destruction from the Presence of the Lord, and from the Glory of his Power. Infomuch as it was the Occasion to the Fathers, almost generally to speak so low Things of this Interim Condition, and is an Occasion unto others, either wholly to deny any Glory to Souls separate, or greatly to diminish from it with Respect to the generality of the Saints departed, as the Papists and others do. And it is certain, that the Glory of the Last Day will comparatively rise to be so great, as this of the Soul separate hath no Glory in Comparison of it. And the Principles of our common Christianity (which are related in Scripture concerning this Point) afford this responsible Ground for it, harmonious to Reason.

1. For then, and not till then, Christ hath all his Saints about him, and himself (as was said) is compleat every way.

Chap. XIII.

2. Then, and not till then it is, that the Soul and Body are united together again, for Christ redeemed the Body as well as the Soul: And if the Fathers were not Perfect without us (Heb. 11. 40.) then by the same Reason is not the Soul Perfect without the Body. Gods charge to Christ was, as to loose none of his Number, so to loose εὐδὲν nothing of them, and therefore not only to entertain their Souls, but also to raise their Bodies. John 6. 39. And this is the Fathers will, which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me; I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the Last Day. God hath the Soul of Abraham with him, but still he reckons he hath not Abraham, that is, the whole of him until the Resurrection; for from thence Christ argues, that Abraham must rise, because God is called Abraham's God, Mat. 22. 32.

3. At the latter Day, and not till then, there comes to be a full Assembly of all Saints, 2 Theff. 1. 10. When he shall come to be glorified in all them that believe. He shall then have all about him, and his Body compleat; and till then, before that Time it will still be said as in another Case, there are Brethren not yet fulfilled. A general Assembly there falls not out until then, and if it was reasonable to quiet the separate Souls to stay till the rest of their Brethren should be killed, then it is as reasonable to quiet them to stay out their full Glory, till all of the Saints (whether to be killed, or not) are fulfilled, or their Number accomplisht, πληρώσονται, That so (as Christ says) All may rejoice together, John 4. 36.

4. There is the Solemnity, the Pomp of Christ's entrance, when (as the Apostle to the Hebrews, Heb. 11. speaks) where God bringeth his first begotten into the World attended with all the Angels, and appearing in the utmost Glory of his Father, on purpose to be admired in his Saints, and by the Glory he bestows upon them. No wonder then, if the great Glory be reserved to that Day, whereas this Admission of our Souls in the mean Time unto Glory is as a secret Entrance incognito (as we say) which is done every Day, and a-part singly.

5. The Glory of our Souls in the mean while is but an occasional Dispensation for a short Time, and brought in by Death the Fruit of Sin. They are in the Case of Friends, who by some present Disaster are put out of House and Home, and come to us unawares and on the suddain. This Condition is occasioned by the Curse upon Adams fall, Thou shalt Die. Souls thereupon returning to God, do recommend themselves into his Hands, as driven out of House and Home. He therefore bestows them (as it were) in the mean while, as well as may be for that Condition. He lodgeth them in Beds (Isa. 57. 2.) conveniently, suitably to that their Estate, but this is but for a shift, and till they shall be better provided for: But the Glory after the latter Day, was the great Thing designed afore Sin, or Death fell out, or redemption from Sin. That Fulness of Glory the Body and Soul was ordained unto, is the Center of all Gods Decrees concerning us. 'Tis Regnum antemundanum, and it shall remain for ever without any Accident, or Change to intervene, or interrupt it. We shall be ever with the Lord; whereas afore, though our Souls were with the Lord, yet so, as Christ and we seem for a Season to Part, and our Souls come down into our Bodies, and rise to meet the Lord (as the same Place shews) but this latter Dispensation of Glory is once for all, and to hold to Eternity one and the same unchangeably, 2 Theff. 4. 16, 17. The Dead in Christ shall rise, and then be caught up to meet the Lord; And so we shall be ever with the Lord. That is the Condition afterwards which admits not (no, not, for the twinkling of an Eye) so much as any looking off from him, much-less a parting for ever. No wonder then, if God hath so reserved the Splendor of Glory for that Day, and then makes a new State of Glory, as if there had been no Glory afore.

The Third is,

1. To find out what is common to the Estate of Glory of a separate Soul, hath in common with the State after the Day of Judgment.
2. To find out what is properly belonging to the State of its Separation.

1. To

1. That we may find out what is common to both States, It is meet for us here to know and consider, that under the same Expressions found in Scripture common unto both, there is yet intended a vast Difference, and Disproportion, in the Glory vouchsafed either to the one or t'other. Therefore we must be aware of such Expressions, and not presently think, that the same are us'd common to both, therefore the same State of Glory is indifferently intended. Two great Errors I conceive have been committed about this Matter.

1. That the New Testament speaking so high, and great Things of the Glory both at, and after the Day of Judgment; the Glory of the Souls separate hath been too much Eclipsed to some Apprehensions, and utterly denied by others, and but carelessly and negligently spoken of by most, especially the Ancients.

2. Others Treating of it do Hand over Head, and confusedly shuffle together, or apply what is said of the one unto the other in such a Manner, as if there were not any Difference, as to the Souls Condition in either State, but only that the Body is glorified at Last: Whereas certainly by what the Scripture speaks, there must be found a vastly differing Disproportion between those Two States, and that not alone in Respect of the Conjunction of the Body to the Soul (which alone would not be so much, if the Souls Happiness in it self were not in its Proportion there-with also advanced) but in Respect of God's Communications of himself to the Soul it self, the proper Vessel of Glory. I may safely say of this Difference what the Apostle in comparing the Estate of the Law and Gospel doth; 2 Cor. 3. 10. That which is made glorious, in this separate Estate, hath no Glory in Respect of that which excelleth at, and after the Day of Judgment.

See M, on Rev. 14. 13.

Now that which hath occasioned this promiscuous or confused way of handling the Blessedness of both Estates (as in Respect to the Soul) as if they were one and the same hath been this, that the Scriptures utter the Happiness of each Estate in many Things, under one, and the same Expressions, as common to both; and therefore it is inferr'd from thence, that the Thing it self is but one and the same, without any such excessive Disproportion to be found between them, especially seeing that in that State after the Day of Judgment, there is but only an Addition of Glory to our Bodies then Conjoined, but that of the Soul is one and the same in both States. As for Instance, 'tis said, that the State of separate Souls is a being with Christ, which (as Paul says) is best of all, and what is there said more of that State after the Day of Judgment? The Place also wherein the Souls are afore the Day of Judgment is said to be the Heavens, and the same is said of the Place after that Day: And therefore it would seem, that there should not be any such Difference between the one and the other. This is a common Apprehension and Inference there from. I shall endeavour to contribute some Things in General unto the clearing of these confused Entanglements, about this Matter by these Three Assertions, or Conclusions.

1. That indeed the same Expressions are used of the Blessedness of the Soul in both Conditions, yet,

2. That these Expressions must still be understood with a vast Difference, and Disproportion. Which

3. I shall confirm from this, that the very same Expressions are used in Scripture of extraordinary Communion with God and Christ in this Life, that are used of the State of Souls, either separate afore, or after the Day of Judgment: Between which yet, and that in Heaven all do acknowledge a vast Difference. And the Inference from all will be, that notwithstanding the same Expressions of these Two States in Glory: Yet a great and exceeding Difference may be found between them.

1. The same Expressions indeed are used of both States.

1. Both are called a Crown, which is given to that state of Souls immediately after Death; Rev. 2. 10. Fear none of those Things which thou shalt suffer: Behold, the Devil shall cast some of you into Prison, that ye may be tried, and ye shall have Tribulation Ten Days: Be thou faithful unto Death, and I will give Chap. XIII. give thee a Crown of Life: And yet a new Crown shall be set upon our Heads at the latter Day, 2 Tim. 4. 8. 1 Pet. 5. 4. 2 Tim. 1. 18. All which Places refer to our crowning at the latter Day.

2. Both States are a being present with Christ. The Condition of the Soul when absent from the Body (2 Cor. 5. 8.) is said to be present with the Lord, and to be with Christ which is best of all, Phil. 1. 2. In like Manner of that State after the Day of Judgment it is said, We shall ever be with the Lord. 1 Theff. 4. 17. That Expression also in John 17. is spoken of both States, That they may be with me (says Christ) where I am, that they may behold the Glory which thou hast given me.

3. Both are termed the sight of God and Christ. That State after the latter Day is so call'd, 1 John 3. 2. Beloved, now we are the Sons of God, and it doth not yet appear, what we shall be: But we know, that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. When he shall appear, namely at the latter Day: And he speaks it as if we had never seen him afore, and as if then only we began to see him, and then also only began to be like him. And therefore a late Writer doth boldly restrain that sight, (1 Cor. 13. 12. For now we see through a Glass darkly, but then Face to Face; now I know in Part, but then shall I know even as also I am known) unto that of the latter Day for this Reason; that Paul there not expressing whither he spake of the Resurrection of the State in the mean Time; therefore John here determines it, and confines that also spoken by Paul unto our seeing him at the latter Day. But it is certain, that our Souls shall see him afore, 2 Cor. 5. 6, 7. Then it is, when we are in the Body, that we walk by Faith, and not by Sight: But when absent from the Body, we are so present with the Lord, as we walk by Sight; as the Opposition of Sight unto Faith there shews.

Thornedykes
Epil. 3. Book
Page 308.

2. I now come to shew, That though the same Expressions are used, yet we are to understand the latter State of the Soul after the Resurrection as still exceeding the former, with a vast Difference, and disproportion, which will much reconcile Scripture, and dissolve Doubts about this Doctrine; the Assertion is made out many Ways.

1. All the Saints are in the mean while presented as Expectants, and so to have their Eyes fixed on the last Day, as if they over-look't this middle State between. And yet this Interim of the Souls Blessedness is a Part of their Eternity, 2 Cor. 5. 1. Luke 16. 9. Where in both Places that Eternal House, and those Eternal Habitations, are spoken of the separate Souls Condition. Thus in the Old Testament, David's Expectation was, Psalms 17. 15. When I awake (that is at the Resurrection) I shall be satisfied with his Image. And thus Job also speaks, Job 19. 23, 24, 25, 26. And again, in the New Testament the Character of a Believer is, a Person waiting for the coming of the Lord Jesus. Thus the Corinthians are describ'd, 1 Cor. 1. 7. Thus the Thessalonians are decypher'd, 1 Theff. 1. 10. It was Christ's coming, that their Hope fix'd, and Terminated on.

2. Yea, the separate Souls that are in Heaven wait for it (Rev. 6.) and are comforted with this, that they shall stay, but till the Number of Gods Elects is fulfilled. That Place also in Job 14. 14. (If a Man Die, shall he live again? All the Days of my appointed Time will I wait, till my Change come.) Ainsworth in his Book entitled Communion of Saints, Interprets of the Souls waiting after Death, till that great Change shall be at the Resurrection; of which Change it is elsewhere said, That he shall Change our vile Bodies, like unto his glorious Body, Phil. 3. 21. and 1 Cor. 15. 51. It was that which the Eye of Job's Soul was then, and should all along the Time of his lying in the Grave, be fix'd upon.

3. Yea, Christ's Hope whilst his Body lay in the Grave, (although his Soul was in Paradise) was fixed on the Glory after his Resurrection, Psalms 16. 9, 10, 11. Therefore my Heart is glad, and my Glory rejoiceth: My Flesh also shall rest in Hope. For thou wilt not leave my Soul in Hell, neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see Corruption.

4. Yea.

4. Yea, the whole Creation is brought in as waiting together with us, Rom. 8. 19, 23. For the earnest Expectation of the Creature, waiteth for the Manifestation of the Sons of God. And not only they, but our selves also which have the first Fruits of the Spirit, even we our selves groan within our selves, waiting for the Adoption, to wit, the Redemption of our Bodies. The Apostle here holds up that Glory which is that Day to be bestowed, as the great Glory indeed; in the fore-view of which it was, that those Primitive Saints reckoned not the Sufferings of this present Time, worthy to be compared with the Glory then to be revealed, (ver. 18.) namely, at the Redemption of our Bodies spoken of ver. 23.

5. The Reward of the Saints is so spoken of, as if not any at all were given, until that Day, so 2 Tim. 4. 8. Henceforth there is laid up for me a Crown of Righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that Day: And not to me only, but unto all them also that Love his appearing: Which is also called Christ his Day, or the Day of the Lord Jesus (1 Cor. 1. 8. 5. 5. 2 Cor. 1. 14. Phil. 1. 6. Chap. 2. 16.) the Day of Redemption (Ephes. 4. 30.) and ἡμέρῃ ἐξοχῆν that Day (1 Thess. 5. 4. 2 Thess. 1. 10. 2 Tim 1. 12, 18.) and the Day unto which our Reward is referred, as in those Places, is withal held forth; and in like Manner Peter also speaks (1. Epist. 1. Chap. ver. 4.) that their Life of Hope lies in Expectation of an Inheritance reserved in Heaven for them, ready to be revealed in the last Times.

6. The Punishments of Wicked Men in Hell, as well as this Glory to be revealed are both one, and the other alike spoken of as then only, and not afore to begin. 2 Thess. 1. 8, 9, 10. In flaming Fire, taking Vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, &c. And this is spoken of that Time, When the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from Heaven with his mighty Angels, which is at that Day. And the Spirits of Wicked Men are said to be in Prison (1 Pet. 3. 19.) and tormented (Luke 16. 25.) and the Soul is said to be killed and cast into Hell after the Body is killed, as well as Soul and Body at the latter Day; Luke 12. 4, 5. That which is inferr'd from hence at least is, that there is a superexcelling weight of Glory then to be revealed, and communicated, which is hid in God till then (as in Col. 3. 3. the Apostle speaks) even as there was a surpassing Glory of Things of the Gospel, that lay hid in God during the Times of the Old Testament, as (Ephes. 3. 9.) and it may raise up our Hearts unto an Infinity of Expectation of what this Glory will rise up to in the End, by what we yet hear, and read, is the Glory of Souls separate afore that Day. As Job saith of God, How little do we know of him? So as little can we know, what he can or will do for his Children, and what Entertainments he hath for them in the other Worlds, he who hath an incomprehensible Power to Effect, and an Eternity of Time before him to perform all in: When we hear of this next State of Souls, and the Glory thereof we cannot Imagine what better Thing there is, or can be yet behind, which shall so much exceed: And yet there is so great an one as this fore-going comes not into Remembrance, as the Prophet speaks.

3. The Third Assertion which tends to reconcile these Two, is, that the like or some Expressions are used of such special Manifestations of God, and Christ, to the Soul, through Faith here on Earth, that are used of either of these States of Glory. And therefore look as a vast Difference is found between such Dispensations on Earth, from those in Heaven, so why upon the Premises may not such a Disproportion likewise be understood in an Analogy between those Two States of Glory, under one and the same Expressions? Especially, if we make up the Parallel, that look as there is a vast Difference between those special Dispensations on Earth, and such other as are ordinarily vouchsafed to Faith whilst we are on Earth, so in a Parallel way may in their Spheres the like be found between those Two States. Now the Instances that prove the same Expressions to be used of Gods special Manifestations in this Life, that are also used of the State of Glory, are many.

Chap. XIII.

1. These Manifestations are stiled the Sight of God. Thus Job speaking of an extraordinary Manifestation of God unto him, Job 42. 5. (And comparing therewith his Experiences in former Times) I have heard of thee by the hearing of the Ear (saith he) but now mine Eye seeth thee. Thus in like Manner the Prophet speaks, Isa. 6. 5. Mine Eyes have seen the King, the Lord of Hosts, which Christ interprets of seeing his own Glory, John 12. Now Job plainly termeth that his own Last; and present Manifestation vouchsafed him, SIGHT, in so vast a way of Difference from all former ways of Knowledges of God vouchsafed, or whatever fore-gone Discoveries had been made unto Faith; that he Terms those but as an hearing of the Ear, as if it were by another Sense, at least a lower Sense, but this latter was by Sight. And indeed such Revelations which he thus Terms Sight, are of the highest Kind of those vouchsafed in this Life; Having Joy unspeakable and full of Glory to accompany them, which we yet find denied by the Apostle Peter to be SIGHT, in Comparison of the lowest State in Heaven (1 Pet. 1. ver. 8.) in those Words, In whom though now you see him not, yet believing, you rejoice with Joy unspeakable and full of Glory. This therefore of Job's and Peter's was indeed but Faith and not Sight in Comparison to that of the Souls after this Life, of which Peter speaks (ver. 9.) terming the Salvation of their Souls the next End, and Reward of their Faith. Take any Christian that walks by ordinary Faith (which is but as walking in the common Day-light of the Sun, be it over-cast) and let him be set down with Job's Light, and his Spirit be raised up to that Presence, and Revelation that was made of God to Job: And that Soul will instantly say, now I see God so as I never did afore, and yet his former Faith must be acknowledged a sight of God; but this latter to differ as much from the former, as a Man walking in a clear Sun-shine Day, that looks full upon the Sun it self, doth differ from his walking in the ordinary Day-light in a dark cloudy Day. Thus far doth Faith, thus elevated differ, and transcend it self at such Times, and yet at this its highest Elevation it is still but Faith, but yet so far exceeding that ordinary Converse with God by Faith, that it is as no Sight in Comparison thereunto, For Faith at this its highest Elevation is but of Things not seen, Heb. 11. Why then may it not without Offence be said, that Vision or Sight of God and Christ which we shall have at the latter Day, shall be so far raised and elevated above what our Souls enjoied afore; as it will in Comparison be as if we had never seen them: And yet both be justly termed (as they are) the Sight of God and Christ, utterly differing from that of Faith in this Life: For the Sight is not as in a Glass only, as that of Faith is said to be, but Face to Face, each of them, as the Apostle speaking at once of the Sights of both those States to come in the other World in Opposition to that of Faith, expresseth it, 1 Cor. 13. 12. The Sun if it were farther removed up into the Heavens would seem but as a Star, and therefore some have fancied each Star to be a Sun; though at such a Distance they seem so small to us as they do. Or if one looks through an inverted Optique Glass to view the Sun, yet then it appears but as a Star: But turn the other end, and it appears the Sun indeed. Now unto the Souls separate (though in Heaven) Christ is but as the Morning Star in Comparison of what at the latter Day God and Christ will appear to be.

Rev: 22. 16.

2. A Second Instance, That the same Expressions are used of Communions with God in this Life, that are us'd of those after, is the Phrase of seeing Gods Face, which all acknowledge the highest Expression of that Glory, in which the utmost of the Blessedness in Heaven doth consist: Yet even this is attributed to an high Communion with God in this Life. Thus it is said of Jacob, Gen. 32. 30. And Jacob called the Name of that Place Peniel: For (says he) I have seen God Face to Face. 'Twas spoken of an extraordinary drawing near of God to him, and so Moses also expresseth himself, Exod. 33. 11. And the Lord spake unto Moses Face to Face, as a Man speaketh unto his Friend, &c. And yet he saw but his Back-parts, ver. 23. And I will take away mine Hand, and thou shalt see my Back-parts: But my Face shall not be seen.

3. In this Life under the Gospel we behold the Glory of God in the Face of Jesus Christ, (2 Cor. 4. 6.) which yet is made the Difference between what is vouchsafed to us in the State of Glory (1 Cor. 13. 12.) and what we see in this Life, and yet again the same is used of the Kingdom of Christ; Rev. 22. 3. In like Manner in that Holy of Holies in the Heavens, where Christ now is, and where we shall be with him after the Day of Judgment, the Sight of God is termed a seeing his Face, and enjoying his Presence. So Christ (Psalm 16. 11.) speaks of it, In thy Presence is Fulness of Joy: And therefore (Heb. 9. 23.) he is said to appear, ad faciem Dei, before the Face of God (so Beza renders it) or in the Presence of God, as our Translation hath it.

Chap. XIV.

4. The Phrase of being with God and Christ, is a like used of strong Communion with God in this Life; and also of that Happiness in both States hereafter. David having his Heart for some time taken up a Morning with strong Fellowship with God says of it (Psalm 139. 18. When I awake, I am still with thee, even in this Life. And of the Souls State in Paradise, the like Expression is used. To Day (says Christ) shalt thou be with me in Paradise: To be with Christ (says the Apostle) is best of all. 'Tis spoken of the State of the Soul after Dissolution. Then again, the same Phrase is also used of the State after the Day of Judgment, 1 Thess. 4. 17. Then we shall be for ever with the Lord.

5. The Phrase of Dwelling in God, is a-like used of all States. In this Life we dwell in God, by ordinary Communion, 1 John 4. 15. Whosoever shall confess, that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God: And in extraordinary Manifestations the Soul dwells in God. John 14. 21. He that keeps my Word, my Father will Love him, and I will Love him, and manifest myself unto him. And (Ver. 23.) We will come to him, and make our abode with him. The same Expression is used of the States of Souls, 2 Cor. 5. 1. We have an House of God, which is interpreted (Rev. 7. 15.) That God shall dwell upon, so it is in the Greek. Finally, and above all after the Day of Judgment, Christ will then give up his present Kingdom to his Father, and God shall be all in all, (2 Cor. 15.) and the Kingdom, he shall then give up, lies in the Dispensation and Communication of himself to the Souls now in Heaven; for during the Time allotted his Kingdom he is as much in Heaven, as in Earth; Mat. 28. 18. And how much this Communication of God, when he is all in all will exceed, what is the Communication of himself to the blessed Saints now, none but God and Christ himself do, or can know.

If further unto these several sorts of Dispensations, through pure Faith vouchsafed to Job and others, serving to illustrate the like Difference in the other World, we shall also add those Visions, and Revelations made unto Stephen and Paul, whilst they were in this Life, it will much Conduce to enhance the Disproportion between two States of Glory. For Stephen, to whom the Heavens were opened, saw otherwise then by Faith the Glory of God, and Christ standing at his Right Hand; and yet this sight was but a far off, and but with his Bodily Eyes. Now assuredly, when his Soul was out of that his Body, he had a sight of both Gods Glory and of Christ, that transcended this, which his Soul had, whilst abiding in Flesh and Blood, or indeed was capable of; seeing Flesh and Blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God in that Manner, as when the Soul is unclothed thereof. Some of the Fathers speaking of the Receptacles of Souls, term them Atria à Longè, but as the Courts or Suburbs of Heaven, and as a far off in Comparison, and those separate Spirits, they stile Souls sub Altare, under the Altar; as signifying, that in that State they do not yet see, nor can see the Glory of God, and Christ at his Right-hand in that Manner, as after the End of the World they shall see them; Whereas of that other State their Expressions are, that they shall be Super Altare, placed above the Altar; yea, in the Holy of Holies (say I) and so behold God and Christ in a nearer Manner.

If this Comparison made of Stephens Sight, which was above the Sight of Faith, and yet below what his Soul after enjoied, be not sufficient to demonstrate the Difference aforesaid; then let us climb a step higher. Paul at his Conversion had seen Christ appearing in his Glory (Acts 9.) as Stephen had done; and yet his Soul was preferred to an higher Sight, whilst he was wrapt up into the Heavens; and yet during that while also he remained, and continued but an Appartenance of this World; an Inmate belonging thereunto, and was to come down and Live here again as formerly: And yet this his Rapture, and Revelations, and Visions, did far exceed either that of his own vouchsafed him at his first Conversion, or that of Stephens: So as his Face shining with it he was a Candidate, or rather Inceptor of Glory. And yet still we must say, that Paul's separate Soul when it was carried into Heaven, and made Perfect, did, and doth to this Hour enjoy that Fruition of God and Christ, which all his Visions amounted not unto: For why? He was not then admitted into the State and Number of the Blessed Ones, but only taken up as a Stander by, that over-heard Things unspeakable; and yet this Vision infinitely exceeded any Revelation of any Kind or Degree formerly made to his Faith, or afterwards.

Chap. XIV.

I conclude then, if Gods Manifestations in this Life admit such variety of Ascents, as we see by all these Instances they have done; why may not Gods Dispensations yet remaining for us in the other World, be framed unto so vast a Disproportion, as I have been arguing for?

CHAP. XIV.

A Particular Enumeration of the Glories of that State, into which the separate Soul enters immediately after Death.

THE Revelation being for the most Part, the Representation of a long and sad Story of Martyrdoms and Sufferings of the Church, ending in a glorious Kingdom of Christ, God was pleased to intermingle special Comforts suited to those Sufferings in the mean while, till that Kingdom shall appear. The Deaths and Martyrdoms of Saints are every where up and down related in that Book in several Ages; as Chap. 2. 3, 10, 13, 19. Chap. 3. 10. Chap. 6. 9, 10, 11. Chap. 11. 7, 8, 9, 10. Chap. 12. 11, 13, 17. Chap. 13. 7, 10, 15. Chap. 14. 12, 13.

2. Our Character of the Primitive Saints (for all the rest) is in Rev. 12. 11. They loved not their Lives unto the Death: I may say, that, as the Apostles were set forth unto Death Last; so these Christians first, not in Time only, but for Eminency. Saints have more Cause to prize their Lives for the opportunity of serving God in this Life than other Men: Yet that Part of Life, they might have lived until natural Death, and therein have done Service unto God, they valued not; those that were Young did not value it, but gave it up.

Now observe we his Method of Comforts for them, and all the Saints from First to Last, and all along.

1. In the very Prologue to that Body of Prophecy that follows (Chap. 5. 10.) e're any Seals were opened, or Trumpets blown, the Representative of the whole Church Comfort themselves with this, We shall Reign on Earth. They look'd at this, as that, which would be the Close and Conclusion, whatever falls out in the mean Time until then. And as answering thereunto at the very End, and Close of all we find the Event to correspond, Rev. 20. 4, 6. Then when all Enemies are destroyed, and after so long a Time in Suffering run out, this Kingdom fore-understood by them is then given them. But yet yet still to shew what their Souls should have in the mean Time (for 'twas a long Time unto the Kingdom, especially to those first Saints well nigh 2000 Years) Christ takes special Care to insert in this Book, what the State of their Souls after Death should be till then, and he doth it set by, and at large upon Two eminent Occasions. There were Two eminent Times of Sufferings, and Ranks of Sufferers. 1. Those under Heathenish Rome, till Christianity overcame the Red Dragon. 2. From Antichrist, or Christian Rome, The Beast. Now observe,

Chap. XIV.

1. That in the midst of, or rather against the Time of the greatest Persecutions under Heathenish Rome, Christ to comfort them all tells them, what Glory he would in the mean Time give their Souls, Rev. 6. 9, 10, 11. And when he had opened the fifth Seal, I saw under the Altar the Souls of them that were slain for the Word of God, and for the Testimony which they held: And they cried with a loud Voice, saying, How long, O Lord, Holy and True, dost thou not judge and avenge our Blood on them that dwell on the Earth? And White Robes were given unto every one of them, and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little Season until their Fellow-servants also, and their Brethren that should be killed, as they were should be fulfilled. This is spoken, but to the first Rank of Sufferers, the first Fruits of Sufferers by Heathenish Rome; and that now under the fifth Seal, at the last and greatest of their Sufferings in Dioctesian's Time. He chose there to insert it, though it was intended for all that suffered afore also, as those Words shew, O Lord, how long? They had Brethren you see to come, they had another Company that were to suffer under another Power Antichristian Rome; Rev. 13. 10. He that leadeth into Captivity shall go into Captivity, he that killed with the Sword must be killed with the Sword, here is the Patience, and the Faith of the Saints. Lo God who speaks once and twice, speaks a second Time in special to those, as he had done to those other, and that upon the Occasion of a most eminent and general Suffering by that Beast; Rev. 14. 12, 13. Here is the Patience of the Saints; here are they that keep the Commandments of God, and the Faith of Jesus: And I heard a Voice from Heaven, saying unto me write, Blessed are the Dead which die in the Lord, from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their Labours, and their Works do follow them.

Wherein, 1. Observe the Juncture of Time wherein 'tis spoken; and to this Purpose take Notice, that this 14th Chapter describes that Company which Christ had had all along Antichrists Reign, ver. 1, 2, &c. (as the 13th Chapter had done Antichrists Adherents) and the 14th Chapter describes also the several Progresses of the Gospel by Three Degrees, and when it came to the Third Degree (ver. 9.) that Professors enlightened by the Gospel began boldly and with a loud Voice to challenge that Beast of Rome to be the Beast or Antichrist, and that they would all be damned (ver. 10.) if they entertained not the Gospel, which was done by Luther, &c. Then arose the greatest Persecution that ever had been afore. The Time hereof lasted long between Luthers first Preaching and the Reformation, or quiet Harvest by Supream Authority crowned, which follows; ver. 14, 15, 16. And I looked, and behold a white Cloud, and upon the Cloud one sat like unto the Son of Man, having on his Head a golden Crown, and in his Hand a sharp Sickle: And another Angel came out of the Temple, crying with a loud Voice to him that sat on the Cloud, thrust in thy Sickle and reap, for the Time is come for thee to reap, for the Harvest of the Earth is ripe. And he that sat on the Throne thrust in his Sickle on the Earth, and the Earth was reaped; it was a great Time of Sufferings. Thus Twice God spake it, and that a-part unto each.

Then 3. At the 20. Chap. he speaks at once to both, when all Sufferings were over, and Comforts them with the coming in of that Kingdom or new Hierusalem, which they had rejoiced so to think of afore-hand at the first, when it was as then almost 2000 Years off.

1. The first sort is Those that had been Beheaded for the Witnesses of Jesus and the Word of God, those who were the Primitive Sufferers, Witnesses that Jesus was their Lord, and King, and Saviour, and that themselves were Christians, that was their Testimony.

Chap. XIV.

2. Another sort is those, which had not Worshipped the Beast, neither his Image, neither had received his Mark upon their Foreheads, or in their Hands.

And, 3. The first Promise made Chap. 5. is Prophefied of, to be fulfilled, They lived and reigned with Christ a Thousand Years, and had the Honour of being Priests and Kings, which from the first was said of them. Chap. 1. ver. 6. And hath made us Kings and Priests unto God and his Father.

Let me add this, I take it: The Promises unto the overcomers at the close of every Epistle, to the Seven Churches are for the most Part, if not all of them, made concerning the Blessed State of the Souls of Saints in Heaven, and in Christ's Kingdom afore the Day of Judgment; which I shall now describe to you, from Particular Instances concerning the State of a Believers Soul departed, Collected for the most Part out of the Book of the Revelation.

Having by these Generals made my way. I come to the Particulars, that any way concern, or that are Ingredient into, the Glory of Souls separate.

1. When the Soul goes forth out of the Body at Death, the Second Death hath no Power over it, Rev. 2. 11. He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second Death. This Promise is unto one, who hath finished his Course with a Victory, which is at Death; and so still in the close of all those Epistles, it runs to him that overcometh: And in the Verse afore (ver. 10.) it is expressly declared, that that overcoming is at Death, as having been a Conflict until then, Be faithful unto Death, &c. The Promise therefore concerns the Soul at, and upon, and so after Death, and hence to Comfort them at, and against that first Death; it is said, that the second Death shall not hurt them, namely then: This Negative in view may seem but a small Matter to the Expectations of Believers, but it is a great Matter to us as Sinners. For

1. It imports, That the Devil that hath the Power of Death, shall not lay an Hand, or so much as a Finger touch on them. A Believer doth then after Christs Example, commend his Soul into the Hands of God, and God as a faithful Creator (1 Pet. 4. 19.) will be sure to keep them from Satans clutches, when thy Soul goes forth, he shall not hurt nor fright thee; for God will give him a Charge, as he did to Laban concerning Jacob. There was a Dispute indeed between a good Angel and the bad in Jude, what should be done with Moses Body, but not the least altercating Word past about his Soul: And God will cut off all Disputes about thy Soul also, as he did about the Soul of Moses. God himself secured that from all Debates, of Angels good or bad about it. Some have understood those Words, Dent. 34. 5. (which according to the Hebrew are read, Moses Died, ad os Domini, at the Mouth of the Lord) with this Paraphrase (which some of the Jewish Writers also did conceive to be this Sence) Ad osculum oris Domini, at the Kiss of the Mouth of the Lord: Even as the nearest loving Friend (as was the Roman manner) useth to take the last Breath of his dying Friend into his Body with a Kiss, that so did God suck out Moses Soul into himself.

See Ludovicus Capellus in Epist. Jude 9. Deus ejus animam quasi exsugendo eduxit.

As a Lapidary says upon Deu. 24. 5.

But Believers have a plainer Warrant, and clearer Word of Testimony (however that Paraphrase is elegant) from the Apostle, Heb. 2. 14. That Christ through Death, having destroyed him that hath the Power of Death, that is, the Devil: Hath (thereby) delivered us from the fear of Death (and so of the Fear of the Devil at our Death) unto the Fear of which all Men are justly Subject, not at Death only, but all their Life Time. But Believers have no Cause at all of any such Fear, for that of our Saviour added, may mightily add to our Comfort at that Hour, John 5. 24. Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my Word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath Everlasting Life, and shall not come into Condemnation: But is passed from Death unto Life. This is a great Priviledge for a Man apt to fear, that when his Soul is forth, the Devils may appear about him. But do not fear, Hands off, says Christ. Thou carriest a Pass-port and safe Conduct with thee Signed and Sealed, and if thou need not fear the second Death, thou needest not fear the Devil, that hath the Power of that Death.

2. Thy Soul shall have Angels to wait on thee, to take thy Soul when it comes forth, as the Midwife doth the Child, when it comes forth of the Womb. The Angels carried Lazarus Soul into Abraham's Bosom, Luke 16. 22. The Devils take others Souls away. Of Apostates whilst they Live, Christ says, that Men shall take them (John 15.) as the Pharisees did Judas, which is an heavy Judgment: But at Death the Devils take their Souls, Luke 12. 20. This Night they shall require thy Soul. Who are those they? Hell is a Prison, so in Peter, 1 Pet. 5. Luke 12. 58. And the Judge delivers to the Officer, and the Officer casts in Prison. This Officer is the Devil, that hales Souls to that Prison, and therefore Paul says of him, that He hath the Power of Death. Indeed at the Day of Judgment the good Angels (Mat. 25.) are said to throw both Men and Devils to Hell, but until then the Devils are the chief Leaders of Wicked Mens Souls to Hell.

Chap. XIV

Now that the good Angels should do this for us at Death, it is for State, and to Grace us, as Kings send some great Noblemen of their Court to attend those (they would Honour) into their great City, and unto Court; and it is by this Christ shews his Value of Us: And as at the latter Day, when the Wedding is to be solemnized he will come himself and fetch us, (John 14. 3. And if I go and prepare a Place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto my self, that where I am there ye may be also) so now at Death. In the mean while he sends his Angels, to bring his espoused unto him.

3. The Soul is in Heaven instantly. 'Twas Three a Clock Afternoon, when Christ Died, and about after Six the Day ended; and the Even of the Passover the next Day began soon after, as the Jewish scruple shews, about the Thieves hanging on the Cross any Part of that Day to come; for which they brake their Legs to dispatch them afore the Evening, which was the beginning of that next Day; as you read, John 19. 31, 32. And Christ knowing what would fall, and that they should Die afore that Evening of that next Day began; spake unto the good Thief on this wise. This Day thou shalt be with me in Paradise: That is afore Night comes. Heaven is ready long since, and reserved for you (1 Pet. 1. 4, 5.) and thy Soul hath been preparing, and making meet for it, and in an Instant it is swallowed up of Life, 2 Cor. 5. 4. And the Angels like the Sun-beams or Flames of Fire are swift of flight, flying swiftly, as the Angel Gabriel said to Daniel, Dan. 9. 21: And hence, as soon as thou beginnest to be Absent from the Body, or ceasest to be at home in the Body, thou art present with the Lord. And if this Body be dissolved ἔχμεν, we have an House ready prepared, for Christ went to prepare it. John 14. and he hath prepared for every Soul his proper Apartment, Mat. 20. 23.

4. At thy Dying, so far as thou hast been rich in Faith and good Works, thy Heart will be strengthened, both at Death, and thy Passage to Heaven, to lay hold upon Eternal Life: And as thou art just a coming thither, and near to set thy first Foot on that most Holy Ground; thou shalt find a rich Entrance, πλοσίως, or an abundant large Entrance into those Holy Courts. Those Everlasting Doors, the broad Gates of Heaven will be thrown wide open for Thee; for loe here comes an Heir, a rich Heir of Life.

Habebitis Liberum et apertum ingressum,
Gerard in verba:

5. Either at the instant of Death, or in that Passage to Heaven, thy Soul shall be fully purified from Sin, and made perfectly Holy, Heb. 10. 23. The Church in Heaven is said to consist of Angels (whose stile is the Holy Angels) and of the Spirits of Just Men made perfect. These Just Men, whilst Men, and their Souls abiding in their Bodies, were but just imperfectly; though just in Gods Acceptation (as of Job, and others we read) but the Souls of these Men now when separate, are made Perfect; that is, in that sort of Righteousness (their Sanctification) wherein they were deficient afore. To the same Purpose the Apostle speaks, 1 Cor. 13. 9, 10. For we know in Part, and we Prophecie in Part. But when that which is Perfect is come, then that which is in Part shall be done away. It is to be understood of a Comparison between the State of this Life, which is the Time and Condition wherein we are imperfect, and oppositely to that other State, when this Life is ended. Now we know but in Part, and Prophecie in Part: And there is the like Reason of Holiness, liness; we are Holy but in Part. And that it is after this Life ended, that that which is perfect doth begin, is evident from these Words, when that which is Perfect comes, that which is imperfect is done away, and é contra, when that which is in Part is done away, then that which is Perfect comes. Now at, and upon Death, it is that Knowledge and Prophefying are done away, and therefore then it is that Perfection begins; and although that way of Knowledge or Faith, which now we have is done wholly away, yet Love (ver. 8.) and so Holiness fails not, but is perfected. And the Reason for this is, because God then takes up our Souls into the Presence of his Glory for us, to know him as we are known, &c. which though it may admit of Degrees; as the Comparison of that after the Day of Judgment shews; yet it is for the kind of it a being admitted unto the Glory of God; and not to know as in a Glass, but Face to Face. Now though the Knowledge of God as imperfectly revealed in the way of Faith, may consist with an answerable imperfect Holiness, (as here it doth) yet the Communication and Revelation of the Glory of God it self unto Sight; cannot consist with imperfect Holiness: For if so, then it would be with a mixture of Sin remaining; which God who is a consuming Fire to all Sin, and every Degree thereof, will not, and cannot bear; and the Soul it self would have more Torment then Happiness in such a sight. Moses could not see Gods Face and Live, but when he was made Perfect he might. David says, I will behold thy Face in Righteousness, Psalm 17. 15. which otherwise he could not behold. The Substance of this Reason we find in Jude 24. Now to him that is able to keep you from falling, that is, into any grosser Evil (for he speaks that of his keeping us in the midst of indwelling Corruptions in this Life) And to present you faultless before the Presence of his Glory with exceeding Joy. This is when this Life is ended, and immediately succeeds the former; for there is no keeping us from falling in that other World; for the Danger of sinning is over: But then we being to be admitted to the Presence of his Glory must be found faultless, for that Presence of his Glory can endure no Spot, or Imperfection in our Grace, no not the least. That the Souls of Saints are present with the Lord, the Apostle often tells us, 2 Cor. 5. 8. and that we are admitted to the Presence of his Glory, that Instance of Stephen shews, That Stephen when dying saw his Glory, Acts 7. 55. and ver. 59. He died crying, Lord Jesus receive my Spirit; that is, in respect unto a being received unto that Presence of his Glory, it was that our dying Stephen when his Soul was now departing, cries, Lord Jesus receive my Spirit; now unto what it is that Christ receives our Souls that (Rom. 15. 7.) informs us, As Christ (says he) hath received us unto the Glory of God. There indeed 'tis spoken of his having received us into the right of that Glory in this Life; but this new receiving us at Death is, and must therefore be his receiving us unto the Possession of it, which in this Life we have not, and otherwise there were no new Act of receiving, nor Addition to the former, now when we come to Die.

Chap. XIV.

If any Doubt or Scruple ariseth in thee from hence, that thou findest at present an Infinite Depth of Sin, Lusts, and Corruptions, and the greater Part of thy Heart, like that of the Earth over-flown with that Sea. If thou art troubled, that thou hast had Experience of so slow a Procedure, and of so difficult a winning Ground upon them for many Years; though thou hast by Faith been continually applying Christs Death to them. And if hereupon thou art ready to say, how then shall I hope and believe, that in an instant all those Corruptions will be purged out, and Holiness perfected in me? For Answer: Consider,

1. That in this Work thy Soul is meerly Passive; whereas in working out of Corruptions whilst thou livest here, God goes the Pace of thine own Faith and Endeavours, and attempts his Work thereto, Rom. 8. 13. If you through the Spirit mortifie the Deeds of the Flesh. But in this last compleating and filling up of Holiness, God doth that alone upon thee, as a Reward of thy former imperfect Endeavours, and as a part indeed, or rather Foundation of glorifying of thee; and therefore look as in believing thou art Passive, so in this.

2. 'Tis

2. 'Tis a new State and Condition, that thou art at Death entring into, differing from Faith. Thy Enjoyment of God after Death is to be by Sight, and accordingly thy Soul must be disposed for it, which it cannot be but by perfect Holiness; and therefore the like Time, and Pauses to work out Corruption, as were during the Life of Faith, are not to be expected. God suits the Dispensation answerable unto the State and Condition he puts us into.

3. You may help your Faith in this, by considering the great Change, which at the latter Day shall be in a Moment wrought upon the Bodies of the Saints, by him, who shall Change our vile Bodies to be like unto his glorious Body, through his Power by which he subdueth all Things to himself: The Bodies of these Saints, that are then alive, shall in the twinkling of an Eye be changed, and of Mortal be made Immortal, and of natural Bodies spiritual; and the Bodies of them in the Grave (that not stink only, but are rotted there) and the Atomes and Dust of many of them scattered, and dispersed) in an instant God will Work that great Change, which the Apostle so much celebrates, 1 Cor. 15. And why shouldst thou not believe the same for thy Soul? Especially, seeing thou hast had Experience of so great a Change wrought in thee in thy Regeneration, from the State and Power of Sin that once held thee, which was a far greater Change then this, being but of Degrees of Holiness; but that was a Change from a total State of Sin, and the Power of it, unto Holiness, though imperfect.

6. There is a great Solemnity used upon the Souls arrival, and first coming thither. I shall take my first rise from that 24th of Jude: Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the Presence of his Glory with exceeding Joy. There are Two Words, that import thus much.

1. A presenting to himself afore the Presence of his Glory.
2. A doing this with exceeding Joy or Triumph.

1. That latter of exceeding Joy is a Joy on all Hands, both on the Souls Part, which now first enters into Joy, and which to be sure hath good Cause to rejoice. The believing Soul rejoiced, when it saw not Christ, but only believ'd on him; and it rejoic'd with a Joy unspeakable, much more now then, when it sees him. There is Joy also of the glorified Saints, especially of those, that knew thee, and were there afore thee, who are therefore said to receive us when we Die, into their Eternal Habitations; Luke 16. and 9. Its spoken after the Manner of Men, as Friends use to entertain and welcome Strangers formerly known to them, that come from far, though they belonging to the same Country themselves were in afore them. And if there be Joy in Heaven at the Conversion of a Sinner among the Angels, as Christ says, then there is Joy at the new coming of such a Soul to Heaven, especially among those Angels, that bring them thither, and among those other Saints fore-mentioned. But above all, there is Joy in the Heart of God and Christ. For if there be Joy in thine own Heart, and in the Angels and Saints, much more in Christs Heart; for Christ hath the great Purchase of his Blood now come home, and his long expected venture is now arrived Safe and Past all Danger. And there is the same Joy in the Heart of God, who chose Thee, and had set his Heart upon thee from Everlasting, and thou comest home to himself, having been sent for by him; when thou hadst been long Absent from him, and wandering in a sinful miserable World. Did the Father of the Prodigal rejoice, and make a Feast, and justify by this, that it was meet, he should make Merry and be Glad, because he, that was lost is found (Luke 15.) then meet it is also in its Proportion, that there should be the like Joy, when a Soul, that hath been Absent from God his Father and his Fathers House (John 14. 1, 2.) so many Years, and during all that space in great Danger of having been lost through manifold Temptations and Hazards, and which had been all along so miraculously kept, and preserved in Christ (as is said in the first Verse of this our Jude) it is very meet that when he first arrives, and appears in the Presence of his Father, there should likewise be great rejoicing, and there is great Cause for it, and indeed the same Reason is for this, as was for the other. And truly, whosoever will consider each Word used here, as 1. Presented to him-

Chap. XIV.

himself, (now so as not afore) and, 2. But now first made perfectly unblameable and faultless, and now new come into God's Presence as not afore; may easily discern, that such a Thing as this (though spoken thus after the Use and Manner of Men) should be intended in this exceeding Joy.

As also it is evident, that it is intended of this first appearing of such separate Souls afore the Presence of God, which begins after this Life ended upon Dissolution. For at the first appearing in any ones Presence that Love us among Men, there useth such exceeding Joy to follow and accompany it. Besides, that this Joy refers to their having escaped, and past through so many Rocks and Hazards, which other Souls had Ship-wrack'd upon, as the whole fore-gone Scope of that Epistle had shewn, and thereby is to be understood in the first Place of that first Admission into Gods Presence, as also that this Time is the first when we are made compleatly Faultless, Ἄμωμοι, that Devils, nor Angels, cannot find any Matter of Blame, nor any such Thing, no not the least.

The first Word (that imports Solemnity) is, that 'tis said, God presenteth them unto himself, as Christ elsewhere is said to present us unto God. The Greek Word ἔστημε here used signifies both to Make, and to Establish, and so understood, it Imports God's making, or establishing us in perfect Holiness afore his Presence. It also signifies to make Present, or to set before ones Presence. And farther, if we compare this with other like Scriptures, it will prove in Sense and Scope the same παρεστήμε; for we find Ephes. 5. 26. that Word in like Manner spoken of Christ, That he might present it to himself a glorious Church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such Thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish. And that faultlessness, there is especially spoken of Sanctification, as by the Verse afore appears, that he might sanctifie it, &c. So when he presents it perfectly sanctified to himself, as being her Husband, and she his Spouse; he is likewise said to present us to his Father, in whose Sight and Presence we are to appear; Colos. 1. 22. To present you holy and unblameable, and unproveable in his Sight, &c. In his Sight, there is meant of the Father, and the Word present in those Places is a Word of Solemnity used of presenting the Male Children unto God (and accordingly 'tis spoken of Christ when presented in the Temple, Luke 2. 22.) or of a Spouse unto an Husband when first brought into his Presence, as of Eve 'tis said (Gen. 2. 22.) God brought Her to Adam as his Wife. So then God the Father here, when he hath compleatly rendred and made us perfectly Holy, presents us to himself as his chosen Children, according to Eph. 1. 4, 5. He hath chosen us to be Holy, and without blame afore him in Love, Ver. 4. And hath predestinated us unto the Adoption of Children to himself, Ver. 5. And we being now at Death accordingly made perfectly Holy, and without Blame, he then presents us to himself (saith Jude here) and Jesus Christ, when any Soul his Spouse being made without wrinkle, and now cometh first so unto him, presents it to himself and to his Father, as his Spouse and his Child; and he doth this by the same Reason, as when the whole Church shall come together, being become without fault, spot, or wrinkle, or any such Thing (as at the latter Day, he then will present her to himself, and solemnly to his Father: Though that is done with infinitely greater Solemnity, when it is of the whole Church, as the Apostle (Eph. 5. 27.) tells us: But in the mean Time he doth it to every particular Soul, at first Approach into the Presence of that Glory. The same Reason in a Proportion holds for this latter as well as the former; so it is confirmed by this, that at the Saints Conversion, Christ is said to present us to his Father, to own and take us as first given to him by Christ; and he doth this often afterward by Intercession.

It was a memorable Speech of an Holy Man, when dying to this Effect; Though I am now (said he) at present filled with the Assurance of God the Fathers Love, and that he will receive me, yet I should dread to appear afore so great a Glory, were not Christ there in Heaven to present me to him.

C H A P. XV.

Of the Glories of Heaven, and the Happiness of glorified Saints therein.

R O M. VIII. xviii.

For I reckon, that the Sufferings of this present Time are not worthy to be compared with the Glory which shall be revealed in us.

MY Design is to raise up your Hearts to Heaven, and to consider that great Glory which God hath prepared for them that Love him, to open and describe Heaven, whereof there are many Uses both to those that are in the State of Nature, and those that are in the State of Grace. There is nothing more powerful to bring Men to Christ, nothing more proportionable to a Principle of Self-love: And there is nothing that is a greater Encouragement to the Godly, that they may willingly and with cheerfulness pass through the Afflictions of this Life, that they may pass through the Evil World with their Hearts raised up to Heaven. The Apostle from the 17th Verse to the end of this Chapter sends it in, beating this upon the Hearts of God's People in stealing their Hearts, and raising them up against Tribulations; and among the rest this is one Incouragement, to consider the Joy which shall not only be revealed to us but in us, which we shall be made Partakers of. The Consideration of Heaven which is so little Thought on by us Christians, this I would lay open to you: In the Excellency of which Glory, that we might more clearly behold it, we might look upon many Things, but I will only Name Two.

First, I will consider it Comparatively, and this the Text leads us unto, For I reckon not the Sufferings, &c. Secondly, Simply as it is in it self.

First of all, To know this great Glory, let us compare it with all other Things, with all the Goods the Creature can afford; with all the Things here below, which our Hearts dote so much upon, as Pleasures, Honours, Riches, Beauty, &c. They are not to be compared to it, it transcends all the Glory of this World, all the good Things we are capable of, one Leaf of this Tree of Life, is better then all the Fruits that grow in this World, Rev. 22. Out of the Bowels of this Earth are raised Gold, Silver, Pearls, and Precious Stones, which serve but for the materials of the Walls of this City and for paving the Streets of it; the most glorious Things this World hath, serve only for the Gates of the Temple. If the outside be so glorious, consider how glorious must the inside be, how beautiful must it be within? No Creature this World hath, is worthy so much as to shadow it; all the Creatures be swallowed up with this Glory, even as a drop is swallowed up with the Ocean. Solomon in all his Royalty, the most magnificent, rich, and glorious Prince the World ever had, lived indeed at the best Rate, he had the very quintessence of all earthly Glory, and Joys, in so much that a Queen herself was amazed to see his great Glory: Yet let me tell you, this Solomon which is now in Heaven, Ten Thousand Times exceeds all the Glory and Pomp he had on Earth; I say, the Glory he hath now in Heaven excels that Glory he had on Earth, being on his Throne in all his Royalty, even as much as he did then excell himself above what he was in his Mothers Womb. We see then the good Things of this Life are not worth talking of, they come far short, they are not worthy to be compared with this Glory of Heaven.
O swallowed.

Chap. XV.

In the Second Place, compare this Glory with the Afflictions we suffer here, and it doth as the Apostle saith, weigh them all down, not only the Afflictions which befall one Man but all Men. Take all of them, be they what they will be, and lay them in one Ballance, and Heaven and its Glory in another, and it will weigh them all down, even as a Grain of Sand will be weighed down of the whole World. There is no reckoning to be made of them in Respect of Heaven, and yet one of these Afflictions will eclipse all the Good we enjoy here; for if we are afflicted, we take no Pleasure in all our worldly Contentments: Therefore we see that the Afflictions of this present Time are not worthy to be compared to the Glory which shall be revealed in us.

In the Third Place, To make a further Demonstration of this to you: There is a Joy which God's People are capable of in this Life; the Joy of the Holy Ghost, which is unspeakable and glorious, one drop of which transcends infinitely all the Joy the Creatures can afford us: My Brethren, have you ever heard of this Joy? Have you ever tasted of it? Hath God ever raised your Hearts to see it and his Glory? If you have but tasted, as the Apostle saith, How good the Lord is, you shall say with David, Psalm 4. Lord lift thou up the Light of thy Countenance upon me. Thou hast put gladness into my Heart more then in the Time when Corn and Wine and Oyl increased. This is the Joy which comes fresh from the Fountain: If the Devil himself when he transforms himself into an Angel of Light affords more Comfort to the Heart of an Hypocrite then the World can do: Why then, how much more doth the Joy of the Holy Ghost which comes from the true Fountains, if it be shed abroad in your Hearts: And hence it was, that the Martyrs suffered so willingly, and ran through so many Persecutions, and yet the Glory which is in Heaven, if it be compared to this, infinitely transcends it. The Joy which shall be revealed swallows up all these Joys which we have here, even as the Sea swallows up Mole-hills; it is nothing in Comparison of Heaven, it is but as a drop to the Ocean, and yet one drop of this Joy of the Holy Ghost is more excellent than Oceans of worldly Comforts. All the Joys of this World is but as a drop to the Ocean, nay the infinite Drops will make a Sea, yet infinite Worlds will not make Heaven; but indeed infinite Drops of this Joy will make Heaven, because it is of the same Nature; yet this Joy of the Holy Ghost is not comparable to the Joys in Heaven, why? Its but the earnest of our Inheritance, 2 Cor. 5. 5. Now be that hath wrought us for the self same Thing is God, who hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit. God doth fashion and prepare his People here, by some small Revenues of their Joys, which shall come in hereafter; and all that the Holy Ghost makes us Partakers of in this Life, is but as a Six Pence in Respect of the whole Payment of Glory, we shall have in Heaven, Phil. 1. 14. The Scriptures calls it no more but the sealing of the Holy Ghost, the Earnest of our Inheritance. Indeed, it is of the same Nature with the great sum of which it is an Earnest; for you know an Earnest differs from a Pledge in this, a Pledge is of another Kind, but the Earnest of the same Kind with the Payment. And so the Joy of the Holy Ghost is of the same Kind with that which is laid up for for us, but it is but an Earnest, and there is Difference in the Manner of producing it. Whatsoever we have here as our Earnest is but from the Light of Faith; we cannot see Christ from whom we have it, we only believe on him as he is Absent; we never saw him, and yet this Works a Joy unspeakable and glorious, 1 Pet. 8. Whilst we apprehend him by Faith, it is but as absent from him: Therefore we are always Confident, 2 Cor. 5. 6. Knowing that whilst we are at home in the Body, we are absent from the Lord. And if we have such Joy in his Absence, and seeing but a small Glimpse, or cranny of Light coming to us by Faith; if this I say, be so glorious, what will it then be, when we shall see him as he is, in which is fulness of Joy? By Faith we see him but not all, and this causeth Joy unspeakable and glorious, what then to see him in Perfection, and have his Presence in the fulness of it; whose Presence in the least Degree of it goeth far beyond all the Sight of him, we have in the highest Degree of Faith, yea in all the Degrees of Faith; and yet the least Degree of Faith excels all the Joy the World can give, and therefore do but think with your selves what Heaven is.

Chap. XV.

Compare it with those Joys, and that Glory the Saints that are now in Heaven enjoy, which infinitely transcends both the good Things of this World, and the Joy of the Holy Ghost, and yet there is a Glory to be revealed after the Day of Judgment that will transcend the present Joy of the glorified Saints. The least drop of Joy here that comes from the Holy Ghost transcends the Joy of the World; the Joy the Saints in Heaven now have, as much transcends the Joy of the Holy Ghost as it doth that of the World, yet after the Day of Judgment, there is a fuller Treasure of Joy, to be broken up; and therefore let this raise up your Hearts to conceive of the exceeding weight of Glory laid up for the Elect; the Saints who are now in Heaven at the Well-head of Comforts, who bathe themselves in these Rivers of Pleasures they have, and are capable of more Joy than we can conceive of. One Saint in Heaven hath more Glory and Joy in his Heart, than all the Joy that is on Earth, and yet at the latter Day, their Glory will as far transcend that they have now, even as it doth ours upon Earth. I may say of their Condition as the Apostle doth, Heb. 11. 40. God having provided some better Things for us, that they without us should not be made perfect. While the Saints are without their Fellows, they are not come to the highest Degree of Perfection, Heb. 12. 23. To the general Assembly and Church of the first Born which are written in Heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the Spirits of just Men made Perfect. There is a Perfection to be given them (which they yet have not) when all their fellow Saints, all their fellow Brethren, when the whole Number of the faithful are together, then shall a new Treasure be broken up, 2 Thess. 1. 10. Who shall come (saith the Text, speaking of Christ) to be glorified in his Saints, and to be admired of all those that believe. We do usually admire a Thing when our Expectation is exceeded, now the Angels and the Souls of the glorified Saints in Heaven, have seen and enjoyed many glorious Things already, and they look for far more glorious Things, but yet Christ will bring forth a Glory at that Day beyond their Expectations; he will not only be admired by wicked Men, but all that believe shall admire this, he will then put them to a new Amazement. Let now the Consideration of this Glory raise up your Hearts to seek for it, that so such an unvaluable and great Price may not pass out of your Hands, even the exceeding great Riches of Glory laid up for us: Again, stand amaz'd at the Love of God, that hath prepared such Glory for you.

Thus much Comparatively, Now Secondly, Let us consider this heavenly Glory simply as it in it self, and because Things are best known by their Causes we will begin with them.

And first of all, I shall consider the Efficient Cause of this great Glory, and that is the great God of Heaven and Earth, whose Greatness and Glory we can-

Chap. XV.

cannot comprehend, but only by his Works. He is the Efficient Cause of Heaven, and all its Glory; he built this great City, and all his Works shall be like himself. If King Ahasuerus make a Feast, he will make it like a King; much more the King of Kings will provide for his Servants whom he Feasts, he made a World, and how glorious is it, but if he make a Heaven, think with your selves what a Heaven it will be: The Scriptures (Heb. 11.) commend this to us, comparing the 10th and 16th Verses together, For he looked, saith he, for a City (speaking of Abraham) which hath Foundations, whose Builder and Founder is God; and then Verse 16. God is not ashamed to be called their God, for he hath built for them a City, mark the Reason. In the first Place it is said to be a City, whose Builder and Founder is God, God is the Artift of it, he shewed his Art in it: In this building of Heaven God shewed himself an Artificer: Indeed God hath made other great Works, as the World; but he hath shewed no Art upon this in Comparison of Heaven. The Heavens which we see, are but the feeling of this Heaven which God hath prepared for his Saints, and yet they are very glorious, but yet he hath bestowed no cost in Comparison, he hath shewed no Art on it in Respect of Heaven; he hath bestowed all his cost on this, and in making Heaven he shewed himself an Artificer. And would you know the Reason of it? It is because Heaven is his standing House. Kings you know use to enrich their standing Houses, they bestow more cost upon them then others. Now this World my Brethren, is not a House that hath Foundation, but it was builded by God as a Stage upon which when Men have acted their Parts, it is to be thrown down; it is set up for a few Thousand Years which are nothing to him, and then he means to pull it down, and he will then burn it: But Heaven is Gods standing House, his Pallace, and therefore consider what great cost God hath bestowed on it. Again, it is said to be a City prepared, Matth. 25. 24. Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the beginning of the World: He speaks as if God had been a great while in making Heaven (God hath been long in contriving it) nay further, saith Christ, I go to prepare a Place, as if it were still in finishing, or as if it were not yet finished. Not but that all Gods Works are Perfect from the beginning, but it is spoken after the manner of Men, that we might expect great Glory, for which there is such great Preparation. And (saith Christ) If it were not so, I would have told you: Think what you will think of it, and it will be answerable, God will fulfil it. Heaven is a City prepared; if there be but Preparation for a Coronation of an Earthly King a Month or a Quarter of a Year, there are great Things expected, and yet more is shewed; but now God hath been always in preparing Heaven, he hath been making of it from the beginning of the World. David laid up Materials for the Temple, and Solomon builded; so God prepares Heaven and Christ builds it. And therefore consider with your selves, there are great Things to be found, expect what you can and it shall be answered. And thus you see God hath made a Heaven with a Foundation, he hath been long in preparing of it, he set up the World in Six Days, but he hath been setting up Heaven, as I may so say, Six Thousand Years, and therefore let this raise up your Hearts to consider what a weight of Glory God hath laid up for those that Love him.

Secondly, Consider the meritorious Cause of it, which is Christ the Lord of Glory. Christ Jesus himself hath purchased it for us in his Blood, he hath laid the Foundation of it, his Blood was laid out for it; he spun this Thred of Glory out of his own Bowels, and therefore we may well argue the greatness of this Glory, seeing that his Blood hath obtained it; Eph. 1. 18. It is there called the Riches of the Glory of his Inheritance. All the Inheritance that Christ hath, he distributes unto the Saints: This is said to be a Purchased Possession; why, now my Brethren think with your selves, what shall be the Revenues of Glory purchased by his Death? Think what a large Possession the Blood of Christ will procure? Consider with your selves what this will amount to? And this is Heaven, Heaven is the Revenues of Christs Blood.

Think,

Think, I say, what glorious Heaven it must needs be which Christ's Blood hath purchased for us? This is that he aimed at in laying down his Life for us; for Justification, Adoption, and Sanctification, are but the way to Glorification; and we are justified, adopted and sanctified all to this End, that we might be glorified. Consider therefore what Christ's Blood will be worth, what the Revenues of it will come to; and therefore what hath been said of Heaven, let it move you, and work upon you. If I should single out any Man present, any particular Man in this Congregation, as our Saviour did the Young Man in the Gospel, and bid him forsake all, and he shall have Treasure in Heaven: This would be a great Offer. Now I single out every Man here present; consider with your selves, you all stand arrested before God; you deserved to be accursed, and to be Eternally so, yet if you will leave all your Iniquities, Repent, and Believe, you shall have Glory in Heaven. Methinks now you should lay hold on this offer, and think no strictness too much, so you could get Heaven. If you were Merchant-like Men, you would not let Heaven, this precious Heaven pass you, you would lay hold on it, and spend all you had to get it; and to be made Partakers of those unvaluable Treasures. Do but think with thy self, thou canst not bid enough for it: 1 Cor. 1. 14. Strive and run, so run that you may attain, and every one that striveth for the Mastery is Temperate in all Things; Now they do it that they may have a corruptible, but we an incorruptible Crown. And if Men be so careful here on Earth to obtain Temporal Preferments, much more then run to get that Preferment which of all other is the Chief, even Everlasting Happiness in Heaven. It is for Heaven an incorruptible Crown, for Heaven that transcends all other Things, and think with your selves how it will trouble you if you come short of your Prize? What a fearful and sorrowful Voice will it be to you, who can express your Anguish, when you hear Heaven and your Crown is parted from you? It was a pittiful saying to Nebuchadnezzar, Thy Kingdom is departed from thee; much more will it then be to any of us, to hear that we have lost Heaven; how will it astonish thee to hear Christ say, Heaven and thy Crown is departed from thee, thou must be turned to Devils for ever, this will be thy Condition to the End? It is our Duty to speak unto you, we can but Exhort you, we can do no more; Matth. 10. 14. If they will not retain it, saith he, shake off the Dust of your Feet as a Testimony against them. If ye look not to your Selves in this Life, this will be the Event of it. Oh how will it fret you to the Heart; what inutterable Perplexities will you be in, when you see others follow Christ to his Glory, and you your selves have that Curse denounced against you, Go you Cursed, &c. Alas then it will be too late to get Heaven: Oh! What Terrour and Amazement, what bitter Anguish to think Heaven came near unto me; it was offered me, and yet because I would not Part with some darling Sin, some beloved Corruption, some base Lust, I have lost my Interest in it; I must not Partake of those Rivers of Pleasures in Heaven. This certainly will be the Issue, except here, whilst you have space, you make sure this Crown to your selves by Faith and Repentance.

I proceed in the Third Place to the exemplary Cause; and the greatness of this Glory appears from this. This exemplary Cause is the Glory of Jesus Christ himself; consider, the great Glory of the Lord of Glory is the nearest Pattern of it, and therefore in Scripture that Glory the Saints shall have in Heaven is said to be like his, we shall be like the Lord of Glory. He is not only made the efficient and meritorious Cause, but also the exemplary Cause of this Glory, and what can be said more then this, we shall be made like to Christ Jesus, who is the Lord of Glory, the Eye of all Things, the First-born of every living Creature, in whom all Excellencies remain, and all fulness dwells; Oh then, what Infinite Glory to be like what Jesus Christ now is? Why, thou shalt be made like to him, John 17. 24. That they may behold my Glory which thou hast given me. But that is not all, though this was sufficient to make us Happy: A Beggar may behold

Chap. XV.

hold the Glory of a King, and be never the Happier for it; nay, be more sad in his Thoughts, because none of his Glory reflects upon himself; but saith our Saviour, John 17. 22. The Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them, that they may be one, even as we are one; we shall wear the same kind of Glory which Christ wears, and he wears all the Glory both of Heaven and Earth about him at all Times, what kind of Glory shall we then wear? We shall be made like unto his glorious Body. As we were all born like Adam, so we shall be made like Christ, for we are said to be predestinated, to be made conformable to the Image of his Son, so that as we were predestinated to be made like him in Grace and Sufferings here, so likewise in Glory. We see here but as in a Glass the Glory of Christ, and yet are changed into the same Image from Glory to Glory; 2 Cor. 5. last, But we all with open Face beholding as in a Glass the Glory of the Lord, are changed into the same Image from Glory to Glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord: If we seeing him here upon Earth as an Holy and Righteous Man, conceive him to have such Glory in him: Consider Brethren what that shall be when we shall see him as he is, what a Comfort will that be, when we shall see him Face to Face in Heaven, and being made Partakers of his Glory, we shall be like him, 1 John 3. 2. Behold now we are the Sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him.

In the Fourth Place, Let us consider both the Object and Subject of this Glory. And First, The Object of this Happiness is not any other Creature, but God himself; no Creature in Heaven and Earth is the Matter of our Happiness, but God himself will be made Happiness to us; he will not only be the efficient Cause, but the material Cause of our Happiness: Gen. 17. He sums up all in himself, I will (says he) be an All-sufficient God unto thee. He Promises himself, not Heaven separated from himself, but he will give us his own Glory; and he doth not only Promise us great and glorious Things to be Created by him, but he himself will be our Heaven; Psalms 72. Whom have I in Heaven but Thee, and there is none that I desire on Earth, besides Thee. Mark the Phrase, indeed there are all other Things here on Earth which we may stand in need of; but saith David, though I have need of them, yet none of them all I desire besides Thee. God alone made David Happy, for indeed God himself makes Heaven, though there were neither Saint nor Angel: Indeed they are all there, but we need nothing but God and Christ to make us Happy. It is said of the glorious City described in the Revelation, this glorious City which is indeed the immediate Fore-runner of Heaven, Rev. 21. 23. The City had no need of Sun or Moon to shine in it, for (saith he) the Glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the Light thereof: Why, my Brethren, though there be many glorious Things in Heaven, though there be the Fruition of the Company of Saints and Angels, yet that is not it which makes us Happy, but God is our Happiness. Indeed the glorious Societies of the glorified Bodies of Saints is very delectable, and Ten Thousand Times excels all the Delights of Creatures here below; yet I say, we have no need of them to make us Happy: It is but over-plus, God himself and Christ Jesus make our Heaven and Happiness. Think now with your selves what Heaven is, are we all able to consider what it is to have God to be our Happiness? It is impossible for you to conceive it, and for me to express it. I can no more reveal what God will do to you, then this Light can reveal the Light of the Sun, which can be known by no Light but its own. In the first Place God contains all Things; all manner of Divine Perfections are bound up in him. The Pleasures of this Earth are scattered here and there, and therefore the Soul goes wandring up and down from one Creature to another, from one Flower to another; because some Part of his Happiness is in one, some Part in another; but my Brethren, in God we have all Happiness summed up, and wrapped together; all our Delights are together ther in him; Rev. 21. 7. He that overcomes shall inherit all Things, and I will be his God, and he shall be my Son: Consider with your Self that God himself can but inherit all Things, and indeed he is all Things; and if we have God for our God, we shall inherit all Things; he will be Meat and Drink, Wife, Husband, and whatsoever else unto us, he will be all Things to us himself; and therefore it is said, 1 Cor. 14. 18. That at the Day of Judgment, when Christ shall give up the Kingdom, then all Things shall be put under him, that God may be all in all; which implies Two Things:

Chap. XV.

First, That God himself will be our Happiness, he will be Happiness enough, for he is all in all.

Secondly, That he will be all unto us in a more transcendent Manner than the Glory of the Creatures, I may compare these Joys of Heaven to those Receipts which contain the very Spirits of Things, the very Life and Quint-essence of Things extracted out, a little Quantity whereof, as much as will lie on a Knives Point, is of more Vertue and Efficacy to work upon a Mans Body (because they are the Spirits) then a great Quantity of all other Drugs: So now these Contentments which God gives are the very Spirits of Comforts which will add more Happiness, than all the Drugs of worldly Pleasures can administer unto us. For all the Happiness that could be had here; nay further, all the Happiness God could Create to Men as Men here on Earth, are but as one drop to the bottomless Ocean of Gods Glory: And yet this falls short, this is too scant a Comparison: For I say; Infinite Millions of drops will at length make an Ocean, but Ten Thousand Millions of the Glories of this World cannot make up one drop of the Glory which is in God. Thus God will be all Things to us, and all Things in a Transcendent Manner.

Again, Thirdly, God will pour out himself unto us, he will give us Communication with himself of this his Infinite Happiness, he will pour out all his Glory unto us; Ephes. 3. 19. That ye might be filled with all the fulness of God, which will give all Comfort; open thy Mouth wide, he is able to fill it, for one drop of God will fill thee full; he will fill thee with fulness, and fulness of the best Kind: Oh! what ineffable Comfort will this be, when the Vessels of Mercy shall be thrown into this bottomless Sea of Glory. Therefore do but think with your selves, what a Happiness this will be, when you shall be made Partakers of Gods Glory, of all the Blessedness that is in God; for although he cannot give us his Glory essentially, yet it shall as truly seem to make us Happy as it doth to make him Glorious.

Fourthly, We shall be made one with him, they are Christs own Words, John 17. 21, 22, 23. That they all may be one, as thou O Father art in me, and I in thee, even that they be also one in us, that the World may believe that thou hast sent me; and the Glory that thou gavest me I have given them, that they may be one as we are one, I in them and thou in me, that they may be made Perfect in one, and that the World may know, that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me. My Brethren, what is it that makes God Happy, but God himself, and what is that which makes Christ so Happy, but that he is equal with God the Father? Now if God make himself Happy, how Happy shall we be then when we communicate with God in this his Happiness. To be one with him then must needs make us Happy, indeed we cannot be one with him as Christ is, for he is the brightness of his Glory, the express Image and Character of his Person, he is the natural Son of God, and of the same Nature with God, but we shall be made one with him so far as the Creature is capable of; and the next Union to that which God and Christ have one with another we shall have. And again, being made one with God, we shall rejoice in all that God rejoiceth in. That God is so glorious a God it shall make thee glorious, thou shalt have all those Joys by Revenues out of what he now lives in Heaven, thou shalt rejoice more in God's Happiness than in thine own, the more Happiness riseth to God, the more riseth to thee: That which is the Matter of Gods Glory be the Matter of ours; it is the Nature of Love, that it rejoiceth in the Love of the Person beloved; John 14. You are my Friends, if you do whatsoever I command you. Our Saviour saith also to his Disciples, If ye loved me, you would have rejoiced, because I said, I go to the Father. Now my Brethren, if we shall rejoice in the same God rejoiceth in, both in that Joy which is intrinsic within him, and in that Joy which is extrinsic, whereby he Delights in all his Works and Providence; if both these I say, shall be in us, how glorious shall we be? John 15. 11. Christ saith, These Things have I spoken unto you, that my Joy might remain in you, and that your Joy might be full. And this is not to be understood of our Saviours Joy, of the Hopes he had of them, but that the Joy which is in Christ shall be in us, that my Joy, saith he, may be in you, Matth. 25. 25. We shall enter into our Masters Joy, Rom. 5. 2. And rejoice in the Hope of the Glory of God, and not only so, but we Joy also in God, through our Lord Jesus Christ. We shall not only rejoice in a created Glory which he shall bestow upon us, but further we shall rejoice in Gods own Glory.

ous

Chap. XV.

USE. Let us therefore take God for our Portion, whatsoever else becomes of us, whatsoever befalls us; let what will come, what Afflictions, what Throbs, what Miseries or Crosses will come, Heaven will make amends for all; God will be better to thee then all: Put them all in one Ballance, and God with that Glory he will bestow on you in another Ballance, and he will over-weigh them all, for they are not worthy to be compared to this Glory. This was it that made the Martyrs run through so many Persecutions and Tortures and that with chearfulness, they took God for their Portions, so they had him they cared not what became of their Bodies: For, saith Paul, We look not to things which are corruptible, but to Things which are Eternal. And because it is probable; yea, and more then probable, that there are Degrees of Glory in Heaven, that God will Reward every one according to their Works: Do not only Content your selves to go to Heaven, but endeavour to serve God more, that you may have great Glory in Heaven; be abundant in good Works, hoord up good Works, according to which Glory shall be weighed to you in Heaven. Let not Pleasures hinder thee of the least Degree of Glory, for to have but one Pearl added to thy Crown is more then the whole World: Commit therefore no Sin that might hinder your attaining of Glory, for what though God Pardon thy Sin? Yet thou loofest Glory which thou mightest have gotten whilest thou wast committing the Sin, the least Shred of which Glory transcends all the Glory of the World.

5. Now we come to the Subject of this Glory: The Vessel which shall receive this Infinite Mass of Glory, and that is the Soul, for it is called the Salvation of our Souls; the Soul which will hold so much is the Vessels of this Glory, for the Body shall be exceeding glorious, yet the Soul is the receptacle which must receive this Glory, Rom. 9. 23. And that he might make known the Riches of his Glory on the Vessels of Mercy which he had before prepared unto Glory; and St. Peter calleth Christ the Salvation of our Souls, the End of your Faith, the Salvation of your Souls: My Brethren your Soul, howsoever you value it, is capable of more Glory than this World can afford, the Pleasures of which will fill your Soul no more than one drop will fill a Cistern, or a little Shower the Place where the Ocean stands, Eccl. 3. 11. Now it is said, that in this Life God will put a World into the Heart of Man, and yet all that World will not fill it; why, my Brethren your Souls are narrow in this Life, in respect of that they shall be hereafter, they hold but little in Respect of that they shall hold in Heaven, they are are but little Bladders which there shall be blown up, they are but clung Bladders in Respect of that they shall be in Heaven hereafter, which may appear in this: Solomon had a very large Heart, he had as many Notions in him as the Sands of the Sea-shore for Number, and yet the Soul of the least Child in Heaven, happily but new come out of his Mother's Womb exceeds all the Knowledge which Solomon had on Earth: Our Souls are capable of more Joys then the Senses can give, they are not able to satisfy it, it will drink up more Glory even in one Hour, then the Senses can provide in many Hundred Years, it will drink them all up at one Draught. My Beloved, your Senses cannot let in the King of Glory, such narrow Gates cannot receive such infinite great Glory, Psalms 24.

Chap. XV.

In Heaven the Doors of your Hearts shall be opened, and when those Doors are open, even when the Everlasting Doors of your Hearts are open, they cannot contain this Glory, you must be contained in it; Enter, faith Christ, into thy Master's Joy. If the Joy of the Holy Ghost in this Life pass all Understanding, and Believing, and we rejoice with Joy unspeakable, and full of Glory: How much more in the World to come, shall our Joys pass all Understanding, when we shall have Fruition of God's Presence, which is Life it self? Your Souls have Two great Gulphs, viz. The Understanding and the Will, which must and shall be satisfied.

1. The Understanding shall be satisfied? Now faith Solomon, The Eye of the Body is not satisfied with seeing, it can comprize half the World in it, and if the Eye of the Body be so hard to be satisfied, much more the Eye of the Soul, and yet in Heaven this shall be satisfied, this Gulph shall be satisfied, Psalms 17. 15. I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy Likeness. He was to lay his Head in the Grave for a while, but he should arise when the Heavens shall be no more. As Job said, I shall see him again; so David, I shall awake, and then I shall be satisfied with thy Likeness. Shew us the Father (faith Philip, John 14. 18.) and it sufficeth us; you will say, if you could but see God, it would suffice, and indeed you may well say so, for the sight of God will suffice you. Why you shall see God, John 17. 24. For Christ doth desire this especially, those who are his, to make Happy, to be with him, to behold his Face: Father, I will that they also, that thou hast given me to be with me where I am, that they may behold my Glory which thou hast given me. So Matth. 5. 8. Blessed are the Pure in Heart, for they shall see God; they shall be able to behold him. If the Queen of Sheba, who had seen so much Glory before, and being a Queen had partaken of so much Glory in her self; if she, I say, was so astonished, so amazed, that she had no Spirit in Her when she saw Solomon's Wisdom, and his Magnificency in Honour, and Riches: How much more shall the Glory of God ravish us, Part of which we never saw, no not the Glimpse of it. Oh! How wilt thou be amazed with Joy when thou shalt see his Glory, and see him as he is, when we shall know as we are known, and God knows us as far as can be; 1 Cor. 13. 12. For now we see through a glass darkly, but then Face to Face; now we know but in Part, but then we shall know even as we are known, all our sight of him here, it is but as in a Glass. Now what a great Difference is it to look upon a Man who is behind us, and to turn our Face and to look truly and stedfastly upon him? There is infinitely more Difference betwixt that Light we have of God by Faith on Earth, and that Perfect Light of him, and Fruition of his Glory, which we shall have in Heaven: Why the Eye of a Mans Body is but a small Thing, and the Apple of it much smaller, and yet by the help of this little Sun, the Body is able to take half the World into it at once: How much more shall the Eye of our Understanding conceive Infinite Joys (past our Apprehension here) when it hath the Light of God's Glory shining about it, Psalms 36. 8, 9: They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fulness of thy House. And thou shalt make them Drink of the Rivers of thy Pleasures; for with thee is the

Chap. XV.

Fountain of Life, in thy Light shall we see Light. When as the Son of Glory comes to shine about us, we shall even draw God into our Souls; and thus you see the first Gulph shall be filled.

2. The Second Gulph of Man's Soul is the Will, thou hast a Will, and amongst all the Affections of it; Love is most comfortable (now that shall be fully satisfied, we shall be satisfied with Gods loving Kindness, Psalms 73.) for all other Affections bring Pain with them, but Love is always comfortable (Phil. 2. 1.) If there be any Consolation of Christ, if any Comfort of Love. We Love Things here on Earth that cannot Love us again, as Money, Riches, and the like; how much more shall we Love it self? Indeed, as Solomon saith, The Love of Friends, is very delectable (Prov. 27. 9.) Ointment and Perfume rejoice the Heart, so doth the sweetness of a Mans Friend by hearty Counsel. The same testifies David in his Lamentation for Jonathan, 2 Sam. 1. 26. I am distressed for thee my Brother Jonathan, very pleasant hast thou been unto me; thy Love to me was wonderful, passing the Love of a Woman: But I say, though the Love of Friends be great, Jonathan exceeding lovely, yet they are not so lovely as God; for it cannot be affirmed of them, that they are Love it self as God is. Oh then! How pleasant will it be when this vast Affection of Love shall be satisfied? God will come into us and dwell with us, and do but think what a pleasant Thing it is to have the great God of Heaven and Earth to dwell together with the Creature in Unity, to have him who is Love it self to dwell in us to all Eternity. It is said (1 Pet. 1. 8.) Whom having not seen you, in whom though you see him not, yet believing you rejoice with Joy unspeakable and glorious. If that be a Cause to make you rejoice so unspeakably, how much more joyful will you be when you enjoy his Presence, not only to kiss him through the Lattice, as here we do, enjoy only his Presence through his Ordinances; but to lie in the Bosom of his Love, to be enfolded in those Everlasting Arms of his Mercy; to be loved of Love it self, to be made Partaker of all his Goodness. And God's Love is free, he loves us without any Cause in our selves: Why then Brethren, consider with your selves, what is the height, depth, breadth, and length of God's Love, what it is to be filled with all Fulness of God (Eph. 3. 8.) Oh what a bottomless Sea of God's Love shall we be flung into, one drop of which is better then the Gold of Ophir; yea, surpasseth the whole Earth!

In the Last Place, I will endeavour to shew the final Cause, and demonstrate the greatness of Heaven, by the end why God hath prepared all this Glory, and the Persons for whom.

1. For whom is it, that God hath been from Everlasting preparing Glory? Is it not for his Saints? Is it not for his Friend and Spouse? Is it not for Sion, Heb. 12. But you are come into Mount Sion, and into the City of the Living God, the heavenly Hierusalem, and to an innumerable Company of Angels, to the general Assembly and Church of the First-born, which are written in Heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the Spirits of Just Men made Perfect, and to Jesus the Mediator of the New Covenant, and to the Blood of the sprinkling that speaks better Things then that of Abel. God hath reserved Heaven for us, Heaven is made for the Feasting of his First-born, he hath in Heaven all his Children about him, there shall be called a general Assembly of them, one will not be away. You know Parents bestow the most Cost when they have their Children all at once together; they respect no Cost, looking at the Joy, which is set before them: They have Joy unspeakable in the Presence of their Children together, and therefore at Times of rejoicing Men will send for their Children home. Now, my Brethren, God will have all his Children home, he will have a general Invitation, the great Congregation of the Elect shall be called together. He will have them all home, and therefore he must needs make great Provision. Consider der what he hath vouchsafed to wicked Men, the Worst of Men; who run away with the Blessings of the World, though they are such as God hath set himself against to hate with an Eternal Hatred? Why then think with your selves what he hath prepared for those that Love him, whom with an Everlasting Love he hath loved in his Son, for his Sons sake which is as great as himself? Certainly to them he will communicate himself to the uttermost: I say, then think with your selves what God hath prepared for those that Love him.

Chap. XV.

Secondly, Consider the End for which this is, and that is, to manifest his own Glory. He truly hath had a great deal of Glory out of this World already; for the Heavens declare the Glory of God, and the Firmament sheweth his Handy-work. He hath had a great deal of Glory out of this World by justifying poor Sinners, and sanctifying their Hearts, and also by Punishments inflicted upon wicked Men; but all this is nothing to that Glory he meaneth to have, not comparable to that he will have in Heaven, 2 Theff. 3. 10. When he shall come to be glorified in his Saints, and be admired of all them that believe. We think wonderful Things of God, and yet all our Thoughts shall come far short of the Excellency of his coming, he will come beyond our Expectation, he will come to Purpose, to be admired of all them that believe. The Matter of Gods Glory, the Revenues of it must come out of you, the chiefest of his Glory; as for the Manifestation of it, must come forth of you, for he will come to be glorified in his Saints, he will then shew how glorious a God he is, by Manifestation of his Glory. It must come forth of that, he will come to be glorified in his Saints; he will then shew how glorious a God he is, by manifesting what glorious Creatures he hath made. It is not a little Glory that will Content God, it is not a little Glory that will Content a King when he meaneth to take State; Rom. 1. He will glorifie himself as God, or else he would never have begun, he would never have gone about it, unless he meant to do it to the utmost. And in what doth this his Glory consist? Why, in making us glorious, and the Manifestation of his Glory, as he is God, comes from us. It is true indeed, Gods essential Glory cannot be added unto us, but the Manifestation of his Glory shall arise to us, we shall have it communicatively, as when you see the Sun reflect upon the Waters, though you see not the Sun it self, yet you see as perfect a Manifestation of it, as if you should see the Sun it self: So likewise, though you cannot have Gods Glory essentially, yet you shall have it perfectly communicated to you, manifested in you; 2 Cor. 8. 23. And therefore the Saints are there called, The Glory of Christ. Now think with your selves, God hath had Infinite vast Thoughts of glorifying himself; there hath been a Fountain of Thoughts in him for that Cause, and that unceasing Spring which hath run in God from all Eternity must needs make a vast Sea; and who must be the Vessels that must go into this, into whom all this must be emptied? Are they not those that Love him, those that he hath loved with an Everlasting Love? Why then, do but think with your selves, how unutterable are the Joys we shall have in Heaven.

I would add something more to it, if any Thing more can be added to it; and if I but mention the Properties, they will further add to this Glory and make it abound. Ple Name no more than those we have already laid down to our Hands; 1 Pet. 1. 45. Elect to an Inheritance incorrupted and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, revealed in the last Times.

In the first Place, It is an Inheritance, the Deed of which runs for ever to Christ; and his Heirs. The subtlest Lawyer that is, yea such an one as can almost find a Knot in a Bulrush shall not be able to pick the least Hole in your Evidence. It is an Inheritance also, to which every one of you shall be Heirs, and shall have an Everlasting Possession in it. It is not in Heaven, as it is in this World, where the Elder Brother is only Heir, and goes away with the Inheritance, when many times the Younger are Beggars; but in Heaven it is not so, for there we shall be all Heirs and Coheirs with Christ: And the Reason of it is, because it is called the Inheritance of the Saints; Col. 2. 12. Giving thanks unto the Father, who hath made us meet to be Partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in Light. Why my Brethren, now you know Light is such a Thing as is common to all, so that if there were Ten Thousand Times more Men in the World than there is, they might enjoy it; neither doth any Envy at the Light another hath. Now Heaven is an Inheritance of the Sons in Light which we shall be Partakers of; and therefore there shall be no envying of one anothers Happiness and Light in Glory. You may be all Heirs; yea, you shall be all Heirs, there are no Younger Brethren. Again, alas in this Life the Livings we possess, and the Inheritance of them passeth from one to another, from the Father to the Son; yea, and further, all the Evidence they have will be burnt one Day; they will be made void at the Day of Judgment. The whole World will be burnt and what will become of their Inheritance?

Chap. XV.

2. But now Secondly, This Inheritance is Eternal, Incorruptible, 1 Cor. 5. 1. For we know, that if this earthly House of our Tabernacle be dissolved; we have, A building with God not made with Hands, Eternal in the Heavens. An Inheritance, that will be for ever. Why, now think what Eternity is, and think of it again, it will even amaze your Thoughts. Length of Time is that which multiplies our Joys here upon Earth; for to enjoy a Thing many Years is our greatest Joy, and if we can so enjoy it, there lies our Comfort; hence those Words of the rich Man in the Gospel, Soul take thy rest, for thou hast Goods laid up for many Years. What a Happiness then is it, not only to enjoy an Inheritance many Years, but for ever, to have Goods laid up for ever? What a Mercy is it that they are for ever? The Eternity of them adds to our Joys. It was a rejoicing to David, that God would give him a Kingdom; but more, that he would prepare a Kingdom to his House a great while, 2 Sam. 7. 18, 19. Then went King David and sate before the Lord and said; Who am I, O Lord God, and what is my House, that thou hast brought me hitherto? And was this yet a small Thing in thy Sight, O Lord God, but thou hast spoken of thy Servants House, for a great while to come. David took it for a great Favour, that God would bestow a Kingdom upon him, and yet, saith he, This was but a small Thing in thy Sight: What was it a small Thing to give a Kingdom? No, but there was another Thing more than a Kingdom, and that was, that his Posterity should sit on the Throne for a great while, this made the Mercy the greater. If Heavens Glory should last but for a few Days or Years, it were worth more seeking after than all the Things of this World. Now we make a great Strife for momentary Trifles in this World, but Heaven shall last for ever: It hath an Everlasting Evidence, it shall never have an End: The Day thereof is for a long Day, for it is for Eternity, and a Day. Again, David was to Die himself and to leave the Glory of his Kingdom to another, yet he took it for a great Favour and Mercy, that it was promised to his House for a great while; but now in Heaven we shall never Die; we shall possess our Kingdom in our own Persons to Everlasting: Whereas the Pleasures and Riches we enjoy here must go to others. The Rich Man in the Gospel sings to his Soul: Soul thou hast Goods in store laid up for many Years; Eat, Drink, and take thy Rest: But Mark the Answer, Thou Fool, this Night shall thy Glory be taken from thee. Now in Heaven it is far otherwise, we shall never be deprived of our Glory; why, let not the least Thought of Jealousie come into our Minds. For this Place is incorruptible, and not only incorruptible in it self, but also in those that enjoy it, we shall be ever with the Lord, we shall be the Persons. The Kingdoms of this World were brave Places if they might have no End, the Kings of them exceeding Happy if they might might never Die, but live always: But alas, though they live like Gods, they shall Die like Men. Now in Heaven there is no such Thing, there is no Dying nor talk of Dying, but Mortality shall be swallowed up of Immortality; we shall enjoy those inexhaustible Rivers of Pleasures to Eternity.

Chap. XV.

3. Now we come to the next Property. It is incorruptible and undefiled, 1 Cor. 5. 25. All the Comforts we have in this Life are mixt with Sin, yea with the Impotency of Sin and Misery; so that one saith well to this Purpose: Though the Joyes of a King be many and greater then others, yet they have as many Sorrows attending upon them as Joys, and if not Crofles, yet Sin the greatest Crofs of all, if Men be sensible of it: But Heaven is undefiled, there is no Anguish, no Grief, no Tears, no Sorrows, but Joys to all Eternity. There shall be no vexing Canaanites to trouble you, neither outward nor inward Enemies, Isa. 35. And the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Sion with Songs, and Everlasting Joy shall be upon their Heads: They shall obtain Joy and Gladness, and Sorrow and Sighing shall fly away. Here the of Sin afflicts us, the Punishments due unto the same affright us, one Man is troubled with a Lust which he would fain Master, another Man cries out with the Apostle, O miserable Man that I am, &c. Qualms come over many Mens Hearts for the guilt of Sin; and how many throes have they before they can get Sin abandoned! Another is vexed with some tormenting Malady and grievous Sicknes in his Body; but in Heaven we shall be freed from these Sorrows, there shall be neither Soul nor Body Sick, Isa. 33. 24. And they in Heaven shall not say, I am Sick, the People that dwell therein shall be forgiven their Iniquity: There shall be no Thought of the Pardon of Sin, for the Inhabitants that dwell therein shall be forgiven their Iniquities: That is, those Sins which they have committed in this Life shall be forgiven there. There is no Thought of Sin in Heaven, there it shall be everlastingly Buried in Oblivion.

Object. But you will say, this Glory may wither and decay; it may wax Old and Decline.

Answer. There is no fading in Heaven, for with God there is no variableness, no not so much as a shadow of Changing. The Glory of Kingdoms decay daily, and Monarchies fall; as the Roman Empire, what a glorious Monarchy was it! But now it is come almost unto a bare Title. But in Heaven there is no decaying, no failing, there is always a full Spring-Tide without Ebb. That Infinite Mass of Glory which thou shalt receive at the last Day, thou shalt keep for ever: After as many Millions of Years expired as there are Hairs on thy Head, it shall be as bright as it was on the last Day, and the Reason of it is because of God's Presence, we shall be present with him who is the Fountain of Life, whose Streams of Glory must needs Issue to Eternity, For at his Right Hand is fulness of Joy, and Rivers of Pleasure flow from him for evermore: So long as God fades not, Heaven will never fade: When God himself fades, when that Fountain can be dried up, then those Rivers of Pleasures shall cease flowing, but that is impossible, for he is the Well of Life. What is the Reason that precious Stones decay not, but that there is no Dross or Corruption in them? As the Diamond being pure in it self fades not away, but always keeps a Lustre and Splendour in it, whereas other base Stones that have Dross in them soon Decay and Moulder away. In like Manner, though this World have Dross in it, and by Reason of that perisheth, yet in Heaven there is no Dross of Sin or Corruption, and therefore it cannot fade.

Why now you will say again, grant all this you have said before, yet I doubt I may be bereaved of it: It may be taken away from me by Violence, for Kingdoms in this Life are taken away, and Kings are deprived of their Dignities.

Chap. XV.

Dignities. But there is no fear of this in Heaven, it is kept for you sure enough, no Moths of Corruption to make you Sin, no Violence of Satans Temptations to make you fall: For though the Devil and Sin crept into Paradise, yet neither of them shall come into Heaven; (Matth. 6. 20.) Lay up Treasures for your selves in Heaven, where neither Moth nor Rust doth corrupt, nor Thieves break in and steal.

But you will say again, if I could once get thither, I had no cause to fear, I should never fall if I were once in Heaven; but I fear the Vileness of my own Heart, I fear I shall be defiled with my Corruptions and by Satan: And as David said, I shall one Day perish by the Hand of Saul; I am afraid I may perish hereafter, though I now be in the State of Grace, I may fall, and never come thither.

But look further, it is said, It is reserved for you who are kept by the Power of God to Salvation; you are kept for it, Christ hath reserved it for you, who saith further, Of those which thou hast given me, I have not lost one. If all the Power of the Creator lie for it, you shall not lose it: But it doth, therefore you shall not lose it. And Lastly, Thou shalt not stay long for it, thou shalt not be a Probationer, but till thy Death at the farthest: it is laid up ready for thee, a Crown of Glory waites and staies for thee. But now all these Things are shewed, this is the Misery, that we will not believe, In my Fathers House, saith he, there are many Mansions; If it had not been so, I would have told you. He will not deceive us, believe him on his Word; we use to believe the Promise of a Man we judge faithful, much more let us Credit God who is Truth it self. Therefore as ever we would be Partakers of these Joys, and have Part and Portion in these Eternal Comforts: Let the belief them be stedfast, and though there be many uses to be made of this, yet this is the chief, that we would believe this Truth. Indeed you believe, but I say unto you believe, and again believe: Those that entered not into the Promised Land, entered not, because they did not believe. This is the Cause that Men perish, and enter not into Gods rest, I say therefore believe God, seeing he hath fulfilled all his Promises, and hath not failed in one since the beginning. The Land of Canaan he gave according to his Promise long before (1 Kings 8. 23.) Lord thou keepest Covenant and Mercy with thy Servants (verse 26.) Blessed be the Lord that hath given rest to his People Israel, according to all that he promised by the Hand of his Servant Moses. If he hath promised that Ten Kings shall destroy the Whore (as indeed he did) she shall be destroyed, he will not fail in his Promise, he hath spoken, and he will make it good, he is abundant in Mercy and Truth; yea, he will be better then his Word. Let me speak therefore to you that are yet in the State of Nature, who still delight in your Sins: If you believed these Things, surely you would not dote on your Sins as you do; it would make you utterly abandon them: And also let me say something to you, whose Eyes God hath opened, who are in the State of Grace; surely, if you laboured more and more to perswade your selves of this, you would not be so glued to the World as you are; it would make you like Men of another World, you would be transformed, and be even as if you were in Heaven. Let then all your Carriage and Manner of Conversation be here, as if you were in your Inheritance above; let all your Thoughts be in Heaven, let your Hearts take Possession of this incorruptible Crown. whilest your Bodies are on Earth.

THE WORKS

OF

Thomas Goodwin, D. D.

The Fifth Volume.

PART IV.

CONTAINING

DISCOURSES,

- I. Of the Glory of the Gospel.
 - II. Of the Supereminence of Christ above Moses.
 - III. Of the Reconciliation of all the People of God design'd, and effected by Christ's Death.
 - IV. A Brief History of the Kingdom of Christ.
 - V. Of the State of Glory to which Christ is exalted in Heaven.
 - VI. Of Thankfulness, which we owe unto God for all his Benefits and Blessings.
-

LONDON:

Printed by Sam. Bridge for Tho. Goodwin, MDCC III.

T H E

C O N T E N T S.

CHAP. I. The Words of the Text (Col. i. 26, 27.) Explain'd. Though God had before by various Ways discover'd the glorious Mysteries of his Grace; yet the Revelation of them by the Gospel excels all the other. Page 1.

Chap. II. The Excellency of the Gospel, proved from the Profoundness of the Knowledge revealed in it. P. 12.

Chap. III. Another Demonstration of the Excellency of the Gospel, that it is a secret Mystery, an hidden, and concealed Wisdom. P. 20.

Chap. IV. That the Knowledge of the Gospel is a most excellent Wisdom, because, as a peculiar Favour, it is communicated by God onely to some Persons. P. 30.

Chap. V. The Excellency of the Gospel consists in the Riches of Spiritual Knowledge manifested in it. P. 41.

Chap. VI. That the Gospel is most Excellent, because it is a most glorious Revelation of God, and Christ to us. P. 51.

Chap. VII. How it is the Glory of the Gospel, that Christ is not only reveal'd in it, but Christ so known by the Believer is in Him. P. 68.

Chap. VIII. The Glory of the Gospel farther manifested, for as much as Christ, the great Subject of it, is in the Work of God upon us reveal'd in the Soul. P. 77.

The Contents of the Discourses.

DISC. I. Of the Supereminence of Christ above Moses: Or, of the more excellent Glory and Power, which accompanies his Promulgation of the Gospel, than did accompany the giving of the Law on Mount Sinai. Page 85.

Disc.

The Contents.

Disc. II. Of the Reconciliation of all the People of God, (Notwithstanding all their Differences, and Enmities) design'd and effected by Christ's Death.
P. 106.

Disc. III. A Brief History of the Kingdom of Christ; Extracted out of the Book of the Revelation.
P. 118.

Disc. IV. Of Christ's Reward; Or, of the Glory, which He receives in Heaven, as due to the Excellency of His Person, and as the Recompence of His Work of Redemption perform'd.
P. 129.

Disc. V. Of Thankfulness, which is due to God for his Benefits and Blessings.
P. 136.

A

DISCOURSE

OF THE

Glory of the Gospel.

CHAP. I.

The Words of the Text (Col. 1. 26, 27.) Explain'd.
Though God had before by various Ways discover'd the glorious Mysteries of his Grace; yet the Revelation of them by the Gospel, excels all the other.

COL. I. xxvi, xxvii.

xxvi. Even the Mystery which hath been hid from Ages, and from Generations, but now is made manifest to his Saints.

xxvii. To whom God would make known what is the Riches of the Glory of this Mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of Glory.

THE Apostle in this Chapter, from the 13th Verse to the End, draws a lively Character of Christ and his Gospel.

1. He describes Jesus Christ in all that fulness of the Riches of his Glory, wherewith he is Arraied and Represented in the Gospel, from the 13th Verse to the 23d.

2. He falls into a Commendation of the Gospel, which is that Mystery wherein is made known the rich Glory of Christ, who is the Glory of this Mystery: And if the Story that makes Christ known, be so full of Riches and Glory; what then is Christ himself, the Subject of it?

The Apostle doth both these on-set Purpose (as in the Fourth and Eighth Verses of the Second Chapter, he professeth) to divert and take of these Colossian's Mind from those vain, deceitful Speculations of Philosophy, and the Ceremonial Law, and Traditions of Men, gaudily and speciously set out with enticing Words, Philosophy and vain Deceit. He exposeth the beggarly Condition of those Rudiments (as he names the best of them, Gal. 4. 9.) and to display the Glory, and Riches of the Mystery of Christ in all its Brightness, he makes the enticing Luster of all other Wisdom (which had almost spoil'd that Glory of Christ (Col. 2. 8.) to vanish.

In the Words of my Text (Col. 1. 26, 27.) the Current of his Praise of the Gospels Glory swells highest, and runs with the deepest and strongest

Chap. I.

Stream. Within the Limits of which therefore I will confine my self (tho' much might be added from other Scriptures) as affording Matter abundant to set forth the Glory of the Gospel, by all that doth commend unto us any other Knowledge.

You have here the Rise and Original of it, as withal of Mans Salvation; how, and for what Ends God contrived it, and revealed it, and to whom. The great God (says he) took up a Mind and Purpose to reveal unto his Saints Infinite Riches of his Glory in it, and by it: And to that End framed this Wisdom on Purpose for them, and them alone. It is made manifest to his Saints, to whom God would make known his Riches and Glory by it.

2. You have the Subject of it, and common Treasury of all that Riches and Glory discovered in it, which is Christ, Gods Son. Which Riches is Christ, says the Apostle by way of Explanation. Now Christ's Riches are unsearchable (Eph. 3. 8.) and this Doctrine of the Gospel, is the Field this Treasure is hid in: And Christ being also the Lord of Glory (1 Cor. 2. 8.) hath filled it with a Glory answerable, with Riches of Glory.

3. You have the Gain and Benefit of it. For as it reveals God and Christ, and all his Riches and Glory; so being received and entertained by spiritual Knowledge and Manifestation in the Hearts of men, it makes those Saints Possessors thereof by giving them a Possession of Christ. And for your further Security, you have them in you, by having him in you, (who is the Treasury of all those Riches) at the present. But then, the glorious Knowledge of this Christ, as he is in you, is yet a future Pledge of a greater and more transcendent Glory to come, greater then this Gospel can reveal, or can be made known to you. Christ is in you, the Hope of Glory.

4. You have added hereunto, all sorts of excelling Properties and Royalties to commend the Glory of the Gospel, above all that are or can be supposed to be in any other Knowledge. 1. If depth and profoundness sets a Value, this is a Mystery in every Line of it. 2. If preciousness and abundance makes any Knowledge estimable, this is full of Riches and Glory. If 3. Secrecy puts an esteem on any Science, this hath been hid from Ages and Generations, but now made manifest. 4. If it recommend any Knowledge, that when the Secret is revealed, yet still it be not made common to the ordinary sort of Men; then the Gospel is most excellent, for though God hath revealed it; yet he retaineth and useth that Art in revealing of it, that he makes known the Riches and Glory of it only to his Saints: Others know it but in the outward Letter of it.

1. I shall take a View of the Rise and Original, of the Revelation of this glorious Mystery. I cast the brief Story thereof into this Frame.

1. Our All-wise, and infinitely Blessed God possessing in himself Infinite Riches of Glory, he thinks of Ways to make them known, and that to some reasonable intelligent Creatures, which by knowing of them might be made Partakers thereof; and have their Bosoms fill'd with all his Riches. For both to make them known, and withal to make them Possessors thereof are in the Text. The one in these Words, Make known, the other in those, Christ in you the Hope of Glory. The Text says, ἠθέλησεν, He would, he had a Mind, and Will, a longing Desire to do it; and communicate it to us to make us Blessed. That is the first Thing. He would make known, &c.

2. The Second Thing to be consider'd is the Persons, to whom. The Text says, to his Saints. His, that is, his Elect, whom he hath chosen to be Holy, his Saints, who are first his own by Election, and then made Saints.

1. They are His, singled out from all the rest to be his Peculiar, his Elect. The Lord knows who are his. Thine they were (says Christ, John 17. 6.) and thou gavest them me; and they have kept thy Word. And Father (says Christ, Math. 11. 25.) I Thank thee, thou hast hid these Things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them to Babes; even so it pleased thee.

Yet 2. He makes them Saints, to whom he communicates himself: Yea, he makes them Saints, by making himself known to them. Judas (not Iscariot) ask'd Christ (John 14. 22.) this bold Question, How is it that thou wilt wilt manifest thy self unto us, and not unto the World? Christ there mentions not, the first Part of this Account here; namely, that they were his peculiarly, and not the World (which yet being alone with his Father in his Prayer, he then takes Occasion to mention to move him) but he gives them this other Part of the Account here. Because (says he) I manifest my self to Saints which you are, and I will cause you to be. His Words afore (in which Judas interrupted him) were these, at ver. 21. He that hath my Commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me, and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest my self to him. And his Words in Answer to Judas fully import it, ver. 23. Jesus answered and said unto him, if a Man love me, he will keep my Words: And my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him. This Answer was needful for their quickning to Obedience.

The Third Thing I add to this Head is, That God had afore the discovery of this Gospel, taken other Ways to make known something of the Riches of this Glory by them. But yet had all that while kept and retained this Knowledge of the Gospel as the Last, to excel, and exceed, and to put down all the former; which yet is but a Preparation to that other discovery in the Heavens; as all those former were to this.

Both these Assertions are clear: The first is evident from those Words, He now hath made manifest, that which was hidden from all Ages, &c. And yet we know that former Ages had much of the Wisdom of God among them, both Jew and Gentiles.

The other Assertion is evident from this; That the utmost discovery of this Mystery and of Christ now, is but the Hope; and so not the Possession of that Glory; which is to come. We are led therefore to consider a little those other Ways, God had already taken to manifest the Riches of his Glory by; as an Ante-masque to this that followed.

1. One way by which he began to manifest his glorious Back-parts, (Exod. 33. 23.) both to Angels and Men, was by the first Creation and the Works thereof, and in the Law and Covenant of Works. Whereof the first holds forth his Eternal Power and Godhead, Rom. 1. 19, 20. Because that which may be known of God, is manifest in them; for God hath shewed it unto them. For the Invisible Things of him from the Creation of the World are clearly seen, being understood by the Things that are made, even his Eternal Power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse: Psalm 19. 1. The Heavens declare the Glory of God: And the Firmament sheweth his handy Work. And the Angels that were Spectators of every Days Work, were infinitely taken with it; Job 38. 6, 7. Whereupon are the Foundations thereof fastened? Or who laid the Corner Stone thereof, when the Morning Stars sang together, and all the Sons of God shouted for Joy. They shouted for Joy to see him finish every Days Work. Then his Wisdom also is display'd in governing so great an Host, an Army of several Creatures to several Ends by perpetual Laws. I instance but in one, the placing of the Sun in the Heavens and the Motion of it, so disposed and ordered, as it could no where else be placed therein, without an apparent Inconvenience to some Parts of the habitable World. But he hath made a Tabernacle for it, and set out the Course thereof to visit all the Earth. It goes to it's Tropicks, and misseth not an Hairs breadth. There is Infinite Justice also apparent in his righteous Law; and withal Infinite Holiness in so exact a Rule of Righteousness, which was the Jews Wisdom and Glory in the sight of all Nations. For the delivery of which Law God came down, and made an Heaven upon a Dirty Mole-hill, Mount Sinai, and constituted Moses a Mediator, and put a Glory upon his Face, and then dress'd up an High Priest gloriously for his Worship, and erected a Tabernacle, and after that a Temple admirably Magnificent. How did the Jews boast of all these Things? Rom. 2.

But all this contented not our God, who would make known a further Mystery, viz. of the Redemption of fallen Man by Christ; which he kept hid and close in his own Breast, and not a Creature knew it, no not his Angels gels (not as we now know it, in the Gospel) which were his nearest Courtiers and dearest Favourites. It lay hid in God, Eph. 3. 9. hid even from them, ver. 10. It was a Mystery, which when revealed should amaze the World, and put the Angels to School again; as if they had known nothing in Comparison of this, wherein they know over again all those glorious Riches which are in God; and that more perfectly and fully then ever before. Such is the Mystery of Christ revealed in the Gospel; which is the last Edition also that ever shall come forth in this World, and is now set out, enlarged, and perfected: Wherein that large Inventory of God's glorious Perfections is more fully set down with Addition.

The Reasons, why God did by Two Ways intend to manifest himself thus variously are.

1. Because he would shew forth his manifold Wisdom (which is the Reason given of revealing the Gospel, Eph. 3. 10.) That to the Angels might appear the manifold Wisdom of God. His Wisdom is so vast and large, that he could vary, and take more Ways then one to display it. And as he had two Sorts of reasonable Creatures to shew himself unto; so he had a double Way, a double Sample, and double Method.

2. God did so, because indeed that other Way was of it self too obscure, and too imperfect.

1. It was too obscure. For in the Gospel and Works of Redemption, the Angels came to see all that they saw before, and that more clearly and largely. They see more Power in Christ, the Power of God (1 Cor. 1. 24.) in raising himself up from Death to Life, Declared with Power thereby to be the Son of God, Rom. 1. 4. And they see also the exceeding Greatness of his Power, in raising us up also (Eph. 1. 19.) more then they did in the Creation. They likewise see a greater and clearer Instance and Manifesto of his Justice, in putting to Death his own Son, taking on him to be a Surety for Sinners: Then if a World of Worlds should have been damned for ever. And in Christ his Son also, they came to see a greater and far more Transcendent Righteousness then ever appeared either in the Law, or inherent in themselves.

2. That other Way was but imperfect.

For, 1. Those Attributes which God Accounts his greatest Riches and greatest Glory (Rom. 9. 23.) even his Mercy and Free-Grace, which he intends most to exalt, never saw Light till now.

But 2. Not only more of his Attributes come thus to be discovered; but further; the glorious Mystery of the Trinity come thereby to be more clearly unfolded, if not the first discovery made of the Three Persons; there being scarce the Footsteps of them distinctly to be seen in the Works of Creation, or in the Law. But now, when the Gospel comes to be revealed, and the Work of Salvation in it; then they were discovered to be Three Witnesses in Heaven (1 John 2. 7.) Witnesses to our Salvation. And their several witnessing comes to be known by their several Seals and Hand-works, set severally to our Salvation; bearing the stamp and similitude of their Three several Subsistences; so as by those Three Seals of the Election of Christ and Us, of our Redemption and of our Sanctification, we may know there are Three Persons, and how they do subsist: Even as in Mens Seals, their several Armes being Engraven, their Houses and Antiquity are known.

4. The Fourth Thing is, what new Model or Means it was which God singled forth to Print and Publish his whole and utmost Council to us by, after all those other; the Edition of which should thus excel all the former; and alone be full and adequate, and commensurable to his whole Design; even to manifest and communicate the whole, the full of all those Riches of Glory in himself, but once for all; and no more, that he shall not need to superadd any other, until himself immediately communicates himself Face to Face. The Text tells us, that this excellent Way of discovery is Christ communicated to us; it is Christ in us, the Hope of Glory. Which Notes out, not only Christ to be the Revealer, the Prophet (as Moses styles him) who by Word of Mouth, or Way of Doctrine should discover the Glory of God (Which the Apostle fully renders to the Scope I have driven at, Heb. 1. 1. God who at sundry Times, and in divers Manners, spake by the Prophets, bath in these last Days spoken unto us by his Son) Whereas a fore-times God by Degrees and by Piece-meal πολυμερῶς uttered himself, one Truth at one Time, another at another by Drops, so it was for the Matter; and πολυτροπῶς after sundry Fashions and Forms, and Shapes, such as were Dreams, Visions, Types, &c. so for the Manner. This God hath now (as the Opposition imports once for all, in the last Days and by whole-sale uttered his whole Council, and this uniformly after one only plain and clear Manner and Way; by Word of Mouth from his Son, spoken by his Son, as the Revealer. So it follows, Chap. 2. 3. Which at first began to be spoken by the Lord (namely, Christ) but not only so, but that which the Text here holds forth, is that Christ as the Argument, Subject, Matter, is the Thing revealed. That alone takes up and fills the whole of this new Doctrine; which Mystery (says he) is Christ, namely, subjective: It is Christ known and communicated; and in him all God's Riches and Glory.

1. In him all the Riches of God, and the Knowledge of him are laid up as the Treasury and Subject of them; and so discovered and communicated to us objectively in the Knowledge of him. Thus, Chap. 2. ver. 2, 3. The Apostle further explains it. For having termed the Gospel (as here) the Mystery of God and of Christ; he adds, In whom are hid all the Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledge; not only to be revealed by him, or subjectively known in and by himself; but (which is the proper Scope of the Apostle) objectively set forth, and contained in him alone, and in the Knowledge of him made known to us.

2. In Him shines the Glory of God (2 Cor. 4. 6. The Light of the Knowledge of the Glory of God in the Face of Jesus Christ) as the lively Image of all his Features and Perfections, and Evidences of his inward Councils and Affections. That therefore which I here insist upon is. That Jesus Christ in all his Glories, is the great and eminent Subject of the Gospel, Rev. 1. 1.

3. It is the Gospel of God (namely, as the Author of it) but it is concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord. God had but one Son, and he made this Gospel on Purpose to Honour him, and set him forth. It is all, and every Word of it some way or other concerning him, or about him. God made it purpose-ly to set his Son Christ forth to us: And in setting forth his Son, himself also: It is therefore termed, (Chap. 2. of this Epistle, ver. 1.) The Mystery of God the Father, and of Christ. Christ in that Series of Truths about him held forth in the whole New Testament, is the Sum of this newly revealed Wisdom of God, 1 Cor. 1. 24.

So then, God's Son, first made our Christ, and that by being made Man, is thereby further made a compleat Body and Systeme of a new Wisdom or Knowledge of the Glory of God. And correspondently is that Speech of the Apostle, Chap. 2. ver. 2. to be understood, that their Hearts might be comforted, being knit together in Love; and unto all Riches of the full Assurance of Understanding to the Acknowledgment of the Mystery of and of the Father, and of Christ. This was that Subject which terminated the Apostles Thoughts, as the Horizon doth the Eye; he regarded not to look beyond it to any Thing else. And surely, if unto God himself, his Christ is an aboundary, a Sum of that Wisdom manifestative, whereby he would make himself known to us, and rests contented therein, as the last and fullest till we come to Glory: Then he may well be so to us, and may we reckon our selves compleat in him; as Col. 2. How compleat and lively a Representation, Christ as revealed in the Gospel, is of the Riches of the Glory of God to be manifested to us in Comparison with all other, I shall shew by and by: When,

4. In the Fourth Place, I have added this, How real and lively a Demonstration or setting forth of Christ this our Gospel, the Mystery here is. The Story of that is this; the Apostles that lived and conversed with Jesus Christ saw with their own Eyes. He dwelt amongst us, (says the Apostle) John 1. 14. God wearing Flesh and Blood about him and appearing in it, was God manifest in the Flesh personally, 1 Tim. 3. 16. And so they had the Priviledge in his Person to behold his Glory. And we beheld his Glory, (says he) the Glory as of the only begotten of the Father; so lively representing the Glory of the Father, that if they knew him, they must needs know the Father; John 14. 9. Have I been so long Time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father, and how sayst thou then, shew us the Father? They beheld it also in his Doctrine, in his Works and Words, and gracious Converse, full of Grace in his Converse, and Truth in his Doctrine, as it follows there. That which we (says John) have seen with our Eyes, 1 John 1. 1. Which we have lookt upon, and our Hands have handled, of the Word of Life. ver. 2. For Christ our Life was manifested, &c. And when he was gone to Heaven, the Holy Ghost came down and caused them to understand the end and intent, the use to us, the Benefits and the full meaning of all he did and said. He turned and translated to them the dark Mystery of his Sufferings written in Blood, which they understood not, his Resurrection, &c. into a familiar Language to be understood and learned by lost Sinners, of Remissions of Sins; Redemption through his Blood; dying, rising for them, in their stead; and a Thousand such Glories redounding to us, and in us, that are the Fruits and Results, and Reverberations of all he did and acted. The Holy Ghost came and took of his, even all that he had done, and deciphered and unridled it; shewed it to them. (As Christ says, John 16. 14.) and so glorified Christ afresh in that Comment of Gospel Light, he caused to shine in their Hearts. He shall glorifie me, for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you. And by them were all these Things in their Sermons Reported; (as Peter speaks, 1 Pet. 1. 12. The Things which are now reported by them (said he) that have Preacht the Gospel to you, with the Holy Ghost sent down from Heaven. And whilst they thus Preacht him, God gave forth by their Ministry the Light of the Knowledge of the Glory of God in the Face of Jesus Christ, 2 Cor. 4. 6. Even the Light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the Image of God, ver. 4.

Chap. I.

But Alas! As Christ himself was gone to Heaven, and had taken up his Glory with him; and those that were Eye-witnesses of it, and should Report it unto us; are likewise gone off the Stage: The Holy Ghost therefore caused them to leave a Frame and Doctrine of the Gospel in their Writings, both the Story of his Life and Death by the Evangelists, which is but Christ written in Ciphers: And in their Epistles, which give that Story forth in plainer Letters, opening the Use, and End, and Intent of all. And these Writings opened by the Holy Ghost, and the Ministers of the Gospel hold forth all Pieces of it, and being set all together make an expresse Picture and Image of Christ, and all his Glories, who is the expresse Image of the Glory of God; and is therefore called the glorious Gospel of Christ, the Subject of it, who is the Image of God, and whose Glory this holds forth. Thus, (as Paul Preacht to the Galatians, Gal. 3. 1.) Before our Eyes Jesus Christ hath been Pictured περίεγραψεν Depictus suit; and that so really and lively, that he is bold to affirm, he was Crucified among them, even as well as at Hierusalem. The Holy Ghost did set them down (as it were) at Jerusalem by the Cross, and brought him forth Crucified before the very Eyes of their Faith, as really and expressly as if they had seen it done with their bodily Eyes. Let any other Tragick Story be told by the quickest and most Poetick Fancy, and it cannot be said, that it was done or perpetrated among them to whom 'twas told. But the Story of Christ and his Truths, and all that is told, is said to be done among them, whilst it is a telling. Yea further, the glorious Gospel accompanied with the Spirit, is not only compared to a picturing or painting by Colours the most lively and artificial that can be supposed; as in that Gal. 3. 1. But further, it is compar'd to the real Image of a Person in a Glass, in which you see his Soul shines out in all the casts of his Eyes, in all the Postures of his Demeanour, and all this in that sparkling Manner, as if all the Angels would would Limb or Draw a Picture, they could not come near it. This you have in 2 Cor. 3. last. compared with 2 Cor. 4. 4, 6. In the one he says, We see the Glory of God in the Face of Jesus Christ, in and by the glorious Gospel: In the other he compareth the other to a Glass, We all behold as in a Glass, the Glory of the Lord. That look how far more lovely, the Representation of a Person is seen in a Glass, above what in a Picture; so is Christ in this Gospel. Let all the curious Artists in the World conspire to Paint the Sun, and bring all their orient brightest Colours, and let a Child but come and bring a Looking Glass; and what a Wan, Pale Thing is the one, to the Glory, Splendour, and Reality of the other? The Riches of the Glory of the Sun, no Painting or Colours can ever render; but a Looking Glass doth: And such is the Revelation in the Gospel made to Believers. We therein behold as in a Glass the Glory of the Lord; and therefore he calls it the glorious Gospel of Christ, even as in the Text.

If you ask, how this comes to pass? I Answer, by the Spirit that accompanies it. So in that 2 Cor. 3. last. Even as by the Spirit of the Lord, it is added. If the Spirit of Revelation, as 'tis call'd, Eph. 1. accompany not this Ministry and Descriptions of Christ, they are but as Pictures, or as dead Words use to set forth any other Narration. But the Gospel being the Ministration of the Spirit, he hath a peculiar Act to bring down the real Substance; (as Heb. 11. 1.) of the Things themselves uttered about Christ, which put together make up this Image of Christ, in the Understanding and Spirit of the Soul and Mind. Can Satan make a lively Shadow of a Person long since Dead, by Condensation of Colours, and his Light Shining therein appear to the Eye? The Spirit can do this much more of Christ, so as though you see him not in that Glory as he is (1 John 3. 2.) in Heaven, yet the spiritual Glory of Christ you see in every Truth the Gospel utters of him; and have real Communion with him thereby, 1 John 1. 2, 3. Even as by laying your Eye to the least Beam of Light that comes in at a Cranny in a dark Room, you see the Glory of the whole Sun: And as you cannot see the Sun, but by it's own Light: So, nor Christ, but by a Light let down from himself; which the Spirit that is in his Heart, and in ours gives.

If you will ask how? I answer by Creation. So in that 2 Cor. 4. 6. God that commanded the Light to shine out of Darkness, hath shined in our Hearts to give us the Light of the Knowledge of the Glory of God, in the Face of Jesus Christ. The Words we speak and utter of his Glory are but Words, and would be no more, though we were able to set them out with the Tongues of Angels. But if that Spirit that is in Christs Heart, and lies hid in this Word (as the Promise is, My Spirit and my Word shall not depart out of thy Mouth.) If he accompanies it to our Hearts, he presents the Things, and the real Images thereof to our Souls in and through those Words. He turns verba in res, as that Philosopher when Converted acknowledged. Which he doth to no other Men but to his Saints, to whom he would make known, &c.

So then to shut up this: Suppose you had an Absent Friend alive, whom loving, you desire at Times to behold in his Converse and Behaviour, and loving Aspect to you; and a Picture of him did not Content you; but you had a Glass, into which at Times the lively Image came; and in which he appear'd to you really in such and such Departments: Such is the Gospel when the Spirit accompanies it, and conveys Christ spiritually, and with the sight of Faith to the Soul. And this will help us to understand, why he is call'd Christ in us: Of which hereafter.

How should we Prize and Value such a Glass as this; Preserve it from soiling Spots, or breaking, and suffer it not to be perverted. You reject such as are false and misrepresent: You affect pure and clear ones: Oh then, keep to and preserve the Gospel in its Purity: You see your Husband in it, and his Beauty every Day.

Chap. I.

Ludovicus
de Dieu.

5. How compleatly doth this Gospel hold forth the Riches of the Glory of God in the Person of Jesus Christ, as a Redeemer and Crucified; 1 Cor. 4. 4, and 6. compared with 1 Cor. 1. 1, 23, 24. The Word is ἐν περσῶ-πω, 1 Cor. 4. 6. John 1. 18. No Man hath seen God at any Time (John 1. 18.) The only begotten Son, which is in the Bosom of the Father, he hath declared him, ἐξήγγισατο which Word (as your late Criticks observe) Enarrationem notat, non tam Sermone aut Prædicatione, quàm Expressione & Repræsentatione factam. It expressed him to the Life, and brought God forth out of his Invisibilty; Christ being (Col. 1. 15.) The Image of the Invisible God. There is indeed a full and compleat Image of the Glory of God, which shineth in his Person, as he appears in Heaven, whereof John, James and Peter had a Glympse (which transcends infinitely all that which the Gospel can, or the Spirit of the Gospel doth reveal of him.) And by this Glory (John 17. That they may be where I am, and see my Glory) we shall see and understand by Converse with him in Heaven more, infinitely more of the Glory of God in and by him. But this Glory, the Gospel treats not of, but only hints; we discern it but by collecting what Glory must needs be due to that Man, in whom the fulness of the Godhead personally dwells. But that Image of God, which in Christ this Gospel holds forth, is but the Hopes of that other Glory, and is a lower Thing then that which his Person wears in Heaven.

And yet this discovery of God in Christ transcends, what ever any way was or could otherwise have been made. The Back-parts of God, which we call his Attributes, his Power, Wisdom, Truth, Justice, which God calls his Glory to Moses, Exod. 36. and which we can not see and live: These are infinitely more really and substantially, and to the Life set forth to us, by what we know of Christ as a Redeemer in the Gospel; and do infinitely transcend, whatever of them either was, or could have been expressed in Millions of several Worlds fill'd all of them with several Sorts of intelligent Creatures, such as Angels and Men to never so great a variety, as the πολυ-πεινυλῶ σοφία of God could have diversified the Natures of them into.

There is a Threefold Image of God in Christ.

1. As he is his Son, without the Consideration of his dwelling in an Humane Nature; and so he is unto God the Father, that Image of himself by whom he understands himself. And were he not equal with himself, he should not understand or behold himself by him fully and perfectly. And Christ thus is in that Respect as Invisible, as Incomprehensible as God himself. For so considered, he is God, and dwells in Light inaccessible.

2. There is an Image of the Glory of God shining in his Person in Heaven, such as all that shall see it shall say (as they did, Mat. 17. upon a Glympse of it) that it is proper only to the only begotten Son of God.

But, 3. There is a glorious Image of all God's Attributes, which shines in the Person of Christ, (as he conversed here) and in the Works which Christ hath done for us, and in the Fruits and Benefits that redound thereby to us: Or in the Works of Christ, (which are the Beams whereof this Sun is the Body,) in us, now he is in Heaven leading us into Communion with himself. And they all make a compleat Image, and that more perfect of the Riches of Gods Glory: And this the Gospel treats of. The First of these is the Foundation of the Second, the Second of this Third: And do each exceed the other. There is a new and compleat Edition of all the Attributes of God, which results out of the Story of what he is, hath done, and is made to us.

In the 1 Cor. 1: 24. Christ is termed the Power of God, and the Wisdom of God. He calls him by Terms of the Attributes of God in abstracto. And if the Question be, How we are to understand it? Not of what Christ is essentially meerly as God, or simply as the Son of God, which was the first, nor yet yet as in his Person as God-Man, he hath an infinite Wisdom and Power inherent in him, which was the Second; but as he is made to us by his Works of Mediation for us, and the like; and in respect of what his Person is made to us. Which is clear by the Context: For he speaks of Christ as he is Crucified, and of the Power of God shewn, and put forth in Calling and Converting our Souls by the foolishness of Preaching. It pleased God, through the foolishness of Preaching, to save them that believe, ver. 21. And so it follows, ver. 23. We preach Christ crucified, unto them which are call'd, the Power of God. The like is as clear to be understood of Christs being the Wisdom of God, which is attributed to him in Respect of what he is made to us; so ver. 30. Who is made unto us Wisdom, &c. And both these, the Power and Wisdom of God appeared in Christ, in what he did and suffered. And therefore Paul subjoins Chap. 2. 2. As to know nothing but Christ (of which I spake afore) so he adds, as Crucified. So then Christ as Crucified; and by the like Reason made Flesh, and walking holily, dying, overcoming Sin, Wrath, Satan, Hell, Rising, Ascending, and then Converting, Justifying, Glorifying us: In all and each of these Works performed by him, he is the Power of God, the Wisdom of God: And so even in these a perfect Edition of all those Attributes. And for the same, and by the like Reason, he may be Entitled, the Truth, the Life, the Love of God, as he is in other Scriptures. The Truth of God, because he ratified all the Promises, and confirm'd them true. The faithful Witness, God's Amen. So he is to the Love of God, 1 John 4. 26. Where God is said to be Love, not in respect of what he is in himself, but in what he is to us in giving his Son; God so loved the World, that he gave his only begotten Son. And not only so, but he, who himself was God laid down his Life for us; Chap. 3. 16. Sinners, Enemies, which all commend that Love, Rom. 5. And thus is the Love of God made manifest to the utmost; Chap. 4. 9. That whereas none could see the Infinite Love of God, as it is in himself. Thus John in that very Place, No Man hath seen God at any Time, ver. 12. Nor can, nor could ever have come to have fathomed the Infinite Sweetnesses of Love and Kindnesses, that lie at the Bottom of that Heart: Therefore God to express the utmost of it gave Christ; that in the Love of Christ, we might comprehend the heighth, the breadth, the depth of that Love that yet passeth Knowledge; as Eph. 3. 19. Then to instance again in Power, Adam and the Angels saw Gods Power in the Creation of the World, Rom. 1. 20. But in Christ's, and his Work of Redemption, he came to see infinitely far greater Works then these, as Christ speaks. Look upon him in the Womb, and see God and Man's Nature united into one Person. The Power of the most High over-shadowing his Mother, Luke 1. 35. Which Word was sought out to shew; how great and incomprehensible a Power, mysteriously and secretly wrought within that Vail, in the framing, and then uniting that Humane Nature to the Son of God. As great Artists, as curious Limners, &c. work within Doors; conceal their Work whilst a doing; so the Spirit doth his Power: And if the framing the Body of Man, and the Union of the Body and Soul is wondered at by David, as so curious a Piece of Workmanship; and therefore wrought as it were under-ground: I am wonderfully made, says he, in the lower Parts of the Earth. How much more wonderful was the framing an Habitation for the fullness of the God-head to dwell in, and uniting God personally thereunto? Look again upon him on the Cross, a weak and sorry Man: For as 2 Cor. 13. He was Crucified in weakness; and yet left and found in that weakness, but on purpose to make an Infinite Power of God appear; his Power was perfected in that weakness; look on him as a poor Man made up of Flesh and Blood, bearing the Wrath of God, and all the Sins of the World: He bore that Wrath that brake the back of Men and Angels, and crush'd the strongest Creatures to Hell, and brake their Bones without recovery. But this weak drop of Flesh and Blood is back'd and steel'd with so great and Infinite a Power, as he eludes and over-comes it. Yea, and it is impossible that he should be held under it, Acts 2. 20. Then see him rising, and flinging open the Gates of Death, the Grave, and Hell, declared to be the Son of God with Power by the Resurrection from the Dead, Rom. 1. 4. Like another Sampson taking these Gates of Brass off their Hinges, and carrying them on his Back to the Top of the Hill he ascended from Heaven. Measure but the distance between the low Estate of his Body in the Grave, and of his Soul on the Cross; and that super-exalted Estate of Glory in the highest Heavens (and what Compasses our Mathematick Instruments, can the most enlarged Understandings frame within their own Thoughts to take this Elevation?) So transcendent a Power appears in raising up this Christ from Death to Glory. Which the Apostle doth greaten accordingly; Eph. 1. 19. and makes it the highest Pattern of Power that God ever put forth. According to the working of his mighty Power which he wrought in Christ, whom he raised from the Dead (so low) and set him at his own right Hand in the heavenly Places (so high) far above all Principalities and Powers, &c. View the like in Holiness. The Glory of God's Holiness is so great, and his Eyes so pure; that when he beheld the Holiness of his best Creatures, the Angels (and in any other that had been meer Creatures, if supposed greater then they, it had been all one) his critical curious Eyes reckon it but Folly (the Angels, the Inhabitants of Heaven) are not clean in his sight. But here is an Holiness of a Man in whom God dwells, satisfies his Curiosity, and though indeed it cannot profit him; as Psalms 16. 2. Christ confesseth; yet he can find no fault with it. It cannot but fully please him, for it is the Righteousness of God. See the Difference of the Strength, the Efficacy of these two Holinesses, and by that guess at the transcendent Excellency and Vertue of the one above the other. Sin, the least Sin is stronger then all the Holiness in Men or Angels: For the guilt of one Sin no sooner arrested an Angel, but it instantly expelled all Holiness out of his Heart, and wip'd out the Memory of all his righteous Works. And no sooner seized it on Adam, but it drave out of his Heart, as his Person out of Paradise, all that stock of Holiness was laid up in him for all Mankind; forc'd it forth of his and all our Hearts, being but imputed to us. And yet loe the Holiness of Christ is such, that when the guilt of Sin of all the Elect were thrown upon him, and reckoned by God and himself as his own; yet his Holiness is of such a Sovereignty, that it preserves him from the Infection thereof: Overcometh Sin, Death, Hell, the Law; and Triumphant, Cries out, Oh Death, Where is thy Sting? The Sting of Death is Sin: The Strength of Sin is the Law: But thanks be unto God, who hath not only given Christ, but this Christ the Victory. For the Strength of his Holiness is such, that tho' it preserved not him from being hurt by the Imputation of our Sins; but laid hold on by us, and imputed by God unto us, it expels all the virulent Poyson and Venom of the deadliest Sins out of our Hearts. Yet oh what a Demonstration of an Infinite Holiness is here?

Chap. I.

4. There is the greatest of Justice and Wrath against Sin. That God should put to Death his own Son for Sin, when he became but a Surety for it; was a clearer Manifestation of his Anger, and an higher Piece of Justice against Sin; then if he had made, and there sacrificed Millions of Worlds.

5. There is the clearest brightness of his Righteousness, such as is not found shining in the Law, or in their Hearts; I mean of Adam, or the Angels: For this at the utmost, serves but to justifie themselves, and there is little enough of it too; the Weight of the least Dust in their Ballance, would cause a Rejection of them as too Light. And if the Righteousness of them all by a general Contribution were contracted into any one of them, it could not serve to free one Sinner from one Sin. Yea, only one sinful Act in themselves would make a Forfeiture of all the Good in them, or that had come from them: But here is a Righteousness of that Efficacy, as serves for Millions of Sinners: Of that breadth, as is able to cover Worlds of Sins, and Millions of Worlds: Of that length, that it reacheth to Eternity, an Everlasting Righteousness; and no Sin in God's People can wear it out, or evacuate and lessen the Vertue of it. All the Divine Perfections mention'd before.

6. Not only all before, are more gloriously and perspicuously set forth in a new Edition of them, but with Addition also of the discovery of of some Perfections in God ; which no way else had come forth unto our Comprehensions. Yea, those Attributes which God Accounts his greatest Riches and highest Glory ; as Rom. 9. 23. his Mercy and Free-Grace, which he desired most of all to exalt in the Manifestation of himself, never saw Light till now. That great Love wherewith he loved us, hidden in his Heart, now brake forth as Joseph's to his Brethren. His Love to Adam and Mankind in him, was but providential founded on the Law of Creation, whereby he loveth the Works of his Hands as such ; and whilst they should Love God, God would Love them. But here is a Love issuing from what is in his own Heart as the Fountain of it, and a Spring, yea a Sea to feed it : A Love in Christ founded on him, and in nothing in the Creature : The same wherewith he loves him to Everlasting, Peremptory, Unchangeable. Mercy and Free-Grace, which are the richest Jewel in his Crown had never else appeared. The Doctrine of Salvation through Christ, being the Stage set up on purpose whereon only it is represented, and off from which it is no where else seen. Upon which it Acts it self the greatest Part, and gives all the other their Parts, and manageth, ordereth the whole Scenes ; all Passages begin and end with it, and tend to this, That by Grace we are saved. The Saints Title is, Vessels of Mercy, Rom. 9. The whole Plot and Frame is made up of Mercy, and is so call'd, 1 Pet. 2. 10. The Doctrine it self that brings this Salvation, is termed Grace ; Titus 2. 10, 11. It begins, sets all a Work, and ends all in Glory.

Chap. I.

USE. Let us then, both Ministers and People be exhorted, to study and search into this Gospel. My Brethren, what ever other Knowledge we may Pride our selves in, and wear out our Brains about the searching into ; yet this is that which is the Riches of the Gentiles and Saints, (as this Text hath it.) The Pearls of the World, Matth. 13. 45. The Glory of the Ministry, 1 Cor. 2. 7. Which God ordained for our Glory ; namely, Apostles and Ministers, the Preachers of it. The clear revealing of which was the desire and longing of the Patriarchs and Prophets, who though they knew the legal Covenant as well as we, yet this Doctrine of Salvation, Christs Sufferings, Gods Grace was it they enquired into, 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11, 12. That is, sought to God by Prayer, and searched diligently : Searched, using all the means of reading, meditating to attain to the Knowledge of it, and all this diligently. Spent, and Thought it worthy of the chiefest of their Pains. And all the Answer they could get, was this, That they delivered these Things for us ; it being ordained for our Glory. Which Paul therefore, that had profited so much in the Knowledge of the Jews Religion, Gal. 1. 14. professeth, Phil. 3. 8. That he accounted all Dross and Dung, for this excellent Knowledge of Christ. For he makes his Knowledg therein his chiefest Excellency ; Eph. 3. 4. There is a Parenthesis, wherein you would think he boasted, speaking of his own Writings, whereby, when ye read (saith he) ye may understand my Knowledge in the Mystery of Christ. The first obscure Dawning, made John the Baptist (who did but Point at Christ,) greater then all the Prophets that were afore him.

What do I speak of the Study and Glory of Prophets and Apostles? It is the Study of the Angels, and which they think worth their greatest Intention. Look into those Two Places, 1 Pet. 1. 10: Eph. 3. 10. Which Things the Angels desire to prey into. Those glorious Creatures that knew God in his Legal Covenant and Work of Creation, (and those in Heaven saw it more glorious, then this Visible World) more fully then ever Adam did ; that have the immediate Participation of God himself, have his Face to read Lectures in Day and Night : Are yet glad, if they can get but a peep and glimpse of the way of saving Men by Jesus Christ, as being a Knowledge of a greater Excellency then otherwise they have any. Yea, and so desirous are they to learn it, that they are Content to go to School to the Church, Eph. 3. 9, 10. That to Principalities and Powers, might be made known by the Church:

Chap. I.

But what need I speak of Angels, Prophets or Apostles? It is the great Study (I may so speak with Reverence) the Wisdom and great Learning of God himself, who was the first Professor of it, call'd so αὐτὸς ἐξοχῶς, 1 Cor. 2. 7. speaking of the Gospel (says he) We speak the Wisdom of God in a Mystery; and that a hidden Wisdom before the World was. Hid in God, Eph. 3. 9. It is God's Art and peculiar to himself. Whereas of other Knowledge Men and Angels have common Notions infused at first Creation, to attain to and pick out of themselves. But this is his Wisdom, which he alone had studied; and which none knows, but those to whom he reveals it.

C H A P. II.

The Excellency of the Gospel, proved from the Profoundness of the Knowledge revealed in it.

I shall now go on to Discourse the Excellency of the Knowledge of the Gospel by those Properties, that do lie in order in the 26th Verse.

In this 26th Verse (as I have told you) there are Three Properties ascribed to this Knowledge of the Gospel, which God hath made known himself by.

1. Here is the Depth and Profoundness of it, in that it is call'd a Mystery.

2. Here is the Secrecy and Hiddeness of it, it was hidden from all Ages and from Generations, till the Apostles Time, and till Christ came.

3. Here is the rareness of the Revealing of it, now when it is revealed: It is revealed only to his Saints. Even that Mystery which hath been hid from Ages and from Generations, but now is made manifest to his Saints.

I shall open these Three Heads to you in their Order.

First, It is call'd a Mystery, that Word importeth more eminently these Two Things.

1. A Profoundness and a Depth of Knowledge.

2. A Secret and a hidden Knowledge.

Now because this Second is contained in the Words afterward [hidden from Ages and Generations] therefore I shall only speak to the First.

The Knowledge, I say, of the Gospel, and the Things that are known therein, they are all Deep, they are Profound, they are Mysteries. Mysteries for their Depth. In 1 Cor. 2. The Apostle speaking of this Wisdom of the Gospel, he calleth it a Mystery, as he doth here, and he calleth it a Mystery for it's hiddeness too. So ver. 7. We speak the Wisdom of God in a Mystery, even the hidden Wisdom which God ordained before the World, &c. But if you read, ver. 10. You shall find that he calleth the Things revealed in the Gospel, the Deep Things of God. The Spirit (saith he) searcheth all Things, yea, the Deep Things of God; meaning the Things contained in this Mystery. And hence therefore it is called a great Mystery, 1 Tim. 3. 16. Great is the Mystery of Godliness, God manifesteth in the Flesh, &c. Now when it is call'd a great Mystery; it is not in Respect of it's being hidden, but in Respect of the Depth and Profoundness of it. Things may be carried hiddenly and secretly, that have no great Depth in them: Therefore now Mystery imports more then meerly a being hidden.

And (my Brethren) in the General, How can it be otherwise, but that all the Things the Gospel revealeth, every one should be Depths and Mysteries? For it is the Wisdom of God, call'd so in a special Manner. So in that 1 Cor. 2. 7. We speak the Wisdom of God in a Mystery. It is therefore a Mystery, because it is a Wisdom of his inventing: And therefore containeth eth nothing, but Depth in it. What saith the Apostle, in Rom. 11. 33. (It is a Place full to this Purpose) Oh the Depth of the Riches both of the Wisdom and Knowledge of God! And of what Wisdom and Knowledge doth he speak? You must know that of all Epistles, that of the Romans, is a Systeme of Divinity methodically laid down, and the Apostle having in the latter Chapters uttered those great and glorious Things of the Gospel, and fetched them all out from the very Bottom of God's Breast, he having handled Election and Reprobation just before; and the Calling of the Jews, and how that God had shut up all under Sin, that at last he might have Mercy upon all, when he had waded now so far into all these Depths, that he felt himself as it were over Head and Ears; he breaks off abruptly that whole Discourse, and cries out, Oh the Depth of the Riches, both of the Wisdom and Knowledge of God! Like one that is wading into the Sea; when he is gone so far, that he begins to be up to the Neck, to the Chin, he then cries out, Oh the Depth! And comes back again: So doth Paul here, it is as if he had said, O ye Romans, I have gone as far as I can, and now I am even swallowed up, I can go no farther, Oh the Depth! The Things of the Gospel are Depths (for that is the Thing, I quote this Place for.) It is a deep Knowledge, because it is that Knowledge which God appropriates unto himself as his Invention.

Which may easily be made out by a small degree of Comparison. Solomon in Prov. 18. 4. saith, That the Words of a Wise Man are as Deep Waters; but yet, though the Words of a Wise are as deep Waters, another Wise Man may fetch it out. So he tells us in Prov. 20. 5. Counsel in the Heart of Man is like deep Water, but a Man of Understanding will draw it out. But now take Kings amongst Men, and of all others, if they be wise (for that is Solomon's Supposition) their Hearts are unsearchable; so he saith in Prov. 25. 3. Where he compares the Heart of a wise King (such as he himself was) to the Heavens for height, and to the Earth for deepness; The Heaven for height (saith he) and the Earth for depth, and the Heart of a King is unsearchable. And the Reason is, because that they deal with metaphysical Things (as I may so call them) that is, they deal with Generals, as with all States and Nations about them, and what their Interests are with them, and their Animosities against them; and they deal with all the Factions of their own People; and they know all the Provocations of them, there are a Thousand such Secret Things by which their Actions are guided that the People know not, they having therefore such a mighty Compass in all their Transactions, their Subjects cannot search into their Hearts. Now then, if the Heart of a King be thus unsearchable, what think you is the Heart of God, who had in his Eye all Souls in all Ages, who hath had Millions of Worlds in his Thoughts, which he could have made, afore this World was? In that 1 Cor. 2. When the Apostle would commend the Gospel, because it is the Wisdom of God, what doth he do? He sets by it the Wisdom (which is the greatest Wisdom in this World) of Princes, and of the great Ones of the World; We speak Wisdom (saith he, ver. 6.) yet not the Wisdom of this World, nor of the Princes of this World, that come to nought; but we speak the Wisdom of God, &c. He instanceth you see in the Wisdom of Princes, as the greatest Wisdom of all the rest; and he makes that to vanish, and to come to nought before the deep Things that are in the Heart of God (as he expresseth it, ver. 10.) before the Depth of this Wisdom, which God himself hath revealed. In Psalms 36. 6. David makes the Judgments of God to be a great deep; by the Judgments of God there he means the Works of his common Providence, his Ways of governing this World, whether in ways of Mercy or of Judgment, for he doth not mean merely ways of Judgment strictly taken for Justice; for in the Scripture Phrase, the Judgments of God, are as well his Works of Mercy, as of Justice; and the Works of his common Providence are meant, which appeareth likewise by what followeth in the next Words, He preserveth Man and Beast; that is, his ways whereby he preserveth Man and Beast, and governs all the World, they are a great Deep. But if you come to the Salvation of Men, He is the Saviour of all Men, by common Providence, Providence, but especially of those that believe; if you come to those Judgments, O how unsearchable are his Judgments and his Ways past finding out! Saith the Apostle in that Rom. 11. When he had spoken of his Ways of saving Men.

The greatest Wisdom that was ever set up in this World by the Princes of it, is the Kingdom of Poperie, it is a Composition of all sorts of Policies, called therefore a Mystery of Iniquity by the Apostle in 2 Thes. 2. and you shall find in Rev. 17. 5. That the Whore that rideth upon the Beast, hath this Name written in her Forehead, Mystery Babylon the great, &c. It is a very strange Thing, that God in his Providence should so order it, that in the Old Mitres that the Popes used to Wear, there was Ingraven in the Inside Mysterium, but since they were challenged out of the Revelation to be that great Antichrist and Whore, they have left it out. It is a wonderful Thing to read their Schoolmen and Casuists in their Prosecution of what concern'd the Frame of Religion they have invented, what great Depths (but Depths of Satan, which he hath helped Men to invent) what Harmony one Head hath in it answering to another, what a great deal of Profoundness of Learning there is in that Systeme and Fabrick. Now this great Mystery, I may call the Gospel of Antichrist, it is another Gospel made on Purpose, and set up by Satan to advance his Eldest Son Antichrist. And as Satan did make a Gospel for his Eldest Son, a Wisdom which the World never knew before, and which for the Depths of it is called a Mystery of Iniquity; surely my Brethren, when God himself shall go and make a Gospel for his Son Jesus Christ, to reveal by it the Riches of his Glory unto the Saints, what Depths think you must needs be in this glorious Gospel. It is called the Mystery of Christ, in Eph. 3. 3. And when Paul boasteth of the profoundness of his Knowledge, he doth it of his Knowledge in the Mystery of Christ, Colos. 4. 3. And as was said before, Without Controversie, great is the Mystery of Godliness, God manifested in the Flesh, 1 Tim. 3. 16.

The Mystery of Christ's Incarnation for the reconciling of the World (to Instance but in that) was such a Mystery, as all created Understandings could never have brought forth. For consider but this, how Things did stand between God and Man (let me but State the Difference and the Controversie, as I may say between God and Man) First, God laid this for a Conclusion, that he would not put up the least wrong from his Creature, but he would have full Satisfaction from the Sinner. In the Second Place, it was as clear and as apparent, that no Creature could satisfy him, neither the Sinner nor any for him. And yet Thirdly, God stood upon this too, He would have Satisfaction from a Creature, and that Nature that had sinned should satisfy. Do but lay all these Three Things together. If God now should have gone and referred the untying of this Knot, to a Consultation of all intelligible Natures, Angels and Men that ever were or shall be; it would have wilder'd, plunged their Thoughts unto Eternity: And after Millions of Years of Consultation they would have returned this Answer, they could think and find out no way. Therefore saith he, Great is the Mystery of Godliness, God manifested in the Flesh; and it is without Controversie so too, that is, it is such a Mystery, as whoever understandeth the State of the Controversie before between God and Man, and this to be the Answer; he must needs acknowledge, that there are Depths of God in it, and that no other could have invented it, it carries its own Testimony of Divinity with it; without Controversie saith he, or universally must this be received to be a great Mystery, God manifested in the Flesh.

That is a deep Knowledge and containeth Depths in it, which contains nothing but the Reconciliation of Contradictions, to make Things, which in appearance are seeming Contradictions meet. But so the Gospel doth all along, I shall give you Instances, and some Scriptures for them too.

Take the Doctrine of God's Election and Free-Grace; That at once a Creature should be loved with the greatest Love of God, and yet be a Child of Wrath at the same time; (as before Conversion he is) can you Solve me this? That he should be a Son, and an Enemy. The Apostle hath it, Rom. 11. where he tells you (speaking of the Jews in the Root) That they are beloved for the Fathers sake, and yet Enemies for the Gospels sake. And in Eph. 2. 1. he it hath plainly, We (that is, I Paul and the rest) were by Nature the Children of Wrath, and yet Paul was a chosen Vessel beloved of God, even from Everlasting with the highest and greatest Love. So were the Ephesians he speaks this off, and it was therefore a Love born to them afore, which was the Cause of this their quickning and bringing out of that Estate. That one and the same Man should at the same Time be Blessed with all spiritual Blessings in heavenly Places; that you have in the very next Words, But God who is rich in Mercy, for the great Love wherewith he loved us; Namely then, when we were thus Children of Wrath: As is evident by that which follows after that, even when we were yet Dead in Sins (out of that love) hath he quickned us, as it is Eph. 1. 3. and yet be cursed with all the Curses written in this Book, and stand under them. What an amazing Wonder is this? It is plain that every Man is so, For cursed is every one that continueth not in every Thing that is written in this Book to do it. It is applicable unto all. The Reconciliation is easie, the Gospel makes these seeming Contradictions meet, for if you take Man Person as considered in Christ, he is thus Loved and Blessed; but if you take his Person as considered in himself, without any to stand between God and his Sin and Guilt, he standeth under the Curse of it. So that both these are true of him, one in the one Sense, and the other in the other.

So likewise, when the Prophet considered in Isa. 53. That God had a Son as old as himself (as I may so speak) and equal to himself, he breaks out, Who can declare his Generation? Here is a Depth.

Our Saviour Christ himself puts some of these Riddles to the Pharisees. Saith he to them, in Mat. 22. 43. Solve me this, If David call Christ Lord, how is he his Son? The Gospel salveth this.

That a Virgin should conceive a Son; this was a Riddle to Mary her self, How shall this be, saith she to the Angel in Luke 1. 34? The Gospel revealeth this.

That this Man Jesus Christ, should be in Heaven when he was on Earth, and should be said to descend from Heaven as Man; and yet never was there then when he said it: This was a Riddle that Christ posed Nicodemus with, he stood wondering at the Doctrine of Regeneration, that a Man must be Born again; what saith Christ, do you wonder at that? I'll tell you a higher Riddle than that, No Man hath ascended up to Heaven, but He that came down from Heaven, even the Son of Man which is in Heaven, John 3. 13. And if you Mark the Coherence of this with the Verse before, you shall see he utters this as an heavenly Mystery beyond that which he had express'd of Regeneration, which he saith was but an earthly Thing in Comparison of this; If, saith he, I have told you earthly Things and ye believe not, how will ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly Things? So you have it likewise in John 6. When Christ had told them, that they must eat his Flesh, and drink his Blood; they strove amongst themselves saying, How can this Man give us his Flesh to eat? And many of his Disciples when they heard it said, This is a hard saying, who can bear it? When Jesus (saith the Text) knew in himself that his Disciples murmured at it (they were those that were not Believers, though Disciples) He said unto them, Doth this offend you? Can you not understand this? I'll give you an harder Thing, What, and if you shall see the Son of Man ascend up where He was before? And yet he was but the Son of a Virgin, and was (as Man) never but in her Womb.

These Riddles the Gospel you see unfoldeth. Now as the Person of Christ affords all these Mysteries and Depths, so his Obedience affords more; That that God that made the Law, should be subject to the Law, and fulfil it himself: This you have in Gal. 4. 4. He was made of a Woman, and made under the Law: That God who is nothing but Spirit, should have Blood to redeem Men by; this you have in Acts 20. 28. Feed the Church of God, which He hath purchased chased with his own Blood. That He, that is God blessed for ever should be made a Curse; this you have in Gal. 3. 1. That He, that is the Holy One of Israel should be made Sin; ay, and what's more, he that cannot endure Sin, for nothing is more contrary to the Holiness of God than Sin, and yet he that knew no Sin, was made Sin, this you have in 2 Cor. 5. 21. That God should never be more angry with his Son than when he was most pleas'd with him, for so it was when Christ hung upon the Cross, God did find a sweet smelling Saviour of Rest and Satisfaction, even then when he cried out; My God, my God, Why hast thou forsaken me? Again, that God should be free in pardoning, and yet notwithstanding receive the fullest Satisfaction, even to the Rigour of Justice: Here is a Riddle to all the World, yet you have it in Rom. 3. 23, 24. Being justified freely by his Grace; but how? Through the Redemption that is in Jesus Christ. Why, if there were a Price by way of Redemption paid, how was it freely by Grace? Yet it is both. And that it should ever be said, That God is Just, and the justifier of him that believeth on Jesus; so it follows, ver. 26. That though he doth justify out of the freest Grace, yet he is in the most absolute manner Just in doing of it; thus to bring Mercy and the Extremity of Justice to meet, what a Reconciliation is this? I'll give you another, for indeed the Doctrine of the Gospel is nothing else, it is made up of these. God requires Satisfaction of his Son Jesus Christ in his Humane Nature, and God must be satisfied with something that is not his own, for you can never satisfy any one with what is his own already. How can this be reconciled? Why my Brethren, the Humane Nature being join'd to the Second Person, he hath that Right in it that the Father and the Holy Ghost hath not, it is his own in a meer peculiar Manner; for it is one Person with him, which it is not with the other Two Persons. No Creature could have made Satisfaction unto God, for whatsoever the Creature had, was Gods own already; but this Second Person, Jesus Christ, he could say to the Father, I will give you that which is mine own, I have such a Propriety in it as you have not; and yet all Things is Gods: This you see is reconciled in Christ, and therefore it is put upon redeeming us with [HIS OWN] Blood.

Chap. II.

So come to Justification: What an amazing Wonder is it, that a Man should be Ungodly at the same Time that he is justified, and at the same Time that he is sanctified too. The Scripture is clear for this; Rom. 4. 5. Abraham, not only at his first Conversion, but a long Time afterward; yea, in his whole Life, looked upon himself as a Person Ungodly, and to be justified by God as Ungodly, considered in himself.

So if you come to Conversion, there is no Man that truly turns to God, but he turns freely to him, it is the freest Act that ever Man did, or else he he will never be saved; yet notwithstanding, though it hath the highest Freedom in it, it is wrought in him by an Almighty Power, even the same Power that raised up Christ from Death to Life. Here is the highest Freedom of Will, and God's Everlasting Purpose and Power mix'd together.

Come to the Life of a Christian after Conversion, take it as the Gospel hath revealed it, and it consisteth of nothing but seeming Contradictions. The Apostle in Gal. 2. 20. reckons up together Two Contradictions in appearance; saith he, I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live; well, yet not I; this is strange, but Christ liveth in me, and the Life which I live in the Flesh, I live by the Faith of the Son of God. My Brethren, for one Soul to live in another, and by another ones living in him, and that should be his Life, it is only the Doctrine of the Gospel that makes these Things true. Adam knew no such Thing, there was no such Art and Skill in his Life. That likewise in Phil. 2. God should work in a Man all, both the Will and the Deed, and yet the Man work freely with God; this is a seeming Contradiction, and yet made good by the Gospel.

I have mentioned these, and have given you Scriptures which holds them forth to you in very Terms. I might Mention a Thousand others: And I'll give you the Reason why I Mention them; it is not only to confirm the Point in Hand, but let me tell you this, and know it for a Truth, the Cause of of all the Errours that have been in the World hath been the want of reconciling these Things together.

Chap. III.

The Arrians found great Things spoken of the Manhood of Christ, as of a Divine Man, and therefore they denied that he was God. They could not reconcile these Two, how God should be Man, and Man should be God, that both should be joined together; therefore taking Part with one, they Exclude the other.

Our Lord and Saviour Christ is God blessed for ever; therefore say the Papists, he did not suffer the Displeasure of God in his Soul; why? Say they, can God Love his Son, and be angry with him at the same Time? And he that is God blessed for ever, can he be made a Curse in his Soul? Yes, take him as a Surety. They take Part with one Truth of the Gospel to exclude the other; whereas the Gospel is a Reconciliation of both these, and therein lies the Depth of it.

So in Point of Justification, Say the Papists, Can a Man be justified by the Righteousness of another? Are not the Saints Holy in themselves? And doth not that make them Holy? Is not the Wall White with the whiteness, that is in the Wall? It is the want of reconciling these seeming Contradictions, that is the Ground of that Errour. I'll give you a greater Contradiction in Appearance to Humane Reason, a Man is Ungodly and Godly, a Sinner and justified at the same Time. This is true, the Scripture holds it forth to be so.

As for the Socinians, They say, there is no Satisfaction for Sin, for if God Pardon freely, how can he Pardon for a Satisfaction? Whereas the Scripture is clear, that there may be the freest Grace in it and yet Satisfaction too, and the Truth of the Gospel lies in reconciling these Two, and that's the Depth of it; but they take Part with one Truth to exclude another.

Take Antinomianism as you call it. All those glorious Truths of the Gospel, that a Man is justified from all Eternity, yea, and glorified from all Eternity too; &c. Men cleave to all these Truths, whereas other Truths are to be joined with them. A Man before he believeth is unjustified, therefore he is said to be justified by Faith; and he is a Child of Wrath until he believe. All Believers are now glorified, and sit now in heavenly Places with Christ, considered in their Head Christ; yet notwithstanding, what poor miserable Creatures are they here below? Take Believers in their own Person they are not so, but considered in Christ they are thus. I am perfectly Sanctified, and perfectly Holy considered in him, and I was Crucified with him; yea, but the remainders of Corruptions are still. All Men would desire to be more glorified than they are here, yet they are perfectly glorified in Christ, considered in him. Here is still taking Part with one Truth to exclude another, whereas both must be taken in. So others Object, they cannot conceive that God should be angry with his Elect, and chastise for Sin; for if he nothing but Love me how can that be? 'Tis easily answered, there is Anger that proceeds from Love. Though Mens Sins are forgiven without Interruption, yet there is a binding of Sins in Heaven; so saith Mat. 18. expressly.

Take Arminianisme. What is the Foundation of their Errour? It is meerly a want of reconciling seeming, though not real Contradictions in the Gospel. As for Example, they know not how to reconcile Man's Free-will with God's peremptory Decree. Say they, if God out of his unchangeable peremptory Love to a Man, work irresistibly upon his Will, how can his Will be Free? Why, the Freest that can be for all this; for consider this, who hath more Freedom of Will, than the Humane Nature of Jesus Christ? For if he had not had the height of Freedom of Will, we could never have been saved by him: Yet infallibly and irresistibly and with the greatest Necessity that ever could be, was his Will carried on always unto Good: I say, the taking Part with one Truth without reconciling it to another, hath been the Foundation of many Errours; and therein lies the Depth of the Gospel in reconciling all seeming Contradictions whatsoever.

Chap. II.

All these Mysteries, I say, hath God knit up in the Gospel, to shew his own Wisdom, and to befool the wise Men of the World. So that now considering all those poor and petty Plots of reconciling Nations and Kingdoms, all the ways of Accommodation, whereby the greatest Difficulties are resolved between Men and Men, and Kingdom and Kingdom, wherein the wise Men, and the Princes of the World so Glory (for their Wisdom lies in ways of Accommodation, and reconciling Things, and in them they spend their Thoughts, and in them they Pride and Magnify themselves) I say, take all those Depths of State, and the least of these Depths that are in the Gospel makes all the Wisdom and Policy of the World to vanish before it as meer Folly. It confoundeth the Wisdom of the Wise, and brings to nothing the Understanding of the Prudent, so the Apostle saith, 1 Cor. I. 19.

I might likewise shew you, that the Gospel in the Knowledge of it is excellent in Respect of the Depths that are in it, so in Respect of all that Harmony and Correspondency that there is in the Gospel of one Truth with another. The Excellency of Knowledge lies as well in the suiting of one thing with another, as in the profoundness of the Things themselves. Now there was never such an Invention as this, that as it is said in Ecclesiastes, God hath set one thing against another; so the Harmony, the suiting of all Truths one with another here, in that glorious manner, is no where to be found in any Wisdom or Art whatsoever. The Philosophers found a great deal of Harmony in the things of this World; for the Skill and Art that God hath stamped upon the Creatures consisteth in the Harmony that is between one thing and another.

Now the Observations would be infinite that might be made of this kind. How our Sinfulness and Christ's Satisfaction and Obedience answers one another: There's nothing in thy Soul that thou canst Object, but there is that in the Gospel which will Answer it particularly. And so of all other Truths, it may be said they kiss each other. My Brethren, it is the Thread that runs through all Divinity, therefore a Man must make a whole Body a System of Divinity that will do this; and when it is done, there is nothing more Glorious.

Now the Gospel is not only a Mystery and a Depth, in Respect of Wisdom, but let me give you another Depth; and that is a Depth of Love, which is laid up and revealed in this Doctrine and Knowledge of the Gospel, Ephes. 3. 16. That you may comprehend with all Saints the Height, and Depth, and Length, and Breadth of the Love of God which passeth Knowledge. Sin is a great Depth, which the Law lays open; therefore saith Jeremy, Chap. 17. The Heart of Man is desperately Wicked, who can know it? And Solomon saith in Eccles. 7. 22. I thought my self Wise enough, I set my self to find out, and to know the wickedness of Folly: But he could not find out that Depth of Wickedness that is in Man's Heart, or make an Anatomy of the Heart: And poor Souls, when they are humbled find it so, and the damned Spirits in Hell find it so; for what is it they Study, and shall do to everlasting? Their own Sinfulness and God's Wrath, their Parts being extended and set upon the utmost Tenter-hooks, and their Sins being set in order before them, they Study nothing but their Sins, and Meditate nothing but Terror; and this is Hell. But now there is a Mystery of Love as well as of Wisdom revealed in the Gospel, a Depth that swalloweth up all the Depths of Sinfulness that is in the Elect, yea and if they were a thousand times vaster than they are. The Apostle in that place I quoted even now, Eph. 3. 16. speaks of Heights and Depths, and Lengths and Breadths Breadths in the Love of God ; he compares it to a mighty Sea, which swalloweth up Hills like Mole-hills ; a Sea which is of that Depth, that the Thoughts of Men, though they shall be Diving to all Eternity to the bottom of it, shall never come thither ; a Sea of that Length and Breadth, that tho' they are Sailing over it to everlasting, yet they shall never come to Shore : It passeth Knowledge, saith he. God's Heart, my Brethren, is as deep in Love as it is in Wisdom, yea and his Love was it that set his Wisdom to work, to find out all those Depths whereby to shew his Love. And therefore it is an observable place in Rom. 11. 23. (which I quoted at the first) O the Depths (saith he) of the Riches of the Knowledge and Wisdom of God! You would think that the Apostle there speaks only of the Knowledge and Wisdom of God ; no, he means Mercy and Love, as well as Wisdom, or rather Wisdom set a Work by Love ; and it is clear by the Context, for he had spoken in the words before, of God's shewing Mercy to the Elect, That through your Mercy (saith he) they might obtain Mercy : For God hath concluded all under Unbelief, that he might have Mercy upon all ; O the Depth, &c. Having spoken of Love and Mercy which God intends to his Elect, and the Ways and Contrivements that Wisdom hath to shew Mercy, he cries out, O the Depth of the Riches both of the Wisdom and Knowledge of God! And there in Rom. 12. 1. where he comes to make Application of all, what saith he ? I beseech you therefore Brethren, by the Mercies of God, that you do so and so. We have two Gulphes in us, two Vessels, Understanding and Will, and both these must be fill'd : Why the Gospel contains two Depths in it, the one to fill your Understanding, the other to fill your Will and Affections for ever. It contains a Depth of Wisdom, and it contains a Depth of Love ; it is a Mystery of Wisdom and it is Mystery of Love. And so now I have dispatched the first Property of the Excellency of the Gospel, that it is a Mystery.

I shall but make a short Use of it, and that is only this. These are great Invitements unto Men to become Saints, and being so, to search in a more especial manner into the things of the Gospel ; you know great Understandings seek after Depths, as good Swimmers do after great Rivers, and will not go to Shallowes. It is said of the Leviathan, that he playes in the Sea, there is room enough to do so. If any thing invites the Understanding of Man to be searching and prying, the Depths of the Gospel will do it.

And let me add this to it (which as it inhanceth the Worth of the Gospel, so it should set on our Spirits after the Knowledge of it, and the Knowledge of it as Saints, the Depths of it are so great that it will always produce new Knowledge ; though you know but the same Things again, yet your Knowledge shall be always new, why ? Because it passeth Knowledge. Go take all other things that are the greatest Riddles and Secrets in the World, and when you once know them, you know them, and they become Trivial when you once know them. There was a Secret in Nature, which the World almost for Three Thousand Years did not know : I am sure the Heathens did not, and that was the Cause of the Eclipse of the Sun and the Moon, and they stood all wondering (as of late the West Indians did) when such a thing happened : Now we know that the Moons coming between the Sun eclipseth it, and the Shadow of Earth coming between the Moon and the Sun eclipseth it ; and this great Riddle that amazed the World, we count it now we know it but a trivial Thing ; and who almost when the Sun or Moon are eclipsed, thinks of it with any Admiration ? But when the Depths of the Gospel are unfolded to you, you may still search into them, and search further with new Pleasure, and to a renewed Understanding they are always New and Fresh. There is no New thing under the Sun, saith Solomon in Eccles. 1. And he speaks of natural moral Knowledge : But there is nothing but New things which are above the Sun, which Believers know : Therefore as the Mercies of God are New every Morning, so the Thoughts of these Mercies they are to an Holy Heart precious, sweet, New every Morning. And you shall find this, that as you grow up more in Holiness, still the Things you knew before will be New to you ; the very same

Chap. III.

Things, besides your Enlargement in other things that you did not know before: So the Apostle clearly saith, in 1 Cor. 13. 10. When that which is Perfect is come, that which is in Part shall be done away: When I was a Child, I understood as a Child, but when I became a Man I put away Childish things. Every new Degree of spiritual Light swallowed up what he knew before, that he thinketh that he did not know it before, the Knowledge of it, or that New Light, being so pleasant to him.

Now, my Brethren, to have the Mind of Man not only to have Depths made the Object of it, but the Holier he grows to be carried on to further Depths, to be led along thus with continual New Knowledge, there is nothing more Pleasant; and yet this the Gospel is, and all the Depths of it. And then when you shall have Depths of Love added, a Sea of Love breaking in upon your Hearts, at every Thought, (if the Apprehension be wound up high) to fill a Mans Will and Affection, as the other fill'd his Understanding; this must needs fill the Heart with unspeakable Pleasure and Joy, and Contentment, in the View and Contemplation of this great and high Mystery. Now if we had Holiness enough, and Love enough, and Faith enough, and grew in these, this would certainly be our Case. And so much now for this first Property of the Gospel that is here mentioned, that it is called a Mystery.

CHAP. III.

Another Demonstration of the Excellency of the Gospel, that it is a secret Mystery, an hidden, and concealed Wisdom.

COLOS. I. 26.

—Which hath been hidden from Ages, and from Generations, &c.

I Come now to the Second of those Properties or Adjuncts that are Attributed or Ascribed unto the Gospel, mention'd in this 26th Verse, to set forth the Glory of it, and that is the secrecy and hiddenness of it. Hidden (saith he) from Ages and from Generations.

That which is here Translated [hid] is in Rom. 16. 25. Silence, not spoken of, it was kept Secret, at least the Mystery of it. Now to him (saith he) that is of Power to stablish you, according to my Gospel, and the Preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the Revelation of the Mystery, which was [kept Secret] since the World began. The Apostle Paul in all the foregoing Part of the Epistle, had laid open the great Things of this Gospel, and now at the latter end of all in the Conclusion of it (because that it is the Revelation of the Gospel for which we are most of all to bless God) he makes that Doxology, or closeth it with this Praise and Thanksgiving unto God: Now to Him that is of Power to stablish you, according to my Gospel, and the Preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the Revelation of the Mystery, which was kept Secret since the World began, but now is made manifest; To God only wise be Glory, through Jesus Christ, Amen. He doth involve and interweave the Mention of the Glory and Excellency of this Gospel, as that for which there is Glory to be given given to God in all Ages and by all Nations (for so the Doxology runs) and this for ever.

It is said here to be hid from Ages, and from Generations. Interpreters, some of them, do make a Difference between these Two; namely, Ages and Generations, that the one doth import all those Times of Eternity (if they may be called Times) before the World was; and the other, all the Times that have been since God made this World, since indeed Time was. I shall give you the Sense, in which the Gospel may be said to be hid in both Respects.

If, in the first Place, we take [from Ages] to be all the Time before the World was (as in Acts 15. it is, known unto God (saith he) are his Works, even from Everlasting) then this Gospel was hid with God, even from Everlasting. In 1 Cor. 2. 7. he saith, It is the Mystery, and hidden Wisdom which God hath ordained before the World: And in Rev. 14. 6. it is called, the Everlasting Gospel. And therefore you shall observe likewise in the Place quoted even now, Rom. 16. 25, 26. he saith, It is a Mystery, which was kept Secret since the World began (so our Translators read it, it is the same Word which is used here for Ages) and is now made manifest according to the Commandment of the Everlasting God. Why comes in the Epithete of that God which hath been from Everlasting? But because the Gospel hath been so too, and hath been kept Secret not only from the Time since the World began, but from Everlasting also.

You will say unto me, in what Respect should the Gospel be said to be hid even from Everlasting, when there was no Creature to know it?

I Answer, because it was that Knowledge which in God's esteem even from Everlasting he resolved he would be sparing of, and ordained to reserve to himself. The Things of the Gospel they were (as the Apostle tells us, 1 Cor. 2. 10.) The Deep Things of God, that lay (as I may so speak) at the bottom of his Heart, the great Secrets, which he esteemed such even from Everlasting. And whereas for other kind of Knowledge he had but a common Regard, not much caring or standing upon it, when he should reveal it, and so thought with himself; as for the Knowledge of other Things, I can set no Time for the Revelation of them (that is, in Respect of any peculiar Account or Value I have of them, though all Things fall within my Decree) but I will give means to Mankind to know any Thing else presently; but this of the Gospel saith he I will reserve. Other Things in God that he meant to reveal, they lay uppermost in his Thoughts, &c. they were common, he cared not how soon they were known. But these were the Deep Things of God; God hath not been sparing or nice (as I may express it) of any other Knowledge whatsoever, that in this World he meant to reveal to the Sons of Men, either the Knowledge of the Creature or of his Law; but this of the Gospel he locked up in his own Breast, he had a peculiar Cabinet for it, and it lay under a Lock of his own Decree not to manifest it, till the fulness of Time should come. And therefore, it is said to be hid in God even from Everlasting. There is a Phrase in 1 Cor. 2. 10. speaking of this Gospel (as in that Chapter he doth) he saith, The Spirit searcheth all Things, yea, the deep Things of God. It is express'd after the manner of Men, and that Phrase with that Emphasis: Yea, the deep Things of God, implies, that God as other Artists, and those that are wise, when he hath any Thing that is rare, and which he Cares not to let every one see, keeps it close. In the like manner you have a Phrase at the 9th Verse of that Chapter, Eye hath not seen, nor the Ear heard, neither have entred into the Heart of Man, the Things (the Things of the Gospel, namely, for he speaks of the Gospel in that Chapter) which God hath prepared for them that love him. Prepared, when? Why prepared even from Everlasting, for as Austin well expresseth presseth it, the Decrees of God (saith he) they are but the Preparations, the Contrivements of all those Benefits and Mercies which God intended to bestow upon us.

Secondly, It is said to be hidden also from Generations, that is, from Ages since the World began: So the Apostle speaks, looking backward to former Times. I shall give you the Particulars, in Respect of which it was said to be hidden from all Generations past.

The Gospel as it is now revealed, was hid from all Nations.

1. It was hid from the Gentiles, so as it was New to them: And that is plainly one of the Apostles Scopes here. He writes to Gentiles, and he would magnifie the Mercy of the Revelation of the Gospel unto them; and therefore if you Mark it, he saith, Ver. 27. To whom (namely, the Saints) God would make known the Riches of the Glory of this Mystery [among the Gentiles] And so likewise you have it in Eph. 3. 8. Unto me, who am less than the least of all Saints, is this Grace given, that I should Preach [among the Gentiles] the unsearchable Riches of Christ: And to make all Men see what is the Fellowship of the Mystery (namely to the Gentiles, that they should partake of it) which from the beginning of the World hath been hid in God. In so much, as some Interpreters would make in all these Places, both that in Rom. 16. 25. and this Place in the Ephesians, and likewise this Text in the Colossians, the Mystery intended, to be the revealing of the Gospel unto the Gentiles. But it is clear that is not the meaning: The Mystery that was kept hid, is not only that the Gospel should be Preached to the Gentiles, but it is the Things of the Gospel it self, it is the Mystery of the Glory of it, it is Christ the Hope of Glory; and it is (in the Ephesians) the unsearchable Riches of Christ: And more plain, in 1 Pet. 1. the Things conceal'd to former Times there, are not only said to be the Revelation of these Things to the Gentiles, but the Things themselves, the Salvation it self, as you shall find if you read the 10, 11, and 12. Verses of that Chapter.

2. It was kept hid even from the Jews also, it is therefore indeed called a Mystery; for what is properly a Mystery? It is not the Thing meerly hid, wholly kept so close as that there is nothing said about it, but when there is that said about it, which doth obscurely and darkly reveal it, and yet hath a further meaning which afterwards cometh to be opened. Even thus as to the Words that Adam spoke concerning his Wife, That they Two should be one Flesh, what saith the Apostle of it, in Eph. 5. 32. This is a great Mystery, saith he? Why? Because darkly under the Union of Man and Wife, was intended the Union of Christ and his Church. I speak, saith he, concerning Christ and his Church.

Now it is therefore called a Mystery even to the Jews, because although they had the Gospel, the Substance of it, yet it was vail'd, and the Carnal Jew he understood all in the Letter, and looked to nothing in the Gospel; and as you have it in 2 Cor. 3. 13. There was a Vail put over Moses his Face, so that the Children of Israel could not stedfastly look to the End of that which is abolished; namely, to what was revealed unto them under the Law. But now the Gospel is come, all is open, (as if you should speak of a Riddle, and when you have done, give the meaning of it) and then they saw that all that the Prophets and Moses had written, was written concerning Christ. But I say, the Jews in the Time of the Law, saw not this Mystery intended in it. You shall find this in that Place of the Romans I quoted even now, Chap. 16. ver. 25, 26. According to the Revelation of the Mystery, which was kept Secret since the World began, but now is made manifest, and by the Scriptures of the Prophets (mark that Expression) according to the Commandment of the Everlasting God, made known to all Nations. Would you know, saith he, why the Gospel is called a Mystery? God had hid a great deal of it obscurely up and down among the Prophets, and Christ hath sent out his Apostles to make known and reveal what all those Prophets intended, which they themselves did not know, not in the clearness of it as we do, they had as it were the Letter, we have the Mystery unfolded. Therefore says the Apostle Peter 1 Pet. 1. 10.

1. 10. Of which Salvation, the Prophets enquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the Grace that should come unto you: Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the Things that are now reported unto you, &c. So that indeed the Mystery, and the Meaning, and the End, at which all those Things aimed that the Prophets delivered, they themselves fully knew not; they were to write the Scriptures, and they enquired after, and searched diligently what those Things which they wrote did signifie; but it was answered them, That not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the Things that are now reported. But now in the Times of the Gospel (saith he in Rom. 16.) By the Scriptures of the Prophets, it is made known unto all Nations: Men had only hints before, but now by opening the Prophets, and laying Things together, the whole Business is unfolded, and this Mystery is come out. And this is properly a Mystery, and in this respect the Gospel was a Mystery, hidden even from the Jews themselves. Therefore, to give you another Place, there is a little Particle in Eph. 3. 5. very observable, By Revelation he made known unto me the Mystery, which in other Ages was not made known unto the Sons of Men. What, did they know nothing of the Gospel? Yes saith the Apostle, they might, but it was in a Mystery, it was not made known to them, saith he, as it is now revealed (Mark that Particle, made known as it is now) to his Holy Apostles and Prophets; that is, the Prophets of the New Testament upon whom the Holy Ghost fell, who opened unto them all those Prophecies of the Old Testament, and they saw clearly nothing but Jesus Christ in them. Hid it was you see from the Gentiles; hid it was also from the Jews, in respect of the Revelation of it. Hid it was also.

3. From the Angels, and from Adam in Innocency. The Angels might know that they were to have a Head in whom God did unite them unto himself; and they might know it, as the Fathers of the Old Testament knew there should be a Messiah, by whom they should be Redeemed; but how, and who, and what he was, they knew not; and in that Respect they are said, in 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11. to Pry into these Things; which Place I shall not mention much; but I shall give you another Place, which will comprehend both; namely, that the great Things of the Gospel were kept hidden from Angels and from Man also. And it is in 1 Cor. 2. 9. compared with Isai. 64. 4. (out of which, the Words in the Corinthians are taken) As it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor Ear heard, neither have entred into the Heart of Man, the Things that God hath prepared for them that Love him. Now in Isaiab it is thus, Since the beginning of the World, Men have not heard, nor perceived by the Ear, nor hath the Eye seen, O God, besides thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him. To open these Words a little. When he saith there in the Corinthians, Eye hath not seen, nor Ear heard, &c. it hath Reference to what was said, Ver. 7. We speak the Wisdom of God in a Mystery, even the hidden Wisdom, which God ordained afore the World: And it hath Reference also to ver. 8. where it is said, Which Wisdom none of the Princes of this World knew; and he brings a Proof why none of the Princes, none of the corrupt Men of the World ever knew it, a majori, from a far greater Argument; for saith he, these great Things which the Gospel reveals for the Salvation of the Elect, have not only not entred into the Heart of corrupt Men, but they have not entred into the Heart of Innocent Man, not into the Heart of Adam himself. How do I prove that? From that in Isai. 64. 4. Since the beginning of the World, saith he, Men have not heard, &c. which Phrase the Apostles often use, when they speak of the Gospel being hidden, as in Eph. 3. 9. he saith, It hath been hid from the beginning of the World. But you will say, he excludes not Angels? Why truly, if you Consult the Place in Isaiab, he saith, That none hath seen, O God, besides Thee; who doth he speak to? To Jesus Christ, as a distinct Person from his Father; why? It is clear by this, because he changeth the Phrase; None hath seen, O God, besides thee; what He hath prepared, not what thou hast prepared, but what he hath prepared; as if he had said, besides Thee O God the Son

Chap. III.

Son, knewest what God the Father hath prepared for those that Love him, none else but only Jesus Christ which was in God's Bosom knew it. Neither Eye hath seen, nor Ear heard, nor hath it entred into the Heart of Man: There is but those Three Ways of knowing, either from the inward natural Principles, which are in the Heart of Man; and so a Thing enters into a Man's Heart from the Principles of Reason, which are in a Man's self; why saith he, all the Principles that were sown in Adam's Heart, or in any Man's Heart else, would not have afforded this Knowledge, it would not have entred into a Man's Heart. And then all the Way of Knowledge by the Eye, or Observation of the Creatures, could never have afforded this Knowledge, or the least Jot of it. No all the hearing by the Ear, all the Communication that God should have made to Adam, would not have laid open these Things to him. And it is plain, that Isaiab speaks of the Things of the Gospel, not only by the Quotation of his Words by the Apostle Paul, but from the Desire of the Church there, that God would bow the Heavens and come down, and reveal these Things to them; bow the Heavens (saith he) and come down, touch the Mountains, &c. Even as the Mountains when God gave the Law bowed down before him, so he expresseth the revealing of the Gospel under the same Terms.

Having gone over all these Places, there is one Place more, in which all that I have said out of the Romans, and out of the Corinthians, and out of the Colossians, and out of the Ephesians, concerning the hiddenness of this Wisdom, is in a manner contained, and it is in the Old Testament, and for ought I know in the oldest Book of the Old Testament, even in Job, Chap. 28. which I shall open to you as clearly as I can; the Truth is, I had not thought it had lain in that Place, till I found the Learned Ainsworth refer to it, though but in a Word.

Ainsworth Communion of Saints.

Most Interpreters I find refer all the Matter in that 28th Chapter, to the 12th verse of the 27th Chapter, and that there Job begins his Preface to all the Discourse that follows. I will teach you (saith he) (it is Translated) by the Hand of God; but Piscator reads it, Of the Hand of God, that is, that shall be the Subject I speak of, and that which is with the Almighty, will I not conceal, that which is Secret and laid up with him: Where he professeth to hint to them a Secret Counsel and Wisdom, which was in God beyond what they had spoken, a Wisdom which they knew little of, and which God kept Secret from all Living. All the Discourses of Job's Friends, what had they been about? They had been about God's outward Dispensations, how God punisheth Wicked Men for their Sins, and they confine themselves to that Discourse, to the Works of God's Providence, and an Enumeration of his legal Proceedings in a way of Justice to Sinners, which was a common ordinary Notion then in the World, and which suited those Times under the Law of Nature, under which it is Thought Job lived. Now in this they prided themselves in their Discourse, therefore Job to confound them, and not only to Confute them, but Shame them too; he professeth to hint to them another Wisdom, which they did not Exercise their Thoughts about. Why saith he, Ver. 12. You speak nothing but what is ordinary, Behold, all ye yourselves have seen it, why then are ye thus altogether Vain? Or Boast your selves of such a Knowledge as you have uttered, by which you condemn me, as if I were a wicked Man? (for by it they had condemned him, because God punished wicked Men according to their Works) and so Job goes on to repeat what they had said, as you will see, if you compare the 13th Verse to the end, with the 20th Chapter. But saith he, whereas you think that this Knowledge you have uttered, hath such a great deal of Depth in it; I'll tell you, or teach you of the Hand of God; that is, of God's Eternal Purpose for so you shall find it (as Piscator well observeth) in Acts 4. interpreted; They were gathered together, saith he, to do whatsoever thy Hand and Counsel determined before to be don. I will not conceal (saith Job) that which is with the Almighty; there is an higher Wisdom, which He in his Eternal Purpose hath order'd beyond that which you see in the Works of his ordinary Providence, which you neither mind nor search into. Having thus Prefaced his following Discourse, course, he doth in 28th Chapter, as both Beza and Jansonius observeth, begin to speak of this Wisdom, and to Commend it to them. And see how he sets it out, you shall see it will fall in and open all the Scriptures I have already mentioned.

Chap. III.

First, He compares that Wisdom, which he would set their Thoughts a work upon, which they neglected, and out of the Rigour of their legal Spirits condemned him; he compares it, I say, First, With all Humane Wisdom; and he tells them plainly this, that there is a great deal of Wisdom in the Hearts of Men; and instanceth in the Art that Men have to find out all the precious Things that are hid in the Bowels of the Earth; so ver. 1. He findeth out, where there is a vein for Silver, and a place for Gold; he taketh Iron out of the Earth, and he hath such Skill as he can make Brasse out of a Stone; and if a Flood break out while he is digging under the Earth, he can overcome that Difficulty and remove it; and he digs up Stones out of the Earth where Bread grows, one would have thought Man should have been contented with Bread; no, but he digs up the Earth, where he finds Stones that are the Place of Sapphires, and which hath Dust of Gold: And ver. 10. (says he) He is able to cut out Rivers among the Rocks (for he speaks of Man and his Wisdom, which God hath given him in all this) and his Eye seeth every precious Thing. Well, but when he had thus described the Art of Man from the first Verse to the 12th. saith he, though Men have all this Skill and this Art: Yet where shall Wisdom be found, and where is the Place of Understanding? And by Wisdom here he means the same that Solomon doth in the Proverbs, viz. that Wisdom that shall save Men, as appears in the Last Verse: For Job interlaceth many Discourses of Christ, speaks of him as the Redeemer, I shall see him with these Eyes, saith he, and he whom he calleth the Redeemer elsewhere; in this Chapter he calls Wisdom, which was to be the ordinary Phrase of the Old Testament, and so of those Times by which they did call the Messiah. He complains in the 13th Verse, that Man who had all this Art and Skill to find out all Things else, yet he sought not after this: Man knoweth not the Price thereof, neither is it found in the Land of the Living; you may go almost all the World over and hear no Man speak of it, no Man values it. He speaks not of that Wisdom which is in God infinitely, for that is not a Thing for Man to obtain, and so under that Consideration to value it as Paul did, when he esteemed all as Dung in Comparison of it; Man knows it not, saith he, he would never have enhanced the Price of it (as afterward, ver. 16. It cannot be valued with the Gold of Ophir, with the precious Onix, or the Sapphire) but to raise up the Hearts to seek it: He speaks just as Solomon doth in Prov. 8. when he speaks of Christ.

Secondly, As he compares it with all the Knowledge that Man hath, so with all the Knowledge that the Creatures materially can afford. Go over all the Creatures, they all do not contain one Jot of that Wisdom; so saith the 14th Verse, The Depth saith, it is not in me, and the Sea saith, it is not in me; for they do afford to Man's Understanding no hint at all of any such Thing, not a whit to be known of the Knowledge of God in Christ is in the whole Frame of Nature. Whence cometh Wisdom then? (ver. 20.) And where is the Place of Understanding? Seeing it is hid from the Eyes of all Living, and kept close from the Fowls of Heaven. Whence comes it? That is, Who is the Author of it? And where is it to be found? That is, What is the Subject Matter of it? The Depth affordeth it not, it is not to be found there, the Creatures though they hold forth the Foot-steps of God, yet they do not hold forth this Wisdom. He tells us afterward, in Ver. 23. That God understandeth the way thereof, and he knoweth the Place thereof; (for as the Apostle saith, in Eph. 5.) It lies hid in God, and Job saith, that God had kept it close, and doth keep it close from all; and so he reckons up all Things that are to be reckoned up, he reckons up the Sons of Men; It is hid, saith he, from the Eyes of all Living, that is, of Mankind; and kept close from the Fowls of Heaven (as you have it in your Margents) as metaphorically he calleth Angels; for otherwise, why would he ascend from the Eyes of all Living, speaking of Man, to the Fowls of Heaven, unless he spake of such Creatures, as have more Understanding than Man, namely, Angels, for so in Scripture they are called. And saith he, Ver. 22. Go down to Destruction and Death, and they will say, we have heard the Fame thereof with our Ears; all our Fore-fathers that are Dead, they knew not the way of it neither; tho' they have heard the Fame of it; The Devil heard it when he was Cursed, he heard it with a Witness, that both his Ears tingled when he heard it; and all our Fathers that are Dead, heard the Fame of it, knew there was such a Thing, as Job also did, but they had not that clear Revelation of it. It being hidden therefore from all these, It is God, saith he, that understandeth the Way thereof, and he knoweth the Place thereof; That God that looks to the Ends of the Earth, and seeth under the whole Heaven; That God that makes a weight for the Winds, and that weigheth the Waters by measure; That God when He made a Decree for the Rain, and away for the Lightning of the Thunder; Then did He see it, and (as your Margent hath it) did number it, or revolved it in his Mind, he recounted it, he prepared it, yea, and searched it out. He saw it, that is, he had it in his View, as the chiefest Wisdom of all else, greater than whatever else he was a doing in making the World: And He Numbred it, that is, He Accounted it as the choicest of all Knowledge else: And He prepared it as a further Thing than the Wisdom He stamped upon the Creature, and He did as it were by Study search it out. You find these Phrases fall in with what the Apostles themselves use of it.
E of

Chap. III.

If you ask me what Wisdom this is that Job speaks thus of? It is (as I hinted afore) that Wisdom whereby Men are saved, which was the Title that then in those Old Times they gave to the Messiahs, and the Fear of Him, and the Knowledge of Him, and of God. If you look in Prov. 8. (and this Book of Job was written long afore that of the Proverbs) you shall find that Solomon useth the same Expressions that Job here doth, and he makes a Description of Jesus Christ under the Title of Wisdom, and of that way of Salvation that was then but obscurely revealed, and afterward more fully manifested in the Times of the Gospel, even the hidden Wisdom of God, as the Apostle calls it. Solomon in that 8th of the Proverbs, ver. 11. saith, That the Knowledge of it is better than Rubies, and that all the Things that may be desired, are not to be compared to it. Job useth the same Expression, ver. 18. No mention shall be made of Coral or of Pearls, for the Price of Wisdom is above Rubies: Had it been the Wisdom of God himself, which God everlastingly keepeth to himself, and is not to be pryed into; Job would not have put that Price upon it to incite Men to the search of it. So likewise you shall find, that Solomon makes the same Complaints that Job doth, that the Sons of Men receive it not, value it not. And as Job saith, That God when he made a Decree for the Rain; then did He see that Wisdom and prepared it, and searched it out; so Solomon useth the same Expressions also, Prov. 8. 28. When He established the Clouds above (its the same Expression) when He strengthened the Fountains of the Deep, when He gave to the Sea his Decree, &c. Then saith Wisdom, I was there, and was daily his Delight, &c. And that you may see how one Scripture openeth another; you shall find in Eph. 3. where it is called a hidden Wisdom, he saith, To make all Men see what is the fellowship of the Mystery, which from the beginning of the World was hid in God, who created all Things by Jesus Christ. Now what saith Job, and what saith Prov. 8. Saith Job, When God did give a Decree for the Rain; When he established the Clouds above, saith Solomon, then did He see this, He had this in his Eye, but he kept it close as a further Wisdom, than what he was a making and stamping upon the Creatures: It was hid in God, saith the Apostle, who created all Things by Jesus Christ: In the Strength of Christ God-man did he Create all Things, and had then in his Eye the Lord Jesus, whom he meant to propound to the Creature as the Head of the Creation. It is a Wisdom also which is not in Nature but distinct from it; for Job saith, When he made the World he saw this. And then he useth the very same Phrases that are used of the Gospel. There are Four Things said of it. 1. He saw it. 2. Recensuit (so Piscator translates it) He numbered it with himself, recounted it. 3. He did prepare it. 4. He searched it out. Now do but look in 1 Cor. 2. 9, 10. where the Apostle speaks of this hidden Wisdom, and you have the very same Phrases. We speak the Wisdom of God in a Mystery, which God ordained before the World. The Things which God hath prepared (the Septuagint useth the very same Words in the Greek, which the Apostle doth here) and then he searcheth it out, The Spirit, saith he, searcheth the deep Things of God. And my Brethren, to add this as the Conclusion, it is that Wisdom by which Men were then saved, that Job had here in his Eye: Now what Wisdom was it that Men were saved by then? It was by that obscure Knowledge they had of God in Christ held forth in the Promise, which did Cause them to cleave to him, and to fear him, and to worship him, and to depart from Evil: Now look in Prov. 8. and compare it with the last Verse of this 28th of Job. Saith he there, ver. 12. speaking of Wisdom, I Wisdom dwell with Prudence, and find out Knowledge: The Fear of the Lord is to hate Evil, &c. and ver. 20. I lead in the way of Righteousness, &c. And so he goes on, and in the Conclusion shews, how that the Knowledge of Christ, and of the Gospel as it was then revealed did work Men to cleave unto God, to fear God, and to depart from Evil; that was the Way whereby Men were saved then. So Job tells his Friends here, you tell me saith he, of Gods dealings with me in an outward way of Providence, but you mind not the Wisdom of God, what is that? The Fear of the Lord, that is Wisdom, and to depart from Evil, is Understanding. Now in the Jewish Language, the Piety of those Times, by which they are said to believe in God and to be Religious, is still express'd, by the fear of the Lord: And he in the New Testament, that is called a Believer, in the Old is called a Man that feareth God, for that was the Wisdom Christ was made unto Men in the Old Testament. I say, as Faith is the great Thing in which the Language of the New Testament runs, so the fear of the Lord is the Language of the Old: There are a World of Places for it. Psalms 34. Come ye Children, and I will teach you the fear of the Lord: Therefore it is called the beginning of Wisdom, when they came thus to know God, for it is called the fear of the Lord, because it was that by which they were to fear God and come to the Messiah, a fear which made them wise unto Salvation. The same Christ by teaching them his fear then, made them wise to Salvation, which teacheth us now; only our Religion is expressed by Faith, theirs by Fear, because there was little Gospel mixt with it; it wrought in a legal Way, in a way of Bondage then, ours in a way of Adoption. So that it is clear, that Job speaks of that Wisdom whereby Men are saved according to the Notion of those Times, having some hint of some further Wisdom which was hid in God, which was not in Angels, nor in Men, and which God himself in the End would reveal. And so you have as I conceive truly the meaning of that Place in Job.

which

USE, Is the Gospel thus a hidden Wisdom, hidden from Ages and from Generations? This should cause us to value, and put the highest worth and esteem upon it. Amongst all other Considerations that should move us to it, this is not the least. We see the greatest Wits of the World, and the greatest Understandings, have still been taken with Antiquity, with any Learning and Knowledge that is Ancient, especially when it is hidden too. How do Men prize an Old Copy of a Father (as they are called) which hath lain hidden in some hole in a Manuscript, and is now revealed! How doth a great Scholar value such a Thing! They think it a Glory to be the Publisher of such a Thing. To have an Old Copy of the New Testament, though it doth not differ Three Words throughout the whole from what we commonly have, yet if it be an Old Copy (as lately one of the Septuagint written 1300 Years ago was sent over) what a value is there set upon it! If the Prophecy of Enoch which Jude quoteth (and such a Thing they say is extant in Africa) were now found out, how would it be valued! If it were common here, how would it be esteemed! Solomon you know wrote of Herbs and Plants, from the Cedar in Lebanon to the Hyssop that Springs out of the Wall, if these Books that are lost were now found, what a Price would we set upon them! O my Brethren, a far greater than the Wisdom of Solomon is here, and far more Ancient, for here is the Wisdom that was hid in God from Ages and Generations, even before the World was, which lay at the bottom of his Heart, which are the deep Things of God. Here is a whole Edition (for so the Gospel is) of a New Testament, of a new Knowledge of God, in Comparison of what the Fathers had. Here is the Wisdom of God himself, which was kept close from the Gentiles, from all Nations Four Thousand Years, kept hid from Adam in Innocency, kept hid from Angels, kept hid from all, that his own Spirit even searcheth into these deep Things of God. How should this whet on our Souls to be skilful in, and to study this Gospel, and to know all the Secrets of it; to seek unto God, for that Holy and Blessed Spirit who writ this Word, and hath hid herein all the Treasures of Knowledge which are to be revealed to us. This did commend it to the Primitive Times; Paul still in all his Epistles, as you have seen in that of the Romans, in this of the Colossians, in that of the Ephesians, in that of the Corinthians, makes it a mighty Matter, that unto them this Gospel was revealed that was hid before, that God had broke up a new Treasury, not of Notional Divinity; but of the Knowledge of himself, even the Mystery of the Father and of Christ, as it is called in Colof. 2. 1.

Chap. III.

But you will say unto me, this indeed did mightily commend it to our Fore-fathers, that lived in the Primitive Times to whom it was first made known. In regard to them it was admirable, that it should be 4000 Years before it was revealed, and then made known unto them, and that they should be the first: But for us we are born under it, and it hath now been 1600 Years since it was made manifest. Therefore what is this to commend it to us?

I Answer First, It did lie hid however 4000 Years afore the World knew it; and that thou shouldst have thy Lot to be born in the Days of the revealing of this Gospel, and shouldst come to know these Things which were hid to the Ages before, as a Favour; for thou mightest have been born in the midst of those 4000 Years.

But Secondly, So did God order it in his great Wisdom, that though the Law was given (I Paralel it so) in Moses his Time, yet there was a Time (as that of Manassehs, and of other of those Kings) in which the Law was in a manner lost, and the Priest searching in the Temple doth by Chance find it. This hath been the Case of the Gospel since God delivered it to these Times, for this Doctrine of the Gospel in the greatest Glory, and the Riches of the Secrets of it, was obscured for more than a Thousand Years, yea, from the very Apostles Time a Mystery of Iniquity began to work, and another Gospel to be raised up that darkned the true one by Degrees, till Antichristianism over-spread the World, when as all the World, and the Learned Men of the World ran after the Rudiments of the World and not after Jesus Christ, and the World was spoiled thorough School-Divinity, and thorough Philosophy, as the Apostle speaks, Colof. 2. 8. And it is not many Years since, that great and glorious breaking forth of the Gospel began in the Time of Luther; when God did break up another Indies. He gave the Pope a World, the Spanish World, the West-Indies; He set them a Work about the first Part of the Wisdom spoken of, in that 28th of Job, to find out a Vein for the Silver, and a Place for the Gold: And he gave another Indies of the Gospel unto us of the Protestant Churches, and it had been Happy for us to have kept ours, and to improve it as they have done theirs. But my Brethren, though God begun and renewed the Knowledge of this Gospel, yet the Saints will find digging Work enough in it, even to the End of the World. You shall find in the very midst of the Book of the Revelation, when Fourteen Chapters ters of it were spent, that it is there said, Ver. 6. I saw another Angel flie in the midst of Heaven, having the Everlasting Gospel to Preach unto them that dwell on the Earth. He speaks of the Time of Antichrist, for in the 13th Chapter, he describeth the Beast, how he ascendeth out of the Sea; and in the 14th, he describes the Saints under Antichrist, and how he tyrannized over them, especially at the latter End, when the Light of the glorious Gospel of Christ breaks forth. And whereas they accuse the Gospel of Novelty, no, it is an Everlasting Gospel, saith he. And God did set a Work many before us to Preach this Gospel, and how did they begin to Preach it? (for it went on by Degrees) They fell upon Images first, they bad People take heed Fear God, and give Glory to Him, and Worship Him, that made Heaven and Earth; that was the first great Thing which the Protestants laid open, when they first began to Preach the Gospel. Afterwards they began to challenge Rome with being the Antichrist, that was the second Angel. And then a Third comes, and saith, That whosoever drinks of her Waters, and of her Cup shall Everlastingly be tormented; so that Men that are learned and knowing Men living in that Religion cannot be saved. And then in the 15th and 16th Chapters there come seven Angels out of the Temple, and they still reveal more and more. Thus doth God by Degrees go on, so that within these 100 Years, we in our Age, ever since that great Light first brake out (especially here in this Kingdom) have had the Light of the Gospel rising still clearer and clearer, and so it will do till Antichrist be destroyed, for he is to be destroyed, to be melted (so the Word is) by the dawning of the Sun of Righteousness, who is coming upon the World. Therefore in Isa. 11. 8. he saith, The Earth shall be full of the Knowledge of the Lord, as the Waters cover the Sea; he hath the like Expression in Hab. 2. And he speaks of the latter Times, for he speaks of those Times before, and upon the Calling of the Jews; and that is clear by ver. 11. of that Isa. 11. It shall come to pass in that Day, that the Lord shall set his Hand again the Second Time, to recover the Remnant of his People; he had deliver'd them out of Captivity once, and he shall do it again the Second Time, saith he. Now go take Ezekiel, he prophesieth likewise of those latter Times, and he useth the same Expression of the over-flowing of Waters by Degrees, in Ezek. 47. speaking of a glorious Temple, that was to be set up in the latter Days (that's clear by all the Passages of that Prophecy) he saith, He saw Waters issue from under the Threshold of the House (that is, of the Church) and saith he, first I was led thorough Waters, and the Waters came up to the Ancles; afterwards the Waters were to the Knees, and then to the Loins, and at length a River that could not be passed over, for the Waters were risen, Waters to Swim in, and when he was returned to the Brink of the River (that you may know what Times he speaks of) he saith, There were very many Trees on the one side, and on the other. Now compare this with Rev. 22. There you have the same Trees and the same Waters (speaking of the latter Times of the Gospel too, as Ezekiel doth) whose Leaves did heal the Nations every Month. So that he speaks of the growing of the Knowledge of the Gospel by Degrees, which should be as Waters that cover the Sea. The like you have in Zachary where he prophesieth, that in the latter Times there should come a Day, which should be clearer towards Evening: In the Times before this, saith he, it shall be neither Light nor Dark (which I believe are our Times) and it shall begin to clear up towards Evening (it is in Zech. 14. 6, 7.) and he useth the same Expression concerning Waters, Ver. 8. Living Waters, saith he, shall go out from Jerusalem, &c. And Dan. 12. 4. Many shall run too and fro, and Knowledge shall be increased.

I speak it for this, that although the Gospel was revealed to the Apostles so long ago, yet God hath so ordered it, that to us now it is new again. My Brethren, Let me say this to you, It is a Faith once given, so Jude tells us. When the Apostles had given it out of their Hands, what, will God send Apostles to recover this Gospel again? No, it is a greater Glory for God by Degrees, and by ordinary Light in the Hearts of his Ministers and his People

Chap. IV.

People to recover this Gospel, (which was thus blasted by Antichrist, in the latter Days) that it shall have the same Purity in Doctrine and Government that was in the Primitive Times, I say, for God to do this by Degrees and by ordinary Means, it is a greater Glory then to send Apostles; it were an easie Matter for him to pour out his Spirit upon Men immediately as He did then, but he chuseth rather to do it by ordinary Means as he hath done; yea, and will go on to do it, and will never leave to do it, till he hath brought it to that heighth, when Jesus Christ shall come to possess his Kingdom, the Brightness of whose coming, the Dawnings of it, shall consume Antichristian Doctrine and Worship. It is a greater Matter for him to work a Miracle by ordinary Means in a way of ordinary Providence, than to shew these great Miracles that he did among the Jews, and the like; as indeed he hath in an ordinary Way done as great Matters for this Kingdom, as ever he did in Egypt for the bringing of his People out of that Bondage. It is I say an easie Matter for God to go and create a new World, and the like; but therein lies his Glory, that he will restore Things, and reduce them to the Primitive Purity by ordinary Means, and not send extraordinary Persons to do it.

Antichrist brought in all his Darknes by Degrees, and it shall go out by Degrees. The Mystery of Iniquity began to work in the Hearts of Men in the Apostles Times, and Darknes grew more and more till Midnight: So the Mystery of the Gospel works likewise, and these Dawnings shall increase more and more till the perfect Day; and the Issue of all these Confusions that are now, when Jesus Christ hath done his work, will be some glorious Thing. God hath given Pastors and Teachers (as the Apostle saith) to all Ages, and one Age doth teach another, and they all tend to the edifying of the Body of Christ, till we come unto a perfect Man, unto a measure of the Stature of the fulness of Christ. All the Light of the former Ages is drawn down to this Age, and in this Age Men suck in their very Education the Light of the former Ages, and so are prepared for a further growth, and so in the End the latter Age of the World will have a fulness of Stature again. And the Scope of all this is, though it is a Mystery, yet God hath so ordered it in his Providence, to endear it to us, to make it a new Mystery to us, even as if he had had Apostles afresh; for it was obscured, and it hath broke out afresh after it lay hid a Thousand Years.

C H A P. IV.

That the Knowledge of the Gospel is a most excellent Wisdom, because as a peculiar Favour, it is communicated by God onely to some Persons.

COLOS. I. xxvi.

But now is made manifest to his Saints.

HERE is the Rarity and Scarceness of it, when it cometh to be revealed [But now is made manifest to his Saints.] And this is the Subject which I shall insist upon.

In the handling of this, I shall do Two Things.

1. Give you an Explication of the Words.
2. Enlarge upon that Theam, to shew from thence, the Excellency of the Gospel.

I. For Explication. If you mark it, the Apostle doth not say, which is now made manifest to me; Although Paul makes the Manifestation of it unto him, to be the means to manifest it to all the Saints; for as elsewhere he saith, it was a Treasure in an earthen Vessel committed unto him; and therefore in the 23d Verse, and the last Words he saith, Whereof I Paul am made a Minister; and in the 25th Verse, the first Words, Whereof I am made a Minister. But how is he made a Minister? For to reveal it to the Saints, therefore he doth not only say, is revealed unto me; but, now is made manifest to his Saints.

The Gospel, although it was at first revealed unto Apostles and Prophets, yet the End and Intent of it was, that it should be revealed to all the Saints. You have this expressly in Eph. 3. 5. comparing it with this. In the 4th Verse, he had called it (as here) The Mystery of Christ; in the 5th Verse, he saith, Which in other Ages was not made known unto the Sons of Men, as it is now revealed to His Holy Apostles and Prophets by the Spirit. One would think now, that the Apostle here should only intend, that this Gospel is revealed to the Doctors and Teachers of the Church, to the Holy Apostles and Prophets. No, read the 9th Verse. It is (saith he) to make all Men see (that is, as these Words restrain it, all the Saints see) what is the Fellowship of the Mystery, which hath been from the beginning of the World hid in God. It was not revealed only to Apostles and Prophets; But now (saith he) is made manifest to the Saints. And therefore in the 23d Verse of this Chapter, saith he, If you continue in the Faith, grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the Hope of the Gospel, which you have heard, and which was Preached to every Creature under Heaven. So that not only the Holy Apostles and Prophets of the New Testament received it, and it was manifested unto them, but to the Saints also. Therefore in the 25th Verse of this Chapter, I am made a Minister of it (saith he) according to the Dispensation of God, which is given to me for you. So that indeed it was given to the Apostles, but only that they might make it manifest to the Saints; and hence therefore he saith, But now is made manifest to His Saints. I shall not need to enlarge more upon this, in the way of opening it.

II. I shall come therefore to the Thing it self, viz. The Rarity of this Gospel, and of the Mysteries of it, and shew you the Excellency of it in this Respect.

But is now (saith he) made manifest to His Saints.

He speaks as if God were dainty of this Knowledge. He reveals it to Saints, and to Saints only; and to His Saints. There is a Revelation of it, which the Saints only have (as I shall shew you anon, and Answer Objections to the contrary) in 1 Cor. 1. 24. he saith, That to them that are called, both Jew and Greek, Christ is the Power of God, and the Wisdom of God. We all say, that He is the Power of God only to them that are called, for He only works effectually in them: But that Scripture also tells us, That He is the Wisdom of God only to them that are called, they so understand the Mystery of it, as none else.

And then, if you Mark it, he commends the Knowledge of the Gospel to us by this, that it is revealed to [His] Saints, His whom He had chosen, whom He had singled out. Certainly, if there had been any Knowledge better than other, he would have reserved it for [His] Saints. There is an Emphasis in that. You know, God chose a Man beloved of him (for so Solomon was called) and as a Testimony of his Love to him, He gave him above all Things else, Knowledge; so that he abounded therein above all that were before him, or shall be after him. And Daniel that had great Mysteries opened to him, is call'd, A Man greatly beloved. I quote these Examples for this, to shew that that which is a more special excellent Knowledge ledge of all others, God would reserve it for them. To you, saith Christ, it is given to know the Mysteries of the Kingdom of God, speaking to his Disciples; To you it is given, it was a Gift, and a special Gift. And therefore in Mat. 11. 25. We read of that great Thanksgiving which Christ makes to his Father, I thank thee O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, because thou hast hid these Things from the Wise and Prudent, and hast revealed them unto Babes. He revealed them to his Saints, and those whom He had chosen.

My Brethren, God reserved the Gospel to reveal it first unto his Son, (you shall see the Order of it) so you read, in John 1. 17, 18. The Law came by Moses, but Grace and Truth (that is, the Gospel) came by Jesus Christ. No Man hath seen God at any Time: The only begotten Son, that is in the Bosom of the Father, He hath revealed Him. The Lord reserved this Knowledge which was hid from Ages and Generations for his Son to declare it first; it came by Him, He brought out the Gospel first. And you have the like, in Heb. 2. 3. Which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him. You see that God prized this Gospel so much, as He revealeth it first to His Son.

And then next to His Son, He chose out Holy Apostles. Had not they been Holy Men, He would not have revealed it to them, to be the Broachers of it, as they were. Holy Apostles and Prophets, saith he, Eph. 3.

And then Lastly, The End of the revealing of it to all these, is that His Saints may know it. It is [to His Saints] in Distinction now under the Gospel from the Saints in the Old Testament. The Saints then, were Infants in Knowledge, and they took up their Faith much upon Trust. But God under the Gospel, doth to reveal the Gospel by His Spirit, that His Saints themselves see into the Mystery of it, understand it, take in the Comfort of it. And I take that to be the meaning of the Promise of that Covenant, in Heb. 8. 11. where he saith, They shall not need every Man to teach his Neighbour, but they shall all know me saith the Lord, from the least to the greatest.

Now then to Answer some Objections, that will be made about this, by which this Truth will be the more Clear.

First, You will say unto me, is this Knowledge so much commended to us, that it is reserved thus, and made manifest to His Saints, why doth not all the World know it? Is not the Gospel preached to every Creature under Heaven? There is an Objection lies not far off the Text, for ver. 23. he saith, It hath been preached to every Creature under Heaven.

I Answer, When our Saviour Christ, in that Mat. 11. 25. Gave thanks to his Father, that He had hid these Things from the Wise and Prudent of the World, and revealed them unto Babes. Yet in the Verses before, you shall read that these Things had been revealed to the wise Men of the World, and yet hid. Read ver. 23. And thou Capernaum, which art exalted up to Heaven, shalt be brought down to Hell. Christ, had preached to Capernaum more than to all the Cities that were in Judea, or belonging to it. It was Capernaum in Galilee, of which the Prophecie went, that Galilee should see a great Light. It is Recorded by the Evangelist Matthew upon Christ's going to Capernaum, because He made that the principal Seat of all his Preaching. But yet, though Capernaum were lifted up to Heaven, in respect of all those glorious Truths of the Gospel that were preached by Jesus Christ thereunto; there were but a few Babes that were therein, that did receive it; and He thanks his Father, that he had conceal'd it from all the wise and prudent, and revealed it only unto those Babes. It's true indeed, that the Gospel is preached unto every Creature, and God is free of it; infomuch as the Apostle saith, Rom. 10. Have not they all heard? But then he asketh withal another Question, Have they all believed? And therefore saith Christ, in Mat. 13. 11. To you it is given, to know the Mysteries of the Kingdom of God, but to them it is not given, though they heard it. And therefore I may say of the Gospel, as the great Philosopher Aristotle spake of his Writings, when he had Published the Lectures which he had read to his Schollars, unto the World; Alexander found fault with him, for now saith he, you have debated all your Knowledge by making it common; no faith Aristotle, for they are Edita non Edita, though they are Published yet they are not Published, for none will understand them now they are Published but only my Schollars, whom I have read them unto, and are Privy to my Scope in them. So it is true of the Gospel, that though the Myſtery of it is made known unto every Creature, yet it is Editum non Editum, though it be Published, yet it is ſo Published as only thoſe that are taught of God underſtand it in the Myſtery of it.

Chap. IV.

Again, to Answer this, that you may ſee the Priviledge of the Saints herein. Although the Gospel is Published unto every Creature under Heaven, yet it was the Manifeſtation of it to His Saints, that was the Motive and Ground of Publishing it. The World ſhould never have known one Tittle of it, had it not been for His Saints in the World, unto whom He meant to convey his Mind and Meaning. And therefore you read in Jude, ver. 2. that it is called, The Faith once delivered unto the Saints. It was delivered unto them, and delivered for their ſakes, the World had never known it elſe. And therefore the Apoſtles themſelves ſo far as they knew it, are called Holy Apoſtles, they had not thus known it elſe. And when they did know it more than other Men, they were but Stewards; for ſo you know they are called in 1 Cor. 4. 1. Let every Man account of us as Stewards of the Myſteries of God; now though the Steward receive Money for his own Expences, yet the chief of the Money he receiveth, is for the Expence of the Houſhold. Go take St. Paul with all his Knowledge, and the moſt of that Knowledge he did receive, it was not for own ſake chiefly, it was for the Saints; and therefore he ſaith, To me it is given, who am leſs than the leaſt of all the Saints, that I ſhould Preach among the Gentiles the unſearchable Riches of Chriſt; To what End? To make all Men ſee, what is the Fellowship of the Myſtery, &c. Hence therefore you ſhall find in Scripture, that where God had abundance of People, there the Apoſtles were guided and inſtructed by the Holy Ghoſt to ſtay long. I have much People in this City, ſaith God, unto Paul, when he came to Corinth, and therefore he continueth there a Year and Six Months teaching the Word of God amongſt them; and when he would have gone unto one Place, he was hindered, and carried unto another, why? Becauſe ſtill the Preaching of the Gospel went where God had his Elect Saints. Therefore in the Words before my Text he ſaith, According to the Diſpenſation of God, which is given to me for you. The Apoſtle had a great deal of Knowledge, but ſaith he, I am a Debtor (ſo he calls himſelf in Rom. 1. 14.) I am but a Steward, I have received it for you. It is the Saints that God principally aimeth at. Therefore, if He did give it to the Apoſtles but for the Saints, then the World, carnal Men, come only to hear of it by the Saints, becauſe the Saints are amongſt them, unto whom God would make it known.

But again you will ſay unto me. Do not carnal Men know it as well as the Saints, why then, is it made their Priviledge?

I Answer, Fiſt, That carnal Men do know the Gospel, and know much of it, and they know it to their coſt. Say the Phariſees unto Chriſt, Are we blind alſo? Ay ſaith Chriſt, If ye were Blind you had no Sin.

But Secoſdly, The Knowledge that carnal Men have of the Gospel, is by Hear-ſay. There is no Truth of much Moment (if you take the Matter of Truth) that is revealed fiſt to them. You ſhall find in Eph. 3. 5. That the Men that God revealed it fiſt unto, were the Holy Apoſtles and Prophets, and in Peter it is ſaid, the Scripture was written by Holy Men. Had they not been Saints, Holy Men, God had not revealed it unto them. Others may receive it as by Tradition from Hand to Hand, but the Men to whom God doth reveal any further Light of the Gospel are Holy Men.

But you will ſay unto me, Now it is given by thoſe Holy Apoſtles and Prophets, and laid up in the Scriptures, may not all Men, or any Man underſtand it? No, For as you have it, in 2 Pet. 1. ult. The Scripture is not of private Interpretation (and he ſpeaks eſpecially of the Gospel) that is, it is not in the Power of any Man's Understanding to apprehend or know the meaning of the Word; But (saith he) Holy Men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost; and therefore as the Scripture was written by the Holy Ghost, so it must be the Holy Ghost that must interpret it. Take all the wise Men in the World, they are not able to understand one Scripture, it is but private Interpretation, the Holy Ghost therefore, the same Spirit that guided the Holy Apostles and Prophets to write it, must guide the People of God to know the meaning of it, and as he first delivered it, so he must help Men to understand it.

Chap. IV.

But you will say yet further, do not carnal Men understand the Mysteries of the Gospel, and that by the Spirit of God?

I Answer, yet still there is a Mystery, that all the carnal Men in the World do not understand. In 1 Cor. 2. 7. We speak the Wisdom of God in a Mystery. He doth not only say, it is a Mystery in it self; but he saith, it is still spoken in a Mystery. And what is the Reason? Because that carnal Men even when it is spoken, yea, when it is apprehended by themselves in a notional Way, yet they do not know and apprehend that Mystery, that still is in it. You shall find, that the Scripture speaketh of all the Knowledge, that carnal Men have of the Truths of the Gospel, as of no Knowledge. In 1 Cor. 8. 1, 2. speaking to those among the Corinthians that were puffed up, carnal Spirits, that Thought they knew all Things; saith he, We know that we all have Knowledge, so ver. 1. but what saith ver. 2? If any Man think that he knoweth any Thing, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know; so that now a Man may have all Knowledge, and yet notwithstanding he may know nothing as he ought to know. In Prov. 9. 10. he had spoken before of Wisdom (and by Wisdom still is meant Jesus Christ revealed, for that was the Title they gave the Messiah in those Times) now saith he, The Knowledge of the Holy is Understanding; there is no Knowledge or true Understanding in the Matters of the Gospel, but only the Knowledge of the Holy. You know there is a Form of Godliness in the World (so you have it in 2 Tim. 3. 5. Men shall come having a Form of Godliness, and deny the Power of it.) As there is a form of Godliness that is not true Godliness, so it is as certain there is a form of Knowledge that is not true Knowledge. I'll give you a Scripture that is fully answerable to it, it is in Rom. 2. saith he, Thou knowest His Will, and approvest the Things that are more excellent, being instructed in the Law; and Ver. 20. Hast a form of Knowledge, and of the Truth. Mark the Expression; as there is a form of Godliness which is not true Godliness, so there is a form of Knowledge that is not true Knowledge, that is but the Picture of it.

And therefore my Brethren know this, that there is no Man, that is become a Saint, but as for the Truths he doth know out of the Gospel, knows that of them which no carnal Man in the World knows. I will give you but this Instance for it; Go take any Man that hath never so much Knowledge both in Law and Gospel, and if God turn this Man to him, you shall have him say, that all Things he knew before are known anew by him; he that had all Knowledge before, he now professeth he had none as he ought to have had. And therefore (by the way) will you know what it is to be Converted? It is to know over all anew, that you knew by Education. It is plain by that of the Apostle, in 2 Cor. 5. ult. If any Man be in Christ Jesus, he is a new Creature, old Things are past away, behold all Things are become new. What doth he speak this of? He speaks it especially of Knowledge; and that's clear by the Verses before, for saith he, Though we have known Christ after the Flesh, yet henceforth we know him no more so, all our Knowledge of him is new: Therefore if any Man be in Christ, he is a new Creature; what is the Effect of that? Old Things are past away, all Things are become New: Old Things become new in this Knowledge.

But you will say unto me, How can this be, for carnal Men speak the same Things of the Gospel that others do?

But yet let me say this unto you, although a Godly Man can express no more in Words than the other doth, yet he knows that of the Gospel which the

the other doth not; yea, he hath such a Knowledge of it, as in Comparison of his the others is no Knowledge. I shall first say this, that the Notions and Apprehensions that are in the Heart of a Saint of spiritual Things, never entred into the Heart of any carnal Man in the World. It is the Apostles Expression in 1 Cor. 2. and I'll give you the Reason of it. It is a received Truth and acknowledged by all, that we have no Knowledge in our Minds; but that which we receive, and which we have by the Images of Things which our Mind conceiveth. All Knowledge which the Mind hath, it is by forming of some Image of a Thing within it self. Now if the Image which is formed up in the Mind, differ in one Man and in another, than the Knowledge differeth. As for Example, if I have seen the Picture of a Man, I have an Image in my Mind of that Man according to his Picture, but if I have seen the Man himself, why, here is another manner of Image formed up in my Mind that have seen him, which is not formed up in the Mind of any Man else, which hath but seen his Picture. Now all the Knowledge that carnal Men have of the Gospel, is but by Images received from the hear-say of it only; but the Knowledge which Holy Men have, is by the impress and Image received from the Thing it self made known unto them by the Holy Ghost. I remember one once said of the late Queen Elizabeth, I have seen her Picture faith he, but I have one Picture of her that I will not sell for all the Pictures of her in the World: And what was that? I saw her but once faith he, and the Image of her remains still in me: Which Image he could Convey to no Man living. Even so the Image and Impress, that which entred into the Heart of a spiritual Man of the Things of the Gospel, is a different Image to what is in the Heart of a carnal Man: And yet now, if the one should go and describe, and speak of the Things of the Gospel, he would express it no otherwise than the other, for there is something still that cannot be expressed. As for Example, take the Sun, there is something in the Sun that can never be pictured; and what is that? The Life and Glory and Heat of it, and yet therein lies the Excellency of the Sun. So there are those Things in Christ, and in the Gospel which can never be pictur'd out by Words; that unless Jesus Christ hath by his Spirit manifested himself to a Mans Heart, he is never able to take it in. And therefore, now when a carnal Man, and a godly Man speak both of the same Thing, he that is a godly Man can speak no more than what the other can take in notionally; yet he understandeth further, he hath seen that which no Words can Paint out or Picture forth. Therefore, now if you ask me what it is the Saints know, which another Man knows not? I Answer you fully, he himself cannot tell you: For it is certain, as to that Impression which the Holy Ghost leaves upon the Heart of a Man, that Man can never make the like Impression on another; he may describe it to you, but he cannot convey the same Image and Impression upon the Heart of any Man else: Therefore Two Men shall talk of the same Things, and yet mean different Things in Matters Spiritual; why? Because the Gospel runs in a Mystery, revealed to His Saints, and to none else.

But further, in Answer to this Objection. Though carnal Men do know the Gospel, yet you shall still find that they will divert to other Things, and not make this the main of their Knowledge. You shall find (and it is a Thing to be wondred at) that in the Times of the Gospel, when it shone most gloriously, still Men that were of corrupt Minds they diverted to Questions about the Law, and to Chronologies and Genealogies, and to a Thousand other such Things. So you find it in Tit. 3. 9. and 1 Tim. 6. 4. and 1 Tim. 1. 7. And this I say, they did when the Gospel did shine most gloriously about them. Men will run out into Critticismes and the Duties of the Law and Knowledge of Sin, and a Thousand such Things; they will Tythe Mint and Cummin, but the great Things of the Gospel they neglect. Our Saviour Christ therefore, doth tell it as a wonder in his Answer to John the Baptist, The Lame are healed, the Blind restored to sight, and the Poor receive ceive the Gospel: For Mens Spirits to be taken by the Gospel, he makes it a mighty Thing. You shall find, if you compare, Mat. 11. 12. with Luke 16. 16. That when the Gospel began to be Preached, all those good Souls that were Holy and Godly were infinitely fired with it. Saith he in Luke 16. 16. The Law and the Prophets were until John, but since that Time the Kingdom of God is preached, and every Man presseth unto it, that is, the Saints did. Now compare it with Mat. 11. and he tells us there, That from the Days of John, the Kingdom of Heaven suffereth Violence, and the violent take it by force. That is, the Gospel did so mightily Fire the Spirits of Men, of those that were Holy and Godly, that they did climb up, for so the Word signifies; it is the same Word that is used in Exodus, forbidding the People to climb up to the Mount, when the Law was given: Now saith he since the Gospel is preached, they climb up to it with all Violence, so he expresseth it, both in respect of Multitudes that press to it, and in respect of the Fire in their Spirits.

Chap. IV.

Again, though carnal Men do take in the Gospel and many of the Truths of it, yet they are apt to mingle it, and imbase it, and practically in their own Hearts; to turn it to another Gospel. as the Expression of the Apostle Paul is Gal. 1. when their Notions and speculative Judgments are Orthodox about it; they will build their Faith, and their Hope as well upon what is in themselves, as upon what is in Christ: You shall therefore find in Men that profess the Gospel, (as the Jews and the Gentiles did) those of the Circumcision and Uncircumcision, that as those, that are after the Flesh favour the Things of the Flesh, and those that are after the Spirit the Things of the Spirit (as the Apostle elsewhere speaks) so those that have legal Spirits and are still Carnal, they favour the Things of the Law. Therefore in Gal. 3. 7, 9, 10. verses compared, you shall find, that the Apostle gives a different Title in respect of their cleaving to the Gospel. Saith he, ver. 7. They which are of Faith (that is his Phrase) and so ver. 9. They which are of Faith: He Names them as if they were a Sect; a different Kind and strain of Men. He means those which followed the Gospel, and their Hearts closed with it; for saith he, ver. 2. Received ye the Spirit by the Works of the Law, or by the hearing of Faith? That is, by the hearing of the Gospel. And hence he denominateth a Company of Men, They which are of Faith; saith he, ver. 7. and oppositely he describeth another gang of Men, ver. 10. As many as are of the Law; that is, that are of that strain; let them know never so much of the Gospel, yet still (as the Apostle saith, Rom. 10. ult.) They will seek Righteousness, as it were by the Works of the Law. They will turn the Gospel into Law, and turn Faith and all Duties else into a Form, and make it as a Law; that as the Jews of Old, that had the Gospel given them in Types and Sacrifices, turned all that Gospel into meer Law, as meerly commanded as Duties of Works: Not viewing Christ in them, so will carnal Men do with the Things of the Gospel, and will do it to the End of the World, they desire (as he saith Gal. 4. 21.) to be under the Law, they will run that way still, and nothing but the Grace of God can draw them off.

It is a great Matter my Brethren, what Truths they are that a Mans Heart closeth with and pitcheth upon, and maketh the eminent and top of his Religion. Mark what I say, it is the greatest Thing in the World, and doth as much distinguish carnal Men, and spiritual Men as any Thing whatsoever. I shall give you but an Instance or Two. In Mark 12. 31. There comes a Scribe unto Christ, and he doth express the height of his Religion, and Christ acknowledgeth that he went very far, and he expresseth it with a great deal of Difference from the common gang of Men in the World. Master saith he, Thou hast said the Truth, (for he asked Christ, which was the first Commandment of all?) For saith he, There is but one God, and there is no other but He, and to love Him with all the Heart, and with all the Understanding, and with all the Soul, and with all the Strength, and to Love a Mans Neighbour as himself, is more than all whole Burnt-offerings and Sacrifices. Here is a Man now, that being under the Law doth pitch upon the most inward spiritualness of it. Whereas the common ordinary Pharisees put all their Religion in Fasting twice a Week, in paying Tithes, in offering Sacrifices when they sinned, and all this they did in a formal Way: Why saith this Scribe, they are all deceived in this, the main of Religion lies not in this; but Master I say as thou doest, the main of Religion lies in loving God with all a Man's Soul, and although 'tis true a Man must offer Sacrifices, yet here lies that which I pursue after. What saith Christ upon it? He doth not give such a Testimony of all the Pharisees or of that sort of Men, the Scribes, as he doth of this Man. When Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, he saith unto him, thou art not far from the Kingdom of Heaven. It is pity now; he pitch't upon the most spiritual Part of the Law, to the height of it, but wanted the Gospel; yet Christ told him, that he was not far from the Kingdom of Heaven. I quote it for this, that this Man he was so far inlightened, that he knew where to put the height of the legal Religion, and he put it right, to Love God, saith he, is more than all Sacrifices. Now as this Man doth pitch upon that, which is the most spiritual Part of the Law to put Religion in it; so the Saints are taught to do in Matters of the Gospel. There is an outward Form as it were of the Gospel, you may easily turn it into a Form: But see what Paul saith, and what the height of his Gospel Religion was, Phil. 3. 3. We are the Circumcision saith he; who? which Worship God in the Spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no Confidence in the Flesh. We are taken off of any Thing in our selves. This is my Religion, and this is the true Circumcision; let them pursue after the other Circumcision that will, I pitch upon this. Therefore it is a great Thing to see, what it is that Men contend for in their own Spirits; as the Main, and Spirit, and Life of Religion. When the Apostle Paul did come to Corinth, he tells us, That he determined not to know any Thing among them, save Jesus Christ, and him Crucified; (so you have it in 1 Cor. 2. 2.) and he would have spent the main of his Epistle (and so likewise when he wrote this to the Colossians) in holding forth the Gospel to them, but he was put by his Scope, for he saith, they were carnal, and they put him upon deciding of I know not how many Things, about covering and uncovering, and about all the Orders of the Church, which they had either violated or neglected; but saith he, I determined to know nothing, save Christ and him Crucified, for here lies the height of my Religion; and he complains, that he was forced to spend an whole Epistle (as he doth the main of that) in nothing, but in resolving such Cases. And therefore my Brethren the Saints still close most with Christ, and the pure Gospel make that the height, the top of their Religion, and tho' they may be put upon other Things in the several Times they live in, various Duties that are to be done; yet there is something else in their Eye, which is more than Burnt-offerings and Sacrifices; namely, the Knowledge of Christ and him Crucified, and to Worship the Lord in the Spirit, is more than all these, though Religious Duties are Evangelical too.
a Man

Again, 4. To add an Answer or Two more which are in the Text, Col. 1. 27.) and in the Context, the Saints only know the Gospel in the Riches, and in the Glory of it. They only know it, so as to value it; 1 Pet. 2. 7. To you therefore, which believe he is precious. They only know the Riches, and the Preciousness of it. Go bring a Jewel to a Child and to a Jeweller, they both know it, but the Jeweller only is able to value it; and so are the Saints only capable of Prizing the Gospel. And therefore in Mat. 13. 25. He only is said to be the wise Merchant-man, that when he hath seen the Pearl, knoweth the Worth and Value of it, so as that he Sells all for it.

In the 5th Place, The Saints only know it, so as to have their Hearts comforted by it, and by all the Riches in it. You have thus much expressed in the next Chapter, Col. 2. 2. He desired, he saith, to see them, and those of Laodicea, that

Chap. IV.

that their Hearts might be comforted, being knit together in Love, and unto all Riches of the full Assurance of Understanding to the Acknowledgment of the Mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ. Though others are brought to see the Mystery in the Letter of it, yet none else but the Saints come so to see the Riches of the Glory of it, as to have their Hearts comforted thereby. And what is the Reason? Because the Saints, when they know the Mystery of the Gospel and the Riches of it, do but know what themselves are Worth. All the Riches which they see to be in it, they see to be their own, and if they attain to the Riches of Assurance of the Understanding of this Mystery, they attain to the Assurance of the knowing of their own Comforts and of their own Riches, and so (as the Apostle saith) their Hearts are comforted. Go take other Men, though they are able to count and cast up these Riches, yet they are but as learned Lawiers that study other Mens Estates; or as Surveyors of Lands that set out what other Men possess, and what their Titles are to them, or Cash-keepers for Merchants that tell over other Mens Moneys; but for the Heir, the Possessor himself, for him to tell over all this, is all the while to study his own Riches, and so his Heart is comforted according to the Value that is in them. And therefore saith the Apostle here, which riches is Christ in you, it is your Christ. Therefore now a Believer, the more Knowledge he hath of the Gospel, the more his Heart is comforted. To another Man all the Truths of the Gospel, are as but Flowers pluck'd off the Stalks; they do not grow upon his Heart, therefore they Die and Wither; but a Saint hath a Root within, upon which all these are ingrafted, and therefore he continually feels the fresh Savour of them; there is still a fresh Sent and Verdure, and sweet arising from them whereby his Heart is comforted.

And then again, 6. Though other Men may know the Mysteries of the Gospel, yet the Saints only know them with the Riches of Assurance. That your Hearts (saith the Apostle) may be comforted being knit together in Love, unto all Riches of the full Assurance of Understanding, to the acknowledgment of the Mystery of God and of Christ. If other Men do know and understand the Mysteries of the Gospel, and the Harmony and Correspondency of one Thing with another therein, it is but as the Knowledge of Mathematicians as I may so express it. You shall have in the Mathematicks a Supposition given, that if this, and this be true, then all the following Conclusions, do harmoniously and naturally follow thereupon, and Answer thereunto. As to give you an Instance: There are Two Sort of Opinions, the one holds that the Earth standeth still, and the Heavens move; and another Opinion, that the Earth moves about continually, but the Heavens, the Sun and Moon, and all these stand still. Now suppose which you will of them, the one makes out their Opinion in a way of Harmony and Correspondency, as rationally as the other. So now carnal Men, that want Faith in the Principles and Foundations of Christianity, can yet say with themselves, if these Principles be true, why there is a glorious Correspondency of one Truth with another, all Truths do harmoniously Kiss each other. But now a Saint, he hath Riches of Assurance of Understanding of the Principles themselves, he apprehends them by Faith, and doing so, he vieweth all the Conclusions that are built thereupon, with an Assurance of Faith, and this no carnal Heart in the World doth.

Lastly, The Saints do so know the Mysteries of the Gospel, that the Things they know of it, are to them the Hope of Glory. This also the Text suggesteth, which is Christ, saith he, in you, the Hope of Glory. They do begin to know, and to conceive what Heaven will be by that Prelibation, by that taste, which they have of what Truths and Things the Gospel reveals to their Faith. The savour and relish they have of Communion with God and with Jesus Christ, and the Things revealed in and by the Gospel, doth give them a hope of that great Glory which shall be revealed. And so much now for those Differences, that are between the Knowledge of the Saints, and the Knowledge of carnal Men of the Things of the Gospel.

USE, My Exhortation shall be unto all, to procure and heap up to themselves what of spiritual Knowledge possibly they can, in these Mysteries of the Gospel, for you encrease your Riches: The Truth which by it, I speak unto all, but especially unto you that are Schollars, who come * hither to furnish your selves, as Scribes fitted for the Kingdom of Heaven, to bring forth out of your Treasures and Store acquired here both New and Old, as Christ speaks, to buy the Truth as Solomon, so as to be able to teach it to others; you come as Whole-sale Men to buy by the Great. Therefore Treasure up as much, and as many precious Truths as you can, and Grace withal to vent by Retail in the Country, when you are sent Abroad.

Chap. IV.

* This was Preach'd in his Younger Time, when he was Fellow of Katherine Hall in Cambridge.

First, Enquire and Learn where these Treasures are to be had, even in the Scriptures. The Merchant who knew the Pearl, was fain to buy the Field, there the Pearl lay: Timothy from a Child had read the Scriptures, and so should you do; they are able to make a Man wise unto Salvation, and make the Man of God perfect; as the Book of Nature when thoroughly known, make a perfect Physician for the Body; so doth this Book of the Scriptures make a perfect Divine: Search the Scripture, says Christ, for they speak of me; as Christ is the Treasury of all Knowledge, so the Scriptures of Christ. These Scriptures lie scattered in all the vains of the Prophets and Apostles, dig for them as for Silver, take pains and travel to understand them: As Daniel's Phrase is (Dan. 12.) Many shall run too and fro, and Knowledge shall be encreased. Do as Merchants, who travel from Place to Place, so do you from Scripture to Scripture, comparing one with another, and Knowledge will be encreased.

Secondly, Go to the Markets and Ware-houses, of those that have laid in, or discovered much of this Treasure (that is) use the Helps of Godly Mens Writings and Conferences: The Help of Saints both Dead and Alive, why? Because it is made manifest to the Saints. The Angels do learn of the Church, and why not we; even Paul desires to see them at Rome, that they and he might be mutually comforted by their mutual Faith, therefore Exchange, and Truck one with another. The Knowledge of any one Man is imperfect, some have more skill in one Point, some in another, and so in several Ages several Truths have been delivered and revealed πωλύμερως by Fragments and Pieces, therefore use the help of all; why? Because it is made manifest to his Saints; and it is not made manifest in all Points unto all Saints, but they have it amongst them. We know but in Part, saith the Apostle, much more thou: Therefore Saints should Truck and Exchange one with another. There is no Man in the World that is as Paul was, whom the Apostles themselves could add nothing unto, who yet professeth that he knew but in Part. The Angels themselves they learn of the Saints, they learn of the Church, therefore do thou so too. In Eph. 4. 11, 12, 13. and so ver. 16. a Place that falls fully in with this he saith, that Christ hath given to the Body, and He speaks of the universal Church, Apostles and Prophets, and Teachers, and Pastors from his Time to the End of the World. For it is until all be come to keep to the Unity of the Faith, and to cause them to grow up to a fulness of Stature in Christ; the meaning of which to me is this, that the whole Body is fitly joined together, and compacted by that which every Part supplieth the whole Universal Church, from the Times of the Apostles down-wards to this very Day; The Ministers and the Saints that have been in former Ages, being tied unto us by Bands and Ligaments, have propagated the Truth unto us. So as indeed it is every Part of the Church that helpeth forward the other, it is the Church in one Age, that helpeth forward the Church in another, and one soweth, and another reapeth: And the Body (take the whole Compass of it in all Ages) is fitly joined together, that it may cause every Age, and every Saint to increase according to his Proportion. Therefore, if God have revealed this Mystery unto his Saints, we must acquaint our selves with Saints, not only with Saints living but dead, and we may have a great deal of Knowledge from their Writings, for it is the Ordinance of God, that the Body in all Ages fitly joined together, should increase by that which every Part supplieth. We have had a great deal of Knowledge from the Age before, and that which is coming shall have much Knowledge from us, and so one Age being fitly joined to another, doth cause the Body to grow to the fulness of the Stature of Christ; and this is that which Christ also says, John 4. 29. one Age sows and another Reaps, that all may be one together.
a great

3. Go to him above all, who hath the Key of Knowledge, Jesus Christ. Rev. 3. 7 Pray to him, as you have it; 1 Pet. 1. 10. They search'd, and enquir'd, i. e. they studied, and prayed, use both, as the Apostles were to spend the Time in both, Acts 6. It is a Mystery which God only makes known; and you know how to deal with him; James 1. 4, 5. If any lack Wisdom, let him ask it of God, whose special Promise in the New Testament, is to teach all that are his to know him; as you cannot see the Sun without the Light of it self, so nor the Riches of the Glory of Christ without his Spirit, who is called the Spirit of Wisdom and Revelation, who only knows these deep Things of God, 1 Cor. 2. 11. As the Mysteries of the Gospel are, that lie at the bottom of his Breast. The Well is deep, we have nothing to draw with.

But you will say, God hath revealed himself in the Scriptures, and it is but reading them, and I have Wit enough to understand them.

I Answer, it was the Spirit that wrote that Word, which is not therefore (says Peter) of any private Interpretation, that is, no Mans or Mens private Understandings without the Assistance of that Publick Secretary of Heaven can understand them: Optimus mentis sue quisque est interpres, he only hid the Treasures of Knowledge in that Field, and he only knows where they lie, what an Advantage is it then, by Prayer to unlock God's Breast, to obtain the Key of Knowledge, that unlocks God's Study, and can direct to all his Notes and his Papers?

Fourthly, Look to it that thou art a Saint, To whom God will make known the Riches, &c. otherwise you cannot receive them; you will count them foolishness as have been shewed; you will take them but as upon Trust, you will not be able to see the Particular Secrets that are revealed in the Gospel. The Saints are they that first find out, and do preserve the Truths of the Gospel in the World: It is certain, if there were none but carnal Professors in the World, this Gospel would soon be lost, 1 Tim. 3. 9. The Mystery of the Faith is preserv'd in a good Conscience, and without a good Conscience it leaks out. And 2 Tim. 2. 13, 14. If we believe not, yet he abideth faithful; he cannot deny himself. Of these Things put them in remembrance, charging them before the Lord, that they strive not about Words to no Profit, but to the subverting of the Hearers. It was once delivered unto the Saints, and it is the Saints that preserve it, and shall do to the End of the World. In Isa. 35. you have a Prophecy of the Kingdom of Christ, and of the Times of the Gospel (as you shall find it to be by reading that Chapter) and he says, that there shall be an High-way, and it shall be called the way of Holiness, and the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be a way for wayfaring Men, and though Fools, yet they shall not erre therein; that is, if they be Men that have a Mind to go to Heaven, whose Hearts God doth sanctifie, though otherwise they are Men of low Parts, and mean Understandings, they shall not erre; why? Because they are Holy, they are Saints, and he hath made manifest this Gospel of his unto his Saints, whereas the Unclean shall not so much as cross the Way, nor pass over it.

The Apostles and Prophets themselves were Men of Holiness, or God had not revealed the Gospel Mysteries to them, as the first Publication of it by them. It is therefore emphatically said, Eph. 3. 5. As now it is revealed unto his Holy Apostles and Prophets: It will however to be sure help you to get the start of any other, and Grace will do this; 1 Cor. 2. 12. Now we have received not the Spirit of the World, but the Spirit which is of God; that we might know the Things that are freely given us of God. A Godly Man hath a renewed Principle, is made a spiritual Man; a natural Man brings only natural Parts, a regenerate Man supposed to have as good; hath a further Power of of discerning given him; 1 Cor. 2. 15. The Spiritual Man discerneth all Things. 'Tis his own Art, and as wicked Men are oftener wiser in their Art and Generation, than a Child of Light; the Reason will stronger hold, that a Child of Light may easier be wiser in his; and therefore Solomon says, The Understanding of the Holy, is Understanding. Trust not the Judgments of Unclean Men, though Ministers in the Matters of Grace, this is a Godly Mans Art not a wicked Mans; though never so Learned, and a Man will Trust an Artist in his own Trade rather than another. The Understanding of the Holy is Understanding (says Solomon, Prov. 9. 10.) especially in the Ways of Holiness.

Chap. V.

C H A P. V.

The Excellency of the Gospel, consists in the Riches of Spiritual Knowledge manifested in it.

COLOS. I. 27.

To whom (viz. His Saints) God would make known what is the Riches of the Glory of this Mystery, &c.

THough others know the Things of the Gospel, yet those to whom God intends the intimate Knowledge of it, are the Saints. All Gods Care and Contrivance is, that His Saints may know it, and that He may so reveal it, that all His Saints shall know it, He hath taken a sure Course for that; and as for others He leaves them to the Darkness and Blindness of their own Minds. To whom God would make known, &c.

The greatest Controversie now on Foot is this, who they are, that are the Supream Judge now upon Earth, of all the Mysteries of the Gospel.

1. The Socinians, they would have Humane Reason to be the Judge; that God should have so Writ the Scripture, that it should be made known to all Mens Understandings, that have but Humane Reason in them, and that God would make known to Humane Reason, instead of making known to His Saints, what is His meaning in all the Things delivered in the Gospel. Now I Confess, that what they say hath the greatest Reason in the World in it, if God had intended, that the Gospel should be made known in the Spirituality of it unto all Mankind. But they do not consider both, that it is a Mystery; and that God would have it so made known only to His Saints. Indeed, if God had meant to satisfy all Mankind, then the Scripture and all these Mysteries would have been so delivered, as Reason should have subdued them, and been able to have been Master of them, and taken them in. But the Care God took in writing the Scripture, was to have His Saints satisfied, and they to take in the Mysteries of it. These I say, would bring all the Scripture to the Bar of Humane Reason, and would have the Holy Ghosts meaning, in all the Places of Scripture concluded within the Circle of a Syllogism, and believe no more than the Power of Reason can convince them of. Reason indeed subserveth, for this is a certain Truth, that there is nothing that a Saint by Faith apprehendeth, but when he apprehends it, he sees the greatest Reason, from the Harmony of one Truth with another fall in with it that may be: One Scripture doth suit so with another, and one Theological Truth so with another, that there is nothing more agreeable to spiritual Reason, than what in the Mysteries of the Gospel are held forth. But my Brethren, Reason will never alone work out these Mysteries. There are Two Principles in the Heart of Man, (and you would wonder they should be the greatest Enemies either of them, that can be) The one is natural Conscience, and the other is Humane Reason. They were the Two Principles that were set up in Adam, and therefore they would be the predominant Principles still. Now God hath set Faith over them both. He will have Faith subdue Conscience; my meaning is this, Conscience shall subserve Faith, it shall serve to give Directions to a Believer how he shall walk; so the Law doth, and so Conscience doth; but if you will make that the eminent Principle, a Man will fall into a legal Temper, and all his Comfort will come from his Conscience, and not from his Faith. So on the other side, if you will make Reason the predominant Principle, when you come to judge of the Matters of Religion; it is a good Servant indeed, but if you will make that the Supreme Judge, you will understand nothing, or little of the Mysteries of Salvation, for God hath appointed Faith, and Faith in the Saints to receive them all.

Chap. V.

2. The Papists, make a Pope that shall determine all Controversies, as our infallible and standing Judge led into all Truth. And I Confess, had God meant in delivering the Mysteries of the Gospel to have satisfied all Mankind, and to have resolved all their Consciences, and all their Scruples in interpreting Scriptures, He would have had some such Judge: He would have had either an internal Judge common to all Mankind, which Humane Reason is, or an external Judge which all Mankind should submit unto as to an Oracle. But my Brethren, whatsoever Power on Earth shall be set up, the great End and Scope of God in Writing the Scriptures, is to make Things known to His Saints, and He hath taken a Course, and made Provision for them beyond all these. And what is that?

1. He hath given to His Saints His Spirit, who writ the Scripture, who knows the meaning of all the Mysteries therein, and He is the Supreme Judge; and to be sure He gives this Spirit unto His Saints: We have not received the Spirit of the World (1 Cor. 2. 12.) but the Spirit, which is of God, that we may know the Things that are freely given to us of God. Here is my Word, here is my Spirit saith He. Where ever God hath a Saint, He doth by the Ministry of the Word convey His Spirit into that Saints Heart, and teacheth him this Mystery; and let the World quarrel, that they have not an infallible Rule to judge by; God never meant to satisfy the World, He meant to make this Mystery known to His Saints. We have not received the Spirit of the World, saith he, that is, we have not only received that Principle, or that Ability to judge of Things which the World hath, which carnal Men in the World have, and whereby worldly Things are judged, which is that of Humane Reason, &c. to beat out Truths that way only, but we have received the Spirit which is of God. Here then lies the great Wisdom, and Love, and Favour of God to his Children, that He hath taken a Course and made Provision for them, He hath given them His Spirit (for He can give His Spirit to whom He will) and He will certainly lead all those He means to save, into so much Truth as shall save them.

2. As God hath given to His Saints His Spirit, so He doth give to them alone an Understanding on Purpose to know the Things of the Gospel; 1 John 5. 20. We know that the Son of God is come, and He hath given us an Understanding that we may know Him that is true. As they have the Holy Ghost as a Guide, so they have an Understanding Created on purpose for to know Him that is true; and therefore you may observe, that still the Apostles in their Writings, Pray, That the Eyes of their Mind may be Enlightened, &c.

3. As He hath given them a renewed Understanding, so He hath put a new Creature, His own Image, into the whole Man; and what is the Image of God, that He thus puts in the whole Man? It is a Thing suited to all Truths more or less: And because this Image is imperfect, hence therefore it is, that there being Corruption and Darknes in the holiest Men, they cannot relish all Truths: Darknes prevailing in respect of some Truths, more than the Light of God's Image in them; even as it doth in respect of Ignorance of some Sins: But yet I say, as He hath given them His Spirit, as He hath given them a renewed Understanding on purpose, a new Eye, so He hath given them a new Creature, His own Image stamped upon their Wills and Affections, which favoureth and reliseth what is true, as what is agreeable unto it. God hath put into every Creature a Taste, and a discerning of what shall nourish it. A Man by his Taste discerneth what is Good and what is Ill for him in a great Measure, what agreeth with his Stomach and with his Nature, finds what inflames him, what poisoneth him, what comforts him, the whole Man feels it: So is it here, God hath suited all the Truths of the Gospel to the regenerate Part, that as some Philosophers; said all Truth is interwoven in the Soul of Man, so to be sure, all Truth is interwoven in the Image of God in a Man. And as the Senses in a Man are suited to Objects in the World, a Mans Eye to colours, his Ear to sounds, his Stomach to Meats; so hath God made the Things of the Gospel to suit the regenerate Part, and the regenerate Part to suit them. And therefore in that 1 Cor. 2. 9. The Things of the Gospel are called Things prepared for them that Love him; they are suited, suited on purpose as it were to them: And in Phil. 1. 9. The Knowledge of the Saints it is called Sense, This I Pray, that your Love may abound more and more in Knowledge, and in all Sense; so the Word is in the Original, and in your Margents, we Translate it in all Judgment, but it is a Judgment which ariseth from, or at least is joined with Sense, a Taste, a suitability that the Soul hath to the Things revealed. And so much now for the clearing of that also; To whom God would make known, &c.

I come now to those Two other Properties, that in this 27th Verse, are attributed to the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The one, that it is a rich Mystery; and the second, that it is a glorious Mystery. To whom (saith he) God would make known, what is the riches of the Glory of this Mystery, &c.

Riches and Glory here, doth not only refer to Christ himself, (though mainly to Him as the Subject of the Gospel; as those next Words [which is Christ in you, &c.] imply,) as if that Jesus Christ only were the Riches, and the Glory that the Apostle here intended; but it refers to the Mystery, to the Doctrine that reveals this Christ also, which by Reason of the Riches that are in Him, which it revealeth, is a rich Mystery and glorious. It refers therefore both objectively unto Christ, and likewise to the Gospel that reveals Him: Because that Christ himself is so rich and glorious, therefore is the Gospel which reveals this Christ rich and glorious also. And indeed according to the Hebraisme, that is, that Phrase that the Jews use to speak in, which the Apostles do likewise often use in Writing the New Testament, these Two [Riches of Glory] are Terms convertible, and his meaning is this, that the Gospel it is either rich in respect of the Glory of it, or glorious in respect of the Riches of it; so as none knows whether the Riches or the Glory of it be greater. I shall first of all, therefore open to you the Riches of this Mystery.

Observ. The Gospel it self which revealeth the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Free Grace of God in Him, is a most rich Gospel.

In 2 Cor. 4. The Apostle having spoken of the Gospel (as you shall find, he doth all along in that Chapter from the 1st verse to the 7th) and laid open the Excellency of it in the Glory thereof, what saith he when he hath done; We have this Treasure in Earthen Vessels, that the Power might be of God,
G 2
and

Chap. V.

and not of us. I am (saith Paul) but a poor Man, I am but an earthen Vessel, made of the same Clay mingled with Sin, that other Men are made of, yet God hath been pleased to betrust me with a World of Treasure. What a World of Treasure was lost, though it was not lost, for he had Preached it out, and Writ it; but what a World of Treasure was broken, when that earthen Vessel was broken: And what was that Treasure? It was (as the Coherence evidently carries it) the Gospel. Hence is it that every Believer, that believeth this Gospel and the Truths of it, is said to be rich in Faith; James 2. 5. and in 1 Cor. 1. 5. to be rich in all Knowledge. The Knowledge of the Gospel is a rich Knowledge, and the Faith of the Gospel is a rich Faith, and the Gospel it self is a Treasure saith Paul, which poor earthen Vessels carries about with them. Now Riches imply these Three Things.

1. A Preciousness.
2. Abundance.
3. Profitableness and Gain.

And the Things the Gospel revealeth, and the Truths contained therein, and the Knowledge thereof unto those that are the true Owners and Possessors of them, and do make them theirs, are Rich in all these Respects.

First, There is a Preciousness in all the Truths the Gospel doth reveal. Not only Jesus Christ is said to be Precious, as the Foundation and Corner-stone; (that you have in 1 Pet. 2. 6. I will lay in Sion a chief Corner-stone, Elect and Precious;) but the Truths that are built upon Christ, are all Precious too, so you have it in 1 Cor. 3. 11. I saith he, As a wise Master-builder have laid the Foundation which is Jesus Christ, the great Precious Stone of all the rest; Now if any Man shall build upon this Foundation, Gold, Silver, Precious Stones; so he calls all the Truths that are built upon this Foundation, there is not a Truth of the Gospel, but it is more worth than Gold, more rich than precious Stones; and then he expresseth all the Falshoods that Men build thereupon by Wood, and Hay, and Stubble that will be burnt up, but by Gold and precious Stones, he means those Truths that will abide the Fire. So that every Truth of the Gospel that is built upon Jesus Christ, that is the Superstructure of it, are all Pearls and Precious Stones, and Gold, and Silver; they have Degrees of Excellencies indeed, but they all have a Preciousness in them. I shall not need to inlarge more about it, I will only quote one Place, and so open the Particulars in which the Gospel is Precious, Prov. 3. 15, 16. speaking there of Wisdom, he saith, The Merchandise of it is better than the Merchandises of Silver, and the Gain thereof than fine Gold; and if there be any Thing better than these, (and yet the World hath turned these up as the great Things that should Master all the rest) he prefers it before them. Precious Stones you know are more precious than Silver and Gold, why saith he, Wisdom is more precious than Rubies, and yet because the Hearts of Men imagine there is something more precious than these, he addeth, All the Things thou canst desire are not to be compared unto her. This he speaks of Wisdom, which is the Knowledge of Jesus Christ, and he speaks of it as he knew it even under the Time of the Law, he valued every Truth, and every Part of it above Gold and Silver, and Rubies, and whatever the Heart of Man could think Precious.

Every Truth of the Gospel, is Precious in these Five Respects.

1. Antiquity makes Things precious. Small Pieces of Coin that contain not much in value, if they be old are priz'd, any old Meddal, or old Pieces of Brass, or of Gold, and Silver coined in the Time of the Roman Emperors, or in the Time of the Grecian, any Piece, that hath Alexanders Image and Stamp upon it, and the like; How do your Antiquaries esteem it? How more Precious do they think it than a great deal of Gold! Now if Antiquity commend any Thing to you, why there is never a Truth of the Gospel but was coined in Heaven, and coined from Everlasting: It is the Everlasting Gospel, and it bears the Image of God upon it.

2. Things

2. Things far fetched are Precious. She fetcheth her Merchandise from afar, saith Solomon, Prov. 31. There is not a Word of this Gospel, but it came from far, it came from Heaven. Jesus Christ came himself from Heaven on purpose to reveal it, Heb. 12. 25. comparing Law and Gospel together; says the Apostle, If they escape not that refused him that spake from Earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from Him, that speaks from Heaven. Who doth he mean by him that speaks from Earth, and who by him that spake from Heaven? Why Moses and Christ? Moses gave the Law, the Law came by Moses, and the Law came but from Earth; but the Gospel, every Tittle of it, came from Heaven: The Law comes out of a Mans own Heart, it was Written in Mans Heart on Earth, namely in Adams Innocency, and there is a great deal of it Written even in the Hearts of Wicked Men, They do the Things of the Law, which are written in their Hearts, saith the Apostle; Rom. 2. But not a Word of this Truth of the Gospel was written in Adams Heart, no, it was Written in God's Heart, it was hid in God, it came from Heaven.

3. Things that are dearly bought you Account Precious. There is not one Truth of the Gospel, but it cost the Blood of Jesus Christ. You will easily grant, there is no Grace you have, but it cost Christs Blood; why my Brethren, there is no Truth you have that is a Gospel Truth, but it cost the Blood of Christ: The Law did not cost Christs Blood, for the Law was written in Adams Heart, and without the Supposition of his Death, it was given to Adam in Paradise; but not a Tittle of the Gospel, not a Promise of it, but depends upon the Blood of Christ; In Him all the Promises are Yea, and Amen, 2 Cor. 1. and they are therefore exceeding precious Promises; so Peter calls them, 2 Pet. 1. for they all cost the Blood of Christ, we could have had no Promise, if Christ had not paid for the Thing promised, not a Promise had been written, if Jesus Christ had not Died to make it so, they had all been Blanks but for His Death.

4. Things charily and warily laid up are Precious. The Gospel and all the Truths of it have had the richest Cabinet that ever was. First, It had God's Heart, it was hid in God (as I said afore) Eph. 3. 9. Then there was a Copy of it transcribed into Christs Heart, and He came into this World full of Grace and Truth, as full of the Truths of the Gospel as He could hold. Then doth God transcribe it out of Christs Heart, into the Hearts of His Elect; 2 Cor. 3. 3. Ye are manifestly declared to be the Epistle of Christ ministred by us, written not with Ink, but with the Spirit of the Living God, not in Tables of Stone, but in Fleshly Tables of the Heart.

5. Things that perish not, but still do vindicate themselves from Corruption, they also are Precious; why is Gold and Silver precious? Because that Gold if put into the Fire, though 'twill melt, yet 'twill not be lost, 'twill not be consumed. But 1 Pet. 1. 7. Faith is more precious than Gold; why? Because it perisheth not, though it be tried in the Fire; Gold in Time will perish, if you try it too often 'twill come to nothing, but Faith the more you trie it the more precious it is, there is not a Dram of it lost at any Time. And the Doctrine of Faith, and of the Gospel is of the same Nature, 'twill never perish, and it will still vindicate it self from Corruption; tho' Men mingle it, as always in the bringing forth of Truths, certainly Men mingle a great deal of Dross, and of their own Wisdom and Artifice, but that Spirit, that is in the Truth it self, will Work out all that Dross in Time. Never take Care to have the Truth of God clear, we may be doubtful of it in many Things in our Age, its certain the next Age, or an Age after will clear it, the Truth hath a Spirit in it that will still purifie it. In 1 Cor. 3. 13. Saith the Apostle there, where he calls Truth Gold, and Silver, and precious Stones, Every Mans Work (saith he) namely, every Ministers Work, whether he preach Truth, or whether he preach Falshood, whether he preacheth Gold, Silver, precious Stones (so he calls the Truths of the Gospel) or whether he Preach Wood, Hay, Stubble; it shall be made manifest, for the Day shall declare it, whether it be precious Stones or no, because (saith he) it shall be revealed by Fire, and the Fire shall trie every Mans Work of what sort it is. He speaks evidently of the Doctrines Men preach or hold forth forth in the World, still there will come a more clear Day-light that shall reveal them, and there will come a Fire, and if it be Hay or Stubble, or what ever it is that is Dross, or Falshood, or Errour mingled with the Truth, it shall be burnt up; as when you go and burn Cloth of Silver or of Gold, all the Cloth is burnt up; but the Silver and Gold remains, so it is here; and the Holy Ghost will never leave, till He hath purified His Truth thoroughly. Therefore the Psalmist saith, The Words of the Lord are pure Words (Psalm 12. 6.) as Silver tried in a Furnace, purified seven Times. You know, they that purifie Silver to the purpose use to put it in the Fire again and again, that it may be thoroughly tried: So is the Truth of God, there is scarce any Truth, but hath been tried over and over again, and still if any Dross happen to mingle with it, then God calls it in Question again; if in former Times there have been Scriptures alledged, that have not been pertinent to prove it, that Truth shall into the Fire again, that what is Dross may be burnt up; the Holy Ghost is so curious, so delicate, so exact, He cannot bear that falshood should be mingled with the Truths of the Gospel. Thats the Reason therefore, why that God doth still Age after Age call former Things in Question, because that there is still some Dross one way or other mingled with it; either in the stating of the Opinions themselves, or else in the Scriptures that are brought and alledged for them that have past for Currant, for He will never leave till He hath purified it. The Doctrine of Gods Free Grace, hath been tried over, and over, and over again. Pelagius he begins and he mingles his Dross with it, he saith, Grace is nothing but Nature in Man; well, his Doctrine was purified, and a great deal of Dross purged out; then comes the Semi-Pelagians, and they part Stakes, they say Nature can do nothing without Grace, but they make Nature to concur with Grace, and to have an Influence as well as Grace; and the Dross of that was burnt up. The Papists they take up the same Quarrel, but will neither be Pelagians nor Semi-Pelagians, yet still mingle Dross; the Arminians they come and they refine Popery in that Point anew; still they mingle Dross. God will have this Truth tried Seven Times in the Fire, till He hath brought it forth as pure as pure may be. And I say it is, because that Truth is thus Precious. And so much now for that first Head, that it is a rich Gospel in regard of the Preciousness of the Truths that are therein.

Chap. V.

The Second Thing that is proper to Riches, is Abundance. Now the Doctrine of the Gospel hath abundance of Truth and Knowledge in it. Take all Philosophy, all the Books of Humane Wisdom and Learning, if they were all distill'd, if you could Extract the Quintessence of them all, there is not so much Knowledge as one Book of the New Testament contains. In this Colos. 2. 3. saith this Apostle there, do you stick to the Knowledge of Jesus Christ, and do not leave that, For in Him are hid all the Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledge. There is all sorts, both Wisdom and Knowledge, and there is all Wisdom and Knowledge, and there are all Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledge hid in this Christ, who is revealed to you in this Gospel. It is all Knowledge by way of Eminency, as they use to say Metaphysicks are, it contains all Knowledge, because it swallows up all the Axioms of all other Sciences; I may say of all other Learning and Knowledge whatsoever, they are all by way of Eminency swallowed up in the Truths of the Gospel. As the Person of Jesus Christ contains by way of Eminency all the Excellencies in the Creature, so the Knowledge of Jesus Christ contains all the Excellency of whatsoever Knowledge can be had, the Knowledge of governing Kingdoms, the Knowledge of Nature, or the Things of Nature, or the Knowledge of the Law, or of whatever else. Our Saviour Christ as He was full of Grace, so He was full of Truth; John 1. 14. We saw His Glory, as the Glory of the only begotten Son of God, full of Grace and Truth; He came so rich into this World, He had such abundance of Treasures, that He brought forth continually some Truths or other. He was full of Grace to fill the Will and Affection, and full of Truth to fill the Understanding and Judgment; and those Truths did comprehensively take in all sorts of Truths that that ever were uttered in a transcendent Manner. Solomon he had a Heart as large for Knowledge in natural Things, as the Sea is full of Sands, he had as many Notions in his Head, as there be Sands upon the Sea Shore. This Solomon, Jesus Christ that came from Heaven he had his Heart larger than the Sea, as large as Heaven it self, He was full of Truth. Saith David who knew but the Law (I mean the Law in Distinction from the Gospel, as we know it, and as it is now revealed) yet saith he in Psalme 119. I have seen an End of all Perfection, but Thy Law is exceeding Broad; he saw such a vastness in the Knowledge of the Law as he stood agast at it; as if a Man should stand in the midst of the Sea, it is so broad, so vast, he cannot see where it ends; I can see to the End (saith he) of all Perfection else, but I cannot see to the End of Thy Law, it is so full, so broad. And therefore in 2 Cor. 3. The Apostle tells us, they did not see to the End of his Ministry; ay, but my Brethren, the Gospel is much more endless, for what doth John say in that Place quoted even now, when he said, Christ was full of Grace and Truth, he speaks in Opposition to the Law, The Law came by Moses, saith he, but Grace and Truth by Jesus Christ, and we saw his Glory, and we saw Him full of Grace and Truth; Moses his Law was but a scanty Business, though it was exceeding broad, and David saw an End of it; but the Knowledge of Christ, and of what is contained in the Gospel they do so abound, as they are unsearchable; so the Apostle saith, Eph. 3. That I may Preach among the Gentiles, the unsearchable riches of Christ; and Paul himself, though he had abundance of Revelations (as he saith in 2 Cor. 12.) yet he professeth, that he knew but in Part, such Abundance is there in the Truths of the Gospel. The Times of the Gospel therefore, they are like the Times of Solomon, in which the Scripture saith, Silver was as the Stones in the Street; so Jesus Christ hath fill'd the World with the riches of the Gospel, for so the Gospel is called, The Riches of the Gentiles, and the riches of the World, wherein the precious Truths revealed concerning Him, they are as common as the Stones in the Streets, and as many for number; if Men had Eyes to see them, and Hearts, and Heads, and Hands to dig for them, and search them out of the Mines in which they lie. And so much now for the Second Head, viz. That the Gospel is a rich Gospel, in regard of the Abundance of Truth and Knowledge contained in it.

Thirdly, All the Truths of the Gospel are likewise rich in regard of the Gain and Profitableness of them; they do make those rich, that are the Possessors of them. There are in the World a great many Curiosities of Knowledge, which Men do Pride and Boast themselves in; the Trial of the Secrets of Nature, and the Experiments thereof, but usually all such Knowledge doth impoverish all those that are retainers to it; But the Knowledge of the Gospel is clean otherwise, it possesseth them that know it by Faith of all the Treasure it revealeth. It is not like Stories that do set forth glorious and rich Things to you, yet when Stories do so they do mightily take you, but you may read such Stories and be poor Men still: But the Gospel as it reveals to you infinite Riches, so it possesseth you of them; therefore what doth the Holy Ghost say here? Which Riches is Christ in you, saith he, for the Particle [which] refers to Riches as well as to Mystery, and indeed to both. And therefore in Prov. 3. a Place I quoted afore for the Preciousness of Wisdom and all the Wares thereof, it is not only compared to Rubies for the Worth and Preciousness of it, but for the Gain and Profitableness of it also; Happy is the Man that findeth Understanding, for the Merchandise of it is better than the Merchandise of Silver, and the gain thereof than of fine Gold: And if the Heart of Man in its vast Desires, could think of any more precious Things unknown, stretch the Compass of your Desires to the utmost, yet saith he, All the Things thou canst desire cannot be compared to her: So verse 15.

If you ask me, wherein lies this Riches? It lies in Wisdom, says Solomon, and that Wisdom is Christ, says the Text. Which Riches (saith he) is Christ in you. We all acknowledge that God is infinitely Rich and Blessed in himself:

Chap. V.

himself, Phil. 4. 19. My God shall supply all your need, according to His Riches in Glory by Jesus Christ; Riches in Glory, for God's Riches lies in Glory most, and He communicateth them all to Believers in and by Jesus Christ, and Jesus Christs becoming yours (Which is Christ in you, saith the Text) hence you come to have a Title and Interest in all those Riches of God, that God himself possesseth. This is certain, that Jesus Christ is worth all that God is worth; He is Gods only Son, and He is His Heir (He is said to be the Heir of all Things, Heb. 1. 7.) and God will not give one Penny from Him, as I may so express it to you. Now this glorious Gospel which we Preach, if received and entertained, makes Jesus Christ yours, and all His Riches. And therefore in 1 Cor. 3. ult. The Apostle thus pleads the Title of a Christian, Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the World, or Life, or Death, or Things present, or Things to come, all are yours, and ye are Christs, and Christ is Gods. Here I say you have as the Inventory of a Christian, so the Title by which all Things are derived to him. All Things are yours, saith he, why God himself is worth but all Things, and Jesus Christ (as I said) is worth all that God is worth; All Things are yours, for ye are Christs, and Christ is Gods. And therefore in Rom. 8. 17. We are said to be Heirs of God, and joint Heirs with Christ; not only Heirs of God, as a Son is said to be the Heir of his Father; that is, that he is the Bequeather, but we are said to be Heirs of God materially, Heirs of God himself, for He is our Inheritance; and we are Joint-heirs with Christ; we are so put into God's will, that as Men are said to be Joint Purchasers with another, so we are said to be Joint-heirs with Christ: Joint Purchasers we are not, that is Christs Prerogative alone, but when it comes to Matter of Inheritance, then we are Joint-heirs with Christ.

And that which we are to possess, is a free Estate; Rom. 8. 32. He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all Things? There is not only all Things that you possess, and the Title, as Joint-heirs with Christ, but you have it freely; there is no Debts to pay out of it, no Portions, no Legacies, but you are Heirs of all Things, and of all Things freely.

And then do but consider what the Revenues of Christs Blood are. Look what both Christs Personal Interest in all Things would convey to you, so much is a Christian worth; and look what the Purchase of Christs Blood is, so rich is a Christian also, that entertains the Gospel. I say Two Things. First, Our Saviour Christ is personally the Heir of all Things, and you have the same Title He hath, being Joint-heirs with Him. Then this Heir laid all that He was Heir of down again to make a further Purchase; and do but think now what a Purchase this must needs be, what Riches it must needs arise to; In 2 Cor. 8. 9. Ye know the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich (for He was rich, as He was the Heir of all Things) yet for your sakes He became Poor; why? That ye thorough His Poverty might be Rich. Jesus Christ is first Rich as the Heir, and ye are ordained Joint-heirs with Him, by that Title; but He that is the Heir of all Things becomes Poor, and Poor on purpose to Purchase, if it be possible more Riches, or the same over and over again: As it is in Phil. 1. 8. He thought it no robbery to be equal with God, as in Glory so in Riches, He had as great and as good an Estate as God himself hath, and it was no Robbery, it was no stealth. He came not by it by any such course or way, it is no unjust Claim, that He laid to it; yet He emptied himself, He left himself not worth one Farthing; He emptied himself, so saith the Text, as in respect of Glory, so in respect of Riches; He became Poor, and as we may express it, not worth the Ground He went on, for He had not a Hole to hide his Head in, Women ministred unto Him. Now I say, this Heir of all Things made over all His Riches, and did it all for you; it is said in that Prov. 3. The Merchandise of Wisdom, is better than that of Fine Gold; when Wisdom, Christ himself (I do not say, that is the meaning of the Place, only I allude to it, and speak in the Expression of it) shall put forth all the Riches He hath in a way of Merchandise to have it returned again, and become Poor to make us Rich, do but think now what Riches this must needs amount unto.

Merchandize

Now the Gospel therefore is a rich Gospel, not only because it doth reveal, and is the Story of all these Riches, but because it possesseth you of them, and is your Bond for it. The Gospel I say, and all the Promises of it, are the Bond that you have to shew for all these Riches, and in that respect it is Rich. When our Lord and Saviour Christ laid down all His Riches, and laid down His Blood to purchase Riches for us, what is it that He hath to shew for it? He hath but the Promises of the Gospel, which God hath made to him, and made to us in and thorough Him; therefore as a Man is said to be Rich, though he be Rich but in Bonds, if they be sure Bonds, so is a Christian, he is Rich in Promises. Compare for this, Eph. 3. ver. 6. with ver. 8. At the 6th verse, saith he, That the Gentiles should be Fellow-heirs, and partakers of His Promise in Christ, by the Gospel. Now what is it the Gospel containeth? Read verse 8. That I should preach among the Gentiles, the unsearchable Riches of Christ: Where lie all these Riches? They lie in the Promises; we are now Partakers but of the Promises of the Gospel: They are unsearchable Riches, which cannot be told over to Eternity, and the Promises are the Conveyers of them, and in these Promises do our Estates lie for the present, but it is a sure Estate; and in this respect Peter calleth them, Exceeding great and precious Promises, 2 Pet. 1. 4. And therefore, although you will say, a Christian hath nothing; it's true, but he is Rich in Promises; and our Apostle Answers it in that 2 Cor. 6. 10. As having nothing, yet possessing all Things; why? Because a Christian possesseth Christ; Which Riches is Christ in you, saith the Text here. It is all one to be rich in Bonds, and rich in Money told by you, and that's all the Difference between your Estate here, and in Heaven; in Heaven you have the Money, the Thing it self; and here you have the Possession of the Bonds themselves.

It were Infinite to go over all the Inventory of a Christian, I have therefore done it in a short brief Sum. Here are riches in Christ to pay all thy Debts the the first Day thou comest in; and to pay all thy Debts thou shalt run in to God, (and it would have begger'd all the Angels in Heaven to pay for one Sin) and when that is done, thou hast a Righteousness so rich as the Angels never possess, a Robe stuck so full of Jewels (for such is every Action of Christ, and all His sufficiency) as never came upon the Angels back. Every Grace thou hast, is a rich Thing; Rich in Faith, James 2. Rich in assurance, Col. 2. 1. In a Word, hath God any more Riches? His Spirit, is as rich as Christ too, and thou hast Him, it is a Phrase used in Tit. 3. 6. He hath poured His Spirit richly on us; so it is in the Original and in your Margents. And then thou hast all the riches of Glory in the World to come, when thou art to be the Possessor of all this. And this the Gospel reveals to thee, and makes thee Possessor of it that art a Believer; and although the meanest Christian, if he have but the least Knowledge of the Gospel is possess of this, yet the more he comes to know the Gospel, the more he comes to know his own Riches.

First, Therefore my Brethren (that I may make a Use or Two of this, and so pass on to the next) it is a very great Invitement to us to be acquainted with all the Things of the Gospel of Christ; for still what dost thou do? Thou dost but Study over thine own Riches, and increase thine own Inventory, comest to the Knowledge of Things thou never dreamest of should be thine. The Angels do Study the Gospel, and Pry into it, but it is not their Riches; it is not which Riches is Christ in Angels, but it is, Which Riches is Christ in you. It is a Thing worth your Observation, that in Eph. 3. speaking of the Excellency of the Gospel, and the Riches of it; he saith, that it is made manifest to all Men, and likewise to Angels, but with this Difference, unto Men it is called the unsearchable Riches of Christ; so ver. 8. That I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable Riches of Christ; but when he speaks of the Angels knowing of it, he calls it Wisdom: So ver. 10. To the intent (saith he) that now unto the Principalities and Powers in heavenly Places, might be known by the Church the manifold Wisdom of God. The Angels are taken with the Wisdom of it, but thou maist be taken with the Riches that are in it; not only with the Wisdom of it, though that takes the Angels and may take thee, but it is Riches to thee, but Wisdom only unto them.

Chap. V.

Secondly, Is the Gospel thus rich in its Preciousness and Abundance; then let us take heed, that we do not Sell any Part of the Truths of the Gospel, which have been revealed to us. Buy the Truth (saith Solomon, Prov. 23. 23.) but Sell it not; for if you do, you Sell your Riches, you Part with your Estates. This Kingdom, and this City (for ought I know) hath been the greatest Mart of Truth, for this last Age, of any Part of the World, and Wisdom hath cried her Wares here more than in any other Place. There is nothing more the Riches of a Kingdom or a City than the Gospel, it is the Expression the Holy Ghost hath in Rom. 11. 12. Where speaking of the Gospel, when it was revealed to the Gentiles, he calls it, The Riches of the Gentiles, and the Riches of the World, in the same Place. Take heed therefore of parting with any of the Truths of the Gospel, those Truths that have been cried, that have run thorough the Fire so much in all Ages, for let me tell you this, that when God did first deliver to the Saints in the Primitive Times, all that the Apostles said went then for Currant in a manner; but when they were gone, God presently went and begun to put every Truth to a Trial, first one and then another.

That there is one God, and one Christ His Son, and that he is God as well as Man, and hath a true Humane Nature; all these Fundamental Truths, were the Exercise and Conflicts against Hereticks and Heathens, that the Holy Christians in the Primitive Times suffered for. Then God put this Truth into the Fire, whether Christ was God or no, and all the World turned Arian; but He tryed it, and it hath stood, and doth stand, and is continued to this Day. He hath likewise put the Doctrine of Free-Grace into the Fire, He began to do it presently after Arianism was down, He hath tried it over, and over, and over, and it is still propagated purer and purer. Now I say, all those Truths that God hath thus suffered to run thorough the Fire, which we now possess by the Blood of Jesus Christ, and by the Blood of Martyrs, and the Conflicts of the Saints in all Ages should be preserv'd by us. I beseech you give not up those Truths, for they are your Riches: Shall we now in this Age Question the Foundation of Religion? (For so some do) will you Sell away those Things that have been derived to us Age after Age at such Cost? O let us possess them as our dearest Treasures. Let us value the Truths of the Gospel as Paul did; I profited (saith he) in Knowledge more than any of my Brethren, Equals, or as much as any. Oh Thought he once, when he had got a Form of the Knowledge of the Law in his Head, what a Treasure have I? But saith he, Phil. 3. 7, 8. The Things I counted gain to me, thought my self rich by them, I esteemed all to be, but loss and dung for the excellency of the Knowledge of Jesus Christ my Lord. My Brethren, let us not Sell the Truth, God never takes it away from a Nation or a People, till they Sell it as Esau did his Birth-right. The Lord had made the Jews His Market for Truth, to them were committed the Oracles of God, Rom. 2. and therefore because He had committed to them the Truth, and they had been the Pillar of it, when the Gospel came to be Preached, they must have the first offer of it, they must have the refusal of it before God would carry it to another Market; It was necessary (saith Paul and Barnabas Preaching to the Jews, Acts 13. 46.) that the Word of God should first have been spoken unto you, but seeing you put it from you, seeing you refuse it, carry your selves unworthy of it, we will go to the Gentiles.

And

And Last of all, Let the Doctrine of the Gospel dwell plenteously in you, Let it dwell richly in you, for so the Expression is, Colos. 3. 16. And let us labour to be enriched with all the Knowledge of; as it is in 2 Cor. 1. 5. Let us grow rich in Faith, for the more you know, the richer you are.

Chap. VI.

But you will say, I am estated into all the Riches of the Gospel, if I have but the least Spark of Faith, and all the Riches of Christ are mine.

I Confess that all the Riches of Christ are thine. But let me tell thee this, the more thou growest after thou believest in the Knowledge of the Gospel, the more thou growest in the Knowledge of thine own Riches, and what a Happiness is that! And though thou hast all the Riches of Christ, and all the Promises, and all the Truths of the Gospel tend for to Comfort thee, and to make thee Happy and Rich, and will one Day make thee so; yet in the mean Time, till thou increasest in the Knowledge of it, till thou hast Assurance of the Things thou knowest, thou art in thine own Apprehension but a poor Man. There is that maketh himself Poor, but is Rich, saith Solomon, which is the Case of many poor Souls, who either want Assurance, or else do content themselves with a little Knowledge, only so much as may save them. So that now here is the Advantage of a Man growing in Knowledge, that the more he knows of the Gospel of Christ, the more he knoweth his own Riches; and if a Man had no other Work, but to tell over Money newly given him every Day, he would surely count it the pleasantest Work in the World. If thou couldest grow every Day in a new Degree of Knowledge, whilest thou dost thereby grow the more in the Knowledge of thine own Riches, how Happy must thou needs be! And so much now for that Attribute, that is here given to the Gospel, it is a Mystery, and it is a rich Mystery.

C H A P. VI.

That the Gospel is most Excellent, because it is a most glorious Revelation of God, and Christ to us.

THE next Thing that is (in Col. 1. 27.) attributed to the Gospel is, that it is a glorious Gospel. The Apostle when he speaks of the Glory of Things spiritual, usually gives the Title of Riches to them; thus in Rom. 9. 23. When he speaks of the Glory that is in God, he calleth it Riches of Glory; so in Eph. 1. 18. when he speaks of Heaven, he calleth it Riches of Glory; and here when he speaks of the Gospel of Christ, he calleth it likewise Riches of Glory.

I need not stand to give you many Scriptures, in which the Gospel is called glorious. I shall quote you but one or two. First, That in 1 Tim. 1. 11. According to the glorious Gospel of the blessed God, and he speaks it in Opposition to the Law clearly; he saith, that the Law is good, ver. 8. but when he comes to speak of the Gospel, he calls that glorious; for Glory is the superexcellency and superlative of Goodness. You have one whole Chapter (viz. 2 Cor. 3.) that shews the Glory of this Gospel, and indeed more than that one Chapter, for the Apostle doth enlarge his Discourse of it to the 6th Verse of the 4th Chapter, and there also he calls it Treasure (as in ver. 7.) as he had called it Glory in all the Discourse before; and as he had done in Timothy, so here in this Chapter of the Corinthians, he compares it with the Law. He doth acknowledge, that the Law had a kind of Glory in it, so ver. 7. If the Ministration of Death written, and ingraven in Stones, was glorious, so that the Children of Israel could not stedfastly behold the Face of Moses, for the Glory of his Countenance, which Glory was to be done away; how shall not the Ministration of the Spirit be rather glorious? For if the Ministration of Condemnation be Glory, much more doth the Ministration of Righteousness exceed in Glory. I shall take all these Arguments afore I have done, to shew how glorious the Gospel is, both because it is the Ministration of the Spirit, and because it is the Ministration of a glorious Righteousness but now I only quote it for this in the General, that the Apostie though he attributeth a Glory to the Law, yet in Comparison of the Gospel he makes it no Glory, for so it follows, ver. 10. Even that which was made glorious, had no Glory in this respect, by Reason of the Glory that excelleth.

Chap. VI.

The Law was glorious (and yet that Glory which it had, he saith, was but a made Glory.) First, In the Promulgation of it, which indeed was a very resemblance of the Day of Judgment, for God when he came to give the Law to Sinners, came down from Heaven and placed his Tabernacle upon Mount Sinai, like unto a Judge, attended with glorious Angels (for the Law was given by Angels) and with many glorious Miracles, Thunder, and Earthquake, and Fire, and Smoak, and the Sound of a Trumpet. Even as the Glory of a Kingdom is most seen, when they go to Enact Laws, for then the King and all the Nobles go in their Parliament Robes; and so your Judges, when they go to Execute the Laws, to Condemn Men, go attended with the sound of a Trumpet, and Halberds, &c. So God when He came to give the Law, came attended with all this Glory.

And then Secondly, As the Law was glorious in Respect of the Promulgation of it, so in Respect of the Matter of it: For the Moral Law, of which the Apostle specially speaks, for he speaks of that Law which was written and engraven in Stones, had a Glory in it; why? This is a certain Rule, whatsoever holds forth the Image of God hath a Glory in it, for the least Ray or Beam of God hath Glory in it, and if the Law be the Image of God, if God be glorious that must be glorious too; now the Law holds forth the Image of God's Mind. Therefore it is, that Man in his First Creation is called the Glory of God, because he was the Image of God, and hence therefore the Grace in Adam was called Glory, and so I think it is the best Interpretation, or at least-wise one great Part of the meaning of that in Rom. 3. 23. All have sinned, and come short of the Glory of God; (it is meant of the Image of God plainly, for in 1 Cor. 11. 7. The Glory of God, and his Image are made all one,) they are fallen from that Grace and Righteousness which at first God did implant in them, by which they were justified, and so are come short of the Favour of God, which did shine upon them. And hence likewise in 2 Cor. 4. The Gospel is said to be glorious, because it holds forth Jesus Christ the Image of God; now the Law therefore containing the Image of God, had a Glory in it materially. In these Two Respects, I say the Law was glorious: 1. In the Promulgation of it, God put a State upon it when He deliver'd it: And, 2. In Respect of the Matter of it, because it contains the Image of God.

But now my Brethren, the Gospel infinitely excelleth in Glory in both these Respects. I will not stand so much upon the first, because it is not so proper to the Text, yet somewhat I will say of it. The Gospel in the Promulgation of it, had all the Glory that could be put upon it. What greater Glory than for a King before he comes himself in State, to have a Train of Men of Four Thousand Years? So had Jesus Christ, before He came into the World to give the Gospel, what a long Train had He? For all the Patriarchs and Prophets were but His Fore-runners, his Train, Men that went before Him, and at last came John the Baptist, who was greater than all those Patriarchs and Prophets, because he came next to Jesus Christ, and because he spake more Gospel than all of them had done. You have an exprefs Place for it, in Isa. 40. 3, 4, and 5. Verses compared, where the Glory of the Gospel is held forth by this, that it had this Fore-runner,

The Voice of him that crieth in the Wilderness, Prepare ye the Way of the Lord, make straight in the Desert a High-way for our God, &c. and saith he, ver. 5. The Glory of the Lord shall be revealed. Because it was so great a Glory, He ushereth it in thus by John Baptist: It's true indeed, there was no Sound of a Trumpet, nor no Earthquakes; but you shall see there was as much, for after all this Train was past, and all these Fore-runners gone by, comes Jesus Christ himself, the Brightness of his Fathers Glory, and the express Image of His Person; Whose Shooe latchet, saith John Baptist (who was yet more than a Prophet) I am not worthy to unloose. Compare for this but the first Chapter of the Hebrews, and the Third Verse of the Second Chapter together. In the First Chapter, he saith, That in these last Days God hath spoken unto us by his Son, and then he sheweth what a Son this was, that He was Heir of all Things, and that by Him also God made the Worlds, that He was the express Image of His Fathers Person, and all this to the End, that he might shew forth the Glory of the Gospel; as appears, Chap. 2. ver. 2. For saith he, If the Word spoken by Angels was so stedfast and excellent, how much more shall that Word be which was spoken by so great a Lord; so ver. 3. And when Jesus Christ did first come to be inaugurated, before He Preached one Sermon (for His Inauguration is recorded by the Evangelists before He Preached one Sermon) it was by a Voice coming immediately from Heaven; saying, This is my well beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. You have the same afterwards in Luke 17. when He was transfigured, when He appeared all in His Glory: Moses his Face did but shine, but Jesus Christ's Face, Clothes, and all shone all over, and then cometh a Voice from Heaven too: This is my Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, hear Him: It is a Preface to the Gospel, here is a Lord of Glory saith He, when He had shewn Him in all His Glory; here He is, hear Him, take that Gospel that he delivereth from His Mouth, for here is the reality of Moses his Shadow. There was a Voice came from the excellent Glory, so Peter hath it; which is more then the sound of a Trumpet which Angels made upon the Mount at the Promulgation of the Law. Here when this Gospel came to be delivered, when it was first begun to be spoken by the Lord, all the Three Persons give Witness and Testimony, and instead of Angels the Holy Ghost cometh down, and instead of the Voice of Angels, here is a Voice from Heaven, even the Voice of God himself; and instead of Moses shining with his Face, here is Moses and Elias both appearing in Glory with Jesus Christ, who put them down clean; for saith John, speaking of His Transfiguration; We saw His Glory, as the Glory of the only begotten Son of God; which Glory of His was as evidently to be distinguished from the Glory of Moses and Elias, as the Glory of the Sun is from that of the Stars. And my Brethren, what was the Purpose of presenting Christ in that Glory upon the Mount? It is evident, it was in Answer to the Glory of Moses his Face, who was the Deliverer of the Law, and that upon this Ground; because there is a Voice come from Heaven, from the excellent Glory; saying, This is my beloved Son, hear him.

And then when Jesus Christ, the Lord of Glory, that first gave this Gospel, went to Heaven; what follows? Why a World of Glories, Beams of Glories were still scattered to confirm it; 1 Pet. 1. 10. Of which Salvation the Prophets did Prophecie, and of the Sufferings of Christ, and of the Glories that should follow (so it is in the Original.) For when Jesus Christ himself ascended and entred into Glory, He poured down glorious Gifts; He poured down a glorious Spirit, He poured down this Gospel, whereof He had but the Substance of it in brief Sayings, which the Apostles delivered to us; so you have it in Heb. 2. 3. As it was first Preached by the Lord, so he saith it was confirmed by Signs and Wonders, and divers Miracles, and by giving of the Holy Ghost. And this was the Glory of the Gospel in respect of the Promulgation of it, which indeed is not so much the Scope of the Text; yet because the Apostle in that 2 Cor. 3. speaks of the Promulgation of the Law, and of the Glory

Chap. VI.

Glory of it in that Respect, when he compares it with the Gospel and the Glory of it, I thought good a little to handle it. But,

Secondly, As the Gospel exceeded the Law in Glory, in respect of the Promulgation of it; so let us compare the Matter of the Gospel with that of the Law, and we shall find it likewise to be transcendently glorious in that respect also. The Law I told you was a glorious Law, because it contained the Image of God, so far as dead Letters could hold forth that Image. The Law written in Adams Heart was the Image of God, and that being blotted out, God took a Copy of what was in Adams Heart, so that indeed the Law is rather an Image of the Image of God, than the Image of God properly; it is but the Image of the Image that was in Adams Heart, and but a literal Picture of it. But now the Gospel must needs be much more glorious: Because,

First, It is the Gospel of Jesus Christ who is the express Image of the Person of His Father; so you have it, Heb. 1. 2, 3. Who is the Heir of all Things (speaking of Christ) the brightness of His Glory, and the express Image of His Person. Now do but look how more glorious the Image of a Man in his Son like himself, who hath the same Reason in him, and Properties of all Kinds that himself hath, excelleth the Image of his Mind, or of his Thoughts delivered in Writing; so doth Jesus Christ excel that Image of God expressed in the Law. And it is this which makes the Gospel so glorious, because it is the Gospel of Christ, who is the Image of God; so the Apostle saith in 2 Cor. 4. 4. Lest the Light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the Image of God, should shine unto them; hence therefore in Isa. 40. 4. Christ is called, The Glory of the Lord. Therefore look how far the Image of God stamped upon Jesus Christ, exceeds the Image of God in Adams Heart; and therefore must needs excel the Image of God in the Law, which is indeed but the Copy of the Image; so much doth the Gospel exceed the Law in Glory, and all the Knowledge of it. The Law I say is the Copy of the Image of God in Mans Heart, but the Gospel is the Glass in which the Image of God in Christ, and the Glory of Christ appeareth.

I will not stand to enlarge much upon that Subject, to shew you how transcendent an Image there is stamped upon Christ; I have done it elsewhere, in opening the 18 and 19 Verses of this Chapter. And that Jesus Christ is the great Subject of the Gospel, I intend by the Blessing of God to speak of that, taking Chap. 2. ver. 2. where the Gospel is called, The Mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ; these being the Subject of the Gospel. I will now only shew you, how glorious the Gospel must needs be that doth hold forth the Glory of Christ, and how lively it holds it forth.

My Brethren, let me tell you the Story of it a little. The Apostles that lived with Jesus Christ, They saw His Glory, as the Glory of the only begotten Son of God; so you have it, in John 1. 14. And as Johns Expression is (and he speaks feelingly) in 1 John 1. 1. That which we have heard, which we have seen with our Eyes, which we have looked upon, and our Hands have handled; they handled Him, that is, they had a sensible Knowledge of Him, their Ears took in His gracious Words, their Eyes beheld Him, beheld His glorious Miracles, beheld the Glory that God stamped upon Him, when He was in the Mount, and had that Voice from the excellent Glory. Well, but Jesus Christ is gone to Heaven, and all His Glory is taken up with Him, and these Apostles that saw His Glory, were all to leave the Earth; and therefore though it is true, that we shall one Day be where He is, according to His Prayer, John 17. 24. That we may behold His Glory; yet how in the mean Time should we come to see this Image of God, and the Glory of Jesus Christ, who in that Place of Isaiab is called the Glory of the Lord? Jesus Christ therefore did by His Apostles frame up a Doctrine of the Gospel, which is left Written by them; for He having delivered it unto them, they have declared it unto us; so you have it in the forementioned Place.

Place, 1 John 1. 3. That which we have seen and heard, declare we unto you. He declared it first to them, and they while they lived Preached the same Gospel by Word of Mouth, and then left it unto us in Writing, that so in the opening of it by Pastors and Teachers to the end of the World, we may come to see Christ, as the Apostles did in respect of His glorious Excellencies. Now this glorious Gospel which the Apostles have thus left in Writing, and which we poor Ministers in all Ages do Expound as well as we can unto you, what is it? It is the lively Image or Picture of Jesus Christ, who is the express Image of the great God, and of all His Glory; and hence is it a glorious Gospel. When the Apostle Paul preached to the Galatians, what saith he of the Gospel he Preached? Gal. 3. 1. Before whose Eyes (saith he) Jesus Christ was pictured; so the Word signifies, or painted, written out. The Gospel my Brethren, is the liveliest Picture of Christ that could be. But you will say, Pictures do not represent the Glory of a Thing? No more they do not, if you would Picture the Sun with the liveliest Colours that could be, you could not Picture the Glory of it; what hath God done therefore? He hath made His Gospel not only a Picture of Christ, but He hath made it a Glass. So the Apostle saith in that 2 Cor. 3. 18. compared with Cap. 4. ver. 4. We all with open Face beholding as in a Glass, the Glory of the Lord; namely, of Jesus Christ, who is the Image of the Invisible God. What is the Reason he calls the Gospel glorious? Because it is the Image of Jesus Christ; and how doth the Gospel hold that forth? Not only as a Picture, but as a Glass, and a Glass if the Thing be glorious that shines upon it, will represent not the Thing only, but the Glory of it too: As if you hold a Looking-glass to the Sun, you shall not only see the Picture of the Sun in it, but the Glory of the Sun, and the Sun in his Glory. Now the Glory of God, that shineth upon the Face of Jesus Christ (and therefore ver. 6. We are said to have the Light of Knowledge of the Glory of God in the Face of Jesus Christ) and the Face of Christ shineth in the Gospel as in a Glass; hence we come by looking into the Gospel to see His Glory, and therefore the Gospel it is a glorious Gospel. To open this a little to you: A Glass it is the most lively way of representing Things absent that can be invented, for it doth not represent Things in dead, lifeless, and wan Colours, as Pictures do, but really. It is a middle way of representing a Man, between seeing a Mans Picture, and seeing the Man himself. It doth represent him so lively and clearly, that though indeed it is not so comfortable as seeing the Man himself, yet it is much more comfortable then seeing the Picture of the Man drawn by all the Art in the World. Therefore it is said here, We behold as in a Glass the Glory of the Lord; now it is a rule in Opticks, and a true one, Quod videtur in speculo, non est Imago, that which is seen in a Glass is not a meer Picture, but it is the Thing it self; if you see a Man in a Glass, though you do not look directly upon the Man, yet you see the Man himself: Only with this Difference, that when you look upon the Man himself you see him by a direct Act, and you see him by an Image taken off from the Man himself, coming into your Eye, but when you look upon him in a Glass, you see him by a Reverberation as I may so express it, the Image of the Man is beaten back again. That I may express this Thing to you: The Eye of a Man sees nothing, but by the Image of the Thing some-way or other coming into it, and therefore now when you behold any Man, if your Eye be looked upon, there is the Image of that Man in your Eye. Now if a Glass doth take that Image (and a Glass it is an artificial Eye as I may call it, and the Eye is a natural Glass) I say, if a Glass doth take in that Image, it beats it back again; and that is seeing a Man in a Glass; whereas, if you see the Man Face to Face, his Image is convey'd immediately into your Eye; but go now and hold a Glass before that Man, and the same Image which you received directly into your Eye by seeing him immediately, is in the Glass, which if you behold, that Image is reverberated or beaten back again to you. As an Eccho is your own Voice beaten back again, so is a Mans Image which you behold

Chap. VI.

in a Glass. And therefore it is the most lively way of seeing and beholding a Thing that can be, why? Because you do not see a meer Picture, but you see the Man himself by a reverberated Species, that is, by the likeness of him beaten back again to your Eye. And thus my Brethren, doth the Knowledge of Christ in the Gospel, and in Heaven differ. In Heaven, there you see Him by sight, why? Because as the Apostle saith, We see Him there Face to Face, but in the Gospel, We see Him as in a Glass, but still the same Christ, really represented in the Glass of the Gospel, above all Pictures whatsoever, whom one Day we shall see Face to Face in Heaven. For the sight we have of Christ in the Gospel, is not meerly Notional or Literal, but it hath a reality in it; and therefore we are said to see the Glory of the Lord in this Glass, this Glory could never have been painted, for the Glory of Christ it must be Beams shed immediately from himself, and to see Jesus Christ with His own Beams, though shining in the Glass of the Gospel, is to see Christ himself. And therefore you see how the Apostles speaks, as they compare the Thing we see Christ in, to a Glass; so they compare the Faith we see Him by, to sight plainly, Heb. 2. 8. We see Jesus crowned with Glory and Honour. Alas, they had not Eyes of their Bodies to look up into Heaven, but their sight of Christ was so lively, as He was represented in the Glass of the Gospel, that the Apostle saith, We see Jesus crowned with Glory and Honour. So that my Brethren, suppose that you had a Glass that did perpetually retain the Image of an absent Friend, suppose you had not only a Picture of him but a Glass, that look what Image he had when he looked upon it, when he was present that Image sticks in it still; what would you give for such a Glass? Some Nations do use to keep their Dead in a Glass, which being artificially closed up, preserves them from stinck; but alas, it is but a dead Friend in a Case of Glass. But here is another Artifice that Jesus Christ useth, He hath framed by His Spirit a Doctrine of the Gospel, which is delivered to us in the Writings of the Apostles; which doth retain a lively Image of Jesus Christ, and if Men when they come to hear it Preached, or when they look into it, bring the Spirit with them, they see the Glory of the Lord there.

But now you will say unto me, How can this be? How comes this to pass? Is not the Word preached, or read, or thought upon, not meerly Words, and so the Picture of Things, and of Christ, as all other Stories of Men are? They are better indeed than Emblems are, the Ceremonial Law was nothing but Emblems of Christ, but the Gospel is a plain describing of Him in Words, but yet as he said, Poetry and Oratory is but the Picture of Things; how should this Word written and preached come to be a Glass to represent Christ thus lively?

I will give you the Reason of it, for the Apostle doth it in that 2 Cor. 3. 4. he saith, That it is the Ministration not of the Letter, but of the Spirit. The Gospel my Brethren, hath a Spirit lying hid in it, and which goes along with it, and if the Holy Ghost did not accompany it to the Heart of a Believer, it would but speak meer Words of Christ, even as the Law spake but meer Words, it would be but a meer Letter, for indeed the Gospel of it self, is but the Ministration of the Letter to worldly and carnal Men, whose Eyes God doth not open (so saith the 4th Verse of the 4th Chapter of that 2d Corinthians) It is hid, saith he, to them that are lost, in whom the God of this World hath blinded the Minds of them, which believe not. But it is called Spirit, and there is a Spirit that doth accompany it, and as he saith in Isa. 59. 21. The Word and the Spirit shall not depart out of thy Mouth: And the Holy Ghost thus accompanying all that is said of Christ and His Glory in the Gospel, He createth (let me say it, for it is true) such Apprehensions of Christ, and of all the Things spoken of Him, which never entred into the Heart of any carnal Man in the World; He createth a new Light by which you do really view Jesus Christ, although by Faith, and though as in a Glass, yet a real sight you have of Him beyond all the Story of Words and Hear-say whatsoever. It were indeed but the Ministration of the Letter.

Letter, if there were only but a verbal and hear-say Knowledge of Him, no, but whilest you read Words in the Scripture, or hear but Words in the Preaching of the Gospel, there is a Spirit goes along with it, whose peculiar Artifice it is to make it to be as a Glass, to see Jesus Christ in the Doctrine of it as you see a Man in a Glass, and that sight is a lively and real sight of His Image. Whilst we do Limb out Jesus Christ by Words, as well as we can (for what we express is still but literal, in Comparison of what a Man if he be a Believer apprehendeth while it is express, and we are to use all the Art we can to express Things to you, whilst I say we are doing this) the Holy Ghost that dwelleth in the Word, and dwelleth in the Heart of Believers, begetteth such a real Image of Christ by that which is spoken, that they behold the Glory of the Lord as in a Glass, and are changed into the same Image from Glory to Glory as by the Spirit of the Lord. It is compared to the seeing in a Glass, because there is a Subsistence given by the Holy Ghost to the Things spoken of, beyond all Pictures, or Words, or Notions. And hence do but observe what follows in the Text (which I shall afterwards more distinctly open) Which saith he, is Christ in you, which importeth thus much, that while that Jesus Christ is known by a Believer in the Doctrine of the Gospel, He becometh Christ in him; He is not only known by him as a Man knows the King, but He is known as when a Man knows the Sun, the Beams of it cometh into his Eye. So that the Apprehensional Knowledge that a Saint hath of Jesus Christ by Faith, the taking in of Christ by Faith, is so real a Thing that it is called Christ in a Man. And I take that to be the meaning of that in Gal. 3. (which I shall further open anon) where he saith, Till Christ be formed in you, and so Piscator takes it.

I shall endeavour to make this further plain to you thus. You may see an Imitation of this work of the Holy Ghost in this; suppose there were a Man standing Two or Three Houses off from your House; it is possible by the Reflection of Looking-glasses set one against another, to see the Image of this Man in a Glass in your own Room. Is the Art of Man able to do this? The Art of the Holy Ghost is able to do it much more. You see Satan, what doth he do that is a Spirit? Whereas Men can make but the Picture of a Man, what can Satan do? Absolutely he will make a Man appear before one as a Man, in lively Colours, not a bare Picture. This Artifice Satan hath: My Brethren, the Holy Ghost accompanying the Doctrine of the Gospel hath a further Artifice, though you see not Christ Face to Face (that is reserved for Heaven) yet you shall see Him in a spiritual Glass, you shall not only see Him as described by Words, but you shall have those lively real Apprehensions of Him created in your Mind (and you have so, if Christ be in you) as puts down all the literal and hear-say Knowledge in the World, it is like the seeing of a Man's Image in a Glass. And therefore, now observe it, in that 2 Cor. 4. (for I have still recourse to that) the Apostle hints how it cometh to pass, that you come to see thus by the Spirit. He gives the Reason there, why that the Gospel that is thus glorious is hid from the Eyes of the World; saith he of some, Ver. 4. Whom the God of this World hath blinded, lest the Light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the Image of God, should shine unto them. But how is that Light wrought? Read on, Ver. 6. God who commanded the Light to shine out of Darkness, hath shined in our Hearts, to give the Light of the Knowledge of the Glory of God in the Face of Jesus Christ. It is done you see plainly by a Creation; He createth a Light in the Soul of a Man, out of that Darkness that is in him. And without this, let a Man stand under the Gospel a Thousand Years together, he would only know Christ by hear-say: But if the Spirit cometh and createth a Light, this Light shall carry the Image of Christ to the Soul; such an Image of Him as never entred into the Heart of any carnal Man, though he knows never so much of the Gospel. I shall make it plain by opening the Apostles Comparison. Every Beam of Light always carries with it the Image of that Thing which it is the Beam of: If you do behold a little

Chap. VI.

Beam of the Sun coming thorough a Pin-hole in a dark Room, run to the Beam, lay your Eye to it, that Beam conveys to you the Image of the whole Sun: So when as there cometh a created Light into a Mans Soul by the Holy Ghost, joining with the Gospel which speaks of Christ, he who is a Believer, by his Eye of Faith taking in that Beam of Light, beholdeth Jesus Christ that Image of God, beholdeth the Glory of Christ in the Gospel thus described, in such a Manner as no Creature else is able to apprehend. It is I say, because the Light of the glorious Gospel is commanded to shine out of Darkness: It is a Light that is given, so saith the Apostle, He hath given us the Light of the Knowledge of the Glory of God, in the Face of Jesus Christ. And therefore now in Isa. 60. 1, 2, 3. Where he speaks of the Glory of the Gospel, which shall one Day break forth to the Jews, he expresseth it in these very Terms; Arise, saith he, for thy Light is come, and the Glory of the Lord is risen upon Thee. When as the Light of the Gospel cometh and shineth into a Mans Soul by the Creation of the Holy Ghost, the Glory of the Lord cometh into him too, he beholdeth the Glory of the Lord as in a Glas. And hence my Brethren it comes to pass, that a Man doth see the Lord Jesus Christ really in the Glas of the Gospel. The Understanding understandeth every Thing per phantasma as we say, the Fancy of a Man: Still when the Understanding works to understand any Thing, the Fancy of a Man begets the Image of the Thing in his Mind: When ever you hear Story told of a Thing done in such a Place, by such or such a Person, still your Fancy will be working the Image of that Thing or Person in your Mind, though it be a Story told, you never heard before; for God hath appointed the Fancy to give the Mind a Subsistence of what it understandeth. Now when God cometh to reveal spiritual Things, the Fancy could never take them in, it could never give any Subsistence to them, it hath no Images to make of them: What therefore doth God do? He createth Faith. And what is Faith? It is not Phantasia, but Hypostasia, it gives a Subsistence (so the Apostle saith, Heb. 11.) a Reality to the Things we understand, even as the Image of a Man in a Glas is a real Thing, it is a Subsistence, so God and Christ they have a Subsistence, a reality in a Mans Spirit. And hence my Brethren it comes to pass, that the Soul doth Form up out of the Gospel glorious Apprehensions of Christ, for as the Gospel holds forth Jesus Christ in His Glory really, so by the help of the Spirit, the same Image that is in the Gospel, is begot in my Heart of this Jesus Christ; that is, real and glorious Apprehensions I have of Him, which are wrought in me in and by the Gospel, and according to what the Gospel describeth of Him. And as I said afore, it is Part of the Apostles meaning in that Place of the Galatians, when he tells them, I am in Travel, till Christ be formed in you; he doth not speak in respect of Sanctification, that he laboured to have the Image of Christ formed in them in that Respect, for they were sanctified and had not fallen from that; but saith he, I endeavour till such Time as those Apprehensions you have had of Christ, which you have lost, be formed in your Hearts again, and that your Understanding take Him in aright.

So then to close up this first Thing of the Glory of the Gospel in respect of the Matter of it, here is the Sum of all that I have said. First, Here is Jesus Christ; He is the Image of God, the most glorious Image of God that ever was: Here is the Gospel appointed to be a Glas to represent this Glory of Christ, describing Him not by Words only and in a literal Way, or by a Picture, but in a Glas, lively and really, and so the Gospel becometh a glorious Image of Christ, even as if you hold a Glas to the Sun, there is a glorious Image of the Sun in the Glas, and hold your Eye to that glorious Image of the Sun in the Glas, and that Image is begotten in your Eye; so is it here, the Gospel being the Image of the Glory of Christ, having the Holy Ghost in it, the Heart of a Believer coming to it by Faith, takes in all that Glory, so far as it is revealed to him, and so having further and larger Apprehensions of Christ, He is formed in him, and as the Gospel hath Christs Image in it, so he hath Christs Image in his Heart, so the Apostle indeed tells tells us, in that 2 Cor. 3. ult. We are changed into that Image from Glory to Glory. To see a Thing my Brethren, that is glorious by its own Light, it always makes a glorious Sight, a real Sight: The least Beam of Christ it helps you to the sight of him, if it be a Beam of himself. You may hear of Him by hear-say as of other Things, but if (as the Apostles Expression is) there shine into your Hearts but a Beam from himself by His Spirit, it doth convey the reality of Christ to you, it makes Christ to be in you, as the Text saith, although you do not see Him Face to Face: If the Sun were down at this Instant, if there were a Glas that took in the Beams of it above the Earth, I might always see the Sun in that Glas; so though Jesus Christ be in Heaven now, yet the Gospel being that Glas in which the Image of Christ is, I may have a real and lively Representation of Him, so far as the Gospel reveals Him. And so much now for that first Thing in respect of the Matter.

I will but add a Comparison, to shew you how much the Glory of the Gospel exceedeth that of the Law in this Respect. Compare it either with the Moral Law, or with the Ceremonial Law. 1. Go take the Moral Law; why? the Moral Law it is a Glas too, and a Glas that revealeth God, or rather what the Image of the Mind of God is: Yet it is meerly a Glas of the Image of God in Adams Heart, it is but a Copy of the Image of God in Man, and so it is rather a Glas to shew Man to himself than God to him; you have it in James 1. (for it is good to compare the Similitudes, the Scripture useth one with another) If any Man be a bearer of the Word (saith he) and not a doer, he is like to a Man beholding his natural Face in a Glas, but he beholds himself, and goes his way, and straightway forgets what manner of Man he was. Whilst you look into the Law, you see what an Image of God was once in you, and by comparing your selves with it, you see your own Deformity now, and so I know not how far, by a remote Consequence, you see what a Holy God, he is that gave such a Law: But it is not a Glas that representeth God, but a Glas that representeth your selves, and representeth that Image that was in Man by Nature. And therefore the Apostle calleth it only a dead Letter written upon Stones, rather than a Glas, when he makes a Comparison of it with the glorious Gospel. 2. Go take the Ceremonial Law, that was join'd to it, and that reveals more of the Gospel, for indeed that was nothing else but Gospel in Shadows, and you shall find that, because it had Gospel in it, 'tis called glorious too; there is Glory attributed to it more than to the Moral Law simply or alone considered. Hence the Ark, which was Jesus Christ in a Shadow, is called the Glory of Israel; in 1 Sam. 4. 22. and so in Rom. 9. 4. To them belonged the Adoption, and the Glory, namely, the Ark. And so the Temple, is called a glorious high Throne, in Jer. 17. 12. And in 1 Kings 8. 11. The Glory of the Lord filled it at the Dedication. Yet what is all this now in Comparison of the Gospel, this Gospel that is now revealed, the Glas that we see Christ in? The Law is called glorious only, because as if the Sun should shine upon a Cloud in a Rain-bow, it took in the Sun that was a rising before we saw it. All this in Comparison of the Gospel is but a Shadow, it is but as the Glory of the Sun in a Cloud, but the Gospel is a Glas, that look as you would think, what a great deal of Difference there is between the seeing of a Man a Glas, and seeing his meer Shadow, such a Difference is there between that Knowledge of Christ which the Ceremonial Law afforded, and this which the Gospel now affordeth. You have it expressly in Heb. 10. 1. (Let us go up and down still, and examine the Scriptures which speak to this Comparison.) The Law saith he, having a Shadow of good Things to come; (he speaks expressly of the Ceremonial Law, for the Moral Law had it not) and not, saith he, the very Image of the Things. It was so far off from having the Image of it, saith he, that it had but the Shadow of it. But now what saith he of the Gospel? We behold as in a Glas, saith he, the Glory of the Lord. It is more than a Shadow, nay, more than an Image or Picture, you see the Thing in a reality. The Glory of the Lord, that fill'd that same first Temple, what was it? A
1 2
Cloud,

Chap. VI.

Cloud, a meer Mist, it was no more, yet it is called The Glory of the Lord. But what is it that appeareth in this Glas? Read Mal. 4. 2. The Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His Wings: He speaks of the coming of Christ, for he was the last that Prophesied, he had said at the 3d Chap. ver. 1. The Lord shall suddenly come to His Temple; and presently in Chap. 4. he saith, That He is the Sun of Righteousness, that shall arise with healing under His Wings. Nay further, that you may see how the Scripture still speaks in this Language; the Apostle in Col. 2. 17. speaking of the Ceremonial Law, saith, They are the Shadow, which saith he, vanisheth when the Body is come. You will say, the Shadow doth never use to arise till the Body comes? Yea, but if the Body be the Sun it self, if that come, all the other vanish, so they did when the Sun of Righteousness did arise. Hence therefore in Hag. 2. 7, 9. it is said, That the Glory of the Second Temple should be more than the first, why? Because Christ the Sun of Righteousness is the Glory of it, He is called the Glory of Israel in the Song of Simeon, Luke 2. 32.

And the Gospel is the Glas in which we see this Sun. And so now I have done with this first Thing, in Respect of the Matter of it that the Gospel is thus glorious, because that Jesus Christ, who is the Lord of Glory shineth in it thus really, and clearly, and fully, as in a Glas, and that compared with the Knowledge that the Old Testament afforded. I might also compare it with that Knowledge which may be had by the Creatures, which is a Glas too; for you may behold God in the Creatures, but the Truth is, they hold forth meerly the Handy-work of God, you do not see God there as in a Glas. But I will not stand upon that.

Secondly, The Gospel is glorious in Respect of the Matter of it, because the Riches of the Glory of God shineth in Christ revealed in this Gospel. This is intimated too in that 2 Cor. 4. 6. where he endeth the Discourse of the Glory of the Gospel; He hath shined in our Hearts, saith he, to give the Light of the Glory of God in the Face of Jesus Christ. But to give you a Scripture or Two more for it in a Word, 1 Tim. 1. 11. I quoted it before, to prove that the Gospel is a glorious Gospel, for so it is called there; but Mark what follows; it is called, The glorious Gospel of the blessed God; observe that Expression, there is a Connection between those Two, why he should give that Attribute to God, when he calleth it His Gospel, and a glorious Gospel: Why it is not only a glorious Gospel, because it holds forth all the Glory of God but because it doth communicate; and Gods End in revealing it is to communicate His Glory, and to make Men blessed: And the plain meaning of it is this, as if he had said, the Lord, that great God, being so Blessed in himself, having such Riches of Happiness and Glory in himself, He did so overflow, He did so over-bound in himself, that He meant to make others Happy with this Happiness in himself; for He is God All-sufficient, and being so full of Blessedness, and His Blessedness consisting in His own Glory, He inventeth the Gospel, contriveth in His own glorious Wisdom the great Design of His Son Christ, in whom He would reveal himself, who is the Subject of the Gospel, that by revealing of it, He might communicate that blessedness unto others. He did it not only to hold forth His own Glory, and to manifest how great a God He is, but He did it as a blessed God that delighteth to communicate that Glory unto others, and He doth it by the Gospel, that so as He was blessed in himself, He might by the Gospel communicate His Glory, and bless others. For my Brethren, look as Envy ariseth in a sinful Creature that is miserable, when he sees another Happy, and he doth it naturally; so doth the desire of communicating what Happiness one hath arise in the Heart of him that is truly Noble and perfectly Happy and Blessed. And so it did in God. Am I thus blessed in my self saith he? I will have others blessed by Me, to whom I will communicate this Happiness and Glory; and He therefore inventeth this Gospel, which is therefore called the glorious Gospel of the blessed God.

Of all Things, Gods Mercy is His Glory, and while you look upon the Face of Jesus Christ, you there behold nothing but Grace and Mercy shine in the Gospel. We behold (saith he) the Glory of God in the Face of Jesus Christ; that as in the Face of a Man you behold his Disposition toward you, so you see the Disposition of God in the Face of Christ, you see His Mercy, you see His Glory. Not a whit of this did shine in the Law, not a whit of Mercy or Free-grace, and yet that is the Glory of God. In Exod. 33. 18, 19, 20. Moses there desired to see the Glory of God. I beseech Thee, saith he, shew me Thy Glory. Saith God, Ver. 19. I will make all my goodness pass before thee. But how should all His goodness appear? Cloathed all in Mercy, for it follows, I will proclaim the Name of the Lord before thee, and I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will shew Mercy on whom I will shew Mercy. The Law speaks not such a word; No my Brethren, this is the very bottom of the Gospel, the bottom of Gods Heart, here is His Glory, I will be Gracious to whom I will be Gracious, and shew Mercy on whom I will shew Mercy; it is the glorious Gospel of the blessed God, that being Blessed in himself, thus resolveth to be gracious and good to poor Creatures, to such Sinners as we are. Moses had seen the Glory of God upon the Mount; he had seen the Glory of God in delivering the Law in a great deal of State; after all this, Lord, saith he, Let me see thy Glory: What is Gods Answer? I will be Gracious to whom I will be Gracious, &c. Here is my Glory. And this Glory shineth in the Gospel, and if you will see it, look upon the Face of Jesus Christ: You may see Jesus Christs Face in the Glafs of the Gospel, and in that Face you may see all this Grace and Mercy shine. And so I have done with the Second Thing, namely, the chief and principal Matter of the Gospel. It revealeth, 1. Jesus Christ in His Glory. And, 2. It reveals the Glory of God in the Face of Jesus Christ, and all this as in a Glafs. I come now to the Third.

3. The Things that the Gospel communicateth and conveyeth are all glorious. The Apostle compares it with the Law too in this Respect, in that 2 Cor. 3. 6, 7, &c. God hath made us able Ministers of the New Testament, not of the Letter, but of the Spirit, for the Letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth Life. If the Ministration of the Letter written and engraven in Stones, was glorious, How shall not the Ministration of the Spirit be rather glorious? For if the Ministration of Condemnation be Glory, much more doth the Ministration of Righteousness exceed in Glory: For, even that which was made glorious had no Glory in this respect, by reason of the Glory that excelleth, that is, the Gospel.

In the First Place he tells you, that the Gospel is the Ministration of the Spirit of God: It is not the Ministration of the Letter only, saith he, but the Spirit; and he meaneth the Holy Ghost plainly, for in the last Verse of that Chapter, he saith, That by beholding as in a Glafs the Glory of the Lord, we are changed into the same Image, even by the Spirit of the Lord, that is, by the Holy Ghost.

Now do but lay these Two Things together. First, That the Gospel only communicateth the Holy Ghost to you. And Secondly, That the Spirit is a Spirit of Glory upon whomsoever He resteth; and then the Gospel must needs be, in respect of its Communication, a glorious Gospel. To make out both these to you.

Look as when Jesus Christ was Baptized, that excellent Glory opened, and the Holy Ghost descended upon Him; so when the Gospel is Preached doth the Holy Ghost descend upon the Elect, and look upon whom the Holy Ghost resteth, he is the Son of God. As He said to John, John 1. 33. Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending and remaining on him, the same is he; so it is here. In the Primitive Times when they heard the Gospel preached, the Holy Ghost did visibly, and apparently, and instantly fall down upon them. And now He falls upon them, so as to turn their Hearts, and to inable them to see the Glory of the Lord Jesus Christ, which is more than falling down upon Men in extraordinary Gifts, simply considered, if there were nothing else: For to have the Holy Ghost to fall upon a Man so

Chap. VI.

so as to dwell in him for ever, to take Possession of his Heart, and to bring him to Glory, is more than to have extraordinary Gifts, which many had who never were saved. Now it is the Gospel only which helps you to the Holy Ghost, and not the Law. What saith the Apostle in Gal. 3. 2. This only I would learn of you, received ye the Spirit by the Work of the Law, or by the hearing of Faith? No, it was only by the hearing of Faith, only by the hearing of the Doctrine of the Gospel, that is, the Doctrine of Faith, for that is meant by Faith there, as in many other Places of Scripture. The Law indeed, as the Apostle saith, Rom. 7. is Holy and Spiritual, but it is not the Conveyer of the Spirit; though it be a spiritual Thing it is but a spiritual Letter, saith he, it is not the Ministration of the Spirit it self, but so is the Gospel.

Now as the Gospel only conveyeth the Holy Ghost to Men and the Knowledge of it; so the receiving of the Holy Ghost, is to receive all Glory: For the Holy Ghost will never rest, till He hath glorified you fully and perfectly. As Jesus Christs work was to redeem you, so the Holy Ghosts work is to work all Grace and Glory into you; therefore when you receive the Holy Ghost, you receive all Glory, in the Seed and Foundation of it. It is the Foundation of our Union with Christ; they that are joined to the Lord are one Spirit; it is by the Holy Ghost. To give you an expresse Scripture for it; 1 Pet. 1. 14. The Spirit of Glory shall rest upon you. And the giving of this Spirit of the Holy Ghost unto you, is more than all Grace and Glory that ever you shall have. If you would ask now what is the substantial Glory of a Man, that is the Foundation of all his Parts and Wit, and makes him capable of the Glory the World puts upon him, without which he would loose all in an Instant, what is it? It is his Soul that dwelleth in his Body; take that away and he is a Beast; nay, take that away and he is a dead Carcass, he is sown in dishonour instantly as soon as that is gone: Therefore in Gen. 49. The Soul of Man is called his Glory, Into his Secret, saith he, let not my Glory enter. Now look what the Soul is to a Man, that is, the Holy Ghost to a Holy Man. He is the Foundation of all Glory, of all Grace: When He hath given you the Spirit, He hath given you all the Grace and Glory in the Foundation, that ever you shall have, for He will never leave you till He hath wrought you up to Glory: And the Gift of Him is the Earnest of Glory, so He is called expressly in 2 Cor. 5. 5. Jesus Christ is the Glory of the Lord to you objectively, but the Holy Ghost is all Grace and Glory efficiently, yea in Heaven; and when you receive Him, you receive Glory, because you receive a Spirit that never rest till He hath made you glorious; and this Spirit you receive by the Gospel, and by nothing else, by no Knowledge else, either of the Law or what-ever else. Hence therefore the Gospel that communicateth this is called a glorious Gospel, in respect of what it ministreth, for saith he, if the Ministration of the Letter was glorious, which did give nothing else but the literal Knowledge of the Law in Mens Heads, then the Ministration of the Spirit is much more glorious. That's the first Thing the Apostle saith.

The Second Thing the Apostle saith here in this 2 Cor. 3. is, in respect of a Righteousness which the Gospel doth convey. You shall find it at the 9th Verse of that Chapter: If the Ministration of Condemnation be glorious, much more doth the Ministration of Righteousness exceed in Glory. By Righteousness here he means the Righteousness of Justification clearly, why? Because he doth oppose it to Condemnation. He doth not mean the Righteousness of Sanctification, no, he means the Righteousness, whereby we are justified, the Righteousness of the Lord Jesus Christ. Why saith he, what doth the Law do? Alas saith he, the Law, although it be a glorious Thing, for it reveals the Image and Mind of God, yet it doth but shew you your own Unrighteousness, and leaveth you where it found you. A Man sees his own Face as in a Glass, and soon forgets what Image he had, sees his Spots and Deformity, and sees the Sentence of Death written in his own Countenance, and in the Threatnings of the Law, he sees himself look like a Dead Man, guilty of Death, and that is all the Law holds forth: But saith he, the Gospel is the Ministration of Righteousness, and that Righteousness is glorious, and therefore the Gospel is such which ministreth it; for that is the Thing he aims at.

Chap. VI

Will you know what Righteousness it is? Why it is the Righteousness of Christ; and in the last Verse of that 3d of the Corinthians, that Righteousness of Christ, is called His Glory clearly; We behold, saith he, as in a Glass the Glory of the Lord. As he means the personal Glory of Christ, so he also means His Holiness and Righteousness for Justification. How prove you that? Because it is that into which we are Changed, into the same Image by beholding it: For whilst a Man Eyes Christ, to be justified by Him, look what Righteousness he laies hold upon by Faith, the Image of that Righteousness is wrought in his Heart. And therefore the Apostle here speaks in a more special Manner of the Righteousness of Christ, which the Gospel is the Ministration of, It is a Ministration of Righteousness, and of the Glory of the Lord, saith he.

Now then do but think, what a glorious Righteousness the Gospel reveals and offers to Men. It is the Righteousness of Christ, and the Righteousness of Christ must needs be glorious; why? He is the Lord of Glory. The Righteousness of the Angels, is not glorious in this Respect. They are glorious Creatures, but they are not Lords of Glory. When you speak of the Will of a King, what do you call it? His Royal Pleasure. If you speak of a Message he sendeth, what is it? A gracious Message, be it what it will be; why? Because you put these Titles upon his Person, therefore you put the same upon whatsoever he doth or thinketh. This is the Manner of Men. My Brethren, Jesus Christ is the Lord of Glory, did He work upon a Trade as a Carpenter? It was a glorious Action, it was a glorious Part of that Righteousness which He performed in Obedience to His Father; for He was the Lord of Glory; and therefore I say His Righteousness, is called, The Glory of the Lord.

But besides this, it is glorious also in another Respect; viz. Because He to perform this Righteousness, and in performing of it, laid all His Glory down, and therefore it is as much worth as the Glory He left. His Death is valued at the rate that the Life which He might have led in Heaven is worth. They Crucified the Lord of Life, saith he. And the Obedience He performed, hath the value and the stamp upon it of that Glory, He might have had. He was equal with the Father, in Glory and in all Things else; and He emptied himself of it all, laid it all aside, and took upon Him the Form of a Servant, and became obedient even to the Death; His Righteousness is therefore a glorious Righteousness, because it is to be valued by that Glory He laid aside, and might have had to perform it; so much as He fore-went to do it, so much it is to be valued at. God the Father was sensible of it; Father (saith he) glorifie me, as I have glorified thee on Earth. I'll give you one Scripture more for it, it is in John 1. 14. We saw His Glory, as the Glory of the only begotten Son of God: What was that Glory? In a special Manner His Grace and Holiness. How do you prove that? It follows in the Text, Full of Grace and Truth. Now my Brethren, it is the Gospel that doth communicate to Sinners, to Men condemned to Die Everlastingly of themselves in Hell, all this Righteousness of the Lord of Glory, makes it theirs. If they get but this Righteousness upon their backs, what glorious Creatures think you must they be? Yet it is the Gospel that communicateth it to them, and puts it on, thorough the Holy Ghost by Faith, as the Apostle in Gal. 5. 5. We thorough the Spirit wait for the Hope of Righteousness by Faith. In Rev. 12. 1. you have a Woman clothed with the Sun. Is not here a glorious cloathing? What is that Sun? It is the Sun of Righteousness, it is the Lord made our Righteousness, it is the Lord Jesus Christ and His Glory, it is His Righteousness which a Man is cloathed withal. Is not this a glorious Gospel then, that doth not only shew you the Glory of this Sun, but wrappeth you about with the Beams of it, cloatheth you with it? The Angels, are poor, beggarly Creatures, that's

Chap. VI.

that's the Truth of it, as we may so speak, to a poor Sinner cloathed with this Righteousness. The Text saith, Solomon in all his Glory was not arrayed like to the Lillies of the Field; so the Angels in Heaven, in all their Glory, are not cloathed like one Sinner here upon Earth, that is cloathed with the Righteousness of Jesus Christ. This Sun of Righteousness was never put upon their Backs, not to be Righteousness to them. He is a Means of conveying Grace and Good to them, but to be the Lord our Righteousness, so He is only to Sinners; and thus He is only revealed and communicated in the Gospel. What is it that makes you glorious in Gods Eyes? It is not your own inherent Grace, in any Comparison, it vanisheth, it is nothing; no, it is your being cloathed with Christ, with this Sun, this is it which makes the foulest Creature, an ugly Toad, (for so a Sinner is of himself) thus glorious in the Eyes of God. A Wife shineth with her Husbands Beams, and so doth every Believer with the Righteousness of Christ. As the Moon shineth with a borrowed Light that the Sun cloatheth her with; and her own intire Light, without that of the Suns (as you see it in an Eclipse) it looks like the bottom of Red Brasse, such is your own inherent Righteousness if Jesus Christ take His away from you. But take the Moon out of an Eclipse, when she is cloathed with the Light of the Sun, what a glorious Creature is she? So is every Believer, when he is cloathed with this Sun of Righteousness.

Thirdly, When a Soul is thus by means of the Gospel, cloathed with this glorious Righteousness which the Gospel revealeth, He is able with open Face to behold the Glory of God in the Face of Jesus Christ. When as Moses his Face did shine, which was a Type of the Law, they could not behold the Glory of it, there was a Terrour in it, it was the Glory of a Judge condemning which did shine in Moses, for he had the Law in his Hands; but when the Holy Ghost hath once communicated to you, and you come by Faith to put on the Lord Jesus Christ and appear before God, then you dare (as the Text saith) with open Face, behold and look God in the Face; why? Because you behold the glorious Mercy and Favour of God in the Face of Jesus Christ; which is called the Light of His Countenance, that is lit up upon you too; that as the Favour of a Man is seen in his looks, shines more there than in all other Parts of his Body, so is the Glory and the Mercy of God, it is seen in His Face, even in the Face of Christ. Therefore in Psalme 90. 15, 16. The Favour of God is called His Glory, Let thy Glory (saith he) be upon thy Servants. This the Gospel revealeth to you, you behold the Glory of God, that is, His Favour, in the Face of Jesus Christ.

Fourthly, The Gospel, doth not only thus convey the Holy Ghost to you, to dwell in you for ever; cloatheth you with this Righteousness; enableth you with open Face to behold God (and the more glorious God is, when you see Him nothing but Love and Favour, you will never be dazzled with that Sight; that is the Reason you are not terrified, because all His Attributes appear in Love, God is Love, saith the Apostle) I say the Gospel doth not only do all this, but it changeth you into the same Image from Glory to Glory, so saith the last Verse of that Third Chapter. You might look in the Law long enough, even look your Eyes out, and never be changed. In the Law you may see your Spots, but you go away as full of Corruption as you were before: You may there see and read your own Destiny, and read your own Duty, but it will not change you one whit. A Man beholdeth his natural Face in a Glass, saith James, and goes his way, and straight-way forgetteth what manner of Man he was; if it have an Impression in his Memory, that is all; but saith the Apostle, we in this Glass of the Gospel, behold the Glory of the Lord, and are thereby changed into the same Image. If that an ugly and deformed Woman or Man, could have a Glass that if they see but a beautiful Person in it, they should be changed into the same Image, what would they give for it? My Brethren, this doth the Gospel do.

But you will say, If it doth change me into the same Image, is that Image Glory too? Yes, so it followeth, We are changed into the same Image from Glory to Glory; that is, from one Degree of Grace to another. All the Grace the Gospel works in you, is glorious, for it is the Image of Christ in whom shineth the Glory of God. And therefore in Eph. 5. 20. The Apostle there speaking of Sanctification (for to me it is clear he speaks of it, both by the Words before and after) he saith, that He hath cleaned us and washed us with Water by the Word, that He might present us to himself a glorious Church, not having Spot or Wrinkle; for when He hath done (he speaks of what He will do at latter Day) when He hath fully sanctified us, He will present us to himself a glorious Church, not having Spot or Wrinkle, or any such Thing, but that we should be Holy and without Blemish. I quote it for this, that every Degree of Grace is Glory, and when that is fill'd up, there is a Glory in it which Jesus Christ reckoneth such, is pleased to look upon as such, for it is His Image. He shall greatly delight in thy Beauty, saith he, Psalms 45. What is that Beauty? She is all glorious within; so it follows there in that Psalms. And my Brethren, let me tell you this, so far you are changed into his Image, that you never look upon him in the Glass of the Gospel, but you go away with some further Degree of Holiness wrought in you, if you see Him really as in a Glass: You may come to a Sermon and hear Notions indeed, but if you get a real sight of Christ you will be changed; and I say so far as we see Him, so far we are changed; here we seeing of Him but as in a Glass, in His Holiness, and in His Righteousness, as He is described in the Gospel, how He walked while He was here below (for so the Gospel represents him) we are changed into the same Image, into the same Image of Holiness and Righteousness from one Degree to another. But now at latter Day, when He shall appear, we shall then be changed into His Image too, for we shall see Him as He is, and when we see Him as He is, we shall be as He is, in His Glory in Heaven.

Chap. VI.

I will add but one more, It doth not only change us into a glorious Image, which is called Glory, but it doth work in the Hearts also of Believers a Joy that is glorious: And this, although it be but the Hope of Glory, yet that Hope of Glory works a glorious Joy in the Hearts of the People of God. It is a known Place, that in 1 Pet. 1. 8, 9. Whom having not seen, ye Love; in whom, though now ye see Him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with Joy unspeakable and full of Glory. Whom having not seen, that is, Face to Face, but having seen Him in that Glass of the Gospel for to the sight of Things in a Glass is the sight of Christ in the Gospel compared, even the sight of Faith; yet because it is not seeing Him Face to Face, the Apostle saith, Whom having not seen, &c.

It is not every Act of Faith that works this Joy, but Faith may be so elevated, as it will work and bring in Joy unspeakable and full of Glory: That Phrase is it I quote it for; it is called unspeakable, because it exceeds the Sense and the Understanding, that is, the Understanding cannot naturally take in such Joy, or apprehend what it should be; as in Phil. 4. 7. The Peace of God is said to pass all Understanding. The Pleasures of the Senses are great, but the Pleasures of the Understanding are far greater, but saith he, this is a Peace, and this is a Joy that passeth all Understanding. We read in John 20. 20. That when they saw the Lord they rejoiced; so when a Believer, though but by Faith seeth the Lord Jesus Christ, though but in this Glass, and that but darkly, hath but Glimpse of Him, yet it begets a Joy which is unspeakable. And it is not only said to be unspeakable, but to be glorious. All the Joies in this World are mean Things, Things that Men shall be ashamed of, but this saith he, is a magnifick Joy. True Joy is a solid Thing, but you see the Apostle riseth higher, it is saith he, full of Glory, or as the Word implies, it is dipt, it is steeped in Glory. Now I say, it is not always thus, that whensoever any one seeth Christ by Faith, that this Joy is wrought; but it is by Faith though, that is, Faith elevated, yet so as it is but a sight of Christ in the Gospel, and that by Faith when ever it is wrought. It doth not I say always accompany an Act of Faith, that is plain and clear from the next Words, Receiving the End of your Faith, even the Salvation of your Souls. You see here that Joy unspeakable and glorious, which God sometimes Works in the Hearts of His People, is called the End, the Reward of their Faith (for so in Prov. 23. 28. the Word End, there signifies Reward) and the meaning is this, that when a Man hath a long while believed and glorified God by a way of sheer Faith of Recumbency, then God doth Reward him, gives him a Reward of his Faith, by giving him Joy unspeakable and glorious, which is called the Salvation of the Soul. And that, that is the meaning of it, is plain by this, because he speaks in the Present Tense, Receiving, he saith not, ye shall receive, but, receiving the Reward of your Faith the Salvation of your Souls. And if you mark it, it is called likewise the Salvation of your Souls, now the Reward which we shall receive at latter Day, will be the Salvation both of Soul and Body; and of that the Apostle speaks in Rom. 8. 23. which he saith, there we wait for; but there is a Salvation of the Soul, which a Man receiveth now, and therefore in the 24th verse of that Romans 8. he saith, We are saved by hope, by Hope of that Glory at present: And so in Eph. 2. 8. By Grace ye are saved. Now then our Eyes beholding this Salvation of the Lord, having the Evidence of it, the Soul is fill'd with it, it is saved, it receiveth the Reward of its Faith, the Salvation of the Soul. And thus my Brethren, it is full of Glory, the least Dram of it, is like Elixir, it expelleth all trouble: We rejoice (saith the Apostle in Rom. 8.) in the Hope of the Glory of God. It exceeds, and weigheth down all the good Things here. And this the Gospel communicateth to us.

Chap. VI.

I will mention no more Particulars, whereby the Glory of this Gospel is held forth to us, but proceed to the next Particle, passing by such uses as I might make of what I have said of this Glory.

That which is next to be consider'd is, that the Glory of this Mystery shines among the Gentiles. There is never a Word, but it doth hold forth something of the Excellency of this Gospel. You know, I have made a Comparison of this Gospel with the Law; and shewed you how the Law had a Glory in it, which yet was no Glory in Comparison of that which the Gospel hath, which I have opened in divers Particulars. Let us now compare the Law and the Gospel together, in another Respect also. When God did give the Law, He gave it but to one Nation, the Jews, whose Land was no bigger than the Dominion of Wales; Psalm 147. 19. He sheweth His Word unto Jacob, His Statutes and His Judgments unto Israel, but He hath not dealt so with any Nation, and as for his Judgments they have not known them. But now, what saith the Apostle? He did keep from Ages and from Generations, a further glorious Mystery to be made known among the Gentiles, that is, to all Nations. You have a Place in Numb. 24. 21. (that I may speak coherently to the Point of Glory, the Gospel is a glorious Gospel, and it is glorious in this Respect) when the People of Israel had sinned against the Lord, against the Law that was newly given, God doth at Moses his intreaty Pardon them for the present, I will pardon them according to thy Word, but as truly as I live (saith he) all the Earth shall be filled with the Glory of the Lord. I know that many Interpreters do interpret this to be meant thus, that God would take a Course, that His Justice in punishing of this People should be known to all the World, and so He would fill the whole Earth with His Glory. But I take it (and I shall give you Scripture for it) that He here makes known, and manifest His own Counsels of His one Day rejecting of the Jews, to the End He might provoke them to Jealousie, as the Apostle saith, He having given them a Law, and they sinning thus against it; well saith he, I will not contain my self within this Nation, but I have a Glory which I will fill all the Earth withal; and that indeed is the Knowledge of the Glory of the Lord Jesus Christ. I shall give give you a Scripture for this Interpretation, it is in Isa. 6. 3. For there the Phrase of filling the Earth with His Glory, is again used, and no where else that I know of in the whole Scripture, answering to that Phrase that God had used in that Place of Numbers afore-mentioned. Now when as it is said here in Isaiab, The whole Earth is full of his Glory, what do you think is spoken of? Why, it is Jesus Christ revealed sitting upon His Throne with His Train filling the Temple, hardning the Hearts of the Jews, and giving Commission to His Apostles to go and preach to all Nations. How is that manifest? Look in John 12. 40. where Christ himself quoteth this very Chapter in Isaiab, ver. 10, and 11. Go and tell this People, Hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not; make the Heart of this People fat, and make their Ears heavy, and shut their Eyes; lest they see with their Eyes, and hear with their Ears, and understand with their Heart, and convert, and be healed: And upon that follows their casting off, Then said I, Lord, how long? And He answered, until the Cities be wasted without inhabitant, and the Houses without Man, and the Land be utterly desolate. But is this spoken of Christ? Yes, read John 12. 40. He hath blinded their Eyes, and hardned their Hearts, that they should not see with their Eyes, nor understand with their Heart, and be converted, and I should heal them; these Things (saith he) said Isaias, when he saw His Glory, and spake of Him. Here is plainly in this Prophecie of Isaiab, the Oath fulfilled, that God sware in that Place of Numbers. And God swears it in that Sense (as I said even now) that Paul speaks in Rom. 11. when he laies open the Riches of the Gospel, he says he did it, that he might provoke to Emulation them which were of his own Nation; so doth God here: Have they indeed sinned thus against my Law, which also Typically holds forth Christ; well, though I pardon them for the present, yet I have a Glory beyond all this, which I will fill the Earth with, when I send my Son into the World, and which I have reserved for the Gentiles, and for all Nations. And therefore this Gospel must needs be infinitely more glorious than the Law, God now breaking up His Treasures, and fulfilling His Oath, to provoke the Jews if possible unto Jealousie. He reserved some better Things for us, as the Phrase is Heb. 11. ult.

And as He reserved a greater Glory for us than that of the Law, so, to speak to the other Property (for the Gospel is called both rich and glorious) he reserved a greater Treasury of Riches, when as He would break open His Mind to the Gentiles. You have it under these very Terms expressed in Ephes. 3. 8, 9. To me is this Grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ, and to make all Men see, what is the Fellowship of the Mystery, &c. When all Men, all sorts of Men were to see it, and God meant to communicate it to the World, then He brings forth His Riches, the unsearchable Riches of Christ, Which had been hid (as it is here) from all Ages and Generations.

So that now this Particle in this Text [among the Gentiles] it is not Idle, it hath an Emphasis in it, it hath this Emphasis in it, that God did reserve the fulness of His Glory, and the Riches of Christ, till such Time as all the World was to come in, He would have all the World to be Spectators, and He would have all Men know, what is the Riches of the Glory of this Mystery among the Gentiles, and therefore I say, He reserved the Revelation of it till then. And so much now for that Particle.

I shall only here as the Coronis of all spread afore you: This great Truth which concerns us: That though God's primary Aim in giving the Gospel, is to make it known to his Saints: Yet because the Elect in Nations, in the Succession of Ages are infinitely Numerous; and none knows where this Inheritance will fall, or upon whose Posterity. Therefore the Gift of the Gospel unto the several Nations of the Gentiles, was, and is indefinitely bequeathed to the Gentiles by God, as a National Endowment, as a National Inheritance to every Nation it takes Place in: It is not to be judged given to the

Chap. VII.

Saints of a present Age that enjoy it; but indefinitely to the whole Lump of a Nation, even as you call, The proper Native Commodity of a Nation, A Staple Commodity to the Nation: Although every Man in that Nation Trades not in it, yet it is National as proper to that Nation, as benefitting the Nation, and no Man is excluded from traffick in it. Because in process of Time none knows upon whom in that Nation it may fall; therefore every Nation is to look upon it, as a National Interest and Concernment.

C H A P. VII.

How it is the Glory of the Gospel, that Christ is not only reveal'd in it, but Christ so known by the Believer is in Him.

COLOS. I. xxvii.

Which is Christ in you the Hope of Glory.

THE Apostle in the former Words, having laid open the Glory and Excellency of the Gospel; the Riches of the Glory (saith he) of this Mystery among the Gentiles, he closeth up all that he had said of it with this short Application, Which is Christ in you the Hope of Glory. He doth not only hold forth Jesus Christ, as the Subject of the Gospel (and yet the highest Glory the Gospel hath, is that Christ is the Subject of it.) He doth not Content himself to say the Riches of which Mystery is Christ, as he saith afterwards, Chap. 2. 3. where he calls the Gospel, The Mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ, in whom are hid all the Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledge; but he addeth, Which is Christ in you. How excellent the Gospel is, because Christ is the subject of it, I have partly shewn you all along; I shall therefore now shew you, why this cometh in here, [Which is Christ in you] and what is the Apostles meaning thereby.

In the first Place, I take it, the Apostle brings this in here by way of Application, for their Comfort. When he had shewn them all these Glories which the Gospel holds forth, by holding forth of Christ, he tells them, this Christ is in you, if you be Saints, He is your Christ, by whom you have Possession of all these Riches; and that in so intimate a manner that they are not only without you, but you have them all within you by having Christ, Which is Christ in you, saith he, and with this Addition, the Hope of Glory, of a greater Glory than yet you have received.

And when he saith, Which is Christ in you, the least of his meaning, if at all, is that the Image of Christ is in them, as some would have it. Though we are changed into the same Image, from Glory to Glory; yet I know no Place, where the Image of Christ is called Christ, or Christ in us. There are many Places where the Image of God is said to be in Christ, but no where the Image of Christ is called Christ. He that is in Christ is a new Creature;

Creature; and in Jesus Christ there is neither Bond nor Free, but the new Creature; and we are created in Christ Jesus unto good Works; so the Apostle still expresseth himself. There is one Place indeed, which hath a seeming shew of it, that Christ in us, should be put for the Image of Christ in us, and that is that in Gal. 4. 19. That Christ may be again formed in you; but that is not the meaning of that Place, as I shall shew anon. However it cannot be the meaning here, at least-wise not the only meaning, for it is too narrow, too poor a Thing, that after he had spoken such great and glorious Things of the Gospel of Christ, he should go and contract all the Riches and Glory of it to the new Creature which is in us, to the Image of Christ in us; no, it is Christ personally, Christ himself certainly that is here meant.

Chap. VII.

I shall as briefly as I can, give you all the Interpretations of this Clause, that have fallen into my Thoughts. My Scope is not to go and handle how many Ways Christ is in you, but in relation to the Context, to the Coherence, to the Gospel which he had commended before.

First, Therefore, Christ in you, implies, that that Knowledge which they had of the Lord Jesus Christ, take the Object of that Knowledge, it is Christ. I appeal, saith he, to your own Consciences, you Colossians that have taken in the Gospel as you have done, taken in Christ, in the Knowledge of Him, whether yea or no, there is not abundance both of Riches and Glory hath been manifested to you concerning Jesus Christ; and this Knowledge which you have of Christ here in this Life begotten by the Gospel, I appeal to you, whether it be not the greatest Evidence of a future Glory; it is impossible it should rest here, but as this Christ in whom you know so much Riches of Glory is now in you the Hope of Glory: So when you come to be with Him for ever, do but think what a Glory you will be fill'd withal then. I take this I say to be the first Part of the meaning, that it is Christ in you, Objective. And this is to me clearly one Part of his Scope, for he speaks in respect of the Gospel revealing Christ to them, whereby they behold the Glory of Christ, which gives them hope of that Glory afterwards with Him.

That which must make good this Interpretation is this, that the Knowledge which the Saints have of Jesus Christ is called Christ, and Christ in you. I told you before, that the Gospel is compared to a Glass, and it is called the Gospel of Christ, because it representeth Him; and the Doctrine of the Gospel is ordinarily and familiarly called Christ in the Scripture. Now that Knowledge, that Representation which is taken from Christ himself in the Gospel, by the Eye and Faith of a Believer, is called Christ in him. And as the Gospel it self being the Glass of Christ, is called Christ, so the Sight of Christ, that Image of Christ (I call it now Image, as being an objective Image, as I may so express it, not subjective, the Grace that is in you, but) that Knowledge that is in you of Him, taken from himself in the Gospel, which a Believer hath, is called Christ in him. In Gal. 1. 16. Paul speaking there of the Revelation of the Gospel to Him, at the 12th Verse, saith, I neither received it of Man, neither was I taught it, but by the Revelation of Jesus Christ; Christ himself revealed it; now at the 16th verse, he saith, It pleased God to reveal His Son in me, that I might preach Him among the Heathen. The Knowledge that he had of Jesus Christ by Revelation in the 12th Verse, is called in the 16th Verse the revealing of Christ in him, mark the Expression; and it is the revealing of Christ in him, that he might preach him to others. God gave him an intimate Knowledge of Christ in his own Heart, the Light of the Knowledge of God in the Face of Christ did shine in his Heart, that so he might preach it unto others; and therefore when he saith, He revealed His Son in me; it is all one as if he had said, He revealed the Gospel, for it was that he might preach the Gospel. And he speaks not only of an experimental Knowledge, I mean, that is not all the Purport of it, that he had Experience of it, and what it wrought, for that he might have had without Revelation. Neither doth he mean only that the Image of Christ was in him, and that God revealed

His

Chap. VII. His Son in him by enabling him to walk as Christ walked, for it was not the Image of Christ only which he preached, but it was Christ himself. Therefore now it is the Gospel, and the Knowledge of Christ in the Gospel, that is called the revealing of His Son in him; and it is said to be revealed in him, because he had it immediately, that is the Reason, why it is said to here of Paul, in Opposition to other Apostles.

There is another Place that I shall give you for this, and that is Gal. 4. 19. My little Children, of whom I travel in Birth again, until Christ be formed in you. They had not lost the Image of Christ in respect of Sanctification in their Hearts, for certainly they were Men that were Holy, but the Truth was this, they had been diverted from the Knowledge of Christ which at first they had received, they were diverted to another Gospel as he saith, Chap. 1. and so to another Christ, Moses had been formed in them. He doth not say, until you are formed in Christ, but until Christ be formed in you. He cannot mean the Person of Christ dwelling in them, Why? Because that is not formed, that was formed in the Womb of the Virgin, and now is glorious in Heaven, therefore it must be the right Notion and Apprehension of Christ in the Gospel that he meaneth; it is as if he had said, till you be fully Evangelized; and as both Piscator and Parcus interprets it, till you be fully restor'd to your former true Knowledge of Christ; now you are full of Moses, he is formed in you; that appears by the 21st Verse, for there were some amongst them that were so full of the Law, that there was nothing but Law almost in them; now in Opposition to this, saith he, I long till such Time as Christ be formed in you, till there be a compleat Knowledge of Christ, according to the Nature and Genius of the Gospel begotten in you. And this is called Christ.

Now, why should the Knowledge of Christ in the Gospel be called Christ in us, speaking of spiritual Knowledge?

1. The Reason is clearly this, there is no Knowledge else in the World can be called the Thing that is known:

2. I shall shew you, that Christ as thus revealed in the Soul, may truly be call'd Christ. There is no Knowledge else in the World, can be term'd the Thing that is known. When a Man hath the Species, or Image of an Horse, or Man in his Mind, or the Thought thereof, you cannot call that Image, a Man or an Horse, because all natural Knowledge is but a meer Phantasm, but the Knowledge of Jesus Christ in the Heart of a Christian is Christ in him; why? Because that Faith which we know Christ by doth give a Being, a Reality, and a Subsistence to the Thing that is known. I mentioned it upon another Occasion, in opening that Place, Beholding as in a Glass the Glory of the Lord; and I shall enlarge upon it now, that you may see still how one Thing follows another. In Heb. 11. 1. Faith is there called Hypostasis, that which doth give a Subsistence to the Things hoped for; so as indeed in the beholding of Christ, and by beholding of Christ, He is in me, there is a Reality, a Subsistence to me of Him. To open and explain this to you a little. The Difference of the Spiritual Knowledge of Christ, and of all natural Knowledge whatsoever; I shall give it you as briefly, and as plainly as I can. You must know this, and you do know it, for you feel it within your selves, that God hath annexed to the Understanding of a Man a Fancy, which we call Phantasia, I speak it in Opposition to that other Phrase in the Hebrews, where Faith is called Hypostasis; Now the other Word, Phantasia, cometh from Phanos, and Stasia, it sheweth its Office; for it makes Things absent from the Mind to appear, and yet but to appear, it doth not give a Subsistence to them, it is but Phanos Stasia. Think where you will of any Thing; if you hear a Story told you of a Thing done at Rome in a Church, of such a Person, or the like, your Mind will be thinking of a Church, or framing the Image of some Person of whom the Story is told, though you were never there. This is natural to the Mind of Man to do it. This is the Work of the Fancy, which is annexed and joined to the Understanding Understanding of Man in his natural Knowledge. And the Reason, why God did annex to the Understanding of Man that Faculty of the Fancy, which makes Things which the Understanding would understand, appear to it, (for so the Word implies) is because the Mind of Man would still behold something; and because the Thing is not present it self, hence therefore God hath made the Fancy to give an Appearance, still to feed the Mind with a view of the Thing it would understand, and so the Mind is supported in the Understanding of what it doth understand by the Assistance of the Fancy. Now the Lord having prepared for His People and Children spiritual Objects of another World, himself and Christ: Alas, the Fancy is not able to take in the Image of himself and of Christ; it will not serve the Understanding to any other Knowledge of Him than meerly Notional or Literal, hence therefore He hath put in that Grace of Faith, which is not Phantasia to the Understanding, but it is Hypostesis, so the Word is Heb. 11. 1. it doth not give an Appearance, but a real Subsistence to the Things the Mind would know, and as the Fancy helpeth natural Knowledge in the Understanding of natural Things; so doth Faith spiritual Knowledge, and indeed is all one with it. And hence therefore the beholding of Christ, and of the Glory of God by a Believer, is not by way of Fancy meerly, but it is by way of Subsistence, the Heart findeth a reality in what it believeth, and it hath so great an Impression, as it changeth the Heart into the same Image, which all the Fancies of natural Knowledge in the World will never do. And my Brethren, this is plainly Jesus Christ in you, in one Sense; and therefore now we find in Eph. 3. 12. That Christ is said, To dwell in our Hearts by Faith, for Faith hath by the help of the Holy Ghost that sight of Him, that makes Him real to a Mans Soul. As now how doth the Sun dwell in the Eye, or in a House, the Sun is in the Heavens, so is Jesus Christ, as Acts 3. hath it, the Heavens must receive him, until the Times of Restitution of all Things, and yet He is in the Heart of a Christian, Christ in you, saith the Apostle; How comes this to pass? Why, look as though the Sun is in Heaven, if it shine into the Eye it dwells there, for there is the real Image of the Sun begotten in the Eye, and as it is said to be in the House, when it comes in with its Beams and its Light, which if a Man put his Eye to he may see the Sun; so is it here, there is the Light of the Glory of God, in the Face of Jesus Christ, that shines into the Heart; and I say, this is the first Thing that is here intended, when he saith, Which is Christ in you; he doth appeal to those that had known Christ in the Gospel, if there were not an insearchable Riches of Glory, a vast Glory in Him, even so far as they had known Him, which did give them a Hope of Infinite Glory yet to come, though this Knowledge was yet imperfect, and therefore was ordained to be built up in the World to come; for (as I hope to make plain and clear to you) there is nothing is a greater Evidence of a Hope of Glory to come in Heaven, than that Knowledge we have now of so great a Glory in Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ in us now is an imperfect Thing, and yet hath so much Riches and Glory in the sight of him, as gives us a certain Hope that there is a Perfection of it to be one Day: So you have it in 1 Cor. 13. 12. Now we see thorow a Glass darkly, but then Face to Face; now we know but in part, it is an Imperfection which must be built up, but saith he, then shall we know, even as we are known. So now that is the first meaning of this Phrase, why it is that he having spoken of the Riches of the Glory of the Gospel in it self afore, addeth, Which is Christ in you; that is, that Knowledge which the Gospel hath begotten of Jesus Christ in you, I appeal to you how rich and glorious it is, though you do not see all of it, and it doth give you a Hope of a Future Glory to come.

Now to cast in other Additional Imports, which will come in and stand with this, and help to fill up the meaning of it.

Secondly, It is Christ in you, that is (he speaks still by way of Application to them for their Comfort) this is for your Comfort, that whatsoever ever Glory, and whatsoever Riches of Jesus Christ the Gospel laies open, it is all yours, it is all in you, and for you. Which Riches of Glory, and which Mystery, and all, is Christ in you, and in you the Hope of a further Glory. When Marcion the Heretick, had wrote a Gospel, as the rest of the Evangelists had done; said an Orthodox Christian of him, it is my Christ that is in your Gospel; implying, that he had no Part in him, though he had written so of Him. But all that this Gospel saith of Christ, is your Christ, it is Christ in you, as the Apostle saith, 1 Cor. 3. ult. All is yours. for ye are Christs, and Christ is Gods. The Gospel (saith he) which I commend to you, it doth not only tell you of Riches and Glory, it doth not only talk of it as other Stories do, but it makes all this yours; The Riches of the Glory of this Mystery among the Gentiles, which Riches is Christ in you, Christ made yours. It is a deep Phrase this, and it imports the Possession that a Christian hath of Christ, and of all Riches of Glory in Him.

I shall open as parallel to my Text, another Scripture Col. 3. 11. Where there is neither Greek nor Jew, Circumcision nor Uncircumcision; Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free, but Christ is all and all. His Scope is this, as Rock hath well observed upon the Place, that all outward external Priviledges, belonging to the new Creature, were nothing at all valued by him; it is not the Priviledge of any Nation, that is so much to be consider'd, therefore saith he, It is neither Greek nor Jew: It is not the Priviledge of any Profession of Religion, that a Man is of this Opinion, or of that Opinion, that he is circumcised or uncircumcised: It is not the Priviledge of Tongues, or Learning, or Wit, neither Greek, nor Barbarian; the Greeks were a wise and learned People, the Barbarians rude, but Men of Spirit, as the Turkish Nation now. It is not Riches or Honour, or any external Condition that is valued by the new Creature, there is neither bond nor free, saith he. But then what hath the new Creature that undervalueth all these Priviledges in lieu of them? He hath Christ, who is All in himself, and is in all. He doth not only say, that Jesus Christ alone is All, the meaning whereof is this, go take the Old Man, though it hath a Thousand Things to make it Happy, yet it hath not one Thing alone that is instead of all to make it Happy, but it hath several Thousand Things that must always go to make a Creature Happy, but saith he, one Jesus Christ doth it, Jesus Christ is All. But that I note it for is this, to Remark the Phrase in All, He is not only said to be All unto All, but He is All in them All, He is all, and in all, saith the Apostle: He puts an Emphasis upon it by way of Difference, from all outward Things whatsoever; He is not only in stead of all to Christians, but He is All in all Christians, and in every Christian, He is All in them, that is, they may find Jesus Christ in themselves to be that to them which all Things else are. As for Example, go take a King, or any great Person in the World, though he hath all Things that this World can afford him, yet all these Things are but all to him, they are not all in him, for all that goes to make them comfortable are out of himself, Honour is out of himself, Riches out of himself, dainty Fare and Beauty all out of himself, the Wisdom he hath indeed that is in himself. But now take a Christian, as Jesus Christ is all Things to him, so Jesus Christ is in him. All other Things, and a Man may be severed, because they are but all to a Man, but if all Things were all in a Man, a Man could never be but compleatly Happy: But so it is here, Which is Christ in you, He is not only all to you, but all in you; go, whither you will go, you carry Him about with you, that is all to you. And so now, that is a second Thing which this Phrase importeth, why the Apostle addeth it here; saith he, if you have Christ in you, you carry about with you where-ever you go Him that is all to you, come what will to you, you can never be parted from this Christ, for He is in you; He is Christ in you, all these Riches, and the Hope of Glory likewise.

Again, this Phrase [Which is Christ in you] is thus added upon the Commendation of the Gospel; because, when a Man comes fully to know the Gospel, the more still he knows of the Gospel and of Jesus Christ savingly, the more he comes to be nothing else in himself, and to himself, but Christ. My meaning is this, Take a Man that hath his Spirit Evangelized (as the Scripture Phrase is) that is, that is Gospelized, the more his Spirit takes the Gospel in, the more all he is, and all he hath, and all he doth, becomes to him nothing but Christ. Let the Gospel have its full and perfect Work, and Jesus Christ full Admission into your Hearts by Faith, if He be fully formed in you, you shall see neither Law, nor nothing else in Comparison of Christ, He will swallow up all; that though other Things be in you, the Law is written in your Hearts, and the Image of Christ is in you, yea, but Christ is all; Christ in you, saith the Apostle; all Things are turned into Christ, and he gives the Glory of all to Christ, all is Christ in you. I live, saith the Apostle, and yet not I, but Christ liveth in me, Gal. 2. 20. He doth not only say, he lived a Life to Christ, as you have it in 2 Cor. 5. 19. That we should not live to our selves, but to Him that died for us, but he saith, that Christ liveth in him; what Life is it, that is in the Branch, or in the Buds? It is the Life of the Root; so saith he, It is not I that live, I am but a Branch, It is Christ that liveth in me. Jesus Christ converteth the Life of Nature, the Civil Life, assimulateth all the Actions of a Christian to himself; He liveth in him. When a Man cometh to be perfectly Evangelized, it is Christ in him. Even as the Members of the Body, do live a reasonable Life, but the reasonable Life they live, is meerly from the Head; it is the Life of the Head in the Members: The Tongue talketh Reason, where hath the Tongue that Reason? It is the Life of the Head in the Tongue: That these dull Members of ours live rationally, it is, because they live the Life of the reasonable Soul. So now thus doth Jesus Christ to me, He liveth in me, it is not I that live that spiritual Life, that I have in all that I do in Matters of Religion, it is Christ that liveth in me. He doth not only say, that he liveth with Christ, as if Christ was the Author of his Life (and so it is, for I having had a Life from Him, I live with Him) No, but He is so the Author of my Life, as He is the root of my Life, and He liveth in me, rather than I live, as having had Life from Him. And his Scope was to shew, that he was Dead to the Law; saith he, I can never be a Jew again, while I live, why? Because I have received Christ into me, and there is a Life of Christ in me, so that I can never return to my Works, return to the Law again: That is his Scope in that Coherence: And therefore, you know, he defineth one, that is of the true Circumcision, that he rejoiceth in the Lord Jesus Christ, Phil. 3. 3. And God forbid, that I should rejoice in any Thing, saving in the Cross of Christ; so Gal. 6. 14. Why? If I live, it is Christ that liveth in me; and if I Die, to me to Die is Jesus Christ, is Gain: If I act any Thing, it is not I, but the Grace of Jesus Christ in me: If I have any Strength it is the Strength of Christ; Be strong in the Grace that is in Christ Jesus, 2 Tim. 2. 1. If I be sanctified, it is not Grace, so much as Christ, is made Sanctification. The Truth is, that as a Man still grows up more and more Gospelized in his Spirit, so Jesus Christ is in him, and works out all Things else, till there be nothing but Christ in him; melteth the Soul into Christ, as Sugar is melted into Wine: All a Mans Graces, whatsoever he doth, he turns it all into Christ, as it is all from Christ: As a Beam is nothing, if it be cut off from the Sun, so there is nothing in what the Soul is, or desireth to be, but so far forth as it is knit to Christ, and cometh from him, and is received from him. My Brethren, I use to say, that Grace is nothing but a company of Nothings, and a company of Alls, as I may so express it to you. It makes the Heart to be nothing in its own Righteousness, but Jesus Christ to be all: It makes the Heart to be nothing in its own Abilities to do any Thing, but Jesus Christ to be all: It makes the Heart to be nothing in its own Ends, but to set up Jesus Christ in all: It makes the Heart to be nothing, in respect of being accepted for any Thing in it self, but to be graciously accepted in the beloved, to be all in that Respect: It brings the Heart to be nothing in Comfort, to seek for nothing of Comfort, but what is to be had in Christ, in the Face of Christ: It makes the Heart to be nothing in Valuation of it self, but Jesus Christ to be all. These Things indeed we all fall short of, but this will be your pitch, that there shall be nothing but Christ in you, not you in Christ, but Christ in you, if your Spirits be truly and fully turned to the Gospel, if they be Evangelized. That you may know, saith he, the Riches of the Glory of this Mystery, which is Christ in you.

Chap. VII.

Lastly, It may also come in here by way of special Instance, To shew, that, that Union, which Jesus Christ hath with the Saints, and in the Saints, whereby He and they are all one, and by which all the Glory He hath, and Riches in Him, are made theirs; that, that Union, I say, of Jesus Christ and His Saints, Christ in them, is one great and eminent Mystery of the Gospel, and the greatest Hope of Glory. There are saith he, a World of glorious Riches and Mysteries in the Gospel, but I will give you one Instance, which of all other is the greatest, or at least the comfortablest to you, and that is this, that Christ and you are one, that Jesus Christ is in you, and so the Hope of Glory. So that he speaks, I say of the Union, that is between Jesus Christ and Believers, as of all other the greatest and the richest Mystery, at least the most comfortable unto us, which the Gospel holds forth, and is the Foundation of all Glory, and of all Grace, it is the Hope of Glory.

He instanceth, I say, in that, both because it so much concerned them, and their Comfort by way of Application; and also, because in it self it is one of the greatest Mysteries, and a Thing of the greatest Moment for Believers to know.

First. It is one of the greatest Mysteries of the Gospel.

I observe this, that all Divines, when they come to speak of the Union that we have with Jesus Christ, and Jesus Christ with us, they do generally make this Apology, if they handle it any Thing largely, that of all others it is one of the greatest Mysteries. Still I say, they make that Apology, that great is the Mystery of our Union with Christ, and Christ with us. Therefore the Apostle might well in the close of all say, by way of one Instance of the greatness of this Mystery, Which is Christ in you.

There are Two Things in the New Testament, which the Holy Ghost doth put an Emphasis upon, and calleth them great Mysteries, and they are Two Unions. The First is, The Union of the Humane Nature with the Godhead, in the Person of Christ, 1 Tim. 3. 16. Without Controversie, great is the Mystery of Godliness; what is that Mystery? God manifest in the Flesh, that is, the Godhead was manifested in the Humane Nature of Christ uniting it to it self, and in that Humane Nature shining gloriously as God. This Thing, that God was made Flesh, that the Son of God was made Man, he saith, is a great Mystery. The Second great Mystery, is, that this Son of God made Man, should be united to a Body of Men, His Church; His Saints: That Christ should be in them, as God is in Christ; and for that you have, Eph. 5. 32. This is a great Mystery; saith he, having discoursed before of the Union of Christ and His Church, under the Representation of the first Marriage of Adam and his Wife in Paradise, and so he interpreteth himself, and saith he, I speak of Christ, and His Church; for the [but] there is not Adversative, but Explicative, that is, when I speak of a great Mystery, I mean the Union of Christ, and His Church. It was a Mystery, that, that Union should be infolded in Adams Marriage, and it is a great Mystery in respect of the Thing it self. To give you a Scripture or Two for this.

The Mystery of the Union of Christ with his Church is so great, that Christ himself parallels it, and setteth it out by the Union which the Godhead had with him, and His Union with the Father. So you have it in John 6. 57. He that eateth my Flesh, and drinketh my Blood, he dwelleth in me, and I in him. Here is now the Union between us and Christ, here is Christ in us. How doth he parallel this Union? Read Verse 57. As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father, so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me. The Scope is plainly this, All Life, saith He, is by Union with the Fountain of Life, I being united to my Father, who is the living Father, do live by my Father. He speaks of himself as He is sent, as He is Man, as He took up a Humane Nature. The living Father, saith He, hath sent me, and so knit and united me to himself, and to the Godhead, and as thus sent, I live by him, and you saith he, do live by me; and (as he saith elsewhere) Because I live, you shall live also; why? Because as it is John 14. 20. I am in the Father, and you in me, and I in you. That which I quote it for at this Time is this, that He parallels our Union, and the Life we have by Virtue of our Union with Him, with that Union of His Humane Nature, with the Godhead, and with the Father.

And because I am fallen upon this Place of John 6. I shall a little open it to you. You shall find, that this is the great Mystery that stumbled the World, yea, that stumbled His very Disciples, many of them, so that they went and left Him. In that Chapter you have a Sermon of his, in which He told them, that they must by eating His Flesh, and drinking His Blood come to be united to Him, and whosoever did so was united to Him: Now saith, Verse 60. Many of His Disciples, when they had heard this, said, This is a hard saying, who can bear it? It is a hard saying, for how can one believe it? Nay, say they, It is an intollerable, an insufferable saying, whose Ears can bear it? And they were Disciples too, Many of His Disciples said. And the saying, is not only the eating His Flesh, but it is all His whole Sermon about it, that He would dwell in them, and they should dwell in Him, by eating of His Flesh. Saith Christ, Doth this offend you? I will make the wonder yet greater; Verse 62. What, and if you shall see the Son of Man ascend up, where He was before? He poseth them with a greater Mystery, and that is the near Union of the Humane Nature with the Divine, so near that He that is now on Earth, is also in Heaven by Communion of Properties, tho' all those that were Reprobates did not see Him ascend with bodily Eyes, nor all the Saints neither; but I am gone saith He, and when you hear that I am gone to Heaven, verily, you will think then, that there can be no Union between me, and those that believe in me, for there can be no eating of my Flesh, or drinking of my Blood. If therefore you wonder at it now, how will you conceive of it, when I am gone up to Heaven? But saith He, I will solve the Mystery to you, if you will understand it, It is the Spirit that quickeneth, the Flesh profiteth nothing. I have a Godhead in me, a Divine Nature (for that is meant by Spirit often, when Christ is spoken of, as, He was put to Death in the Flesh, that is, in His Humane Nature, but quickened by the Spirit, that is, by His Godhead) I have, saith he, a Godhead dwelling in this Humane Nature, though this Flesh you cannot eat, and though, if I have nothing else but Flesh I could not dwell in you, nor quicken you, nor give Life to you, yet having a Spirit, a Godhead in me, it is that which quickeneth. And how doth He quicken? And how doth He cause you to dwell in him, and himself in you? Why saith He, by the Words which I speak unto you; while you by Faith chew upon the Word that describeth me, as I am the Saviour of the World, as I give my Flesh for the Salvation of the World, the Godhead that is in me, and the Holy Ghost that dwelleth in me, causeth me by Faith to dwell in you, and so to give you Life; for so it follows, in that 63d Verse, The Words, which I speak unto you, they are Spirit, and spiritually to be understood; and saith he, they are Life.

There is a great Question amongst Divines, whether we are first united to the Humane Nature of Christ, and by it to the Godhead, or immediately to the Godhead? For my Part, this Place mightily helpeth me to resolve the Question, It is the Spirit, saith he, that quickeneth, that is, the Godhead (now He had spoke of Union before) and so by Virtue of uniting to the Godhead of Christ, there is a quickening of us: And though we are united to whole Christ, yet to the Godhead first.

I shall give you another Scripture, that this is the great Mystery of the Gospel, it is in John 14. 20. (a Place I named afore, and did but name it) The greatest Mystery that is in the Gospel, was reserved for the Apostles to know it, when Jesus Christ should be ascended, for then the Holy Ghost fell upon them, for to reveal to them the great and glorious Things of the Gospel. Now what saith Christ there? At that Day, saith he (namely, when the Holy Ghost is come, for He had promised to send the Comforter in the Words before) ye shall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you. These Two are made Paralels. The Apostles had had their Union with the Father, and with Christ before now, they had it at this Time, when He spoke unto them, but saith He, then you shall know it, you shall understand it, both experimentally in your own Hearts, and you shall know the Mystery of it, so as to teach it unto others, for so the Apostles did, they received this Knowledge by the Holy Ghost to communicate it to others. And this great Mystery (which the Apostles then did not so clearly understand, but should fully know it when they received the Holy Ghost) He reduceth you see to Three Heads, and all are Matters of Union, and indeed the one dependeth upon the other. First, Saith He, you shall understand this great Mystery, that there is an Union between me and my Father, and the Humane Nature and the Son of God, and so that I am one with Him, and that is the Foundation of all your Comfort. This they understood not at first; To believe in God, believe also in me, saith He. Secondly, You shall know that as I am in my Father, so you are in me, that is, that God the Father did from Everlasting make me a publick Person for you, and I stood in your stead, and you all were in me, when I did whatsoever I did here upon the Earth, and you are in me when I go to Heaven; it is an Union representative between you and me. And Thirdly, You shall know that I am in you, and you shall feel it, and that is a communicative Union as I may so express it. And every one of these is the Foundation of the other; you shall find, saith He, that as the Union of my self with the Father, and the Union of the Humane Nature with the Son of God, is the Foundation of my being a publick Person for you, why I was able to Die, and my Death to be Effectual; so you shall find the Power and Virtue of all these communicated to you by my being in you; you shall be sensible of this Union. This I say is the great Mystery, which was reserved for the Holy Ghost to reveal unto the Apostles themselves. And because, that the Comfort of all lies in this latter, to feel Christ is in me, for by that I climb up to the other; hence the Apostle singeth it out, when he would hold forth, and bring home to their Hearts the Riches of the Glory of the Gospel as theirs, and that Christ is theirs, and that they are one with the Father, and that Christ did represent them from Everlasting, &c. He instanceth only in the latter, Which is Christ in you.

My Brethren, This is so great a Mystery, as that the Angels do not know it as we do, for they are not united with so near an Union to Jesus Christ as we are. As He took up our Nature into a greater nearness with God, and did not take up the Nature of Angels, so He takes us up into a nearer Union with himself and so with God. It is a Mystery indeed, that the Angels stand and admire at; seen of Angels, saith the Apostle, and so it is admired by them, that Christ should be in us, but they do not feel it as we do, and therefore of all Mysteries it is the greatest.

CHAP. VIII.

The Glory of the Gospel farther manifested, for as much as Christ the great Subject of it, is in the Work of God upon us, reveal'd in the Soul.

GAL. I. xv, xvi.

xv. But when it pleased God, who separated me from my Mothers Womb, and called me by His Grace.

xvi. To Reveal His Son in me, &c.

MY designed Subject is, The Application of Christ to us; or, The appearing of Christ in us. There is Christ in Redemption; which Work was wholly transacted out of us, between Him and His Father: And the Work thereof I have handled. But this is Christ in Application; or as brought home to our Hearts, which is as necessary for our Salvation, as that other of Redemption.

You hear a great deal of talk of Christ within us: But as that talk runs, truly another Christ is meant thereby, than that Christ God-Man, that Jesus who was Crucified at Jerusalem. But indeed, Christ within us, is no other than that very same Jesus, who was and is out of us; and both one and the same, even Christ dwelling in the Heart by Faith, and manifested in us, and to us.

Brethren, There is the Work of Election which is the Fathers: There is the Work of Redemption; and both these wholly are performed without us: God was in Christ reconciling the World: That is, the Father and Christ giving Himself for us a Ransom: 'Twas he that Died, and offered a Sacrifice, and now is risen and ascended, long afore we were, and 'tis He that now intercedes in Heaven, and transacts all with His Father for us; and thus indeed considered, He is a Christ without us: But the same Christ is in you, when you are turned to God (or rather, that turns you to God; Acts 3. last) and are called by His Grace, as the Apostle saith here; when it pleased God to call me by His Grace, and reveal His Son in me; then you have the same Christ that is without you, revealed in you, and brought home to you; you have the whole of Him First and Last within you, according to what measure God hath appointed you in Christ: As you had the whole of Himself given as a Price for you, Eph. 5. 2. It is the same Christ without us, and the same Christ within us; only what He is, or did for us without us, the same is applied to us: And it is this Christ in Application (which is the very Word, the School-men use, of this Matter) I would make my Subject: And as concerning that, the Doctrine with which I shall Centre in, is, That Christ revealed in us, comprehends the whole of that Work of Application, First and Last: Or thus, That the whole Bulk and Summ of our Practical Religion (as you use to call it) is resolved into God's revealing Christ, and Christ's revealing Himself within us, from First to Last, throughout our whole Lives: Which Comprehensiveness, Paul surely intends here: For, in saying, when God revealed his Son in me, though his first Calling was the first beginning thereof; yet he withal took in what from thence he had gone on to do throughout the rest of his Life, for the same End that at First; For that Revelation at first, was, That he might Preach what was revealed unto the Gentiles. God as He had begun, begun, went on still to reveal Him more in me, that I knowing more and more of him, might be enabled to reveal more of Him to others, to whom I was sent; only then He began with Me.

Chap. VIII.

This Phrase [Revealing Christ within me] hath made a great deal of do among Interpreters, as well as amongst us of late Days. It is a strange Thing, that Hierome so long ago, should unluckily stumble upon the very Notion of the Quakers; or that which in those Days the Pelagians held: Namely, That what Light of God was in Nature, or Light of Moral Good in the Conscience, was the Grace of Christ; which is all one with what our Quakers Foundation is. And he fell upon this in opening this Text: When it pleased God to reveal Christ in me, saith he, doth imply and suppose, that Christ was in him before his Calling; and his Calling was but a Revealing, a Discovery, of what was by Nature in him: Revelatur quod prius fuit in eo: And plainly and boldly he saith, Perfpicuum est, It is plain from hence, that by Nature there is the Knowledge of God; and that no Man is born without Christ: This is the Language that this Man stumbled then upon.

And truly, this Interpretation of Hieroms so scared many Interpreters, as it diverted them from the true Sense (though it be plain enough) though not to his Sense, to say, That Christ was revealed in him, this Phrase, they knew not what to make of it, taken in the plain Expression: Therefore

Some Interpreted it thus, When it pleased God to Reveal His Son by me. In Me, they turned to Per Me. Voluit per me filium cognitum facere, so Grotius took it. Brethren, there is an apparent Contradiction to this in the Text; for he makes the end of God's revealing Him in him, to be, That he might Preach Him to others, which Denotes that to have been the final Cause of God's revealing Him first in himself: Therefore there can be no other Meaning than this, That God was pleased first to reveal His Son in him, when He called him; that is in the Person of Paul himself; That he having the experimental Knowledge of this Christ within himself, in his own Heart, and his own Soul, for his own Salvation, he might be able to reveal him to others the more effectually, suitable to that in 2 Cor. 1. 4. Who comforteth us in all our Tribulation, that we may be able to Comfort them which are in any Trouble, by the Comfort wherewith we our selves are comforted of God. When it pleased God to reveal His Son in me; to make Him known sensibly unto me, and to apply Him experimentally in and to my Soul: He did this, that I might (having the Knowledge of Him for my self, as the Truth is in Jesus) make Him known to others. And the Words afore, He called me by His Grace, shew that he speaks of his first Conversion, which was the Fruit of his Election: When it pleased God, &c. And it was then, that God began to reveal Christ savingly unto him, or any Man, as the main Intention of Gods calling a Man, and as the chief Thing above all others revealed, or to be revealed at a Mans Conversion; though God reveales Sin (you will say) He convinceth the World of Sin, and of Judgment, and Holiness: Yea, but He revealeth Christ ordinarily above All, and in All. But of all Saints that ever were or shall be, God pitcht Pauls Heart upon Christ at first, though he saw his Sin too, Rom. 7. and the Sin of unbelief especially, as he saith in Timothy. And the Knowledge of Christ was the eminent Work in Pauls Conversion, and gave him a compleat Knowledge of Him at first, because of the eminent present Service God had for him to do: For immediately (he says) he consulted not, but fell to Preach Christ instantly, whom he thus knew.

Calvin, Interperets it Mihi, revealed Christ to me, which he would carry unto the Revelation of the Doctrine of Christ in the Gospel, whereof he had said, Verse 11, and 12. The Gospel which was Preached of me, is not after Man: For I neither received it of Man, neither was I taught it, but by the Revelation of Jesus Christ. And he and the former have their Criticisms, and Hebraisms for this.

Beza * indeed admits of that reading; to reveal it to me, Mibi (for so Calvin had afore Expounded it: But says, That it signified some further and larger Matter; and that from the like Hebrew Propriety, being all one with [מבי] and so signifies the Grace of God to have come down from Heaven into his very Soul in the Revelation of Christ.

And Cornelius a Lapide †, among the Papists, says, some indeed read it He revealed it to me; but the Word is, He revealed it in me; That he might signifie, That his Spirit drank in this Revelation of Christ into himself, within the very intimacy of his Heart; so that Christ should be in him, and speak in him, when he preach't to others. And he hath his Hebraism for this too.

The main Sum and Substance of Christianity then is, That Christ be revealed in us, and not only to us: That you come to have Christ by Application, in and to your Souls. Christ brought down into your Heart; yea, and this is the Design of Election: When it pleased God (saith he) who separated me from my Mothers Womb, and called me by His Grace, to reveal his Son in Me: It was the Design of Gods good Pleasure towards him from Eternity, as the Word imports.

But you will say, why do you bring in Paul an Instance, to make this generally the Sum of our Christianity, first and last? You will say, This Instance shews it to have been Pauls Condition in and after his Conversion: But what is this to us Inferiour Christians, To propound his Example to us? Truly, because, take but the Substance of Religion and of true Conversion, and it is common to Paul and us. Indeed Paul differed from us, in some particular Priviledges about this Matter: He differed from us herein, 1. In the manner of having this revealed; for he had it by immediate Revelation, as the 12th Verse tells you, I neither received it of Man, neither was I taught it (i. e. by the Ministry of Men,) but by the Revelation of Jesus Christ: Where [of Christ] notes not out Christ as the Object of the Revelation, but as the Worker: Christ Himself converted him, and Christ Himself revealed Himself to him; and the Father likewise, as the Text here hath it: But as for us, we have it by Man: Ours is by Means of Instruction. And yet, that Knowledge of Faith, which we have of Christ, is called a Revelation, Eph. 1. 17. speaking of ordinary Christians, he prays, That they may have the Spirit of Revelation in the Knowledge of Him: That is, of Christ. Thus as Adam, was made a Man, Flesh and Bone, as we have, but he was made immediately by God: Take other Men, they have the same Members of Body, and Faculties of Soul like, and answerable unto what Adam had, but we have them immediately by Generation from Man: So it was with Paul. Again, 2. Paul and we differ in the Measure, Paul had it by Whole-sale; as Adam was made a perfect Man the first Moment; and Paul had the whole Systeme of the Revelation of Christ in himself to his Soul: He knew whole Christ at first, more or less: He might know more of Him by Degrees afterwards; but at that present he had a whole Knowledge of Him; and the Reason is apparent from the End of it; which was, That he might preach Christ immediately: He had that in Three Days, which others grow unto in many Years; He was so fully instructed, and made the Man of God so perfect, as in the 2d Chapter of this Epistle; he says, That the other Apostles, that were Pillars, and had lived long with Christ, and had the Spirit come down upon them, to inlighten them in what Christ had taught them; added nothing to him.

All then, that God works upon you savingly, from First to Last, is a discovery of Christ, some way or other, in you. It is either the Knowledge of His Person, or it is a Conformity to Him; or it is Dispositions suited to what you know of Him: Workings upon us, and Operations of God upon us suitable to what is in Him; and this I call, The Sum or Substance of our Religion.

Chap. VIII.

* Mibi sed tamen illud videtur quoddam etiam amplius significari, quod apparet ex Hebraeorum Idiomismo: Et videtur eo dicendi genere significari, Dei gratiam Caelus in animum ipsum illabi ut Græca etiam Scholia notant.

† Dicit, potius [in me] quam [mibi] ut significet spiritum suum intimo Corde imbibisse, ut Christus in eo esset, & per eum loqueretur.

Chap. VIII.

Even as to the first Work upon a Man, when he is humbled for Sin: My Opinion thereof is, That, in a Man that shall be saved, it is a different Work what is in wicked Men, that have Terrours of Conscience, and shall not be saved; and that accordingly there is in it a part of Conformity to Christ crucified; and I shall give you Scriptures for it; Gal. 2. 19. He speaks of being Dead to the Law through the Law; which is to be convinced of Sin, and it is effected by the Power of Christ crucified, so as if you ask, How came Paul to be thus dead to the Law? He tells you, Rom. 6. that it was by the Body of Christ.

The very Work of Humiliation is a Conformity to Christ; and it is a beginning of revealing Christ in us: And if a Man will look back upon all hath been wrought in him, he shall see, That it is all Christ.

But however, that, which is the Eminency of Christianity, the Bulk and Substance of it; That, to be sure, is all of it Christ in us: It was Paul's Eminency, That Christ was the Sum of all he had and did; to the end, that he might know and preach Christ; and it is the whole of Christ that God reveals sooner or later, more or less, in and to all Christians; whether they know it or no.

If any ask, Why, when he speaks of revealing Christ in us, he should rather say revealing His Son in us? My Answer is, The Word [Son] comprehends the whole of Christ.

I shall give you but an Observation or Two more.

1. Happy is that Soul, that in Conversion or Calling was pitcht first on Christ; or soon upon his Conversion. If you that are now Converted had lived in our younger Days, you would have seen, that we were held under John Baptist's Water; of being humbled for Sin, and the Work of Sanctification. But now, Happy it is with some, whose Lot it is, that their Conversion-work begins with Christ: Next after their Humiliation for Sin, they are pitcht upon Christ: The Work upon Paul was in this Manner, who had the Advantage of us this way, for Christ Himself appeared to him, and yet he was humbled, and saw Sin to be above measure sinful, Rom. 7. and therefore the Work of Humiliation is necessary unto Faith in Christ.

2. Another Observation is, That whoever of you will be Preachers of the Word, get Christ revealed in you, that you may preach Him unto others, out of the Experience of that Revelation: John eat the Book, and then wrote it; as you have it in Rev. 10.

3. Blessed is he, that from his first Conversion was pitcht upon reaching out the Experiences he had to others. Some Men have, as Paul had, their inward Motion to be Ministers upon their being called; as Paul had it conjoined therewith. And as God separated Paul from the Womb for both: So He hath seperated such.

A
DISCOURSE

Of the Supereminence of Christ above Moses :

OR, OF

The more excellent Glory and Power which accompanies his Promulgation of the Gospel, than did accompany the giving of the Law on Mount Sinai.

HEB. XII. 25, 26, 27, 28, 29.

25. See that ye refuse not him that speaketh : for if they escaped not, who refused him that spake on Earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from Heaven.
26. Whose Voice then shook the Earth, but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more I shake not the Earth onely, but also Heaven.
27. And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain.
28. Wherefore we receiving a kingdom, which cannot be moved, let us have grace whereby we may serve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear.
29. For our God is a consuming fire.

HAGGAI II. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9.

5. According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so my Spirit remaineth among you : fear ye not.
6. For thus saith the Lord of hosts, Yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the Heavens, and the Earth, and the Sea, and the dry Land.
7. And I will shake all Nations, and the desire of all Nations shall come : and I will fill this house with Glory, saith the Lord.
8. The Silver is mine, and the Gold is mine, saith the Lord of hosts.
9. The glory of this latter house shall be greater then of the former, saith the Lord of hosts : and in this place will I give peace, saith the Lord of hosts.

THE Apostle is upon a Comparison (or rather, that there is no Comparison) between Christ, as giving forth the Word on Mount Sion, and Moses upon Mount Sinai. This Moses in delivering his Law, he reckoneth of but as a Man on Earth ; and so infers from thence (to greaten Christ) if they escaped not who refused him, that spake on Earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaks from Heaven. The vast disproportion between these two Teachers, he argues from that infinite distance that is between the situation of their Seats, and Places they spake from : Moses's Chair (as Christ terms it) was placed on Earth, so low, at the Footstool: But Christ (Christus Cathedram in Cælis habet) hath his Chair in Heaven (as was said of old of him) so high above the others as are the highest Heavens. Neither let this so great lowering Moses and his Law, unto Christ and his Gospel offend you, oh ye Jews, as too bold or contemptuous. For Paul' had your own John Baptist to bear him out, who when in like manner he would compare himself with Christ and his Doctrine with his own, (to the end to exalt both it and him) he casts himself, and the highest Point he could reach to, as low as Earth, John 3. 31, 32. He that is of the earth is earthy, and he speaks of the earth. And such a Teacher I acknowledge my self to be (says he) when set with him that cometh from Heaven; and such also my Doctrine is in comparison of his, who speaketh what he hath heard and seen, namely in Heaven, from whence he comes. What John thus speaks of himself, Paul applies to Moses. And John in his Ministry was greater than Moses and all the Prophets, put all into the same Scale together with him, Matth. 11. 11, & 13.

N

fo

The Apostle Paul doth urge us farther to consider those infinitely surpassing and more glorious Effects of Power and Majesty, which do issue from the Voice of him that speaks from Heaven in the Gospel, and accompanies the delivery of it as a Testimony of the Glory of the Matter uttered in it; which, the more lively to represent, he compareth them with those former effects which accompanied the delivery of the Law when it was given by Moses; Whose Voice then shook the earth, (says he) but his Voice now shall shake both earth and heavens.

From which advance he 3dly raiseth another Mount yet higher, namely, a Consideration of that superexcelling Glory of his Kingdom, which his Gospel uttered, by him brought to light, and gave Believers the right and assurance of: All these Effects accompanying both Law and Gospel, being but slighter Works and Effects of an inferior sort, and lower make and production: Things but made in comparison of the Things of his Kingdom, which Christ should bring in.

Now by these shakings, &c. the Apostle meaneth and intendeth those new, strange, and (in comparison to those under the Times of the Law) unparalleled Changes, Alterations, and abolitions of Things which were already begun in his time and view, to be made in this World, and are to go on till they are to be consummated at the latter Day. And these are the Effects and Concomitants of this word the Gospel, and of his Voice that dictates it. All which Removals should be but the Preludiums and fore-running Preparations unto that Kingdom of his, which cannot be shaken; which all those shall issue and determine in, as infinitely more glorious than all things else we now see or know, by how much all these are but made to be pulled down, and then removed, as the Rubbish that lies in the way to that his Kingdom to be erected: But we have a Kingdom, the Gospel speaks of, which cannot be shaken: Which therefore let us firmly expect, and adhere unto, and serve God acceptably, in the expectation of it in the midst of all these shakings. This for the coherence, and as an outside shew of the meaning of the words hung forth at the entrance, inviting you to the Sight within. Let us now enter and view each Particular more thoroughly and exactly.

The words of my Text, in ver. 26, & 27. (though I have read the rest afore and after) do fix upon this latter Point, namely, the vast different Effects and Demonstration of Power, by all sorts of alterations in Heaven and Earth, that shall accompany the Coming and Kingdom of Christ all along the Times of the Gospel, in comparison of those that attended upon the giving of the Law of Moses. And this I have also fix'd on to be my present Subject.

The Particulars to explain that Difference are two.

1. The Difference of those Effects themselves when compared.
2. The Allegation of the Prophecy in Haggai, for the Proof of that Comparison, and likewise the Pertinency of that Allegation.

Which two being by way of general Premise dispatch'd, I shall more closely grasp those which are the greatest Difficulties in the Text in their own Place.

1. The

1. The difference of those Effects themselves compared.

The First Part of the Comparison are the Prodigies that fell out at the Birth and bringing forth the Law, the shaking of the Earth, &c. Whose Voice then shook the Earth, says the Text out of the 19. Exod. 18. The Mountain quaked greatly, and the Sights in the Air upon the Mount were so terrible, and the Voice then heard so dreadful, that they could not endure it (ver. 19. 21.) But yet, so as the Force and Efficacy of all these reach'd no higher or further than the Earth and Air, which signified the Lowness and Earthliness of the Frame and Form of Worship given, and also to be of that sort, which one Day as the Earth was then, should be in the like manner it self, shaken, as the Apostle here unfolds the Mystery of it.

And withal (to that end to greaten Christ and heighten the Comparison of his Gospel effects with these the more) he hints us to consider, that it was even our Christ, which then gave the Law, and that it was his Voice, though hiddenly and concealedly; the Power whereof shook the Earth, whose Voice (saith my Text) then shook the Earth, for though Angels are said to have given the Law, it being termed, Heb. 2. 1. The word spoken by Angels, yet the Lord God (which was Christ) stood hid under those Angels; so expressly, Exod. 20. 21. You have seen that I have talk'd with you from Heaven. And though Moses, as a Mediator, is said to have given it visibly forth, Gal. 3. 19. compared with Deut. 5. 5. yet you may see what a poor slight Mediator he was by his Carriage in it, and to have been but a Cypher or Shadow of our Christ, whose Voice then and now speaks, and made him to tremble. You may read how Moses stood by quaking and trembling, whilst the Law was uttering, like a frail forry Man of Earth (as he was) for no sooner did he begin to feel all things shaking under him, but he cries out; as Verse 21. I exceedingly fear and quake. He shewed what a Man he was, and how constituted, but of the same Matter the Mountain it self (that was the first shaker) was of, Earth and Dust; which our Apostle alledgeth to shew his Law in comparison of this Gospel to be like unto him Earthy, and ordained to be shaken.

Corollary. And this as it is the clearest Scripture in the New Testament, that it was Christ that gave the Law, so it is as evident a proof that he is God, whose Voice it was that spake those Words, and said, I am the Lord thy God, thou shalt have no other Gods but me; which Voice then shook the Earth, in testimony thereof at the uttering of them. This is the first Part of this Comparison.

2. The second Part is a comparative Inference, how far greater and more surpassing outward Effects, and Signs and Tokens of Power and Glory must needs be ordained to accompany the Coming of Christ himself, and the Dispensation of the Gospel from him, inferred from this, that his Voice then shook the Earth, &c. wherein two Things are to be considered,

1. The surpassing Excellency of the Effects themselves.
2. The Ground and Rationality of the Apostle's Inference, when from a Comparison made with the other, he argues and infers the Excellency of those Effects themselves under the Gospel.

1. For the Superexceeding of the Effects themselves under the Gospel.

1. If he shook the Earth then, he will shake Heaven now; that is, as Christ in his own Case speaks, if you wonder at this, you shall see greater Wonders than these. The Father loveth the Son, and to shew us that he is the Son himself, He will shew him greater Works, that you may yet marvel. Thus here, if he then shook Earth, he will now shake both Earth and Heavens too.

Which Phrase, to open it first in general, is a Proverbial Speech, to express how far higher and greater things he will do; even by so much higher as the Heavens are above the Earth: That look, as it would in all Mens Apprehensions be a Demonstration of greater Power, for one to shake the Pillars of Heaven, and make the Stars quiver, the Sun to tremble, in comparison of shaking Houses and Glass-windows on Earth, which we see great Noises as of Thunder-Claps, and great Ordinances are won't to do. So in this,

2. As in the Object shaken this riseth higher, even to the shaking Heavens, so in the issue of the shaking either the one or the other. For whereas then he did but shake, he will now not only shake but remove; and then he did but shake the Earth, and in the Earth that Mountain the Law was given upon, which yet stands where it did; under the Gospel he will not only shake but remove, not the Earth only, which he shook but in part afore, but even the Heavens, which he then left untouch'd. But now he shakes, yea, and he means to remove, v. 27. Thus this word once more signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken as things made, on purpose to give Demonstration of his Power in their removal, and withal of that superexcelling Glory of that Kingdom, to which these Things are but made to give way unto; and observe it (for it must be our Guide, and serve to bring us to the full of Paul and Haggai's meaning, that the Apostle puts the Emphasis upon) even this, That he shakes so as to remove. And this he alledgeth as Haggai's Scope.

2. For the ground or rational Part of this Inference, namely, why, upon giving the Gospel, these Effects should rise so much higher, the Account stands thus,

1. If God (whom here the Apostle affirms Christ to be) will anew come come down into the World a second time, he will surely make his Discovery therein exceed the former; 'tis his manner so to do, especially if the first be but a shadow or Type of the same Person in lesser Discoveries (as Moses was in this of Christ's) and in that respect but as the Earth; then the second or next succeeding, whatever it be, will rise as high as Heaven in comparison of the former. Now Moses as a Man on Earth, gave forth his Dispensation, but Christ as the Lord from Heaven, therefore his must accordingly in its proportion exceed. And his Argument runs thus, It was Christ's own Voice, which then did shake the Earth, when he gave the Law. Now if he being then hid (himself concealed under the Administration of Angels, therefore, Acts 7. 30, 31, 32. in his speaking to Moses, he is some times termed an Angel, sometimes the Lord) and also stood disguised under Moses receiving the Law as his Type, did yet own and second that Dispensation, so far as to shake the Earth, &c. in testimony of that underhand, and remote presence of his, what effects will his Voice have, when he comes personally to appear, and professedly as Son of God to dwell in Man's Nature personally united to himself, and therein to deliver a new Doctrine (namely, the Gospel) especially (now) that is after his having been on Earth, and there first had himself conversed with Men, but now is ascended again to Heaven. And from thence speaks and rules, who, in his Person, was the Lord from Heaven, 1 Cor. 15. and in Heaven whilst on Earth, and so Lord of both Earth and Heaven, and hath received all Power both in Earth and Heaven: To give full proof of all these things, he will therefore surely shake, both Earth and Heaven, and shew he is able to shake and remove both. So much for the Inference, and ground of the Apostle's arguing, as elsewhere he doth the like from Adam to Christ, 1 Cor. 15. 45, 46. by way of a superexcelling Comparison, which is his way of arguing here.

For the Allegation out of Haggai, and the Pertinency of it, to this his Scope, which is the next and great Thing to be insisted on, I observe that the Apostle's Custom in this Epistle (he writing to Jews) is to assert nothing but what he brings proof for out of the Old Testament (as all along appears) he writing to such, who (as Peter speaks) gave heed to that sure word of Prophecie of old, and thus here he quotes Haggai 2. 6, 7. For thus saith the Lord of Hosts, yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the Heavens, and the Earth, and the Sea, and the dry Land. And I will shake all Nations, and the desire of all Nations shall come, and I will fill this House with Glory, saith the Lord of Hosts.

The Prophecie is evidently of Christ, his Person and Coming, whom he intireth the Desire of all Nations, according to other Scriptures, as also what in himself he is, and should be unto all Believers. Jacob had before by the like Circumlocution described him to be that Person, to whom the gathering of the People should be. The Septuagint translates it the Expectation of the People, he being the Center of all their Desires, and dearest Affection, whom Kings and Prophets phets desired to see. Luke 10. 24. or as Isaiab 11. 10. To him shall the Gentiles seek, or as Christ out of Esai of himself, In his Name shall the Gentiles trust, it is the Periphrasis of the Messiah. Thus multitude of Places, the Land of Desire, speaking of Canaan, Zech. 7. 14. is put for a Land most pleasant, and every one the Object of Desire. Thus Things, or Persons lovely, are termed desirable, or Things of Desire every where in the Prophets, and a Person most dear as a Wife, is called by Cicero, desiderium meum, my Desire, even as we now say, my Love, and as Christ is thus by Haggai entituled, the Desire of all Nations, and to come as such; in like manner Malachi (in a Correspondency to this Prophecy) terms him the Lord, and Messenger of the Covenant, whom ye (speaking to the Jews) seek and delight in, Mal. 3. 1. That which is our Happiness or chiefest Good is the Object of Desire when waited for, of Delight when enjoyed; and such is Christ both to Jew and Gentile coming to be Lord of both. And the Harmony between the Prophecie of Malachi and Haggai is the more full, because both prophecie, whilst they speak these things of his coming, and both Prophecy of his filling that Temple, then built, with Glory.

Now, 2. The Pertinency of the Apostle's singling out this Scripture thus, evidently meant of Christ is very observable; for it not only serves to prove in terminis the thing it self, he would assert, namely, the shaking of both Earth and Heaven, when this Messiah should come; but further, it ratifies also the Foundation of his very Comparison here made, namely, that if God did so great Wonders at the giving the Law by Moses, that he will do greater when the Messiah promised should come. To this purpose observe how in the Words just before, the Prophet pointeth them to what Paul here, even to God, had done in Moses his time for the People, as a Ground and Foundation of Inference, that he would now again, upon the approaching times of the Messiah do greater, Read v. 5. 6. 7. According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so my Spirit remaineth among you: fear ye not. For thus saith the Lord of Hosts, yec once, it is a little while, and I will shake the Heavens, and the Earth, and the Sea, and the dry Land. And I will shake all Nations, and the Desire of all Nations shall come, and I will fill this House with Glory, saith the Lord of Hosts. As if he should have said, you know how greatly then for you, I shook the Earth: I shook Egypt afore I gave the Law, I shook the Earth at the giving the Law, and I shook all, and all the Nations round about you in casting them forth for you, after I had given it. Now once more, I will a second time begin, and go on to do greater things, and shake Heavens also, and the Sea, and dry Land, and all Nations, and shaking remove all in them that is made.

Now the Difficulties that are met with in this Text by them that have travelled through it, are eminently two.

1. Concerning the time which this Prophecie and Promise should concern, [now he hath promised] or when it is this Promise, either was, or is to be performed, and in what Center of time, we may find Haggai his Intention, and Paul's Application hereof in this Epistle to this time, [Now] to meet and agree.
2. The second is the Explication of these Heavens and Earth, and the shaking and removing of them, what these import.

Now for the first. There is no Controversie as to the designment of this Time in the general, viz. that it being opposed to the time of giving the Law, therefore it should note out some time under the Gospel, for then is clearly opposed to now, whose Voice then shook the Earth; But now he hath promised, &c. So that some Part or Piece of Gospel-time, in opposition to the time of the Law, should be designed, is acknowledged by all hands. But the difficulty is, whether this (Now) of the Performance of this Promise, was only the time of the first giving forth the Gospel (as the Then he shook the Earth, was) or upon, the first giving the Law; and so to design that time only, when Christ was on Earth, and his Apostles had begun to preach the Gospel: And this so as with that time, all this should end and determine, and with it the Commission of Haggai's Prophecie, as extending to no further time. This

This some assert, observing, 1st. Haggai to speak evidently of Christ's first Coming, and of the Signs and Prodigies which were found to accompany his being on Earth, in shaking Heaven and Earth &c. of which hereafter. And, 2^{dly}. they observe the great Change and Shaking that fell out thereupon in the World, in giving forth the Gospel first by Christ, then succeeded by the Apostles, whereby the Gentile Nations were then converted, and Christ, the desire of all Nations, even the utmost blessing their Hearts to the utmost enlarged could desire, revealed to them, and so come amongst them. And, 3^{dly}, they observe that among the Jews, to whom Haggai directed his Prophecy, there was a shaking and removal of that former Frame of Worship, &c. (or, as Paul to the Colossians expresseth it, a blotting out the Handwriting and nailing it to his Cross, and so taking it out of the way) set up by the Law of Moses ; and instead thereof, that eternal Kingdom, the Kingdom of Heaven (as the Gospel, and the Doctrine, Worship, promises of it, are called) set up once for all. After which God will bring in no new nor further Doctrine or Worship. Hence therefore, it is judged by many, that the time of Haggai's Prophecy doth end and determine with this in a full and complete accomplishment : As also Paul's Scope here, his Intent being (as they judge) in his Application hereof (he writing to the Jews about the change of the Jewish Worship, &c. which he had inculcated all along in this Epistle) to put a conclusion to this his Argument, which had been the subject of his Epistle : And to that end alledgeth last of all this Prophecy of Haggai's, as fore-telling this Change which they had seen upon Christ's coming, as no other than what was foretold by him should come to pass upon Christ's coming (who now spake to them from Heaven, as this alteration clearly evidenced) viz. a new Doctrine : Unto whom therefore, and his Doctrine, he most vehemently now at last exhorts them to attend.

Others observing (as they judge) Paul to step over the mention of Christ's coming, and to carry the Minds of those he wrote to, unto other shakings and removals of Heaven and Earth yet to come ; they on the opposite side have restrained Paul's Scope and Intention, to the Change which is yet to be made upon the second coming of Christ ; the Reasons for which I shall give anon : But then how to reconcile Paul and Haggai together is still the Difficulty : For if Paul carries it to the second coming, and yet Haggai's Prophecy, doth expressly intend the first coming : Or, if Haggai intend, the first, how can Paul (who cited Scriptures pertinently, and so as might convince the Jews he wrote to) apply it to the second ? especially as a Promise made in Haggai yet to be fulfilled.

I shall endeavour, as I am able, to search and give forth the full Intent and Scope both of Paul and Haggai in their utmost Latitude, and try if all these may not justly be reconciled by an amplitude of Interpretation of either. I shall begin with Paul's Scope first, and then with Haggai's, and so proceed to a Reconciliation of them.

1. For Paul's Mind herein, I shall proceed by degrees ;

As, 1. That his Now here, takes not in the Time of Christ's being in the Flesh only, but the Age of the Apostles, the present Time he spake this in, which is clear. For his Now refers to that Now of Christ's speaking from Heaven, τ λ α λ ϵ ν ι α , ver. 25. and therefore speaks of him, as being ascended to Heaven ; and from thence now speaking to us on Earth ; and it was now some Years from his Ascension, when he wrote this Epistle ; he was not only come (as Haggai speaks) but gone again into Heaven ; and he says not, refuse not him that hath spoken from Heaven ; in respect that he being a Man from Heaven when on Earth, first gave the Gospel, but as one that now continues to speak from thence.

Then, 2^d. the just Reason of this will carry Paul's Scope, not only to be fixed to that present Now or Age, but all along to the end of the World. For, 1st. by and for the same Reason alledged, that he did shake the Earth and the Heavens then in Paul's time, by and for the same Reason, he must be acknowledged to continue to do it in all Ages after : Now the Reason he attributes it unto then, was that he was then speaking from Heaven : And so his Voice then had this effect of shaking Heaven and Earth. Therefore by the same Reason, whilst from Heaven

Heaven he shall thus speak to Men, he will continue to shake both Earth and Heaven during all that time: His Voice, whilst he speaks from Heaven, will shake Earth and Heaven. As even that Parallel of his shaking the Earth, when he gave the Law, serves also to persuade. For look as whilst the Law was a speaking by the ministry of Angels, he is said to speak from Heaven, Exod. 20.22. and all that while his Voice continued to shake the Earth: So here, whilst the Gospel is dispensed by the Ministry of Apostles and Ministers to succeed them, he is all that while said to speak from Heaven as well as at first; and during that time, he for a Sign and Token of the Power of it, continues more or less to shake Earth and Heaven: And therefore as he hath not ceased to speak, nor doth to this Day, so, nor hath he ceased this shaking. And therefore 2dly. The Apostle speaks in the Language of the present Time, σείω, I shake: That whereas of his shaking the Earth at his giving the Law he speaks in the time past, whose Voice then shook the Earth; and whereas also the Prophet Haggai, as Prophecy of it had said, I will shake, σείσω, (so the Septuagint) which Interpreters have observed, but not considered enough the Purport of it; yet of this he speaks in the time being, σείω, I shake, I am a doing it now, when this was writing, and in that Age, and I still shake whilst I speak. As therefore he then was and still is a speaking from Heaven, and it is the Messiah's Voice we hear; so as he did then, he also doth still shake, and will do to the end of the World, when he will come himself again, and by his own immediate Voice, elevated louder than ever; as a Man transact that great Affair of Judging and Convincing, all Men Face to Face, and together therewith shake and remove Heaven and Earth, once for all, even for everlasting. As therefore the Exhortation the Apostle useth, refuse not him that speaks from Heaven, (which is founded upon this Motive: [For now he hath promised, saying, I shake Heaven and Earth]) must needs be acknowledged to take hold of us: So likewise this Motive or Foundation it self, which that Exhortation is made upon, must be granted in like manner, to hold and continue in force together therewith; and therefore the performance of it, (which keeps it in force) continues so to this Day as well as then; yea, and as some observe from those words, He hath promised, SAYING I shake, that word saying had reference to that of the 25th Verse, him that speaks, or to him speaking, as particularising what among other things he is a saying and speaking now from Heaven to us, to move us to attend to him: Even this of the Prophet [I shake, &c.] tho' said by way of Prophecy afore, yet is now said by himself from Heaven over again by way of renewed Promise and Performance. From Heaven he still says, I am he that shake Heavens, &c. therefore hear him; or, as Paul, and therefore refuse him not.

3. From those words of St. Paul, Now he hath promised; that is, from that Particular of it; that he calleth it a Promise, as yet to be performed, this Assertion is yet more and more argued; for he says not, which according to his Promise he hath performed, as he would have spoken, and was meet to have been said if it had been fully accomplish'd; but, as being a Matter still under a Promise, which is always of things yet to come, as Faith and Hope are, and so yet to be performed. Paul says, he now hath promised, the Constellation of that Promise of Haggai (tho' in part performed) yet still reigning, and in its Influences, not having the whole of those Events (it portended) as yet come to pass: And for this Paul giveth an inanswerable Argument, That still much of it must remain under Promise; for the main import of that word [yet once more] which Paul puts upon it, is to note out that the thing to be effected, was the removal of the things shaken, as well as shaking them: And this to the end to settle and establish, things which cannot be shaken. Thus Paul expounded it, v. 27. And this word in the Prophet [yet once more] (says he) signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made; that those things which cannot be shaken may remain. And therefore it is an undeniable Argument, that Paul's meaning was to hold forth (and that argued by him, out of the words of the Prophet himself) that that Promise, was not yet fully performed, but the main thing intended, namely, the removing work, remained yet to be done, and so under Promise.

For it is undeniable, that upon Christ's first coming, and being upon Earth, the Heavens or Earth then shaken by him, whether you would understand the Jewish Worship, expound it of what you will, what was shaken by him was not actually removed but continued still, though loose and made weak; and those that confine it to the first coming, and Christ's being on Earth, interpret the shaking the Heaven, &c. of those Signs in the Heavens, as eclipsing the Sun and Moon at his Passion, in the Sea, when the Winds were calmed by him, &c. But still I urge as Paul doth here, these were not removed then. The Sun is where, and as it was, &c. yea, though the Vail of the Temple was rent then, to shew that in his Death the Jewish Worship had its fatal Blow given it virtually by his Death; yet actually it was not removed till afterwards, nay, not till after Paul's Time and Death, and this Epistle written. And I further urge, that for the same reason, that according to Haggai's Prophecie, the Jewish Worship was to be removed, namely, because shaken by Christ at his Death; by the same reason, the Sun, and Moon, and Earth, &c. are to be removed, ere this Prophecie shall end; for these also were shaken then; and the Apostle tells us, that the Prophet intended the removing of those things, that are or were shaken; yea, and the shaking, or putting out of Course the Heavens and Sea, then, did signifie, that one day they were to be removed; yea, the word signifies the removing of things shakable (or as the Margent varies it, which may be shaken) that are capable of it; and the Apostle adds as of things that are made; so then whatever things are made and shakable, whether it be Jewish Worship, or these visible Heavens or Earth, made for a time, and begun to be shaken by Christ then to shew they were shakable, and but as it were artificial Stuff made by God for a time, or whatever else was or is to come in the World that is humane, or set up by Men made with Hands, is according to that Prophecie to be shaken and removed, and therefore it must still needs remain, as a Promise unperformed, in the main part of its Accomplishment.

Yea, and 4thly, it may, according to this, perhaps not be found wholly contrary to the Apostle's Scope, but congeniate thereunto to say, That in those words, But now he hath promised, saying, (they referring to him that speaks from Heaven, v. 25. as was said) Paul doth bring in our Lord Christ, as now since his being in Heaven, a new ratifying and saying over again, the same Promise which had been delivered by Haggai, as that which was to receive a more full and perfect Accomplishment. It is Christ whom Haggai brought in at the first speaking these words. For in Haggai the Prophecie runs thus, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, I will shake, &c. It was this Son of God, the Lord of Hosts, who gave the Law (for his Voice then shook the Earth) and who also spake this there, and promised to come in Mans Nature, and become the Desire of all Nations, and who, as Paul, since his going to Heaven says, [Now hath promised] namely, again, himself now saying, and using those his own Words, which, in Haggai, he had afore uttered by a Prophecie foretelling it afore his first coming, only because he speaks them now when he had begun to perform it, he alters the Tense, and says, I shake; and then the Result is but this, that the Desire of all Nations coming according to Haggai's Prophecie, and shaking all Nations as he was a coming, and shaking Heaven and Earth, upon his being come on Earth; and he having whilst on Earth, and upon his first coming, but performed part of what was intended, and incompleatly: It became him now when gone to Heaven, having Apostles to utter his Mind by from Heaven, as infallibly as ever by Haggai he had done; it was but futable, I say, to declare and utter by Paul, as also by Peter in their Doctrine, that he from Heaven had ratified and confirmed that Promise afresh, and that in the same Words before delivered, especially there being so much of it yet behind; and so main and essential a Part thereof, yet left unpay'd, so that he renews his Bond for performance of what is behind, his former Bond in Haggai remaining uncancell'd till the whole should be fully paid in, and he only renews it for more Clearness and further Security.

And

And so there are according to these Two last, the Third and Fourth Positions: Two Senses to be given that well stand together of these words, But now he hath promised, saying,

1. That now under the Gospel, the time is come of which and concerning which he hath or had thus promised in Haggai, and this is correspondent to the Third Position.

Or else. 2. The sense of the words refers to the time of renewing again this Promise, that is, Now again he hath promised since he went to Heaven. The like Sense we find, Heb. i. 6. And again, when he bringeth in the First Begotten into the World, he saith, &c. where the Word [again] may either be taken as referring to he saith, that is, again he saith, as a new Quotation added to Two that went afore, to prove Christ the Son of God, and very God; or it may be taken as referring to his bringing him into the World again.

And as congruous to this last Meaning given Ambrose and Chrysostom's Glos upon this word [yet once more] may fitly be taken in; they supposing (as in this Explanation I do,) that Christ by his Apostles from Heaven now uttered this Promise after his First Coming in the Flesh: And if Christ be indeed thus brought in here by Paul after his being gone to Heaven, as renewing the Promise afresh, and saying yet once more; then it necessarily points out a second Performance yet under promise that should end all, and once for all: As not having so thoroughly performed what Haggai had prophesied of at his being on Earth, and so withal it gives an account of the reason and necessity of renewing this Promise. For Paul in his recourse to the words of Haggai having proved the Promise to be as yet unfulfilled in a great part, (when in the 27th Verse he urgeth, that [once more] in the Prophet's intention, to signify the removing of those things that were shaken;) therefore hence it was, that Christ had renewed or now again promised the same since his going to Heaven, That yet once more he would come and shake, so as to remove what he shook. Which was meet for him both now to promise, and hereafter to effect. And according to this intent, the words of the 26th Verse are to be understood as a new Promise now given forth: Yet renewed and made in Haggai's words, both for the Analogy and Likeness of the things promised by the one and other to be done, as also because he was now to do in effect but what Haggai also had promised should be done by him. And, as conspiring with this sense, you may take in the word once more used in the 27th Verse, to refer partly to the very words of Haggai, as a Proof that Haggai intended the same; and yet withal, that word is to be taken as an explanation of what this renewed Promise principally aimed at; as hath been explained.

Now in the Fifth place, That Paul here had in his Eye the Second Coming of Christ; or at least that effect that shall accompany it, namely, that shaking Heaven and Earth then, is evident.

1. There is not until then a full removal of all that is made, and that is to be removed; and then, to be sure; it will be done, finally and once for all: And whatever Removal else of any other Heavens or Earth can put in a Plea to have been intended, this which I alledge can and may plead the same Reason to have been intended: This hath a visible Earth and Heaven reserved for Christ, to shew his Power upon in the removal and change of them, 2 Pet. 3. 7. The Heavens and the Earth which are now, are kept in store, reserved unto Fire against the Day of Judgment, and Perdition of ungodly Men. And if any other Heavens and Earth come within the Verge of Paul's Reason here, why they were at any time removed, [as of things that are made,] (which is the Apostle's Reason; and he speaks in the Language of Universality.) then all things whatever, one as well as another, that were alike, made to be removed at any time by God, do come within the compass of the same Premunire and Sentence, that any other Particular doth for a qua tenus ad omne valet consequentia: And as it is an Universal Law against all Men: It is appointed for all Men once to die. So is this an Universal Judgment pass'd upon all things; which the Word of God tells us, were made but to serve for a time one as well as another; and therefore takes hold of these Heavens and Earth, which the Word of God doth declare to us to be kept in store for the Fire, and to be in respect of the Condition they now are in, or Use they now serve for; but as a Stage or Masque-house, which when the Story of this World is ended, is to be removed.

And, 2. More particularly the Apostle's scope is clearly to work a Dread and Awe in the Hearts of those he wrote to, of this great Person that speaks from Heaven; as one that threatens, and will execute Vengeance on them that will refuse to hear him: Ver. 25. If they escaped not who refused him that spake on Earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from Heaven. And to edge and pursue this Exhortation thus mingled with Threatning, he alledgeth this Promise of shaking the Heavens and the Earth one Day parallel to that at the giving the Law: And concludeth it with this, For our God is a consuming Fire: Therein more eminently pointing at that Change and Removal of the Earth and Heavens, and the destruction of wicked Men at the latter Day. Even as Peter had also spoken; and comparing the Words, we have an Eviction in them; 2 Pet. 3. 7. But the Heavens and the Earth which are now, by the same Word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the Day of Judgment and Perdition of Ungodly Men.

Neither, 3. Is there any other shaking the Heavens and the Earth which holds so fair and clear a Correspondency with that shaking the Earth by Christ, (which Paul here mentions as the Parallel of his shaking the Heavens intended by him,) which was at the giving the Law, as this of the latter doth; and may therefore be supposed more intended than any other: For then as at the 18th Verse of this Chapter, he came down with Fire and Smoke; The Mountain burned with Fire, and there was Blackness, Darkness, and Tempest; The Sound of a Trumpet, and the Voice of Words uttered by Angels, Chap. 2. 2. which they could not endure, Ver. 18, 10. So now there is parallel with it, his coming at latter Day, as to the Thessalonians in each Epistle Paul hath set it forth; 1 Thess. 4 6. The Lord himself from Heaven with a Shout, with the Voice of the Archangel and the Trumpet of God. And, 2 Thess. 1. 8. With his mighty Angels in flaming Fire, taking Vengeance on them that obey not the Gospel of God. And Paul speaks suitably, Heb. 12. 25. see you refuse not him that speaks from Heaven (obey his Gospel;) for if his Voice then shook the Earth thus, it will one day shake the Heavens, and he manifest himself a consuming Fire, rendring Vengeance unto such.

4. Add to this, that Peter having treated of this great Day, and burning Heaven and Earth by Fire, (as hath been cited, Chap 3. of his Epistle, from the 5th to the 15th:) He confirmeth the Doctrine of it, and his Exhortation thereon founded from the Testimony of Paul, who, as he says, had in all his Epistles; but especially now in an Epistle written to the Jews, (which is this to the Hebrews, to whom also Peter the Apostle of the Circumcision, directed these of his, 1 Pet. 1 1. as is generally acknowledged;) inculcated the same. Now, where in all this Epistle to the Hebrews, can any Passages be singled forth, that hold so direct a Correspondency with those in Peter, as these words do? Both speaking so alike of the removing and burning Heaven and the Earth by the Power of Christ, who is a consuming Fire. So then, we have Peter's Testimony concurring with us in this Interpretation.

And thus much for Paul's more eminent Intention. I come to Haggai's.

It is in the Second Place as clear, That Haggai his Scope was, to fix the eyes of the Jews he wrote unto upon the first coming of Christ in the Flesh, and the signs and effects of that coming of his; both those which went afore, or accompanied his Presence on Earth, or followed presently after.

1. He must needs intend the First Coming of Christ in the Flesh, when he uttered that Promise, Ver. 7. And I will shake all Nations, and the desire of all Nations shall come, and I will fill this House with Glory saith the Lord of Hosts: Not only because that was yet to come, in the Days of his Prophecie, and it was the first Coming that was to come between his Times and this Second Coming of Christ Christ; but because it was next and most in the eyes and expectations of himself and these Jews he spake to. And it was that Coming concerning which the promise of yet a little while was made, and must needs be supposed to have its first and immediate reference unto, put in for the relieving the impatency of that Peoples Spirits who had waited so long. Whereas, had it only and immediately respected the Second Coming of Christ, it had not been yet a little while to them, but far larger, (as now in our days it is since Haggai's time,) than from their coming out of Egypt until then.

2. His scope argues it; which was to encourage them to finish the Second Temple, and to comfort themselves against the outward meanness of it, in comparison of the former built by Solomon. And he comforts them with this, That the Messiah himself should come into this second Temple; Ver. 8, 9. The Silver is mine, and the Gold is mine, saith the Lord of Hosts. The glory of this latter House shall be greater than of the former, saith the Lord of Hosts: and in this place will I give Peace, saith the Lord of Hosts. He points to that material Temple then a building, as those words shew, ver. 8. and so his meaning is, Whereas the Temple of Solomon destroyed by the Babylonians, was in all outward respects far more glorious in Proportion, and was filled with a Glory from God at the Dedication of it: Know (says the Prophet) that a greater Glory shall in the end fill this: And Malachi utters the very same, He whom you delight in (their Messiah,) shall come into his Temple, Mal. 3. 1. (Where he so often preach'd and utter'd his Glory, John 18.20. Jesus answered him, I spake openly to the World, I ever taught in the Synagogue, and in the Temple, whither the Jews always resort, and in secret have I said nothing) And thus the Jews generally afore the Destruction of the Temple, understood the mind of this Prophecie to be, That that Temple should stand to the Coming of Messiah; but since, the Jews have sought Evasions, because, if granted, it is an undeniable Argument of our Christ being come in the Flesh.

3. The shaking of the Heavens and the Earth, Haggai himself interprets, Ver. 21, 22. of throwing down Kingdoms and Monarchies during that space or small remnant of Time left, as forerunning Signs that the King and Lord of all the World was a coming into it; Speak to Zerubbabel, Governour of Judah, saying, I will shake the Heavens and the Earth; And I will overthrow the Throne of Kingdoms, and I will destroy the Strength of the Kingdoms of the Heathen, and I will overthrow the Chariots, and those that ride in them, and the Horses and their Riders shall come down, every one by the Sword of his Brother. These Stirs began a little after Haggai's time throughout the Earth; and that the Prophet had those Confusions in all other Nations which were antecedaneous to Christ's First Coming in his Eye, is eminent by this, That for the comfort of the Jews, he tells them both, (Ver. 9.) That they in the mean time should have Peace, as in comparison of all other Nations they eminently had; as the Story of the Macchabees and of Josephus shew. And he says, That Zerubbabel and his Successors should be as a Signet, whom God would have a dear and special care to preserve (ver. 23.) in the midst of those general Commotions. Thus far Haggai's next and more immediate meaning doth reach.

The next thing is, To make the Reconciliation of these Two, Paul and Haggai. We must hold this fast as a most certain truth, That Paul here quotes that place of Haggai according to the true aim that the Holy Ghost intended; for he setting himself in this Epistle all along to prove what he asserts out of the Old Testament, his scope therein being to confirm the Jews he wrote to in the great Points of Christian Religion; They would expect (being many of them unsettled,) that the Proofs which he should alledge, should be punctual and convictive; and in that he so expressly termeth that shaking a Promise in his time, and yet to be fulfilled; it necessarily argues it so intended by the Holy Ghost, as a thing then promised and prophesied of by Haggai. For the reconciliation and demonstration thereof, I shall lay down these Four general Assertions.

1st. General Position is, That the scope of Haggai as well as Paul, is to comprehend and sum up all the Proceedings and Transactions of Christ under the Gospel throughout his whole Reign, in shaking and removing what is heterogeneous or opposite to his Kingdom, and advancing thereof to its perfect Glory. And this Position alone, if cleared, will sufficiently reconcile both, and justify Paul's Quotation as pertinent. I shall clear this Assertion in such a manner as at once to prevent Objections, as well as establish the truth of it by degrees.

1. I observe in Haggai Two Things distinctly prophesied of; the one, The Coming of Christ the Messiah; the other, I will shake the Heavens and the Earth, &c. and all Nations. And then take this along with you, to prevent a great mistake, That the Holy Ghost's intention in his mention of the latter, is not only or barely of them as Signs and Tokens that should fore-run or accompany that his coming. (The restraining it unto which alone, hath caused a narrowing of the Prophet's scope;) but it is withal to be understood as the great design and consequent, or business of the coming of the Messiah as Lord of the World into the World. He speaks of the Work which he should effect, and came for, and is therefore one distinct part of this Prophecy, and as eminent as is the other of his coming. And to put such an eminent Observancy of it, he mentions it first in order, I will shake, &c. and the desire of all Nations shall come. Which order of the Words hath occasioned some to confine this shaking to what passed afore Christ's coming, and so only to the fore running Signs thereof, which must be acknowledged, is to be taken into the Prophet's scope. But to the full comprehension of his meaning, or the Holy Ghost's rather, This shaking is to be understood of a great design God had, farther than Christ's first coming; and so to hold forth one great part of the Counsel of God towards this World, in the Changes and Alterations thereof, as the main Errand of the Messiah's coming. And indeed, even those that most restrain it to the first coming of Christ, as Prodigies and Signs, &c. of it, do yet contradict themselves in this that they interpret.

1. This shaking the Heavens not only of what went afore his coming, but of what also after his coming whilst upon Earth. And,

2. That the shaking of all Nations, they interpret the Conversion of the Gentiles to the Christian Faith, which was after to be Christ's being gone to Heaven. And so according even to their Interpretation, it is not to be understood in this sense only of fore running Signs as to this sense, I will do all these things afore, and then the desire of all Nations shall come. And you may observe, that Paul here mentions not at all that part of the Prophecy of the Messiah's coming; nor did he cite it as a Proof or Evidence of the Messiah's being come, (though it served most fitly thereto,) but takes that for granted, and chiefly singleth out that part of it which was the designed Work of his coming when come, as that which is to be the demonstration of his Power and Glory, thereby to work a dread in the Hearts of those he wrote unto, and all Men to whom the sound thereof should come: How great a Person he was that now spake from Heaven, evidenced from the greatness of the Work which was the design of his coming, even to shake and remove the Heavens, and Earth it self, as was here prophesied of him; and who therefore would be to the refusers of him, a consuming Fire.

2. The word once more, or yet once, is, in the Prophet, not to be joined, or put in construction with this part of the Prophecy, The desire of all Nations shall come, as to this sense, that yet once, and he shall come, and come but once. That were an evident Falshood to have been spoken in Haggai's days; for Messiah had in the days of his Prophecy, both a first and second coming; as in distinction from the first, it is call'd Chap. 9. 28. You may therefore observe the Apostle applying and conjoining the word once more only unto this other part; Yet once more, and I will shake Heaven and Earth, leaving that other Particle [it is a little while,] to be applied to that other of his coming by the Prophet spoken of, taking and urging this yet once as properly belonging to his work of shaking. And,

3. As this word yet once, is to be understood as relating to this Work or Business to be done; so it was put in to signify and import the through and effectual performance of that Work, as the greatest and last that God hath a purpose pose to do ; that it shall not cease when begun, till he hath thoroughly shaken, and removed, and settled once for ever that which shall never be shaken, and so, that it is the utmost and last that shall be done. God hath but this one Work to do, to remove all that is made, and to set up a Kingdom which cannot be moved : So that the Expression once, imports, he will make but one work of it. And in this sense, Paul urgeth the import and signification of the word [yet once more.] And this also discovers another mistake that diverts the interpretation ; for the word once sounds (at the first hearing of it) as if it noted out only some point of one Time, wherein all that is to be done, shall be at once done, or mainly some one special instant of Time allotted for what is to be done, and that done in a trice (as we say) once, so as not to be done again a second time. But if it be so understood, it cannot be applied to that part of the Prophecy concerning the coming of Christ ; for so it were a manifest Falshood ; and to say in that sense, he shall once come, were a contradiction to that which Haggai asserts, That he should come not only a first but a second time. But to apply it to this work of shaking and removing all things ; as noting forth the through and effectual doing of it, a doing it to purpose : This sense will admit a continuation of that Work for a long while ; yea, and therein a reiteration of doing the same thing towards it again and again, (when but imperfectly at first,) until it be done thoroughly and to purpose. and hath attained its full intended Perfection at last. A Man may be said to intend to write but one Book or Treatise once for all, and after it no other (as the utmost Sum of his Thoughts,) and yet be a writing it by Pieces for many Years, yea, over and over, till he hath compleated and perfected it. So here to say, yet once more I will shake so as to remove, and then no more, will bear and admit a shaking, and shaking again over and over ; first, one piece or part of an old Building suppose, and then another, till he hath perfectly renewed it, and set up another once for all in the room thereof For all is but one and the same work, though necessarily reiterated until perfected ; and that Perfection at last is the once that was intended : Or look as that may be said, to be but one Earthquake, which continuing for many days, hath yet many throbs and shakes down first one House, then another : Or, that travel but one Birth that yet hath many Throws : So here the word yet once more, will without any such contradiction, admit and take into its comprehension the whole Work of Christ's shaking and removing, from first to last ; and every part and parcel thereof, as belonging and appertaining to all and every Piece thereof, unto one perfect compleat Work, which when done is done once for ever. Now then, to restrain it unto those first Times of the Gospel, and the shakings that then accompanied Christ's first Coming, is to restrain it from the attainment of its full End, and limit it unto what is imperfect, and but the least Piece of this Work. So then, though this word yet once being applied unto Christ's Coming, or to those words, The desire of all Nations shall come, would exclude a second Coming ; yet being thus understood and applied (as it ought,) to the work and business it self, as the intent of his Coming, then it will also admit a first and second Coming, or a third, (if a third were to come,) and all of them prophecied of, when as all of them are in order to effect and complete the business that is at length to be fully done.

4. I observe, the Apostle doth indeed draw and interpret Haggai's shaking Heavens and Earth, &c. to this, That God's great design and τὸ ἔργον, or that one work (as we say,) is to remove what is made, divers from, or not belonging to a Kingdom, which he means to set up as his utmost Master-piece, once for all ; and then he hath done for ever, and will do no more. This is express'd, Ver. 27, 28. And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain. Wherefore we receiving a Kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have Grace whereby we may serve God acceptably. It is evident by the contexture of Paul's Speech, That he doth collect or infer from this Prophetick Speech of Haggai this Kingdom of Christ, which cannot be moved as intended and prophecied of by Haggai, as well as the removal of things that were made to be Preludiums or Anti-masques to it. That same Wherefore, Ver. 28. sounds forth this a Reference to, with an Inference from the Prophet's Speech; he strongly enforcing both from that one word of the Prophet, yet once more: For as Beza glosseth on it from the word yet, ἔτι, he infers the movable condition of all other things that are not ingredients, into Christ's Kingdom: And from the word once more, (as we use to speak,) he argues something that shall succeed it, and be in the room of it when the other is removed that shall remain, and so shall become a work of God's once for ever: And both these (I say) equally and alike are inferr'd from the Prophet's words.
to,

Now there is nothing more consonant to Reason, than that the Prophet's scope should be to prophesie of Christ's Kingdom, under those Expressions of shaking Heaven and Earth, &c. as signifying thereby the removal and throwing down all high and potent Oppositions thereunto, or possessing the room thereof. Yea, and it became him as well to insert the Prophecy of this, then when he spake of his coming in the Flesh, as conjoined therewith, and the designed work thereof. For,

1. The setting up this immovable Kingdom of Christ, was the issue and mark of all the Prophets that have been since the World began, as old Zachary in his Song tells us. Of which David speaks, (upon whose Throne he knew Messiah was to sit, Acts 2. 30.) and others also in many Psalms, Psal. 82. and 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, &c. And Daniel also speaks to the same purpose, Dan. 8. 2, 44. and Chap. 7. 9, 27. In all which (when you read) you will find the throwing down of all other Kingdoms and worldly Excellencies that have or should have never so firm a rooting in the World, are still prophesied of in order to the erecting this Kingdom of Christ: And so whilst many of the Prophets prophesied of the one, they necessarily intended the other. To express this out of Daniel once for all, Chap. 2. 44, 45. The God of Heaven shall set up a Kingdom which shall never be destroyed, but it shall break in pieces the Iron, the Brass, the Clay, and the Gold, and consume all these Kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever. Or, if you will have it in the Psalmist's words (reiterated again and again,) sounding nearer to the Apostles here, The Lord reigneth, the World also (that new World he brings in) shall be established, that it shall not be moved. Now then Haggai prophesying, though under another Metaphor, namely the shaking of the Heavens and Earth, the Sea and the dry Land; (which Phrases, how they serve to express the removing all these, or whatever else can be supposed made, or heterogeneous to it, I shall hereafter shew.) The Prophet doing this together and with the same Breath when he prophesies of Messiah's coming; this must needs be acknowledged with the rest of its fellow Prophecies, to point at and intend the bringing in the Kingdom of Christ, where, in order to the erection of it, he foretels the removing of all else, even from the heights above to the depths below; all else that possessed the room of it; especially, considering that the erecting this Kingdom is made by all the holy Prophets and Apostles, the End, or Errand, or Business of Christ's coming into the World, whereof together with it, this our Prophet here speaketh And further,

2. He that shall duly weigh the Prophet's inserting this Royal Title of his, The desire of all Nations, whilst he prophesies this of him, that he should shake all Nations, may perhaps easily be persuaded to judge this to be the most genuine and natural import thereof; even prophetically to shew what he should be unto all Nations when shaken and converted to him, even their Lord and King: Then, when he hath by shaking all Nations, converted them, and brought them under his subjection, and so taken, the words are found expressly to prophesie of this his Kingdom to be set over all Nations, and not over the Jews only: For we all know, that desire to another (which is all one, as to call that other ones desire,) is put to express subjection to him as a Lord or Superior; that of the Wife to the Husband: Thy desire shall be to thy Husband, which is explained, And he shall rule over thee, Gen. 3. 16. And again, Chap. 4. 7. the subjection of Abel as the younger Brother (by the Law of Nature then,) is likewise thus expressed, Unto thee (speaking to Cain,) shall be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him. And more pertinently in the same Language did Samuel prophesie to Saul, That he should be chosen, and set up as King by all the Tribes of Israel; he thus thus expresseth it, On whom is all the desire of Israel? is it not on thee? 1 Sam. 9. 20. It is as much as to say, that their desire is to make thee their King and Ruler. And thus Haggai here says of all the Nations of the World receiving Christ for their King, The desire of all Nations shall come, and shake all Nations; so expressly prophesying of his Kingdom, and converting all Nations to him, and removing what is opposite to that his Kingdom among them.

Now from hence in the Fifth place, it will easily follow, That this Work and Design is such as the Proceedings of it do take up and run along through the whole time of the New Testament, the space of Christ's Reign, and is not to be limited to any one Particular, as the removal of Moses's Law, or the like. Yea and indeed, that was the Prophet's intendment, to include all as well as any one: Both which are evident, if we consider,

1. That the whole time of the New Testament is allotted to this Work, that is, the removal of what is opposite, and the advancement of his Kingdom: Christ hath both set that whole time to effect it in, and is continually a doing of it one way or other; He must reign (that is, continue to reign, having then begun to reign,) until he hath put all things under his Feet, and subdued all things under him; which therefore, while he reigns, he goes on to do Age after Age. And though some one Age may bring forth a full Birth of some eminent shaking of what had been long and fixedly rooted in the World before, yet the occurrence of those many Ages afore, had wrought together to the ripening of it; and when some one such Piece is compleated, then a new design is set on foot to shake some other thing that riseth up, or which was left in opposition to his Kingdom one way or other, so as this Work is perpetrated throughout that whole time. And this agrees with Daniel's Prophecy, (which, as you heard in the Matter prophesied of, agrees with Haggai;) who sets out the whole time of the New Testament, as the space allotted for this Work; whilst he foretellet, that in the days of the Fourth Monarchy a Kingdom should be set up, which, after the setting it up, should by degrees break in pieces all those Kingdoms, to advance its own Throne and Dominion for ever. Dan. 2. 44. And in the days of these Kings shall the God of Heaven set up a Kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the Kingdom shall not be left to other People, but it shall break in pieces, and consume all these Kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever: So that all the time, from the days when it first began (which was upon Christ's first coming, and ascending to Heaven in the Days of the Roman Empire,) to its attainment of the full sole Dominion, is allotted for the breaking in pieces, or in Haggai's Phrase shaking, in Paul's, removing and subduing all things else that stand in the way of it. And because this Kingdom was, when Paul wrote this; in existence, and actually begun; therefore Paul said, de presenti, we receiving a Kingdom which must shake and remove all things else. And thus Paul's [now,] Haggai's [yet once more,] Daniel's [days of the Kingdoms of this World,] are one and the same space of time set out, though a long one for this great work of shaking, that was to continue during that time. And,

2. It will hence follow, That Haggai thus prophesying of the Work of Christ's Reign and Kingdom, must be understood to have intended all such shakings, one as well as another that are in order thereunto; for the same reason, why any one shaking of one sort or kind, in order to advance Christ's Kingdom, should, and doth hold as well, and carry us on to any and to all other that tend alike to the same End. For though the things shaken may be divers, yet the work of shaking them is all of one and the same sort. But especially, because Haggai by his shaking, manifestly intended a removal, and a through removal of all as of one work, once for all, therefore no other than the total removal of all things, and so of one as well as another, though one after another, must be alike, intended by him. His once more extends it self to all that Christ himself (in whose Name he spake,) intended to do of this kind of work. I will do it once, that is, throughly, and so rest and cease from all such kind of work for ever. Now therefore, whoever should confine the Prophet's Aim and Speech to any one kind of shaking, in some one Age, (as suppose, that of the Jewish Fabrick in the Primitive Times,) when yet Christ had designed divers as great Works of removal removal of other Things afterwards; would thereby, though unwarily, make the Prophet to speak an untruth: For after he had in Christ's Name said, once more I shake, and but once more I will shake, and then no more, but end and cease that kind of work, as that Word once imports; and Christ should yet afterwards shake other things as great, yea greater than the first that were shaken, even the Gospel Worship, and Administrations themselves, that came in the room of the Jewish by Christ's Institution, and last of all these Heavens and Earth; this would be untrue. Therefore this word once more, being thus put in, signifies both a total removal and a through shaking, as one entire complete work of all but Christ's Kingdom, and what in it was for ever to remain. Hence therefore necessarily it must take into the compass of it, all and every shaking of Christ's in their Successions in After-Ages from first to last, and bind and grasp them all into one Bundle. For if any were left out, and were after to be done, Haggai's once more having put a period to that kind of work, had precluded and fore-spoken their being never to be done: For why, God had by the Prophet set his Finis to that sort of work, and engaged himself hereby to do no more the like. On the other side, Whilst any one piece of this work were yet left to be done, it might not only be said, The whole work was imperfect, but that Haggai's Prophecy was not yet fulfilled and accomplish'd; for he prophesied of a full, final, and total Removal, in saying, but once more I will shake, and yet still something was left, and remain'd behind; it must necessarily therefore take in all.

4. This will more clearly appear, if we bring all or any such particular instances of shakings, which any have gone about to determine the date of this Prophecy withal, and to circumscribe its meaning in the Circle of it, to a due Tryal and Examination. The issue of which Tryal will be found this, That no Man will know where rationally to fix the non ultra of it in any particular Accomplishments, and to stay the Waves of it, but so as the like Reason will break in upon him, and carry him on to take in still more and more to the end of the World; or else some defect, or absurdity, or other, will appear in such a Confinement: Which will appear by bringing each in their order to their Tryal, and let them each put in their Plea.

1. Will any pitch upon these great Alterations in States and Kingdoms (which did fore-run his Coming, and took up the space between Haggai's and Christ's time,) and those Prodigies in the Heavens, which are usually cited by Interpreters, that fell out before Christ? If he will therewith shut up the extent of the Prophecy, he will not only, 1. Much eclipse the spreading glorious Beams of this Prophecy, but, 2. Exclude thereby these Prodigies and Miracles in the Heavens and the Earth, that were wrought when Christ was in the Flesh, and afore he went to Heaven. And,

2. Those that will further extend it to that date of Christ's Ascension, and so take in the Signs that accompany his being come, as well as those that fore-went it, still will find they leave out that glorious shaking of all in the Conversion of the Gentiles and Nations, which Haggai here, and all the Prophets spake of; and which is the greatest Evidence that Christ is not come only, but is ascended, and hath erected that Kingdom in all Nations which shall never be removed. For Christ was but new gone to Heaven, the Apostles found the House at Hierusalem only shaking under them, and Three thousand converted; when as afterwards the whole World was. He, upon his Ascension, receiving all Power in Heaven and Earth to shake both; thereupon the gathering of the People was to him, and all Nations began to desire him, and stand astonish'd at him. And so therewith we must admit the Alterations of the Primitive Times, wherein Paul and other Apostles saw this effected, and so Paul's now, to be that present Age. And,

3. Having gone so far, we shall be tolled on to comprehend in the aim of the Prophecy, that great and eminent Change above all other of Moses his Ceremonial Law, which the Apostle so much inculcates in this Epistle; That with the Change of the High Priest, there must needs be a Change of the Law; and and herewith most Interpreters do bound it, as having received a fair and full accomplishment; This Change being, as they alledge, but once for all. For the Gospel or Kingdom of Heaven that comes in the room of it, is an everlasting Gospel: And the Word we preach to you, saith Peter, abides for ever. This Change indeed, because it fell out first, Interpreters have rested on, and thought it enough, yet to set up the Rest here, and stretch it no further, is evidently short and defective, and hath its Absurdities. For,

1. In this very Comparison which the Apostle here useth, Moses his Law-Worship, &c. doth bear but the proportion of the Earth; and therefore Moses is said to speak on Earth, (ver. 25.) in comparison of what Christ brought in; the Ordinances, Institutions, and Administrations of which, are call'd heavenly in opposition to them, (Heb. 9. 23.) as being given by him that was from Heaven. Now the Change that Paul brings the Prophet to foretel, is expressly said to be not only the removal of the Earth, but of the Heavens also. And so the Prophet's scope, is not accomplish'd in the Abolition of the Jewish, but even the heavenly Ordinances which had been brought in in their stead, must one day be removed by virtue of it; and to fulfil it, the Sun, and the Moon, and the Stars, the Ordinances that rule and govern the Times of the Gospel, must also be shaken and dissolved; so as that Change of the Jewish State is but a mean and a low one, in comparison of what Haggai meant and intended. Yea, and the Gospel Ordinances being removed as well as the Jewish was, Prophecy is to cease; the Lord's Supper, &c. to continue but till Christ comes. Nor Paul nor Haggai could have said, that God would shake but once, and mean the Jewish Earth only; when after that these Heavens were to be removed also, he thereby endeavouring to reach the highest and utmost Change whatever that could or ever should be. And,

2. Though the Jewish Fabrick was in Paul's time shaken, when he wrote this, yet it was not removed till after: For the Temple Worship stood some Years after this Epistle. And the Apostle speaks of a removal of what is shaken, not a shaking only; and so the Prophet also: And so it must yet be stretched to the Destruction of Jerusalem after the Apostle's Death. And if intended thus of the Mosaical Rites, then as yet it is not fully accomplish'd. For the Jews to this day, stick to and uphold those Observations of the Ceremonial Law, even all which their Exile out of their Country will permit them. And our Apostle tells us, that Moses's Vail is still upon their Hearts; but when converted, it shall be taken away, (2 Cor. 3.) so as it may truly be said, That it is removed, (as here:) And therefore till then, there is not (no not in that respect,) a full accomplishment of Haggai's Prophecy so understood. So then, still we are under this Promise unto the Jews Conversion; and the Prophet's Intention having gone these many miles with us, we may easily persuade our selves it will go throughout to the World's end, and reach the Day of Judgment, as by this invincible reason it doth. For till then the Ordinances of Heaven, the Gospel Institutions, will not be removed.

3. And it having stretch'd its Line over all Time to such Changes yet to come, we may as well enclöse within the compass of it all other Alterations of Religions, false and supposititious, that are and have been found in the World during all this space of Time, or shall fall out; and bring them in to pay Contribution unto Haggai's Prophecy; as that change of the whole Roman World from Heathenish Religion to embrace Christianity, and from Popish Idolatry to the Purity of Worship, and the Alterations of States and Kingdoms together herewith; and all these may be inferr'd by as good Warrant out of the Prophet as that Change made of the Jewish Religion and Kingdom; not only because these are all in Scripture Language denominated Heavens and Earth as well as any of the former: But further, because,

1. The shaking which Haggai prophesied of, was a shaking in all Nations; and so is not only, much less principally meant of the Jews or Jews Religion only, whose Law was given only unto that Nation and not the Gentiles, though converted unto Christ: It imports therefore, that Christ would make some work in all Nations as he did in the Jewish: That look what was done to the Green Tree of the Jewish Religion, &c. should be done to the drie; the same else where. And,

2. It is not a shaking of Persons only in Conversion, but of things that are to be removed, they are the Subjects of this Abolition, which is evident from the interpreting it of that judicial Remove, which was not only effected by the Conversion of many of that Nation to Christ, which was but common to them with all other Nations; but chiefly it is to be understood of the Abolition of the Temple Sacrifices, &c. And by the like proportion of Reason, (this being a shaking of all Nations, not the Jewish only, as that which is more expressly and literally spoken than that of the Jews;) the shaking and removal of all things in all Nations, and not of the Conversion only of Persons in all Nations that are opposite to, or possess the Room of Christ's Kingdom, will come in to have been intended, and as eminently. And therefore,

3. The Apostle interprets it of the shaking all things made, not Persons only, as the principal Subjects of this Vengeance. And there are and have been in all Nations, things made, and so made to be destroyed: All things that are human in Religion, whether false Religions themselves, or what is Superstition in the true, comes under the same præmunire of Haggai's Prophecy, that the Jewish Religion did, and by juster Sentence, for that had a better Plea for it self, having been made by God; and to be sure, they are much rather to be removed than the Ordinances of the Gospel which were made by Christ himself, which yet must submit to this general Law, and suffer this Fall in the end, by virtue of this Writ of Prophecy that comes to us by Haggai's Commission. And,

4. If it be thus extended to Changes in Religion in all Nations, divers from the Gospel, and removing all such things that stand in a nearer competition with the things belonging to Christ's Kingdoms, then truly we may without much difficulty, be persuaded to take in all the Alterations, Shakings, and Removals, Civil, that have been in States for Religion sake, and in the quarrel of Christ and his Truth, which have at any time since fallen out in the World. For,

1. If those Alterations in Kingdoms which fore-ran the coming of Christ, as Signs of it, are taken in by Haggai, and so interpreted by Haggai himself, ver. 20. of this Chapter, (of which more anon;) then much more these Com-motions in all Nations that have followed upon his going to Heaven, (seeing those in Religion since Christ's Ascension are entertained into it,) not only because they are of the same rank and sort, and so may as aptly come into this Catalogue and Account, as their Fellows afore Christ did; but further, because these are proper and immediate effects of his being come; yea, demonstrations and puttings forth of his Power and Rule that was given when he went to Heaven: Whereas those other were but Signs of his coming to come, and so Warnings to the World, that when he should come, he would do the same, and far greater. And,

2. The Powers and Dominions in all, are and have been the great upholders of those things in Religion that were made to be destroyed; and so having still cast their Lott with them, will alike perish together: Yea, the Powers of this World have been the great opposers of the interest of Christ in all Ages; and are therefore more particularly set out as Christ's Mark to remove and subdue; He must rule till he hath put down all Rule and Dominion. And,

3. The Jewish State: The Scepter or Government of it, was broken, as well as their Religion abrogated; and so shall all other, so far as they stick to what is false. And,

4. States and Kingdoms, and the Governments, and Powers, and Ranks in them, are as ordinarily set forth by this Metaphor of Heaven and Earth, and the Changes therein, by the shaking of Heaven or Earth, as any other: And the shaking of all Conditions of Persons in them, when opposite to the Gospel, is more properly a shaking the Nations themselves (which is the Letter of the Prophecy,) than any other Accomplishment.

5. By the Conduct of these Threads that have carried us to this length of Time, the end of the World, to this extent of things, to all that is made in Religion, to all Powers that oppose and stand in the way of Christ's Kingdom, we may now be brought to think, that nothing is to be left out of the reach of Haggai's Net, but that it is cast over all that is any way or ever to be removed, and so throw this Line of Desolation over the visible Heaven and Earth we see, which we know one Day will be removed.

6. and Lastly, We may also think the last Days of the Gospel the special Times intended for the perfecting these Works of Christ. For,

1st, Though it be true that Haggai doth explicitly in his words and intendment, fix his Eye upon that first Coming of Christ in the Flesh, as that which he eminently points, A little while and the desire of all Nations shall come; yet this hinders not, but that his intendment was to prophesie of that Kingdom, he should come to set up in shaking all Nations, and removing in all Nations what was opposite thereto, during his whole Reign.

For all and every of such Changes he should make from his first coming to the end, were alike the end of that his Coming and taking Man's Nature, and their Original, their Motion and influence were from thence: This was the Spring did from that time set all the Wheels a going which have never since ceased; Wheel moving within Wheel, (as Ezekiel) until this Engine brought then into the World, hath forced down all the old Frame of things whatever, and set up a new, which Work hath in every Age gone on more secretly or openly to this day. And therefore it were derogatory to the Honour of Christ, to limit the Prophet's intent unto the Occurrences that fell out at his first Coming, or in that Age: And if there had been no other dependence between this great Design and his First Coming, than simply, that the putting it in execution bear-eth Date from thence, and it had its rise and beginning therefrom, it were sufficient reason that First Coming alone should be so eminently mentioned above any other, though the whole of what followed thereon were intended: But further, it was causal, and set it all a-foot. Nor was it needful in that respect explicitly to mention his Second Coming, though that should be for the compleat Accomplishment of the Work. Besides,

2. No wonder if the Prophet in his Times, Primarily and in the First Place, and explicitly did foretel his First Coming, because the time he lived in was that in which the Jews had their eminent, and in some respect, their only Expectation of the promised Messiah; The next great thing to be done, which their Eyes and Hearts were intent upon. And it is as little a wonder, if the Apostle in his time (after that coming was past,) carries on the Eyes and Hearts of these Jews he wrote to, to all that yet remained, to be accomplish'd of this Work, and was yet behind, (whereof the greatest part by far was to come,) and more especially to a Second Coming, which should accomplish it; which brings me to the Second Part of this Affoilment or Reconciliation of Haggai and Paul to be added to the former, to make the answer full: Namely, that one and the same Prophecy hath often such a comprehensiveness in it, as it may involve and take into it self many Accomplishments, and so be fulfilled over and over. Instances of this in Scriptures, we find many: That Voice in Ramah of Rachel weeping for her Children, which were Ephraim and Benjamin, Jer. 31. 15. foretold the Destruction of some, and leading others into the Captivity of Babylon; from whence the Promise is, They should be brought again into their own Border, and was then fulfilled: And yet this was verified in the Slaughter of those Infants in and about Bethlehem, by Herod in our Saviour's time, where Rachel was buried. Yea, and there shall be a like ground for this Lamentation a third time at the calling of the Jews, which is yet to come; for even unto that doth the Promise made then, reach. If Rachel were now alive, she could not but lament for her Son Ephraim and all his Posterity, as utterly lost; for they themselves know not themselves, nor none other in the World where the Ten Tribes are, or what Nation they are. She would cry out, Ephraim is not, he is a lost Child; yet they shall be converted, and own'd by God for his pleasant Child: There is hope, says God, in thine end, speaking of the latter Day; Thy Sons shall come into their former border, ver. 17, 18, 19, 20. Thus the Destruction of Jerusalem prophesied of by Isaiab, Chap. 29. from ver. 1. to the 13th, for the cause there specified, ver. 13, 14. Forasmuch as this People draw near me with their Mouth and with their Lips do honour me, but have removed their Heart far from me; and their Fear towards me is taught by the Precept of Men: Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvellous Work among this People; even a marvellous Work and a Wonder; for the Wisdom of their Wise Men shall perish, and the Understanding of their Prudent Men shall be hid; is applied by Christ, as a Prophecy of the like Superstitions, and Temper of the Jews Spirit in his time: So as the Cause of that Second Destruction of Jerusalem that followed by Titus, Matth. 15. 7, 8. Ye Hypocrites, well did Esaias prophesie of you, saying. This People draweth nigh unto me with their Mouth and honoureth me with their Lips; but their Heart is far from me. Both which Destructions of that City; did (God's Providence thereby shewing the Parallel that held between them,) as Josephus records; fall out on the same day of the Month. Thus also that Prophecy of Jeremy, Chap. 16 v. 14, 15. and Chap. 23. v. 8. Behold, the Days come that it shall be no more said, The Lord liveth that brought up the Children of Israel out of the Land of Egypt, but the Lord liveth that brought up the Children of Israel from the Land of the North; and from all the Lands whither he had driven them, and I will bring them again into their Land that I gave unto their Fathers. This was manifestly intended of, and fulfilled in their Deliverance out of Babylon; and as manifestly the same is intended of their Conversion and Deliverance yet to come in the Days of the Gospel out of all Lands, as Chap. 23. v. 6, 7, 8. where the same Prophecy is in the same words repeated, and there undeniably applied to the Times of Christ, and remains yet to be fulfilled: In his Days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: And this is his Name whereby he shall be called, The Lord our RIGHTEOUSNESSES. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that they shall no more say, The Lord liveth, which brought up the Children of Israel out of Egypt: But the Lord liveth which brought up, and which led the Seed of the House of Israel out of the North Country, and from all Countries whither I had driven them, and they shall dwell in their own Land. I say it to be fulfilled (to use Isaiab's words) a second time, Is. 11. 11. To instance in no more Examples foreign to the thing in hand, but in such as are more parallel unto that which in Haggai we have in hand, (it being a Prophecy of Christ's Coming as a Redeemer,) as this also is: There is none that reads those words, Isa. 59. 20. And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from Transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord, but will presently have his Eyes upon Christ's First Coming in the Flesh to preach unto the Jews, which he did; especially, if he shall withal read Peter's Sermon to the Jews of that Age, speaking in the very words of that Prophecy, Acts 3. 26. God hath sent Jesus to bless you, by turning every one of you from his Iniquities. Yea, and Jeremy certainly, and the Jews in his days, had this First Coming of the Messiah in their Eye, and perhaps it only; and yet the Holy Ghost in penning this, had a further Eye upon his coming to them, as a Redeemer to convert them in the last Days. Therefore Paul guided by that Spirit, is bold to apply this as a Proof of Christ's coming in his Spirit, (or perhaps visible Appearance, such as made to himself when converted to Christ,) to convert the Nation of the Jews, after their rejection under these Times of the Gospel which is yet to come; Rom. 11. v. 26. All Israel shall be saved, as it is written, There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away Ungodliness from Jacob.

And why should not the like hold here in the Prophecy of Haggai, That although the Prophet himself, and the Jews he spake it unto, had their Eyes only fixed upon the First Coming of Christ, and the Alterations and Shakings then made; yet the Holy Ghost had a further Eye upon a Second Coming, accompanied with greater Shakings both afore and after. And,

2. This Rule must needs be acknowledged in a special manner to hold true, when there are many and several gradual Accomplishments of one and the same kind of Work done by degrees and parts, which are all of one sort or kind, and all at last to be cast up in one total Sum, and which may be reduced to one general

ral Head that comprehends them all. In this case a Prophecy may be applied to each of those Performances, and may be said to be fulfilled in the first, and yet to remain to be fulfilled, and still under promise in respect of a future Accomplishment. And such indeed is that instance last given, which upon Christ's first Coming in the Flesh, had an imperfect Harvest, and first Fruits of Performance in converting Multitudes of Jews in that Age, but so as to have a more full Harvest in the Conversion of all Israel at the last. This is undeniable in other instances; for that promise, Old things are past away, behold all things are become new; given forth by Isaiab at twice, Ch. 8. 43. and Ch. 65. hath a just accomplishment in the Conversion of every Sinner, as the Apostle affirms, 2 Cor. 5. 17. Therefore if any Man be in Christ, he is a new Creature; old things are passed away, behold all things are become new; and so is every day fulfilled in the World. And when whole Nations renounce their false Worship, and entertain the Worship and Profession of Christ, it hath a more ample degree, but yet still it remains at the end, to be fulfill'd in his creating the New Jerusalem, Rev. 21. 2. When the Tabernacle of God is with Men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his People, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all Tears from their Eyes; and there shall be no more Death, neither Sorrow nor Crying, neither shall there be any more Pain: for the former things are pass'd away. And he that sat upon the Throne, said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write: for these words are true and faithful. And Isaiab manifestly aimed at it, Isa. 65. 17, 18, 19. For behold, I create new Heavens and a new Earth: and the former shall not be remembred, nor come into mind. But be you glad, and rejoice for ever in that which I create: for behold, I create Jerusalem a Rejoicing, and her People a Joy. And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my People; and the voice of Weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of Crying. And this, though it had an imperfect Accomplishment in Paul's time, in every true Israelite that was converted to God, who had a new Heaven in the renewal of his Mind, and a new Earth created in his Affections and Outward-man; yet Peter tells us, that still, in respect of the ultimate Accomplishment of it, it still continues under a Promise to be fulfilled, 2 Pet. 3. 13. Nevertheless we, according to his Promise, look for new Heavens, and a new Earth, wherein dwelleth Righteousness. And thus here, as to the point in hand, the shaking of the old Heavens and Earth to bring in this new, being a work that hath many Parts, and Pieces, and Degrees. that go to make up the total of it; it comprehending the whole Work of Christ's Kingdom during his whole Reign from his first coming to the end; it had an accomplishment in what was done in the World in those Primitive Times, upon Christ's first coming. But he that should determine and end it there in his removal of the Jewish Worship, converting the Nations. or the like great Alterations thereupon made, should narrow that Prophecy of Haggai as much as he, that should confine Isaiab's intent to be meant only of each particular Believer's Conversion, when it is so evidently to be enlarg'd to the creating of a new World in which Righteousness shall dwell, that is, rule and reign, which we look for, even that World to come as in this Epistle to the Hebrews the Apostle termeth it.

A
 DISCOURSE
 OF THE
 RECONCILIATION OF ALL THE People of God,

(Notwithstanding all their Differences, and Enmities,) design'd and effected by Christ's Death.

Ephes. II. 14, 15, 16.

14. For he is our Peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle Wall of Partition between us :
15. Having abolished in his Flesh the Enmity, even the Law of Commandments, contained in Ordinances, for to make in himself, of twain, one new Man, so making Peace.
16. And that he might reconcile both unto God in one Body by the Cross, having slain the Enmity thereby.

 Printed in the First Volume of his Works.
 Part III.*

YOU have heard the Story of the Enmity between the * Jew and the Gentile, how great and lasting it had been. You have also seen what Christ in his own Person did work for the staying of it both meritoriously and representatively on the Cross, in the Sacrifice of himself, and what force and efficacy that must needs have in the issue to bring about their actual Reconciliation, and to smother all Enmity.

I come now to the actual Accord, That the Vertue of Christ's Death did effect between these Jews and Gentiles in those Primitive Times, in the view of the Apostles and Christians of that Age, and which the Apostle Paul himself saw brought to a great Perfection when he writ this Epistle.

And it is requisite we have our Hearts and Eyes intent upon it, as a Token, and Sign, great and marvellous; these Two Works, The Conversion of the Gentiles; and, The mutual coalition of Jew and Gentile into one new Man, being of all other the greatest Miracle wrought under the New Testament; the most glorious Fruit of Christ's Death, and among the strongest Evidences of the Truth of Christian Religion.

And

And that the Greatness, together with the Reality and Truth thereof may appear, it is necessary, That I first shew out of the Records of The Acts of the Apostles, the Enmity or Distance that continued and remained in the New Christian Jews towards the poor Gentiles; for in the Jew, principally and originally, was the Root of Bitterness, and most deeply seated together with the sore Mischiefs which might have further arisen from them, even to the danger of a perpetual hindrance of the Gentiles Conversion.

It may seem strange to hear, that the godly Jews, after they had received Christ, the promised desire of all Nations as well as of themselves; yea, and the Holy Ghost likewise sent down from Heaven by Christ, should yet retain so great a degree of distance & simultas, towards the Gentiles, as we read and find was in them. It is a wonder, that their being filled with the Holy Ghost as with New Wine, should not have sweetened their Spirits, but that yet so great a Must of the Old Vessel should yet remain unwrought out in them. But God himself takes time to work out long retained Principles; and Men may thence well learn, so to do towards their Brethren.

And the dangerous Effects and Consequents of the Jews grudge against the Gentiles, do make it yet more strange, and aggravate the evil of it. For,

1. It would have been (if it had not been removed,) an eternal Bar and Obstacle unto the very Calling and Conversion of the Gentiles to the Christian Faith, and the propagation of the Gospel to them who were fellow Heirs of it, together with themselves; (than which, what can be supposed of more mischief!) But,

2. After that Bar was taken out of the way, and the Gentiles were called and converted, there yet still continued such Degrees and Relicks of this old Tincture as occasioned such actual violent and high Division in the Church between the then become Gentile Christian and the Believing Jew, that all the Apostles then living, with all their Skill and powerful Applications, could hardly cure and remove, which yet in the end was allayed, and both made one in the issue.

It is requisite for me, before I enter upon these Heads, especially the First, to set forth as in a brief Map, those several degrees of spiritual Latitudes and Distance which these Gentiles lay in, as to the Apprehensions and Calculations of the Jews. The Scriptures in general, had termed them afar off, both in the Old and New Testament, which is spoken of them in respect of their incapacity and remoteness from Christ and the Covenant of Grace; whereas of the Jews it is oppositely said, They that were nigh; (of both which more afterwards.) Now though all the Gentiles are said to be afar off, yet some were in further Degrees of Latitude than other; and the Jews accordingly in their Spirits, were less or more remote in converse with them.

I distinguish them into these Four Ranks or Climates.

1. The first were Samaritans, who were indeed in place Neighbours, but by their original Extraction Gentiles, as you read in the Book of Kings, who became Inhabitants of the Land of Ganaan, and succeeded the Ten Tribes therein, after that the most of the Ten Tribes were carried Captive. These also were circumcised, owned Moses's Law, profess'd of themselves to seek the true God, and to Sacrifice to him, as did the Jews, Ezra 4. 3. But were so corrupt in their observation thereof, and with such a mixture, that Christ says, there was no Salvation to be expected in their Profession. Though they were nearer in place to the Jews living in part of the Holy Land, yet from these the Jews were most alienated in their Affections, and abhorred them of all other Gentiles; as being nearer in the Profession of the same Religion, and yet so dissenting in the observation of it.

2. There were Gentiles who were become Profelytes to the Jewish Religion, that had join'd themselves to the Lord, Isa. 56. 6. had submitted to the whole Ceremonial Law, and to that end had received the Seal of Circumcision, having been first wash'd, or baptiz'd; and these, though Gentiles, were yet to the native Jews as any other of their own Nation; now as to such, there was no scruple in any Jew to converse with them: For they were accounted clean, and came as freely into the Temple as themselves, and were called Profelyti fœderis, Profelites of the Covenant, Acts 56. 6. where they are termed the Strangers that join themselves to the Lord and take hold of the Covenant.
and

3. A third Set were such Gentiles, who though truly converted to the Acknowledgment, Fear, and Worship of the true God, wrought Righteousness according to the Moral Law, yet entertained not their Circumcision, nor the observation of the Rites of the Law Ceremonial, such as Cornelius, Acts 10. and others, who under the term of devout Men and Women, as those Greeks, Acts 17. 4. are distinguish'd from the Jews, Acts 13. 16, 43. The like was Naaman the Affyrian of old; and even these not circumcised, nor obliging themselves to Moses's Law, the Jews did reckon unclean.

4. A fourth Set were such as remained in their Gentilism, the Idolaters of this World, as Paul calls them, which were the generality of all Nations, which therefore the Jews did much more reckon unclean than the Third sort.

This Map or Division of the Gentiles, it is necessary to have in our Eye; for the following Discourse hath often reference to each of these sorts, (as occasion shall be given to make mention of them :) and by understanding this difference, we the better shall discern the approaches God made by degrees into this great Work of the Gentiles Conversion: Which Difference of the Gentiles is by this commended to our regard and observation, that the Holy Ghost thought it a Subject worthy to spend much of the Book of the Acts upon.

These things premised, I am to present you with the History of the Conversion of these Gentiles, even those whom the Jews esteemed more unclean; and that by these Jews themselves, and of the Difficulties and Bars that lay in the way thereof in the Jewish Spirits, even after their own Conversion to the Faith of Christ; and how this Wall of Division mouldred, and by degrees was dissolved, and levelled to the ground. The Narrative of which is of great use to us in our Dissention and Distances, (far less than these.) to assure us, that they may and will be, though by degrees abolish'd,

The Case between the converted Jews and the rest of the Elect Gentiles to be converted, stood thus: The time was now come, which had been foretold that the Gentiles should become the Spouse of Christ; yea, and the Ordination of God, was, that the Word or Means to convert them, was to go forth out of Sion to all the Earth, and those of the Jewish Nation (being such themselves converted,) were to be Instruments of their greater Call, or the Prophecies had not been fulfilled; and yet the nine first Chapters of the Acts, give us such a Character of the Patent Constitution of the new converted Jews, yea of the Apostles themselves, as renders them not only far and backward, but wholly averted; yea, in Conscience, kept off from the least endeavour after such a Work. They stand bound up in their Spirits not so much as to preach the Gospel to the Gentiles, though the Gentiles themselves should have sent to them, and have earnestly desired it of them; and like Men confined to a Circle, they dare not stir one foot that way. Peter, and the rest of the Apostles, that with Zeal and Boldness dared the utmost of Persecution to convert their own Countrymen the Jews, or circumcised ὀμυρτία of the Gentiles were yet under such an awe and bondage of Jewish Scruple, that in Conscience they durst not converse with an uncircumcised Gentile, though it were to save his Soul eternally.

And that which increaseth the Wonder, is, that tho' our Saviour at his Ascension had given in Commission, and in Charge, and in express Terms, to preach the Gospel to all Nations, and every Creature under Heaven, yet they were averse to any Converse with the Gentiles: So deeply had the Tradition and Enmity received from their Fore-fathers prepossessed their Spirits.

And I dare not affirm the reason of this to be, That the Calling of the Gentiles was wholly an Arcanum hidden to them. For besides that, even the Jews at this day, understand and acknowledge this to have been prophesied of, (as Beza, Acts 2. 39.) to fall out in the days of the Messiah; and what the envious and hardned Jews acknowledge now, cannot be supposed hid from them then, especially from the Apostles; our Lord also expressly foretold it, Matth. 9. 11, 12. Jer. 11. 32. and giveth it clearly in his last Commission; yea, it seems clear, that

Peter

Peter understood it (at least in the confused Notion,) by his interpretation of that Promise, Joel 2. 17, 20, 21. I will pour out my Spirit upon all Flesh, and it shall come to pass, whoever calls upon the Name of the Lord shall be saved. Which Promise, ver. 39. he declares, to belong to them afar off, who in their known Language were the Gentiles, (to encourage the Jews the more to embrace it;) and that by them afar off, to be called the Gentiles, are to be understood, the Old and New Testament give in Evidence both when they speak of their Calling, as Peter there; so Isaiab in the Old; and not to go far from my Text, the immediate foregoing 13 and following 17 Verses of this Chapter, You Gentiles who were far off, are made nigh: And, ver. 15. He came and preached the Word to them that were afar off (you Gentiles,) and you that are nigh; but how that this should be effected in the end, as yet neither he nor any of his fellow Apostles, knew the time when; nor yet had their Consciences received any particular Discharge or Quietus est, from those fore-mentioned Jewish Principles, but lay still bound up thereby from so much as conversing familiarly with the Gentiles; and therefore were much more restrained from any industrious setting themselves to convert them, by preaching the Gospel to them; much less baptizing them, or giving them the Holy Ghost, so as if they did understand so much, or that themselves were the Men designed to this Work: Yet how these Commands and Laws of not converting the Gentiles that lay upon them, (as they yet thought from God,) should be annull'd, they were ignorant of. For this is certain, That the Story of the Acts puts this aversness of theirs upon the remainder of that old Enmity and Principles of their Jewish Religion, taken in by Tradition from their Fathers; which appears evidently in the instance of Peter, and other Jews, as also the Practice of the rest of the Disciples that were the most zealous of winning others to the knowledge of Christ. First for Peter; The Story in Acts 10. informs us, what Chains they were he stood fetter'd with, which held him fast from giving consent to Cornelius, a Roman Gentile, (who yet was, in his Religion, come half way to him, being a Profelyte, a Worshipper of the true God, only was not circumcised, nor had submitted himself to Moses's Rites,) until God himself released Peter, and knock'd off those Fetters, with saying from Heaven, ver. 20. Arise, go, nothing doubting; and if you will know what the Scruple that made him doubtful was, himself expresseth it, ver. 28. You know (speaking afore his Jews,) how that it is an unlawful thing for a Man that is a Jew, to keep company, or to come unto one of another Nation that was uncircumcised, as Cornelius was; for we read the Quarrel was, Acts 11. 3. against Peter for this fault of his; That he went into Men uncircumcised; for else, those Profelytes of other Nations that were circumcised, and submitted to the Law, were accounted as native Jews, and called Profelyti fæderis. But God immediately shew'd me, (saith Peter thereupon,) that I should not account any Man common or unclean. Those words, nothing doubting, evidently import inward Scruples and Argumentations in their Mind contrary, by reason of these fore-mentioned Principles, and he took more notice on this as the eminent, if not sole cause of that Obstruction; inasmuch as he again repeats these very words in his Apology, made Acts 11. 12. The Spirit bad me go, nothing doubting: And in the 29th Verse of that Chapter, he saith, I thereupon (God having struck off all contrary Apprehensions,) came without gain-saying. So then he had hitherto stuck in the Mud of this Principle, and could not stir a step forth of it, to the saving of any Gentiles by converse with them. And,

2. As Peter, so all the rest of the Christian Jews that continued at Jerusalem, were of the same Mind and Spirit: For upon his return to Jerusalem, after this so happy Hansel of the first Gentile uncircumcised who believ'd on Christ Jesus: They all there quarrell'd with him for this which he had done, Acts 11. 2. When Peter was come to Jerusalem, they that were of the Circumcision contended with him, saying, Thou wentest in unto Men circumcised, and didst eat with them; and so they quarrell'd him much more, for having preach'd to him, and having baptized him. Peter's Apology argues, their Speech to have been most bent against that; for in the Conclusion there, v. 15. he thus speaks; As I began to preach, the Holy Ghost fell on them; and I remembered the Words of the Lord about Baptism, &c. But forasmuch as God gave them the like Gift, What was I that I could withstand God? namely in this baptizing them; thereby also shewing his former averseness and unsatisfaction to such an Act, to have been such as theirs now was. Yea,
the

3. This was commonly received, and taken for granted Principles amongst all Professors of Christ, that were Jews in those First Times. You know, saith Peter to those Jews, ver. 10. how it is unlawful, appealing to the common Maxim that had obtained amongst them to that very hour. And,

4. Hereupon you read of a Shiness in the first Christian Jew, to preach the Gospel to any but such as were of their own Nation, or Profelytes circumcised and submitted to Moses's Law, who were all one in their esteem, as Jews, as appears by the Practice of those of the first at Jerusalem, who had been scattered from Jerusalem, ver. 8. who though they carried such a Fire of Zeal in their Bosoms, to seek to convert others to the Faith of Christ, yet carrying withal along with them these common Principles of their Nation and Religion, they were damped and restrained in their Spirits thereunto; for as they travelled through Heathen Countries, it is with a certainty recorded, that they preach'd the Word to none but to Jews only: So Acts 11. 29. that is, either Jews by Birth or Race, who were then and long afore dispersed over all Nations, as Acts 2. 5. shews, or such Profelytes which were to them as Jews, (as was said;) they perhaps (as some conjecture,) understanding Christ's Commission to preach the Gospel to all Nations, to have been still intended of the Jewish Nation, or Profelytes, as were in those Times dispersed throughout all Nations, as in Acts 2. appears; and so still compliant and consistent with those Jewish Principles, not conversing with any other Nations whom they accounted unclean.

Now this being the condition wherein things stood in that first Church of Christians, and these their Apprehensions, either their Judgments must be cleared of these Obstructions, or the Gospel would not have run and flowed forth through these Channels unto any of the Gentiles; and yet the Prophecies in the Old Testament, and God's Ordinations, were fix'd and peremptory, that the Gospel was to go forth from Zion; and these very Christian Jews were to be the very instruments of propagating of it: What, shall these all be frustrate, and Christ lose his Spouse through these Mens Scruples? No verily. This other Part therefore of this Story, namely, How this first Wall of Partition the Text speaks of, moultered by degrees, and in the end was laid flat, and an High-way paved through the Hearts of these Jews from Jerusalem to Assyria: This was a great Work, and it is to be marvellous in our Eyes. And the observation of it may support our Faith, (which is the end of my relating it,) under the like slow-paced gradual, yet sure Proceedings of our God, towards the effecting of that Union among the Saints in our Times.

The first step (though but a small one to what after followed,) was the Conversion of the Samaritans, (the first sort of those Gentiles I in that short Scheme made mention of,) a Mungrel between Jews and Gentiles, yet Inhabitants of the Holy Land, circumcised, and owning the Law of Moses, so as they were Jews in Profession. Concerning those, it was a while a matter of difficulty unto me, (as it hath been to other Writers,) how it came to pass, that these Samaritans being hated above all Nations by the Jews, (as the Speech of that Woman to Christ shews, How is it that thou being a Jew, askest Drink of me that am a Samaritan? for the Jews have no dealing with the Samaritans.) How, I say, it should come to pass, that these Christian Jews, Peter, and the rest, should without any hesitation, or scruple, or new extraordinary Revelation about them so freely converse with, preach to, and baptize these Samaritans, as in Acts 8. we read. Philip broke in first, then Peter also (who yet himself did still scruple,) doing the like. And John laid on Hands, and they received the Holy Ghost. The difference upon search, I found to lye partly in a more special Warrant and Command, given them by our Lord himself concerning these Samaritans; which the Apostle had had more easily understood him in, than in that concerning other Gentiles, having also his own Practice to confirm them in it.

1. This Command he had at his Ascension said, Acts 1. 8. You shall be Witnesses to me both in Jerusalem and all Judea, and in Samaria, and the utmost Parts of the Earth: Which latter part of their Commission was perhaps more ambiguous to them; for they might still have understood it of Jews only that were then spread in all Nations, but Samaria was expressly named. And further, This was the recalling of a Prohibition given by Christ, Matth. 10. 5.

2. They might also perhaps consider and understand from his own Practice and peculiar Prediction in his Life, a special Design to Samaria, to be an Harvest ripe for them to thrust their Sickles into, after that Judea should be converted. 1. For his Practice. Himself had converted a Samaritan Woman, yea, and her fellow Citizens also, and abode two days with them, John 4. where, whilst he was upon the place, he measured out and quartered forth that Country, and the Inhabitants thereof for his own Harvest. And by having had in those first Fruits, he thereby had consecrated the rest of the same standing, to be reaped into his Garner with the Fruits of other upon his Ascension; concerning which, he therefore then renewed his Commission a Second Time.

3. But that which did further facilitate the Apostle's Preaching to the Samaritans, and gave them liberty to have compassion on these, with Difference from other Gentiles, was indeed the different condition of their Persons from other pure Gentiles: For the Samaritans were, tho' the most of them in their Original Gentiles, yet circumcised all, receiving and acknowledging the Five Books of Moses, expecting the Messias, John 4. Yea, many of the Seed of Abraham remained mingled among them, (without known distinction by Genealogies,) that is, of the Ten Tribes, it being their Country, and were all now alike Inhabitants of the same promised Land, and in all these respects, as immediately capable of the Preaching of the Apostles, as were the Inhabitants of Galilee, where Christ himself spent the most of his Ministry. For the Inhabitants of Galilee and Capernaum were the Posterity of those Gentiles brought in by Salmanassar, mingled with some Remainers of the Old Inhabitants of the Seed of Abraham, even as well as those of Samaria were; and in these respects, they are distinguished from other common Gentiles at large by Christ himself, in that caution (as I may call it, rather than a prohibition,) given in his Life-time, and but pro tempore for that time, namely Matth. 10. 5. Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any City of the Samaritans, enter not, but go rather to the lost Sheep of Israel; where he distinguisheth Samaritans from Gentiles, and prohibits them only with the Rather. The reason of that Prohibition or Caution having been, that the Gospel was first in order to be thoroughly preached unto the pure Jews: And seeing that for that small Space, until his Ascension, they had enough to do to go over and preach it in the Region of Judea, so as if they then should have step'd into the Cities of Samaria, they should not have accomplished that Work designed; therefore rather, says he, confine your selves for the present to Judea. In that new enlarged Commission, Acts 1. 8. (wherein he more particularly sets forth the course of the Gospels Progress,) he mentions Samaria still next after Judea, but with a manifest distinction from all other Gentiles afar of, when he calls the rest the Ends of the Earth: Yea, and this Difference was manifestly acknowledged by the rigidest Jew, then turned Christian. For though they contended with Peter, for going in to Cornelius, yet they murmur not, no not so much as mention his going in to the Samaritans; or doth he give any Account of it to them. Nay, it was warranted by his fellow Apostle before he went, Acts 8. 14. So then this of preaching the Gospel, and conversing with Samaritans, was an Exception grounded upon a special Reason from the difference between them and Gentiles, universally acknowledged by the Christian Jews.

And as for that Enmity and Estrangement of the common Jew from the Samaritan before-mentioned, it lay rather in Malice in their Wills, not in any express Prohibition that their Law gave them; which distance from these Sa- maritans, a Zeal for the Conversion of Souls, soon struck off in these new converted Christian Jews. Well but for all this, that so open a door was let open into Samaria, and the Regions thereof; yet still they durst not go a step further, to baptize, or familiarly converse with any supposed pure Gentile, though Profelytes to the true God, if they were not circumcised, and subscribed not themselves to the Ceremonial Law; for notwithstanding this successful inroad into Samaria, which is recorded Chap. 8. of the Acts, We find Peter and all his Fellows with him, still at a stand, Chap. 10. to go in unto Cornelius, (though he was such a Profelyte as was just, holy, and feared God,) merely because uncircumcised; and that is the true Account why, notwithstanding the Conversion of Samaria, which was in order before that of Cornelius, that that is made the first instance of the Gentiles Conversion to the Faith of Christ, by two Apostles, Peter and James, Acts 15. says James, v. 14, 15. Simon hath declared, καθὼς πρῶτος, how first (so the words are,) God did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a People for his Name. Now how or what manner of Declaration had Peter made, (which James refers us to,) you had in the Verses foregoing. Brethren, you know how ἀφ' ἀρχαίων ἡμερῶν. From the first days, or early days, namely of the Preaching of the Gospel, God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my Mouth should hear the Word of the Gospel, and believe God, bearing them witness, by giving them the Holy Ghost. These Gentiles he insists on as the first converted were manifestly Cornelius and those with him, and not the Samaritans, who had first believed through Philip's Preaching, and first by Peter's; and Peter appealing to the cognizance of many now present at that Meeting, says, Brethren, you know how; and refers both to those that were eye and ear witnesses, and present at Cornelius's House; and Peter's Sermon there made, as likewise to whom he had faithfully given the Narration, and who had rested thereon satisfied, Chap. 1. at both of which some were present.

I come therefore (where this hath brought me,) to a second Branch of this Story, and that is, to shew how this Wall of Distance and Separation from all the Nations was removed out of the way: By what means this great Sluce of Enmity was pull'd up that stop'd the Current and Overflow of the Gospel to the rest of the World. And of this, that last instance of Cornelius's Conversion, gives a full and particular Account, and you shall now behold all and every of the same Persons that you have seen scrupled and bound up to this, brought now in and unbound, and abundantly satisfied therein, (which was a marvellous Work of God.) 1st, Peter; 2dly, Then his Fellows; 3dly, Those Jews that had been scattered, (Chap. 8. and preached the Gospel only to the Jews;) And, 4thly, The generality of the converted Jews.

I shall begin first with Peter, the great Wheel and Engine that brought all the others.

After Peter had finished his Journey through Samaria, and the Villages thereof, and so return'd, Acts 8. 15. unto Jerusalem, we find him to take indeed another Progress into Palestina, to Lydda and Joppa, but so as to converse with Jews only, and visit in those Cities, those Brethren of the Jewish Nation that had believed. Thus, Acts 9. 3. And we find him, (or Christ's Spirit,) rather takes him at one Simon's House, a Jew, as his Name gives Evidence; for at none others durst he as yet lye or abide; and thereupon a Vision befalls him: And the Interpretation of it, with a Command to go unto Cornelius, which gave him such ample satisfaction, as everlastingly silenc'd all Scruple in him. And to this end, that now at once this door of Faith might be set open wide enough, without any more distinction or qualification of Persons, and difference of Gentile from Gentile, Profelytes of this sort, or the other, and make the way alike for the bringing in of all alike, whether they were legally pure or impure, clean or unclean; the grossest Idolaters as well as any other. God therefore made the Rule and Commission large enough, and seals the Warrant of it with a Vision from Heaven, the Mystery of which held forth this great Latitude. A Sheet from Heaven is let down, having four Corners fastned to the several Quarters of Heaven, wherein were all manner of four-footed Beasts, Wild Beasts,

Beasts, Creeping Things, Serpents and Fowls of the Air, whereof many were pronounced unclean: Yea, by the Law of Commandments given the Jews, many of them were abhorrent even to Nature, as Toads, and were now declared Purified, ver. 4. What God hath cleansed, calling that common. And these Beasts of all sorts, signified Men of all sorts, even Gentiles of all Nations, Professions whatever, though never so venomous. Thus Peter applies it, ver. 28. God hath shewed me, ('twas God's own Interpretation of it,) that I should not call any Man common or unclean; that is, in respect of that outward ceremonial Impurity, such as by that Law had been in fine both in Meats and in Beasts, and parallelly in Men. For now God had taken that away; and by that Sheet in which all, both clean and unclean, were met, was signified the Universal Catholick Church of the New Testament, which was let down from Heaven, Gal. 4. 26. and to be taken into Heaven as that Sheet in the Vision was, in which are all sorts gathered, all things in Earth, Eph. 1. 10. Jews and Gentiles; and yet from all the four Corners of Heaven to which this Sheet was knit; imparting their gathering to be from East, West, North, and South, to sit down with Abraham, and his Children: Upon this Vision and the Circumstances that accompanied it, (which often confirm the Mind of God unto us,) as that Messengers should be knocking at the Door, the while to bring in News of another Vision made to Cornelius to send for him: Peter hereupon professeth the greatest Conviction; Chap. 10. 34. Of a truth, I perceive, that God is no respecter of Persons, but in every Nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him. He speaks as a Man, either whose Judgment was now altered, or but now fully convinced and determined of that which he had but an inkling of before, καταλαμβάνομαι, I have it, I apprehend it, and take it in: Although he had taken in the inkling of it afore, yet as it falls out in a new degree of spiritual Knowledge, especially in a matter wherein the Mind was any thing wavering, but is now confirmed therein; so Peter here professeth, as but now to take in the apprehension of it, as the word καταλαμβάνομαι, I apprehend it, or, I take it in: And that Phrase, ἀπὸ ἀληθείας, of a truth, notes not out only the infallibility and certainty of Light now came in, causing him to apprehend it as a certain truth, but that now he had experimentally seen the truth of it. Indeed, that Speech argues, that the Jews, yea Peter himself, had formerly been so rigid in their Judgments about such kind of Profelytes as submitted not to Moses's Law, that they questioned whether they were such as God did save. The like argues that Speech of those Disciples, Acts 11. 18. Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted Repentance unto Life: And though they had repented, yet it would seem, they doubted whether unto Life or no. And so he goes on to enlarge upon this, and to give a further account of his Satisfaction in it. I perceive now, says he, that this was indeed the Word (or Message,) and so parts the Gospel it self, which God sent to the Children of Israel, preaching Peace by Jesus Christ, Lord of all. The Spirit of God was promised to bring all things seasonably to the Memories and Understandings of the Apostles by Christ, but not understood, which had been by him spoken afore; which Promise was eminently fulfilled in this Passage of Peter's: For now he understood that Embassy of Peace on Earth, Good-will to Men spoken of, as the consequent of Christ's coming into the World, to concern all Nations; He remembered also the many Speeches which Christ himself had uttered when preaching this: He spake of the Calling of the Gentiles, Matth. 8. 11, 12. and John 11. 32. and how all were to be gathered into one and the same Fold, John 10. and so the Enmity to be removed. And Peter annexeth this Reason of confirmation of it, He is Lord of all, that is, of Gentile as well as the Jew indifferently; and now I fully remember (thought he,) how when Christ went to Heaven, he saith, All Power is committed to me both in Heaven and in Earth; and how, as an Inference from it, he added, Go ye therefore, and teach all Nations; the intent and evidence whereof he had now seen: And Peter further tells us, how a cloud of Testimonies came into his mind from all the Prophets, which afore he understood not so clearly, confirming to him this truth; it being God's manner to send extraordinary Visions with Testimonies of his Word coincident therewith;

thus,

thus, ver. 43. To him give all the Prophets witness, as to be the Messias promised to the Jews; so to the Great Proclamation concerning him, That whosoever believeth on him shall receive remission of Sins, by those words πάντες τὰ πνεύματα, whoever believes. He understood and intends the General Pardon now proclaimed under the Gospel to Gentiles as well as Jews. As it is the brief Sum and Substance of the Prophet's Predictions in this Point, so it fell out to be that very Promise which Peter out of Joel 2. 32. had been harping at in his first Sermon to the Jews, Acts 2. which he had interpreted to concern as well the Gentiles that were afar off as the Jews and their Children: But yet he then was himself far off from the clear and distinct apprehension of it, yet groped at it as in the dark; but now he hath a full clear distinct over-coming Light brought into his Soul about it, as often on the sudden, there useth to be unto us about things wherein we had but confused Notions we minded or heeded not. A general Notion he had of this thing then; but now all the Prophets, that is, such that were of the Old Testament, come in distinctly to his mind, with their several Verdicts and Testimonies hereunto. He had a sudden View, and thorough Light, which ran through them all as to this great Point; and such a View the Spirit often gives us in things we considered not afore.

And unto this general Sum and Substance of the Gospel, concerning the Gentiles Calling, drawn out of the Prophets by Peter, did the like Speeches and Quotations of Paul, fall in, and give their express Suffrage and Consent, Rom. 10. 11. where being upon the same Argument Peter is upon here, he speaks in the very same Language that Peter here doth: I need but read the words; for the Scripture says, Whosoever shall believe in him shall not be ashamed: For there is no difference between the Jew and the Gentile: For the same Lord over all, is rich unto all that call upon him: And then quotes the words of Joel, which to this purpose Peter also had done: Whosoever shall call upon the Name of the Lord, shall be saved. And that I may bring all this same to my Text, the very next words there do hold a correspondence with, and explain those other Passages of Peter's Sermons as directed to this scope, and each give Light to the other. Peter he says, This is the Word which God sent unto the Children of Israel, preaching Peace by Jesus Christ, who is Lord of all. In answer thereto, here Paul says of Christ, He came and preached Peace to you. What, did Christ ever preach to the Ephesians? No: Those words can have no better Comment than the words of Peter, namely, that Christ in many of his Sermons, though delivered only to the Children of Israel, yet proclaimed himself the universal Peace between Jew and Gentile; and there what follows, but an Answer to, and confirmation of that other Prefage rementioned in Peter's first Sermon to one and the same effect? He came and preached Peace to them that were afar off, the Gentiles, and to them that were nigh, the Jews: Peter's words are, The Promise to you (Jews,) and to them afar off So then, you see Peter now fully gained, and won to a reconciliation with the Gentiles. Then, 2. For the rest of the Jews with him, they came over to the same mind; for when in the 44th Verse, they saw the Holy Ghost fall on these uncircumcised Gentiles, as formerly he had done on the Jews: 'Tis said, ver. 45. That they of the Circumcision which believed, were also nigh: Even as many of them as came with Peter, and were so far convinced themselves, that at Peter's Command they baptized them, ver. 48. which they would never else have done. Therefore those other Jews, who as you heard out of Chap 11 contended with Peter about this Fact: They also, when they had heard a Narrative of all these things from Peter's Mouth, confirmed by the Testimony of them that were with him; even at the first, they were so far won upon as they held their Peace. Their Mouths were stop'd; but not only so, but there they glorified God; which argues not their Judgments only, but their Hearts, rejoicing that God had added the Gentiles to make one Body to himself with them; and they set down this as a final conclusion and determination (as to their Judgments) of this Controversie for ever. Then hath God also granted unto the Gentiles unto Life; which afore they doubted, as was observed. 3. For those other Jews that had been dispersed into several Countries afore this fell out, and had as they went along scrupulously preached unto Jews only; they also were in the end fetch'd about to preach unto the Gentiles; yea, and the set scope of the ensuing part of that 11th Chapter, is to give a Narration thereof, on purpose subjoining that Story of theirs next this of Peter's, concerning Cornelius and the Gentiles, as being both one continued Woof of the same Thread, namely, a continuation of the account how the Gospel was propagated unto the Gentiles by other Disciples as well as by Peter, the Holy Ghost industriously setting these things together in one view, because this Work was the greatest thing done in the World since Christ's Ascension, and of the highest concernment; And that these other Jews did preach freely to the Gentiles, the next words shew, ver. 19, 20, 21. Now they that were scattered abroad upon the Persecution that arose about Stephen, travelled as far as Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, preaching the Word to Jews only; and some of them were Men of Cyprus and Cyrene, which, when they were come to Antioch, spake unto the Gracians, preaching the Lord Jesus, and the Hand of the Lord was with them, and a great number believed, and turned to the Lord. There hath been a Question among some Interpreters, whether these Gracians to whom these Jews preached, were of Grecian Birth and Race, or Jews by Race, but living among the Gentiles, which making use of the Greek Translation in their Synagogues, were called ἑλληνισταί, or grecising Jews, (the word there used,) and which was commonly given to such Jews as live among the Greeks. But it is evident, as Beza long ago, and Capel, and others since, have observed from the contexture of the 29th and 30th Verses, that they were Gentiles, Gracians, by Race, and not Jews, (though perhaps Profelytes, such as Cornelius was; as those Gracians, Acts 17. 4. also were;) for Luke here having immediately afore related, how those of the Dispersion had preach'd the Word to none but Jews only, (ver. 19.) He doth then by the way of Exception, hereunto add, ver. 20. ἤτις οὐ πάντες, but there were some of them, &c. namely of that Company of the Dispersion that preach'd it to Gracians that were Gentiles. The opposition clearly carries it; so accordingly in the Manuscript Copy sent by Cyril, that worthy Patriarch of Constantinople to King Charles I. they are expressly called (as 'tis here translated,) ἑλληνες, Gracians, by Birth and Extraction: And to set out this Work the more, which the Holy Ghost's Eye was so intent upon, he adds, And the Hand of the Lord was with them, and a great number believed and turned unto the Lord, ver. 21. a great number, namely of that sort of Grecians whom they set themselves to preach unto.

And so that First Part of the Relation, how for a long time all of them generally had preach'd but to Jews only, comes in to make way, and give illustration to the latter part, namely, That yet at last some of them (that had been then narrow,) were set at liberty, and alter'd their Practice herein, and after Peter's Example, did preach to the Gentiles also, as he had done; and therefore it is, that this Relation of what became of those dispersed, (whose Dispersion is recorded, Gh. 8. at the beginning,) was deferred until now and then subjoined presently after that of Peter and the Jews fully ended, because it was a Story of the same sort and to the same purpose with the other, a continuation of the Conversion of the Gentiles; and how this Jewish narrow Spirit though it had for a while every where hindred, yet was still as fast removed in those Places, as well as at Jerusalem; and he sows both together as Pieces of the same Cloth; yea, and doth it perhaps to insinuate, how that the Noise of this Faith of Peter's, together with the Jews Satisfaction about it, arriving at the Ears of these Jews that were travelling abroad, was the occasion of this sudden and strange alteration of Judgment and Practice in them; which News overtook them not till they came to Antioch. For we read, Acts 15. 2. that in Phenice, which was one of the Regions these had travelled through afore they came to Antioch, the Conversion of the Gentiles was but News to them a good while after this, the reason whereof may be; that there was a quicker intercourse betwixt Jerusalem and Antioch, being two greater Cities than Phenice and Jerusalem, which appears from what follows in the next words, That the News of what was now done at Antioch, went back again as fast fast to Jerusalem before it came to those other Places. Then tidings of these Things coming to the Ears of the Church which was at Jerusalem, they sent for Barnabas as far as Antioch, to shew their approbation of, and zeal to prosecute this happy beginning among the Gentiles, whose Success also in this new Work made among these Gentiles, the Holy Ghost records; for when he was come, ver. 23, 24. he both encouraged those already converted, and added now a full and open Trade of gaining Gentiles Souls, that had been as contra-banded Merchandize afore, and Factors were sent on purpose from the Jews themselves about it, and this Holy Commerce was set open in the World, and so an Union of Jew and Gentile into one new Man hereby effected and procured.

I have insisted the longer hereon, because the only work of Wonder set forth in these Passages, is and hath been usually understood to have been another, than simply the Story of the enlargement of the Church in Conversion of new Souls to Christ, and spreading the Gospel in those first Times; whereas the Holy Ghost's principal Design was to shew, how the Gentiles Conversion was laid and carried on, and so Jew and Gentile made one new Man, which was the greatest (as it was the first) Work Christ hath done since he went to Heaven; which Paul having seen effected, had a special Eye to it here in the Text, when he says, He hath broken down the Partition Wall, and created both into one Man in himself.

I have now mentioned one Man, (the great Apostle Paul,) whose part in this great Scene hath hitherto wholly been omitted. But if you inquire, how his Spirit stood pointed upon his Conversion to this conversing with, and converting Gentiles, and how and when wrought thereunto, the Return thereto is wonderful; Christ's Dealing with him in this particular, was not as with the other Apostles, whom he instructed by degrees, but he was together with his own Conversion at the same instant converted hereunto. He took it in together with that Milk or Seed of the Word that begat him unto Life; yea, so earnest was Christ himself, who immediately converted him, and zealous in this Point, that he seals his Commission to teach the Gentiles, with the first News of his own Salvation; and Truths that are impressed upon our Souls, at, or upon our first Conversion, are of the greatest moment to us, and have the deepest stamp, and are never worn out; and Duties which are then set on, we ever after do or ought most to mind, as being Conditions which God designed us to, and converted us.

Hear Paul himself tell the Story, Acts 9. 15. The Lord said to Ananias, (whom he employed first to bring the glad Tidings of Salvation unto Paul,) Go thy way (and tell him,) he is a chosen Vessel to me, to bear my Name before the Gentiles, and Kings, and the Children of Israel. The Children of Israel (you see,) do in Paul's Commission come in in the Rear, but the Gentiles are the first in his Commission; and the very same did God speak as expressly to him by Revelation, as Paul relates it, Gal. 1. yea, and if you observe the set and full scope of that relation of his Conversion in that place, it is evident to be on purpose to clear this very thing, (which he makes the Argument in the first part of that Epistle,) namely, how the Gentiles were admitted into the Fellowship of the Gospel without any subjection of theirs to the Jewish Ceremonies; and that he accordingly had had a Revelation from the first of his Conversion, to go and preach the Gospel upon such terms first to the Gentiles; and a great part of that Chapter is taken up with the Narration of the strange Workings about of his Spirit to this Point of the Compass to which it had stood clean contrary afore, as much as any other Jew whatever, as that singular Passage in the Narrative of his first Conversion shews. You have heard of my Conversation in times past, (says he,) in the Jewish Religion, being more exceedingly zealous of the Traditions of my Fathers, whereof this was one, and the most deeply rooted; but when it pleased God to reveal his Son in me; for what work? that I might preach him among the Heathen: And immediately, (for thus soon was he instructed in the main Article of his Commission,) I conferred not with Flesh and Blood; I went with so full a Conviction of this new Truth revealed to me, as that I would not so much as ask Counsel of any Man else; and then, whither did the Spirit carry him? Straight into Arabia, who were the World of Heathens, Ismael's Seed and Posterity, whose Hands,

Hands, as in Genesis, were against every Man, and every Man against them, (like the Wild Irish,) of all the most barbarous; and he fell first a preaching unto them, without scruple or regard at all had to any Jewish Tradition, or to any Jew; and as his first Conversion had thus taught him this, so he accordingly bears this written in his Stile, and Title, and Glories in it, The Apostle, Doctor and Teacher of the Gentiles.

I have but one thing more to add: The universal Joy and Acclamations that was in the whole Church of God, at the addition and first rearing of this new and greatest part of God's House, the Gentiles; and this both in Jews, and others, which in all places they were generally filled withal, which the Holy Ghost in the end of every of these Stories takes notice of, and is as the Epiphonema. There was never such Joy on Earth as then upon all occasions; never such Joy in Heaven, as upon Christ's Nativity when the Angels sang Glory to, &c. For First, Those Jews which had withstood Peter, Chap. 11. They sing a Glory to God on high upon it, as the Angels did upon Christ's Nativity, Chap. 11. 18. They glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted Repentance unto Life. Then again, when the Gentiles at Antioch were converted, the News came instantly to Jerusalem; and they out of an earnest desire to know the truth of it, and to forward the work, sent Barnabas, who, when he came, and saw the Grace of God, Oh! how glad was he? The Holy Ghost could not but relate it; He was glad, and exhorted them all, says the Text. Then Barnabas searches out Paul, and in the end meets him, and they were well met, being alike spirited to this Work; and they are sent out, chap 13. to the Conversion of New Regions of the Gentiles: And this is the joyful account of that whole Journey, Chap. 14. 27. They rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how God had opened the Doors of Faith unto the Gentiles. Then again, Chap. 15. v. 3, 4. Going from thence to Jerusalem, and passing through Phenicia and Samaria, what News was it they carried which their Hearts were big with? Even this, declaring the Conversion of the Gentiles; and they caused great Joy to all the Brethren, even those that were Jews.

A B R I E F
H I S T O R Y
O F T H E
Kingdom of Christ ;
Extracted out of the B O O K of the R E V E L A T I O N .

TH E Book of the Revelation is a Tragicomical Vision of the Occurrences of the World through all Times and Ages ; whereof this may truly be the Title, [The Story of Christ's Kingdom.]

CHAP. 4. The Stage for this is set up in the 4th Chapter ; there being a representation of the universal Church in all Ages set forth, according to the exact Pattern of a Church visible, and instituted, into which all Saints on Earth should be cast.

CHAP. 5. Then the Prologue follows in the 5th Chapter, where is Christ's taking on him the Government and Kingdom, by taking the sealed Book, and thereby undertaking to be God's Commissioner, to execute the Decrees contained in this Book, and to give the Vision of it unto John ; at which Instalment of him into the Kingdom, there is a Song of Praise sung to the Lamb, by the 24 Elders, and four Beasts, who are the Chorus in this shew, with a triumphing assurance and expectation of what will be the happy conclusion of all, that we shall reign on Earth with him.

The Scene or Place where all that was acted here in these Visions, is the Roman Empire, and the several Dominions of it East and West, called οἰκουμένη, or the whole World.

Then begins the Story it self to be acted at the 6th Chapter. The general Argument of which is, That whereas Christ's Government was to be executed and seen, 1st, In putting down all opposite Rule and Power that stands in his way, as Paul speaks, 1 Cor. 15. And then, 2dly, In a visible taking the Kingdom to himself and his Saints, which makes the Fifth Monarchy : Accordingly here the Story of this Book first shews, how Christ puts down all the opposite Rule, and Power, and Dominion whatsoever, in the fourth and last foregoing Roman Monarchy, in the several Successions and Revolutions of it, one after another, till that he hath worn them all out that were ordained to stand up in it. And these many Difficulties of his coming to, and obtaining his Kingdom, do exceedingly serve to make the Story of it appear glorious.

Then 2dly, It closeth and endeth in a glorious visible Kingdom which Christ on Earth sets up, and possesseth peaceably with his Saints, as the Catastrophe of all.

More particularly the Story is this, according to the several Contents of each Chapter.

Christ, when he ascends up to Heaven, finds the Roman Monarchy (whose CHAP. 6. room he was to possess,) stretched over East and West, even over all those Parts of the World where he was to seat his Church and Kingdom, and this wholly in the Hands, and under the Government and Power of one intire Monarch or Emperour, and under him altogether heathenish and idolatrous, and subjected wholly to Satan, set up as the God of this World: Christ first, he sets upon the Conquest of Satan's Ministry, and Worship in it; and by the preaching the Gospel, over-turneth that vast Empire as it was heathenish, throws down CHAP. 12. Satan from his Throne, and height of Glory in it, and brings it into subjection and acknowledgment of him as King, and turns both it and Emperours of it Christian in 300 Years. This is the Sum of the sixth Chapter of the Seal-Prophecy, and the twelfth Chapter of the Book-Prophecy.

But this Empire (though turned Christian in outward Profession,) yet ha- CHAP. 8. ving persecuted his Church whilst idolatrous, and after it was Christian (when Arrian,) therefore at the Prayers of the Martyrs slain, (mentioned, Ch. 6. 11.) and in vengeance of their Blood, Chap. 8. 4. he further proceeds to ruin the Civil Imperial Power of it, the Empire it self, by the Trumpets in the eighth and ninth Chapters. And the Empire then becoming divided into two, the Eastern and Western Empire, (as they were commonly called.)

1st. He ruins the Imperial Western State and Power in Europe, by the four first Trumpets, the Wars of the Goths, by four several steps in the eighth Chap- ter.

Then, 2^{dly}, He destroys the Imperial Eastern State, which stood after CHAP. 9. the other by two degrees: First, By the Saracens; then by the Turks; who are the fifth and sixth Trumpet, who possessed all the Eastern Part CHAP. 7. of this Day; and that is the Contents of the ninth Chapter. Only, e'er ever these Trumpets bring these Evils on the Empire, he seals up a com- pany of an Hundred forty four thousand Christians in the Eastern Part, as Chap. 7. v. 2. to be preserved and continued in the true Profession of his Name, under those two, the sorest and longest, (and there called the Woe, Woe, Trumpets,) which were to fall upon the Eastern Part of the Empire, in which Parts these Servants of his there sealed, were to lye, as appears Chap. 9. ver. 4. And this their sealing is the Sum of the seventh Chapter.

Now then that Old Roman Empire being thus removed in both Parts of it, yet still look as that Eastern Part of it, is left possessed by the Turks, in the ninth Chapter: So the Western Part of it in Europe, being broken into ten King- doms by the Goths, they consent to give their Power to the Beast, the Pope, who so becomes a Successor to the Western Emperor, and possesseth his Seat and Power, tho' under another Title; and so heals that Wound given: And this Beast the thirteenth Chapter describes, and gives the Vision of his Rise, Power, time CHAP. 13. of his Reign. And the seventeenth Chapter doth expound and interpret, CHAP. 17. under whose Anti-christian Tyranny (as great as that of Rome heathenish, or of the Turks themselves to Christians,) Christ yet preserves another-like Compa- CHAP. 14. ny of an Hundred forty four thousand, even the like number of Virgins who are sealed Christians in the West, (as under the tyranny of the Turks and Saracens, he had done the like in the East;) so himself keeping possession still by his Church, preserved under both, of both these Parts of the Empire, as his Inhe- ritage: And this opposite Company of 144000 Christians, opposite to the Whore there called Virgins, and their separation from her, and opposition to her, are recorded Chap. 14.

But now these two, the Pope and Turk, (both Enemies to Christ,) thus suc- ceeding in the Empire, and sharing the two Parts of it between them, Jesus Christ we see, is still as far off from his designed Kingdom as he was afore : For Mahumetanism tyrannizeth in the one , Idolatry overspreads the other , as Heathenism had done the Empire ; and so he hath a new business of it to come unto his Kingdom, as difficult as ever.

CHAP. 15,
16. Therefore Christ hath seven Vials , which contain the last Plagues, (for he means to make this the last Act of this long Tragi-Comedy,) to dispatch the Pope and Turk, and root them out, even as the Seals had done Heathenism, and the Trumpets had done the Empire it self : And the Plague of these Vials are the Contents of the fifteenth and sixteenth Chapters.

The first five Vials do dissolve and ruin the Pope's Power by degrees in the West ; then the sixth Vial breaks the Power of the Turk in the East ; so making way for the Jews, whom he means to bring into fellowship of his Kingdom in their own Land.

But by these six Vials, their Power and Kingdom not being wholly ruined and removed ; Both Turk and Popish Party join, and putting too their utmost Forces ; and together with them, all opposite Kings of the whole World , against the Christians, both East and West, (who, when as the Jews are come in, and converted, make up a mighty Party in the World ;) unto the help of whom, against these and all opposite Power whatsoever, Christ himself comes , and makes but one work of it, and with his own Hand from Heaven destroys them : And so it is done, as the Voice of the last Vial is in the sixteenth Chapter.

CHAP. 17. The seventeenth Chapter is an interpretation, (who is the Beast and Whore.)

CHAP. 18. The eighteenth Chapter sings a Funeral Song of Triumph for this Whore's ruin ; after which comes in Christ's Kingdom, the New Jerusalem.

CHAP. 7.
to the 9th. Which new Kingdom of his, shall be made up of, 1st, Eastern Christians that endured the Bondage of the two Woe Trumpets, the Saracen and Turks, yet continuing to profess his Name ; and therefore unto those 144000 in the seventh Chapter, do succeed an innumerable Company with Palms in their Hands who have the same Promises of the New Jerusalem made to them ; the very same that are found mentioned in the twenty first Chapter, which shews their interest therein.

And, 2dly, This Kingdom of Christ shall be made up of Western Christians also, whose 144000 in the fourteenth Chapter, do arise in like manner to an innumerable Company :

CHAP. 19. Who, after the rejection of the Whore, Chap. 19. from the 1st to the 9th, are brought in singing in like triumph, decking themselves for the Marriage in fine Linen.

But, 3dly, This Kingdom of Christ shall be made up especially of Jews, dispersed both East and West, and over all the World ; and therefore hath the Name from them, The New Jerusalem.

With whom, 4thly, come in as Attendants of their Joy, other Gentiles with them, that never had received Christ afore : The Glory of the Gentiles is said to be brought into it.

CHAP. 20,
21, 22. And so both East and West, Jew and Gentile, and the Fulness of both comes in, and becomes one Fold for a thousand Years, under one Shepherd, one Kingdom under this Root of David their King, [King Jesus the Conqueror,] even as it first was under one heathen Idolatrous Emperour, when first Christ set himself to conquer it. And so is fulfilled that Prophecy of this his Kingdom, Isa. 59. 19. (where, after the final Destruction of all Christ's Enemies, foretold ver. 18.) Then (he says) they shall fear his Name [from the East unto the West,] and the Redeemer shall come unto Sion. Which words, Rom. 11. 26. Paul interprets of the Jews final Call, and this Restauration of the World with them ; Even so Lord Jesus, come quickly.

CHAP. 5. In the fifth Chapter, we have an Account of a Book with seven Seals, which none could open. In this streight comes Christ, and takes upon him the opening and fulfilling of the Book, and the Decrees therein : At this the Chorus fall down and worship.

Ver. 1. First, What is this Book? Many make it the Scriptures: But it is plain, it is a Book containing the Affairs of the World, and the Church, and God's Decrees about it. For upon the opening of every Seal, he sees a Vision, containing the matter of the ensuing Chapters, the 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th; and when the Seals were all taken off, Chap. 10. John is bidden to eat the Book, that he might prophesie again the other part of this Prophecy. So as it is this Book of the Revelation and the Government of the Church and World set forth therein, which Christ takes; and by taking the Book, undertakes to manage and exercise that Government; which agrees with what is said at the beginning of this Book, Rev. 1. 1.

Ver. 2. A strong Angel proclaimeth, Who is worthy to loose the Seals thereof, &c. The use of the Seals is not simply to shew it cannot be known, as Daniel's sealed Book is, to shew it could not be known till the end, Dan. 12. 4. but for the further setting out the Glory of Christ, who was only able to take the Book, and to loose the Seals. To take the Book, 1st, God causeth a general Proclamation to be made to all Creatures, as some Kings have done for a noble Service, promising great Reward, as Saul did, 1 Sam. 17. 26, 27. 2dly, An Angel makes it, to shew that none among Angels could, and a strong Angel, that his Voice may reach all Creatures. The end of this was, First, To stir up strong Desires in John, and all else, to search into the meaning of this Prophecy; what he did in the first Chapter of Rev. v. 3 here he provokes unto the same by this Proclamation. Secondly, Another end of it was, to set out the Weakness of the Creature, that the Honour of Christ might appear that he only can do this, it is the manner of God thus to endear Mercies to us as he endeared a Wife to Adam. He first brought all Creatures to him, that he might first see that there was not a meet help for him among them: So in the Work of Salvation, he lets the Soul try all means first, to run to Duties, and to all Helps, and then brings it to Christ: So 1 Cor. 1. that the Power of God might appear, he first lets the World try their Wisdom, and then sends the Foolishness of Preaching to save them that believe, ver. 21, 25. It is a Question among the School-men, (Whether any meer Creature could satisfie for Sin?) Some say, they could; and some say, it is a needless Question: But it is a necessary thing to know, that a Creature could not; for it glorifies Christ the more, as in the present case it doth, that all Creatures here were first challenged: And this here is an Argument for that also; for if they could not open the Book, they could much less have redeemed us, for that is made a greater thing, ver. 9. where they sing, That Christ was therefore worthy to open the Book, because he had redeemed us, Heb. 10. God was not pleased with the Blood of Bulls and Goats, ver. 5.

Use. Hence learn we to renounce all Kings, Priests, and Prophets, in comparison of Christ; he is a Priest to redeem, and a Prophet to teach and reveal the Mysteries of God; and he is the King to execute all God's Decrees: It is good to go over all the Creatures, and to renounce them, and say, I will be saved by none of you. Suppose the Work of Redemption was yet to work, and God should make this Proclamation as here, Find me out a Party able to redeem, I'll speak to him; call a Council, seek one, (none would be found;) and how should we have howled, and wept? as John did here, and say, We were undone; and then suppose God should have set out Christ at last; but he would not put you to this plunge; 'tis the more love shewn by him, to find out Christ, and to speak to him himself to die for us, and do it to our Hands.

Observe from those words, Who is worthy?] It is not simply an Act of Power to break open the Seals, but to have Authority by worth; so that which puts the value on Christ's Satisfaction, was the worth of his Person, and so in this Act to open the Book: A meer Creature might have had as much habitual Grace, and performed as much Duty, but who is worthy? It is the Personal Worth which did it; Such a High Priest became us, who is higher than the Heavens, that is, than the Angels, Heb. 10. 2dly, None was found worthy; the word is (none,) it is not restrained to Man, no Man, but never a reasonable Creature, in the Heavens Angels, nor in Earth Men.

Neither to look thereon,] that is, to look in it to understand it, for else John could and did look on it, ver. 1. Now to loose the Seals, and open the Book, is not simply simply to know God's Mind in his Decrees, but to make the Vision of them to John, and to execute and fulfill them in times; it is in Allusion to those which take a Commission, who take it not only to look on it, but to fulfill it; it is a Commission sealed so, as this Proclamation is in effect: Who shall be able to be God's Commissioner, to take this Book, and make the Visions to John, and execute and produce them in their time?

And this appears from Chap. 6. ver. 1. still as the Seals are opened by the Lamb, there is a Vision made to John of what should be done; therefore the Lamb is presented not simply, as one that should take the Book, but that hath Eyes and Horns; Eyes of Providence, and Horns of Power to execute: And this agrees with the Allusion unto Gen. 49. 9, 10. where Judah is made a type of Christ, and called a Lion's Whelp, and the Scepter given him, and is called God's Lawgiver, to take his Laws from him, and execute them, (for in that respect it is, that Judah is called God's Lawgiver, Gen. 49. 11.) not in respect of the giving the Laws of God, but in respect of the executive Power to see them kept: So Christ here; and he so takes this Book, as to deliver it to us to execute the Decrees of it.

Ver. 4. And I wept much.] John weeps; he was called up to Heaven to see Visions; and now there was a stop, it was to set off the Mercy, and to try his Heart, and make the Joy greater.

Observ. 1. Our Infirmities shall not hinder God's revealing himself; though Unbelief may say, it will never be, yet Christ will go on to reveal himself, as here to John Observ. 2. God in greatest Mercies, may make greatest Stops enough to bring to Despair, you shall see no hope e'er he grants them so to John here; so in the first Works of Conversion many times; and so in great Works he calls Men to, he may make a stop; John was called to see Visions, yet a stop and pause was in his View made.

Observ. 3. If by John's Weeping were meant, his praying to God in this stop put, then you see the way to obtain Revelations of God, is by Tears and Praying; so Daniel prayed and wept, Dan. 10. ver. 2. and then God revealed himself.

John is comforted by a Stander-by, 1st, By something to uphold his Heart; 2^{dly}, By the sight of the Lamb, ver. 6.

Observ. 4. The degrees God uses to comfort his People; 1st, To let fall something that gives hopes of Christ, to draw the Soul to wait: Then 2^{dly}, To shew them Christ himself; God might have shewed John the Lamb at first; but first he comforts him by a Stander-by; So Job, first heard by the bearing of the Ear, and then his Eye saw him.

Ver. 6. Christ the only opener of this Book, and giver of this Prophecie, is diversly expressed: 1st, He is called the Root of David, out of Isa. 11. 10. Christ put this Riddle to the Pharisees, How David could call him Lord, if he were his Son? So how could he be called the Root, if he were David's Son, and a Branch of him? The truth is, he is the Root of David, and of all the Saints; he was the Root of his Ancestors, the Father of his Mother; the Root of any Family in Scripture, is put for the eldest Son in it, who is as the Root of the rest: So Isa. 14. 30. I will kill thy Root with Famine, that is, thy First-born, the Root of thy House; for in opposition, he says, And the First-born of the Poor shall be fed; so Mal. 4. 1. that therefore Christ is the Root of David, the meaning is, that he is the First-born among all his Brethren, as Rom. 8. he is called, and Psal 89. 27. so God calls David in the Type, but intends Christ thereby, when he says, I will make him my First born, higher than the Kings of the Earth; and ver. 29. His Seed shall endure for ever: This is to be the Root of David, He is the First-born of every Creature, of whom the whole Family in Heaven and Earth is named, Ephes 3. 15.

2^{dly}, He is called the Lion of the Tribe of Judah: But why a Lion of the Tribe of Judah? It is a manifest Allusion to the Prophecie, Gen. 49. 10. wherein Judah (as this place shews,) is made a Type of Christ; and it warrants the Application of all there unto Christ.

Judab is called a Lion : 1. Because out of Judab came all the Worthies, and Lion-like Men, Joshuah, Othniel, David, all the Shadows of Christ; therefore, Gen. 49. 11. he is called an Old Lion, (as the Word is,) a courageous hearty Lion : So 2 Sam. 17. 10. Valiant Men are called Lions ; such was Christ, who durst engage his Heart to draw near to God, Jer. 30. 21.

2. Judab had that Kingdom (whereof a Lion is the Emblem,) therefore Scepter and Lawgiver, ver. 11. are attributed to him ; so that it is as much as to say, Christ the King by inheritance, as Judab was, hath overcome.

3. Judab did take the Prey, (the Land ;) it was done by the Worthies of Judab, Joshua, David ; and when, as a Lion, they had taken that Prey, they couched and had rest ; as in Solomon's Days, 1 Kings 4. 21. which was also prophesied of, Numb. 23. 24. Behold, they rose up as a great Lion, and shall not lye down till he eat the Prey ; and Gen. 49. 9. He couched as an Old Lion ; who shall raise him up ? So Christ, when he had led Captivity Captive, sits down quietly in Heaven couching, as lying in wait till the Day of Judgment, when he will appear like an old Lion that coucheth as if asleep, and then suddenly leaps on the Prey. Especially in the latter Days, when the Gatherings shall be to him, his Kingdom shall be as of a Lion among Beasts ; so Micah 5. 8. he Propheesies there of Christ's Kingdom in the calling the Jews, and of his Birth, ver. 2. now that Kingdom is the scope of this Book.

Ver. 6. And in the midst of the Elders, stood a Lamb as it had been slain. John had heard of Christ as a Lion, but he sees him as a Lamb. So many a poor Soul are afraid of him, but when you see him, and come to be acquainted with him, you will find him to be a Lamb, and a Lamb that hath Eyes to run to and fro through the Earth for you, and seven Horns, not to hurt you, but to butt his and your Enemies : We have not all Lion-like Thoughts of Christ ; as he hath, the Heart of a Lion, so he hath the Meekness of a Lamb. You may wonder at this mixture ; he is a Lamb to you.

1st, Why is he called a Lamb ? It is in allusion to the Sacrifices of the Old Law, which were most of Lambs ; the ordinary Sacrifices were two Lambs a Day, Numb. 28. 3. Here he was to represent Christ as a Priest ; as before, in being call'd a Lion, he was represented as a King ; and therefore it follows, as it had been slain.

2^{dly}, In the midst of the Throne, &c. stood a Lamb.] The Lamb stood nearer than the four Beasts, between the Throne and the Elders ; for he is a Mediator betwixt his Church and God.

3^{dly}, As it had been slain ;] that is, First, As if he were newly slain ; for his Blood is fresh continually, as if he were slain to day ; thou see'st thy Sins, as if they were committed yesterday ; and God views Christ's Blood, as if he were slain yesterday, Heb. 9. 12. Secondly, But as slain, to shew he doth not remain slain, but is alive, Chap. 1. 18. I was dead, and behold, I am alive for ever more.

4^{thly}, Stood a Lamb] standing, to shew he is ready to help. When Steven died, he saw Christ standing at God's right Hand as ready to receive him. 'Tis also to shew his readiness to interceed.

5^{thly}, Having seven Horns ;] Horns are put for Power to push with : So Rev. 17. 12. The ten Horns are the ten Kings : The seven Horns here, all Kingly Power ; seven is a number of Perfection, to shew Christ hath power to open the seven Seals ; and there are seven Trumpets and seven Vials, and Christ hath seven Horns, that is, power to fulfill all these. Anti christ rises like Christ, and comes with Power, Rev. 13. 11. but what discovers him he hath but two Horns, the Church needs not fear him ; the Lamb hath Horns to vindicate himself of his Enemies ; fear not Kings though ten Kings, he is King of Kings ; and fear not the Devil, who is a roaring Lion, for Christ the Lion of the Tribe of Judab is stronger than he, and will bind him.

6^{thly}, And seven Eyes, which are the seven Spirits of God, sent forth into all the Earth ;] the Spirit not in his Personal Subsistence is here meant, but in his instrumental working in Gifts and Providence, and so is called seven Spirits (before, in Chap. 4. 5. The seven Spirits before the Throne are Gifts in the Church which are from Christ ;) for he is the Fountain of Spiritual Gifts, and hath the Spirit

Spirit without measure; but here by the seven Spirits in Christ, is not meant Gifts poured out, but Eyes of Providence sent into the Earth, by which he knows and sees all things in allusion to that, Zach. 4. 10. and it implies the perfect Knowledge and Providence of Christ to order all Affairs on Earth for his Church; so 2 Chron. 16. 9. as before in Zachary, he did the Affairs of the Persian Monarch for the building of his Church.

Observ. Christ as Man hath both Horns and Eyes to guide and discern all things here below; his Human Nature is the Instrument of all God's Power; all goes through his Hands, and all the Works of God's Providence go all through his sight; he knows all is done in the World.

The next thing is, why Christ should be presented here in this: Christ under these Notions of a Lion of the Tribe of Judah, and a Lamb, and the Root of David, rather than any other: He speaks, 1st, in the Language of the Old Testament, and of John Baptist, who was under the Old Testament, (who all spake of Christ:) So Luke 24. 27. Beginning at Moses and all the Prophets, he expounded unto them the things concerning himself. Now Moses called him a Lion, Gen. 49. 9. Isaiab calls him a Lamb, Chap. 53. 7. and the Root of David, Isa. 11. 10. and John Baptist calls him the Lamb of God which bears the Sins of the World. Now as all other things in this Book are set forth in allusion to the Old Testament, so these Descriptions of Christ also: 2dly, He gives him these Titles in relation to the Work of Redemption, of which mention is made ver. 9. Now to that, Two Things are required:

First, A price to God, and so as a Lamb thou hast redeemed us to God by thy Blood, ver. 9. Secondly, Power to deliver us out of the Hands of our Enemies; so he is a Lion that overcomes, 3dly, It hath relation especially to the opening this Book, and executing the Affairs in it; and so these Titles are most proper.

For, First, He needed to die for it, and so is presented as a Lamb slain; for that Price that Salvation did cost, each Revelation to us must cost as much also; not simply his being the Son of God, and so knowing the Counsels of God written in his Decrees, was enough for him to make them known to us; but to reveal this Counsel to us, as in a Book to be opened to us, he must die, for our Sins hindered, and therefore he must die; Hence it is said, Thou art worthy to open the Book, for thou wast slain, ver. 9. And so, as a Lamb, he is said to take Sin away that hindered the Revelation to us.

Secondly, As a Lion he needed courage to approach God's Wrath, break through a consuming Fire to his Throne to take the Book; Who hath engaged his Heart to draw near to me? No Angel durst have presumed to come so near.

Thirdly, As a Lion he needed to overcome Death, and rise to execute the Contents of this Book. A Lion, they say, sleeps at first three days when brought forth, and then with the roaring of the Old Lion is roused, and sleeps the least of any Creatures; so Christ rose by the Power of his Father to sleep no more.

Fourthly, Being risen, he is set forth, 1st, As a Lion of Judah, for in that Prophecy, Gen. 49. 11. as also Psal. 60. 7. Judah, in respect of his Kingly Office, is called God's Lawgiver, not simply in respect of giving the Laws, that Moses of the Tribe of Levi did, but because Judah executed them; now because Christ did here take the Book of God's Decrees, and undertake to execute and fulfil them as God's Commissioner, therefore he is in this place most properly in that respect the Lion of the Tribe of Judah. 2dly, He is here set forth as a Lamb with seven Horns and Eyes, in as fit and proper respect to this as might be, as one not fit only to give this Prophecie, but to effect the things contained in it by his Horns and Eyes, and seven Horns and seven Eyes, to shew his full Power to open the seven Seals and the seven Trumpets, and to pour out the seven Vials, such a Prophet never was, who is not barely to reveal things, but to bring them to pass, and make them good, God gave Christ the Plat-form of the Occurrences to come, and Power and Wisdom to order the Accomplishment of them.

He is set also forth under both as a Lamb and a Lion; to shew his Kingly and Priestly Office; to shew, how by virtue of both, he makes us Kings and Priests, as they sing, ver. 10. and so they having his Kingdom in their Eye, are confirm'd in the Promise of it by a remembrance of him; as a Lamb and a Lion thus strong and powerful; as a Lamb he purchaseth the Revelation of what concerns the Church; and as a Lamb with Horns and Eyes, he effects the accomplishment of it. And the Sum of this Book being to shew, how Christ rules the World and his Church, till he hath put down all Rule, and how he takes the Kingdom himself; therefore he is described as a Lamb in respect of his quiet governing the Affairs of the World and the Church until that his Kingdom come, and then as a Lion by open Force, takes the Kingdom and his Church as a Prey, out of the Enemies Jaws, and that by the right of a promised Succession from Judah and David; for which Causes, those Titles of the Root of David and Lion of Judah do here come in.

In a word, First, This Title of his being the Root of David, is to shew his Right and Title to that Kingdom he is to receive, of which David and his Kingdom was but a Type.

Secondly, His being a Lamb slain, is to shew both the Right and Title to that Kingdom, and the Price by which he purchas'd this his Kingdom, even his Blood.

Thirdly, His being a Lion, is to shew the Power by which he conquers and obtains, and then possesses it: Therefore this heavenly Chorus or Company here, when they do but see Christ, by taking this Book to undertake the accomplishment of this Prophecie; the conclusion of which is, his Instalment into his Kingdom; they in the Joy and Faith of it, cry out afore hand, we shall Reign on Earth, as looking on all was to go before it, as good as already done, and over-looking it all, having this Kingdom chiefly in their Eye.

Now, from the 8th Verse to the end, is a Doxology, or a giving Praise for the Lamb's taking the Book, which consists of four Parties or Companies.

First, Of twenty four Elders and the Beasts; the Church of Men on Earth, they begin and raise the Song, ver. 8.

Secondly, Angels they join and sing after, ver. 11.

Thirdly, Then all Creatures come in also, ver. 13.

Fourthly, The Beasts, as the Leaders, say in the end, Amen, and close it, v. 14.

Observat. Observe, 1st, in the general, that the Sons of Men are the eminentest Praisers of God, they are the Precentors in this Heavenly Quire, and they conclude the Song; the reason is, because the highest work God did, is the Work of Redemption which concerns us, not the Angels; for which, yet the Angels praise him in the Second of Luke, as also here; yea, all the Creatures rejoice in our Redemption, ver. 13. but still we are the First Fruits, the top Leaders: The Angels follow; 'tis not said by them, Thou hast redeemed us to God by thy Blood; that concerns us; yet they sing Praise.

Observe, 2dly, Learn to bless God for his Mercy and Goodness to others; so you see, the Angels do for us: They cannot sing, as we, with an interest, yet they praise God for it; and this is their highest Grace. Canst thou do so? Then comfort thy self, thou hast as good Grace as any in the Angels.

Observe, Yet, 3dly, Learn to bless God with a sense of thy interest; that will raise thy Heart a degree higher, as the Church of Men are here rais'd, (ver. 9. 10.) in their Song by their interest. The Praisers of the Sons of Men are described:

First, Having Harps.

Secondly, Golden Vials. 'Tis an allusion to the Levitical Service in the Temple, where they had Musical Instruments and Incense in Bowls or Vials, which Zach. 14. 20. are called the Bowls of the Altar; not that Musical Instruments are to be in the Worship of God now no more than Incense, but as Incense was the Type of Prayer and Praises; Psal. 141. 2. Let my Prayer come up before thee as Incense: So these Harps are of that spiritual Melody, as the Apostle calls it, which we make to God in our Hearts, even of spiritual Songs in Christ, Eph. 5. 19. Therefore John himself interprets the Odours or Incense here, to be the Prayers of the Saints; their Hearts are the Golden Vials, having Faith purer than Gold, as Pe- ter speaks; it being the Spring of all their Prayers; and their *Harp*s also are their Hearts, corda & chordæ are near a-kin.
S ter

And every one is said to have *Harp*s; for in Publick Worship all should join; the little Strings go to make up a Consort as well as the great. Though thou hast but little Grace, yet God's Worship would not be compleat without thee.

And whereas John calls these Odours the Prayers of the Saints, it makes nothing for what the Papists would collect hence, That the Saints in Heaven offer up the Prayers of the Saints on Earth: For, First, This Company are (as we said before,) the Church of Men on Earth. Secondly, These here offer not the Prayers of others, but their own; for both themselves make the Song, and it is a new one of their own making; and also the benefit they praise God for in it, is their own, Thou hast redeemed us to God by thy Blood. Those words therefore [the Prayers of the Saints,] are but the interpretation which John adds, and imply but this, That these were Saints, and their Odours were their Prayers.

Ver. 9. And they sung a new Song] [new;] you shall find in the Psalms, that when David had a new occasion in a further degree to praise God, he says, I will sing a new Song; and here was a new occasion given: 2dly, New, in opposition to the Old Song under the Old Testament, as John 13. 14. I give you a new Commandment, that is, of the Gospel, called new in opposition to the Commands of the old Law; in the 4th Chapter of this Book, these Elders had sung a Song for the Work of Creation, ver. ult. but here they sing for the Work of Redemption, as ver. 9. which is the eminent Work of the New Testament, as Creation was of the Old; and therefore it is called a new Song. 3dly, Here there is a more special reason why they should sing a new Song, for the New Jerusalem was in their Eye, Christ's Kingdom and their Kingdom; we shall reign on Earth, there all things shall be made new, and therefore their Song is new; a new Song for the instalment of their new King, thus Psal. 96. 1. (which is a Psalme of this Kingdom of Christ, as appears ver. 10, 13.) that Psalme therefore begins, Oh! sing to the Lord a new Song.

Observat. 1st, Learn to frame new matter of Praise and Affections upon every new occasion.

Observat. 2d, We are to bless God for Creation and Redemption, both to take in the mention of old Blessings when we give thanks for new, as a good Scribe is said to bring forth of his Treasure things new and old; so in Thanksgiving, we are to sing the old Song and the new.

The Matter of the Song is Praise to the Lamb.

First, The Person praised is the Lamb, Thou art worthy. In answer to the Proclamation, Who is worthy? Thou, and thou alone; for to him, and by him, and for him, are all things, Colos. 1.

Secondly, The things for which they praise him, are 1st, For his Death, that he died to redeem: 2dly, For his Resurrection, intimated in this, Thou wast slain; the one making us Priests, the other Kings; as follows, ver. 10. and to this end Christ died, and rose that he might be Lord and King, Rom. 14. 9. The word which is translated here redeemed, is in the Original bought.

Ver. 9. For thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy Blood out of every Kindred, and People, and Tongue, and Nation.

Observat. First, That the Blood of Christ was paid as a Price to God to purchase our Redemption, 1 Cor. 6. 20. bought with a Price; and in 1 Tim. 2. he calls it a Ransom.

Observat. 2. That Christ hath not redeemed all Men; for it is not every Nation and Tribe, but out of every Nation the Elect only.

Observat. 3. In that they say, Christ is worthy to receive the Book because he was slain; it argues, this Book of the Revelation is a special Fruit of his Death; and so should be the more prized by us; before Christ's Death, we hear Christ himself say, He knew not when the Day of Judgment should be, but now he is slain, and hath taken this Book, he doth, ver. 10.

Ver. 10. And hast made us unto our God Kings and Priests, and we shall reign on the Earth. Christ was afore set forth as a Lion for a King, so as a Lamb for a Priest Priest, and both were mentioned, to shew the grounds of our being both Kings and Priests who shall reign on Earth.

Observ. First, That this Comforted the Saints of old, even the consideration of Christ's Kingdom on Earth; and how peremptory are they we shall reign; they mention that, because, that is the end and scope of the Revelation, the conclusion of this Book, when the Seals are off, and the Book finish'd; and so they have it in their Eye; and they seeing Christ undertaking the accomplishment of all in this Book, whereof this is the issue, are confirm'd in the Faith of it.

Observ. Secondly, That this Kingdom of Christ on Earth to come, is a far more glorious Condition for the Saints than what their Souls have now in Heaven; for these here over-look that Condition which yet they were to run through, and their Thoughts fly to comfort themselves with this, we shall reign on Earth.

Ver. 11. In this Verse comes in the other Company of the Angels singing; who, First, for their number are Ten thousand times a thousand, and thousands of thousands in the 7th of Daniel; where the same Throne and Kingdom of Christ is prophesied of, there is the same number of his Guard of Angels mentioned.

Observ. 1. God hath another World of rational Creatures which we see not; and what a Story then will the Latter Day produce?

Obs. 2. What need we fear when there is so many for us? as 2 Kings 6. 17. For their Station, they are behind the Elders, &c. yet round about the Throne, not so near as the Elders, they are the Guard of the Queen of Heaven, the Lamb's Wife the Church, Psal. 34. 7. Angels in compass round about them that fear him, and are sent out for their good, Heb. 1. ult.

Ver. 12. The Song follows, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive.

Observ. 1st, Christ though he were worthy by Inheritance, yet he was also worthy by Purchase, to receive all these; so the words imply, (that was slain.)

2dly, As he hath seven Horns and seven Eyes, so he hath a sevenfold Praise.

3dly, And because they cannot praise him enough, they heap up words to praise him with.

4thly, None is worthy to be the King of all the World but only Jesus Christ; and indeed it were too much for any Creature. The Angels themselves were top-heavy of their Glory, which made them reel out of Heaven; but Christ hath the Godhead to poize him: No Beast is naturally a King of Beasts but the Lion, (says the Philosopher;) nor none worthy to be King of all Creatures, but this Lion of the Tribe of Judah.

The things which they attribute to him are:

First, Power, that is, Authority over all; so Christ says, John 17. 2. To me all Power is given.

Secondly, Riches, that is, Possession of all Creatures, all things are his, and so ours, 2 Cor. 8. 9. Christ who was rich, was made poor; Riches of Glory, Knowledge, all are his.

Thirdly, Strength, joined with Power and Authority, able he is to work any thing, not as other Kings that have great Power and Authority, but no more Personal Strength than other Men; he hath therefore seven Horns.

Fourthly, Wisdom, and this as large as his Power and Dominions; he knows all God means to do, and sees all with his own seven Eyes, not other Mens, as other Kings do.

Fifthly, Honour, that respects what all Creatures bring in to him; they all adore and bow the Knee to him, Phil. 2.

Sixthly, Glory, both in his Personal Excellencies, and also what his Father gives him; he sits at God's right Hand, and with his Father governs, and shall come in his Fathers Glory, and in his Person is the Brightness of his Glory.

Seventhly, Blessing, which respects that Glory, which for his special Goodness to them, his Saints do give him; others give Honour to Christ; the Devils do, but not Blessing; that the Saints only do, for that respects Communication of Goodness, they only bless him whom he blesteth first.

Observ. Christ hath all desirable Excellencies in him, Beauty, Glory, Honour, Esteem, Riches, Strength, Wisdom.

Ver. 13. And every Creature ;] Every Creature in its kind shall worship Christ, Phll. 2. Every Creature comes in here, because when Christ's Kingdom is set up, they shall be renewed, Rom. 8. 19. Psal. 69. 10, 11. both Creatures under the Earth, Bodies of Saints departed, and precious Stones, &c. for all Creatures shall be used in a glorious Liberty.

The Church of Men began the Song, and these continue it ; for it is this Mercy to them that is Matter of the Song, and the Instauration of their King ; and therefore we are to be stirred up the more to do it, in that we see even all the Creatures do it whom it doth not so much concern.

Ver. 14. And the four Beasts said, Amen ;] and the Elders follow ; the Officers begin and end.

Amen,] seems to be an Ordinance, a word to be used by Officers first, and then by the People, as 1 Cor. 14. 16.

A DISCOURSE
 OF Christ's Reward;

Or, of the GLORY which He receives in

HEAVEN,

As due to the Excellency of His Person,

And as the RECOMPENCE of

His Work of Redemption perform'd.

Rev. v. 12.

Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive Power, and Riches, and Wisdom, and Strength, and Honour, and Glory, and Blessing.

I Design to give you a Particular (as we use to call it,) of that Estate of Glory which was Christ's due, and which our Lord of Glory parted with, and was emptied of; and compare with each, the Particulars of His emptied, humbled Estate, contrary thereunto.

And for this, I might refer unto those inherent Glories that were His due, to have broke forth from the first in Him; as also those Privileges, and Royalties of His; and so here, upon that Argument, set by them His standing out of all these, and emptying Himself of them during His humbled Estate.

I shall take that Royal Proclamation of His Glories which the Holy and Blessed angels His Heralds have made; and take what I find sum'd up in one Cluster, growing on one Stalk, or in one Verse, Rev. 5. 12. Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive Power, and Riches, and Wisdom, and Strength, and Honour, and Glory, and Blessing: That they speak it of Him as God-man, is clear, in that He is called the Lamb.

But before I enter upon the Merits of my Design specified, I must remove an Objection, That my running over those Particulars mention'd, will not be pertinent unto the Ends and Purpose which I even now propos'd; for the main Argument is, the Glories which were His due as God-man before His Redemption

tion of us; and the laying down of that Glory, was the main Ingredient of that Sacrifice He offered up for His redeeming of us: But the Royalties there ascribed as worthy to be given Him, are what the Angels say, He was worthy of for having redeemed us; for the Account they give them hereupon, is as He is the Lamb slain, and not at all as God-man. For the removal of which, and clearing the aptness and meetness of the Allegation of these, as suitable in the Scope and Matter of them unto my forementioned purpose, I premise these Answers.

First, As to that, That the Angels should proclaim him worthy of all these because slain, and as the Lamb that was slain, as ver. 9. seems to carry it: Suppose that were the Scope, yet it is but to declare a superadditional Glory of Christ's, consisting in this, That He should merit by his Death what was otherwise naturally due to Him in His Person, who was slain; and so a redoubled Honour accrue to Him upon several Titles; That He who in Himself, and the Dignity of His Person, was worthy of all these, should moreover by the Merits of His Death, purchase thereby to be worthy of them also; and so that although He merited them by His being slain, yet it was but what his own by another right before, due to His Person, but now moreover to His Actions and Sufferings, and how that by them He deserved them also; and so in that one Description or Character of Him, both Dues are here both involved at once. First, The Lamb, noting His Person God-man; (and it is His Title given His Person now He is in Glory, throughout this Book.) Secondly, The Lamb that was slain; both which, under the same terms in effect, Peter indigitates, 1 Pet. 1. 19. Ye were redeemed with the precious Blood of Christ, as of a Lamb without blemish, and without spot, where the preciousness of his Blood is inferr'd from the preciousness of his Person. 1st, He mentions Christ, whom in his Person he expressly calls Elect and Precious, in the following Chap. 2. 6. and whom he sets forth in his Person as a Foundation to our Faith, and also unto his Merit for us, which is the approximate ground of our Faith: Then, 2dly, He speaks of this glorious Person's being sacrificed to Death; for his Blood, there is said to be the price, as of a Lamb without blemish, and without spot, alluding to the Paschal Lamb his Type; for indeed, even the value of that Price by his Death was founded on the innate Worthiness of his Person, as to whom all these were due on the pure account thereof; for his having been slain would not have made him worthy of all these, if his Person that was slain had not been worthy of all these afore he was slain: Yea, and the Angels do mention his Death in this their Doxology of Praise, chiefly as a Description of his Person in this sense, That he whose Person was the Lamb of God, (God man;) and further, had been he that was slain, was worthy, &c. and of the two it is certain, the Worthiness of his Person far exceeds the Merits of his Sufferings and Actions.

Secondly, The like Allegation may be made concerning the manifestative Glory of the other Two Persons; for that very Glory which is personally due to each Person as God, they are yet proclaimed worthy to receive upon occasion of some special Work done by them; and thus it is with Christ here: Thus God the Father, of whom the Angels say, Chap. 7. 12. Blessing, and Glory, and Wisdom, and Thanksgiving, and Honour, and Power, and Might, be unto our God for ever, and ever. Amen. All these are his due as he is God; and yet, Chap. 4. 11. he (for of him 'tis spoken,) is proclaimed worthy to receive Glory, and Honour, &c. for thou hast created all things: Thus it is with Christ for having performed the Work of Redemption here.

Thirdly, 'Tis true, there is a Glory given to Christ, which wholly relates to the Work of Redemption alone, even as to God the Father also, for and upon his Work of Creation; who although he was God, and so Almighty, able to create, yet he could not have had the glory of creating, or being a Creator, unless he had actually created; though in that he is able to create, he might have been intitled to such a Power: And so Christ hath this Glory given, upon occasion of his being a Redeemer, and that he is a Redeemer; for he was slain, and without it he had not been a Redeemer; yet still look as God receives in and upon the Work of Creation, but the glory of his being God; the invisible things of God being manifested therein, even his eternal Power, and God-head; so Christ in receiving the Glory of Redemption, receives but the acknowledgments of those Portions due to him as God-man, now further manifested in that Work.

Fourthly, In that he is said [to receive them,] after his being slain, this prejudiceth it not, but that they were due to his Person afore: For not only of God himself the same Phrase is used, Worthy art thou to receive Glory, that is, as given from all thy Creatures, Rev. 4. 11. 'tis spoken of him that sits on the Throne, (ver. 10.) but also here, as it is used of Christ, it refers to that actual Possession he had taken of Glory upon his Ascension, which is called his entering into Glory; after his Sufferings, Luke 24. 26. Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his Glory? All which, the Angels after his Ascension thus applauded, and cry Euge to; and in respect to this Possession then given, and received by him, it is said, he was made both Lord and Christ, Acts 2. 34, 35, 36. The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right Hand, until I make thy Foes thy Footstool: Therefore let all the House of Israel know assuredly, That God hath made that same Jesus whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ; which is clearly spoken of his Ascension: And yet he was Lord and Christ afore.

And in the like manner doth the Revelation speak of his entering into Possession of the Kingdoms of the World, Rev. 11. 17. Thou hast taken to thee thy great Power: It was his afore his Power as his due, and yet as now but the taker of it; and therein takes but what is his right into his own Hands: And the Phrase [takes to him] is usually spoken of one that hath newly taken to him a Right or Due that was detained from him, or out of his own hands, and exercised by others that kept it from him, yet belonging to him; and so here, when he is declared worthy to have received, &c. and to receive after his Suffering, it is to be judged, that he doth but take to him what was his.

And, Lastly, That all these were his by inheritance, as being God's natural eldest Son: You have expressly, Heb. 1. 4, 5. Being made so much better than the Angels, as he hath by Inheritance obtained a more excellent Name than they: For unto which of the Angels said he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? And again, I will be to him a Father, and he shall be to me a Son; by inheritance, as being eldest Son, and the only begotten of God; yea in his very Conception, and the Union of God-man, he was the Son of God; and therefore, all this Royalty or Glory was then his due by inheritance, Luke 1. 35. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the Power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that Holy Thing which shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God; [called,] that is, shall have the Name of being God's Son, and therewith all that Dignity, Power, Glory whatsoever, that were due to him that was the only begotten Son of God, John 1. And the Angel shews, that he should have all these in Title as his right and due the first instant of his Conception; all which he yet had not in full and actual possession until he (as now here) was come to Heaven.

And therefore that it is here said, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive, &c. imports not as if he received it only because he was slain; nor is it any way implied thereby, that it was not his right by Personal Inheritance, no more than that a King that is a while kept from his right, and obtains the possession of it by Conquest, may not yet be said to have it by inheritance also, yea, and so as he holds that to be the surer and better Title also.

In that very Chapter (where his Kingly Dignity is solemnized,) there are these three distinct Ticles proclaimed of him, First, By inheritance, in that he is called the Root of Jesse: The eminentest and eldest in a Family, are called the Root, or the Father of that Family. So Isa. 14. 30. Now though David was the youngest Son, yet Psal. 89. 27. God said of him, I will make him my First-born, higher than the Kings of the Earth; who as in that Right received the Kingdom, to shew, That Christ as God's First-born, should by inheritance receive it also; which is the Title I am now a pleading. Secondly, He is called the Lion of Judah, who got the Land by Conquest; so Jeshua of that Tribe, Christ's Type. Thirdly, A Lamb slain that bought it with his Blood.

This Objection being thus removed, and the Text thus adapted to my intended purpose, I approach now unto my intended Design, which is to set in one view in two opposite Schemes or Draughts, these Personal Excellencies of Christ God-man, as it were in one Side or Page, (as in such cases we use to place things opposite or parallel;) and the contrary humbled Estate in the Form of a Servant on the opposite Page, as being ἀντισημασία, contrary one to the other.

I. Concerning these his Excellencies and Royalties due to his Person, I premise but Two Things in general e'er I enter upon the aforesaid particular Comparison.

First,

First, That these Perfections he is celebrated for, are in number seven, which is the number of Perfection; for they contain a fulness, and compleatness of Perfections, and those personally due to him.

The Second is, That they are the good and holy Angels, who behold his Face and the Father's, who do give him the Elogy and Praise of them; and the Testimony of Angels ought to have a mighty impression upon us: You see what a weight is put upon but one Angel's Testimony that gave Revelation to John, and it is as the Seal set to the whole Book, Rev. 22. 16. I Jesus have sent mine Angel to testify these things: What then is the Testimony of all the Holy Angels, the whole Quire of them? And so it is prefaced to these words in the foregoing 11th Chapter, And I beheld, and I heard the Voice of many Angels round about the Throne, and the Beasts, and the Elders, and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands, saying with a loud Voice, Worthy, &c. This Witness of theirs must therefore have an answerable reverential Repute with us; for they must needs be held the most faithful and able witness in this Matter: Indeed, above all other Creatures, we Men redeemed do experimentally feel what he is, as he is a Redeemer, and know that (in that respect) better than they: And therefore there is that emphatical difference to be observed in the Song of the Chorus of Men, giving Glory to him, Rev. 5. 9, 10. Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy Blood out of every Kindred, and Tongue, and People, and Nation, and hast made us unto our God, Kings and Priests, and we shall reign on the Earth. Oh! how feelingly do they enlarge upon it? But yet the Angels when they say, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain; tho' they go no further in their mention of it, yet they speak all this upon their own knowledge, and that a knowledge of Sight, and not of obscure Faith, as in a Glass darkly; for they see his Person every day, 1 Tim. 3. 16. taken up into Glory, seen of Angels, and seen as now he is in Glory, since his taking up; and so are to be valued for the most competent Witnesses to this Matter of his Personal Glory, as also for the most faithful and impartial, in that he is of another nature from theirs; He took not the Nature of Angels, but yet they are so taken with, and overcome with this Glory of his Person now it is in their Eye, that not only they envy not at this his Exaltation as Man so far above them, as the evil Angels of their own Nature do, and for that Cause did, that you see on the contrary how they magnifie and extol it: You may well and worthily then receive their Testimony as next to that of God himself, and say (in allusion to what John says of God's Witness of Christ, 1 John 5. 9.) If ye receive the Witness of Men, the Witness of Angels is greater.

And so I am more immediately arrived at that comparison I promised in each particular of these Glories set in opposition against every answerable humiliation, not only emptying of them in Christ's humbled Condition, but the perfect contrary brought upon him; and this the Holy Angels themselves give us occasion, and invite us to do, by saying, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain; they considered, and took in both into the Burthen of their Song.

Let us therefore (as I said afore,) turn that part of the Optick Glass that renders the Sun in its brightest Strength and Glory, and then turn the other end that renders it as a small Snuff, discoloured, and riding in Darkness and Blackness; and we may among other, make this use of it, when you come to the Sacrament to celebrate the Memory of Christ crucified, take a view of Christ in both: First, See him as Crowned with Glory and Honour, as the Apostle speaks they saw him, Heb. 2. sitting on the Throne of Majesty on High: And then as Crowned with Thorns, naked, despised, hanging on a Tree. You have them both in sight in that one Ver. 9. We see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the Angels, by the suffering of Death, crowned with Glory and Honour. And that ῥῆξυτι [a little] Lower, understand not of his Being, in that he was a Man, therefore a little degree lower; but it is spoken of the shortness of the time in which he was made lower; for otherwise, as for the lowness it self of Condition which he was brought unto, the comparison unto the Angels was not sufficiently expressive, it is too high to set it forth; for he was in that respect made lower than any Man; I am a Worm; and no Man, said he, Pf. 22. that afore had said, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? And as you consider consider any part of his Debafement, mingle this Thought with it ; Thus glorious fhould my Jefus have been at that time , but he gave himfelf, and all, away for me.

The firft Attribute is Power, that is, Authority, δυναμις, which is here put for ἐξουσία, (as fometimes elle-where) for here it is diftinguifhed from ἰσχύς, Strength, which is another of the Particulars that follows ; and it is a fure rule in interpreting this place, that each of thefe feven are diftinct from the other, elfe they obferved not the number feven, the number of Perfection ; and to fet out Chrifts compleatnefs thereby is his fcope, John. 17. 2. Thou haft given him Power over all Flefh : And, Matth. 28. All Power is given me both in Heaven and Earth ; even all that Power executive, (not effential,) which God himfelf means actually to exercife, or put forth, all this Power is committed to him ; as himfelf at another time faith, John 5.22. All Judgment is committed to the Son : And thus as in refpect of actual Exercife of Authority, Gods and Chrifts Power as God-man, may be faid to be of equal extent, one God, one Lord, of both whom are all things that are, fo by virtue of this he hath all fubject to him, 2 Pet. 3. 22. Angels, and Authorities, and Powers, being made fubject to him ; fo as Chrif, by virtue of it, commands whatever is done in this and that other World, you have feen him in his greatnefs in this refpect.

See him now ftrippt of all this, Matth. 20. 25. Ye know that the Princes of the Gentiles exercife Dominion over them, and they that are Great exercife Authority upon them : Then, ver. 28. he propounds his Example, The Son of Man came not to be miniftered unto, but to minifter, and to give his Life a ransom for many : 'Tis as if he had faid, The Son of Man foretold by Daniel, (as in Chap. 7. 13. we find it,) to whom was given Dominion and Glory, and a Kingdom, that all People, Nations, and Languages, fhould ferve him ; his Dominion is an everlafting Dominion, which fhall not pafs away ; and his Kingdom that which fhall not be destroyed, ver. 14. Though it was his right to exercife Dominion on thefe petty Conftables, who, for fuch are Kings over the Nations, yet under him inftead of being over (fays he) all thefe forts of Attendants I minifter to all, and my whole Life is a Service devoided of all Authority but over Devils and Difeaſes, but otherwife it is a fubjection to all other ; and I am not only a Servant unto God herein, but am fubjected to Men ; and what was his end in this, but to make a price of Redemption for us thereof, together with his whole Life, and to give his Life a Ransom for many ? He is fubject not only to the lawful Authority of the Roman Empire as then extant ; but fo he would have been of any State he might have been fuppoſed to live in, which he confidered enough then ; the Exactors of Tribute required it of him by Peter, to put him in mind of it, Matth. 17. But he declared in his Answer to their Demand, himfelf a King's Son ; and therefore he fays, ver. 26. The Children of Kings are free. And in theſe words he ſpeaks to this effect, to give thee Peter a demonstration of what Authority and Dominion I have in this World, I will not pay it out of that ready Mony I have, or thou haft by thee, nor will I borrow it of any Man, but I will command a Fiſh to pay me Tribute, and with that do thou pay Cæſar ; fo as whilft he ſubjects himfelf to this Authority, he ſhews a greater Authority himfelf had, which Cæſar had not. This Authority, Power, and Dominion he gave away, and receded from it ; yea further, He that had Authority to command all in Heaven and Earth, (a far larger and ſuperiour Dominion than Cæſar's reach'd to,) was often put to hide himfelf, and fly from that Authority that fought his Life, as if he had not been able to have commanded the prefervation of it : Thus when a Babe, he was forced to go into Egypt for fear of Herod ; when come back again, to go into Nazareth for fear of Archelaus ; and when come to Age, he was fo divested, and emptied of all Power, as he was forced to retire into the Borders of Canaan, at one time to hide, and ſkulk, as we ſay : And again, John 4. 1, 3. When therefore the Lord knew how the Pharifces had heard, that Jefus made and baptized more Difciples than John, he left Judea, and departed again into Galilee : And another time, John 11. 53, 54. Then from that day forth, they took Counſel together for to put him to death : Jefus therefore walked no more openly among the Jews, but went thence unto a COUNTRY near to the Wildernefs, into a City called Ephraim, and there continued with his Difciples : Yea then, when he was to be apprehended by a Band of Men, he yet considers enough what Power and Authority he had in Heaven for his Rescue, Matth. 26. 53, 54. Thinkest thou not that I cannot now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give me more than twelve Legions of Angels? But how then shall the Scriptures be fulfilled, that thus it must be? Even then he subjects and empties himself: If I should take this on me, how should the Scriptures be fulfilled? which have said, I must die, and suffer, and thus it must be: So at the Bar, he suffers himself to be arraigned by Authority, and to be smitten by an Under-Officer, as one that reviled the Authority, which the smiter of him judg'd he ought to have been subject to; yea, thought much at it that so poor a wretch as he should presume not to do it, John 18. 22. And when he had thus spoken, one of the Officers which stood by, struck Jesus with the Palm of his hand, saying, Answerest thou the High Priest so? As if he should say, Answerest [thou,] so vile, so mean a Wretch as thou art, the High Priest so? And he then also considers what was his due, and declares it afore them openly at the Bar, when they contemned him, as being then thorough his own willing emptying himself, in their Power. Thus, Matth. 26. 64. Jesus saith unto him, Thou hast said; nevertheless I say unto you, Hereafter shall ye see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of Power, and coming in the Clouds of Heaven: That is, you have me^e now under, and this is your hour; and you think of me but as of another Man subject to you: Nevertheless I say unto you, Hereafter shall ye see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of Power, and coming in the Clouds of Heaven. What need I lay more as to this Argument but this, That he to whom all Authority in Heaven and Earth is committed, was accus'd and condemn'd, and the cause for which he was condemned, was, That he was a Rebel, and a Traytor unto Authority.

The 2d Particular Glory of which Christ divested himself for us is Riches, which some refer to those Riches of Wisdom spoken of Colos. 2. but Wisdom we find comes in after; nor are they Riches of Glory; for they are in like manner summed up in Glory, which also follows: But these Riches here are attributed to Christ as a King, (which is the subject of this Chapter;) and a Kingdom consists as in Authority, so in Riches, &c. and so these Riches do import the right of Possession unto all things whatsoever: The Jus or Dominion over all Creatures, as being his proper Goods and Chattels; and to this purpose it is said, All is yours, for you are Christ's; so that all are his first and originally; and our Right is but a derivation from him. We read that Wisdom (that is, Christ) says, Prov. 8. 18. Riches and Honour are with me: The Earth is full, as of his Glory, Isa. 6. (for that is spoken of Christ;) so of his Riches, as Psal. 104. 24. And of Christ it is that it is said, Psal. 24. 1. The Earth is his, and the fulness of it; the World, and they that dwell therein; 'tis spoken of Christ that King of Glory, as ver. 8, 10. of whom that Psalms is made: For 'tis he to whom those everlasting Doors did open when he ascended, as in the close of that Psalms: His Riches lye not in Chattels only, but in Persons also, The fulness of the Earth, and the Inhabitants also, as in that Psalms. The Angels here you see, acknowledge, That all Riches are his, and there withal that themselves possess not a foot of ground in Heaven but what is Christ's: And if they, the supreamest rank of God's Creation, are his Servants, as that Angel acknowledgeth himself to be, Rev. 19. and ministring Spirits, Heb. 1. (and Servants and Ministers about a great King, or great Person, are part of their Riches,) then surely, all things else must be put into this Inventory: Now see the Grace, the Love of Christ, as the Apostle speaks, 2 Cor. 8. 9. That though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor. He emptied himself of the Possession of all, and left not himself so much as an hole to hide his head in; he speaks in relation to his outward possession of any thing: For his scope in that place, was to exhort to giving to others; and this Poverty was from his very Birth. Consider but how his Mother did lye in; (you that are rich, fine Dames, you will soon be sensible of this more than others,) she lyes In in Straw as Beasts at best, not in a Bed, no not in a House, but a Stable; and the Babe himself was laid in a Manger: His Parents that brought him up from an Infant, were poor, (and such must his Accommodations and Breeding be:) Witness the Offering they made made at his bringing to the Temple, Luke 2. 24. And after in his Life, the World was not amended with him : He lives upon the Charity of others, and had but meerly wherewith to live : He is made dependent on Women, (who themselves have not to give, but out of that their Husbands allow them ;) thus Luke 8. 11. and therein was made a Servant ; for so is the Borrower to the Lender, as Solomon speaks. And at his Death, it continued still to be thus with him : He is fain to commend his Mother to another (to John,) to keep her when he is gone, having nothing himself to leave her : His Cloaths, though mean, were not his own to dispose of at that time ; but the Guards and Watchmen that waited him till Death, cast Lots for them afore his Face ; and himself considered it, and laid it to heart, as in Psal. 41. (made of him, and expressing his Heart, ver. 9.) It is strange, that in the midst of such Tortures he then hung in, he should mind this Circumstance, so small an one ; but we are thereby taught, that he considered every thing he suffered, as well as every Sin of ours he suffered for ; and was accordingly afflicted, that he that was so great, so rich a Person, if he had had his own in his right and due, should be brought to this, and stript of all ; and should have those his mean and worthless Cloaths to be disposed of afore his Eyes, in a way of sport, as well as otherwise : This wounded and pierced his Heart, as well as that they pierced his Hands and his Feet, and gave him Vinegar to drink, and wagged their Heads in scorn ; and his Poverty, and emptiness of all Comforts, and want of all Supplies in those respects, he was deeply sensible of : And the Psalms begins with, Blessed is he that considers the Poor ; for he was such, and speaks it as glad that any did consider him in that Estate.

The Third Thing instanced in, is Wisdom, which is as large as his Authority : He knows all things that are, or fall out within his Dominion ; which are all things. Kings see not with their own Eyes, but the Eyes of the Lord run through the whole Earth. He knew Paul, where he dwelt, Acts 9. as also that Church, Rev. 2. 13. I know where thou dwellest, and so all Particulars also ; and else, he were not a merciful High Priest as Man, if he knew not all our particular Straights as Man : He is the Bishop of Souls, and knows all his Flock himself : As Man he shall judge the World, and is ready to do it now, as Peter speaks ; and therefore knows all that God hath done, or will do, or all Persons to be judged, All things are naked before him ; (and that Him is Christ there,) with whom we have to do : And all these things he knows not by the hearsay of Angels, that are his Messengers sent by him, not to bring him Intelligence, but to execute his Will ; them yet he employs as Ministers for his Business : But he knows them all in himself, as he did that particular Matter then in Mark 5. 30.

See Lapide
in Locum out of Molin.

Now let us see him in his Weakness, and emptying himself for a time in this respect : How ignorant was he of many things ? As of the Day of Judgment, and of The Fig-tree, &c. Yea, ignorant of Letters and Learning This they spake of him that had cause to know him, his Kindred that lived in the same place, and therefore name his Condition and Calling, and they that knew his Sisters, Mark 6. 2, 3. spake thus of him, From whence hath this Man these things ? And what Wisdom is this which is given to him ? Is not this the Carpenter, (that hath lived always at his Trade, and wrought for us,) the Son of Mary, the Brother of James and Joses, and of Judas and Simon ? And are not his Sisters here with us ?

A
D I S C O U R S E
O F
T H A N K F U L N E S S,

Which is due to G O D for His Benefits and Blessings.

Pfal. 100. 4.

Be thankful to Him.

WHAT Thankfulness is, I will explain to you by these few Questions :

First, How being thankful differs from glorifying God ; for they are made to differ, Rom. 1. 21. They glorified not God, neither were thankful. Thankfulness being in the general taken as it is here, for the whole Duty of Man to God, is for substance all one, as to glorifie him ; for in the same thing wherein we glorifie him, we also give thanks to him : And therefore Luke 17. 18. Christ speaking of that Leper's Thankfulness, saith, None but he returned to give glory to God, that is, to be thankful to him. I know indeed, Thanksgiving is a peculiar Branch of God's Worship, when it is taken strictly ; but Thankfulness is larger, and extends it self to all Duties, which when they are done to God, as an acknowledgment of his Mercies and our Love, they may be termed Thankfulness : And so, though in the same Duties wherein we glorifie God, we are thankful also ; yet in several Considerations, and as coming from us upon several grounds, those Duties are sometimes called glorifying God, and sometimes being thankful : As if a Friend, a Son, or a Servant, should do all the same thing for a Man ; in the Servant that Act might be called doing him Service ; in the Son doing his Duty, and an Act of Obedience ; and in the Friend a Kindness : So here we standing towards God in all relations, and in regard of all those Relations, Obedience being due to him as he is a Father ; all that we do to him is called Honour, Mal. 1. 6. As he is a Master and Lord, it is called Fear in the same place ; as he is a God, gracious, that loads us with Benefits, it is called Thankfulness ; as he is a glorious God in himself, to whom Glory and Power is due, all is called glorifying him. Thus (Psalms 50. 14, 15. 23.) Thanksgiving is put for his whole Worship, and glorifying him so many ways ; and so in many Relations we are tyed in obedience unto God, as we can never want Motives to draw Obedience from us ; and therefore

so

so many Aggravations are there of neglect and want of performance of them.

To come then to the Difference between these Two ; God being so glorious a God, we are to do all to him, and for him, and obey him in all, and make him the end of all, which is called glorifying him. Suppose we were no way beholden to him, all this were a due to his Excellency and Glory, which might challenge it from us; might extort it, Psal. 29. 2. Give unto the Lord the Glory due unto his Name ; that alone would challenge all the Service, all the Praise that you do or could make to him ; but now we all are upon a further ground, to do all to him, and for him, because of all the many Mercies we receive from him : Now to return all in this relation, is called Thankfulness. To do all out of a sense of his Excellency and Glory that is in himself this is to glorifie him. But to do all out of a sense of his Mercies to us, and our obligation unto him, this is Thankfulness : So that (Rom. 1. 21.) it is brought in as a further aggravation, that though the Gentiles did, as it is in the Verse before, read many Characters of his glorious Power and Wisdom in the Creation and Governing the World, (the Heavens declaring his Glory, Psal. 19.) that though they knew this, yet they glorified him not, gave not the Glory which is due unto his Name; but, Secondly, Not only so, but though they knew they themselves had all from him, and that he loaded them with Mercies ; (so Acts 14. 17. speaking of the Gentiles, he saith, that notwithstanding their ignorance, yet God left not himself without witness, in that he did good, and gave us Rain from Heaven, and fruitful Seasons, filling our Hearts with Food and Gladness : All which are Witnesses and Testimonies of God's Love and Bounty) yet they, though they knew all this, and that they lived at his cost, were disobedient, and therefore their disobedience is aggravated here by this, that they were Unthankful.

The Second Question is, What Thankfulness is ? It is a free rendering to God the Glory of his Goodness; principally to the end we may glorifie it, and testify our love to him.

First, It is a rendering, and in that Act doth the Nature of Thankfulness consist, and hereby it is express'd, and this Act hath reference and relation to something received ; if I give any one any thing never so freely, if it be not in relation to something received from him, it hath not the nature of Thankfulness; it is giving not Thanksgiving, but when a Man begins first to consider with himself, what he hath received from God, and upon that ground he returns an acknowledgment of the Mercy; that which he doth return to him is, Thankfulness; and this you may see in David, Psal. 116. 12. What shall I render unto the Lord for all his Benefits toward me? Ye see how he considers the Benefits received, thinks what to return again, and upon what ground,

And therefore for Application, would you know whether you do all you do out of Thankfulness ; I ask you, whether it is a rendering to God ? That is, do you look upon God as the Author of all the good things you do enjoy ? And thereupon, do you bring forth all your obedience, and look upon it when you have done, but as a rendering to God again, even as all the Rivers come from the Sea, and return to it again ? So do your Hearts but as it were return to God, all you have first received from him ; otherwise, if you should do never so much for God, and not look upon it as a rendering to him, it were not Thankfulness if it came not from you upon that ground ; for if you think in your Hearts, though never so secretly, that you have added any thing to him, if you think with your selves thus : Why have I not prayed ? And I have fasted (as Isa. 58. 2. they began to murmur :) Thus to glory in any thing, as if you had not received it, (1 Cor. 4. 7.) as Men are apt to do, and as they at the last day will do, who heap kindness upon Christ : Have we not prophesied in thy Name, and cast out Devils ? as if he were beholden to them : So Men think that God is beholden to them if they repent, and do think every thing they do for God to be a great matter ; such Popery is in Mens Hearts : This is not Thankfulness ; but your behaviour, is as if you had given to him first : Whereas, says God, Job 41. 11. Who hath prevented him, that I should repay him ; that is, who is aforehand with me in any thing he

he hath done : There were other thoughts in David when he gave so largely to the building of the Temple, 1 Chron. 29. 13, 14. We thank thee, saith he, Of thine own have we given thee; we have but rendred what was thine; given indeed it was, because willingly, ver. 14. but yet of thine own; so he looks upon it, and therefore it was Thanksgiving: For, says David, All things are of thee, even this my Thanksgiving, and all.

Secondly, It is a free rendring, and that is an essential property of Thanksgiving. What is restored must be restored willingly; if it be for slavish Fear, though a Man render never so much to God, it is Service not Thankfulness; for Thankfulness hath relation to Bounty, and consists in a likeness to it: Now one among many Conditions, as I observed in Bounty, was, that it should be free and willing; now therefore, therein Thankfulness must answer to it, as rendring must be done in relation to giving, as I said; so look how it is given, so it must be rendred; it is not Bounty unless it be freely given, it is not Thanks unless it be freely rendred, Matth. 10. 8. Freely you have received, freely give, as Christ saith in another case: Yea, Willingness is more required and looked at, than the Thing rendred in matter of Thanks: So it is also in Bounty; and so Paul makes it in the Bounty of the Saints to their Brethren, 1 Cor. 8. 10. That they began not only to do, but to be willing a Year ago; it is brought in as a greater matter than to do, Non tam effectus aestimatur quam affectus; and so in like manner in matter of Thanks, Non tam requiritur equalitas rerum quam voluntatum, saith the School. The Woman that cast in her Mite, Christ says, had cast in more than they all, 'twas her freeness made it accounted so. Therefore David in the forenamed place, in rendring to God, put the Emphasis, Not in that he had rendred, but in that he had given so willingly; and after this sort. Wouldst thou know whether thou art truly thankful, or no? and desirest to be so, and to have it so taken? Look not only upon what thou hast rendred again to God, or how much, but how willingly; as, What willing Entertainment have all good Motions for God and the Advancement of his Glory in thy Heart? How came they off from thee? Dost thou follow thy Calling not willingly, but by constraint, as Peter speaks of Preachers, 1 Pet. 5. 2. because thou knowest not how else to live? Dost thou pray to God, but yet art haled to it by thy Conscience as a Beast to the Stake, to avoid a Whipping, by Conscience, that night thou omittest it? Then it is not out of Thankfulness. Dost thou keep in upon the Sabbath Day, and write and note the Sermon, and repeat it, but thinkest thy Master's House, or thy Study, a Prison all the while, and wouldst gladly be taking other Liberties, but that thy Tutor or Master commands thee otherwise; and all that while, thou lookest at them as thy Jailours? If so, thou art then unthankful, though thou rendrest and dost never so much for God.

Thirdly, The third thing to be considered concerning Thankfulness to God, is the thing which is to be rendred, and that is Glory; that thing thou renderest must be such, as thou art sure his Glory doth arise out of it: So 2 Cor. 4. 15. That through Thanksgiving it may redound to the Glory of God: So saith the Apostle there, and that is it God looks for in thy Thanksgiving; and the word Redounding is to be observed, because all that we can do adds no essential Glory to God; it redounds to it only, and manifests it. The reason is, because nothing else will be accepted at thy Hands: It is an excellent Rule Aristotle hath, speaking of the Matter of Thankfulness: What is it to be rendred? It is Restitutio superexcellenti, honoris, indigenti, Lucri; that is, if he be one who is far superiour above thee, and stands in need of nothing thou hast, then thy only and best way is to honour him all thou canst for his Bounty; restore Honour to him, and he looks for nothing else; but if he be one that stands in need, then thy best way to shew thy Thankfulness, is to recompence him some other way, give him of thy Substance, and relieve his Want: And now to this purpose, see what God himself says in Psal. 50. 12. If I were hungry I would not tell thee, (says God to the Formalist, (who thought to please him with Sacrifice, with killing Oxen and Goats;) I have no need of thee; but instead of these, ver. 14 15. he says, Offer to me Thanksgiving; and glorifie me. So also, ver. 23. they are put together, Whoso offers Praise glorifies me; it is the Praise of his Glory that is to be rendred, if thou wilt shew thy thy self thankful; he doth not always require of thee again the things themselves which he hath given thee for the substance of them, but the glory of them all; all Comforts thou hast, he is content thou shalt enjoy them, and rejoice in them, so thou give him the glory of them all; Men equal to your selves you are thankful to, by giving them like for like; if they invite you, you invite them, but not so to God: Go thy ways therefore, as Solomon says, and eat thy Meat with a merry Heart, and rejoice with the Wife of thy Youth, only acknowledge thou hast all from him, and that he gave all; and return the Strength of all to do his Will; and thou givest Glory and Thanks to him, when thou usest all to him, and for him: So Rom. 1. 6. To eat to the Lord is linked with giving Thanks

Only I add this, That if the Glory of God need thy Wealth, and any thing thou hast, so as thou must part with them, or dishonour him; if the Lord need thy Afs, as Christ had the Messenger tell him, (so doth God sometimes condescend to do,) then let him have all; let Goods, and Life, and all go, even the things themselves in such a case; so if the Profession of his Truth call for thy Life, let him have it; if his Honour calls for thy Credit, let him have it; so if his Church need thy Estate, or any Business whereby his Glory, Gospel, may be advanced and enlarged, let him have it freely.

But yet, Fourthly, This is to be limited in the Point of Thankfulness, to the Glory of his Goodness; it must be that which we principally render, when we give him and reflect upon him the glory of his Wisdom, Justice, Power, &c. we praise him in those Relations, but are thankful to him in relation of his Goodness only. There may be a rendring of Glory in the other, but yet it is simply a due in Justice; but when we do this in relation to the Goodness which is in him, it is a further thing and is due upon a further ground. We honour and reverence many Men whom we are no way beholden to, and we are bound to do it; it is a Duty, and a Duty of Justice, and is called Observance: So Rom. 13. 7. Render to all their Dues, Honour to whom Honour, Tribute to whom Tribute. Here you see, it is a Rendring, which is not Thankfulness, it being otherwise a due in Justice; but when being obliged to Men for the kindness and goodness that is received from them, we therefore honour them and serve them, this is Thankfulness: And so when upon that ground we honour God this is thankfulness and therefore here it is made a distinct thing from glorifying of God; only this is to be added, That if at any time his Goodness be the ground and motive of giving him Glory, then, though we praise any other Attribute in him, or the effect of it, as set a-work by his Goodness, it may be termed Thankfulness; then it is Thanksgiving, when we praise the Lord for his Goodness, (as it is said, Psal. 107. 8.) or when his Goodness is the ground of it in our Hearts, and it spring thence.

Fifthly, The Fifth Thing to be considered, are the Ends of Thankfulness, which must necessarily be added to all this, and they are Two: 1st, Principally to acknowledge that his Goodness; and, 2^{dly}, To testify our Love: Though we strive to render to him the Glory of his Goodness never so much, never so long, and never so many ways as ample as can be devised, yet if the end be not principally to glorify it, and testify our love, it is not Thankfulness; if it be with an Eye to reward, principally to hook more in, it is not Thankfulness, it is buying and selling rather; for Thankfulness still hath relation unto, and must resemble his Goodness and Bounty, and answer to it; now that is true Bounty which gives, looking for no Recompence, or not principally aiming at it: So Aristotle defines it, 2 Rhet. cap. 7. Gratia est per quam gratis aliquid quis facit, non ut sibi quicquam subveniat, sed cui facit, Bounty doing a kindness freely, not to benefit themselves, but the Party it is done unto; and so God doth; for even the Thanks he looks for is for your good, Deut. 10. 13. therefore now, if you have Hearts truly thankful, all you do for the Glory of his Goodness, will principally be to glorify that Goodness; and this was David's utmost End in that Thanksgiving of his, 1 Chron. 29. 13, 14. Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praise thy glorious Name. And what am I, that I should offer so willingly after this sort? praising God that he was able and willing to thank him, and to testify his love. See the holy Disposition of this thankful Man; when he had earnestly and willingly lingly rendred unto God, his Thanks are his next Thoughts, when he had done; What Reward will God give me again? No: But he falls a praising God afresh, that he was able to do what he did; and therefore, thus to glorifie God and thank him, this was in it self his utmost end; therein he rejoiced more than in any thing else: So it is said, ver. 17. I have seen it with joy, says he, and thou that knowest the Heart knowest I have done it in Uprightness, willingly; both are put in, not willingly only: So those that do all for Reward, may be very willing and forward, but we must be thankful in Uprightness also, (that is,) principally arguing to glorifie God's Goodness; for therein lyes Uprightness of Heart principally; it lyes in our Ends which then are upright, when God is principally aimed at: David thought this the greatest Mercy, that he was able to be thankful, though he ran most into debt when he went about to pay it.

I add and couple with this, this other End also, namely, that we ought to do all to testifie our Love, because Love being the Spring and Root whence true Thankfulness springs; therefore his End, that is truly thankful, is to manifest that his Love; therefore in Pf. 116. (which is a Psalm made on purpose, and wherein David's Heart is exceedingly enlarged with Thankfulness for hearing his Prayer, that he knows not again what to render to him, v. 12. he begins it thus: I love the Lord because he hath heard my Prayer. He makes profession of his Love to God for all the Love he had shewn him, as the ground of the ensuing Thankfulness; that being the thing that in his Thankfulness he would have God especially take notice of, because, he that knows what true Love is, knows that it desires to be paid in its own Coin chiefly, and therefore receiving all from free Love, he endeavours to return all again out of free Love; his Obedience therefore comes not from him simply to satisfy a Debt of Thankfulness he owes, (as many Men do when they requite Kindnesses, who return all but as a Debt, only to discharge themselves of a Duty and Obligation they owe; and so do many Mens Consciences discharge themselves of Duties to God, and are glad they are soon done) but he as a thankful Man hath a further aim than simply to discharge a Debt of it, and to have it taken notice of that such a thing is done, further to declare the willingness that was in his Heart when he did it; that especially he desires to shew, he hath a Design. As he takes notice of God's free Love principally to him in all, and thanks him for it more than for all the things he hath given him, so he desires that God would regard his Love in it rather than the Performance, and rather desires he should take notice of it than reward him again.

Having thus defined what thankfulness is, I will add these few things, further to illustrate the Definition. If further you will ask, (which makes a Third Question,) What ways you are to shew your Thankfulness? I answer out of the Definition given: Look how many ways God may come, to have the glory of his Goodness from you; so many ways are you to shew your selves thankful: As,

First, In acknowledging his meer Goodness in all, as the ground of all; which hath Two Things in it:

1st, That all ye are, or have, doth come from him, as David doth acknowledge 1 Cron. 29. 14, 15, 16. All (O Lord, as he confesseth there,) is of thine Hand, and is thine, not ours: For we in our selves are Strangers here, brought into the World, first made by thee, and therefore possess nothing but thy Gift, and therefore all is thine: And so Deut. 8. 17, 18. if thou hast Wealth, say not, my Power or the Might of my Hand hath gotten me this Wealth; but remember the Lord thy God, for it is he giveth thee power to get Wealth, consider, it is he bestows all, which, because we are apt to forget, he gives you a Memento to remember to ascribe nothing to your selves, to get humble Hearts, to glory in nothing, as if we had not received, 1 Cor. 4. 7. to look on our selves, if we have more Wit, or Wealth, or Grace, but as the Purse that hath more Money in it than another; but both, and Money and all is Gods'.

2dly, And also, we must not only thus acknowledge, that all we have is his, and from him, but also that all comes in meer goodness to us, and for nothing in us: So

David

David doth, 2 Sam. 7. 18. Where acknowledging the reason why God gave him so much and not another, he says it was not for any difference in him; but for his words sake, which he had promised to David, and according to his own Heart had he done those great things; there were no other Motives but his Goodness, and what is in, and comes from himself out of his own Heart: He hath a great Heart, and therefore doth great things.

But, Secondly, We must not only acknowledge his meer Goodness, but also our own Unworthiness of any: This casts a further Shadow upon his Goodness, and as a Foil, further illustrates it; one that hath deserved to be cast out of Favour, is more bound to be thankful, than one that never offended: And therefore Jacob lays that as the Foundation, whereupon he reareth his Thankfulness, Gen. 32. 10. I am less than the least of thy Mercies; Where, 1st, he acknowledgeth, that every thing he now had was Mercy, 'twas not simply Bounty, as to Adam, but Mercy which adds to Bounty: 2dly, says he I am less than the least; take the least bit of Bread he did eat, even his Staff he was not only unworthy of it, but unworthier than it; always an humble Heart is a thankful Heart; study your own Baseness if you would be thankful.

Thirdly, This his Goodness and thy Baseness must not only be apprehended by thee, and conceived in thy Heart, but it must be acknowledged in words, tho' it is necessary that our Hearts should be sensible of both: And accordingly, we are therein to bless God also, 1 Cor. 14. 16. we are to bless with our Spirits; all within me, says David, Psal. 103. 1, 2. The Heart and Affection within are the Instrument the Musick is made on; Thanks is called Melody, Eph. 5. 19. in the Heart; yet when the Heart is thus filled with a sense of God's Goodness and our Unworthiness, it must be acknowledged with the Tongue also; and Thanks is the Fruit of the Lips, Heb. 13. 15. and Calves of Lips, Hos. 14. 2. God's Praise is too big for the Heart; acknowledge all therefore privately in thy Prayers to God, and not only so, but also to others, Exod. 18. 8. When God had delivered the Israelites, Moses tells Jethro what he had done for them: David bids them come to him, and he would tell them what he had done for his Soul. Christ's reward of the Leper for healing him, was, Go, and tell what is done for thee. Instead of foolish jesting which our Mouths are full of, rather give Thanks, Eph. 5. 4. And if the Heart were full, the Mouth would be filled with Praise.

But yet, Fourthly, If we would shew our selves truly thankful, and give him the true glory of his Goodness, we must not think to render it in words only; but if the Glory of his Goodness may be any other way rendred, we must also endeavour to do it; for all we can do is too little: Therefore, Psal. 50. 23. he speaking of true Thankfulness says, He that offereth Praise glorifieth me; and he adds, He that ordereth his Conversation aright, he offereth the truest Praise, and glorifies his Goodness most: The Mercies of God call for another Sacrifice besides the Calves of our Lips, Rom. 12. 1. I beseech you by the Mercies of God, that you present your Bodies, that is, your whole Man, a living, holy, and acceptable Sacrifice. Now because they might mistake him, he shews how they must sacrifice themselves, which is (says he) your reasonable Service. 1st, Dedicating themselves to his Service; and, 2dly, That Service squared to the Word; (for so the Words in the Original signifie,) This is better than sacrificing thy Thousand Rivers of Oil; yea or thy Life. Thus David in that famous Psalm of Thanksgiving, Psal. 116. resolves to walk before the Lord, ver. 8. that is, to order all his course, so as God might be glorified and advanced; and I will pay my Vows, ver. 14. that is, all the Covenants he had made: 1st, He resolved, that the Consideration of God's Mercies should quicken him to the performance of them, as his Vows in Sicknes, Vows in Distress, Vows in Sacraments; and, ver. 16. I am thy Servant, that is, I dedicate my self for ever to thee, as one that owed him all he had or could do; every Man should think with himself, as that King concerning Mordecai: These and these Mercies I have received from God; But what have been done for him? As First, What Sins have I left? (for therein Thankfulness is to be shewn;) Sin no more, says Christ to him, that was healed: Shall I be so unthankful, so unkind? Shall I requite the Lord thus, to be unclean, to be negligent in my Calling, dead to Holy Duties? Do you thus requite the Lord? Who hath made you, establish'd you, deliver'd you? as Moses argues, Deut. 32. 6. So also, when a Man quickneth up his Heart to abound with Holy Duties, and says with himself, I have received more Wealth, Wit, Credit, than others, what therefore shall I do for him more than others? When a Man considers, the Sins God hath pardoned, the Prayers God hath heard, the long time in the World God hath given him, and thinks he owes him his Life for every Mercy, even as long as I live, says David, Psal. 116. 21. A thousand Lives if he had them, tho' he should never receive more Mercy, yet for those he hath had, I am thy Servant, says David, ver. 16. For thou hast loosed my Bonds, and therefore I will enter into new Bonds to serve thee; looking on every Mercy as a new Indenture betwixt God and him. When a Man repeats God's Mercies over, and every one of them makes his Soul to bleed for his Sins, as Nathan did to David, to cause him to mourn: Have I given thee thy Master's House, and Wife, and wilt thou serve me thus? This is to be thankful even in mourning for Sin.

Fifthly, A Fifth way to shew Thanks, is, to honour God with thy Substance, Prov. 3. 9. to do good with thy Gifts, to profit others, 1 Cor. 12. 7. to spend thy Sweetness and thy Fatness for the good of God and Man, and to consecrate all thy Learning, Wit, Wealth, to God, to use, and call for, and command, as if they were his own; this is to be thankful: And for this purpose, consider how much of their Estates the Jews under the Ceremonial Law, bestowed upon God and Holy Uses, besides their Yearly Tyths they payed, First-Fruits, brought Sacrifices and Offerings upon all occasions; these you are freed from; but yet thou art oblig'd to do good to his Saints, either their Souls or Bodies, with that thou hast received; as David did require, if none of Jonathan's Seed were alive, he might shew Kindness unto, 2 Sam. 2. 9. So do thou say, where is a poor Saint I may do good unto, whose Bowels of Soul or of their Bodies I may refresh? And do it as God hath enabled thee: If thou hast not Gold or Silver, yet such as thou hast, give them, as Peter did, and as Christ bad them, Matth. 10. 8. They having received their Gifts freely of Healing and Preaching, freely gave; and do all this, to this end, that others may thank God for thee, more than thank thee, which is Paul's Motive to their Bounty, 2 Cor. 9. 11, 12. You being enriched (says he) to all Bountifulness, which causeth through us Thanksgiving to God, and you to rejoice. that others are set a-work to glorifie God's Goodness in thee, by thine to them; for that should be the main Motive, as appears by his following words: For hereby, says he, not only the want of the Saints is supplied, (which Pity may cause you to do,) but furthermore it is abundant, by many Thanksgivings to God.

The fourth Question is, For what you must give Thanks, and be Thankful; I answer, All things: For, look how far his Goodness reaches, so far our Thanks should; now his Goodness runs through all things, so we must give Thanks for all, Eph. 5. 20. 1 Thes. 5. 18. in all, and for all; that is, in all things, so far as God's Goodness is seen in them; and so even for Afflictions, as they come out of love and faithfulness, Psal. 119. and are appointed and ordered for our good, though in themselves they are not to be thanked for: So Job blesteth God in the midst of all; for he found God blessing him in them; for as we love not God but he loves us first, so neither can we bless him till he blesteth us. Praise him for all his Dealings; for though thou see'st not how they are all Mercy, and Truth; yet thou shalt see them to be so in the end.

Praise him for Temporal Mercies; every Creature is to be received with Thanksgiving.

Magnifie him for Mercies past, as well as those to come; eaten Bread must not be forgotten, but praise him especially for Spirituall, Eph. 1. 3. for these do sweeten all the other; and his Goodness is more seen in these: Bless him for his giving Christ for thee, and thee to Him, and Him to thee, and all Things with Him.

For publick Mercies also, as well as private, as of all Duties, Thankfulness become you most who are Saints, Psal. 33. 1. So to be thankful for publick lick Mercies to the State you live in, is especially expected of you: For godly Men have publick Spirits, and also publick Mercies are principally intended by God for you; for all things are yours, the World, all Deliverances and Peace which a People have, 1 Cor. 3 last Verses; and publick Mercies redound more to God's Glory, 2 Cor. 4. 15. and your first Petition is, Hallowed be thy Name: So also be thankful for Mercies to come, as David praiseth God for the great Things laid up in store for those that fear him, Psal. 31. 19. as well as those he had then wrought for them. So also David praiseth God, 1 Sam. 7. 17, 18, 19. for the long time to come, that he had promised to his Seed the Kingdom, as a greater Matter than his present enjoying it.

The fifth Question you will ask, When we are to be thankful? I answer, At all times: For, look what time his Goodness is extended, which is at all times, then also must thy Thankfulness be returned; therefore that is added, Eph. 5. 20. Always, and for all things: As he said to the Queen, that when she left giving, he would leave begging: So, I say, when God leaves giving, then leave thou shewing thy self thankful to him; but his Mercies are renewed every moment, as the Rivers are as continually running to the Sea, as they are from it; so let thy Thanks flow to him, as his Mercies always flow to thee; all his Works are for ever; and so his Works of Mercy, and every one, is to be thanked for ever: If thou hadst received no more but thy Creation, if he gives thee Being and Life, resolve to be thankful whilst thou hast a Being, as David, Psal. 104. 33. I will praise him as long as I live, and whilst I have any Being. As Sin is an eternal Guilt, so every Mercy is an eternal Obligation; as they therefore are ever punish'd in Hell, because they can never pay the utmost Farthing, so we in Heaven shall be thankful ever; because we can never be thankful enough, he loads us with Benefits daily, Psal. 68. 19. Therefore we should praise him daily, as David, Psal. 71. 15. resolves to do.

The last Thing to be added, is, That look in whom God shews and extends his Goodness, in and through him give you Thanks, and return the Glory of it, and that is Jesus Christ: So Eph. 5. 20. for Thanks are Sacrifices, called the Fruits of the Lips, and Calves of your Lips, Heb. 13. 15. that is, they are instead of those Sacrifices and Offerings of Fruits under the Law, therefore bring them to the Priest to offer (as Heb. 13. 15.) for you must offer nothing without a Priest: Again, All is from God, through Christ, and therefore return all to God through him also, and give thanks for him above all, for he is all in all.

And so now in the last place, I will shew you the causes of true Thankfulness, which you may take, and consider, as helps to it: And they are,

First, A true consideration of God's Benefits received by us; which must of necessity be done, or else there can be no true Thankfulness, as ignoti Cupido nulla, so Gratie nulla pro ignotis: So then you must labour to know them, and that they are yours, Psal. 139. 14. I will praise thee, saith David, for thy wonderful Works, which my Soul knows right well; that is, makes full consideration of them, which makes me thankful therefore; for want of this, unreasonable Creatures are incapable of Thankfulness, because of Understanding, and yet wicked Men are worse; for Isa. 1. 3. The Ox knoweth his Owner that feeds him, but my People do not consider; that is, regards not, takes no notice of, and into consideration the great things I have done for them. And therefore Deut. 32. 6. their Unthankfulness is ascribed to Folly, A foolish People and unwise, Stultus semper est ingratus: Therefore get a Heart that takes notice of every Mercy; if thou prayest, watch how God doth answer thy Prayers, Col. 4. 2. Watch in Prayer with Thanksgiving; as if he had said, Still see how many Requests God grants; Watch to see how your Prayers come in, and it will afford much and plentiful Matter of Thankfulness; to this end, take notice of small Mercies as well as great; that is a true sign of a thankful Heart; and a means to encrease Mercies. In every Passage of the Day, in every Petition of thy Prayers, thou see'st Mercy, and an Answer; God takes this kindly at thy Hands, and he sees that none is lost; it is a Motive to him to give thee more; it is a sign thou art little in thine own Eyes, when every small Mercy is great to thee, as it was to Jacob. Forget not all his Benefits, saith David, Psal. 103. 1. not all, not one if it were possible ; as when we would work our Hearts to godly Sorrow , we use to go over particular Sins ; so if we would work our Hearts to Thankfulness , go over particular Mercies, and labour to take notice of them , and know them ; so also remember them , which is but an iteration of Consideration : And indeed this is so necessary, that Forgetfulness is put for Unthankfulness ; and so David, Psal. 103. lays a solemn Charge upon his Soul, My Soul, forget not all his Benefits : He doth give himself a charge to remember them. And we had need have a charge laid on us to do this ; for nothing sooner waxeth old than Kindnesses ; Injuries are written on our Hearts with a Pen of Iron, but Mercies are written as in Water, Psal. 106. 13. They soon forgot his Works ; as Pharaoh's Butler forgot Joseph, so we forget God.

Secondly, A second help and cause of Thankfulness, is a true esteem and valuation of God's Mercies, which is to be added to the other : And to this end, we are to consider the greatness, and the number, and all the aggravations of them ; for some Circumstances in Mercies make them great. When Paul would express his great thanks, 2 Cor. 9. That thing which he gives thanks for, he calls unspeakable. And in 1 Thess. 3. 9. What Thanks shall I give, saith he, for all the Joy we have for your sakes before God? He thought it so great a Mercy, as no Thanks were great enough , the Gift so unspeakable , that as his Groans in Prayer, so in Thanks also were unutterable. Now if you would have such large Hearts, get a large Esteem of God's Mercies. See how Ezra esteemed the Mercy shewed his People, Chap. 9. 13. Such a Mercy as this : So think thou of the peculiarness of every Mercy to thee, how God hath not dealt so with others of thy Brethren, as he in the Psalm, not so with any Nation ; to this purpose also, cast up the number of them. So David did , Psal. 40. 5. Thy Thoughts (speaking of thoughts of Mercy,) are more than I can reckon up to thee : So Psal. 71. 15. I will praise thee always, for I know not the number of thy Mercies : And add to that a right esteem of thine own Vileness, that thou deservest nothing , but art less than the least ; and then every Mercy will be Mercy indeed ; nothing hinders Thankfulness more than Pride. Hezekiah rendred not because his Heart was lifted up, 2 Chron. 32. 25. for a proud Man thinks every thing is due to him ; but a Beggar is thankful for a Penny. The People of Israel having proud Hearts, thought scorn of the good Land, Psal. 106. 24. thought it not good enough for them who were too bad for Hell ; we have nothing but this Manna, say they, yet it was Angels Food, and came from Heaven without their Labour ; and take heed of contemning these Mercies thou enjoyest, which because thou hast not what thou wouldst have, thou art apt to do ; there is no Mercy almost here, which in this Life is a pure Mercy, but something is wanting still, because indeed in our Works unto God, there is still something wanting, and we are wayward Creatures ; and because things do not come off adequately to our Minds, and so fully as we would have them, we therefore undervalue them. Such pievish things are our Lusts, that unless all be pleased, none are pleased.

Thirdly, There must be added to this a sense of God's Love to your Persons in every Mercy, or at leastwise there must be a Heart in thee that seeks after that Love in and above all other Mercies, and rests not in them without it : And such a Heart only is a thankful Heart. For, if the Heart be jealous of the want of his Love in all he gives, it will not be thankful, as the Children of Israel were not, they thought God brought them out of Egypt to destroy them ; and therefore murmured rather than gave thanks : And if the Heart be not sensible of God's Love, great Mercies are little worth to us ; for Love is that which makes them Mercies. A Dinner of Herbs in love, is better than a stalled Oxe without love : As when thou sittest down with a great Man , whose Heart thou fearest is not with thee, as Prov. 23. thou wilt have no great Heart to thank him for his Cheer : So also, if thou fearest that God's Heart is not with thee ; therefore Psal. 63. 3. David makes this the ground of his Praise, because he tasted his loving Kindness to be better than Life ; neither is it requisite only, that the Heart should know, that the Mercies come from God, but also that they come out of Love. The Gentiles knew, that all they had was from him, Acts 14. 17. He left not himself without Witness, but they tasted not his Love in all as better than Life, and so were unthankful; therefore get Faith and Assurance of his Love in all, and that will make every Mercy a great Mercy, because flowing out of an eternal Love in Christ, so Col. 2. 7. Be you rooted and built up in Christ, and established in the Faith, abounding with Thanksgiving; and then every Dinner of Herbs, yea, every Cross, is interpreted in Love, and made a Love-Token; all his Ways accounted Mercy and Truth.

come

Fourthly, A fourth Help to Thankfulness, is Love again to God, which is wrought by the sense of his Love: This is necessary, for Love is the Ground-Song of this Melody, as the Apostle calls it: Therefore David makes it the Foundation of all his Thankfulness, Psal. 116. 1. and so Psal. 18. 13. for Love enlargeth the Heart, and it is the very Form and Essence of Thankfulness; and therefore the chiefest Cause of it; and therefore contrarily, Self-Love is the greatest hindrance of it; and also Love to the Creature hinders it too, for Self-Love keeps all to it self, and improveth all to it self, it contracteth the Heart, therefore in 2 Tim. 3. 3. it is said Men shall be Lovers of themselves, and because such, therefore unthankful also, that follows, for that makes them content to take all Kindnesses, but to return none; and therefore that Goodness in Nature, (as we call it in Men) which makes them thankful is but so much Ingenuity, as restraining Grace hath gained from Self-Love, and so likewise Love to the Creatures if Inordinate is an hindrance, Nullum habet malum cupiditas majus quam quod ingrata est, for like Dogs that are greedy, cast one Sop to them they swallow it down, and then look you on the Face for another; so do Men possess with Lusts.

Fifthly, A fifth Help is Joy in God's Goodness, as when Hannah praised God for Samuel, 1 Sam. 2. 1. she begins her Song thus, My Heart rejoiceth in the Lord: When you entertain God's Blessings with fulness, you cannot give Thanks for them; therefore upon Days of Thanksgiving, a liberal use of the Creature is allowed us, in the 8th of Nehemiah; for the Joy of the Lord is your Strength; for Joy dilateth the Heart and opens the Mouth, turns it and winds it up; and so Luke 1. 46, 47. My Soul magnifieth the Lord, and rejoiceth in God my Saviour: And David also, when he gave Thanks, 1 Chron. 29. 17. he rejoiced exceedingly that day; only you must joy in God's Goodness; for if you carnally rejoice in the Creature, Spiritual Joy is damped, and then Thanksgiving is damped also, Deut. 8. 10, 11. Lest thou being full and forget me: They in the 14th of the Acts, verse 17. had their Hearts fill'd with Gladness, but yet walked in their own Ways, because it was Gladness in the Creature, not in God: Preserve Spiritual Joy therefore, and delight thy self in the Almighty.

Sixthly, We freely render to God the Glory of Goodness, by acknowledging his Goodness and our Baseness, and by yielding our selves, and all we have to his Service, and in all things, at all times principally to this end to glorifie that his Goodness, and to testify our Love; and all this to the Name of Christ.

U S E. The first Use is to exhort you to this Duty of Thankfulness, unto which, as you have the greatest Motive drawn from the Object of it, the Riches of God's Goodness (of all Cords the Cords of Love are the sweetest) so also from the Goodness and Excellency of the Duty it self; which, indeed, hath all kinds of Goodness met in it; for all good things the Philosopher reduceth to three Heads, 1. Things honest. 2. Things profitable. 3. Things pleasant, and all these three met in this Duty, a perfect Trinity of Goodness; so you have 147 Psalm. Praise the Lord, for it is good, that is it is profitable, so Rom. 5. 7. and it is pleasant, and praise is comly; and therefore by the rule of Contraries, all kind of Evil is contained and met in unthankfulness; to which, even the very Heathen bear witness, ingratum si dixeris, omnia dixeris, all Evil is spoken in this one word, viz. Unthankfulness.

First, Thankfulness to God, is most profitable, 1. Because it is the way to get more, and unthankfulness is the way to lose all we have: Therefore Phil. 4. 6, 7. Let your Requests be made known with thanksgiving, otherwise Requests alone will not move God; it is not earnestness only, for what thou wantest, but withal Thanks for what thou hast, must prevail; as you use to put Water into the Pump to fetch more, so return Thanks to fetch more Mercies; whereas the want of Thankfulness, and returning all to God again, forfeits all the Blessings you have, Deut. 28. 47, 48. because you served not the Lord with Gladness of Heart in abundance of all things, you shall serve your Enemies in want, &c. Enemies are opposed to God a bountiful Master; Abundance to Penury, and Gladness to Grief and Sorrow of Heart; great odds you see therein, yet this Unthankfulness brings Hos. 2. 14. I will take my Corn away, says God, when they were unthankful.

Secondly, It is profitable, because even the Creature and Blessings you have, are blest to you by it, and thereby made good, 1 Tim. 4. 4. the Creatures are good if received with Thanksgiving; mark it, he puts in that (if) for otherwise God's Curse goeth with them, which Thankfulness removed.

The second thing is, it is pleasant also both to God and Man, 1. Pleasant to God, Eph. 5. 18, 20. sing Psalms, making Melody to God in your Hearts, giving Thanks for that is the Ditty: So Pf. 69. 30, 31. I will magnifie the Lord with Thanksgiving this shall please the Lord better than an Ox or Bullock. As it is pleasant to God, so 2dly to Man, for Joy is always the ground of it; we never thank God truly, but our Hearts are warmed with his Love, and we rejoyce in him; therefore Luke 1. 46, 47. When Mary praised God, she said, My Spirit doth magnifie the Lord, and rejoyce in God my Saviour; and as Joy is the ground of it, so the Consequent and the Issue of it: When you thank God most heartily, then God fills your Hearts with Peace: So Phil. 4. 6, 7. Let your Requests be made known with thanksgiving, and the Peace of God shall rule your Hearts: Christians find it so, and those Blessings are sweetest to them, which they are most thankful for, that are won with Prayers, and worn with Thanks. Lastly, It is also comely, for it is paying a Debt, 2 Thes. 1. 3. We are bound, and it is meet to give Thanks (says Paul there) it is all God requires, and all we can do. So in the 2 Sam. 7. 19, 20. when he had repeated those great Mercies, and now, O Lord (says he) what can thy Servant say more, it was all he could do, he could but thank him, and out of Thankfulness serve him, and this is all God requires, 1 Thes. 5. about the 18 v. This is the Will of God concerning you Therefore as it is comely, as being the giving but a due, and less than his due, and yet all we can; so also honourable, yea, more honourable than praying is, præstantius est dare quam accipere; so to return than begg; therefore the Service of the World to come, and of Angels in Heaven is set forth by this.

Secondly, By way of use then let me shew you your Unthankfulness to God, and let you see what Unthankfulness is; I will briefly set it forth to you in three Degrees of it, which I will apply to you: The first Degree of Unthankfulness is, 1. When you want true Thankfulness, in expressing your Thankfulness, as when you want the true Grounds and Ends of it; among Men there is no greater falshood and dissemblance than in the matter of Thankfulness one to another, and much more to God; there are often the Matter, the Duties, the Tokens, the Expressions of it, both in Word and Deed, when as yet the Life and Soul of Thankfulness is wanting, for as you pray amiss, (as James says) so also you may be Thankful amiss: See you an Example for this, Luke 18. 11. I thank God (says the Pharisee) I am not like other Men: Here is one outwardly thankful, when yet he wanted the Power of true Thankfulness; for he gave not God the Glory of what he was, but in his Heart took it himself; he rendred an Acknowledgment indeed, as unto God, but yet gloried, as if he had not received it from him: Some Men will commend their own Worth and Gifts to others, by way of Thankfulness to God, when they aim more at glorifying themselves than glorifying of him.

So also when Men are thankful for Mercies, which indeed they have not received from God, nor have no Assurance and Evidence of; it is an ordinary thing for Men give to Thanks for Election, and the Work of Grace, Grace, when inwardly their Hearts tell them, they have no Assurance of neither; to thank God for Mercies you have not, is to mock him, as the other gloried in what he had received, as if he had not received it; so some give Thanks for what they have not received, as if they had received it.

So also when Men seem to be thankful, and say, we bless God for the Means of Grace, and blessed Preaching we live under, and for the Company of God's People, and yet their Hearts are affected more with a value, and esteem of their Corn, and Wine, and Oil; and of their Quails more than Manna; all this is Unthankfulness. So when Men seem to be very stirring for God, forward of Duties, and fearful of Injuries and Wrongs to him, and yet do not this out of Thankfulness; this is Unthankfulness when it is not his Goodness they fear most in abstaining from Sin, as Hos. 3. 5. They forbear not wronging him because he hath been kind to 'em, not because the Love of God and his Goodness constrains them to Duties, neither is that they do for him in relation to what is past, and what he hath done for them; but still they look to things to come only, what Dependances they have on him, considering rather how they are in his Danger than in his Debt, not so much to requite him, who hath done so much for them; but lest he should reward them for all they have done against him, if in this Case, and on these Grounds only, you should offer Rivers of Oil to him, and give your Bodies to be burnt for him, yet you might be termed Unthankful; Thankfulness hath no greater End than it self; as when a Man looks upon God, as one who hath saved him from hanging in Hell, and one he owes his Life unto, and so would be content to do or suffer any thing for him upon this Ground, and is glad if God will but use him or call him to either, is greedy of Opportunities of rendring to him, and glad of an occasion wherein he may show himself to love him. Is thankful for nothing more than that; He is able to do any thing that pleaseth him, and may be accepted; this Man is a thankful Man; so much of this as you have in your Hearts, so much Thankfulness you have; that Man, who endeavours to quicken up his Heart, and says, I have received these and these Mercies more from God than any of my Equals, as Paul did, more Wit and Parts, and Learning, and Credit, and Opportunities, what shall I therefore do for him more than other Men? And so serves him; this is a thankful Man.

The second Degree of Unthankfulness I would convince you of, is much more than the former, viz. not rendring at all; not only rendring amiss, but not rendring at all, or not in any proportionable measure to the Mercies received. Herod had received much assistance in the making an Eloquent Oration, and God had made it take, but he gave not Glory to God; that was his Sin, he rendred not again; and so Hezekiah's, a good Man, he had received a great Mercy, he had the Lease of his Life renewed for 15 Years, and of his Kingdom with it, and a deliverance from Zenacharib; and this, at that time, when the rest of the Tribes were carried away Captive, and had a Miracle wrought for his sake which made him famous all the World over; namely, the going back of the Sun; and which made him to be thought dear to the God of Heaven, who, beyond the Course of Nature, lengthened the Day to show he meant to lengthen his Life; yet 2 Chron. 22. 25. he is taxed, that he rendred not again according to the Benefit done unto him; his Heart was not wrought upon to be so much better after so great a Mercy, according to that proportion which might be expected; and so Solomon is taxed for this kind of Ungratitude, 1 Kings 11. 9. God had been exceeding merciful unto him, not only in giving him the Kingdom, though a younger Brother, but in appearing unto him, and assuring him thereby of his Love, and Acceptation of him, that he was his God. Now, says the Text, by way of Aggravation of his Sin, He turned away from the Lord his God, 1 Kings 11. 9. who had appeared unto him twice. Is there any Man here had often Appearings from God? (for when after any extraordinary manner he draws nigh to you, it may be so called) And have not your Hearts been turned more to God after? Then these Appearings will be set upon your Score of Unthankfulness; so have you had much cost bestowed on you, much Means by the Lord of the Harvest, and Dresser of the Ground, and have you not brought forth meet Fruits, not only Fruits but meet Fruits,

Fruits, Heb. 6. 7. you may be called unthankful Persons, because you render not again according to the Benefits.

So it is Unthankfulness when Christians are always whining and complaining, and discontented, for what they want, but never praising God for what they have, still a begging more, not considering what is past; indeed in Duties, you are to look to what is before, and not to what is behind, but contrary in Mercies, to what is past more than to what is to come, and if so much as you fall short in rendering as you might, so much Unthankfulness, much more are they unthankful that render not according to the Benefit received; but not at all, as many do not, but do take all they can get from God, but he gets nothing of them again; they have Houses to dwell in of his building, but pay him no Rent, pray not to him nor worship him in their Families, and so as to make a Church in their Houses; have Credit in the World, and Interest in Men's Hearts, but are loth to spend never so little of it for God and a good Cause, and to make use of their Interest in Men for his Advantage, but improve all to their own Ends only; that have Power put into their Hands (which the Apostle says is God's, and from him) and yet do not think with themselves how to employ it best for him, in the suppressing of any Sin, or the advancing of his Gospel; have Bodies and Souls that are of his buying and finding, but yet endeavour not to glorify God with either, as Paul exhorts upon that ground in 1 Cor. 6. 20. do not begin to say in their Hearts as God taxeth them, Jer. 5. 24. Let us fear the Lord who giveth Rain, both the former and the latter in their Season: Nay, pay him not so much as good Words for all his Mercies, much less study not how to render, and to be really thankful; nay, Sacrifice to their own Nets, Hab. 1. 16. and say in their Hearts, their Wit, and Power, and Industry hath got 'em; their Wealth and their Learning (Deu. 8. 14. 17.) they think hath got them their Credit; their Friends have got them their Preferment; all these are unthankful Persons; the Earth rendereth Fruit to him that dresseth it, the Clouds return, the Rain they receive from the Earth, the Rivers empty themselves into the Sea, from whence they had their Streams; the Body of Man returns to the Earth whence it was taken, and the Spirit to God that gave it, only in your Hearts, and in your Lives, you return nothing again to the Glory of God's Goodness.

The third and highest Degree of Unthankfulness is not only rendering or not rendering at all, but requiting and rendering Evil and Disobedience for the Good received, which is the highest Degree of Unthankfulness; such was in the Children of Israel, and is in all impenitent Persons, who, Luke 3. 35. are called Evil and Unthankful: So Nehe. 9. 25, 26. They took strong Cities, and a fat Land, and possessed Houses full of all Goods, &c. and did eat, and were filled, and delighted themselves in thy great Goodness; nevertheless they were disobedient, and rebelled against thee, and cast thy Law behind their Back, and kill'd the Prophets, and wrought great Provocations. So Jesurun waxed fat and kicked, Deut. 32. 15. like full fed Heifers, who, when fat and lusty, kick at the Owner when he comes to yoke them for his Service.

Thus David's Sin is aggravated, tho' a good Man, 2 Sam. 12. 7, 8. Did not I anoint thee King, and deliver thee from Saul, and gave thee thy Master's House and Wines, and if this had been too little, would have given thee more? For God makes one Mercy the Foundation of a greater; And why hast thou despised the Commandment of the Lord? Why hast thou used me thus, and set light by me? Is this thy Requital? This is the Case of all impenitent Persons, whom God out of the Riches of his Patience affords time to live here, as space to repent; yet this his Patience puts them from Repentance, and in the end Repentance so far off from them, that they can never meet, Eccles. 8. 11. Because Sentence against an evil Work is not presently executed, therefore their Hearts are set to do Evil: Because God defers punishing and cutting them off, they defer repenting, going on in Hardness of Heart, despising the Riches of his Patience, which leadeth them to Repentance: Deterrers of Repentance are unthankful Persons; therefore in the highest degree, they think to spend the best and most precious of their Youth, and to live in Pleasures, and give God the Dregs and the last Sands when the Glass is run, neither would they then repent, but that they needs must; and will it be accepted thinkest thou? no.

All the Blessings God in the mean time vouchsafeth them, they have used them against him, and they increase but the Fire of their Lusts, as God complains, Ezekiel 16. from the 15, and so on, Thou takest my Gold and Silver (so God calls them) and makest Idols of them: So I may say of all your covetous Worldlings, God's Silver and Gold you have made Idols of, & fallen down and worshipped them, and sacrificed all unto them, and v. 19. My Meat I gave thee: Thou art a Glutton, thou hast sacrificed to thy Lusts, made thy Belly thy God, that Strong Drink and Wine God gave thee thou hast sacrificed to Drunkenness, that Strength to Women, consumed all on thy Lusts (as James speaks) the Wealth you have had, which you should serve God with, you have but made use of it to live at a higher rate of Sinning, and procuring the sweetest and daintiest of Pleasures, and the daintiest and comliest Sins; that Wit thou hast had, thou hast used it not in giving Thanks, which the Apostle rather commands, Eph. 5. but in foolish Jest abusing the Scripture, mocking his Saints; that Power & Preferment thou hast is made use of by these perhaps to persecute God's Children & Ministers. So also thy Body that God hath at a dear Rate bought, thou hast dishonoured him with, & made the Members of it, Members of a Harlot; thou hast Eyes full of Adultery, & thy Strength to pour down Drink; nay, thou canst not give him so much as a good word, but hast his Name up in every Company, prophaning it by swearing, &c. art thou not unthankful? God by giving these Blessings, hath made thee more able to offend him, hath strengthened an Enemy, and by sparing thee so long, hath but made thee more bold to do it, and daring in it, and all his Mercies have but fortified thy hard Heart to hold out Siege against him, all the Creatures he set to woo thee to him, have got thy Love away from him themselves. Do you requite the Lord thus, O ye foolish and unkind, as Moses expostulates the Case, Deut. 32. 6. as Christ said, For which of these good Works do you stone me: So I say, for which of all his Mercies do you go on thus to sin against him? What, to fight against him with his own Weapons, his own Strength, to betray all he gives thee into thy Enemies Hands, what can be worse? What Iniquity have you ever found in him? When did he ever do you any Hurt?

God will one Day expostulate his Cause with you, and heap Coals of Fire upon your Heads if you turn not, because you rendered him Evil for Good; all the Mercies abused will be so many more Coals to make Hell Fire the hotter, and therefore all of you consider what good Things you have received, and enjoy from the Lord, and how unthankful you have been, and humble your selves and turn to him, for know, that nothing will condemn you more than sinning against Light and Mercies.

F I N I S.

A Table of the Scriptures.

Page.	Page.	Page.	Page.
Chap. 12, 13. 12 a	4. 3. 444 a	3. 5. 31 d	27, 28. 97 d
14, 15. 10 21 a	11. 73 b	8, 9. 77 d	13. 15, 16. 30 a
17, 21, 23. 110 c	5. 11. 470 a	9. 15 a	James.
21. 18. 100 a	18, 20. 107 a	16. 27 a	Chap. 1. 2. 439 a
Acts.	6. 11. 17 a	4. 4. 11 13 a	21. 365 a
Chap. 1. 2. 12 a	13. 153 a	5. 1. 93 b	23. 135 b
4. 6 a	19. 56 a 126 b	27. 12 a	2. 21, 23. 40 b
8. 7, 11 a	7. 11. 275 a	6. 13. 199 b	1 Peter.
2. 3. 13 a	8. 3. 3 b	Philippians.	Chap. 1. 3. 16 23 a
16, 18. 6 a	9. 16, 17. 71 b	Chap. 1. 10. 27 a	3. 31 418 a
2. 24. 405 a	10. 1, 10. 148 b	9. 10. 1 b 273 a	3, 5. 139 a
5. 31, 32. 16 a	13. 120 b	2. 1. 21 a	4. 115 c
6. 3. 23 a	12. 1. 27 a	3. 6, 7. 268 a	8, 9. 65 d
7. 37, 38. 5 a	3. 10 a	13. 165 b	9. 73 c
9. 28. 113 d	4, 7. 11 26 a	15. 190 b	11, 12. 12 a
31. 19, 30 a	7. 31 a	4. 7. 19 a	22. 24 a
10. 11. 12 a	21. 61 a	13. 206 b	23. 27 a
34. 173 d	27. 10 a	Colossians.	2. 2, 3. 429 a
11. 15. 7 a	13. 10. 62 c	Chap. 1. 13. 406 a	7. 434 a
20. 115 d	9. 10. 101 c	26, 27. 2, 3 1 68 d	18. 276 a
24. 12 d	12. 72 c	2. 13. 411 a	19, 20. 71 b
13. 2. 11 a	14. 18. 111 c	3. 1. 72 d	4. 4. 32 c
33. 10 a	2 Corinthians.	12. 470 a	14. 5 c
15. 8, 9. 17 a	Chap. 1. 4. 408 a	1 Thessalonians.	19. 130 d
20. 28. 31 a	22. 35 a	Chap. 1. 5. 15, 31 a	ult. 80 c
24. 16. 15 b	3. 3. 14, 20, 23, 31 a	15. 19 a	5. 9. 118 b
Romans.	5. 195 b	3. 12. 26 a	2 Peter.
Chap. 1. 21. 259 a	6. 12, 26 a	5. 13. 2 a	Chap. 1. 1. 17 a
2. 14, 15. 215 a	6, 7. 61 d	2 Thessalonians.	3, 4. 184 303 a
15. 284 a	18. 200 a	Chap. 1. 5. 12 a	19. 190 b
6. 17, 18, 78 b 360 a	4. 4. 55 d	2. 13. 100 b	21. 11 a
27. 79 a	6. 57 d	1 Timothy.	ult. 33 d
7. 4, 6. 33 b	13. 16 a	Chap. 1. 11. 51 d	3. 19, 20. 21 b
8. 10, 11. 69 c	17, 18. 16 c	14. 86 a	20, 21. 210 b 303 a
11. 35 a	5. 2. 30 c	3. 16. 14 d	3. 11, 12. 31 b
12. 33 a	3. 36 c	4. 6. 467 a	4. 23. 101 a
13. 24 a	4. 47 c	16. 25 b	1 John.
15. 14, 31 a	5. 65 c	6. 6. 436 a	Chap. 1. 1. 54 d
16. 22 a	6. 8. 71 c	14. 18 b	3. 21 a 57 b
18. 105 c	6. 7. 63 c	2 Timothy.	4. 34 a
23. 7 a	18. 188 b	Chap. 1. 13. 23 246 a	9. 61 b
28. 32 a	8. 9. 21 a 48 d	14. 35 a	2. 5. 44 b
29, 30. 202 a	10. 28 a	2. 1. 206 b	13, 14. 177 b
9. 1, 3. 22, 468 a	13. 14. 21 34 a	5. 33 b	14. 198 b
10. 30, 32. 287 a	Galatians.	Titus.	23. 185 b
11. 32. 82 a	Chap. 1. 16. 69 d	Chap. 2. 14. 79 b	3, 3. 10. 33 b
33. 13 d	2. 19, 20. 354 a	3. 4, 6. 65 384 a	8. 104 b
13. 15. 276 a	20. 20 a	7. 18 a	9. 181 197 a
14. 5. 14, 93 a	3. 1. 16 a 6 d	8. 86 b	4. 6, 7. 22 a
8. 21 b	2, 5. 12, 47 a	14. 31 b	10. 97 b
9. 10 a	13, 14. 6 45 a	Hebrews.	5. 6. 22 a
15. 3. 35 a	15, 17. 290 a	Chap. 1. 1. 5 d	Jude.
13. 19 a	4. 4, 6. 388 a	4, 5. 131 d	Verse 5. 306 a
16, 17. 4, 7, 29 a	6. 50 a	6. 93 d	20. 19 a
30. 33 a	9. 14 a	2. 6. 8 a	24. 103 c
16. 25. 20 d	19. 70 d	9. 132 d	Revelations.
1 Corinthians.	5. 5. 17 a	15. 31 a	Chap. 1. 7. 26 a
Chap. 1. 24. 8 d	6. 8, 10. 37 b	4. 12. 308 a	2. 20, 21. 100 c
30. 29 a	14. 448 a	6. 1. 26 a	3. 17. 41 c
2. 4. 12 a	Ephesians.	4. 10. 298 a	20. 197 b
9. 23 d	Chap. 1. 3. 5. 166 a	7. 8. 139 b 314 a	2. 121 d
10. 15 a	6. 29 a	10. 5. 385 a	7. to the end 122 d
12. 3 a 42 d	19, 20. 392 a	14. 327 369 a	14. 12, 13 99 c
13. 12 a	2. 10. 80 b	11. 13. 10 c	13. 1 c
14, 15. 155 a	14, 16. 106 d	16. 83 c	21. 1. 25 a
20. 23 d	18. 17 a	17, 19. 49 b
3. 16, 17. 62 d	20. 10 196 a	12. 25. 83 d

A N

Alphabetical INDEX

O F T H E

M A T T E R S

I N S I S T E D O N

In this Volume.

Note, That the Letters in this Table after the Figures of the Pages denote, A the first Part, B the second, C the third, and D the fourth.

A.		Page	Page
A	Bimelech following the Light of his Conscience in the Matter of Sarah , perform'd an Act of Integrity	329 a	Acceptation of Believers with God thro' the beloved 167 a
	Abraham , as professing true justifying Faith and claiming Salvation, thereby said to be justified by Works	43 b	Actions of Men the Fruits of Righteousness when directed to the Glory of God 35 b
	— Faith, a working Faith	44 b	Acts of Righteousness shall appear with Men at the day of Jesus Christ 36 b
	— Where in the Old Testament, call'd the Friend of God	47 b	Adam in Innocency retain'd by the Covenant of Works the Spirit of God. 47 a
	— Term'd the Friend of God by James , shewn	ibid. b	Addresses to God for Reconciliation must proceed from an inward Good-will to him 122 a
	— Spoken of in James , Chap. 2. as the Father and Pattern of all Believers	48 b	Admiration of God in all that we know of him a glorifying of him 453 a
	— Bosom, what	13 c	Afflictions of Saints shall terminate in eternal Glory, shewn 20 c
	Absent from the Body and present with the Lord, what	71 c	Affections that are accidental in the Heart, what 157 a
	Acceptation of Saints with God thro' the holy Spirit	29 a	Age (the middle one) of Christians as the special Season of Temptation, so of overcoming 204 b
	Acknowledging of God in our ways, what	63 b

X 2

Angels

The Alphabetical I N D E X

	Page		Page
Angels (good) rejoyce at God's Grace to the Elect	89 a	— The forming the Image of Christ in Believers	203 a
— Their Testimony ought to have a mighty Impression on us	132 d	— The Mercies that attend it, shewn	381 a
Appearance at the day of Christ fill'd with the Fruits of Righteousness	37 b	— Peculiarly attributed to the Resurrection of Christ	413 a — Will be for the Glory of God the Father and Jesus Christ	37 b	Bestowing of sanctifying Grace shews forth the power of it	85 a
— To Men themselves	37 b	Blameless until the day of Christ, what	17 b
Apostles had no priviledge in Regeneration above others	389 a	Blamelessness of Saints wherein it consists shewn	20 b
Authority eminently ascrib'd by the Angels to Christ	133 d	— Pray'd for the Philippians by the Apostle	22 b
B.
B aptism the sign of our Engagement to fight against the Devil	114 b	— Possible to be attain'd	23 b
Believer is blessed that dies in the Lord, shewn	5 c	Blessedness of those who die in the Lord, shewn	3 c
— Dying in the Lord, the Spirit supports him therein	16 c	Body , its Dissolution the first solemn time of God's Inquisition into its state	42 c
— In respect of his Souls continuing to live after Death	7 c	Book seal'd, Rev. 5. what	121 d
— Engag'd in common to war against the Devil	112 b	Born of God, what	179 a
— In their new Birth receive the Seed of a spiritual Life	181 a	Breaking the Seals not simply an Act of Power	121 d
— In their Souls are enabled to spiritual things	189 a	Burthen'd , 2 Cor. 5. 3. what	57 c
— Their acceptance with God thro' the Beloved, shewn	167 a	C.
— Temporary ones not said in Scripture to be born again	198 a	C alling the Gentiles an Arcanum hid to the Angels	108 d
— True ones by Faith chang'd into the Image of Jesus Christ	201 a	Canticles 4. 12. explain'd at large	25 a
— Conform'd to the Example of Christ shewn	210 a	Carnal Men why they value themselves upon their Excellencies, shewn	443 a
— The difference between true and temporary ones shewn	304 a	— And godly how differenc'd	444 a — Temporary, the Doctrine of 'em useful to sincere Christians	306 a	Christ gave the Law from Mount Sinai	87 d
— The glorious ends of God on temporary Believers	308 a	— The opener of the Book, Rev. 5. 6. how	122 d
— Temporary, the Doctrine of 'em how made use of by God	309 a	— The Lion of the Tribe of Judah	ibid. d
— Temporary not cast off by God on the first advantage	320 a	— The Root of David	ibid. d
— True ones the Fruits of God in their Hearts do not presently appear	321 a	— In his humane Nature the Instrument of all God's Power	124 d
— Temporary their Gifts and Graces by the knowledge of Christ	324 a	— Compar'd to a Lamb, why	ibid. d
— Their Gifts and Graces real	325 a	— By his Humiliation divested himself of those Riches he was possess'd of	134 d
— The Work in 'em has a goodness in it	326 a	— And of Wisdom	135 d
— Said to be sanctify'd by Christ's Blood, Object. and Answ.	328 a	— The Power of God and Wisdom of God, how	8 d
Believing in God a glorifying him	455 a	— At his Ascension let down beams of his Glory to confirm the Truth of the Gospel	53 d
Benefits that flow to Believers from God and Christ are spiritual	163 a	— In you, Col. 1. 27. what	68 d
— Spiritual in Relation to God himself	165 a	— The Fountain of Salvation to all that expect him	104 b
Birth new of the Soul and Resurrection of the Body bear Analogy	180 a	— Came to destroy the Works of the Devil in the Saints	105 b
		— Upon his leaving the World discours'd to his Disciples of the Holy Ghost	2 a — Consecrated and anointed to his Office by the Holy Ghost	9 a
		— At his Ascension fill'd with Glory by the Holy Ghost	10 a
		Christians ought to maintain and recommend to others the Majesty of God	130 b — Should

of the Matters, &c.

	Page		Page
Should labour to do all the good that lies in their power	132 b	Confusion of Satan the chief design of God in the Salvation of the Elect	90 a
Engag'd against Satan as their common Enemy	106 b	Conformity to the Image of his Son the special end of God in our Prædestination	202 a
Being Friends to God ought to demean themselves accordingly	51 b	— &c. Begun when God calls a Man	203 a
Should consider what God out of Love hath done for 'em	53 b	Conscience , a good one, what	216 a
Labouring to excel in spiritual Things	10 b	— The Seat and Throne of God	220 a
While in this Body how burthen'd, shewn	59 c	— What, according to the Heathens	16 a
While young Men, according to 1 John 2. 14. most assaulted with Lust	199 b	— Natural the Effects of it	225 a
Said to overcome Satan, how	202 b	— What, according to Pelagius	231 a
Young ones call'd upon to stand on their Watch	203 b	— Natural in its Effects like true Grace	232 a
Middle aged ones not so confident of doing any thing as young ones	208 b	— Wherein it falls short of true Grace	234, 235 a
His Character as given, 1 John 2. consider'd	179 b	— The Light of it originally from God	234 a
Christianity , the Substance of it is to reveal Christ in the Saints	79 d	— The Light of it more or less bestow'd on all thro' Christ	236 a
Church -Institution for Worship is the Command of Christ, shewn	18 b	— Has a Power over the Faculties of the Soul	239 a
Of God joyc'd at the Addition of the Gentiles to it	117 d	— The proper Seat of the Law of God	240 a
Contribution to Saints a spiritual Ordinance	159 b	— Natural the Goodness of it, what	243 a
Cloathed upon, 2 Cor. 5. 2. what	34, 36 c	— The Inherent Goodness of it, what	249 a
Cloathing of the Soul in this Life with Christ's Righteousness, how	38 c	— The Holiness of it wherein it consists	253 a
Of the Soul in this World, twofold shewn	37 c	— Part of Practical Reason	16 a
Comfort of a godly Man, wherein it lies	433 a	— Natural in Men un sanctify'd remains un sanctify'd	254 a
Communion , mutual is the Soul of all Friendship	56 b	— Whether it urges Obedience consider'd	16 a
— Successive with each Person of the Trinity, what	186 b	— The Deficiencies of it	256 a
Of Believers with the Father and Son, why unequal at some times	195 b	— The Light thereof makes not the Heart good	257 a
— Successive with the Trinity, why	196 b	— Carried not the Heathens to the spiritual part of Vertue	260 a
Coming of Christ in the Dispensation of the Gospel, the great Effects of it shewn	87 d	— The Light of it sanctifies not the Heart	261 a
— Second of Christ intended by Paul , Heb. 12. 25.	93 d	— Gives not strength to perform Duties	16 a
Of the Holy Ghost prophesied of in the old Testament	6 a	— Cannot make a Man delight in the Law of God	262 a
(First) of the Holy Spirit immediate on Men in their polluted Condition	52 a	— Several grounds of Mistake whereby it is taken for true Grace	263, &c. a
Concurrence of Man the less it is the more of Mercy is shewn	378 a	— Approves of the Law as good	269 a
Of the blessed Trinity in our Regeneration shewn	384 a	— Lays an Injunction on the Heart to perform the Law of God	273 a
Of the Trinity made manifest at the Baptism of our Saviour	387 a	— Apt to carry its own Testimony farther than God's Intention	285 a
Condition of God's Children to be Servants of Righteousness	78 b	— Regenerate , how far it speaks Peace after believing	290 a
Condition of Men afore Regeneration, is a State of Sin and Wrath	69 a	— The Influence of it in speaking Peace to the Soul	290 a
		— Backs the Evidence of Faith	291 a
		Consciences of Men subjected to the Graces in God's People, how	122 b
		Considerations to strengthen our Spirits against Sin and the Devil	115 b
		Conversion the Work of the Holy Ghost	177 a
		— The parts of it	345 a
		— OF

The Alphabetical I N D E X

	Page		Page
Of the Gentile World, a Work of the Spirit	6 a	Desiring and Groaning join'd together by the Apostle to shew the Eagerness of his Desire	34 c
In every part of it attributed to the Holy Spirit	41 a	Despair may be brought on by Mens going on without knowing their Condition	357 a
Denotes three things	336 a	Tho' sometimes the Issue of Humiliation for Sin, yet no Objection against that great Work	ibid. a
Converts , true ones, very desirous of converting others to God	467 a	Devil let loose more on middle aged Christians than others	200 b
Covenants of Law and Grace divide the World	287 a	More upon Christ in his middle Age	201 b
Covenant between God and Christ was in behalf of sinful Man	111 a	Difference between a carnal and spiritual Man's desiring spiritual things, shewn	139 a
Conviction of Sin the Work of the Spirit	14 a	Dispositions of Heart in a godly Man, what	437 c
Created to good Works	401 a	Of our Heart made holy by the Spirit	22 c
Creation , what	78 c	Dissolution (at the) of the Body, Mortality is swallowed up of Life	61 c
New by the same Law that the old was	188 a	Distress , what the Heart runs to in it is made Mens chief Comfort	435 a
Creature new, wherein it consists	195 a	Divine Nature , 2 Pet. 1. 4. what	184 a
Under the Gospel, the same with the Image of God in Man at his first Creation	187 a	Doing the Word , what	135 b
The essential Constitution of it	424 a	Doctrines (two) rais'd from Mark 6. 20.	121 b
Its chiefest good, what	427 a	Doing a Thing for Conscience sake according to Scripture, what	275 a
How it reflects Glory on God	453 a	What is mistaken for it	ibid. a
The Nature of it	469 a	Δουλαγία imports two things	8 b D.
D anger of the neglect of improving the outward Ordinances of the Gospel, shewn	143 b	Drawing forth the Graces into Act, the Work of the Spirit	25 c
Of unworthy receiving the Lord's Supper, either of being unfruitful, or living in Lusts under the Participation of it	153 b	To Sin the great Work and Interest of Satan	107 b
Of being in Church Fellowship, and living inconsistent to such a Relation	158 b	Dwelling in God the peculiar Description of a godly Man	123 a
Of neglecting the Holy Spirit	37 a	Dying in the Lord is a thing of the greatest moment to Man	5 a
Day of Christ or of Judgment, ought to be always before our Eyes to keep us sincere and blameless	24 b	Is the Crown of Perseverance	6 c
Death , and the Souls going out of the World express'd by failing	15 c	In Peace us'd sometimes to express such a departure hence as wherein the greatest desires of a Man's Heart are accomplished	12 c
Represented by the Dissolution of our earthly House	25 c	E.
The second has no Power over the Soul of a Saint when it is gone out of the Body	100 c	E arthly Things are in the Valuation of carnal Men their Gain	437 a
Seeming Denials of particular requests to be taken kindly from God	66 b	Edification of Saints by the Means of Grace the Work of the Spirit	30 a
Delight in those things that please God most a Character of a Friend of God	132 a	Elect , in a twofold state in this World	65 a
Design of the Apostle, 2 Cor. 4. 17. was to comfort himself and all Believers against Death	17 c	Have no benefit by what God and Christ have done for 'em till they be reconcil'd	112 a
Delight and Enjoyment of any thing a false Rule to Measure what is our chiefest good	346 a	Tho' they may stand long at a stay and seem to go backward, yet God takes not advantage against 'em for it	142 b
Desire of all Nations, what	88 d	Election of the Father obliges the Elect to Holiness and Obedience	91 b
Desires which can rest only on God shew that he is our chief Good	437 a	Electing Love in God from everlasting, shewn	99 b

of the Matters, &c.

	Page
Electing of Men by God proceeded not barely from Will but from Pleasure and Delight	98 b
Empire (Roman) how destroy'd by Christ's Kingdom, shewn	119 d
Emptiness of ones self may convince a Man of his utter inability to help himself	93 a
Our Engagement against the Devil ought to have a great force to make us holy and to fight against Sin	115 b
Enmity in Sinners tow'rds God is seated in their Minds	130 a — Of the Jews against the Samaritans , wherein consisted	111 d
Entrance into Glory upon the Dissolution of our outward Man, a Consolation to Saints against the fear of Death	23 c
Estate of Sin and Misery settled from a Man's Birth till Regeneration is wrought, prov'd	23 a
— Of Sin and Misery is alterable	74 a
Esteem of God and Christ shewn in a diligent pursuit after 'em	435 a
Epistle of Christ writ in the Heart, what	202 a
Eternity a Continuation of Time for ever and ever, without succession of Day by Day	23 c
Expressions in Scripture of Man's sinning against God, shew that it is for the Devil's Interest	109 b
Exhortation to grow in Holiness and endeavour to be fill'd with the Fruits of Righteousness	39 b

F.

F Aith in Saints the Operation of the holy Spirit	16 a
— In Scripture express'd by every particular sense, prov'd	4 b
— Consists in a confident adventuring to cast our selves on Christ for Salvation	94 a
— That is true, works the Heart to a Friend-like Disposition to God	48 b
— In every Man must have this tryal, whether it has brought forth Holiness in Heart and Life	16 b
— (True) is futable to the Object it apprehends	ibid. d
— Strongly exercis'd in a dying Hour is the Martyrs blessing	4 c — Or Knowledge when true or saving Works on the Affections futable to their Object	30 c
— A sign of a Saint's being born again	179 a
— And a good Conscience the sum of Religion	216 a — Unfeigned founded on self emptiness and poverty of Spirit	92 a
— Justifying, how founded on nothing in Man	421 a
— The end of it in 1 Pet. 1. 9. what	74 c

— Ceasing the Soul shall see and enjoy God	70 c
Favours of God ought to be studied to find out his Kindness in them	68 b
Fearfulness of displeasing God in our Obedience to God	70 b
Fellowship and Communion with God the Father and Christ, the height of the Christian Religion	182 b
— Attainable in this Life	186 b
Flattery and Friendship their difference between 'em	124 a
Flesh in Scripture what in opposition to Spirit	147 a — And Spirit denote two inheret Principles in a regenerate Man's Nature	ib. a
— Often put for the whole of Man's Nature	148 a
Free Grace of God bestow'd on Saints by the Spirit	16 a
— The Doctrine of it, is the faithful saying in Titus 3. 8.	89 b
The Formation of the Humane Nature of Christ, the Work of the Holy Spirit	8 a
Friend of God only expressive of God's first Work	41 b
Friendship well plac'd affords the highest Delight	59 b
— Lies in a mutual unfolding of Secrets	60 b
Fruits of Righteousness , what	27 a — To be fill'd with 'em, what, viz.	28 b
— When good Works do and have grown in a Christian Man's Heart	29 b — And when we have no time of our Lives barren	30 b
— To be fill'd with 'em at all times what	28 b
— In all Ages and Conditions futable to every Age	32 b
— By Jesus Christ how	34 b

G.

G Athered to our People, what	11 c
Gentiles , their spiritual Latitude in the Apprehensions of the Jews, shewn	107 d
Giving the Gospel, why the Effects of it so much greater than those of giving the Law	88 d
Gentiles among 'em, Eph. 3. what	67 d
Ghost (Holy) and Christ had both their fig-nal comings	5 a — Not personally united to the Dove as Christ was to the Humane Nature	6 a — Proceeding from the Father	3 a
— To be honour'd for his special Works	16 a
— A Comforter to the Disciples	4 a
— The cause of Christs rising from the dead	10 a — Proclaims Christ in Mens Hearts	ibid. a
— The Founder of the Church under the New Testament	ibid. a
— The

The Alphabetical I N D E X

	Page		Page
— The Glory of the Ministry	12 a	Glorifying of God, what	456 a
— The same to every particular Saint	13 a	God the Father the Bestower and Donor of the Spirit	45 a
— as he is to the Church Universal	13 a	— Sends the Spirit into Saints in and by Christ	45 a
— Worketh in the Saints all that is wrought	ibid. a	— Regenerates none but the Elect, deny'd	76 a
— The Author of all the Principles and Habits of Grace	14 a	— In suffering his Elect for some time to remain in a state of Sin, of use to all good Men	86 a
— Gives to Saints a sight of God's free Grace	16 a	— And also to bad ones, how	88 a
— Supports 'em in their Hopes of Salvation	17 a	— And gives Saints occasion to shew forth their Disposition of Grace	87 a
— Is a Peace-bringer to Saints	19 a	— And also hath an Influence upon Angels, good and bad	89 a — Introductor of Fellowship with the Father and Son	21 a	— In shewing forth his Love more to the Elect than others, draws forth their Love to him the more	99 a
— Leads Saints into all the Truths of the Gospel	23 a	— The Father and Christ act their parts in our Reconciliation	109 a — Worker of Sanctification in us	ib. a	— To give Satisfaction to Justice ordained the sacrificing of his Son	110 a
— Term'd a Wind in respect of his Operations	26 a	— Gives not Possession of Salvation without something to shew for it	43 b
— Quickener of Inherent Graces	ib. a	— Accepts no Faith but such as is productive of Holiness	50 b
— A Spirit of Counsel	27 a	— If not glorify'd as God, is dishonour'd	461 a
— The Conductor of our Wills	28 a	— In Conversion, specially useth the Endeavours of those himself has turn'd	474 a
— Consider'd in a threefold respect as to Christ	43 a	— As God only call'd Father in the old Testament, Object , and Answer .	189 b
— Glory which is the Object of a Saint's Faith, is also the Object of his Desire	31 c	— In teaching the Knowledge of himself, does it at several times	191 b
— Due to the name of God, why	449 a	— How becoming him it is to receive the separate Souls of Believers into Glory	79 c
— Due to God from his Creatures, why	450 a	— The Father of Spirits	81 c
— Requir'd to be given to God by his Saints	451 a	— The God of Believers	82 c
— All that God requires of us for all we receive of him	ib. a	— In working out eternal Life for Souls shews great Artifice	85 c
— Due to his name, without which his aim in his Works is not satisfy'd	461 a	— Why he manifested himself so variously to his Creatures, shewn	4 d
— In Heaven prepar'd of God for Believers	67, 68 c	— An ancient Friend to Saints, shewn	52 b
— Being provided for the separate Souls of just Men is a Dispensation most becoming God	77 c	— Such a Friend as never has his Thoughts from 'em	ib. b
— Of the Soul in the other World, God's Art and Workmanship	85 c	— A Friend from everlasting to everlasting	ib. b
— Of Souls separate has different degrees	90 c	— All he doth for such as are reconcil'd he doth freely	54 b
— Of Saints in Heaven far above all earthly Glories	105 c	— Condescends to admit Saints to Communion to himself	57 b
— &c. Not to be compar'd with their Afflictions here below	106 c	— May be made use of by us in small matters as well as great	65 b
— Its Efficient Cause	107 c	— Willing to accept our Obedience under the Notion of Gratitude and Friendship	69 b
— Its Exemplary Cause	109 c	— Enables such to be his Servants as he calls thereunto	80 b
— Its Meritorious Cause	108 c	— Having wrought groaning Desires of an Object designs its existence	31 c
— Its Object	110 c	— Will be fought unto by Sinners, and how, shewn	119 a
— Its Subject	112 c		In
— Its Final Cause	114 c
— Its Properties	115 c
— Of Christ, how lively represented in the Gospel	54 d
— Of the Soul after the Dissolution of the Body, the Object of a Believer's Groaning	48 c
— Kingdom, and Greatness of Satan increas'd by Sin	108 b
— Of Heaven, why compar'd to an House	28 c

of the Matters, &c.

	Page		Page
— In and by an unregenerate Man's Conscience speaks an Approbation of what is well done by him	284 a	— More glorious in the matter of it	54 d
— How he works by his Spirit in Conversion	343 a	— As it is a Glass to represent Christ, it excels the Law	59 d
— Most glorious in himself	449 a	— Glorious in that the Riches of God shine in it	60 d
— Expects that Glory be given him of his Creatures	451 a	— Changes Saints into the Image of God from Glory to Glory	64 d
— Will glorify himself on us if not glorify'd by us	452 a	— Glorious in that it is made known to the Gentiles	66 d
God in rejecting those that are more deeply enlightned proceeds by degrees	142 b	— Design'd by God to the Gentiles as a National Endowment	67 d
— Was greatly displeas'd with the Israelites who continued in Sin under his Ordinances	150 b	Going to our Fathers in peace, what Government of Christ on Earth, wherein it consists	10 c 118 d
— But will be more severe to those who live in Sin under the Gospel Ordinances	151 b	Grace and its Priviledges now extended to all Nations	77 a
— Seconds extraordinary Visions with Testimonies out of his Word	113 d	— What it is, shewn	78 a
Godliness wherein it should appear and be put forth, shewn	131 b	— is bestow'd on Men only, ex proprio Dei motu	83 a
— The Spirit of Obedience	107 a	— Whereby its freeness and richness is exalted	84 a
— The Life of it, wherein it consists	404 a	Grace, the Work of it on Believers in this Life shews that God hath prepared a Glory for 'em hereafter	68 c
— That which exalts God as God	461 a	— Hath a transcendent Elevation to the Glory of God	470 a
Good-will from us to God is to be manifested by our Obedience to him	128 a	— The Work of it why term'd a begetting, shewn	141 a
Goodness, wherein it consists, shewn	469 a	— Of God to Man seen in the Works of the Holy Ghost	89 b
Gospel in the Ministry of it, exceeds that of the Law	201 a	— And Love of God manifested to Man engage Holiness, &c.	91 b
— The last days of it the special time for perfecting the Works of Christ	103 d	— Inherent the end of it that we be Doers of the Word	138 b
— Its Glory, to whom reveal'd	2 d	— Inherent the Spiritualness of it, shewn	170 a
— Before its discovery God made known the Riches of his Glory	3 d	— The Life of it the beginning of eternal Life	183 a
— How a real and lively Demonstration of Christ	5 d	— In true Believers specifically distinct from that in temporary ones	314 a
— How it holds forth the Riches of God in Christ as a Redeemer	8 d	— Its Work in many that think they have it examin'd	395 a
— Its Properties, shewn	12 d	— That's restraining not comparable to that Power which was wrought in raising Christ from the Dead	396 a
— Why call'd a Mystery	ib. d	— That the Gospel works, is all glorious	65 d
— Reconciles seeming Contradictions, shewn	14 d	— Adjuvant granted by God in proportion to habitual Grace in us	207 b
— Excellent in respect of its depths	18 d	— Tho' free, yet observes the set Rules of its Dispensation	16 b
— After its greatest Study still produces new Knowledge	19 d	— Assitant given by God in measure to Grace acquir'd	208 b
— How said to be hid from Everlasting, when there were no Creatures to know it	21 d	Greatness of the Love of God to Men consider'd	81 a
— How hidden from Generations past	22 d	Ground thorny in the Parable, what	316 a
— Its being hid commends it	28 d	Guilty of the Body and Blood of Christ; what	137 b
— Tho' reveal'd to the Apostles, yet as it were was new to us	29 d
— Its Excellency shewn in that it was manifested to the Saints	31 d	H.
— Only understood of those that are taught of God	32 d	H Aggai in his Prophecies, Chap. 2. design'd to fix the Jews upon Christ's first Coming	94 d
— How known to carnal Men, shewn	33 d
— Is a most rich Gospel, why	43 d	Y	Hainousness
— How made known by God to his Saints	42 d
— Wherein it is glorious above the Law, shewn	52 d

The Alphabetical I N D E X

	Page		Page
Hainousness of the neglect of the Spirit and its Motions, shewn	37 a	Image of God in us, wherein it consists	140 a
Heart , what to have it elevated unto all spiritual things as spiritual, shewn	152 a	— Of God in Christ threefold	8 d
— A new one, what	196 a	— Of Christ in Believers, what	205 a
— Being emptied by a taste of God of earthly Enjoyment a sign that God is its chiefest good	437 a	— Of God in Believers much advanc'd above what it was in Adam while Innocent	207 a
— Of a regenerate Man keeps after God tho' vain Thoughts crowd in upon it	433 a	Implantation of Graces the Work of the holy Spirit	24 a
Heathens in their most exalted State deficient in real Happiness	259 a	Impressions made on the Spirit after seeking to God in Prayer are to be observ'd	63 b
— The Light of their Conscience carried 'em not to the spiritual part of Virtue	260 a	Indwelling of the Spirit is in every Believer	25 a
Heaven , the Glory of it compar'd to an House	66 c	— Is primarily of his Person, and secondarily of his Graces	55 a
— Desir'd by a true Saint as his Inheritance	170 a	— In Believers attributed to the holy Spirit	56 a
— And Earth the Store-Houses wherein Men in this Life lay up their Treasure	426 a	— Personally in Believers objected, &c.	57 a
Holiness (habitual) the Work of the holy Spirit	24 a	— Of the Spirit the same in Saints and in Christ	58 a
— Its Principle has two inward Effects	8 b	Incarnation of Christ had a Manifestation of the blessed Trinity in it	385 a
— The Primary Design of God	91 b	— Of Christ such a Mystery as all created Understandings could not have brought forth	14 d
— And Obedience inforc'd by the Consideration of the Love of God to us	95 b	Infants , as such regenerated	76 a
— That's true is the lively Image of God	123 b	— Capable of the Essentials of Regeneration	379 a
— The main and ultimate end of Regeneration	359 a	Influences from Heaven, &c. nourish Self and Lusts in carnal Hearts	142 d
— True is a real Conformity to the Word and Law of God	ibid. a	— Of the Ordinances not always violent but sweet and gentle	143 b
— Is an universal Impression on the Heart by the Word	365 a	Interpretations different of 1 Cor. 5. &c.	18 c — Or Grace, a preparation to Glory	68 c	Inward Man is making ready for Glory while the outward Man decayeth	20 c
— How perfected on the Soul at Death	102 c	Joy is not only in the blessed Trinity on the Conversion of a Sinner but throughout the Heavens	391 a
Honour with God, what	446 a	— In the Holy Ghost its Excellencies shewn	106 c
Hope of Righteousness threefold	18 a	— That is wrought in Believers is glorious	65 d
— As to Death maintain'd by the Holy Ghost	31 a	Judge , the supream one of the Mysteries of the Gospel, who shewn	41 d
— In the old Testament often us'd for Faith and Trust	90 b	Justification of Saints by the means of the Holy Ghost	17 a
Humiliation for Sin necessary in Conversion	342 a	— Of Men wholly of and by Grace	83 a
— Is not to bring Men into Despair; shewn	351 a	— By God twofold	42 b
— Pressing of it not an endeavouring to bring Men to our mind, shewn	357 a	— By Christ the Glory of the Christian Religion	167 a
— The Parts of it shewn	434 a
— The end God has in it	ibid. a	K.
I.		K ingdom of Heaven sitting down in it, what	14 c
Jealousy of God exhorted from	66 b	— Immovable of Christ the aim of all the Prophets	98 a
Jews in the Wilderness enjoy'd the same Ordinances for substance as Christians do under the Gospel	149 b	— Of Christ, of what made up	120 d
— Their Grudge against the Gentiles , its dangerous Effects shewn	107 d	Knowing the Father and Son, what	181 b
— Converted, and the Elect Gentiles how they stood affected one to another, shewn	108 d	Knowledge of God in Heaven only a Quality in the Soul	176 a — True the Foundation of writing the Law in the inward parts	252 a
		— In an unregenerate Man hath the Heart, Will and Affections arm'd against it	168 b — Natural

of the Matters, &c.

— Natural, tho' improv'd not sufficient to work Regeneration in Men	350 a
— Of God is a manifestation of his Glory	434 a
— Of one Person of the Trinity may more abound in Saints at one time than another	186 b
— Of God and Christ and things belonging to 'em require successive Impressions	191 b
— In us can't be without a spiritual Light	193 b
— Of spiritual things twofold	ib. b
— Of a godly Man all sanctify'd to him	ib. b
— Of carnal Men in the Truths of the Gospel, how shewn	69 d

L.

L AW Moral, the goodness of it	244 a — The Light of it in an unregenerate Man but literal	245 a
— The goodness of it in natural Men above other Creatures	247 a
— As given on Mount Sinai was the promulgation of the Covenant made with Adam	330 a
— And Ceremonial given anew to the Jews tho' fallen as a Church	331 a
— As given to the Jews a Type of those Promises under the Gospel	332 a
— The effect of it in the Conversion of Paul, shewn	341 a
— Put into Mens Heart, what	370 a — Written in Man's Heart, what	ib. a
— As given by Moses, how glorious	52 d
Life of the Soul wherein it consisteth	434 a
— The only time wherein to prepare for Glory	69 c
Living in the Spirit and walking in the Spirit compar'd	63 a
Living worthy and suitable under the Ordinances of the Gospel brings a blessing upon our Souls	143 b
Likeness to God in Holiness necessary to our Reconciliation to God	121 a
Love of the Spirit and of Christ is equal	35 a — Of the Spirit in some things exceeds the Love of Christ	ibid. a
— The immediate Principle of Obedience	3 b
— Of God, what	80 a
— To Men exemplified by the fourfold degree of the Misery of Men	81 a
— To God ought to be inflam'd in the Elect, and why	99 a
— Of God to the Elect draws forth their Love to him	ib. a
— In changing the State of the Elect enlarges their Obedience	100 a
— Perfected when it attains its end	44 b
— To God that is peculiar must be us'd by us in all things	65 b
— Of God the Father in Election a great Motive to Holiness and Obedience	93 b

— The greatness of it manifested to us in the Gift of his Son	97 b
— Of Election in God from everlasting	99 b
— Of God to the Elect constant and unchangeable	100 b
— More to be valued than the Benefits occurring thereby	166 a
— In Heaven no more than a Quality in the Soul	176 a — Of the Trinity shewn to Believers in their Regeneration	390 a

M.

M Ajesty and Authority appears in the Word preached by holy Men	121 b — Of the Lord how to be preserv'd in the Souls and Lives of Saints	129 b
Man, tho' refin'd in his natural State, if not a partaker of the Divine Nature, still in the same State, shewn	72 a — Coming to Christ for Justification should look on himself as ungodly	93 a
— In believing looks not at himself as working, but at God as justifying	94 a
— bringing forth righteous Fruits must be righteous	32 b
— That is Regenerate may sin against Knowledge and yet remain godly	160 b
Means whereby God publish'd his outmost Council to Men, shewn	4 d
— Of Edification in the Church from the Holy Ghost	11 a
Marriage an Emblem of the States of Nature and Grace	71 a
Men unregenerate ought to pray for the Gift of the Spirit	61 a — May go far in common Righteousness and still be unregenerate	21 b
— Under the powerful effects of Conscience	222 a
— Apt to mistake the Light of Conscience for Righteousness and Sanctification	228 a
— The Reasons of their Mistake	231 a — Fall short of the Knowledge of God as God	250 a — Assent to the Law of God, how	270, 272 a — Consent to the Commands of God out of a respect to 'em	281 a
— In looking to God in their Obedience willing to deceive themselves	ib. a
— Think God as the propounder of my Duty their chiefest Motive	283 a — Good and Wicked how differenc'd	424 a — Place their chief good in that they most delight in	428 a
— And glory in it	447 a
— Carnal ones speak the same things of the Gospel	34 d
— Tho' they know the Gospel yet they make it not the main of their Knowledge	35 d — Are apt to mingle the Gospel with the Law	36 d
— Godly may against actual Light and Knowledge commit particular Sins	160 d

The Alphabetical I N D E X

	Page		Page
— Regenerate said to have a good Conscience in two respects	249 a	— Is committed to Saints to perform and take care of	88 b
— Assent to the Law on different Accounts to what unregenerate ones do	271 a	— Of Christ has depths and mysteries in it shewn	15 d
— To affect spiritual things only for their own good is Hypocrisy	161 b	Objection concerning good Works answ.	29 a
— All under the Covenants of Work or Grace	216 a	Odours the Prayers of Saints, what	126 d
Mercy of God, what	80 a	Oeconomy or general Dispensation of God to his Church under the old and new Testament, represents his dealing with particular Souls	187 b
— Manifested abundantly to Man in freeing him from Sin and Misery	82 a	Offence to be without, what	14 &c. b
— Shewn more to one redeemed Soul than to all the World	394 a	Once more , Heb. 12. 26. what	96 d
— Of God more enlarg'd on in the old Testament as the other Attributes are in the new	188 b	Opportunities in a Man's Life, wherein he should bring forth Fruits of Righteousness, shewn	31 b
Middle aged Christians as more liable to Temptation, so more fit for overcoming	204 b	P.
Ministry of the Apostles consisted of two parts, shewn	108 a	P apists make the Pope the standing Judge in all Controversies	42 d
— Of Men made use of by God to work saving Faith in Men	350 a	Partition-Wall between Jew and Gentile how broken down	110, 112 d
Miserableness of those who have not the Spirit of God in 'em, shewn	60 a	Patriarchs much delighted to be call'd the Servants of God	79 b
Mortification of Sin the Work of the Spirit	24 a	Paul's intent in Heb. 12. 25. shewn	90 d
Moses a Mediator of the Law given to Israel	87 d	Paul and Haggai how reconcil'd	95 d
Motives , none in Man to incite God to bestow Regeneration on him	37 a	— And Peter how agreeing about the bringing of the Gentiles, shewn	114 d
Mourning , sincere for Sin how shewn	126 a	— Was especially commission'd to bring glad Tidings to the Gentiles	116 d
Mysteries of the Gospel how made known to carnal Men	34 d	Peace the Originals of it in regenerate and unregenerate Men, shewn	286 a — Of the Gospel only known to Saints in the Riches of Assurance	38 d	— The way to attain it as taken by a regenerate Soul	288 a
— Of the Gospel known to Saints so as to be the hope of Glory in 'em	ib. d	— The way of it in a natural Conscience	291 a
N.		— The difference of that which is true and that which is given by a natural Conscience	294 a
N aked, 2 Cor. 5. 3. what shewn	40 c	Pentecost , what	7 a
Nature as corrupt, how far it may be wrought on by the Spirit without true Holiness	333 a	Perfection and End of a reasonable Creature what	137 b
— Corrupt in Men unregenerate converts God's Gift to their own selfish ends	210 b	Persons that groan after the Dissolution of their earthly Tabernacle, who	50 c
Necessity of Regeneration to Salvation, shewn	143 a	— Of the Spirit a greater Gift to Saints than that of his Graces	51 a
— Of Man's seeing himself an Unbeliever without Faith in Christ	356 a	Peter in denying Christ wherein his Sin lay shewn	112 b
— Of our being reconcil'd to God notwithstanding what God and Christ have done for us, shewn	108 a	Philosophers (Heathen) taught the Immortality of the Soul as well as Christians	56 c
Neglect of the H. Ghost a Diminution of the God-head	2 a	Pleas (two) of carnal Men answered	74 a
New-Birth or Generation the Passage out of the State of Sin into that of Grace	67 a	Power of Miracles in Christ from the Holy Spirit	9 a
Notions of God from the Law will not cause a Man unregenerate to know God as God	251 a	— Of God manifested in Regeneration	329 a
O.		— (The Mighty) of God how exerted in Man's Regeneration	408 a
O bedience to God implies a fearfulness to displease him	70 b	— &c. Exerted in true Justifying Faith	410 a — Includes a keeping God's Commandments	71 b	— &c. Equal to the Power exerted in the Creation	420 a
		— Continued in preserving true Faith in the Soul	415 a
		— In God is regulated by his Will	417 a
		Prayer made to the Spirit as well as to the Father and Son	26 a — Of the Apostle in Philip . 1. 9. how fulfill'd	20 b
		Preaching

of the Matters, &c.

	Page
Preaching of the Word the Conveyer of the Fruits of the Spirit	31 a
Preciousness of the Truths of the Gospel, shewn	44 d
Presumption caution'd against	105 a
Preservation from Sin the Work and Interest of Christ	107 b
Principles inherent of a spiritual Life are wrought in the Soul at Regeneration	173 a
— &c. The Papists and Arminians Arguments against it answ.	174 a — More necessary to the Soul to act holily than at the first Creation to act naturally	190 a
— Of Grace give absolute power to act spiritually	192 a — Moving ones of three sorts to be found distinct in Men	263 a — Natural in Men have no need of the great power of God	398 a
— In carnal Men stirring them up to good Motions is self-love	400 a
— In good Men leading 'em to the same is a new working upon the Heart which was not before	401 a
Proceedings during Christ's Reign intended by the Prophet in saying, He shall shake all things	99 d
Profession outwardly will not prove us Friends of God	131 c
Prophecies have often many Accomplishments thro' their Comprehensiveness , shewn	103 d
Properties of a good Servant, shewn	80 b
Promises brought home bred Experience	5 b
— Made to Abraham of his Seeds possessing of Canaan , denoted to him a far better State after this Life	91 c
— Of Life, Justification, &c. not made to temporary Believers	329 a

R.

R Econciliation of Sinners matter of the greatest Delight to God and Christ	112 a
— Includes two things, shewn	124 a
— Nearly concerns every Man	134 a
— With God denotes a preceeding Enmity between God and us	116 a
— With God is a forsaking all others and choosing him for our only Portion	120 a
Recovery after great Falls has the workings of a new Conversion	465 a
Regeneration properly the work of the Spirit	40 a
— Why committed to him	42 a
— Term'd a begetting, why	140 a — Without which we can have no possession of the Inheritance in Heaven	144 o
— Call'd Spirit in opposition to Flesh	181 a
— Is a Mortification of inherent Corruption	186 a — The first discovery of our Election and Redemption	374 a
— On it the greatest Sum of Pardoning Mercy is granted	375 a

	Page
— Is but once wrought	376 a
— Brings Men into an eternal Estate of Glory	377 a
— Makes a specifical Change	ib. a
— The foundation of all good Works done after it	380 a
Regenerate Man how far he affects spiritual things for their own good, consider'd	160 a — And unregenerate Men their difference, shewn	178 a — May sin under a strong Pulse against Sin	161 b
— Under a strong Motion to sin when he commits it	162 b
— Whether they may deliberately sin against Light, examined	163 b
— Whether they live in their whole Course according to their Knowledge	164 b — And unregenerate Men different in their Course	165 b
— Men how they taste the Pleasures of Sin	430 a
— Ones have a love to Christ and pity for others	470 a
Unregenerate ones how they taste the Pleasures of the World to come	431 a
— And regenerate a parallel between 'em	432 a
— &c. The difference between 'em in respect to particular Acts of sinning	166 b
Religion (Christian) consists in the Fellowship of God the Father and Christ	182 b — And the God that Men serve are proportion'd	462 a
Remembrance of the State of Sin wherein the Elect were, helps their Faith	92 a
Repentance is a glorifying God	455 a — Wrought by the holy Spirit	15 d
Resignation of all of us must be if we would have God our Friend	121 a
Resurrection of Christ and the new Birth have a near Affinity	419 a — Of Christ call'd his begetting	ib. a
— Of Christ the vertual Cause of Regeneration	415 a
— The exemplary Cause of our Regeneration	ib. a
— And our Regeneration compar'd	421 a
Revelation of the Gospel its rise and original	2 d
— s Chap. 14. 13. one of the greatest Cordials for a dying Christian	3 c
— Chap. 5. 12. spoken of Christ as God-Man, shewn	130 d
Riches of God's Glory how reveal'd	3 d
— Laid up in Christ as the Subject of 'em	5 d
— Of the Gospel only known to a Saint	37 d
— What	44 d
— Their Abundancy	46 d
— Their gain and profitableness	47 d
— Of Christ all a true Christians	49 d
Richness of the Gift of the Holy Ghost, shewn	59 a
Righteousness its Fruits, what	27 b
— Our

The Alphabetical I N D E X

	Page		Page
— Outward wherein it consists	81 b	— While separated from the Body, enjoy not that degree of Glory as they do after the Judgment	90 c
— True never renewed in those that perish	326 a	— The Reasons of it	92 c
— Of Justification denoted by Uprightness	352 a	Shaking the Earth and Heavens, what	87 d
— That the Spirit conveys into Men glorious	62 d	— Ec. The time when enquir'd into	89 d
Righteous and unrighteous Men compar'd	28 b	Salvation of the Soul , 1 Pet. 1. 9. what	74 c
— Fruits of what sort	32 b	— Why term'd the end of Faith	75 c
S.		— Wherein it consists	76 c
S acrifices acceptable on two accounts	30 a	Sanctification wrought in Saints by the Spirit	23 a
Saints growth in Grace the work of the holy Spirit	28 a	— A work framing the Heart into the word of God	361 a — Raised by the Spirit from the dead	32 a	Seasons to render Obedience to God most acceptable as a Friend, shewn	72 b
— Should shew forth the Vertues of the Holy Ghost that dwells in 'em	62 a	Satan being the Author of Sin , a Motive to Saints against it	105 b 111 b
— May fall into offence, Ec. tho' yet preferv'd	22 b	— It should humble us when we have sinned	111 b
— Should take occasion to have Communion with God, shewn	57 b	— Cannot hurt those that stand stedfast against him	119 b
— Ec. To abound in their love to God	58 b	Scriptures being the word of God, how a Glass to represent Christ in, shewn	56 d
— Should ask Counsel of God in all their Affairs of Life	61 b	Seed of God remaining in Man, what	197 a
— Should study what will please God most	71 b	— Abiding in a true Christian's Heart, he can never yield to an act of Sin	202 b
— And such works in performance as are extraordinary	72 b	Seals , the breaking of 'em, Rev. 5. 2. not simply an act of Power	121 d
— Should deny God nothing, and yet take his Denials kindly	76 b	— Loosing of 'em and opening the Book, what	ib. d
— Stick close to God in a time of Tryal	77 b	Sense in Phil. 1. 10. includes Experience	5 b
— Oblig'd to the Service of God because the end of their Redemption	79 b	— Added to Knowledge expressive of spiritual Faith	4 b
— Being enabled to exercise Faith, Ec. in a dying hour is a singular Blessing, shewn	4 c	— Intends deep and glorious Impressions on the Soul	6 b
— Why said to be gathered to their People, shewn	11 c	Servant of God his Properties, shewn	80, 85 b
— Their Sin properly the work of Satan,	107 b	Sentence of Salvation is expressly term'd Justification	44 b
— If stedfast in believing are victorious	119 b	Simplicity and plainheartedness to God in all our walkings with him the truest Jewel of Friendship	75 b
— Tho' they have Corruptions in their lives yet they make God their chief Treasure	434 a	Sincerity , what it is	12 b
— Glorified of God for ever	451 a	— From whence it arises	13 b
— Wherein they may glorify God, shewn	453 a	Sin discover'd by the Law before the Revelation of Christ	338 a — Hold and maintain some Communion with God the Father and the Son	185 b	— Against the Holy Ghost, the difference of it from other Sins against Knowledge	173 b
— Glory after the day of Judgment far transcends all their other Glory	107 c	— A sight of it enough to constrain us to make use of Christ's Righteousness	357 a
— Have two Gulphs which in Heaven shall be satisfied	113 c	— Indulg'd is a dealing with the Devil	110 b
— Know the Truths of the Gospel as no carnal Man knows 'em	34 d	Sins and Pleasures carnal Mens Dainties	435 a
— Only know the Riches of the Gospel	37 d	— Afore nor after Regeneration prejudice not those in the Ministry who truly return	775 a
— Only know the Gospel to be comforted by it	ib. d	Sinning against the Spirit, what	161 b
— On Earth and in Heaven their different States, shewn	51 c	— Presumptuously, the Difference between godly and ungodly Man's so doing	169 b
— While on Earth their Groaning the occasion of it	53 c	Sinners by an outward persuasion are led to Christ as propitiatory between God and them	117 a
— Why they groan after their Dissolution	55 c	— Must seek Peace and Reconciliation through Christ	118 a
— Admitted by Christ into the Inheritance purchased for 'em	5 c	Sleep and Death one and the same in Christ's sense in John 10. 13.	6 c of the Matters, &c.

	Page
Socinians esteem Reason the supreme Judge of the Gospel	41 b
Sons of God , to be so, the greatest Benefit to a Believer, shewn	166 a
Solemnity us'd upon the Soul's Arrival in Heaven, shewn	103 c
Song , new one, in Rev. 5. 9. what	126 d
Sorrow that is godly , what	275 a
Soul , the principal Subject wrought upon for Glory	68, 70 c
— Why call'd the inward Man	ib. c
— When the Body dies, is taken up into Glory, why, shewn	69 c
— The first and primitive Subject of Holiness	71 c
— As immediately capable of Glory when separated as united to the Body	ib. c
— While separated from the Body, why admitted into Glory	72 c
— The Rank and Kind of it as it stands in before God	78 c
— The State it would fall into upon the Dissolution of the Body, shewn	79 c
— Then the special Season for God to shew his love to it	ib. c
— Of Believers when separated appear before God as their Judge and Rewarder	84 a
— Separated, being admitted to Glory, shews the glorious Contrivement of God in it	85 c
— Separate, enjoy different degrees of Glory	90 c
— Being separated from their Bodies, are instantly in Heaven	101 c
— In their Passage to Heaven are instantly purg'd from Sin and made Holy	ib. c
— By the Righteousness of Christ enabled to behold the Glory of God in Christ	64 d
— Being found naked, its Miseries come not out till it is dispoil'd of its Body	44 c
Spirit Holy a Witness of, and unto Christ	2 a — The complement and fulfiller of the Gospel	12 a
— Supports Saints at the approach of Death	32 a
— The Holy ought to be most precious to Saints	33 a
— The richest Gift God ever bestow'd on Men	36 a
— The Author of Conversion	37 a
— Of God, why term'd holy in the New Testament	41 a
— Term'd a Spirit of Judgment and Grace in respect of our Sanctification	42 a — Given to Saints from mere Grace and Love, and not from Works	46 a — Concur'd with Adam only as a third Person	47 a — Given to Saints not to depart from 'em for ever	48 a
— Comes on Saints only as a way-faring Man	50 a — Converts a Man when unregenerate	53 a
— Its Workings upon the Heart of a new Convert, shewn	344 a

	Page
— Of God, the best Interpreter of the Scriptures	40 d
— The only supreme Judge of the Mysteries of the Gospel	42 d
— Of Glory upon whom it rests	61 d
— What meant by it, John 3. 5.	146 a
Spiritualness , of affecting spiritual things, what	158 a
State of Sin, what	69 a — Of the other World in Heaven compar'd to a City replenish'd with Inhabitants	15 c
— Of the Soul when separate from the Body the Apostle's aim, 2 Cor. 5.	24 c
— Of Believers not to be concluded by many Accidents in the State of Grace	300 a
— Of Glory afore and after the Resurrection different, shewn	94 c
— Sometimes us'd for some Manifestations of God on Earth	95 c
Strength , spiritual, twofold	204 b
— Wherein it consists	205 b
— From the holy Spirit	27 a
Sufferings two eminent times for the Followers of Christ before his second Coming	99 c
Suitableness of the Heart to spiritual things as such a Character of one born of the Spirit	155 a
Supper of the Lord , what it represents to us on God's part in the Institution	153 b
— On our parts is a shewing forth publicly his Death	156 b
— At it we take an Oath of Fidelity to Jesus Christ	157 b

T.

T Abernacles , what, shewn	25 c
T Teaching others God's ways and gracious Dealings, especially sanctifieth God	473 a
— God's ways, what	474 a
Temptations of all sorts scatter'd amongst the Saints	119 b
Thankfulness to God differenc'd from glorifying God	136 d
— Wherein it consists	137 d
— How to be shewn	140 d
— For what shewn	142 d
— When it is to be	143 d
— The Causes of it	ib. d
— Most profitable	146 d
— Pleasant both to God and Man	ib. d
Unthankfulness in the Degrees of it, shewn	ib. d
Thing said to be fulfill'd in Scripture when declar'd by some eminent Signal of it	46 b
— The self same in 2 Cor. 5. 5. what	67 c
— s that the Gospel reveals are all glorious	61 d
Time ceasing to Saints Eternity immediately begins without any intermediate state	21 c
Thoughts

The Alphabetical I N D E X

	Page		Page
Thoughts of our Heart , what they are most spent upon is our Treasure	446 a	Uprightness of Man , Job 33. what	351 a
— Are the freshest Acts of the Mind	ib. a	W.
— The immediate Acts of the Soul	447 a	W ays of God, what	413 a — Evil ones crowding into the Soul no Evidence that they are our Pleasure	440 a	— And Dealings of God are ways of Love and Friendship to Saints	54 b
— A Man hath of his Treasure are of the greatest Delight and Contentment	ib. a	Wisdom of God above all other Beings	25 d
— Of a godly Man, tho' about worldly Things, yet is all the day in the fear of the Lord	443 a	— The general Title given to the Messiah in the old Testament	26 d
Treasures of Men , what	434 a	Willingness of God to be reconcil'd to Man secretly implanted in their Hearts	117 a
— Wherein they account their greatest Gains to lye	436 a	Work of the holy Spirit equal to that of the Father and the Son	1 a
— Of a Christian lie in the other World	440 a	— Of the Father in our Regeneration	388 a
— Of Men are those things by which they estimate themselves	442 a	— And of the Son	389 a
Tryals ought to make Saints stick close to God	77 b	— Of the Spirit on the Understanding of Men proportionate to the Power in the Resurrection of Christ	399 a
Transformation of the Heart into the Word of God , what	363 a	Word of God enjoyns Holiness in Men	136 b
Trinity equally concern'd to destroy the Power of Satan in Man	112 b	— Living because eternal	146 b
— Each Person gives glory to the other	451 a	— Mighty in Operarion	ib. b
— Engag'd to see a righteous Soul brought to glory, shewn	37 c	— Engrafted, what	365 a
Truths of the Gospel purchas'd by Christ, the Saints Riches	50 d	Works of the Law cannot obtain the Spirit of God	47 a
V.		— Temporary and saving the Essential difference, shewn	324 a
V ials, golden ones, in Rev. 5. 8. what	125 d	— Good ones ordained for us by God in our Election	92 b
Union between Christ and Believers one of the greatest Mysteries of the Gospel	74 d	— First not always to be trusted to by Believers	302 a
Understanding is an Ability of discerning of things true from their Counterfeits	8 b	Workings , saving of God in the Spirits of Men are not always in violent ways	321 a
— Is a Judgment to approve of what is best	ib. a	— Some of the Spirit may be and not by the Power of God	398 c
		World , convincing the World in John 16. what	336 a
		— The things of it have a powerful influence on Mens Minds	410 a
		Wounding with Sin , as Sin the ends of it, shewn	356 a

F I N I S.