The P R E F A C E.

THE great and mysterious Truth of the Trinity of Persons in one God, which is the Foundation of our Christian Faith, and which tho' not contrary to our Reason, is so much above it, that we could never have had a thought of it, if God had not reveal'd it to us in his Word; is not a mere speculative Notion, but a Truth, in which the Faith and Practice of a Christian is concern'd; insomuch as it is necessary, that every one who is sav'd, should believe that there are three Persons, one and the same Infinite, Eternal God, blessed for evermore. For how can we believe that God hath chosen any of Mankind, to make them unchangeably and for ever happy; that the same God hath redeem'd, and doth sanctify these his Elect, if we do not believe that this one and the same God is three Persons, to whom these Works, so necessary to our Salvation, are in the Holy Scriptures distinctly attributed? How can we trust in the God of all Mercies, and adore and love him for that great, and indeed unpeakable Love, in sending his only begotten Son to die for us? And how can we act Faith on our Blessed Redeemer, as having voluntarily come into the World, to accomplish the Work which his Father sent him to do, unless we have distinct Thoughts of the Person of the Father sending, as distinct from the Person of the Son sent by him? And these Persons are equally God; for any one inferiour could no more have redeem'd us, than he could have elected or created us: But they are not so many several Gods, therefore they are one and the same God, equal in all Perfections and Glory. The Author hath discours'd of the Work of God the Father, in the Second Volume of his Works; and of the Work of God the Son in the Third, with great Clearness of Light from the Scripture, and consequently with as great a Strength of Evidence to every Spiritual Mind. In the Discourses of this Fifth Volume, he as clearly and evidently describes in all its Glory, the Work peculiar to the Spirit, in healing and restoring our depraved, wretched Natures, by making them alive unto God, and sanctifying them in Likeness to him. It is a Work which demonstrates him to be True God, as well as the Father and Son are; for Life is that which God only can give, and a creating Power is as necessary to produce a Spiritual as a Natural Life. Nay of the two it is more difficult (tho' nothing is so to God) to raise a dead Soul than a dead Body. It is also as much a Work of God, to make us Partakers of a Divine Nature (2 Pet. 1. 4.) as it was to make Adam at first after his own Image. That none may think these Truths to be merely Niceties or abstruse Controversies, and an Enquiry into them needless; the Author hath made, through all the Discourses, proper and pertinent uses naturally flowing from the Doctrines: which may evince, that as all the Truths of the Gospel have in their own Nature, a Fitness and a proper Tendency to strengthen our Faith, and to improve our Holiness, and to make us not only wiser but better; so God hath revealed them as needful to be known by us for these Purposes. And as the Gospel is peculiarly suted to raise and tune our Hearts to thankful Strains, and cheerful Praises of our Lord Jesus Christ (and in honouring him we honour the Father also) so this Doctrine of the Work of the Holy Spirit in our Salvation, which is pure Gospel too, is adapted to excite us to give that Glory to him which is due; and in honouring him we honour both the Father and the Son. I have given on the other side of this Leaf, a Catalogue of the MSS. in this Volume, that the Reader may be satisfied that he hath all which I promis'd in the Proposals; and also may see that I present him with several other Discourses, which I did not offer in them.

A CATALOGUE of the Manuscripts, in the Discourse of the Work of the Holy Spirit in our Salvation.

A Catalogue directing in what part of the Volume the several MSS. are printed.

- A General and Brief Scheme, of the whole Work committed to the Holy Spirit, in bringing us to Salvation; in an Enumeration of all Particulars: And what is the Glory due to Him for it.
2. Of the Gift of the Holy Ghost to us: How he is at first given to the Elect when called, and what is his Indwelling within us for ever.
 3. How the Work of Regeneration, or the first Application of Salvation to us, is in a peculiar manner attributed to the Holy Ghost.
 4. That there are two States and Conditions God carries the Elect through: 1. The State of Nature. 2. The State of Grace. And how the New Birth is the Passage between these two States; from which the Necessity of Regeneration is demonstrated.
 5. That God, for Holy and Glorious Ends, permits the Generality of his Elect, that live to riper Years, to abide some time in that Estate of Nature, and then renews and turns them.
 6. The Necessity of Regeneration demonstrated, by Arguments drawn from the Nature of Reconciliation with God. That all which God, and Christ have done towards their Reconciliation to us, will not benefit us unless we be reconciled to God. This Work of Regeneration set forth under the Notion of Reconciliation to God, and some Differences of a Counterfeit Work and a Saving Work discover'd thereby; with an Exhortation to be reconciled to God.
 7. The Necessity of the new Birth, and some brief Explication of the Nature of the Thing begotten in it: as the Similitude of begetting again imports.
 8. The Eminency of Mercy and Grace discover'd in this Work, comparatively with other Works wrought in us.
 9. The Divine Power put forth by God, in a Saving Work of Regeneration.
 10. Of the new Creature, or the Thing begotten in us by the Spirit; that beside his Indwelling in us, and his Acting of our Spirits, there are permanent or abiding Principles inwrought in the Soul; that is, Spiritual Habilitments, or Dispositions so to act.
 11. The Nature or kind of the Thing begotten in us, as it is set forth under the Notion of Spirit; That which is born of the Spirit is Spirit, Joh. 3. 6.
 12. That this new Creature is a Change of the Heart.
 13. That it is a different and higher Principle than natural Conscience, in its greatest Elevation of Light.
 14. That this new Creature is peculiar only to the Elect, and is a thing specifically different from the Common Work of the Spirit in Temporaries.
 15. That the Virtual Cause of Regeneration, is the Resurrection of Jesus Christ.
 16. Of the three Parts of Regeneration, and the New Creature. 1. Humiliation for Sin, and the Necessity thereof. 2. Faith in Christ for Justification. 3. Turning from Sin unto God.
 17. The nature and way of Conversion, illustrated from an Instance of what it was in Job's Time, Job. 33. and in the Instance of Paul's Conversion.
 18. Of one eminent Disposition of a Man born again, which is to desire and endeavour to convert others to God.
 19. Of the distinguishing Character of this new Creature, or of a Man born again; which is for a Man to make God his chiefest Good, and God's Glory his utmost End.

Dr. Thomas Goodwin;

Compos'd out of his own Papers and Memoirs.

THOMAS GOODWIN, the eldest Son of Richard and Catherine Goodwin (the Name of whose Family was Collingwood) was born Octob. 5. 1600. at Rolseby, a little Village in Norfolk. He was brought up religiously by his Parents, and they devoting him to the Ministry of the Gospel, gave him also a Learned Education. After some time spent in School, having got the Knowledge of the Latin and Greek Tongues, he was sent to Cambridge, Aug. 25. 1613. and plac'd in Christ's College, under the Tuition and Instruction of Mr. William Power, one of the Fellows there. He continued about six Years in that College, which flourished in a Fulness of all Exercises of Learning, and in the Number of Scholars, there being two hundred of them: but A. D. 1619. he left it, and removed to Katherine-Hall; the State of which seem'd so contemptible to him, there being no more than 16 Scholars, and few Acts or Exercises of Learning had been perform'd for a long time, that tho he was chosen Fellow and also Lecturer for the Year 1620, yet he had some thoughts of leaving it again. He had by an unwearied Industry in his Studies, so much improv'd those natural Abilities which God had given him, that tho so very young, he had gain'd a great Esteem in the University. But all this time he walked in the Vanity of his Mind; and ambitious Designs and Hopes entirely possessing him, all his Aim was to get Applause, to raise his Reputation, and in any manner to advance himself by Preferments. But God who had destin'd him to higher Ends, than what he had projected in his own thoughts, was graciously pleas'd to change his Heart, and to turn the Course of his Life to his own Service and Glory. But as the Account of the Work of the Holy Spirit on his Soul, will be most acceptable as related by himself, I shall present it in his own Words.

‘ Tho by the course of Nature in my first Birth, I was not like to live, being born before my time, and therefore of a weak Constitution; yet God so kept and strengthened me, that he preserv'd me (as David says) when I hung upon my Mother's Breasts; as one in whom he meant to manifest his Grace, in the miraculous Conversion of my Soul unto himself. He did often stir up in me in my childish Years the sparks of Conscience, to keep me from gross Sins, and to set me upon performing common Duties. I began to have some slighter Workings of the Spirit of God, from the time I was six Years old; I could weep for my Sins, whenever I did set my self to think of them, and had Flashes of Joy upon thoughts of the Things of God. I was affected with good Motions and Affections of Love to God and Christ, for their Love revealed to Man, and with Grief for Sin as displeasing them. This shewed how far Goodness of Nature might go, as well in my self as others, to whom yet true sanctifying Grace never comes. But this I thought was Grace; for I reason'd within my self it was not by Nature. I receiv'd the Sacrament at Easter, when I was fourteen Years old, and for that prepar'd my self as I was able. I set my self to examine whether I had Grace or not; and by all the Signs in Orsin's Catechism, which was in use among the Puritans in the College, I found them all, as I thought, in me. The Love of God to such a Sinner, and Christ's dying for me did greatly affect me; and at that first Sacrament I received, with what inward Joy and Comfort did I sing with the rest, the 103^d Psalm, which was usually fung during the Administration! After having receiv'd it, I felt my Heart cleared after a wonderful manner, thinking my self sure of Heaven, and judging all these Workings to be infallible Tokens of God's Love to me, and of Grace in me: All this while not considering, that these were but more strong Fits of Nature's working. God hereby made way to advance the Power of his Grace the more in me, by shewing me how far I might go, and yet deceive my self, and making me know that Grace is a thing surpassing the Power of Nature; and therefore he suffer'd me to fall away, not from these good Motions, for I could raise them when I would, but from the Practice of them; insomuch as then my Heart began to suspect them as counterfeit.

I made a great Preparation for the next ensuing Sacrament at Whitfontide, and in the mean time I went to hear Mr. Sibbs (afterward Dr. Sibbs) then Lecturer at Trinity-Church to the Town of Cambridge, whose Lecture the Puritans frequented. I also read Calvin's Institutions, and O how sweet was the reading of some Parts of that Book to me! How pleasing was the Delivery of Truths in a solid manner then to me? Before the Sacrament was administred, I look'd about upon the Holy Men in Christ's-College, where I was bred; and how affected was I, that I should go to Heaven with them! I particularly remember Mr. Bently, a Fellow of that College (who was a dear Child of God, and so died) and I then look'd on him with Joy, as one with whom I should live for ever in Heaven.

When I was in my Place in the Chappel, ready to receive the Sacrament, being little of Stature, the least in the whole University then, and for divers Years; it fell out that my Tutor Mr. Power seeing me, sent to me that I should not receive it, but go out before all the College, which I did. This so much damp't me, as I greatly pitied my self, but chiefly for this, that my Soul which was full of Expectation from this Sacrament, was so unexpectedly disappointed of the Opportunity. For I had long before verily thought, that if I received that Sacrament, I should be so confirm'd, that I should never fall away. But after this Disappointment I left off praying, for being discouraged, I knew not how to go to God: I desisted from going to hear Dr. Sibbs any more, I no more studied sound Divinity, but gave my self to such Studies as should inable me to preach after the Mode, then of high applause in the University, which Dr. Senhouse brought up, and was applauded above all by the Scholars.

It now fell out that Arminianism was set afoot in Holland, and the rest of those Provinces, and it continued hottest at that very time when I was thus wrought upon. I perceiv'd by their Doctrine, which I understood being inquisitive, that they acknowledged a Work of the Spirit of God to begin with Men, by moving and stirring the Soul; but Freewill then from its Freedom carried it, tho' assisted by those Aids and Helps. And this Work of the Spirit they called Grace, sufficient in the first beginnings of it, exciting, moving and helping the Will of Man, to turn to God, and giving him Power to turn, when being thus helped he would set himself to do it: but withal they affirm'd, that tho' Men are thus converted, yet by the Freedom of the same Will they may, and do, often in time fall away totally; and then upon another fit through the Liberty of the Will, again assisted with the like former Helps, they return again to Repentance. Furthermore I am yet to tell you how I was withal acquainted during this Season, with several holy Youths in Christ's College, who had made known unto me the Workings of God upon them, in Humiliation, Faith, and Change of Heart; And I observ'd that they continued their Profession stedfast, and fell not off again.

Tho' the Arminian Doctrines suted my own Experience, in these natural Workings of Conscience off and on in Religion, yet the Example of those Godly Youths in their constant Perseverance therein, made so strong an Impression upon me, that in my very Heart and Judgment, I thought the Doctrine of Arminianism was not true: and I was fixed under a Conviction, that my State was neither right nor sound; but yet I could not imagine wherein it failed, and was defective. But notwithstanding my falling thus away, yet I still upon every Sacrament set my self anew to examine my self, to repent, and to turn to God; but when the Sacrament was over, I return'd to a neglect of praying, and to my former ways of unregenerate Principles and Practices, and to live in Hardness of Heart and Profaneness. When I was thus given over to the Strength of my Lusts, and further off from all Goodness than ever I had been, and utterly out of hope that God would ever be so good unto me, as to convert me; and being resolved to follow the World, and the Glory, Applause, Preferment and Honour of it, and to use all means possible for these Attainments: When I was one day going to be merry with my Companions at Christ's College, from which I had removed to Katherine Hall; by the way hearing a Bell toll at St. Edmunds for a Funeral, one of my Company said there was a Sermon, and press'd me to hear it. I was loth to go in, for I lov'd not preaching, especially not that kind of it which good Men used, and which I thought to be dull stuff: But yet seeing many Scholars going in, I thought it was some eminent Man, or if it were not so, that I would come out again. I went in before the Herse came, and took a Seat; and fain would I have been gone, but Shame made me stay. I was never so loth to hear a Sermon in my Life; enquiring who preached, they told me it was Dr. Bambridge, which made me the more willing to stay, because he was a witty Man. He preach'd a Sermon (which I had heard once before) on that Text in Luke 19. 41, 42. I remember the first Words of the Sermon pleased me so well, as to make me very attentive all the while. He spake of deferring Repentance, and of the Danger of doing so. Then he said that every Man had his day, it was, this thy day, not to morrow, but to day. He shew'd also that every Man had a time, in which Grace was offer'd him; and if he neglected it, 'twas just with God, that it should be hidden from his Eyes. And that as in things temporal, 'twas an old Saying, that every Man had an Opportunity, which if he took hold of, he was made for ever; so in Spirituals every Man hath a time, in which if he would know the things which belong unto his Peace, he was made for ever, but otherwise they would be hid from his Eyes. This a little moved me, as I had wont to be at other Sermons. Then he came to shew that the neglect of this, had final Impenitency, Blindness of Mind, and Hardness of Heart; concluding with this Saying, Every day thou prayest pray to God to keep thee from Blindness of Mind, and Hardness of Heart.

The matter of the Sermon was vehemently urged on the Hearer (whoever he was that deferr'd his Repentance) not to let slip the Opportunity of that day, but immediately to turn to God, and defer no longer; being edged with that direful Threatning, lest if he did not turn to God in that day, the Day of Grace and Salvation, it might be eternally hid from his Eyes. I was so far affected, as I utter'd this Speech to a Companion of mine that came to Church with me, and indeed had brought me to that Sermon, that I hop'd to be the better for this Sermon as long as I lived. I and that Companion of mine had come out of our own Chambers at Katherine-Hall, with a fixed design to have gone to some of my like Acquaintance at Christ's College (where I had been bred) on purpose to be merry and spend that Afternoon; but as I went along, was accidentally persuaded to hear some of the Sermon: This was on Monday the second of Octob. 1620. in the Afternoon. As soon as we came out of the Church, I left my Fellows to go on to Christ's College; but my Thoughts being retir'd then, I went to Katherine-Hall, and left all my Acquaintance, tho they sent after me to come.

I thought my self to be as one struck down by a mighty Power. The grosser Sins of my Conversation came in upon me, which I wonder'd at, as being unseasonable at first; and so the Working began, but was prosecuted still more and more, higher and higher: and I endeavouring not to think the least thought of my Sins, was passively held under the remembrance of them, and affected, so as I was rather passive all the while in it than active, and my Thoughts held under, whilst that Work went on.

I remember some two Years after, I preaching at Ely in the Minster, as they call it, in a Turn of Preaching for Dr. Hill, Prebend of that Church, Master of our College: I told the Auditory, meaning my self in the Person of another, that a Man to be converted, who is ordinarily ignorant of what the Work of Conversion should be, and what particular Passages it consists of, was yet guided through all the dark Corners and Windings of it, as would be a Wonder to think of, and would be as if a Man were to go to the Top of that Lanthorn, to bring him into all the Passages of the Minster, within Doors and without, and knew not a jot of the way, and were in every step in danger to tread awry and fall down. So it was with me, I knew no more of that Work of Conversion, than these two general Heads, That a Man was troubled in Conscience for his Sins, and afterwards was comforted by the Favour of God manifested to him. And it became one Evidence of the Truth of the Work of Grace upon me (when I reviewed it) that I had been so strangely guided in the dark. In all this Intercourse, and those that follow to the very end, I was acted all along by the Spirit of God being upon me, and my Thoughts passively held fix'd, until each Head and sort of Thoughts were finish'd, and then a new Thought began and continued; that I have look'd at them as so many Conferences, God had with me by way of Reproof and Conviction. My Thoughts were kept fix'd and intent on the Consideration of the next immediate Causes, of those foregone gross Acts of sinning. An abundant Discovery was made unto me, of my inward Lusts and Concupiscence, and how all sorts of Concupiscences had wrought in me; at which I was amazed, to see with what greediness I had sought the Satisfaction of every Lust. Indeed natural Conscience will readily discover grosser Acts against Knowledge; as in the dark a Man more readily sees Chairs and Tables in a Room, than Flies and Motes: but the Light which Christ now vouchsafed me, and this new sort of Illumination, gave discovery of my Heart in all my Sinnings, carried me down to see the Inwards of my Belly (as Solomon speaks) and searched the lower Rooms of my Heart, as it were with Candles, as the Prophet's phrase is. I saw the violent Eagerness, Unsatiableness of my Lusts: and moreover concerning the Dispensation of God in this new Light, I found the apparent difference, by experience of what I had received in former times. I had before had Enlightenings and great Stirrings of the Holy Ghost, both unto and in the performance of Holy Duties, Prayer, and Hearing, and the like; and yet I had not the sinful Inordinancy of my Lusts discover'd, which had been the Root and Ground of all my other Sinning. And these foremention'd Devotions were different also in this respect, from the present Sight of my inward Corruptions: That in all the former, tho I felt my self much stirred, yet I had this secret thought run along, that God could not but accept those real Services, which I thought I did perform; and so I fell into the Opinion of Merit, which thought I could not get rid of, tho the common receiv'd Doctrine taught me otherwise. But now when I saw my Lusts and Heart in that clear manner as I did, God quitted me of that Opinion, which vanish'd without any dispute, and I detested my self for my former thoughts of it. And the Sinfulness of these Lusts I saw chiefly to lie in Ungodliness, as the Spring of them; forasmuch as I had been a Lover of Pleasure more than a Lover of God: according to that in Jeremy, My People have committed two Evils, they have forsaken me the Fountain of Living Waters, and have made unto themselves Cisterns that will hold no Water. And these Lusts I discern'd to have been acted by me in things that were most lawful, answerably unto that Saying in Scripture, The very plowing of the Wicked is Sin: and by the clear Light thereof, the Sinfulness of my Sin was exceedingly enlarged; for that Light accompanied me through all and every Action that I could cast my Remembrance upon, or that my View went over.

And by and through the means of the Discovery of those Lusts, a new horrid Vein and Course of Sin was revealed also to me, that I saw lay at the bottom of my Heart, in the rising and working of all my Lusts; namely, that they kept my Heart in a continual Course of Ungodliness, that is, that my Heart was wholly obstructed from acting towards God any way, or from having any holy or good Movings at all.

God having proceeded thus far, I perceived I was humbled under his mighty Hand, as James speaks, with whom only and immediately I had to do, and not with my own bare single Thoughts. But God continued orderly to possess my Thoughts with a further Progress, as to this Subject; I being made sensible of God's Hand in it, and my self was merely passive: but still God continued his Hand over me, and held me intent to consider and pierce into what should be the first Causes of so much actual Sinfulness; and he presented to me as in answer thereunto (for it was transacted as a Conference by God with me) the Original Corruption of my Nature, and inward evil Constitution and Depravation of all my Faculties; the Inclinations and Disposenesses of Heart unto all evil, and Averseness from all Spiritual Good and Acceptableness unto God. I was convinced that in this respect I was Flesh, which was to my apprehension, as if that had been the Definition of a Man, That which is born of the Flesh is Flesh. And here let me stand a while astonish'd (as I did then) I can compare this Sight, and the Workings of my Heart rising from thence to be, as if I had in the heat of Summer lookt down into the Filth of a Dungeon, where by a clear Light and piercing Eye I discern'd Millions of crawling living things, in the midst of that Sink and liquid Corruption. Holy Mr. Price's Comparison was, that when he heard Mr. Chatterton preach the Gospel, his Apprehension was, as if the Sun, namely Jesus Christ, shin'd upon a Dunghil; but my Sight of my Heart was to my sense, that 'twas utterly without Christ. How much and deeply did I consider, that all the Sins that ever were committed by the wickedest Men that have been in the World, had proceeded from the Corruption of their Nature; or that the Sins, which any or all Men did commit at any time, were from the same Root; and I by my nature, if God had left me, and withdrawn from me, should have committed the same, as any Temptation should have induc'd me unto the like. But what much affected me, was a Sight and Sense, that my Heart was empty of all good; that in me, that is, in my Flesh, there dwelt no good, not a Mite of truly Spiritual Good; as the Scripture describes true inherent Grace to be some good in us toward the Lord our God, which none of my Goodness nor Ingenuity was (which I boasted of.) What is all such Goodness to God who is only good, and is the only true measure of all that is called good? which is so only so far as it respects him, as he is holy and good, as of the Law it is said, Rom. 7. Thus at present I was abundantly convinc'd.

But next I was brought to enquire into, and consider of what should have been the Original Cause at the bottom of all this foremention'd Sinfulness, both in my Heart and Life. And after I had well debated with my self that one place, Rom. 5. 12. By one Man Sin entered into the World, and Death by him, and passed upon all Men, in whom, or in that all had sinned: That it was in him they all sinned, for they had not in and of themselves sinned actually (as those that die Infants) after the Similitude of Adam's Transgression, which Limitation is cautiously there added by the Apostle, to shew that they had not actually sinned of themselves, but are simply involved in his act of Sinning; and that Sin wherein we were all involved, as guilty of it, is expressly said to be the Disobedience of that one Man; for by one Man's Disobedience, many of his Children of the Sons of Men were all made Sinners, for Disobedience notes an act of

Sinning,

‘ Sinning, not a sinful Nature or a Habit. This caused me necessarily to conceive thus
 ‘ of it, that it was the Guilt or Demerit of that one Man’s Disobedience, that corrupt‘ ed my Nature. Under such like Apprehensions as these did my Spirit lie convicted so ‘ strongly of this great Truth, that being gone to bed some hours before, and filled
 ‘ with these Meditations, I in the end of all rose out of bed being alone, and solemnly ‘ fell down on my knees before God, the Father of all the Family in Heaven; and did ‘ on my own accord assume and take on me the Guilt of that Sin, as truly as any of my ‘ own actual Sins. But now when I was thus concluding in my own Heart concerning ‘ my Sinfulness, that all that I had acted was wholly corrupt, and that in me there ‘ was nothing but Flesh, as born of Flesh; so that all the Actions that came from me
 ‘ were wholly corrupt; and in me (that is in my Flesh) there dwelt no good thing; ‘ Rom. 7. my pronouncing this Conclusion with my self, was presently interrupted by ‘ the Remembrance, which not till now did come in full upon me, in this nick of time ‘ and not afore.

‘ The Interruption was made by these intervening Thoughts, that I had forgot my ‘ self, and should wrong my self to end in this Conclusion; for I had had abundance of ‘ Experience (as I thought) of the Workings of true Grace, Enlightnings and Ra‘ vishments of Spirit and of Faith in Christ, at Sacrament and at other times. I recal‘ led the Course of my Spirit, until I was towards thirteen Years old (for I was not thir‘ teen when I came to the University) and I recalled to my remembrance, that during ‘ that space when I was seven years old, my Grandfather whom I lived with had a ‘ Servant, who observing some Sin in me, reprov’d me sharply, and laid open Hell ‘ Torments as due to me, whither he said I must go for such Sins, and was very vehe‘ ment with me; and I was accordingly affected with Thoughts of God, and Matters of ‘ Religion from thenceforth. I was indeed but in my Infancy, in respect of my Know‘ ledg of Religion, having childish Thoughts, which I began to build my hopes on.
 ‘ For my Conscience was open’d with the sight of my Sins when I committed any, and ‘ from that time I began to weep and mourn for my Sins, and for a while to forbear to ‘ commit them, but found I was weak, and was overcome again; but I could weep for ‘ my Sins, when I could weep for nothing: and I doing this privately between God and ‘ my self, concluded ’twas not Hypocrisy. I thought of Hezekiah’s Example, who turn’d ‘ to the Wall and wept, and how it moved God; for I was brought up to read the ‘ Scriptures from a Child, and I met with that Promise of our Saviour’s, Whatever you ‘ shall ask the Father in my Name, I will do it for you: and that made me confident, for to ‘ be sure I would use his Name for whatever I would have of God. Yet still I fell into ‘ Sins, renewing my Repentance for them: As Paul says, when I was a Child, my ‘ Thoughts were as a Child; and I judg’d, that whatever is more than Nature must be ‘ Grace: and when I had my Affections any way exercised upon the things of the other ‘ World, thought I, this is the Work of God, for the time was I had no such actings.
 ‘ And thus my younger time was at times spent, but God was to me as a wayfaring ‘ Man, who came and dwelt for a Night, and made me Religious for a Fit, but then de‘ parted from me. The Holy Ghost moved upon the Waters when the World was ‘ creating, and held and sustain’d the Chaos that was created, and so he does in carnal ‘ Mens Hearts, witness their good Motions at times. In a great Frost you shall see where ‘ the Sun shines hot, the Ice drops, and the Snow melts, and the Earth grows slabby;
 ‘ but ’tis a particular Thaw, only where the Sun shines, not a general Thaw of all ‘ things that are frozen. But so it was, that for these lighter Impressions and lighter ‘ Workings, my Heart did grow so presumptuous, that I thought my self not only to ‘ have Grace, but more Grace than my Relations; or any Inhabitant of the Town that ‘ I knew of, and this for the time I was a School-boy before I came to the University.
 ‘ When I was past twelve Years old towards thirteen, I was admitted into Christ’s Col- ‘ lege in Cambridge, as a Junior-Sophister, a Year before the usual time of standing;
 ‘ and there being the Opportunity of a Sacrament of the Lord’s Supper, appointed to ‘ be administr’d publicly in the College, and all of that Form that I was now in, being ‘ taken into receiving, I was ashamed to go out of the Chappel alone and not receive,
 ‘ and so I adventured to obtrude my self upon that Ordinance with the rest. I had set my ‘ self to the greatest Preparation I could possibly make, in repenting of my Sins, and ex‘ amining my self, and by Meditations on the Sufferings of Christ, which I presumed to apply ‘ to my self, with much Thankfulness to God. And that which now, since I came to that ‘ College, had quicken’d and heighten’d my Devotion, was, that there remain’d still ‘ in the College six Fellows that were great Tutors, who profess’d Religion after the ‘ strictest sort, then call’d Puritans. Besides, the Town was then filled with the dis‘ course of the power of Mr. Perkins his Ministry, still fresh in most Mens Memories;
 ‘ and Dr. Ames that worthy Professor of Divinity at Franker, who wrote Puritanismus ‘ Anglicanus, had been Fellow of that College, and not long before my time had by the ‘ Urgency of the Master, been driven both from the College and University. The Worth and Holiness of that Man is sufficiently known, by what he did afterwards in the Low-Countries. These Puritan Fellows of that College had several Pupils that were Godly, and I fell into the Observation of them and their Ways. I had also the advantage of Ursins's Catechize, which Book was the renowned Summaries of the Orthodox Religion, and the Puritan Fellows of the College explained it to their Pupils on Saturday-night with Chamber-Prayers. This Book I was upon this occasion acquainted with; and against the time of the foremention'd Sacrament I examin'd my self by it, and I found (as I thought) all things in that Book and my own Heart to agree for my Preparation. As I grew up, the Noise of the Arminian Controversy in Holland, at the Synod of Dort, and the several Opinions of that Controversy, began to be every Man's Talk and Enquiry, and possessed my Ears. That which I observed, as touching the matter of my own Religion, was, that those godly Fellows, and the younger sort of their Pupils that were godly, held constantly to their strict Religious Practices and Principles, without falling away and declining as I knew of. I judged them to be in the right for matter of Religion, and the Arminians in the wrong, who held falling away; yea and I did so far reverence the Opinions of the Orthodox, who are against the Power of Freewill, and for electing Grace, that I did so far judg my self, as to suspect I had not Grace, because of my so often falling away, whereof I knew not any probabler Reason that it was not true Grace which I had built upon, then this, that still after Sacraments I fell away into neglects of Duties, and into a sinful Course, which those godly Youths I had in my eye did not. But that which chiefly did serve most to convince me, was the powerful and steady Example of one of those godly Fellows in the College, Mr. Bently, who was a Man of an innocent, meek, humble Spirit and Demeanour, and an eminent Professor of Religion, in the greatest strictness, whose Profession was further quickned and enhaunced by this, that he lived in a continual Fear of Death, having had two Fits of an Apoplexy that laid him for dead, and daily expecting a third. This blessed Man I observed, and revered above all other Men but Mr. Price, who then was of the University, an eminent Example of Conversion in the Eyes of all, and who was afterwards Minister of the Gospel in Lyn Regis. I remember that when I came to the Prayers, I used to have usually great Stirrings of Affections, and of my bodily Spirits to a kind of Ravishment, and so I continued in private Devotion for a Week after; yet still all those Impressions proved to be but Morning-Dew, and came to nothing, and I utterly forbore to pray privately, or exercise any other good Duty, and so all my Religion was soon lost and came to nothing. But again, when the time of the next Sacrament came, I renewed the former Exercises, and then I grew into a Love of the good Scholars of the College, both of Fellows and others, and began to continue more constant in Duties for a longer time together.

And I left going to St. Maries the University-Church, where were all the florid Sermons and Strains of Wit, in which that Age abounded, the great Wits of those times striving who of them should exceed each other: But from these the Work I had the next Sacrament upon me, did so far withdraw me, as for eight Weeks together I went with the Puritans of that College to hear Dr. Sibbs, whose Preaching was plain and wholesom; and to improve my time the better before Sermon began, I carried with me Calvin's Institutions to Church, and found a great deal of sweetness and savouriness in that Divinity. In those Weeks I kept constantly to private Prayer, and calling to mind the sweetness of this Course, of those eight Weeks in these Exercises; and acquainting my self more with the Youths of that College, who held stedfast in their Profession. O how did I long for the receiving of the next Sacrament, in which I hoped the Body and Blood of Christ received with due Preparation, which I endeavoured to make to the utmost of my Ability, would confirm me in the way I had begun, and continued in so long, and would strengthen me for ever from falling into the same way of liking florid and scholastick Sermons. I went to Chappel for the Sacrament, as I was wont to do, and expected no other but to receive it; but in the nick, when every Communicant was rising to go to kneel at the Step, as the manner was, my Tutor Mr. Power (who was the only Tutor that ever I had) sent a Messenger to me to command me out of the Chappel, and to forbear to receive; which Message I receiv'd with extreme Dolor of Heart and Trouble; but he being my Tutor I obeyed him. But upon this Disappointment I was so discouraged, that I left off private Prayer for the first Week after, and at last altogether, and from thence after went constantly to St. Maries, where the flaunting Sermons were; and tho I never fell into the common Sins of Drunkenness or Whoredom, whereunto I had Temptations and Opportunities enough, yet I return'd unto the Lusts and Pleasures of Sinning, but especially the Ambition of Glory and Praise, prosecuting those Lusts with the whole of my Soul. And tho I did not walk in profane ways against Religion, yet with a lower kind of Enmity against good Men and good Things, resolving to have preached against those at Lyn and their Ways, and to have taken part with the whole Town against them; which my wicked Spirit was too eager and fitted to do by the Studies I had pursued, it came to this at last, that if God would give me the Pleasure I desir'd, and the Credit and Preferment I pursued after, and not damn me at last, let him keep Heaven to himself; and I often thought thus with my self, they talk of their Puritan powerful Preaching, and of Mr. Rogers of Dedham, and such others, but I would gladly see the Man that could trouble my Conscience.

When God now by a true Work of Grace effectually converted me to himself, the Vanity of my former Religion was, by serious Reflections on these Passages mention'd, sufficiently manifested. The Deficiency of the Root of all my Devotions, did also abundantly add to the Discovery: For God did vouchsafe me a new and further Light into the bottom of my Heart, to discern that Self-Love and Self-Flattery, acted by the Motives of the Word so far as they will extend, were but the Roots of all these gaudy Tulips which I counted Grace: and I needed no other Scripture than that in the Parable, together with my own Heart, for the Proof of it: Mark 4. 4, 5. Some fell upon Stony Ground, where it had not much Earth, and immediately it sprang up, because it had no Depth of Earth: But when the Sun was up it was scorched, and because it had no Root it withered away. And with this one Blast, and thus easily, did the Flower of all my former Devotions wither and come to nought, because they wanted Moisture in the Heart to nourish them.

By the Prospect of all these Heads of Sinning which I lay under, I was surrounded and shut up, and saw no way to escape: but together with the Sight of all this Sinfulness, Hell open'd his Mouth upon me, threatening to devour and destroy me; and I began withal to consider the Eternity of time that I was to pass through under this Estate, that 'twas for ever and ever. But tho I was subjugated and bound over to these Apprehensions, yet God kept me from the Soreness of his Wrath, and its piercing my Soul through and through: that tho I had a solid and strong Conviction of God's Wrath abiding on me, as being in a State of Unbelief; yet my Soul suffer'd not the Terrors of the Almighty, tho I lay bound as it were Hand and Foot, subacted under the Pressure of the Guilt of Wrath, or of being subject to the just Judgment of the Lord, as the word is to be translated, Rom. 3. 19. How long my Soul lay filled with these thoughts, I perfectly remember not; but it was not many Hours before God, who after we are regenerate, is so faithful and mindful of his Word, and his Word of Promise, as to suffer us not to be tempted above what we are able, but will with the Temptation also make a way to escape, that we may be able to bear it; and he loving us with the same Love as we are his own dear Elect, does not often suffer a destroying Apprehension to continue long upon us, but out of the same Faithfulness and Pity to us finds a way to escape. I do not speak now of Temptations, but of the just Conviction which many such Souls have, previous unto their Believing. See what God says, Ezek. 16. of the whole Body of his Elect Church, comparing their Condition as to that of a Child born dead, and covered over with Blood, as it came out of the Womb, the Navel not cut, neither washed in Water, but in this plight cast out into the open Field, as a Child that was dead, among the Carcases: And therefore God when he was said to have Compassion on him, said to him, Live, which implies that he was dead. In this Plight was my Soul dead in Sins and Trespasses from my Nativity, and from thence so continuing to that very day, together with that heap of actual Sins, that were the continual Ebullitions of Original Sin. And no Eye pitied me or could help me, but as God there (in Ezek. 16.) on the sudden (for 'tis spoken as a speedy Word, as well as a vehement earnest Word, for 'tis doubled twice) yea I said unto you Live: So God was pleased on the sudden, and as it were in an instant, to alter the whole Course of his former Dispensation towards me, and said of and to my Soul, Yea live, yea live I say, said God: and as he created the World and the Matter of all things by a Word, so he created and put a new Life and Spirit into my Soul, and so great an Alteration was strange to me.

The Word of Promise which he let fall into my Heart, and which was but as it were softly whisper'd to my Soul; and as when a Man speaks afar off, he gives a still, yet a certain sound, or as one hath expressed the Preachings of the Gospel by the Apostles; that God whispered the Gospel out of Sion, but the sound thereof went forth over the whole Earth: So this speaking of God to my Soul, altho it was but a gentle Sound, yet it made a noise over my whole Heart, and filled and possessed all the Faculties of my whole Soul. God took me aside, and as it were privately said unto me, do you now turn to me, and I will pardon all your Sins tho never so many, as I forgave and pardoned my Servant Paul, and convert you unto me as I did Mr. Price, who was the most famous Convert and Example of Religion in Cambridge. Of these two secret Whispers and Speeches of God to me, I about a Year after did expressly tell Mr. Price, in declaring to him this my Conversion, while 'twas fresh with me, as he well remembred long; and I have since repeated them to others I know not how often, for they have ever stuck in my Mind. And Examples laid before us by God, do give us Hope, and are written and propos'd unto us: Rom. 15. 4. For whatsoever things were written to us afore time, were written for our Learning, that we through Patience and Comfort of the Scriptures might have Hope; and we use to alledg Examples, not only to illustrate and explain Rules, but to prove and confirm them. That God pardon'd such a Man in such a Condition, is often brought home unto another Man in the same Condition, and impliedly contains a secret Promise, that so he may do to me, says the Soul in the same Condition. And I remember that I preaching at Ely two Year after, urged to the People the Example of Paul (which I was before refer'd to) as an Example to win others, in having in my Eye and Thoughts the said Experience of God's dealing with me in the same kind; and that the Examples of such are to be held forth by God, as Flags of Mercy before a Company of Rebels to win them in.

Now as to this Example of Paul, it was full and pertinent for that purpose, for which God held it out to me; I then consider'd with my self the Amplitude of my Pardon, that it involved all sorts of Sins of the highest Nature, in which Paul had so walk'd, as he was even upon the narrow Brink of sinning against the Holy Ghost. And God suggested unto me that he would pardon me for all my Sins, tho never so great, for Boldness, Hardness of Heart, and Hainousness of Sinning, as he had pardon'd Paul, whose Story of Forgiveness I was refer'd unto: and also that he would change my Heart, as he had done Mr. Price's, who was in all Mens Eyes the greatest and most famous Convert, known to the whole University of Cambridge, and made the greatest and notedest Example that ever was, of a strange Conversion to God, and who was the holiest Man that ever I knew one or other, and was then Preacher at Kings-Lyn, whither my Parents had remov'd from Rolfeby, and then liv'd there.

The Confirmations which my self have had, to judg that these Instructions and Suggestions were immediately from God, were these.

1. I consider'd the Posture and Condition of my Spirit, and that this Suggestion took me when my Heart was fix'd, and that unmoveably, in the contrary Persuasions, not only that I was guilty of those Sins, and had continued in them to that time; but that I was in a damned Estate without hope for Remedy: and when God had set a Guard upon me as the Prisoner of Hell, then came in these contrary Apprehensions and Impressions as it were in an instant; which Impressions also were so deep and rooted in my Heart, that I remember'd them ever since: And I did accordingly acquaint Mr. Price at Lyn, a Year and a half after this, setting them on upon my Heart, in rehearsing to him the Story of my Conversion, which he exceedingly approved of.

2. It was a Word in its proper Season, like that which was spoken to Abraham the Father of all the Faithful, and which ran into a Proverb among the Jews, In the Mount the Lord will be seen, or provide; which they apply to the immediate Remedy, which God does use to afford out of pity to a Man in a Strait or Distress; and which none but himself can give Remedy to. It is a Word fitted and proper to such an occasion, and peculiar to the case of the Person; a Word that was quick and sudden, and interrupting all contrary Expectations and Fears, as the manner of the Speech was, Abraham, Abraham, as a Man that speaks in hast to prevent any contrary Fears: 'Tis a Word spoken in Season, which Christ himself was taught by God to speak to distressed Souls, Isa. 50.

3. This that was suggested to me was not an ungrounded Eancy, but the pure word of God, which is the ground of Faith and Hope. It was the Promise and Performance of God's forgiving of Paul the most heinous Sins, that ever any Convert committed who was saved; for he was the chiefest of Sinners, as himself confesses: And this Instance was directed unto me as the most pertinent to my case, that I could elsewhere have found in the Book of God.

4. In considering the Consequents and Effects that follow'd after God's speaking to me, I was hopefully persuaded, it was from God, for the things were fulfilled which God had spoken of. For first I felt my Soul, and all the Powers of it, as in an instant to be clean altered and changed in the Dispositions of them; even as our own Divines of Great Britain, do set out, in their Discourse of the manner of Conversion in the effect of it. Secondly I found from the same time the Works of the Devil to be dissolved in my Heart in an eminent manner, my Understanding enlightened, my Will melted and soften'd, and of a Stone made Flesh, disposed to receive, and disposed to turn to God. And thirdly, I found my Spirit clothed with a new Nature, naturally inclining me to good; whereas before it was inclined only to evil. I found not only good Motions from the Spirit of God, as he was pleas'd to incite me formerly, not only flushings and streamings of Affection (which soon vanish) or stirring my bodily Spirits with Joy, when I applied my self to a Holy Duty, but I found a new Indweller or habitual Principle of opposition to, and hatred of Sin and welling, so as I concluded with my self, that this new Workmanship wrought in me, was of the same kind as to matter of Holiness with that Image of God, express'd Eph. 4, 23, 24, but more expressly affirmed, Col. 3, 10. It was this one Disposition that at first comforted me, that I saw and found two contrary Principles, of Spirit against Flesh, and Flesh against gainst Spirit : and I found apparently the difference of the Opposition, that only Conscience makes against a Lust, and that which the Spirit, that is, the new Work of Grace in a Man's Heart, makes against the Flesh. That the Spirit not only contradicted and check'd, but made a real natural Opposition, such as Fire do's to Water ; so that the Spirit did as truly lust against the Work of the Flesh, as the Flesh against that of the Spirit. And this difference I found not by reading, or hearing any one speak of it, but (as Austin did) I perceived it of my self, and wonder'd at it ; for I may say of this Combat, that 'tis proper and peculiar to a Man that is regenerate. It is not in God or Christ, who are a Fulness of Holiness ; not in Devils, for they are all Sin ; not in good Angels, for they are entirely holy ; not in wicked Men, for they have no Grace in them, to fight with their Corruptions after such a manner.

Thirdly, The Consequent of this that fell out in my Heart, was an actual turning from all known Sins, and my entertaining the Truth of all Godliness, and the Principles of it as far as I received it from the Word of God, and the best examples of godly Men I liv'd withal. And in general, I took this Course through God's Direction and Assistance, that I looked back upon my sinful Estate, and took a summary Survey of my chiefest Sins and Lusts ; and I found them to be Love of Pleasure more than of God, corrupt ends, especially of Vain-glory and academick Praise, which I fought with my whole Soul : and God was pleased to direct me to take up, as the Rule of my turning to him, a sincere Aim at his Glory as the Rule of all my inward Thoughts, Words, Actions, Desires and Ends whatsoever. And in this it pleased God to direct and assist me, to consider asunder all the sorts of Actions I had gone through in my Life, and to take them asunder in Particulars every one in order, but especially the principallest of them. And here in the first place, I consider'd, what was the Aim and Drift of my Studies, which I had spent my whole time upon : and having been devoted by my Parents for the work of the Ministry, I consider'd what it was, did serve most to the Glory of God in the Work of the Ministry, and that overturned all the Projects and Designs of my Heart hitherto, which were the dearest of all to me ; so dear, that I would certainly rather not have lived, than have forsaken that Interest. The University in those times was addicted in their Preaching to a vainglorious Eloquence, wherein the Wits did strive to exceed one another : and that which I most of all affected in my foolish Fancy, was to have preached for the matter thereof in the way that Dr. Senbouse (of St. Johns, afterwards made Bishop) did exceed all Men in. I instance in him, to explain the way and model that I set up, because his Sermons five or six of them are in print, and because it is the eminentest Farrago of all sorts of Flowers of Wit, that are found in any of the Fathers, Poets, Histories, Similitudes, or whatever has the elegancy of Wit in it : and in the joining and disposing of these together, Wit was the eminent Orderer in a promiscuous way. His way I took for my Pattern, not that I hoped to attain to the same perfection, I coming far behind hand of all the Accomplishments he abounded in. But I set him up in my thoughts to imitate as much as I was able ; and about such Collections as these did I set my Studies until I should come to preach. But this way of his did soon receive a fatal Wound, Dr. Preston opposing it and preaching against it, as vain and unedifying. His Catechetical Sermons in the Chappel of that College it fell out I heard, whilst unregenerate ; but they moved me not to alter my Studies, nor should all the World have persuaded me to have done it, nor all Angels, nor Men ; but my Heart upon this my turning to God, and setting his Glory as my resolved end of all my Actions and Ways, did soon discover to me the Unprofitableness of such a Design ; and I came to this resolved Principle, that I would preach wholly and altogether sound wholesom Words, without Affectation of Wit and Vanity of Eloquence. And in the end, this Project of Wit and Vainglory was wholly sunk in my Heart, and I left all, and have continued in that purpose and practice these threescore years ; and I never was so much as tempted to put in any of my own wither'd Flowers that I had gather'd, and valued more than Diamonds, nor have they offer'd themselves to my Memory to the bringing them into a Sermon to this day, but I have preach'd what I thought was truly edifying, either for Conversion of Souls, or bringing them up to Eternal Life : so as I am free to profess that great Maxim of Dr. Preston, in his Sermon of Humiliation, on the first of the Ephesians, That of all other, my Master-Lust was mortified.

I observed of this Work of God on my Soul, that there was nothing of Constraint or Force in it, but I was carried on with the most ready and willing Mind, and what I did was what I chose to do. With the greatest Freedom I parted with my Sins, formerly as dear to me as the apple of my Eye, yea as my Life, and resolv'd never to return to them more. And what I did was from deliberate choice ; I consider'd what I was doing, and reckon'd with my self what it would cost me to make this great Alteration. I consider'd the common Opinion the World had of those ways of Purity and Holiness, and walking according to them. But tho I consider'd what the common

Course and Vogue of the World was concerning the ways of one that would be a true Convert and sincere to God, yet they hindred me not at all. The Weeds that entangled me in those Waters, I swam and broke through, with as much ease as Sampson did his Withes; for I was made a Vassal and a perfect Captive to another binding, such as Paul speaks of, when he says, he went bound in the Spirit to Jerusalem; and I said within my self, of all my old Companions, What do you breaking my Heart? I am not ready to be bound only, but to give up my Life, so as I may serve God with Joy in these ways. I parted with all my Lusts, not as Lot's Wife, looking back on what I departed from; but with my whole Soul and whole Desires, not to return more to the Enjoyment of any Lust, and casting down all those childish Imaginations of Preferment, such as Scholars do generally aim at, and promise to themselves, and to attain which they make their Aim, and the Card of their Life they sail by. All these fell, and like Bubbles broke and vanish'd to Air; and those which I counted my strongest Holds and Imaginations, And every thing that exalteth it self, was brought into Captivity and Obedience to Christ, 2 Cor. 10. 5. And I was brought in my own Thoughts, to be content with the meanest Condition all my days, so as I might fulfil the Course of my Life, tho never so mean, with Uprightness and Sincerity towards God. I took my Leave for my whole Life of all Ecclesiastical Preferments; and tho afterwards I was President of Magdalene College, my great Motive to it from the bottom of my Heart, was the fair opportunity of doing good in my Ministry in the University: And that it might be in my power, to bring in young Men that were Godly, both Fellows and Students, that should serve God in the Ministry in after times. And after such as were godly did I enquire and seek, and valued such when I found them as the greatest Jewels: And when I fail'd of such, it was a great Affliction to me: but this was my Heart and Endeavour, as my own Soul and Conscience bears me witness, tho I did, and might fall short of this my own Aim in some particular Persons. And this Principle I brought with me from Katherine-Hall in Cambridg, where I had my first Station, and where I was the Instrument of the choice of that holy and reverend Man Dr. Sibbs, to be Master of that College, and of most of the Fellows of that College in those times, as Dr. Arrowsmith, and Mr. Pen of Northamptonshire, to name no more: And I was the more fixedly establish'd in the practice of this, that after I had been seven Years from Cambridge, coming out of Holland, I had for some Years after, well nigh every Month, serious and hearty Acknowledgment from several young Men, who had received the Light of their Conversion by my Ministry, while I was in the University of Cambridg. And this was the great Encouragement I had to return again to an University, having enjoyed so frequent a Testimony of the Fruit of my Labours while I was Preacher at Cambridg; and what the Success has been at Oxford, I leave to Christ till the latter day.

But the most eminent Property of my Conversion to God (I have been speaking of) was this, That the Glory of the great God was set up in my Heart, as the Square and Rule of each and every particular Practice, both of Faith and Godliness, that I turned unto; and of all Signs of Sincerity, there is, nor can be none clearer than this, witness our Saviour Christ's Speech, John 7. 18. He that seeketh his Glory that sent him, the same is true, and no Unrighteousness is in him. Christ speaketh it of himself, who is the Truth it self, and speaketh of himself, out of his own Experience of what he did who is the Truth it self; and the Glory of God is God himself, who doth all things for himself: and therefore he that acteth thus predominantly for God above all other ends, must necessarily be judged truly righteous. Nor can any Man extract that out of his Heart which is not in it: Now there is not the least Spark of the Glory of God in the Heart of Man unregenerate, and therefore cannot be extracted out of it, no not the least Spark. Take a Flint, and strike it against Steel or Iron, and you shall have Sparks struck out; but if you take a piece of Ice never so great, and strike it against a Stone, or any other material, you shall not have a Spark, for there is none in it, nor any Disposition towards it. I remember that when I heard Dr. Preston describing true spiritual change of Heart ('twas upon Rom. 12. 2. Be ye transformed by the renewing your Minds) he spoke in this manner. It is (said he) when upon the change of a Man's utmost end, there is a change made upon the whole Man, and all the Powers of it; which when I had duly consider'd, I judged I never had any thing more punctual, remembering this Work of God upon my self at first. For as he then discoursed it, if a Man changes but unto one particular end, and has but one particular and limited end, the Effect is answerable, 'tis but partial so far as that end serves to: as if a Man that had a Humour of Prodigality, and now thinks it concerns him to be sparing and covetous, this change of his End being but particular, has but a narrow'd Effect, namely as to sparing and care to keep his Money, not to spend it lavishly: but Godliness, the height of which lies in a respect to God, and his Glory above all things else, hath a general, yea universal end, which extends its Influence upon all things.

‘ Hence my Task from this Principle, proved to be to survey and go over every particular kind of Act, both what I must forbear and for what end, and with what Heart, as also to observe each particular Practice of Godliness, which I wretchedly had altogether for a long while lived in neglect of; and hereabout I began with what I was to forbear and practise no longer, but alter my Course in, as first of all my Sins I had liv’d in; and therein I fixed upon this summary of my whole Life, that I had made Lusts and Pleasures my only end, and done nothing with aims at the Glory of God: and therefore I would there begin my turning to him; and make the Glory of God the measure of all for the time to come.

This is the Account which my dear Father drew up, concerning the Work of the Holy Ghost on his Soul, in converting him to God. He left it with a design (as himself said) to give from his own experience, a Testimony of the difference between common Grace (which by some is thought sufficient) and that special saving Grace, which indeed is alone sufficient, and always invincibly and effectually prevails, as it did in him, and endur’d through a long Life, and Course of various Temptations and Trials unto the end. In the first enlightenings and workings of Conscience, he experienc’d how far common Grace might go, and yet fail at last, as it did in him, to an utter withering and decay. In the other Work on his Soul, he felt an extraordinary Divine Power changing it, and entirely subduing it to God; a work that was lasting and victorious to Eternity. I have often heard him say, that in reading the Acts of the Synod of Dort, and taking a review of the first Workings of common Grace in him, he found them consonant with the Arminian Opinions: but comparing his own experiences of efficacious Grace, with the Doctrines of the Orthodox Protestant Divines, he found the one perfectly to agree with the other. It was this inward sense of things, out of which a Man will not suffer himself to be disputed, that establish’d him in the Truths of the Gospel, and possess’d him with a due temper’d Warmth, and Zeal to assert and vindicate them with such Arguments and Reasons, as the Truth is never destitute of to resist Gainlayers.

It was many Years before he came to have a clear Knowledg of the Gospel, and a full view of Christ by Faith, and to have Joy and Peace in believing. ‘ A blessed Age this is (said he in his latter Years) now the time of Faith is come, and Faith is principally insisted on unto Salvation: In my younger Years we heard little more of Christ, than as merely nam’d in the Ministry and printed Books. I was diverted from Christ for several Years, to search only into the Signs of Grace in me: It was almost seven Years e’er I was taken off to live by Faith on Christ, and God’s free Love, which are alike the Object of Faith. His Thoughts for so long a time, were chiefly intent on the Conviction which God had wrought in him, of the heinousness of Sin, and of his own sinful and miserable State by nature; of the difference between the workings of natural Conscience, tho enlighten’d, and the Motions of an holy Soul, chang’d and acted by the Spirit, in an effectual Work of peculiar saving Grace. And accordingly he kept a constant Diary (of which I have above an hundred Sheets wrote with his own hand) of Observations of the Case and Posture of his Mind, and Heart toward God, and suitable, pious, and pathetical Meditations. His Sermons being the result of these, had a great deal of spiritual Heat in them, and were blessed by God to the Conviction and Conversion of many young Scholars, who flock’d to his Ministry: As my Reverend Brother Mr. Samuel Smith, Minister of the Gospel at Windsor, told me, that his Reverend Father, then a young Scholar in Cambridg, acknowledg’d mine to have been blessed by God as an Instrument of his Conversion among many others.

As it was that holy Minister of Jesus Christ Mr. Price of Lyn, with whom my Father maintain’d a great Intimacy of Christian Friendship, and of whom he said, that he was the greatest Man for experimental Acquaintance with Christ, that ever he met with; and as he pour’d into his Bosom his Spiritual Complaints, so it was he whose Conference by Letters and Discourse, was blessed by God to lead him into the Spirit of the Gospel, to live by Faith in Christ, and to derive from him Life and Strength for Sanctification, and all Comfort and Joy through believing. As for Tryal of your own Heart (wrote Mr. Price to him in one of his Letters) they are good for you; remember only this, that Christ in whom you believe, hath overcome for you; and he will overcome in you; the reason is in 1 Joh. 4. 4. And I say Tryals are good for you, because else you would not know your own Heart, nor that need of continual seeking unto God. But without those Tryals your Spirit would soon grow secure, which of all Estates belonging to those that fear God, is most dangerous and most uncomfortable: Therefore count it exceeding Cause of Joy, not of Sorrow, when you are exercised with any Temptations, because they are Tokens of your being in Christ; which being in him Satan would disquiet, and carnal Reason would call in question: Yet stand fast in the Liberty of Christ, maintain the Work of God’s free Love, which his good Spirit hath wrought in you. Say unto the Lord; Lord, thou knowest I hate my former sinful Course, it grieveth me I have been so long such a Stranger unto thee my Father: Thou knowest now I desire to believe in Jesus Christ, Christ, I desire to repent of my Sins, and it is the Desire of my Heart to do thy Will in all things. Finding these things in your Heart, cast your self upon the Righteousness of Christ, and fear nothing; for God will be a most merciful God in Christ unto you. Strive but a little while, and thou shalt be crown'd; even so come Lord Jesus, come quickly, Amen. In another of his Letters he thus wrote to him: All your Complaints are good, and will bring a-bundance of Thankfulness in the end; for mark it in the Scripture, where the Saints of God have complain'd for want of Christ, or any good thing from God in Christ, they have had e'er long their Hearts and Tongues fill'd with Thanksgivings and Praise, Rom. 7. 24, 25. It is the surest State for our deceitful Hearts to be kept in awe, and not to be as we would be, in Perfection of Grace. God knows the time, when it will be best to fill us with his Love, and to ravish us with his favour in Christ. In the mean time let us go on in Faith, looking every moment for that day of Gladness, wherein Christ shall manifest a fuller Sight of his blessed Presence. I pray you fight it out valiantly by Faith in Christ, against base Unbelief and proud Humility. I do assure you, and dare say it, you may by Faith in Christ challenge great matters at God's Hands, and he will take it well at your Hands: yea the more you can believe for your self in Christ, the better it will be taken at the Throne of Grace. Now the Lord give you of his Spirit to help you in all things. The Lord keep your Spirit in Christ, full of Faith and Love to Immortality. In another Letter he thus wrote: Your last Complaint made in your Letter of your self, is from Spiritual Insight of your unregenerate part: It is wholesom, for it being loathed and abhorred, makes Christ in his Righteousness and Sanctification, more glorious in your Eyes daily. If this were not, Pride and Security would start up and undo you: Besides, I find you have great assistance from God in Christ: He ministers much Light to you both of Knowledg and Comfort; and therefore you had need of some startling Evils, to make you depend upon God's Grace for the time to come, lest you should rest in that which is past. Let the Lord do what he will with our Spirits, so he drive us from the liking our selves in any Sin, and make us long after Christ, to be found in him, and in his Righteousness. In another he wrote thus: Your Letter is welcome to me, and your State also matter of rejoicing unto me, however it may seem unto you for the present. Know you not that the Lord is come to dwell in your Heart, and now is purging you and refining you; that you may be a purer, and also a fitter Temple for his Spirit to dwell in? All these things concerning the right framing of your Spirit will not be done at once, but by little and little, as it shall please our Gracious God in Christ, to work for his own Glory. Yet this you may have remaining ever unto you, as an evidence of God's everlasting Love, that the Marks of true chosen ones are imprinted upon you, and truly wrought within you, for your Eyes are open'd to see your self utterly lost, your Heart is touch'd with a sense and feeling of your need of Christ, which is Poverty of Spirit; you hunger and thirst after Christ and his Righteousness above all things, and it is the Practice of your inward Man to groan and sigh, to ask and seek for Reconciliation with God in Christ. These things you have to comfort you against Sin and Satan, and all the Doubts of your own Heart. Therefore when you fear that all is but Hypocrisy; to fear is good and wholesom, but to think so is from the Flesh, carnal Reason, Satan, Darkniess; because it is against that Truth which hath taken place in your Heart, merely of God's free favour towards you in Jesus Christ. As for Slips and Falls, so long as your Purpose is in all things to do the Will of God, and to judg your self for them, so soon as you find your self faulty, fear nothing; for these will stick by you to humble you, and to make you loath your self the more, and to long after the Holiness of your blessed Saviour, which is imputed unto you for your Holiness in the Sight of God. It was thus this gracious Minister of Christ Mr. Price, pour'd the Balm of the Gospel into his wounded Soul, and God blessed it to heal and comfort it. These truly Evangelical Instructions turn'd his Thoughts to Christ, to find that relief in him, which he had in vain sought from all other Considerations. I am come to this pass now (wrote my Father in a Letter to him) that Signs will do me no good alone; I have trusted too much to habitual Grace; for assurance of Justification, I tell you Christ is worth all. Thus coming unto Christ, his weary Soul found Rest, when in all its unquiet Motions, it could not find it any where else.

But the account of this Work of Faith I shall give (as I have done the other) in his own Words: 'It fell out, that soon after my being humbled for Sin, the Doctrine of Justification through Christ by Faith came into my Thoughts: But my Spirit was turn'd off from it by this Prejudice, that it had been the common deceit ordinarily of carnal Men, when they continu'd in their Sins, and so I might be deceiv'd in that Way and Course; and I remember'd that I had been also deceiv'd, in believing on Christ crucified with Joy, and Ravishment in my carnal State; and that remembrance was from time to time an hindrance to me from going to Christ; and I was pitch'd on this great Principle, that if I found I were sanctified (as I plainly did) I then was certainly justified. But I did not think my Sanctification to be my Justification, but an evidence of it only; and thus my Spirit was set upon examining the inherent Work in me wrought by the Spirit; and I pursued after Mortification of Lusts, and of Holiness within, and then I thought I should have the Comfort of Justification, or of being justified. And thus I was kept from going to Christ actually; tho I dealt with God and his Mercy in Christ, as having done all that was on his part to be done, in redeeming and reconciling us, and so I dealt immediately with God, and his pure Mercy and free Grace. But as it fell strongly into my Thoughts, that there was a necessity of Christ's Righteousness to justify me, as well as of his Grace which had sanctified me; and the course God took to convince me of it, and to set me awork about it, was this. He us'd the very Conviction which I had of Original Sin from Adam, in the two Branches of it; the Guilt of Adam's actual Transgression imputed to me, and the Corruption of my Nature thence deriv'd; I had had a mighty and large Conviction, and deep sense of these, and that all Lusts were Sins; and this mightily help'd me clearly to take in the absolute necessity of Justification by Christ's Righteousness, and to discern the perfect difference of it from Sanctification, and the necessity of it, and I gloried in it. I began to reflect that Jesus Christ was the Head for Salvation, as Adam had been for Sin and Condemnation: and that therefore as there were two Branches of Sin and Condemnation deriv'd to me from Adam; the one an Imputation of his Fact to me, the other a violent and universal Corruption of Nature inherent in me; just so it must be in Christ's Salvation of me; and hence I must have an Imputation of his Righteousness for Justification, as well as an holy Nature deriv'd from him for Sanctification; which Righteousness of Christ for Justification was perfect, tho my Sanctification was imperfect. The Notion of this did mightily and experimentally enlighten me.

He now alter'd his way of preaching, which before had been for the most part, if not wholly, for Conviction and Terror. But now his experience of the refreshing Comforts, which the Knowledge of Christ, and free Justification by his Righteousness alone, afforded him, made him zealous to preach the Gospel for the Consolation of Consciences afflicted, as his had been. And this was according to the Directions given him by that great Man, and lively Preacher of the Gospel, the Reverend Dr. Sibbs, who by my Father's Interest among the Fellows had been chosen Master of Katherine-Hall, and who familiarly said to him one day; Young Man, if you ever would do good, you must preach the Gospel, and the free Grace of God in Christ Jesus. As he called his Sermons of the Glory of the Gospel, printed in this fifth Volume of his Works, his Primitivæ Evangelicæ, or his evangelical First-Fruits; so the only Copy of them was preserv'd by a remarkable Providence. The Portmanteau in which they were, was by a Thief cut off from my Father's Horse in the dark of the Evening; just against St. Andrew's Church-yard in Holborn. The Clark or Sexton coming on the Lord's-day Morning to ring the Bell, found a bundle of Papers ty'd up with a String, lying at the foot of a great Tree. In it there were some Acquittances, which Mr. Leonard Green a Bookseller of Cambridge, who had accompanied my Father to London, had from some of his Customers. It was by these only the Clark could know to whom the Bundle did belong, and so he brought it to Mr. Green; which he was the more careful to do, because he was his particular Friend.

He was chosen in 1628. to preach the Lecture to the Town of Cambridge at Trinity-Church. Dr. Buckridge Bishop of Ely, at first made some difficulty of admitting him to it, unless he would solemnly promise, in pursuance of the King's Proclamation, not to preach about any controverted Points in Divinity. My Father alledged, that the most essential Articles of the Christian Faith being controverted by one or other, such a Promise would scarce leave him any Subject to preach on: That it was not his Majesty's Intention to inhibit him, or any other from preaching against the gross Errors of Popery. After some Opposition he was admitted Lecturer, and so continued till 1634, when being in his Conscience dissatisfied with the Terms of Conformity, he left the University and his Preferments. As he acted herein with all Sincerity, following the Light which God had given him, and the Persuasions of his own Mind and Conscience, in which no worldly Motives had any part; for if he had hearken'd to 'em, they would have sway'd him to a contrary Course: so I have heard him express himself with great Joy of Faith, and Thankfulness and Praise of the faithful Love of Jesus Christ to him, in performance of that Promise, Luke 18. 29, 30. And he said unto them, Verily I say unto you, there is no Man that hath left House, or Parents, or Brethren, or Wife, or Children, for the Kingdom of God's sake, who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the World to come Life Everlasting.

I freely renounced (said he) for Christ, when God converted me, all those Designs of Pride, and Vain-glory, and Advancement of my self; upon which my Heart was so strongly set, that no Persuasions of Men, nor any worldly Considerations could have diverted me from the pursuit of them. No, it was the Power of God alone that prevail'd to make me do it: It was he alone made me willing to live in the meanest, and most afflicted Condition, so that I might serve him in all godly Sincerity. I cheerfully parted with all for Christ, and he hath made me abundant Compensation, not only in the Comforts and Joys of his Love, which are beyond comparison above all other things, but even in this World. What Love and Esteem I have had among good Men, he gave me: He alone made my Ministry in the Gospel acceptable, and blessed it with Success, to the Conversion, and spiritual Good and Comfort of many Souls.

A. D. 1638. he married Mrs. Elizabeth Prescott, the Daughter of Alderman Prescott: of the other two, one was married to Sir William Leman of Northaw, the other to Sir Nicholas Crisp of Hammersmith. He was very happy in a Woman, of such a sweet Temper, lively Wit and sincere Piety, as endear'd her to all that knew her: And he was happy in an only Daughter he had by her, Elizabeth, who was married to Mr. John Mason, a Citizen of London. In natural Endowments of Mind, and which is far more to be valued, in Grace and Piety, she was a lively Image of her Parents: She lost her Mother when she was about ten Years of Age, and died two Years before her Father's Death.

The Persecution growing hot in England, my Father resolv'd to remove into some Foreign Country, where he might exercise his Ministry in the Gospel, and enjoy the Ordinances of Christ, according to his Conscience, which he could not do in his own Native Land. He went over into Holland in 1639. settled at last at Arnheim, and was Pastor of the English Church in that City. During his abode there, some differences arising in the English Church at Rotterdam, my Father, and the Elders of the Church at Arnheim went thither, and God was pleas'd to bless their Brotherly Advice and Counsel to compose the differences, and to re-establish the disturb'd Peace of that Church. After some years continuance in Arnheim, he return'd into England, was Pastor of a Church in London, and by an Ordinance of Parliament, June 12. 1643. appointed to be a Member of the venerable Assembly of Divines at Westminster. The Debates about Church-Government and Discipline which arose in that Synod, are not so proper to be inserted in the Life of a particular Person: I shall only take notice, that he took a brief account of every Days Transactions, of which I have fourteen or fifteen Volumes in 8vo. wrote with his own Hand. And his way of arguing was with such Modesty and Christian Meekness, that it procur'd the Esteem of those who differ'd from him, and the other dissenting Brethren in their Judgment.

In the Year 1647. he had Invitations from the Reverend Mr. John Cotton (in whom Grace and Learning were so happily conjoin'd) and other worthy Ministers in New England to come over thither, which he was so much inclin'd to do, as he had put a great part of his Library on Shipboard. But the Persuasions of some Friends, to whose Counsel and Advice he paid a great deference, made him to alter his Resolution.

In the Year 1649. he married Mrs. Mary Hammond, descended from the antient Family of the Hammonds in Shropshire, whose Ancestor was an Officer in the Army of William Duke of Normandy, when he invaded England, A. D. 1066. Tho she was but in the seventeenth Year of her Age, she had the Gravity and Prudence of a Matron: Her conjugal Affection, her tender Care, her wise Administration of the Affairs of her Family, the Goodness of her Disposition, and more than all this, her Grace and Piety have left an honourable remembrance of her among all that knew her. He had by her two Sons, the eldest of which is yet living; the other whose Name was Richard, died in a Voyage to the East-Indies, whither he was sent a year after his Father's Death by the East-India Company, as one of their Factors. She also bore to him two Daughters, who died in their Infancy.

In the same Year 1649. he was admitted President of Magdalene College in Oxford; where he made it his Business to promote Piety and Learning. His Candor, ingenuous Nature, his Catholick Charity for all good Men tho of different Persuasions, won the Hearts of those who had been most averse to him. In conferring any Places of Preference at his Disposal, he was not byass'd by affection to a Party, but bestow'd 'em where he saw Goodness and Merit. Those who continu'd Fellows of the College many years after he left it, Mr. Brown, Mr. Byfield and Dr. Fairfax, retain'd an Affection and Esteem for him, and always spoke of him with an honourable mention. He was not only President of a College but Pastor of a Church, which consisted of Persons of Piety and Learning, Mr. Thankfull Owen President of St. Johns, Mr. Francis Howell Master of Jesus College, Mr. Theophilus Gale, Mr. Stephen Charnock, Mr. Blower, Mr. Baron, Mr. Terry, Mr. Lowman, and many others. Upon the Revolution in 1660. he resign'd his Place of President to Dr. Oliver, and remov'd to London, where he was Pastor of the same Church which he had gather'd in Oxford, a great part of the Members of it following him to that City. In the faithful discharge of this Office, and Labour in the Lord Jesus Christ, he continu'd till his Death.

It was now he liv'd a retir'd Life, spent in Prayer, Reading and Meditation, between which he divided his time. He read much, and the Authors which he most valued and studied were Augustin, Calvin, Musculus, Zanchius, Paræus, Waleus, Gomarus, Altingius, and Amesius; among the Schoolmen Suarez and Estius. But the Scriptures were what he most studied; and as he had furnish'd his Library with a very good Collection of Commentators, he made good use of them. And as the Scriptures are an inexhaustible Treasure of Divine Knowledg, so by an eager search into them, and comparing one with another, he discover'd those Truths which are not to be found in other Authors. The Love and Free Grace of God, the Excellencies and Glories of our Lord Jesus Christ were the Truths, in which his Mind soar'd with greatest Delight. And it was not merely a speculative Pleasure, but these Truths were the Life and Food of his Soul; and as his Heart was affected with them, he wrote 'em with a Spiritual Warmth, that is better felt than expressed. Tho he read much, yet he spent more time in thinking; and it was by intense Thought, that he made himself Master of the Subject of his Discourse.

In that deplorable Calamity of the dreadful Fire at London, 1666. which laid in Ashes a considerable part of that City, he lost above half his Library, to the value of five hundred Pounds. There was this remarkable, that that part of it, which was lodg'd very near the Place where the Fire began, and which he accounted irrecoverably lost, were by the good Providence of God, and the Care and Diligence of his very good and faithful Friend Mr. Moses Lowman, tho with extreme hazard, preserv'd from the Flames. But the other part, which he thought might have been timely secur'd, being lodg'd at as great a distance as Breadstreet, was by the negligence of the Person whom he sent on purpose to take care of 'em, all burn'd. I heard him say, that God had struck him in a very sensible Place; but that as he had lov'd his Library too well, so God had rebuked him by this Affliction. He blessed God he had so order'd it in his Providence, that the Loss fell upon those Books which were of humane Learning; and that he had preserv'd those of Divinity, which were chiefly of use to him. As the exercise of Faith and of Patience, which is the Fruit of it, gave him relief, so on this occasion he meditated and wrote a Discourse of Patience, and its perfect Work, printed soon after.

In February 1679. a Fever seiz'd him, which in a few Days put an end to his Life: In all the Violence of it, he discoursed with that strength of Faith and assurance of Christ's Love, with that holy admiration of Free Grace, with that Joy in believing, and such Thanksgivings and Praises, as he extremely moved and affected all that heard him. That excellent Man Mr. Collins (who was then Pastor of the same Church, that he had formerly been Pastor of, and with its Consent, tho unwilling at first to part with him, he remov'd to Oxford, 1649. and which is now under the Pastoral Care of his worthy Son, and of Mr. Bragg) praying earnestly for him, offered up this Petition, That God would return into his Bosom all those Comforts, which he had by his Ministry of Free-grace, poured into so many distressed Souls. My dear Father felt this Prayer answered, in the abundant Comforts and Joys with which he was filled. He rejoiced in the thoughts that he was dying, and going to have a full and uninterrupted Communion with God. I am going (said he) to the three Persons, with whom I have had Communion; they have taken me, I did not take them. I shall be changed in the twinkling of an Eye, all my Lusts and Corruptions I shall be rid of, which I could not be here, those croaking Toads will fall off in a moment. And mentioning those great Examples of Faith, Heb. 11. All these (said he) died in Faith: I could not have imagined I should ever have had such a measure of Faith in this Hour, no I could never have imagin'd it. My Bow abides in Strength. Is Christ divided? No, I have the whole of his Righteousness, I am found in him, not in my own Righteousness which is of the Law, but in the Righteousness which is of God, which is by Faith of Jesus Christ, who loved me, and gave himself for me. Christ cannot love me better than he doth, I think I cannot love Christ better than I do, I am swallowed up in God. Directing his Speech to his two Sons, he exhorted 'em to value the Privilege of the Covenant. It hath taken hold on me (said he) my Mother was an Holy Woman, she spake nothing diminishing of it. It is a Privilege can't be valued enough, nor purchas'd with a great Sum of Money, alluding to the words of the chief Captain to Paul, Act. 22. 28. Then he exhorted them to be careful, that they did nothing to provoke God to reject them. Now (said he) I shall be ever with the Lord. With this assurance of Faith and Fulness of Joy his Soul left this World, and went to see and enjoy the reality of that blessed State of Glory, which in a Discourse on that Subject he had so well demonstrated. He died Feb. 1679. and in the eightieth Year of his Age.

THE CONTENTS OF THIS TREATISE.

BOOK I.

A General and Brief Scheme of the Whole of the Work Committed to the Holy Spirit in bringing us to Salvation; in an Enumeration of all Particulars, and of the Glory due unto Him for it. The Work of the Holy Spirit in the Unction of Jesus to be our Saviour.

Chap. 1. Some General Observations premis'd out of the Fourteenth, Fifteenth and Sixteenth Chapters of St. John's Gospel. p. 1.

Chap. 2. Some further Observations touching the coming of the Holy Ghost. That He had a Signal Coming designed to him for His Glory, at the Feast of Pentecost, as Christ had a Visible Coming in the Flesh; the great Change made in the World thereby. p. 5.

Chap. 3. Of the Works of the Holy Ghost, upon Christ our Saviour. p. 8.

Chap. 4. His Operations upon the Church, the Body of Christ, and that First, as Collectively taken, The whole thereof. p. 10.

Chap. 5. His Operations in every part, and Member of the Church, and Body of Christ. p. 13

Chap. 6. The Uses of the Precedent Doctrine. 32.

Chap. 7. How the Holy Ghost is the Author of Regeneration, or the first Application of Salvation to us, in a more peculiar Manner, Comparatively to the other two Persons. 40.

Chap. 8. How the Holy Ghost is the Gift of God the Father to us, in and by Jesus Christ. That this inestimable Gift is bestowed freely by the pure Mercy, Grace and Love of God. 44.

Chap. 9. That we not only partake of the Effects of the Holy Spirit's Operations in us, but also of his Person dwelling in us. 51.

Chap. 10. The Uses of the Foregoing Doctrine. 59.

BOOK II.

That there are two States or Conditions thro' which God carries the Elect: The state of Nature, and the state of Grace. That the New Birth is the Passage between them; which evidenceth the Necessity of the New Birth, or Regeneration. The Reasons why God hath so order'd it, that the Generality of the Elect, who live to Riper Years, should for some time remain in that State of Nature, before he renews them: The Uses of the Doctrine.

Chap. 1. The Words of the Text explained; from which, and other Scriptures, it is proved, That the Elect are in a State of Sin, and Wrath, before they are brought into a State of Grace. 65.

Chap. 2. That it is by the New Birth that an Elect Soul is translated from a state of sin and wrath into a state of Grace. That it ought therefore to be our earnest Enquiry, Whether we are regenerated or no. That tho' we are by Nature the Children of Wrath, yet our Case is not desperate, because this state is alterable. 69.

THE CONTENTS.

Chap. 3. That all Gods Elect do not indeed, before their Regeneration, remain in that State of sin and wrath, as is evident in the Case of Infants. 76.

Chap. 4. The Reasons why God suffers his Elect, grown unto riper Years, to continue for sometime in a State of sin. The Glory of Gods Mercy and free Grace is the more Illustrated by this Dispensation. 79.

Chap. 5. Other Reasons why God suffers his Elect, who are Adult, to continue for some time in a State of Sin. That this Dispensation turns to their Benefit and Advantage in the Event. That it serves for the Conviction, and Judgment of wicked Men, and greater Confusion of Satan. 86.

Chap. 6. The Uses of the foregoing Doctrine. That they who are brought into a State of Grace, should always bear in their Minds a remembrance of their former State of sin and misery. That it will have an Influence to promote, and strengthen their Faith. 91.

Chap. 7. The Second Use we should make of the Review of that wretched sinful state, out of which God removes us by the Work of his Grace, is to have our Hearts affected with the sense of Gods extraordinary Love Manifested herein, and to excite, and heighten our Love to God, by the consideration of this his great Love to us. 99.

Chap. 8. That the thoughts of Gods Excellent Love in bringing us out of this woful, state of sin, into a state of Grace; should enkindle in us sacred Zeal, and Fervency of Spirit, to Live in all holy Obedience to him. And what a dreadful condition they are in, who make an Ill Use of the Doctrine of Grace, by abusing it to an Encouragement of Carelesness, Negligence, or Licentiousness. 102.

BOOK III.

The Necessity of Regeneration Demonstrated by this Argument, That all that God and Christ have done towards their Reconciliation to us, will profit us nothing; unless we be reconciled to God. And how Conversion is set forth under the notion of Reconciliation, as on our part.

Chap. 1. That notwithstanding what God and Christ have done for their Reconciliation to us; it is by Gods Ordination necessary, that we be Reconciled to God, if ever we be saved. This prov'd from Gods design in his Reconciliation to us; to Glorifie his Holiness, &c. 107.

Chap. 2. The necessity of our being reconciled to God, evinced from Christs Design in his Work of Reconciliation. III.

Chap. 3. That we may be Reconciled to God, it is necessary for us to be Convinced, that we are Enemies to God: That our Estate is dangerous. That yet God is appeasable: That there is a Mediator by whom the Soul may come to God, that we must also seek God and his Favour in Christ; and seek him with Confession of, and Mourning for Sin. 116.

Chap. 4. How our Reconciliation to God consists in renouncing all friendships and Interests which stand in Competition with his! And in choosing him for our alone Friend, and Portion; in resigning all to him; in having a Disposition and Nature like to God: And also in all our Addresses to God proceeding from an Inward Principle of pure good will unto God. 120.

Chap. 5. The Application, or Uses of the foregoing Doctrine. 130.

BOOK IV.

Of the Work which the Holy Spirit effecteth in us, as it is expressed under the Notion of our being Begotten unto God, and of a New Birth; from which the necessity of Regeneration is farther Demonstrated. Of the nature of the thing Begotten in us, as it is set forth under the Notion of Spirit. John 3. 6.

Chap. 1. The necessity of the New-Birth Demonstrated, and the Nature of it described, from the Notion of our being begotten unto God, 1 Pet. 1. 3, 4, 5. 139.

Of the Work of the Holy Ghost in us, as it is represented to us under the Notion of a New Creature. That besides the Holy Spirits indwelling in us, and his Motions, and Actings of our Spirits, there are permanent, or abiding Principles wrought in our Souls, which dispose them for Holy Actions, and give Spiritual Abilities for the performance of them. That this new Creature is a change of the Heart. That it is a Conformity to the Image of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Chap. 1. That exciting and moving Grace is not all that the Spirit doth for us, to enable us to the performance of Holy Actions: But he works Grace inherent, which is an abiding Principle in us. The Opinions of the Popish Doctors, of the Arminians, and of some Enthusiasticks, considered. 173.

Chap. 2. That the Holy Ghost, when he makes us New Creatures, works in us fixed and abiding Principles of a Spiritual Life, proved; 1. Because it is a New Birth, which supposeth a Principle of Life given. 2. Because this New Creature is called Spirit. 3. Because it is called so, in Opposition to Flesh. 4. Because the Apostle speaks of our being Born of God, and so having received a Seed of Divine Life, which cannot sin. 5. Because he speaks of Eternal Life, abiding in us. 6. Because, 2 Pet. 1. 3. We are said to be Partakers of a Divine Nature, and this is something which is continually growing in us. 7. The same is proved from the Parable of the Sower, and his Seed, Mark. 4. 17. And of the Ten Virgins, Mat. 25. 177.

- Chap. 4. That the Work of Grace in True Believers, differs in Kind from that which is in Temporaries, proved, because True Holiness of Heart cannot be produced by any Vertue of the Covenant of Works, since the Fall, but that it is peculiar to the Covenant of Grace to effect this. 323.

That there are Three parts of our Regeneration : 1. Humiliation for Sin, and the Necessity thereof in order to Faith. 2. Faith in Christ for Justification. 3. Turning from Sin unto God, or Holiness of Heart and Life : proved, from the Work which our Lord Jesus Christ ascribes to the Holy Ghost, John 16. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. from the Instances of Conversion in the time when Job lived ; and of the Conversion of the Apostle Paul. Of the Eminency of Mercy and Grace discovered in this Work of Regeneration, comparatively with other Works wrought in us. Of the Greatness of the Power which God manifests in Regenerating us. Of the Influence which Christs Resurrection hath on our Regeneration.

 OF THE
 (THE Third Person of the TRINITY,
 BOOK I.

A General and Brief Scheme of the Whole of that Work Committed to the Holy Spirit in bringing us to Salvation; in an Enumeration of all Particulars, and of the Glory due unto Him for it. The Work of the Holy Spirit in the Unction of Jesus to be our Saviour.

CHAP. I.

Some Generall Observations premis'd out of the Fourteenth, Fifteenth and Sixteenth Chapters of St. John's Gospel.

THERE is a general Omission in the Saints of God, in their not giving the Holy Ghost that Glory that is due to his Person, and for his Great Work of Salvation in us; insomuch that we have in our Hearts almost lost this Third Person. We give daily in our Thoughts, Prayers, Affections and Speeches, an Honour to the Father and the Son; but who almost directs the Aims of his Praise (more than in that general way of Doxologie we use to close our Prayers with, All Glory be, &c.) unto God the Holy Ghost? He is a Person in the God-head, equal with the Father and the Son: And the Work he doth for us in its kind, is as great as those of the Father, or the Son, Therefore, by the Equity of all Law, a proportionable Honour from us is due to Him. God's ordination amongst Men is, That we should render to all their due, Honour to whom Honour is due, Rom. 13. 1. To the Magistracy (which there he speaks it of) according to their Place and Dignity; and this he makes a Debt, a Due, v. 8. And the like is enjoyned concerning Ministers that are Instruments of our Spiritual good, that we should esteem them very highly Book I. highly for their Work's sake, 1 Thes. 5. 13. Let the same Law, I beseech you, take place in your Hearts towards the Holy Ghost, as well as the other Two Persons of the Trinity. The Holy Ghost is indeed the last in order of the Persons, as proceeding from the other Two; yet in the Participation of the God-head, He is equal with them both. And in His Work, though it be last done for us, He is not behind them, nor in the Glory of it, inferiour to what they have in theirs; and indeed He would not be God equal with the Father and the Son, if the Work allotted to Him, to shew He is God, were not equal unto each of Theirs: And indeed, no less than all that is done, or to be done in us, was left to the Holy Ghost's share, for the ultimate execution of it; and it was not left Him as the Refuse, it being as necessary, and as great, as any of Theirs. But He being the last Person, took His own Lot of the Works about our Salvation, which are the last; which is to apply all, and to make all actually ours, whatever the other Two had done afore Him for us. The scope of this Treatise is to set forth this Work to you, in the amplitude of it; to the end, you may accordingly in your Hearts, Honour this Blessed and Holy Spirit. And surely, if to neglect the notice and observation of an Attribute of God, eminently imprinted on such or such a Work of God's; as of Power, in the Creation; Justice, in Governing the World; Mercy, in bearing with Sinners; Grace, in our Salvation: If this be made so great a Sin, (Rom. 1.) then it must be deemed a greater diminution to the God-head to neglect the Glorifying One of these Persons, who is possessed of the whole God-head and Attributes, when He is Manifested, or Interested in any Work most Gloriously.

Obf. 1.

In prosecution of my design to perswade you to Honour the Holy Ghost, as you do the Father and the Son, I shall consider the XIV, XV, and XVI Chapters of John, and make some General Observations upon various passages in those Chapters, serving to this purpose; and we shall see therein what a Valuation the Father and the Son, the other Persons with Him, have in those Chapters put upon Him, and His Work; and what a great and singular matter they make of His Work, and what Divine esteem of His Person, as by Christ's Speeches scattered up and down therein, appears. Tho the Father himself doth not immediately Speak, yet the Son doth in His Name, as well as in His own: And you may well take their Judgments, for they are Sharers and Corrivals with Him in point of Glory, about our Salvation: The Work of which, I shall only treat of.

There are these General Observations which I shall make upon the whole Series of the aforesaid Chapters, which serve the design of my Discourse.

First, Our Saviour had abundantly, in all his former Sermons, discoursed both his Work and Hand in our Salvation, as also his Fathers: And now at last, just when he was to go out of the World, he then, and not till then, doth more plainly, and more fully discover to them this Third Person, that had an after-Work left to him; who, to that end, was to come when he should be gone, and was to come visibly upon the Stage, to Act visibly a new Scene of Works left by the Father and Himself unto him, John 14. 16. I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter: He had said Chap. 8. 17. That the testimony of Two Men (or Persons) is true; and that he himself was One Witness of those Two there spoken of; and his Father another, v. 18. I am One that bear Witness of myself; and the Father that sent Me, beareth Witness of Me. And he tells us here, you see, that there is yet Another, distinct from the Father and Himself; for in his saying I will pray the Father to give you another Comforter; he must mean a Third Person, distinct from them both, to be that Other. And moreover, this Spirit, as another Person, is said likewise to be a Third Witness of, and unto Christ, John 15. 26. and so is to be joyned as a Person, and third Witness with these Two; when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of Truth, which proceedeth from the Father; He shall testify of Me; like as of the Father and himself, the same had been spoken in that Chap. 8. 18. last cited. And the coherence with v. 17. argues their being Witnesses alike, to be distinct Persons, each from other; for v. 17. he alledgeth the Law, It is written in your Law, that the Testimony of Two Men is true. For therein lyes the validity of their Testimony, That they must be Two Men, or Two Persons, that make up a legal Testimony. And in this 15th Chap. v. 26. there is the Holy Ghost as a Third Witness brought into Court, to testify with Both; and therefore he is a Person, if a Witness; for there are Three Persons, if Three Witnesses; and the Law it self He cites, says, Under the Mouth of two or three Witnesses shall the matter be established, Deut. 19. 15. and Mat. 18. 26. We may also observe how industriously careful Christ is further to characterize this Person of the Holy Spirit, the Author of these works, and to describe who he was, and what manner of Person, that they might be sure to mind him, and have a regard to him; and to know whom, and to what Name, they were to be so much beholden. Thus v. 26. The Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, (says he) And v. 27. Even the Spirit of Truth. And Chap. 15. 26. Whom I will send unto you from the Father, who proceedeth from the Father. Which last addition is to shew the Divine Procession of the Holy Ghost, and the Original, and the Consubstantiality of his Person, to be out of the Substance of the Father, proceeding from him; as (1 Cor. 2. 12.) the Apostle signallizeth him, The Spirit that is out of God. Or (which is all one) that hath his substance, or his being a Person, by proceeding from God the Father, and so being God with God; insomuch as it is not in any wise to be understood that he Subsisted Extra Deum, out of, or separate from God; for he had said v. 11. that he is in God, even as the Spirit of a Man is said to be in him.

Some would understand that speech of Christ's [Who proceedeth from the Father] to be meant in respect of God's sending him forth to us, and his Embassage to us. - But that had been said by Christ in the words afore, Whom I will send from the Father; and therefore to intend the words after (Who cometh from the Father) of an Embassadors sending, had been needless, for Christ had said that already, and therefore if that had been all the meaning of that addition, he had but said the same over a second time. There is therefore in those speeches, a manifest distinguishing between that Dispensatory Sending of Him from the Father to them, and that Substantial proceeding of his from the Father, as a Third Person; and this is added to shew the Original ground, why it must be from the Father that he sends him, and with his consent first had; because his very Person is by proceeding from the Father, and therefore this his Office too. And therefore that latter is spoken in the present time; whereas that other speech of Christ's, Whom I will send from the Father, is in the future; because the Holy Ghost his Dispensatory sending, both from the Father and from Christ, was yet to come; whereas this Personal proceeding of his from the Father, was Then, when he spake it, and is continually, and had been from Eternity.

Now the tendency of these reiterated designations of the Person, doth manifest Christ's sedulous intention, and tender regard to, and for the Honour of this, so Great a Person; and to raise up in their hearts a valuation of this Person himself, that should be the Comforter; and to make them careful to give Glory to Him, even the Holy Ghost, as a Third Person, and the Comforter: As likewise to assure them of his coming upon them, when Himself was gone; and that therefore they might Honour Him in His coming, for His Work; as he would have them to Honour himself for his own Work, and coming in the Flesh. It is as if he had said, I would not, for that honour I ever look for from yourselves, that you should so attribute the Comfort you shall have, or the revealing of Truth to you, (from which he is called The Spirit of Truth) so unto Me or my Father alone, as to neglect, or omit to give him his peculiar honour in it; for it properly, and of due belongs to him. You are and shall be beholden to Me and my Father, for the sending of Him; but you are to be especially beholden to Himself, for that Work he doth in you, being sent by Us. Be sure therefore to take notice of him and his Person, distinct both from Me and my Father. For it is another Comforter (says he, v. 16) which is the Holy Ghost, (v. 26.) and therefore you ought, as distinctly to Glorify Him as you would do Us.

The Second Observation is Concerning the Particular Works which Christ says are His; and for which we are to honour Him. And an enumeration of His Works, being the Scope of this my Discourse, We may find divers particulars that are the most eminent of them, named and specified in these Chapters to our Hand, which will sufficiently serve for me to take the mention of them for an Example to me to proceed to specify other Works that are attributed to Him else-where: This I premise, because I would not be obliged to fetch each of them which I shall after name, out of these Chapters; and so to confine my self thereto.

The Particular Eminent Work indeed on which He insists in these Chapters, is, that of being A Comforter to them; for the occasion of these Sermons was to relieve, and pacify the Apostles Minds, against his own leaving them, as they thought, Desolate. But therewith He further brings in other Works of his besides, and in effect that He should do All, that they had need of his help In. He Insinuates to them how much already themselves had been obliged unto Him, for his Working hitherto in them; which He calls them to look back upon, for they had received Him already in Regenerating, Converting and Calling them out from the World (which was his First and Great Work in them;) and so distinguished them from the World. Thus Chap. 14. 16, 17. The Comforter, the Spirit of Truth; whom the World cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him; that is, Knows him not by experience of any Saving Work upon them; and so they cannot receive Him as a Comforter, because it is necessary they first receive Him as a Converter. But ye know Him; and have found Him to have begotten you again; for He dwelleth in you; Hath come and taken Possession of you, and acted hitherto in you all that Spiritual good, that hath been found in you; and thereby hath taken everlasting Possession of you, as it follows, and shall be in you, to perfect all that is wanting, and that for ever: as v. 16.

A Second Work there specified is, that he should be to them A Spirit of Truth, to Lead them into All Truth; which, as a sacred Depositum, He was by them, as Apostles, to leave unto the rest of the World; Chap. 14. 26. He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have Said unto you. And not only so, but shall suggest new to you, Chap. 16. 12, 13. I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now: Howbeit when He, the Spirit of Truth, is come, He shall not speak of Himself, but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall He speak.

A Third Work Instanced in is, that He will shew you things to Come: And this to that end, that ye may Teach, and Write them to others, Chap. 15. 26, 27. He shall bear Witness of Me, and you shall bear Witness of Me.

A Fourth Work Specified is, to Sanctifie them, against Sin and Corruption. This Work is Imported in His Name, the Holy Spirit; as the other, of Leading them into all Truth, is signified by that other Title, the Spirit of Truth; for He is termed the Holy Spirit; because He Sanctifies, Rom. 15. 16. Being Sanctified by the Holy Ghost.

Obf. 3. Fifthly, He shall be a Comforter to you, against all Sorrows, Chap. 14. 16, 17, 18.

Sixthly, He shall Assist and Direct you in all your Prayers, and be the Inditer of them for you; and so effectually as to obtain what you shall ask, Chap. 16. 23. Verily, verily, whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my Name, He will give it you: Hitherto have you ask'd nothing in my Name; for the Holy Ghost was not as yet given, as He in these Chapters promiseth He should be. But in that Day, namely when the Holy Ghost is Come, ye shall ask in my Name; then, (as in Chap. 14. 20.) In that Day, namely, when the Comforter is Come, (That Word in that Day, refers thereunto) Ye shall know that I am in my Father, and you in me. These Works He specifies as to themselves.

But withal, Seventhly, He mentions His Works upon the World, by their Ministry; unto whom they were sent: He shall be a Converter, and Convincer of the World; that is, the Glory of the Conversion of the Gentiles, is reserved for Him: By your Ministry, Chap. 16. v. 8, 9. when He is come, He will reprove the World of Sin, and of Righteousness, and of Judgment: Of Sin, because they Believe not on me &c. To which Three Enumerations, the Total of the Work of Conversion is reduced, of which afterwards.

Thirdly.

Thirdly, Observe what Christ says, I my self must be gone, (saith He) and disappear, to the end it may appear that all this whole Work is His, not mine, v. 7. If I go not away, the Comforter will not Come; He will not do these Works while I am here; and I have committed all to Him. That look as my Father hath visibly Committed all Judgment unto me (John 5. v. 22, 23. For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all Judgment unto the Son; that all men should Honour the Son, even as they Honour the Father) so here, I and my Father will send him, having Committed all these things to Him, That all Men might Honour the Holy Ghost, even as they Honour the Father and the Son. Even, as in like manner the reason why the Spirit was not sent, whilst Christ was on Earth, was to shew, that not the Father alone sent Him: but that He came from Christ, as well as from the Father: And so Christ, He went to Heaven, to shew that both Father and Son would send the Holy Ghost from thence; Acts 2. 32, 33. This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are Witnesses: Therefore being by the Right Hand of God Exalted, and having received of the Father, the Promise of the Holy Ghost, He hath shed forth this, which you see and hear: Thus wary and careful are every of the Persons, to provide for the Honour of each other in our Hearts: And as careful should we be to give it to them accordingly.

C H A P. II.

Some further Observations touching the Coming of the Holy Ghost. That He had a Signal Coming designed to him for His Glory, at the Feast of Pentecost, as Christ Had a Visible Coming in the Flesh; The Great Change made in the World thereby.

Add to these Observations out of those Chapters, these also that follow; concerning this His Coming promised, in those Chapters; but observed out of other Scriptures.

I. That a Signal Coming should be appointed to Him, to the performance of His Work; as well as unto Christ to perform His. This Coming of His you have inculcated again and again in these Chapters, in these Words, when He is Come, and the like: Which imported that although He was given to Work Regeneration in Men afore, even under the old Testament. (as Nehem. 9. 20. He gave them His good Spirit; And many other places shew) that yet to let all the World of Believers take notice his Coming, and his Work; He must have a coming in state; in a Solemn and Visible manner; accompanied with visible effects; as well as Christ had, and whereof all the Jews should be, and were Witnesses, (thus Acts 2. 4. Chapters) and it was also apparent throughout the Primitive Times, in outward Signs, and Miracles; extraordinary Gifts, and Conversions. And as Christ, tho' he was under the Old Testament, present with that Church, and with the Fathers, Acts 7. 37, 38. This is He that was in the Church in the Wilderness, with the Angel which spake to Moses in the Mount Sinai; and with our Fathers) yet had a visible coming in Flesh, to manifest his Person; that it was He who had done all those works then; and came now to work more, and far greater works: So there was a visible coming of the Holy Ghost, both in the Appearance of him as a Dove, descending on Christ at First, and afterward in the resemblance of cloven Tongues.

And there was not a personal Union of the Holy Ghost, with that Doves and those Tongues, as in Christs manifestation in the Flesh, there was between the Eternal Son of God and humane Nature: Yet these appearances of the Holy Ghost are to be understood by us, as visible outward Representations, and Discoveries of Him, to be the Third Person. And that it had been He who was the Author of all the whole work of Application in the Saints; then under the Old Testament; as well as now, of Regeneration, and Sanctification; and of Comforting; and that He had been indwelling in all Saints afore this his coming, as well as after.

And this His coming was as clearly prophesied of, and solemn Promise made thereof, under the Old Testament; as there were of Christs coming in the Flesh: Which did so much heighten and raise up the expectations of all Believers then, about Him; as that upon which, and whereby, so great a change should be made in the Church and World, in the last days. This the Apostle Peter commemorates and applies upon that Spirit's visible coming upon himself, and the rest of his Fellows, Acts 2. 16, 17, 18. This is that which was spoken by the Prophet Joel, it shall come to pass in the last days (saith God) I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh, and your Sons and your Daughters shall Prophesie, and your young Men shall see Visions, and your Old Men shall Dream Dreams, and on my Servants and on my Handmaidens, I will pour out in those Days, of my Spirit, and they shall Prophesie; and so on. Yea, this coming of the Spirit, I may farther call, the Great Promise of the New Testament. For as Christs coming was the great Promise of the Old Testament; so the sending of the Spirit is entituled the Promise of the Father in the New, Luke 21. 49. And behold I send the Promise of my Father upon you. And He is so stiled, not only in that He had been promised in the Old Testament by the Prophets, (as in that of 2 Joel; 28, 29. now cited) and in multitude of other Prophecies of old; but because that Christ himself did now DE NOVO (as it were) promulge it as his promise, and the Fathers; and that upon this Authority, that this Spirit proceeded from Him as well as from the Father, and that he was first to receive, Him from us, and then shed Him forth on us, Acts 2. 33. That so it might be made good, that all the Promises are Yea and Amen in Him, seeing this Promise of the Spirit is given upon Christs account, as He is the Son (according to that, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your Hearts, Gal. 3. 13, 14. compared, and also because now under the New-Testament this promise was to be fulfilled in such a manner and measure as was never under the Old; and so it becomes a Promise proper to the New, That next great Promise, which was to succeed that of Christ himself, The Promise of Promises; The sole great Promise now left to be given. God the Father had but two Grand Gifts to bestow; and when once they should be given out of Him, He had left then nothing that was great (comparatively) to give, for they contained all Good in them; and these two Gifts were his Son, who was his Promise in the Old Testament; and His Spirit, the Promise of the New. And the Father doth Honour himself to us by this Title, that He is the Promiser and Giver of the Spirit; And Christ himself now when he is come, takes the Honour too of that, to make the sending of the Spirit His Promise also, in saying, Behold I send Him, Luke, 24. 49. and John 14. 26. Whom my Father will send in my Name. And 'tis evident, that our Saviour in calling Him the Promise of the Father, which was spoken by Him after his Resurrection, Luke 24. 49. doth refer to his own Words and Sermons uttered afore his Resurrection, in 14, 15, 16, Chapters of John, rather than to the Prophets primarily in his Intention, Acts 1. 4. Wait for the Promise of the Father which ye have heard of me.

Again, Christ had John the Baptist who began the Gospel, to foretel his manifestation in the Flesh, and to prepare the way for this Lord. And besides him, His Angels did it: But the Holy Ghost hath Christ Himself to fore-tell his coming upon Flesh: And that to prepare the Hearts of Men for Him, whenever he should come.

And Lastly, on purpose to Honour His visible coming, He had answerably an extraordinary work left to him, upon that his visible coming: The Conversion of the whole Gentile World; and the raising and building of the Churches of the

the New Testament, was reserved ~~of~~ His Glory. To believe in the Holy Ghost, and the Holy Catholick Church; you know how near they stand together in the Creed. His visible coming at Pentecost, was the visible Consecration, and Dedication of that great Temple, The Mystical Body of Christ, to be rear'd under the Gospel (the several Members of which Body are called Temples of the Holy Ghost, 1 Cor. 3. 16.) as that Appearance at Christ's Baptism, was the Consecration of the Head, of this Work of the Spirit, that of the Psalmist, though spoken literally of the first Creation, may yet be used in Allusion; and is mystically applied by some of the Fathers thereunto, Psal. 104. 30. Thou sendest forth thy Spirit, they are Created; thou renewest the face of the Earth. The whole Earth was decked, and adorned with a new Array, when the Spirit of God moved upon that Chaos; and the whole face of the World was in that Age of the Gospels promulgation, no other than a Chaos, void, and without all form; All Nations had walk'd in their own ways: But the Spirit was sent forth, and lo this barren Wilderness became a fruitful field all the World over.

The Feast of Pentecost, was under the old Law, the Feast of the first Fruits; Lev. 8. 23. Thus it was in the Type; and the Apostles on that day received for the Church of the New Testament, the First Fruits of the Spirit: Rom. 8. 23. And the Sickle was then first put in, in the Conversion of the Three Thousand out of all Nations; (whether Jews, or Gentiles, or mixt with both) so to begin that great Harvest, whereof these were the first Fruits or Seeds which consecrated the rest, (as the first Fruits did under the Law;) in after Ages to come, as Christ told them that their Fruit should remain, John 15. 16. And this coming of the Holy Ghost then, and Converting such as were Inhabitants out of all Nations, was by Christ designed to be for the handsel of the Conversion of all Nations: Acts 1. 8. Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and Ye shall be Witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the Earth; charging them to stay at Jerusalem, and not to stir one foot out from thence; but wait first for the promise of the Father; and v. 4. For it would have been a vain attempt to have endeavoured to Convert the World, until the Holy Ghost had come upon them; and hence it was that this his visible coming was reckoned by the chief Apostle, the first Æra; the beginning of the Gospel; as the beginning of the Creation described by Moses, is of the World: Acts 11. 15. The Holy Ghost fell upon them Gentiles, as upon us, at the beginning; which refers to that at Pentecost. And this yet further answers the Type: For the first giving of the Law by Moses, was on that day; the Day of Pentecost; and so this coming of the Spirit that Day, was justly reckon'd the beginning of the Gospel, although the account of the Christian World begins with the Nativity of Christ. But the full Revelation of the Gospel, and the Mysteries thereof, and the Conversion of the World of the Gentiles, this was ordained for the Spirits Glory; and reserved for his coming John 16. Which Conversion of the World is magnified as an after-Sacrifice; (as the Saints Sufferings after Christs, are styled the after-Sufferings of Christ, Col. 1 presented unto God by the Holy Ghost, Christ offered up himself as that alone meritorious Sacrifice; but this of the Gentiles did come after: A Sacrifice Sanctified by the Holy Ghost. The Grace vouchsafed to the Apostle for his poor Instrumentalness therein, he owns, whilst He yet gives the Glory of it to the Holy Ghost. Which you may find in Rom. 15. 15, 16. To me this Grace was given, that I should be the Minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles; Ministering the Gospel of God; that the offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable; being Sanctified by the Holy Ghost. The Gentiles you know before had ever been esteemed unclean; and upon that account unmeet to be an offering to God; as the Law shews; which that Vision of all sorts of unclean Beasts made to Peter in the Sheet, (Acts 10.) And the Comment thereupon, which He makes, that the Gentiles were meant, doth shew. But these were all purified by the Holy Ghosts converting of them, that thereby all difference was taken away; and so much as those that were not to be convers'd with by a Jew, were now offered up as a Sacrifice to God. Thus Acts 15. 8, 9. God which know-

Book I. knoweth the Hearts, bare them Witness ; giving them the Holy Ghost, even as He did us : And put no difference between us, and them ; purifying their Hearts by Faith.

Thus much for some General Observations premised.

CHAP. III.

Of the Works of the Holy Ghost, upon Christ our Saviour.

THE Summing up of the Works of the Holy Spirit, and laying them altogether in one heap ; that we find scattered up and down in the Scriptures ; would, if we were able to recollect them all, and every particular, arise to a very great Bulk : I shall reduce them which I have Gleaned as most Eminent, unto these Three Heads.

1. What Work and Use He is, and was of, to Christ our Head.
2. What to the Church ; taken Collectively.
3. What to every Saint : And in the filling up of these, I shall not mention any thing, that may by consequence be argued His ; but what the Scriptures do expressly attribute to Him.

I shall first describe His Operations upon Christ our Head.

1. It was the Holy Ghost that formed His Humane Nature in the Womb : Mat. 1. 18. 'Tis said that Mary was found with Child of the Holy Ghost : and v. 20. That which is conceived in her, is of the Holy Ghost : So then He made the Man Jesus, both Body and Soul.

2. Some Divines do further ascribe unto this Spirit the special Honour of tying that Marriage knot, or Union, between the Son of God, and that Man Jesus, whom the Holy Ghost formed in the Virgins Womb. Now if their meaning be that He, in common with the Father, and the Son, did joyn in that great Action, I grant it, according to the measure of that General Rule, that opera ad extra sunt indivisa ; All works outward, or that are wrought not within the Godhead, it self ; which admit some exception, all the Three Persons had a joint common hand in. But that which is my proper Subject, is, what special Honour in those works, doth by way of Eminency belong to the Holy Ghost in any of these Works : And so considered, I have not found a ground why to attribute the Personal Union more particularly to the Holy Ghost ; but rather according (unto what occurs to my Observation, in the Scriptures, and to consonant Reason) that Action is more peculiarly to be Attributed to the Son Himself ; as Second Person ; who took up into one Person with Himself that Humane Nature. The Father indeed sent the Son into the World, to take Flesh ; and the Holy Ghost formed that flesh He assumed ; but it was the Son's Special Act to take it up into Himself ; and to assume it. So the Apostle tells us, Heb. 2. 16. He took on him, the Seed of Abraham : Or He took to himself : Assumpsit ad : Which Word denotes the very Act of that Union : And it was his own single Act, and in reason it must have been so ; for it was an Act of a Person knowing, and actually intelligent in what he did, when it was done by Him. And that thing he did was a taking to himself a Foreign Nature, to be one Person with himself ; as a Person. affording his own Subsistence unto that Nature, to be a Person with Himself. Himself must Communicate that Personalitie, and none other for Him, for 'tis properly his own to bestow, unto which that in Chap. 10. accords; when he comes into the World, He says, A Body hast thou prepared me; speaking to his Father, who prepared that Body by the Holy Ghost; and 'twas his Fathers Ordination He should take it; but He, as a Person existing afore He took it, as coming into World by assuming it, says, Lo I come to do thy Will, o God, as v. 7. it is more expressly added. But

3. It was the Holy Ghost had the Honour of the Consecration of Him, to be the Christ; and that by anointing Him without, or above measure; as John the Baptist Witnessed, John 3.34. It was with Power and all Grace that he was anointed, Isa. 11. 2. The Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon Him; and the Spirit of Wisdom, and Understanding; the Spirit of Counsel, and Might; the Spirit of Knowledge, and of the fear of the Lord. What is Messiah, or χριστός; but the most Holy One, anointed? Dan. 9. Now with what Oyl was Jesus anointed, and so made Christ? Acts 10. 38. God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost. The Holy Ghost is that Oyl He is anointed with, above his fellows; and he hath his Name of Christ, which is the chief Name of his Person, from the Holy Ghost; as he hath that of Jesus, for saving us, which is his Work. Christ the anointed, is the Name that speaks all his Offices. Kings, Priests, and Prophets, who were only his shadows, were anointed. And it is made the true proper sign and token of his Person's being the Son of God, that the Holy Ghost came visibly on Him, and abode upon Him: John 1. 32, 33, 34, And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from Heaven, like a Dove, and it abode upon Him: And I knew him not; but he that sent me to baptize with Water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on Him; the same is He which Baptiseth with the Holy Ghost: And I saw, and bare record, that this is the Son of God: With which compare John 7. 38, 39. He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his Belly shall flow Rivers of Living Water: But this spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him, should receive; for the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet Glorified: Whereupon, v. 40, 41. Many of the People, when they heard that saying, Of a truth, said they, this is that Prophet, others, This is the Christ. This descending visibly of the Spirit, (which was done first to Him) was the highest evidence of these that could be, excepting only that of the Father, This is my Beloved Son. The Baptist makes these his highest Characters, that it was he Baptized with the Holy Ghost, as with fire; and that he received the Spirit without measure, tho' he was personally full of Grace, and Truth, himself, as He was the Son of God.

4. It was the Holy Ghost anointed Him to all his Offices, as first to be a Prophet, and Preacher of the Gospel; which was first spoken by the Lord; Heb. 2. Thus Luke 4. 18. (and some think it was his first Text.) The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath sent me to heal the broken Hearted, to Preach Deliverance to the Captives, and recovering sight to the Blind; to set at libertie them that are bruised. Whether you take the words ἐν ἐνεκεν Antecedently, or Consequently, either that because by God he was designed to be a Preacher, therefore the Spirit was on Him, or that because the Spirit was on Him, He therefore was fitted to be a Preacher; it comes all to one, as to my purpose. The Spirit was He that made him a Preacher of the Gospel, to utter things which man never did; and to Speak in such a manner as Man never did. And this is evident by the Context, in that Luke 4. for it was his first Sermon after his Baptism, when the Holy Ghost had a new fallen on him; and he had returned full of the Holy Ghost: As Luke 4. 1. and again in v. 14. He returned, (or went) full of the Holy Ghost, into Galilee, his ordinary standing Diocess, for his ordinary Preaching; as the Evangelists shew.

5. The Holy Ghost anointed him with power to do all his Miracles, and all the good he did: So in Acts 10. 38. He was anointed with the Holy Ghost, and with Power, going about doing good; and healing all that were oppressed of the Devils: Whom it is expressly said, he cast out by the Spirit, Mat. 12. 28.

Book I. 6. When Christ was dead, who was it raised him up from the Grave? Which work was so great a work, as God himself accounts it as a new begetting, or making him anew; and as it were a second Conception of Him: A new Edition of his Son Christ: Acts 13. 33. He raised up Jesus again, as it is written in the second Psalm, Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten Thee. God rejoiceth, as having but then recovered, and found his Son, that was as it were lost in the likeness of sinful flesh. Now who was the immediate cause of this new Advancement, whereby he was born into the other World? The Holy Ghost, Rom. 8. 11. But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead, dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead, shall also quicken your mortal Bodies, by his Spirit that dwelleth in you: God by his Spirit raiseth up both Christ and us.

7. When he ascended, who filled him with that Glory? The Holy Ghost, Psal. 45. He was anointed with the Oyl of Gladness, above his Fellows: Which Oyl, Acts 10. 38. is said to be the Holy Ghost.

8. 'Twas the Holy Ghost that solemnly anointed him as King in Heaven: Acts. 2. 33. Being at the Right Hand of God; and having received of the Father, the promise of the Holy Ghost, &c. Peter's inference from thence is, v. 36. Therefore let all the House of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus whom ye have Crucified, both Lord and Christ.

9. It was, and is the Holy Ghost that proclaims him Christ in all Mens Hearts. He sets the Crown upon him there also, as well as in Heaven; in so much that no Man could ever come to acknowledge Him the Christ, but from the Spirit. 1 Cor. 12. 3. No Man can say Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost. So as what ever right he had in his Person, or by his Fathers designation; (of which in Acts 2. 36. Rom. 14. 9.) yet it is the Spirit that publicly proclaimed Him such, brought him in all his Subjects, or to use Christs own words, He it is that Glorifies Me, shewing it to them, John 16. 14. All this He hath done to and for Christ our Head.

C H A P. IV.

His Operations upon the Church, the Body of Christ, and that First as Collectively taken, The whole thereof.

LET us now consider the Operations of the Holy Ghost in and upon the Church, collectively taken, as the Body of Christ.

1. He was the first Founder of the Church of the New Testament. The Apostle writing to the Ephesians; who, (as you know) had formerly Gloried of their Temple of Diana, as one of the Seven Wonders of the Gentile World, sets before them, Chap. 2. an Infinitely far greater and more glorious Temple, whereof they themselves, he tells them, were a part, even the Church Universal of the New Testament consisting of Jew and Gentile, Eph. 2. 20. A Building fitly Framed together, that groweth up into an Holy Temple in the Lord. But then, who is the Builder and Framer of this Fabrick, Age after Age, till all is perfect? And through whom also is it, that this Temple when built, is consecrated unto God, for a Mansion House, or Habitation, who hath the whole World to dwell in? The 22 v. shews both, In whom (namely Christ) ye (Ephesians) are also builded up together for an Habitation of God through the Spirit which in the coherence with the former, is as if he had said, He that made you, the Ephesians, a Church, (which was as a particular Member of that Universal Body,) as Members in Particular 1 Cor. 12. v. 27.) the same Spirit was the Builder of that great Cathedral in which are comprehended all particular Churches as smaller Oratories: So as he is the great Founder of all, both in the whole; yea, of every Member that Worships therein. Thus in v. 18. Through him (namely Christ) we have both (Jew and Gentile) access to God (but) through the Spirit. Yea, He is the Soul of this one Body, Eph. 4. 4. There is one Body, and one Spirit. Christ bears the Relation of Head to this Body; but who is the Universal Soul, which is in all, and every part of it? 'Tis the Holy Ghost: And, Oh! how Glorious a Church and Body shall Christ have, when all are met and set together, and filled full of this Spirit, at the latter day! Eph. 5. 27. At that day it is, he will present it to Himself: Glorious Church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; Thus spake the Husband, the Head of this Spouse. But who is the Soul that gives this Beauty, that formed this Symetry of all the Members, and adds Life to all? The Holy Ghost. And now let us think, what a mighty and vast Work, this of forming and building the Universal Church is, whereof this Holy Spirit is the Former and Effector. There was a perfect pattern and platform of the whole and every Member thereof, in God's breast, an Idea also in Christ's (as appears by the last cited Eph. 5.) which this Spirit will bring in the End the whole unto, and frame each living Stone in the Building, to bear a due, suitable, and comely Proportion in the whole, and each to other. And this is, and hath been providentially a doing and a framing in every part thereof, in all and every Age, and hath been wrought from the beginning of the World, in the several Parcels apart; even as each piece of Tapestry in hangings, use to be wrought in little bits and small parcels; which when finished, are then at last set together. And this Spirit, who is the Dedolator, the Architectonical Master-workman, hath in his Eye, every degree of Grace He works in every of these Members hearts, who is a Stone in this Building, according to the Pattern which the Father and Christ, have in their Idea and Model, of every particular, as also of the whole; and exactly frames each and the whole, unto their mind, and misseth not the least of the set proportion in the Pattern; which in so long, so various, and multifarious a work to do, (as this therefore must be supposed) what infinite Wisdom and Power doth it require, and argues him to be God, that is in God (as the Spirit of a Man within him) and searcheth the deep things of God.

Book I.

2. All the means of the Church's Edification, (as the Word, Ministry, and all Gospel Ordinances) all which are the Goods and Chattels, the Householdstuff of the Church Universal (Paul and Apollo are theirs,) these are all of Him, and Blessed by Him. He wrote the Scriptures, 2 Pet. 1. 21. gave the Prophecies, 1 Pet. 1. 13. Revealed the Gospel, Eph. 5. 5. in such a manner and measure, and with such an enlargement as never before, to the Sons of Men.

The care of all that great Affair of the Ministry, and the work thereof, is incumbent on Him, lyes on His hands to manage. In the New Testament we find Him once immediatly speaking in His own Person, and taking on Him as a Person, (as the Father had done afore, when he said, This is my well-beloved Son) and the occasion was particular about the execution of this work of the Ministry, 'tis in Acts 13. 2. The Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them. In which Effort of His, He speaks as One entred upon an Office or Work committed to Him, and betruſted with Him: And it is as if he had said, This is my work, proper to me, I am the immediate Governour and Administrator herein; for all that any way concerns the edification of the Church, is committed to My management and care. And He says He had designed Paul and Barnabas to one part, as Peter and John to another, Gal. 2. yea all their Gifts are His, in Him, and He as a Person that is the Sovereign thereof, distributes them as He will, 1 Cor. 12. 4, 7. He makes Ministers, John 20. 22. And that power to declare that Sins are forgiven, and so set free Mens Consciences, is from their having received the Holy Ghost first, Christ breathed on them, and said, Receive ye the Holy Ghost; and then adds, Whose Sins ye remit, are remitted. And as He makes Ministers, so He sends out Ministers, Acts 13. 4. and in vain it is for them to go, until he comes upon them. The Apostles are therefore commanded to stay going forth into the world, till they should have received the Holy Ghost, Acts 1. 8. He appoints the place and People any of them should go unto, and forbids and hinders, where they should not be usefully employed. He gives them Orders, He bids Philip go to the Eunuch, Acts 10. 19. and Acts 11. 12. And on the other side, He forbids to Preach to such or such. Paul and Timothy were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to Preach in Asia, Acts 16. 6. and they again-essayed to go into Bithynia, but the Spirit suffered them not, v. 7. And when they preach, it is he prompts them with their Sermons, Mar. 13. 11. The Apostles spake as the Spirit gave them utterance, and when they spake, they spake Apothegms, as the word is, weighty Sayings, 1 Cor. 2. 13. Which things, we speak not in the words which man's Wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing Spiritual things with Spiritual; that is, fitting expressions to the gravity and weight of the things delivered. He Fires their Tongues and Hearts, that they should not speak meer empty and powerless words, nor shoot Powder, but Fiery Bullets, such as have warmth and life in them. And when they Preach, He makes their Sermons to be the Ministration of the Spirit, to convey Himself unto their Hearts, and to make the Gospel the Power of God unto Salvation. All the power of Sermons is from the Holy Ghost, 2 Thes. 1. 5. Our Gospel was not in Word only, but in Power, and in the Holy Ghost, 1 Pet. 1. 11, 12. The Gospel is said to have been Preach'd with the Holy Ghost sent down from Heaven; who waiteth and watcheth when ye come to Sermons, and at the speaking such a word as will do your Hearts good, He falls upon you. Acts 10. 11. Whilst they were Speaking these words, the Holy Ghost fell on them. I might shew the same in all the Ordinances; but of them after.

For a Conclusion. It may be truly said, (as it hath been by some of the Ancients) that as Christ was the Fulfiller of the Law, and the End of the Law; Rom. 10. So that the Spirit is the Complement, the Fulfiller, and maker good of all the Gospel; otherwise all that Christ did would have profited us nothing, if the Holy Ghost did not come into our Hearts, and bring all home to us; Christ made his Will, by his Death; Heb. 9. But the Spirit is his Administrator. Christ's Blood, and Purchase gave us, by his redeeming us, jus ad rem; but the Holy Ghost, by applying it, only jus in re; he gives us Possession, Livery, and Seisin; Himself is the Arrha; the Earnest, and the Investiture of all, is by him: The Promises had been but as Blanks else to us; but it is the Holy Ghost is the Sealer of us by them, the Verifier of them: Christ also came, and delivered his Commands to his Apostles, to teach his Church to do them; as in Mat. 28. last; but withal it is expressly said of him, and that after his being risen again, that He gave those his Commands to them by the Holy Ghost, Acts. 1. 2. And then again, those great Truths he uttered only by word of mouth; but it was the Holy Ghost which recovered them when they were almost lost; and in a manner clean gone out of the Apostles weak and shallow Memories and Understandings. And he it was that added a Thousand more Truths to them, which Christ never uttered; to whom therefore Christ refers them, John 16. 12, 13. I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now; howbeit when He, the Spirit of Truth, is come, He will guide you into all Truth; for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak.

Only by the way, let Ministers and Christians take notice what is the Glory of the Ministry, even the Holy Ghost: Thus Paul himself, 1 Cor. 2. 4. My Speech and my Preaching was not with inticing words of Mans Wisdom; but in demonstration of the Spirit, and of power: The Phrase, 2 Cor. 3. 6. Is, He hath made us able Ministers of the Spirit. The words in that Text are indeed, Ministers of the New-Testament, but it follows in the same Verse, not of the Letter, but of the Spirit. And this new Testament, or the Gospel (says the Apostle, v. 3.) Is Ministred by us with the Spirit of the Living God. Our Abilities lye in our being made more or less Instruments, by whom the Holy Ghost is pleased to Communicate himself: Acts 11. 24. 'Tis said, Barnabas was a good Man, and full of the Holy Ghost, in his own Person; and much People was added to the Lord: A Preacher in the Primitive Language is termed, He that Ministreth the Spirit: Gal. 3. 2, 5. And therefore value Ministries by this; and let Ministers seek to be filled with the Holy Spirit. 'Tis still prefaced of their Preaching, such or such an one was filled with the Holy Ghost, and spake; as Acts 4. 8. and Acts 2. 3, 4.

C H A P. V.

His Operations in every part, and Member of the Church, and Body of Christ.

IT is next to be considered what the Holy Ghost doth in every part, and Member of this Body of Christ, the Church. What he doth for every particular Saint : For look what he is to, and in the the Church Universal, that he is first unto, and in, every Saint in particular ; for it is the particular individual Saint, that makes up the Church Universal ; even as Reason is first, and principally in every particular, and individual Man ; and by means thereof it is that Reason is found, and so abounds in a Body, or Assembly of Men : They meeting together every one severally brings a Portion of it with him, thereunto ; so as the main of his Work lyes and consists in what he doth in and to every Member And when he falls upon Assemblies of Saints as met, yet 'tis so as he falls on the whole, by visiting the particular Souls so Assembled, and out of respect unto each single Soul ; as when the Rain falls upon a Field of Corn, it falls upon the whole for every particular Blades sake : Watering every stalk at it's Root, and so all grow up together. Hence therefore Acts 2. where the fulfilling of those Promises made in the 14th and 15th Chapters of John, were in the first fruits of them accomplished, It is expressly indigitated that the Spirit sate upon each of them. v. 3. And they were all, (that is every one of them) filled with the Holy Ghost ; As Organ Pipes use to be with the common blast of the Bellows, that breathes wind into them, though by the difference of the Pipes there is a differing Sound. And thus the Holy Ghost doth as one Spirit inform and inspire the whole Body of Christ, as the Soul doth the whole Body of a Man. Eph. 4. 4. There is one Body and one Spirit, and the Spirit is the same in every Member. Now consider with your selves, if there were but one common Soul (as some have feigned to be in the System of the World) which acted, and enliven'd every Man and Thing in the World ; you would acknowledge that it must be a mighty, vast, and burthensome work, which is incumbent upon that great Soul, (whatever it were) and which it undergoes every Moment. But thus it is in reality with this great Spirit, the Soul of the whole Church, who both informs and enliveneth the whole, and every Member of it.

What therefore is next to be considered, is the Activity of this Holy Spirit upon us, and in working in us.

First, In General, He worketh no less than ALL that is wrought, 1 Cor. 12. 11. But ALL these WORKETH that one and self same Spirit, dividing to every Man severally as he will. As of Christ, who is the Word, it is said in the point of the first Creation. (John 1. 3.) That without him there was not any thing made, that was made : So of the Spirit in this New-Creation, we may say, that without him there is not any thing wrought in us, that is wrought.

But let us consider, Particularly his Works.

1. In Regeneration, which is his prime work in us.

1. He is the Author of all the Principles or Habits of Grace, of that whole New Creature, of that Workmanship created to good works, the Spiritual Man, which is called Spirit; that DIVINE Nature, which is the Mass and Lump of all things pertaining to Life and Godliness, that which is born of the Spirit, John 3. 6. The Image of Christ, which is stiled Christ formed in us Gal. 4. 19. That Divine Nature is the Image, drawn: But who is the immediate Former, the Limner? It is the Spirit of God, 2 Cor. 3. last. We are changed into the same Image, from Glory to Glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. And that place shews, that not only the first draught of that Image, is of his drawing, the ground-colours; but all the additional lines that follows after, to perfect it all along, from one end of the Work to other: For, he attributes that continual change wrought after Conversion in every degree of it, from Glory to Glory, unto this Spirit. And therein he so speaks of himself and these believing Corinthians, ye all Believers. We are thus changed all along by beholding, &c. All the changes into that Image, are by the Spirit of the Lord: No hand hath Skill or Power to add to this Work; none able to mingle colours Orient and Lively enough, but He. In the same Chapter the believing Corinthians are declared to be the Epistle of Christ, so far as they were, or shewed themselves Christians in reality: And Christ and his Graces are the perfect Original and Exemplar, and these Corinthians, so far as they had advanced in Christianity, were for Essential parts the intire Copy, which in some degree, does express to the Life, that Original; And there is not a letter or tittle added in the Copy, which is not found in him. 2 Cor. 3. 3. For ye are manifestly declared to be the Epistle of Christ ministered (indeed says the Apostle) by us (as the Pens) but written with the Spirit of the living God; Not with Ink, nor in Tables of stone, but in fleshy Tables of the Heart. Unto the draught of the least line of which, no Art or Pencil of Man can reach; or hath Colours Orient enough, to write it: For, all and every tittle, every stroke; is no other than an inward living disposition of Heart, like unto the Divine Life and Nature of Christ, the Son of the Living God; and therefore requires the Living Power of the Spirit of the living God, (as he is there stiled) to concur to the Creating of it. Psal. 51. 10, 11. Create in me a clean Heart, O God, and renew a right Spirit within me: Cast me not away from thy presence, and take not thy Holy Spirit from me. For as he vouchsafes to become the Ink, so he bears the part of the Hand; too, of a ready Writer. The Spirit is the finger of God (Mat. 12. 28. compared with Luke 11. 20.) the sole Artist that guides those Pens that cast this Ink, as there also (in v. 6.) it follows: God hath made us able Ministers of the New Testament; not of the Letter; (for even that New-Testament, hath also Letter to Men unregenerate; and is but the dispensation of a Notion) But, of the Spirit, or Power.

Let us go over the particular Actings of the Soul, which are as a drawing out of those created Principles, whether at or in our first Conversion or afterwards; and we shall find that each, and every particular thereof, are attributed to this Spirit.

1. Hast thou seen thy Sinful Condition, and been humbled, as to Hell, for it? It is the Spirit's proper work, for which He was sent. Thus says Christ, John 16. 8. When He is come, He shall convince the World of Sin. And He says it to His Apostles, when He was to send them into the World, to Convert Men. And this is the first work of the Three there rehearsed, that the Holy Spirit be- ginneth with, in Conversion; viz. A Conviction of a state of Sin and Unbelief: As it follows, Of Sin, because they believed not on Me, and consequently, of Damnation, as having lived without God and Christ in the World. and this work, though it may seem too low for Him; yet He is pleased to bear a title from it, and is termed a Spirit of Bondage to us, as causing us to see our bondage to Sin, and Death, and Hell. Rom. 8. 15. For ye have not received the Spirit of bondage again to fear: But ye have received the Spirit of Adoption, whereby we cry Abba Father. It is one and the same Spirit, there spoken of, in respect of two contrary operations, who hath the title there of both. It is the Holy Ghost who is that Spirit of Adoption there spoken of, whereby we (afterwards) cry Abba Father. This you may also see, Gal. 4. 6. and in the next v. 16. of that Rom. 8.

It is the Spirit who also witnesseth to us, that we are the Sons of God; and by the opposition it will follow, that if the Holy Ghost be the Spirit of Adoption spoken of, that He also was that Spirit of bondage; inasmuch as He doth discover to us our bondage; even as He is termed the Spirit of Adoption, because He testifies our Sonship. And the discovery of this our Bondage is an Infinite favour; For, do not the Great and Wise ones of the World, go hoodwink'd quick to Hell in a moment; and know not whether they are going, until they are there? And of thy self, thou couldest never have been thoroughly convinced of that; for the heart is deceitful above measure, who can know it? None without the light of this Spirit. For it is the Spirituality of the Law, whereby He instructs Men to know Wisdom in the hidden point of their corrupt Nature, as David, confessing it, speaks, Psal. 51. 5. and 6. verses compared together, Behold I was shapen in Iniquity; and in Sin did my Mother conceive me. Behold thou desirest truth in the inward parts; and in the HIDDEN PART thou shalt make ME TO KNOW WISDOM. And without the Light of which Law, the same David likewise confesseth, Psal. 19. 12. Who can understand his errors? Cleanse thou me from secret faults. By which secret Sins, He understands the immediate ebullitions of corrupt Nature. And it is HE that searcheth the Deep things of God, 1 Cor. 2. 10. The Hidden Wisdom v. 7. Hid in God, Ephes. 3. 9. and reveals it to us, v. 5. It is HE, the same Spirit, that searcheth the Deep Deceitfulness of Mens Hearts, and reveals it to them, which David called Wisdom in the Hidden Part. And it is THOU (says he) to God, That makest me to know it; that is, thou by thy Spirit who knowest all things, 1 Cor. 2. 10. And this for Him to Vouchsafe to doe for Him, to take the same pains to do it; as ever Mother or Schoolmaster took to teach a Child from his Alphabet to read, is an act of Infinite Grace. It is HE that gives thee EYES to see, and an Heart to Understand, who holds the Candle to thee, and points with his Finger to every Sin. Let us all consider the Unpleasingsness of this work, which were it not that it is necessary for his saving thee, He who is the Holy Spirit, would never rake into such foul and filthy Jakes and Dunghills of Lusts and By-ends, Unbelief and Presumptions: This must needs be a Loathsome work to him, by reason of the objects He is exercised in, and tedious in it self. And this is the entrance into Conversion

It is this Spirit which works Repentance upon this discovery of Sin, and turns our hearts from Sin to God effectually. John the Baptist came Preaching the Baptism of Repentance for the remission of Sins. Now by what, or whose power was it, that repentance was wrought in the Hearts of Multitudes that were his hearers? It was the Holy Spirit, He shall come, (says the Prophet) in the Spirit and Power of Elias, Mal. 4. 6. The Spirit of Elias was the Holy Ghost, resting on him, (2 Kings 2. 15.) as He did on the Baptist, Luke 1. 15. He shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his Mothers Womb. And it is spoken to signify the Power that should accompany his Ministry, to work repentance, as it follows in the next verse; And many of the Children of Israel shall be turn to the Lord his God. And thereupon it is, that this Prophecy of Malachy's is alledged, v. 17. He shall come in the Spirit and Power of Elias, and turn the hearts of the disobedient to the Wisdom of the Just. So as that which is spoken of Paul's Ministry among the Thessalonians, 1 Thes. 1. 5. that it came not in Word only, but in Power, and in the Holy Ghost, might (though in a lower degree) be said of his. And yet the first and eminent effect of his Ministry was seen in the working of Repentance as 'tis often said, in Acts 13. and 19. Chapters. It may likewise be observed, as serving to this purpose, that when Christ gave that new Commission to his Apostles, to Preach Repentance in his Name, unto all Nations, for the Remission, of Sins, (as in Luke 24. 40. He withal renews The Promise of the Father, which was the Holy Ghost, v. 45. Behold I send the Promise of my Father upon you. And why is that annexed to the former, as the Preface thereto, [And behold] shews, but because the giving of the Holy Ghost, even after Christ's Ascension was to work Repentance in Mans Hearts by that their preaching, yea and he commands them (as with a caution, in the following words), that they should tarry in the City of Jerusalem, until they were endued with power from on high. With Book I. out whom, and the power of whom, their Preaching Repentance would have had no efficacy at all, to move Men to turn unto God; but through whose Operation God gave Israel, Acts 5. 31, 32. Yea and the Gentiles, Repentance unto life, Acts 11. 18.

3. The work of Faith, is of his Operation; and therefore he is styled, The Spirit of Faith, 2 Cor. 4. 13. And the same Spirit that wrought Faith in the New-Testament, is said to have done it in the Old, as that place shews; 2 Cor. 4. 13. We having the same Spirit of Faith, &c. The same which David, and they in the Old Testament had. It is therefore also, that to be full of the Holy Ghost and of Faith, are joyned; Acts 6. 5. Stephen a Man full of Faith, and of the Holy Ghost: Also Barnabas is said to be a Man full of the Holy Ghost, and of Faith, Acts. 11. 24.

Let us view some special Acts of Faith, and see how the Working of them is ascribed to the Holy Ghost.

I. He gave thee A Spiritual sight of Christ, and God's Free-Grace, which drew thy Heart unto them.

1. He gave thee a sight of God's Free-Grace; when thou hadst seen thy sins, and thy undone condition, and thy Heart was thrown off the Hinges of thy former hopes on Self-Righteousness, and the Bladders of Presumptions upon God's Mercy upon false grounds, pricked and fallen; and thou wert left utterly at the loss, and knewest not what to do, to be saved: Who was it opened to thee the first door of Hope (Hosea 2.) and gave thee the first kenn, hint and glimpse, of Grace and Mercy; and that God would abundantly and freely Pardon thee, if thou wouldst seek him and ply thy self to him? Who was it then that laid before thee that Allsufficient Righteousness of Faith; and that did set thy Heart on work to seek it? Even the good Spirit, who is therefore called The Spirit of Grace and Supplication, Zach. 12. 10. He became a Spirit of Grace, in making a discovery of that Rich and Free-Grace in God's Heart to be inclining towards thee, and therewith became the Spirit of Supplication in thee, inflaming thee, as a Condemned Man for Life, to seek after that Grace and Pardoning Mercy in God. And from thence he led thee to the Cross of Christ, and made and set such a lively Picture of Him, as Crucified before thine Eyes, (Gal. 3. 1.) as all Angels and Men could never have pourtrayed, no more, yea, infinitely far less than they can the Sun. 'Twas HE, the same Spirit of Grace, that did it; and so it follows Zachary 12. 10. And they shall look upon him whom they have pierced. Thus also, John 16. 8. 'tis said, When He is come, he shall convince the World of Righteousness; (which Christ there enumerates, as the Spirit's second Work, in calling us) even of that Allsufficient Righteousness of Christ, offered up for satisfaction to the Father; Who was made sin, that we might be made the Righteousness of God in him. And when the word of Faith founded in thy Heart and Ears; thou hadst not eyes to see it, Therefore This Fountain for sin and uncleanness to wash in, must be OPENED (as 'tis said Zach. 13. 1.) Or Men descry it not. Thou wert ready to Perish for thirst, as Hagar was, Gen. 21. and lifted up thy Voice and Weptst: But as God opened her Eyes and she saw a Well (v. 19.) just by her: So did the Spirit Thine, to spy out Christ and His Righteousness, which is hid unto the World: As I heard one say, on his Death-Bed, Oh! Where had I been, if I had not spied out Christ! It was this Spirit of Grace who caused thee to look towards Him, and first set thy Eyes and Heart to see Him, and look on him that was pierced, as all that are saved should be brought to do, as they did on the Brazen Serpent, John 3. 14, 15.

2. When thou didst find (being come to this Fountain) that the Well was deep, and thou hadst not wherewith to draw; and while thou wert but looking down into it, with a longing Eye after it; but couldest not reach into it, to wash thy self in it; but layest as that poor impotent Man did at the Pool (utterly without strength, as Rom. 5.) to have stept in: It was then the Holy Ghost Sprinkled of it upon thy Heart, and caused thine Iniquity to pass away. (1 Pet. 1. 2.) Sancti-

Sanctification of the Spirit, and sprinkling of the Blood of Jesus Christ, The Blood indeed is the Blood of Jesus, but the sprinkling, (in that place) is attributed to the Spirit, as well as Obedience. 'Twas Christ shed that Blood, (it is therefore there called the Blood of Jesus Christ) but it is the Spirit that sprinkleth it, and he sprinkleth it with both hands, on thy Heart, to wash away thy spots; and therefore in v. 22. they are said to have purified their Souls in Obeying the truth, through the Spirit: Which is spoken of the Obedience of Faith for Justification, as well as Sanctification; as the parallel words of the same Apostle, in Acts 15. 8, 9. compared, shew; God giving unto them the Holy Ghost, even as He did to us, and put no difference between us and them, purifying their Hearts by Faith. And in 1 Cor. 6. 11. Justification, as well as Sanctification, is attributed to the Spirit; But ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the Name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God: But ye are washed, that's the general; but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified (two distinct Benefits,) Justify'd in the Name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God: Both of these are by both Christ, and the Spirit; as Justification is in the Name of the Lord Jesus, so is Sanctification too; and by the like Reason they were both Justified by the Spirit of our God. It is Jesus Christ's Name affords the Merit and Vertue for both, but the Spirit is the Applier of them, and all others Blessings.

3. And when thou hadst been brought to close with Christ, for Justification and Righteousness, Who was it brought thee to the Father, to be justified by him also, (who Justifies the Ungodly, Rom. 4. 5.) and who gave thee access to him, when thou stoodest trembling, not daring to approach to a Consuming Fire, and Everlasting Burnings? It is through Christ, we have access (Manuduction) by one Spirit unto the Father, Eph. 2. 18. 'Tis both through Christ, and by the Spirit, who leads us, as well as Christ: And indeed, Christ leads us to the Father (as it were) with one hand, and the Holy Ghost by the other: Yea 'twas this Spirit that taught thee to call God Father, (Rom. 8. 15. Gal. 4. 6.) and therewith to seek Adoption from him.

4. When thou art once justified by Faith, and hast that Righteousness imputed to thee, who is it hath hitherto kept, and continues to keep thine Heart fixedly to wait for, and hold to that Righteousness alone for thy Salvation? And who is it with-holds thee from betaking thy self to any other, for Justification? Who settles thy hopes solely on it? 'Tis even this Spirit, Gal. 5. 5. For we through the Spirit, wait for the hope of Righteousness by Faith. Justification by Faith, (as we know) is the eminent Subject of that Epistle; and these words come in, in the midst of many other lesser additional perswasives, which he useth last, after the Doctrinal Arguments in the former Chapters, tending all to this, that they should stand fast in that Liberty which v. 1. of this Chapter begins with, and which the Righteousness of Christ endows us with; and that they should renounce that of Works in the point of Justification.

We, says he, that is the generality of Believers, Jew and Gentile, of weak and strong Faith, we all do steer this way; and therefore you that turn aside to the works of the Law, for your Justification, do sever your selves from the Faith common to the Church. With which accords that of the Apostle Peter, 2 Pet. 1. 1. To them that have obtained like precious Faith with us (Apostles, namely through the Righteousness 'er δικαιοσύνη) and of God our Saviour Jesus Christ. This was the true and common Faith of Apostles, and all in those times.

Do wait (says he) that is, we not only did rely upon that Righteousness wholly for our first Justification, (as the Papists distinguish) being necessitated unto that alone then, because as then, we had no other works to rely upon, but of Nature, and Unregeneracy (which upon Conversion are discovered to be Dead works) But ever since we abide by it, and depend upon that alone, for our Justification afterward, and that now, when we have other manner of works of true Holiness and Sincerity renewed in us, and which encrease more and more in us; which (if any works could or might) would intice us over to join them with Christ, as a ground of our Confidence for Justification: But we are immoveably constant unto this Righteousness by Faith, and the Hope that is from it, for time to come, and this continually; all along the remainder of our Lives. Do wait, (says he) For the Hope of the Righteousness by Faith. Those words [Of Righteousness by Faith] are a distinction, severing it from that of Works, and is an indigitation that he meant that to be the Righteousness, which had been the Subject of his Discourse. For otherwise, that word [We wait] did sufficiently import that by Faith they were Expectants of it, without that addition.

Those words, For the Hope of Righteousness, are an extensive Speech, and spoken in many Respects, especially Three.

1. It Respects a waiting for Justification still to come upon us, from that Righteousness. Hope is of what is yet to come; and we not only lay hold on that Righteousness to be justified by it at present, but we wait for the hope of Justification by it for ever: For, we are to be Justified continually all along the remainder of our Lives; for it is Actus continuus or perpetuus; and therefore our hopes of Justification are to be continued and kept up, and we depend wholly on that Righteousness which is by Faith, as well when we were Converted at first, or do at this day. It is called an Everlasting Righteousness, (Dan. 9. 24.) And it is but one and the same Righteousness first and last, which we wait for.

2. We wait for that Eternal Life, (which is frequently termed our Hope, and the Hope of Glory) both after Death, and at the day of Judgment, as the conjunct consequent of this Righteousness; for Glory is an Inheritance entailed upon that Righteousness of Justification, as the Holy Apostle informs us, Tit. 3. 7. That being Justified by his Grace, we should be made heirs according to the Hopes of Eternal Life: And at that day it is that Justification and Forgiveness of Sins is with the Solemnity of with those words (Come ye and inherit, &c.) finally to be pronounced, and admision thereupon is to be given into Eternal Glory.

3. Among the Persons here expressed by the Word We, whose example he presseth upon these unsetled Galatians, it falls out, that there are true Believers who have sought God much and long, for the Justification by Faith thro' Christ's Righteousness, and the Assurance of it; and God hath been pleased to defer the Manifestation of it to their Souls. And there were others that had obtained an assurance of it, in some good degree, and yet either thro' sins renewed, and other sad and dark Temptations, have been weakened in their Faith about it. And in that case, there are other ways for Relief and Comfort, besides this of the Righteousness of Faith, that are ready to offer themselves unto such Souls; or otherwise are apt to faint in waiting (as the Psalmist speaks of himself) and to have their Souls made sick, (as Solomon speaks of Hope deferred) and are ready to grow weary, and give over waiting for the Lord any longer. Now in such a case, who is it that giveth those poor Souls (who make the greatest Number of Believers) Patience of hope to wait? (Lam. 3. 29.) He putteth his Mouth in the Dust, if so be, there may be Hope) and causeth them to wait, (as there it is also said) and causeth them to wait on till God shall reveal himself to their Souls? (which is the thing I cited this place for, and have opened as I have done) It is even the Spirit. And for his great Honour, it is added by the Apostle, We, T H R O' T H E S P I R I T wait. It is one of his greatest Works in us, to hold our Hearts constantly fixed to this Righteousness, and to settle our whole Expectation upon it, and to continue so to do, that we may look unto no other Righteousness for Justification and Salvation. These Galatians having at their first calling embraced Christ nakedly, and him alone, for Justification as v. 7. and 8. insinuates, Ye did run well, (says he) who did hinder you? That ye should not obey the truth: This persuasion cometh not of him that Calleth you. One true Cause that so many of them afterward had fallen to the Doctrine of Works, was, That they would not wait by pure Faith; (at which, this place also glanceth) They would see something in themselves, as a ground of a Believing on Christ; and so had recourse to themselves, to their own Doings and Actings, for a Foundation of it; at least to joyn them in Commission with Christ to justify them. A new Convert in Christianity, such an one especially, is in a great danger of thus Diverting; For the Spirit that is within us, would of it self go that way, unless powerfully detained from it, by this other Blessed Spirit in us. The Law is engrafted engrafted in every Man by Nature; and was in pure Nature of Innocency, which knew no other way for Justification, but by a Man's own Righteousness, and it was the Law of Nature to be thereby Justified. And this new Nature that is begotten in a Christian, is, in the ground work of it, materially a Conformity to the same Law; and the Law is continued under Grace to be a Tutor to instruct it how to walk in truth of Holiness. And hence the Heart is apt to listen to the other dictates of it even in the point of Justification also. And again it is Man's own Righteousness, which Paul after many Years Experience of the Righteousness of Faith, was yet by reason of the propensity of nature to it, afraid to be found in, Phil. 3. And the dispositions of Righteousness that are renewed in us, and the Duties we perform, do often offer their help to supply the room of Faith, giving us confidence, ere Christ comes. And Christ to try us, stays often long (as Samuel did his coming to Saul) ere he reveals himself. And as Abraham, waiting long for a Child, turned aside to Hagar; so doe we to works. Now in all these hazards who took thee by the Hand and taught thee the way of sheer Faith, and then afterward the way of bare waiting upon God? Who instructed thee by a strong hand, and would not suffer thee to go in the way of the Law, but strengthened and secretly supported thy Spirit in waiting till God should rain down Righteousness, as the Prophet speaks? It was this good Spirit; and nothing else could or had been able to have done it in thee, but that Spirit who mov'd on the Chaos when it was darkness, and but one step from nothing, and newly come out of nothing, and ready to return unto nothing again: And who by his Almighty Power upheld, hatch'd, and supported it from falling into nothing. Gen. 1. It is the same good Spirit who inliveneth, and inspiriteth such a Soul in its Confessions. It was he who forster'd, and maintain'd, and kept up this resolved purpose in thy Heart, to remain comfortless for ever; otherwise than by such comforts as Christ, and his Righteousness should afford thee. And tho' thou didst vehemently hunger, and thirst after Righteousness of Justification, as well as of Sanctification, yet thou wouldst have starv'd, rather than have liv'd upon thy own Bread; that is, have trusted to thine own Righteousness, and none but Christ, and his Righteousness, who is the Lord our Righteousness, and his alone, was it would satisfy thee; yea, that none else should, was the fixed Resolve of thy Heart. It is the Spirit guides and leads thee thus v. 18. of this 5th Chap. If ye be led by the Spirit, ye are not under the law; which is spoken in point of Justification. He took thee by the hand, and gently led thee the right way therein, as well as (according to what is spoken in respect of Sanctification) he led thee to walk Holily. The Spirit is the Leader and Conductor in both, as the coherence with his former and his immediate foregoing discourse do shew, and doe suit this of these works to be the Scope of these words in common to either.

5. When thou didst attain unto joy and peace in believing, tho' Christ was the Peace-maker, yet Who was the Peace-bringer? It was the Holy Ghost; Rom. 15. 13. Now, the God of hope fill you with ALL JOY AND PEACE IN BELIEVING, that ye may abound in hope through the POWER OF THE HOLY GHOST. All that joy unspeakable and full of Glory, 1 Pet. 1. 8. that peace which passeth all understanding Phil. 4. 7. whereby we Glory in tribulation Rom. 5. 2. and are more than Conquerours, Rom. 8. 37. to whom is it to be ascribed? Whose operation is it? The Holy Ghost's: It is particularly appropriated to him; and therefore it is stiled Joy in the Holy Ghost. Rom. 14. 17. The Kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but Righteousness, and Peace, and JOY IN THE HOLY GHOST. As God's Kingdom consists of these things, so this joy is a peculiar belonging to his Spirit; it is his jurisdiction, it is stiled Joy in the Holy Ghost; when yet our Joy is in God and in Christ objectively, yet in the Holy Ghost efficiently, which is therefore elsewhere stiled, The joy of the Holy Ghost. So 1 Thess. 1. 5. And the consolations we have, are called The comforts of the Holy Ghost. Acts. 9. 31. As being the Author and Diffuser of them into our Hearts, &c. In which sense, our Praying is in like manner said to be In the Holy Ghost (Jude. v. 20) as the Inditer of our prayers, Rom. 8. And it is also thus termed joy in the Holy Ghost, by way of a Superlative Eminency, in difference from all other joys, which have ever entred into the heart of man: and in compare to which, all other joys are but as the Crackling of thorns, the fewel they are fed with being earthy and terrene. It is a Joy not Book I. as the World giveth (saith Christ, speaking of his peace.) And it therefore hath the peculiar character of glorious Joy, as being Joy of another kind, and also unspeak-able, for degrees and abundance; More Joy than when their Corn and Wine encreasing never so much afforded, Ps. 4. 7. We use to distinguish things that are Excellent by joyning the name of the Workman, Author, or Efficient, when in his Workmanship he transcendeth all other Artists; And so it is in this, All the Sweet-meats of Heaven, (and this Joy is the taste of the hidden Manna) He hath the keeping and Delivery of them out, where, and when He will; And not only so, but He Tempers them, and all the Cordials out of God the Fathers love, and Christ's heart and blood, and mingleth His own love with Theirs; and puts them into our hearts, conveying them in Promises of the Word; and fitly and seasonably applyes them, and reserves them for us as we need. And though Christ bequeatheth that Peace and Joy as His last Legacy, He being the Purchaser of it by his death; yet it is the Holy Ghost that is His Administrator and Executor of it, to perform it, and execute His will. He it is that maketh known to us that love which hath lain hid in the heart of God the Father towards a particular Soul in choosing him at first, and then giving him to Christ, and giving His Son to dye for him. It is he who displays that love which is laid out in infinite Wisdom, contriving and ordering all about every man's particular Salvation who is Saved. 'Tis He likewise that takes of Christ's, and shews, and brings home His love in Giving Himself for every such Soul, and causeth it to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge; which he did vouchsafe to our Apostle; who loved me (says he) and gave himself for me, Gal. 2. 20. He shews these things (as Christ's word is) and tells over the stories of them, in a way of Application and Comfort to a Man's own heart in particular; and withal, lets in the taste of them; and makes the loves of all the Three pass thorow and thorow us, even through our very inwards; as Oyl, that soaks into the Bones, and refresheth the Marrow within them, even this Oyl of Gladness, which is purely of his making. And He gives an immediate taste of that love fresh out of the Heart of God and Christ, and causeth every Faculty, in its kind, to taste how good the Lord is. He gives us a Relish of the Sweetness, of the Deliciousness of Loves; Loves, in the plural, as it is expressed in Cant. 5. 1.

 which we are made abundantly to drink and taste of, as it is said Can. 5. 1. In Rom. 5.
 5. you have it thus expressed, Hope maketh not ashamed, because the Love of God is shed abroad in our Hearts, by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto us. Given us He had been afore, to endow us with Justifying Faith, and all those Glorious Fruits of it, which he setly had enumerated: As Peace with God, v. 1. Access by Faith into Grace, v. 2. Rejoycing in Hope of the Glory of God, Glorying in Tribulations; and Patience working Experience; and Experience Hope: And that Hope rising up, in the End, to a steadiness, solidity, and constancy, as never to be confounded, no, not in a Man's own Apprehension or Fears; and this hope is wrought by shedding the love of God abroad in the Heart, so as never to be violated or temerated by prevailing doubtings any more. And this he reckons last, as the sum, the Complement of all the foregoing Privileges. And this last, as well as all those other, are the Effects of the Spirit given us; for he Working those other first, and then this of shedding the Love of God, over and above. Now that wherein this love of God and Christ, materially or objectively doth consist; the Apostle tells us in the following 6, 7, and 8 verses, that God himself hath com- mended his Love to us, that when we were Enemies, Christ dyed for us; than which there cannot be an higher strain or note that Love could reach unto. Yet the Coherence of this place shews, that if the material part of this love should be decla-ed in words never so illustriously, without the power of the Holy Ghost accompanying it; and his shedding that Love abroad in the Heart; yea, if these very words were used, whereby God Himself commends His Love by the Holy Ghost Himself, as the Penman of them; yea, if these words were Preached and enlarged upon by the Apostles themselves; ay and by all the Angels in Heaven too (if they were sent by God to do it) yet they would avail nothing upon our Hearts, to affect them therewith, without a Transcendant operation of this blessed Spirit, whose Work and Office is to be the Comforter. Yea further, where this Holy Spirit doth

doth by this, and such like words as these, setting forth the love of God and Christ, perfume and bedew the Souls of Believers, in his ordinary Dispensation of Faith, with the Consolations of the Almighty; more or less; yet the Text in Rom. 5. 5. means and intends, by that shedding abroad God's Love, an higher Communication of the Love of God, than those more commonly vouchsafed. And as there is promised a pouring forth of this Spirit, so there is a pouring forth Joy in the Holy Ghost, more extraordinary; which in its measure doth exceed the dispensings by the ordinary Light of Faith Believers are accustomed unto. And the reason for this latter dispensation, may be resolved into this, That this Holy Spirit searching the deep things of God, and knowing the Height, Depth, Breadth, and Length, of this Love, to the extreamest dimensions of it; and coming immediately upon Mens Souls, from out of the Heart of God and Christ, is enabled from thence to bring this their love, warm immediately out of their Hearts; and convey it into ours; and give us a true and native original taste of and from the things themselves, and the Sweetness thereof. And so he sheds it abroad (as the word here is) into every chink and Cranny of the Soul, thirsting after this Love, and brings it as fresh as the Mothers milk comes out of the dugg into the Child's Mouth or Stomach; and this Love so shed into us by the Holy Spirit, is digested or turned into Love in us, and returned on our parts towards God and Christ again. This is another manner of thing, than all the words that ever have been or can be uttered, yea, though penned by the Holy Ghost himself, speaking the greatest things that can be uttered of this love, and enlarging our minds to the most extensive conceptions of the dimensions of this love, so far as Words, or Arguments by words, will avail to do it, tho' uttered by the Tongues of Men or Angels. But, when the Spirit by the Word, (for I speak not of Revelations without that Word, or besides it) shall add his condiment and seasoning to that Love of God set forth in the Word, with diffusing Joy which passeth Understanding, This doth infinitely surpass even such Joys, as he doth sometimes unto some Saints vouchsafe.

6. If we consider all the Fellowship and Communion we have with the Persons of the Father, and the Son, we shall find that this Holy Spirit is the Introducer of us into it; and the Manager and Transactor of it in us, and for Them with us. Our Fellowship is with the Father and with the Son. (1 John. 1. 3.) By means of which it is, that our Joy mention'd is a full joy, v. 4. And all this Fellowship is through the help and manifestations of the Holy Ghost; Phil. 2. 1. If there be any Comfort in Love; (which is peculiarly attributed to the Father) If any Fellowship of the Spirit, who communicates both these. This place seems to speak, in the matter of it, somewhat parallel to that of the same Apostle, 2 Cor. 13, 14. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the Communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Now it is the Love of the Father which ordained Christ, and Salvation for us; it is the Grace of Christ which works our Salvation by Redemption; as you read how Grace is in that sense and respect attributed unto Christ, 2 Cor, 8. 9. But yet it is the Holy Ghost imparts and conveys all things that the Father or Son hath. He takes them and reveals them to us, and so glorifies them both unto us, John 16. 14, 15. He shall glorify Me, said Christ, for he shall receive of Mine, and shall shew it unto you: All things that the Father hath, are mine, therefore said I, He shall take of mine, and shall shew it unto you. In saying, All that the Father hath, are mine; He doth plainly affirm, That it is the Spirit that shews all that is the Fathers to us, as well as Christ, and what is Christ's. And in that renowned place in the Gospel of John, where Christ promiseth, that He and his Father will come to us, and make their abode with us, and that he will manifest Himself to us, John 14. v. 21, 23. Yet in the v. 20. immediately foregoing, Christ says, A T T H A T D A Y ye shall know that I am in my Father, and you in Me, and I in you; [in that day] namely when he should give and send his Spirit; as by this verse, being compared with v. 16. appears. And therefore it is, that that fullness of Joy which ariseth from the Communion with these Persons, is termed, Joy in the Holy Ghost; (that is, tho' the Holy Ghost) and the Communion of the Holy Ghost, altho' the Objects of that Joy are the Love and Persons of the Father and Son.

Book 1. 7. All the Evidence; and Witnessing of all or any Grace wrought in us, (tho' not accompanied with joy unspeakable and full of Glory) as a Love in us to God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost; they are all of his Working, and from Him.

1. Do our own Consciences Witness to any eminent Holy Disposition that is written in our Hearts; such as the Apostle Professeth he found in his own Heart, even to a willingness to be accursed from Christ, for the Glory of God, and the Salvation of his own Countrey-men, the Jews? The evidence of this to his Conscience; was from the Holy Ghost; without whose Testimony joined to that of his Conscience, his Conscience would not have Witnessed it. Natural Conscience Witnesseth the things of the Law naturally in Man; Rom. 2. yet Gracious dispositions it cannot. Hear the Apostle himself speak of himself concerning this matter, Rom. 9. 1, 3. I speak the Truth in Christ, I lye not; MY CONSCIENCE ALSO BEARING ME WITNESS IN THE HOLY GHOST: I could wish that my self were accursed from Christ, for my Brethren, my Kinsmen according to the Flesh. When he says, My Conscience bearing me Witness in the Holy Ghost, he speaks it not only because the Holy Ghost was He that had wrought that Grace in him, but that in Point of his Conscience Witnessing of it, it was the Spirit who was the cause of that Witness. Conscience indeed was the faculty that was the substance that Witnessed this to his Soul; but it was in, (that is, from) the Holy Ghost, so testifying with it. And therefore, if that, or any other Grace in us, be evidenced to us, it is He that is the Eminent Witness, and causeth that Grace to speak so loud as to Witness it, Rom. 8. 16. The Spirit it self beareth Witness with our Spirit, that we are the Children of God. It may be read Witnesseth to our Spirit, and Witnesseth with our Spirit. And though Man hath a reflecting Faculty as a Man, which (1 Cor. 2.) the Apostle indigitates, None knoweth the things of a Man, but the Spirit that is in Man: Yet the discerning the things of God, and of His Supernatural Working in a Man, the Apostle in the same place attributes to the Spirit; as the Person who Works all, and makes all in us, and also reveals all that to us which He Worketh: He writes first all Graces in us, and then teacheth our Consciences to read His Hand Writing, which we could never do, without His light. In 1 John 4. v. 6, and 7. you read of Six Witnesses, Three in Heaven, and Three on Earth, who are Witnesses of Two things; 1. Christ to be the Son of God; 2. To Believers Hearts, of their own Salvation, as in v. 1. Whosoever Believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is born of God; which also is evident by comparing ver. 13. where both these two are put together, as the things Believers might know, through what He had Written in this Epistle, especially now last Written, in those immediate foregone verses. Now you find there in these 6 and 7 verses, that the Spirit, or the Holy Ghost, is mentioned in either Catalogue; First among the Witnesses in Heaven, The Father, the Word and the Holy Ghost; And yet again, this Spirit that is a Witness in Heaven, is yet numbred with those that bear Record on Earth too: verse 8. The Spirit, the Water and the Blood: And He, the First, and as the Principal of these on Earth, is set before Water and Blood. One, among other Reasons I have apprehended for this, is that He Efficiently is the Grand Witness, with those other Two on Earth, in their Witnessing; And that to whatsoever they bear their Testimony, this Spirit joyns with them in it, and brings home their Testimony into our Hearts; as without whom, and which, their Witness would be of no force; as, for example, If Christ's Blood, when believed on, Witnesseth to our Hearts, by giving our Hearts Ease and Peace; it is because this Spirit joyns with it in its Testimony. If Water, or the New Creature, (begotten of Water and this Spirit; the Holy Spirit, Working as Water in cleansing us) if that do testify to us, it is in virtue of the Holy Ghost's conjuncture with it, and irradiation of it, and 'tis that which gives its validity of Testimony to it, as Rom. 8. 16. He Witnesseth with our Spirits; that is, our Graces (or that which is Born of the Spirit which is Spirit) and in the same 1 John, 5, 6. the Apostle resolves all into this, as the foundation of the others Testimonies, It is the Spirit that beareth Witness, because the Spirit is Truth: 'Tis He therefore that bears the name of Witness, κατ' ἐξουσίαν as being the Spirit of Truth, as Christ also calls Him.

And

And truly in that, Rom. 8. where it is rendered, The Spirit Witnesseth with our Spirits, the Holy Ghost, in the Original, hath so composed the Words, that they Import His Witnessing to our Spirits, as well as with our Spirits; and that Witnessing with, hath a respect to the Witness of the other Two Persons, the Father and Christ; as with whom this Spirit should witness to our Spirits, they all three, the Witnesses in Heaven, conjoyning their Testimonies together, to persuade our Spirits, (that is our Souls and Graces in them) that we are the Children of God. And if so understood, then the witnessing both of the Father, and of Christ, unto our Salvation, is eminently attributed to the Spirit, who only is named, as also, in witnessing the truth by Christ, and the especial Honour thereof is given to him; which accords with that fore-cited speech of Christ, John 16. 14, 15. And thus, He is the Great Witnesser both of Heaven and of Earth, to this of our being the Sons of God.

VII. As thus in respect of evidencing our Graces to us, and his joyning with God the Father and Christ in their Testimonies also to us the Spirit doth the work so as to lead us into all T R U T H S of the Word, and Secrets of God whatever, which in this Life are revealed, it is, He whom God sends to discover and convince us of them all, 1 Cor. 2. 20. He searcheth all the deep things of God. He is the keeper of all those Archives of Eternity, and they are all committed to his custody, and he lets us into the view of them, and reveals what is revealed of them unto us, as He will. There is not a thing that God hath prepared for us that love Him, v. 9. (which is spoken of the hidden things of the Gospel. v. 7.) but he is the Manifester of it to one or other of the Saints; 'tis he leads into all Truth. 2 Tim. 1. 13. and 14. Hold fast the form of Sound Words, which is in Christ Jesus But alas, might they say, of our selves, we are apt to let them slip and leak out, (as Heb. 2. 1.) And to be carried away with every Wind of Doctrine, Eph. 4. (this we are prone to be) therefore he adds. v. 14. That good thing (so he calls the Truth of the Doctrine of wholesome words, for bonum & verum convertuntur,) Keep by the Holy Ghost, which dwelleth in us. Who also brings them home to our Remembrance, when we have forgotten them, John 14. 26.

And as these matters in point of Faith, and Assurance, and Joy, and all Communion with God the Father, and the Son, are Transacted by this Spirit, together with the Revelation of all Truths: So,

VIII. If we view all and the whole of the Work and Works of Sanctification, that are wrought in us, or proceed from us, it will appear that it is He that works them all in us, and for us. This is the third part of the Application of Salvation to us; according to that distribution which Christ makes, John 16. 8, 11. and which he attributes to the Spirit; when He is come, He shall convince the World of J U D G M E N T: That is, of true Holiness, Sanctification, and Reformation of Heart and Life; as in the Old Testament frequently; and in the New: That word Judgment is used, as Mat. 12. 20. That Christ shall bring forth Judgment to Victory, citing v. 18. out of the Old, viz. out of Isa. 42. 1. He shall shew Judgment to the Gentiles. And in respect of His working herein, he hath this denomination made appropriate to him, viz. A Spirit of Judgment, purging away the filth of Sin in his People, Isa. 4. 4. And Holiness is called the Sanctification of the Spirit, 1 Pet. 1. 2. And 2 Thes. 2. 13. And for this cause he bears the name of the Holy Spirit, as the Eminent Efficient of Holiness in us. And accordingly as Men have grown up into, and encreased more and more in Holiness, they have been said to be filled with the Holy Ghost, as Luke 1. 41. 'Tis said of Elizabeth the Mother, and her Child the Baptist; and his eminent Holiness is expressed by this, He shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his Mothers Womb. Luke 1. 15. And the same strain of Speech goes on in the New Testament, Acts 6. 3. Choose Men full of the Holy Ghost, and Wisdom. Of Barnabas, 'twas said A good Man, and full of the Holy Ghost: Acts 11. 28. and the super-excelling fulness and Eminency of Christs Graces, is set out by this measure, That He had the Spirit above measure, For this Spirit's indwelling in Him, was the Fountain and Standard of his infinitely transcending Holiness.

Let us go over the Several Particulars of that Work.

I. Habitual Holiness, and all the Principles of Holiness. I have shewn afore, that they are wholly of his operation; and this our Baptism (which is the Seal of Regeneration, or of the New Creature) doth signifie in a special manner: The letter of that word βαπτισμα, imports not simply to Wash, or to be washt; but to be Dyed also. It is also taken from the Dyers Fat, into which what Cloths are dipt, they carry away in them a new habitual tincture. The Holy Ghost takes a Man's Heart, and dyes it anew, changeth it. As a Cloth goes into the Fat of one colour, and comes out of it, of another: So is he who is born of the Spirit: He goes wholly Flesh, comes out Spirit in a good degree, which two are contrary, Gal. 5.

II. Mortification of Sin, and to the World, is ascribed to the Spirit, Rom. 8. 13. For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if ye, T H R O U G H T H E S P I R I T, do mortifie the deeds of the Body, ye shall live: 'Twas prophesied by Malachy, Mal. 2. 2, 3. That Christ coming after the Baptist, should purifie the Sons of Levi, by Fullers Soap, and the Refiners fire: Now who is that Refiners fire but this Spirit? As appears by comparing Isa. 4. 4. Where he is styled, The Spirit of Burning, and the Spirit of Judgment: The Spirit of Burning, consuming and purging out our Dross and Filth; and there also is the prophecy of Christ's coming to Baptize with the Holy Ghost and with fire, as the Baptist expounded it. (With the Holy Ghost as with Fire. It is spoken partly because what remaining filth his Baptism of Water had not cleansed out, Christ's Spirit, as fire, should do it. For Num. 31. 32. the Fire is made a stronger purifier than Water; and even of the Baptist himself, and his Ministry, (the Spirit of God accompanying it) it was foretold by Isaiab, Chap. 40. That the Glory and Beauty of the whole Creation should be blasted, and caused to fade and wither, as flowers of the Grass are, by a wind; in and to New Converts Hearts, and deadening their Souls, being deaden'd unto it, when the voice of the Cryer should come and Preach Repentance to the People; and the Glory of the Lord (Christ namely) should be revealed; The Grass withered and the Flower faded, (v. 7.) in such Men's Hearts as were savingly wrought upon by his voice and cry. And how came this to pass? 'Tis added, The Spirit of the Lord hath blown upon it. And the Apostle Peter expounding this Prophecy, says, That all Believers wrought upon by His and the Apostles Ministry, had purified their Souls, (1 Pet. 1. 22.) By the Preaching of the Gospel, and then referreth us unto this very place in Isaiab, Being Eern again, v. 23. For all Flesh is Grass, and the Glory thereof as the flower of Grass: The Grass withereth, and the Flower thereof falleth away; but the Word of the Lord endureth forever; and this is the Word which by the Gospel is Preached unto you. verse 24. and 25.

III. There is in Scripture ascrib'd to the Holy Ghost the implantation of all the contrary Graces which are so often compared to Flowers and the Gardens of them; and unto Trees in Orchards, and Beds of Spices, planted artificially by a Florist (which is an allusion the Holy Ghost delights to use in that Book of Canticles) the Fruits and Flowers whereof shall never fade, (as the Flower of grass doth) but grow up, and Flourish to eternal Life; which Flowers, &c. because planted in her Heart; the Spouse there calleth Her Garden [upon my Garden] As also Christ calls it his Garden, and both in that one Verse, Cant. 4. 16. which as appears by v. 12. was her own self. An inclosed Garden is my Sister, my Spouse, (says Christ of Her.) A Spring shut up, a Fountain sealed. And v. 13, & 14. Thy plants are an Orchard of Pomegranates, a Fountain of Gardens, a Well of living Waters, and streams from Lebanon; which is certainly an Enumeration of particular Graces in their distinction and Variety, if we knew how aptly to apply those Similitudes in each, to what is proper to each. But how ever it serves in general to instruct us, that there is such a variety of Graces in our Hearts, as here of Trees in the Spouses Heart, and that the Heart of every Saint is an Orchard to such spiritual Plants growing therein; and in like manner; A Garden to a like variety of flowers as in ver. 12. and various Graces are meant by either. And the planting and bringing ing forth. These are all ascribed to the Holy Spirit as Christ's chief Planter. Thus I understand that fore-cited, v. 12. A Garden inclosed, A Spring shut up, to intend, That she had two things inclosed in her Heart. Book I.

1. All sorts of Graces, planted as in a Garden, as the Effects.

2. The indwelling of the Spirit as the Spring and Producer of all these Flowers, and accordingly in ver. 15. he is said to be A Fountain of Gardens, a Well of living water, and stream from Lebanon. Now that Well of living Water is apparently the Spirit, John. 4. 14. But whosoever drinketh of the Water that I shall give him, shall never thirst; But the Water that I shall give him, shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life; Which is interpreted to be the Holy Ghost (John 7. 38, 39.) which comes as a spring from Lebanon, that is from that high Mountain, even from Heaven, from the Throne of God and of the Lamb, as Rev. 21. 1. And he shewed me a pure River of water of life, clear as Crystall, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb, which water-eth these Flowers. Which Well the Church hath in her belly, as Christ's word is, in that of John the Evangelist Ch. 7 38. And all these plants in Christ's Garden (which is the Soul of a Believer) are of the Spirit's bringing forth and Setting. For as the Earth watered with fructifying water, brings forth Plants, as at the first Creation: So the Soul, bedewed with the Spirit, brings forth Trees of Righteousness of the planting of the Lord, that He might be glorified, Isa. 61. 3. Which (as appears by comparing v. 1) is recorded as the effect of Christ's having this Spirit given him: The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, to preach the Gospel, whereof this is made the immediate effect, viz. the communicating the same Spirit unto His Members for this end, To plant in them Trees of Righteousness. Thus it is ascribed unto this Spirit, and ver. 11. of the same chap. it is added, For as the Earth bringeth forth her bud, and as the Garden causeth the things that are sown in it to bring forth, so the Lord God will cause Righteousness and Praise to spring forth before all Nations. In a word, he is styled the Spirit of Grace, Heb. 10. 29. as the eminent Efficient of all our Graces; and therefore, they that Apostatize, are said to do despite unto this Spirit, as He is the Efficient of all Graces and gracious Workings.

4. As the Planting, so the drawing them forth with into Act, both Bud and Fruit, and causing them to grow, is his work also.

1. The drawing them forth into Act, or the Acting of them; Or the causing them to shoot forth; is ascribed to him. He is that Wind, which blowing upon our Graces, causeth them to flow out, even as his blowing upon the Flower of the Grass, (as you hear'd out of Esay 40.) Withers and Mortifies the Flowers or Glories of this World, to New Converts. And this follows in the next words of the same chapter, Cant. 4. v. 16. Awake O North Wind, and come thou South, blow upon my Garden, says the Spouse; that the spices thereof may flow out: Let my Beloved come into his Garden, and eat his pleasant Fruits, There are two prayers in those words; The first to the Spirit, Come, thou South Wind and blow; and the second to Christ himself, Let my Beloved come into His Garden when it shall be thus blown upon. First, The Wind there apparently is, The Holy Ghost; Ezek, 37. 3. 14 verses. compared with 5. 6. As the Wind bloweth where it listeth, so is he that is born of the Spirit. The Spirit is a Quickening Wind, (the Breath of the living God and of Christ) who coming upon a man doth Regenerate him, and infuse a New Spirit into him; as Christ had there said: And after he is thus quickened, and born; A Soul new-born of the Spirit, then by blowing thereon, the same Spirit doth cause him to operate, and act, as such a New Creature; who is so high-born should in some measure do. Insomuch as all and the whole of him who is truly born again, is from this Spirit; Not only his first begetting but his after-actings; which Book I. which latter, Christ also involves, in saying, So is he that is born of the Spirit; supposing him first to have been begotten a-new.

If any shall object, That the Spirit is but One and the Same Spirit, viz. the Person, and how can he be termed both the North Wind and the South Wind, which are not only divers, but blow contrary ways? The answer is, 'Tis true, the Person of the Holy Ghost is one and the same Person, as in himself considered; but his being said to be a Wind, is in respect of His Operations upon us; and so His blasts may blow several ways; Not only in these two Points of the Compass, there mentioned, but several others; and in this respect He is said to be Seven Spirits (Rev. i. 7.) from whom Grace is there prayed for, as well as from Christ and the Father. And even the natural Wind in the Ayr is one and the same Wind, for the Substance of it, whilst yet it turneth it self about, as God pleaseth, unto several quarters, from North to South, &c. And this objection is preoccupied by the Apostle, 1 Cor. 12. 3, 4. Now there are Diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit; and so on, v. 6, 7, 8. and there are differences of administrations, &c. Now both these contrary Winds are needful, to cause the several Graces in Believers to flow forth; Come, says the Spouse, praying to this Spirit, come and blow upon my Garden, that the spices thereof may flow out. So then, the Spirits Operations upon those Graces, is the Blowing upon them; and their exerting that hidden virtue, or active power that lies latent in them, thro' the Excitement and Actings of the Holy Ghost, is that their Flowing forth: And it is as if she had said, I indeed have these Plants and Graces habitually rooted in me, by thee, O Holy and blessed Spirit; but I am utterly unable so much as to give forth the least Scent or virtue of them (which other Plants naturally do) without thy breathing on them, and Moving and Impregnating of them: yet even earthly Plants yield their fragrancy of themselves, yet more strongly and abundantly when the Wind drives them to and fro, and exhales the Scent out of them: But she in the sense of her utter inability, prays to the Spirit to come and influence her.

And from hence, by the way, we may observe an Instance of a Warrant to pray distinctly to the Person of the Spirit, as if it had been said by her, Awake, and, come, thou Holy Spirit. As likewise to pray distinctly to the Person of Christ; as she also doth in these next words, Let my Beloved come; and that is, Then be Thou also pleased to come and visit thy Garden, when first thy Spirit, sent by Thee, hath drawn out and educed from out of those Plants that are growing therein, those pleasant Savours so pleasing to Thee, which these my Graces, when thus acted by the Spirit, do afford. And indeed, the many former Prayers and Petitions ever and anon found up and down in this Book of the Canticles, do put it out of all question, that it is usefull for us thus to pray to each Person.

There is not so much as the least good thought, nor the least Bud which we with all our inherent Graces are able to bring forth, unless this Holy Spirit efficaciously blows upon us, 2 Cor. 3. 6. It is the Spirit (says he) who is ἐνομοποιεῖν, That quickens and gives life; and he speaks this of the Holy Spirit joyning with the Gospel, even The Spirit of the Living God, whom he had under that title mentioned afore, in v. 3. And that His Quickening relateth unto all and every thing of the Spirit of life within us, even unto the production of but One, a single individual One Action, though it also be but the least good thought; is expressly said in v. 5. not that we are sufficient of our selves to think any thing as of our selves; but our sufficiency is of God; that is, unless God (the Living God) by his Living Spirit (as in v. 3.) do form it in us; And although the Matter of a good thought were cast into our Minds, yet as Seed thrown into a Barren Soil, it would sow this in our hearts, it would instantly become a dead work, such as all the works of unregenerate men, are Heb. 6. 1. So that our eyes, should be fixed upon, and intirely ascribe all that is good in us, to this Spirit as the Author. And tho' we and our Wills do concur in in the acting also, yet He is the efficient of that concurrence in us causing us to do: Yea and is the cause of every degree of that goodness in our Actings, Dividing to every Man severally as he will, 1 Cor. 12. 11.

3. The Spirit produceth all the Spiritual Strength we receive, when our hearts are ready to be over-born with temptations, or a lust; Or when we want strength to do such or such a Work or Duty; to suffer, that we may be able to endure in such a trial. It is the Spirit gives strength to the Inner Man, (Ephes. 3. 16. compared with Coloss. 1. 10 & 11.) Like as the Spirit fell on Sampson, and gave him strength, who of himself was otherwise but as other Men. 'Twas He made Elias so bold and couragious, and the Prophet Amos after him, ch. 3. 8. (Truly says he) I am full of Power, by the Spirit of the Lord, and of Judgment, and of Might, to declare to Judah his Transgression, and to Israel his sin. The like He gave the Baptist to tell Herod of his Sin, which cost him his life: 'Twas because he came in the power and Spirit of Elias. Take the weakest heart that is; as weak as water, (as the Prophet speaks) and let the Spirit joyn with it, and Mingle Himself therewith, and it is too hard and strong for all the World; it will snap asunder Tentations, as Sampson did his withs. There is a Supply of the Spirit, Phil. 1 10. comes in with fresh forces, when we are near to a yeilding up the Fort, and being led Captive, and so he rescues and Delivers us. In all our walkings with God, He is our Guide and faithful Companion, to see to us and to keep us out of harms way. And often when we stumble, He puts under his hand, as the Psalmist's word is. And a little help keeps up a man that is falling or reeling; Or to recover him again when he is falling: And thus the Apostle seems to intend that speech, who helpeth our infirmities (Rom. 8.) And those infirmities there are not to be limited to the infirmities that belong to, and accompany our Prayers onely; but which accompany us in all our ordinary walkings. The word συνελαμβάνει supposeth it to be the case of a Weak Man in himself, who yet further hath a weight or a burden hanging on him, which presseth him down (as of our Corruptions, especially some, or such as are more proper to us; as the Apostle expresseth, Heb. 12.) who yet having a friend to accompany him in his Running the Race set before him (as there the Apostle's Allegory is) He perceiving the Weaklings aptness to sink under the weight, does continually relieve him; and not only shoares up, and sustains the Man; but himself takes the other end of his burden, (and the far heavier end) and so helps him to bear it, and go on a long with it. And this the Apostle expressly there attributes to the Spirit; and if so be, it chanceth that we fall, he is still at hand, a present help (as a present Help, as David says) to take us up; yea then when we fall into the Foulest Mire and Dirt, and grievously defile our selves, it is the Spirit that cleanseth us, according to that of the Apostle, 1 Pet. 1. 23. We through the Spirit purifie our selves: And according to that of David, Psal. 51. Create in me a clean Heart (after he had so foully fallen into Unclean-ness) and take not thy Holy Spirit from me, v. 10, 11. In this Case this Gracious Spirit, says not, (as the harsh Spirits of Man would say) Even lye there still, since you would needs fall, sprawling in your own Filth: Not so this good Spirit; but as if a Man (a Brother) be overtaken with a fault, Those that are Spiritual, are to take on them, to restore, and often do, restore such a Man in the Spirit of Meekness; How much more will and doth this Blessed Spirit; who is He that makes Spiritual, those that are such, and indues them with that Spirit of meekness, out of His own Dovelike Meekness, Restore such an one, and take care of him, for ever after, least he fall so again.

4. He is a Spirit of Counsel, powerfully Instructing and convincingly teaching how to act and walk, for He direct's us to set right steps, and to walk with a right foot; and thereby prevents us of many a sin, by seasonable Instruction set on upon our hearts with a strong hand, as Isa. 8. 11. For, as the same Prophet says, Isaiab 11. 2. He is the Spirit of Council and of Book I. the Might : 1. Of Counsel to direct : 2. Of Might, to Strengthen the Inner Man. Such He was to Christ the Head ; (of whom 'tis there spoken:) For instance, In that agony and (on the determination of which our Salvation depended) and conflict in the Garden, when he prayed, Let this Cup pass ; 'twas this good Spirit that counselled Him to dye : and in Psal. 16. 7. He blefseth God for it : I bless the Lord that hath given me counsel. 'Twas that Counsel that in that case caused his heart to say, Not My will, but Thine. When we are out of the way ; He recalls us, and is a voice behind us, saying, This is the way, walk in it ; and not only thus directs us, but taketh us by the Arms, and teacheth us to go ; Hosea 11. 3. Thy Spirit is good, lead me, says the Psalmist : Psal. 143. 10. And therefore it is an usual Phrase, in Rom. 8. and Gal. 4. Our being led by the Spirit. And not only so, as to direct and lead, but effectually to cause us to walk in his statutes and ways. For,

5. As He is a Spirit of Counsel to our Understanding part, so an Effectual Perswader, and Conductor of our Wills ; with Might (as was observed) working in us the Will and the Deed, according to his good Pleasure : For altho' the Will of a Man Regenerate is endowed with a new vital Principle of Spiritual Life ; so as in its willing and acting Spiritually it doth it freely, and as a Living Principle of its own Acts, yet it Acts concurring with the Movings and Influences of the Spirit, according to that most excelling Scripture (as to this purpose) Psal. 110. 3. Thy People shall be willing in the day of thy Power. Herein the Holy Spirit hath determined the Controversy ; and reconciled the Freeness of Man's Will in Conversion ; as likewise in the After-actings of Grace, with the determinating efficacy of the power of God's Grace ; this being so full and infallible a Prophecy, certainly foretelling these Events of their willingness. Now that Prophecy doth directly refer to the day of Pentecost (whereof that Psalm treateth) and of Christ's Ascension and sitting in Heaven, and that passage refers unto the pouring forth the Spirit that day upon the Apostles ; and unto His coming upon Three thousand of the Jews, converted the same day, and made willing (by the same Spirit accompanying that great Apostle's Ministry) as the fullfilling of this prophecy. You read the story in Acts 2. where you find that willingness ascribed unto the Spirit, as His work ; and so wonderfully efficacious is his power, as it was styled in that Psalm, The day of His power ; Not of Man's will ; Christ's Power had the day of it in overcoming Mans Will. And whereas it is said, That God worketh in us to will and to do, it is not by His giving in power only to will or to do, but to will, τὸ θέλει : the act of willing, the τὸ θέλει : and the Giving This, was the Spirit's Gift. So in those Converts it was by the Spirit (as Psal. 110. compared with Acts 2. will inform us) who is indeed the Power of the Most High, Luke 1. 35. And to cause us to do, and therefore To will, is expressly attributed to this Spirit in Ezek. 36. where, First it is said, A new heart also will I give you, and a new Spirit I will put within you ; and I will take away the stony Heart out of your Flesh, and I will give you an Heart of Flesh : Which words denote the Creating of all those Principles of Spiritual Life and Habitual Graces ; and then it is added v. 37. I will put MY SPIRIT within you, and CAUSE YOU TO WALK IN MY STATUTES, and ye shall keep my Judgments AND DO THEM. What is this other, but the same with that in the Philippians, To work in us to will and to do ? For if to do, then to be sure to will : And this Promise of the Covenant (and it is the Covenant of Grace is there Promulged) is to work in us an Evangelical Obedience unto all the Commandments ; which begins first with to Will and then follows to Do, according unto that of the Apostle, Not to do, but to be willing, 2 Cor. 8. 10.

6. As all the Principles, and the Production of the Acts, and fixing the Will ; so our whole growth in Grace, from first to last, is attributed to this Spirit also : Isa. 44. 3, 4. I will pour Water upon him that is Thirsty, and Floods upon the dry Ground : I will pour my Spirit upon thy Seed, and my Blessing upon thine Offspring ; and they shall spring up as the Grass, as Willows by the Water Courses, or Streams. There are two things that cause the springing up of Grass, and Growth in Willows.

1. Sufficiency, and plenty of Water, either Rain from Heaven, or streams of Rivers, when Trees (as Willows) are seated by them. 2. The Sun and the sweet Influences thereof, Dent. 32. And for this latter We have elsewhere our Lord Christ compared to the Sun, in this very respect, Mal. 4.2. But unto you that fear my Name, shall the Sun of Righteousness arise with healing in His Wings; and ye shall grow up as Calves in the stall; as the Sun causeth Trees and Plants to grow, so Beasts too; which later allusion, he prosecutes there. But in that of Isa. 44. He compares the Spirit to the Floods, and the Rain, which encreasing the Sap within the Root and Body of the Trees, causeth them to grow up and bring forth fruits, even to old Age: I will pour FLOODS upon the dry Ground, I will pour my SPIRIT upon thy Seed.

Book I.

7. The Acceptation of all these Fruits by GOD, and of our Persons by God for them, both all along, and specially when all is finished and perfected, is by and from the Holy Ghost. Thus Rom. 15. 16. the Apostle speaks, That the Offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being Sanctified by the Holy Ghost. In which Words, he sets out the great Function and Success of his Gospel-Ministry, under allusions to the Levitical Priesthood, as that which Succeeded that of the Law, (Isa. 66. 2c.) in declaring how there had been a far more Excellent Sacrifice offered up to God, by his Preaching, than had been by them of Old. Their Sacrifices were but of Beasts; but this was of Men; the Souls of Men, which by his Preaching had been converted to God, even an innumerable Company of the Gentiles; which were the first Fruits and Foundation of the Church of the New Testament. These Sacrifices of the Gospel, also in number far exceed any of the Sacrifices of the Old Testament, that were at any one time, ever offered up; yea, than there had been by Solomon, at the Foundation, and Consecration of his New Built Temple; and yet all this was as the work but of one Apostle: Of those Old Testament Sacrifices, it is still noted how, and what acceptableness they had with God, as Abel's, Heb. 11. As Noah's, Gen. 8. 20, 21. God smelt a sweet savour, and of Solomon, Testified by Fire coming down from Heaven. Now of this great New-Testament Oblation here, that which gave the acceptableness, is expressly said to be, the being Sanctified by the Holy Ghost, as the Cause that rendred them acceptable; and our Translators favour it, if not imply it, in rendering it, Being Sanctified by the Holy Ghost; that is, in that, or because, it was Sanctified by the Holy Ghost, and therefore acceptable: As for the Apostles own part, he professeth himself but the poor Instrument, so in the following 18. ver. and that it was Christ, and his Spirit had wrought all by him. And as he wrought nothing in those Gentiles Hearts, so the acceptance of what was wrought, was much less from any Consideration whatever in him, to make this Sacrifice accepted by the Holy God. Far be that from the least of our thoughts, for it is to be attributed unto Christ, as the Worker of it, v. 18. and unto the Spirit, in this 16. v. and unto the Spirit as well as unto Christ. Neither is our Sanctification simply in it self, and abstractly considered, as it is in us, of force and virtue alone, to cause this Acceptation. This the Confessions of David and Daniel, &c. abundantly do declare. It is the matter indeed, or thing that is accepted, but not the ground or cause of the acceptance. And therefore, that word in (as in the Original) which is translated by the Holy Ghost, is not added barely to shew that the Holy Ghost was the Author of this and all other Sanctification, that is accepted, but that it might be noticed that it was He who was and is the main and principal cause of that acceptance, and for which it hath a due value with God; even for this reason, that our Sanctification is the work of the Holy Ghost. As we esteem the Work for the workmans sake; so doth God our Works for the Holy Ghost's sake, as the Worker of it.

If it be said, that, our good Works and Holiness have their acceptance from Christ. It is granted, as most true, our Persons are accepted in his Person, as the Beloved, Eph. 1. 6. and our Works in his Works of Mediation; the sole Meritorious Cause of that Acceptation, and as by way of Mediation between God and us; in so much as Christ is said to be made Sanctification it self to us, 1 Cor. 1.30. as if it were no Sanctification in the sight of God, that is not made accepted for such in Christ. And by him we offer up our Sacrifices to God

Book I. God; and God is well pleased with them; Heb. 13. v. 15, and 16. And upon such an account, the Holy Ghost is not the cause of this kind of acceptation. This Honour is Christ's alone; yet so as there is left room for this Holy Spirit, to have the Glory of procuring acceptation to our good works another way; namely in that he is the Efficient of them, and in that they are His Works in us. Yea, and our Persons also are in such a like respect, accepted in, and for the Holy Ghost, in that we are the Temples of the Holy Ghost, and He dwells in us; and God hath respect to the Temple for His sake that dwells therein. Therefore give and acknowledge that Honour to the Spirit, for his Work and Interest, as well as to the Son for His.

If we have recourse to the Metaphor the Apostle began with, and continues along to the end of the verse, viz. That the Gentiles were made a Sacrifice, and an Offering to God, and had their Lusts slain by the Gospel, the Sword of the Spirit, as the Sacrificing Knife, and this by the Holy Ghost, according to that in Chap. 8 You by the Spirit mortifie the Deeds of the Body; we may extend the allusion to the acceptation of a Sacrifice. There were two things made the Sacrifices acceptable, viz. The Altar, upon which the Offering was made; which Christ teacheth us; The Altar sanctifies the Gift; and that most fitly represented Christ's part in our acceptation: Heb. 13. 10. We have an Altar, namely Christ; by whom we offer our Sacrifice of Praises, and by whom they are accepted, v. 12, 15, 16. But then there was fire also, which came forth immediately from the Lord, and consumed the Burnt Offering that was upon the Altar. So it was at first in Moses time; Levit. 9. v. 24. and the second time, fire came down from Heaven, and did the like in Solomons time, 2 Chron. 7. 1. When the Temple was finished and consecrated. This signified, The Holy Spirit, who comes out from God, (1 Cor. 2. 12.) even as that fire came forth from the Lord, and came upon the Apostles to convert the World, like fire; according to the Promise that they should be Baptized with the Holy Ghost, as with fire. And he is termed the Spirit of Burning, Isa. 4. 4. As the Sacrifices are termed, Burnt Offerings, and fire Offerings: And as the fire caused the Sacrifice to Ascend in smook (and therefore the Hebrew word for a Burnt Offering is Gnolak, Ascension) and consumed the Offering to Ashes, so doth this Spirit cause our Sacrifice as well as the Altar: Psal. 20. 3. The Lord accept thy Burnt Sacrifice. It is in the Hebrew, The Lord shall turn to Ashes; which our Translators rightly Translate accept, from the wonted Speech of Moses Law; which informs us, that the smook which ascended from the Sacrifice by reason of the fire, is termed up and down in the Levitical Law, a Rest before the Lord, and a Savour of Rest: Lev. 6. 15. Which the Paraphrasts do in Terminis, in our own Phrase and Words, render a favourable acceptation with the Lord, and this sweet savour, is expressly attributed to the fire, as that which did thus sanctifie the Offering, and the acceptation of the Sacrifice its being a Fire-Offering. He puts it upon account, Lev. 1. 9, and 13. It is a Burnt Offering, (says the Text there) an Offering made by Fire, of a sweet savour unto the Lord. As if he would have said, It is therefore of a sweet savour, because made by fire. So then, as Christ, as the Altar and Mediator, gives an acceptation; so the Spirit, as the fire that consumes the Sacrifice, and causeth it to ascend in smook, causeth the acceptation also; but either upon differing accounts, as was explained.

8. The whole Edification of every Saint, by the means of Grace, which are the Ordinances, and other Means whatsoever, all flows from the benigne Influences of this Spirit, accompanying them, and bedewing Men's hearts by them. And for the proof of this in general, you have that passage, Acts 9. 31. Then had the Churches Rest, and [were edified] walking in the fear of the Lord. And so it is said of Churches walking in all the Order and Ordinances of Christ; (as of the Colossian Church it is spoken chap. 2.) that they did so, in the Comfort of the Holy Ghost, as the Author of that Edification and Comfort by those Ordinances.

I shall instance particularly in the main Ordinances of our Salvation, and shew how our profiting by them, is from the Spirit.

1. In the Preaching of the Word we receive not only the fruits of the Holy Spirit, but the Spirit himself, by the hearing of faith; that is, by the hearing the Gospel preached, which is the doctrine of truth. Our Gospel came not to you in word onely, but in power, and in the Holy Ghost, 1. Thes. 1. 5. I create the fruit of the lips, Peace, and teach thee to profit; namely, by the lips of those who by office are said to preserve knowledge, Mal. 2. 7. All which profiting is attributed to the Spirit, 1 Cor. 12. 7. But the Manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withall. It is the profit both of a man's self and others. And the Holy Spirit's care is very great herein; he is the Providore General, to oversee the Overseers of the Flock and to see to it, provide the fittest Stewards for every flock, Acts 20. 28. The Flock over which the Holy Ghost hath made you Overseers. And he furnisheth them with such Gifts as shall best serve, and most suitably agree unto their capacities, and the bore of their Understandings, and to work on their hearts; and in providential Grace disposeth of them and their Gifts, as shall be most agreeable to their Spirits, and Spiritual condition. As some Ministers are fitted for the profiting of the Weak; so others, to the Wise; even as the Apostle says, he was a debtor to both, Rom. 1. And then he takes a further special care of their forehand Meditations and Preparations, to suggest such Materials and Notions for their Sermons, as shall be a food most convenient for Men's Souls. They are Stewards that give meat in due Season, Math. 24. 45. He fills the Breasts of Ministers (their Spiritual Nurseries) with consolations, and other Truths, suitable to the temper and constitution of their Stomachs, and instructeth them to speake words in season: And this, very often, unknown to themselves that speak them; They not having any aim at thee, or any other Man in particular, in such passages, which also are utterly unexpected to, or perhaps not prayed for by him whom yet they greatly concern; when yet the Holy Ghost knew whom to direct those passages unto; and had set up thy heart as the Mark, to shoot those Arrows into it.

9. And lastly, To draw to a conclusion; and it is, indeed, the happy Conclusion and Crown of the whole work of the Spirit upon us, for we are now come to the Brink of eternity, the Consummation of all:

1. With respect to Death, this Holy Spirit, the Comforter, all our Life long feeds and maintains by faith, more or less, a lively hope within them that are Regenerate, 1 Pet. 1. 3. Blessed be God that hath begotten us again to a lively hope; which according to the degree of it in any, allays that fear of Death, the King of Sorrows, Job 18. 14. The fear of which, all Men (that have not this Spirit) are subject unto the Bondage of, all their life time: Heb. 2. 15. From the Dominion of which Bondage, the Spirit of Adoption frees us, Rom. 8. 15. So as to have our Spirits supported by faith, so far as ordinarily to be able (when put to it in earnest) to venture or cast our Souls, into the hands of God as a Father; and this the Scriptures attribute unto this Good Spirit. In the 2 Cor. 4 and 5. chap. the Apostle treats of a Believers dying, and comforts himself and them against it: for upon occasion as the times then were, he and other Saints were in continual hazard of death; as v. 11. For we that live, are always delivered unto death for Jesus sake. Now from whence, or from whom had he and they supports and reliefs against this, but from the Spirit, his working and upholding faith in them? We having the same Spirit of faith, according as it is written &c. and pertinently quotes a saying of Dauids under the Old Testament in the 116 Psalm; where he had been under apparent apprehensions of death, as in the third verse, upon occasion of which, David had uttered that speech, I believed, therefore have I spoken, v. 10. and spoke it, as it were, in defiance of Death, and all the fears of it, and dangers about it. Now whence had David this confidence? From the Spirit, says the Apostle; as who wrought and maintained that faith in him: Thus it was in the Old Testament; and he (says he under the New Testament) having the same Spirit of faith; we upon the view of such apparent dangers of death, believe and therefore speak, with a farr greater confidence, by how much the Spirit that is in the the New, exceeds in his comforts, the same that was in the old: but, Book I. from the same Spirit, both. And what spake he by this Spirit of faith? It follows in v. 14. We knowing, that he which raised up the Lord Jesus, shall raise up us also by Jesus; This they spake and believed, and comforted themselves with against Dying. Again in the 5th chap. What made him confident of a house in Heaven, when this Earthly Tabernacle should be dissolved? Even this, and above all, this, That God hath given us the Earnest of His Spirit, v. 5. to bind the Promise of Eternal life: And from thence it is (says he) that we are always confident, &c. v. 6. [always] which extends both to all along our lives, and also at our deaths: Which is a

2. Thing, That when we come to dye, or that the time of death approacheth, and is coming upon us, This Spirit is given to support us. For, if always, as the Apostle even now said, and at all other times of our lives, and upon other occasions of fears and distress, He is given to help our Infirmities, Rom. 8. 28. Then especially when we are weakest, as at Death (to be sure) we shall be, when our flesh fails, &c. Ps. 73. 26.

2. And at the last day of the World (who is it shall raise thee up, having kept thy bones) dwelt in thy dust all this while as Christ's God-head did his Body, which therefore though in the Grave David calls the Holy One, Psal. 16. It is this Spirit, Rom. 8. 11. But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead, dwell in you; he that raised up Christ from the dead, shall also quicken your mortal bodies, by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. It is brought in as the comfortable Consequent of this Spirit dwelling in us: And having raised thee, leaves thee not, but is the Author of all thy Glory and Communion with Father, Son, and Himself forever. 1 Pet. 4. 14. He is in that respect termed the Spirit of Glory; Not of Grace only, but of Glory. Blessed are ye, for the Spirit of Glory and of God resteth on you; that is, you possess for ever this Fountain of all Glory, this Spirit of God; therefore the promise of the Spirit is made adequate to the whole Blessing (as being the Mass of Blessings) which was given to Abraham. Gal. 3. 14. That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the Promise of the Spirit, through Earth. The whole is termed the promise of the Spirit.

C H A P. VI.

The Uses of the Precedent Doctrine.

U S E I. L E T me a little affect your Hearts, with the Love of the Spirit, from and upon Occasion of all that hath been said. There is a daily intercourse with, and Meditation of, the Love of the Father, and the Love of Christ. There is a Fellowship of the Father, and a Fellowship of the Son, in the Souls of every Believer: But the Holy Ghost, though he hath been Universally acknowledged as a Person equal to either, yet we do not hold and pursue after Fellowship with him as a distinct Person; nor is his Love in what he hath done for us, set on as a Seal upon our Hearts. Whereas the Scriptures (though more sparingly, because it was he who wrote them) do urge Obligations upon us, drawn from him, as well as the other two Persons.

If we believe he is a Person in the Trinity, let us treat with him as a Person, apply our selves to him as a Person, glorifie him in our Hearts as a Person, dart forth beams of special and peculiar love to, and converse with him as with a Person. Let us fear to grieve him, and also believe on him, as a Person; Which our very Creed directs us to; Do you profess to hold Communion and converse with the Saints? I beseech you have it with the Maker of them, the Holy Ghost; and this not at second hand, by having fellowship with those he dwells in, but immediately also with himself.

Because the Spirit is intimior intimo, is so nearly and intimately united to us, dwells in us as our own Souls do in us, therefore we converse not with him (as we do seldom with our own Souls) but are most of all strangers thereto. Also because indeed his work is but new beginning, and as yet imperfect, and but a Foundation of that Building in Eternity to be raised: Whereas Christ hath perfected his, hath perfected for ever those that are Sanctified (Heb. 10. 14.) by one Offering once made; it is therefor we discern not, (mind not) the Holy Ghost, or his Works, as we do Christ and his. But what says the Apostle, Rom. 15. 30. Now I beseech you, Brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ sake, and for the love of the Spirit, that ye strive together with me, &c. You see he adjures them by the Spirit, and his Love, and their Love unto the Spirit, as well as for Christ's sake. The Occasion was; That ye would pray for me, says he, that that Work of the Ministry, (which is properly the Holy Ghosts Work, Acts 13. 2.) may prosper in my hand: And if you profess love to the Spirit, whose Work it is, and so Consider his love to you, who hath done so much for you, His Honour in this Work will be dear to you. And in as much as he had urg'd them just before for the Lord Christ's sake, and then subjoins, For the Love of the Spirit: Surely he must mean in like connexion of sense, that for the Spirits sake also, and for his Loves sake towards them, who had born no less Love to them, than Christ had done, they would do what he exhorted them to. Sure his Exhortation falls not lower, nor runs in a lower way, to mean only the Love which they bore to the Spirit; but it means that Love which the Spirit himself bore to them, and which is equal to that of Christ. And the edge of his perswasive, farther lies in this, and is as if he had said, Seeing that when we exhort you for Christ's sake, it useth to take with you, to move and prevail with you; so when we urge you by the love of the Spirit, it will have no less effect, if you do but consider all he hath done for you, or is to you. Now when he moves them for Christ's sake (as in the first place he doth) the meaning is to obtest them by all the love that Christ had born them, and by what he had done for them: When therefore he adds, And for the love of the Spirit; (the Spirit being a Person we are obliged to, as well as unto Christ) can you think he had not this as his more especial Aim, to move them in like manner by this very love of the Holy Ghost, who indeed deals altogether in the affairs of love from the Father and the Son? He proceeds from them by way of love; and love in them mutually each to other, is the Original of his Person: And as he is the Love that is between them both, so it is he who sheds abroad the love of both into our Hearts; and it is he who is grieved as a Friend or Person that loves us, (as Eph. 4. 30.) when we sin, or neglect that Duty which is his Care and Charge to work in us.

And as this is the Apostles Scope, so this Love of his ought to be very dear unto us; for if we single out any thing earnestly to entreat some other thing from another, that thing we entreat them by, must be supposed to be most precious to Us. Again, when Rom. 8. He had insisted on this, that there is the Spirit of Christ in us, or we are none of his; he then begins the Enumeration of many great things this Spirit doth for Us, throughout that Chapter; by those Arguments perswading Us not to live after the Flesh, but after the Spirit. In the midst of these perswasives, He come in with this, Wherefore, Brethren, we are Debtors, but not to the Flesh. Those Words make two intire Sentences, one Affirmative, that we are Debtors; the other Negative, but not to the Flesh; We are not Debtors to the Flesh: Now to whom is it he affirms, we are Debtors? Evidently the Spirit, as not only the Words of Opposition, not to the Flesh, (which two are in this Chapter, set as ἀντιθέμενα as Contraries and Opposites, as every where else) but as the Coherence and the Illation [therefore we are Debtors] shew. It was this Spirit he had last spoken of, the Spirit that dwelleth in us as a Guide and Leader, Actor and Informer of us, as the Soul in our Souls, v. 11. If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead, dwelleth in you; he that raised up Christ from the dead, shall also quicken your mortal Bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. And from thence he infers, Therefore we are Debtors. To whom but to him? Debtors unto what? To live after the Spirit, and not after the flesh: So v. 12, 13. Not to the flesh, to live after the flesh; for if ye live after the flesh, ye shall dy: But if ye thro' the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live. The obligation here you see runs in the Spirit's Name, the Arrest is at his Suit. Debtors then we are, and infinitely indebted to him, and this for dwelling in us; and because we are led and guided by him as a Person that loves us, are we wonderfully beholden unto him. And those next words, As many as are led by the Spirit, directs us to treat with him as with a Person, a Familiar, a Friend, that walks with us, takes us by the hand, talks to you, adviseth you as the Spirit of Counsel (as Isa. 11. 2. he is call'd) continually speaking in us, This is God's way, walk in it. Again, when we read 2 Cor. 13. 14. The Grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the Communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you: That Koinonia which we translate Communion, doth it not, and may it not import the Fellowship and Converse that the Holy Ghost vouchsafes to us with himself, as well as that with the Father and the Son, 1 John 1. 4. The word in both places is one and the same. And when he moves them (Phil. 2. 1.) by all these Considerations, If there be any Consolation in Christ, any Fellowship of the Spirit, &c. why should we not interpret fellowship of the Spirit, for Converse and intercourse had by us from him as a Person, as well as Consolation in Christ, is that which is in the Person of Christ? Out of such an experimental sense of sweet Familiarity and Converse had with the Spirit of God, doth that speech of Holy David seem to proceed, Psal. 143. 10. Thy Spirit is good, lead me. Methinks he speaks so feelingly of him, and of that sweetness he had found in him as a friend, as if he had said, I have found his Counsel and Converse so good, oh give me more of them. And when he bids us grieve him not, (Eph. 4. 30.) doth it not Import one whom we converse with dayly, that is full of Love and Kindness to us, full of Tendernefs, whose love we should take in, and consider, and have a wary watchful regard to, and grieve with him, if we offend him. I cannot enlarge upon the work he hath done and is to do for us, which yet is proper to this occasion. I shall only instance in what, in the doctrinal part, I have been so large in, and in that which Rom. 8. 11, 12. the Apostle putteth this very obligation upon our being Debtors to the Spirit. He had in that chapter spoken much, and great things about the Spirit's indwelling in us, and the fruits thereof: And he spoke thus, v. 11. If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead, dwell in you; he that raised Jesus from the dead, shall also quicken your mortal Bodies, by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. Christ's love was in dying, the Spirit's is shewn in his in-dwelling in us. His inference from thence is, v. 12. Therefore brethren we are Debtors, not to the flesh to live after the flesh. But that the Greatness of his Love and Grace may appear unto us, and we may put a due Value upon it, let us compare it with the love of Christ himself in being incarnate, and dwelling in our Nature for us. You account it infinite love in him to leave the Bosom of his Father, to come down from heaven, and become one person with a Man, to be made flesh, and so to be made less than his Father in that respect; Yea and this love is the greater, in as much as he assumed this Nature as clothed with all Infirmities of flesh and blood, the likeness of sinful flesh, and dwelt among us, and endur'd such Contradictions of sinners as the Apostle speaks. And this Union was the foundation of all his work and satisfaction for us. And herein God commended his love, as Heb. 2. you have it set forth: And yet set this grace of the Holy Ghost's indwelling in us by it, and it riseth up unto an equality; and though it fall lower in some respects, yet exceeding that of Christ in others, the Scales will be acknowledged even.

It falls lower in this, that the union between him and us is not personal as that of Christ's is with his human Nature; but yet it is as near it as Possibly may be, for 'tis an immediate union of our persons to and with his person, so as to have an eternal right personal to each other, and everlastingly to dwell each in other: And it indeed was well for us we had not a personal union with the Spirit; for our defilements (if remaining) would then have defiled and been imputed unto his Person.

2. In other things it is equal:

For, 1. Both are said to come alike down from heaven; the Spirit (1 Pet. 1. 12.) as well as Christ,

2. He in-dwells in us for ever, as was shewn. He is in us; and shall be with us marryed as indivisibly without all divorce, as the Son of God and that humane Nature also are. Yea, and as Christ continued his union with the Body in the Grave, so those words (Rom. 8. 11.) If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead, shall also quicken your mortal Bodies, by his Spirit that dwelleth in you; import, that the Spirit continueth his union and relation to the Body (which 1 Cor. 6. 19. is also called his Temple) even within the Grave, and fall to dust.

But 3. In these things the love shewn by the Spirit in such his union with us, doth exceed;

1. That, tho' indeed the Son of God dwelt and dwells thus intimately in an humane Nature, yet it is a Nature made holy, harmless, separate from sin, and sinners (Heb. 7.) But this good Spirit's lott and part is to come at first into hearts full of all defilements, into raggs of uncleanness, into flesh, that is, and hath wholly corrupted it self. Of old this was made a wonder by Solomon; Will God in very deed dwell on Earth, in a house which I have built for him, whom the Heaven and the Earth cannot contain? 2 Chron. 6. 18. But here is a wonder of wonders, That the Holy God (as the Spirit is) should dwell in hearts so unholy and unclean, and make them his Temples (as 1 Cor. 6. 19.)

2. Christ indeed dwelt among us, and convers'd with sinful Men, whereby He suffered daily such Contradictions of Sinners: But it was a Contradiction meerly from without, and yet this grated on his Spirit (nothing more) inso-much as 'tis said, he pleased not himself, in the best of his Company, Rom. 15. 3. But the Union of the Holy Ghost, and his in-dwelling in us, is in our sinful Hearts; so as often, where his in-dwelling is mention'd, it is inserted, (Gal. 4. 6.) He sent the Spirit of his Son into our Hearts, 2 Cor. 1. 22. He hath given the earnest of his Spirit into our Hearts, John 7. 38. This Spring of Living Water, is said to be in the Belly, environed about with mud; All which imports a nearer Union then that of Christ within us; to which this Limitation is added, He dwells in our Hearts by Faith. But of the Spirit, it is said, every where, That he dwells in us. It is Originally, his Title, 2 Tim. 1. 14. to be styled, He that dwells within us. Now the Contradiction, which he by reason of this near Inhabitation endures, must needs be much greater, and quicker to his Sense, from those he dwells thus within, and hath entred into, and hath undertaken such a Conjunction withall, then that of outward Converse, which Christ only endured. For if what Christ says, in another case, be true, What is from without should offend; then how much more that which is from within, the Person one dwells withall? And in this Respect, he alone of all the Three Persons is said to be grieved, having taken on him, the part of an intimate Friend. A Father (as God the Father) is Offended, but a familiar Friend, is grieved: It argues a nearer striking home at the Heart. And in this Respect, he hath had an hard task of it, and this from the beginning of the World. He hath been burthened, and felt the Weight of the Old World, (Gen. 6.) My Spirit shall not always strive with Man therein. And yet he relieves himself by bringing the Flood upon them after an Hundred and Twenty Years. But against these, he thus in-dwells in, whom He Regenerates, He hath no Relief, for He hath Eternally undertaken for them.

Book I. And is it nothing, think you, to have His Work continually spoiled? Never to find the Soul, as He left it? To have that Heart He dwells in, continually resisting and contradicting of him? To have that unspun in the Night, which He hath woven in the Day? To have made a good Prayer in us, and that swept away, as if it were but a Cobwebb, by Lust that riseth? To have His greatest Enemy, the Devil, Blaspheme him and His Graces, in His own House, in His own Hearing? If Lot's Righteous Soul was vext, or our own Graces within us troubled; than how much more is the Author of all Grace; dwelling in us, in so much as he is weary of this World, and the course held in this Respect?

And to that Accompt I have sometimes in my thoughts cast that Speech, Rev. 22. where we find some Out-crys for Christ's coming, that He would come quickly. The Spirit says come, (speaking to Christ) as well as the Bride says come: She, that She may enjoy her Husband; He, that He may be eased. He groans to be unburthened of this Conflict with sinful Hearts He dwells in, (as our Souls are said to do, 2 Cor. 5.) as having so long born the Trouble and Grief of this Work, which till there is an End of all by Christ's coming, He is designed unto.

USE 2. There is another Use of this Doctrine, which I urge to unregenerate Men. Well, God by his Providence hath brought thee once more to the Word, which the Apostle calls the Ministration of the Spirit. Now Consider, tho' thou hast been never so empty, dry, and barren of goodness, and art now in thy filthiness; thou may'st carry home the Spirit with thee, and therein thou art passive; but if thou dost, it will cost thee something in His Workings on thee; He will work strangely on thy Heart. Thou may'st now begin to be possess'd of the richest Gift God hath to bestow. Thou camest to see Fashions, a Reed shaken with the Wind, as John's Hearers did; but thou standest in the Wind of the Spirit, and He may seize upon thee, and save thee; for he comes upon Men without preparation, and then works all. I shall open but two or three Scriptures to this purpose. In Isa. 44. 3. There is the promise of the Spirit (which in Gal. 3. is said to have been made to Abraham, and his seed) I will pour Water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry Ground. Which Isaiab himself interprets, I will pour my Spirit upon thy Seed, and my Blessing upon thine Off-spring; and they shall spring up (as Herbs namely) among the Grass, &c. One shall say, I am the Lords, &c. And this Scripture also did our Saviour allude to, in the promise of his Spirit to the Woman of Samaria, John 4. 14. But whosoever drinketh of the Water that I shall give him, shall never thirst; but the Water that I shall give him, shall be in him a Well of Water springing up into Eternal Life. He alludes also to the same Scripture, in what He says to His Disciples: John 7. 37, 38, 39. If any Man thirst, let him come to me, and Drink. He that Believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his Belly shall flow Rivers of Living Water. But this spake He of the Spirit, which they that believed on him should receive; for the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet Glorified. The Promise in each refers to both places: And yet the occasion was differing, tho' of one and the same Spirit. If you observe the purport and occasion of the promise of this Spirit, in the 4th of John, it was when our Saviour was treating with the Woman of Samaria, a great Sinner, v. 18. Utterly ignorant, v. 10, 23. a Flouter of him, v. 15. And as yet (when Christ spake these Words) purely in her Natural Estate. And therefore this promise of the Spirit here, all acknowledged to be the Spirit of Regeneration to work Conversion at the first; to become, as at the first he doth, a Well of Water springing up to Eternal Life.

Now this was at first poured upon a dry ground, in respect to any such Work; utterly dry, utterly barren, that hath not so much as a desire or thirst, after this Holy Spirit, to ask him, as she had not, v. 10. If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith unto thee, Give me to Drink; thou wouldst have asked of him, and He would have given thee living Water. And upon this this ignorant barren Soul, doth Christ pour out his Spirit, whilst he is speaking with her; and which was the strangeness of it, tho' poured from without, yet soaking into her, it began (as Christ promised) to become a spring in her Heart; which other Water, poured from without on Earth, doth never become; bubbling up all that which tended to Eternal Life. And the promise of the Spirit as Regenerating at the first, and to that end poured out on such Souls, as here, was part of Isaiab's scope. He had a further also, for it is pouring Water upon dry ground, causing Herbs to come up where Barrenness was (v. 4.) to the end that Men that are Gentiles, and strangers to the Common-Wealth of Israel, (as this Samaritan was) might call themselves by the name of Jacob, and subscribe unto the Lord, and surname themselves by the name of Israel, v. 5. And the first thing we see God doth (as Christ also in the 4th of John promiseth) to such Souls, is to pour out his Spirit on them in that very Condition, and he becomes a Spring within them of all Goodness, even then, when there is not a drop afore, nor any Preparation to it. And again the Prophet Isaiab, prophesying of Times when Christ should be on Earth, thus speaks, Chap. 35. 5, 6. Then the Eyes of the blind shall be open, and the ears of the Deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame Leap as an Hart, and the tongue of the Dumb sing: Then followeth the very same Promise, that In the Wilderness Waters should break out, and streams in the Desert, and the parched ground shall become a Pool. Which promise, as Christ interpreted, so he also made it good, fulfilling of it in this Samaritan, the first fruits of Gentile Converts; and this he did whilst he was speaking it to her. Ezekiel speaks to the same purpose and effect (Chap. 37.) though under another allusion of Men not only dead, but consumed to Bone, and those Bones dry, and a wind came from God, upon them, even when in this Estate, and made them live. And what is the Moral of it? The Spirit of God (whom Christ compares to the Wind, John 3. and who Acts 2. came as a rushing Wind) the Spirit of the living God (as in 2 Cor. 3. 3.) came upon these Men, and made them live, even when dead, and dry Bones: Thus it is said, v. 14. I will put my Spirit in you, and ye shall live. He puts his Spirit into us, not only pours him on us, ere we have the least of Life; who therefore must needs come on us, yea, into us, when we are dead. He gets into us, and becomes a Spring in our Bellies, in the Heart of this barren Earth, when it is dry.

USE 3. Is it the Spirit of God who is the Author of Conversion? Then Lament, and bewail the hardness of thy Heart, which tho' it hath so often had good motions put into it by the Spirit (which motions, for ought thou knowest, are the beginnings of this work and Leaders unto Repentance) yet it hath not followed them, but given a deaf Ear unto them.

I. Consider the hainousness of the Sin. It is that which Stephen upbraided the Jews with, Acts 7. 51. Ye stiff-necked, who evermore resist the Holy Ghost. It is the Sin for which our Saviour chiefly wept over Jerusalem, Luke. 13. 34. Consider that it is to oppose the Holy Ghost in his own proper work and office; and, in as much as in you lies, to put him out of Office. And tho' it be not always that Sin against the Holy Ghost, which is unpardonable (for many have afterwards repented of this) yet it is a sin against the Holy Ghost. For as the Scripture, though it makes indeed but one ἁντιχριστός That Anti-Christ, the man of sin and son of perdition, the Pope, the greatest Arch-Heretick that ever was, or will be) yet every petty Popeling, and less Notorious Heretick is an Anti-Christ, for there be many *Anti-Christ*s now in the World, (says the Apostle, of his times, before the great Anti-Christ was risen) So it is in this case, though the Scripture makes but one sin against the Holy Ghost κατ' ἐξοκλήν, yet the Resister of the least Motion of the Spirit leading to Repentance, is a Sinner against the Holy Ghost; and there be many such Sinners. I appeal to many of you; how often hath the Holy Ghost come and viewed you? How often hath he come to your hearts, when ye were alone, and even unto you Bed-side, beseeching you, and ye have put him off? And you may judge of the greatness of this sin to resist

Book I. resist the least good motion (which is a step to the other) in that the Scripture makes the full Act (or grosser act as I may call it) of that sin to be in isto genere, in that kind, the greatest and the only unpardonable one. Now we measure sins in the act they tend to: As Murther being a great sin, and the act thereof more hainous than of other sins, therefore thoughts of Murther and Revenge, are worse than any other sinful thoughts. And if you will put this sin of resisting the motions of the Spirit, into the Ballance of the Sanctuary, and rightly weigh it, with other ways of finning; I dare affirm it, that the resisting the least good motion tending to Conversion, is greater, than many of those grosser Acts against the Law of God. And these Motions resisted, do heighten and aggravate all our other sins committed before and after them. For they tend to turn us from them, by causing us to repent of all sins past, and preventing sins to come. Moreover this sin is a sin against the Gospel (for the Gospel is the Ministration of the Spirit, and so of these good motions of the Spirit) and sins against the Gospel are greater than those against the Law. And therefore (Heb. 2. 23.) The very neglecting the Salvation of the Gospel, is made a Crime deserving a sorer punishment than any breach of the Law. And how much sorer punishment does it deserve to despise it, when it is brought home to us by the Holy Ghost, and by him sett on upon our hearts? If barely to hear the word, and not be moved by it, be a sin, and a heinous one, then to be moved by it, and to neglect it, is a greater: For it is the despising of the greater Mercy; and it is against the Spirit of Grace in the Gospel.

2. Consider the danger of this sin: You have seen that for the guilt of it, it is above committing gross sins against the Law: And the danger of it is answerable; for sins against the Law, God threatneth but conditionally with damnation: If men believe not, and repent not; so as that Repentance coming between, they may escape: But this, God threatneth, yea, and punisheth with Impenitency it self, (and that is the damning Sin) for God useth ordinarily to punish sins in their own coin, according to their nature and kind; and this he punisheth with Impenitency, because it resists the Work of Repentance. I would have purged thee (says God, in the Prophet, unto the people of Israel) but thou wouldest not. When God would, they would not; and therefore God never after would. And when God hath used means, and comes unto us, to cleanse us, and we would not; he says (as 'tis Rev. 22. 11.) He that is filthy, let him be filthy still; and so we shall be long enough, for all him: For at length, God grows peremptory, and never makes offer more. God commonly gives such up unto irrecoverable hardness of heart and blindness of mind. And I appeal to their own Consciences, if they grow not harder after such resistings, as Clay doth, the more the Sun hath shone upon it; or as Ice freezeth harder, after it had begun to thaw. Consider but the reason of it, If a man sins against the Law, he hath yet the Court of the Gospel to sue in, and so to obtain pardon: As if a man be cast in one Court, he hath a liberty to remove his suit from that Court unto a higher; but if he be condemned in the higher, then there is no going backward unto any lower Court: So God hath given us two Courts, that of the Law, and that of the Gospel. Thou being an unclean or Covetous person, or a Drunkard, goeth to the Law, and that condemns thee. Then the Spirit offers thee to remove thy Suit to the highest Court of the Gospel, and upon Faith and Repentance to bring thee a Pardon. Thou neglects this, and so the Gospel it self presently condemns thee; for there he that believes not, is condemn'd already, John 3. 18. And if Mercy, and the offers of it, condemn thee, I know not what can save thee; for that is the highest Court, and go backward thou canst not. The work of the Spirit (as you heard) is the last Act of man's Salvation and without it neither no evidence of thy Election, nor Redemption are to be respected. And if thou run unto God's Mercy (as that is the common shift, that God is merciful) or to Christs Redemption, in that he dyed for Sinners; both these send thee to the Spirit: And the Spirit tells thee He hath offered Salvation to thee, upon thy Repenting, many a time, and hath profered to assist therein,

in, and thou didst still refuse : And how then canst thou expect Salvation ?
Ay, but thou wilt say, I hope the Spirit will offer again, and again, and when I am on my Death Bed, as well as now. I answer.

Book i.

1. That it is a great Hazard: For the Spirit blows when, and where He listeth. And it may be, will never move thee more. And,

2. Consider whether thou hast any reason to expect this. For suppose thou shouldst have often, again and again, moved a Friend of thine in a matter which concerns Himself, and which thou hast most Benefit by; only out of Love, thou hast thus moved him in it, and He still gives thee a contrary, or froward Answer, and goes on doing the contrary: Wouldst not thou at last resolve, that seeing thou hast so often moved Him in vain, hereafter thou wilt never speak of it to Him more? This is the Case between the Spirit and thee. He hath often moved thee in a matter that concerns thine Eternal Wealth or Wo, even to Repent, but thou givest Him a churlish Answer, and goest still on in thine Impenitency : How then canst thou expect He should ever move thee again? God comes at length to say of thee, as of those in Hosea 6: 4. Who had had many good Motions, which like Dew the were dryed up; and Reformations, which like a Cloud passed away. O Ephraim what shall I do unto thee? O Judah, what shall I do unto Thee? For your Goodness is as a Morning Cloud, and as the early Dew, it goeth away.

3. Yet seeing this is thy Plea, That thou hopest the Holy Ghost will move thee again; I Charge thee, as thou tendrest thine own Salvation, if that now, or hereafter, He doth move Thee, to take the opportunity of Time and Tide. If by Meditation, Reading or Prayer, any Sparks be kindled in thee, blow them up, let those thoughts rest on thee; Welcome them, Hugg them, as the best Guests that ever came to lodge in thine Heart. Shall An Ambassadour extraordinary be sent from the King of H E A V E N, unto thee, with a Message; and wilt thou not give him Audience, but put him off, from Day to Day, and tell him (as Felix did Paul) Thou wilt hear him another Time? The best Men are but green Wood, on which, though Fire do take hold, it is subject to dye again; And therefore if thou hast but a few sparks, leave them not, till they have taken hold; nor then, till they are put into a Flame. And above all things take heed of quenching them by Carnal Mirth, or Company, or Recreations, as Men use to do.

C H A P. VII.

How the Holy Ghost is the Author of R E G E N E - R A T I O N, or the first Application of Salvation to us, in a more Peculiar Manner, Comparatively to the other two Persons.

T I T. III. 5, 6.

Not by Works of Righteousness, which we have done, but according to his Mercy he saved us, by the washing of Regeneration, and Renewing of the Holy Ghost: Which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour.

R E G E N E R A T I O N, you see, is attributed to the Spirit as the Author. It is termed the Renewing of the Holy Ghost; and likewise the shedding forth the Holy Ghost, is magnified as the Rich Gift and Blessing of the New Testament.

I have in a former Discourse shewn how all the Three Persons have shared and distributed the whole work of our Salvation amongst them, unto Three several parts. 1. Election is appropriated to the Father. 2. Redemption to the Son. 3. Application of both to the Holy Ghost. Who accordingly doth bear several Offices suited to these Three Works.

That which now I have to do, is more particularly to demonstrate both the What and How of this point of great moment; both That, and Why, this last part of Salvation; viz. Application, and so principally this of Regeneration, is attributed to the Holy Ghost.

I. I shall produce Scriptures to demonstrate this point.

1. The first Scripture is John 3. 5. Except a Man be born of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God. This Scripture shews not only the necessity of being born again, but withall, that it must be the Spirit, who must do it, or it will not be done. For no Man can so much as say, Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Spirit, 1 Cor. 12. 2.

2. The near Kindred and Dependance the New Creature hath with and upon the Spirit, as the Child begotten hath of, and with it's proper Father, doth evidence the same truth.

1. The new Creature is in the same third of John, v. 6. styled Spirit.
 (as elsewhere it is called a Spiritual Man, 1 Cor. 2.) That which is born of the Spirit is Spirit: It is therefore professedly Baptized into the same name, because the Father of this new Birth and Baptism is the Spirit.
 With Men, the Begotten bears the name of the most Immediate Parent.
 And so in this Case, tho' this Work of the Spirit be in common termed the Divine Nature, 2 Pet. 1. 4. Because it is the Image of the Godhead, of

of which all three Persons are Partakers, yet to shew that in a more peculiar manner it is the Child of the Spirit, it is called Spirit.

2. For the very same reason, this Spirit of God, the Author, relatively bears the name of Holy in the New Testament, where it is (tho' not first) yet more frequently used, as his special title, to be called The Holy Ghost, as our old English hath rendred it to us. Is not the Father Holy, and the Son Holy, and both equally Holy with this Holy Spirit? Yes, Essentially, and Personally also in themselves; Holy, Holy, Holy, they are all Proclaimed, Isa. 6. How came these other Two to bear it, that He, the third Person, should have the peculiar stile of Holy? It is not neither in a Peculiar, either in a Personal, or Essential respect, but relatively unto that which is his proper and peculiar Work, because he sanctifies and makes us Holy; and so merits that name; as Christ doth of our Saviour; and the Father, of God the Father and Maker. And here let me return to the necessity of this Persons making us Holy: As it is necessary for Christ to redeem us, there is an absolute necessity that we all be a sanctified Holy Sacrifice offered up to God, if we look to be saved; or otherwise we must be made a Sacrifice of his Wrath, as Christ hath told us, Mark. 9. 49. Where he having threatned, if Lust be not killed, Men shall be cast into the fire that is unquenchable: (v. 47, 48.) He adds this as a reason, That every Man is to be a Sacrifice to God one way or other. According to the Old Law some Sacrifices were consumed with fire, as the Burnt Offerings; some seasoned with Salt, to sink up the corrupt moysture in them, Lev. 2. 13. One sort of these Sacrifices all Men must become; if not sanctified by the Spirit, so as to have salt in them, then with Hell-fire, which also is a Sacrifice to God. Now Christ for our Redemption offered up himself a Sacrifice to God, for a sweet smelling favour, Eph. 5. 2. And it was necessary he should be so. And to that end he sacrificed himself as in his sacrificial Prayer, he speaks, John 17. 19. And it is as necessary if we be saved, that our Persons be offered up unto God as a Sacrifice also, Rom. 12. 1. Even a living Sacrifice, Holy and Acceptable to God. It was necessary therefore we should have a Sanctifier of us, to be an Offering unto God; as well as a Redeemer, that offered up himself for us. And who is that? You are directed to him in Rom. 15. This is the issue of my Ministry (says Paul, speaking of his Converting the Nations, v. 18, 19.) that the Gentiles (being Converted) might be an Offering acceptable, being Sanctified by the Holy Ghost. Else never to be acceptable to God. Christ was Sanctified immediately by himself; by the Personal Union with the Son of God: I Sanctifie my self: Even as he also offered up himself by the Eternal Spirit, or Godhead dwelling in Him, Heb. 9. But we by the Holy Ghost. And as in that other Speech, That which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit; the New Creature bears his Name; so here, he is called the Holy Spirit, or bears the name of Holy, because the Sanctifier of us, Being Sanctified by the Holy Ghost.

3. The Work of Conversion, not only in the Whole, but in every part thereof, is attributed to him, John 16. 8, 9, 10. It is (as I hinted afore, and shall shew hereafter) divided into three parts: 1. Conviction of Sin: 2. Of Righteousness for Justification. 3. Of Judgment, Holiness and Reformation; and the Spirit is there made the Authour of these three. And according to this division of the parts thereof, he hath Titles also given him, as in relation to his immediate working of these Three.

1. He condescends to be termed the Spirit of Bondage; I say he condescends but to the work and name; for otherwise, and in himself, he is the free Spirit, (Psal. 51. 11, 12.) and delights in Comforting us, not in grieving us. And he is therefore also called the Comforter; but yet to effect

Book I. effect our Salvation, and the effectual Application of it to us; He (contrary to his Nature) becomes our Jaylor, takes the Keys of Death and Damnation into his Custody, and shuts up our Spirits under the Law, as it is a School-Master to Christ, rattles the Chains, let us see the Sin and Punishment we deserve; He convinceth of sin, John 16. and becomes a Spirit of Bondage, Rom. 8. 15.

2. But then Secondly, In regard of the Revealing God's Love to us, and C H R I S T and his Righteousness, by whom we are Adopted, and by which justified; He is called in the same place the Spirit of Adoption, the Spirit of Faith, as some interpret, 2 Cor. 4. 13. Barnabas was full of the Holy Ghost, and of Faith, Acts 11. 24.

3. In regard of Sanctifying us, and convincing of Judgment; He is in the Old Testament, intitled the Spirit of Judgment (Isa. 4. 4.) In respect of washing away the filth of Sin; When the Lord shall have washed away the filth of Zion; by the Spirit of Judgment, &c. And in the New, he is intitled the Spirit of Grace, Heb. 10. 22. Have done despite to the Spirit of Grace; that is, to him, as going about to work Grace and Holiness in the Heart; The sin against the Holy Ghost, which is there described, not being against the Person of the Spirit, so much as against him in his Workings; And that in his working Grace, and Sanctifying, as in the Words afore you have it. And as to Grace in the general, as he is the Author of every particular Grace, so in the Head himself, therefore much more in the Members. The Prophet speaking of the Messiah, in Isa. 11. 1. The Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, and shall be in him, in respect of his Effects upon him; The Spirit of Wisdom and Understanding, the Spirit of Knowledge, and of the Fear of the Lord. There is the like reason he should be denominated from every other Grace. He is in one Chapter, John 14. termed The Spirit of Truth, v. 17. who reveals all Truth to the Understanding. The Holy Spirit, who sanctifies the Will, the chief Subject of Holiness; The Comforter, who fills the Heart with joy and peace in Believing; which is therefore usually stiled Joy in the Holy Ghost, in Multitudes of places. That Phrase speaking him not so much the Object of it (which is rather Christ, 1 Pet. 1. 8. In whom Believing, ye rejoyce with Joy unspeakable and Glorious; and God, Rom. 5. 11.) as the Author of it, Rom. 15. 13. Now the God of Hope, fill you with all Joy and Peace, in believing, that ye may abound in Hope through the power of the Holy Ghost.

II. I shall now Secondly give the Reasons why this Work is committed to him, and is his lot. These Reasons are not of Logical Demonstration, but Harmonious, by comparing Spiritual things with Spiritual, and by the suiting of one thing with another, in which the strength of Divine Reason lies; for Divinity is a Wisdom, not an Art.

1. This Operation of the Spirit is in a Correspondency to the Creation of the first Man, who was a Type of what was to come, Job 33. 4. The Spirit of God hath made me; And the Breath of the Almighty hath given me Life. 'Tis evident he speaks of the new Creation, in allusion to the old. v. 1, 2, 3. My word shall be of the uprightness of my Heart, and my Lips shall utter Knowledge thereby; And then adds, The Spirit of God hath made me; that is, hath given me a sincere Heart, an illuminated Mind, put the words of life into me. To have spoken of his first Creation only, he being a Man fallen from it, had been a poor Argument to perswade Job of the truth of his Heart, and the Truths he went about to utter: And yet too, he as evidently alludes to the first Creation, Gen. 2. 7. The Lord formed man of the dust of the Ground, and breathed into his Nostrils the breath of Life, and Man became a living Soul. Now in this New Creation, we being dead dead in Sins and Trespases, it is the Spirit of God that giveth Life; 2 Cor. 3. 6. Who as in respect of giving us this new Life, is called the Spirit of the Living God, v. 3. And in the Old Testament, Ezek. 37. 13, 14. I will bring you out of your Graves, I will put my Spirit in you, and you shall live; which you find in the 36 Chap. v. 27. And it is observable that the first visible giving the Holy Ghost, which was after Christ's Resurrection to enable them to be Ministers not of the Letter, but of the Spirit, which should give Life to them, and to others by them, was by the ceremony of breathing on them; And he said, Receive the Holy Ghost, John 20. 22. We had his Blood that ran in his veins, first, and it is efficacious to wash away the guilt of sin. We have his Breath next, which comes out of the inwards, of him, which conveys his Spirit; which conveys himself into our inwards as 'tis in the Prophet, and gives us life. And as Life comes with the breath God breathed at first, and goes away with it; so doth Spiritual Life upon the going or coming of the Holy Ghost upon us.

Book I.

2. It is the Spirit that converts, and Regenerates us, and forms the new Creature in us, in a Conformity to our Head Christ. The Holy Ghost was, 1. The immediate Former of the Humane Nature of Christ, in the Womb. 2. The Uniter of that Nature to the Son of God. 3. The Sanctifier thereof, with all Graces dwelling therein, above all measure.

1. He was the Former of the Humane Nature of Christ in the Womb. Mat. 1. 18. She was found with Child of the Holy Ghost, and v. 20. That which is conceived in her, is of the Holy Ghost. Which was in his forming and fitting that matter into a Man, which the prolific vertue, useth to do.

2. He was the Uniter of it to the Divine, and Sanctifier of it with all Graces, both which you have expressed in another place, Luke 1. 35. And the Angel answered and said to her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the Power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: Therefore also that Holy thing that shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God. Now we being to be made as conformable to Christ as is possible, it was correspondent, that the same Person who was designed to form Christ's Body for the God-head to dwell in all his fullness, should form Christ in us, that God and Christ may dwell in us, 1 Cor. 3. 16. Know ye not that ye are the Temple of God; and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? That same Person that made that happy match, the Personal Union between Christ's Humane Nature and the Divine, the same Person makes the Union between Christ and our Souls; and so we become one Spirit with the Lord, 1 Cor. 6. 17. The same Person that made the Man Christ Partaker of the Divine Nature, maketh us also. There is an higher correspondency yet: The Holy Ghost is Vinculum Trinitatis, the Union of the Father and the Son, as proceeding from both by way of Love, and who so meet to be the Union of God and Man in Christ, of Christ and Men in us, as he that was the Bond of Union among themselves?

3. In respect of sanctifying that humane nature of Christ, It was the Holy Ghost who made him Christ, that anointed him with himself, and all his Graces, Isa. 11. 2. The Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the Spirit of Knowledge and the Fear of the Lord: the Graces of Christ, as Man, are attributed to this Spirit, as the immediate Author of them; for although the Son of God dwelt personally, in the humane Nature, and so advanc'd that Nature above the ordinary rank of Creatures, and raised it up to that dignity and worth; yet all his habitual Graces, which even his Soul was full of, were from the Holy Ghost; The Holy Spirit is therefore said to be given him without measure. And this inhabitation of the Holy Ghost did in some sense and degree concur to constitute him Christ, which as you know is the Anointed One of God. Acts 4. 27. Thy Holy Child Jesus whom thou hast anointed: Anointed with what? Acts 10. 38. God anointed Jesus with the Holy Ghost. Now then if the Spirit made made him Christ, and concurred in this respect to make him the Anointed of God, much more is it he that makes us Christians.

4. Consider what this Application of Salvation unto us is: It is the Revelation of the mind and love of God and Christ unto us, and the things of both. He that doth this must take of mine, says Christ, and in doing so he must take of my Father also, for all the Father hath or doth is, Christ's. You have both in one place, John 16. 14, 15. He shall glorifie me, for he shall receive of mine and and shew it to you. All things that the Father hath, are mine. Great Persons woo not by themselves, but employ Embassadors, and Ministers of State, and so doth Christ. Now who should do this but the Spirit, who knows the heart and mind of God? 1 Cor. 12. We have received the Spirit who is of God, that we might know the things that are freely given us of God; that is, by our having him from God, who knows all that is in God, which is the reason there given, v. 10 God hath revealed them to us by his Spirit, for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God; which he confirms and illustrates by a Similitude fetcht from our own Bosoms, v. 11. For what man, that is, what other man, knows the things of a man (that are in his own breast) Save the spirit of a man which is in him? Even so, the things of God knows no man, or Angel, but the Spirit of God; who being the Spirit of Counsel (Isa. 11. 2.) even to Christ himself, helpt him to all God's secrets, and he also being privy and over hearing as (John 16. 13.) All that the Father and Christ have intended to us, and spoken about us, was only fit to reveal them unto us. And thus by him we come to have the very mind of God and Christ. The Grace of Christ, and the Love of God the Father, are revealed to us by the Communion of the Holy Ghost, 2 Cor 13. 14.

C H A P. VIII.

How the Holy Ghost is the Gift of God the Father to us, in and by Jesus Christ. That this inestimable Gift is bestowed freely by the pure Mercy, Grace and Love of God.

TIT. III. 5. 6.

Not by works of Righteousness, which we have done, but according to his Mercy he saved Us, by the washing of Regeneration, and Renewing of the Holy Ghost, Which he shed on us abundantly, through Jesus Christ our Saviour.

WE have seen in a short, but Comprehensive View, the Operations of the Holy Ghost, in the great work of our Salvation. The next Prospect of him is, as he is the Gift of God, conferred on us for this End, and Purpose. To open this to your sight, I offer these following considerations.

1. That it is God the Father, who is the Donor, or the Bestower of Him on us. This is plainly expressed by the words of the Text, which declares, that he sheds the Spirit on us. 2. This Gift of the Spirit is in, and through Jesus Christ our Saviour, and Mediator. 3. This Gift of the Spirit is bestowed, not according to the Covenant of Works, but of Grace, and Free Love.

Love. For those Words, Not according to Works; and the other words of the Text, which speak of the appearance of the Love, and Kindness of God, refer as well to this rich shedding forth the Holy Ghost upon us, as unto saving us through Regeneration, and Renewing us. 4. the Condition of the persons to whom he is given is altogether unworthy. When we were in our disobedience, serving our Lusts, the Holy Ghost was poured out, and renewed us.

1. The Donor or Bestower of the Holy Ghost, is God the Father through Christ. As the Father is the Original of the Persons in the Trinity, so of this great Gift. Therefore Christ (John 15. 26.) when he speaks of senting the Spirit from the Father, adds, as the reason why he should be sent from the Father, That he proceeds from the Father (his Substance doth) naming him as the Fountain both of himself and the Spirit also. He is termed the Spirit of God 2^d Cor. 2. 11. in the same sense that we say the Spirit of a man (as in the same verse) for as God is a Spirit, Isa. 48. 16. THE LORD GOD AND HIS SPIRIT, says the Prophet there: But the Apostle further adds, v. 12. the Spirit 2^d Cor. 2. 11. who Personally is from God, whom therefore we have and receive from God, 1. Cor. 6. 19. The Holy Ghost which we have, 2^d Cor. This Gift is therefore especially attributed to the Father, and termed by Christ, the Promise of the Father, Acts 4. Luke 24. 49. The Spirit of the Father, Mat. 10. 20. from whom Christ, as God-man, received the Spirit first. The Holy Ghost was sent down by the Father upon Christ, as a Dove in his Baptism. God anointed Jesus with the Holy Ghost Acts, 10. 38. and when Christ ascended into Heaven, he received him from the Father, Acts 2. 33. and so he shed him forth on us. And therefore Christ also, as Mediator, was to pray the Father to give the Spirit, John 14. 16. I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, &c.

Yet so as 2ly, Even the Father himself sends him not, but in and through Christ, John 14. 26. The Holy Ghost whom the Father will send in my Name. Through Christ our Saviour, says the Apostle Tit. 3. 6. Which imports not barely the Son's Concurrence, as Second Person, in sending him as well as the Father, even as his Person proceeded from both, (as Job. 15 26. Whom I will send unto you) But further, That Christ as a Redeemer, had a virtual meritorious influence or hand herein; so as for his sake, and thro' his Purchase and Intercession, the Father sends him. Christ purchased not only all the Graces of the Spirit for us; but the Spirit himself, (whom we had forfeited) to dwell in us. We have an express Scripture, Gal. 3. 13, 14. Christ hath Redeemed us from the Curse of the Law, being made a Curse for us: For it is Written, Cursed is every one that Hangeth on a Tree. That the Blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we may receive the promise of the Spirit through Faith. Where there are two ends adequately and alike, made of Christ's being made a Curse for us: 1. That we might receive the Blessing of Abraham. 2. That we might receive the Promise of the Spirit. And for as much as the Gift of the Spirit comes under a Promise, as well as other Blessings, It must needs come under the purchase of Christ's Blood, which confirmed all the Promises. And this, as all the rest of the Promises, are Yea, and Amen in Him. And to this end it is observable, That he breathed not the Spirit until after his Resurrection, But then he did, John 20. 22. And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy-Ghost. He had not shed his Blood until now; And therefore breathed not the Holy-Ghost until now. But Christ having dyed, and having as the Lamb slain, purchased the Spirit, and being ascended up to the Throne of God; He, as the Lamb now sheds forth the Spirit. John 7. 38, 39. He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, Out of his Belly shall flow Rivers of living Water. But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him, should receive: For the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet Glorified. He compares the Spirit, as Communicated to us, to a Spring of living Water. But not as then broke forth Book I. forth, as afterwards it should, because Christ had not dyed, and so entred into Glory. Now compare with it, Rev. 22. 1. And he shewed me a pure river of water of life clear as Christal, proceeding out of the Throne of God and of the Lamb: This water of Life issues, you see, from the Throne of the Lamb, who in the 5 Chap. v. 6. appeared at the Throne of God as the Lamb slain, and Redeeming us with his Blood, and as such doth shed forth the Spirit upon us; And is even there also said to have all the fulness of the Spirit on him, Who hath the seven Spirits; that is, the Holy Ghost in all the varieties of his Gifts and Graces, called seven from perfection. For that the seven Spirits, are taken Metonymically for the Holy-Ghost, is evident by Chap. 1. v. 4. John to the seven Churches of Asia, Grace be unto you, and Peace from him which is, and which was, and which is to come; And from the seven Spirits, which are before his Throne. Hence also when we receive the Cup in the Lords Supper, which is termed the Communion of Christ's Blood (1 Cor. 10.) We are yet said to drink into one Spirit; For that Blood is Vehiculum Spiritus, the Spirit runs in and with this Blood. We therefore know whom we are beholden unto for the Spirit; and whom to go unto for the Spirit, even to the Father, and to Christ, and to his Blood; and to the Father thro' Christ, who gives Commission to the Spirit to work such and such measures of Grace, at such times to fall upon us, and at such and such times to withdraw.

Hence 3ly; The Spirit is given us from meer Grace and Love, and not according to Works; so in the Text those words, Who not according to Works, but Mercy, &c. refer as well to this shedding forth the Holy Ghost, as to his saving us by Regeneration. You may therefore Observe, 2 Cor. 13. 14. That the Grace of the Lord Jesus, and the Love of God the Father, are put before Communion of the Holy Ghost, as that which proceeds from both. The Grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Love of God, And the Communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all, Amen. Therefore in Scriptures, both the Law, the Preaching of it, and the Works of it, are in exprefs words excluded and shut out from having any influence to convey the Spirit to us, that we may never so much as think to obtain the Spirit thereby: Jer. 13. 32. I will make a New Covenant, not according to the Covenant I made with their fathers; but this shall be my Covenant, I will write my Law in their inward parts: Which Compared with Ezek. 36. 26, 27. is renewed with this Addition, I will give you a new Heart, and put my Spirit within you. And you may compare with both 2 Cor. 3. 3. Ye are manifestly declared to be the Epistle of Christ, ministered by us, written not with Ink, but with the Spirit of the living God, not in Tables of Stone, but in fleshy Tables of the Heart: Which clears both. Yea, so far forth, as they in the Old Testament had the Spirit (as they had, Neh. 9. 20. Thou gavest them thy good Spirit to instruct them; and Hag. 2. 5. According to the word I Covenanted with you when ye come came out of Egypt, so my Spirit remaineth with you:) So much Gospel was even then mingled with it, and raning in the veins of it. It was Fædus mixtum, and so in the vertue thereof, the Spirit was (tho' in a lesser measure) given. Therefore when the Gospel came to take place, then the Preaching of the Law, or Ceremonies of it, did not convey the Spirit; to shew that it was purely upon the Covenant of Grace, that the Spirit is given, 2 Cor. 3. 6, 7, 8. Who also hath made us able Ministers of the New Testament; not of the Letter, but of the Spirit: For the Letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth Life. But if the Ministration of Death, written and Engraven in stone, was Glorious, so that the Children of Israel could not stedfastly behold the face of Moses, for the Glory of his Countenance, which Glory was to be done away; how shall not the Ministration of the Spirit be rather Glorious? You see that the old Covenant is the Ministration of the Letter, and of Death; and the New Testament, in exclusion of that old, hath alone obtained this more Excellent Name, The Ministration of the Spirit.

As not the Preaching of the Law, gave the Spirit; so, nor can any Works of the Law obtain the Spirit at God's hands. The Text is as express for this, as for the other, Gal. 3. 2. This only would I learn of you, Received ye the Spirit by the Works of the Law, or by the hearing of Faith? Paul useth that as Argumentum Palmarium, against the Law, as alone sufficient evidence. This one thing (says he) I would learn of you, and let that decide it, Received ye the Spirit by the Works of the Law, or by the hearing of Faith? By Spirit, he here means the Spirit of Regeneration and Sanctification; for v. 5. He speaks of extraordinary Gifts afterwards, and v. 2. he speaks of that receiving which was general to all Believing Galatians, even common to all Saints, to whose Universal Experience he appeals, if ever any one of them had received him upon their doings. Now Extraordinary Gifts were not common to all Saints, no not in those days. And by the hearing of Faith, he means the Doctrine of Faith, the Gospel; and therefore v. 14, 15, 16, 17. he asserts the Spirit to be given freely by the Covenant of Grace, which God afore the Law did Establish with Abraham, and in him together with Isaac (as the Type) with Christ. Gal. 3. 14, 15, 16, 17. That the Blessing of Abraham, might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ: That we might receive the Promise of the Spirit through Faith. Brethren, I speak after the manner of Men; though it be but a Mans Covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no Man disannulleth or addeth thereto. Now to Abraham and his seed, were the Promises made. He saith not, And to seeds; as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ. And this I say, That the Covenant which was confirmed before of God in Christ, the Law (which was Four Hundred and Thirty Years after) cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect. Yea, (to end this) he makes it an evidence of not being under the Law, if a Man hath received the Spirit, and be led by him, Gal. 5. 18. But if ye be led by the Spirit, ye are not under the Law. And for this also it is, that he is called the Spirit of Grace, Heb. 10. 29. Because given freely. He is the Gift of Grace, Eph. 3. 7. and so given upon the terms of the Covenant of Grace.

Hence from both these, appears the difference between Adam's having the Spirit in that Estate of Holiness, and the Saints under the state of Grace. Adam had the Spirit as well as we, and the Holy Ghost was at the making of him, and wrote the Image of God upon his Heart: For where Holiness was, we may be sure the Spirit was too. The Holy Ghost was at that Consultation, Let us make Man, and one of the Us spoken unto. Yea, and that Spirit that moved upon the Waters, who also is sent forth to renew the Face of the Earth (Psal. 104.) The same Spirit was in Adam's Heart to assist his Graces, and cause them to flow and bring forth, and to move him to live according to those Principles of Life given him. But there is this difference between that his having the Spirit, and ours, apparent from what hath already been said.

1. That he concurred with Adam, meerly as the third Person, who joined in all works, and so upon no further accompt then as he concurred in assisting all Creatures else in their kind, to cause the Earth to bring forth Fruits according to their kind; and indeed he must necessarily have an hand in all works of Creation and Providence: Whereas we have the Spirit upon Christ's accompt, in his Name, purchased by him, as whom he had first received; also purchased, as the Head of his Church. And therefore it is Ordinary in Scripture to term this Spirit as now dwelling in us, the Spirit of Christ, Rom. 8. 9. The Spirit of the Son, Gal. 4. 6.

And 2. Hence Adam retained the Spirit according to the tenor of the Covenant of works, (which is but that equal Law of Creation between God and the Creature) whereby he held a Continuance of the priviledges given him at the Creation, even as he did Life in God's sight, upon works of Obedience, DO THIS AND LIVE.

And as by one Act of disobedience he forfeited life, (Cursed is he that continueth not in all things) And so in like manner the Spirit was forfeitable by him upon the same terms: Even as in a man that comes from Adam, one mortal Sin causeth the Soul to depart: So here, one act of sinning caused the Soul to depart; for the Bond of the union ceased. But as it would not be so in a man risen from the dead, and by the power of the second Adam made a quickening Spirit; No wounds would be mortal to such an one: So here the Gift of the Spirit to us is by promise; as Gal. 3. 14, 15, 16, 17. the Apostle argues. The Gift of the Spirit, to a truly converted Soul, is an absolute Gift, and not upon Conditions on our parts; but to work and maintain in us what God requires of us: The Gift of the Spirit is not founded upon qualifications in us to continue so long as we preserve Grace in our Souls, and do not sin it away. I will give you my Spirit to preserve you, and prevent your departing from me, Ezek. 36. 26, 27. I will give you a new heart; but you would soon make it an old one, as bad as ever; to prevent this, it follows, And I will put my Spirit within you: and cause you to walk in my Statutes, and ye shall keep my Judgments, and do them, And so it is said in Jer. 32. 40. Ye shall not depart from me. He comes by virtue of Election on us, as he did on Christ, Isa. 42 1. Behold my Elect in whom my Soul delights; I have put my Spirit upon him. Gal. 4. 6. Because ye are sons, (by Election, namely; as it is said Eph. 15. God having predestinated us to the adoption of Children) God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, And Matt. 10. 20. The Spirit [of your Father] is in you; that is, God having taken on him the relation of your Father, thereupon bestoweth his Spirit on you. And therefore it is that so few of many that hear the same Sermons, receive the Holy Ghost; for he comes on men by the Grace of Election, and so the Spirit picks and chooseth (as God hath done) and rests on this Soul, and not on that; and so (as Isaiab says, Isa. 27. 12.) they are gathered one by one. It goes as it were by lott, as it is (Acts 8. 21.) spoken to Simon Magus, in relation to the Holy Ghost, v. 19. It hath the appearance of Chance, because this man is taken, and not that; When yet it is the eternal good pleasure of God that puts the difference; And the Spirit, that knows God's mind, seizeth on men accordingly; and is said to be as the Wind, that blows where it lists, which is spoken of Regeneration, John 3. 8.

Hence it is that he is given to us for ever, and not to depart from us; the reason is, because his Person is given without Conditions, and to work all conditions; he is so in us as to be with us for ever, John 14. 16, 17. I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever: Even the Spirit of Truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you. He came in Christ the Head, to make his abode in him, John 1. 33. And I knew him not: But he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. Which was a fulfilling of that piece of the Prophecy, Isa. 11. 2. The Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him. To which Peter alludes, speaking also of us, 1 Pet. 4. 14. The Spirit of God resteth on you; and to signify this, when visibly he came upon the Apostles (Acts 2. 3.) It sat upon each of them. Christ's abode among us is compared to the dwelling in a Tabernacle John. 14. And now He dwelt as in a Tabernacle amongst us, for he soon removed to Heaven: But the Spirit dwells in us as in the Temple, which was instead of that moveable habitation, a more fixed, settled abode, 1. Cor. 6. 19. Ye are the Temple of the Holy Ghost: I go and come, says Christ, (John 14. 18, 19.) but he shall be with you, and in you (v. 17) for ever. And therefore he is not only given as the Earnest of our Inheritance, (Eph. 1. 14. and 2. Cor. 5. 5.) a Certain Pawn that we shall have Heaven: But he becomes also from that time a Spring in us never to be damned up, a living Fountain of water, springing up unto eternal life, as Christ himself speaks, comparing John 4. 14. with John 7. 38, 39. Now we do not say the Spring shall continue, whilst Water is in the Stream; but Water shall continue in the Stream, and bubble up whilst there is a Spring. If indeed the Spring could fail, the might fail. Now the Holy Ghost is given to become a perpetual spring, both of grace and glory. And accordingly also (1 Pet. 1. 23.) The Holy Ghost is said to be The incorruptible Seed of which we are begotten, which some have understood to be meant of the Word: but that is put in besides, as the instrumental cause, in the words following, By the Word of God. Nor is it the New Creature which is there meant, for that is the thing begotten in us: But the principal cause of whom we are begotten, is the Holy Spirit, John 3. 6. That which is begotten of the Spirit. Now he is called the incorruptible seed, because he is cast into the Soul with the Word, as the prolific Vertue in the Word; which is the seed, materially, but the Spirit virtually. And this also shews the difference between this giving the Spirit by vertue of Election, and that Communication of him to temporary Believers that fall away, who are said, Heb. 6. to be Partakers of the Holy Ghost, as Saul; The Spirit of the Lord came on Saul. (1 Sam. 10. 10.) but so as to depart away again, 1 Sam. 16. 14. Thus on Balaam he did, (Numb. 24. 2, 3.) and opened his eyes. The fundamental difference lyes in the differing Terms of the gift of the Spirit, insinuated here in the text: That many receive the Spirit not from God as a Father by vertue of Election; or through Christ as a Saviour: They receive not, as Children, the Spirit of God as from a Father; as Rom. 8. 14, 15. as also Matt. 10. 20. And as Christs Speech also (in³ John 14 and 15 Chapters, I will pray the Father, &c.) do import: But they receive him from God out of Dominion and Sovereignty, and from Christ as a Lord, who hath brought even wicked men to serve him, 2 Pet. 2. 1. This distinction of this double receiving the Spirit, the Apostle insinuates both in that Rom. 8. and Gal. 6, 7. 8. In that Rom. 8. 15. He speaks of a Spirit of Bondage, which as Servants, they in some measure or other had formerly received from God; look in what state men stand to God, they answerably more or less have a portion of his Spirit on them: If they are only in the state of Servants, they have a Spirit of Bondage working legally that fear of Death which is in all men, Heb 2. 15. And deliver them, who through fear of Death, were all their life time subject to Bondage. The one place interprets the other. Those stirrings of Guilt and Condemnations which are in all men's hearts, are from workings of the Spirit in all men. The same Spirit that moved upon the waters (Gen. 1.) moves upon all men's hearts. Now if men live under the preaching of the Law and Gospel, then the same Spirit falls with higher works upon the Spirits of men unrenewed, yet still but upon the same account that is mentioned Gen. 6. 3. My Spirit shall not always strive with Man, for that he also is but Flesh. He had spoken of the Sons of God, (v. 2.) that were the Professors of that Age, who lived under Noah's Ministry, a Preacher of Righteousness, Heb. 11. 7. And he went with his Ministry in a way of striving with, and opposing Mens Corruptions in their Hearts; of which Peter. (1 Pet. 3. 18.) having said that Christ was quickned or raised by the Spirit, he adds (v. 19.) by which Spirit also he went and Preached unto the Spirits in Prison, W H I C H S O M E T I M E S were disobedient, when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the Ark was a preparing, when few, that is, Eight Souls, were saved by water. These Men were Corrupt, and remained flesh, and yet received the Spirit, striving with them from God, as the Lord and Judge of the World, who to men fallen, gives his Spirit, as at first he did to Adam, with a new stock of Gifts and Motions: But deals with them therein but upon a Covenant of Works. It is a Favour indeed to give him, as all outward Gifts of the Spirit are, but their Persons being under the Covenant of Works, and servants, their retaining this Spirit is according to the terms thereof; and so it proves in the issue, and their improving that Gift is managed according to the dispensation of such a Covenant: And so they, by opposing and resisting such strivings of the Spirit, God withdraws him: For he says, My Spirit shall not always strive. He deals with them as with Servants, that are untoward and rebellious, John 8. 35. The servant abides not in the House for ever; but as Hagar was turn'd out of Doors and inherited not, so 'tis here: But (says Christ) a Son abides Book I. for ever in the House, and therefore they, as Children, receive the Spirit of Adoption, to cry, Abba Father. And the Spirit of Christ, as their Head, remains in them, and they are overcome and led by the Spirit of God. These are Sons, and that they may abide in the House forever, this Spirit abides in them for ever. You have the very same distinction of Men, Receiving the Spirit, as Servants and as Sons, Gal. 4. 6, 7. Because ye are Sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son, into your Hearts, crying Abba Father: Wherefore thou art no more a Servant, but a Son, an heir of God through Christ. The meaning is, they receive the Spirit as Sons, not as Servants, as others do. To which add, v. 22, 23, &c. Where Hagar and Ishmael, and Sarah and Isaac, are made the Types of these two conditions of Men living in the Church, as they did in Abrahams Family, and Christ, John 8. alluded evidently unto it, in that Speech fore-quoted, v. 33, 34, 35. They answered him, We be Abraham's Seed, and were never in Bondage to any Man; how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free? Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever commiteth Sin is the servant of Sin: And the Servant abideth not in the House for ever, but the Son abideth ever. Both these living under the means, had dealings with God; Gen. 21. v. 17, 18, 19, 20. And the Angel of God called to Hagar out of Heaven, and said unto her, What aileth thee, Hagar? Fear not; for God hath heard the voice of the Lad, where he is. Arise, lift up the Lad, and hold him in thine hand; for I will make him a great Nation. And God was with the Lad, &c. But yet this was but according to the Covenant of Works, whereof they were types: And their Spirits used all Gifts, Motions, Visions, &c. in such a way, and so at last the Spirit was withdrawn from them.

And therefore let not that deceive you, that Men that fall away, are said to be partakers of the Holy Ghost, &c. for they may be so, when yet they are not Sons. The Holy Ghost comes to some as a wayfaring Man, for a night. But do you not feel that though he may withdraw many Effects, yet still his Person is in you, and works even amidst your sinnings to reduce you again to God, and suffers you not to be finally overcome; but frames your Hearts so as you give your selves up to be led by him, and you treat with God of his abode in you, and of your Salvation, not upon a Covenant of Works, but Grace. Look to your tenure, by which God guides your Hearts to seek the Spirit and Salvation. Every Man's Heart and Spirit (as a Pen in his hand) is guided to write his own Deeds and Terms he holds Salvation on. Dost thou treat with God, as a Son, upon meer terms of Free Grace, renouncing Ishmael's Covenant and Tenure, not daring to treat with God upon these Terms, If I walk thus, and thus, God will give and continue his Spirit to me: No, but thou sayest as David, Lord, give me thy constant Spirit to work all in me, to cause me to walk in thy Statutes, Psal. 51. 10, 11. Create in me a clean Heart, O God; and renew a right Spirit within me. Cast me not away from thy presence; and take not thy Holy Spirit from me. In the Margent it is, a constant Spirit within me; and if this is thy dependance and thy Salvation, and if upon these Terms thou holdest and retainest the Spirit, thou art a Son. You esteem it in Lands as a matter of great moment, the Tenure, whether it be Free-hold, or Copy-hold. My Brethren, know there is a Free-hold of the Spirit, and a Copy-hold: And go over but thy Prayers, and the Workings of thy Spirit with God, and thou wilt easily see thy Tenure.

C H A P. IX.

That we not only partake of the Effects of the Holy Spirit's Operations in us, but also of his Person dwelling in us.

THERE is a Gift of his Person, First and Chiefly, or Primarily; but Secondarily of his Graces, to be wrought in us by him. And in this Gift of his Person doth consist the greatness, the richness of the Gift. This is expressed in those words, Whom he shed on us richly, Tit. 3. 6. This, I say, is intended of his Person first, and simply, and then of his Graces and Effects, as in the second place intended to us, as those which accompany the Gift of his Person, and as Hand-maids upon it, and do flow from and depend upon the bestowing and gift of himself. Thus there is the Gift of the Person of Christ to us, and for us: And there is the Gift of all those Benefits which he hath purchased; but the Gift of his Person is, of the two, greater infinitely than that of his Benefits; as the Person is more worth, than the Dowry. And thus you are to look at the gift of the Person of the Spirit more than all his χαρίσματα or Gifts. Let us hear how the Scripture speaks to this great Point, and sets a value and indigitation upon it, as in distinction from his Graces, Rom. 5. 5. The Love of God is shed abroad in our Hearts, by the Holy Ghost which is given to us. Here you may observe a set distinction made between this one Effect of the Spirit in us, viz. The shedding abroad the Love of God in our Hearts, and the Gift of the Person of the Spirit: And how there is brought in a manifest super-addition of the Gift of his Person over and above that Effect of shedding Gods love. By the Spirit (says he) Which he hath given us. Thus he speaks of the gift of the Person himself singly and apart, distinct from the other; yea, and as being the Foundation of it. Take this Instance and Comparison. God having given a Wife to a Man, by whom he hath had such and such Children, such and such an Estate, Benefits and Priviledges, when mention is made of any one of those good things that accrued by her, she to heighten the Mercy of the Gifts by the consideration of the Person by means of whom the Man hath them) might say, All these things are by the Wife which God hath given thee. The same import you have in other such Appendixes and Additional Clauses to the like purpose. Acts 5. 32. And we (that is Apostles) are his Witnesses, (that is, Christs) of these things; and so is also the Holy Ghost, (which manifestly refers to his Person.) The Apostle adds, Whom God hath given to them that obey him; Thus notably holding up unto their view the greatness of this Gift. And indeed the pouring forth the Holy-Ghost, is all the Discourse of the first Ten Chapters of the Acts. And therefore it is elsewhere called the Gift of the Holy Ghost, Acts. 10. 45. It is not χαρίσματα (spoken of 1 Cor. 12.) Gifts, in the plural, as speaking of his Graces; But it is the Gift, as one absolute full and intire Gift, once given for all; his Person containing virtually all other parcels and particular Gifts which he after works. The like addition to signifie this, you may observe, 1 Cor. 6. 19. Your Bodies are Temples of the Holy Ghost, which is in you, whom ye have of God. This refers also manifestly to his Person, as I shall have occasion further to shew; and it comes in, to mind them of the greatness of the Gift, and the special Favour of the Do-

Book I. nor, whom ye have of God. Again you have it, 1 Cor. 2. 13. We have received the Spirit which is of God, that we may know the free Gift of God to us. Here is a double Gift, and both from God, distinguished: 1. The Grace or Gifts of God and his Spirit bestowed on us, τα χαριδέντα or χαρίσματα: and 2. The Gift of the Person of the Spirit, distinct from these; whom we receive (says he) as given by God first, and so received by us. And he is Given (as to other ends) so that we may know these things he gives us, or works in us, the Gift of which is distinct from that of his Person, which is set out further by this τὸ πνεῦμα τῷ Θεῷ. The Spirit is out of God himself, and proceeding from him, and he is in God, as the Spirit of a Man in a Man. v. 11.

The reason of this is, Because the Spirit is given us by the Covenant of Grace, which Covenant makes freely over all that is in God unto us, and for our good; All, both Attributes and Persons in him; the donation thereof running thus; I will be thy God, and thou shalt be my People. I use to say that the Covenant of Grace, is in all the Transactions a Covenant of Persons. Consider that of Election in the Fathers Hand, He pitch'd not on Qualifications but Persons, afore they had done good or evil, Rom. 9. 13. And therefore so long as the persons remain, his Love remains; and thence he works that in the Person, which may make him Comely, Eph. 1. 4. He hath Chosen us in him, before the foundation of the World, that we should be Holy, and without blame before him in love. And Christ when he comes, he gives his Person, He gave himself, as every where it is said, both to us, and for us; And he dyed not for abstracted Propositions, but Persons. I lay down my life for my sheep, and I know them by name. And when he applyes his Blood to us, he gives us himself, and the Soul in the end seeks his Person also. As Paul did, Phil. 3. 8. Thus answerably in the third Person, the Gift of the Holy Ghost is the Gift of his Person to dwell in us.

The next thing to be considered is his coming upon us, and his dwelling in us. I have two Assertions to add concerning this.

1. Concerning his coming upon us, and God's shedding him forth: My Assertion is, That the first coming of the Holy Ghost is immediately upon us, as we are in our natural Condition, in our uncleanness and pollution, without any preparation to make way for his coming upon us, or into us. He doth not work Grace first, and then come into a man; but he comes first and seizeth on a man, then works Grace in him. and this the Text in Tit. 3. 6. insinuates when weighing the Mercy thereof, the Apostle says, He shed his Spirit upon us: On us; how qualified? The fourth verse tells us, Us, when disobedient, serving divers Lusts and Pleasures. And he then sent him, to renew us, v. 5. Such were the vessels when this precious liquor was first poured into them, and upon them. And his coming first thus on men, when in their natural state, is exemplified in the Corinthians; yea, and pressed on them as a great point, which the Apostle would have them seriously to mind and consider, to the end they might ascribe unto the Holy Ghost his due Glory, 1 Cor. 12. 1, 2, 3. Now concerning Spiritual Gifts, Brethren, I would not have you ignorant: Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carryed away unto those dumb Idols, even as ye were led. Wherefore I will give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God, calleth Jesus accursed; and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost. Being to treat of Spiritual Gifts infused into the People of God, He prefaceth this, I would have you (says he) know and consider these things about them. 1st. That the Author of them is wholly and intirely the Spirit of God. No man can say, or confess out of Conviction of Judgment, that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost. And the embracing of this Foundation of Christian Religion, was before any further Spiritual Gift was Communicated unto you, but was indeed the foundation of bestowing it, for no man, speaking by the Spirit, calleth Jesus an Execration. Then 2. Says he I would have you remember the Condition you were in, when the Spirit of God began first to teach you this; you were all Idolaters, led away as bruit beasts beasts after dumb Idols, when also you execrated and abominated our Jesus, (as to this day the Jews and Heathens do) When it was certain therefore, that you had not the Spirit of God in you; for no man that hath the Spirit calleth Christ accursed, as ye then did. So then, who was the first Beginner of this great Change and Alteration, but the Spirit of God? And 3. If this were your Condition, (as it was) what did or could the Spirit find in you, as preparatory and inviting of him thereunto? Absolutely nothing at all. The lowest and first step which can be supposed to be out of Heathenism into Christianity, viz. The Thoughts and Profession that our Jesus is the Lord and Christ, even this first thought, which is the introduction to all, you, says the Apostle, had from the Spirit of God first, as well as you have been enlightned by him since.

4. He would have them further consider, That they, when they were thus Idolatrous, were acted and possessed by another greater Spirit than their own, who invisibly was in them, and yet effectually wrought in them, and had possession of their Minds, Fancies, and Affections (which unless he had been in them he could not have) Even Satan, that evil Spirit, the God of this world, who (as it is said 2 Cor. 4. 4.) blinded these Heathens. This he clearly insinuates to them (and puts it in, as in opposition to their now having the Spirit of God) in these words, Ye were led after Dumb Idols. Led, even as Bruit Beasts are at the pleasure of them that possess them; And led by some other Spirit than their own. It had been impossible else that so many wise Heathens should have worshipped Dumb Idols (as on purpose he terms them) themselves having reasonable Souls, that thought and spake, which those Idols, that had eyes, and saw not, wanted. Now then the Apostle would have them consider that ere their Judgments could be led to own Christ as Lord, this evil Spirit must be dispossessed; and another Spirit, even the Spirit of God, come in his room; and possess their hearts, and so lead them into all the truth they then possess; without which they had never embraced the first Element or Principle of Christian verity. From which instance and experiment in the Corinthians, I infer, That the Spirit of God, when he converts men to things Spiritual, comes upon a man (when an Heathen (suppose, as then the World went) or on us) when unregenerate. And it is confirmed by this, that the Holy Ghost reveals not any Truth, or works any saving good, but a man first hath him sent down into his heart. He is first sent and shed upon us, ere we are led into all, or any Truth; as the 14, 15, 16 chapters of John shew. We receive him as an Uction first, ere he savingly teacheth us any Truth 1 John 2. 20. Ye have an Uction from the Holy One (which is the Spirit, Acts 10. 38.) And ye know all things, first and last. All that ye know in Spirituals, it is from him; yea, and by having him first. And as from having him first, it is that we begin to know; so that we continue to know and acknowledge Spiritual things savingly, is from his abiding in us. He in his first Person is first said to abide, and so to go on to teach us. So v. 27. of that Chapter, But the anoynting which ye have received of him, abides in you; but, as the same Anoynting teacheth you of all things, and is Truth, and is no lye: And even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in him. So then these Idolatrous Corinthians, when they were converted to God, had first the Spirit communicated to them, casting out that evil Spirit, and possessing his room in them, ere they could be taught the first letter in this School. Which agrees with what Christ says of the casting out Satan, in order to men's Conversions, (unto which Christ's scope extends) Matt. 12. 27, 28. If I by Belzebul cast out Devils, by whom do your Children cast them out? Therefore they shall be your Judges: But if I cast out Devils by the Spirit of God, then the Kingdom of God is come unto you. with which compare Luke 11. 20, 21, 22. &c. It is said by Mathew, that it is the Spirit, by Luke the finger of God, by whom Christ professeth to cast out Devils, in men to be converted, as well as out of men possessed. This Spirit he compares there to a stronger than Satan, that comes upon him immediately as he is in his house, or place, binds him, and overcomes him; And so himself enters in, as Mathew's and Mark's phrase is. For it is Entry and Possession the Holy Ghost aims at; and it is the first thing he doth, after he hath pulled forth Satan that was in possession, and bound him;

Book I. him; and then being entred, he throws out his Goods and Weapons, mortifies Corruptions, and sanctifies the Heart, and leads the Soul into saving Truths. And this is it which Paul insinuates, That he came upon these Corinthians, cast out the Spirit that led them into Error, entred himself, and led them into Truth. And it was as necessary he should first come on them, ere they could Spiritually assent to the first or least Truth, as it is necessary he comes on us, and abides in us, to lead us into all Truth else. And therefore it evidently follows, both 1. That the shedding forth, or entring in of the Holy Spirit, is the first foundation to all wrought in us; and 2. That therefore this his coming upon us and entring into us, is immediately without any preparation, when men are unregenerate. When Christ indeed comes to dwell in our hearts by faith, as Eph. 3. 17. there need be preparation in our hearts for that his coming, and there is a preparing the way of the Lord. For he is to be received by our Faith as a Saviour and Redeemer, and therefore we cannot receive him as supposed to be such, until we see our selves sinners. But our receiving the Spirit is not Objective, as we receive an Object into our Understandings or Hearts, and so needs no preparation on our parts; for he himself must first come to work all Apprehensions and Affections in us, from first to last, Gal. 4. 6. He sends his Spirit into our hearts, crying, Abba Father, and he Cries as he comes along.

There are two or three Objections which I will answer.

Obj. 1. Can we imagine that the Spirit of God, who is so Holy a Spirit, will come and enter into and possess himself of an unclean filthy and defiled Heart, in the fulness and spring-tide of it's filth and uncleanness? Doth he not rather first make the Heart Holy, and then by that Holiness dwell therein, seating himself in the new Creature which he first creates? Thus indeed some have Evangelized, and thereupon distinguished between his coming upon us, as at first, and his dwelling in us.

But I answer.

Ans. 1. I. That if the Spirit could be defiled in so doing, he would not do it; but this Earth mudds not the Water that gets into it to become a Spring, no more then the Sun Beams are by shining into a dunghil.

Ans. 2. II. The substance of the Soul (which he comes to) is his own, and comes to make it clean, which he cannot do, unless he gets within it. It is well for us he is so Holy; for no other Water but of this Preciousness, would have Virtue and Power to cleanse us. And this is no more absurdity than to say, That pure Water is poured first into a Vessel to take away the filth of it; Or that fire gets into, and fills the pores of Metals in the Ore, whilst full of dross, to burn out, and consume, and separate it from them, Now these are the Comparisons the Scripture useth Ezek. 36. 15. I will sprinkle clean Water upon you: An is not that pity, you will say, that not only Water, but clean Water, should be poured upon defiled Hearts, utterly defiled? God prevents the Objection, in telling us that he thinks not much at this cost. The cleanest sweetest Water that Heaven affords, he chooseth, viz. His own Holy Spirit: But the Water is so clean, as it receives no Tincture whilst it runs through you, and cleanseth you; as it there follows, And ye shall be clean from all your filthiness; and from all your Idols will I cleanse you; and a new Heart will I give you. And this is interpreted to be the Spirit, verse 27. I will put my Spirit within you; not upon you only; that will not serve to cleanse; he therefore puts him first into you. And what is this, but what you read, 1 Cor. 6. 9. Such were some of you; but ye are Washed; there is the Genus, or in Common the Spirits work; the particulars follow: But ye are sanctified, but ye are justified, in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God. The Spirit must do both: And it is no strange thing thing ye should receive the Spirit, and he come into you to do all these ere ever you are sanctified or justified. That other comparison of Fire, I need not insist on: You have it Isa. 4. 4. When the Lord shall have purged the Blood of Jerusalem by the Spirit of Burning. You know how the Holy Ghost in this respect is compared to Fire up and down the New-Testament. Now what is it to the Fire to enter into what is drossy and defiled to eat it out and consume it? Such Fuel is proper for it to seize on, and shew it's power upon. And what is it to this rushing Wind, to enter into the middle of a rotten House (the old Man) and blow it down; and rear up a new one in the room of it? And what is it for this strong man to enter into Satan's House, whilst he is in it, and throw him out; and spoil and rife all his Goods, and throw them out after him? He will not stand without doors to do it, as Christ also tells us.

Chap. 9.

A Second Objection is out of John 14. 17. Where Christ speaking of the Spirit, says, Whom the World (or Men Unregenerate) cannot receive, because they see him not, neither know him; but ye know him, for he dwelleth with you, &c.

The Answer is clear. That promise of the Spirit there is meant of him as a Comforter, and Assurer of Salvation; so v. 16. I will pray the Father, and he will give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever. Now, as such, he can never come first on an Unregenerate Man; but he must be a Spirit of Bondage first to him, and (as Chap. 16. 8.) Convince the World of sin: And therefore they in that condition are not capable of the Spirit as a Sealer; for they must have Regeneration first; and Faith first wrought, Eph. 1. 13. After ye believed, ye were sealed with the Spirit of Promise. So as Christ's plain meaning is this, you that are already Believers, and have already experimentally felt the workings of this Spirit in you, you know him; (says he) and to you, and to others that know him, by having been already wrought upon, I will send him as a Comforter, to fill your Hearts with joy in believing, unspeakable and glorious. But unregenerate Men are utterly incapable of this Priviledge, for they know him not in these first effects of Regeneration, and change of Heart; and therefore, as a Comforter, they see not nor know him. He must be a Regenerator, ere a Comforter. Receive him they may, to convert them; but not thus to assure them, until he hath wrought Regeneration in them, as he hath done on you.

Answe.

I shall now discourse about the in-dwelling, or in-being of the Spirit in us, after he is thus come: Concerning which, my Assertion is this,

That the Indwelling of the Spirit also is of his Person Primarily and immediately, and by his Graces secundarily. And although it be with his Graces, yet it is not primarily by his Graces, but his Person is given to dwell in us immediately and for ever; and his Graces secundarily. Our Persons (Bodies and Souls) are the Temples of his Person immediately; his Graces are the hangings, the Furniture, that he may dwell like himself: ut habitate decore; that he may dwell handsomely. He is an Holy Spirit, and Holiness becomes his House, as the Psalmist speaks; and so tho' he comes first into bare Walls, yet he afterwards adorns them. You have a parallel made in the Scriptures of this point of his indwelling, with that former, of the Gift of him. That as his Person hath been shewed to be the great Gift, and his Graces the secundary Gift; so his indwelling is primarily added to his Person, and to his Graces secundarily. Because sometimes in Scripture the Spirit is used to express his Graces, the Cause being put for the Effect; therefore, it hath been generally almost asserted that he dwells no otherwise in us, then by having wrought such and such Graces. But my position is, That as the Person of the Spirit is primarily given, so his Person doth primarily dwell in us; and his Graces secundarily. And this I hope to make clear by parallel Scriptures to those other.

I. That

Book I. I. That text in 1 Cor. 6. 19. (which I said I should have recourse to again) shews it. Your Bodies (and therefore much more your Souls) are the Temples of the Holy Ghost, who is in you. It was not sufficient for him to say they were as his Temples, for him to be worship'd in, by and through the Graces he puts in them; but he adds, Who is in you, whom ye have of God: Besides what afore was said, it appears further thus: For as he heightens their sin of Fornication, in the former verse, that it is against the Person of Christ, in respect of their relation to him as an Husband; so in like manner in this verse, that it is against the Person of the Holy Ghost, an Indweller in them. Ye are the Temples of the Holy Ghost, who is in you. It is therefore made a distinctive property of the Holy Ghost, as in relation to the Saints, (Even as Procession is proper to him, in Relation to the Father) That he is the Indweller in us, 2 Tim. 1. 14. That good thing which was committed unto thee, keep by the Holy Ghost, which dwelleth in us. You may observe that in the place before cited, how still there came in this super-additional Clause, By the Holy Ghost which is given to us. So in like manner that other Clause, the Holy Ghost which dwells in us, where the Person of the Holy-Ghost, as thus dwelling in us, is spoken of as abstracted and severed from his Grace by two Characters, 1. That he exhorts Timothy to keep the truth in faith and love, v. 13. as also v. 14. That whole frame both of Grace and form of Truth, which he calls that good thing committed to him by the Holy Ghost: For evidently severing the Holy Ghost's Person as the Conservator of Faith and love of the Truth, and of all that is good within us, or committed to us. He distinguisheth him (I say) from these Graces, as the things that are to be preserved by him: For else he should exhort to keep these Graces by these Graces themselves, if he meant that they were these Graces by which the Holy Ghost doth only dwell within us. Secondly, His Exhortation to Timothy runs not thus: By the Holy Ghost who dwells in thee, which yet had been more proper, if he had intended the Indwelling of those Graces in him, but he speaks generally by the Holy Ghost who dwells in thee and us; all in Common.

II. It may be observed, that whereas both God and Christ, those other two Persons, are also in Scripture said to be in us, and to dwell in us; Yet this of Indwelling is more special, and immediationi suppositi, attributed to the Holy Ghost: Which as it serves to give him an honour peculiar to him, so when set in such a Comparison, even with them, must needs be meant, and understood of his Person immediately, and not by his Graces only. Yea the other two Persons are said to dwell in us and the God-head it self, because the Holy-Ghost dwells in us; he being the Person that makes entry, and takes possession first, in the Name and for the Use of the other Two, and so bringeth them in. I shall but name the place, which looks this way, Eph. 2. 22. Ye are an habitation unto God by the Spirit: 1 Cor. 3. 16. know ye not that ye are the Temple of God, namely the Father, or (if ye will) the God-head it self. And it follows by a speciall addition, And that the Spirit of God dwells in you. So giving the original foundation or ground how we came to be Temples of God, Because the Spirit of God dwells there: Or, as afterwards, Chap. 6. The Spirit which ye have of God: Likewise, 1 John 3. 24. He that keepeth his Commandments dwelleth in him, and he in him. Take it either of God the Father, or the Son, for he had spoken of either, v. 23. And hereby we know that he abideth in us by the Spirit which he hath given us, whom we feel dwelling and working in our Hearts; And therefore our Divines have generally affirmed it, that Christ is said to dwell in us, because first his Spirit dwells in us, from Rom. 8. 9, 10. compared. Now to me it were strange, to interpret such speeches that God and Christ dwells in us, because their Spirit dwells in us; and then by the Spirit mean only his Grace, or the Spirit only by his Grace; for the Spirit of God being a third Person, must needs be acknowledged an Indweller, as well as the other two; yea, and to come in between them and his own Grace; seeing their dwelling in us is attributed to his. The truth is, that it is in this Union of ours with God, as in that of Christ: That look as in the Union of the man Jesus, unto the Son of God, and in the Indwelling of the Son of God in that hu-humane Nature, the Son of God first and originally dwells there, and he dwelling therein, the Father is in the Man, and the Spirit is in him, and he in the Father: So is it here in this subordinate Union of ours, that the Third Person comes as the first Inmate in us, and he taking possession, the other Two come in, and take up their abode also.

Or if you will, you may view it in the Spirit's comforting of us, which holds parallel to this. Christ first promiseth to send the Spirit, as our Comforter, into us; And when he is come, (says John 14. 16, 17.) I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever; Even the Spirit of Truth, whom the World cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him, for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you. And in that day (v. 20.) ye shall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you. If any man love me, (v. 23.) my Father will love him, and we will come to him, and make our abode with him. So the Spirit comes first. And thus it is even in their Indwelling also; So as indeed it may be rightly urged to the point in hand; that if it be thus, that God and Christ dwell in us, because his Spirit dwells in us; That then much more it must be granted, that his Graces are said to be, and to dwell in our Hearts; because the Spirit first and primarily, who is the Author of them, doth so: As the Beams do therefore dwell in this visible World, or the Heavens, because the Sun doth first and originally dwell there, whose Emanations and flowings forth they are. I might bring an invincible Argument from this, That he first comes ere he works Grace, but I refer it to the next head.

I observe that Gifts and Graces are called the manifestation of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 12. 7. that is, an outward Demonstration or Manifestation in Men of that Spirit that dwells and abides within the Heart, and is invisible. The seeing of the Eye, the hearing of the Ear, the Acting of the Fancy, and Speech in the Tongue, are the manifestation of the Soul that dwells in the Body; and dwells not there by these, but with these; and in order, the Soul it self is that ἐνέργεια that actus primus of these, as actus secundi. And such is the Spirit to our Souls, and his Grace; he dwelling first in us himself. And therefore as animalis homo is a man that hath no more but a Soul in him, that informs him, and acts him, without the Spirit of God; So oppositely, he is a Spiritual man (you have the opposition, 2 Cor. 2. 15.) that hath received into his Heart the Spirit of God, (read all the verses afore) that he might know the things of God.

The Objection which hath diverted Men from this Assertion, is, That the Person of the Holy Ghost is every where, Psal. 139. 7. Whither shall I go from thy Spirit? Or whither shall I fly from thy Presence? If I ascend up into Heaven, thou art there, &c. And in that respect his Person is as much in a Worm, as in the Saints, and in all alike; therefore how can his Person be said to dwell more in the Saints, then elsewhere, otherwise than by his Effects and Graces?

1. According to the severity of this reason, the second Person, the Son of God, should not be said to dwell otherwise in the Humane Nature of Christ, then by Effects and Graces, which Col. 2. 9. He is said to do, for in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead Bodily; in distinction from Saints and Angels. For essentially, as he is God, he is also in the meanest Creature; and yet the Person of the Son, and the God-head it self, dwells personally in that Nature, and not the Graces only. Now what is it makes that indwelling to be more than by Graces and Effects, and so puts that vast difference? All acknowledge that it is because he takes up that Humane Nature into a nearer relation to his Person, so as to be one Person with it immediately; and such an Union Graces alone work not, nor gives Foundation unto: And so he dwells in him upon that accompt.

Book I. Well then 2ly, 'Tis true that into so Near and High a Relation, the Saints are not taken up; They are not made one with the Spirit, nor doth the Spirit dwell in them upon that accompt. The Spirit dwelling in a Saint, is not said to be made flesh, as the Word is, John 1. 14. for then what Good or Evil the Saints do, would personally be accompted the Holy Ghost's; Our Prayers his, subjectively; yea, and our Sins, his; as the Blood and Obedience of that Man Jesus, was the Blood and Obedience of God, and the Son of God. Therefore our Relation to the Holy-Ghost's Person, is not so near by God's Ordination. Yet, 3ly. (as to the point in hand) We are capable and are made partakers by the like Ordination and free gift of God, of a Relation, or Propriety rather, to the very Person of the Holy-Ghost: Which tho' it be lower then that of the Son of God, to humane nature, in Christ God-man; yet it is not founded upon Graces, but is beyond them, and before them, even by God's free and absolute Gift and Donation of his Person to us, in order to such Graces, and the working of them in us! So as that this Person should indeed dwell in us, in reference to Graces as the final cause, but not the Instrument at all, or means of his Indwelling. It is Unio Personarum, an Union of two Persons immediately, us, and him, remaining two Persons still: As that of Marriage is of two Persons immediately, in order to such and such ends, And 'tis not unio personalis, to become one Person, as that of the two Natures Christ, the Humane, and the Divine. Which is unio duorum Naturarum, but not unio naturalis, of two Natures, but not into one Nature, but one Person. And this difference was exemplified in Christ himself our Head, in the Man Christ Jesus, in whom the Spirit of God dwells not personally, for then Christ would be one Person with the Holy-Ghost, as well as with the Son of God; nor doth the Father dwell personally in Christ, for then all three Persons should have been said to be incarnate. And yet I suppose none will say that the Person of the Spirit, nor of the Son, dwells in the Man Jesus only by means of his Graces. But further the Person of the Spirit first rests on the Man Christ, which Person he hath a right unto, that he should dwell in him, because that Man Christ Jesus is now united to the second Person personally; and so to his Graces secondarily. So as if we ask whether in order of nature the Person of the Spirit dwells in him first, or the Spirit by his Graces; we may without any hesitation answer, The Person of the Spirit primarily, and then his Graces. Unto which, seems to me, to accord that in Isa. 11. 12. Where it is first said, The Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him; namely, the Person of the Holy-Ghost, simply and absolutely considered; Then relatively, as in order to endowing him with such and such particular Graces, viz. The Spirit of Wisdom and Understanding, the Spirit of Counsel and Might, the Spirit of Knowledge, and of the Fear of the Lord.

Now for the manner of the Indwelling of the Holy-Ghost's Person; it is no Error to affirm that it is the same in us and the Man Christ Jesus. Sure we are capable of it, and therefore shall have it, we being to be conformed to his Image and Likeness (as he to ours) in all that is possible, as he was to us, sin only excepted; so we to him, the personal Union, and the Priviledge of it, excepted. Only indeed we differ herein from him, in two things. 1. In the Measure; for he hath the Spirit given him without measure, in his Effects. 2. In the Right to this indwelling of his Person in us, and in him. He holds it as a Royalty, and one of the greatest, from his Personal union with the Son of God. We hold it in his Right, and by vertue of the Covenant of Grace, and free Donation; for because we are Sons adopted in him, He hath sent the Spirit of his Son into our Hearts, Gal. 4. 6. But the Modus, the manner of the Indwelling, is one and the same.

These things long since satisfied me in this great point; and I submit them to Judgment.

C H A P. X.

The Uses of the Foregoing Doctrine.

LET us view with Admiration the Riches of this Gift of the Person of the Holy Ghost; 'Tis the word which the Apostle useth here in the Text, whom he shed upon us, πλουσιῶς, Richly. Let us value him accordingly. You value the things (every one of them) which God hath given us: Then value the Spirit much more, who is the Author of the most, and Discoverer of them all. Take the most pretious of Graces, like pretious Faith (as Peter calls it) Assurance of the Love of God, which is the earnest of Glory; the Gift of the Spirit that works this Faith, and the Shedder abroad of this Love, is infinitely greater. And therefore in Rom. 5. 5. After the enumeration of Faith, and all the Fruits of it, Peace with God, Rejoycing in Hope of Glory, Patience, Experience, shedding abroad the Love of God in our Hearts; it is super-added, as more then all these, being the Root, the Spring of all, The Spirit which he hath given us. Yea, and as in verses 6, 7, 8. He sets out the greatness of the Love of God, that gave Christ to dye for us: So in those verses afore said, He would in like manner insinuate the greatness of that Love, that gave us this Holy Spirit to work all these Graces in us, and reveal the Love which God hath so Commended. Infomuch as this hath been started as matter of debate, and most serious Consideration, by some Divines; Whether Filius datus, (Isa. 9.) To us a Son is given, or Spiritus datus, The Spirit given, (Rom. 5.) be the richer Favour? Whether the Incarnation, God manifest in the Flesh; or the diffusion, or pouring forth of the Spirit upon all flesh, be the greater Mercy? From Heaven they both came down; The Spirit as well as the Son, 1 Pet. 1. 2. and from the Bosome of the Father both: They are both of them Pawns, and Earnests, and Witnesses alike, of one and the same Love. It is also a dispute among Interpreters, whether the Gift of God, which κατ' ἐξουσίαν (as tis call'd) is predicated so much, and held at so high a rate, John 4. 10. be Christ, or the Spirit: Jesus answered and said unto her, If thou knewest the Gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living Water. It is questioned whether, as the sole sufficient satisfying Object of our Desires, is the Gift of the Son, or the Gift of the Spirit? Whether Christ means himself, or the Holy Ghost, as given to us? Many carry it to Christ, but the Context more clearly carries it to the Spirit: For 1. The Gift of God (as there) seems to be distinguished from, rather then explained by, that which follows. Who it is that saith to thee; and give me drink, seem as two things, not one and the same. And 2. That Gift is clearly, that living Water, which God and Christ give, and that is the Spirit, v. 14. being compared with John 7. 38, 39. In the Old Testament you hear of it, as more then all the Mercies of Giving the Law, or bringing out of Egypt. Thou gavest them thy good Spirit to instruct them; So Nehem. 9. 20. 30. It is Twice Expressed, As also Isaiab 63. When he Professeth to mention the loving Kindness of the Lord, according to all he hath bestowed upon us, v. 7. Where you may see how he heaps up and multiplies words to set out the Riches of God's mercies by: And this he reckons the greatest of their Sins, that They rebelled and vexed his Holy Spirit, as the greatest mercy of all, and therefore he fought against them v. 10. And then himself remembers what his kindness of old had been, and how doth he express the height of it? v. 11.

Book I. Where is he that put his Holy Spirit within him? And when the Temple was built again, and they delivered out of Babylon, what is the greatest Promise God could make, till Christ should come and give a greater measure of his Spirit? You have it, Haggai 2. 5. According to the word I covenanted with you, when I came out of Egypt, so my Spirit remains among you, as the greatest Pledge and Pawn of my Favour; fear you not. But in the New Testament, there you hear of it again, and again; as in the Old, Thou gavest them thy Good Spirit; So in the New, He hath given his Holy Spirit, is written almost in every Epistle. It is almost all the talk, and fills their mouths throughout all the Book of the Acts; especially the first 15 Chapters, it was all their talk and Speech. The first Question they asked, when they met any that professed Christ, was, (as Acts 19. 1, 2.) Have ye received the Holy-Ghost, yea or no? So transcendent a Priviledge is it, that it is recorded as the Emulation of the Jews against the Gentiles. The Jews had wont to make Messiah their Glory, (as Simeon hath it, Luke 2. 32. The Glory of thy People Israel.) But when they had received the Holy-Ghost (Acts 2.) They would have run away with it alone, as the richest Prize, till God Confuted them, by pouring forth the same Spirit equally, and as much upon the Gentiles, thereby giving both Sorts his Children an equal portion in him, as being the whole of his Estate now left to bestow, having given his Son afore, Acts 11. 17. For as much as God gave them (says Peter) the like Gift of the Holy Ghost, as he did unto us: which argued the utmost of his favour, to the one, as well as the other; as that of the Prophet also shews, Ezek. 39. 29. Neither will I hide my face any more from them, for I have poured forth my Spirit upon them, saith the Lord. Nay then (say the Jews there) let them take all, as well as we. God hath withheld nothing from them, for then hath God granted the Gentiles Repentance unto life (v. 18.) and estated them in all Promises, in all Priviledges of Life, for he hath given them his Spirit. Who dares deny to Baptize them? Who dares to shut them out from any Priviledges? For they have received the Holy-Ghost, as well as we, says Peter, Acts 10. 41. And in that hot dispute in Acts 15. about the Gentile's Salvation, Peter Silences all with this (v. 8, 9.) God, who knows their hearts, hath given them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, as he did to us, and put no difference between them and us, (so v. 11.) They and we are Heirs alike of the same Salvation. and God (sayth Paul an Apostle, and a Jew, unto the Gentile Corinthians) hath established us with you, and you with us; hath anointed us, and sealed us, and given us the earnest of his Spirit, in our hearts, 2 Cor. 1. 21, 22. That as the Apostle argues, If he hath given us his Son, how shall he not with him, give us all things? So the Sum of these Agitations is, That if God hath given us his Spirit, how shall he not give us, I do not say, with him only, but in him even in that one Gift of him, give us all things? In this one gift of the Holy-Ghost (as it is termed, Acts 10. 47. and often else where) not Gifts, as of many; but Gift, as of one; is contained all the whole both of Grace and Glory; Tanquam in Fonte, tanquam in Semine; As in the Seed, and Fountain of both.

UES II. Is the gift of the Spirit, that great and rich Gift, which God vouchsafes to the Sons of Men? Then how miserable are they, that have not this Spirit in them, nor have had any workings from him, in order to their Salvation, to this very day. That live a Life of Sensual Pleasures, in enjoying Meat, Drink, Marriage, Beauty, great Houses, Riches, fine Cloaths; and then say (as in Revelations 3. 17.) I am rich, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked; for why, thou wantest the Spirit. When Jude would express the misery of these sensual wretches, his words are v. 19. Not having the Spirit. And indeed (Rom. 8. 5, 6.) They that are after the flesh, do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit. For to be carnally minded, is death; but to be Spiritually minded, is life and peace.

Let me instruct your hearts accordingly, to direct your prayers hereafter with answerable Intentions and vehemency, for the Gift of the Spirit himself: Chap. 9.
 You pray in the Spirit, and you bless in the Spirit: Let me exhort you to pray for the Spirit above all, and to bless God for this Holy Spirit, as one of the greatest Blessings of all. USE III.
 When the Apostle saw the Corinthians eager after Spiritual Gifts, his care and skill was to pitch their Aims and Desires upon what was most excellent, (1 Cor. 12. 21.) Covet the best Gifts; and yet I shew you a more excellent way. Thou seekest after particular Mercies, and some one particular Grace thou at present findest thou needest; To be humbled for sin; To be emptied of thine own Righteousness; To have the right Way, and Art of Believing particularly discovered to thy heart, or to have power against such a Lust, &c. And thou dost well, for thou art to branch thy Prayers into all particular Wants: But yet let me shew thee a more excellent way: Pray for the Spirit himself to be given thee; and whilst thou seekest for the Stream, forget not the Fountain. For when God gives thee him, more and more to dwell in thee, and fill thee, and mingle with thine heart, he brings with himself all these unto thee. Is thine heart hard? If God pour this water on thee, it will soak into it, and soften it. Wouldst thou see thy sinfulness, the most Spiritual Wickedness of Unbelief, &c. in thee? When he is come, he will convince of sin, because they believe not in me, saith Christ. He that searcheth the deepest things of God, is much more able to search and discover the shallows of thy Heart. Wouldst thou have no Confidence in the Flesh, but be purely carried out of thy self, to seek the Righteousness of Christ alone, and be found therein? Read, Gal. 5. 5. We through the Spirit, wait for the Righteousness of Faith. Wouldst thou have Joy and Peace in Believing? Joy unspeakable and Glorious? The love of God shed abroad in thine Heart? Pray for the Spirit, Rom. 15. 13. Now the God of hope fill you with all Joy and Peace in believing, that ye may abound in Hope through the Power of the Holy Ghost. Wouldst thou have thy lusts mortified? We through the Spirit mortifie the deeds of the flesh, Rom. 8. 13 And ye through the Spirit have purified your hearts, 1 Pet. 1. 22.

Our Saviour Christ, both in his own Practice, and Direction to us, hath guided us to this, as the great Request, 1. By his own example; for what is made the greatest and most professed Subject of the Flower of the most raised Prayers that our great high Priest eternally puts up for us? Yea, and upon what occasion did he first promise that he would pray for us? It is even this; I will pray the Father to give you another Comforter, even the Holy Ghost. Joh. 14. 16, 26. You may judge what things your own, or others Judgments and Apprehensions are raised up to, as most excellent, by what your Prayers and Desires therein reach forward to, as the Mark of your eye. Therefore in Christ's Judgment, that knows best what is to be prayed for, this is the most excellent: Yea, and you may take this further estimate of it, that he promiseth to spend his prayers now in Heaven (and if ever his heart is wound up to the highest strains, it is there) Yea, his Prayers and Intercessions there, are spent most upon this Subject. And though he may be supposed, to pray for other things we stand in need of; yet I am sure, this in particular is mentioned, and perhaps the first, and chiefest.

And as his own Practice, so his Direction pitcheth us upon this also: And he cites his Fathers Judgment also of this, to be the best Request we can put up. That if ever we were confined to ask but some one thing, he would advise us to ask this. In the 11th of Luke, Christ himself had been praying, and was upon that occasion desired to teach them to pray, v. 1. and he gives them many particulars in that we call the Lords Prayer, and then makes a parable to provoke them to importunity, v. 5, 6, 7. and bids them, Ask, and seek, and knock, all being several degrees of more urgency, vehemency, and importunity. (so v. 9.) with Promise that such shall in the end receive, v. 10. But then what is the most eminent thing, the best he would direct you to pray for? Though he had given the particulars in the Lords Prayer, he singleth out this of the Spirit, v. 13. If ye then being evil, know

Book I. know how to give good gifts unto your Children; how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him? He wrapps up this direction in a Promise, and delivers it by way of promise for their greater Encouragement, and he calls in his Fathers Judgment poore that this is the best and greatest request: If you that are evil, know how to give good things to your Children: According to your Judgment you use to give the best, and use to exercise your best Judgment therein; Then take your Heavenly Fathers Judgment which is most excellent and desireable, Even his Spirit. And therefore Mathew 7. 11. expresseth it thus; How much more shall your Father in Heaven give good things, even all good things (for such the Spirit summarily is) to them that ask him? This is the Fathers Judgment, you see, and 'tis Christs; And you may be sure it is the Spirits. You cannot honour him more than to pray most for him, that makes all your Prayers; and he takes it kindly to see himself most desired by you, that is the Author of all your Desires. You may observe also how Christ pitcheth our thirstings upon this great Sea and Ocean of Goodness, able to supply us with whatever we desire. He had taught them (Matt. 5.) to hunger and thirst after his Righteousness, and Holiness therewith, with a promise of Blessedness. But in the great day of the Solemn Feast, he makes this Proclamation, John 7. 37, 38, 39. upon this last day of the Feast, he brings forth his best Wine (Be filled with the Spirit, and not with Wine) He proclaims his best Commodity at the end of this Assembly: And you may observe he says but in general, He that thirsteth, he names not what; because let it be what good soever the Mind of Man could be supposed to stretch its desire to, That Spirit which he spake of, v. 39 was a compleat satisfaction to it, and so as they might thirst no more. And he directs them to two things: 1. To believe on himself, and come to him, who was to give the Spirit: And then 2ly, To come to his Spirit as given by him, whom we are also said to drink, 1 Cor. 12. 13. Our Prayers are the most precious Actings of our Souls, and it is the greatest Advantage that can be to us, to have the Aims of our Prayers set to the best and highest Marks: And upon all accompts you have seen this to be it; To pray for the Spirit. And therefore learn hereafter in your Prayers not to deal or traffique in particular, or small Wares only; but put in for the whole Stock, of the Spirit, as wise Merchants use to do, and as Christ himself (as you have heard) in his Intercession doth. And observe it in Experience, when the Holy-Ghost comes upon you, and fills your hearts as another Spirit, sensibly mingling with yours; Then if you go over all the Promises and find them yours, You can then apply this, or that, or any one. And why? Because you have the great Promise, the Spirit of Promise. You may (let me say it with Reverence) at such a time make use of the Spirit to any thing whatsoever. You may fall upon your lust's by him, and do more at such a time for the destroying of them, than in many Prayers after. You may By the Spirit then, at such a time, mortifie the deeds of the flesh. At such times improve your opportunity: For having the Spirit, you have all good things; And you may ask what you will, and have it: And yet even then ask still for more of himself.

USE IV. If the Holy-Ghost be the great Indweller in us, and Graces but the manifestations of him; Then let us shew forth the vertue of him that dwells in us, and be holy as he is holy; as 1 Cor. 3. 16, 17. Know ye not that ye are the Temple of God; And that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defileth the Temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the Temple of God is holy; which Temple ye are. You see what an hainous thing it is to defile the heart or Soul, because his Temple: But elsewhere the Apostle holds forth a stronger motive; Even that the Spirit dwells in us as the Soul doth in the Body, and the life we lead, is his, not ours; as the life of the Body is not of the Body, but of the Soul in the Body. This is the purport of that, Gal. 5. 25. If we live in the Spirit, we walk in the Spirit. The question first is (for opening of it) what is meant by that phrase, If ye live in the Spirit. And how it is to be distinguished from walking in the Spirit? If to live in the Spirit, were meant to be active; lively or striving; in Actions of spiritual life; to walk in the Spirit would be all one: It would be but Idem ex eodem; for to live, in that sense, is to move and walk: But the genuine Notion that interprets this, is, That he intends a comparison

1. Between the Souls Indwelling in our Bodies, as a Principle of life; and the Spirit's like Indwelling as the Fountain of Spiritual Life: Which that in the Prophet also insinuates, Ezek. 37. 14. I will put my Spirit into you, and ye shall live. 2ly, That as walking, or Actions of life spring from the Souls indwelling, so should an answerable walking from this of the Spirit's like indwelling. And so this expression, if ye live in the Spirit, is a Perswasion drawn from a Common Professed Principle: His inference runs thus: Consider who you have in you; The Spirit; and how? Even as a Constant Principle of Spiritual life. And to that end he doth dwell and abide in you, as your reasonable Soul doth in your Bodies: If you profess this, then live, and act, and walk, and shew forth Graces worthy and suitable to so great and holy a Spirit; that hath vouchsafed and condescended thus to dwell in you, and become a Fountain of such a life in you and to you. Every living thing acts according to that Soul that is in it, according to the degree of vigour and activity, and kind of life communicated thereby. If you then profess to live in the Spirit, walk in the Spirit. As if you should say to a sottish man (Cui anima inservit tantum pro sale) If you be a man, have a reasonable Soul in you, Act and carry your self as a man; And be not like a beast that perisheth.

The only Inquest will be, Why, if he intend this Similitude of the Soul's indwelling (as 'tis evident he doth) he should express it thus: If you live in the Spirit.

The Answer is, 'Tis true, that we indeed, in common Speech, rather use to say, The Soul lives in the Body, than that the Body lives in the Soul; though in reality it be true, that the Body rather lives in the Soul, than the Soul in the Body: The Soul being a Principle of Life unto the Body, and not e contra. The Apostle thereupon, to express perfect and real dependance of life Spiritual upon this great Spirit, chooseth rather to say, Live you in the Spirit, thereby importing this Spirit to be the same to us in respect of all Grace and Spiritual Life communicated to us by Union with, and dwelling in us, that the Soul is to the Body. And yet of Christ, Paul useth even that other phrase also (though only when he speaks of the activity of a Christians life) That Christ lives in us, Gal. 2. ult.

Grieve not this Holy Spirit: That Expression imports the highest motive: Superiours use to be offended; Familiar Friends grieved: The Spirit considered as a Superiour therefore, to resist him is termed Rebellion, Isa. 64. They rebelled against his Holy Spirit. But because he vouchsafes also, to become a familiar Friend, (as hath been declared) therefore he is also said to be grieved. And if you have love in you; that will move you more (when you think him you grieve is God) Isa. 27. 13. To grieve not Man only, but God, is load enough) more then to say you offend him. Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, is comparatively guarded with a trinity of Articles τὸ πνεῦμα, τὸ θεῶν τὸ ἀγιον, They shew his Greatness and his Goodness; His Greatness, that he is the Spirit of God: His Goodness. 1. The Holy Spirit in himself. 2. That hath sealed you. We would not grieve a Brother, Prov. 23. 19. Much less a Father. You would not grieve a Minister that Watcheth over Mens Souls, as a Substitute under the Holy Ghost (Heb. 13.) much less himself. If thou hast done so, there is no way but to be grieved too, and as fire best takes out fire; so thy Grief that of the Spirit's.

I say no more but this to my self and you; There is a day a coming, in which you will need him and all his Cordials: Therefore I speak to you in the words of Ecclesiasticks (which is the voice of that bodily Self-Love in us, And let it be of Spiritual self-love also, Honour thy Physitian. So treat this Holy Spirit, as thou wouldst one from whose prescription thou art in a continual Course of Physick, and none have skill but he. For when thou comest to dye, his Cordials must alone support, for none of any others making will do thee any Good. It is These, and these alone, must Comfort, and Carry thee to Heaven.

That there are two States or Conditions through which God carries the Elect : The state of Nature, and the state of Grace. That the New Birth is the Passage between them ; which evidenceth the Necessity of the New Birth, or Regeneration. The Reasons why God hath so order'd it, that the Generality of the Elect, who live to Riper Years, should for some time remain in that State of Nature, before he Renews them : The Uses of the Doctrine.

But after that the kindness and love of God our Saviour towards man appeared ;

Not by works of Righteousness, which we have done, but according to his Mercy he saved us, by the washing of Regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost :

Which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour :

That being Justified by his Grace, we should be made Heirs according to the Hope of Eternal Life.

The Words of the Text explained ; from which, and other Scriptures, it is proved, That the Elect are in a State of Sin, and Wrath, before they are brought into a State of Grace.

THis Text doth afford these Heads to be treated on :

I. That there are two different States or Conditions, which the Elect of God, that are saved, pass through ; between which, Regeneration is the Pass.

Book II.

I. The one is their first state in which they were born, A state of Bondage to Sin, and obnoxious to instant Damnation whilst they remain in it. This is clear in the words, and is premised to celebrate the Mercy of it; for having mentioned all Men, in the very Words afore, in exhorting to shew meekness to all Men; it follows, for we our selves, whom God hath now shewn Mercy unto, and severed and called out from the rest of Mankind, were also sometimes, disobedient, Serving divers Lusts and Pleasures: These words, We also sometimes, both import, that as the rest of Men remained in this woful state, so themselves, tho now saved, were once in the same state of Bondage to sin, serving divers Lusts, and thereby obnoxious to Damnation.

2. The other state is of Grace and Salvation, therefore oppositely to that former state; he saies, He hath Saved us, Justified us, and made us heirs of Life; Us, who in the former estate had been heirs of Hell, and Children of Wrath, as the opposition shews.

II. Hence it follows, That the new Birth is the Transitus, or passage between those two states; and the necessity thereof from thence, may be demonstrated.

III. And Thirdly, that God to Magnifie his Grace, Mercy, Love, Kindness (for all these are named) the more, leaveth many, or most of those he saveth, to remain and continue for some time, in the first Estate, before he doth Regenerate them. For Paul speaking of the Communalty and bulk of them in distinction from all other men, saies, We our selves were sometimes disobedient and so remained and continued in that Condition as well as other men. But at length, after, the love of God appeared towards us (says he) he saved us by Regeneration, and it all tends to shew as well the necessity as the mercy of it.

IV. Hence then it is evident, that the eminentest mercy that God doth, or which may be judged to be vouchsafed us in our whole lives, or to Eternity, is the laying the Foundation in his first renewing, and regenerating us by his Spirit as being the Transitus, or the passage, between both, by which we become translated from the one, and actually admitted into the other of Salvation: According to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of Regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost, which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour. That being justified by his Grace, Wee should be made Heirs according to the hope of eternall life.

V. Further to set forth the Mercy of it, there is presented here, as great a solemnity at this business, as ever was, or shall be found in any work done for us, namely, a joynt concurrence and yet distinct appearance in a set and solemn conjunction of all three Persons, Father, Son and Holy Ghost. A happy Constellation or conjunction of the Planets falling out at the instant of the birth of some great Prince (especially if you supposed it one of those greatest conjunctions whereof but six have been since the Creation) how wonderful a prognostique would this be accounted by Astrologers, of great and glorious Events to follow and accompany him so born, and thus honoured and mark'd forth at his Birth. But lo, a more glorious Conjunction of the three glorious Persons in the Heaven of Heavens, of the three Witnesses in Heaven, as John terms them, solemnly meeting and appearing as Witnesses at this great Baptism, the only true Baptism, the new birth of every Believer; called therefore the Laver or washing of Regeneration, and renewing of the Holy-Ghost. 1. The Father is implied in the 4th v. After the love of our Saviour, he Saved us by renewing us: for God our Saviour in the 4. v. is clearly made a distinct Person from Jesus Christ our Saviour, v. 6. so then the Father is meant. 2. the Holy Ghost is mentioned, for it is called, the renewing of the Holy Ghost, was then shed on us abundantly. 3. Jesus Christ is nam'd in those words, through Jesus Christ our Saviour. All this displays the greatness of the mercy of our regeneration, which Peter had only in general words words expressed (1 Pet. 1. 3.) but Paul, you see, doth it more particularly here. Tho' Peter indeed doth also express the Authors of this work. For there is first God, as in opposition to all created causes, Blessed be God who hath begotten us. In God all three Persons are included, having a distinct and proper hand it it, Tho' of all the three Persons, the Holy-Ghost more eminently and specially; His name is taken into its very denomination. It is termed and denominated by the Apostle the renewing of the Holy-Ghost, as elsewhere the thing begotten, John 3. that which is born of the Spirit. Lastly in Christ, who is ὁ ἐξοχῆς our Saviour, of all transactions of his for our Salvation, his Resurrection hath the most eminent influence into our New Birth as the Instrumental Cause; and for that I must have recourse unto Peter, and fetch it out of him, who hath begotten us again by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ.

Chap. I.

That there are two vastly differing Estates, of Sin and Damnation, of Grace and Salvation; which the New Birth is the passage between, and the Transitus from the one to the other: This I must premise, as the Apostle doth, in order to shew both the absolute Necessity of Regeneration, and greatness of the mercy of it. Not this Scripture alone, but all the Epistles give eminent evidence to my Assertion, and under several metaphors and expressions (wherein each delights in its variety) set forth Maps and Descriptions of these two Estates, which argues this matter to have been, in the preachings of the Apostles, a point of greatest moment. And this discrimination made, is not to be understood as the setting out two sorts, or ranks, or destinies of men; as if the one sort consisted only of Persons that were Reprobate, the other of Elect, or as if none but Reprobate should be understood to be in the estate of Nature; and the Elect to be such as were always in no other estate but the estate of Grace. 'Tis true indeed that all Elect sooner or later are in the end translated into the estate of Grace, or they could not be saved. And on the contrary, those whom God passeth by, are left to continue and persist in the state of sin and damnation to their deaths, and they die in their sins, as Christ speaks. But these two differences in mankind, are to be lookt upon as two estates or conditions, whereof the one hath Salvation, the other Damnation, actually belonging to them, at the present; whilst any, either Elect, or they who are past by, are respectively the subjects of either. And therefore we find this different condition exemplified in one and the same Persons themselves of the Elect, take them in several times of their Lives in that Estate we usually Call of Nature; but afterwards through being renewed, they are in the Estate of Grace. Only what the Apostle speaks in another, yet the like Case, that by God's ordination holds in this, That is not first which is spiritual, (or the Estate of Grace) 1 Cor. 15. 46. but that which is first is Natural, and afterwards that which is spiritual. His reason (v. 49.) holding also in this, that we are to bear the Image of the Earthly, the first Adam, first; and then the Image of the Heavenly. This almost every Epistle to all the Saints they wrote to, doth more or less indigitate. Thus Rom. 16. 17, 18. But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of Doctrine which was delivered you. Being then made free from sin, ye became the Servants of Righteousness. And 1 Cor. 6. 11. Such were some of you; But ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified, in the Name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God. And Gal. 4. 8. There was a time, (then) when ye knew not God, And a Now: After that now ye have known God, or rather are known of God. And Eph. 2. 1, 2. And you hath he quickned, who were dead in sins and trespasses, wherein in time past ye walked &c. and so he goes on to describe their natural condition. And Colos. 1. 21. And you that were sometimes enemies in your minds by wicked works; yet now hath he reconciled, And Ch. 2. 13. And you being dead in your sins. and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickned, having forgiven you all trespasses. Neither do they exemplifie this in the same persons of the Gentile Converts, but in the Jewish also; who came in troops to John; to escape the wrath to come: And though himself was sanctified from the womb (Luke 1. v. 15.) tho' conceived in the state of sin, for that which is born of the flesh, is flesh; yet, the multitude of the rest of the Elect lived in disobedience until riper years, v. 16, 17. And many of the Children of Israel, shall be turn to the Lord their God, and he shall go before him him in the Spirit and Power of Elias, to turn them, namely through his Ministry. And accordingly our Peter writing to the Jews, that had lived in the Bosom of that Church, speaks of them as of those who before this their Generation had a former estate which he terms their vain Conversation, v. 18. and (v. 14.) calls that estate the former Lusts of their Ignorance; so terming their former estate from the want of saving knowledge, when their lusts ruled, which now having escaped, they were made partakers of a Divine Nature, 1 Pet. 1. 4. having now purified their hearts, being born again of incorruptible Seed, v. 22, 23. And more expressly he says of them (v. 2. 13.) that they he thus wrote to, (who were by outward Character the People of God) in time past were not a People, but are now the People of God; which had not obtained mercy, but have now obtained mercy. It was a state wherein actually, and before God as a Judge, or according to the Judgment the Word pronounced of them (by which God will judge, or according to that Judgment the Word pronounced of them (by which God will judge all the World) they were not a People; though before God, as God, they were elected, and his chosen People. The other is a state of Grace and mercy, but now (says he) have obtained mercy; and still Regeneration or Conversion is set out as the Passover, as the Equinoctial Line to be past, that divides between both Climates, the one of Darkness, and the shadow of Death; the other a contrary Climate of Light and Glory; so the words just afore intimate, who hath called us out of Darkness into his marvellous Light, And as Peter speaks thus of the Jews as well as Gentiles, so Paul also having spoken (Eph. 2. 1.) to the Gentiles (compare v. 11.) you were dead in sins, wherein in time past ye walked: He turns his speech from them to himself, and his Country men the Jews, and says of all the generality of the Jews then converted, Among whom also we all had our Conversation in times past, in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh, and of the mind, and were by nature the Children of wrath, even as others. By those others he means the Gentiles, and he evidently speaks of what they had been in their Conversation unto riper Years.

Divines usually term the one, the state of Nature, as the other; the State of Grace; and they give them these terms warrantably from the Scriptures.

1. For the terming a mans condition after Regeneration the state of Grace, the Apostle doth it expressly, Rom. 5. 2. By Faith (saith he) we have access into this Grace wherein we stand; that is, into this station. It is a perpetual and standing Condition of favour; when once we have admission or access into it, which by Faith there, and by Regeneration (here in this Text, of Titus) we are said to have; he speaks as we do, or rather we as He, calling it a state of Grace. And so oppositely the other a state of Nature, which you have as fully and as expressly mention'd, Eph. 2. For when he would sum up what was that estate of both Jews and Gentiles fore-spoken of, He as in a general conclusion speaks thus, We were by nature Children of wrath as well as others; his meaning is not only that both were alike in such an estate when born, as restraining that Phrase by nature, meerly unto what they had been by Birth, and so only to their birth-sin (tho' that must be intended, as the source or spring) but he speaks too of that race and whole time of their conversation, and course run, wherein they fulfill'd the lusts they had by nature (as is evident) until quickened and saved. He termeth that whole Stage they ran, and that scene of life, A condition of Nature, as acting all that while according to the Principles and Swinge of Nature; and having nought but Nature in them, afore Grace came and wrought in them. And therefore as Erasmus hath well observed, it is opposed to that which follows (v. 5.) By Grace ye are saved, shewing in the former what naturally, without Grace, and until Grace; their condition was, for sin and wrath. And this interpretation, that stile of the Apostle given to every man in that estate, confirms; terming him (1 Cor. 2. 14.) a natural man, in distinction from a Spiritual, till made a Spiritual man by Regeneration. That which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit, During all which time they remain (till New-born) children of wrath; that is, whose portion is wrath, and they expos'd to it, during such their condition. And simularly to this sense that this phrase by nature, should involve involve the whole time from the birth, as well as the sinfulness of our birth it self, do other Scriptures speak, when they would describe and set forth that natural condition, Psal. 58. 7. They are gone astray from the Womb. And it is the natural condition afore and without Grace, the Psalmist there speaks of: For he not only says they were corrupt in or by the womb, but all along from the womb, thereby expressing their whole State. The like you have Gen. 6. from their youth.

Now when we say mens condition afore Regeneration is all that while a state of sin and wrath, of as that Grace is the contrary; I desire all men to consider what that imports. Guilt of sin is one thing, (the Best are guilty) but a state of sin, is a further thing: Corruption of Nature to be in a man, is one thing; the state of Nature is another: To be worthy of death, is one thing, so every man in sinning is; but to be in a state of death, is another; it is to be sentenced and adjudged to die, or as Christ speaks, condemned already, John 3. 18. He that believeth on him, is not condemned; but he that believeth not, is condemned already; because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God: which is all one to say, He that hath not such a faith as renews the heart (for of regeneration Christ had discoursed v. 3, 4, 5. of the chapter) is in a state of condemnation, so that he needs no other sentence. There wants nothing but Execution; for which how soon a Writ will come out, he knows not. As in the Canon Law; for some transgressions a man stood excommunicated ipso facto upon the committing, as Murther &c. It depended not upon a new Sentence: Here his state makes him instantly and immediately obnoxious to death; Every sin he sins, not only deserves death, but it is unto death; not only the thing is worthy of it, but by reason of his state, it redounds to the Person; and binds him over to death, which is the true import of that phrase, A child of wrath by nature: As a man that stands sentenced, and adjudged, condemned to die, is by a Jew termed a child of death: 2 Sam. 12. 5. This man is a child of death. For David as a King did at that time pronounce it of him, as we translate it, that he should certainly die. And Christ, on the contrary, is termed a Son of love, Col. 1. 13. we translate it, his dear Son, but it is ὁ υἱος ἀγαπῶντος, noting forth a perpetuated state of grace and favour born to him, which Christ calleth abiding in his Fathers love, John 15. 2. That is he remains in a perpetual state of Grace and Favour; and in the like sense these are termed Children of wrath, as abiding in it.

C H A P. II.

That it is by the New Birth that an Elect Soul is translated from a state of Sin and Wrath, into a state of Grace. That it ought therefore to be our earnest Enquiry, Whether we are regenerated or no. That tho' we are by Nature the Children of Wrath, yet our Case is not desperate, because this state is alterable.

I shall now evidence the Assertion, That Regeneration is the only alteration of this estate of death, and so make way for application.

A state is a permanent fixed condition, whether of good or evil, continued without cessation or interruption, until the Legal Terms of that Condition be altered: This might be in many instances exemplified: I will only take such as the

the Apostle, discoursing of these two states (Rom. 6. 7.) hath illustrated them to us, by: Which do withal directly concern the doctrine in hand. The Romans they had Servants which were Slaves to them, and some by birth, over whom they had the power of life and death. The condition of such was a permanent condition, and so is that of Apprentice-Servants among us, till the terms of that condition are altered. If they ran away, yet their condition altered not, they might take them wherever they found them: The terms of that alteration were either Manumission, or Expiration by death. Now Paul professeth by this instance of this outward condition among men, to set out those other we are now upon, v. 19. I speak after the manner of men, saith He; that is, I use this allusion to express the difference of those two states, you once were, and now are in, v. 17, 18. You were the Servants of sin, but now made free from sin, ye become the Servants of Righteousness. Now then to see how upon Regeneration the terms of this state and condition are altered; The Apostle tells us, that their hearts having been new moulded, cast into that mould of doctrine of the Gospel, (ἡ τὸν διδασκαλίαν ἐστὶν ὁ παρὰ δόθητε) into which they were delivered (so v. 17.) and they being ingrafted into Christ, and the likeness of his death and Resurrection (v. 3, 4, 5. &c. : whereby they became dead to sin, and were made men new risen again) therefore by the law of Nations, the terms of that condition were altered. And he that is dead, saith the Apostle, is freed from his master v. 6, 7. Our old man being crucified with him, that the Body of sin might be destroyed, that hence forth we should not serve sin; For he that is dead, is freed from sin: And we being new raised from the dead by Christ's Resurrection. Looks then as if you could suppose a Roman Slave had been killed and Dead, and then rais'd again to a new life, the Law must have freed him from that former state, for he was now a man of another world: So a man being freed from sin, is also freed from a state of death, and he is said to pass from death to life, as it is expressed once by Christ, John v. 24. He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into Condemnation, but is passed from death to life. And as it is expressed by John, 1 John 3. 14. which is a second allusion to the state of a man adjudged to die in one Kingdom, in which is absolute Tyranny, and no pardon to be had, but certain death; wherein whilst he remains, he is perpetually in a state of death; which every moment may befall him, and in the end certainly will: Now what alters the terms of such a mans condition? Do but suppose there is another Region where Grace and Mercy only reigns, and which invites men to come over to it, with promises of life and pardon; when he arrives there, his state is changed. These are the two estates (Rom. 5. 21.) That as Sin hath reigned unto death, even so might Grace reign through Righteousness unto eternal Life, by Jesus Christ our Lord. Take a man that is a servant to sin, sin is said to reign over him unto death; and whilst he remains in it, he is a son of death, a subject of death; and that Kingdom shews no mercy. But Regeneration, and such a Faith as regenerateth, is a Bridge or Ship to carry him over into another Dominion of Grace, where Grace reigns through Righteousness unto Eternal Life; and welcomes all that that will come into its Dominions, and takes them for ever into its Protection. And if Grace means to save a Man, it prepares this Ark for him, even the Washing of Regeneration, whereof Baptism is the Seal; 1 Pet. 3. 20, 21. As in the days of Noah, when the Ark was preparing, wherein few, that is, eight Souls, were saved by Water: So the like Figure unto it, viz. Baptism, doth now save us (not the putting away the filth of the Flesh, but the answer of a good Conscience towards God:) by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ. It is not the outward, but the inward Baptism saves; and still by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ, 1 Cor. 6. 11. Ye are Washed, ye are Sanctified, ye are Justified in the Name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of God: Sanctified by the Spirit, and Justified by the Name of Christ; and being thus, wafted over to the other side of the Shore, the Devil, Sin, and Hell, and Death, cannot reach you. You are not under the Law, the Covenant of Creation, by Vertue of which Sin and Death Reigns in the first Estate (for the strength of Sin is the Law), but under Grace, that is, the Dominion of Grace, Rom. 6. 14. Where Christ also Reigns, Ch. 5. 21.

5. 21. The like you have Colos. 12, 13. Speaking of their Conversion, and giving thanks to God for it; Giving thanks (says he) unto the Father which hath made us meet to be partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in light. Who hath delivered us from the Power of Darkness, and hath Translated us into the Kingdom of his dear Son, where we are safe for ever; and to the same purpose he speaks, Rom. 6. 9, 10, 11. Knowing that Christ being raised from the Dead, dieth no more; Death hath no more Dominion over him: For in that he died, he died unto sin once: But in that he liveth, he liveth unto God. Likewise reckon ye also your selves to be Dead indeed unto Sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. He would have them reckon and account themselves as for the Permanency of that new state, in that very same Condition Christ is in, but then to take heed to walk accordingly. v. 12. Let not sin therefore Reign in your Mortal Bodies, that ye should obey it in the Lusts thereof. This is the Natural supream Law in the Hearts of the Subjects of that Kingdom, and which Regeneration hath written therein.

There is another Similitude whereby the Apostle sets out these two states in their fore-mentioned fixed settledness, and this alteration from the one to the other (Chap. 7.) and it is that of Marriage, which with us, you know, is a settled fixed condition for Life, till by Death the terms of that condition be altered. Now what says the Apostle? Rom. 7. 2, 3. The Woman who hath an Husband, is bound by the Law to her Husband, so long as he liveth; but if the Husband be Dead, she is loosed from the Law of her Husband. So then, if while her Husband liveth, she be Married to another Man, she shall be called an Adulteress: But if her Husband be Dead, she is free from that Law; so that she is no Adulteress, though she be Married to another Man. By the Covenant of the first Creation (under which a Man for ever stands till Married to Christ) the Heart of Man was Married to the Law, and so subjected to the power of it, as to it's natural Husband; as the Wife by the Law of Creation is said to be to the Husband (Gen. 3.) and among other things to beget Children according to his likeness on her. Man falls from God, yet still the Marriage holds, but through the disease of Nature, and Perverseness of the Wife, Children that are contrary to the Holy Law, are brought forth by her, and no other, which together with her self, are subjected to the Punishment of that Law, Thou shalt dye the Death. But now says he, if either we dye, or the Law dye, then we may marry another, and so the terms of that condition and estate of subjection alters; and thus says he, it is here, v. 4. Wherefore, my Brethren, ye also are become dead to the Law by the Body of Christ, that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the Dead, that we should bring forth Fruits unto God. So then Regeneration which consists in the Mortification of Lusts, and quickning us with Christ, and Faith that marries us to him, makes the alteration, and the Resurrection of Christ follows us still.

Let me, ere I go off from this point, apply it a little. We are all here in the presence of God, and it is certain that we all stand under one of these Estates before God this Day. We are all Subjects belonging to one of these Dominions of Death or Life: And it is as certain that we all once were in that condition of Nature, and so of Wrath, as sure as we are Men. And it is also sure, that nothing doth or can make the alteration out of the one, into the other, but true Regeneration; which alone by Gods Ordination alters the Condition of Sin and Death, as it is a permanent Estate. For to add this reason to the former, As the first Birth alone was the Foundation of that first Estate, so this second Birth alone is the entrance and access into this other Estate of Grace.

And now then whether Regeneration be savingly wrought in us or no, is a Question the best Man may ask his own Soul; for God will not be mocked, or be put off with any thing outward or inward, that is below it. As Rom. 3. 23. For we all have sinned, and come short of the Glory of God. And it is as certain, that if we dye without obtaining of it, we are undone, and lost for ever, and go to Hell, as sure as we are now alive.

Now.

Now then first, for Examination of our Estates: Consider that this being such a permanent condition, both that no change, but into true Holiness, makes the alteration; and withal corrupt Nature will bear many Elevations and Refinements which are not the Divine Nature; it concerns us to make a very strict enquiry: It is certain God tries in several Degrees how far Corrupt Nature will be refined, and yet fall short of the Glory of God. You know what Elevation Socrates was of, among the Heathens, and Paul among the Jews, by the addition of the Light of the Law, Phil. 3. and how strict the young Man in the Gospel was, in Pharisaical Observances: And how far advanced above these, those are among Christians, who are enlightned, and taste of the powers of the World to come, and yet fall short, Heb. 6. 4, 5, 6.
 Now suppose any one Man should be by God gradually Refined, and run through all such alterations, as corrupt Nature, remaining still, is capable of. Suppose a profane Epicure were turned first a Stoick or a Socrates; then with all his Heroick Vertues turned a Jew, and embraced that Religion, yet Christ hath said it of the one and the other, Except your Righteousness, exceed the Righteousness of the Pharises, ye cannot go to Heaven, yea, de facto, many devout Heathens did turn to the Jewish Profession (in which was Salvation then, John 4. 22. as in the Christian Faith now) and yet of them Christ pronounceth (Mat. 23. 15.) that they are twofold more the Children of Hell than before. If in like manner the most Devout and Righteous Turk, should now turn Christian, meerly in outward profession, and embrace all the Articles of that Profession, his condition would be but Parallel to the former: Well, but then let this Man be elevated further, let him receive the Word with Joy, as the stony Ground; yea, let him cast off all outward Evils, as the Thorny Ground did the tops of all its Thorns that grew above Ground, only the roots remaining not pluckt up; let him escape τα μίσγματα, the gross Defilements of the World, (2 Pet. 2. 20.) through the Knowledge of Christ: Let him escape the Corruptions that are in the World through Lust; and in a word let him further, (as in Heb. 6. 4, 5.) be enlightned, and taste of the Heavenly Gift, and be made partaker of the Holy Ghost, and taste the good Word of God, and the powers of the World to come; yet if he is not partaker of the Divine Nature (spoken of,
2 Pet. 1. 4.) whereby he mortifies the inward Lusts themselves: If he have not the Divine Image stampd on him, and made a Nature in him, and Child-like dispositions of Love to God wrought, 'tis certain the terms of that Condition he was born in are not altered: Like base Metals, Corrupt Nature will suffer many Sub-limations, and yet be base Metal still; and until it comes to be turned into the true Elixir, that changeth it into Gold, the state of Man is not changed. Men may run away from their master-sins, (as Servants from their Masters) when their Lusts are not Crucified, their Indentures not cancelled; and so long the termes of their Estate is not altered, but sin fetcheth them again. Men in Prison, may be taken out of the Dungeon, and put into more open rooms, and there have their Bolts knockt off; and from thence be brought to the Grate to look out abroad, and see the Happiness of them at Liberty, and have Communion with them; and so not be far from the Kingdom of God (as Christ said to the Scribe, Mark 12. 34.) Yea, in some Prisons, as in the Tower, he may have liberty, to walk abroad in the Walks, and open Air, and yet still be a Prisoner. Yea, suppose he makes an escape, yet still the terms of his Estate, as Prisoner, is not altered; till he have that to shew for it, which gives him a Discharge by him that is the supream Judge or Creditor; and so tis here in this Case. Again, take Ice, and melt it, when it is Water heat it, from thence Boyl it, through Fire, or put hot Irons into it; yet still 'tis Water, and retains its form in Predominancy, and will return to its coldness again. So will Corrupt Nature, if the Divine Nature be not begotten in it. But if thou findest the least spark of that Divine Nature struck out of thy Heart, it will in the end enkindle the whole Man, and convert all to its own Nature, and Christ will never Quench, but bring it forth to Victory.

When,

Then in the Second place Consider, that even from a Man's Birth, this Estate of Sin and Death, is a fixed settled continued Estate, without interruption untill the change specified be wrought: And go home, and think how formidable a thing it is to be found therein, or continue in it but one night longer. For thou fool (says Christ, Luke 12. 20.) this night may thy Soul be required of thee. And that it is such a permanent Estate of Sin and Wrath, is that which, when a man's eyes are opened, strikes the terrour into him, And thus the Apostles in their Writings represent mens conditions to them. They speak not to them only of the guilt of such and such sins, but of a State of sin and death; which language the primitive Christians were most sensible of, as that which still roused and awakened them to consider their Estates; for the danger thereof was of common apprehension. See how the Apostle expresses it, 1 Cor. 15. 17. If so, then ye are yet in your sins. He speaks of it, as of a fixed estate you are in your sins; and you are yet in them; to this hour, as being a continued estate, and that wherein the extremity of all evil lyes. It is as if you should say of a man tyed to a Stake in the midst of ten thousand Barrels of Gun-powder, He is in the fire (as Jude also speaks) and ready to be blown up every moment: And thus Christ also expresseth it; Ye shall die in your sins, John 8. 21. Thus also Peter speaks to Simon Magus, Acts 8. 21, 23. I perceive (says he) that thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter; no interest in this Common Salvation, whereof we profess our selves partakers. I perceive that thou art in the Bond of Iniquity, and in the Gall of bitterness; that is, thou remainest fixt in it, as in a permanent condition. And to the same purpose John speaks, when he says (1 John 5. 19.) the whole World lies in Wickedness, as in its proper state and Element, And 1 John 3. 14. and ch. 2. 9.) his phrase expresseth, a continuation or running on of it from the first. He that hates his brother is in darkness until now. And v. 11. He that hateth his brother, is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes. That Phrase, until now, is as if he had said, Let that man consider, that he is not only in an estate of Death and Darkness at the present, that it is his present condition; but that it hath been the condition he hath continued in, without interruption, all along the whole space of his life hitherto: And how dreadful must that be? If there were a narrow Bridge of Ice made over the vast ocean, and no Island or spot of dry ground all along, and a man from his birth had been set upon it, and had slid and furiously run upon it in the dark, and for twenty, or thirty years made a continued journey on it even till now, and were now in the midst of it; and at length light should rise and come upon him, to see how far he had advanced hitherto, and how he was in the height of continual danger of falling into the Sea, either by the Bridges breaking under him, or through his own stepping aside: Imagine what dread would strike that man! And yet this is the case of many that hear me this day. Now John uttered that speech to strike their hearts, who had been Professours of the Principles of the Christian Religion in those times; of which Religion, the most frequent and familiar Principle was the infinite difference of these two Estates of the Sons of Men; The sense and apprehension of which, (he knew) they who were now apostatized, and hated those Godly Persons who continued to profess it, carried in their Bosoms and Consciences along with them. Inasmuch as they had this abiding conviction; That if they were found to be in an unregenerate condition; they were, notwithstanding their profession, in the most desperate and deplorable estate, and darkness until now. And however they were apt presumptuously to bear themselves up with this, that they once were enlightned, and had a Saving work upon them, when first they entred into this Profession, and therefore must have so still; he plainly tells them they had remained in this darkness until now; for they never had a true work of regeneration to make an alteration of their condition, and so the dismal Account of that Estate had run on to this very day. And a great Scripture this is with me, for its holding forth, That whoever is found in an unregenerate state at any time, hath ever been in it; and so consequently there is no inter-

Book II. cision of Grace, nor falling from it. Of such as fall away, the Apostle professeth that they never had true Grace; but though enlightned, yet falling away, do shew, that they have been, during all their time, unregenerate. To this also the 19th verse accords. They went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us; But they went out, that they might be made manifest, that they were not all of us. As it is a true saying, If once in a state of grace, then ever so, for the time to come; so it is as true, That this man who is in the state of nature and wrath, hath ever been in it for times past, even until now. So as such a man (and let every man consider it) Though he may have many changes in the time of his pilgrimage, and may take up himself, and commit fewer and smaller sins in his middle age, than in his youth; or in his middle age, than in his old age (for it is not necessary that to continue in that estate he should every day wax worse and worse) yet if he be not truly regenerate, he is still in one and the same hold, and so all the sins that he hath, or doth commit, or shall continue to commit every moment, they all shall center in him, as being still in such an estate wherein an obligation stands in force against him for every sin he hath at any time put his hand unto. The power of Corruption puts him on to sin, and then the guilt of sin binds him over to death. Every motion of sin from his Cradle, belongs to that Estate. He is in the Bond of Iniquity, go where he will, whether he sleeps, or wakes, and all his sins are as fresh to God, as if they had been this moment committed. Time wears not out the guilt of any, but rather helps to make up the treasure of wrath greater; (as in Debts, Time adds an increase) and all that time also the wrath of God abides upon him, and is ready to fall upon his head every moment; and God is angry with him all that time. He is angry with the Wicked every day, as the Psalmist speaks, Psal. 7. 11. And this brings Eternity upon a man; and all put together will amaze the stoutest heart that ever was; And yet who almost considers these things?

USE III. And this may also discover some usual deceits even of the wisest men. They flatter themselves, that all are Sinners, and they are only Sinners as well as others. But they consider not a state of sin, which themselves and most of men are in. And if they hear the state of Nature mentioned, they understand it only of that condition they were in when conceived or born, but they think that it is done away at Baptism; and never imagine that it still runs on, In omne volubilis ovum. They also set themselves to repent, and turn from this or that sin, but seek not a change of state, a General and Universal Change. And so they think they may deal with Mercy well enough for any particular Sin they live in, acknowledging themselves worthy of death for it, as all are for the least sin; but consider not that they remain adjudged to death, and abide in death for every sin, and that Damnation sleeps not, but is coming upon them. The great Inquest at latter day will be, What state thou wert found in? Whether found (as Pauls Phrase is, Phil. 3. 9.) in Christ, or found in thy sins?

USE IV. The only comfort to the Sons of men that find themselves in that state is, That though it is a continuation of sin and wrath upon man whilst he is in it, yet it is alterable. It is not therefore said to be a state, because it is unchangeable, as that of the Devils is, who are kept in everlasting chains, who abode not in the Truth, but left their first estate, as Christ and Jude speaks) And who are now in irrecoverable misery: No there is grace and mercy in this Text. Tit. 3. 4, 5, 6. There is also an Holy Spirit spoken of, that may yet renew thee, and alter this estate of thine. But know assuredly nothing else will alter it.

There are two Pleas upon which carnal Men build the hopes of their Salvation, though they go on in the sinfulness of their own Hearts, and dye without this work wrought in them.

I. They plead Gods infinite Grace and Mercy! Who (say they) shall limit his Mercy? He may pardon me however, if he pleaseth

II. They

II. They say Christ hath dyed, and perfectly wrought Salvation for them, and they cast themselves upon his Death to be saved by it.

Well but here are two things (in 1 Pet. 1. 3.) that do answer both these deceitful reasonings of carnal Hearts.

1. God is merciful, 'tis true ; yea more, the Text tells you he is abundantly Merciful ; but withal, it tells you, That when he shews Mercy he begets a new Nature, (who according to his abundant Mercy hath begotten us) so that if ever he means to shew thee Mercy, he will shew it herein, and hereby, even in begetting thee anew, that so he may shew thee Mercy according to the Wise Counsel of his Will. Thus also in Tit. 3. 5. According to his Mercy hath he saved us (but how?) by the renewing of the Holy Ghost. And in Jer. 3. 19, 20. God himself professeth, how that else he cannot save them. Men think that for God to save them, is no more but only to put forth a prerogative Act of Pardon and shewing Mercy ; as a King doth when he pardons a Traytor ; but God always does more ; for when he pardons any one, he makes a Friend and Favourite of him. a Son and Heir, in whom he may delight ; therefore together with pardoning him, he also renews him.

2. And for Christs Death ; even that also will not save thee, without this new begetting ; and the Text, 1 Pet. 1. 3. will warrant this too. For consider but this, that he rose again, as well as dyed. Now as he dyed for the pardoning of your Sins, so he rose again to Regenerate and beget you again. Therefore says the Text, 1 Pet. 1. 3. Who hath begotten us again by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ. If you will have the benefit of his Death, you must find the power and vertue of his Resurrection in Sanctifying you, as Paul speaks, Phil. 3. 10. And you who are dead in sins and trespasses, must be quickened with him, unto a new Life of Grace, if ever you be saved. Both these you have in Eph. 2. 4, 5, 6. God who is rich in Mercy, hath quickned us together with Christ, even when we were dead in Sins and Trespasses, and hath raised us up together, &c. And this new Birth, or Holiness, necessarily accompanies Pardon, even as Christs Resurrection followed his Death ; and his Death extends to save no more, then his Resurrection puts forth a power to beget. As, if Christ had not personally risen, we had been still in our sins ; so if Christ be not risen in thee, thou art still in thy sins, and wilt dye in them, Rom. 6. 12, 13, 14. Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lust thereof: Neither yield ye your Members as Instruments of unrighteousness unto Sin ; but yield your selves unto God, as those that are alive from the Dead, and your Members as Instruments of Righteousness unto God. For sin shall not have Dominion over you ; for ye are not under the Law, but under Grace. And Chap. 7. 4. Wherefore, my Brethren, ye also are become Dead to the Law, by the Body of Christ, that ye should be Married to another, even to him who is raised from the Dead, that we should bring forth Fruits unto God. Which last place confirms that former reason given, that we being to be Married to Christ, and he being to be risen from the dead, we must be made like him in a new Resurrection.

C H A P. III.

That all Gods Elect do not indeed before their Regeneration, remain in that state of Sin and Wrath, as is evident in the Case of Infants.

TH E Great G O D, for Holy and Glorious Ends, but more especially to give demonstration, or to make appear his Love and Kindness, his Mercy and Grace, hath ordered it so, that the Generality of the Elect that live to riper Years, should for some time remain in a Condition of Sin and Wrath, and then he renews them, and turns them to himself. I have in the former Chapters prov'd the matter of Fact.

My present business is to consider the Design of God herein, and to what Ends and Purposes, and for what Reasons he hath thus appointed such their condition.

I must premise something by way of Limitation, and Explication, to prevent Exceptions against this Truth.

I. My Meaning is not, that God Regenerates none but such as are grown up to riper Years, I should be injurious to multitudes of his Elect, if I so asserted: But as Infants are capable of all the Essentials of Regeneration; so de facto, it is evident that he Regenerates multitudes of them whilst such: For in the Old Testament the promise being indefinitely uttered for Time or Age, as well as Person, I will be the God of thee and thy Seed, Gen. 17. 3. And I will Circumcise thy Heart, and the Hearts of thy Seed, Deut. 10. 6. And Circumcision (which was the sign and seal of that Circumcision of the Heart mentioned in the promise, and so the Seal of that Promise it self, and of the performance) being by Gods Command applied to Infants, whereof multitudes whilst such, dyed, necessarily imports that there are some of that age, whom God had in his Eye, whom he inwardly Circumcised; or else the promise and seal to them had been in vain. And if it had took place in none but those that lived until they grew up to riper Years, then Circumcision would have been deferred unto that age as that wherein Gods ordination had only been to Regenerate Mankind, namely all when come to such or such an Age, grown up, and not before. And Circumcision is the the seal of that Righteousness, the same Righteousness which Believers grown up, have imputed to them, (as Rom. 4. 11. The Apostle, instancing in Abraham, saies) He received the sign of Circumcision, a seal of the Righteousness of faith. Which words do not assert Circumcision to have been a seal of Faith or Righteousness only unto them that actually do believe, but the purpose of them was to signify and exemplify what Righteousness it was that Circumcision was the seal of, which he exemplifies in Abraham, saying, that it was the same that Abraham the Father had imputed to him, and which Believers lay hold on, which is called the Righteousness of faith; because revealed from faith to faith, and so apprehended and made known to us that are of riper years by Faith. And so hereby he gives us to understand that elect Infants circumcised, the seed of Abraham, dying had, and might have the very same Righteousness which we and Abraham had by Faith, and which Circumcision did seal up to his Faith; even as well as they have the actual Application of that outward outward seal, as much as Abraham had. And indeed the half of Mankind dying whilst Infants, it may be well supposed that as great a portion, at least for number, are found amongst the seed that dye, as experience shew'd, was found among them that lived, and so were inwardly circumcised. And those Promises, I will be the God of thee and thy Seed: And I will circumcise the heart of thy Seed, being spoken (as they are apparently) indefinitely of any Age, one as well as another, who shall dare to limit them to Years of Understanding only? And if indefinitely for Age, then it may as well be supposed, that there is no Time, or Age, in the whole Series of Mans Life, but there will be found instances of some of Abraham's seed that were therein regenerated, some in one, some in another; even as there is not the least moment in the thred of Mans Life, but some or other have expired therein. And again, Shall we limit it to Infants of eight days old, to exclude all Infants dying before eight days? Surely no. The real intent was otherwise. As Women were not excluded from the promise, though not Circumcised personally; to whom yet the promise held, as well as unto Males; and the Female Sex were representatively Circumcised in the Males; so Infants (take it still indefinitely of what Age, yea of what moments standing you will, from their Conception) were represented in the Circumcision of those infants of eight daies old. This deferring and staying of it then, and this representative Circumcision at eight days old of some, was ordained typically to hold forth that Representation of all the elect which נבר, that strong Male Child Christ, the first born of them, was to bear of all the seed, he standing in their stead.

And it is to no purpose to say that Circumcision sealed up to them only the promise of Canaan: For beside that the promise to Abraham, and his seed was one and the same, also Infants that dyed (as half of Mankind dye when Infants) enjoyed so little, some not at all, the benefit of that promise, that thy days may be long in the Land which the Lord thy God hath given thee, as it were ridiculous to assert Circumcision was applied to them to seal up that promise only.

In the new Testament, we find that Grace, and all the priviledges thereof, are now more extendible, as to Nations, (Go teach all Nations, not the Jews only) so in like manner unto all sorts of Persons, more then these, to whom the Grace and dispensations of Grace in the Old Testament, could be supposed to extend; and therefore if to Infants then, so now. And 'tis Observable that the first in the Catalogue of the New Testament (both according to Christs account, Matth. 16. 16. and also that of Zacharies) was John, who as the first Fruits to Sanctifie in a more special manner the lump of Infants, was filled with the Holy Ghost in his Mothers Womb, Luke 1. 5.

Christ himself who sanctified our Nature, to the end that we might be sanctified, (John 17. 19. Heb. 2. 11.) representatively sanctified every Age of man he went through, as well as those Ages, or years of Mans Life he fell short of. Now therefore he was sanctified in the Womb, to sanctifie some Infants in the Womb. He was Holy when born, even because some Infants when first born, might be then Sanctified. And the same Lord Jesus pronounceth of Infants, That of such is the Kingdom of God.

Nor can it be supposed, that he sanctifies only such infants that in his decrees he had appointed to dye when Infants; for when Christ spake that last fore-cited speech, it was upon occasion of such Infants being brought to him, who might be supposed to have lived up to riper Years, and it being intended a direction to the Apostles as Ministers, with respect to Infants coming or being brought to them, to be sure they were not first to Judge who were to Live and who were to Dye, and to regard the latter only, therefore Christ speaks indefinitely. And add to this, John Baptist who lived to riper Years, was yet when an Infant sanctified.

Book II.

And if we take a great lump of Christians that are grown up, some few will be found Sanctified from their Infancy, in so much as they dare not say but they had workings of Grace on them ever since they can remember, and that they had gracious dispositions (though proportioned to that Age) mingled with the dawnings and springings of Reason in them. This experience shews, and therefore you must not take this Doctrine Universally true, that of these that live to Years of discretion, none are sanctified when Infants.

Yet in the Text it is more Generally and Ordinarily true concerning those Elect who live, that God (in whose hands are the Times and Seasons of Regenerating Men, as well as of all things else, Acts 17.) hath appointed and ordered their Month (as the Prophet speaks) or times of bringing forth to be, when grown up to Years of Discretion. And besides instances out of the Apostles Epistles, many passages in the Old and New Testament evidence that thus it was even in those that lived in Zion, and were well educated in the Church of God, and yet needed Regeneration, and were Regenerated when of Years of discretion, or grown up.

In the Old Testament, David (Psal. 51. 12.) desires God restore to him the Joy of his Salvation, that he might teach Sinners God's ways, (not Heathens only, but Sinners among whom he lived) and that they might be Converted unto him. v. 13. And though Men scoff to hear of Converts in the Church, yet Isaiah tells us of Converts in Sion, Esa. 1. 27.

In the New Testament we have the Example of Timothy, who though brought up by good Parents, and taught the Faith by his Grand-Mother, and Mother (2 Tim. 1. 5.) and who, tho' he was one who knew the Scriptures from a Child, yet for all this, his Conversion was afterwards by Paul's Ministry. Who therefore calls Timothy his own Son, (1 Tim. 1. 2.) not only as Nourisht up by him in the words of truth, (as 1 Tim. 4. 6.) but as truly begotten (in respect of Regeneration,) as ever any other was, of whose Conversion he was an Instrument; and therefore elsewhere also he still calls him his Son, 2 Tim. 1. 2. 1 Cor. 4. 17. upon the same account that he calls Onesimus his Son, Phil. 10. My Son Onesimus; and he gives the reason why he styles him so, Whom I begat (says he) in my Bonds. And accordingly elsewhere, he distinguisheth between Spiritual Fathers and Instructors in the same, 1 Cor. 4. 15. Though you have, says he (that is, might be supposed to have) Ten Thousand Instructors, yet not many Fathers; that is, that Converted you; none was an Instrument thereof but I: For in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the Gospel. And (Acts 18.) he shews he was the Converter of those Saints at Corinth; and as of them, so of Timothy, whom in the very next words he terms his Son, (which always speaketh relation to a Father,) and he having thus in the words afore distinguisht between a Father and an Instructor, and having stiled himself a Father to them, for his having begotten them, that He should style Timothy his Son, with the same breath, must necessarily be understood in one and the same sense. And when he says (1 Cor. 4. 17.) For this cause I have sent unto you Timothy, who is my Beloved Son; There was something of an Argument in it to move them to receive Timothy, as sent them by him, being their natural Brother as it were, begotten by the same hand they had been. So then Timothy, though a towardly Child, and well Educated, as any can be supposed to be; yet after he was come to Years of Discretion, it was, that he was converted. And truly the Additions of that Word, Begotten you through the Gospel, God having appointed as then, so now, the Gospel, and that, as Preach'd to be the ordinary standing means (though not with exclusion of other means) for begetting Men to Christ, as well as building Men up) argues Gods secret Ordination of those Elect that live to riper Years; and yet because a great part of his Elect dye when young, he hath appointed Baptism as a Nett for them (as he did Circumcision of old) and for the other that live, he hath reserved the Word to catch them, Rom. 10. 17. Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word. That is the ordinance of God to that end, as it is also Milk to nourish, 1 Pet. 2. 2. As new Born Babes desire the sincere Milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby : It is seed to begett them, 1 Pet. 2. 23. even the same Word which is Preached to them, v. 25. And therefore one of the first Encomiums David gives the Word (Psal. 19. 7.) is this, The Law of God is perfect, converting the Soul. And God appointed the Tribe of Levi in the Church of the Jews to this end, Mal. 2. 6. Though they had Circumcision then, as we have Baptism now, yet Levi was appointed to Convert and that many which is the same Speech that is spoken of John Baptists Ministry, Luke 1. 76, 77, &c. And now God hath ordained Pastours and Teachers, as for the building up, so for the joynting in of the Saints ; that is, for the Conversion of them, Eph. 4. 16.

CHAP. IV.

The Reasons why God suffers his Elect, grown unto riper years, to continue for some time in a state of sin. The Glory of Gods Mercy and free Grace is the more Illustrated by this Dispensation.

THis Explication and Caution premised, I come now to give the reasons why it hath pleased God so to order it, that the Generality of his Elect, who live up to riper years, should for some time remain in a state of sin, and wrath.

You meet with a strange thanksgiving, Rom. 6. 17. God be thanked that ye were the Servants of Sin : Had the Apostle ended here, you would have deemed it Blasphemy : But he thanks God, not simply for their having been the Servants of sin ; yea, nor merely for this, that now they were converted (which follows, that ye have obeyed from the heart, that form of doctrine which was delivered you ; that is, become men Holy, both in heart and life) but he blesteth God complexly, with respect to both, namely for this change wrought in them, as it is set forth and illustrated by their having been the Servants of sin formerly. No man likes or commends the shadow in a Picture, if you take that alone ; but it is the likeness thereof unto the life it self, which makes both the Picce and the Workman to be esteemed and praised : And yet the shadow sets off the Picture, and gives a liveliness unto it. He in the next words shews how the Image of God had been faintly stamp'd upon their hearts ; as this similitude of being cast into a mould, there used, imports. And that is the main thing he blesteth God for ; yet withal he admires and extols Gods Workmanship and Art in taking the advantage of so great and dark a shadow as an estate of sinning is (which themselves had first drawn) to be a foil to this bright image of his holiness. God had let them alone a long while to draw the dark part ; (for sin was their work, and not Gods work) who is only the Father of Lights ; and with him there is no shadow (as James speaks) and no darkness at all (as Job hath it) and they had many years been Apprentices at this work (ye were the Servants of sin) and God all this while having had his work in his Eye, he suffered them to go on unto a full measure, (for the sins of Elect men have a fulness before God converts them, as well as wicked men before God destroys them) and then God fell to work. And He that brings Light out of Darkness, made that Chaos and Abyss of Darkness which they had been

been so long a creating, the ground-work whereby to set out his new World and Workmanship of Grace, more than if at first he had made all perfect, and begun it, by sanctifying them in the Womb. And therefore, says the Apostle, God be blessed, that ye were the Servants of sin; which you are to take together with that which follows; But ye have obeyed from the heart, &c. For sin, or an estate of sinning, cannot in it self alone, be made the matter of God's praise; but yet it may serve the more to commend the Grace of God unto us. So says the Apostle, Rom. 3. 5. If our unrighteousness commend the Righteousness of God, what shall we say? Is God unrighteous? If God who is the Judge of all the World, (as v. 6.) will suffer the creature to go on in sin, which it was justly born in, and for which he damneth millions of Souls, and is not unrighteous in taking such a vengeance (as follows v. 5.) then if also he will suffer an elect Son of his to go long on in sin, even unto a fulness; and then, instead of damning him, converts him, justifies him, and sanctifies him, (such were some of you, says the Apostle, 1 Cor. 6. 11. but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified, &c.) He cannot be said to be Unrighteous.

In a word, This is such a phrase of speech, as in the like case, is usual in the Scripture; so in Luke 15. 23, 24. says the Father of the Prodigal, Let us eat and be merry, for this my Son was dead, and is alive again; was lost, and is found, &c. Merry they were, not simply for that he was dead and lost; but that having been lost and dead, he was now found and alive: The mercy of his finding and life, being heightned by this, that once he was dead and lost; and therefore it enlarged their Joy that he was now found and alive; and that (as that Parable shews) more than if he had never plaid the Prodigal. Now nothing is more the Object of thanks and praise to God, then what proceeds from Love and Mercy.

And so I come to that which at first I propounded, to shew the Ends God hath in this dispensation of his; to give an illustration and demonstration of

1. His Love or Kindness.
2. His Mercy.
3. His Grace. All distinctly mentioned in the Text.

I shall first, in a word, distinguish these three.

1. Love is the foundation of Mercy, whereby God peremptorily and unalterably pitcht upon some men, and set himself to love them in all estates and conditions whatsoever. Who shall separate us from the love of God in Christ? Now I joyn Kindness and Love together in one, for they differ but thus, that Kindness is when Love strives to express it self in the most taking way, and to set a lustre upon what it doth.

2. Mercy is a continuing to love them when they are in Misery, for Mercy properly respects Misery.

3. Grace imports the freeness of both these, his loving freely; and shewing Mercy freely, founded upon no respects in the creature moving him thereunto.

Now that which I am to speak to, is not simply that God hath put forth all these his Attributes towards his children in their Salvation in general; but particularly that he eminently doth it, in this dispensation of his, when having left them to an estate of sinning, he yet at length quickens and saves them.

Again 2. by way of general premise to this discourse about all these three, Whether God first pitch his love upon us simply considered, as creatures or creabiles in massa pura, in that pure mass, without the Consideration of our being sinners, I will not dispute; for in relation to this point, it comes all to one. For if he first set not his love upon men considered as fallen into sin, but purely as creatures; yet his wife counsellors pitcht on this course that we should be left to this condition only of having sin in us, (as in the mixt estate of sin and grace after regeneration) but also to an estate of sin and death, to the end he might shew the more Love: That it might appear he took up so great a Love, that tho we were Sinners, it continued the same; and not only so, but stirred up mercy to pity us therein, and thus all our sinfulness comes to magnifie his love. And although God might have communicated himself to us without letting us have fallen into sin, tho' he might have communicated (I say) himself to us, as he will Heaven, immediately and directly; when the World shall be at an end, when sin shall be remembered no more; when God shall be all in all, as he is to Christ, and he might have in this estate yet made us apprehensive of mercy, in this respect; That when he might have left us to sin, and to such a condition of sinning, yet he in mercy would preserve us from it; thus he shews love and mercy to the elect Angels. But because the Creatures are apt to receive the stronger Impression by sense and real experience, and his end was to take our hearts in a rational and most taking way, suited to our apprehensions. And when it is the Understanding of Man is taken and struck with admiration, when one contrary is set against, or brought forth of another, which exceedingly serves to illustrate it: And also because God would suit his way of Acting, to the experience of man (by which Christ himself learnt obedience) and in common experience, what a man really falls into, and is then delivered out of, this affects more, then what is altogether prevented: Therefore God ordained this course rather, to commend his love and mercy to us.

1. His Love. The Apostle John doth in this argument make a great matter of this one consideration, that we do not begin to love God, but he loved us first. Herein is the love of God (says he, 1 John 4. 19.) not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and (as in v. 19) loved us first And thus it may be greatened as to Angels. But Paul goes farther, and upon the consideration of this our unregenerate estate, winds this Argument of God's love up to a higher pin; not only by the negative, that we loved not him first; but by aggravation positive, that we hated him, we were enemies to him, so in Rom. 5. God commended his love, when we were Sinners (v. 8.) yea when Enemies (v. 10.) Christ died for us. And to set out his love herein, he makes four degrees of misery we were in, two Negatives, and two Positives.

He describes us to be without strength, (v. 6.) unable to help our selves; yea, dead, and utterly dead; for so of the Body, the same word is used; when it is dead, it is said to be sown in weakness, 1 Cor. 15. The word is the same word that here he describes us to be.

A good natur'd man is moved to pity a poor weak Child or Beast without strength, but it must then have life in it; but we were dead. This you have (Ezek. 16. 5, 6, 7.) set forth to the end to greaten God's love unto us. He compares that estate of ours afore to that of a dead Child, still born, cast forth on a dung-hil, all in gore blood, its menstruous blood, and none Eye pitied thee; Then says God, I pass'd by thee, and said unto thee, Live. I therefore say a dead child, because the mercy shewn, was to bid it live, so putting life into it: 2. Not only so, but ungodly.

2. Ungodly, (v. 5.) and empty of that Goodness he at first saw in us, so as what by the Law of Creation, might more move him, was lost and forfeited: As Salt, when the favour, the goodnes is lost, is fit for nothing but the dunghil. Yet in that case now he is moved to pity. But further there are two Positives added.

1. We are said to be Sinners (v. 8.) that is, that had dishonoured God, and transgressed his Law: But yet that might be pardoned, if it were not out of malice and in-bred enmity.

Therefore 2. he heightens it by this also, even when we were Enemies. A Love, by all these circumstances manifested to be such, and so great that much water cannot quench it (as Solomon speaks) is Love to the height of admiration.

And as hereby the greatness of his Love, so the unchangeableness of his Love, and peremptoriness thereof, is declared and made conspicuous.

Is it not an unheard-of wonder, that so strong a stream of infinite Love should run under ground for so many years; and that so many rebellions all that while should not dam it up, but that it should hold on its course uninterrupted, and work out all that had so long obstructed the current of it, and at last bubble

 ble up at a time designed, and save, and wash, and purifie the wretched, defiled Creature. Doth the Earth bring forth such a wonder? Have Mothers love enough to hold out thus? Other things may manifest other properties of his love, as the giving of his Son shews the greatness of it, (and yet even that too, is set out by our natural estate.) But nothing more argues the peremptoriness and unalterable Resolution of God's love, then its holding out against all the provoking oppositions in us, against all the sins committed before he had broke his mind, and declared his love unto us, or any open way ingaged it, Jer. 3. from v. 1. to the end of the chapter. It is usual with you (says God there) and according to the principles you walk by, that though your selves cast a wife off, and not she you; yet if she becomes another man's, (as then she may) you will then never own her more: Ay, but (says God to his betrothed Spouse, his Church) Thou hast voluntarily plaid the Harlot, and run after other lovers. And (v. 5.) Thou hast done as evil as thou couldst, hast sinned as it were to the utmost, and yet I cannot part with thee, and yet return thou unto me, says He. He still loves her and allures her unto him; and why is it? He gives the reason at the 14. v. For I am married unto you, &c There was knit so fast a love-knot between God and them, a secret pre-contract on his part, tho' unknown to them, made by himself, even from all eternity, that no whoredomes, no continued sins whatever of hers, could untye. Well therefore might the Apostle say, Who shall separate us from the love of God in Jesus Christ? yea, and challenge Angels, Devils, Afflictions, and all Creatures else to do it, Rom. 8. 3, 4, 5, 8, 9. For surely if a continued course of sinning could not dissolve it, then nothing else can.

II. The second thing which God eminently manifesteth hereby is Mercy. And though God's mercy be absolutely in God, or in his Nature; and he had been merciful, although we nor any Creature had ever been, or never had been miserable, yet the manifestation of that his mercy hath respect unto misery; whereof sin and death being the greatest that can befall the Creature, the freeing it therefore from an estate of both, must needs be the fullest manifestation of that his mercy, and pity towards them. Thus (Rom. 11. 32.) The Apostle says, God hath shut up (or concluded) all under unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all, both of Jews and Gentiles, of whom in the 30 and 31. v. he had discoursed how in their severall vicissitudes first the Gentiles, then the Jews had been shut up under unbelief. And lockt up, they both were under the surest Lock and Key that could be, Unbelief; and whereof God alone keeps the key; who openeth, and no man shutts; who shutteth, and no man openeth. The key of the door of Faith (as Acts 13. it is call'd) is in God's hand alone, for it is the Gift of God. And Unbelief is as a Grave-stone roll'd over men, when already dead in sin, to keep them in that estate. Now unto those that have lain longest under it, the greater mercy is shown. God hath lockt up the Jews under unbelief for sixteen hundred years, since Christ's death, as he had done the Gentiles for above two thousand years before Christ. And the design in this dispensation unto either, was that he might have mercy upon both, who between them make up the All of Mankind; for these two divided the World. Now this which he doth unto these two Bulks and Bodies of Mankind, the more in the end to illustrate his mercy unto them, the like he doth to the particular persons of his Elect. He shuts them up a long time, under unbelief, that in the end he may have the more mercy on them. Whom likewise doth the Apostles call Vessels of mercy, Rom. 9. 23. but those who once were not his people? As appears by v. 25. and 26. Vessels of mercy they could not be, till they had first been fill'd up with sin and misery. And that some them are greater, and of a larger size then others; this comes to pass by how much they have been fuller fill'd with sin. Even as a bladder is more capable, and will hold more of a precious liquor, by how much at the first it hath been distended with wind. So these are enlarged to contain the more mercy, by how much they have like a wild Asses Colt, snuffed up the wind, (as the Prophet speaks) and have walkt on in the vanity of their minds (as Paul says) and in a vain conversation as Peter's words are. God's Children, as well as Reprobates, have a measure of iniquity, iniquity, and a stint of sinning; which when they are once arrived to, and have fill'd their measure, God begins to empty them, and to fill them up again with mercy.

III. The third Attribute, the glory whereof God doth hereby advance, is his Applying Grace, which is the Grace he here speaks of, and which super-adds to his love and mercy a freeness, as being extended to us upon, no Motives or Incentives in us, but ex proprio suo motu. So Rom. 3. 24. Being justified freely by his Grace. Now nothing can be supposed to illustrate the fulness thereof more than this kind of Dispensation. For there can be supposed fewest Motives for God to shew mercy to those, who have done nothing but offended and provoked him in a continued course of sinning. After we are regenerate once, tho' we continue to offend him, yet then he is engaged to be reconciled to us. And therefore (Rom. 5. 10.) it is made a greater matter to reconcile us to himself at first when we were Enemies, then to keep us Friends being once reconciled. For to the upholding of our Friendship many Motives may fall in, from which at least God may take an occasion to back one kindness with another: But in this case there are none at all. Now both the Riches of his justifying Grace, and also of his sanctifying Grace, are illustrated by this Dispensation. And I mention both, and upon this very occasion you have both these distinctly mentioned, 1 Cor. 6. 9. where the Apostle having spoken, of their condition before they were converted, he says, Such Sinners were some of you; but now you are justified, now you are sanctified.

I. Gods Justifying Grace is hereby, 1. Cleared, and, 2. Exalted, and that more then any other way.

I. Hereby is cleared to us that our Justification is wholly of and by Grace. Now in the point of Justification, the great Competition is between Grace and Works. Grace looks upon Works as its only Enemy, and Competere herein; which are therefore always set in a direct opposition throughout the Epistles. This is in the Text, and this Dispensation it is the strongest Conviction that could have been, that Works are no ingredients to the Justification of us. Take for Proof of this; the course the Apostle holds in the Epistle to the Romans to clear this to them. After in the two first Chapters he had proved that both Jew and Gentile were in the like natural corrupt estate, He says (Chap. 3. 9.) We have proved both Jewes and Gentiles that they are all under sin; not sinners only; but under sin; that is, the Dominion of it. And this natural Condition, and the Corruption of it, he describeth from the 10 v. to the 19. and then at the 20th, infers this as a Corolary from it, Therefore by the deeds of the Law shall no flesh be justified in his sight. And v. 23. repeats his reason, for all have sinned, and come short of the Glory of God; and therefore he concludes; (in v. 28,) that a Man is Justified by Faith without the Deeds of the Law. This is so strong an Eviction of this saving Truth, that the Papists themselves (to do Bellarmino, and their Doctrine it self; this right) do acknowledge that works done afore Regeneration, though never so outwardly righteous, are excluded from that first Justification. (as they by distinction call it;) yea he confesseth that that Justification then is therefore only in and through Christ's Blood. But then after Conversion, they say there is a second Justification whereby a man is judged worthy of Eternal Glory, and such and such degrees of it; and this they attribute to good Works after Conversion; dipt in Christs Blood. A Man in and by Regeneration being made inherently righteous, and set up a new, begins with a new stock, and so Trades for Eternal Life. And that is their Errour. But yet, even to evince that Works are excluded from that their second Justification, as well as from the first, the consideration of a Mans Unregenerate Estate doth most aptly serve. The total Corruption of that Estate hath spoyled and disabled all the Righteousness, that shall anew be bestowed, for ever being fit to justifie us. And this not simply, because it hath defiled the Person, and made him a Traytor to God, and so nothing can can ever as from him (as in himself considered,) be accepted. Nor is it the cause why Works after Conversion cannot justify us, because they are Imperfect, and stained as a menstruous cloth (though that is a reason ex abundantia) but if we could suppose them as undefiled as after the Resurrection they shall be, as perfect as in Heaven they shall be; and if God should upon the first moment of Conversion make any one so perfectly Holy, yet they would not then serve to justify (if I know nothing by my self, says Paul, yet I am not thereby justified) and what is the true and utmost reason of this, Yet? Because he had known so much by himself in his former Unregenerate Estate. This you shall find to have been the Apostles scope and way of reasoning (in the 8, 9, 10, 11. verses of the second Chapter to the Ephesians) why Salvation is of Grace, and not of our selves, nor of works, neither afore nor after: For by Grace are ye saved, through Faith; and that not of your selves; it is the Gift of God: Not of Works, lest any Man should boast: For we are his workmanship Created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. That is, these very works are given by Grace, of which this your former condition enough convinceth you; for then you were nothing but Sin, dead in Sins and Trespases, not able to think a good thought, so as God was out of his Grace to give you a new frame of Heart on purpose created, or you had never come to have had the least good Work. And if so, then you are not saved by these good Works wrought by you, through this new Workmanship in you, no more then by those afore, for they all are the meer free gift of God, and of his Grace; and that Righteousness that comes of Grace, and holds of that Tenure, can never come to justify. For the works that must justify, must some way challenge that Justification by debt or a due, not merited indeed (for so even Adams could not) yet by a natural due through that first Covenant of Nature, Rom. 4. 12.

2. As the Doctrine of Justification is hereby cleared to be by Grace; so his Grace in Justification, is hereby advanced and extolled; and that in two properties thereof.

I. The Freeness of Grace.

II. The exceeding Riches thereof.

You have the one, Rom. 3. 24. The other, Eph. 2. 7, 8, &c.

1. The Freeness of Grace is hereby exalted; for if you observe it, upon what occasion is the mention of the freeness of Grace in justifying brought in, in Rom. 3. 24. but only upon his having said before, v. 22, 23. That they all had sinned; and there was no difference; that is, all were alike, in a state or condition of sinning. For those that are not Justified, are and remain in such an estate; now, says the Apostle, so do all those whom he means to Justify, he Justifies them freely by his Grace. For then it is apparent it is Grace, out of its own meer motion doth it, and so puts a difference and, that a vast one: Who caused thee to differ from another says the Apostle? 1 Cor. 4. 7.

2. The exceeding Riches of Grace in justifying, is hereby advanced; for when a Man by sinning hath gone on to treasure up Wrath, adding every moment to the heap for so long a time; it requires a vast sum of Mercy treasured up by God to discharge, and buy out (as it were) that other. And it is certain, when after so long and so lavish an expence of sinning, as falls out in a mans Unregenerate condition, he comes first to God in the sight of all his sins; though afore he lightly took it for granted God was Merciful, &c. yet now he stands agast at it; and wonders where there should be Riches of Mercy enough to forgive so many Millions of Talents of sinning. And it is infinite Mercy (God having such sums ready and lying ing by him) to forgive a Man all after all, upon one single Act of Faith. It is infinite Mercy in God to suffer such a poor and mean Ticket to take up upon pure trust so much Riches, when as yet God hath had no experience neither of our good Behaviour. I will not now dispute whether then at the first Justification God pardons all a Mans sins to come, as well as past. For whether the one or the other be asserted, yet this must be reckoned the great Act and Time of Justifying, and of expending the Riches of Grace upon us, even when he first saved us by Faith, as Eph. 2. 7, 8. 9. And if then, all sins to come, as well as past, are pardon'd, yet not till then; and then, after so long a forbearance, God at once doth it. Well might the Apostle triumph upon such an experiment, and say, Who shall lay any thing to the charge of Gods Elect? It is God that Justifies: Shall sin, that a man was born in, that lay as an old debt from the Womb? The Apostle cuts that off with an easie Answer, Not as the Offence, so is the Grace; it aboundeth much more, Rom. 5. 15, 16. Tho' sins, continued in with full consent, every one of which had made the corruption of Nature of a deep dye, have abounded; nay, throw on heaps of actual transgressions as High as Heaven, as Daniel speaks, and these reaching also as low as Hell: Let Manasses come with his Fifty Years continued Rebellion, and Paul with his: Although these abound, yet Grace much more. Yea (v. 2. of that Chap.) The Apostle is bold to make the utmost supposition, that where sin hath abounded, Grace hath abounded much more, and in the next verse compares it to a mighty Monarch, that rejoyses in the conquest of so many Enemies; Grace reigns, through Righteousness. And the Glory thereof lies (as of other Potentates, as Solomon says) in the multitude of these its Subjects.

II. This conduceth to shew forth the power of sanctifying Grace, or that renewing Grace in the Text, Eph. 1. 19. The Apostle attributes to this the greatest power that ever God did or will put forth in any work unless in that of raising Christ from that low estate the Humane Nature was in, unto the highest estate of Glory. And how comes it that so great a Power appears? He tells us, (Eph. 2. 1.) Where he goes to prosecute it, You who were dead in Sins and Trespasses, hath he quickned; Dead in the sin of Nature, dead by Transgressions actual, whereof each gives a fresh stab; not only Twice dead (as Jude speaks) but a Thousand times dead. And though in nature there is but one measure of Death; One Man that is dead of one stab, is as dead as he that hath Ten Thousand; yet if you were to raise a Man to life, it would require a greater power to raise a man to life, that hath a Thousand stabs in vital parts, for every stab must be cured or he will be dead still. Or rather to exemplifie it thus: To raise a man rotten in the Grave, is a matter of greater power, than to raise a Man newly dead. Mary thought that Christ might have kept Lazarus from dying, whilst any spark of Life had been in him (so twice it is said John 11. 21, 32. If thou hadst been here, my Brother had not dyed) But now (says Martha, v. 39.) he is not only dead, but stinketh. He hath been dead four days, v. 29. and indeed Christ had stayed away on purpose, to shew forth the Glory of God, v. 5, 6. compared with the 40th. In like manner thus Christ defers and suffers his own Children to be in a state of Death. He defers his own not only four days, but many years. and before he raiseth them up, lets them stink in their sins. The vertue of Christs Death and Resurrection is a Sovereign Remedy for any sore, and God is a Skillful Physitian that intends to shew the vertue of it, and often drives so long, till as the Prophet says, the Wound is otherwise incurable and then applies and cures them.

C H A P. V.

Other Reasons why God suffers his Elect, who are Adult, to continue for some time in a state of Sin. That this Dispensation turns to their Benefit and Advantage in the Event. That it serves for the Conviction, and Judgment of wicked Men, and greater Confusion of Satan.

UNTO those Ends of God's suffering his Elect to remain for some time in a state of Sin, which are the Principal and more Immediate, I may add others which are but Additionall, yet Ingredients into this his wise and gracious Dispensation. And as the ends before mentioned, related to himself: So these other regard all sorts of intelligible Natures, both Men and Angels, and all sorts of either Good or Bad.

I. They regard Good Men.

1. The Persons, themselves whom he after such a state converteth. He disposeth of a state of sinning afore Conversion for their Good, as all things else to work together for Good; namely for the encrease of their most pretious Graces afterwards. This Paul, in telling that Story of his Conversion which so much delighted him, holds forth, 1 Tim. I. 14. The Grace of our Lord Jesus was exceeding abundant with Faith and Love which is in Christ Jesus. The sum of which is this:

1. He had shewn how much the contrary sins had abounded. I was a Blasphemer, (says he) a Persecutor, I did it in Unbelief.

2. How Infinitely Gods Grace in Pardoning him, had much more superabounded, ὑπερ ἐπλεόνασεν.

3. He had shewn how thereupon when converted, the contrary Graces and Gifts abounded in him, instancing in Faith and Love. As on Gods part, and in Gods Heart, pardoning and accepting Grace abounded; so on his part also, and in his heart, Faith and Love abounded also. the Grace of the Lord was abundant with Faith and Love; that is, with those effects of it in some proportionable Correspondency to the Grace shown him; and in these returns to God again his heart was answerably affected to the comparative measure of his former sinfulness and God's Grace. These were the Reverberations, the Reboundings and Reflections rising out of both. And it is observable, that he carries his discourse so, as to shew how, when he was converted, the Graces particularly contrary to those very sins he had most exceeded in afore, were wrought in him; and so that therein the abundance of God's Grace was to be observed. The sins which he instanced in are three. 1. Unbelief; I did it (says he) in unbelief, v. 12. oppositely, the Grace of Faith was afterwards abundant. 2. I was a Persecutor (says he) and injurious; but now Grace was abundant in Love to God and all his Saints; and his Love rose higher then ever any ones but Christ's, he could have wished himself accursed for them, Rom. 9. 1, 3. I was (says he) a Blasphemer, the foulest Throat that ever opened it self against God and his Tabernacle, and the Saints that were on Earth. He had been a Wicked Saul, breathing out threatnings and slaughters against the Disciples, Acts 9. 1. But now Christ counted him Faithful, and put him into the Ministry, and he proved the best Preacher that Christ ever had. He now Preaches the Faith he once destroyed, was the Bruit, and Character went forth of him, Gal. 1. 24. And how he laboured more then all the other Apostles, himself also reports.

2. It proves an advantage also to other Saints, and that many ways.

1. It gives an occasion of Glorifying God in the Conversion of some notorious sinner, throughout all the Churches. So those that never had seen Paul's Face (Gal. 2. 22, 23. I was unknown by Face to the Churches in Judea) and who had heard only, that he which Persecuted them in times past, now Preached the Faith, Glorified God.

2. It gives them occasion also of shewing forth the disposition of Grace which of all other is most Noble and Natural to the new Creature, and that is a Zeal for, desires to, Prayers and Endeavours after, the Conversion of others; which as in Nature, so in Grace, is the most natural Work. Which that they may have opportunity to exercise, God affords them through this dispensation, matter in their several Relations, and this not only to Ministers but to all sorts of private Christians. God in his providence, marries a Wife (that after proves a Believer) to an Husband, that continues an Unbeliever long after; And what knowest thou, (1 Cor. 7. 16.) O Wife, whither thou shalt save thy Husband? So then as God ordained it thus, to shew forth his own Love and Mercy the more; so withal he designed it, that we might give Demonstration of our Love and Pity to the Souls of Men; as he hath in his Divine Providence left the most of Mankind in Poverty or Necessitous to give occasion of that Grace of Charity, which he so delights in, as being the likeness of himself. To save Souls, was the tempting argument to Christ himself, (Isa. 49. throughout, and Isa. 53.) Now Christ having payed the Price, and so having perfected for ever them that were to be sanctified, he went to Heaven on purpose to leave the Actual conversion of Souls unto us his Brethren. He would not do it himself instrumentally, because he would not take that work out of our hands that believe. He knew they had the same Graecs and desires for saving Souls himself had, and he would leave them matter for the specifying of it: He withal knew; how great a joy it would be to a Father to win his Child, a Wife to convert her Husband, which often falls out, as the Apostle insinuates, 1 Cor. 17. 16. What knowest thou? He knew that he could not use an higher and greater motive to indure much (as they did) from Heathen Husbands. The like he says, 1 Pet. 3. 1. So that as the Apostle says, he fulfilled the after Sufferings of Christ, that is, what he left for us after his example to bear; so I may say he hath left us this as the after work, which was properly his, and should have been his, even to save mens Souls from Death, (James 5. 20.) but that he would have us have the Honour of it: Neither doth he employ his Angels (who are Ministring Spirits in all other the greatest affairs in this World) in this Work, but reserves it wholly for us Men. He gave the Law by them, but not the Gospel. He knew there was no greater joy, next to joy in God himself, can befall a Christian, than to convert a Sinner. That which satisfied Christ himself; and for which he thought himself well apay'd for all his sufferings, was, that he saw the Travel of his Soul. Isa. 53. 10. He shall see his seed, and the work of the Lord shall prosper in his Hands. He shall see the Travel of his Soul and be Satisfied. And he knew that to see the like in converting Souls, would in our proportion, of all things else, most most joyous ends. Ep. John v. 14. I have no greater joy than to hear that my Children walk in truth. First to see those he might call his Children; My Children (saith he) (as Isaiab speaks in Christs Person, Lo here, am I, and the Children whom I have given me.) And then to hear they walk in Truth.

This Dispensation regards Bad Men, and such as God means to cast away. God hath a design upon them also in this dispensation of his. God in this World as well makes way and prepares evidence, against the day of Judgment, as for the Salvation of his own. This, as one great work to be done at the day of Judgment, Enoch held forth to the then ungodly world, Jude 14, 15. *And Enoch also, the Seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his Saints, to execute Judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them, of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly Sinners have spoken against him. As to execute Judgment, so to convince; and I observe it is said, All ungodly among them, that is, that have lived among the Saints in this World; And of what in a more especial manner are they to be convicted? Even of their hard speeches spoken against him; that is against Christ, as appearing in the Saints. Thus Paul was convicted by that speech from Heaven, Why persecutest thou me? Now there is nothing of all passages of Gods dispensations that falls out in this world, that hath more of conviction in it, then to see those that lived once according to the course of this world, and in the same lusts with themselves, to turn unto God, and become new men. Neither yet doth any thing usually more provoke them to hard speeches even against that conviction, than such strange accidents when they do fall out. Nothing hath more of conviction in it, and is therefore used as a most effectual means of gaining men; even when the Word will not, nor the Doctrine of it. If any obey not the Word, they may without the Word be won by their conversation, 1 Pet. 3. 1. It setteth home the Word, as an example of Judgment doth a Threatning against such and such a sin. Hence Isaiab says. (Esa. 29. 23, 24.) When Israel (speaking of the Nation) shall see his Children the work of mine hands; answerably to Eph. 2. 10. (you are his Workmanship, created, &c.) in the midst of him, they that erred in Spirit, shall come to understanding, and they that murmured (that were opposers of Religion) shall learn Doctrine. Such an example setteth home many Sermons. They see the word verified; whilst men shall see and hear, as Christ speaks, ὅτι πτωχοὶ εὐαγγελίζονται; that the Poor are Evangelized, are Gospelized, turned into a living Gospel, the word of God taking hold of them, and they becoming an engrafted Word, as James speaks. What the word says and speaks of Conversion, is made true and good, and exemplified in them in their conversion. Christ speaks it not of the bare preaching of it to the poor, for so it was to all, as well as the poor, but thereby expresseth the effect of it upon them, reckoning it among the miracles that accompanied the preaching of it. The blind see, &c. And therefore Christ there brings it in as a visible object. Tell John the Baptist (says he) what you have seen and heard; namely these miracles accompanying the preaching of the Gospel, and poor Souls converted by it, the greatest of all the rest. And these Christ alledgeth as a full conviction, That he was that Messiah to come into the world: For that was the message, v. 19, 20. John sent them about, to the end they might ocularly be convinced of it. So then, my Brethren let me say this to you, This hath the reality and power of conviction in it, that miracles were ordained for. Now though all other miracles are ceased, yet God continues this standing miracle. Men are apt to think with themselves, if I had lived in those times, when all those miracles were wrought, I should surely have believed. Oh adulterous Generation, do ye seek a sign? No other sign shall be given you, but that afore your very faces, your companions in evil, your Children, or Wives that once lived in sin as you do, in that estate you continue in, are converted afore your eyes, and turn from their evil ways, professing damnation to have been in that estate which they lived in before: And if you will not believe by this, if one were raised from the Dead, you would not believe, for a greater Resurrection is here. And therefore* therefore such a real conviction shall be brought against thee at latter day (if thou also turn not) with greater evidence than the multitudes of Sermons thou hast heard. And tho' the Word of God must judge us, yet this will much more. And yet when men do thus turn to God, and see Converts live among them, they are enraged to speak evil of them, which serves to make up the full measure of that sinfulness and vengeance Jude speaks of. The Apostle Peter (1 Pet. 4. 1.) gives a definition of a Primitive Convert; 1. He is one, says he, that hath suffered in the flesh. He and his lusts have been on the Cross with Christ, and it hath had this effect, that he ceaseth from the common practice of known sins: He hath ceased from sin, and hath utterly left them, for the Salvation of his Soul, and this for ever: That he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh, to the lusts of men, but to the will of God. To the lusts of men, that is the same lusts the most of men live in. This is his bent, this is his profession, and this is the work begun upon him. There was a time indeed, a time past in our lives (says Peter in the next verse, v. 3.) in which we wrought the will of the Gentiles (For whilst men live in the same lusts with others, they please them, they are as they would have them) when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable Idolatries. Well but now they had turned to God, what do the Gentiles among them think and speak of it? They think it strange, that is, it is a wonder to them, for it is as a kind of miracle they cannot tell what in reason or nature to ascribe it to. And they yet speak evil of them, and tho' they are convinced by nothing more, yet they are provok'd to speak evil of them upon no occasion more, for it brings their Consciences upon them, it publicly declares that the courses and state they still remain in are evil and wicked, and the way to destruction; and this makes them put the cause of this alteration upon ten thousand other pretences or grounds, as Hypocrisy, &c. Well, but says Peter, All this makes but work for the day of Judgment, and prepares Evidences of conviction for to help Christ to clear his Sentence of condemnation of them; for so it follows, Who shall give an account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead. So then, this is one of those Ends which God hath in his dispensation. And surely for a wicked man to see another that walk'd in the same way with him, begin to turn head on a suddain, run contrary ways so cross to flesh and blood, and which tends to reproach, and perhaps ruin in this world; this must needs amaze and awaken his Companion.

II. This dispensation hath its influence also upon Angels, both good and bad, and produceth as great Effects, conjunct with God's Glory, as any other Dispensation of God's Providence whatever.

I. In the Good Angels, it proves the occasion of as Great a Joy as any we read of, that fills the hearts of those great Spirits. They are the most curious Spectators of God's works of wonder. And themselves are employed by Christ in the Greatest Transactions that belong to this World, in Wars and making Peace &c. and in what belongs to the preservation of God's Elect; and this is an inferior work for them. But they are said in a more special manner to joy and rejoyce in what themselves have no hand at all, not the least, viz. To see and behold Sinners and lost Sheep converted unto God. Christ says expressly, There is Joy in Heaven at the Conversion of one Sinner; and as it would seem, this joy befalls them in a great part of a reward and recompence for their other so cheerful undergoing those other Employments and Services in this World which are below them: which yet, as it were by the by, God entertains them with, as the Roman Emperour did the People with their Spectacula, Sights and Shews to please and to delight them. Sure I am, we read of this to be matter of joy to them, who have God so much to rejoyce in; and not those other Employments of theirs because this of all other is so meet to, and more conjunct with, the Glory of God which they have made their Happiness. Thus also the glorious sufferings of Apostles and Martyrs are made a spectacle for Angels to feast their eyes withal, 1 Cor. 4. 9. So the preaching the Gospel, the sending down the Book I Spirit, the Sufferings of Christ, the Glory that followed are rehearsed as things the Angels do pry into. 1 Pet. 1. 11, 12. And also that which was the end of Christ's death and, of sending down the Holy Ghost, and of preaching the Gospel, namely the Conversion of Souls.

2. This dispensation of God hath a design upon Bad Angels. I observe it, that next to mans Salvation, Satans confusion is that which God on Christ's behalf purposes with most vehemency and edge of Spirit, to contrive how at once to save Men, and together confound Satan in the most exquisite and artificial way. You may read and observe it, how God gave forth that first and great Promise of Christ the promised Seed, and of Mans Salvation by him, not first and directly to Adam and Eve themselves (whose Salvation yet it concerned) but in his Speech unto, and in his cursing of the Devil, Gen. 3. 5. I will put Enmity between thee and the Woman, her Seed, and thy seed. It shall break thy Head, &c. It was spoken in their hearing indeed, but immediately directed to the Devil, and the point of it levelled point blank at his brest. He gave it I say, with a Vengeance, uttered it, with the highest indignation, it answerably being matter of pleasure and delight to him to disappoint that Enemy. Now of all contrivements which God in his Wisdom sharpned with revenge hath sought out, even next to the sending his Son into the World (Non macies invenit tormentum) God hath not invented a more exquisite rack and torment to that evil Spirit, then that an elect Child of Gods, having continued many Years in a state and course of sin, and in the Devils full possession, should be pull'd forth of his clutches, and converted unto God after so long a time. And that he was in his possession, is the thing that vexeth the Devil: Had a Man been regenerated in the Womb, it had been far less vexation to him. It is the usual Description of Conversion in the New Testament, that it is the turning of a Man from the power of Satan unto God, (Acts 26. 18.) a delivering us from the power of darkness, (which is Satans) and translating us into the Kingdom of his Son, (Col. 1. 13.) 'Tis certain that afore Conversion, the Devil Rules and Reigns as fully in one that is Elect, as any other Man, and finds no difference, Eph. 2. 2. Now consider what a confusion it must needs be to the Devil, that when for Ten, or Twenty years, he hath possess'd a Man in peace, (as in the Parable Christ tells us, Luke 11. 21.) and like a strong Man hath fortified his House round, in so much as he is in Peace and Security, that he is his own, and that he shall have him to Hell with him, (he is called his proper Goods and Chattels, in that Luke 11. 21.) that when he hath fortified his Understanding, the Tower of the Souls, (2 Cor. 10. 4, 5.) with strong holds and high imaginations, when he hath cast up Mounts and Bulwarks, and environed and moted the ill Ground again, and again, with corrupt Affections, that there is no access to move it; in so much as he Glories in the possession of a Man (as Nebuchadnezer did in his Palace, and to shew the Devils like Boast and vain account herein, Christ useth the very word in that Luke 11. 21. εἰς τὴν ἀυλὴν αὐτοῦ, he termeth the Mans Soul, his Court, his Palace,) That when the Devil is walking up and down, and in the midst of Glorifying, Is not this the Man I have possessed so long? Is not this the Babel which I have built for the Glory of my Majesty? In an instant a word comes from Heaven, Thy Kingdom is departed from thee, and the Holy Ghost seizeth upon all, and none of Satans Fortifications can keep the wind of the Spirit out, which blows where he listeth as Christ says, John 3. And the Holy Ghost binds this strong Man (as Christ speaks) in an Hour, throws down, and in a great measure slights all the works which this Spirit had been a rearing all that Mans Life time hitherto. Oh how must this needs still that Enemy and Avenger, when he hath had a Man so long as it were in a string, (2 Tim. 2. 26.) taking him Captive at his Will. He knew how, and where to lay Traps and Gins for him, and take him as the Fowler doth the silly Birds. To have this poor forlorn Man pull'd out of his Jaws, when he had in his thoughts drunk him up (as Peter speaks) and in Peace possess't him: What an infinite confusion must this be to him? In so much much as Christ concludes of him, that being thus cast out, He walks in dry places, like one Banish'd, that is melancholy, and seeks Solitariness, an Heath, or a Wilderness, as being ashamed to shew his Head. Chap. 6.

Thus you have seen all Creatures reasonable, and of all sorts of them, affected with the thoughts of Gods Dispensation to his Elect, all having an interest in it: That as at Christs birth all the City of Jerusalem is said to have been moved at it; so are all sorts both in Heaven and in Hell, at the New Birth of one that hath been a lost Sinner; which is that which putteth the notice upon it. Whereas the Regeneration of Elect Infants passeth silently. They are still born, and no such noise made of it.

CHAP. VI.

The Uses of the foregoing Doctrine. That they who are brought into a state of Grace, should always bear in their minds a remembrance of their former state of Sin and Misery. That it will have an Influence to promote, and strengthen their Faith.

YOU have seen God's Ends and Designs in his Dispensation toward the Elect; and they are great and holy Ends, and of as large an Extent in their Tendency, as in any other Dispensation of God to us.

I come now to the Uses to be made hereof on our part, which must be such as may answer those Ends on God's part. And withal what Uses may be made of such a Time spent in sinning afore Regeneration, may also fitly be turned upon the Spirits of those that have had great fits of sinnings in any kind, after Regeneration. They will serve for both, but I will speak more directly, as in relation to the first.

You that have run out many years in great sins, or few years in many, Look back, and now learn to make an improvement of that waste time in your lives. Men are apt to think that there is no use to be made thereof, especially of so long a time as that of Unregeneracy was, in which we all lay. Now the Apostle, he would never have exhorted the Ephesians (as you see he doth, Eph. 2. 2.) to remember what once they were, if there were not many most fruitful and profitable improvements of the consideration of that Condition. It is called our vain conversation (so Peter calls it, 1 Pet. 15.) And the Apostle Paul saith (Rom. 6. 2.) What fruit had you in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? But my Brethren, assure your selves of this, that God would not have left many, yea most of his children to so long a time of sinning against him, in which they brought forth no fruit unto him, if that after they were turned unto him there were no ways whereby they should improve, and improve with interest and advantage, all the Experiences they had of their sinfulness in that Condition. God could have saved you cheaper then by letting you fall into sin at all; it was not for his profit in a proper and direct way, that those whom he went to to save, should continue in sin, though but for one moment. He could have Book II. saved us, as he did the Angels, a Cheaper way. He loves his Children so well, that he would never have it said, that they had so and so dishonoured him, if he had not meant to have more honour (in an indirect way, in the event and issue, when all is summ'd up) by all that Condition of sinning, in which formerly they had lain.

This general Exhortation, which is as a foundation to the rest, is to bear all your days in remembrance your sins, and the Condition of sin in which you sometimes were. In Ephes. Chap. 2. the Apostle had at large discours'd of the State of Nature they had been in, and the Close and Conclusion he makes of all is, Wherefore remember that ye were sometimes Gentiles in the flesh &c. There are two things which in the New Testament we are call'd upon in an especial manner to remember; first, the Death of our Lord and Saviour Christ, which the Sacrament calleth upon us to remember, Do this in remembrance of me. And the second is, Remember what once ye were, what your Estate and Condition was, and forget it not. There is a third, which is, that thou shouldst Remember whence thou art fallen, and repent, which is coincident with this Second. Remember, it had need be urg'd, for we are apt to forget it, and yet it is a duty lyes upon us. Ezek. 16. 22. he had discoursed there in the former part of the chapter, what their condition was, before God took them to be his People. Thy Birth and thy Nativity is of the Land of Canaan; thy Father was an Amorite, and thy Mother an Hittite. v. 3. and so he goes on to mind them of their Abominations, When thou wast (saith he) in thy Blood, I said unto thee, Live. Now after he had took them to be his People, when they had gone a whoring from him, what is it he lays to their Charge, especially at v. 22. that in all their abominations and whoredomes they had not remembered? In all thine abominations and thy whoredoms thou hast not remembered the days of thy Youth, when thou wast naked and bare, and wast polluted, &c. And the not remembering of this, as it is made a great sin, so it is made a special reason why they had fallen from God so much, and so often, after they were his People; Even because they remembered not. Every place thou comest in, where thou hast lived before, may put thee in mind of some Sin or other, Jer. 3. 2. 13. Every Member of thy Body hath sin written on it. The Tongue is a world of evil, thy Feet have been swift to carry thee to vanity. The whole Body is not able to contain the story of it. As of Christs holy active Life, it was said, That all Books in the world could not contain the History of them; So the same may be said of thy sins.

But in making the Use, or Application, I shall chiefly confine my self unto those Ends which God had, as in relation to us in this dispensation. I instanced in two eminent Graces in Pauls example, 1 Tim. 1. I shall now present them particularly.

I. The Consideration and remembrance thereof may help and further thy Faith. 'Tis true, the guilt of many and great sins, is in a direct way an Opposite and Hinderer of Faith; it strikes the hand off, and discourageth from laying hold on Christ: Yet by God's dispensations that turn Darknes, into Light, this may prove a Provocative thereto, and an Inlarger of it many ways.

1. Unfeigned Faith of the operation of God, is founded upon Self-emptyness, and Poverty of Spirit. If I would seek to move and stir my heart to kindly Godly Sorrow, I would take into Consideration my sinning after Conversion, as being committed against so much Love, not only born towards me, but either brought home to my heart, or on which my Soul depends alone for its Salvation: Also against the Blood of so gracious a Saviour, not shed only, but relyed on, and to which I have dayly recourse to have it sprinkled on my Conscience: Also against that Holy Spirit that dwells in me, and bears with me with an unwearied patience. But if I would work my Soul up to Self-emptyness, I would with the help of the Spirit consider my Natural Condition, and that in two respects.

1. There I am sure to find a perfect Emptiness of Works of Righteousness, for it afforded none; no not in any imperfection. This (when the sinfulness of such an estate is fully discovered) the heart needs not be taught, it is so apparent. These words (Tit. 3. 5.) Not by works of Righteousness which we had done, come in not here only, but else where, upon this occasion, as taken for granted by all Believers that had any insight into that estate, of which the Apostle hath pronounced this conclusive Sentence: So then, they that are in the flesh, cannot please God. Rom. 8. 2.

2. A man looking back thereon, may see the vileness of his nature to the full, for it was then that the power of sin remained in its full strength (or to use Paul's Phrase, Rom. 7. 5.) had force, its full force in his members to bring forth fruit to death, which force is now in part broken and slain. A man then laid the reins upon his lusts neck: A man then committed uncleanness with greediness, πλεονεξία such as his Soul could never have enough of. And it is the greediness, the unsatisfiedness, and eagerness of a man's Lusts in sinning, humbles more than the outward action. A man may by the course he then held, see what a Dragon that Serpent would have proved; but now Christ hath troden on his head to keep him from ever growing again.

3. A Man consulting that, may be convinced of his utter Inability to help himself, and of his want of Power to believe. Take any man, and he will easily be brought to acknowledge that he hath so much guilt of Sin, as needs a Mediatour to God for him; and that it is necessary that he go to him, if he will have benefit by him. But yet still he flatters his Heart with this, that he hath power to believe, and lay hold on him, otherwise men would not dare to defer to believe and repent, if they took not this for granted, and were not encouraged by such an Opinion. But when a man comes to see his Natural Condition, he sees himself without strength, plunged into Misery, and unable for ever to help himself, and that there is not only need that God would Graciously provide a Mediatour, a Sacrifice for him (as Abraham said, Gen. 22. 8.) but that God must as well give him Faith to go unto Christ, as give Christ himself, and must find him hands to lay hold of him withal. And this also the Apostle regards as a granted Principle in Believers Hearts, from a sight of their Natural Condition, Eph. 2. For having said they had been by Nature dead in Sins, he concludes, v. 8. By Grace ye are saved, through Faith; and that not of your selves, it is the Gift of God. After conversion a Man finds himself quickned, through the Spirit, and the New Creature stirring in him; but he was afore utterly dead in Sins and Transgressions. There is nothing gives a more perfect experience of this Inability, then that Estate; let the Soul remember but that, and he must needs remember he wanted all Ability to any Good.

4. This, and this alone, Teacheth a Man one Lesson (and it is one of the highest in Faith's School) which but for the Experiences hereof, a Man would hardly, if ever learn; and that is, That whenever a Man puts forth an Act of Faith for Justification, and comes to Christ for it, he should look upon himself as an Ungodly Person, and to be so in himself for ever. This is made the very Genius, and the Spirit of Faith. Rom. 4. 5. But to him worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his Faith is counted for Righteousness, and no other. Now after a Man is once converted to God, altho he a sinful man in many respects, yet in that state he is not an ungodly but really and truly a Godly Man. Doth the Apostle then intend this speech of the first Act of Faith which a Man puts forth when he first believed only, that then indeed his acting Faith, was such as wherein looking upon himself as an ungodly Person, in respect of all his former condition, he then came to Christ and God under such apprehensions of himself to be justified, notwithstanding looking on himself as a Person utterly ungodly. Now suppose the Apostle had spoken it in respect of that first act of Faith only; a Man could

Book II. could not have had an experimental sense of his being, or having been ungodly, but by means of having lived in such an estate, wherein he had been both a sinner, and also ungodly. But further, the Apostle here speaks of the Faith of a Believer; which he continues to put forth from first to last, and his Scope is to describe the whole of that Faith all along, which in point of Justification a Believer lives by: Which is evident, both

1. By the instance he is alledging for his Proof, which is the instance of Abraham. Abraham was not justified by Works (v. 2.) therefore not we. For what faith the Scripture? Abraham Believed God, and it was counted to him for Righteousness; v. 4, 5. as shewing and expounding, what manner of act of Faith that was, which Abraham our Father put forth. It was clearly this, he believed on him, or on God, as justifying the ungodly; and so in believing look'd upon himself, under the consideration of an ungodly Person. Now: if indeed this Act of Faith in Abraham, which the Apostle hath recourse to, had been that which at his first Calling and Conversion he put forth, then this Speech of the Apostle concerning this Faith, must have been limited to that first act of Faith: But if it prove that that act of Faith the Apostle quotes of Abraham, was that Faith he put forth many Years after He had first Believed, then it must necessarily be understood, that Abraham after he was converted, in believing for Righteousness, look'd upon himself as ungodly. He had no Eye to Works, no more than at the very first. Now it proves to be thus indeed; for it is in the 15th of Genesis, that you find this first said of Abraham's Faith, whereas Abraham had been Converted and a Believer many Years before, for in Gen. 12. 1, 2, 3. You read of Abraham's call out of his own Country, when yet he believed Heb. 11. 8. By Faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place he after received, Obeded. So then Abraham in believing for ever lookt on himself as ungodly.

2. The Apostle's scope all along is, to assert the Doctrine of Justification by Faith only, as well after Conversion, as in Conversion, and how that in believing a man looks not at work, or in himself as working; but eyes God under this Consideration, as one that justifies a person, though ungodly; and upon those terms cometh to God for Justification. And therefore Justification (says he) is not by Works, for they are a contradiction to the very formale subiectum, or that formalis ratio of a person to be justified, which true Faith hath in its eye: For it both considers the person to be justified as not working, yea, as ungodly. And the formal consideration it hath of God, or under which it eyeth him is, that he is a God justifying the ungodly. Now if this be the nature, the tendency of Faith, as justifying; then says the Apostle, it is impossible to be Justified at all by Works, but if we are justified, it must be by Faith. For by this, Faith excludes Works in the very formalis ratio of the subject to be justified, who is one that worketh not; and in the formalis ratio of the Object it eyes, the Person justifying, God justifying the ungodly. And therefore we may be said to be justified by Faith all along, after Conversion, as well as before we are; for the Just live by Faith, And the Righteousness of God is still revealed from Faith to Faith, as he had shewn in the beginning of his discourse, Chap. 1. 17. For therein is the Righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith; as it is written, The just shall live by faith. Then it must be after Conversion, as well as before, that the Faith of a Believer doth in some true and real perspective or other look upon himself as ungodly, and as having no works at all: And for every apprehension of Faith, the Believer must look on himself as ungodly. Faith and Truth are the nearest of kin of all things else, therefore That which God would have me believe, must have the greatest and clearest truth in it. Therefore this must remain a certain and irrefragable truth, That after conversion a man may be said to be an ungodly person. And how can this be? Why it is no way salvable, but by this, that a man having once been an ungodly person, and in such an Estate, he is to look upon himself as in himself, for ever ever as such, when he comes to be justified, in the 2 Cor. 12. 5. You have Paul distinguishing concerning himself, I knew a man in Christ, of him I will glory, yet of my self I will not glory; yet this man was himself, that same one individual Paul. So then Paul in Christ is differing in his own eye, from Paul in himself. Thus here a Believer is taught this strange distinction, to acknowledge himself as in Christ to be a new Creature, a person godly, but yet to turn the other end of the prospective, and view himself as in himself, to be an ungodly person, utterly ungodly. And if he will at any time present himself afore God's throne for Justification, he must plead sub formâ Impij, as our Law says in another case, sub formâ Pauperis: He must appear in his unregenerate rags or rather nakedness, as a person abominable, cast out, and weltring in all his blood; for God as justifying regards nothing at all that difference which yet himself hath made, of Godly, and ungodly; Godly since regeneration, and ungodly afore: But looks upon the Man as environed with the guilt of both Estates; and so having been once godly, as one that is in that Court to be adjudged, reckoned so still. It is not a man's new godliness takes away the guilt of his ungodliness; but it is only God's imputing a Righteousness to him, that is none of his own. Now look how God, as justifying, looks upon things; so will God have Faith, as justifying, to view things also. And therefore when faith comes afore a Justifying God, it must lay aside the thoughts of its own works, though it have never so many to plead in its own Court; yet it must fall down and acknowledge (as they at the Altar did) A Syrian ready to perish was my father; and an ungodly person I was once, and am still, as in the guilt thereof ready to perish, and as in thy sight (oh Lord) I present my self afore thee as such, and I cast my self upon thee to justifie me, not as now Godly and Converted, but as ungodly, for so I was once, and am ever so to be reckoned, in my self considered. And this is clearly the Faith we first brought to God, when we first believed; this is the Faith we live by, and this is the faith we are to dye in. And so as Justification in God is one uniform Act, Actus individuus, as Divines speak, so hereby it comes to pass that Faith (take it as it justifies) is also an Act of one kind, uniform, Constant, and like its self, both at first, at last, and all along, it is A believing on God that justifies the ungodly.

Now Faith would not have a ground for such an apprehension, unless a man had been sometimes in such a Condition, wherein he was utterly ungodly, and experience of that estate by having past some time of a man's life therein, helpeth Faith to think, yea formeth in the heart, the thought of this Condition. Take John Baptist sanctified in the Womb, who grew up to actual faith after, yet he apprehended, though not by experience, yet from the word, as David also did, that in his Conception he was utterly ungodly, nothing but flesh. But if a man hath found himself to live in such an estate some years, and hath been Convinced of it, then experience helps Faith, and teacheth it this so hard Lesson, than which there is none harder in the School of Christ. And this Abraham was taught by occasion, that himself had lived in such a Condition afore his Call, having been brought up in Idolatry in his fathers house, for they served other Gods (saith the Holy Ghost, Josh. 24. 2. speaking conjunctively of Terah Nachor and Abraham) And therefore in God's Call of him, the words run thus (Gen. 12. 1.) Get thee from thy fathers house; that is, leave their sins and ways, as (Psal. 45.) in God's speaking to the Church, that phrase is in like manner included. Now hence it was, that Abraham ever after, when he came to believe, first look'd upon himself, as in the guilt of this Estate. I was an Idolater, might Abraham say, and would have been so still: Therefore I believe on thee, O Lord, who justifiest not Abraham as Religious, but Abraham the Idolater: I reckon not my self by what through thy Grace I am; but what, but for thy Grace, I should have been. Paul speaks of himself, I was a Blasphemer once, and I reckon my self so still: And all the Sermons I have made, it was not I, but the Grace of God in me. Take the [I] and put nothing but Blasphemy, Persecution. and all Concupiscence to it, for this [I] consisteth of nothing else: And the sense of this caused Paul to say, I know nothing by my self, yet I am not hereby justified

Book II. sted (1. Cor. 4. 4.) that is, suppose I did know nothing by my self since Conversion, yet I know so much by my self before, as it would never justify me: But as to that point, the Faith I live by, is to believe on him that justifies the ungodly. So then the experience of such a former estate of sin, helps that part of Faith, which consists of Self-emptiness.

2. As this dispensation of God layeth a Foundation for that private part of Faith, Self-emptiness; so it is sanctified by God, as an help and promoter of Faith in its positive Acts.

1. Faith, as ye know, lies in a confidence (as the Apostle expresseth it) in an adventuring to cast my Soul on Christ for Salvation. Now if a Man hath adventured upon some uncouth doubtful way, and found success and issue therein, he is emboldned to attempt the like with more resolution, especially in some special desperate Case; he made such or such an attempt, and it succeeded. Now, when thou at first Conversion sawest thy self, (I speak especially to such) as to the time past of thy Life, to have continued in a lost and undone condition, and foundest thy self hopeless and helpless in respect of any power or qualification in thy self, that might stand thee in any stead: Tell me, was it not a bold adventure to begin, first to believe? It is certain the first Act of Faith that any man doth put forth (and every man had a beginning) was the boldest adventure in the World. That thus thou a Soul, guilty of nothing but Ungodliness, and so much ungodliness for time past, shouldest stretch forth thy impure hand (perhaps trembling, when thou didst it) to touch him that is the Holy One of God; to dare so much as to think with thy self, he may yet love me, pardon me, and be my Husband, was the boldest adventure, which thou couldest make: And yet God drew, and perswaded thy Heart to come to him with such a purpose and aim of Spirit: Which venturous act of thine, he seconded with easing, quieting, and pacifying, thy Heart; stilling and Commanding the Waves that were coming in upon thy Soul to be quiet for the present; yea, perhaps owning thy Soul with leaving some impressions and intimations of his Love and Grace inclining towards thee. Now then, here is the improvement of this experience, I would have thee (the greatest venture being already born) be bold to reiterate the same Act of Faith continually, which thou mayst now do with more steadiness and freedom of Spirit, than when thou didst first believe. 'Tis a phrase peculiar in the Epistle to the Hebrems, (Chap. 3. 14. To hold fast the beginning of our confidence, stedfast to the end. As if he had said, Your first Onset, and Attempt, your beginning to venture upon upon Christ, was an act of Daning; do but hold fast and renew the same, which you have greater encouragement to do, if by no other, even by this, that you know what it is to begin. Consider thy Faith at first Act of believing had no experience of it's own to hearten it, as Adam and Eve had not when the promised Seed was, first preach't; but now Faith hath had some experience, if never so small, at one time or other, then believe again, and again, and hold fast thy Confidence unto the end.

2. Yea the consideration of this may help thee in the worst and highest Temptation, that can befall thee, for usually the Devils worst, or the worst he is permitted to speak of thee to thy self, is to terrify thee with this, That thou art still an ungodly Creature, in thy natural Condition; and he well knows how terrible the fear of that is to a poor believing Soul. Well but yet such a desperate plunge is not usual with thee; if thou wouldest speak truth, thou art seldom brought so low, thus conclude, or to sit down so perswaded of thy self, though full of doubts and suspicions. Yet usually when thou hast cast up all, thou darest not say, God hath wrought nothing yet saving, on thy Heart. Well but suppose Satan hath overthrown thee in all suits and pleas, and thou art reduced to this, I am yet after all this an ungodly Person; do thou but yet strengthen thy weak Knees, and if thou canst not walk, creep to Jesus Christ, and say, what I was bold to do at first, I will do do still, if I be driven back to that point from whence I launch'd forth into the vast Ocean of free Grace at first, having neither Sail nor Compass, I will to Sea again; and as I ventured then, I will do so still. And though I have missed hitherto, yet there was a time when ungodly Abraham, ungodly Paul, &c. began first to believe, and to believe on God, as one that justifies Persons ungodly. It is not disproportions of greater or lesser ungodliness that makes any difference. If thou wert more ungodly than thou wast at first (which yet thou art not) it matters not with God.

3. In the Tentation about fears of Perseverance, or falling away, the Consideration hereof may help thee. Thou hast Corruptions break forth within thee, and thou fearest they one day will undo thee, and art apt to think, will God bear with me to the end? Well, but remember how disobedient thou once wert, committing sin with greediness, which now thou canst not do, a seed of God remaining in thee, which God upholds in thy Heart, as a spark in the Sea, that thou canst not sin as thou wert wont. It is certain thou art not worse in that respect, than thou wert in that estate of ungodliness once. Then reason thus with thy self, If God then loved me so, and loves his People so whilst in that condition; as he in the end pull'd me forth of that estate; will not this his Love more easily be induced to preserve and keep me in this Estate I yet stand in? Yes surely, Rom. 5. 10. For if when we were Enemies, we were reconciled to God by the Death of his Son; much more being reconciled, we shall be saved by his Life. Do thou now then but make the Comparison between the one estate and the other. Thou never camest at him then, nor didst any thing for him, and yet he received thee; but now thou comest every day to him, and he reduceth, and brings thee back again. And consider further, that God during all the time of thy unregeneracy, had all that while thou wert running on in sin, a time in his Eye, in which he would bring thee home unto himself, and relieved himself (as it were) with this, Well, let him now take his swinge, I shall have him shortly on his Knees for all this, and he shall come home by weeping Cross, and seek unto me for Grace and Holiness with the same eagerness he now pursues his pleasures. So now consider, though thy Spirit by fits runs out into bold evils against him, and Corruptions break forth in thee, that yet God doth, and can much more easily relieve himself about thee now, than he did before. He says with himself, Well, there is a time a coming shortly, in which I shall take him up to my self, and sanctifie him fully, and present him without spot and wrinkle afore my self, (Eph. 5. 26.) 'Tis but bearing with these trifling miscarriages and breakings forth a little space: I did forbear him much more afore, when he did nothing but sin; and never sought to me in earnest or seriously, nor had I one jot of service from him all that while: But now tho' he thus sins, yet I get now and then a lively broken Prayer of him, I see his heart is with me notwithstanding, and he is never quiet till he comes to me again, and but half his heart and consent is in the sinning; and my free Grace is honoured in him, in pardoning of him; and though I honour not my self, so much in keeping him altogether free, yet he never comes to be as bad as afore Conversion, in respect of the frame of his Heart in sinning. Surely then, saies God, as I bore with him then, and said his day of Conversion is a coming; so I will bear with him now as a Father doth with his Son that serves him: for I see a day of his being made perfectly holy, is a drawing near: And it is but my waiting till that change shall come. Do thou relieve thy self with these thoughts too, and help thy faith with this also, that he that gave at first so great and fatal a blow to thy Corruptions and so sensibly deaded all thy desires to the World, and the pleasures of sin, that thou foundest them as dead Drink to thy Stomach which had lost its Spirit; and wrought so great a change in thee thee then: The same God will at the day of thy Death; which is the next great day when thy change shall come, give all thy sins a final blow, and an eternal Death's Wound. Thou hast found the one in part, and trust him thou shall find the other. Wait (as Job says) till this great change shall come, whereof that other was a beginning and a pledge, and of the two the greater.

4th. Lastly, The remembrance and consideration of such an estate may serve, and is sanctified by God, to quicken a Believer, to take the faster hold of Jesus Christ. And although the strength with which we believe, is wholly and entirely from the Spirit, and put into the Soul by him, who is said to strengthen us, in the Inner man, (Eph. 3. 16.) Yet he useth apt, and suitable, and fit motives, by and with which he conveys it; and conveys it answerably to the fitness, strength and force, that is in such motives to work upon an intelligent Nature. Now among all the considerations that are like to thrust and push on a Man's Soul to take hold on Christ with violence, and that may quicken him in his way to the City of Refuge, even when his knees would else grow feeble, that which is very powerful, is the view and prospect of an Unregenerate Condition, and the sins thereof, like an Army sent out to attack him, to course him, and to make him throw and plunge himself into the water-brook, as the hunted Hart more furiously, when standing still and lifting up his ears he winds, and hears the cries of all his sins that trace his Blood. When a Man shall see and consider, if I be not found in Christ, then not only all the sins I have committed since I knew God, but all the bold and Bloody Transgressions of my youth, the sins which I have vomitted up, shall call me Owner and Authour of them, and I am then still the miserable Subject of them; the vast and through prospect of all this, ever and anon taken in, drives the Soul with the more eager vehemence upon Christ. Or as a Man hanging upon an high Tree or Pinacle, having underneath him a gulf of all miseries, as suppose heaps of Toads, and Serpents, or Ravenous Beasts, that lye gaping in a deep Pitt, ready to prey upon him, and devour him, if he should let go his hold, and fall down again amongst them; (of which he is sensible, having lately scabbed forth of it, and got up upon that Tree of Life and Preservation) the frightful view and prospect will cause him to make as sure hold as possibly he can, and to renew his hold again and again, and not to hold with one hand, but with both, entwining his Arms and Leggs and his whole Body about that Tree, embracing it for preservation, as well as for the pleasant fruit that grows upon it: So tis here in this case too.

C H A P. VII.

The Second Use we should make of the Review of that wretched sinful state out of which God removes us by the Work of his Grace, is to have our Hearts affected with the sense of God's extraordinary Love Manifested herein, and to excite, and heighten our Love to God, by the consideration of this his great Love to us.

A

SECOND main Improvement of the remembrance of thy former condition, is to intend and heighten thy Love to God. This is that second particular which Paul instanceth in (1 Tim. 1.) as the redound, and consequent of having been injurious in his former condition. Grace was abundant in Love, (says he) that is, Grace made this advantage thereof, to cause me to love God the more. And this is also the Spirit of that saying, Mary loved much, because much was forgiven her, Luke 7. 47. Christ founds his reasoning upon two things,

I. Gods usual Dispensation, which is, that where he leaves one to many sins, and long to continue in them, when he Converts him, he works in him more love to himself: And on the contrary, where fewer sins have been, there is less love. For to assert the truth of this, Christ turns it both ways; for it follows, To whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little.

II. Christ founds his reason upon This, That where God shews more love, he works and draws forth more love to himself again. God chose us to be holy afore him in love. 'Twas the end of his Choice and the Aim of his love. And as he makes it an Argument that he loved us first, so he will not bate the least grain, degree, or proportion of Love, but he will have use for it; and those whom he loves most, he will cause their Hearts to love him more in the end. Now God shews love in this Life, in no Dispensation more (I do not say only, or most by this, yet in none more) for as I shewed you, his end in it was to set forth Grace, Mercy and Love: And therefore when he hath effectually wrought upon a Soul, that had lien in such an Estate, he makes the Heart sensible of more love, from himself, and so draws love forth out of the Heart again; Est Magnes magni magnus Amoris Amor: Love is the Load-stone of Love, and draws according to the measure of the vertue and Spirit that is in it. When did Christ ask Peter Lovest thou me? John 21. 17. &c. But then, when he had denyed him, when he first met with him after it. And 'tis observed that as Peter had denyed him thrice, so Christ asks him thrice, Peter dost thou love me? Christ expects a proportion of love from Peter to his own love shewn in pardoning of him. And as for this converting love of God, when fully considered, whom indeed would not such a love move? Think how, during thy unregenerate condition, God lay in ambushment for thee, to in-viron thee about, and then overcome thy Heart with loving kindness. Think how during all that time thou hadst not one good thought of God, (Psal. 10. God was not in all thy thoughts) that yet God's heart and thoughts continually have been upon thee, thinking nothing but thoughts of Peace to thee, and not of Evil, Jer. 29. 11: Thou wert written upon his Heart, and the Palm of his hands, all that time thou didst nothing else but write and score up sins against him. You may observe (for 'tis worth it) how out of this disposition of Heart in God, the Holy Ghost cannot forbear bringing in the mention of Saul in the History of his Life, and Actions again and again before his Conversion, as one he had his Eye upon, whilst he was a Persecutor, Acts 7. 58. The Witnesses, knowing his Zeal, laid their Cloaths down at a young Man's feet called Saul, who was consulting Stephens death (Acts 1. 8.) his hand was in the murder of the first Martyr. I saw thee then, said God to him when he converted him, and if he tells us of it, he told himself much more. And again, You have it again repeated in v. 3. of that Chapter, As for Saul, (he stood in Gods eye more, and God all that while took more notice of what he did, then of all other Men) he made Havock of the Church, entering into every House, and haling Men and Women, committed them to Prison. And as he said of Senacherib (2 Kings 19. 27.) I have known thy abode, thy going out and coming in, and thy rage against me: So he shews he did take notice of Saul all that while; but with a differing intention. As he relieved himself against Senacherib's rage and tumult, that he would put a Hook in his Nose; and a Bridle in his Lips (And I will turn thee back by the way which thou camest, v. 29.) So God did all that while please himself with the thoughts of his purposes towards this Saul: That the time would shortly come, that he should have him come in as fast, and with as much holy violence to seek mercy from God, as ever he had gone forth against him: That he should see him in the Pulpit preaching the Doctrine he now destroyed: That he should have an hook, a Cord of love to strike into his heart and draw him back again: And that he had appointed the instant moment when he would throw it at him, just when he was going to Damascus. And God out of his love pleased himself as much with the thought of this aforehand, nay more, then he did at the thought of his turning back Senacherib, whom you may perceive that God makes sport at. And as God is said to laugh at the wicked seeing his day a coming (Psal. 37. 13.) God pleaseth himself with this thought concerning an Elect Soul, Well, let him play on; the Line, the day of his Conversion is at hand, and then I shall have him. Well, this time draws near, and to shew how much Gods thoughts were on it, as ours use to be on some great occurrence, for which a set time is appointed, God is speaking of it a third time Acts 9. 1. And Saul yet breathing out threatnings, &c. You see the Holy Ghost puts in a Yet, as if God began now to think the time long; or was then thinking with himself his time is but short, which I have allotted him to continue in sin, it is almost out, he yet breathes out threatnings: But his threatnings now shall breathe out their last. Now the same Heart and Affection God had all that while towards thee, whilst in thy natural condition, and when thou wert committing such and such a sin, God saw thee ere thou didst him (as Christ told Nathaniel, I saw thee under the Figg-Tree) loving thee all that while, with the same love, with which he loves thee now; though then concealed, as Joseph was to his Brethren. And as he had appointed a fulness of time for the coming of his Son into the World: So he had appointed a set time to have Mercy on thee, as the Psalmist speaks, Psal. 102. 13. And Oh how did God long all that while until that time should come, as Jer. 13. 27. When shall it once be? And when that day was come, you may see how his Heart rejoiced, in the Parable of the Prodigal, Luke 10. 20. When he was yet a great way off, his Father saw him. It expresseth his Longing, how he look'd out aforehand; his Love sending forth forth his Eyes, as Messengers, to feed him with that News he so delighted in. And after thou beganst but to utter thy Heart to him, he could not hold long, but fell upon thy Neck and kiss'd thee; so v. 20. He broke up that Treasure of Mercy, he had from Everlasting laid by for thee, under Lock and Key of his everlasting Purposes, and which he had reserved and kept for thee, as thy portion; Though Millions in all Ages had past afore him, and might have been Heirs of it, yet he reserv'd the rich Robe for Thee, and fetched it out for Thee. Luke 15. 22. And when thou beganst to melt towards him, for having Offended him; and to Bemoan thy self (as Jer. 31. 18. the Phrase is) more out of Love to thy self, and sense of thine own Misery, than love to him; yet he fell a Weeping too, as fast as thou, and his Bowels were stirred for thee; What, says he, Is Ephraim, my pleasant Child, come Home to me? And is Ephraim, the wickedest of all the Tribes, become pleasant to me? God speaks it wondrously, as indeed admiring at his own Affections, how enlarged they were, how his Love was gushed forth, and therefore well mayst thou. What Heart is there that proves the Subject of these Glorious, yet true Occurrences, that will not, is not moved at the Remembrance, or the Rehearsal of them? They so took Paul's Heart, that the Love manifested therein would never out of his mind: I was (says he) a Blasphemer, but I obtained Mercy. If we had been in Paul's Heart, to have discerned the mixtures of the strange Affections which met when he put these two together, I, and Mercy, whoever would have thought these two should meet, that were as distant as Hell, and Heaven? Who would not (thought Paul) have made a But of Exception at me? Who would not have entred a Caveat against my ever having mercy, of all men else, if there had been no more in the World? Ananias puts in a Demurr, (Acts. 9. 13.) when Christ did but speak of him; Lord, I have heard by Many, how much Evil he hath done to the Saints at Jerusalem. And it is said, v. 21. That all that heard him were amazed, v. 21. But yet this Saul obtained M E R C Y; and so hast thou. Oh let this Grace of our Lord be abundant with Love in thy Heart towards him again, as it was in Paul's. Paul could never think of these passages, but a Sea Love broke into his Heart, and overflowed it.

Chap. VIII.

That the thoughts of God's Excellent Love in bringing us out of this woful, state of sin into a state of Grace; should enkindle in us sacred Zeal, and Fervency, of Spirit to Live in all holy Obedience to him. And what a dreadful condition they are in, who make an Ill Use of the Doctrine of Grace, by abusing it to an Encouragement of Carelesness, Negligence, or Licentiousness.

AS the Considerations of God's Love in changing our state may thus enflame Love, so they may enlarge Obedience, which springs from Love, and may excite thee to Fruitfulness, and abounding in the work of the Lord, and to be wiling to do, or suffer any for him. It enflamed Paul's Zeal, insomuch as none of the Apostles laboured so much as he. His Spirit was never at rest, he thought he could never do enough. Peter denies his Master, its true, and he did it thrice, and you know how Christ came upon him for it, with an higher care of work and labour from him, Feed my Lambs. He says it thrice too, in the fore-mentioned John 21. So as indeed Christ in that place to which I have recourse again, would have Peter make these three Commensurable. 1. That as Christ had loved him more, in pardoning more than to the rest; so 2. He expected, that he should love him more; and that proportionably to that love, he should give demonstration of it in his Care over his Lambs. To move Peter the more to be willing to do and suffer for him the last of his days; Christ gives him a little touch, as I understand it, of some wildness, and youthfulness that had been in Peter's Spirit, afore Christ had to do with him. v. 18. of that Chapter: Verily I say unto thee, When thou wast young, thou girdest thy self, and walkedst whither thou wouldst, but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thine hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldst not. Peter had had his Vagaries, and lived as he listed; and further, as may seem, had given an instance laetly of what kind of Activities (as I may call them) his youth had delighted in, as many young men do in Bodily exercises and shewing their strength and vigour that way, with too much excess of delight and pride in them, in the 7. and 8. verses. He being in a Ship (v. 7, 8.) and spying Christ, girds his Fishers Coat about him, and makes no more ado, but Casts himself into the Sea. The other Disciples were of a more sober Spirit, and came into the Ship by land, which he might have done as well as they, being not far off Land, But as it would seem, he gloried in such Feats and active Pranks, and would shew his Master one, who was now risen from the dead, and was not taken with such things; and yet there was some love mingled with this. That which moves me to think Christ had a purpose to mind Peter of the way of his Spirit wherein he had so much delighted, is that he seems to speak of the whole Course of his youth, wherein he had taken liberty to do what he listed. When thou wert young, thou wentest whither thou wouldst; that is, didst live to thine own lusts. Which Peter in his Epistle involving himself with others, acknowledgeth: He was as a loose unruly Heifer. And indeed indeed many such things in themselves innocent, and lawful, young men are adicted unto; yet when there is a Pride, Vanity, Vain-glory, Excess of delight with expence of time, they are in God's eye great sins. As also is the Vanity of those Scholars who adore Learning too much, and too inordinately love it, from a desire to gain Reputation and Esteem. This was Lipsius his confession in a great Fit of Sickness. I have not been (said he) Covetous nor Vicious, Sola mihi placuit dulcis pellacia Musa; only the Harlotry of Learning took his heart. Christ you see, makes this use to Peter of his former Wandrings, to move him to be the more willing to be carryed whither God would have him, even to the Cross, as that whereby God ordained to glorifie himself in him. And seeing he had delighted himself in such Activities, as a man of Metal and Courage, God therefore would serve himself of this Spirit of Resolution in him, in a way of tryal contrary to the way of his Spirit. He was to be hung up by the heels upon a Cross (the worst of Crucifyings) to be bound to his good behaviour thereon. And Peter (says Christ) See, that thou, remembring what thou wert when young, shew thy Valour, thy Resolution, when thou comest to that Conflict; and Peter remembered it, and was moved by it, 2 Pet. 1. 14. If this Conjecture should not hold, sure I am, I find Peter himself in his Epistles urging this as a most provoking argument to quicken to future obedience: And he puts himself in among the number of those that had so walked in vanity and sin, for which the Popish Commentators would find Excuses. He speaking of the genius and Spirit of a Christian, (he says 2 Pet. 4. 23.) he is one whose heart this Principle hath taken hold of, and prevails upon him, That he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but the will of God: For the time past of our lives may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles. The strength of this persuasive lyes in these two things:

I. They had a long time of their lives already lived in the sins of such an Estate. They had served their lusts, and done nothing for God all that while, and there is but a remaining remnant of it left. τὸν ἐπίλοιπον εἰσάραξι; which is as a brand pluckt out of the fire. Oh bestow that wholly upon God, with grief and Sorrow that so much is spent and burnt out in sinning. Do as much for God, as ever you did for the Devil: As you have yielded your members servants to Uncleaness, to iniquity, unto iniquity, adding one iniquity to another, and thinking you had never done enough for your lusts, and growing worse and worse: So now yield your members servants to righteousness unto holiness; and if there were any thing higher then holiness, they should reach at that too. And 2. he edgeth it with this; That the time past might suffice to have served their Lusts, if they could suppose it to be lawful for any space of time to neglect God's service, and please and indulge their lusts; yet those lusts had had sufficient time of their lives already, and indeed too great a share, and therefore it may well suffice. If a lust of thy former ignorance tempt thee, is it not an answer, a sufficient answer, You have been served already, you have your time out, and too much, and if it urgeth thee to take a little pleasure for a moment, and then to serve God again; yeild not, no not for a moment, as Paul speaks, Gal. 2. Your Lusts have had too many moments spent upon them, and your whole time was due to God, and he hath too little left. For as the Apostle reasons (Rom. 1. 12.) We owe nothing to the flesh, to live after the flesh. We have no reason to do the least kindness for it, nor to give it a Crum, tho' it were to save a lusts life: So nor to afford it one moment of our time, but to give the whole unto God. Now therefore it behoves you, to redeem the time remaining to the utmost, to live much in a little, to do all for God, from an holy grudging that Satan hath had so much. The Apostle Paul makes this of it self an Argument to more Holiness, that by how much less of a mans time is left in the flesh he should, be the more holy, Heb. 10. 25. So much the more, as he sees the day approaching. And Peter adds this to it: By how much of the time past hath been lost to God, we ought ought to take our measure, that the more of what is to come, be consecrated to him: And in 2 Pet. 1. 15, 18. his scope being to exhort to Holiness (as that is the main drift and Errand of his Epistles) He setteth together in opposition, and in view, their vain Conversation (v. 18) with that holiness of Conversation, which God now expected (v. 15.) Be holy in all manner of Conversation, for ye are redeemed from a vain Conversation. He setteth Conversation to Conversation, and holy, to vain. Be holy in all manner of Conversation, for you have been altogether vain in your former Conversation; let the total Corruption that was in the one therefore provoke to a total Sanctification in the other: And indeed Such grounds as have lain long fallow, you expect the greater Crop from them.

IV. The last advantage which we may have by occasion of such an Estate of sinning, is to remember it, to keep our Spirits low and humble for ever, after Conversion wrought; and the like use ought to be made of any great fit of sinning. You shall therefore find that the Apostle Paul who had as high manifestations of God as ever man had, for no man ever since or before him had the like, (Our Lord and Saviour Christ himself, though he was transfigured upon the Mount, yet he had never been rapt up to Paradise, nor into the third Heaven, as Paul was, but lived by Faith as we do) yet that which kept him low all his days, was the remembrance of what he had been. You find two expressions to this purpose. The one in 1 Cor. 15. 9. I am (saith he) the least of the Apostles, that am not worthy to be called an Apostle: Though he doth profess elsewhere, that he laboured more than they all. But if you look into Eph. 3. 8. which is the next Text, he goes lower; To me (says he) who am less than the least of all Saints. The one Phrase (viz. that which he useth in the Corinthians) is a diminutive expression ἐλαχίστος, the least of the Apostles and yet there he compareth himself with Apostles: But in that place of the Ephesians he compares himself with Saints; and useth a more diminutive expression, if there be any thing lower than the least, he humbleth himself to it, and that not in relation to Apostles: but in relation to Saints. Now what was it that kept Paul, that had all this Grace in him, and all the cause in the World to be rapt up above the rest of Saints and Apostles in Priviledges vouchsafed to him? You shall find it in that 1 Cor. 15. 9. (that which I quoted even now) where having said, I am the least of all the Apostles, that am not worthy to be called an Apostle: In what follows, you find it was the remembrance of his former Condition, and of what he had been, persecuting the Church of God, that mov'd him to such humble thoughts and words. You know when he speaks of his unregenerate Estate, in 1 Tim. 1. 11. I was a Persecutor (saith he) and injurious, &c. This was it, he bore the Scars of, in his own Spirit, to his dying day. And you may observe how he did grow up into this humility and into this lowness in his own eyes. When he wrote that Epistle to the Ephesians, he was an aged man, he stiles himself there Paul the Aged; he had written to the Corinthians long afore; you see he grows to a deeper sense, he was the least of the Apostles then, but now the least of all Saints. And what was it that did make him thus low, and that he did grow up into a daily sensibleness; the more God loved him and revealed himself to him? Even his own vileness, the Consideration of what once he had been: Because (saith he) I have persecuted the Churches. Why Paul, he had thought of that sin a thousand times, but still the older he did grow, the more it did sink into his Spirit, and humble him the more. Hast thou had any Manifestations of God to thy Spirit? Hast thou prayed well to day? And art thou proud of it? Hath God lifted thee above others in Spiritual Priviledges? Come, take but a turn in thy unregenerate Condition: Let me bring to thy remembrance thy old walks; what wert thou ten, twenty, or thirty years ago? And what wert thou doing of then? Dost thou not remember? Suppose a man had liv'd with Nebuchadnezzar after he had come out of the Wilderness from amongst Beasts, and should have heard him talkt as presumptuously as before, Is not this great Babel I have built? If one should but have minded him, and bad him go to the Wilderness where where he was two or three yeares ago; It would have prickt his bladders and let out the wind: so it will have the same effect in thee.

I have made many Uses, you see, of this great point for you; there is one Use more (it is a bad one) which I am affraid some of you will make for your selves. It was Paul's fear, also his Care to prevent it; And that is, That seeing a man who hath lived in a state of sinning, often hath, and may have this event, to be converted at last, I will even continue in sin, that Grace may abound; or at least I will presume still to continue as I am.

1. I will give the Apostles answer, Rom. 3. 8. Let us do Evil that Good may come; whose Damnation is just. He throws Hell-fire back again upon them, and that is all the answer; That if God upon such an arguing of thine, should pronounce such a Sentence on thee, and swear a-doth against thee in his wrath, thy Damnation were just, and this God often doth against many. For in thus arguing, besides thy abuse of the sweetest attribute of Mercy, thou assumest to thy self God's highest Sovereignty and Prerogative, which if ever in any thing, lyes in this, That he can bring so great a Good out of so much Evil, and yet in so doing, he barely permits the Creature to go on, leaving them to their own ways. But thou art active in all thine, and by this proclaimest thy self (ipso facto) the greatest Rebel that God hath on earth. You know that great and terrible place, Deut. 29. 18, 19, 20. God was tendering that day the Covenant of Grace, as is clear by Paul's application of that Sermon, Rom. 10. and by the first verse of that Chapter: And he bids them take heed, least there be a root of Bitterness, an evil heart in any one, that says I shall have Peace though I walk on in the imagination of my heart, and add drunkenness to thirst, that is, to satisfy my Lusts: The Lord will not spare that man, but then (even whilst he is thinking such a cursed thought) the anger of the Lord shall smock against that man, and all the Curses in this Book, shall lye upon him, and the Lord shall separate him unto evil, single him forth of all the Tribes, &c.

But shall I close with thee now at last? Dost thou begin to be sensible thou hast gone on in such a condition to this Hour, Go home and tell God of it; there is no remaining in it, no not for an Hour, for the Wrath God abides upon thee: Yet say not there is no hope (as they in Jer. 2.) for you have heard, it is one of Gods greatest designs to exalt Grace, Love and Mercy upon Men by and in that way. Let all that is in God encourage thee. Thy way out of it hath been made plain before thee, it is Regeneration, that passage from Death to Life. Oh begin to seek to obtain it; if thou hast a mind to Christ, assure thy self, he hath much more mind to thee. Art thou wambling, art thou Whimpering? I assure thee he is gone forth to find thee, Luke 15. 4. He goes out to seek that which is lost, long before he finds it. He will meet thee half way (as you have it in the same 15th Chapter of Luke, v. 20.) Only let me persuade thee to turn now to him. Thou art not only perhaps undone else, but if ever thou dost hereafter turn, thou wilt repent thou did'st it no sooner. Yea thou wilt repent for nothing more, than that Sin had so much more time after God had moved thee. It is the Ingenuity of true Grace (which is love to God) so to work. Come, it may be a Match between Christ and thee before Midnight yet; 'twas so to the Jaylor, Acts 16. in a less space. Come I have spoke thy Heart, and have hold of it. I will not let thee go. What thou and God will alone together make out of it, I know not, there may be but an Inch between thee and eternal Glory; wilt thou defer? Oh unkind! If thou hopest to go to Heaven, shall God have no Glory out of thee, in amends to what is past? Shall thy no longer to live to the Lusts of Men, be thy no longer to live? Tell me how many Years hast thou lived in sin? What's Thirty, or Forty Years? May not that suffice to an Enemy that will destroy thee? In a word, I have told you a long story of God's design in suffering the bulk of his Elect to go on to years of discretion, ere he converts them: and that his design therein is glory to himself: But it is meet for me withal, to tell you,

yea, indeed end in telling you it, that as God's design is to shew Love in it, so Book III Wisdom also. And therefore ordinarily his design is so to Convert, after such a time of sinning, as providently to have such a time in thy years remaining, as to have a glory out of thee in thy Fruitfulness and Obedience. There are but few instances of late Repentance. All the Epistles of the Apostles speak of men that had formerly been in such a Condition of sin, but they were yet written to them, whilst alive, and now turned, and as remaining surviving Subjects of Exhortations to all Holiness, and left to give demonstration thereof. My Brethren, God is so wise, as he will compass and grasp both ends:
 As he will leave a time, in which you may have experience of such an estate;
 So he will ordinarily so convert, or not at all, as there may be a time to shew forth the contrary Graces, for his Glory, which is made the end of Conversion, 1 Pet. 2. 9. And of the two, you may well give God leave to project the latter for the longer time, for a little of the other sufficeth. I observe it in this Epistle to Titus, that this Grace and Love (which Paul says appeared to us who were sometime disobedient, in this third Chapter, is in Chap. 2. 12.) said so to appear, as that men may afterwards give demonstration of their living soberly, righteously, and godly, according to that grace, even in this present World: For otherwise whilst they are in the World, God would lose his design.

The Necessity of R E G E N E R A T I O N Demonstrated by this Argument, That all that God and Christ have done towards their Reconciliation to us, will profit us nothing ; unless we be reconciled to God. And how Conversion is set forth under the notion of Reconciliation, as on our part.

2 C O R . V . 18, 19, 20.

- V. 18. And all things are of God ; who hath reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ ; and hath given unto us the Ministry of Reconciliation.
- V. 19. To wit, That God was in Christ, reconciling the World unto Himself, not imputing their Trespases unto them ; and hath committed unto us the Word of Reconciliation.
- V. 20. Now then we are Embassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us, we pray you in Christs stead Be you reconciled to God.

C H A P . I .

That notwithstanding what God and Christ have done for their Reconciliation to us ; it is by Gods Ordination necessary, that we be Reconciled to God, if ever we be saved. This prov'd from Gods design in his Reconciliation to us, to Glorifie his Holiness, &c.

O U R Apostle professeth to declare in these, and the foregoing Words, the whole substance of the Ministry of the Gospel ; which He, and his fellow Apostles, were intrusted to deliver to us : v. 18. God hath committed to us the Ministry of Reconciliation ; which Message, or Ministry consists of two parts.

Book III

1. A Reconciliation wrought on Gods part towards us; in the effecting of which, Christ was concurrent with him; for God was in Christ, reconciling the World to himself.

2. The other business is a Reconciliation on our parts; enforced from what God and Christ had done; and this is equally necessary unto Mans Salvation, as that Reconciliation on Gods, and Christs part is, v. 20. Now then, we as Embassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christs stead, be ye reconciled to God: Now as these are the two parts of the Ministry of Reconciliation; that is, of the Gospel; so they must be understood to be two Essential Requisites, to make our Salvation compleat; and both alike essentially necessary thereunto, and without which we shall never be saved; as those obliging words of God, and Christ beseeching us, v. 20. shew. Now under the notion of our being reconciled to God, He intends, and involveth both, the whole of what is requisite on our parts, from first to last; both that work of Reconciliation effected in our Regeneration, whereby we enter into that Estate; and which is required of those to whom this Gospel comes, to estate them into Salvation; and also a daily proceeding to perfect that Reconciliation (after it hath been begun) by Faith, and Repentance towards God and Christ.

For He applies this Doctrine to the Corinthians that had been reconciled already: And yet (says he) Be ye reconciled.

Observ. Notwithstanding what God, and Christ have done towards our Reconciliation on their part; (which is the first of the Message;) there is a necessity, by Gods Ordination, of our being Reconciled to God; If we be partakers of Salvation. For the Apostle having distinctly declared both Gods care in it, and Christs; He from thence presseth this on our part; as that without which the other would be in vain to the attainment of Gods Intention, and Aim in both; which is, our Effectual Salvation. And to impress this the more effectually upon the Spirits of Men, the Apostle tells them that himself and other Apostles and Ministers, to whom this Ministry is committed, are ordained Ambassadors of God, not only to proclaim, and declare to us this fore part of the Message, That God was in Christ reconciling the World unto himself; and that Christ was made sin for us: But that himself and the other Apostle were Ambassadors of God, and Christ, to beseech us to be reconciled: v. 20. Now then we are Ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us, we pray you in Christs stead, be ye reconciled to God. Which beseechment denotes, not only their Gracious Condescension, or meer desire to us, but loudly speaks the absolute necessity of our being reconciled by Gods appointment; as without which, if not performed by us, God should lose what he had wrought towards it; and Christ should lose his Labour, and Reward; and the design of his having been made sin for us. And that this is Gods resolved ordination, He further enforceth from the end of Gods having set up, and established such a Ministry of his Apostles, and their Successors, in the World: Whose Office is an Ambassage from the great God, by Preaching, and then by writing their Epistles, to reduce and bring in the Elect, fallen into a Rebellion against him. Which Reconciliation of them, if it had not been necessary, this great Institution of of God had been in vain, and to no purpose. I might say of this matter, what the same Apostle on behalf of the Resurrection argues, 1 Cor. 15. 14. If Christ be not risen, then our Preaching is in vain. Thus I might say concerning your Reconciliation, If what God and Christ have done, had alone perfected it; and no more had been to be done in us; then is our Preaching the Scriptures of the new Testament, vain, Rom. 10. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17. For whosoever shall call upon the Name of the Lord, shall be saved: How then shall they call on him, in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe on him, of whom they have not heard? And how shall shall they hear without a Preacher? And how shall they Preach, except they be sent? As it is written, How Beautiful are the feet of them that Preach the Gospel of Peace, and bring glad Tidings of good things? So then, Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God: The Word of God is Gods Ordination, and Appointment; without which none of us of Years shall be saved. Here the necessity lies; it was Gods pleasure so to order it; if therefore our Apostle makes a necessity of his Preaching the Gospel to men, (a necessity (says he, 1 Cor. 9. 16.) is laid upon me to Preach the Gospel) then there is a greater necessity that those that hear the Message of it, should obey it, if ever they be saved. For the necessity of his Preaching the Gospel, was the Foundation of the necessity that is layd upon all other Embassadors like to him. All this is farther illustrated by Rom. 10. v. 13, and 17. compar'd. Let us now consider how God hath threatned (2 Thes. 1. 8, 9.) finally to destroy them, who obey'd not the Gospel, who came not in to him, and entertained not this infinite Love and Grace with all acceptation; in humbling themselves, believing on him, and his Son, and turning unto him: And it will be manifest that God is more engag'd to punish those his Enemies for their refusal of his Entreaty by his Ambassadors who are in his stead, than the greatest Kings on Earth are, or can be thought, oblig'd to avenge an affront offer'd to their Ambassadors. Read the Parable of the Vineyard, Luke 20.

Let us next consider the Interest which God the Father, and Christ his Son, have; and the part which they act in this our Reconciliation. God the Father's part was to contrive the whole of our Salvation; Christ's part was to purchase it. God was in Christ reconciling the World to Himself, &c. I have elsewhere discours'd of God the Father's Original Transaction with Christ about this; which I will not repeat, only I cast in the single consideration of it in the Text, to enforce the thing in hand. In the 28 v. His Preface to all this is, All things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ. The Spirit of which connexion I extract into this; That the great God, of whom all things else are, hath made this his Master-piece; and his Heart was in it, above all other things (and therefore he sets it against all things else) and his Wisdom, and all his other Attributes were especially at work about this; who works all things according to the Counsel of his own Will: As the same Apostle says upon the same occasion: Eph. 1. He therefore hath been most consultive about the effecting of this, and for the bringing it to its performance, according his own desire. And therefore He, who hath contriv'd to effect all things else; in such a manner, wherein they shall be most for his own Glory; (All things are of him, and for him, Rom. 11. 36.) hath above all other contriv'd this business of Mans Salvation. And therefore we may be sure, he was most regardful, and heedful that it should be effected upon such termes, as should be for his own high Honour and Glory, as well as our Salvation: That he might have Glory by it, as well as we have Peace. When that great Proclamation of Peace, and good will to Men, was made by the Angels at the birth of our Lord (which contains the whole of Reconciliation on Gods part) it runs thus; Glory be to God on high, that's first; and then it follows, Peace on Earth; Good Will towards Men. This was to shew, that he had so ordered it, that our Peace and his Glory, should run along together. Now if we should have Peace and Pardon from him on the account of what Christ hath done; and we should remain unreconciled to him both in Heart and Life; then here were dishonour to God the most High, and a violation of Peace on Earth too. But surely he hath dispos'd matters so, that as he would shew himself a Friend to you, and manifest good Will to Men; so withal he would appear a Friend to himself, and true to his own interest; which is his Glory: This is indeed but a General, and yet it comprehends all his Attributes; all and each of which are his Glory. I shall instance particularly in the Glory but of one, or two of them.

III. fo his Works.

1. As to his Holiness, when I discours'd of those Transactions of the Father with with Christ, I* shewed that God meerly to give satisfaction to Justice, ordained the sacrificing his Son: And it was (as we have it, Rom. 3. 26.) That He might be just, and the Justifier of him that believes in Jesus. Now if to be true to that Attribute, He spared not his own Son; so then here, he having another Attribute as near and dear unto him, viz. Holiness; that must be complied withal to vindicate it's Honour. And therefore as God will be Just in saving, which cost Christ his Blood; so he will be Holy in saving us too. Therefore as He that called you is holy, so you must be Holy, and called with an holy calling: 2 Tim. 1. 9. 'Tis not his purpose of Grace towards you in Christ Jesus, will serve the turn: Because it is written, Be ye Holy, for I am Holy, 1 Pet. 1. 15. 16. He is resolved on it, And therefore without Holiness, no man shall see God, Heb. 12. Certainly He abated not his Son the least point that Justice demanded. If he would not that the Cup should pass at his then so earnest entreaty; 'Then if twere possible to suppose, Christ would supplicate him now, to let Regeneration, or Reconciliation pass off without effect, in saving any of you; God would not.

2. A Second Attribute he intended the Glory of, in the matter of Reconciliation between him and us; was principally the Glory of his Grace. He design'd to set forth his Love so, as to attain the Ends of Loving. It is not to give forth Peace only, but to manifest good Will, and Kindness; as that speech of the Angel, shews, Luke 2. 14. Yea, the ground of His shewing Mercy, is his Love: Eph. 2. 4. God who is rich in Mercy, for the great Love wherewith he loved us: And although on our part, our Love and Friendship to God, is not the ground of his; yet it is the End, or Aim of his. Tho he did not Love us because we loved him first, yet he loved us that we might Love him again, for He chose us that we should be Holy in Love, Ephes. 1. 4. Therefore in those he saves, if there were not wrought an inward principle of Love, and Friendship, and good Will, mutual again to him, that might answer this his Love; His Love would not have it's End: And would be finally cast away; for so we reckon Love to be given away in Loss, when it is not answered in it's Kind, that is, with a true Love again. God would have his Love valued, and esteemed by those he saves; for Love is the dearest thing that any one hath to bestow; because whosoever hath a Mans Love, hath all he hath, for it commands all; And therefore God, who is Love, (1 John 4. 8.) will not cast away his Love, especially not such a Love as this. And yet this Love were lost, if not esteemed by us; and if esteemed by us, it will work Holiness in us; and we shall be Holy before him, in love, Ephes. 1. 4. These Arguments to prove the necessity of our being reconciled to God, have been drawn from the part which God the Father hath in our Reconciliation.

C H A P. II.

The Necessity of our being reconciled to God, evinced from Christs Design in his Work of Reconciliation.

TH E next Argument shall be fetched from Christ, and his part in Reconciliation, of whom it is here said, God was in Christ Reconciling, &c. Christs interest was considered by God; and Christs Concernment is such in this matter, that I may without any scruple of diffidence, pronounce, That Christ would rather lose all he hath on his part done, or suffered for us, than that we should be sav'd without being reconciled to God by a true work of Regeneration.

In the foresaid Transaction of God with Christ, about the Reconcilement of us; I shewed there was a Covenant made between God and Christ in our behalf. And therein God the Father meant not, to put such upon Christ, as should continue wholly averse in disposition towards him; for Christ by Covenant was to be an Husband, as well as a Redeemer from Sin; and the agreement between him, and his Father was; (as Jacob's with Laban,) to purchase his Wife to Himself; Ephes. 5. 25, 26, 27. Husbands Love your Wives, even as Christ also loved the Church, and gave himself for it: That he might sanctifie and cleanse it with the washing of Water, by the Word; That he might present it to himself a Glorious Church, not having Spot or Wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be Holy and without Blemish. It is but reason then, and what he deserv'd, that he should have such for his Spouse, as should love him again. This Covenant between God the Father, and the Son, is rehearsed in Psal. 110. The Lord said to my Lord, &c. And he took an Oath to it; that He should be a Priest, v. 4. which was a great word; God the Father therein expressing the Call he gave him: But then withal, his Father engageth, and promiseth That his People should be willing in the day of his Power. Thus the Father acts in his part of the Covenant with Christ: And then Christ on his part resolved, and agreed to see those he would save, to become His Seed, and to be born of him; or he would never have been satisfied, Isa. 53. He shall see his Seed, and be satisfied. He resolv'd that they should come to him, as his Father promised they shou'd; which as that Speech of his shews, John 6. All that the Father hath given me, shall come to me. The Father not simply gave them to Christ, to save them; but promised withal that they should come to Christ: And coming, be subject to him in all things: Ephes. 5. as the Law of the Marriage-Covenant requires: And there is a promise on Christs part, to raise them up at the last Day; And to that end he ceaseth not, till he presents them to himself, a Glorious Church, without Spot or Wrinkle, Ephes. 5. 26, 27. Yea I may not stick to say that Christ otherwise would be content to lose all he now hath done, rather than that any one should be saved, and not reconciled to God his Father. And the reason is manifest; for otherwise he should be the Minister of Sin, which he abhors. Thus the Apostle argues, Gal. 2. 17. And it is the full and direct Scope of the Apostle there: For treating of the Doctrine of Free Justification, or Salvation; in that Epistle, which the Adversaries thereof Branded for a Doctrine of Licentiousness; The Apostle abhors it with the greatest indignati-

Book III
 Indignation, in saying that this were indeed to make Christ the Minister of Sin, if he should have died to procure the Justification of any that are not sanctified. And from Heaven Christ himself declared to Saul, that He sent him to open the Eyes of the Gentiles, to turn them from Darkness to Light; from the power of Satan unto God; that they may receive forgiveness of Sins, and an Inheritance among them which are sanctified, by Faith that is in me: Acts 26. 18. That is, to be a means of their Regeneration: And otherwise he should but have tyed Gods hands from hurting us, or destroying us; whilst we should have a License left us to provoke him, and continue in Sin. No, Christ is more tender of his Fathers Glory then so; and though he is a Saviour perfect, yet he becomes the Author of eternal Salvation, but unto those who Obey him; Heb. 5. 8; 9. which none will do, until born again.

Lastly, The Demonstration is drawn both from God the Father, and Son jointly. This great design of their reconciling Sinners, as agreed on by them, became matter of the greatest delight to them; and which, when Concluded, their Hearts were infinitely taken up with; as in Prov. 8. Wisdom, that is Christ, exults in the remembrance of it, as 'twas in his own, and Fathers Heart, afore the World: Yea; and Gods end in Loving us, and Christs end in dying, was to delight in our Persons; as Zephan. 3. 17. He will rejoyce over those he saves; and will rest in his Love towards them, as thinking his Love well bestowed; and being abundantly satisfied, and contented in it: And he promiseth Christ, that he should greatly delight in the Beauty of his Queen: Psal. 44. And Christ accordingly in that Love Song declares his infinite Delight in his Spouse, and Cant. 7. 6. How fair and pleasant art thou, (Oh Love,) for delights? (Tis Christs Speech) Now if to delight in those he saves, were one great end of both in their counsels about us: Then of necessity there must be wrought a Reconciliation, in us, unto them, as well as a Reconciliation for us by them; there is no way for them to attain Delights in us, unless our Hearts were won to them, to Love, and delight in them again: Tis true, God, loved us when we were Enemies; Rom. 5. Yet delight in us he could not, unless we be made Friends to him. All the sweetness of Love lies in the Reciprocation: There is nothing more grievous, more hateful, than to Love and not to be beloved: As out of his own Heart, and experience he expresseth it: 2 Cor. 11. 15. Dulce est amare, et amari: At least otherwise there is no rest in ones Love; no contentedness, or satisfaction in it. If Gods end in saving us indeed, were principally to pardon us, then he need do no more than Kings do, when they pardon Traytors; pass such an Act upon the party, and there's an end: But God is also to make Friends and Favourites of them whom he pardons; and so to delight in them, and to have communion with them, graciously to accept of them, as well as pardon them, Eph. 1. 6, 7. To the praise of the Glory of his Grace, wherein He hath made us accepted in the Beloved: Over and above, that In Him we have also Redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the Riches of his Grace. And therefore He changeth the Inward frame of Men's Hearts, and makes of Enemies, Friends of them to himself; Otherwise he could not rejoyce in them: For can a man delight in a Toad or a Serpent? (between which Creatures, and us, God hath put an enmity?) what Fellowship, and Communion, can Light, and Darkness have.

The Conclusion of this matter discoursed is, that although God the Father hath transacted All these things from Eternity, and that Jesus Christ hath long since performed All that which might pacifie, and reconcile his Father; and procure our Attonement with his Father; according to the Command and Request of his Father; yet it was withal agreed mutually then by them, That not a man, no not an Elect man, should have Benefit by either, until they come in to be reconcil'd. And that State of this affair, I explain by this Instance or Similitude grounded upon Scripture, That suppose one oweth a great Sum, and the Creditor to whom he oweth it, Is willing to forgive it unto this Debtor, upon payment made by another, whom the Creditor tor doth under hand Himself procure to pay it, at his request; yet withal unknown as yet unto the Debtor: But with this Compact, of the Surety and Creditor, that when this transaction shall come to be made known by them to the Debtor, of what they have secretly done, He, upon effectual notice thereof, shall come in, and acknowledge the Debt; seeking the remitting of it unto Him, and acquitment of Him; with profess'd subjection to them both for ever. Until this be performed by Him, the Bond, though by agreement Cancelled, as in respect of any other payment; yet is still to lie and be kept in the Creditors hands; who obligeth Himself not to give a discharge, or release to the Debtor, or Deliver in his Bond as cancelled, until He makes his Address, and humbly acknowledgeth the Debt; seeks for an Acquittance, yea, and gets the party who paid it, to go along with him to the Creditor, to mediate, and plead for him his Satisfaction given Him; and sue forth the Acceptation of that payment of his, for him in particular; undertaking the Party's heartiest, and sincerest engagement of future Love and service to both for ever. And thus does Christ's Righteousness, and our Debt, lye both in God the Father's hands, the Creditor, until the Sinner for whom the payment was made, shall thus Come in; And if we could suppose that Christ had dyed ten thousand Deaths, (which was but one Sacrifice once offered) for one man; yet both Father and Son have and are resolved that this man should never be the better for it, till he comes in.

And in Expression similar unto this management, and ordering of this matter, you shall find the Scriptures speaking in both the Old and New Testament, Compared. There is to this purpose a passage in Job. 33. 22, 23, 24, 25, 26. His Soul draweth near to the Grave, and his Life to the Destroyers: If there be a Messenger with Him, an Interpreter, One among a thousand, to shew unto man his uprightness: Then he is gracious, and saith, Deliver Him from going down into the Pit; I have found a ransom: His flesh shall be fresher than a Childs; He shall return to the days of his Youths: He shall pray unto God, and He will be favourable to him, and he shall see his face with joy; for He will render unto man his Righteousness. They are the words of Elihu, which taken together with the foregoing, from verse 15. and then with those which follow after; do set out a fair Pattern, or draught of the workings of saving Conversion, at the rate they went in those Ancient times, collected by the Observations of Elihu, upon divers Persons in his view; and set afore Job, to provoke him to Conform himself unto them (as his only course to take) with encouragements of mercy from God, that in like manner God will be gracious to Him, to restore Him to his favour, and that He shall come to see his face with joy, v. 26. And together with the means or operations, He setteth forth the means, which God then often did use to work upon men's Hearts: As first, Visions, and Dreams, v. 15, 16, 17. (for there this his discourse of conversion begins) In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumbering upon the Bed, then he openeth the Ears of men, and sealeth their Instruction, That He may withdraw man from his purpose, and hide Pride from man: And this dispensation was the more ordinary means in those times, (although to us now extraordinary. Then Secondly, another means were great sicknesses even unto Death: v. 19. He is chastened also with pain upon his bed, and the multitude of his bones with strong pain. And thirdly, the awakenings thereby are followed by the Seasonable Instructions and Directions of a Teacher, one skill'd in Soul-saving work: An Interpreter of God's mind, to shew what that is, for which God favours man, as also what a Sinner is to do, v. 23. &c.

And that such a saving work of true Conversion is intended, the whole sense of his Discourse, from the aforesaid v. 15. doth plainly manifest: And first, This his discourse at the Entrance shews, at the 16 and 17 verses; Then he openeth the Ears of men, and sealeth their Instruction; that he may withdraw man from his purpose, His resolved Course of sinning, and hide Pride from man: That is, truly to humble Him, and break the staff of the pride of his Heart.

2. His more full and special Instance He gives in the middle of his Narrati-

Book III on; the sick man's Case, in the verses afore: Taken together with this Inference He draws from it for instruction unto All men v. 27, 28. He looketh upon men, and if any say, I have sinned, and perverted that which was right, and it profited me not; He will deliver his Soul from going into the Pit; and his Life shall see the Light: And 3. The Conclusion of all in the 29 and 30 verses, as much doth declare, where Elihu sets a remark upon it; [Lo] All these things God worketh often times; (twice or thrice,) with man: To bring back his Soul from the Pit; and to enlighten him with the Light of the Living: That is, with the saving Light of Life: As John 8. 12. speaks of them that Live by faith: And this Speech is the general close unto these Instances foregone, and gathers in All he had said, from the 15. v. downwards: And signifies all the outward ways and means, with many other the like, which God had then a foot, to work savingly upon men: As also all those particular Inward Operations which had been Instanced in, and which might be drawn forth out of one or the other of these passages.

And those Particulars are, 1. Conviction, and Confession of Sin, with brokenness of Heart, v. 27. If any man say I have sinned, and perverted that which was right, &c. 2. A Laying hold by Faith on Christ's Righteousness and Ransom. For His own Righteousness and Redemption, when he is affected with that sense of his sin, and own Un-uprightness, which was and is the greatest Point which That Interpreter shewed, or discovered to Him: Instructing Him where and in whom the true and perfect Righteousness of fallen man doth lie, which this humbled Soul desires, prays, and seeks for, and to be made His; and God to be Gracious to him, and accept Him Therein; which God accordingly delivers, and renders to him: These are summarily in verse 23, 24, and 26. And this is accompanied with turning from sin, in uprightness of Heart, and Holiness of Life; for time to come, in a course utterly opposite to His former perverting that which was right, which v. 27. He confessed He had run into. And there is a most comfortable Issue of all these upon this Man, which begins at v. 24. Then He is Gracious, and says, Deliver Him. Then, namely, when the Interpreters Instructions, (whereof some are Implied others expressed) have had their due Course, and Effects (in all such Gracious workings specified) in the man's Heart; Answerable to the matter of His message; which shewed this man what is man's Uprightness: which in a summary, contains Directions unto All these; and which being Impressed on his Soul, as the Wax is with the Seal: For 'tis with a sealing the Instructions, (as the word afore was, v. 16.) He must necessarily be supposed to have had these proper Prints conformable thereunto. Now the Issues, or consequential Priviledges hereof are two.

1. That God doth then, or thereupon, out of his Grace, Absolve, and pronounce the Justification of him. The Lord is Gracious, and saies, Deliver him: The word Deliver, signifies Redeem him, that is, from the guilt of his Sin, and Hell, or Gods wrath: Thus Forgiveness of Sins is stiled, Ephes. 1. 7. In whom you have Redemption through his Blood, the forgiveness of Sins, through the riches of his Grace: The word Deliver him, here signifies Redeem him: And he, that is, God, says it within himself: For Justification is an immanent act, in Gods brest, and Heart, and that is that Justification we call, in foro Cæli, in the Court of Heaven. He says it, before and unto Christ the Mediator. He pronounceth the sentence, as in Heaven, as the supream Law-giver, able to Save, and to Destroy. Yea; he often says it, and applies it to the Mans own Conscience; and by a word of his Messengers declares it. And then he adds the Ground for and through which he doth it; for (saies he) I have found a Ransom; and thus he applies it to this particular Sinner. And then,

2. God further causeth this justified Soul, to see his Face with Joy, vers, 26. God lifting up the sight of his Countenance, and causing his Favour to shine upon his Soul, with Joy, greater than when Corn, and Oyl increase. Which Dispensation, after great Humblings, deep Repentings, long and much seeking of his face face, God is wont to gratifie sincere new Converts with; Rom. 4. 5, 6, 7. and Rom. 5. 1, 2, 3, 5, and 11.

II. And 2ly, That initial Conversion wrought at first, which is called Regeneration) is specially intended, and that the words are not meant only of Men renewed, or Converted already: but declined (tho they are indeed included) the words of those 27, and 28, verses, evidence *He Looketh upon Men, and if any say, I have sinned, and perverted that which was right, and it profited me not; He will deliver his Soul from going into the Pit, and his Life shall see the Light; He lays two things together: 1. That they are a general Invitation, and Incouragement given to all Men, who shall in like manner come in, and apply themselves to him, that God will be likewise Gracious, and Pardon, and receive any of them into Grace, and Favour, and deliver his Soul from going down into the Pit; as he had done this sick Convert; and so General, and indefinite a Declaration, must necessarily respect, and take in men unregenerate; the bulk of Mankind, shall hear this; who mostly lie in Unregeneracy in all times, especially did in those. Thus John saith of his times, 1 John 5. 19. Hence, therefore that Exhortation, and incouragement to Repentance, (If any Man say I have sinned, &c.) must in a special maner intend the first work of Regeneration, and Initial Repentance. The second thing is, that this General Proclamation is brought in, as a Corollary, or Inference from the Example of this sick Convert: And comes in upon it, as Elihu's deduction out of it. And therefore the case of that sick Man proposed, must involve, and extend to a first Conversion, which we call Regeneration: And it is not to be limited only to such as had been converted already: And truly the Tenor of those words, To shew to this Man His uprightnes doth argue him to have been one Ignorant asare, of what course to take for him to be saved, till taught by this Instructor.*

But Lastly, The final Conclusion of all, puts it out of exception, v. 29. Lo all these things worketh God, often times with Man; and tis a General one too, comprehending these, and all the blessed Operations, or Effects, that God doth work upon any, to save any of the Sons of Men (who at any time are saved,) from Hell; and not to be limited, to restoring of those Patients, that are sick, from bodily sickness, or of Men who had had a work of Regeneration already, and had gone astray. But speaks to all, of all sorts, and to the Unregenerate in a special manner.

C H A P. III.

That we may be Reconciled to God, it is necessary for us to be Convinced, that we are Enemies to God: That our Estate is Dangerous. That yet God is Appeasable: That there is a Mediator by whom the Soul may come to God, that we must also seek God and his Favour in Christ; and seek him with Confession of, and Mourning for Sin.

TH E particular Passages which a true and sincere Reconcilement doth require, are either such as prepare the Heart to be willing to be reconciled; or such wherein the Substance or Nature of Reconciliation it self, or wherein the frame of an Heart Reconciled, doth Consist.

1. For the preparing us to be reconciled, it is necessary that we be convinced that we are Enemies to God, and that he accounts us such. And that so long as we remain in that estate, he is also an Enemy to us, and can be no other. This what God in Christ hath done, gives Demonstration of. He would not save us upon Christs bare Intreaty, but he would have Satisfaction, and have Christ feel what it was to stand in the room of Sinners. Yea, one end why God saved us by way of Satisfaction to his Justice, was that Sinners pardoned might in what Christ suffered see, and throughly apprehend what Sin had deserved. And is it not then requisite that they should at least lay to Heart and be sensible of their own Treasons and Rebellions, and that God and they are at odds. Traytors must be Convicted and Condemned, ere they are capable of a legal Pardon, as Sentence must be pronounced ere a legal Appeal can be made. It is so in Mans Courts, and it so in Gods proceedings also. Neither indeed will men be brought to sue out for his Favour and prize his Love, till then; for it was never heard any Man did heartily sue to one for Pardon and Peace, with whom he did not first apprehend himself at variance.

2. It is necessary also that Men apprehend the danger of going on in this Estate, for though one should know another and himself to be Enemies, if he thought his Enemy were either careless or weak, he would slight Reconciliation with him, and though fought unto, would not seek it. He who is mention'd, Luke 14. 31, 32. fate down and considered if he were able to go out and meet his Enemy, else he would never have sought conditions of Peace: So the Soul, until it apprehends and considers (finding God and it self Enemies) what a sore Enemy he is, and what a fearful thing it is to fall into his hands (Heb. 10. 30, 31.) will not till then care to seek out to him.

3. If one apprehended God implacable, not inclinable to peace or hard to be intreated, he would never come at him neither. Thus David when Saul and he were at odds, suborned Jonathan secretly to observe what mind Saul bare towards towards him, 1 Sam. 20. and when at the 33 verse, he found him bent to kill him, David came not at him. So the Jews came away from God, as a wild Ass from its owner, Jer. 2. Because there was no hope. Chap. 3

4. The Soul comes to be perswaded better things of God, and things that accompany Reconciliation, and conceives hopes that Reconciliation is to be had, and had for it: And therefore in all whom God means to reconcile to himself, after he hath humbled them, he fixeth a secret perswasion on their Hearts, that he is ready to be reconciled to them, if they will be reconciled to him. God gives them a secret hint of his intended good will to them. He reveals what a gracious God he is, and how freely he Pardons: And because that all acquaintance begins with Knowledge, and is the ground of it, therefore God, when he brings any into this Covenant, the first thing he doth, is, He teacheth them to know him, Jer. 31. 34. And gives them a new Spirit, that they may be able know him after another manner then ever before. He teacheth them to know him especially in his Mercy, in those vast thoughts of Mercy laid up in him, (Jer. 9. 24.) To know him to be a God, that ever bath loving kindnes in the Earth; though not in Hell to Devils, yet in Earth to Men, and that therein he delighteth; he enableth him also to see what happiness is to be had in Communion with him, by reason of those glorious Excellencies which are in him, and makes such Representations of himself to the Soul, as allures the Heart, Hos. 1. 14. God draws the Heart, John 6. 44. for in the 45 verse it follows, They shall all be taught of God referring to these places of Esay, and Jeremy; for saies Christ; It is written in the Prophets, They shall be taught of God. And the Lesson is (as hath been said) to know God; and God doth this in a peculiar manner, working another kind of knowledge of himself than a man had before, or than other men have. For it is a knowledge that enamours their Hearts with him, and allures them with his good will. And (saies Christ) every man that hath thus heard, and learnt cometh to God. Though all hear the same message of Reconciliation; yet God whispers something to a Mans Heart, that he doth not to every man. The same God who from everlasting spake unto his Son, and wooed him for us, doth speak likewise secretly to a Man's Heart, to allure and woo him to come in to him.

5. And yet Fifthly, If the Soul should look upon God alone, as he is in himself, a God, Just as well as Merciful, he would thereby be discouraged to come alone into his presence, who is a consuming fire. The Glory of Gods Justice would dash him and confound him: And as Adam trembled, so would he, and could do no otherwise. 'Tis the Instinct of Nature (witness the Heathen Sacrifices, and lesser Gods, as Mediators to the great God) to seek out a Daies-Man, Job 9. 33. Yea it is the way of Man seeking Friendship with another, to use the Mediation of some other, that is great with him that is wronged: Therefore God teacheth such an one, to whom he means to be reconciled, to know his Son also, whom he hath sent as his beloved Son, in whom he is well pleased with others too. God holds and sets forth him as a Propitiation, That in his Blood he may both be Just, and the Justifier of us, Rom. 3. 25. And he causeth his Glory to shine, and appear in the Face of Jesus Christ, and secretly points and directs the Heart with an instinct to go to Christ: Every Man that hath heard and learnt of the Father, cometh to me, (John 6. 45.) As the Beasts were taught to go to the Ark. And we thus coming to Christ by Faith, and taking hold of him by the hand thereof, Christ then leads us by the hand to God Eph. 3. 18. We have προσαγωγην, Conduct, and Entrance and Access to God, having such a Person with us, and his Interest in God to plead for us, and whose Blood and Satisfaction we may plead; we have free Liberty of Speech παρρησιαν, to plead his Righteousness and Satisfaction, and that with bare-facedness and boldness, as the word signifies: Not to stand as Condemned Prisoners with our Faces covered, but as Persons acquitted in Christ, pleading Pardon with Confidence. And this is necessary, for as God intended to shew us no favour without Satisfaction, so no more can we apprehend that his Favour, but in and through Christs alone Satisfaction, Rom. 3. 25. God hath therefore set forth Christ a Propitiation Book III Supplication by Faith in his Blood, that he might be both Just, and a Justifier of him that believeth in Jesus. And how God should be Just, and a Justifier of a Sinner, no man could ever apprehend, till he bottoms his Faith on Christs Righteousness alone, which only can stand before Justice, and break through it unto God.

And yet 6thly, When all this is done, the man must be set a work to seek, as a Condemned man, God and his Favour in Christ, and Peace and Reconciliation through him for life; Job. 33. 24. He shall pray to him; and he will be gracious, and say, Deliver him; I have found a Ransome. God himself first sought to Christ, and sought him with all earnestness and vehemency to become a Mediator to him for us, and therefore reason it is that he should stand upon it to be sought unto, ere we obtain Peace with him. Yea, and though his own Son hath performed it, and he Covenanted with him that He should see his seed, yet God expected that his Son should seek to him for the acceptation of his Mediation, who yet hath merited it, and who undertook it at his request. And therefore you see what a Long prayer he puts up, John 17. Tho he says at the 4. and 9. verses, He had finished the work he gave him to do, yet he prays for the persons redeemed, and the acceptation of the redemption wrought, throughout that Chapter. God had told him (Psal. 2. 8.) he must ask the Heathen for his Inheritance; and tho they were his Inheritance, as he was his Son, and whom besides he had purchased and bought with his blood, yet he must ask them. Yea that Glory which was his own before the World was, he seeks to his Father for, v. 5. And if it were thus between God and his Son, in the business of Reconciliation for us, and that in what he might challenge as his own, then surely much more it must be so between God and us; whom this Reconciliation most concerns. He therefore pours upon a man a Spirit of Grace and Supplication, Zach. 12. 10. That is; A Spirit to supplicate for Grace.

And the same is evident from the Nature of the thing it self. God is the party Superiour, and it is fit the Inferiour should seek to the Superiour: And also he is the Person wronged; and though he be willing and desirous to be reconciled more than ever, yet he will have his favour prized. David longed to be reconciled to Abfalom, yet he would be sought unto, for he would have his Favour prized to the utmost, and not cast away.

Yea and to be in Favour with God being better than Life, God will be sought to with more earnestness, contention and constancy, then a Condemned man seeks for Life; Jer. 29. 13. They shall find me when they seek and search for me with their whole heart. And Matt. 11. 12. The Violent take it by force; Though God be most willing to part with this great Blessing, yet that it may be prized and sought, indeed he doth as it were hold it fast in his hand, and will have it wrung from him by force, as it were, Matth. 11. 12. And from the Days of John the Baptist, until now, the Kingdom of Heaven suffereth Violence, and the Violent take it by force. And in Luke 13. 24. Strive (saith he) for many seek. The word in the original signifies an eager violent contention and wrestling of mind. And there is reason, from what God did in Christ for us, for this also: For how earnestly did God seek to his Son for us? He expressed all the earnestness that might be, laying his command upon him; and he added an oath to it, &c. And doth he not expect earnestness at our hands? Yea how did Christ also, in the days of his flesh, put up an Atonement, seeking to his Father with strong cries and tears? And shall we think to be heard with dull and faint Cries? Nay, look as God himself was more earnest in this matter of reconciling us, then ever in any thing else, so He will have us seek to him with more Earnestness and Contention, than ever we sought any thing, even Life its self. And surely, if God hath bidden us seek peace with men, yea, and to ensue it, (as in Psal. 34. 14. 1 Pet. 3. 11.) that is, though it fly away, yet to follow it; much more are we then to seek Peace with God himself, and though he seem to reject us, yet to follow him, and press upon him as it were from one room to another, that is, from one performance to another, and and so to follow hard after him, as David says Psal. 63. 1, 2, 3. to verse the 8th, My Soul followeth hard after thee: Thy right hand upholdeth me.

7. He will be sought unto with Confession of, and mourning for offending him. For being in bitterness, (Zach. 12. 10.) and mourning, is joynd with Supplication for Grace.

And this is necessary to Reconciliation, because an acknowledgment is to be made, Jer. 2. 13. God would be sought humbly unto by us, as those that are Traytors and Rebels. And God will have men know when he pardons, that he knows what he pardons, and therefore will have them acknowledge what they deserve, that Every mouth might be stopped, and become guilty, and obnoxious in their own acknowledgment before him; Rom. 3. 19. As if a man will become, wise he must become a fool; so a man that will become a Friend to God, must turn Enemy against himself, and judge himself worthy of destruction. And God will have the Freeness and Glory of his Grace acknowledged in pardoning. And therefore will have us Confess our evil ways and deservedness of destruction. In the 36th of Ezekiel, when at the 31 verse, he says that when he pardoned them they should remember their evil ways, and acknowledge themselves worthy to be destroyed: the reason follows in the next verse; Be it known to you, I pardon it not for your sakes; I do it freely: And that ye may know so much, remember your evil ways; be ashamed and confounded for your ways.

And there is good reason also that mourning should be joynd to all this, from what God did in Christ when he reconciled us to himself.

1. For first, Was not Christ, who never knew the pleasure of Sin, put to grief? Yea, all the Sorrow and Smart was his. Isa. 53. 4. Surely he hath born our griefs, was a man of Sorrow, &c. Which Sorrows were put upon him, by his Father also, ver. 10. He put him to grief; and therein indeed put himself to grief. And if they both were thus put to grief and afflicted, for our reconciliation and peace, then surely the least that we, who have tasted of, and enjoyed the pleasures of Sin, can do, is to grieve also, for that thing, which made both Father and Son to grieve. God required of Christ to bear our Sorrows: Now the Sorrows of Death, and of his Wrath, God exacts not of thee; but the Sorrow of a Friend, the Sorrow of Kindness, which causeth not Death as other Sorrows do; but Peace and Joy in the very performance of it; Repentance never to be repented of. He requires thee only to mourn kindly for thy Sins that pierced him: And such a mourning the nature of Reconciliation requires. For,

2. Secondly, Where mourning for Offending God is wanting, there is no Sign of any good will yet wrought in the heart to God, nor of love to him, without which God will never accept a man. For the least thing, wherein good will towards a Friend whom we have injured, can be shewn, is to mourn and be sorry for it: As the least requital for a Kindness is to be thankful. And this all that have Affections in them do, when they can no way else make amends.

3. Else there is no hope of amendment. God will not pardon till he sees hope of amendment. Now until a Man confess his sin, and that with bitterness, it is a sign he loves it, Job. 20. 12, 13, 14. Whilst he hides it, spares it, and forsakes it not, it is sweet in his mouth, and therefore till he Confess it, and mourn for it, it is a sign it is not bitter to him, and so he will not forsake it. A Man will never leave sin, till he finds bitterness in it, and if so, then he will be in bitterness for it, Zach. 12. 10. And Godly sorrow works Repentance, 2 Cor. 7. 10.

CHAP. IV.

How our Reconciliation to God consists in renouncing all Friendships and Interests which stand in Competition with his! and in choosing him for our alone Friend, and Portion; in resigning all to him; in having a Disposition and Nature Like to God: And also in all our Addresses to God proceeding from an Inward Principle of pure good will unto God.

EIGHTLY. He that will be reconciled to God, must part with, and forsake all other Friends and Lovers; renounce and break off all Interests and Correspondencies with them, and choose God for his Sole Friend and Portion. And he must choose God for ever, to cleave to him with full purpose of heart.

1. He must renounce all other Friendship, James 4. 4. Ye Adulterers and Adulteresses, know ye not that the Friendship of the World is enmity with God? Whosoever therefore shall be a Friend of the World, is the Enemy of God. As God will not have us serve other Masters, so not to have other Friends: Whosoever doth not forsake Father, Mother &c. is unworthy of me, says Christ, Luke 14. 26. And still what God hath done in Christ for reconciling us, will persuade to it.

First, God was content to part with his Son, a Friend, an Old Friend, and a Bosom Friend, brought up with him; and yet he was content for a time to forsake him: Witness that speech, My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me? And Christ was content to part with and leave his father for a time. That speech, For this cause a man shall forsake Father and Mother, is in Eph. 5. 31. applied to Christ in his giving himself to the Church, as the context shews.

And he came down from Heaven for to make such Friends: And thus each of them parted with their old Friends to get new. So do you, and be content to forsake the dearest you have delighted in, and have been brought up with. The Church forsook her Father's house.

2. The nature of reconciliation requires it. For Friendship with any thing else is enmity with God, Jam. 4. 4. A Friendship not only with proclaimed Enemies, open sins, but with all the things the world hath, is vanity with God. A Believer may have a Lordship over them, but not Friendship with them. He may use them as Strangers, and Servants, but not as Friends, so they must not have his heart. He that hates not Father and Mother is unworthy of me, says Christ, that is, not worthy of my Friendship, and such a Friend as I am and mean to be.

3. Choose him alone for your God, to betake your selves unto him for ever. Friendship is entred into by Choice. Kindred indeed is not, for I chose not who was to be my Father; who shall be the Son of my Mother is not in my choice: But friendship goes by Choice: So Jonathan chose David, 1 Sam. 20. 30. Thou hast chosen the Son of Jesse (saith Saul) So the Church, Hos. 2. 7. She shall follow after after Lovers, but she shall not overtake them; and she shall seek them; but shall not find them: then shall she say, I will go and return to my first husband, for then was it better with me than now. She forsakes all other Lovers, and betakes her-self to God; and what says God? Ver. last, I will say, They are my People; and they shall answer my Love again, and say, Thou art my God, ver. 16. Which place shews the reason, whence it may be enforced: For God, you heard, chose you, and gave you to Christ before you were, and he chose Christ for you to be your, Mediator, and said concerning him, Thou art a Priest, and that he would not repent his choice. Now in like manner as God did Choose you, so must you also choose him. As God chooseth you freely (Hos. 14. 14.) out of Good will, and pitcheth his choice upon your Persons, so must you choose him freely, and choose him as Jonathan chose David to be his Friend, tho' to the loss of a Kingdom, as Saul told him, 1 Sam. 20. 30. So do thou choose God, though to thy undoing in the world; and as he chose you for ever, never to cast you off, making an everlasting Covenant with Christ for you, giving him a Charge to save you, choosing you out of an everlasting Love: So you are to choose him, to be your God for ever: And, as Jonathan's heart cleaving to David, he swore to him, and entred into Covenant with him; so must you do with God. I have sworn (says David) and I will perform it. Psal. 119. And as no difficulty could put God by from his purpose, he had rook up towards you, as you heard; so strong was he in it, so bent and set upon it: So let nothing, that can fall out in your way, Losses or Crosses, that you meet with for him, alter your purpose towards him: As nothing can separate you from his love, so let nothing separate him from yours.

9. Ninthly, Let thy heart resign up it self, and all that it hath, and devote it all unto God, for ever, to be commanded and used by him. Thus Friends use to do, and thus God did for you: For if he spared not his own Son, how shall he not with him give you all things else. Let all you have be God's, giving up your selves first unto the Lord, as they in 2 Cor. 8. 5. Let God have all thy Understanding, Will, Affections, and whatever else: Let all be his, to command in any thing as he pleaseth, and study how to set all a work for him; for he set the Infinite Depths of his Wisdom a work, to find out a way to be Friends with you; and chose that which would shew most love; And so do you choose the things that will most please him, Isa. 56. 4. and 44. 5. Subscribe with your Hands to the Lord, and say I am his, even as Friends use to say, Yours to Command, and All I have is at your Service. God wrote with his own hand your Names in Heaven (Heb. 12. 23.) in the Heart of Christ: And he wrote it down in the Books of his Decrees, and made Christ subscribe to it, that he should be a Priest: And so subscribe you, that you will be for ever his to Command and Use.

10. And Tenthly, ὁμόνοια or Likeness of Disposition, is the only sure lasting Ground and Foundation of Friendship, and is the Soul of it; so as it is impossible two should long be Friends, unless they agree in their minds and Affections, loving and liking the same things; Can Two walk together and not agree? Amos. 3. 3. Therefore you must get stamp'd upon your Hearts, a Likeness to God in Holiness; whereby to hate where God hates, and to love where he loves; so as to become an Enemy to his Enemies, and a Friend to his Friends. And in this respect David is called a man after God's own heart; that is, whose Mind and Disposition was fashioned to the Lord's in all things. So Psal. 119. 127, 128. I hate every false way; but thy Law I esteem aright concerning all things. So do you love and approve Holiness in all things, in the Abstract and Concrete; in the word as it is delivered, and in Men's Lives and Hearts, as it is practiced and appears. And so the Believer also hates sin in himself and others, and counts God's Enemies as his own. Thus David did, Psal. 119. 21, 22, 23. And this in Scripture is termed a True Heart, Heb. 10. 22. True as a man to his Friend; as to his own self. True and Faithful, as a Spouse to her Husband: True and Loyal, as Subjects to their Native Prince. Job. 22. 21, 22. Acquaint thy self with him (there is an Exhortation to Friendship with God) and be at Peace. Receive, I pray thee, the Law at his mouth.

Book III

11. Eleventhly. Accordingly, A man that is thus reconciled, must endeavour to walk, and behave himself as unto a Friend. The Nature of Reconciliation requires it; Pro. 18. 24. He that hath Friends must carry himself Friendly. And Christ hath said, If ye be my Friends, then keep my Commandments. John 15. 14. Therefore you must endeavour so to do, and to do it upon that motive chiefly; and to walk with God as Enoch did, observing all God's Carriages to you, and yours, to God-ward; as one that is reconciled, observes him in all his Dealings, interprets all in Love, depends on him, trusts on him, &c. And also watch over your selves in all your ways, and be Fearful to displease him and his Goodness, Hof. 3. 5.

12. Only in the last place, All these Addresses tending to Reconciliation, must proceed from an Inward Principle of pure good will unto God, which is the Soul of Reconciliation; and which therefore God regards and requires above all things else: Not only in respect of his own Greatness and Sovereignty (which exacts all in the Creature to be for him, Rom. 11. last, and to be wholly referred unto him) but also in a way of Ingenuity. He is the Superiour, yea Sovereign, in this Friendship. The Nature of true Reconciliation requires it, especially with respect to such an one, who being so infinitely above us, doth condescend to this Relation of Friendship with us: Yea, and subjects himself to all, even the lowest Laws and Expressions of Love and Friendship, which any, the meanest Friend on Earth can be supposed to do. Aristotle indeed denies That the true Law of Friendship can hold between one too much Superiour, and an Inferiour: For the Interest of one riseth so high to Sovereignty, as excludeth pure Good Will; and in the Inferiour it falls so low to Subjection, as it admitts too great a mixture of by-ends. And so true Friendship is excluded on either hand: But this Philosopher never knew our God, nor yet the power of the Divine Nature in us. He could not have imagined that God, who is so great, could be so good; and stoop unto such low Carriages and terms towards us (as to Instance in one out of the text) to beseech us to be reconciled.

But above all, this is expected by him, whose Friendship is wholly free. The Title of it is free Grace, meerly out of pure good Will; The good Pleasure of his Will, and can have no other ends. And all, without such sincere Observance of God, is but plain flattery: And God, who also is so wise as not to be mocked, accounts it so; for so he judgeth and pronounceth of those, that yet earnestly sought him, Psal. 78. 34, 35, 36, 37. They sought him, and sought him early, that is, diligently. When he slew them, they sought him, and they returned and inquired early after God. And they remembered that God was their Rock, and the high God their Redeemer. Nevertheless they did flatter him with their Mouth, and they lied unto him with their Tongues. For their Heart was not right with him, neither were they stedfast in his Covenant. But God is not mocked, for tho' men cannot see and discover thus much often in those they deal with; yet God doth, who searcheth the Heart, takes notice of it, you see, and deals with men accordingly. Now, flatterers are distinguished from Friends by this; That a Flatterer is one who seeketh indeed Friendship, and abounds in offices of Friendship for his own ends, and chiefly out of by-respects; but a true Friend is one, who besides by-respects, doth things out of good-will to the party: God doth indeed give those who seek Reconciliation with him, leave to have a respect to themselves, their own Safety, and Recompence of reward; for else he were not a true Friend to them, if he did not suffer them to look to their own Good, which as he subordinately professeth to have aimed at in their reconciliation to himself, though contrived chiefly for his own Glory, so may they; and therefore says Christ, Luke 12. 4, 5. I say to you my Friends (to speak in the language of the Text) Fear him that can kill Body and Soul. So as to fear God, as one who is able to cast us into Hell, may stand with Friendship. I Say to you my Friend, There is the fear of Hell allowed those who are in Communion with him, and also hopes of Heaven. So God said to Abraham whom whom he calls his Friend, I am thy exceeding great reward. And one Eye he had thereto, Heb. 11. 16. But now they desire a better Country, that is an Heavenly. Wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God, for he hath prepared for them a City. And Moses too (v. 26.) Esteemed the Reproach of Christ greater riches than the Treasures in Egypt, for he had respect unto the Recompence of the reward. And this Moses, God treated as a man doth his Friend, Exod. 33. 11. And the Lord spake unto Moses face to face, as a Man speaketh unto his Friend. But yet, if there be no further principle of Good-will predominate, it is but flattery; and though I confess, that happily in one newly scared out of his natural estate, this principle is not so soon and so easily discerned, yet after a while it may; which, because it is the main, and Soul of all the former Acts, I will therefore a little more enlarge upon it. And herein I will not attempt to affix a different Character of Friendship and Flattery, upon each and every of those particular acts and passages of Reconciliation formerly mentioned; nor keep punctually unto all those Acts specified in the 78th Psalm, though this is feizeable, and might be done, as for example: It is here said, when He slew them, then they remembered he was their Rock and Redeemer. A Traveller in fair Weather passeth by a Rock, minds and regards it not; but in a Storm he runs for Shelter to it; but yet dwells not there: But one truly wrought on, though he first run to God in his distress, and after often doth so; yet ever after he makes him his House and Dwelling place, Psal. 90. 1. Tis the Voice of the whole Church, Age after Age, Lord thou hast been our dwelling-place in all Generations. And in the next Psal. 91. verse 1. He that dwells in the secret place of the most high, shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. I observe,

1. That it is the Description of a Man truly Godly, to be one that Dwells in God; yea, and in the secret place, the Heart, the Bosom of God, and hath intimate Communion with him: He affects that room; and if he cannot get in, is still knocking at it, takes it up for his constant abode. And 2. A Shelter in it, and from it, comes in it secundarily as to his aim; for it is the promise made upon it. He shall abide under the shadow, that is the Protection, of the Almighty. It is the Love of God he principally aims to dwell in, 1 John 4. 16. God is Love, and he that dwells in Love, dwells in God, and God in him.

I might secondly observe the like upon that other passage, They flattered him, in running then to him, but only as a Redeemer. The Holy Ghost is exactly punctual in expressing the bottom Differences of their Flattery. A Man is like to Dye, he sends to the Physitian, but as a Physitian only; he never did, nor doth now regard the Friendship of the Man. Pharoh sends in all haste ('tis said) for Moses and Aaron, Exod. 10. 16. when he never cared more to have seen them: So, verse 28. See my Face no more. But yet in his distress he says unto them, I have sinned, forgive, and intreat the Lord your God to take away this Death only. What need was there for him to put in this Exclusive, this Death only. He was an Ignorant Heathen, and so speaks out his Heart plainly. He knew not how to flatter this God. (For God was a strange God, whom he professed not, he still stiles him your God.) he speaks as indeed it was, he professeth to care for God no further. But those very Men (of whom the Psalmist here speaks) that were brought out of Egypt from under this Pharoh; professed God to be their God, and to have been their Redeemer out of Egypt. And they, in their Speeches, when they return to God, carry it otherwise; yet their Hearts at the bottom were the very same; and therefore of them 'tis said, they flattered him with their Tongues. And thus Men professing Christ in the Church, do not say unto God, when they pray to him; or unto Men, when in distress of Conscience, Sicknes, &c. Take away this Hell only: They do not say it, but God, that knows the Mind of their Spirit in them, knows it is all, and the whole they would have with him; yet they give good words, conceal this to be all or the main of their intentions; yea themselves, out of self-flattery discern it not. But yet still they think and mean the very same, though Pharoh only spake it out. And therefore they are said to flatter him. But what doth a godly Mans Heart say, in his Distress? He runs to God indeed as a Redeemer, but coming to him, he finds Est aliquid in Christo formosus Salvatore. The Lord is my Portion, says the Soul, Lament. 3. 24. And it was spoken in as deep distress, as ever Soul was in, as is apparent from the Chapter. What saith David from the very bottom of his Heart in his sickness? Not take away this Death only; No, but David being Sick, first comforts himself with this promise, Psal. 41. 3. The Lord will strengthen him upon his Bed of Languishing, and make his Bed in his Sickness. And then adds, v. 4. I said, Lord, be Merciful to me, and heal my Soul; that is, destroy my Lusts, which are the Diseases of my Soul, Lord; and heal my Soul, and renew Life and Communion with thee, which is the Health and Strength of my Soul. Do not take this Sickness and Death only away, but this sin away, that hath dishonoured thee, hath separated between me and thee: Heal my Soul, for I have sinned against thee.

I need not so punctually pursue the rest of these Instances of their flattery, that follow in the 78th Psalm. I chose rather to single forth some of the eminent Acts contrary to the forementioned Particulars, in which I shewed Reconciliation to God to Consist, and I must instance but in a few of them, and in them make forth the difference between Flattery, and true Friendship, and Good Will.

1. The First is that of seeking God, (which I have been large upon before) and even that also is mentioned in the Psalmist, Psal. 78. 34. When he slew them, then they sought him, and enquired early after God; that is, diligently: As what a Man riseth betimes to do, he may be said to do with earnestness and diligence. They sought him, but still as a Redeemer only, as was observed. Now let us bring it to the business of Reconciliation, which is the point in hand, and the difference will appear, what seeking of God is only out of Flattery; what also out of Friendship.

1. First then, there are two things in Reconciliation, which the Gospel propounds, Luke 2. 14. Peace and Good-Will. First Peace, quiet of Conscience in regard of the pardon of Sin. Secondly, Gods Favour and Acceptation, so that God Receives us, Loves and Delights in us. Now to seek Peace only, and to aim at Peace alone in seeking God, may be in a Flatterer, as in those (Psal. 78. 34.) who sought him whilst he was slaying them; who were earnest that God would be pacified towards them, but that was all; Enemies to a Prince may earnestly seek Peace, and their Pardon, who yet care not whether ever they see the Kings Face any more, and whether they live in his presence and serve him, and attend him all their daies. But now one that hath good will to God in him, though he will seek Peace also, yet that alone doth not content him; for he seeks, as a Favourite seeks to his Princeas; a Lover or Mover, to one he is in Love withal; whom nothing but Love and Good Will again will satisfy, Jer. 2. 2. I remember (says God) the kindness of thy Youth, The Love of thine Espousals, when thou wentest after me in the Wilderness. They went after him, and wooed him, as a fond Lover doth. So doth he that seeks aright, he seeks to God for Favour, as a Friend doth to a Friend, to be answered with Love, and to live in his sight, and presence for ever. To such an one therefore who thus seeks God, and hath such an aim in seeking him; if half the News were brought to him, that God would Pardon him indeed, and not throw him into Hell, but let him enjoy the World, but yet that he can never love or delight in him again; this would grieve him more then the other would rejoyce him. That which Abalom but feigned, they can and do say in truth, 2 Sam. 14. 32. Let God kill me, rather then not suffer me to see his Face; for 'tis his Face they seek. And so the Generation of them who seek the Lord, is distinguished. Psal. 24. 6.

2. Secondly, It will appear whether Goodwill be in your seeking God, from the Issue and Event of it, for either God withholdeth his Face from a man man in seeking him, and seemeth to reject his suit, keeping him so in suspence, as he knows not whether he will save him or no: Or he gives him some Evidence and Assurance of it. One of these two Cases will fall out, and in either of them will pure good will to God discover it self, when a man seeks aright. Chap. 4

1. If God withhold himself and his Face from a sincere Soul, yet still that Soul is enabled to cast himself upon him and his free Grace, and to refer himself and his Case to his meer Good Will and Good Pleasure. He can still put himself into his hands, as David did, 2 Sam. 15. 26: Here I am, if he hath not Pleasure in me, let him do what seemeth good in his eyes. Thus Job also did; Job 13. 15. If he kill me, yet will I trust in him. If he dyes, he resolves to dye seeking at his feet: And it is the good will he beareth unto God, which causeth him to do thus, because he cannot leave God. But one whose heart is not right with God in seeking him, when he hath sought a while, and seeking a-miss obtains not, he leaves off his suit, and withdraws himself, and will not trust his Soul with him; this seems express by comparing that Speech of the Apostle Heb. 10. with what you find in Habakkuk, whence it is cited. The words of Paul are, Heb. 10. 36, 37, 38, 39. For ye have need of Patience, that after ye have done the Will of God, ye might receive the Promise. For yet a little while, and he that shall come, will come and will not tarry. Now the Just shall live by Faith; but if any man draw back, my Soul shall have no Pleasure in him. But we are not of them, who draw back unto Perdition; but of them that believe, to the saving of the Soul. Patience in waiting and believing, is made the Character of a true Believer; and withdrawing, is the Character of Impatience in one whose heart is not upright within him. Hab. 2. 3. 4. For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the End it shall speak, and not lye: Though it tarry, wait for it, because it will surely come, it will not tarry. Behold his Soul, which is lifted up, is not upright in him: But the Just shall live by his Faith.

2. Secondly, One that seeks out of good will, when he obtaineth any Glimps of God's Favour, he rejoiceth in it, and in God more than in Life and the Hope of Heaven, Rom. 5. 2. and 11 verses compared. The Apostle, you may perceive, proceeds by way of Gradation in the Effects of Faith in a Good and Sound Heart. He hath first Peace, v. 1. then 2dly, he rejoiceth in hope of Glory, v. 2. then 3dly, not only so, but (v. 3.) we glory (says he) in Tribulation, and not only so, but (says he v. 11.) we joy in God, even in God himself. To rejoyce in hope of Glory, speaks something of Good Will, as hope imports: But it is a strain yet purer and higher, to rejoyce in God himself. And therefore if the Soul hath not outward things, yet God is enough; and if he hath them, he rejoiceth more in them as they are Love-tokens of his God, than in the things themselves: And he is more fearfull to displease him out of fear of his Goodness Hos. 3. 5. When God speaks Peace, he returns no more to Folly, Psal. 85. 8. It works more strength, hatred, and loathing of sin. But the unsincere Soul, if he conceives any hope (as often they do feed themselves with ungrounded hopes and shadows of Assurances) grows the more securely Presumptuous, turns that Grace into Wantonness; as self-love is apt to do, 3. Jer. 4. Thou callest me Father, and yet doest as evil as thou couldst. But when God truly works, he says in opposition to that former, Thou shalt call me Father, and shalt not turn away from me. Even as Abalom sought to be in Favour with his Father, but rebelled the more. So it proves in the Issue with a Soul unsincere; for though the Assurance of God's Love is the surest motive to work upon a Principle of Love and pure Good will, unto God in the Heart; (The Love of Christ constrains me, saith the Apostle) yet when there is nothing but self-love in the heart, it abuseth that Grace it seeks for, and thinketh it hath attained; for it hath not Ingenuity in it to God.

2. The Second Particular I would Instance is, Confession of Sin with mourning; which I instanced in, as one Eminent Ingredient into Reconciliation with God.

God. This Flatterers also may seem seriously to do. So Abab mourned and Book III went softly; and (Isaiah 58: 5.) They are said to hang down their Heads like Bull-Rushes. But if the mourning be out of Good Will,

1. Then first, a man's Heart will not only mourn for sin, as having brought misery upon him, or as that which hath cast him out from God, which whilst a man doth, he indeed lamenteth but himself: As a Traytor at the Gallows lamenteth that he should come to such a miserable end, and deserve such a death; as Cain mourned; when he cryed out, My Punishment is greater than I can bear. It was the Punishment pinch'd him. Thus to mourn for sin in relation to misery, though we do it thus before God, is not mourning but howling, Hof. 7. 14. Or as David terms it, roaring Psal. 32. 3. But in true Mourning, which comes out of Good will, they are said (Zach. 12. 10.) to mourn for him whom they had pierced, as a Mother for her Only Son. In which, Two things are Observable for our Purpose, (which is to distinguish Mourning) first, that they are said to mourn, not so much for sin, much less their Misery, as for Him; that is, for sin in Relation to him; as it is an Injury, provoking, wronging, and piercing him. As David in Confession, Psal. 51. sets this Accent upon his sinning, in saying, Against thee, against thee have I sinned. In the verse afore he says, his sins were ever before him, as that which is a man's greatest and heaviest Affliction useth to be. David had other things enough to have had afore him, as the shame &c. But these things, though when Sin fell light, they were heavy, yet now are vanished and disappear; And the sin, the sin is ever afore him: And what was it in the sin? Even this; that against God he had sinned. Wherein I observe, 1. That he considers it, not only as done in God's Sight; in his Presence, and afore him only, and he looking on, though he aggravates it by that; but chiefly, that the sin was committed against him, as the object: And 2dly He repeats that twice, as in Sorrow we use to do what most deeply affects us: As David on another Occasion cryed out, Oh Absalom, my Son, my Son; So here he sayst twice, against thee, against thee &c. And 3dly as not content with this, he adds only (against thee only) As the only Consideration that at present moved him; though he had sinned against Bathsheba and Uriah too, and all the People of God. And hence, because God is the Object, the terminus of such Sorrow, it hath therefore its denomination from God; and is called, Sorrow according to God, 2 Cor. 7. 9, 10. κατὰ Θεὸν λύπη, as Acts are denominated from their Tendency.

2. And Secondly. The comparison the Prophet useth; Zach. 12. 10. argues it sprang from pure goodwill: For his Words are, as a Mother Mourneth for her only Son: What else moveth a Mother to Mourn for the loss of a Son, especially of an Infant, but Good-will to it? You know how David took on for his Son Absalom. Children are in dependence upon their Parents; and may Mourn out of self Love; because when they are gone, they are left Orphans, and helpless. If therefore he had instanced in the Mourning of a Child, Self-love might at least have been supposed the principal Motive; but when he says as a Mother for her Child, he can mean nothing more, than that out of Love they do it. It is one thing to come and Mourn for Sin before God; and bemoan our selves to him, and another to Mourn for him, and for Sin, as done against him. A flatterer may do the one, but an ingenious friend only the latter, Ezek. 6. 9. They that escape of you shall remember me among the Nations whither they shall be carryed Captives, because I am broken with their Whorish Heart; which hath departed from me, and with their Eyes, which go a Whoring after their Idols; And they shall loath themselves for the Evils which they have committed in all their Abominations. This also is spoken of the true and kindly Sorrow of heart wherewith the Godly come unto God.

Now 1. As afore you heard, they mourned for him: So here, says God, they shall remember me. And upon the thought of him, whom they have so sinned against, shall loath themselves. Now that which must cause self to hate hate it self, must be pure good will to God above a man's self. To remember God, is to think of him, with the deepest Affection of Love, as the words of Christ in the Institution of the Sacrament import, do this in remembrance of me. Chap. 4.

2. What is it concerning God in sin, that makes them loath themselves? Even this, That it hath broken God's Heart. The Godly look upon sin as God doth; see that to be the evil in sin, which God doth; Yea, they look upon it also with God's Heart; And what affects God in it, affects them. 'Tis said (Num. 11. 10.) God was angry, and Moses was displeas'd also. Yea they mourn for it, because it affects God's Heart, as true Friends, that have but one heart and one Soul: Thy Friend (Deut. 13. 6.) that is as thine own Soul: So God and the Saints have as it were one Heart, which consists in pure good Will. And therefore; God that knows the temper of true Hearts to him, propounds this as the object of their Sorrow, that the thought that his Heart was broken, was the chief thing that breaks theirs. And this motive no Principle in man, but love, can apprehend and take in. A Sincere Soul considers this as the Eminent Evil in his sinning; that God's Heart is broken with the unkindness of it, as an Husband for the departure of a Wife whorishly from him (to which that place alludes) and so mourn for it.

3. The last words (in Ezek. 6. 9.) do import some such thing; for they run thus: That they should Loath themselves for the Evils Committed in their Abominations. Not for their Abominations simply, in the grossness of them; for Wicked Men mourn for their Abominations when outwardly gross: But this Expression imports there were certain special Evils in their Abominations (the greatest of the Evils therein) which they spied out to mourn for, as their unkindness to God, falseness in them to God, &c.

3. Thirdly, The sincerity of this Mourning will appear in the issue and event, in the Cases forementioned. For,

1. If God forbear to speak Peace and Pardon to him, and rather seems to be an Enemy, and to fight against him, (Isa. 63. 10.) in that Case he joyns with God in Self-Revenge. Thus, (2 Cor. 7. 11.) Godly sorrow (among other things) worketh Revenge, on ones self (as they had done on a Church-member, of which 'tis principally spoken) so as he hates and loaths himself, and turns Enemy against himself, (Ezek. 36. 31.) Judgeth himself worthy to be destroyed. So the old Translation renders it. He finds it in his Heart now that at the latter day, his Heart would of it self step out the first, before ever it were accused, and say, Here am I, that have deserved thy utmost destruction. And if he thought he should be Destroyed, he finds some little Relief in this, that God is avenged on one of his Enemies.

2. If he hath assurance that God will Pardon him, then the more Assurance or Hopes, (that rise to any greatness) he hath of Pardon, the more he Mourneth. Assurance broacheth Godly Sorrow, sets it a Working, and giveth vent to it. Ezek. 16. 61. Thou shalt remember thy evil Ways, and thy Doings, which were not good. And remembering them, (v. 63.) shalt be Confounded and never open thy Mouth any more, because of thy shame, when I am pacified towards thee for all that thou hast done. Then cometh in the greatest Confusion; Shame and Grief overcoming the Heart most, when God is pacified. God overcomes when he Pardons, as well as when he Judgeth: And hath a greater Victory over the Soul whom he Pardons, then over the Damn'd in Hell. And there is in such a Soul as true a Confusion of Face, though of another kind, that so no Flesh may Glory in his presence; but the more hope an unsincere Soul, who seeks out of Self-Love, and Mourns only out of self-Love, hath, the less he mourns: Like a Traytor, that when he hath got what he would have, and is in hope to obtain his Pardon, his eyes are dry:

4. Fourthly,

4. Fourthly, There must be good Will in acts of Obedience also, and in choosing the things that please God. You know what Christ says, John 15. 14. If you be my Friends, do what I Command you. Now if there be good Will in the Heart, it will appear: A Man may Discover it one time or other by the Dispositions of his Heart, either, 1. Sometimes before the Obedience performed. 2. In the Performance. 3. After the Performance, or the doing any thing for God.

I. First, Before the performance by two things.

1. Inasmuch as the chiefest aim of his Heart in it will be to shew forth and exprefs his good Will to God. As he does it as a Friend by way of requital to a Friend, whose utmost end is to shew his Love to the Party: So the chiefest things he desires is, that God would but accept it for such; and take it in good part, and take notice of his Love in it; which Love of his is more then the thing, though he grieves it should be so little. And therefore a Godly Mans Obedience is termed Thankfulness. When Mary came and bestowed that Cost upon Christ, and Washed his Feet with Tears, Her utmost end was but to shew Her Love; Which therefore Christ took notice of, and speaks of, and accepts of, above all else: She Loved much, because much is forgiven her, says Christ. As if he had said, All this is but to testifie Her Love, and Godly Sorrow, which I take notice of, and will therefore have recorded to the end of the World. Therefore it is called, Heb. 6. 10. The Labour of Love. And hence often-times (perhaps not always) the greatest and strongest Motives that can be used before, to perswade and prevail with the Heart to Obedience, is taken from Loves Topicks, from God's Love, as appeareth by Christs dealing with Peter, whom when he would effectually perswade to feed his Church, he telleth him not of Livings and Preferments by it, nor of the Woe if he Preached not, but he useth a Motive of another kind, stronger then all these; Peter, Lovest thou me? I am perswaded it broke Peter's Heart to hear Christ thus questioning with him, and to think that he had given him occasion, by his Denial to make a Question of it. He modestly Replies, Lord (saith he) thou knowest, that tho I have dealt Unthankfully, and falsely with thee, that yet I Love thee, and am willing to do any thing for thee: Whereas another performs his Duty, but at best, as a Servant doth a business for a Master, and so he may do it even because he is Commanded, but yet his utmost aim is not as a Friend to shew his Love; But what says Christ, If ye do whatever I Command you, that is, out of love, then henceforth I shall call you Friends, not Servants. John 15. 15. Or else the Man doth his Duty as a Bribe to a Judge, to buy off his Punishment, Mich. 6. 6. Where withal shall I appear before the Lord? What shall I give him? His manner of speaking bewrayes, he did it to Bribe the Lord, to get his Pardon: An Enemy being in an Enemies lurch; may do as much for his Enemy, and for one he regardeth not.

2. Secondly, The good Will that is in the Heart will appear before the performance of any Divine Service in a readiness to do it. As if a Man truly loves a Friend, his Love to him is a Preparation in his Heart; and makes it ready to do any thing before he asketh it. And therefore (1 Pet. 5. 2.) They are said to do what they do (if they do it as they ought) out of a ready mind. And though they cannot do always what they would, as Paul complaineth; Rom. 7. yet (says he) at the 18th verse, To will is present with me. And therefore it comes off Willingly, Frankly, and Freely, 1 Cor. 29. 14. Whereas another, though he goes about it yet it is out of Constraint, as Peter speaks, 1 Pet. 5. 2. And that is not only when Worldly and by-ends move a Man, but when Conscience also pricks a Man on to it by legal Motives only: And when the Heart is put upon it, it is sorry, and wincheth, it is sorry that it is propounded So as when it is propounded and urged by Motives drawn from God; That of all Love between him and us, we would do such a Duty; as ever we would do do him a kindness, or shew our Love to him: As ever we have received Mercy from him, or look for Communion with him as a Friend; we should obey him in this or that particular, yet the Heart stirs not for all these, comes not off, until self-Respects strike in; God in this Case thinks himself Denied.

3. Good Will appeareth in the doing of the service to God, 1 John. 5. 3. This is the effect of Love to God, that his Commandments are not grievous; and a Man goes about his Work, as about a Friends business; as Jacob went about Laban's business; when Love to Rachel set him on work, it was not grievous to him; he thought not the time long, because he Loved Her. So any thing we do for God, Love sweetneth to us, 1 Chron. 29. David offered, and he offered willingly, and rejoiced with great Joy in the doing of it, v. 14. And who am I (says he) that I should do it? He thought it a Mercy God would use him, and accept it.

4. It will appear after the performance by two Dispositions. First, Thou wilt think every thing too little that thou dost; as when a Friend sends Presents to one who is a Friend indeed, still he thinks that they are not good enough, and wisheth they were better for his sake. There are two Companies of Men, who seem to have done much for Christ, who shall appear before him at the latter Day: The one thought they had done so much, that they speak of it themselves, Have we not prophesied &c. But the other that had done much more, and out of Love to him, were silent; and not only so, but when Christ took notice of their Love, they were Modest; Wondred at it, were ashamed, as it were; That such poor Services should be spoken of, as not worth the owning. And the reason is, because he that hath Good Will in his Heart to God, still his Heart exceeds his Actions. He doth them out of the Abundance of his Heart, as Christ speaks. As the Woman that gave her Mite, emptied her Purse, but not her Heart, being (as 'tis likely) sorry she had no more to give. And such an one also doing it out of love, and that as answering, and requiting an infinite Love, measuring what is done by both, finds it infinitely too little, not big enough to express his own Love, but much less to answer Gods: And so he is sorry and ashamed it is no better: Whereas, one that doth not do things out of Good Will, thinks every thing enough, that he thinks will but save him. His Heart is less then his Actions, and though by reason of Convictions of what he ought to do, he cannot think it too much, knowing it to be his Duty; yet when he doth it, and afterward, his Heart thinks it much, and grudgeth it.

5. Lastly, In Case of Tryal, when in Temptation poor Souls think all they have done is in vain, this Good Will, will appear, in that they repent not of what they have done, 2 Cor. 7. 9, 10. It is therefore called Repentance never to be Repented of: There can no Case befall them, wherein they do Repent, or are sorry for what they have done; but still wish it had been much better for Gods sake. If he hath had any Glory by it, and if they should be Damned, and not Rewarded, they are contented to give him so much in. Whereas the other, as Suitors when they are out of Hope, send for all their Tokens again, though they pretended much Love; so they did in the Prophet, It is in vain (say they) to serve God, and wherefore have we fasted, and thou seest it not?

C H A P. V.

The Application, or Uses of the Foregoing Doctrine.

I SHALL now shut up this Discourse with what is the Apostles chief Scope in the Text, 2 Cor. 5. 18, 19, 20. Viz. An Use of Exhortation, to befeech Men to be reconciled to God; because Reconciliation imports an having been formerly Enemies; and in that case, it is (as I shewed) necessary for Men to apprehend themselves in a state of Enmity with God, ere they will ever seek out unto God for Peace and Reconciliation, or listen to the true terms of it.

I. I shall therefore in the First place earnestly beseech all Men to Consider whether yet such a work of Reconciliation be wrought in them, yea, or no. And this is a Question the best and greatest Man living, may without offence be intreated to ask his own Heart; and it concerns every Man that will have Reconciliation with God, to do it. To this end I beseech you to Consider that we were once Enemies, that is, in a state of Enmity, and it is not Christs having dyed that altereth that State. You see that the Text supposeth Gods having been in Christ Reconciling the World, when yet the World remaineth unreconciled to God; for upon that supposition he foundeth this Exhortation. Tis true, Christ dyed for us, when we were Enemies, and therein his Love was shewn, Rom. 3. 8. God Commendeth his Love to us, that while we were yet sinners, (and Enemies, as it follows) Christ died for us: Yet withal it is as true, that we remain notwithstanding in that state, until a work of Reconciliation to God is wrought in us, through Christs death, Col. 1. 22. And you that were sometimes Enemies, yet now hath he Reconciled. Nothing is more sure then that we were all once such: And it were well if we had good Reasons to be as sure that now we are not. And the Apostle every where stands upon the important Now, of every Man's Condition; as putting every Man upon the examining his present Condition.

2. And Secondly consider, that this Enmity is seated in your Minds and Natures. You are Enemies in your minds. Rom. 5. 8. Whence therefore it must be acknowledged that there must needs be some great Alteration wrought in your Minds, if God and you be Friends: And thence Consider that therefore it is not Education, or Outward Priviledges, or Deportment in the Church, that either doth alter, or argues your Condition altered. As take a Wolf, a Cubb, that is newly fallen from the Dam, which is as we know in its nature an Enemy to a Lamb, tho' you put it into a Lambs Skin, and bring it up with the Sheep in the same Fold, and feed it with the same Food, yet still it will remain a Wolf, and an Enemy to a Lamb: Such is our woful Case, being born in our Natures Enemies to God, though immediately when we fell from the Womb, we had a Christians Ear-mark given us, were trained up in a Christian Profession, and have been ever since fed with the same word, &c. yet we are Enemies still, if there be no more alteration in us. It was the Case of Simon Magus, Acts 8. 23. I perceive thou art still in the Gall of bitterness. And v. 21
Thou

Thou hast neither Lot nor Part in this matter, Though he had been Baptized &c. And tho' an Innocent and harmless Carriage in the World be added to this, yet this will not argue your Estates to be altered, for a Wolf may be so tamed, that it shall not do much hurt: For every Beast hath and may be tamed, as James saith Jam. 3. 7. Every Kind of Beasts and of Birds, and of Serpents, and Things in the Sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed of Mankind. And if Mankind can tame Beasts, their Inward Natural Disposition remaining, but restrained; God can do the like, and much more, to the Hearts and Spirits of men, without changing of them. Thou mayst be a tame Wolf, be Chained up from ranging and devouring, and yet still remain an Enemy: For remember that this enmity is seated in thy Mind and Nature. That your Hearts are not filled with so much Gall, as to carry you on to evil works, doth not argue you Friends and reconciled; if withal they be not seasoned with so much good will to God, as to make you Zealous of good works. Tit. 2. 14. Meer Neuters (if you could be such) are no Friends. God accounts them Enemies, Matt. 21. 30. He that is not with me, is against me, says Christ, our Supream Judge.

3. Neither, Thirdly, is it a forward Profession of what is outwardly good, added to your Inward Carriage, which will argue you to be Friends; for Flatterers may abound in outward Kindnesses, as well as Friends, Isa. 58. 2. You see a Company there to mention Kindnesses to God, whom God regards not: For 'tis with God herein, as with great Men, who have many Flatterers, but few Friends, as Solomon expresseth it, Prov. 19. 6. Many intreat the Favour of the Prince &c. because of Gifts, and will be Friends (that is seem to be) to him that giveth Gifts. And thus also God having great gifts in his hand to give away, Heaven &c. and the Keys of Death and Hell at his Girdle; he hath many who do seek and earnestly entreat his Favour, out of such respects and ends; and apprehensions strongly set on upon their Hearts, who yet do but flatter him. Therefore trust to none of these, but love to have such a work of true Reconciliation wrought in you, as hath been spoken of. Which, if there be, The before mention'd dispositions of pure good will, will be sooner or later bubbling up in your hearts. In brief therefore, take the help and benefit of all those particulars to examine your Estates by, and try whether such a work hath been wrought in you.

1. Consider, whether thou, having first apprehended thy Enmity against God, thou wert therewithal brought to know God anew, and his Son; and knowing him, didst fall in love with him, (and All that ever yet have known him, have loved him) not with such a Love only, as we bare to some Hero, that doth great and noble things; Or to our dead Founders, whom we speak well of, and Commend their Doings, although we never knew them but by Tradition. (and such at best is the Common Love to God and Christ, which men bear to them) But so to know and love him, as to be enamoured with him, As one in Love useth to be with the Person he sets his Affections on. Doth thy Heart burn after him, when thou seest a Glimpse of him but passing by thee; or to use the Phrase in Job, Art acquainted with him? Job 22, 21. Hath he imparted any Secrets to thee as to his Friends he doth, John 15. 15? Hath he shewed and manifested himself to thee, (John 14. 20.) if not in assurance of his Love to thee, yet in the Goodness that is in himself? Tho' thou hast seen him but as through the Lattice, (as the Church did Cant. 5.) yet canst thou never be at quiet till thou seest him again? Hath thy Heart been divorced from all other Lovers upon acquaintance with him? Hast thou chosen him, and dost thou seek him for ever? And for what hast thou chosen him, and why dost thou seek him? Good-Will looks especially at the Person, not the Fortunes (as you call them) I seek not Yours, but You, is the Language of a Friend. Alexander had Two Friends, the One he called φιλοβασιλευς, A Lover of the King; the Other φιλαλέξανδρος, A Lover of Alexander; as being a Lover of his Person and Dispositions. So many profess to love Christ, yet do it only as he is a Saviour, And their Judge, and King of Heaven and Hell. They love him not as Christ, not for that which God chiefly loves him for, namely, because he is his Natural Son, his Image, the Express Image of his Person. Nor do they love him as Christ, that is, as anointed with the Spirit, and all the Graces thereof, full of Grace and Truth above measure. For which yet the Virgins are said to love him. Cant. 1. 3. Because of the savour of thy Oynments, they love thee: And that, as Virgins, with a pure and chaste Affection to himself, with a Savour of his Graces, Sweetness, and Perfumes thereof. Is it the Holiness, the Amiability, the Love, the Goodness, that is in him, which draws thy Heart unto him? What says Paul, Phil. 3. 7, 8, 9. But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss, for the excellency of the Knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: For whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but Dung, that I may win Christ, and be found in him, not having mine own Righteousness, which is of the Law, but that which is through the Faith of Christ, the Righteousness which is of God by Faith. Observe it, he had suffered the loss of all for the Excellency of the Knowledge of Christ Jesus his Lord: and Counted them dross in Comparifon of the Knowledge of him. And his great desire was, that he might win Christ and be found in him, his person first: And then to be found in him, not having his own Righteousness.

Again, Of all the things, which he hath to bestow, or that is in him, what is the thing thou especially seekest for, and shalt never rest satisfied or contented without it? Is it his love, his Favour, to have his Heart towards thee, his delight set upon thee, to enjoy his Presence, his Face, to live with him for ever? And desirest thou to be happy thy self, that he may greatly delight in thy Beauty; and that thereby thou mightest be suited to him, and so mightest come to delight in him; and this in such a manner as nothing else will satisfy thee, neither pardon, nor Christ's death, with addition of all the World, if it could be separated from the Favour of God, would not Content thee?

Again, Dost thou Choose the things that please him? And what pleaseth him most, dost thou choose most? As a man useth to do his Friend, whom he affects to please: As because thou hearest Faith pleaseth him (Heb. 11.) because a broken heart pleaseth him (Psal. 51.) glorifying him more then thousands of Rams (Psal. 50.) because private prayer pleaseth him (as himself declared, Let me hear thy Voice, it is pleasant, Cant. 2. 14.) Because Thanksgiving pleaseth him more than thousands of Rams (Psal. 69. 31.) Do all these things therefore, delight thy Soul? Because the Sabbath is his delight, and honourable to him, that is, for his honour; is it therefore thy delight, and dost thou call it Honourable? Isa. 58. 13, 14. Because the Saints please him, and are his delight; are they therefore thine? Psal. 16. 2. In a word, take all Ordinances, dost thou use them as Back-doors to let Christ thy private friend in, to the end to speak with him, and to enjoy Communion with him? Doth thy heart upon that Account value the word thou readest or hearest, as a private Letter sent from a dearest Friend? Dost thou think of going to the Sacrament, as of going to a Friend's house to supper Rev. 3. 20.? In like manner dost thou regard Private Prayer, as an opportunity of speaking privately and alone with a Friend in Secret?

And again, in thy doing what pleaseth him, what is it setteth thee in thy constant Course awork? Is it his Love that setteth thee a work, and Constrains thee, 2 Cor. 5. 14. Or if not the sense of that, yet is it a desire to please him? And when thou dost it for him, dost go about it, as about a Friends business, not coldly, but so as to do it to purpose with all thy Might, serving him with all thy strength? Grudgest thou if thy Lusts or corrupt Affections do get any of thy Spirits, so that they are not spent for him, and upon him? Thinkest thou all this to be no trouble to thee? Art glad when thou canst do him a kindness, that is, any thing, which he may be pleased to accept? Thinkest thou that day best spent, wherein thou canst do him most Service? Yea, most of all thankest him, that thou hast a Heart to do it? As David did, 1 Chron. 29. 14. And when thou hast done all, thou yet still fall'st down as an Unprofitable Servant, and unuseful Friend. Thinkest thou that 'tis all too little, and confessest still, this and that is not good enough, so as thou couldest find in thy Heart to do over all again? Wait never yet (and that out of Love, not not Conviction only) satisfied with the best Prayer that ever thou madest? Art ashamed of the performance in any kind? Yet because it is thy best he hath enabled thee to do, thou desirest him to take it in good part; but not at, or in thine own Name, because of thine Unworthiness, but for his Sons, thy Christ's sake. Dost thou not find that thou hatest also, where he hateth? Whether it be Sinners, or Persons as cloathed with Sins. Dost thou hate those that hate God? P^{sa}. 139. 21, 22. Do not I hate them, O Lord, that hate thee? And am I not Grieved with those that rise up against thee? I hate them with perfect hatred. I count them mine Enemies. And as for sins, canst thou say (as David) I hate every false way? And that (as he says there) out of prizing all Gods precepts in all things to be right, P^{sa}. 119. 127, 128. And when it falls out that thou dost sin against him that is so good, canst thou yet in truth say, I do what I hate, Rom. 7. And then what is it in sin thou hatest most? Is it because thou feelest thy Heart turned (as it were) within thee? Saying, as 2 Sam. 16. 16. Is this thy kindness to thy Friend? Shall I do my God, my Friend this wrong? Shall, or should I so evilly or unthankfully requite God? Or dost thou hate sin, because it breaks Communion betwixt God and thee? And when thou hast thus sinned; art thou never quiet, till thou hast returned, and God and thou art Friends again? And returnest thou again to him, not as healed by Conscience, into his presence; and so stayest not till an Arrest come forth for thee, or be served upon thee. And until thou art fetch'd in by Terrors, or Afflictions only (though sometimes these are needful) but returnest thou out of a Longing and Lingring after him; as one without whom thou canst no longer live, no not in this World, where thou hast so many things to comfort thee? From whom to be estranged, is it bitter as Death to thee? So that during all that space of distance from him, when thou but hearest or thinkest of him, thy Heart glows within thee, burns after him, and in the End thou resolvedly comest to say; I can no longer bear this Life, I must return to him again whom my Soul Loves, for then it was better with me than now, Hof. 2. 7. I never enjoyed good hour, since I wickedly and foolishly forsook him. And then when thou comest again into his Presence, what is it broacheth thy Heart, and makes it gush? Is it thy Unkindness to him, doth that Dissolve and Melt thy Heart, confound and overcome thee, stop thy Mouth, so as at first thou canst do nothing but sit in silence with thy Mouth in the dust, laying that most to Heart which God lays most to Heart. If it had been an Enemy he could have born it: But that thou his Friend, καὶ σὺ τὸν ἑχθρὸν, dost it, is intolerable. Thou who wast once a perfect and utter Enemy unto him as ever was, and yet seeing the Misery and Danger of that Condition; and having heard of his Loving Kindness, Grace and Mercy, wast sweetly drawn in, won, and allured, by himself too, to seek his Favour and Friendship more then Life: And he as Graciously also Condescended to entertain a Treaty with thee about it; gave thee many Hopes and Evidences of his Favour, which thou hast prized more than Life; and thou wast even then when this unhappy Lust betrayed thee, and carried thee Captive, upon the very point of obtaining the assurance of his Love from him. Or suppose (I speak to one who hath obtained assurance from him) That thou wentest as Saul, seeking after Asses, a World of Vanities, and yet even then hast found thy self in the Ambushment of an Infinite and Everlasting Love, surrounding thee without the possibility of Escape from it. That thou who hast received all this, shouldst use God thus, what base ingratitude is it? Well and yet further, when thou hast come in to him again, and again, (for this is not the first or second time that thou hast served him so) and when thou didst expect nothing but Frowns, if not Rejection by him; Lo, he hath fallen upon thy Neck, ere thou hadst half spoke out thy requests unto him with trembling Heart and Lips; and lo, he fell upon thy Neck and kissed thee, and Wept Love, Eternal Love, and the Blood of his dearest Love into thy Bosom, faster than thou couldst pour Tears into his. And instantly he bid fetch the best Robe in all his Ward-Robe, that never yet was put on upon Angels

Backs,

Backs, Woven by his Son, and appointed by himself, and told thee he had reserved it by him for thee, from Everlasting, and that all were Friends again, and 'twould be so for Ever. And he left only this kind Sting behind, that he told thee, that thou wouldst yet sin again as thou hadst done before, and so thou hast. And hath not, doth not this yet more melt thee, and cause the Tide of Godly Sorrow, to swell yet higher as it did in Peter? A good Look of Christ made him, go out, and Weep bitterly. And when God hath used thee thus kindly, only bid thee take heed of returning to Folly any more. Didst thou, after that, fear his Goodness more then ever thou didst his Anger? Weepst, if others do see thee, or thou seest others sin? Do, or have Rivers of Tears fallen down thine Eyes, because Men keep not his Law? as David speaks, Psal. 119. But how remote are such Dispositions as these from the Hearts of the most of Men, even of those, who yet profess themselves as great and good Friends to God, as any? And if for want of such or like dispositions to these, so many will be found Enemies (for Christ hath said it, he that is not with me is against me) where shall you that are opposers of God and Goodness, and mockers of Holiness; you that are secret Maintainers and Flatterers of Bosom-Sins, of Uncleaness and Worldliness in your own Hearts, strangers from God and the Life of God; not subject to the Law of God; and to the multitude of Duties he requireth; Not calling upon God (as the Psalmist speaks) where will you appear? I have ransackt your Hearts; let me now prosecute my begun Exhortation afresh. I beseech therefore all those, that shall have the least beam of Light darted into their Hearts by these Considerations, to Consider with themselves what to do.

For Consider; how nearly it concerns you to be reconciled to God. For know that He is angry with you every day (Psal. 7. 11.) though he says nothing. And if thou turn not, He will whet his Sword, and prepare Instruments of Death. Unhear'd of Tortures are a preparing; Therefore it behoves us to enquire in what terms we stand with God. That King in the Parable (Luke 14. 31.) hearing that a Foreign Prince provoked, was making war against him, sat down and considered whether he were able to encounter him. And I beseech you so to do. Whoever went on against him and prospered? Do we provoke the Lord to Jealousie, are we stronger than he? 1 Cor. 10. 22. If I speak of strength (saith Job) there is no dealing with him, submitting to him, for he is strong Job 9. 19. What is weakness in God, is stronger than the strength of men, 1 Cor. 1. 25. What is weaker then a man's Breath, which can scarce blow away a Straw; and yet by the breath, of his Countenance we are Consumed, Job 4. 9. It was but a word, but a breath that made the World; and we are but as the dust of the Ballance (Isa. 40. 15.) soon blown away. He is wise and also strong (so Job saith) And therefore consider withal, that there is no way of escaping, but by sending out for Conditions of Peace: So in the Parable (Luke 14. v. 32.) That was the Issue of that Kings Consultations; That when he found that his Enemy had prepared against him, and would be too hard for him, He sends out his Conditions of Peace. And withal, let me tell you this for your Comfort, have any of you a mind to make Peace with him? Then be assured he will be at Peace with you. The Text 2 Cor. 5. 18. brings the news of it; God was in Christ (hath made it his business) reconciling the World. And contrary to the Use and Custom, sends Embassages to us to be reconciled unto him: And lo his Earnestness; All things are of God who hath reconciled us to himself. If ever God was earnest or serious in all or any thing, he is in this, Isa. 27. 4, 5. Fury is not in me: Who would set the Briars and Thorns against me in Battle? I would go through them, I would burn them together. Or let him take hold of my strength, that he may make Peace with me, and he shall make Peace with me. Tho' he be strong, yet as it is there, Let a man take hold of his strength. Take hold of that Arm, which if lifted up in fury, all the whole Creation cannot stay, or Rule it. And he shall make Peace with me, (says God.) Yea all the Power which is in him shall be turned for you, and shewn in pardoning you. Only let the Bryars and Thorns, (Heb. 6) Sinners that go on in their Sins, and set them-themselves in battle-array against him; let them look to themselves, for I will go through them (says God) and burn them together. v. 4.

Cap. 4.

And therefore, take Amos his Counsel, Amos 4. 12. That seeing he will surely do thus unto thee unless thou turn, prepare to meet thy God, as that King did in the Parable: And as Abigail did, when She heard that David was coming on in Fury. Throw away your Weapons; Cast away your Transgressions; why will you die? Do as Shimei to David, seeing he will overcome; Go forth to meet him, and put your selves into his hands; 2 Sam. 19. 20. Thy Servant knows (saith he) that I have sinned; So I am come to meet the Lord my King. This overcame David, though Egg'd on by Servants for to kill him. David was overcome by it, being an Ingenuous man, much more it will prevail with God, a God of all mercy. The truth is, he desires but to be acknowledged to be God, both in Damning and Saving: To overcome and to be justified, when he is judged; which he is, when he is submitted unto. Do I not know that I am King this day? (saith David) Giving a reason why he pardoned him, v. 20. Thus also, when Benhadad was in Ahab's Power (1 Kings 20.) his Servants advised him, to send Messengers unto him, with Ropes about their Necks, and to put on Sackcloth; thereby to acknowledge, he might hang them up if he pleased; for they, and their King were in his Power, if so it pleased him to deal with them: Only they knew the Kings of Israel, were merciful Kings; and so they came, and put themselves into his hands, and humbly sought him, running by his Chariot side, waiting if any word of hope and encouragement might fall from him. And thus they obtain not of a David, but of an Ahab; an hard hearted Ahab: And if this King of Israel (the worst of them) were thus merciful; what is the God of Israel? The God and Father of mercies!

Go home therefore, and fall down upon thy Knees; and with a Heart broken and dissolved to Water, acknowledge thy Treasons, Rebellions, and Injuries against him, who never did thee Hurt; Yea, who hath never ceased to do thee good; Yea, who hath striven with an unwearied patience, to soften and overcome this strong and stout Rebellion. Lay open all thy sins, and spread all thy bold and bloody Transgressions, as a Scrol before him; set over each their Accents and Aggravations. Point every Confession with tears, and sighs: Rip up thy Heart and Life: Say it is Thou who hast polluted the Earth; Sinned against Heaven and Him that sits therein; And art altogether unworthy of the name, much more of the priviledge of a Son: That thou hast forfeited thy Creation, and deservest not to be called a Creature. Acknowledge thy crime with self loathing and self Condemnation, as with a Rope put about, and ready fitted to thy neck by thine own hand, as Benhadad's Servants did. Say to God, that if he will destroy thee, he may: And if he doth, he shall need no other Judge to Condemn thee, but thy self: No other Indictment then this thy free Confession, made of thine own Accord. And to shew that he needeth not to send for thee, and hale thee to Execution, say, Thou freely presentest thy self to him. And referring thy self to him, say, as David did, 2 Sam. 15. 26. If thou hast not Pleasure in me, do with me as seemeth good to thee. Yet withal, bemoan thy self to him, as Ephraim is said to do, Jer. 29. Confess thou hast perverted that which is right, and it hath not profited thee at all: That thou hast wearied thy self in the ways of sin, and hast run away from him days without number, who is thy Fountain of life: And that it was never well with thee, since thou didst forsake him. Yea, that thou hast destroyed thy self, to do him Injury, in whom alone thy help is to be found. And falling down yet lower, tell him, That now thy life depends upon his breath: That he is that Law-giver who alone is able to save thee, or condemn thee. A word of his saves Thee, and it may condemn Thee. And above all, get thy heart to melt for thy unkindness to him: Say, that though thou hadst never been the better for the Goodness that is in him, or shouldest never hope to be, yet to wrong him, Who is a God, that is so great, and yet withal so good, that hath Infinite Glory joynd with Holiness, Riches of Grace, Mercy with so much much power; that is so able to destroy, and so willing to forgive; is that most grieves thee. That thou shouldest kick against him in whom thou livest, and movest, and hast thy being: At whose Expence and Charges it hath been, thou hast hitherto been maintained: And yet to no other end, but to sin against him: say to him, That 'tis this thought which wounds thy Soul, Acknowledge that thou hast already spent him Millions of Riches of Patience, and Long-suffering, and all to no other fruit or purpose but to offend him: And of all which, thou canst give him no other Account, but Millions of sins and Injuries returned against him. And besides this vast Expence of the Common stock of Mercy, common to others with thee, thou hast neglected and despised the offer of as much Mercy as were sufficient to save all the Devils (if they were capable of it) And if he yet pardon thee, thou must cost him yet much more, than thou hast already spent him; the Mercies of Eternity, the Soul-blood of his Son, which Blood and Mercy is what thou art now a suing for. And after all this, thou must be beholden to that free Grace, thou hast all this while been sinning against and despising; or thou art undone: And none but everlasting, unchangeable, and sure Mercies will serve thy turn. Thy Transgressions and Rebellions and Corruptions are of that extent, that less Mercy will not reach or hold out to pardon thee, but fall short of what thou owest; which Mercies if yet thou obtainest not, it is not for want of good Will in God, but from hardness of heart in thee to Him, yea to thy Self. And let this Consideration further make thy heart to gush and bleed, and strike thee down into the deepest Confusion, never to look up again, but with Shame and Sorrow; but yet tell him, that if thou couldest yet find in thy heart truly to turn to him, he can find enough and-enough (to an overflowing) in his heart to be at Peace with thee.

Thus goe and take words unto thy self, as He himself directs thee, in Hof. 14. 2. He will be sought to, and he loves to be entreated. It is Melody in his Ears to hear a poor Soul bemoan it self unto him. Soft Words pacifie Wrath, (Pro 15. 1.) much more stirrs Bowels of Mercy. His heart cannot hold out against such VOLLIES of Tears and Cries from a Heart that is broken. Turn all thou hast heard or read about Reconciliation on his part, into Motives and Arguments to move him to shew mercy unto thee. Tell him it is true, it is in his power to shew his Justice on thee if he will, and that thou art freely come to present thy Naked Breast to him as a Butt that deserves to be shot at, and he might spend his Arrows on thy hateful Soul, or sneath his Sword in it, only desire him to remember, before he doth it, that it is the same Sword which he once thrust into his Son's Bowels, when it pleased him to put him to Grief, and make his Soul an Offering for sin. And when thou hast said it, shut thine eyes and trust him. And oh! wash, bathe and plunge thy Soul in that Fountain which he then opened. Beseech him to Consider, that He himself found out a way to pacifie himself for sin; such a way as thou and all the Angels should have trembled to have thought of, and couldest not have believed, but that himself hath done it and revealed it: Yea, and that he himself, unbespoken to by thee, or any of us of Mankind, sought to his Son to be Mediator, when thou hadst no being. And say to him, Lord, wilt thou not now accept it, when He hath performed it at thine own request, and when it is sought for at thy hands? Further tell him, that as the motion came first from himself to his Son, so from himself first to thee: That thou shouldest never have had the Face or Heart, or Will, to have sought him thus; but that he first set thee a work, spake to thy hard heart, won, and allured thy Soul to trust, by what thou hearest of his love, which hath so taken thy heart, that now thou canst never part with it. He doth beseech thee by us to be reconciled to him; and though he doth it by us, yet he would have come himself, but that he is to appear in Heaven to intercede. Urge him, that there are but a few in the World, that do seek to be reconciled to him, and if he should turn any away that do, he would have fewer. Who would fear him if there were not mercy in him, and plenteous Redemption? And thou mayst wax yet bolder, according to what you heard out of Job 33. and other Scriptures. Thou hast heard by his Messengers, those who have been sent to thee by himself, of an Infinite and all-sufficient Righteousness in his Son, laid up in him also by his

his own procurement, and be trusted with him for the bestowing of it upon those that should come to him for it: Whereupon he hath said v. 26. I will render to man his Righteousness. Put this in suit, for it is but as in trust committed to him; and plead that he received it to that very end to, give it forth to them that sue for it. And he hath therefore said that when any one Soul draws nigh unto the Grave (as thine doth now) and a Messenger from him shews to him, and gives him this Righteousness (Job 32. 23.) and that thereupon if he pray unto him, he will be favourable, and he shall see his Face with joy: And that he will say, Deliver him, I have found a Ransom, for he will render to man his Righteousness, v. 26. Go sue for it therefore as thine; pray, and plead thou thus, and he cannot deny thee.

But if it be objected against thee, that 'tis true these things are in him, but thou art a Sinner, an Enemy: Say thou then that if this Objection stand good, his Son must be in Heaven alone, and none of Mankind must be there with him, No Man must stand in his sight. Say, Thou hast heard, that to take away Sins was the main Design of the Covenant of Grace; and had it not been that he meant to save Sinners; he needed not have pitcht on the Course of saving men by his Son; for he might have Created New Friends cheaper: But that he knew the saving an Enemy would shew more love. If the greatness of thy sins be urged upon thy Conscience, say, All Fulness dwells in his Son; A fulness, and all fulness of merit above what thy sins can reach to. If, that these sins have been Continued in by thee, these many years: Urge that this Fulness dwells in his Son, and hath done so, longer than sin hath done in thee. But if he say, Yea, but those I do save, believed, and repented: Ask him, Who gave them that Repentance, and that Faith? Didst not thou, O Lord? By Grace ye are saved, through Faith, Eph. 2. 8. And that Faith is not of our selves neither; It is the Gift of God; Which beseech him therefore to work in thee.

Come thus with a true heart to him; for thou must draw near to him, as with Confidence of being accepted, so with a true heart; for both are joyned together, Heb. 10. 22. Wherefore I take the meaning to be (in opposition to a false disloyal and trayterous heart) to signify such a heart as for the future resolves to be true to him, even as one Friend would or ought to be to another; or as thou wouldest be to thy self: A heart truly loving him, resolving to keep thy self chaste and true to him alone. Even as the Spouse that had played the Whore with many Lovers in former times, and now returns woing and suing to her Husband, not only for to pardon her, but to love her, and to receive her again with a Conjugal Love, and to let her enjoy Communion and Fellowship with him, as a Wife doth with a Husband, from whom she had been so long time estranged. Do thou seriously and truly resolve to let go all Whorish and Carnal Friendship, with other Lovers, as the World, and all things therein, which had enticed thy heart away from God. Come also with a true heart, resolving to be Loyal and Faithful to him, as a Subject to a Lawful Prince; submitting to all his Laws for ever, hating and standing out against every sin as an utter Enemy: Being for him and for his Glory: having respect to him in all your Actions (as you would have such a regard to one you love more dearly than your selves, whom it grieves you to displease, and in Comparison of holding whose Friendship, you count not your Life precious or dear unto you) fully submitting to his Commanding and Condemning Will: Standing out in nothing, Resolving to give up thy self in the deepest Services of doing or suffering whatsoever he shall set thee about: Resolving to be nothing for thy self, but to be all to him, and true to him as thou wouldest be to thy self. All this, I take it, is meant by a true heart: And this it is, to be reconciled. Now sue thus, and continue suing, and all the Saints in Heaven must yet be Condemned, if ever thou art; for they came thither no other way than thus. But without this, though not for this (for God accepts freely) an Husband would never accept his Adulterous Wife (though she flubbered never so much) except he saw she resolved to live now true and chaste to him: No more will God receive, except he sees in thee such holy Resolutions. And though man may be deceived, yet God searcheth the hearts, and cannot be deceived.

Only in the last place, as the Conclusion of all; see thou dost this presently, and not defer it a whit; and this the nature of Reconciliation requires of thee. For that Reconciliation which shall be accepted, must proceed out of good will to God, as hath been spoken. So as when a man returns, he mourns that he hath stood out, and been an Enemy so long: And that he came in no sooner. And therefore if thou sayst now, after all this urging, that thou wilt reconcile thy self hereafter, it argues thou intendest not to do it in truth of heart, so as God should accept thee. For if thou afterwards comest out of necessity, thou suest (as Esau did) with Tears, yet thou shalt not be accepted, as he was not. If a bare submission would serve thy turn, though unfeigned, thou mightest defer, and make thy Peace afterwards: But it being to be Reconciliation, it requires absolutely the present time. No time so fit as now, deferring argues Enmity. An Enemy will submit to an Enemy, when he is cast into a strait as Shimei did; but a Friend will return of himself.

And besides, secondly Let this thought move you, Shall God and Christ have busied themselves about your Reconciliation from Everlasting; and spent an Eternity of Thoughts upon it, and will you defer to think of it till the hour of Death, or Sicknes? Hath God made this his first work, and Master-piece? And do you make Repentance to be your refuse work, to be done at your cast-away leisure? Hath it took up the delights of the great God, hath he been so forward in it; and must you be haled and forced to it? And if that will not move you; Consider the danger of Delays. Agree with thine Adversary (says Christ) while thou art in the way. God now in this Life, offers to deal with thee upon terms of Friendship, but if once thou comest before the Judge (as Christ says) and so before God, as a Judge, will he regard any Ransom? Will he then come to any Composition? No, he will not rest Content (as Solomon saith) though thou givest him many Gifts. Or if thou shouldst then obtain thy Peace, yet it would be upon harder Conditions than now, ten thousand times. Learn Wisdom of him in the Parable (Luke 14. 31.) who when he saw he was not able to encounter with his Enemy, he sent to him for Conditions of Peace, whilst he was yet afar off (the Text says) for he knew that if he deferred till the Enemy came nigher, with his Armies of thy sins and his wrath, and sat down before the Walls, he would hardly be brought to remove his Siege; and if so, yet upon harder Conditions, if at all. Now his coming against thee may be nigher than thou art aware. This night, (it may be) the Judge stands at the door, says James. Yet suppose Judgement be deferred, and the Judge to be afar off, yet it is the safest way, to send out speedily, and to sue for Conditions of Peace. For when God's wrath hath begirt thee round about at the day of Death or Sicknes, it will be more difficult by far, if at all thou dost obtain it.

God may shoot at thee suddenly, and at one shoot, at one blow, kill thee as he did the Sons of Ely, and cut thee off, ere thou hast time even to do that which thou thinkest will serve the turn, which yet will not. For it is not bare Submission, but Reconciliation; not necessitated, but free, and voluntary, proceeding out of good will, that must be the Condition of thy Peace. Observe Shimei's Policy, and follow his Example; who when he heard that David was settled in his Kingdom, and so knew he had Power to crush him, he being Conscious of his Rebellion, came in voluntarily, and was the first of the Rebels that submitted, and so got his Peace. So do thou, do it now, and be glad and thankful if God will yet, after this long time of Rebellion, accept thee again.

 OF THE
 (THE Third Person of the TRINITY)

BOOK IV.

Of the Work which the Holy Spirit Effecteth in us, as it is Express'd under the Notion of our being Begotten unto God, and of a New Birth; from which the necessity of Regeneration is farther demonstrated. Of the nature of the thing Begotten in us, as it is set forth under the Notion of Spirit. John 3. 6.

C H A P. I.

The Necessity of the New Birth demonstrated, and the Nature of it describ'd, from the Notion of our Being begotten unto God, 1 Pet. 1. 3, 4, 5.

1 P E T. I. 3, 4, 5.

V. 3. Blessed be the God, and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead,

V. 4. To an Inheritance Incorruptible, and Undeiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in Heaven for you.

V. 5. Who are kept by the Power of God, through Faith unto Salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time.

THE Believers whom Peter Wrote to, were stranger-Jews, cast out and dispersed from their own Land and Inheritances (as v. 1. insinuates) and he being the Apostle of the Circumcision, and so the Jews being committed to him, as his proper Flock (as Paul was the Apostle of the Gentiles, or Uncircumcision, Gal. 2. 7.) To comfort them against this their dispersion, he puts them in mind of another and greater Inheritance, which also by a Birth higher and diviner than that of theirs from Abraham, who gave them right to the other Inheritance in Canaan, was estated on them. Who (i. e. God, saith he) hath begotten us to an Inheritance, &c. The Carnal Jew boasted of his birth from Abraham, as that whereby also they challenged God to be their Father, John 8. from the 33. to the 45. And when they had occasion to bless God for any Eminent Mercy, their Form of Blessing was, Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, &c. Psal. 72. 18. But Peter, under the New Testament, instructs them, that instead of glorying they had Abraham to their Father, they should rejoyce and glory in this, that they were begotten again of God, and of the Incorruptible Seed, the Spirit of God, v. 23. And so John Baptist the Son of that Zachary in the early Times of the Gospel taught them, John 1. 12, 13. Compared with Luke 3. 8. and by that Birth they became a Choice Generation indeed, as our Peter speaks in his Second Chapter.

Again, Instead of entituling God by the name of God of Israel, Peter in the New Testament teacheth them to entitle and bless him now as the God and Father of Jesus Christ, and to view him upon that account, as become a God and Father unto them. And Lastly, instead of boasting of their Canaan, their so Antient Inheritance, from which these Saints of that Nation were now cast out, and the whole Nation was to follow them soon after his Death; He instructs them to solace themselves with a Lively Hope of an Inheritance far better seated and conditioned: An Inheritance Incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in Heaven for you: Which their New Birth had given them right unto. And this is the more special Aspect and Coherence of those words.

I have no further design upon this Text in the opening of it, then what it offers to us concerning Regeneration; which done, I shall leave it, and pass to another that speaks of other things about it. This Text will put us upon the Consideration of Two things concerning it:

1. Why it is termed or called a Begetting, as elsewhere a being born again, and what that Metaphor eminently imports, and instructs in it about it.
2. The Necessity of it, as without which God shews us no Mercy; we can have no hopes or title to this Inheritance.

1. Why is it called Birth, or being Begotten? I shall not prosecute the Metaphor, but chiefly insist on it to shew the Nature of the thing Begotten.

1. It is called a being born again, to shew that it conveys an Image, or Likeness of the Begetter. Men are said to make many things, which are not like themselves; as Artificers do: But they are not said to beget any thing which bears not in specie their own Likeness. The first Adam had an Image to convey to his Seed: Therefore Gen. 5. 3. it is said Adam begat Seth after his own Image and Likeness: So Christ, the Second Adam, hath also an Image to convey unto them that are his (1 Cor. 15. 49.) therefore the way of conveying it is called a Birth, and he a Father, Coloss. 3. 10. The New man is renewed after the Image of him that created him, namely at first; it being for substance the same, which (as it follows) is to be like God and Christ in those Gracious Dispositions which he shews to be in himself in his Dealings towards us: So v. 12, 13. Put on therefore, as the Elect of God, Bowels of Mercies, Kindness, Humbleness of Mind, Meekness, Long-Suffering: Forbearing one another, and Forgiving one another, if any man have a Quarrel against any; even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. As if he had said: As the Elect of God, and chosen of God to be his Children, be like unto him; and Christ, So also be you: Or (as our Peter expelleth, it 1 Pet. 1. 15. 16.) Be Holy as he is Holy. Now God's Holiness lieth in Two things: 1. In the things he willeth and Commandeth us. 2. In making his own Glory his own End: Therefore the Image of God in us, must lye in these Two things:

1. A Conformity, or Frame of Spirit, suited unto the things he Commandeth or willeth; as the Piece is to the Pattern. 1 Thes. 4. 2, 3. For ye know what Commandments mandments we gave you, by the Lord Jesus. For this is the will of God, even your Sanctification. That is, your Sanctification lies in a Conformity to his Will, and that Will of his as expressed in his Commands.

2. In having God's Glory set up in our hearts as our own utmost End, and as the Square, and Measure of all our Affections, and Actions, &c. (as self-love was before, in us) and the one to be made as Co-natural to us, as self-love once was. This is Holiness, and it can be no other or further thing, even as in God himself it is not: It being that in him, which forms, orders, disposeth, guides, directs, acts all for himself, and swallows up all into himself. Now in the Creature, Holiness the likeness of what is in Himself, and so it is a disposition to be for God, even as God is for Himself, Therefore what ever is good or excellent in the Creature, of what kind soever of Gifts of Righteousness, it falling short of the Glory of God, it becomes sin. So saith the Apostle (Rom. 3. 23.) setting forth in a summary conclusion the sinfulness of man's nature as fallen from God, to which he had spoken v. 10, 11. As it is written, There is none Righteous, no not one. There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God; that is, there is none that aimeth at or setteth up God as his chiefest End, or seeks after him as his chiefest Good; and so they fall short of the Glory of God, and his Image, in which at first they were created. To be born again and to become a Christian, is to make God's Interest my own for ever. It is the fundamental Law of Regeneration, and the first enacted in the Heart, and is general to all Believers, that are truly such: So Paul says, Rom. 14. 7, 8. For none of us liveth unto himself, and no man dieth unto himself. For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: Whether we live therefore or die, we are the Lords. None of us, that is, of us, that are true Christians, though other men are guided by other Principles. Yea, and observe his Inference, it is therefore that we are the Lord's, because we are in both Life and Death for the Lord. Thus it is the Image of God that is Begotten, and although the New Creature may have many other Workings and Stirrings of heart divers ways, in humblings for sin, sight of a man's Natural Condition, which are as the Films in which the New Creature is enwrapped, yet this is the Birth, the substance of what is Begotten; and all the other tend unto it. It is the Image of God's Holiness Limb, for Limb.

II. This work of Grace, and the Image of God wrought in us, is termed a Begetting, to shew that it is made a Nature in us, as that Image stamp't on us by Birth is said to be, and as all Dispositions which we have by Birth, are said to be Natural. To have a thing by Birth and by Nature, is all one in Phrase of speech; so to be blind by Nature, signifies that which is so by Birth. Hence this work, which in the Scriptures cited hath been termed the Image of God, is by our Peter termed the Divine Nature, (2 Pet. 1. 4.) Nature, for its manner of Inherency, as Natural Dispositions use to be inherent in us; Divine, for its tendency and Quality, as that which bears a likeness to God's Nature, and which carries the Soul up to him as Nature doth us, unto what is suitable thereto. And that by Divine Nature, which some would raise up to a higher Sublimation of Participation of the Essence of God, there is meant such Divine, Holy Dispositions wrought in us, is clear by it's Opposite there mentioned by Peter, in those words, Having escaped the Corruption that is in the rest of the World through Lust. Corruption through lust, is that which is destroyed: And as you usually say, that Corruptio unius est generatio alterius; so here, the Corruption of this Corruption, is the Production of the New Creature. Now the Corruption that is in all Mankind through Lust, is the Corrupt Dispositions and Inclinations to evil, which are natural unto us; this is Corrupt Nature, as we use to say. The Divine Nature is the contrary hereto, which because freely given, is indeed called Grace, but yet becomes a New Nature to a man begotten, and according as the Spirit acts it, it puts forth it self in Dispositions in manner like to those which are natural, as will appear by bringing James's words to Peter, Chap. 2. 5, 6. The spirit that is in, us lusteth to envy; but God giveth more Grace. That is, whereas the Natural Spirit that is in us, puts forth it self in lustings; and Dispositions to envy, and it doth it naturally: God gives Grace or Holiness, to lust after Meekness, Humility: And the one after a man is regenerated is as natural, as the other afore. And accordingly, as the flesh or Corrupt Nature is said to have its Lustings to evil things, so the Spirit of Regeneration is said to have its answerable Lustings to things holy, Gal. 5. 17. so as a man may come to understand, and withal take an Estimate, whether he have the Spirit of Regeneration, or no. Every man knows by Experience what it is to have Lustings to Evil, Dispositions to Envy, Ambition, Uncleanness, Pride, and finds they are his Nature. Hast thou found the like Dispositions of Love, Ingenuity to God, to seek his Glory, to love the Communion of Saints, &c? I need not write to you, ye are taught of God to love one another, says Paul, 1 Thes. 4. 9. The Opposition shews he speaks of it, as such an Impression as by nature God puts into the Creatures, and so they are said, to be taught of him; such is this Divine new Nature. Therefore, measure that Good that is in thee, by the Evil; I say, not for the Degree (thou mayst find Corruption working more strongly) but for the kind, the one works as naturally, as to the Innateness of workings, as the other.

Use 1. We read much in Scripture of men greatly enlightened, receiving the Word with joy, made Partakers of the Holy Ghost, that yet fall away: Yet among all the Great and Glorious things said of them, you have it no where said, that they are Begotten again, or born again, as likewise no where that they are justified: And the reason is evident, 1. Because Justification is the Act of God towards His, pardoning and accepting of them to Life. And therefore if God doth it at all, he doth it truly and really, or not at all; it can have no Counterfeit: So in like manner, to be Begotten again, notes a state of Sonship, a being truly made a Child; for if God Begets, he begets genuinely, it proves always a true Child of his begetting; and whoever is born of God, hath his Image, his Nature, or as the Apostle speaks, True Holiness, Eph. 4. 24. And that you put on the New man, which after God is Created in Righteousness and true Holiness. They are said to be sanctified, Heb. 10. (for that may have a Counterfeit) namely, a setting apart to outward Service by Gifts and Enlightenings: But to shew it is not True Sanctification, or after God in True Holiness, they are never said to be born of God. They as Servants live in the Family, are put into Offices and Services, and to that end do receive Gifts and Graces to lay out as Talents Mat. 25. which not improved they lose: But being not made Children, therefore it is they abide not always in the House, as Christ speaks, John 8. 35. And the Servant abideth not in the House for ever, but the Son abideth ever. They are hired Servants, not Begotten Children: They have Gifts from him, as a Lord; but not his Image, as from a Father; and so are never said to be begotten. Now, take then the poorest Soul, whose heart hath Child-like Dispositions running in his heart to God, good Nature, Ingenuities; for Grace is but good nature to God, and works toward God, as good nature doth to them we love. Take a Soul whose heart is taught of God, to apply it self unto God in all his Dealings, so as still his heart works Good naturally and like a Child towards him; if he frowns or smiles, loves or chides, whips or gives Favours. He fears his Goodness more than his wrath, finds the Glory of God in some degree naturalized in his Soul, as the Supreme Law, as set once next in him before. And though perhaps his Faith cannot call God Father, or challenge him as such, yet his heart utters it, his love cries it: He finds love to God and his People working as kindly in a measure, as he hath found self-love working to and for himself; his Affections of Fear, Joy, Desires, hatred, rising and falling according as the Glory of God is interested. The least of these are better and surer Evidences, than many of those Glorious Incomes you hear spoken of, that come and visit men's Souls at times, as flashes of Lightning do a house, transiently and away: Whereas tis a new nature; a holy frame of heart, that is constant; a Seed of God abiding; that makes man said to be born again. This is regeneration, and without this all other will come to nothing. After the Apostle had spoken such Glorious things of men that fall away, Heb. 6. A man then reading v. 9. that there are better things than these these, that accompany Salvation, would expect some Seraphical manifestations, exceeding all these, to be those better things. But the Apostle instances in Love to the Name and Glory of God, and his Truth and Children, as one of those things that exceeds all these; which is a Child-like Disposition of one begotten and born of God.

2. The Second thing to be Considered, is the Necessity hereof to Salvation, which is demonstrated out of the Text thus. All do, and will acknowledge that without God's being merciful to a man, there can be no Salvation: But God's mercy (suppose it as abundant as it is, as you are able to conceive of it) can nor never will save any man without Regeneration; for it is clear in the Text, that herein it is that God shews the Abundancy of his mercy, even to beget again those he means to save, as without which he could not save. This is clear also from Tit. 3. 5. According to his mercy hath he saved us, so then we are saved by mercy only, as the moving Cause; but yet how doth Mercy save whom it will have mercy upon? It is, By the renewing of the Holy Ghost. Yea, in the 4th v. herein is made the great appearance or manifestation of the Love and Kindness of God born to any Soul, that he renews it. After that the Kindness and Love of God appeared, not by Works of Righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of Regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost. So then, if God means to manifest Love and Mercy in the Salvation of any, he doth it in and by this, or which is all one, if he loves any, it appears in this. Herein is the Love of God manifested, as John upon another occasion speaks. Now for the Demonstration of this, take such Reasons as are congenial to the Text.

1. Without Regeneration God bears not the Actual relation of, nor becomes a Father to us. God owns no Children but such as are like him, and begotten of him after his Image. If you call on him as your Father (says Peter in the same Chapter, v. 17) then as Obedient Children you must be holy, as he is holy (v. 14, 15, 16.) not fashioning your selves according to your former Lusts; that is, you must be new cast, new fashioned, and so become holy, as he who called you is holy. All are ready to challenge God to be their Father; as the Jews (John 8. 40.) did with a bold and Impudent fore-head Challenge God to be their Father, when yet they were full of Envy and Malice towards Christ and his Disciples. No, says Christ, Ye are of your Father the Devil (and his Image you bear) and his Lusts you will do, v. 44. In the 3d of Jeremy, God, (as Christ doth in John) upbraideth the Impenitent Jews for the like Impudence; Wilt thou not from this time (he speaks what had been their wont from time to time :) come and cry to me, My Father? When, as it follows v. 5. thou hast done evil things as thou couldst. And thinkest to call me thy Father, or that I as a Father will ever own such. But seeing God will become a Father even to such Sinners, how comes it to pass that in the 19. v. God is brought in as consulting with himself how to save these Rebels, and how to come to own them for his Children? And he brings it in by way of objection: But I said, (God makes a stand at it) How shall I put thee among the Children? Come to enroll thee into the Catalogue whom I will own as such. And 'tis an objection God himself can never well answer without turning and regenerating them, and causing them not to depart from him. So it follows, Thou shalt call me My Father, and shalt not turn away from me. There is the answer, and the only answer can be given to it. So then, God is no Father nor owns any among his Children without it.

2. Without this work wrought in us, Christ becomes not our Lord and Husband. When Adam was to be married, God lookt over all the Beasts of the Field, and finding never a fit Match for him among them, he made one like him of his own Ribb, and in the same Image with him. Now if thou hast the same Image wherein thou wast born, thou art a more unfit match for Christ, than Beasts for Adam: Would any of you be content to have no other Wife but a Beast, a Cow or a Sow, Book IV. Sow, or a Devil-Succubus? God would not have Christ unequally yoked; Now what Fellowship can Light have with Darkness, Christ with Belial? 2 Cor. 6. 14. He speaks it to us in the name and person of Christ, that we should not be unequally yoked; and therefore he would not have Christ much more. God would have his Son have a wife that should please him, and have a Beauty suitable to his Mind; Christ loves Beauty as well as you, as you may see Psalms. 45. 11. Where Christ is set forth as one who hateth Iniquity and loveth Righteousness, v. 7, 8, and therefore God gives his Daughter the Church Commandment to forsake the sins she was born and brought up in. Hearken, O Daughter, and Consider; incline thine ear; that is, to my Son's Commandments; and forget thy Father's House, so shall the King (Christ) greatly desire thy Beauty.

3. Without this, we can have no title to, no hope of enjoyment, or possession of that Inheritance, 1 Pet. v. 5. We can have,

1. No Title. Heaven is an Inheritance, and as Inheritances go by Birth, so doth it also. Who hath begotten us again (saith the Text :) to an Inheritance incorruptible. If no Son, no Heir: And if no New Birth, no Son. Kingdoms upon Earth have two ways of Succession; First, by Choice or Election: Secondly: by Birth; and this latter for a Monarchy is held the best way of Succession. Now God (who takes into his Dispensations all the Rules that men go by) hath ordained to settle and establish Heaven to all that shall be saved by both these titles: 1. by Election, but that is secret to himself. The Lord only knows who are his. Therefore 2. To declare it to Men themselves, and to others, he hath ordained a Heavenly Birth openly and actually to entitle them unto it. Whom he hath predestinated them also hath he called. Rom. 8. As God gave the Earth and all things in it unto Adam, and all that should be born of him; so hath he given Heaven and all the Promises unto Christ, and unto all that should be born of him also. And as such as was the earthly man, such are the Earthly men; so such as was the Heavenly man Christ, such are all his to become, even Heavenly as he is.

2. Without being converted there is no hope of this Inheritance, Thou mayst have a dead hope, a false hope, that will deceive thee, but not a lively hope. Is any man so fond as to hope for a Crown, that was not born to it? How then can we hope for Heaven, if we have not the New Birth, God's Image, to shew for it.

3. We cannot otherwise possess it. If a reasonable Soul so created by God, would come into this World and possess the good things in it, it must necessarily be put in o a Body, and cloathed with flesh, which is to be had from Adam, by a fleshly Generation: (it could else never come to see the Light of this Sun, it could else never see this World, nor possess any thing in it) so nor can Mens Souls ever come to set a foot into the other World the Kingdom of Heaven, if they be not cloathed with God's Image, and so born of Christ. In 2 Cor 5. 3. there is a Parenthesis which bears this sense; If so be that being cloathed, we be not found naked. He is a speaking of the Souls being cloathed with an House from Heaven when separate from the Body, and discoursing thereof he casts in this as a Caution for all Christians, that they looke to it their Souls be cloathed upon with the New Man; which is the Begotten of Christ; for if they be found devoid thereof, and naked, they cannot expect the enjoyment or possession of the house that is above. This is Calvin's Interpretation, and it is a true one. And hereof Christ himself useth this Expression, That unless a man be born again, he cannot (so much as) see the Kingdom of God, nor peep into it; and much less can he enter into it, or set a foot in it.

3. I may add Thirdly, though he could enter, yet he could not enjoy it. Heaven would not be Heaven to him. Heaven is an Inheritance of Light, says the Apostle, Coloss. 1. 12. and therefore we that are naturally Sin and Darkness, must must be made meet for it. Who hath made us meet to be Partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in Light, having Delivered us from the Power of Darknes, v. 13. Heaven is an Inheritance Incorruptible, 1 Pet. 1. 4. Now if flesh and Blood (that is, frail mortal flesh) cannot Inherit the Kingdom of God, nor Corruption Incorruption (as 1 Cor. 15. 50. the Apostle speaks) then much more not flesh; that is, that sinful Defilement which we were born in. If the Body must be changed ere it can be Glorified, then much more the Soul: For this Glory in Heaven is an Inheritance undefiled, and no unclean thing can enter in, Rev. 21. 27. Without Holiness no man can see God; that is, so see him as to be happy in him. Blessed are the Pure in heart, for they shall see God; and so be blessed in the sight of him.

Let us see, and make this necessity of the New Birth. We are fallen into times in which the thing and Doctrine of it is forgotten and laid aside: In which there are multitudes of Professors, but Few Converts: Many that seem to walk in the way to Life, that never came in at the Strait Gate. There is a Zeal amongst us to advance this or that Reformation in Religion: And it hath been all the Cry: But my Brethren, where is Regeneration call'd for or regarded? We have seen the greatest outward Alterations that ever were in any Age, Kingdoms turned and Converted into Commonwealths, the Power of Heaven and Earth shaken: But men, although they turn this way and that, from this or that way, from this opinion to that, yet their Hearts generally turn upon the same Hinges they were hung on, when they came into the World. In this University of Oxford we have had puttings out and puttings in, but where is putting off the Old Nature and putting on the New? Where do we hear (as we had wont) of Souls carrying home the Holy Ghost from Sermons, of their being changed and altered, and made new, and of Students running home weeping to their Studies, crying out What shall I do to be saved? This was heretofore a wonted Cry. Conversion is the only standing Miracle in the Church, but I may truly say these Miracles are well nigh ceased; we hear of few of them.

With whatever Advances in Religion, and Incomes from God, or Purity of Reformation, we may flatter our selves; I am sure that Regeneration and Conversion is it that must make Christians in this Age, as in all the Ages afore us. As take the Whole Generation of Mankind, though Mankind in one Age hath grown up in stature, and in duration of years of Life (as afore the flood:) more then in Another: and may be more Civilized in manners, more raised in Parts and Abilities in one above another: Yet the Propagation of the race of men on Earth, is one and the same in all; by being born, begotten, formed in the Womb, in all Substantials of Being: If they be men they must be born. So in the Church, of whatever progress in Truths or Holiness one Age may excell in above another; yet if Regeneration, the thing it self, and the Doctrine of it, goes not on, the Church is not encreased, nor is there a multiplication of Inhabitants of the other World.

C H A P. II.

That by Spirit, John 3. 5. is not meant the Indwelling of the Spirit. Nor that in the New Birth, the Holy Ghost produceth in us the same Nature which himself hath.

JOHN III. V.

That which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit.

YOU have here the Thing begotten in us by the Spirit of God at the New Birth, set forth in the whole and the general Nature of it, expressing what is most sublime in it. 'Tis Spirit, which denotes the Supreme kind of Being. I say in the whole Nature of it, that which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit. 'Tis all and the whole of it Spiritual; and this gives us a general Nature common to all the parts of the New Birth. All, and every Grace, tho' Diversified by the special Objects they are exercis'd about; yet agree in this common and general Nature, that they are Spirit, or Spiritual Graces. Sorrow for sin, and Humiliation, is such a fight and sense of sin as is Spiritual. And thus justifying Faith is a Spiritual Faith in all the Acts of it.

I. Let us enquire what is meant by Spirit here, by considering what it is not.

1. It is not the Communication of the Holy Spirit himself, which is here meant, For tho' indeed he himself is given to us as the Author of our Regeneration, and tho' himself dwelleth in us immediately, and not by his Graces only (as I have before proved) yet the giving of, and the Indwelling of the Holy Ghost in us, is in no wise to be term'd our being born of the Spirit, nor is it any where in Scripture so styled. Our being born of the Spirit, notes out an Effect, or Work of the Spirit in us, as that which is born of Another is: And as the conception of the Humane Nature of Christ is said to be of the Holy Ghost, Mat. 1. 18, 19.

2. It is not the begetting of a Nature, or being the same that the Spirit himself is of. It is not a Communication of the God-head to us, making us God of God, (as some have Blasphemed) nor Spirit of Spirit; In which sense Christ's God-head is termed Spirit, (Heb. 9. 14.) and very God of very God. But this Spiritual Nature in us is not a Spark of the Divine Nature, struck or shot forth into our Souls: But it is for the Kind of it a Creature, which is for ever distinct from the Deity, as the Apostle severs them (Rom. 9. 5.) when he speaks of God as Blessed for evermore. And indeed the God-head in the Indivisible Whole of it is eternal (Rom. 1. 20.) but this Spirit, or Spiritual Nature (of which we are now speaking) is born in time, for it is produced after a man's having been first born Flesh. And besides, it is not only styled a Creature, but the New Creature, and therefore if it were the Divine Nature, or God, there would be as many New Gods, as there are men regenerate.

2. We are now to consider what This Spirit, which is born of the Spirit, is. One way, and a sure one, is to conceive of it by the opposite to it, and which is set by it on purpose to explain it. That which is born of the Flesh is Flesh, saith Christ.

Now what is Flesh in Scripture sense, as it is opposed unto the New Creature? It is plainly not the substance of a man's nature, or any other substance a man is transformed into, but the Corruption, the natural sinfulness and defilement of man's Nature. And therefore the Spirit, or that which is born of the Spirit, is in its kind and proportion to be understood in like manner. I shall not name many places, but only one which is apposite, in Gal, 5. 17. The Flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the Flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other, so as you cannot do the things you would. That by Flesh here, he means not the Essence or Substance of man's Nature, much less, as Created by God, is evident; because in v. 19, 20, 21. he says, The works of the Flesh are manifest, Adultery, Fornication, Uncleaness, Wantonness, Idolatry, Witchcraft, Hatred; and such like; whereof I tell you (says he) that they which do such things shall not inherit the Kingdom of God. What is meant therefore, is man's corrupt degenerate Nature, the old man which is said to be corrupt through deceitful Lusts, Eph. 4. 22. And as all men are born Flesh, they are in the Flesh (Rom. 7. 8.) until born again.

Now together with this, he represents the contrary Principle of Spirit in a regenerate man; whereof the one lusting after the Spirit, the other after the contrary; even before the consent of Man's Will, they distract the Will of a Man so as he cannot do what he would. Now then hereby two Inherent Principles in a regenerate man's Nature must necessarily be denoted.

1. For as the Flesh (which all acknowledge to be man's Nature by Birth) lusts against the Spirit: So the Spirit is in like manner said to lust against the Flesh; And this naturally, for it is before a consent of the Will one way or other, as well as after such consent: Now to lust (one way or other) is the proper and immediate Product of the inward Inclinations of a man's Heart and Nature: And from these Principles, as inherent in our Nature, each of these Lustings draw the Will several, yea, contrary ways. They work a Contrariety of Will in us also: You cannot do what you would. And therefore Spirit must be understood to be a Principle in man's Nature, as well as Flesh or Corruption is.

Neither must it be said that the Holy Ghost is that Spirit that lusts in us, in the like manner as the Flesh doth lust against the Spirit. He may be said to work in us indeed this lusting against the Flesh, as he is said to make intercession for us in stirring up Groans in us, &c. Rom. 8. 27. yet so, as we are said to groan and pray: So here to lust against the Flesh, is our Act and not the Holy Ghost's: And therefore is from a Principle opposite to Flesh in our Souls, and inherent in us, as Flesh is, and so made a contrary Nature in us unto that Flesh.

2. These two are said to be contrary and therefore are as two contrary Qualities in man's Nature. For Qualities only, not Substances, are contrary. And if then Flesh be such that lusts after Evil, then Spirit is also such that lusteth after good. These are as Heat and Cold, Sickness and Health, in the same Subject, stirring and acting one against the other.

3. They are to this purpose compared unto two Roots or Seminal Principles seated in the Soul, producing contrary Effects and Fruits: For he says, v. 22. But the fruit of the Spirit (mark that allusion) is Love, Peace, Joy, Long-suffering, Gentleness, Goodness, Faith, Meekness, Temperance; when as he says on the contrary, The works of the Flesh, the Fruits of the Flesh, are Envyings, Murthers, Wrath, Strife, &c. And this place alone is sufficient to confute those that would have the Holy Ghost's Indwelling only, without his working, an Inherent Root or Principle of Grace by which all Acts of Holiness should become properly ours subjectively, as well as his sufficiently, as he alone acteth that Grace in us to bring forth every good work.

Objt. Those of the forementioned high-flown Perswasions will interpose here, That Flesh in Scripture is put for the whole of man's Nature, Substance, and Excellencies of any Kind; yea and the whole Creation is denominated Flesh, and so even man's pure Nature as it was at first created in Adam, and all the Glories of it, are termed Flesh. He was a Fleshly, Earthly man. And therefore not only Corrupt Nature, but all those Holy Qualities created in Adam at first, or that is of the like created Nature or Rank, though never so excellent above them, are here to be understood by Spirit: For else that which you call Spirit (say they) is still indeed but Flesh, as the whole Creation, whether New or Old, is to be Accounted.

I thus answer the Objection.

Answ. 1. Be it so, That Flesh imports in some Scriptures all created Excellencies in their utmost Perfection; yet in this Text, and multitudes of Others throughout the New Testament, it is taken not in that general Notion, but strictly for the Degeneration of man's Nature by the Fall, conveyed by Generation Fleshly; out of which, if Mans Nature be not restored by a New Birth Spiritual, He is eternally lost. Well then in this place, and the other places now cited, Flesh is strictly taken for that Corruption of man's Nature; and Spirit likewise oppositely for the Principle restored, in it, contrary thereunto: For it is that Flesh that is destroyed by this Spirit, as it is contrary.

2. It is true that the best and highest Excellencies of Adam's Nature were but Flesh, taken as compared with the Nature of God himself. I can give you Scriptures that even the humane Nature of Christ, which was the Glory, the Head, the Sum of the whole Creation, Old and New, is but Flesh with all its Prerogatives; yea, and profits nothing, as in opposition to the Godhead in him. What else is the meaning of John 6. 63. The Flesh profiteth nothing, it is the Spirit that quickeneth. And further, that in respect of glorying in God's presence, all the Grace in a renewed Man, termed Spirit here, is but Flesh in that respect, and comes within the Compass of that saying, 1 Cor. 1. 29. That no Flesh shou'd glory in his presence. For when he adds, For of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who is made Wisdom, Righteousness, Sanctification, Redemption, He there instancing not only in all the glorious Graces that are wrought in us, as Wisdom and Sanctification, but also all the Benefits bestowed upon us, as Justification, and the Glory of Heaven it self, expressed by Redemption; he doth thereby plainly call all these Flesh, as in themselves considered, and as they are Excellencies for us to glory in, the Glory of which God hath in that respect rob'd them of and deflowred, for as much as God hath made Christ all these to us, which otherwise in themselves would be but Flesh in us, as the Old Creation at first was. And God doth this, that so we might in all these glory in the Lord only, and not so much in them thus given us.

Our Souls, by Christ's Restauration of them, do remain created Substances still, He doth not Transubstantiate them into the Being of the Divine Nature: And when it is said He brings Things that are, unto nought, or nothing, his meaning is not that God destroys them in respect of their Being or Existence, they must have that still. For if by Flesh were meant all that is created by God, differing from himself, then the Substance of the Soul, yea, the whole of the man, would be destroy'd by Grace; so there would be no Subject left capable of having this Spirit begotten in it, no nor would Salvation be the Salvation of our Souls. If they say, there is some new thing created in the room thereof, which they would call Spirit; yet still concerning that new Thing I ask, 1. Either it is a Creature made by God, and distinct from him, and then I urge upon them, it is Flesh, even as well as the former Soul: For in comparison parison unto God, so it is; and still within the same Sphere and Rank of Beings that are created. Or 2. It is God, and the Godhead. If that be their meaning, let them but say so, but then I will not argue it, but rend my Garments. And the truth is, they can mean no other thing, if they will speak otherwise of these things than we do.

3. The third answer to the Objection made, is This. I grant that this New Spirit begotten of the Spirit, is of a more Divine Temper, Genius and Aspirement than the Image of God in Adam was; which though holy, yet but in a natural way; in knowing God in and by the Creatures and by the Covenant of Works, and so only according unto what is naturally due unto a Creature reasonable, as he first falls out of the hands of his Maker. And I should not only grant that this New Divine Nature born of the Spirit, is Supernatural, in comparison to Corrupt Nature and the Dispositious thereof, but also in comparison of pure Nature. Inasmuch as Adam was but an Earthly Natural man comparatively to that which is born of the Spirit, which is the Image of the Heavenly, and is ordained in the end to see God in himself, and will be raised up thereto; and at present hath such a way of knowing and enjoying God, and such Objects Spiritual suited to it, as Adam's state was not capable of. Now therefore although all the Old and New Creation are Flesh to God, as was said, yet the New being of our highest Aspirement, may be termed Spirit in comparison of its fellow-creatures; and so this new Creature in Regeneration wrought, may perhaps be styled, in comparison of Adam's Image.

The Use of all in brief is this, That men should take heed of being seduced and drawn into Opinions under the pretence and allurement of still more Spiritualness, and Spiritualizing still All that the Scripture says, or can be said of true Spiritualness, till they lose all Spiritualness. It may be truly said that many that seemed to begin soberly in the Spirit, whilst they have affected to go still a note higher then the Gospel allots unto the Creature, as the Portion of it, intruding into things they have not seen, they have in the end come round, and ended in the Flesh, even where they were before they did begin. You must not think to Spiritualize the Soul of man beyond what can consist with its being a Creature, and beyond what, in a lower rank of union with God, than Christ hath, it can bear. The nature of Things must not be destroyed, God must alone be God, and that Eternal Spirit. The Soul must be the Soul, enjoying God as such, remaining distinct from him; then attribute what Spiritualness you can lower then what Christ and the Eternal Spirit is said to have, as being God, and the Son of God. And also withal stay but a while to have that addition of Grace, and Glory which our Doctrine gives and proclaims to Spirits made perfect in Heaven, where God is all in all; and yet still he and the Creature are distinct, tho' the glorified Creature enjoys a fulness and immediateness of Knowledge in him, as in himself face to face, and in a love raised up and proportioned thereto. These distances being kept, let men urge what Spiritualness they can, and our Doctrine will rise as high as they can do; yea, (which is the glory of our Doctrine) they cannot speak beyond it, but are forced to cant their own wild Notes in our Expressions. If men will go higher, it falls out here as with Chymists going about to seek further Spirits out of Spirits already extracted, out of Wine or Metals sublimated as much as the things will bear. In seeking to sublimate them yet further, in the end they all vanish, and all ends in smok.

So then, That which is Spirit here, is metaphrased elsewhere by Paul, 1 Cor. 2. 15. and is all one as to say That which is born of the Spirit is Spirit, and that the Soul of a man born again, is Spiritualized ὁ πνευματικός, that is, a Spiritual man; and thereby fitted to receive and take in (as the word v. 14. is) τὰ πνευματικά, Spiritual things, πνευματικῶς, Spiritually, or as Spiritual.

C H A P. III.

That by Spirit, John 3. 5. is meant all those gracious Dispositions in the Soul, which do suit it unto things Spiritual, as Spiritual.

INOW come to the explanation of the thing it self in the general Nature of it, what is meant by Spirit.

I give this distinction of it. Spirit is all those Gracious and Heavenly Dispositions and Habiliments wrought in the whole Soul, especially the Spirit of the Mind, which do elevate and raise it, fit and suit it unto things Spiritual, as Spiritual. I shall give you an Account of this definition as it is extracted and drawn out of the import of the very word Spirit: And then come to the examination of it in several particulars.

1. In the General, Common Nature of it, I term it a New Disposition or Temper of Spirit. The Acceptation and Use of the Word in the general in Scripture, warrants the word Spirit being put to import a Disposition or Temper of a man's Heart, whether it be applyed to what is good or bad therein. The Spirit that dwells in us (saith James) lusteth to Envy, James 4. 5. He termeth the very Inclination and Disposition to Envy that is Natural in us, the Spirit that is in us: Although again in respect of its Corruption it be Flesh and Fleshly. So Luk. 9. 55. Christ rebuking James and John for their zealous wishing that Fire might devour those of that City that did not receive Christ, speaks thus, You know not what Spirit you are of; that is, what a fiery Disposition is in your Hearts, which you have declared by this wish. Thus too an Inclination to Whoredom is termed a Spirit of Whoredom, Hosea. 4. 12. A Jealous Disposition, a Spirit of Jealousie, Numb. 5. 14. On the contrary, Dispositions unto what is good, are in like manner termed Spirit, the Spirit of Meekness, Gal. 6. 2. The Spirit of Love and Fear, 2 Tim. 1. 7. As also any Habiliment that elevates and enables the Understanding to discern the difference of things Spirituall (as acquired Habits by reason of use are said to do, Heb. 5. 14.) is denominated Spirit, Isa. 11. 2, 3. The Spirit of Wisdom and of the Fear of the Lord, shall rest upon him, and make him quick of Understanding in the Fear of the Lord. So as if you would run over all Graces particularly, they are Heavenly and Divine Principles put into the Soul, and each faculty of it, carrying it forth to such and such Spiritual actings towards such or such Spiritual Objects, Zach. 12. 10. A Spirit of Prayer, of Supplication, and of Grace, that is, to seek after Grace and the Favour of God, and the same may be said of all other graces whatever.

2. I add, Gracious Dispositions, to distinguish this work of the Spirit from Gifts; which though common to Reprobates; yet we find them called Spiritual Gifts, 1 Corinthians 14. 2. Which in the 12th and 13th Chapters, he distinguisheth from Graces, True love to God and the Saints, &c. Thus also when the Apostle James (James 4. 9, 10.) had said The Spirit that is in us, lusteth after envy, he adds these Words, but God gives more Grace, i. e. A contrary Spirit of Grace to overcome it. It is there termed in the opposition Grace; tis therefore a gracious disposition. The Abilities of Mind are termed Gifts, χαρισματα, because freely Given; and Spiritual, because they impower the mind to take in the Notion of Spiritual Truths, so far as to do good to others, but not to a Man's own Soul savingly, which Grace doth. True knowledge hath vim plasticam in it, a Formative Vertue.
Nei-

Neither do these gifts raise up the mind to things Spiritual, as Spiritual, which is the great difference to be attended in this matter.

3. I call it Heavenly, that is, which is wholly Divine, and carries the Soul up to, and fits it for things Heavenly. Adam, (1 Cor. 15. 47, 48.) is in his best Estate termed on earthly Man. 'Tis evident by the saying, which the Apostle cites out of Genesis, that he speaks of him and his Graces when first Created. But God hath fitted and prepared for this Spiritual Man, (of whom we speak) things Heavenly; farr above the reach of Adam's Estate. I observe, 1 Eph. 3. That the Apostle when he speaks (Eph. 1. 3.) of the whole lump of Blessings with which in Christ we are Blessed, termeth all and the whole of them Spiritual Blessings in Heavenly things ((say I) and not Places only; and such Adam's were not. And the Reason is, because, these are all Blessings in Christ, who alone is that Heavenly Man, the Lord from Heaven. 1 Cor. 15. 47, 48. But Adam but an Earthly Man, and so Christ alone is the Founder of Spiritual Blessings in Heavenly things; and therefore this Spirit coming from him, the quickning Spirit (as Christ is there termed in opposition to Adam's being but a living Soul, v. 45.) is wholly Heaven-born, is an optique Glasse, set to the Eye to see into things Heavenly, which Adam's sight fell short of. Spirit here, is the Foundation and Beginning of all those Glorious Enjoyments of God in the other World, and shall be raised up thereto. And in this Life the Spiritual Man hath, an Aspirement thereunto, and could never be satisfied without it. And in this Life, where this Spiritual and Heavenly Temper compleats no degrees, as Adam's Primitive Holiness of Nature was, it would raise a Man up to Infinitely higher proportions of Communion with God and active Holiness then Adam's state was capable of: But alas! our Life here is hid with Christ in God, through our Imperfection; and the like. And indeed this very word Spirit, That which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit, speaks a Sublimated Work, the most Refined and most Raised Work that Mans Heart in this Life is capable of: For the Extract, the Quintessence of things (leaving the gross parts behind them as severed) you still call Spirits. I need not give you Chymical Instances. Also in the Creation, those things which are of the highest Rank, Strength and Excellency, and nearest God himself in their Natures, are termed Spirits: Who maketh his Angels Spirits, Heb. 1. 7. And the Substance of his own pure Nature, is set out by this, God is a Spirit, John 4. 24. Yea, take an Estimate from Hell, the height, the Quintessence of all Wickedness, is, as you know, found in the Devils, and how is it expressed? It is nam'd Spiritual Wickedness, Eph. 6. 12. And they are elsewhere termed Wicked Spirits, Mat. 12. 45. Because the Substance of their Nature or being is Spirit, and they are filled with Wickedness. But here the Wickedness they are filled with is further termed Spiritual; that is, it is a Wickedness of the highest kind, which exerciseth it self in opposing and contradicting things Heavenly, as it follows there about things Heavenly, which are the things this Spirit (in the Text, John 3.) is raised unto, and contends for, and aspires after; and therefore as their Wickedness is termed Spiritual; so the Nature of this is termed Spirit or Spiritual, as pursuing after those very things, Heavenly, which their Wickedness sets it self against.

4. These Heavenly dispositions have for their seat, the Spirit of a Man. This is the immediate Subject in which it resides, in which it was chiefly and first implanted, and from thence diffused to the whole Man, and so is justly denominatd Spirit from its Subject, the very Spirit, Quintessence, and Center of the Soul, Eph. 4. 22. 23. Be renewed in the Spirit of your Minds; by infusing into it Spiritual Principles of Heavenly Light and Dispositions. The new Man is there said to be put on. And to the same purpose speaks the Apostle, 1 Thess. 5. 23. The God of Peace sanctifie you throughout, or wholly, your whole Spirit, Soul, and Body. Body is the exterior part, and Soul is the inward part of Senses, Affections, &c. but Spirit is the top, the highest Region

Region of the Mind which is capable of an higher intuition of things Spiritual, and this is sanctified first and chiefly, and therefore first named, and the Sanctification hereof is termed Spirit. The seat of the powerful workings of sin, and of the first Sugestion usually thereunto, is the lower Faculties, which Intice and Allure, and propound the Pleasures of themselves to the Will and Affections; which being corrupt, and knowing no better, yield, and approve them suitable to the outward Man; and therefore it is termed the Law of the Members. But the Workings of Grace are perfectly contrary. The seat of Grace, and its chief Dominion, is the Spirit of the Mind, termed therefore the Inner Man, the Hidden Man, the Law of the Mind: Which giving forth Laws and Impressions to the Outward, rules and commands it. And because the strength that must sway the man lies there, therefore it meets with more Difficulties than the Dominion of Sin doth, for it hath all the Affections to subdue, by Spiritual Light, and fresh comings in from Heaven.

C H A P. IV.

What it is to have the Heart Elevated, and Suited to all things Spiritual, as Spiritual.

BUT the last and main thing in this Definition to be most attended unto is, What it is to have the Heart elevated, and suited unto all things Spiritual, as Spiritual.

There are Three things to be enquired into, for the Explanation hereof.

1. What those things are which are Spiritual.
2. What it is to have the Heart Suited to these Spiritual things.
3. An Account why this should be added, To Spiritual things as Spiritual

1. what are things Spiritual? It needs not long be insisted on, the Particulars are become known to us all, if we have Hearts unto them; they are the things of God, which the Spirit reveals, The deep things of God, 1 Cor. 2. 10, 14. and Rom. 8. 7. They are things of the Spirit, Rom. 8. 7. They are another World, or System of things, opposed to things of the Flesh; which Flesh, or corrupt Nature, is suited unto, which are manifestly Fruits of the Flesh, (Gal. 5. 19.) downright sins, or things of this World abus'd by our Lusts, 1 John 2. 16.

1. First, and Primarily, God himself and Christ are the chiefest Spiritual Things and Blessings; They are the first Original of all things Spiritual, and so are the most Spiritual, and have all and only true Spiritualness in them. God is a Spirit, it is his pure Nature so to be, and therefore he is to be worshipt in Spirit by us: Even as it is said God is Holy, therefore be ye Holy; so God is Spirit, therefore be ye Spiritual: And therefore all things else are Spiritual as they refer unto him. As God only is good (as Christ says) so God only is Spirit; and as the Sun only is Light, so God only is the Father of all Light that is truly Heavenly; God is the measure, the Standard of all things Spiritual. And thus also Christ, who is styled The Lord is also said to be

be that Spirit, (1 Cor. 4. 17.) who puts all the Spiritualness that is in the Gospel, into our Minds. Chap. 3.

2. There are things that are Spiritual derivately from God and Christ, which are the things of God, and which are not otherwise, no nor further Spiritual, than as they relate unto God and Christ, and partake of them, and redound to their Glory, who is the measure of them. And of this distinction we shall have great use in the Sequel; for in all the Benefits bestowed in our Salvation, there is no further a Spiritualness to be found, than as God shines in them, and his Excellence and Glory are Illustrious. And that, and that alone, puts every other thing into the being and rank of things Spiritual.

1. All Blessings, Adoption, Forgiveness, Redemption, Fellowship with God, and Heaven it self, are termed Spiritual Blessings, Eph. 1. 3. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all Spiritual Blessings in Heavenly Places in Christ; and these Blessings consist not in Houses, Lands, &c. but in things Heavenly.

2. Thus all Graces of the Spirit are also Spiritual. Col. 1. 9. True saving Knowledge is styled, ἡ γνώσις πνευματικὴ, Spiritual Understanding.

3. All the immediate Duties of Gods Worship, when God is Worshipped in Spirit in them, are termed Spiritual. Prayer, Hearing, &c. all are termed Spiritual Sacrifices, 1 Pet. 2. 5. which become such, so far as God is Sanctified and closed withal in them and by them.

4. Every Duty of the Moral Law, as it is directed unto God, is a Service in Spirit, Rom. 7. 6. And the whole Moral Law, and every particle of it, in this right Tendency, is Spiritual, Rom. 7. 14. The Law is Spiritual.

2. What is it to have the Heart made suitable to these Spiritual things?

You all know by Analogy from Nature, what it is to have the Soul in the Power and Faculties of it suited unto the Object of it; as the Eye is suited and fitted to Colour, and the Ear unto Sounds. I shall give you some Philosophical Instances, which the Scripture makes, Eccles. 11. 7. Truly the Light (saith Solomon) is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is to behold the Sun. Here is an Heavenly outward Object, and the visive or seeing Faculty, declared, suited, or fitted, one to the other. The Apostle Paul also (1 Cor. 6. 13.) speaking of the Present Condition of the Bodies of Men, The Belly (saies he) is for Meats, and Meats for the Belly; that is, they are by God suited and fitted one for another in this present State. And consider the purpose of his mentioning this: 'Tis to Illustrate how in a proportionable manner, and in a Spiritual way, even the Bodies of Men after the Resurrection, when they shall be made Spiritual (1 Cor. 15.) shall then be suited unto Christ, so it follows, v. 14. And God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise us up by his own power: And it is said too, in v. 17. He that is joyned to the Lord, is one Spirit. Now then to make up the Analogy, as will suit spiritual Senses to Spiritual things, after the Resurrection, so he doth suit mens Souls and Spirits aforehand in this Life, unto the Spiritual things manifested in the Word, afore the Resurrection of Body and Soul into a greater Glory. And this the Scriptures also speak, as expressly to this point of Regeneration or Grace, as it doth to that other point of Nature, 1 Cor. 2. 9. Eye hath not seen, nor Ear heard, nor hath it entred into the Heart of Man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. The things prepared, &c. are manifestly here the things of the Gospel in this Life Revealed; and not only those in the World to come, as by the Context hath been long since observed. And the only use at present I make, lies in these Words. Prepared for those that Love him; that is, afore-hand suited and fitted by God unto the new Creature, or unto those into whose Hearts he puts his Love. And

It be not an allusion intended by the Apostle, yet it may well be Represented by the Correspondency that is between the story of the first Creation, and the new Creature, which the Apostle intends by those who Love God. The Apostle in those words, of his, As it is Written, refers us to Isa. 64. 4. Since the beginning of the World, Men have not heard, neither perceived by the Ear, neither hath the Eye seen, &c. Now consult the story of Mans first Creation, to which this is a manifest allusion, and it stood thus. God made and prepared a World consisting of, and filled with variety of Creatures; the making of which cost him six Daies work. There were Delicacies of Fruits for the Taste, an Entertainment for the Eye in all sorts of Colours, Light, Ornaments, and Tapestry which Heaven and Earth affordeth to this Day. There was a brave World, and richly furnished, as the Apostle speaks of it, 1 Tim. 6. The Angels stood by, and wondered all the while for whom all this should be prepared; for they had not Senses to be affected with them. God after all, at the latter End of this his work brings in Man; and sets Adam down in the Centre of this World; and Lo he had at the first of his Creation an Eye to see and to be taken with all the Beauties God had scattered up and down throughout the whole. He had an Ear to Hear all the Musick which the Melodies of Birds Singing, or the Murmurings, and Warblings of Rivulets, could afford. He had a Taste and Belly suited to take pleasure in all these Varieties of Fruits, or whatever else God had provided as a Banquet for him; insomuch as there was not any one thing which God had made, but he had some Sense inward or outward, to take in a pleasure from it; or some facultie in his Mind, to close with, and make use of it. Whence it was apparent unto himself and the Angels, the Spectators, that God had first prepared and set out all these for the Man, and then created the Man, in like Manner prepared and fitted for all these things. He had an Ear and an Eye (as both the Prophets and Apostles words are) to receive and take in what was thus made for him. Thus the Apostle tells us it falls out in this new Creation; God hath been from Everlasting contriving, and ordaining, and in the fulness of time preparing all those Glorious Truths and things which the Apostles (to whom was committed the News and Tidings of this World to come, Heb. 2. 5.) by the Holy Ghost, have given us in their Writings a full Discovery of. And whenever God Regenerateth any Man and Constitutes him a New Creature; Lo the Man hath a new Eye to see, an Ear to hear, and all sorts of new Senses to take in all sorts of Spiritual things, as the Spirit shall be pleased to reveal them to him. He no sooner opens an Eye, but he finds himself to be come into a new World, and to be environed with new Objects. Thus they are prepared for him, and he for them; and hence it comes to pass that he hath an Eye to see, and an Ear to hear, and an Heart to understand, such things as never from the beginning of this World entred into the Heart of Man; no not of Adam in his first Creation. Now the Principle by which he is enabled to this, is called Spirit.

If you will have another Scripture that speaks this suitableness between this Spiritual Man and these Spiritual things, look into Rom. 8. 5. Those that are after the Flesh, do mind the things of the Flesh; but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit. You have here the suitableness between Spiritual things and a Spiritual Man, Illustrated by its contrary, namely the like of a carnal Heart towards carnal things; that so all Men, whether Carnal or Spiritual might be equal and just Judges, out of experience whether they had as yet Flesh only, or further, Spirit, begun in them. For all mankind have experience what it is to mind, to favour, and find an Heart suited to things fleshly and outward. We feel every Day how our Bowels work, and our Affections are enflamed after things fleshly, as Beauty, Pleasure, &c. Now saies he, Descend into your Hearts, and be righteous Judges; if yo be after the Spirit, if that supernatural frame of Heart be in you and predominant, you will in like manner be taken with the things of the Spirit: For both stand upon like just and equal reason; for as Flesh is suited unto things Fleshly; so Spirit is suited unto things Spiritual, even as 'tis here, John 3. That which is born of the Flesh, is Flesh, so that which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit.

C H A P. V.

That this suitableness of the Mind to Spiritual things, is the great distinguishing Character of one that is born of the Spirit John, 3. 5. from others who are not so.

I SHALL now give an account why I put in this restriction, A suitableness of the Heart unto Spiritual things, as Spiritual. The truth is, herein lyes the Spirit, or the formal Constitution, and Difference of that which is here termed Spirit. The meaning whereof is, that Spiritual things are to be considered barely, and meerly as they are in themselves, and their own Nature, abstracted from all other Considerations and Concomitants adherent to them, and abstracted from such Benefits as are accidental, external, and foreign to them. Spiritual things may indeed be view'd as wrapt up in Worldly Conveniencies, the avoidance of Punishment, or the obtaining something which a man apprehends good to him, which occurs by them or with them. But Spiritual things as Spiritual, are the things themselves, which are represented in their own real Nature, in their native hue and proper Colours to a Spiritual man.

In other things, the formal reason of any Objects is that which puts the difference between Sciences, and Arts, yea, and the Senses. Bodies natural are the Subjects of a multitude of Arts and Sciences, but take it as a natural Body, and simply so considered, it is the proper Subject of Philosophy and makes an essential difference between that and other Knowledge: So it is here, Spiritual things are the proper Objects of that true genuine Heaven-born Spirit, begotten by Regeneration.

2. The Apostle is my Warrant for putting in this distinction: For he setteth this fatal and eternal difference between a Natural Man and a Spiritual Man, 1 Cor. 2. 14, 15. But the Natural Man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him: Neither can he know them because they are Spiritually discerned. But he that is Spiritual judgeth all things yet he himself is judged of no man. To say, Because they are Spiritually discerned; and to give this as the reason why a Natural Man cannot therefore receive them, is all one as to say, that if they be rightly discerned, they must be discerned in their Spirituality, that is, as they are in themselves, Spiritual things, as Spiritual. Thus the Soul, whilst in the Body, cannot see or discern the Angels that dayly attend us, nor the Devils that hourly tempt us: Why? Because they are Spirits, and are Spiritually to be discerned, and so can be view'd only by Naked Spirits like themselves. They may be seen if they will thicken and condensate the Air or take a Shape, inclose themselves in a Body; but still as Spirits, and in their own Substance and Nature, they are discerned by none but those of their kind. And (as he here speaks of a Spiritual Man, v. 15.) They can see all we do, but themselves are not discerned by us; we see not their Motion nor their Actings. I know this Similitude, as none other, will hold in all; for our Souls stript of our flesh, would thus see Angels; but not so an Unregenerate Man; he would not discern Spiritual things, tho he were stript of flesh, if he was not also Spiritualized. And by this Natural man, is not barely understood a sensual man, sensual for Lusts and bodily Pleasures, but a man endowed with the greatest Gifts of Knowledge and Wisdom, such as were the Scribes and Pharisees, and the Disputers of this World, 1 Cor. 1. 7, 8, 20. And for the discerning of these things Spiritually, a man must not simply have the Spirit Book IV of God to reveal them objectively (v. 10, 11, 12.) but he must subjectively be made by that Spirit a Spiritual man, and have Spiritual Senses given him, else tho' the Spirit should reveal them, he could not receive them. The Natural man receives not the things of the Spirit of God; for quicquid recipitur, recipitur ad modum Recipientis. As a blind eye receives not the Light of the Sun: Neither can he know them; which words speak an impotency or an incapacity in the Subject; for there is a disproportion between the Objects, taken in their Spiritual Nature and the Subject. For, says he, they are Spiritually discerned; and therefore the man must be made Spiritual, or he cannot take them in: As a Beast must be made rational, ere he can understand or take in the things of a man: That look as now this Natural Body of ours (as 1 Cor. 15. the Apostle calls it) cannot discern an Angel or Spirit, as he is a Spirit; but when God shall make his Natural Body a Spiritual Body (which how he will do it, we know not) then we shall see Angels and Spirits, even as we are seen of them; but a Spiritual Body it must be made first; so 'tis a man must be Spiritual, before he can see Spiritual things.

3. A Third ground why I say that a Spiritual man must discern Spiritual things as Spiritual, is, Because otherwise he receives not the things at all, which the Apostle hints. This is a great truth, that if the Soul of a man does not arrive at, and close with, and embrace the things themselves, as they are in themselves and in their own nature, it knows them not, it receives them not at all; but only Ideas, and Notions, Shadows and Clouds, instead of them. God will be known as God, and glorified as God (Rom. 1. 29.) or he accounts it no Knowledge. Then we know and affect things as they are, when our Knowledge and Affections towards them are such as the Nature of the things requires. If the Knowledge of Christ in my Heart be not answerable, Similar to what is in the thing it self, I do not know it: As I am not said to know a man, if I know him but by hear-say, or have seen but his Picture. And therefore the Apostle distinguisheth as I do Eph. 4. 21. If you have been taught as the Truth is in Jesus; that is, to know Christ in himself, and the Truths about him, which are Beams of him, as they are in their true and naked hue. Thus also Affections to any Thing or Person is not true Love, or a genuine Affection, if it be not suited and carried out to the thing and the Person it self: You call it Harlotry Love else, Lust not Love. And therefore of necessity if our Knowledge of Spiritual things be true, and such as it ought to be, if our Affections unto them be genuine, our Hearts must be suited to the thing as Spiritual. Yea, otherwise the things whatever they are in themselves, do become to us but things of the Flesh, as the Law was to the Carnal Jew, and all Spiritual Priviledges are to an Unregenerate Professor.

4. This is the great difference or constitutive distinction of Men Regenerate from the Unregenerate, though never so much enlightned, elevated to the tasting of the powers of the World to come. Those that are truly renewed are made Spirit, or Spiritual in all things, so not the other: Altho raised up and elevated to be exercised about things Spiritual, yet not about the Spirituality of the things, and to be carried out to them as such. This will appear in the particulars of the Work of Grace all along. There is a carnality about Spiritual Objects, else the Apostle would never have termed the Corinthians Carnal, in comparison of other Christians, and not Spiritual, 1 Cor. 3. 1. Now that which was in a great measure remaining in them is predominantly in temporary Believers. It is in them as that which constitutes their Estate without any genuine principle of Spirit at all. It is no where said of any Temporary Believer, or Person that fell away, that he was born again, nor is it any where said of any such that they are Spiritual Men, or begotten of the Spirit.

The main Use I intend is of Examination of our Estates, whether we are savingly Regenerate or not? Consider what the Frame, the Posture, the Vergency, your Spirits are of unto things that are Spiritual, as Spiritual. I speak now only unto Men that are or have been some way or other affected with things Spiritual ritual; for as for such as are not, but live wholly in things Earthly and Sensual, such need not a Jury to pass upon them to Condemn them. Towards our help in this Examination, let us take these two things. Chap. I

1. Take Instances of several particulars of Spiritual things, and searching out wherein the Spirituality of them lies, bring them and your Hearts together, to put you upon considering how your Hearts and they agree, and suit each other.

1. Learn to understand in your own Hearts what these two things mean, and what a vast difference is between them. 1. To have Heavenly natural dispositions and inclination suiting the Heart to things Spiritual, as Spiritual: And 2d, To have accidental and forced Elevations or stirrings of Heart towards things Spiritual, and those but upon Considerations that are but accidental to the things, or are but Appurtenances of them, Attendants and Hangbys to them, and are not of the nature of the things themselves.

You will ask me, What do you account but accidental Affections in Mens Hearts to things Spiritual; and what is it that is accidental in the things themselves?

1. That is but an accidental affection in the Heart it self, which is forced and strained in respect of what the whole stream of thy Heart otherwise doth naturally carry thee forth unto, whereas that which is born of the Flesh doth wholly and naturally mind and favour nothing but what is Earthly, Worldly, &c. Rom. 8. 5. and the whole propension and pondus thereof, would of it self for ever run that way; yet so as look as streams that naturally run but one way, yet are capable of a turn, and to be diverted a contrary way by Winds, or Stoppage, or the overflowings of Waters, &c. without having a new and natural Spring or Fountain to feed and carry it on, that contrary Current: So the natural Mind may sometime flow in another Current, than that in which its own Inclinations carry it. But now the Apostle Peter speaking of the Hearts of Men Regenerate, expresth it thus, 1 Pet. 5. 2. That what they did was not out of constraint, but willingly, and out of a ready Mind. The great and Predominant Principle in us is Self-Love; it is the Spirit the Quintessence of Original Sin. Now this Spring or Fountain of all Lusts in us naturally cuts forth a Channel to it self only towards things Earthly: And the poysse of it (as it is the predominant Principle in Mans Nature, as by Nature it is) doth lie clean another way then to fall in at all with any of the things which are Spiritual, or to have any thing to do with them; but it secretly and closely enjoys it self, in cleaving and adhering unto things Earthly and sinful: Yet so, as if it be stormed with the noise and conviction of the things of the other World; as with what is the dreadful consequent of Sin, viz. Wrath and Destruction; and of what is the Deliverance out of it; even to leave sin, to seek after pardon, &c. The Enlightnings of these things coming powerfully in upon Self-Love in Men, that other natural Stream and Current to things Earthly may be stopped, yea, and (as is said of Jordan) turned backwards and the Affections run that way; and yet all this be but accidental and violent, in respect unto the natural tendency thereof, which remains still one and the same.

2. There are answerably also accidental or consequential respects or considerations that are but Appendixes to things which in themselves are the most Spiritual, which are foreign and extrinsecal to the things, and yet are revealed in the word together with those things with the apprehension of which, a natural Man that hath nothing in him but only self-love, may be stirred, moved, and affected. As take sin for one instance, there is the evil of sin as sin; that is, the Spiritual Evil in it as Spiritual, and as it is contrary to God; and there is the wrath of God, &c. which is the consequent of Sin, that is an accidental evil to it, as it is sin: As there is the Charcoal in its foulness, and there is the

 the Fire in the Coal. Likewise there is Christs Righteousness as it is a Satisfaction to God for sin, and the Glorious way of saving Sinners by it, above all ways else, this is the Spiritualness of it; and there is the freedom from that wrath thereby; the one is the thing in it self, the other is the Consequent or accidental appendix of it. Now (you know) like will still find out its like, suit and consort with it. Hence my Exhortation is, That you would in searching your selves, narrowly observe what your Spirit doth match withal; that is, what it is in Spiritual things which your Hearts are taken with in them, whether with what is accidental chiefly, or chiefly with what is truly Spiritual. The Apostle hath an Expression (1 Cor. 2. 13.) which may allusively help me to convey my meaning, comparing (saith he) Spiritual things with Spiritual. He speaks there indeed of the delivery of Spiritual things to be Preached of by us; and it is as if he had said (comparing the words afore and these together) if you be to make Orations about things Civil, Politique, Scholastical, then use all your Flowers of Rhetorick and Art to set them out with, for Fleshly Worldly matters are best drest up in Cloathings and Ornaments that are suitable to them; but if you be to make Sermons, take and seek out such Words and Expressions as may be savory and Spiritual and so suited to the matter. In like manner (say I, in allusion to it as to the point in hand) if you be to examine your Hearts, compare Spiritual things with Spiritual, or else Accidental with Accidental: Lay things of a sort together; that is, observe what kind of Affections in thy Heart, are stirred, and to what sort or kind of things, and upon what Considerations. If therefore thy Case be such, that only transient and accidental Affections are in thy Heart (accidental I say to the natural whole Current of thy Heart) finding out and comforting with the like accidental considerations in things Spiritual; here is no genuine true Spiritual Regeneration, here are plainly but two Bastards married, two slips of each Family, accidental Affections, to accidentals in things Spiritual; and their Brood will be answerable, they will not inherit with the Sons of the free Woman; that is, Spirit here. But on the contrary, if there be a new Spring and Fountain set open in thy Heart, that works forth it self a natural Current and Channel contrary to that other, whose poyse was to each, which doth withal find out that in Spiritual things which are truly Spiritual, suits and complies with the things themselves as in themselves, and pours out its streams upon them and runs into them, here is a noble match between two Offsprings, of two Heaven-born Families, which will never be parted, but as a noble Plant will bring forth Fruit unto God, and unto everlasting Life.

Another Consideration I would premise, as both useful to prevent a mistake in Examination of our selves hereby, and which also ariseth from, and is the natural Corrolary of this part of my definition, suiting the Heart to Spiritual things. The premise is this, That the Spiritualness of our affecting of Spiritual Things, lies not in a total opposition or exclusion of what suiteth self-love in us, or aiming at our own Good; but if it be rightly stated, it takes it in the most naturally that can be. Some good Souls, when they hear of such Doctrines as these, That Spiritual Things are to be affected for themselves, and as Spiritual, have presently made this Interpretation of it, That if the Heart be truly Spiritual, then it must affect them in opposition to themselves altogether, and to their own good: And that therefore they must wholly renounce and cashier all thoughts of a mans self therein, thinking that if they at all intermix them, they do unspiritualize all the rest.

Or when they hear that there is an accidental goodness in Spiritual things which will take self-love in a Carnal Heart, they then presently judge that therefore true Spiritualness lies in this, in having no affection of self-love working or stirring at all to any thing in things Spiritual. These are both mistakes: And the very terms of this latter part of the Definition I have given, duely understood, clears and states this great Case, and is preventive of these mistakes. Mark it, It suiteth the Heart unto the things; now if the Heart be made suitable to the very things themselves, it is certain that a man must and doth at once affect affect both the things for themselves, and for his own good also. For why? Let the things be the most Spiritual that ever were revealed; wherein doth a man's own good lie but in the enjoyment of what is comfortable to him, and which he most desires? And what is it that is most comfortable, and yeilds most content to any man, but the things that are suited to him, and he unto them? If therefore the being and end of Grace lie in this, to suit the mind to Spiritual things themselves, and for themselves; then it must needs most happily fall out and come to pass, that at once in affecting the things in themselves, the Believer pursues his own Good and Happiness.

The General truth of this Assertion, That mens Comforts, and so that which they account their chiefest good, do lie in the suitableness or frame of their minds as it stands unto the things, is so evident in Experience, as I need not insist on it. What is the reason that trahit sua quemque Voluptas, One man is pleased with one thing, another with other things? It lies in the several humors, and suitableness of dispositions to such or such things. You use to say, That which is one mans Heaven, is another man's Hell; what otherwise is the reason that carnal Men mind the things of the Flesh, or Earthly things, naturally, but because they are suited to them? Else they have a Light within them which tells them that they are not the best things. You see in Nature it is not every stone, though good and pretious, that will draw Iron after it, or unto which Iron will greedily run or clasp with, but with the Loadstone it will; and again, no other Metal but that, will close with a Loadstone. What's the reason? There is a suitableness. Now then take a carnal Heart, and change the Inward radical disposition of it, make and render it suitable to God, and Christ, and all other Spiritual things, as they are in themselves (and the power and efficacy of Saving Grace must lie in this, or differs not from Flesh) and instantly that Soul is taught, and hath an Instinct for its own good, and greedily and Naturally (according to the measure of Grace given) runs out unto, and after these Spiritual things as Spiritual, and placeth its Happiness and Good in them, as truly as ever it did in the other.

You will say, Wherein then is the difference between a carnal man's affecting these things and a Spiritual man's doing so? For it is out of self-love in both. I answer, out of the Principles already delivered.

1. That the Fundamental and Original difference lies not in this, as if that were a carnal Heart that with respect to its own good, or with love to it self, did affect Spiritual things; and on the contrary, he only were truly a Spiritual man that did not at all out of self-love affect them. No! God forbid; but that which puts the difference is, what that goodness is, which in Spiritual things the Heart of a man doth thus affect, and find his good to lie in? If it is only that which is the accident of all goodness, and but the consequent of the other, as Ease of Conscience, Freedom from Wrath, Judgment, &c. And the man not affected with the things as in themselves, there being no suitableness at all to the things if they could be nakedly represented to him, and in their Spiritual Hue; this Heart is a Carnal Heart; and thou that wearest it, art not a Spiritual, but a meer Outward and Accidental Christian: For as a man affects, so he is. The usual comparison I give to express the difference between these two, is this: Take two men, whereof the one is in perfect Health and Vigour, and as Hungry, as Esau was, when he came out of the Field; and take another who is Heart sick; set meat or drink before these two, the one falls to eat it (and that as it is meat) out of appetite, and suitableness to the thing in it self: For God hath Ordained the Belly for meats, and meats for the Belly: The others Stomach nauceates the thing simply in it self considered, and the native Scent overcomes him: But yet rather then he will dye, he will take down something, and yet by his good will he takes that only when it is so sauced, as the natural Scent is not discerned: So it is here. If God, and Christ, and his Righteousness, and the Graces of his Spirit, could be represented in their native naked Hue, a Natural man could not receive them, as the Apostle speaks; but take them as dipr,
and

Book IV and fauc'd with ease of Conscience, hopes of freedom from Wrath, &c. carnal men take them down: In a word, they make use of them as Physick, not as Meat. Here in this Case a man affects not the thing, hath no mind, or suitability to the thing it self, but to the consequent of it; and a meer accident belonging to it, which is freedom from Pains, &c.

2. Another difference is, Where only thus the accidental goodness of Spiritual Things affect a man, there is self only, or love to a man's self only, that is the root of such Affections; yea, and such a carnal self, as of its self would pour out its Affections to other things much rather, to which only it hath an inbred Suitableness. The whole Heart of it self would run that way, and no other, by its good will. But being over powered by the Power of the World to come, there is a stop put to such Affections, and the Current of them turned another way. But take a Spiritual man who is in his Inward man suited to things Spiritual, and Spiritually Naturalized, or Naturally Spiritualized to them; and though the accidental Considerations might have first mov'd him (for alas at first a man hath no other Principle but self-love to be wooed and courted) and in their rank lawfully continue still; yet he now, being come unto them, and himself Spiritualized, he closeth with the things themselves as in themselves, and as best and most excellent, Phil. 1. 10. He finds so much in the things themselves, that he wisheth no greater good, yea, no other good, than what ariseth from the things, and from Communion with them and enjoyment of them. He finds his good lies in them, which (as was said) ariseth out of a suitability. So that now the state of the Case is not whether thou affectest them out of self-love, or for thine own good, yea or no; but whether the things themselves have been made suitable to that Inward man, and so withal unto that self in thee. The root of all that which we call Hypocrisie, or counterfeit Grace, though wrought by the Spirit, doth lie in this defect, the man hath not an Heart to the Things, but chiefly to the Appurtenances of them, and so is said in Scripture to have an Heart, and an Heart, and to be a double-minded man; because he pursues not the things for themselves, but for what accompanies them; when all the while, as to the things themselves, he hath an Heart against them, if they were represented in their true Spiritualness. And this is the true meaning of that Phrase: For otherwise it were far more proper to say of a regenerate man, that he hath had an Heart, and an heart in him, for he hath really two Principles, Flesh, and Spirit, two men, two Springs and Fountains in him; of Flesh, suited to things Fleshly; of Spirit, suited to things Spiritual: But yet because his Heart is truly suited unto these Spirituals, therefore he is said to affect them with his whole Heart, and not to have an Heart, and an Heart. But the other in their most over-flowing Affections that seem as a Land-flood to carry the whole stream that way, as in the Peoples Hearts when the Law was given, We will (say they) obey the Voice of the Lord. Oh (says God) would there were such an Heart in them.

As a Corollary from what hath been spoken, I shall a little further enlarge on this Question, Whether a regenerate man, as such, may and doth affect Spiritual things for his own good, and how far? Briefly,

1. Take self-love as it is a natural Principle, and annexed to Being or Entity it self, if Grace will have a Subject to reside in, it must have this for part of it, for it is the adjunct of Being. If you think to Spiritualize your Affections so far as nothing of love to your selves should remain, then you must destroy the Subject of those Affections. If you cut off this Nail entirely, you cut off the Finger too: Pair it you may, and must, as to the inordinacy of it; thus to the Captive Woman taken to Wife, was done by the Law, Deut. 12. 11, 12.

2. If Grace sanctifies us throughout, and every Faculty and Principle in us, (1 Thes. 5. 23.) then it sanctifies self-love in us: For of all things in us, it is most a part in our selves: And if there be a sanctified self-love, then part even of our Holiness must lie in loving our selves. But then withal, observe that this Sanctification of self-love is eminently seen in this, that the Heart being made and suitable to Spiritual things, it is enabled and made so truly happy, as to find its own greatest good in those things, and is carried forth towards them with the greatest contentment to it self. And so it comes to pass, that when a man's Soul is perfectly sanctified, he loves these Spiritual things with a stronger love to himself, than any carnal man can do, or ever did, carnal things. And hence these two make but one stream; I at once love my self, and Spiritual things themselves, and all comes to be reconciled by this, that the Heart is made suitable to them. Yea, upon this ground I will go yet higher; The more I judge God, Christ, and all other Spiritual things to be the best, and chiefest good for my Soul (and this when considered in the highest Spiritualness that can be supposed to be revealed by the Spirit, and discerned and apprehended by me) when they rise up in the most Spiritual Spirituality, the Holy Ghost himself can or doth represent them, then for my Soul to be most able to say, These are the best for me, and to have Spiritual Affections rise up as these other apprehensions of the Spirituality of the things do rise, this argues still that my Heart hath the greater degree of Grace. And the reason of it is clear from this Principle, That Grace suits the Soul to Spiritual things; and therefore those actings of my Heart argue it still to be the more Spiritual, as being so suited that still I find my highest good to lie in the highest and utmost Spiritualness of them: Even as the more a Man's Stomach affecteth and relisheth meat, the strongest meats, yea, and the more sweetness it finds therein, the better Stomach it is. David's Heart hath in a great degree decided this in few words, Psal. 73. 28. It is good for me to draw near to God. He found Communion with him, out of suitableness, to be his greatest Good.

C H A P. VI.

How we may discern, value, and love Spiritual things, purely as Spiritual, and yet view them as Blessings to us: And regard, and affect our own Interest, and Benefit in them.

IF any do yet understand me so, as to have this Objection still in their thoughts (putting it by way of supposition) That if any man should love Spiritual things as Spiritual, chiefly for his own Good, would not this be Hypocrisie, and he be a carnal man?

I answer, Yes: And even this will also follow from that Principle I have insisted upon. For if a man's Heart be carried out suitably to the things, that is to God, and Christ, &c. as they are in themselves, then he cannot but prize, adore, value, and love them above himself. For if his Heart be not suited to the things, as they are proportionably in their own worth, his Knowledge and love of them is not such as the things require, and so are not suited to them. And (as I said) it is a false and a Counterfeit Knowledge of, and Affection to them, as was afore observed. So that, it is a Contradiction to say a man's Heart is suited to the things, and to say, That he affects them as such, chiefly for himself. For if he knows God as God, or Christ, as the truth is in Jesus; Then (as John says in another Case) he finds these to be infinitely greater than himself, and himself to be but as a Mote flying in the Beams of the Sun. And if he did not accordingly prize and affect them and their Glory, His Affections would not be suitable to these things. (Therefore self falls down, and gives up it self most to exalt the things above it self, when it finds them most suitable to it) Yet still notwithstanding, this on the other side falls on with the highest consistency, That a man never loves loves himself more, yea and never finds he doth it more, then when he finds he loves them above himself, and not for himself chiefly.

If you ask me how far these two may stand together? I answer, they are consistent in a due Subordination of Self unto God, and the things of God. All men must acknowledge this, That true Grace is the Image of God's Holiness, Col. 3. 10. And it so long continues to be his Image, as it keeps a due and answerable proportion unto that Holiness that is in himself, the great and only Architype, and Master Pattern of all true Holiness. Therefore it is consistent with so loving God, and our selves, in such a subordination as God loveth himself and us. Now if we consider God; he as God loves himself above all, and works all things for his own Glory; and therein lies his Holiness, in choosing his Elect unto Salvation; for he did it for his own Glory, Eph. 1. 5. 6. Having predestinated us unto the Adoption of Children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his Will: To the praise and glory of his Grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the Beloved. And yet every where the Scripture also doth ascribe God's Electing us and Redeeming us to his Infinite love born unto our Persons (God so loved the World &c.) And that not comparatively only as to others (Esau have I hated) but simply, as he bore an Affection to our Persons, Deut. 10. 15. Only the Lord thy God had a delight in thy Fathers to love them. You see then, that in God's Heart our Salvation, and his own Glory, love to himself above all, and infinitely above any respect to us, had a great place, and yet a true real and special love and affection born unto us, did sweetly meet together, and run in one Channel subordinately to the other. And this hath been to many a great help, and inducement to their believing God's real intention and heartiness to save Sinners and themselves, that it is a design which falls in with the utmost manifestation of his own glory: Yea, and God in effecting it, or bringing it about, hath contrived all the means of Salvation so as to represent at once to us an intermixture of transcendent love to us, and a prerogative respect of his own Glory. Look one way, and you think he loved us, as if he regarded nothing else: Look on the other side, and the glory of his Grace doth so appear, that we seem to be forgotten, and God's glory, alone shines in it. Are these two then so reconciled in God's heart, love to us, and himself? Come we now then to the heart of a man saved and regenerated Spiritually, and certainly they may consist also there. And the saving Faith of both these respects, and Affections had by God to his own Glory, to us, and our Salvation, may also work both ways in our Hearts. And indeed God in commanding us to love him above all things, yea our selves, hath withal given leave to us to love our selves in so doing, in an answerableness to his own loving us, whilst yet he aimed so eminently at his own Glory, as if nothing concerning us had moved him. For Grace in us is the Image of what is in himself: And all this (say I still) may justly be enforced by this Assertion, that Grace in the Heart is a Principle that elevates, and suits the Soul unto the Spiritualness of things Spiritual. Now the Glory of God above our Salvation, being the most Spiritual of Spiritual things (it is Spiritual in summo gradu) then if the Heart be suited to the thing, it must in the end exalt and set this up, as it is in this its Spiritualness, and so set it in this its high Throne above it self; it were not Grace else, nor suited to this Object. And because it is a Principle that suits the Heart thereto; therefore it withal must have the greatest delight when it finds it can do so; therefore the greater Happiness consists therein, and therefore the Believer enjoys his own good most, in being so affected. Grace is the strongest Creature and Principle that ever God did, or shall make. It comes upon the Heart when it is an utter stranger unto God, and when it is full of self-love, and is as contrary to God, as any one thing can be to another, and yet it comes and begets an instinct in that Soul to make its own highest Good to lie in the Good and Happiness of that God aimed at and delighted in, above its own. I will end this. This Love to God ariseth not out of self-love (tho' it is so in a carnal man) but it may more properly be said to be joynd with it, self-love to take it into it self.

3. When we say that Spirit here, in John 3. 5. is a suiting the Heart to Spiritual things themselves, the meaning is not, That the closing with God himself, and with the Person of Christ abstractly considered, is all and the whole of true Spiritualness, or which are the only Objects of a Spiritual Heart: But there are many Benefits by Christ, and that come within the Souls cleaving to God, which are Spiritual also, and so are truly and Spiritually the Objects of the Affections of a regenerate man, as Spiritual. This I add, to prevent a mistake also.

Many when they hear of such a Doctrine as this, that Spiritual things are to be affected as Spiritual: Take it in thus, That therefore all Affections to any thing but to God, and to the Person of Christ, simply for themselves, and not at all for any Benefit or Blessing with them, are Affections of an Heart that is Carnal.

'Tis true indeed, that those before mentioned Dispositions are in a Spiritual Heart, raised up unto an intense degree (for these only are Spirituals in summo gradu, as we use to speak of other things, as of Heat in Fire, &c.) yet withal, the Benefits that flow from adhesion to the Persons of God and Christ, are in their degree Spiritual also. Thus you have it expressly pronounced, Eph. 1. 3. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all Spiritual Blessings in Heavenly places in Christ. Here you have mentioned the Persons of God the Author, and of Christ the Conveyor, distinguished from the Blessings, and yet the Blessings themselves are termed Spiritual, as well as God and Christ elsewhere are. And Adoption, (v. 5.) and Redemption through his Blood, and Forgiveness of Sins through the Riches of his Grace (v. 7.) are ranged among the Number of them. So that even in these Blessings themselves there is a Spiritualness to be found, and Spiritual Considerations about them, for which a regenerate Heart Spiritually affects them, and seeks them. The eye that loves to behold the Sun's Light, and to behold the Beams of the Sun, doth certainly love the Sun it self the Fountain: For those Beams are High and Heavenly, as well as the Sun it self is an Heavenly Body. And thus it is with respect to all Spiritual Blessings. Justifying Faith, which is as Spiritual a Grace as any, hath not immediately the Person of Christ in its eye, abstracted from its Righteousness or Forgiveness, but as arrayed with them. There is therefore a Spiritualness in Christ's Righteousness to be found, for which we must value it, and to close with it is as truly Spiritualness, as to close immediately with the Person of Christ. Paul desires (Phil. 3.) to be found in Christ, not having his own Righteousness, &c. So is it in all Graces, they are Spiritual things: Only I add this, That all these are Spiritual but derivatively, and as they relate to God, and Christ, and unto their Glory. If you cut them off from that Relation, and value not their worth, as in that Relation, they lose their Spiritualness: As the Sun Beams have a glory in them; why? Because they are Beams of the Sun, as rooted in it, flowing from it; which if you could cut off, they would lose. Now carnal Hearts in valuing and affecting these Benefits, cut them off from God, and Christ. A dark cloud of self interposes, and they do not most value them on the account of their relation to the Persons of God and Christ.

This also is farther to be considered, that many Believers, especially when young in Grace, may not have those Principles and gracious Dispositions, so far stirred, and acted (although the things are in them) as to be able eminently to discern that high suitableness to God and Christ in its true Spirituality with difference from what is from carnal self. That is, they may not presently find that love to the things themselves, for themselves, budding, and shooting up, so as to overtop that other remaining Principle of regard unto their own selves.

1. It is therefore to be considered, that Believers at first having carnal self stirred towards Spiritual things (even as Temporary Believers have) as well as Spiritual self, they are in respect of this mixture termed Carnal, rather than Spiritual, because that Principle is, if not predominant in acting, yet so vigorously, and perhaps more sensibly, acting in them, than the Spiritual part, purely Book VI purely as such is found to be. When Paul wrote to that Church at Corinth, he writ to Saints, yet professeth he writ not to them as to Spiritual, but as to carnal (1 Cor. 3. 1.) that is, as to Babes in Christ, whose workings are to sense more carnal than Spiritual, tho' they afterward do grow up to be more Spiritual. Thus in the first Birth, a Child first lives the life of a Plant, then of a Beast or sensitive Creature; and last of all springs up Reason, and yet the reasonable Soul was the root of all these, and so was the Principle of them there from the first: So it is in the New Birth often. Therefore let none be discouraged though the present actings of their Spirit have been low, and not risen up eminently above carnal self (as to their sense) for true Grace or Spirit may be in them carried out with the mixture of the other, and that genuinely (as to the thing it self) unto what is Spiritual.

2. In the main and whole ordinary Course of a Christian, these two streams run together in one Channel, and have no occasion of parting; but they find that loving their own selves, and their affecting Spiritual things for themselves, do concur: in so much as whether they affect themselves most, out of love to themselves, or most affect the things themselves, they cannot discern: As when all the Bells strike at once, it is hard to discern distinctly the sound of the loudest above the rest. So as although a man's Heart truly affects the things most, yet so much of self, carnal self, is mingled with it, that which is most eminent is not perceived. Only this they find, that their Affections are still carried on one way or other to things that are spiritual; and in this Case, the Constancy of the stream (though at some passage of a man's Life more shallow than at another) is that which doth best evidence the Holy Ghost to be the Spring of all, and that a Fountain of spiritualness is sprung up in that Heart, which feeds it thus to Eternal Life. The truest Issue therefore, which in examining our selves we are to bring our Souls unto, is ultimately to search, taking the help of those Cautions given along with us, and not to rest satisfied till we have found some Dispositions in our Souls naturally matching with, and suited unto, what is spiritually good in things that are Spiritual. And although in the mean while till this is some way discerned, the Soul may support its self with the thoughts, that those Affections that have been drawn forth to things spiritual revealed in the Word, perhaps in present sense, only out of self-love, may yet in the Issue prove to have true strains of spiritualness running along with them. But yet still thou canst not have an undoubted, or infallible evidence of thy Regeneration, till thou findest thy Heart carried forth to, and clofing with what is truly spiritual in those Blessings.

C H A P. VIII.

That the Blessings which we have by Christ are purely Spiritual, Proved by an enumeration of them; How a Spiritual Heart considers and affects them in their pure Spirituality.

I COME now to reduce this Inquisition unto Particular Instances, that is, to view over some things Spiritual, and to single forth in them what is truly Spiritual, severed from what is accidental, and so to bring them, and your Hearts together, and to see how they will and do match and agree.

I will begin first with such things as may seem less Spiritual because suited unto what is in our selves, such are the Benefits that come by Christ. Now in each of these there is something that is purely and truly Spiritual, towards which which for the Heart to be suitably carried forth argues Spiritualness in the Heart. Now to clear our Understandings in this, Take this for a true, and certain general Rule, That all the Spiritualness that is in every such Spiritual Benefit consists in its relation and reference unto God himself, who is that great Spirit, and the Fountain and Measure of whatever is Spiritual. Neither Grace, nor any Spiritual Benefit, is further Spiritual then as it is a Tenant of his, and holds of him, and both issues and flows from him, and returns again unto him, as redounding to his Glory. So as it is the Shine, the Lustre, the Reflexion of his Glory on these Blessings, some way or other, which alone makes them Spiritual, as they are Streamings down of God upon us, and are Rebounds and Reverberations of Glory back again to him: Which is more eminent in those Blessings, then their being Benefits unto us. And without this aspect unto, and conjunction with God, they, if simply considered as Benefits, would lose their Spiritualness. So as although because they are truly Benefits, and for our good, and do make us happy, therefore Self-Love is admitted to partake of, yea, and to embrace them for its own good (for they were also ordained thereto) yet unless that self-love be taken with what is of God, and tends unto God in them, so as really to find its own good to lie therein, it would not be Spiritual Love.

And the truth of this Notion (That you may not think it a meer Imagination) discovers it self in things that are humane, and in the professions of men, concerning things that are found amongst men.

1. A great ^{King} ~~thing~~ in bestowing his Benefits puts the worth of them upon what is from himself, and redounds to himself. That story of Alexander illustrates it. You know the great King Alexander when he thought fit to give a Gift, he professes to give as a King, and so gave a City as a reward for a mean Service; justifying it thus, I give as a King (as the Scripture Phrase also is, 2 Sam. 24. 23.) as becomes a King to give, and not as becomes the man to receive: So as in that Gift or Benefit there shined more of Honour and Glory to Alexander, than there did of Good and Benefit to the Person on whom it was bestowed. The same strain was in Abasuerus, Thus shall it be done to the Man whom the King delighteth to honour. Thus it is in the Spiritual Benefits we have from God: God hath set them out unto us infinitely more by what is in them of benefit to us, and would have us accordingly entertain and embrace them; And when the Heart is answerably thus affected, then it is Spiritual.

2. The Heart of an ingenuous man, though carnal, may understand how it is in this respect with a regenerate man's heart, so as to be convinced of it by what they feel, at least often pretend unto, in humane Affections. If a Person be far your Superiour, or a Friend very dear, and you are either Suitors to him for a Gift, or Place, by reason of which you shall be near to him: Or if you be to return Thanks and Obligations, or if you have a Token given in remembrance of a near Friend, your Hearts prompt you, or your Wits, at least, counterfeit such strains as these, Non tam dono (Lector) quam abs te dato, I rejoyce not so much in the Gift, as because it is by so noble a Hand, and so noble a Mind. And what you must profess to regard is, that he who gave it would cast an eye upon you, or that you might come thereby to have a nearer approximation to him. For instance, will you take one of Paul's Realities? (I must not term them Complements) in Phil. 4. 14, 17. He Celebrates and magnifies their Gift (v. 14, 15, 16.) more then any, from any Church; and concludes (v. 17.) This I speak not, that I desire a Gift, but that Fruit may redound to your account. He considered the Benefit as it was to himself apart, and also as in its tendency it redounded unto the Givers again whom he valued. Thus also you value a Medal, or a piece of Gold, or the Picture of a Friend not by its worth or weight, but as it relates to him, a thousand times above the value of it in its self. Now bring but the Analogy of such things as these on to God, and his Benefits or Graces bestowed on you, and Judge righteous Judgment; and ask your Hearts this Question, For what it is you do affect them, and what is in them takes your Hearts?

Run over those particular Benefits, celebrated (Ephes. 1.) All which the Apostle pronounceth to be Spiritual Blessings (v. 3.) And particularly observe wherein the lustre of their Spirituality lies.

1. What greater Benefit, or Honour can be to us, then to be the Sons of God? v. 5. Is it a Small matter to be a Son in Law to a King? Oh what honour is it to be a Son to God! There you see is the Benefit; well, but see what are the Beams of Spirituality that irradiate this, and shine every way through it?

1. That the Original of it was the good pleasure of his Will.

2. That this is bestowed by Jesus Christ.

3. That it is bestowed to the praise of the glory of his Grace. Take this Benefit as it is thus Spiritualized, and there is no Heart that can truly prize and affect it as thus considered and circumstantiated, but it must be a Spiritual Heart.

1. That Heart is Spiritual, which values it in respect of its Original, viz. The good pleasure of his Will. This took Christs heart in Gods saving of his People (which Christ is personally interested in, as much as we) more than the Salvation itself of them, Mat. 11. 25 Father, I thank thee, even so Father, it seemed good in thy sight. Christ sets his Seal, his own concurrency of Will with Gods, as that which above all pleas'd him also in it, namely, that so it seemed good in his sight. What is it the Beloved Disciple in like manner calls up Believers to behold and value their Son-ship by? Even this Original of it, the love of God, 1 John 3. 1. Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be call'd the Sons of God. Herein lies the Spirituality of their value for the love of God in respect of its Fountain in God's Heart, his love therein is valued more than the thing.

2. That Heart is Spiritual which values the Privilege of Son-ship on the Account of its being bestowed by Jesus Christ, and that it is possessed by virtue of a relation to Him. This also holds forth Spirituality above what our Son-ship is otherwise in its self. Adam was a Son of God's by Creation, Luke 3. 38. But to be a Son of God by Christ, this is an higher thing, and puts the Spirituality upon it, which an holy Heart values. For it is to be a Son in Law by marriage unto, and union with, the Natural Son of God. So then the Spirituality of our Son-ship lies in that relation it hath unto Christ. Now bring a Spiritual Heart unto it, and though it cannot but infinitely rejoyce, that it is become a Son of God; yet that this should be such a Son-ship as is founded upon relation to Jesus Christ as an Husband, this makes his joy greater. To which of all the Angels hath he said, My Son is thy Husband, and thou art his Spouse, and so thereby becomest my Son? To as many as received him, He gave Power to be the Sons of God, John 1. 13. This infinitely adds more unto it in a Spiritual Hearts esteem.

3. A spiritual Heart rejoyceth that this should tend to the praise of the glory of his Grace: That God should take Sons, who at best were such but by Creation, and then by the Fall were made Sons of Wrath, Children of Hell, Sons of Satan, and make some Persons Sons, and Sons by Christ. And this rebound that it hath unto the praise of the Glory of his Grace, is the Spirituality of this Benefit, the Apostle being Judge. How hath or doth thy Soul close with it?

2. Then take the Second Benefit instanced in (v. 6.) which is, To be graciously accepted; And still it holds of God and of Jesus Christ. Therein lyes the Spirituality of it. First, There was mention of the free Grace of God in it just afore, and then follows, Wherein he hath graciously accepted us. This David valued above all, when he said Thy Favour is better than Life; yea, even above the Life he had by it, or through it, whether Spiritual, or Temporal. Gods Grace and Love ought to be more valued than the Benefit that occurs thereby.

3. A Spir-

Chap 6.

3. A Spiritual Heart considers, That this acceptation is in the Beloved. If God would profess to love one man immediately, as he is considered in himself alone (as some say he doth still the Angells, or to be sure, as he did Adam at first) and to love another Man in Christ, who is the primum Amabile, his first and naturally Beloved, his only begotten Son: Oh how would the Heart of a third man standing by, that is Spiritual, say, Oh Lord, love me in the Beloved with that love thou lovest thy Son! John 17. 23. What love is it that Paul values and triumphs in? When (Rom. 8. 37, 39.) he had first said, In all these things we are more than Conquerors, through him that loved us; What love was it, he had in his eye, that he thus valued, and which caused him to triumph? He tells us (v. 39.) that it was The love of God which is in Jesus Christ our Lord. Take this away, and all other love is but a common love, a Providential love. But herein lyeth the Gospel Spiritualness of God's love, that the favour of God is transmitted through Christ, who first hath contracted all the Beams of God's love into himself, and so diffuseth them unto us. This takes, and enflames the Heart more than if in Common, and immediately, the divine Love was cast down upon us: As in a burning glass you see the Beams of the Sun to be more contracted, and strengthened.

4. A Spiritual Heart considers the other Benefit (v. 7.) Redemption and Forgiveness of sins. This all men will readily, and greedily listen after: Well, but a spiritual Heart takes it in those rays of Spiritualness Paul hath set it in. 1. In whom we have it, namely, Christ. 2. Through his Blood. 3. According to the Riches of his Grace. Justification and Pardon of sin through Christ's Righteousness is the Glory of our Religion: And take it in all that doth surround it, it is as spiritual a point as any other. And indeed it is too spiritual not for Papists only, but for many in these times to cleave to. There are those among us who begin to be weary of it; though formerly, out of reverence to the Reformation of Religion, even carnal Hearts entertain'd it: But take it in its true spiritualness, and then to be sure only spiritualized Souls will value it.

1. A Spiritual Heart regards Justification by Christ's Righteousness as it relates unto God's Glory, that is, the glory of his Grace. If ever God contrived any thing for his Glory, he did this. Inherent Grace in us justified us once, but though it was the love of God the Creator, and the due of innocent Nature, yet God had no great liking to it; for as (Rom. 4. 2, 4.) man had thereby whereof to glory; and the greatest Reward was, by that way, reckoned of Debt and not of Grace: So man falling, God was willing to take that Escheat and Forfeiture, and for ever to dispoil inherent Grace (though he meant to bestow such Grace still, out of Grace, anew) of its first ancient Priviledge, and hath pronounced his Sentence against it, That whatever it might avail and serve for, in man's primitive innocent state, to be sure it should never justify him that hath it more. The glory of his own Grace entred upon this, and hath sequestred it as his own Prerogative for ever, To the glory of his Grace. And he valued this one thing so much, as he hath given it away, and entituled his own Son to it, on purpose to magnifie his Blood; that this might be his eminent title, Jehovah, the Lord our Righteousness: And he hath put him into the possession of this Honour, as won by his Sword and his Bow; as Jacob said of a Plat of ground he gave to Joseph.

Now to bring this home to our Hearts by Application: The News of Forgiveness, Justification, Redemption, all men run away with: But I beseech you consider wherein the Spiritualness of this Benefit lyes; and whether ever your Hearts have been taken at all with it: Indeed they should be most taken with it. USE.

1. We ought to adore this way of our Salvation, as it brings in so great a Glory to God's Grace, and to Jesus Christ: So as we re weto choose, we would have this way. This was the disposition of the Heart of Abraham our Father as appears in Rom. 4. Compare but the Beginning and the conclusion of the Apostles discourse about our Father Abraham: Whereas (v. 2.) it is said, that if Abraham had been justified by Works, he had had whereof to glory (which was contrary to God's design) and whereas he made Abraham's Faith the Subject of his discourse in the residue of that Chapter, at last he concludes (v. 20.) that He staggered not at the Promise through Unbelief, but was strong in Faith, And gave Glory to God, and Therefore (v. 23.) it was imputed to him for Righteousness. This his giving Glory to God (though withal he commends the strength of his Faith he did it with) hath a respect to v. 2. Where, in opposition to Abraham's glorying (if he had been justified by Works) he had had whereof to glory, but not afore God: So then by comparing each, the meaning is, that Abraham fell down afore God upon the revelation of this way of Justification, which he perceived much to tend to glorifie God and his Grace, that willingly upon that account he gave up all his own Works (a greater Sacrifice than that which he intended, namely, the Sacrifice of his Son, which is celebrated as a noble Work proceeding from Faith, James 2.) and laid them upon the Altar of God's Glory. And he was glad that his Heart had light upon such a way as did so highly glorifie God by the Spirit, being the more strengthened (as it is said) to seek Salvation by this way, because it gave all to God, and nothing to man. Hath this in Justification taken thy Heart, which took our Father Abraham's? Perhaps thou wouldest serve thy self on God, and take the Benefit of this his pardon, but hath it ever been done with giving the Glory to him, and to his Grace?

Thus also when thou comest to have recourse to Christ's Blood, and Righteousness for Justification, (which is the Second thing Paul puts in to Spiritualize this Benefit unto us) is it the glorious Relation to, and the Influence that Christ and his Blood hath upon Justification, that causeth thee to value it, looking upon it not only as a thing thou must have, or thou art lost and damned, but oh! dost thou desire to be cloathed with it, to be found in it? For what doth a Spiritual Heart value it, What! is it only that because their own Righteousness is as filthy rags, therefore they throw it away? No: But that if it had the Righteousness of Adam, yea, that which all the Angels had at first, yea all the Inherent Grace and Glory which both Angels and Saints have now in Heaven, it would gladly take the Occasion to throw it away, and make a Trophy and Spoil of it to glorifie this Righteousness of Christ. It was the Apostle Paul's desire to be found in Christ, not having his own Righteousness. He speaks like a man afraid of being taken tardy in that place of residence, and runs away from it as far as ever he could. Unto me (says Christ Isa. 45. 23. for it is spoken in his Name, as appears by the Apostle's citation Rom. 14. 11. Phil. 2. 10.) shall every Knee bow. And what special Glory is it, that the Saints shall give to him? The 24. v. tells us, Surely one shall say (as the greatest thing they could say, and they say it with greatest asseveration, as if they were to utter but one thing, they would say this) In the Lord (Christ) have I Righteousness, Ah how feelingly is it spoken! And they give it to him as a matter of Glory, for so it follows, v. 24. In the Lord shall all the Seed of Israel be justified, and shall Glory. And truly the Conjunction of these two in that place, In the Lord I have Righteousness for Justification (as it is interpreted v. 25.) and in the Lord have I strength for Sanctification, makes me consider Augustine's interpretation of that Passage in Psal. 71. 16. which an hundred times he celebrates to this very sense (though our reformed Interpreters reject it) I will go in the strength of the Lord God, I will make mention of thy Righteousness, even of thine only.

This relation that forgiveness of sins hath unto Christ's Blood, as the Price, how doth it raise the price of it unto an Holy Heart? How do the Apostles speak of it and thereby teach Believers how to esteem it, and the Benefit by it, as it is by his Blood, and that as having a relation to his Person, that gives the value to it? We are redeemed, (says Peter) not by Gold or Silver, &c. but by the precious Blood of Christ, 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. Oh value your Redemption by this great Price of it. And to this, Paul also directs us when he speaks (Acts 20. 28.) of the Church, which God hath purchased with his own Blood. Mark it, the Blood is valued as it hath relation to the Person whose own it is. And again John speaks to the same Purpose, Rev. i. 5, 6. From Jesus Christ who hath loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own Blood. To him be Glory and Dominion for ever and ever. How was the thought of Forgiveness of sins (as it is a meer Benefit to us) swallowed up into an adoring, and giving glory to him, who shed his Blood for that Benefit? When the Apostles speak but of Faith as in this its relation to Christ's Person, Oh! How do they singularly term that Grace above all others precious in that respect, and call upon all Generations to call it Blessed, because it is that Grace, which thus adores, glorifies, and magnifies the Blood, and the Righteousness of God, and of our Saviour Jesus Christ. 2 Pet. i. 1. To all that have received like precious Faith $\epsilon\upsilon$ δικαιοσυνην, on the Righteousness of God and our Saviour Jesus Christ. Faith may have a thousand other Vertues and Properties in it, but the Glory it gives to Christ and his Righteousness in point of Justification, is that which makes it precious Faith indeed. This stone set in it serving to make the Lustre of this Righteousness to shine forth, is that which makes the Ring so rich and precious. I shall name one general conclusive place more, in 1 Cor. i. 29, 30, 31. That no Flesh should glory in his Presence; but of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us Wisdom, and Righteousness, and Sanctification, and Redemption; that according as it is written, Let him that glorieth glory in the Lord. The thing I quote this now for, is, That it is not Justification or Redemption alone, and singly taken, nor Christs being made Righteousness and Justification to us, and our Sanctification, being accepted in him, which the Heart should alone glory in, but the Heart should rejoyce in the Honour which Christ hath by all his, or it is not truly Spiritual.

C H A P. VIII.

That a Spiritual Heart desires Heaven, as it is a Spiritual Happiness: Desires, and prizes Inherent Graces as Spiritual Ornaments of the Soul, and a Divine Likeness, in which God is pleased: Takes pleasure in holy Duties on the account of his having Converse and Communion with God in them.

YOU have hitherto seen how all the Benefits reckoned Eph. i. are Spiritualized.

Now take Heaven it self, which he there also mentions, v. 11. In whom we have obtained an Inheritance, &c. If any Benefit seems to be desired and affected by the Generality of Men, it is Heaven;

because it is conceived to be the ultimate Happiness that will fill up the natural desire of the Soul to the full: Yet if men did take in true and genuine notions of it, what that Happiness is, and wherein it lyes in the Spirituality of it, and we could suppose their Hearts remained still carnal, nothing would be more unsuited to them. If (as Christ says to the Sons of Zebedee) you knew what you asked, or knew what 'tis to be there, none but an Heart truly, yea sublimately Spiritual, can find in its Heart to desire it. The Apostle Paul (Eph. i. 17, 18.) prays for these Ephesians that they might have a Spiritual Knowledge of the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, in these words Book V. That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of Glory, may give unto you the Spirit of Wisdom and Revelation in the Knowledge of him: The eyes of your Understanding being enlightned: That ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the Riches of the glory of his Inheritance in the Saints. Elsewhere it is called an Inheritance of the Saints (Col. 1. 12.) as the Possessors of it: here (in Eph. 1. 18.) he speaks, otherwise of it, as an Inheritance αὐτοῦ of him. It is translated, his Inheritance in the Saints. The signification of it is, that it is what the Saints have, by inheriting himself. I would but ask who, or what in Heaven is the Inheritance of the Man Jesus? It is said (Rom. 8. 17.) that we are Heirs of God, joynt Heirs with Christ. Now what is Christ's Inheritance? It is God himself, Psal. 16. 5. Thou art the lott of mine Inheritance. 'Tis Christ's Speech. 'Tis not an happiness only from God as the Author, but it is in God himself, who is there to be enjoyed. In Heaven God is set afore us to pick all Happiness out of: And so all that Happiness must arise from suitableness of Heart to him: And therefore the Saints are said (Col. 1. 18.) to be made meet to be Partakers of it. And here in this Place of Eph. 1. 11. it is added, In the Saints, for none else can take Comfort or Joy in God, Rom. 5. 11. Come now, canst thou say, and say it Heartily, out of a taste how good the Lord is, Whom have I in Heaven but thee? Canst thou out of a taste (I say) declare there is nothing on Earth which thou hast enjoyed, in Comparison of him? So as thy Soul saith with it self, If God be in Heaven, and if all hold good which the Word says of him, and I have him there, though I should have nothing but him, I find I should be happy enough: Canst thou say this? It is a sign thy Heart is Spiritual.

5. Take Grace inherent in us, what is it draws out thy Heart to desire it, but the Spiritualness of it?

1. 'Tis certain that Grace hath the greatest Dowry that any Creature whether in Heaven or Earth hath. Godliness is profitable to all things, (1 Tim. 4. 8.) having the Promise of this Life, and a better belonging to it: But these simply are but Additionals unto it: And it may be thy Heart is only willing to match with so rich an Heiress.

2. Vertue hath an Ornament in it, as it adorns the Soul, and is the Perfection of it: And so the Philosophers, Plato, Hercules, and others, judged it: But wherein doth the Excellency, the Spiritualness of Grace lye? 1. That it is the Image of God and Christ, and so is allied to him, of Kin to him, as being divine Nature. 2. That it fits thee for, and carryeth forth thy Heart unto Communion and Fellowship with God, and is a Principle that enableth thee to Sanctifie him in thy Heart. 3. That it makes thee in these respects Beautiful, Amiable, yea Glorious in God's Eyes, and Esteem, whose Favour thou valuest above Life. It makes thee such, that Christ greatly delights in thy Beauty, Psal. 45. Doth God there move the Church to get much of Grace (Eph. 5. 26, 27.) That he might Sanctifie and cleanse, it and present it glorious to himself, that is, for his own delight, and rejoycing in her as his Spouse? And doth Godliness thus alone consider'd, or (as the Apostles own Phrase is 1 Tim. 6. 6.) in its own self-sufficiency, μετ' αὐταρκείᾳ, take thy Heart to seek it as great gain? Here is Spiritualness.

6. Take Duties of Obedience, as Prayer, Reading the Word, partaking of the Holy Ordinances of God; there is a spiritual part in all these; which is, to meet with God in them, to Sanctifie him in the Heart, whilst we are conversant in them. The Law of these Duties is to have to do with God; and if with God, then to glorifie him as God in our Hearts and Affections, that is the Spirit of them. And therefore (1 Tim. 4. 8.) Godliness is opposed unto Bodily Exercise, that is the outward performance only, for Godliness is the Spirit of Obedience; which is,

1. When God is Sanctified as the end of thy Duties.

2. When

2. When he is regarded as the object matter of them, and as one with whom we converse in them, then they are Spiritual Duties; when God is Sanctified in the Heart; and then God is Sanctified, when either, the motives for Duties, are fetcht from Considerations of God, and he is made the matter of them, and the converse we have with him is from some suitableness of Heart unto him. But that which causeth carnal Hearts (or any Heart so far as carnal) to neglect them, or to be weary of them, or wish they were over, and done, is, that the Law of them is to have to do with God all that while, who to a carnal Heart is burdensome Company: And so carnal men perform these Duties to him, as Complementers do visits to Persons, whose company they regard not. Will the Hypocrite pray always (says Job) And why will he not? Because he will not delight himself in the Almighty, Job 27. 10. that is, the Law of the Duty, and he, cannot consort with God but overly, and so his Prayers grow overly, and in the end he gives over. To pray, or read, to ease thy Conscience, and to keep all quiet there, what is it? That is not the essential part of the Duty. Paul considered the Law and Duties of it in its Spiritual Nature, Rom. 7. 14. The Law is Spiritual and good, and (v. 22.) He tells us that he delighted in the Law of God (in the Inner man) and in every Duty of it. Now delight is out of suitableness; and why? Because his Inner man, that delighted it self in God, was assimilated to God. (Rom. 8. 7.) The carnal Mind is said to be Enmity against God first, and therefore not subject to the Law; and so the reason men delight not in these Duties of the Law, whose tendency is to carry the Soul up to God, is because they delight not in God. But the state of the Case is quite contrary in a Godly man. Psal. 103. 10. Teach me to do (says David) thy Will, for thou art my God, thy Spirit is good, lead me into the Land of Uprightness. None but a Spiritual Heart could Experimentally and Feelingly have moved God, with this, as being first moved thereby it self. He had found the Spirit of God coming upon him in Duties, teaching and leading, acting and quickening him, v. 88. and was so good to him, that he loved these Inward Influences and Effluxes of his heart to God therein; and they were so good to him, so suited, that he prays for more, and could not be content without it. Oh! (says David) thy Spirit is good! Oh therefore give me him, act me by him in all that I do.

7. To mention no more; take God, and Christ, and the Holy Spirit, which are (as I said) Prima Spiritualia, the First, and chiefest Spirituals, what suitableness hast thou had unto these, abstractly considered in themselves, cutting off what accidental Goodness is annexed to them, as represented in the word? Doth thy Soul say at times, yea at any time, The Lord is my Portion? Lam. 3. Doth thy naked Soul say it of the naked Lord, and say it heartily from the Soul? Lovest thou him by all thou hast heard of him, or knowest of him by his Attributes, Laws, Decrees, and Dispensations? Thus also for Christ, Dost thou love him for himself, and not only as a Redeemer? Though to love him as such, he doth allow thee; for therein he hath shewn and manifested Infinite love unto thee: But yet there is Aliquid in Christo formotius Salvatore; there is that in Christ that is far more amiable than his being a Saviour. Dost thou love him as thy Head and Husband, more than as thy Saviour? So a Wife unto a Physitian, if she loves him, will really do all for him, although she be never so diseased and needs his help (both these relations of Head and Saviour in Christ, are distinctly insisted on Eph. 5.) or dost thou love him for what God most loveth him, (and that is, that he is his only begotten, and therefore Beloved Son; and because he pleased his Father in all things) as well as because out of love he did work thy Righteousness? God therefore lov'd and exalted him, because he was obedient to Death (Phil. 3.) Because he loved Righteousness and hated Iniquity. (Psal. 45.) therefore God exalted him, and anointed him with the Oyl of Gladness. There are and have been Souls that have found their Hearts drawn forth in love to Christ chiefly, because in doing (though for themselves) he expressed so much Obedience to his Father, and thereby shewed he loved them (John 14.

Book IV 31.) having that in his eye more than their Salvation. And dost thou reckon withal this as thy chiefest good, and desire of thy Soul, to be and live for ever with him? Oh to be with Christ is best of all, says Paul. Dost thou value the Indwelling of the Spirit? Canst thou say to God, Thy Spirit is good, who helps me to all that sweet Communion with thy self, and takes of Christ, and gives it to my Soul: Oh take not thy Spirit from me, for thy Spirit is good &c.

Objection. You will say, these are but Notions, and such as are invented to express in the abstract Spiritualness by.

Answer. I answer, They are such Notions as will distinguish one day all your Souls into Heaven, or into Hell; and they are such real Notions, as holy and happy Souls feel them and live upon them. Paul, you see, writing to them that were Spiritual, Spiritualizeth all these things in this manner as I have now done, and thus setteth out these things, as taking it for granted they (as so represented) would take with Spiritual Hearts, as suited to them. And therefore he provoketh these Ephesians to bless God for them as Spiritual Benefits, Spiritual in these respects, as he had set them forth; so he writ, so he preach'd, and so were their Hearts suited to them. I conclude (as the Apostle doth 1 Cor. 14. 37.) If any man think himself to be Spiritual, let him acknowledge these things to be Spiritual; and then see how they (as such considered) and his Heart, do agree.

USE.

You learn hence what is the true measure of judging of our Spiritual growth: It is to grow up in what is true Spiritualness, which is a raising up all in the Soul unto things Spiritual in their Spiritualness. It is not a growth in respect of Bulk either of Duties or Knowledge of, or Affections unto things Spiritual, but still they must be discerned and lov'd in their Spiritualness: And by this character is growth in Grace, with difference from younger Christians, still expressed, Gal. 6. 1. If any be overtaken in a fault, you that are Spiritual, restore such an one: That is, you that profess to have more Grace, and are more deeply acquainted with Temptations, as is in the next words insinuated. Thus also the Apostle speaks, 1 Cor. 3. 1. I could not write unto you, as unto Spiritual, but as unto Carnal, even Babes in Christ. Spiritual men he opposeth to Babes, and therefore understandeth by those Spiritual Persons, grown Christians, that are raised up to discern of things that differ, and to approve the things that are Excellent.

 Third Person of the TRINITY,

BOOK V.

Of the Work of the Holy Ghost in us, as it is represented to us under the Notion of a new Creature. That besides the Holy Spirit's Indwelling in us, and his Motions, and Actings of our Spirits, there are permanent, or abiding Principles wrought in our Souls, which dispose them for holy Actions, and give spiritual Abilities for the performance of them. That this new Creature is a Change of the Heart. That it is a Conformity to the Image of our Lord Jesus Christ.

CHAP. I.

That exciting and moving Grace is not all that the Spirit doth for us, to enable us to the performance of Holy Actions: But he works Grace inherent, which is an abiding Principle in us. The Opinions of the Popish Doctors, of the Arminians, and of some Enthusiasticks, considered.

JOHN 3. 6.

That which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit.

I HAVE proved from this Text of Scripture that the thing wrought in us by the Spirit, is Spirit, and makes us spiritual: I now resume the same Text to demonstrate from it this Assertion, or Doctrine:

Doct. That over and above exciting, and moving, and aiding Grace unto Acts, there are Imwrought, and infused in the Soul at Regeneration, inherent and abiding Principles of Spiritual Life; by which the Soul is inwardly fitted, capacitated, inclined, and quicken'd unto the Operations of a spiritual Life. I

Book V.

I shall first consider, and refute some Opinions that are contrary to this Assertion. Tho' the Papists very much speak of Habitual Grace as a Principle by which the Soul acts: Yet they assert that the first and only Grace that actually turns the Soul is no more then exciting and adjuvant Grace: And that so to Conversion it is sufficient that we be aided and assisted by divine Grace, without receiving a new Principle of Life from it. But yet they say when a man hath turned to God out of free Will, excited by an internal motion of Grace at first, then God infuseth an Habit of Grace as a Root, or a radical Principle of good Works. But then observe the Reason, and to what end they thus state it, and affirm, how that then, and not before the Souls first turning to God, the habits of Grace are infused by God.

1. Because in plain terms according to their Doctrine of Sanctification, or inherent Grace, or the infusion of a new Principle of Life, is Justification, or that for which God adopts, and accepts a man to eternal Life, as that which renders a man amiable and acceptable to God, and constitutes him Righteous.

And 2. They assert that a man being at present made Righteous, or justified thereby, then those Habits infused further becoming the Roots and Principles of good works, these good works come accepted in order to the meriting eternal Life, and are habitual Graces, given as the Foundation of Merit: But so as still the first Acts of turning to God are carryed on by exciting Grace; and therefore they say the Understanding and Will are but as of a man in the dark that can see imperfectly, or of a man fettered or sick, that can stirr of helped. And they therefore call all these Acts of turning to God by the Names of Attrition and Contrition, and the like, as pre-dispositions if the Soul to the infusion of this Form or Principle of Grace: Even as fire or Flame is introduced into the Wood, when it hath been heated and hath smoaked. This is the Papist's Doctrine. See Bellarmin, de gratiâ, lib. 6. cap. 15. per totum. And so Bishop Davenant in his Determinations, Quest. 9, and in Perkins his Reformed Catholick, do state their Opinion, and refute it.

And though I know many of them say, that to every supernatural Act of exciting Grace, an habit at least, or an inherent disposition infused is required; yet I retort this as a contradiction in their Doctrine, which is that Justification after a man is so turned to God in the infusion of Habits, which therefore they must necessarily thereby deny to be afore Conversion, or else why is not the man justified thereby, or else acceptable afore. Bishop Davenant also, in that before cited Determination of his retorts it further thus upon them: Some Papists (says he, citing Suarez) overcome by force of Argument, do yeild, That unto the bringing forth of Spiritual Acts, there is always infused by God a quality which supplies that which an Habit serves for. Yet to salve that other Principle they withal say, That it differeth from an habit only in this, that it is not permanent, but passeth away together with the act, when that ceaseth. To what end (saith he) are these evasions? Why do they not acknowledge these kind of Infusions into the Powers of mens Souls, to be the vivification of them, and that to continue as permanent, and to be encreased.

Others, who are not Papists, putting our Justification upon Faith in Christ alone, and not upon habitual Grace at all: Yet withal falling in with the Popish Doctrine of free Will and exciting Grace, as sufficient to the first Conversion, they professedly and utterly deny any infusion of Habits or Principles abiding in the Soul, necessary to Conversion; but that it consists altogether in acts stirred up by Supernatural motions, by which the Will is strengthened to accept or refuse: And so all of our Conversion, according to this Arminian Opinion, lieth in such acts of our parts excited by extrinsecal Motions and Enlight'nings on God's part. Hereby it comes to pass (as they would have it) that the whole of Conversion is parted between the Will, nakedly considered, and the adjuvant Grace of God assisting or elevating the Will by way of motion and perswasion, without any working or infusion of a new Heart and Spirit, Spirit unto us, for they being not necessitated to embrace such Habits for Justification as the Papists do, and yet falling in with the freedom of Man's Will, and supernatural exciting Grace only, as the Papists do, they reject all such Infusion of Habits, and wholly deny any part of Regeneration to lie therein; and say it is Figmentum Scholasticum, an Invention of the Schoolmen. Only indeed this they own, That the Soul being thus once turned to God by exciting Grace, by its multiplying such acts through that grace acquires an Habit or facility to act graciously, as by the often repeating of other acts men use to do, in Arts or Faculties acquired, (as in playing on the Lute, &c.) which indeed supposeth (as their Principles do) an imperfect inchoate Power already in man's Will to act graciously which through assisting Grace stirred up by crebrous and frequent acts, grows up into an Habit or facility of working. But the Doctrine of Regeneration which we profess, is differing from both. We detest that Doctrine of Infusion of Habits for Justification, or as a Foundation of works, to make them meritorious. But we say they are simply required for man's acting holily, and for the pleasing of God by good works, which good works declare and assert withal that in our Regeneration from the first acts to the last, and so throughout our lives, there are infused supernatural Principles of Life and Grace, which remain and are inherent in us: And so the works thereof, nay the workings of Grace in us, are not meerly from motions and excitations of the Holy Spirit in us; Which is the full Scope of the Apostle Eph. 2. 10. We are saved (that is justified and made Heirs of Life) through Faith; not of works, for we are his Workmanship created unto good works; which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. Here are good works as the fruit, and here is a workmanship created in us as the Principle whence works proceed, We are his workmanship created to good works, and there are no good works without it: But yet instead of good works being ordained to justifie us, He is the adequate and full end and Ordination of Gods Workmanship in us unto good works, which is only, that we should walk in them.

There is another Opinion of some high-flown People, who reject and despise all Habits, and Effects of Grace, esteeming such a Participation of the divine Nature (and of which the Apostle speaks 2 Pet. 1. 4.) to be meerly by Accidents and Qualities, which they Contemn. This Notion is too Low for them, and therefore they boldly Assert that they are Partakers of the Divine Nature by being Transubstantiated into God, and that tho' they be no more then Creatures in appearance, yet the Being of God is in reality the Substance of their Being. And tho' this Opinion is veil'd under the notion onely of higher Union with God; yet it is Demonstrable out of their Writings, that they rejecting all that our Divines say of our Blessed State in Heaven it self, and of Gods being all in all, as to the Communications of himself to us there; and rejecting also the Hypostatical Union of the Humane Nature to the Person of the Son of God, they cannot feign any higher Union above those, than that which consists in this, that the Saints shall become God. And their believing themselves to be God, tho' in appearance Creatures, is the Fundamental in which all their Religion centers, and indeed they need no more. So then as God said upon occasion of the fall of Man, Man is become as one of us. So say they of Man restor'd, that he becomes God. And therefore they professedly cry out against two things especially in our Divinity, because they lie in the way of this high imaginary preferment of the New Creature, to which they profess to advance it. One Truth decryed by them is the Personaly union of our Nature with the Divine in Jesus Christ: Which tho' it be the highest advancement any Creature is capable of, yet falling lower than this, which they aspire unto, they despise it, as not high enough for them: All the Saints being (as they say) rais'd up to the Form of God, and transform'd into God.

Among many other grounds of this bold Assertion, there is one more plausible, which is this, That by our Opinion we make all our Communion with God to be but Accidental, by vertue of Accidents, or Qualities in the Soul, and not real, or substantial.

But I answer, It is true, that as the Soul it self and its Faculties of Understanding and Will, are but Creatures: So Graces are but Qualities in it, and that Knowledge, and Love which remain in Heaven are no more than Qualities:

 Book V. But yet if they will allow the substantial Soul of man to be a meer Creature, and to remain a Creature for ever, distinct from that divine Essence and Being, then it cannot otherwise be Partaker of the God-head than by such Communion with him as our Person with another Person, who never become one in Nature and Essence, but continue two several Beings. The Communications therefore of God to us, and our Communion with him, are transacted no otherwise, than by our knowing God, Loving him, and enjoying him for ever. A created Understanding and Will in a Creature not united to one of the Persons Hypostatically, can come no otherwise to be capable of Communion, and Intercourse with God. And yet to say that this is but an ac- cidental Enjoyment of God, or the divine Nature, is utterly false: For as we acknowledge and profess that it is God himself, and all the Blessedness of him Objectively, that is both known and lov'd of us: So we profess to enjoy as our Happiness the Divine Nature as it is in it self: For such will our enjoyment of him be in Heaven, where these inherent Principles of Communion with him, viz. the Knowledge of God, and the Love of God, will continue, and be perfected. And withal we affirm, That the Soul is swallowed up into the Enjoyment of God, as its all in all. But as for essential Participation;

viz. so to enjoy him, as to be made one Being with him, that can never be. The manner of the enjoyment is by means of Accidents indeed, but the thing enjoy'd is the Divine Nature made known to us, and beloved of us, as most blessed in himself. But withal we say that if the Soul had not these Faculties of Understanding, and Will, which are but Accidents, tho'

 Essential Properties of it: And likewise if it had not those infused Qualities of Grace not Holiness superadded, it could not have this Participation of God. Look as the Eye when it beholds the Sun, hath an immediate Communion with the Sun; yet if it had not a visive Faculty, a Power of seeing, and were but a meer Ball of Flesh (such Flesh as other parts of the Body are) the eye could not be a receptive of the Sun. So it is here; the Understanding could not see or know him as God, nor the Will glorifie him or love him as God, if it were not inspired, and endowed with those new Principles for which we are contending: Much less would it be capable of taking in the Glory of God (as in Heaven it doth) to be its self glorified thereby. And look as when the eye beholds the Sun, it reflects not on its self, it thinks not of, nor regards to boast of this that it hath such a Power of seeing in Affect, but 'tis wholly taken up with the Glory of the Sun it self, which is all in all in such a View. So is it in Heaven, when God is all in all to the blessed Souls there. Only if there were not a new Eye given the Soul to see with, and an Heart to love him; or a Divine Nature like unto God's, it could never have to do with him, nor were it capable of it, nor meet for it.

 Take Lead, yea Gold it self; and the Loadstone will not draw it, nor will it follow the Loadstone nor cleave unto it; but let the divine Power turn that Gold into Iron which hath Qualities like to, and assimilated to the Load-stone, and then you shall see the new made Iron in motion, as the Loadstone moves to it, yea if the Loadstone doth touch a peice of Metal, it infuseth a magnetick Vertue to draw Needles unto it, and yet that vertue is but a new

 Quality, or Accident. So it is herewith Souls; it is not the best or largest or most refined Soul for the Substance of it, with all its essential Faculties, nor the largest or greatest Understanding Faculty in any such Soul, that is fitted for this Communion with God: But take the dullest Soul, and meanest among all the Number of Souls, and let God infuse his Likeness unto it, that is, give it a divine qualified Understanding to know him, and a disposed Heart to love him, and instantly it runs after him, and doth it naturally and suitably.

C H A P. II.

That the Holy Ghost, when he makes us New Creatures, works in us fixed and abiding Principles of a Spiritual Life, proved ; 1. Because it is a New Birth, which supposeth a Principle of Life given. 2. Because this New Creature is called Spirit. 3. Because it is called so, in Opposition to Flesh. 4. Because the Apostle speaks of our being Born of God, and so having received a Seed of Divine Life, which cannot Sin. 5. Because he speaks of Eternal Life, abiding in us. 6. Because, 2 Pet. 1. 3. We are said to be Partakers of a Divine Nature, and this is something which is continually growing in us. 7. The same is proved from the Parable of the Sower, and his Seed, Mark 4. 17. And of the Ten Virgins, Mat. 25.

I H A V E in the foregoing Chapter given an Account of those Opinions which allow no other Work of the Holy Spirit, than to move and excite us to Holy Actions ; and which deny his Influence to produce in us Living and Abiding Principles, from which when Regenerated, we have some Inherent Abilities, (tho' in dependance still on his renew'd enlivening us, both to Will, and to Do, Phil. 2. 13.) to perform them.

I shall now prove the Doctrine which I propounded in the beginning of that Chapter, which is this.

Doctr. That the Holy Ghost doth not only move and stir us up to all good Actions which we do, but that in the Work of Conversion, he produceth in us Living, and Lasting Principles of a constant Holy Life.

First, I shall first Explain this Doctrine.

Second. I shall prove it by several Arguments.

I. For the Explication of the Doctrine. All Men may Understand the difference between an Inherent Power in the Soul, or Principle wherewith to Act ; and the Act, or Operation it self, be it Inward or Outward, proceeding from it, as the effect thereof. In the Body, we see an Hearing Ear, (to which that Speech of Christ's concerning Spiritual hearing, alludes, He that hath an Ear to Hear, let him Hear) which is made by God ; and endowed with a ready Disposition, and ability to hear sounds : And this Power is inherent in the Ear, and is ordained for Hearing, as the Act. The same we may understand of the Eye ; there is a visive Power residing in it, and enabling it

Book V. it actually to see Colours when laid afore it : Which are the Objects ordained and fitted by God unto it. The Necessity of which permanent Power in either, we see by experience; and is mainly understood by the Example of those whom Christ Cured (that were Born Blind and Deaf) if we consider the different Condition of the Persons, afore and after the Cure : As also that there was an Almighty Power put forth, first, to give an Inherent power to their Ears and Eyes, to hear and see, ere their Soul could put forth the Acts of Hearing, or Seeing. And of both these, the Blind young Man Cured, was so sensible; that he Proclaims it to Christs Praise, John 9. 25. One thing I know, that whereas I was Blind, now I see: And he knew too, that it was Extraordinay, and a work of Omnipotency: v. 32. Since the World began, was it not heard, that any Man opened the Eyes of one that was Born Blind.

And however there were a Capacity, and remote radical power in his Soul; yet it could never have produced an Act of seeing any thing in this World, which it was in the midst of, without a new bodily Eye; or a new endowment of it with a new power of seeing.

Now there is in the Case of a Man Unregenerate, and Regenerate, a further distinction to be made. 1. Of a Natural Faculty in the Souls of Each. 2. Of a Principle in the said Faculty, in order to Act. 3. Of the Acts both are ordained for.

Take the Soul of a Man Unregenerate, it hath naturally and essentially an Understanding Faculty in it (he were not of Mankind else) and that Understanding hath a Capableness, and a remote Faculty to have Spiritual Objects taken in by it; and so to Act towards them. For when it shall once come to know them in a spiritual manner, it must be said that it is the understanding Faculty, which is Essential to the Man that doth Understand them. Indeed before a Spiritual Light induc'd into it, it still remains as one Born Blind, as to those Spiritual Objects; And it cannot receive them, for they are Spiritually discerned, (1 Cor. 2.) but must be super-endowed with a new Ability, and Principle infused into it by a New Birth; or it cannot Spiritually Eye, nor at all Understand them, as they are in themselves, and although through Adjutories of Light, &c. Men may see them in the Painted Glass, and Literal Notion of them; yet not as they are in themselves, in their true Spiritual Nature: No, no more then our Bodily Eyes can see Angels, that are of that other invisible World, an higher world then Ours, unless they do assume Visible Shapes, or we see them Painted with Earthly Colours. Answerably Christ says, John 3. 3. Jesus Answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a Man be Born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God. They cannot see them: And thus also God pronounceth of the Jews in the Wilderness, after Forty Years experience of Gods Wonders, and giving the Law; Deut. 29. 34. Yet the Lord hath not given you an Heart to perceive, and Eyes to see, and Ears to hear, unto this Day. Eyes they had, and Understandings they had, as Men; but not as Spiritual Men; and so had not the true sight of Spiritual things to affect their Hearts towards them, in their Spiritual Nature; without which God regards not any other Apprehension of them.

Now tho' this new Spiritual visive Power, with which the Understanding is endowed, be for the kind of its being but a Quality; and a Super-additional Accident introduced into the Understanding, and not a Faculty, as the Understanding is, Essentially inherent in the Soul; yet as it is planted in the Soul in order to receive, and take in things Spiritual, (which are of an higher, order of Beings unto our Natural Understandings, and are Infinitely Transcending things Natural, and Worldly, which are the Objects of our Natural Understandings; and by which, or like Terms, the Apostle distinguisheth those two differing both Objects, and Powers of a Regenerate, and Unregenerate Man.) so this new Divine and Heaven-born Power, Elevating and Empowering the Soul to discern them, hath justly the name of being entitled a new Understanding, 1 John 5. 20. And we know that the Son of God is come come, and hath given us an Understanding that we may know him that is true, that is, truly to Understand him that is true.

Thus the Bodily Eye of Man after the Resurrection, Elevated to see Angels, (which now are invisible unto it) may be enstyled a new Eye, yea, and a Spiritual Eye; even as the whole Body then shall be a Spiritual Body; (as it is called, 1 Cor. 15.) And yet that change will be but the Superinduction of new Spiritual Qualities suiting the Eye, and whole Body unto such Spiritual Objects as Angels, &c. are: The substance both of those Eyes, and of those Bodies remaining the same that now. And yet those new Spiritual Habilities then are said to constitute their Bodies Spiritual, and Transform and raise them into Bodies of an higher Rank and Order, like to Angels, as Christ says, and he speaks it of what manner of Persons in respect of our Bodies, we shall then be. In like manner the whole of a Man new Born, so endowed with this Divine Quality of Spirit; (though it be but a Quality) is styled a New Man, a Spiritual Man. It gives a new Name to the whole Man, And doth as truly Constitute him such, in that Sphere of Spirituality; and deserves to be so styled being the Principle of this New Spiritual Life; as much as the Soul with its natural Faculties, simply considered, hath the name of, and Constitutes the Man to whose Body it is joyned, in the rank of a Living Soul: For though Grace be but an Accident, yet 'tis such as is worth all Mens Souls in the Substance of them, devoid of it.

And Further; If the Soul were not by the Infusion of this new Spiritual Quality Elevated, and admitted into that Order of Spiritual Agents, having Spiritual Life, it would want that Essential property (in Common to all sorts of living Agents in their kinds) to act from within it self: But must be acted meerly by a Principle Extrinsecal to its self.

And Further; The Necessity of such a new Spiritual Hability to be infused into our Souls, to Constitute them Spiritual, and Agents of that kind, is, that both Act and Principle may be of one and the same Kind and Nature; a Spiritual Acting, Proceeding Suitably from a Spiritual Principle; which had first Constituted the Man in whom it is, a Spiritual Man; as good Fruit is from a Tree, first made Good, as Christ says; without which it cannot bring forth good fruit.

And as the Bodily Eye at the Resurrection, cannot exert the least Spiritual Act to those Spiritual Objects specified; nor those Bodies put forth any one Exercise that is proper unto Spiritual Bodies, until at the Resurrection the Body be Constituted a Spiritual Body; so is it here.

And Lastly; This endowed Spiritual Principle in the Soul, is abiding; and permanently inherent in the Soul, when those Spiritual actings cease; as the exercise of our present Senses do in Sleep; or when they are disturbed, and hindered.

2. Having thus explain'd the Doctrine, I come now to prove it by these following Arguments.

1. In the words of my Text (John 3. 6.) the work of the Spirit in us is expressed to be a Being, or thing born, which implyes Principles of Life given it, in order to Acting, and Operations; or Works of Life. All other Births, do this; They give a natural Being: And so this gives a Spiritual one, and both according to their Kind. In Scripture it is not the Acts of Faith or Love that are said to be born of God, or a man to be born of God thro' those Actings; but on the contrary they are made Signs of a man's being born of God. As Effects are of their proper Cause. As a Child's crying, which is an Act of Life, is in Law made a Sign of a Child's being born alive: So Faith is made a Sign of a man's being born again, 1 John 5. 1. Whoever believeth that Jesus is the Son of God, is born of God. And this our Regeneration doth contain in it many more Graces besides Faith: And this Expression, To be born of God, signified in the Language of the Primitive Church a Fundamental common General Character, denoting a Christian truly and savingly wrought upon by God. Of which New Birth, this one act of believing Christ to be the Son of God, was an Evidence. Deus posuit in Corde Fundamentum Fidei; says Prosper: God puts in a Foundation of Faith into the Heart, and then draws forth the Acts of Faith. So John 1. 12. 13. They who believed in his Name, which were born not of Blood, nor of the Will of the Flesh, nor of the Will of Man, but of the Will of God. They were born first: The like is spoken of the Act of Love, 1 John 4. 7. every one that loveth, is born of God, and knoweth God. The Act of Loving God, is alledged as the Effect, and the note of a man's being born of God. That which is added, and knoweth God, shews that act of loving God, dependeth likewise on an act of Knowledge and of Acquaintance with God perswading it, but both of them depend on our being Born again. The Act of the Understanding in knowing God, depends upon being born of God as the Foundation of it, as well as the act of Loving. Unless a man be born again, He cannot see the Kingdom of God (says Christ, John 3. 5.) nor know any thing belonging to it. The Scripture speaking suitably to this Allusion, compares these new Powers and Abilities, unto natural Faculties, and Powers, themselves in the Soul; which are the Principles of Acting; such as is the Faculty and Instrument of Seeing, where Seeing denotes the Act. And the Scripture speaks of giving Eyes to see; Ears to hear; and an Heart to understand; Deut. 29. 4. Yet the Lord hath not given you an Heart to perceive, and Eyes to see, and Ears to hear, unto this Day: Now that which is properly said to be given by ones Birth, is the natural Faculty and Ability of any thing to act so and so, according to its Kind. So then, like as the natural Birth, brings a man forth with all the Powers of Sight, Hearing &c. So doth the new Birth the like. The Child exerciseth not these in the Womb at the first, yet hath them all in the Principle. 'Tis Basil's comparison, As the Power of seeing in a sound Eye; As Art in him who hath acquir'd it; Such is the Grace of the Spirit in him who receives it; always indeed present, but not perpetually operating.

De Spiritu
Sancto,
Cap. 26.

2. A Second Argument to prove the Doctrine, is, That this work of the Holy Ghost is termed Spirit, here in John 3. 6. and a spiritual man, 1 Cor. 2. 14, 15. and that in order to discerning Spiritual things. This Argument will be farther strengthened, if the Analogy be considered between this new Birth of the Soul and the Resurrection of the Body (which is called the Regeneration:) of the Resurrection of the Body, it is said (1 Cor. 15. 44, 45, &c.) That the Body is sown a natural Body, but it is raised a spiritual Body. I would ask what is that new Spiritualizing of the Body, but an endowing it with such new Qualities and Abilities as shall fit the Body unto a spiritual Condition and Actings: It shall be endowed with such new Qualities, namely, as Incorruption, Glory, Agility &c. and perhaps with new Senses, which we cannot now guess at, which are differing from, yet answering unto these natural Qualities and Powers our Bodies now, as natural Bodies have; unto which the character of these spiritual Bodies is opposed; the Change then is not barely of new Acts, but of new Powers and Endowments, enabling us to Act. Therefore Verse 50. he speaks of our present Bodies as those that are incapable of the Objects and Acts we shall have then; Flesh and Blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God. They want Powers to bear and sustain the Objects of spiritual Glory, and they want Qualifications to take them in. And therefore 'tis said of those that do not then die, that they shall be changed, Verse 52. and these vile Bodies shall be changed and fashioned like to Christ's glorious Body, Phil. 3. 21. which is spoken in respect of new inherent Powers and Endowments, which are Qualities, and are stiled the Image of the Heavenly man 1 Cor 15. 42. As is the Earthly, such are the Earthy, viz. Adam and his Sons in their Bodies; for so endowed are ours from him. And as is the Heavenly namely, Christ as risen, and in Heaven such shall our Bodies be. All import likeness in Qualifications, &c. Now then look as the Body is at and by the Resurrection made Spiritual in those Respects; in like sense it is that the Soul is made spiritual by Regeneration, which is termed a Resurrection to the Soul as the other ther is the Regeneration of the Body; as commonly in Scripture they are enterchanged. The Resurrection is termed a Regeneration, Mat. 19. 28. Col. 1. 18. where Christ is call'd the First-born from the Dead. And this day (says God, Acts 13. 36.) have I begotten thee. And so Regeneration is termed a Resurrection, Eph. 2. 5, 6. Even when we were dead in sins hath quickened us together with Christ (by Grace ye are saved) and hath raised us up together. And Christ is as powerful, yea and a greater Benefactor to our Souls now, than he will be then to our Bodies: He will therefore be a quickenng Spirit to both. And therefore in making our Souls spiritual, he doth as much for them, and works the like things, viz. new Powers in the Soul to see the Kingdom of God (as the Phrase is in this third of John) as well as he will work new Qualifications in the glorified Body, that it may inherit the Kingdom of God. To give our Bodies such Eyes as shall see Angels; who are Spirits, and are not otherwise the Objects of our Senses, is but in Analogy what is done to our Souls in giving them Eyes to see and an Understanding to know God and Jesus Christ, as they are in themselves.

3. A Third Argument from what is in the Text for this, is the Opposition (in John 3. 6.) between Flesh and Spirit. Flesh is evidently evil Dispositions, and Inclinations unto Evil, which dwell in a man, and which is a Root hath Fruits: And pursuing that Similitude, the Apostle enumerating the Works of the Flesh, which are manifest, termeth them the Fruits of the Flesh, Gal. 5. and in opposition thereto, Spirit (in the 17. v.) is used in like sense. And when Paul (Rom. 7.) speaks of that Sin that dwells in Him; he expresth it to be a Sin that, by occasion of the Law, wrought all Concupiscence; v. 7. mark that word wrought, It was a Sin which was distinct from the works of sin, and therefore it was an active Disposition, and Inclination, distinct from those Acts, as the cause of them: Which sin is also called an indwelling sin in the man: And so notes out, what is permanent. And in this Sense doth this Apostle up and down in Rom. 7. speak of it, terming it Flesh (as v. 5.) and Himself, in respect of this Sin, Carnal (v. 14.) and in my Flesh (says he) dwells no good thing. And in that very Speech of His there, which He speaks by way of Explanation, or Limitation;) In me, that is, (says he) in my Flesh, dwells no good thing; He implies that he had another Self, or me, wherein All good did dwell; (even as in himself, as He was Flesh, no good thing did dwell) and wherein the contrary good did dwell; that is, an Inclination to what was truly good, and spiritual. And therefore it follows, To will is present with me: To will what? Any thing that is good; which yet he was not able to perform; as it follows: But how to perform that which is good, I find not: as if he had said, Yea, but yet I have so much of Good too, continually dwelling in me, opposite to this Flesh, as is ready to put forth, and doth put forth, though but an imperfect Act or Will (for the Principle is but imperfect and Lessa Principia habent, Lessas Operationes) unto what is good, when it is presented to it: Now what is an inward Readiness, and Preparedness to Good, and that Spiritual good, as the Law is, but an habitual Principle, indwelling? And therefore, as of that wicked man it is said, He was ready to all evil; Acts 13. 10. So of a Godly man it is in like manner said, He is ready to every good work: Tit. 2. 1. meet, and prepared, as a Vessel is for his Masters use, both by its habitual fashion and make, as we say, which are inward Dispositions that fit it, by the cleanness of it from defilement, as 1 Tim. 2. 21.

4. A fourth Argument is drawn from what the Apostle John says, 1 John 3. 9. Whosoever is born of God, doth not commit sin; for his Seed remaineth in him: And he cannot sin, because he is born of God. He speaks of our being born of God, and that there is a suitable Nature, a Seed of divine Life in us which cannot sin, or be touch'd with Evil, for it cannot act contrary to its own Nature, and Being: As Fire being preserv'd cannot act contrary to its Nature. It may indeed be put out by subtraction of Fuel, yet if it be kept up, and and remain Fire, it cannot either moisten, or cool. This in Analogy is the force of the Apostle's reasoning that every Believer, by his new Birth receives such a Seed of spiritual Life, such an Heavenly Nature, which cannot cannot sin; for to do so, would be to act contrary to its self. It is the Soul it self which is endowed with this Seed of Life, and is the Subject, and intrinsic Principle of Action. The Holy Spirit, tho' he is in us, and dwelleth in us, yet is not this Seed of God here mention'd by the Apostle, for he is extrinsecal to the Soul her self, as to the Actions which she doth. Now it is the property of all things that have Life, to have in their several Kinds of Life; a Principle by which they bring forth Actions of that Life. And thus free, and Intelligent Agents in their Kind have a Principle of Life and Action, besides that first, and supream Mover of all, in whom we live, and move, and have our Being: Who tho' he be in us, and Acts us, yet he is but extrinsecal to the Act. For we our selves being endowed with Principles of Action, are moved by him, And therefore the Actions which we perform, as Praying, &c. are not attributed to the Holy Ghost as the Subject of them, but only as the Efficient. We must not say that they are the Holy Ghost's Prayers subjectively, but only efficiently. He makes them in us, and for us, and helps our Infirmities in Praying (Rom. 8.) but that which constitutes us in the Rank of spiritual Actors in the Duty, and the Subjects of it, is a Principle of a spiritual Life inherent, and seated in the Mind, and Will, and quickening us thereunto. And this is the Seed convey'd in the new Birth, and communicated from God who hath Life in himself. And that a man, thus born again, becomes thereby an Agent from a new vital Principle within him, is evident from a Parallel Scripture in the same Epistle of John, 1 John 5. 18. We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God, keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not. He speaks it indeed of the unpardonable Sin unto Death. But when he adds, He that is born of God, keepeth himself, he means that the regenerate man is an Agent in the Business, and acts from what is within Himself: And his saying that he is born of God, implies, that he hath receiv'd, and doth retain the Seed of God within him.

That the Holy Ghost is not the Seed meant in these two Places, 1 John 2. 9. and 1 John 5. 18. is evident, as by what hath been said, so by this farther reason: Because it wou'd be improper to say that therefore the man born of God cannot sin, because the Spirit of God in him cannot sin. This were utterly improper, but to say (as aforesaid) that the man who is born of God, and hath his Seed, cannot sin, is a Speech, which is consonant to the Voice of Nature. It implies the Voice of an inward Disposition, which causeth a man to say, he cannot do thus, or thus, contrary to his Nature, so remaining: It is Nature speaks, but the Holy Ghost himself becomes not the new Nature in, or unto any Soul.

And that other Speech, He who is born of God keepeth himself, doth most properly shew, that though the Holy Ghost in us be the great Conservator, and Keeper, and Actor of us; yet by means of our being born of God, and receiving a Seed of God within us, our Understandings and Wills do act, tho' actuated by him. So that the holy Actions, tho' the Spirit excites, and stirs us up to them, are our own, and we are the intrinsic Agent of them, and constituted to be so by vertue of a divine Seed convey'd to us in our spiritual Birth. And the Metaphor of Seed remaining is (As Thomas Aquinas out of Augustine explains it) an Allusion to what God doth to his other Creatures bearing Seed according to their Kind. He hath communicated to every such Creature a seminal Principle ordained to encrease and grow up to such, and such Effects of bringing forth Fruits, as we see in Trees, &c. And so in the Second Creation, God, in like manner, puts in a seminal Vertue, which as the Seed of Mustard, the least of Seeds (as Christ says) is yet to grow up to a Tree the greatest of all other: And therefore look what Proportion, and Ordination that natural Seed, with its Vertue sown in the Ground, hath unto natural Fruits, and Effects, the Like hath this Seed of God sown in the Soul of the Heart unto supernatural Acts. Seed is the Communication of a Principle of Life from things that live, ordained to grow up, and act according to its Kind: And in a simular manner this here is the Seed of all that Holiness ness which after follows in our Lives, and which springs from it, yea, and it is the Seed of Glory it self.

Nor is this Seed meerly the Word of God heard, or read by us, and remaining in our Minds, and Memory; as what we have heard, our Minds are said to retain. 'Tis true if the word heard become ἐμφύτῳ an ingrafted word in the Heart, changing that Stock into its own Nature, then indeed it is all one with this Seed of the new Birth: As the Apostle speaks, James 1. 18. Of his own Will begat he us with the word of Truth, that we should be a kind of first-fruits of his Creatures. Wherefore says he v. 21. Wherefore lay apart all Filthynefs, and Superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word, which is able to save your Souls. This ingrafting of the word, is in Substance the same with Regeneration its self, being a Similitude to illustrate it. But tho' the Word be sown, the meer sowing, it is not Regeneration, if it doth not take Root in a good and honest Heart (Mat. 13. 18. &c.) and therefore the meer receiving the good Seed of the Word, as the Stony and Thorny Ground did, regenerateth no man. For if it be so, that the Letter of the word falls either carelessly into mens Ears, so that the Understanding is not so much as possess'd with a notion of divine truth: It is no more then Seed laid up in the hard troden high-way-Ground: Or if it falls into the Understanding, yet so as not to affect the Heart, the Devil soon takes it away, as the Fowls pick up loose Seed, which hath not taken root in the Ground: Or if it works so as to stir the Affections, yet still if it wants depth of Earth to take Root, it is not the inherent abiding Principle of Regeneration, which we treat of, and indeed such a bare receiving of the Seed regenerateth no man.

That therefore which is meant by the engrafted word, is the Law of God written in the Heart (as God hath promis'd in his new Covenant to do it) utterly differing from the Work of the Law in the letter of it, which the Heathens had, Rom. 2. For it is such a writing of the Law as God had written in Christ's Heart, Psal. 40. 8. I delight to do thy Will, O my God: Yea, thy Law is within my Heart. It is this engrafted Word, the word or Law written by the Holy Ghost (2 Cor. 3. 12.) and therefore is distinct from that Holy Spirit himself) that is the abiding Principle wrought in us by Regeneration. And as Christ had this Law written in his Heart (Psal. 40. 8.) So we hereby are conformed unto Christ's Image, Rom. 6. For what is that, but an inwrought strong Disposition in the Soul, conforming, and inclining it to what the Word and Will of God directs unto? Grace is the Word of God concocted, and digested into the Heart, and made of one Nature with it. In which Sense, and for which cause, the Word is said to abide for ever in the Souls of men converted, 1 Pet. 1. 2, 3. And that Phrase of writing the Law in the Hearts, imports no less than such an abiding Principle. Words spoken are Transient, and vanish into Air, but Litera Scripta manet: what is written, abides, and is extant to be seen and read.

5. I draw a fifth Argument to prove that the Holy Ghost in regenerating us, works an inherent permanent Principle of a spiritual Life, from what the Apostle John farther says of eternal Life abiding in us. It is not only that eternal Life abides upon us, (as it is said John 3. 36. that the Wrath of God abides upon him, who believes not) but it is said to abide in us. Eternal Life must have a Beginning, as well as Accomplishment. And we all say that the Life of Grace is the Beginning of a Life that is eternal, and will be perfected in Glory, and abides in the mean time in him that hath obtain'd a Right unto the Life of Glory to come: It is not only said that a man hath Eternal Life, in that sense as a man is said to have an Estate, an Inheritance he hath right unto, but a Regenerate man's Condition is expressed by this, that he hath Eternal Life abiding in him; as an unregenerate man's Condition is express'd by the contrary, 1 John 3. 15. He that loves not his Brother hath not Eternal Life abiding in him, that is, in short, he hath not Grace. 'Twas a Phrase in those times to express a man's spiritual State by

Book V. by that Character, that He was One that had Eternal Life abiding in him, which Phrase I urge. Now, says the Apostle, I hope you will all grant that a Murderer whose Heart and Spirit is full of Blood to the Saints, as Cain's was to Abel (in whom the Apostle had Instanced) such a man cannot have Eternal Life abiding in him, as not being consistent with such an Heart and inward Disposition which his Soul is fill'd withal. He argues from the same Topick and Principle that he had done v. 9. that inherent Grace, that is, eternal Life that abides in the Soul, cannot consist with such a Frame of Heart as to hate the Saints as such, and to seek their Death and Ruine. The act of Murder, and that of a Saint, (as it may seem Uriah was) may with a right to eternal Life consist in David, but an Heart at enmity with the Saints (which is John's Scope) cannot, for it is a contradiction to that Principle of eternal Life which is begun in him and abides in him. You heard afore that Grace is call'd a Seed because it is the Seed and beginning of Eternal Life; and this Place confirms it, these both in like manner being said to be abiding in a Christian, and the Apostle alike arguing from both.

6. Further to prove my Assertion, that by Regeneration an inherent and abiding Principle of Life is wrought, I argue from 2 Pet. 1. 3. According as his divine Power hath given unto us all Things that pertain unto Life and Godliness, through the Knowledge of him that hath called us to Glory and Vertue. He speaks not of those external Priviledges and Benefits of Justification and Adoption, &c. which are given us; which is evident by two Arguments, 1. Because they are such things as are wrought in us by Power. The giving Justification and Adoption is ascribed to his Grace, &c. towards us; and so Works done upon us, and out of us, and yet bestowed on us, are usually said to be to the Glory of his Grace (Eph. 1.) But what are done in us are the proper Objects of Power.

2. Again Secondly, It is added that God, or Christ, in giving us these, is considered as he that hath call'd us to Glory and Vertue. Now you know the true Maxime is, that God's calling any Person unto any Employment or Dignity, is joined with the giving him Abilities, and an Heart suited with Principles answerable. So then his meaning is, That God having by Regeneration and Faith called us unto a Possession of Glory hereafter, and the Prelibation of it here, and in order thereunto the Exercise of Vertue and Holiness in this Life, he hath answerably by the working of his Almighty Power in us, given us a Spirit fitted thereto, that is, ready furnish'd with all things that are the Beginnings of, and Preparation to that Life (which you heard termed Eternal Life abiding) as also to all the Duties of Godliness, which we are to walk in here. He hath fitted us in some measure for that Calling. And you see that he speaks in the time past, that his Power hath (in time past and already) given us all and the whole of them, as to the several Vertues, Seeds, and Principles of them.

7. Add to this Seventhly, as another Argument, What is that divine Nature which is spoken of there in the fourth verse? Not the Divine Being of God, for that cannot be made Common between God and us, or divided. It is therefore Inherent Grace which is opposed to Lusts in the Words following, Having escaped the Corruption that is in the World thro' Lust. Nature is an abiding, permanent Principle, carrying on the things which it is to act accordingly. We are not Partakers of God's Nature essentially, therefore not as a Nature, otherwise then by having his Likeness or Image in divine Qualities stamp'd on us, and so becoming like to him, to be holy as he is Holy, which makes us fit to have Fellowship with him, and so to take in his Glory, and to be made happy by it, which unless we agree in an holy Nature, and Holy Dispositions with him, we cannot do. And this new Nature denotes a stable and permanent Being in the Soul, As also a Principle of working or it were not truly a Nature. Dionysius has rightly express'd it, Nothing can come to work or act till it hath received a Nature and a Being as the Principle thereof: So nor to act divinely or supernaturally till it hath a Being of such a Supernatural Nature given to it, and this is still the same with the Seed of God, and Eternal Life abiding in us. We have by the new Birth a supernatural Being, as by the first a natural.

8. It is a Seed, a Nature, a Life, &c. for it is said to grow up in us, or else what is meant by growing in Grace and renewing the inner man, and the like? How can this be meant but that as a Seed, which is an imperfect communication of Life, grows up to a Stalk, and Blade and Ear, so this of Grace in us? 'Tis such as all other growths are, and subsists therefore by the encreasing of those permanent Qualities and Vertues. A living man is not said to grow as such, or as a living man, otherwise then as he adds one act of Life to another. A man is said to grow rich by adding to an heap, but a living man grows in strength and Bulk answerably to the Principle of Life at first received.

Learn what is meant by those distinguishing Characters in the Parable of the four Grounds, and in that of the wise and foolish Virgins. The stony Ground's defect was this, they had no Root in themselves Mark 4. 17. Which speaks the very Language of inherent Grace, which is that which is properly in a man's self inbred and implanted. And Job calls it the root of the Matter, Job 19. 28. The foolish Virgins wanted Oyl in their Vessels, when that they had Oyl in their Lamps. The wise on the contrary had Oyl in their Vessels when yet their Lamps were out, as in Mat. 25. you read. Let any give a more rational interpretation than this, That the Oyl in the Lamps is such assistances by Motions and Enablings, as serve to hold forth an outward Profession, and to perform the same Duties, and to give the same light to others which the foolish Virgins had, but they had not Grace in the Heart, Oyl in the Vessel, as a Stock or Treasury abiding in them, when that in the Lamp might be out. But the wise Virgins had that abiding in them when themselves were asleep, and their Lamps clean out. It uses to be made an Argument in this Case or Point, That if there were not abiding Principles of Grace, that then when a Believer is asleep he ceaseth to be an holy man, or a Believer. If Life lay only in the Actings and stirrings of Life, then when they cease, there would be no intercession of Life, and so Eternal Life, as such, should not abide in a man, as you have heard. And the Argument is strong as to the Point: But it is more strengthened by this Scripture (Mat. 25.) speaking the same, or the like to it. There are Christians not only asleep as they are men but even as Christians also, and their Lamps go out; their profession and actings in a great measure ceasing, and yet they have Oyl in their Vessels, Grace in their Hearts, ready to be drawn up into the Lamp and to become matter of a new shining forth in good works.

It is also urged, that if it were not for such inherent Principles abiding, an holy man could not be denominated holy, but when he acts holily: As a man's Countenance is not denominated Ruddy for blushings or flushings, but from the constant Constitution and Complexion. And here you see a confirmation of the foregoing Argument also, for they are denominated wise Virgins, when yet their actings ceasing, they were as fools and not wise: Even as Solomon says of himself, that in the midst of his decay, his Wisdom that is, his Grace remained with him Ecclesiastes 2. 9.

Yea, This Oyl in their Vessels, or Hearts, did they carry with them into Glory with the Bridegroom, and were made Vessels of Glory as you read there: Yea and it is said that our Souls are thereby, made meet for Glory, Col. 12. 3: and prepared for Glory Rom. 9. 23. Even as well as thereby they are prepared for every good work, as Vessels meet for our Masters use, 2 Tim. 2. 21. And when we dye, not only our Works doe follow us (Rev. 14.) as a man's Treasure, which he hath wrought and gotten, but also the Soul it self is wrought by God here for this very purpose, to be made capable of a further degree of Glory, as it brings Grace with it into the other World, 2 Cor. 5. 5. Now he that hath wrought us for the self-same thing is God. Not only have we Book V actively wrought but we our selves are here passively wrought by God, having our Fruit the Increase of inherent Holiness (Rom. 6.) and the end everlasting Life. And therefore (2 Cor. 5. 3.) he had said we shall be clothed with Glory if we be not found naked, that is, depriv'd of the Image of God, but clothed upon with it, as the Apostle elsewhere also speaks.

C H A P. III.

That the Holy Ghost in Regenerating us, works in us an abiding Principle of a Spiritual Life, Demonstrated by other Arguments deduc'd from the Nature of the Work wrought in us.

I HAVE thus far prov'd, by direct Scriptures, that by Regeneration we receive an inward Principle of Life. I shall now use other Demonstrations of it.

1. If in Regeneration there be a mortification of that Flesh in part, which (as we heard) is an inherent Corruption, then there is an habitual Principle of Grace that cometh in the room of that inherent Corruption that was destroyed. That in Regeneration there is a mortification of an inherent Corruption is evident, because the Subject of mortification is that Flesh that dwells in us: For if there be such a Body of sin in us, it must be destroyed, Rom. 6. 6. And therefore the Subject hereof is call'd the old man, the Body of sin, the earthly Members, throughout the Scriptures. And also it appears by this, That if mortification were but a deadening the Soul to a present act of sinning, then it were no more but restraining Grace. Well then, if this mortification be a destruction of an inherent Corruption, then there is also an habitual Principle of Grace comes in the room of it. This is evident;

1. Because Vivification, or quickening, is of as large an extent as mortification can be supposed, for they are commensurable. The Spirit of life that comes into us is proportioned, and is as large and ample as the death of sin, and God's work in quickening is no less then what is seen in mortifying.

2. And Secondly if it were otherwise, this also would follow, that so much of the Soul in which sin was afore, and in which, sin is now mortified, should remain (as the Apostle speaks) naked and unclothed upon with Grace, and have neither Grace, nor Corruption in it. And so whereas still a part of the Soul remains corrupt habitually, this other part would remain un sanctified habitually. The State and Condition of the Soul would have this disadvantage in it, that unto evil it hath a Bias, a Poise, or (as the Apostle expresseth it) a weight continually to pull it down, but it would have no inherent Quality of Grace to carry it God-ward, in that other part in which Corruption is destroyed, but remain naked and neutral, and volatile, to be tost with the very Wind. And yet (according to those mens Opinions that held the contrary to ours) this man must be said to be regenerate forsooth, in as true a Sense as the part remaining corrupt in him is said to be corrupt. Which indeed is in effect all one as to affirm, That a man is as truly alive, that hath not a Soul remaining in him, as he is dead whose Soul is not only gone out of him, but expelled.

3. Yea Thirdly, this would necessarily follow, that so much of the Soul as had a corrupt habit expell'd and not a new contrary habit introduced, would be just in that Condition which the Papists feign to have been due to man in Innocency, even in pure naturals without supernatural Grace, which they say was added but as a Bridle unto Nature, or Sin. I speak this to those that know this Opinion which our Divines detest, viz. That the restoring of us, is but to such a Condition, and that this is all our Gospel Regeneration: And yet this will follow upon the Assertion that natural Corruption only is mortified, and not habitual Grace restored.

4. Add to all these a fourth Argument, If Grace wrought in us be the perfect curing and healing of Corruption, then if Flesh be a corrupt Principle inherent, so must Grace likewise be an inherent Principle. There is an habitual Aversion from God and a Conversion to the Creature, a frame of Heart set and inclined that way: And it is not exciting Grace will proportionately cure an habitual Distemper, for as in the bodily, so in Soul-Diseases Contraries are cured but by Contraries. If therefore Christ comes with full healing in his Wings and sanctifies throughout he doth cure habitual Corruption with habitual Impressions on the Mind and Will.

2. A Second Demonstration is taken from the parallell of the new Creature to the Image of God which at and with man's first Creation was given to him, and which he hath now left. It is evident it consisted not in bare acts of Holiness, for he is said to be created in it: It was therefore as well produced by Creation, as the Soul of man, and concreated therewith: And he is said to be created in it before he put forth any act of Knowledge, or Righteousness; and yet he lost it by sinning. What can that be, but something that is distinguish'd from the Soul and the Faculties of it, for it was lost: And distinct also from all acts of the Soul or actings upon him, for an Image notes a thing permanent and inherent? I say what could this be, but habitual Inclinations and Dispositions unto whatsoever was holy and good, inasmuch as all Holiness radically dwelt in him. The Apostle informs us, That the Image of God at first was in Righteousness and true Holiness. Eph. 4. 23. and Col. 4. 10. Now the same Holiness and Righteousness is required of us, when we are called to turn to God. God calls for his old debt, yea and it is as expressly said That this New Image is created after God, in Answerableness unto God's creating that Image at first. And surely to confirm this, I may add 1. that if original Righteousness be still required in us, then habitual Holiness, else the want of it would be no sin. Again Secondly Christ in being a quickening Spirit doth as much for us in respect of God's Image as Adam should have done if he had not fallen. Adam would have conveyed it, to his Children long before they could have put forth any act: Therefore sure in quickening us Christ must convey at least the same, if not higher: Else God doth not so much for us in restoring his Image, as he did at our first Creation: Yea Adam had in conveying it, if he had stood, done more then Christ doth for us. Yea and therefore when the Creation of this Image is spoken of it is not only in one place said to be ἐπιγνωσις for Knowledge, that is, to enable to know; and therefore notes a new created Power, but it is expressly termed a Workmanship created to good Works Eph. 2. 10. It is a whole Frame of new Powers to enable a man to act that, for which good works are ordained.

Yea further, if the New Creature be truly the Image of God's Holiness, then there is a permanent Holiness of Nature, or divine Nature as it is call'd: For God is first holy in his Nature and in himself, and then is Holy and Righteous in all his ways and works ad extra. He is good, and so doth good Psal. 119. 68. and the thing is undeniable as to his transient actings, for if God had never made or done any good to the Creatures, or given his Law, or sent his Son, yet he had been as good in his Nature and was so from everlasting. Yea some Attributes which yet were in him, as Power, Mercy &c. had never put forth acts &c. had there not been Creatures.

3. A Third Demonstration of it is drawn from what is said of some Infants, when it is expressly said of such, That they are sanctified in the Womb. So it is said of John the Baptist Luke 1. 15. That he was filled with the Holy Ghost as sanctifying of him even from the Womb. He puts that in emphatically, And to be fill'd with the Spirit hath a respect to that great measure of the fruits of the Spirit wrought in him then; they were not actings holily, therefore habitual Holiness. And because there was that in him which was born a Spirit of the Spirit, in relation thereunto it is said of him (v. 80.) That he grew and was strengthened in Spirit, that is, in that Inner man begotten at first which now grew grew up and was actually strengthened and enlarged. And there is this further Confirmation of this, that there is in Infants a capacity of this habitual Holiness. For First in the state of Innocency, they should have had that Image of God (spoken of afore.) conveyed by Birth, which Adam had by Creation, for he was to beget in his likeness.

2. They have, now man is fallen, the Image of inherent Corruption conveyed: And they should not have been capable of sin inherent upon Adam's fall, if by the Law of Nature they had not been capable of having inherent Holiness conveyed by Birth. For sin and the evil is conveyed but upon the equity of that Law, that the contrary good should have been conveyed, if Adam had stood. And it is with all as certain, That so far as they are capable of sin, whilst Infants they are so far capable of the contrary Holiness; and therefore of habitual Holiness, as well as of habitual sin, the venom of which we all feel in our Bowels from the Womb.

CHAP. IV.

That it is necessary, and congruous to the Nature of things, that such inward permanent Principles should be wrought in us by the Holy Ghost, to enable us to live Holily.

I SHALL now give the Reasons for this, both from the Congruity and Necessity of the thing.

1. It was meet and congruous, if not necessary, That God should proceed by the same Law in the work of his new Creation, that he doth in his first Creation. Now take the Law that is common unto the whole Creation of God, and it will be found true upon a particular Survey, That all acts or workings of any kind, in any Creature, have an inbred Principle suiting and enabling the Creature that acts or works thereunto. God moves all his Creatures to their ends by inbred Principles put into them. God in the whole Creation (qui disponit omnia suaviter) not only or barely assists or concurs with his Creatures, by a moving of them unto all their Actions, but furnisheth them with Powers and Vertues inbred, that are the Principles of such motions, by which they are enclined to such and such things, that so their actions may be connatural to them. If a Stone moves downward, it hath a Natural Poise: If the Soul understand it is not barely by Light shot into it, but there is an understanding Power, Faculty, or Ability inbred, which Beasts want; of whom it is said they have no understanding. If the Soul joyned to the Body sees, it is by an eye endowed with a visive Faculty; and so it is in hearing too. Again, in other Creatures, You see an inherent instinct put into them, guiding and swaying them to such or such a particular action; as you see in Bees in framing their Combs, and in Birds building their Nests, and bearing love to their Young: By which also (as the Prophet says) the Stork knows its appointed time. It is something inbred, and interwoven with their Nature: Even in Arts and Sciences acquired, there are imperfect Abilities in Nature perfected by use, yet still so, as there are Principles, though imperfect, which are the Foundations of them. He that invented Painting first, or that hath attained the Art of it, had Images in the Fancy, disposing him to begin to draw the Pictures. And this also is the reason that some are excellent in one Trade, more than in another; In like manner, If a natural man performs any Action morally good, he hath an inbred Principle of light of Conscience, impressions of moral Vertues, and the Law written in his Heart, that moves and instigates him thereunto; and it is an abiding Principle in him, Rom. 2. 14, 15. Men do by Nature the Things of the Law, which shews the Effect or Substance of the Law written in their Hearts. Now it might be shewn, that the new Habiliments of the new Creation are assimilated unto all these, the Holy Ghost having regulated and reduced the new Creature, to this common Law.

1. It is like to the natural Powers of Seeing and Understanding.

2. It is like to an instinct put into irrational Creatures who are taught of God to love their Young. As concerning Brotherly love I shall not need to write unto you, (says the Apostle 1 Thes. 4. 9.) for you your selves are taught of God to love one another. It is opposed to external teachings, and referred to the rank of instincts, or endowments: As when God teacheth a Brother to love his Brother, the Mother to love the Child; or as God is said to teach the Plowman Discretion and Skill, Isa. 28. 26. In like manner, all that come to Christ are said to be taught of God (John 6. 44, 45.) by an Impression on their Spirits; such as the Beasts had that came to the Ark. He parallels it also with the Law written in the heart by nature, yea makes it infinitely the greater work, when he says, I will write my Law in their Hearts and put it into their inward parts: Jer. 31. 33, 34.

But although these are of themselves, Arguments, yet they are remoter Confirmations unto that which I intend to make forth, viz. That the reason of the Congruity or Necessity is the same in the New Creature, as in the Old. Yea that there is a greater necessity in this, than in the other, and that the Soul should be no less enabled and furnished to Spiritual Things, than all other Creatures are unto their actings, which generally, and universally, is by having an internal Principle enabling them so to act.

1. There is as much reason and necessity it should be thus in the New Creation, as in the Old.

1. Because this rule holds both in the Second Creation and in the first, That every thing that acts, should act according to its kind; and they are differing in bred Principles that put the difference of kind between one Creature and another: Every Creature hath a proper, special Nature that doth constitute its kind, and then the Fruits and Effects are answerable thereto. You have this Law (Gen. 1. 21. and 24.) concerning Fishes, and Beasts, and Plants; Trees bring forth differing Fruits because of differing kinds given them, and that depends upon in bred Principles which are existent in them, even in Winter, when they do not bring forth. Our Saviour Christ bringeth this very Law of the first Creation into the Second, and urgeth it upon the Pharisees, Mat. 7. 17, 18. Every good Tree bringeth forth good fruit, but a corrupt Tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good Tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt Tree bring forth good Fruit. And then in Mathew 12. 23. Christ says; Either make the Tree good, and his Fruit good, or else make the Tree corrupt and his Fruit corrupt; for the Tree is known by his Fruit. Wherein (although Christ urgeth not Regeneration, but Conviction) make the Tree, &c. that is, acknowledge your selves to be bad, when your Fruits are bad, and so on the contrary: Yet the ground of his Conviction lies invincibly in this Truth, That ere a man can bring forth a good work, he must be made inwardly, and radically good, For Acts follow Nature. Also in another place he says, Can you gather Grapes of Thorns, or Figs of Thistles? Can you that are evil speak good things?

2. It is so, Because to have in bred Principles of actings maketh the Creature to act con-naturally and sweetly. Thus though a Mother (as a Woman) hath love in her, yet to act the more naturally in the loving her Child, a special instinct is requisite. The Sun rejoiceth to run his race: And so all Creatures rejoyce to keep Gods Ordinances to this day (Psal. 119.) because God hath put in bred Principles in them so to do. Now of all actings of his Creatures God would have it so, that this of Souls in gracious actings should be most con-natural, and done with the greatest alacrity, and That his People should be a willing People (Psal. 110.) and be acted by a free Spirit, (Psal. 51.) not by constraint, but of a willing Mind. God would have the New Creature so to move it self in its actings as to be the inward formal principle of that work, that it might in that respect be termed its own: And therefore as all other Creatures have to their Actings inbred principles to inable them unto their Actings, so it was most meet that the Soul of Man and especially the Will should have a Bias clapt on it, a poyse, an Inclination, or (as the Apostles Phrase is) a Readiness whereof God accepts more then of the Deed, 2 Cor. 8. 10. 11, 12.

2. There is a far greater necessity for the Soul to have new Principles, and Abilities given to act Holily, and Spiritually, than at the first Creation to act Naturally. And the Reason is far more strong, because the Acts are Spiritual and Supernatural, and so are the Objects. God and Christ as they are Revealed in the Gospel are Supernatural unto the Natural Powers, and Faculties of the Soul, and there is no proportion between them. There is not only such a Disproportion as the Batts Eye hath unto the Sun, but as a Blind Mans Eye is to the Sun. In Mans Corrupt Estate, yea, and at Mans best Estate in Innocency, tho' God as Revealed in the Creature, and in outward Effects was the Natural Object of Mans Understanding, that is which was Naturally ordained for it by the due of Creation, yet God, as in himself to be Revealed, had that Disproportion unto that Estate, that a Spirit, or an Angel, not appearing in some outward Effect hath to the Eye of a Seeing Man. The most quick sighted in that Case must have a new Eye, a Spiritual Eye made, or the same Eye endowed with New Spiritual Power. And therefore the Scripture speaks of this as giving a new visive Power, as Eyes to See, and Eares to Hear, and (1 John 5. 20.) it is said, He hath given an Understanding to know him that is true, speaking both of God and Christ. It is not meerly to relieve the weakness of natural Sight, as when one is to see an Object far distant by the help of an optique, Or as when Stephen was enabled to see and behold Christs Body in Heaven, which of it self is visible, as the Sun is tho' disproportioned in Excellency: But 'tis spiritual Sight given wholly to enable the eye to see it, the Spiritual Objects, and to take them in. And therefore the Phrase which the Scripture every where useth, is, that else Men cannot see them, nor know them, nor receive them, as hath been said. And therefore there is a necessity of infusion of such spiritual Abilities, for there are no Principles in man for him to begin with, by which they should be acquired.

But here a further question hath been made; Whether the necessity of such Inherent Principles as these is such, that God by his absolute Power might not raise up, and draw forth out of the Soul supernatural spiritual Acts without infusing such new Principles as Powers into the Soul first: Whether Gods motions and excitations, and actings upon the Understanding and Will might not elevate them unto such acts. as Stephen's eye without a new power of seeing was elevated and Raised up to see Christs Body in Heaven.

I answer this that it is not for the understanding of us poor Creatures to forge Shackles or set limits to the absolute power of God, or to say he can work this, and not that. Yet I think this may in the first place safely be said, that as to the privative part there must at least be a destruction of that habit of Sin, in respect of the strength and the Impression which it had in the Soul afore. For if the Soul be naturally, full, and all over possess'd with nothing but Flesh (according to what is in John 3. 6.) That which is born of the Flesh is Flesh: Then whilst it doth so remain it can never be brought to act the contrary, no not in the least spiritual act, for there is something within that hinders. Whilst the Mind inwardly remains fleshly it cannot be subject to the Law of God Rom. 8. 7. That word speaks the common Language of Nature; That whilst such a Form remains, and fully possesseth the Mind, it cannot be brought to act the contrary. God indeed can change Fire into Water in an instant, and so that which was Fire shall moisten, but whilst it remains Fire and is continued to be such, we may say that it cannot do so. Indeed it may be kept from acting as Fire, as the Fire of Nebuchadnezar's Furnace was, but it cannot be brought to do the contrary. And thus the Scripture pronounceth of the Fleshly Mind remaining remaining such, that it cannot be Subject to God, and that those who are in the Flesh cannot please God, Rom. 8. 7, 8. Yea, even of a Regenerate Man so far as Flesh is in him, so far as he is still possess'd with Flesh, the Apostle saies he cannot Will, or do Good, Gal. 5. 17. It is not only that he wants an Ability, but he hath an Habitual contrariety, an Enmity, as one contrary Form hath to another and that contrariety therefore must necessarily be destroyed and expelled, that the Soul being so far freed from it may be capable to act Holily. So then at least we may say, That that part of Regeneration we call Mortification, or (as it is express'd in Ezekiel) the taking away the Heart of Stone, is an Habitual permanent work absolutely necessary.

If it be said (as it is by some) that if Adams Soul being wholly fill'd with Holiness fell into an Act of Sin without a Principle of Sinning first in it; therefore a Soul possess'd with nothing but Flesh and Enmity to God may be elevated to a supernatural Act.

I. Reply, First, That when Adam's Soul fell into that Act of Sinning, the Holiness that was in him, was that very Moment Expeld and so then the Parallel here must be, That at the same Instant the Soul is raised to Holiness, the Contrary Corruption must be so far expel'd also: And as in the Act of Sin, Adams Soul slip the Coller of its Habitual Grace and so ran away from God: So must the Heart as it is Acted Holy slip from so much of its inbred Corruption at the same Instant. But if you will suppose that Corruption doth remain in its full Strength and Possession, it is such an uncircumcision as keeps the Soul in an impotency to any such Act.

But 2. The fuller Answer is this, That there is not the same Reason of Raising up Man to Act Holly, as there is of his falling into Sin: For the Possibility of his falling into Sin lies in his Deficiency, and Mutability as he was a Creature, and in his aptness to fall, which his Will was Subject to meerly as it is a Creature made out of nothing, and so it's Habit of Grace doth Perish by that Deficiency; when it falls out. Solum Liberum Arbitrium Sufficiebat ad malum, was Augustines constant Cry, The Deficient Will of Man need no innate Principle to Sin, its Frailty was Sufficient, or rather Insufficient to it. But it is not so in the Power to do Good, as it is in the Transgression, as in another like Case the Apostle speaks. To Sin the Soul need not be first made Sinful to constitute it formally an Intrinsic Agent in it, for this may arise from a Defect, but if Man will become a Supernatural Worker, and as an Intrinsic Agent formally produce a Good Work, he must have such a Divine Form, or Nature first infused in him, or it will not be Natural in him, and Genuine; nor is he capable to do it.

2. As to the Positive part: Viz. The Necessity of the Infusion of a New Principle: There are many that deny that any more then a help and a Supernatural Assistance is absolute needful: Because the Almighty power of God can and doth (say they) supply the Room of such an inward Principle, and so raise up and actuate the Understanding or Will without it. For (say they) in the Soul God finds a Faculty of Understanding capable of that Spiritual Knowledg of him: And the Habit, or the New Principle you call for (say they) serves but to enable, or Elevate that Understanding to take into it God in a Spiritual manner. Now that which your suppos'd Habit contributes hereto, why may not (say they) the Power of God supply by a meer Acting of that Understanding, and raising it up to such Acts by an Almighty Motion of his joyning with it, and overpowering the Soul to it. There is this Difference (say they) between the necessity of an Understanding Faculty, and of this New Spiritual Principle: That if we suppose that first wanting, then all must say, the power of God doth not supply the Room of it. God doth not Understand for us, but Man understands only with his own Understanding, nor without an Understanding can he Understand; as a Beast remaining a Beast cannot. But now for that other case of an Habit, that being (say they) but an help Book V. help to the Understanding may be supplied: For what help a Second cause affordeth, that the power of God alone can, if he please, supply without it.

But 1. If the Scripture it self, and the Spirit that wrote it, and also works all Grace in the Heart, and knows best the proportions of things, do speak of this new inward Principle of habitual Grace, in the same Language that it doth of this Power of the natural Understanding it self, or as it doth of the visive Faculty whereby we see, terming it an eye to see, an ear to hear, an Heart to understand, terming it also an understanding given, that we may know: Then even that also is to be judged to be to the Soul, in understanding supernatural things, of the same nature and necessity, that an understanding it self is to know natural things. Yea if it be a Principle of life unto the Soul of one that is dead, as a new Life to a dead eye, as in Scripture it is termed, (Eph. 2. 5. compared) and if it is expressly termed eternal Life it self inherent in a man (1. John 3. 15.) which doth constitute him formally a living man, in respect of that kind of Life which is Spiritual and supernatural: If this be so, then upon the same necessity, that an understanding faculty is required to a natural act, this new Understanding, Power, or Spirit (as my text calls it) this new Heart and new Spirit to understand things supernatural withal, is as absolutely required. All grant this, that though God can give to this stone an Understanding; yet he cannot be suppos'd to make a Stone to understand without an understanding Faculty. Now in order unto an act of understanding Spiritual things, this new Principle infused is so styled, and is really in its Proportion such: So as without it the Soul is said to have no Understanding, but to be blind, yea dead, as to these things that are spiritual. God can, and did take a Body of red Earth and breathed into it the breath of life and caused it to live; but it was not possible to have made and constituted it a living Soul, as the Scripture terms Adam without having a living Soul put into it, and united to it, for a thing cannot be caused to live without a Spirit of life: Now so 'tis here, as those Scriptures clearly shew. We must not call these new Principles, Powers, or Faculties in the Soul, in the same respect, or sense, that the Understanding is in and to the Soul: For the Understanding is one and the same understanding Faculty, and so is the subject of that spiritual act, after Regeneration, that it was afore; and it is the same Understanding that understood other things afore, or that doth now understand other things besides spiritual things after Regeneration: But by Analogy it is affirmed to be a new Power and a new Understanding, in this respect, because the Soul which hath but one and the same Faculty of understanding must be enlivened with this Grace as another life to it, ere it can spiritually understand. That Grace puts a new ability into the Understanding, as necessary as the Understanding it self is to understand withal, as all the Scriptures shew.

If indeed such Principles as acquired Habits do serve to give only facility or easiness in working, or serve but as Spectacles to an eye that can see already, only to help it to see better and more clearly, or to see what else at such a distance it could not see; then the work might be supplied only with God's external Actings. But these Principles of Grace do give Potentiam simpliciter, as some Schoolmen speak, Power simply and absolutely. Yea, and say I, it is not only analogous to a new Power; but it is to the Soul more than a new Power, and of a sublimer Nature, and greater worth than all mens Understandings devoid of it. It is Spirit, (says the Text) which is more than a Power: It is a divine Nature, which is more than a natural Power. It is indeed as the Soul is to a dead eye, when it comes to enliven and inform it, which is more than to give an eye simply or barely organized, and fitted to see: Or at least it is, if not as the Soul, yet as the life it self, by which, as diffused from the Soul, the Eye is made a living eye, and so immediately capable of that vital or living act of seeing; and by reason of which it is a seeing eye, a living eye, when yet it ceaseth to behold any thing, as when closed, and in sleep. It is the Seed of God, which (as the Seed of any other thing) hath the vertue of that which it cometh cometh from, in such a manner as the Soul it self hath not, though it cometh from God.

That which hath much conduced to misguide the Schoolmen in this great point, hath been

1. Their Addictedness to the natural Power of mans Will and Understanding, that in supernatural Acts it should share with the Grace of God. They have therefore easily been led to judge that these natural Principles strongly assisted and only extrinsically acted by God as an Efficient and Mover with them, might produce such acts: And that such divine Habits as Grace are only required to make them more natural to the Powers of the Soul.

2. The Schoolmens mistake in this point ariseth from their Opinion, that the natural Understanding and Will in the Soul are the Root or Principle of whatever Life or Act either spiritual or natural, the Soul produceth as a living Agent. So that it is the natural Understanding, and other Faculties in the Soul which (as they speak) are the sole Principium vitale, that is, the living Principle, or Seat and Subject of all Life. The Soul and the active Faculties and Powers thereof, are those that live and have that life in them, and so live this supernatural Life. And this is proper to that which lives, that it intrinsically moves it self: For so you know all living Things do, and not from an extrinsecal Force or Power acting them, as Stones are mov'd.

And therefore (say they) the Soul and its Powers having an inward Principle of self-Motion, there is nothing more required than that God should move, and act them. But if they consulted the Scriptures they would find, That that, which is termed the vital or Life-Principle of this kind of Life Spiritual and Eternal in the Soul, is not the natural Powers of the Soul: But that all the Life-Principle the Soul hath in Understanding or Willing, is naturally deadness unto this Life: And that the Grace infused is called Eternal Life, &c. 'Tis true indeed the Subject or Root upon which this new Principle or Power of Spiritual Life is engrafted, is the Soul; and thereby it is diffused to the Faculties of it, and so the natural Soul is in that respect absolutely necessary as the Subject of this new Spiritual Life (of which a Beast, remaining a Beast, is not capable) and so the natural Soul and its Faculties are as the Root and Foundation, or as the Stock that the other new Principle of Life is engrafted upon. But still that which is the formal next compleat Principle, or Power of active Life Spiritual, as such, is that Grace which God engrafs upon that Stock, yea, and the whole of the Souls Principle of Spiritual Life doth lie and consist therein: Though still if this Grace were not in such a Subject viz. a reasonable Soul, that Spiritual Principle of Life; would not be a Life at all. Thus far indeed the natural Powers do contribute unto it. So then in producing those supernatural Acts of knowing or loving God, there are three Principles to be considered.

1. Principium quod, The Principle which; that is, which is the Seat and Subject of all; and that is the Soul, and its natural Faculties as they have a natural Life in them.

2. There is Principium quo, The Principle of Life by which, the Soul acts, and from which, as it acts Spiritually, it hath a Spiritual Life; and that, say We, is Grace infused, which is termed Eternal Life in a Man.

3. There is God who is the Fountain and efficient Cause; and Worker both of that Principle of Life in the Soul, and then of all the acts from it by his Motions, Influences, and Helps, and Elevations, and Raisings up of that Life to act according to its kind; which Actings, notwithstanding this infused Life in us, do depend upon Gods power to work them in us (Phil. 2. 13.) as much as the infusion of Life it self doth.

Aquinas distinguisheth the necessity of a Principle of Grace, and that of ordinary habit thus: Of the first, ut intellectus fiat potens: Of the other, ut Intellectus fiat potentior. 1. par. quest. 12. Artic. 5.

Suarez, when he comes to the decision of this, treads upon Ice; and is loth to deny these Principles of Grace to be potentie, because they give new Power to the Soul; and yet he must have the natural Power of the Soul it self to be a Sharer with them in their motion, supernaturally, and therefore concludes it thus. Quod si quis de nomine magis, quam de re contendens dicat hos habitus quatenus dant Potestatem agendi vocandos esse potentias; respondebimus saltem non esse potentias integras seu completas; imo nec esse inchoationem ut sic dicam, & raticalem potestatem: At dare quasi complementum potestatis. Lib. 6. de grad. C. 5. Num. 12.

Book V This being thus explained, herein lies to me the necessity of such an inward Principle of Spiritual Life to be infused (besides what Life of understanding or willing the Soul hath of its self, as also besides God's assisting Motions and Strengthenings) that if any Soul be ever brought to put forth any Act of Spiritual supernatural Life, that Soul must be constituted, or made first a supernatural living Agent, or Worker: It must be put into that order or rank of Agents or Workers, and thereby so be fitted to move from, and within it self, as a supernatural living Agent or worker, that so all such acts of Life as proceed from it may come to be denominated, or call'd its own, as acts of a Creature that now lives such a supernatural kind of Life, and so that every Holy Action may be termed the Act of its own Life, when it so works. And the reason is clear from the Analogy or like proportion of any other living Agent in any Kind: For if any Act of any Creature be accounted a living Act, or a Life-Act, that Creature must first be a living Creature endued with that kind of Life which the Act it self is of, which it doth put forth, if it be an Act of Natural or Sensitive Life (as to see, hear, &c) as in a Beast, necessarily the Beast must be a living beast, or Creature; living, I say, within it self that kind of Life, it putteth forth in that Act, or that Action cannot be a living Action. Now then by the same reason and proportion (for such as the Act is, such is and must be the Principle that works it, which holds in this and other kinds of Life whatever) If the Soul come ever to produce a supernatural-life-Act (as I may call it) it is absolutely necessary it be constituted, and put into the rank of a supernatural-Life-Agent, to have a Principle of supernatural-Life, wholly a new Communicated unto it, over and above its being in the order or rank of Nature's Catalogue, a life-Agent. And tho' Men talk that the Soul, with its Faculties, is a living Principle: Yet still it is not a living Principle supernaturally, otherwise then Life. Eternal Life; and the Soul, with all its Faculties remaining purely natural, is Dead, in respect to that Life.

Another thing that deceived many of the Schoolmen is, That they take the Similitude of acquired Habits and make them the measure by which to judge of these infused Habits, and so imagine that the natural Faculties are the immediate Subjects of the infused Principles of Grace: And not the Soul it self: Even as those natural Faculties are of such acquired Habits; and so they thought these infused Habits of Grace should be no otherwise required in order unto working, then those other acquired. Now it is certain and granted, that God's power extraordinary, can in an Instant, supply the Defect of such kind of Habits only by assisting Acts, without infusing any new Principle. Thus whereas Man's Tongue is apt to learn, and acquire by pains and use; any Tongue or Language in use, Yet God in the primitive times did, without infusing the settled, permanent Habit of speaking such or such a Tongue, assist a Man's Mind for that present, whilst the Spirit acted him, to speak or interpret any Language, as if he had learnt it by use. Thus some spake with Tongues who did not understand the Tongue, and some interpreted a Tongue, that were not able to speak it: As might seem by some passages in 1 Cor. 14. Now indeed if those supernatural Principles we speak of, were at the highest supposition, but the infusion of such Abilities as these, that might be otherwise acquired in time, by the natural Powers of the Soul by use, then indeed the opposite Assertion might pass, that God could (by his assisting power alone) supply without such a Principle, what the infusion of the Principle served for: Because the natural Soul as such, did hold a proportion to such Acts, if it were acted and assisted by God; for as it is a natural Soul, it might acquire them of it self. But it is not so in the Principles of Grace, for they belong wholly to another Rank, and Order, and Kind of Life, as hath been said. They are not such superficial, washy Tinctures, or additional Impressions on the Soul, such as are those other Habits which are seated but finger deep (as when a man's Fingers, Fancy, and Memory have acquired a Skill to play on musical Instruments, musical Tunes, which have no deeper Subject then the Finger, Fancy, and Memory) but this Heavenly Tincture goes deeper. It is not as an ordinary Accident, seated immediately in an Accident, that is, the immediate subject of Graces are not the Faculties of the Understanding and Will, as they are powers and Accidents themselves in the Soul: But this Heaven born Image and Likeness of God (which is more worth then all men's Souls) is immediately by God diffused into the Soul it self; and the Soul is as immediately the Subject of it, as of those powers themselves. It is not in the Soul only as Paint or white in a Wall, in the outward Superficies of it; but as Light in the Body of the Sun, and as the Glory that is in the spiritual Bodies of Men at the Resurrection. The God of Peace Sanctifie you throughout (says the Apostle) in Body, Soul and Spirit, yea it seizeth on the Spirit of the Mind it self (Eph. 4.) that is, if there be any thing pure, the Soul is throughout immediately steep't and dyed in it; it hath it by Infusion (as the School word is) or it is shed abroad in the Heart, as the Scripture saith. It is in the Soul as a new Soul or Life to it, and it then diffuseth it self to those powers that are therein: And in the Understanding it becomes a spiritual Understanding, and the light of Life: In the Will it becomes Love, an Infusion of Love to that God above it self, whose Image it is. And so it is indeed a thing (which I have all this while pleaded it to be) that deserves as much to be styled a new Power, and Life in the Soul, as those natural Faculties themselves are said to be. Neither is it beholding to them for its Interest and Station in the Soul, but can vye with them for immediateness of Inherency: Yea, it enspirith and teacheth them, and actuates them with new Powers of an endless Life, which they had not afore. And so by this means, this new Principle of Grace, becomes an Ear to hear, an Eye to see, an Understanding to know Spiritual Things, as Spiritual, in as real a manner as these other natural powers of Understanding and Will are in their kind of Life able to perceive Natural Things.

CHAP. IV.

That the New Creature wrought in us by the Spirit of God, is a Change of Heart.

EZEKIEL XXXVI. 26, 27.

A new Heart also will I give you, and a new Spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the Stony Heart out of your Flesh, and I will give you an Heart of Flesh. v. 27. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my Statutes, and ye shall keep my Judgements, and do them.

THE Glory of God's Grace, in the Application of Salvation unto us, in this Life; and the Commitment of it to the Holy Ghost; you find put together in this one Scripture: Here is

1. A creating, and infusing new Abilities, and vivifick Principles of Spiritual Life; whereby the Soul is quickened, and enabled to act as a Supernatural Agent, or Worker, of all sorts of Spiritual Works and Operations; which is here in Ezekiel said to be the giving a new Heart, and a new Spirit; together with taking away the Heart of Stone; which is as truly a work of Omnipotency, as to turn a Stone into Flesh, into living Flesh; or to transform Stones into Bread, (upon doing which the Devil himself would have believed Christ to be the Son of God) Or of Stones to raise up Children to Abraham; whereby John the Baptist celebrateth God's omnipotent Power.

2. Here is set forth the Holy Ghost's effectual drawing forth, and efficaciously working every such Spiritual Act; causing us to walk in his ways, both by his giving us To will, and to do, of his good Pleasure, Phil. 2. 13.

Book V 3. Here is the giving this Person of the Holy Ghost, unto our Persons; to dwell in us forever, as the Author of both these, which is expressed in those words, I will put my Spirit within you; which comes in between the former two. It is he who gives us the new Heart at first, and having predispos'd, and prepar'd us thereby, causeth us to walk, and do, that is, draws forth that new Heart into Act.

The words of my Text Ezek. 36. 26, 27. are Promises of the Covenant of Grace, concerning all that is wrought in us by God, from first to last, unto Salvation; summ'd up to Two Heads. 1. The giving a new Heart, &c. 2. The Intent of that Gift, viz. To enable us to do, and to walk; which is a continuation of doing. The first is the Principle of doing, placed first in order, and accordingly given first, as the Foundation of subsequent Doing, and Walking, ever after. There is also the Spirit of God, over and besides that new Spirit promised, given to them, to cause them to act, and do; when once the new Heart, and Spirit is given. And although the Holy Spirit of God is promised, to cause them to do, as without whom the new Heart alone would not produce those new Actions; yet so as withal the Spirit Himself doth not cause us to do, without a new Heart first given; and unless the old Heart, the Heart of stone, (the Principle of the former contrary walking, and doing,) be removed, and taken away; as being that contrary Principle that Letteth, and would Let for ever; if it continued in its old full Being, and Strength. The Holy Ghost is the extrinsecal Cause of the Operation, therefore said to be put; but the new Heart is the Intrinsecal Cause of our Doing; though as acted by the Holy Ghost.

And these Things are consonant to Reason, and Scriptures.

1. The Heart doth in the Language of Nature, speak the primary Intrinsecal Cause of Motion, and Action; being the first seat and forge of all the vital Spirits, by which we act, and move: And so in the Soul there is That answers to it; which is the Spring, and Actions are the Streams that issue from thence. Above all Keeping-keep thy Heart; for out of it are the Issues of Life; that is, the Course, and Actings of a Man's Life, which are as Issues from the Heart, as a Fountain; the walking and doing here, are not the New Heart it self, for that (as was noted) is a new Gift, and Benefit distinct therefrom. Nor is the Spirits acting our natural Faculties, and Principles already in our Hearts; the whole or sole work on God's part in us. Nor consists it only in actings (which the promise of the 27. verse is wholly spent upon) but that verse afore, (the 26) is taken up as much with the promise of giving a New Heart, and removing the Old, and is a promise of as much Grace as this Latter, in verse 27.

2. 'Tis true that the natural Faculties of the Mind, and Will, and Affections; are in Scriptures termed the Heart; or connotated at least when the Heart is spoken of: And therefore they must be taken in, and supposed here; for they are the Subject, and Intrinsecal Principle of all the Actings of a Man, in doing what ever is done; be it good or evil. And this is common to all Men, whether Regenerate, or Unregenerate; in their doing Good, or Evil; to do it with their Hearts. And therefore Solomon admonisheth, Prov. 4. 24. Keep thy Heart, for out of it are the Issues of Life, which reason in general concerns all Men, that such as the Heart is, such is the Course of Life. He compares the Heart to the Fountain, and the Actions to the Streams, that issue out from it. A good man, says Christ, Mat. 12. 35. Out of the good Treasure of the Heart, bringeth forth good things; and an evil Man, out of the evil Treasure, bringeth forth evil Things. So as an Heart to do, is ascribed to either of them.

3. I shall confirm this by other Scriptures. You have a Workmanship, said to be created unto good Works: Eph. 2. 10. For we are his Workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. Here is an whole Frame, or ποιήμα created, and wrought in us; in order unto our Working, or Acting; God having ordained the one for the other; viz.

viz. those works for us to walk in, (as it follows) And this Workmanship, to bring forth those Works. You read in like manner of the Image of God, created ^{εἰς εὐαγγελίον} into Knowledge; for it is wrought to that end: And it is more expressly said, 1 John 5. 10. He hath given us an Understanding, that we may know him that is true.

Another Scripture is, that passage, in 1 John 3. 9. Whosoever is Born of God, doth not commit Sin; for his Seed remaineth in him: And he cannot Sin, because he is Born of God. The words I lay hold on for my purpose, are what that Seed of God that Remains in a Man Born of God, should be. I might annex this Argument to be drawn from the Interpretation of these passages, unto the first Argument I drew before from John 3. 6. That it is a Birth, a thing Born; And this which I shall now urge, you may well put to that, for it Seconds it; and they do mutually confirm each other.

The Scope is, to set out the difference between an Unregenerate Man, and a Regenerate; (under the Dominion of Grace) in point of sinning: Yea, and it may be extended to the differing Case of Adam, in his first sinning. He mentions indeed only the Case of a Regenerate Man, but asserts concerning Him; 1. That a Man Born of God commits not sin; that is, persists not in any constant track or course of sinning; for committing sin here, is meant in the same Sense, as that in the words afore, He that doth Righteousnes is Righteous, is meant: Which Position is further amplified that He cannot Sin. 2. The Reason of which is resolved into this, Because he is Born of God: He hath by, and from that his Birth, a Seed of and from God remaining in him; that is, He hath a new Principle of Holiness, a Divine Nature, and Indoles; which God that begat him, and formed anew for himself, maintains in his Heart, out of his Gracious Favour towards that Grace, so as to continue the station, and residence of the substance and matter of it in the Heart; whilst yet its Activity may be, or is weakned, and abated by the prevailing of the contrary Corruption (that is in the Soul) through the Wills indulging to it: And yet so far as that Seed and Principle, in the solid Substance of it, thus remains; this corrupt Will, nor all a Man's own Lust that tempts him, cannot employ, or draw this Seed to close with that sin; but it stands off, and is averse; and co-operates not (It is not I, but sin that dwelleth in me) yea, more or less it lusteth against it. But it is not thus with an unregenerate Man's Will, nor was it thus with Adam in his first sinning. But all his Principles, and concreated Habits of Holiness inherent, were by one single Act of sinning, through the meer Mutability, and vertibility of his Will, (suppose his sin had been the least Sin) utterly driven out of his Heart, and destroyed at once. The Reason whereof lay in this, The Terms of his State then, being the Covenant of Works, the Curse of that Law in threatning, In that Day thou sinnest thou dyest the Death; took hold of his Soul, and began to have its full Process, and Execution against all that Spiritual Life that was in him: And rased out the whole of what was holy in Him, which was the best of his Lives; to whose keeping the whole Stock of his Grace was committed, and entrusted; and he was no more able (when he sinn'd) to keep the least Mite thereof, to remain still in him, then a Man that is stab'd to the Heart, is able to keep his Soul in his Body. But a stronger Law is now under Grace in force over Men that are born of God; who are not under the Law, but under Grace; which Law is, That the Strength of this inherent Grace, is the Gospel of Grace; which preserves this Seed in the Heart, in the midst of sinning; so as that Grace in the Soul is not wholly expelled upon every sin the Will consents to; As it is acknowledged by All. And who can set, or put the Limits of the difference; That in some sins to which the Will yet consents, sin should not totally expel that Seed, for that present; And in other sinnings, perpetrated by the Will's Allowance and Consent, Grace should be destroyed for that present? Now the preservation of this Seed, is because it remains upon that Gospel-Account specified, in such a man, and that is; the ^{τοῦ κειμένου} the thing that Letts, or hinders, that he cannot sin, with fulness of Consent: And whilst this Seed upon this account remains, so much of it as remains, and hath possession and residence in the Heart, cannot be made use of, or be drawn to be a party with its Contrary; or to Act the same thing which its Contrary doth Act. Nor will we grant that the Activity of that principle though preserved in being, may be retuned so, as to put forth no acting; for the Apostle affirms (Gal. 5. 17.) that it is never so, but in some degree it makes resistance; though so weak as it is not discernable by his Heart in whom it is, as there is some motion of the Pulse, though not felt; whilst there is Life. This that holds invincibly true, that whilst this Seed of Life remains in the Will at all; (and that it remains, is the Apostles word, and assertion;) It, to be sure, cannot sin, no more than Sin whilst it remains in the Heart, can act holily: Sin and Corruption so far as it remains, cannot become an Actor of true Holiness; you may much safer affirm that Fire, as Fire, may cool, and moisten. 'Tis true, God may, and once we read of, did retund the Activity of Fire; whilst it remained Fire; so as not to burn; or so much as singe, as was seen in Nebuchadnezzar's fiery Furnace; but that Fire, remaining Fire, should cool, and moisten; this were utterly contrary to its Nature. And the truth of this Maxime, the Apostle confirmeth; and applies it to this very Case of sin, and Holiness in us; bottoming it upon this very Reason; viz. that a Thing contrary in its Nature, whilst it remains contrary, cannot be brought to co-operate in the same Act, with that which is contrary to it self. Gal. 5. 17. For the Flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the Flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other, so that ye cannot do the things that ye would. And the same is the bottom ground of that other Assertion of his; in Rom. 8. 7, 8. The carnal Mind is Enmity against God, for it is not subject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be: So then, They that are in the Flesh, cannot please God. And let no man say, it is in the power of the Will to cause it so to do; the Apostle says the contrary; so as ye cannot do what you would; neither in sinning with your whole Will, nor in doing good, with your whole Hearts, and whole Souls: And although Corruption that is in us, may so far prevail over the Will, against the active power of Grace in the Will; as often exert for the outward Act to commit a sin, yet still so far as a Principle of Grace exists; and God causeth it to continue and abide; and whilst God upholds it so to do in the Soul, and Will; that part of the Soul and Will cannot be prevailed with by the corrupt part to joyn with it in sinning; for they are Contrary. Our Apostle John in this his first Epistle, expressly says that it doth remain. And how should that be, if God did not maintain it by his Grace; for that Sin is stronger than created Holiness: take it in its own Efficacy; and as in it self, we have found by Adam's sinning; And it is in Effect said, in that verse, that it is God that causeth it to remain, Even because it is born of God: And is therefore so beloved of God, that he says, Destroy it not, there is a Blessing in it.

And what is the thing that doth remain but a Seed; And as all must grant, distinct from Fruit? Now every Fruit must have a Root to grow upon: And therefore gracious Actings proceed from a Seed let in by a Birth, and that Birth is from our being born of God, whose Seed it is called. Which fully makes good the Assertion, that in Regeneration not meerly our Actions are altered, but there is a Change of Heart.

Use 1. We see then that one fundamental difference between them that fall away, and others that persevere in Grace; is, That in the first there is not a Change of Heart, nor a new Principle, a Seed from God that remains: Many glorious Things are spoken of temporary Believers; but it is no where said in all the Scripture, (that I can find) that they are born again. This assigned difference is congruous to the works that are wrought on them. In the one there is a stirring, an elevating what is in Nature; As of vertuous dispositions, and self-love; by such Motives as suit self, laid down in the Gospel; which Motions, when they cease, those Actings in their Hearts, which Men take for Grace, do cease also. It was the Case of the stony Ground, who received the Word with Joy, but immediately (as the word is Mark 4. 17.) they fall off from it, whereas in the other it becomes new; new acts towards new Objects; so new Principles: 2 Cor. 5. Old things pass away, and all things become new. And though Operations may Cease, or be weakned, and overborn with the contrary contrary Corruption; so far, as to prevail unto the outward acts of sin; yet there is a constant abiding Principle which Lusts unto the contrary. And this difference is found by experience in the one sort, and the other; And you find also this difference in Scripture; in that Parable of the Sower, of the Stony Ground: Mat. 13. 21. Mark 4. 17. 'Tis said they have no Root in themselves; which Phrase expresseth the proper Language of inherent Grace; habitually seated in the Heart. There might be, and was a springing up, from an external Principle moving them; As the Holy Ghost stirr'd them by the Word; but they had no Root in themselves. And thus Job expresseth the difference between himself, and the Hypocrites; in the Number of which, his Friends went about to perswade him that he was; Job 19. 28. The Root of the Matter (says he) is in me; that is, Truth and Sincerity of Heart towards God; whence my profession hath risen: And the Apostle (Gal. 5.) alludes to the same comparison, where he calls Adultery, Fornication, and so forth, Works of the Flesh; But the Fruits (says he) of the Spirit, (the New Creature in us) to which Flesh is opposed; As also in that Text (John 3.) are Love, Joy, &c. And in this Sense they are opposed in the 17 verse of that Chapter, The Flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the Flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other; By Spirit he means not the Holy Ghost in us; for it must not be said that the Holy Ghost lusteth against the Flesh; But it is that Spirit which he begetts, and then Acteth; which is contrary to the Corruption in us; As two contrary Qualities use to be. And that Metaphor of Fruits of the Spirit, and Works of the Flesh; doth congruously argue this Spirit to be a Root, whence these Fruits arise:

3. The like Difference I observed from the Parable in Mat. 25. between the wise Virgins, and the foolish: The Foolish had Oyl in their Lamps, for a Profession; They had present Assistance for what they did, by Motions, and the like; They had Heat, and Warmth from rubbing, and stirrage; but they had not Oyl in the Vessel, which remain'd; as Principles of Grace do, when Men are asleep; as these were; They had not Warmth, and Heat from a Principle of Life.

Use 2. Let us therefore examine our selves. Acts and Motions will not save us, without a spiritual new Frame of Heart, which is acted, and wrought upon; whereas when these other Motions are off, Mens Hearts remain as bad as ever: Heb. 12. 28. The Apostle useth this Argument, that seeing by the state of Grace in which we are, we have a Kingdom that cannot be shaken, perpetual and abiding; we should have Grace correspondent, and answerable: Let us therefore have a fixed, and abiding Principle thereof within us; that we may serve God acceptably, seek unto God to work this in you, as well as the Act, and Deed: Turn me O Lord! (saith the Convert Ephraim, Jer. 31. 18.) and I shall be turned.

Use 3. When a Lust stirrs, and ariseth in thee; either from Satan's Temptations, or from thine own Heart; and the Mass of Corruption that is in Thee; seek thou unto God to give Thee the contrary Grace; and to act that Grace in Thee, that it may lust against that Corruption, and overcome it; James 4. 6. The Spirit that is in us lusteth after Envy, but he gives more Grace, wherefore He saith, He giveth Grace to the Humble: And for this especially the Apostle frames his Prayer for the Thessalonians 1 Thes. 5. 23. And the very God of Peace, sanctifie you throughout; And I pray God your whole Spirit, and Soul, and Body; be preserved blameless, unto the Coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. And bless God if thou dost find such an abiding Principle so wrought in thee, a Seed of God, that Thou canst not sin, or do what thou wouldest; in the Sense before explained Bless God for it, for this is a great Work: As in Adam at first there was the Image of God, as a Principle concreated with Him; which was the Foundation of All.

Use 4. And then again, Rest not in having sleeping Habits: The Wise were saved, having Oyl in their Vessel; but being asleep; they were frightned out

Book V out of that Deep, or they had not been saved neither: Matth. 25. And therefore endeavour to exercise every Grace upon every occasion it is ordained to Act in, and that is the end of it; Let Patience have her perfect work. Patience as the Grace given Habitually, let it have its perfect work that it is ordained for. And so do as to every Grace else; that every Grace may be able to say at your Death, I have done the work, thou gavest me to do.

The Apostle (2. Pet. 1.) Having exhorted to add Grace to Grace, as to Faith, Vertue, &c. both by increasing the Principle, and Acting accordingly; he Concludes (v. 8.) If these things be in you, and abound (the Root of them in bringing forth Fruit) they make you that you shall not be Barren, nor Unfruitful in the Knowledge of Jesus Christ: As thou mayst have every Sin in thee; though yet thou hast not Acted it, so thou hast every Grace in thee, in the Root, which thou hast not yet experience of: And therefore (as Paul saith) as in other Graces, so see you abound in this Grace also, for Grace is ordained to Act. It is the Image of God; and as God is pure Act, so Grace, in Imitation of Him, should be.

C H A P. V.

2 C O R. III. 18.

But we all with open Face, beholding as in a Glass, the Glory of the Lord, are changed into the same Image, from Glory to Glory, by the Spirit of the Lord.

THAT you may know the Scope and Coherence of these Words, our Apostle does in this Chapter throughout set forth the Excellency of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, whereof he was made a Minister: Tho, as he himself saies at the beginning, he needed not to have done it unto them, because they had sufficient experience of the Power and Glorious efficacy of it, even in their own Hearts, God having used his Ministry as a Pen to draw forth even his own Image, and the Image of his Son, in their Hearts, by the Power of the Spirit, accompanying it. I need (saies he, verse 3.) no Letters of Recommendation, for you are made manifest to be the Epistle of Christ, Ministered, or Written by us, not with Ink, but the Spirit of the Living God; not in Tables of Stone, but in Fleehly Tables of the Heart. And from thence he falls upon a set and large Commendation of this Ministry, to the end of the Chapter; and for that purpose makes a Comparison between the Law and the Gospel, the Ministry of Moses, and of Jesus Christ. The Sum of which is this: The Law indeed (saies he) had Glory in it, For it revealed the Glorious Will of God, setting before Mens Eyes that Image wherein they were Created: For the Law was the Copy of it. Which Glory was shadowed out by the shining of Moses's Face when he came off the Mount. But yet alas it was but the Ministry of Death, (as it is call'd at that 7. verse) to the Hearers and Beholders of it: For though they beheld it, yet it changed not their their Hearts into the Image of it: Nay it dazled their Eyes so, that Moses was fain to put a veil over his Face, in Token that his Ministry did not change Mens Hearts, or open their Eyes, but a veil lay over all Mens Hearts, in the rending of it; but now the Ministry of the Gospel doth exceed every way in Glory. v. 9. Chap. 4

1. It is as the Glafs, or Mirrour, which represents unto us a far more excellent Glory, even the Glory of the Lord Jesus Christ, He being (Gal. 3. 1.) Pictur'd, Described, and set forth therein to Mens Eyes in all his Glorious Properties of Life and Death, being Crucified before Mens Eyes. So that the Gospel sets forth the Image of Christ, who is the Image of his Father, Heb. 1. 3. and the Brightness of his Glory, Heb. 1. 3. So that in the Face of Jesus Christ revealed in the Glafs, doth shine the Glorious Image of God the Father, and that more clearly then it did in the Law, or in Man at his first Creation, 2 Cor. 4. 6.

2. There is not only a brighter Discovery of the Glory of Christ in the Gospel, but Believers have a clearer View of it, in the Dispensation of the Gospel, then they had, who liv'd under that of the Law. We behold with open Faces (says the Apostle) the Glory of the Lord, not Veil'd, and Obscur'd, but in the clearest Light.

3. We do not barely behold it, and view it, but it changeth us into the same Image. The Law was a dead Letter, and tho' it shewed us the Will of God, yet it changed us not into the Image of it; but the Gospel reveals the Glorious Image of Jesus Christ to true Believers, and Changeth them into the same Image; (yet so as by degrees) from one degree of Glory to another; this Glorious Image being perfected by little and little, till we come to the full stature of Christ.

4. Then Lastly, is shewn the ground and true reason why the Gospel thus changeth those that look into it by Faith, because (v. 6, 7, 8.) The Gospel is the Ministration of the Spirit; but the Law is a Dead Letter. The Spirit accompanieth the Ministration of the Gospel, and we are changed into Christs Image, by the Spirit of the Lord.

In all true Believers, that have their Eyes opened to see Jesus Christ in the Gospel by true Faith, there is a most blessed change wrought in them into the same Image of Jesus Christ; as he is revealed in that Gospel. Obfer.

1. I say all Believers; for we all (says the Apostle) that do behold Christ by Faith, are thus changed. He doth not speak only of Ministers and Apostles, but all true Christians; for the comparison stands between true Believers and the People or Children of Israel, who could not behold the Glory of Moses Ministry. But they are Believers that in that Gospel with open Face behold the Glory of the Lord. Compare the 13, 14, and 15 verses with this 28 v.

2. They are changed thus in this Life; for it is by beholding Christ in the Mirrour: But after this Life is Ended, the Glafs shall be taken away; and we shall see him as he is.

3. They are changed into that Image of Christ which is Revealed in the Gospel; for being changed by beholding him therein, therefore so far as they Behold of Christ in the Gospel, so far are they changed. The Doctrine having so good ground in the Text, so as you cannot look on the Text, but it presents it self to your Consideration, I will omit other Scriptures that be alledged for it, and give you some Reasons of it, and and so come to the Uses. I shall give only one place in this Chapter, 2 Cor. 3. 3. The Apostle Affirms of the Corinthians, to whom he Wrote, that they were made Manifest to be the Epistle of Christ, which was Written in their Hearts: What doth he mean there by the Epistle of Christ, but Copies Written out by the Spirit, even Word for Word, line for line, so that in their Hearts and Lives might be read the Grace of Jesus Christ in some measure, and the likeness of his Death and Resurrection; they were his Epistle, but Christ's Image was the matter of it.

1. The First REASON of the Doctrine is drawn from that special and ultimate End that God hath Predestinated us to: I do not say the end he chose us for, but that which he did Predestinate us to: For that is the difference between Election and Predestination, the One is for an End, his own Glory; the Other is to an End, that is, what he means to do with his Children and Chosen Ones. Now if you look into Rom. 8. 29, 30. You shall find the Apostle says there, That those whom he fore-knew, he also, or withal, did Predestinate; that is, Appoint to this Especial End & What? To be Conformed to the Image of his Son, the Apostle Adds withal the Reason, That he might be the First-Born among many Brethren. The Scope of the Apostle, why he brings the General Proposition there, is to arm Believers, against Afflictions; for it was Christ's Portion before us, and God hath Predestinated us to the same Image, and yet not only to Afflictions, for an Image implies a Conformity in every part, it is not otherwise an Image or Likeness, and so he brings in this General Proposition for their Comfort, that as they are like to Christ in suffering, so shall they be in all things; else He brings it in for their Comfort, that God had ordained them in all things to be like unto his Son, and to be conformed to the same Image, both of Grace, Sufferings, and at last of Glory, thereby to arm them against these Afflictions, that so they might be content to be like unto Christ in this, as well as in the rest; as knowing assuredly they should be like him in Glory, as well as in Suffering, conformed to the same Image: 'Tis a General Proposition brought to this particular purpose; and as an Image is not an Image of another, unless it be Conformable in every part, so we are not Conformed to Christ's Image, unless we be made like him in all things.

1. 'Tis the End to which we are Predestinated, containing the full Purpose and Intention of God, in his Decree, that we should in all things be made like to Christ, in this Life, like to him in Grace and Afflictions, in our Measure, and after in Glory.

2. There is the Reason and measure of this Conformity, That he might be the First-born among many Brethren.

1. Forasmuch as all are said to be his Brethren, it implies it. God had many Children to bring to Glory, and he would have them all alike as Brethren, all to resemble him and one another: And therefore Conformed them all to the Image of his Eldest Son. God set up Christ as the Master-piece; first Patern, and Draught of his Decree, Predestinating all his, To be like unto him, that what Graces and Glory he had, they in their Measure should have also. And as (Heb. 2. 11.) the reason why he took our Nature on him (being made like unto us by taking the Similitude of sinful Flesh) is given that he might call us Brethren, so also that we might be able to call him Brother; He conforms us in all things like unto himself, that he might be the first born born of many Brethren : And this too in respect of the Sanctification of our Nature, that he who Sanctifieth, and they who are Sanctified, might be all of one ; yet still so as he might be the first Born among all those Brethren, were they never so many. In the Old Law, the Elder Brother had the Preheminency and therefore tho' we should be made like to him in Grace, and Glory, yet he would have the Dignity, the Priority, and the Preheminence in all those things wherein we were made like him, both in Grace, and Glory, and also in Sufferings. There are none equal to him, they are but like him. So that out of this place you see, that howsoever God Created us in his own Image at the first immediately ; yet his intent was to restore it by another way : He having a Son, that was the Image of himself, resolved that he should take our Nature upon him, that he might be therein made like to us, that so filling his Nature with all Grace and with all Glory, he might conform us again unto the Image of that his Son, that we might all be Brethren, all alike Conformed unto him. The same Apostle tells us, (Col. 1. 19.) That it pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell ; and God ordained him as the Store-House, and Treasury of all that Grace and Glory which he means to bestow on his Children. Adam lost all, and all is now in Christ the Second Adam, that ever the Elect Sons of Men shall have ; and this Fulness dwells in him. (Col. 2. 9.) that we might be made compleat in him. 'Tis principally there meant in regard of Sanctification, as appears by what follows there : Now how are we therein said to be compleat in him, but when we do partake of that his Fulness in a compleatness suiting with our Measure, and Conformity unto him, so as no part of likeness to him is wanting, as the word compleat implies. And therefore the Apostle (in the 11, 12, 13, and 14 verses) shews wherein it consists, viz. in being Circumcised, as he was, and in being Buried as he was, and in being raised up as he was. Therefore all Fulness is in him, and therefore also he is called the Sun of Righteousness, because as all Light is gathered up into the Body of the Sun, and dwells there in the fulness of it, and of it the Moon and other Stars do partake ; and the Sun shining on them makes them in their measure light as the Sun it self is, so is it here. God hath appointed Jesus Christ as the Person in whom should remain, in the Fulness of it, the Glorious Image of God, and all Believers upon whom he shines are Transformed into the same Image ; and the nearer they come to him, the more are they Transformed. This you see is the Decree of God concerning all his : To be Conformed to the Image of Christ ; and it contains fully all that can be said of what we were ordained to.

A Second Reason of the Doctrine is this, When God doth call any Man, then he begins to Execute that his Decree, and so to renew the Image of Christ in him. For whom he hath Predestinated, them also he hath Called ; and Calling is nothing but the Conforming us to his Image in this Life, in regard of Grace ; and therefore says Paul, (Gal. 15. 16.) When it pleased God to call me, and to Reveal his Son in me. That is, when he began to manifest this Image of Christ in my poor Soul. What then is the New Birth, but the forming and Fashioning the Image of Christ in us ? I Travail in Birth again (says Paul, Gal. 4. 29.) until Christ be formed in you. What is the meaning that Christ should be formed in them, but that the lively and real Image of Christ should be imprinted on their Hearts ? And in the word Formed there is a Metaphor taken from the shaping of a Child in the Womb, that look as the Natural Parents communicating matter of their own Bodies, it is framed and shaped by the Spirits into the lively likeness of themselves, Limb for Limb, answerable to themselves, so likewise is Christ appointed by God as a Second Adam, (as 'tis in 1 Cor. 15. 45, 46, 47, 48.) and an Everlasting Father (Isa. 9. 6.) who Communicates to us the Seed of his word (1 Pet. 1. 23.) to be shed into our Hearts, and the Spirit of Christ Enlivening it, frames it, and fashions it in every Limb, like unto himself ; and as the First Adam begat a Child in his likeness (Gen. 5.) so doth this Second Adam in his likeness. And though indeed the full Conformity to him shall be in Heaven, yet so far as Christ is Revealed, so far are we made like him ; we see him but as he was upon Earth, revealed in the Gospel, and unto that Image are we Conformed here in the New Birth. As we see him in Book V the Mirrour, we are made like to that Image in it; but when we see him as he is, we shall also be like him in Glory, 1 John 3. 1, 2. And therefore (Isa. 53. 10.) we are called his Seed, which do prolong his Daies upon the Earth, for though he be ascended up to Heaven, yet he begets Daily those that are like to him as he was on the Earth; so like him, as they are said to prolong his Days on Earth: As you use to say of a Child like his Parent, that so long as he lives, his Father will never dye, he is so like unto him: So the Resemblance of Christ in us doth prolong his Days on Earth; and therefore Christ is said to prolong his Days on Earth; Christ is said to be in us (2 Cor. 13. 5.) to live in us, (Gal. 2. 20.) And we are said to put on Christ, even in regard of Sanctification (Rom. 3. 14.) that is, we cloath our Hearts and Lives with his Image, fashioning our selves to him. Will you have all in a Word? The Church, the Body, the Members of Christ, are called (1 Cor. 12. 12.) Christ; if you read the whole verse, and consider it well, you will find it so; and that both in regard of Union to him, and Communion with him in his Image, and likeness, and therefore also have the same common Name with him, as Brethren and Members use to have. For the Name Christ signifies Anointed and he is indeed Anointed first as our Head with the Spirit and the Grace of it above measure, even above his fellows: But yet so that as from Aarons Head, that Oyl ran down and anointed his Cloathing and all his Body, so do the Grace and Vertue of all that Christ did, or suffered, descends to them that receive the anointing of him. 1 Job. 2. 27.

Use 1. The first Use may be a Use of Tryal or Examination, whether we yet belong to Christ or no. Let us examine whether we have his Image renewed in us. We are predestinated (as you have hear'd) to be conformed thereunto. And in our Calling also, God begins to renew this his Decree on us. If that therefore we would make our Calling and Election sure, (as the Apostle speaks 2 Pet. 1. 10.) we should labour to try and examine whether Christ his Image be in us or no. Let me therefore Exhort you in the words of the Apostle, 2 Cor. 13. 5. To Try and Examine your Selves, whether Christs Image be in you. Know ye not your own Selves, how that Christ is in you, unless you be Reprobates. That is, in the same state with them; for those that are Predestinate, are Predestinate to be Conformed to the Image of his Son, which if it be not in you, ye are as Reprobates. My Brethren, we profess our selves Christians, whence is it that we have our Name, but from our Conformity unto Christ, as you heard out of 1 Cor. 12. 12? And therefore those that have not the Image of Christ in them begun in some measure, are but Bastard Christians: We plead we are Baptized, and by it made Members of Christ; and did not we read that those that are Baptized truly into Christ have put on Christ, his Graces, his Image, in Sanctification, as well as Justification, as you heard out of the 12th of the Romans, and the last Verse. We profess our selves also such as Christ hath Dyed for, and in the perswasion of this we labour to sooth up our selves daily. Well if he hath Dyed for us, he hath Dyed in us; if he hath Lived for us, he also Lives in us, by his Grace and by his Spirit. Thus Paul, when (Gal. 2. 20.) he says, Jesus Christ gave himself for him, put this before it, I am Crucified with Christ, and Christ lives in me; we all also profess our selves to be the Children of God, and call God Father, and Christ Brother; and have you not heard out of the 8th of the Romans, that God Predestinates his to be Conformed to the Image of his Son, that he may call them Brethren; and if you do not in some measure resemble your Elder Brother Christ, you are none of the Children of his Father. Have you not also heard that Christ begets them in his Image How will you be able to ask your Inheritance at his Hands unless you be his Son? and my Brethren, howsoever we may pass currant here for good Christians, And think our selves so, yet God at the latter Day, and Day of Death, when your Souls are brought to him, either to own, or to refuse; The very first things that he will enquire into, will be, as Christ did when he saw the Penny, Whose Image is it? And as he said, What is Casars to Cesar, and what is Gods to God, so will God say; if it hath the Image of Christ on it, give it to Christ, for it belongs to him; if of the Devil, (for one of these you must have,) then give it to him, for it belongs to him. Nothing will pass current Coyn with God, but what hath the Image of Christ on it; none will be taken for his Sheep, but those that have his Mark, and then he will raise it up at the last Day, as he himself speaketh. All this, my Brethren, I press upon you to stir you up Seriously, to lay your Hearts to what shall be spoken, by way of Tryal: For to help you therein, my intent is to shew you the Particulars wherein the Image of Christ doth Consist, to which we are Conformed in this Life. And these take along with you. First, That tis not Perfection, but Truth therein, that God accepts. For the best are but imperfectly changed into this Image; for 'tis from Glory to Glory, that is, from one Degree to another; if therefore thou canst discern the Prints of his Image, and Supercription on thy Heart, tho they be but as rude and imperfect Stamps, and thy Evidence be but as the Prints in a blurr'd Sixpence, yet if thou beest sure thou findest them there, thou mayest have Comfort; God will not deny any such imperfect Coines.

Now this Image consisteth especially of Two Parts, First, In a Conformity to his Graces. Secondly, To his Example; I speak of that Image which in this Life we are changed to; there is also his Image of Glory, which in the Life to come we shall be Conformed to, and that of Suffering, which is here in this Life, neither of which are Pertinent to this Text. For only that Image of him as here on Earth is revealed to us in the Gospel, we see him not as Glorious in the Heavens, but his Grace, his Work, his Death, his Restoration and other parts of his Mediation, which are the Objects of Faith, unto these here must we be Conformed; for as the Apostle says (1 John 4. 13.) Even as he is, so are we in this World.

1. The Image of Christ in us is a Conformity to all his Graces: The like Graces in us must be renewed that were in him, (John 1. 16.) of his Fulness we have all received Grace for Grace; Christ was said to be full of Grace in the former Verses, and of his Fulness do all we (says the Apostle) that Believe in him, receive Grace, and that Grace for Grace; as you ought to say when you Copy out one thing out of another, that tis done Word for Word; so do we of Christ (says John) receive Grace for Grace, that is, look what Graces are in Christ are derived to us, Grace for Grace, and therefore (John 15. 5.) He is compared to the Vine, and we to the Branches, because he conveys the same kind of Sapp of Grace to us, that are in himself, so as we bear the like Fruit unto that he did, pleasing through him unto the Father. (Job. 17. 19.) For their sakes Sanctifie I my self, that they (even all that thou hast given me) may be Sanctified through the Truth. Christ Sanctified our Nature, that by it he might be made Sanctification to us; and the place here implies, that to that end he received the Graces of Sanctification, that he might Sanctifie us with the same kind, receiving it to that End, and therefore there is no Grace in Christ but is renewed in his Children; otherwise that Grace in Christ were in vain, for he received all as a Fountain to convey his Store to us. And why else is it that Believers are Exhorted to be Holy for he is Holy, (1 Pet. 1. 16.) who are said to be Righteous as he is Righteous, that is in the same kind not measure, (1 John 3. 7.) why are we called to shew forth the Vertues of Christ, (1 Pet. 2. 9.) if we had not received them? my Brethren, let us be exhorted to Examine our selves by this. It is not enough to have Gifts from Christ (as Reprobates had) Judas and others, an abundance of swimming knowledg, common enlightning, natural Wisdom, Learning, Abilities to express a mans self; All which I confess came from Christ. But yet are not part of that his Image; but are endowments flow from him to the Sons of Men. For he is thus the Light that Enlightneth every Man that comes into the World (John 1. 8.) And as the Sun, in the Heavens, so the Sun of Righteousness with his common Gifts shines both on good and bad. But his Image is his Graces, and those not civil Vertues only; for they are but common

Book V common Gifts; but Christ was not only a Civil Man; no, he call'd for more Righteousness than the Pharisees had. Except your Righteousness, says he, to his Disciples, exceeds that of the Scribes and Pharisees, you cannot enter into the Kingdom of God; and yet they were civil men, and lived soberly and justly, were no Adulterers. And yet who greater opposites to Christ than these were? Truly methinks the consideration of this Truth, should amaze all civil Justitaries in the World, and deliver them from resting in their glittering Sins; Mark, but of what strain Christ was, look into the State, marke and observe his Steps in the story of him; he made the duties of Holiness his chief Trade, he lived not only civilly but holily; 'twere Blasphemy to say the contrary; and if that men were begotten of him, in his Image, those Vertues they would shew forth most; Christ you heard is our Father, we his Seed, begotten by him, and he formed in us: Now as in a Father those Limbs that are greater, are proportionably so in the Child, or else it were a Monster, so all these Graces which were most in Christ, would be most in us, if we were his Children. When as a Man makes a great shew of all kind of civil Vertues, of Sobriety, Chastity, and the like; but none of Holiness, 'Tis a sign he is a Monster, and Christ begets no such: Let Men but consider that these Vertues are found in those that never heard of the name of Christ, as the Antient Heathen and the Turks at this day, who are not Christians, not so much as in Name; and therefore those that go no further deserve the name less than they. Wild Trees do bring forth Blossoms, that grow in Wilderneses as well as those in Gardens. But those that are Ingrafted with Christ, do bring forth Fruit also according unto its kind, and the Root they are Ingrafted on; but what are Moral Vertues only but Blossoms? And though indeed it is true, that even those were in Christ, and ought to be in Christians, yea and are; yet if you would make them signs of a good estate, you must discern them as growing from Union with Christ, and then they will be of another kind then meer Moral Vertues are; differing as much as sweet Marjorum from Wild, the one a Weed; the other an Herb; your Meekness will proceed, not from softness of Nature; but from a Heart humbled, Tamed, Sweetned with the apprehension of thy Injuries done to Christ which now thou findest forgiven, and from this ground thy Spirit is calmed and subdued. In the 11. of Matthew, Learn of me (says Christ, Mat. 11.) for I am Lowly and Meek; the Civilest, the Meekest Men by Nature must learn of Christ to be Meek and Humble: And so also that Love, Sweetness, and Ingenuoufness of Nature, would reach higher than it doth or can do in civil Men, it would extend it self to thy Enemies for so Christ loved thee when thou wert an Enemy: If you Love them that Love you, the Gentiles do so, says Christ, there is but one good turn for another. Good Nature and Love in a Gracious Heart will also burst out and be seen, especially to the Saints and those that excel in Vertue. Indeed when Christ met with that young Man that was but a civil man, 'tis said he looked on him and loved him; but when he spoke to his Sheep, to his poor Disciples, to Mary Magdalen and others, he opened himself to them, expressed bowels of his Love unto them, countenanced them, cherished them, comforted them! And when they told him of his Brother, and Sister, and Mother, he shewed that they that were Spiritually akin to him were dearer to him. Also our Mercy and Pity would shew it self to the Souls of Men especially; he was good to their Bodyes for he Healed many, fed five Thousand out of his Compassion; but, twas to pluck their Souls out of the jaws of Death, that was his chiefest aim; stronger it was in him than Hunger to Convert a Soul; for when as he came an Hungry to Samaria, and they went to buy Victuals, he met with the Woman of Samaria and forgot his Dinner; 'twas Meat to him to convert her self; and therefore wheresoever he came, he went up and down instructing of Men; prayed for his Enemies Salvation; even at the last gasp; Wept over Jerusalem when he went to be Crucified in it; and if we had any of his Compassion, our Bowels would Yearn within us, to see Men lye in the Fire, and would move us to labour to pluck them out; for alas that is Mens greatest Misery. And so our Humility would not be that proud Humility the World

World is so full of. When his kinsfolk came to him (in John 7. 3, 4, 5.) and spurr'd him on to go shew himself; If thou doest these things, go shew thyself to the World. Alas he suppressed it, shewed it no further than it might be for the Salvation of his chosen, and that they might believe in him, (Job 5. 34, 44.) Denied himself, Emptyed himself of the Glory that was due to him (as from the beginning of the World) regarded it not if his Father might be Glorified; and when it came to that dismal hour of Crucifying, and encountering with his wrath: Not my Will, (says he) but thy Will be done. How content was he to bear any condition of Hunger, Nakedness, the Taunts, Reproaches of his most base Enemies; and when he was Reviled, Reviled not again. How did he express his contempt of the World, in having an Eye to that Glory which was set before him, that though he had all the World offered him at once, yet he refused it all? What Zeal and Courage did he express in his Fathers Cause. Whipping the profane out of the Temple, withstanding the corruptions of those Times; opposing the Pharisees, calling them Hypocrites to their very Faces; what hatred and detestation did he express against their Sins?

Use 2. By this we may learn how much the Image of God in us is Advanced and Improved above what was in the Heart of Adam, in Innocency: As also above, that which the Image of God is, in respect of Conformity to the Law and Will of God; For tho' Holiness in all States, is one and the same, the same for Substance; for Holiness is to aim at Gods Glory, and that runs through all States, both in Innocency, and in the State of Grace, and in Heaven. Yet that Holiness which Christ works in us under the Gospel, and by which we know God and Jesus Christ, and God in him, hath far more Elevated Strains, of a more excellent Genius, and far higher, Nobler, and Heavenlier than what was in Adam's Heart, or his Heart ever knew; for instance, I'll go over but some Graces, which are all but Christ in us. Adam had Humility, he must needs have it, as he was a Creature; the Angels they have Humility in them, for they cover their Faces when they behold the Glory of God, they have Wings on purpose to do it. But the Humility that Adam had, whence did it spring? Why by seeing himself to be a Creature, made out of nothing, and that there was an infinite distance between God that was the Creator, and himself. But now take that Grace of Humility that is in the Heart of a Believer, and it is of another make, and Springs from another, and more Noble Rise; for was Adam so Humble as to be laid so low as to see himself a Creature, and God the Creator? Why Sin lays a Believer lower, far lower, and Humility in a Believer riseth thence. It riseth likewise from this, that he that was God himself was Humbled, and therefore shall Man be proud? Had Adam such motives to Humility? That Humility and Self-emptiness that is in a Believer, makes him not value his own Graces, they are all as nothing to him, and Jesus Christ is all in all to him. It lays him not only low, seeing himself nothing, as a Creature, but it makes him account himself worse than nothing, a Creature deserving Hell it self. Adam though he was Humbled as a Creature, and knew his distance, yet he could stand upon Terms, Terms of Creation, with God; he might challenge a Justification that was due to him, for so the Covenant of Works doth, which he was Created under. Look into (Rom. 4. 4.) and see what the Apostle saith there, Now to him that worketh is the Reward not reckoned, of Grace, but of Debt; And verse 2. If Abraham were Justified by Works, he hath whereof to Glory; but Abraham had not whereof to Glory before God, therefore he was not Justified by Works, that's the Apostle's Argument; he clearly in that place holds forth the difference between the Covenant of Works, and the Covenant of Grace; the one he saith is κατὰ τὸ ὀφείλημα it is according to Debt, or Due, but the other is κατὰ χάριν, according to Grace. Now is it not a strange Speech, that he that should have been Justified by Works; (as Adam should have been) had whereof to Glory, had something that was a Debt, which in some Respect he might have challenged, and have stood upon Terms with God

Book V God about it. Here now is the Humility of this Adam, that he knew himself to be a Creature, made out of nothing, and that God might Annihilate him when he would, tho being under the Covenant of works, while he did continue so, there was a Justification that was his due, that was his natural due, that God should account him, and pronounce him Righteous. I confess I have often wondered at the Expression of the Apostle in that Rom. 4. for we read in Rom. 11. 34. Who hath first given to the Lord, and it shall be Recompenced unto him again? Therefore that is not the Apostles meaning, as if Adam could have given any thing to God, and therefore he might challenge a Recompence from God, but the meaning is only this, that in the way of a dueness and of a natural Justness, such as is between the Creator and the Creature, whilst the Creature remaineth Holy, God should according to that Law justifie him according to his Works, and so he had whereof to Glory. It is not a Debt of Retribution (that is the Distinction) it is not Debitum Restitutionis, as if he could in a mercenary way procure any thing of God, yet it was Debitum Conveniente, it was meet that if he wrought, and remained Holy, God should Justifie him. So that Adam's Humility was joyned with what was a natural Due which he might have challenged if he had continued Holy. But what is our Humillty we have from Christ? Why instead of standing upon Terms, the Wages of Sin is Death: The Reward (saith he) is reckoned of Debt, and he receives it as Wages; but all the Wages we have now, it is but the Wages of Sin, and that is Death. and the Heart of a Believer acknowledgeth it, and doth not only submit himself to the Sovereignty of God, as he is a Creature, so Adam must do, but he laies his Neck upon the Block, tells God that Hell and Destruction are his due, puts his Mouth in the Dust, and Walketh humbly with God; and if God gives him Life, oh it is the free gift of God, the Wages of Sin is death, but the Gift of God is Eternal Life.

Secondly, Consider the Justification that Adam had, and that which we have by Christ. The Justification of Adam was Natural. It was plainly this, if he did continue Righteous, which Righteousness was preserved and conserved by working according to the Rule, and the Principles in his own Heart; he thus obeying God, and remaining Righteous, it was a natural Due to him a meet thing for God upon this to approve him and pronounce him Righteous, because he did act and continue as God had made him, and he walked according to the Law of a Creature toward his Creator. Now what was it for God to give him this approbation and so to justifie him? It was only this, that he pronounced him to be good in his kind, even as he pronounced all the other Creatures to be so, in their kind. Gen. 1. ult. God viewed all the Creatures that he had made, and said they were very good; he viewed Adam so too, for this was before Adam fell, and he pronounced him good as he did the rest only good in his kind, which was the goodness of Righteousness, Holiness and Integrity, which he yet stood in. So that indeed the justification of Adam according to the Covenant of Works, it was but an Approbation of him, that he continued Good, that he walked uprightly, &c. as he pronounceth of the Heavens that keep their Ordinances to this day, that they are Good; so he would have done of Man, if he had kept his Ordinances according to the Law of Creation. But alas all this Goodness, and Righteousness he had, would not have stood out against the least Sin; if he had but sinned, all this had been Forfeited, all gone, utterly lost. But now what manner of Righteousness is it that we have by Christ, Revealed in the Gospel? Why we are Justified freely by Grace, we are Justified by a Righteousness which is Sin-Proof, by a Righteousness which when it hath made a Purchase of the Forgiveness of all our Sins, gives us in Heaven too, by a Righteousness which Believers never can, never shall, out-spend, by a Righteousness that Pardons all a Mans Sins, Pays all his Debts, the very first Hour that he believes and lays hold upon it, and which continues to Everlasting, and would continue to Everlasting, to Justifie him, though he should remain in a mixt condition of Sinning against God, as we are in this Life by a Righteousness which breaks through God's Justice to Gods Throne of Grace, and makes the Soul do so with a World of Confidence. Thirdly, Let us compare the the Love that was in Adam's Heart to God, and the Love which Christ works in us. Adam loved God, its true, because he was a good God to him, and his Creatour; but he so Loved him, as that Adam withal knew that if he did but Trip, did but Sin, God would instantly Hate him, more than ever he Loved him, and his Wrath would fall upon him, and he must Die the Death; So that indeed the Term of Love between God and Man, then, what was it? I Love you, while you Love me. God had out of Love made Adam Holy, and given him power to Love; but then so long as he continued to Love God thus, and to Love God at such a Hight, so long God continued to Love him; so that indeed it was but a Temporary Love, as I may Express it; that is, a Love which might fail, and did fail as such. It is a saying that Seneca hath, and it is a true one, To Love one so, as a Man thinks with himself it may fall out so one Day that this Man may Hate me, This is the hane of Friendship there cannot be a perfect Love where this is; Perfect Love doth cast out all such Fear. But yet this was the State and Condition of Adam: Its true, he knew that so long as he Loved God, and Obeyed him, God would Love him; but yet so as he knew withal, that if he Sinned (and he knew not how soon he might Sin, for he was but a Creature) God would then presently Hate him. This was Clearly and Truly the Friendship and Love that was between God and Adam. But now what is the Love, what kindleth the Love now that is in the Heart of a Believer of a more Noble Flame? It is a Love that is Free, a Love that is not fixt upon us while we Love God, or because we Love him, but was eternally before we had done either good or Evil as the Phrase is, (Rom. 9.11.) Not for your Sakes, but for my own Names Sake, do I this, saith God. Ezek. 36. 32. Indeed he hath chosen us in Christ, that we should be Holy in Love, but he hath not chosen us because we Loved Him, nor doth He continue His Choicc therefore. Is it a Love which may prove but Temporary? No, It is a Love from Everlasting to Everlasting; it is a Love that is pitcht upon our Persons; I Love such a Person, saith God, be he Sinful, or Holy; and if Sinful, I will make him Holy. The Love pitcht upon Adam, was in Relation to his Graces; and the Love that God bare to Adam, was but single to him as to his Creature; but the Love that is in Gods Heart now, is through Christ his Son, Professing to Love us with the same Love he Loveth him. That Love he bare Adam, was such as he bare to any Creature, be they what they be, so long as they remaind Holy, and kept in their First State; but the Love that a Believer takes in, it is a Peculiar Love, it is a Love with Difference; I will shew Mercy, to whom I will shew Mercy, that's all the Reason of it; Jacob have I Loved, and Esau have I Hated, and he gives no Reason of it. The Love that Adam had in his Condition was such, that Sin took away all Gods Love, and turned it into Hatred; but here is a Love now that though we be Sinful, we are not Children of Wrath, when we are Believers; a Love which much Water cannot Quench; a Love which when we were Sinners and Enemies, it was the more desirous to manifest it self, because it should have more opportunity by giving Christ to shew the more Love, by how much the more we were Sinners. Now all this Love doth the Heart of a Believer take in under the Gospel, and doth Christ Work in us, therefore raiseth up this Love to a Height, to a Nobleness, to a Generosity, to a Heavenliness, such as never Adam's Heart was capable of: Perfect Love casteth out Fear; he knows God so Loves him as he will never Hate him, nor never can do it; a Love which is not Mercenary, doth not serve for reward; a Love which (when the Gospel once hath kindled it) will cleave to God though a Man's Heart knows not whether God Love him or no; a Love which will not only make a Man Submit to the Will of God, but makes a Mans Soul willing, if it were the Will of God, to be lost for him, so it was with Paul. Fourthly, take Self-Denial in a Christian, which is a New Grace. Not my Will but thy Will, was Christ's Motto. Alas Adam was put to Live, he was to keep within his Bounds which God Created him in, and it was fit he should be kept in them. But we are put to deny our selves, yea, sometimes when it comes in Opposition to God, to deny Friends, Father, Mother, Life, yea, a Man's own Graces.

Book VI No such self-denial was Adam put to, which is the most great and glorious Grace of all the rest. Fifthly, Go take all Motives to Obedience, and they are far more noble in a Christian than ever was in Adam. As in (1 John 2. 7.) Love is called not only an old Commandment, but a new; And why a new one? Because when the Gospel cometh, it brings new Motives, and urgeth the Commandment of love to our Brethren and fellow Creatures upon such Grounds, as the Law and the Covenant of Works never did. We have higher Motives to the smallest Duty than ever Adam could have, or his Heart was capable of. Are we to be kind to our Fellow Creatures? Saith the Apostle, Put on Kindness; but how? How doth he move it? As the Elect of God, holy and beloved, (Col. 3. 12.) as those whom God hath chosen with an everlasting Love in Jesus Christ, forbearing one another, and forgiving one another. And so you have the like in (Eph. 4. ult) Be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you. And so in (Eph. 5. 24.) The Obedience of Wives to their Husbands, and the love of Husbands to their Wives, is urged upon such a Ground as Adam should never have had such a Motive run thro' his Heart; Let Wives (saith he) be subject to their Husbands in every thing, as the Church is subject unto Christ: And let Husbands love their Wives, even as Christ also loved the Church. Such Motives as these, in these common Relations, doth the Gospel give us. These old Commandments Adam had, of duties to his Fellow Creatures, and of love to his Wife, and the like; but they were upon lower Motives, infinitely lower than what the Gospel holds forth, he had no such example as we have in Christ for every Duty, no such Motives as we have from him. Lastly, The assistance which we have from Christ is of an higher kind than that which Adam had. How did God assist Adam in all the works of the Law that he was to perform? What was the Promise of Assistance? No other than to assist him in his kind (God having created him holy) as he doth assist other Creatures in their kind. I say his assistance was but the concurrence of a common Providence, so as to other Creatures, only it was applied to Adam in his kind, as a Creature that was holy. But now the assistance that we have under the Gospel, for every work we do is of an higher Nature, for Jesus Christ is our Covenant, he hath undertaken to fulfil all in us and for us, all that God would have us to do, he hath undertaken to work it in us, so far forth as to save us, or to bring us to that degree of Glory he hath appointed us unto. He works in us both to will and to do according to his good pleasure; I am able to do all things (saith Paul) through Christ that strengthneth me: So that it is not I (saith he) but the Grace of God that is in me, the Grace of God acting me, falling upon me, and over-powering my Spirit. A Believer, he is in the Spirit, and so he walketh in the Spirit. But this was not the Law of assisting Adam, which was only the Law of common Providence.

2. The Second Thing which we are conformed to, is Christ's Example, and so the Author to the Hebrews calls him the Captain of our Salvation, (Heb. 2. 10.) because like a valiant General he hath set us a Pattern; and left us an Example to follow his Steps (1 Pet. 2. 21.) and therefore, the same Apostle Peter following the same Metaphor (1 Pet. 4. 1.) says, Arm yourselves with the same Mind. Nay, lay but aside the Works of his Divinity, as healing, fasting &c. and of his Mediation, and the like: And 'tis a sure Rule That whatsoever Christ did for a Christian, he doth in Him also, there being a Likeness and Proportion and an Assimilation in his Works of Grace in us and for us. He is Conceived, Formed, Born again in us; as you heard out of the Galatians; We circumcised with him, with the Circumcision made without Hands; are dead, buried, raised up again with him, as 'tis Col. 2. 11, 12, 13. So that the Conversion of a Sinner is but the acting over again of Christ's part. Now though I might go over many, yet I will insist, this time, only in these which are mentioned Rom. 6. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. The Sum of which is in the 5th verse. That we are planted with him into the Likeness of his Death and Resurrection. For those two being the chiefest parts of his Mediation: The work of Sanctification in us, is assimilated and likened unto them. Mortification, or the killing of Sin, and Vivification cation or quickning us unto newness of Life; are assimilated to his Death and Resurrection; and that not only because they are wrought by the Power of them (though that be true, as appears by Phil. 3. 10.) But also in regard of a likeness that there is between the one and the other; and so we are said to be planted with him into the similitude of his Resurrection. I desire you to consider (Rom. 6. 3, 5, 6, 7. &c.) because I will ground the rest on what is there. In the 6th verse, you may observe how the Apostle puts upon the Mass of Corruption and Sin that is in us, the name of a Body; calling it the Body of Sin, not only because that it is compact and made up of innumerable Lusts in us, as Members of it. (As 'tis Col. 3. 3, 5.) Which, like Members, are knit together; but chiefly, in respect of this, that he might shew us the Likeness between Christ's dying, and our dying to Sin; that as he had a Body was Crucified, so we have a Body of sin to be destroyed: Yea, and in the same manner Crucified as his was. Such is his Phrase in the 6 v. That our Old man, or Body of sin, might be crucified with him and destroyed. Yea, and the Apostle Peter in (Epist. 4.) useth the two parts of Christ's Crucifying to express this.

1. Christ was Condemned, and had Sentence of Death passed on him so are our sins Condemned, for we having resolved to leave and forsake them, to cherish them no longer, have past the Sentence of Death on them; and so a Christian hath Vowed the Death of his Sins, as of his known Enemies; and though a Man loved his Lusts never so well, though they have been his old Bosom Friends, he hath formerly had so much solace in, yet now when he hath discovered their Treason out, and apprehends how they are his Enemies, Enemies to God, to Christ, and that he must now either Kill, or be Killed, that they fight against his Soul (as Peter speaks) he seeks the Death of them by all means, accuseth, arraigneth them, by Confession, and pleading Guilty; his own Mouth Condemns them Daily, hales and drags them before the Judgment Seat of God; and because he cannot execute them, he cries, Lord, thou art able, to give this lust a stab, and its Deadly Wound which is ready ever, and anon to overcome and to kill me; and how glad is he when he hears the Sentence of Death pronounced against it, in the word; lays his Heart open to the Ministry of it, the Reproof of his Sin, and suffers the Sword of the Spirit to have its full blow at it: Oh my Brethren, Examine your own Hearts, who among you have gon thus far in the Mortification of his Lusts, who is at Enmity, and Daggers drawing at them Daily, who is he that stand in Terms with them, as with an Enemy, nay, rather, doth not cherish them as dearest Friends, keeping them under their Tongues as sweet bits; how many are there that never made Prayer against any one Sin, that storm at the Word when it Condemns them?

2. As Christ, after he was Condemned, was brought to the Cross, and there Executed, Crucified; so also the Spirit of God in true Christians, comes with the power of Christ, naileth his Lusts to the Cross of Christ, (Gal. 6. 14.) and so (1 Peter 4. 1.) we are said to suffer in the Flesh as Christ did, and the Apostle Paul (Rom. 6. 6.) useth the same word of Crucifying to express the one and the other, both of Christ's and ours; as Christ's Body in crucifying was in every Member and Part put to pain, which in no Death scarce but that, falls out; not a Vein, not a Sinew, but was stretched, so also is every Member of the Body of Sin Crucified, it reaching to every Lust, great and small, (Gal. 5. 24.) they all now stretch for it; and Oh my Brethren, who knows the pains in parting with Lusts, but they that have done it indeed, and in truth; and tho some have stronger Hearts then others, to endure more pain, yet every Lust being as the strings of a Mans Heart, as dear as his Life, therefore the parting with these, the crucifying of these, must needs be as the breaking of the Heart-strings, and making the Vital Sinews crack. Examine your selves, how many is there of you, that never parted in earnest with one Lust yet, much less with all.

Book V

And then 3dly; as Jesus Christ being thus crucified, gave up the Ghost; so also doth the Spirit of Christ, in likeness unto this, take away the Life and Power of Sin; at the first Stabb it hath a deadly Wound given it at the Heart, and therefore the Apostle (in Rom. 6. 2, 3.) Affirms that Believers are Dead to Sin, Baptized into the Death of Christ, it having a deadly blow given it, and how shall we that are Dead Live therein? He argues 'tis Absurd and Impossible, how can it be? Can a Man that is Dead, or Deadly Wounded Live, that is, perform the Actions of Life with Delight constantly, for that is to Live; why he cannot; no more can we (says the Apostle) Live in Sin, that is we cannot with Delight, and in the Life of Comfort, continue in the practice of any of our former Sins in a full carier, that is, continue with Delight in the Actions of it: For to Live in Sin in the 2d. Verse, is all one as to continue in Sin, in 4. verse. My Brethren, let us all examine our selves hereby; we came all into the World Sinners, and with Lusts all as lively as our selves; and every Man also, till that he hath the power of Christs Death, thus conveyed to him; lives the life of his lusts, as well as that of his natural Life; performs the actions whereby he satisfyes them with as much life and delight, as he can do those of his Natural Life: (Col. 3. 7.) Now therefore Examine your selves whether that you have felt a thro work ever wrought in you or no, by which this power and life of Sin was killed; and thy Sins had, and hath a deadly wound given them, which will go with them to their Graves, and which they could never since recover; try this in thy Master Lust; doth a Lust Live in thy heart still, Live and is as Brisk as ever, when it is put in, or stir'd up in thee, Even, as a Fish in its own proper Element; then thou art not Mortified. But dost thou find a Deadness and Stifness to those Sinful Delights wherein formerly the comfort of thy Life consisted, so as that they are all as dead Drink to the Stomach, or as a Stone put into a Dead Mans Mouth, and thou cannot find the relish that Savours, the Sweetness and Fulness of Contentment in them that formerly thou hast done, so that thou art Crucified to the World, and the World to thee; this proceedeth from Union with Christs Dying unto Sin, which is likned to his dying for Sin but especially try it in regard of thy Course, (for the Apostle says) if that we be Dead to Sin, how shall we Live therein? If a Man were Crucified or Dead with Christ, he could not Live in his old Courses, (1 Pet. 4. 1.) He that hath Suffered in the Flesh, that is, whose Sinful Corruption of Nature is killed by the power of Christs death, hath ceased from sin; that is, the course and practice of any known Sin, for that is the most capable Interpretation can be given of it. My Brethren, pray consider, either that is not the Word of God, or this is not the meaning of it, or else any one that lives in the Practice of any known bosom Sin is not a Christian; how can then those that live in the Lusts of the Gentiles, as they are termed there in vers. 4, 5. in Wantonness, Chamberings, Drunkenness, Uncleanness, and the like excess of riot, be Termed Christians? In (1 John 3. 5, 6, 7, 8.) speaking of our Conformity unto Christ, among the rest he makes this as one, That as Christ had no Sin in him, so he that abides in him, continues not in Sin; for so the Word must be Interpreted for says he (verse 8.) Christ appeared to dissolve the Works of the Devil; that is in those that are his, to put an End to the Work or Devilish Trade of Sin in themselves If therefore we be dead with Christ, how shall we continue in Sin? When a Thief is hanged, doth he not leave the practice of his Thievery? And so should we break off our course in sinning, if we our selves had ever been on the Cross with Christ, and Crucified with him. Well my Brethren, this know, that none shall have the benefit of his Death for the forgiveness of sin, that hath not a likeness to it in the death of it in himself. And least it should be thought that Sin is not thus truly kill'd with Christ, the Apostle goes farther in (Rom. 6. 4.) and says that we are Buried also with Christ. There is also a Conformity to his Burial; whereby is shewn that Sin is truly Dead; a living Man would not suffer himself to be Buried, and by the Conformity to his Burial, he means the progress of a Christian, in the farther, and daily daily Mortifying of his Lusts, that as a Body being laid in the Grave, Rots away and Consumes, till at length it be Destroyed; so doth the Body of Sin, (as 'tis at ver. 6.) being Crucified it is Destroyed also, and that is not till the day of Death, and therein indeed it differs from Christs Body, which remained Unconsumed in the Grave, saw no Corruption, and remains now Glorified in Heaven. And therefore Examine whether Sin Moulders and decays in thee, or no.

BOOK VI.

That the Work of Grace wrought in us by the Spirit of God in Regeneration, is a Different and Higher Principle than Natural Conscience in its greatest Elevation of Light. The Deficiency of Natural Conscience shewed, and the mistakes of Men about it detected.

CHAP. I.

That all Men being under a Covenant of Works, or a Covenant of Grace; there are Two Principles of Actions, viz. Conscience alone in its natural Light in the One, and supernatural Grace with its Light in the Hearts of the Other, who are Regenerate. The Two Texts, Rom. 2. 14, 15, and Jer. 31. 31, 32, 33. Explained. That the Principle by which the Law of God Reigns over Men is Conscience. What Notions the Philosophers among the Heathens had of it.

- V. 31. Behold, the Days come saith the Lord, that I will make a New Covenant with the House of Israel, and with the House of Judah.
V. Not according to the Covenant, that I made with their Fathers, in the Day that I took them by the Hand, to bring them out of the Land of Egypt; (which my Covenant they brake, altho' I was an Husband unto them saith the Lord.)
V. 33. But this shall be the Covenant that I will make with the House of Israel, after those Days, saith the Lord, I will put my Law in their Inward parts, and write it in their Hearts, and I will be their God, and they shall be my People.

HAVING opened the Nature of the true Work of Grace; I shall now for the fuller and Larger Illustration hereof, subjoyn the Discovery of its Counterfeit, which is the Work of the Law, Written in the Heart by Nature.

Book V Nature, or the powerful Effects which a Natural and Enlightned Conscience hath in the Hearts of Men remaining Unregenerate; Which Men in all Professions of Religion do ordinarily mistake in themselves, for true and inherent Holiness. The Use and Necessity of this Discourse is to shew more clearly the Nature of true Sanctification, by the Detection of its Counterfeit. For things come to be distinctly known as well by discovering the difference of what usually pretends to be, or is, Commonly and Generally taken, and goes for Current among Men, to be such or such a thing, when it is not, as by defining positively what the thing it self is, in the Genuine Nature of it. We Learn Truths with an Advantage (especially Spiritual Truths) when we compare them with the appearance of Errors, and sever them from, and extract them as Spirits out of that dross, and mixture of a deceiving Likeness that cleaveth to them. It will also serve to remove practical mistakes about Regeneration, which are of infinite moment, and yet generally incident unto Men.

Now as the Sum of our Religion is reduced by the Apostle, to these two, Faith, and a Good Conscience. (1 Tim. 1. 19.) Faith, which is Principium Credendorum, the Principle of things to be Believed; and Conscience, which is Principium Agendorum, the Principle of things to be done by us; for as the Object Matter of all Religion is reduced to Credenda and Agenda, so the Principles within us, are Answerably thus Generally expressed by these Two, Faith, and Conscience. Faith looks upward, to the Things of the Gospel, and takes in all supernatural Truths, with Application to a Mans Soul. Conscience looks both inward, to our own actings within; and outward, to the Law or Rule which is to guide us: And it also is the Spring to all the Wheels, and the Mover in all provocations to Duties, or Avocations from sins. Now as these Two are the two Principles (when True and Good) of all true Religion: So all the imperfect Works, and Counterfeits of the true, which are to be found in unregenerate mens Hearts and Lives, must be reduced unto these two also, both as to the Principles thereof in their Hearts, and to the effects of them all in their Lives. As there is a false common Faith which Men do generally mistake for true; (and therefore the Apostle distinguisheth, terming the true, unfeign'd Faith. (1 John 1. 5.) So there is a pure Heart, and a good Conscience in the same place also opened. It is a Conscience good, with such a Goodness as qualifies the Heart, and this by way of distinction, and difference from Conscience, which is but natural, and the low effects thereof in Men unregenerate, which they ordinarily do in little matters mistake for Sanctification. So then all counterfeit Religion, (I speak of such as is any way serious, and not grossly and meerly hypocritical) are either, 1. The Effects and Workings of Conscience, as it is a natural Principle, and tho' still remaining defiled in an Heart unregenerated, yet elevated and enlightned by the Word and Spirit. Or 2. The effects of supernatural Light in matters of Faith joynd therewith, and shining into an unrenewed Understanding, and affecting self-love, with what is suitable to it in the things that are revealed.

Again, all mens Conditions falling to be either under the Covenant of Works, or the Covenant of Grace, Hence all that are enlightned, and carried on with any powerful Effects in the profession of Religion, are either acted therein by Conscience, as the predominant Principle, which is the seat of the Dominion of the Law and Covenant of works; or by Faith, which is the in-let, or receptive of the Dominion of Grace.

That all men are under one of these Covenants is evident by the whole Current of the Apostles Writings, who still distinguisheth between Works and Grace as the only two (possibly to be supposed ways) Men take unto Salvation: Not of Works (says he) but according to Grace: And you are not under the Law, but under Grace Rom. 7. He makes this distinction as that which takes in, and divides the Whole of Mankind. And the reason is evident from (Rom. 7. 1, 4, 6.) For every man having been born under the Law, and Covenant of Works, the Law continues to have Dominion over him either in commanding, or inciting, yea often in acting and carrying him on unto what is commanded thereby, or else binding him over unto Condemnation. And and no man is freed from this, until he is married to Christ, and so come to have a new Nature, together with the privilege of being a Subject of Grace. Chap. 5

 And therefore he continues under it, so long as he lives in that first Estate; for the Laws right over him was not forfeited by the Fall. Now suitably that every man might come to be subject to, and sensible of this several Dominion over him, according as his Condition is; There are two Principles planted within man, by God suited hereunto, and suscipient of each of these. The one is in every man by nature, (since every mans Condition is to be under the Law) and that is Conscience: The other is a supernatural Grace, and that is Faith. (Eph. 2. 8.) By Grace you are saved, through Faith. Now Jews and Heathens were under the Dominion (as explained) of both these, and also ignorant Christians. But if man that remains unregenerate, be enlightned by the Gospel, and the Knowledge of the Grace of God, although it may be a while doubtful unto himself or others; unto which Covenant or Dominion he belongs, or is the Subject of, yet in the Issue and Event his Spirit doth fall, and will act or be acted according as his Condition is, and he will lean either to the one or the other, as his Lord and Sovereign. If a man that is under the Covenant of Works takes in the present over-powering Light of the Doctrine of Grace, and the truth thereof, which hath good and blessed News for every man to listen to; yet in the Issue and Event he will fall into one of these two Cases or Conditions. He will either come to abuse the Grace of God to Wantonness thro' self-love; which remaining unsubdued to the Dominion of Grace, makes use of the knowledge of Grace under-hand, to back and strengthen that Corruption in him, in which the power of sin doth lye: And so Self-love in a way of presumption (which hath the appearance of the strength of Faith in that man) eats out the active power of Conscience in him, and so he comes to fall under the Dominion or Stroak of the Covenant of works more strongly than ever; and the Law comes to bind him over to a deeper Condemnation, when Conscience shall come again to be awakened, and even the Gospel it self, which he knew, will be turned into a sorer Avenger than the Law of itself would have been. And this is the Case of such as swallow down the Gospel whole, and so make shipwrack of Conscience through their presumption on the Principles, about the Doctrine or Application of it to themselves.

Or 2. The Case of one that is enlightned will be, that his Conscience being enlightned and awakened by the Law, continues to act and provoke him unto doing in Religion in a legal strain and way, and carries on Duties upon the Wheels of legal Motives, and so the Law becomes the predominant Principle to over-top and over-sway Evangelical Faith. And that it doth so, is but suitable to the state of the man; for as he is still under the Covenant of Works (self not being broken, nor Christ having slain the Law to him) so answerably the best and most active swaying Principle in him, is that which is the Seat and Throne of the Laws Dominion, namely Conscience; and so the best of that mans Religion is but the actings of a legal Conscience: And how he compounds with the Gospel, and subordinates his apprehensions of it, is too long here to insert.

So then (that I may set out that Subject I mean to treat of) It is not my purpose here to treat of temporary Faith, the Counterfeit of true saving Faith. But singly and simply, an enlightned natural Conscience, and the Effects thereof, as they are or may be mistaken for true Sanctification, and the Effects of it. And the eminent distinction and difference between these two, is by these two Texts Rom. 2. 14, 15. and Jer. 31. 31, 32, 33. compared, clearly held forth both for the ori and the scri thereof: The one speaking of the Effect of the Law written in the Heart by Nature (thus Rom. 2.) the other (Jer. 31.) of the writing the Law in the inward parts, as the eminent and proper fruit of the Covenant of Grace, and that in distinction from the other.

The first Text Rom. 2. gives instance in the Gentiles (whom all acknowledge under Wrath and Unregeneracy) and their having the effects of the Law written by Nature and above all other effects of the Law. He instanceth in Conscience accusing, and excusing: As that which of all other argues the Law written there; yea, and his Scope in bringing in this example of the Gentiles, is in the Coherence of it to convince the carnal Jews (whom he had taken to task to convince them in this Chapter, that they were unregenerate and in their natural Condition, as he had done in the former, who rested in the Law, and the effects thereof upon them for their Justification and Acceptation with God: Thereupon making their boast of God, v. 17. Having proved the Gentiles to be under Wrath, Chap. 1. he then comes upon the Jew therewith, and improves their example as a special Engine to unsettle and overthrow the Jew in his carnal Boast by giving him to consider,

1. That even the Gentiles whom they accounted unholy, tho' they had not the Law delivered by Revelation from God to them (for God dealt not so with any Nation &c.) yet had the effect or substance of the outward Precepts of the Law written in their Hearts.

2. Those Letters of the Law were so powerful and prevailing in many of them, that the Prints of them were published and stamped in fair Characters in their Lives; that is, they acted according to it, v. 14. They do by nature the things contained in the Law. And (v. 15.) shew or give demonstration that the effect of the Law is written there:

And 3. The eminent Principle or Seat of this effect of the Law, he makes to be their Consciences, v. 15. For he gives that as the eminent instance of the Law written in their Hearts, that it did μεταεὖ ἀλλήλων excuse and accuse, that is, by Course and alteration between themselves singly, or in their own Breast, (as the Margent also hath it) it did some while excuse and approve, pronounce a Sentence of Absolution and Justification both to their Actions and Persons, when they do well; as also when they do ill, it again at other times accuseth.

Now from this instance of the Gentiles, he would have the carnal Jews themselves reflect that they had indeed the advantage of having the Law, and Word of God outwardly revealed to them, over and above the bare light of Nature, and so more fully and clearly than the Gentiles had; and had also the more excellent things thereof, v. 18. Thou approvest the things that are more excellent, being instructed out of the Law. All which came to pass, because they had the same principle of Conscience (he had spoken of) which the Gentiles had; which Principle was apprehensive of the Righteousness of the Law, revealed to them of God, and so approved of it, and received it from God, and was apprehensive of its subjection thereunto, and thereupon had set them a work to act according to that Eternal Word. But yet in all this (says he) thou that art a Jew actest, at the best, but in the same Sphere, and upon the same Foundation in Nature, that is found in the Heathens by Nature: And tho' thy Conscience comes to know more excellent things by Revelation from the Word, and so to act outwardly more gloriously from thence, yet the inward Principle is one and the same in thy Heart that is in the others, namely, Natural Conscience enlightned, for magis & minus non variant Speciem. These are but further degrees within the same kind, and internally and ultimately it is but Nature in both that all is resolv'd into.

Yea and 5thly He urgeth them from the 21 Verse, Thou that art a Jew (says he) in thine Obedience and Conformity to that Law given thee, fallest more short, according to the compass of thy Principles and light of Conscience, than the Gentiles do, according to what they know by the light of meer Nature in their Sphere. Yea, and oftentimes some things (which their Consciences keep them from) thou sinnest against thy light therein. Now then his Conclusion is, Be thine own Judge, v. 26, 27. Therefore if the uncircumcision keep the the Righteousness of the Law, (that is within his Compass of light, so far as he knows, as really and as conscientiously from a Principle within him, as thou canst be supposed to do thy Law, whilst but from the same Principle) shall not he by the Analogy and Proportion of that Rule by which thou dost judge of thy estate before God, be also justified? And shall not his Uncircumcision be counted Circumcision, and so in his measure and proportion be accepted of by God as well as thou? It is not that Paul affirms this as if an Heathen should be saved; but he useth and urgeth it as a Conviction to the Jews, according to the Principles they judged of themselves by, leaving it to them to judge of themselves by analogous Reason. And therefore his last Conclusion and Resolution is (v. 29) That it is none of these Principles mentioned that is true Holiness, but Regeneration or Circumcision of the Heart, as the Apostle elsewhere termeth Conversion (Col. 2. 11.) In whom also ye are circumcised with the Circumcision made without Hands, in putting off the Body of the sins of the Flesh by the Circumcision of Christ. And He is a Jew (says he) that is one inwardly: And Circumcision is that of the Heart in the Spirit, which is a Principle beyond both natural Conscience in the Heathen, or enlightned Conscience in the Jew, and all the works or effects thereof in either: And this, says Paul, you will find all true, (as the 16th verse hath it, which comes after that Parenthesis of v. 13, 14, 15.) In that day when God shall judge the Secrets of men by Jesus Christ, who by discovering the Secrets of all Hearts, will make a full discovery of these things, and the practical differences between them, and thereupon difference in mens Estates.

2. The other place, Jer. 31. is most adequate to this general Scope of mine; for the full direct and professed intent thereof, is to hold forth this very distinction and broad difference that is between the entertainment of the Law in the Heart of a carnal Jew, with the effects thence ensuing, and the writing the Law in the Heart by Grace. And you may observe that he contents not himself nakedly with setting forth the effects of the Covenant of Grace, that it is a writing the Law in the Heart, but setteth by it, for illustration thereof, the Consideration and Remembrance of the former Covenant by Moses in giving the Law, with the effects thereof, v. 32. Yea, he brings it in by expresse distinction from this other, Not according (says he) to the Covenant I made with their Fathers in the day that I took them by the Hand to bring them out of the Land of Egypt. Now the effects of that Covenant upon the most, or on the generality of the Jews (tho' secretly, the new Covenant, which was conveyed with it in the Types did then work in many of the Elect you have lively deciphered at the very first giving the Law (unto which very Transaction Jeremy most aptly refers, and sends us, to understand this difference) You have it Deut. 5. (where the Story of the giving the Law is rehearsed from v. 5.) at v. 24, 25, 26, 27. &c. you find how their Consciences made them sensible of the greatness and glory of God who gave the Law, v. 24, 25. And they said, Behold the Lord our God hath shewed us his Glory, and his Greatness, and we have heard his Voice out of the midst of the Fire. We have seen this day that he doth talk with Man and he liveth. Now therefore why should we die? For this great Fire will consume us; if we hear the voice of the LORD our GOD any more, then we shall die. And these Apprehensions of theirs did work up unto Resolutions to do whatever God should say. I have heard (says God thereupon, v. 28.) the Voice of the words of this People, which they have spoken unto thee; they have well said all that they have spoken. And yet at v. 29. you read how the main was wanting, Oh that there were such an Heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep all my Commandments always, that it might be well with them, and with their Children for ever. Now the thing that was wanting, was the Law written in the Heart, (as Jeremy discovers it to be) as that which, with respect to the more general and more apparent and professed workings of it in men, was reserved for the days of the New Testament, as the fruit of the Covenant of Grace. Now this writing the LAW in the Heart, spoken of by Jeremy, the Apostle (Heb. 14. 16.) doth genuinely interpret of the work of saving Sanctification, as it is distinct from that of Justification, and is peculiar to them that are justified.

So then upon all accounts these Texts do fully warrant, and give bottom to the proposed subject; Namely, the distinction of the Effects of the Law in natural Conscience, from the writing of the Law in the Heart by Regeneration. The main and more substantial Difference it holds forth to be this: That God, in giving the old Covenant, came upon and took man's natural old Heart without renewing it, and gave the Law thereunto, and tried how it would work upon it; but in this new Covenant He gives a new Heart, and a new Spirit, writing the Law in the very Inwards, and makes it the Ground-Work of all his other Workings.

Further ere I come unto these particular Heads which are to fill up the Bulk of this intended Discourse, I must premise one thing as introductory to what follows.

That which I premise, is this Assertion. That Principle or Faculty in the Heart of Man, which is the Seat, Throne, or Scepter; by which the Law of God comes to rule over, and to have these effects in the Hearts of Men, is Conscience, by means of which it is said, that the Law hath dominion over a man as long as he lives; that is, whilst he lives in his natural Condition, Rom. 7. 1. compared with v. 4. This Faculty is the Zion or Tower of David in the Soul, from whence the Law goes forth to the outmost ends thereof. To this purpose, you may observe how the Apostle here, when he speaketh of the Law written in the Gentiles Hearts, maketh especial, yea, only mention of this, and of no other Faculty; because this Faculty of Conscience is that first and most immediate Seat or Subject of this writing of the Law by Nature; and is also the great Officer of State, entrusted with the executive power of that Law, to see it done and performed: Which accordingly both urgeth the Heart of man thereto; as well as after that Actions are done, it hath the Office of a Witness under the great Judge, to accuse, or excuse, and to serve his Writs upon a Man.

You that are versed in the Writings of the wisest Philosophers for Morality, viz. Plato, and the Stoicks, Seneca, Epictetus, Hierocles, and Marcus Antonius &c. you find them still to cry up and magnifie in man, as his supream Guide and Judge. ὁρθὸς λόγος Recta ratio, Right Reason, which they term a Branch of God, and σκῆπτρον τοῦ Θεοῦ the Scepter of God; yea, God in a man; and many such Elogies they give forth of it. Now by right Reason, they meant primarily that practical part of Reason in the Mind which guides a man in his Actions according to the eternal Law of God (as they speak) or the Mind of God; which they termed the principal and primary Law. * So Tully expressly speaks in his second Book de Legibus, in the name of all the wisest Philosophers. And Hierocles upon Pythagoras his Verses speaks answerably ὁ λογισμὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν ἡμῶν ἐποδεξάμενος. It is Reason taking in the divine Laws of God: And so it is Διαιτὴς ἀγρυπνὸς ἐαυτῷ γίνεται. It becomes the most vigilant Judge to a mans self. And although these Heathens sometimes used the word Conscience even as we Christians do, yet more sparingly; and when they did, it was usually intended by them of one part of its Office, viz. That after Actions are done by us, it doth accordingly torture, and disquiet or refresh, and rejoyce a man, as he doth good, or evil, Thus (a) Tully decipheres his sense of Recta Ratio, or right Reason, to be a true and certain Law within us which calls upon us to what is our Duty, and pricks us on to do well by commanding us, and restrains from evil by forbidding us with Terrors. Which (said he) the wisest of the Heathen took to be the mind of God himself, who by that Reason, in men did order men, by Commands, or Restraint, as by a supream or sovereign Law.

† Lex vera atque princeps apta ad jubendum & ad verendum ratio est recta summi Jovis. Ibid

Hence therefore in their usual Language, to Obey God, and to Live according to Right Reason, were all one, which they also Termed, Living according to Nature, as they accounted Right Reason to be. And what is all this, but as the Learned

(a) Est quidem vera Lex recta ratio constans sempiterna quæ vocat ad officium jubendo a fraude detinet. lib. 3. apud Lactant: cap. 8.

Learned Selden makes the Interpretation of these and the like Speeches (citing of them) but that which in other Terms themselves, and we Christians do call Conscience. And Chrysostrum afore him; When God formed Man at first, (saith he) he put into him a Natural Law, and what that Law of Nature is, Conscience hath Explained it unto us, and of it self hath made Manifest to us the Cognizance both of things Honest, and that are otherwise. Conscience is that only Principle in a Man, under whose Cognizance comes all that hath the notion of what is Morally Good or Evil: And which with one and the same Eye vieweth a Rule, or Law forbidding Evil, or Commanding Good, and together therewith do we take a Glance of God, as the Supream Judge, giving that Law, and backing it with Threatnings, or Promises of Rewards; and this the Etimology of the Name denotes, Conscientia, quasi cum alia sciens, viz. with God, and from this Knowledg of God, which it carries about with it, together with its Being a Rule, or Law, it is, that that Obligation, Power, or Force of it doth arise; which binds a Man (though no Creature doth look on, to be a Witness of his Sin) and so he becomes a Law unto himself. And Conformably to this, as being the Truth, the Apostle speaks, Be subject for Conscience sake, (Rom. 13. 5.) which is elsewhere rendred to Obey God. And hence also Paul termeth the Leading of a Good and Regular Life, a Living in all good Conscience before God, (Acts 26. 1.) The having done which, Paul doth Attribute to himself, even whilst he was under his Pharisaism, and he terms it Living in good Conscience, because this Conscience was that Principle which took in the Law from God, and so did provoke him to Act outwardly according to it, which hath a Goodness in its kind, and therefore is termed Good. And it is said to be Living in a good Conscience, because no Man doth make Conscience of any thing at any time, but it is with an Eye to a Deity more or less, as he is Enlightned, be he a Jew, or Gentile, or a Professour of Christianity. And in all these it is Conscience, whether truly sanctified or not, which is that τὸ ἠγαθόν, which (as Hierocles word is, is the suscipient of the Divine Laws. It is that Province of Reason, which lies open unto Light from God to come in at, and to Urge and Enforce Obedience, and which is capable and Apprehensive of what God shall in that kind speak. It is the Judge of Good and Evil Moral, not only of Right and Wrong, between Man and Man, (as Gallia spake) but of things Honest and Wicked. It is Communis Intelligentia, qua non solum jus & injuria dijudicantur, sed omnino omnia honesta & turpia, (as Cicero speaks) And it Judgeth of them with Application to all particular Actions, to direct, provoke, restrain, or if the Action be done, to excuse, or accuse according to its Judgment, and that in the Name of a Deity, or of God. Infomuch as I may apply here what Paul says in another, though like Case, What things soever the Law says, it saith to them that are under the Law, Rom. 3. 9. I may add, Whatever the Law saith without us, is a Conscience within us, the Principle capable according to the light received from thence, to urge it upon the rest of the Faculties; so as these Phrases are equivalent, to be under the Law, and to be under Conscience; to be concerning the Law blameless, and to Live in all good Conscience. And the goodness of Conscience there spoken of by Paul, is but a Conformity of his outward Conversation to the Light of the Law, in his Conscience.

And by the Way, let me add this, That those that say there is no use of the Moral Law to a Christian, may as well say that there is no more use of that Faculty of Conscience in the Soul of a Christian. Put out that Faculty out of Mans Heart, if you tear out that other, namely the Obliging part of the Law. Even as if God would annul Colours and Light, he must also take away, and close up the Sense of Sight.

That the Natural Light of Conscience in Unregenerate Men, hath a great Influence on their Actions.

NOW these Things being premised, there are Three Parts which fill up the Body of that Discourse which I intend.

I. That in Men whom the Scriptures pronounce Unregenerate, this Principle of Conscience hath had Great and Powerful Effects upon their Hearts.

II. That these Effects Men of all Professions, Jews, Heathens, or Nominal Christians, are apt to mistake in the Judgments which they pass, concerning their own State and Condition, when they think that an Observance of the Dictates of Conscience will make them Acceptable to God. Yea, and if they be Professors of Christianity (that are Unregenerate) and so here of Grace and Regeneration, they take this to be True Holiness, or Sanctification. I shall also herewith give the Reasons, and Grounds of this Mistake.

III. I shall make a Discovery of this great Counterfeit, and of its Deficiency, and of its falling short of Grace in the light of it, and in the Effects of it, together with a Detection, and Conviction of those Mistakes.

1. In Discourfing of the First Head, there are Two Things to be Treated of.

1. I shall prove that in Men whom the Scripture pronounceth Unregenerate, there are such Powerful Effects of Conscience to be found.

2. I shall shew what those Effects particularly are.

I. To prove that in Unregenerate Men, there are Powerful Effects of Conscience; I shall give Instance in Three sorts of Men, in whom God hath given Demonstration thereof, how far, and how high; this Principle of Conscience may, and hath been Elevated, and what Effects it may have, and yet fall short of the Glory of God, thereby more to Magnifie his Sanctifying Grace.

1. The First Instance is of Heathens under meer Nature, which the Writings of the Heathens are Records of, and which are indeed the truest Comments upon this Treatise of Rom. 2.

2. The Second Instance is of Jews under the Law, whereof the Pharisees, and the Carnal Jews under the Old Testament, are Evidences. All the Scribes and Pharisees (whatever some of them might be.) were not gross Hypocrites, but many were serious in what they did, and their Consciences being greatly enlightned in the Law, they Acted according unto Conscience. We have an Instance, both of that Young Man, who said he had kept the Commandments from his Youth, and also of the Scribe, Mark 12. 32, 33, 34. And the Scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the Truth; for there is one God, and there is none other but He; and to Love him with all thy Heart, and with all thy Understanding, and with all thy Soul, and with all thy Strength, and to Love his Neighbours as himself, is more than all whole Burnt-Offerings, and Sacrifices. And when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, he said unto him, Thou art not far from the Kingdom of God. He had in his light pitch upon the first Commandment of duties to be directed immediately to God himself, and his Conscience rested not in outward performances, Sacrifices and Burnt Offerings, but the light in it had dictated to him further, altho' it was not able to mold his Heart thereunto; For he says expressly, That to love God with all the Heart, and with all the Understanding, and with all the Soul, and with all the Strength, and to love his Neighbour as himself, is more then all whole Burnt Offerings and Sacrifices. And Christ that discerned his Heart, gives him this approbation of him; Thou art not far from the Kingdom of God; which for that meer Notion, if this Scribe had been in his Life a gross Hypocrite, Christ would never have given. But yet this man wanting that Love to God, whereof his Conscience had the Light (for Conscience never so much enlightned, will never work love to God) he fell short (as the Word else where is) for otherwise there is not any that thus truly love God, who is far from the Kingdom of God, *1 Cor. 2. 9. Paul also giveth this Record of many of the Jews his Countrymen, Rom. 10. 2. I bear them Record, they have a Zeal of God, that is, a Study and Care to please God in keeping of the Law (of the Works and Righteousness whereof he there speaks, and had spoken Chap. 9, the three last foregoing verses) which Zeal in their Affections, Conscience had provoked and stirred up. But the eminentest instance of all other in that kind is Paul himself, whom God did set up, before Conversion, as the highest pattern in the Jewish Religion; as after Conversion, in the Christian. Paul speaking of himself whilst a Pharisee still, tells us how zealous his Religion made him, as to the persecuting the opposite party, so to the observation of that righteousness of the Law, Gal. 1. 14. and Phil. 3. 6. Concerning Zeal, persecuting the Church; touching the Righteousness which is in the Law, blameless: That is, I was so truly zealous for the Law, that I persecuted what way was opposite to it. Now, what made him so? It was Conscience, Acts 26. 9. He verily thought that he ought to do so. Now that Principle in us which convinceth that we ought to do a thing, is Conscience. (Acts 23. 1.) That Apology which Paul, being set before the Council, was about to make, but was broke off by the high Priest, and the Tumult, runs thus, Men and Brethren, I have lived in all good Conscience before God until this day. Many of you are not ignorant, how most Interpreters do understand this speech as relating to, and taking in the whole of his Life, not of Christianity only, but even in Judaism also, for he doth not by any express word date it from his Conversion. He doth not say, since I turn'd Christian, or was converted to the Faith, but only says, until this day, which indefinitely includes the whole of his Life till then. And his manner was in telling the story of his Conversion, to begin with his exactness in observing the Law before his Conversion, (which he was about to relate but that he is interrupted here) which outward Obedience, because of its conformity to the Principle of it, is frequently termed a good Conscience, that is, a good or regular Life conformed to, and springing from Conscience. And that which Paul here intendeth in reference to that part of his Life under Pharisaism, is all one and the same with what elsewhere he saith, *Phil. 3. 6. Touching the Righteousness which is in the Law, blameless.

But there were a third sort in whom Conscience enlightned may be supposed yet further improved in the effect of it, when yet it fell short of Grace. There were those who were supernaturally enlightned by the Gospel, of whom Paul (Heb. 6.) and Christs Parables speak. Such light the Understanding of man not renewed is capable of, and it lyes exposed for God to shoot into it, without infusing a new Habit, or spiritualizing that Faculty. It lyes exposed also unto influences, and effects of the promises of the Gospel working upon self-love in the Will and Affections, with tastings of the powers of the World to come. Now when the light of the Gospel is added to the light of the Law, and when a supernatural light of things revealed in the Gospel, is added to that of Conscience in the Law, Conscience cometh to have its Dominions enlarged, and is more strengthened and backed hereby. Now in such so wrought on by the Gospel, and also the Law, and in whose Hearts both these meet, the effects must needs be supposed more powerful and vigorous, because there is brought in a stronger light of God himself in the the efficacy of knowing whom, more or less, the obligation and power of Conscience lyes. An instance that mentions the Conjunction of both these in expresse words, is hard perhaps to meet with all: Although where such supernatural enlightning in things of the Gospel falls out to be in such 'as have fallen away, it must necessarily be supposed that there is a more vigorous actuating and stirring that Light and Principle of Conscience that doth accompany the same; especially considering that the workings of the Law upon Conscience, is that which prepares mens Hearts (both that are saved, or otherwise fall away) for their listning after, and so receiving in, the supernatural Truths of the Gospel. Howsoever thus much is evident to the thing in hand, that these Jews of all other who were of the Sect of the Pharisees, that made Conscience of the Law, when they came to be enlightned by the Gospel, became the Raisers and Fomenters of that great opposition to the Gospel, which was the ruine of many Professors in those primitive Times. Of these Pharisees mention is made (Acts 15. 5.) There rose up certain of the Sect of the Pharisee who believed (and some, as in Charity we are to think, savingly, who yet were the Defenders of that great Error,) saying, It was needful to Circumcise men that believed, and to teach them to keep the Law of Moses; that is, the whole of it, which Circumcision did oblige unto. As these men had Faith, superadded, so I may say of them, as Paul of some Gentiles, they had a Conscience of that Idol, the Law, to that day; and their Conscience having been inured to that yoke, knew not how to discharge it self so soon of that subjection (I speak as to that sense mentioned) and so by that addition of Faith, Conscience was more provoked to be Zealous for the Law, and to observe it, that they might keep in with God. Now, what the estate of these particular persons there mentioned was, we know not, nor the Issue of them as to God, yet this we are sure of, that many of the Followers of that Doctrine which these there first did broach, and who had embraced the Faith upon a supernatural Light (for else none in those times would easily have professed it) did out of the same Principle of Conscience urge and profess obedience to that whole Law of Moses, and set out therein with the same Zeal in both (for the reality of it) that these Pharisees that were the first Authors of that Opinion did: It was the profession of making Conscience, and of their obligation to God's Command, which was the ground of that Zeal; and yet we are sure that many of them are branded to have been Apostates to the Faith in the end. And I observe, that when Paul twice speaks of this kind of Professors (as he vouchsafes to name them, Titus 1.6.) who thus urged the observation of the Law, as well as Faith in the Gospel; he still makes mention withal, of Faith and Conscience. For the latter was that, which these so much pretended; for the obligation of the Law (they contended for) did principally respect Conscience as the Seal of it, and as subject to it, and over which it had Dominion in Men. Thus Paul writes (1 Tim. 1.) concerning some at Ephesus who pressed the Law in the sense these Pharisees had done, as well as they pressed Faith, as appears by v. 7, 8. And because they did urge this upon pretence of Conscience, therefore in opposition to that Religion of theirs, which they made up both of Law and Gospel in an untoward mixture, Paul professeth the true Religion (or that part of it which relateth to the Commandments) to be this, v. 5, 6, 7. Now the end of the Commandment is Charity, out of a pure Heart, and of a good Conscience, and of Faith unfeigned. From which some having swerved, have turned aside unto vain jangling, desiring to be Teachers of the Law, understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm. He by these Words intimates to us, that tho' these men did profess the same Faith in Christ; yet their zeal to the Law, for which they pretended Conscience, was the Cause of their swerving from both; They never having had the true genuine, or saving Principle of either. And therefore in his enumeration of the true and saving Principles of Faith, and a good Conscience, he upon occasion of them is forc'd to distinguish upon these Principles, as is evident by those Words, The end of the Commandment is Charity out of a pure Heart, of a good Conscience, and Faith Unfeigned. And why is it, he should use this Distinction there, when he had occasion to speak of these Men, but to put the difference between Faith, and such a Conscience and Principle of Zeal in Religion, which is defiled? In Distinction unto which, he calls the Principle of True Holiness, a good Conscience, as he had characterized true and saving Faith with this of herunfeigned Faith; and a pure Heart, as the effect of both these; for a purified Heart is expressly made the effect of Faith, Acts 15. 9. So then there is a Conscience zealous of Religion, that is, joyned with a pure Heart; and there is a Conscience that is joyned with a defiled Heart, and that in men enlightned in Religion, which Paul in his Epistle to Titus thus expresseth (in words near a kin to those he useth in Timothy of the same sort of Professors.) Unto the pure are all things pure, but unto them that are undefiled, and unbelieving (that have a Faith which purifies not the Heart, but leaves it still in its natural defilements, and so as good as no Faith, and therefore he terms them Unbelievers still) Even in their Mind and Conscience, which yet are the supreamest and purest part in them, even these remain defiled: However enlightned and what ever Conscience of the Law they do pretend. Now therefore, if their Consciences remain defiled (saith he) no wonder if in the end of their Profession their lives prove also such, (verse the last) for as Christ says, If the Light be Darkness, how great is that Darkness? But if the Eye be single, the whole Body is full of Light. And in these two Discourses compared, Paul discovers and rips up the Inwards of true Profession and false. In the practice of Religion mention'd in the one, viz. that of Titus, he resolves Apostacy and falling away, unto its true Causes: And in this other to Timothy, speaking of the contrary, sincere Obedience, that holds out to the end, he resolves his Perseverance unto its true Causes also. In the one, he tells us that their Consciences, which having been enlightned had been the ground work of their Zeal for the Law, and of obedience to it, had yet continued, and remain'd defiled, notwithstanding all that light: In the other, he tells us that they have obtained such a good Conscience and Faith unfeigned as had purified the Heart. Neither is his Scope in his Epistle to Titus, only to shew what at present their Consciences were become thro' sinning, but to resolve things into their Causes (as in that of Timothy he had done) shewing that this defect had been in their Profession from the first of it, in that their Consciences and Minds had remained in their natural defilement: And thence all their best Actions, as well as their outward legal observations, had become defiled to them, and in the End had wrought out that Light and Goodness, that had any impression upon them.

2. I come, now to shew what Effects a Natural Conscience may, and doth produce in Men unregenerate. The Instances I give of these Effects shall be only such as have been found in Heathens and Jews, of whom it must needs be Acknowledged that they were not Renewed. And such Effects, even in Professours of Christianity, who are not savingly Regenerated, are still but of the same kind, only are more heightned by the Addition of Gospel Light, more clearly Revealing God; and also perhaps in such Persons these Effects are Extended Objectively unto more Duties, than came to the Cognizance of either Jew, or Gentile. The Reason why this Addition of Gospel and Supernatural Light, must needs increase the same Effects more Powerfully, is, because (as I said) Conscience hath in all Men Two things still in its Eye: 1. The Law, or Rule. 2. God as the Judge, giving that Law; and from its Eying more or less, God as the Judge, doth arise that Authority that is in the Dictates of Conscience. And hence as the Conscience doth more Clearly and Fully take in Light from God, and is thereby Convinced of Him, and his Greatness and that the Rules given are from him; proportionably must these Effects of Conscience become more Powerful, and Work more strongly upon the Heart, yet so, as still this Light, and these Effects, are but of the same Kind with those that are found in Heathens or Jews.

i. I shall give Instances of these Effects, in Respect of what is good.

1. Conscience in a Natural and Unregenerate Man, may and doth often pass an Act, both of Assent and Approbation, to what is a Good and Holy Duty, and to what the Law saies, or to the Duties and Commands thereof, that they are Good, and Just, and Right; otherwise it could not accuse a Man for what is Evil, unless it secretly approved of what is Good. Video Meliora proboq; (saies Medea in Ovid.) I see what is better, and approve of it; though I Choose and Pursue the worse. Seneca also speaking of the worst of Men, saies that Vertue hath that Aimableness in it, that it is Ingrafted in those that are most Wicked, to approve the things that are Good and Best. They are Heathens that speak these things; and as for the Jews, Paul expressly saies, Rom. 2. 18. Thou Approvest the things that are more Excellent, which is a Phrase suitable to the other, Probo meliora. And this is one Respect, for which they are said to be under the Law, and the Law to have Power or Dominion over a Man (as Rom. 7. 1, 2. Even because Men have a Principle in them capable of its Love, and Naturally subjected thereunto; which maketh them Acknowledg, and own it for their Lord. Now it could no way bring Men under that Subjection and Bondage, but by this, that there is something in this Principle of Conscience unto which this Law Approves its Equity and Justness, or to use the Apostles Phrase, 2 Cor. 4. 2.) Commendeth it self to every Mans Conscience. And thus the Law held forth in a Godly Mans Life, in the Concrete Approves it self to a Wicked Man: Saul could not but acknowledg of David, Thou art more Righteous than I. And in the Abstract it doth it much more. In the Story of the Acts, the Apostle Appeals to their Consciences (as Socrates before had done to his Heathen Judges) whether it were not better to Obey God than Men, for their Natural Consciences could not but so adjudge it.

2. Natural Conscience not only Assents to what the Law Commands as good, but it commends it to a Man as his Duty, and laies it as an Injunction upon him to do it. So saies Paul, I verily thought with my self, that I ought to do many things, &c. Acts. 26. 9. Therefore it is called Conscientia by some, because it laies an Obligation upon a Man, and so it is quasi Concludens Scientia, which Binds him to his Good Behaviour.

3. It provoketh, yea, prevails with Men to do what it shews them to be Good, and their particular Duty. It is not a Sleeping Idle Principle, but Active; for so saies the Apostle, of the Heathens, (Rom. 2. 14.) They did by Nature the things of the Law, as instigated thereto by Conscience. For he renders that as the ground of it, that they were a Law unto themselves. So Herod (as you know) DID many Things, which John the Baptist urged upon his Conscience out of the Word.

4. In these their Acting what is good, the Workings of Conscience are the main Engines which set them to Work, and not simply outward respects. Thus Paul resolves what he did in his Unregeneracy into this Principle, I Verily thought I ought to do it, (saies he) And so did what he did, (Acts 26 9, 15.) It also appears in this, That a Man will go against all outward Respects, meerly to satisfy his Conscience, as Judas did, when he Confessed, and Restored the Money for which he had Betray'd Christ. Wherein he did, an Act cross to the dearest Lusts in him, his Credit, and his Coveteousness. Conscientie Satisfaciamus (saies Seneca) Nil in samam laboremus: Let us satisfy Conscience, no matter for Credit.

5. Hence also Natural Conscience may in these Actions have a Real respect to God, to whom (as was said) Conscience looks, and from whom it fetcheth its binding Power; so as the Man takes his Command in, as a Consideration that moves him, John 16. 2. He that Killeth you, shall think he doth doth God good Service; that is, he shall look upon it as a Service done to God, and have some respect to him in it. And tho' this is spoken of such Actions as materially in themselves, were not Service to God, but the contrary, yet the inward Motive it proceeded from was, that they Judged it a Service unto God: And therefore when it falls to be in it self a Duty, which Conscience presseth it much more, and urgeth it upon this Motive (Rom. 10. 1.) The Carnal Jew is said to have a Zeal of God, or for God. Thus also we Read of Carnal and Wicked Men, who out of Awe, and Fear, and Respect to Him, do forbear some Sins: It is in my Power (says Laban to Jacob, Gen. 31. 29.) But the God of your Father spake to me saying, Take heed thou speak to Jacob neither Good nor Evil. God Commanded Balaam, also that he should not Curse the Israelites, and Balaam kept to that Command, and durst not go outwardly cross to it, although inwardly he desired leave to have done it, that so he might be rewarded by Balack: Yea, he therefore durst not do it, because of the word of the Lord, Num. 22. 18. So Cyrus says to Ezra, (1. 2.) That the God of Heaven had charged him to Build an House for him.

6. When a Man hath done what Conscience, and God in his Conscience, have Commanded, he hath much Peace in it, for it excuseth him as the Text (Rom. 2. 15.) saies. Thus a Heathen also could say, Recte fecisse merx est; It is Reward enough to do well. Therefore Paul's Heart was kept Alive (Rom. 7.) in Joy and Peace, by doing what the Law Required. So also a Man will be Exceeding Glad when such a Sin is avoyded, or if a Sin take not full Effect, as Darius was glad when Daniel was Alive, (Dan. 6. 23.)

II. I shall give Instances of the Workings of Conscience, in Relation unto Evil, either Sins of Commission, or Omission of Duties:

1. Conscience in Natural Men causeth a Reluctancy and a Commotion of Affections against a Sin, before the Commission of it, and a Displacency in committing of it. Thus Darius, an Heathen, (Dan. 6. 14.) was so displeas'd with himself, when he was put upon putting to Death so just a Man, as his Conscience Hold him, that Daniel was. We may observe it in Herod, also (Mark 6. 26.) when John the Baptist's Head was required of him, you read what a Reluctancy he had, and Sorrow against it, he was exceeding Sorry, (v. 26.) And it was his Conscience that wrought that in him, for (v. 20.) it is said that he observed John, because he was a Just and an Holy Man; yet for his Oaths and Lusts sake, he Murther'd him; tho' to have parted with half his Kingdom would not have troubled him so much.

2. Conscience excites in Men an endeavour to avoy'd, and decline Evil. So Darius set his Heart to deliver Daniel, and he Laboured till Evening, (Dan. 6. 14.) So Pilat did all he could, a great while, to free his hands of the Guilt of Christs Death, by saving of him.

3. It worketh much Sorrow and Repentance after Sinning. So, of Darius, we Read (6. 18.) That he was Troubled all Night, could not eat his Meat, and his sleep departed from him. (Rom. 2. 15.) And thus the Apostle says of the Heathens, That their Consciences do accuse them. Thus Judas also (Mat. 27. 4, 5. says) I have Sinned, in that I have Betrayed the Innocent Blood. And he cast down the pieces of Silver in the Temple, and Departed, and went and Hanged himself. And (by the way) here are all the Parts and Ingredients that the Papists Require in Repentance: 1. Contrition, He Repented himself. 2. Confession, I have Sinned in betraying Innocent Blood. 3. Restitution and Satisfaction, He cast down the Silver Pieces that had Betrayed him to that Sin. 4. He purposes never to return to it, as Saul resolv'd not to Kill David (his Conscience was overcome with his Righteousness) and as Pharaoh resolv'd to let the People go.

These things might be enlarged, and other Instances given; but I have given Instances of such, as all must needs Acknowledge to have been Unregenerate Men.

CHAP. III.

That men are apt to regard the natural Light of Conscience, and the influences of it to be the Effects of true Grace. The Reasons of their Mistake.

I Come now to prove all sorts of men unregenerate, have been, and are apt to mistake this light of Conscience in them, and the powerful effects of it to be true Righteousness, which makes them acceptable to God. And if they be Professors of Christianity, they are ready to take it for Sanctification, and true Holiness.

There are three things under this Head, to be spoken unto.

I. That de facto, all sorts of Professions have mistaken it.

II. The reasons of it.

III. Some Grounds of the mistake.

I. All sorts have been apt to this.

1. Heathens have been so. It were infinite to Reckon up the Flesh-blown Conceits of the Heart of man in the instances of the Heathens (as they may be authentically drawn out of their own Writings) how they magnifie and cry up in themselves that which they call'd Right Reason forementioned, as their Diana; what divine Elogies they give it, and how they blessed themselves, when they lived conformably unto it, and the Decrees or Dogmata of it, as Epictetus calls them.*

*Una in ducitur humanis Virtutibus Regula. Ratio recta simplexque: Nihil est divino divinius, caelesti caelestius. Ratio autem nihil aliud est quam in Corpore humanum pars divini Spiritus mensura. Sen. Ep. 66.

1. For the Light thereof it self, they judged it Holy, Divine, Heavenly; yea, and nothing more Divine or Heavenly; not God himself; It being (as they say) a part of the Divine Spirit put and drencht into an Humane Body. Thus Seneca speaks, and he speaks it not of the Soul it self, but of Reason or Conscience; for he speaks of that, which he terms the rule and measure of Vertues. Yea, and because 'tis Right Reason or Conscience that lets in the Light of a Deity into the Soul (as the word it self imports) as a Judge; therefore they call'd it not only a good Angel, or Daimon in a man (as frequently they do) but Seneca terms it Sacer Spiritus, a Sacred or holy Spirit. Sacer intra nos Spiritus sedet Malorum Bonorumque nostrorum Observator & Custos: Hic prout a nobis tractatus est, ita nos ipse tractat. There is a sacred Spirit that sits within us, which is the Observer and Layer up and Keeper of all the good or evil things in us (that is, which we do or are found in us who so deals with us as we deal with him. This eminently refers unto Conscience, for that is that Principle which lets God in upon us as a Judge of our Actions in our own Hearts. And you see it is spoken of that in us which is the Observer of all Good and evil in us; yea, and the layer of it up, and Remembrance of it for a long time after: And which, as we follow the light and guidance of it, so it deals with us, accusing or excusing us, as here in the Text Conscience is said to do. All which are evidently properties of Conscience (as in this Text) unto which he (as from his own experience) attributed a Deity: As indeed himself in the very next words says, † he knew not what God to call it, but a God it was (Quis Deus incertum est, habitat Deus) for his Conscience still represented a Deity unto him.

Yea, this Light and Principle in them, they also accounted a thing equal unto God, calling it not only a Branch of the divine Nature, Antonius lib. 5. de vita sua Cap. 6. Epictetus also thus speaks. As for thy Reason O man! thou art not less, or inferiour to the Gods. Which they spake, as concerning the Nature of it; so in respect of its ability to guide and bring us unto Happiness in this respect equal to the Reason or divine Light that is in God: Tho indeed in him it was infallible, and supream; by which he govern'd and manag'd himself, and his Affairs. Thus Seneca expressly makes no other difference between Right Reason within a man and God, *than between two Mariners that have like Skill to steer and govern their Vessels only the one, viz. Reason, hath a less Ship to guide, God a larger Ship of the same fashion and make: Yet so as that Right Reason in a man is as supream in his Com-pass, as God in his, both had the same rules they steered by, and in that sense and intention they attend the usual Speech, that in following Reason they followed God. And so indeed I may in this respect make a Parallel, that looks as the Papists having sett up the Pope as the supream universal Judge of Controversies, tho' in pretence as Christ's Vicar to encrease his power, yet in the Apostolical interpretation of it (2 Thes. 2.) They Set him even above and against Christ, and all that is call'd God, for that which they attribute to him doth really arise to so much: So these Heathens, and the wisest of them, did set up Right Reason in a man, though in pretence as Gods Vicegerent, yet really and in effect as equal unto God in a man, and as mans supream Guide or Judge only dictating the same rule or λογισμα as Epictetus calls them which God did. Yea, to make the Parallel yet more full, they made it an universal Rule and Concern, (as Euripides calls it) that had so full a power over all their actions, as to constitute them good, or evil. Thus they gave forth this Maxim (a) ni tibi concessit ratio, digitum exere, peccas, unless Right Reason gives Commission, even to the putting forth of a Finger, it is a sinful Action. They speak (you see) higher things hereof by far, than the Scripture doth of the New Creature, which yet it terms a participation of the Divine Nature.

Secondly, And 2. For the fruit and effect of this Principle upon their Hearts, and in their Lives; they judge themselves therein, according to that measure and esteem which we have heard, they had of the Principles of self. A good Life they termed an harmonious suitable living to the height and dictates of this Light, as that wherein the happiness of a Man lay. Now all that the Apostles attribute to a true Saint; or an Holy Man (in this respect) they attribute also to themselves in terminis.

1. They term it the Image and likeness to God μοι ὅσιν τῷ Θεῷ so Plato; yea, and he putts it into the same division and in the same words the Apostles express the parts thereof. Plato's words are these, A Likeness unto God consists in what is holy, and what is just or righteous, with Wisdom and Knowledge. The Apostles words are these, The Image of God which is in Knowledge created after God in Righteousness and true Holiness Eph. 4. 24. compared with Col. 3. 10. Only for distinction the Holy Ghost adds true Holiness, for theirs was not so.

2. Doth the Scripture call such a man a good man, a blessed man? c These are the ordinary Titles which they also usurp; and that with distinction from others ὁ ἀγαθὸς ὁ ὕδαμων, The good, the blessed man and the like,

Yea 3. Doth James call a man grown up in Christianity a perfect man? And Paul use the same, I speak to those that are perfect? So do they. And as the Apostles said that all Graces go together: So they affirm of all Vertues, And that else a man is not perfect. Yea; they go higher than the Apostles did, for they assert that good men are impeccable, and cannot fall or transgress, and that a wicked man was one that had no Vertue in him, and they distinguish also of Proficients and of perfect men. Do the Apostles say that

that a godly man hath Dominion and Fellowship with God, (Truly our Fellowship is with the Father and the Son) And Abraham was called the Friend of God. They will needs say the same of their blessed man, Unto whose Estate (says Seneca) when thou hast attained, thou beginnest to be a Companion with God himself. Another describes his wife man to be one who doth In mortali Corpore agitare Societatem Jovis, in a mortal Body pursue Fellowship with God. Yea, and herein they are bold to vye with God himself. Cum Dijs (says Seneca) ex pari vivit. He lives as blessed a Life as God; and differs from him (say they) but in duration, Passions and Mortality; but I will not trouble you farther with their Notions. I shall only add, unto all these, one Scripture instance of an Heathen, who tho' in these first times of the World we find more modest, yet standing upon his Integrity and Righteousness before God himself, he says (Gen. 20. 4, 5.) Wilt thou also slay a righteous Nation? Said he not unto me, she was my Sister? And she, even her self said, He is my Brother, In the integrity of my Heart, and innocency of my Hands, have I done this. This Man was an Heathen, as also his People whom he was King over. The speech of Abraham, (v 11.) declares it upon the general observation of their manners. What didst thou see in us (says Abimelech) I said, (saies Abraham) Surely the fear of God is not in this place; that is, God is not Worshiped by or amongst this People, or there is no Religion amongst them. Parallel to which is that Speech of Dauids, (Psal. 36. 1.) The transgression of the Wicked, saies within my heart, There is no fear of God before his Eyes. It is so apparent and speaks so loud; yet this Abimelech, in the case of Sarah, having dealt therein according to his knowledge, and the principles of his Conscience commonly received amongst them in that Nation; says that for Conscience sake he would not have taken her, if he had known her to have been Abrahams Wife: In the Integrity (says he) of my heart, and Innocency of my hands, have I done this, v. 5. And this, he speaks not to Abraham, (and so as what he could pretend to before men) but to God, of whom he had some knowledge, though an Heathen, and whom he doth acknowledge to be the Judge over Nations, and to judge righteous Judgement. In the words afore (v. 4.) he makes his appeal to God the only Judge of his Conscience, professing not only in Innocency of Hands, as to matter of outward Fact, but of integrity of Heart, as having been sincerely conformable therein to his Conscience. And he speaks herein the very Language of an holy man, Even of David, whom you hear (Psal. 18. 24.) thus pleading with God, According to my Righteousness, according to the cleanness of my hands in his eye-sight. Now, what he says of one action, that in all other, (if conformable to his Conscience) he would make the same plea.

2. That the Jews did so mistake the natural light of Conscience, and the powerful effects thereof, to be true Righteousness, The old and the new Testament are so abundant in known Instances, as I need not mention any. They rested in the Law and made their boast of God, saies the Apostle, (Rom. 2.) And the resting in the Law was by those that were the best of them, by reason of their Conformity unto it (These have I kept from my Youth, said that young man in Mat. 19.) for which, as they thought themselves righteous (as Christ speaks) so they judged it ordained unto Life and Justification, as Paul says, (Rom. 7.) And thus they went about to establish their own Righteousness, (Rom. 10. 4.) And what is all this, but to take the effects of Conscience for true Holiness, yea for Justification? So (as was said) this as the Principle was the fuscipient of the Law, and the cause of all that obedience in them.

3. Christians also are obnoxious to the same mistake: What Pelagius did boldly and plainly in his Doctrine utter, that in application do the most of Christian Professors secretly rest upon for their own Salvation; Even what goodness is found to be in Nature. We have all Fibra Pelagiana in us, We are naturally all Pelagians, and the great deceit of mens Hearts is, that what opinions they doctrinally nally Condemn in their Speculative Judgments, those they practically approve in their Secret Transactions with God for their Salvation. We generally de-claim against Pelagianism, as extolling Nature for Grace, and yet as generally we take the Fruits and Effects of it in our Selves for Grace: And I may say, as the Apostle doth, Blessed is the Man that bleisseth not himself, in what he Condemns.

Now Pelagius in his Doctrine professed Conscience, and the Light thereof, to be Grace and Holiness. He hath a manifest saying to this purpose, There is in our Minds a Certain natural Holiness, which residing in the Supream part and Tower of the Mind, doth give forth and exerciseth the Judgment of what is Good and Evil, which encourageth to and cherisheth Honest Acts in us, and Condemns what are Evil and Wicked. Now what is this but that which we call Conscience? And to this purpose he would draw the very words (of Rom. 2. 14, 15.) to be intended of Abel, Noah, and all Just ones before the Flood, and before the Law was given, that by Nature they did what was acceptable to God. Et Justas illas Imagines, (says he) quis nisi injustus prohibet, a Regno Dei?

Est in animis nostris naturalis quædam Sanctitas, quæ velut in arce animi residens, exercet Mali Bonique Judicium, honestis actibus fovet & sinistra opera condemnat.

Secondly, The Reasons of this Aptness to mistake are these,

I. In General: It is Conscience it self that is the Judge; yea, in a Mans own Heart; The Highest and Most Supream, and there is no Higher Principle to control it; Yea, and no more of the Word prevails with a Man then this takes in, and the proper Office of it is to Judge what makes a Man acceptable to God, and what not. And next unto God (who is greater then our Hearts) all Appeals are made to this Court; and therefore no Man doth imagine, but that Conscience doth direct him Right; and that if the Dictates thereof were followed, and Obeyed, he should be a Just and an Upright Man. Conscience being the Supream Judge, hath this Opinion of its own Judgment, That if it were followed it would save a Man; and the rest of the Faculties have that good Opinion of it also, for else it would never be acknowledged as Supream. And there is no Man that doth, or will think himself so far off from Grace, as not to think he hath right Opinions about it. If therefore Conscience finds it's Judgment, hath any Sway, or stroke in a Man to over power the Heart, or the Actions, it presently applauds, both this its own Power for Grace, and also thinks well of the Man, so far as he is Conformable to it's Dictates: And Applauds him with a Well done Good and Faithful Servant: And this, because it doth think well of it self; even as we are apt to think the better of our Selves, when we see our selves Respected, and entertain good Opinions of those that do Respect us.

2. Secondly, The main Reason is, because all Men are under the Covenant of Works, or the Covenant of Grace, (Rom. 6. 14. Ye are not under the Law, but under Grace; Compare it with (Rom. 7. 1.) and the one hath Ever set up it's Righteousness against the other; and now that Man is fall'n, yet Corrupt Nature is so Conceited of it self, that it attempts to Vye, and out-Vye that Righteousness, that is of the Spring of Grace in us. The Genius in that Covenant is to trust in it self for Righteousness. It's strange to see how contrary to the way of Salvation, by Christ, the way of Nature is. Christs way is to cause all Men to distrust themselves, and be nothing in themselves, that he that Glories, might Glory in the Lord: But the greatest maxim of Nature among those of the Heathen, that professed to Live most Righteously, was Expressly, Sibi fidere, To trust in a Mans Self, and to what in and by Nature he was able to do. And Paul hath insinuated the Reason of it also in those Words (Rom. 10.) They went about to Establish their own Righteousness; and they did so, because it was their own.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, The Particular Grounds of the Mistake are,

1. Men find Conscience to be an inward Principle, as Grace is, Inherent, Seated and Rooted in themselves, as they hear Grace is; and therefore if it hath any Power in a Man, they easily take it for Grace: Men would think otherwise indeed, if that which carried them on against Evil, and unto Good, were only and meerly outward, as Socrates his Genius, &c. Or if outward Weights and Enforcements of Worldly Respects hung on, only moved the Wheels; if only vain Glory, or fear of Superiours, or Conformity to others, acted them: But Men find something here within them, over and besides all these, which is Real and Serious for Good, and against Evil, and that such a spring should move, and have any stroke in them, as a part of themselves, this they easily think to be Grace. Now such a Principle is Conscience, and the Light of it in Men, for the Effect of the Law, is Written in the Heart, as the Text says, and they are a Law to themselves. It is not other Respects only that moved them, but a Law in themselves, and to themselves. Yea, and oftentimes, when a stream of outward Respects would carry them against what is Good, and unto what is Evil, yet this inward Principle, Conscience, moves them contrary, to swim against that Stream: As in Socrates, and Brutus, and Fabritius, whom no Threats, or Intreats could divert; Of whom it was said, That sooner might the Sun be turned out of it's Course, than Fabritius be swayed by respects. And we have an Instance too in Balaam, whom an House full of Gold and Silver (though himself was Covetous) could not persuade, God having an hold upon his Conscience within.

2. Again 2dly, That which helps forward this Good Opinion, is, That Men find it a Constant and Incorrupt Principle, and (as the School Men say) that it keeps it self a Virgin. It dwells in them, as Grace is said to be a Seed that remains: And it is incorrupt in this Respect, that it will not let Sin pass Uncontrolled, nor be Charmed to hold it's Tongue; but will talk and speak against it, whilst it hath a Tongue; which tho' it be Imprisoned, will Preach in Prison. It keeping it self thus incorrupt, Men are apt to think it is Grace in them.

3. The Fruits and Effects are so like to those of True Grace, that no Wonder if Men mistake them. The Phrase used to express both are so nigh, a kin, as a Man must Criticize to observe the difference. Grace is the Law Written in the Heart, the Light of Conscience is the Effect of the Law Written there: The same outward Duties which Grace directs to, Conscience enlightned doth urge unto, and speaks against the same Sins. And at once to give you a clear Demonstration both that the Effects are much alike, and thence Men are apt to mistake: How comes it to pass, that the 7th Chapter of the Romans, from the 14th Verse, to the End, should be so variously Interpreted, by Men of great Understandings, that one and the same Draught and Representation, which Paul there makes of that Great Fight, between Grace and Corruption, The Law of the Members, and the Law of the Mind, should be drawn by Arminius and others, as a Representation of the Effects, and Conflicts of Natural Conscience enlightned, and that he should carry on every Phrase and Particle therein, in all the Particulars, with so much seeming Appearance? This Argues the Effects to be alike. Yea, which is yet stranger, Augustine himself, who knew the Difference of the Effects of Grace, and Natural Conscience; yea, and in his Confessions, Relates the Experiments of that Difference in himself, to have been the First Evidence of Regeneration, or of that New Work of Grace upon him, in Comparing the then frame of his Heart, when New Converted, with his former, in his Unregenerate Condition: After this Work he Interpreted that Chapter of the Effects of the Natural Conscience, tho' after he Retracts it. We also hear Carnal People that apparently have no Grace, yet alledge out of that Chapter, Excuses for their grossest Sinnings, That they do what they would not; and it is not I, but Sin. That thus, one and the same Picture should seem two Several Pictures of Two Several Men, Argues there is a near Resemblance. That the Complexion and Lineaments of Natural Conscience should seem to one to be pourtrayed in this Chapter, and yet the Resemblance of Grace appears in it, to another, that hath Experience of what is Grace, Argues a great likeness, as indeed there is. But I will Discourse of this more Particularly.

1. The Grounds why Heathens were deceiv'd in their high esteem of Conscience, were these. They thought Reason, and Conscience in them, to be the same, that is in God himself. Orta est Simul cum mente divina; & Princeps Lex, est Ratio recta Summi Jovis, says Tully. And Hierocles also says, that it is the same thing to Obey Right Reason, and God; such a Mind Enlightned differs not from the Mind of God, but being intent on that Divinity, and Brightness, by which it is Enlightned, it comes to do those things which it doth, and the Heathens knowing no higher Illumination, and therefore thinking that it was thus Adequate and Correspondent unto the Light that is in God, whom whilst they glimeringly knew, they Judged altogether such an one as themselves, and Glorified him not as God in their Knowledge of him: They therefore knowing no higher, Judged nothing could be higher. And so look what pleased Reason in them, they judged it must fully please God also, of whom it was the Participation. And altho' they could not but Acknowledge God as the Supream Judge (for Conscience still urged them with his Authority) yet they did in their Doctrines, do what they could to perswade themselves and others, that this Right Reason, or Law in their Consciences, was the Supream visible Judge, to which a Man himself only was to give an Account, and receive his Happiness, or Woe, from it, according as he lived after it's Dictates.

2. The Jews receiving the Law immediately from God himself, as a perfect Copy of his Mind, saw not the end of it, 2 Cor. 3. and Considered not that the end and intent of Gods giving it, was to discover to them now fallen, their Weakness, and Contrariety to it, to drive them to Christ; but they thought that God prescribed the Law to them as the way to Life, by which they might Live in doing of it as they were able: And so their Consciences taking it from God, set them a doing it in the Letter of it, and this they judged must save them, because the Primitive intent of the Law to Man at first, was ordained to Life; this Paul speaks as his Thoughts, in the name of the rest Rom. 7. 9. But that which deceived them was, that Man was not as at first, tho' the Law in it self, was what it was at first.

3. We Christians that know the Gospel, yet remaining Unregenerate, do still verge in our Spirits to the way of the Covenants of Works, for tis Nature in us, and so we set up Conscience, and close with the Dictates of it for Religion rather than the way of Faith, and Rules of Believing. And further hearing, Religion expressed to us by such Phrases as these, of a Mans being a Conscionable Man, and the Integrity of a Mans Actions being expressed, by doing things for Conscience sake (Rom. 15. 5.) and having all Religion also to be reduced to those Two, and so expressed to us, viz. Faith and a good Conscience (1 Tim. 1. 19. Faith being the Principle of all things to be Believed; Conscience of things that are to be done. Fides principium Credendorum & Conscientia Agendorum) therefore Faith to be a Common Assent to what they are Trained up in, and is delivered in the word; so look what Effects Conscience hath upon their Hearts, either for Good, or against Evil, they think must needs be what the New Testament means by the New Creature: Not Dreaming that there is a Defiled Conscience, which sets Men a work till Faith and Regeneration comes with Power, and Purifies the Heart.

CHAP. IV.

A Discovery of the Defects wherein Natural Conscience falls short of True Grace.

THE third and main Head is to make discovery of this deficiency, as also of the grounds of those mistakes fore-specified.

1. I shall make inquisition or search into the Principle of Conscience it self, and into the Light with which the Consciences of natural men are endowed: And I shall enquire also into the Nature, Seat, Condition, and Goodness of that Light, and this in many Assertions introductory unto what shall follow. For to be sure the goodness of the effects of Conscience cannot rise higher than that of the Cause.

2. I shall consider the grounds of those several mistakes forementioned, by which men unregenerate are induced to think the light of natural Conscience to be Holiness.

3. I shall particularly examine all those effects of natural Conscience which have been enumerated, and the deficiency of them from that holiness which is in a man regenerate.

1. As to the enquiry concerning the principle of Conscience it self: Suppose that you had some Person that were counterfeit, that pretended to some great Inheritance, under examination, you would strictly enquire into his Birth, Original, place of abode, and residence, and the like: Let us take the same Course here.

1. For its Original, I acknowledge that the light thereof is from God upon a new account, but this will make nothing for the Justification of the grand mistake, that therefore it is Holiness. There are those who would have those sparks of moral Light in Conscience, as also of moral Vertues and inclinations in the Will and Affections found in corrupt Nature to be Relicks of the former Image of God: So that by the Stumps of Stubble remaining on the Ground you might know what Corn once grew upon that Soil, viz. the Heart of man, now laid waste and desolate. And indeed if the Case was thus, this Controversy were at an end, for then these remaining sparks of Conscience must be of the same kind with that primitive Holiness, as being the Stumps thereof, and so every man by Nature would be in part regenerate, which is the highest perfection here. But that which I would assert, is, That take these Seeds of light, &c. abstracted from the natural Faculties, and they are new Plants rather in the Heart of man, tho' of another kind (as Herbs that are wild in Wilderesses are from those in Gardens) which God thro' Christs general Mediation for all Mankind, hath planted there de novo, out of pity to the totally ruined Condition of man's Nature; out of which by the Curse, all Stems were utterly rooted out and stubbed up: The Nature of man being left in the rigour and utmost extent of the Curse, nothing but Flesh, or as an abrasa Tabula, devoid of all good, (Rom 7. 18.) infomuch as it would not have had the shadow or appearance of what is good: As Christs Curse upon the Temple was, That not so much as a Stone should be left upon a Stone. Infomuch as in the execution of that Curse, after that the Romans in Titus's time had razed and thrown down the upper parts and Walls thereof, even unto the ground, God in Julian's time gave the Earth a Vomit by an Earthquake, and it cast up the very Foundations, that not a Stone was left upon a Stone. So it befel man's Nature upon upon the Fall, in respect of all moral good. And so tho' these sparks of light and κοινὰς ἐνοίας common Notions of God and Goodness are indeed the imperfect Shadow of that former Image created in true Holiness (as by distinction from these Paul termeth that original primitive purity) yet they are no way the Relicks or Remainers of it, but indeed are new Donatives over and above that Birth-right of nothing but Sin, and natural Faculties, the necessary Subject thereof, which Adam, and the Curse for his sin, left unto us.

For 1. Christ himself hath designed and set out the Pittance of that Birth-right Portion to be this, That which is born of the Flesh is Flesh. (John 3.) That is, there is not that thing which is born or derived to us by that Birth, and the dues of it, but flesh; and of that flesh Paul sayes again and again, That 'tis enmity to God, (Rom. 8.) And that no good thing dwells in it, (Rom. 7.)

Neither 2. Had the curse for Adams Sin any Eye to pity, or Commission to spare some good, whilst it stretcht out its Sword to cut off all. It alike struck at root as well as branch, and its devouring Jawes left no broken fragments. The Threatning was, That that day thou sinnest thou diest. Whatever good then is found, is from the mitigation of this Curse on another account; viz. of Riches of Mercy, though but common Mercy, such as the fourth verse of this (Rom. 2.) speaks of.

And truly, 3. The great inequality of the distribution of these moral lights or goodness which is found either in Conscience or any other Faculty doth evidence this. Socrates had more thereof than Epicurus; whereas the Curse of it self would work in all a like deprivation of moral light: And this to me is unanswerable, that so far as any one man's Conscience doth by Nature prove more dim in light than others, even to the lowest degree of glimmerings, such as is found in the meekest natural Fool that ever was yet in the World, unto that degree at least, (as it must be acknowledged) would the Curse of it self work in all men to leave them to the same proportion. For even that small proportion (in comparison of what others have) is from the same Curse; which of it self in Justice was to overflow to all, and as a sweeping rain would carry all away. And truly whilst we give the name of meer Naturals unto them, who have the lowest degree of light, and are but a nice distinction between an elevated Brute, and a rational Creature, we do thereby tacitly acknowledge that this least Pittance is the whole Dowry which meer Nature, as accursed and corrupt, would have left to any man: So as utter Darkness, Blindness in things, is Nature's Legacy. Man is born (says Elihu in Job) as a wild Ass-Colt Job. 11. 12. And thus, tho' Conscience be a natural Faculty, and there is the Altar, yet the Fire and the light of it, and what is morally good, even to every spark thereof, is not raked up in the Ashes of our Nature, as remainders of that holy light which was there before; but as sparks struck into Conscience as the Tinder fully capable and recipient of them. In (Rom. 2.) you have one phrase makes for this, and another that makes against it, let us examine the force of either; Paul says it is the effect of the Law written in their hearts. Writing is opus Artificis, and notes out Characters imprinted by an exterior hand. Our Consciences are the Paper, that is all we bring, which the very renewal, or revival by the Law Typified. God at first form'd both by one immediate hand, in the State of Innocency; but after man had broken these Tables, man findes the Stone, but God the Letters, and Writing still. But Then how is it said (v. 14.) That by Nature they do the things of the Law? this on the other hand, seems to make against it: But the Answer is easie, Nature is opposed to God's outward Revelation of the Law, as the Context shews. The Gentiles that have not the Law, that is, the outward knowledge of it by Revelation, have yet a light derived with their Births and Nature (for the Sparks of this must be acknowledged to be therewith derived) according to the purport of that expression He enlightneth every man that is born into the World, and so it accompa-panies our Birth : And more or less is made a Dowry common to the Nature of man, and made innate in man, yet it is still written there by an external hand. And all those other Scriptures convince me of this, in that when speaking of this Truth (whereof Conscience is the Seat) concerning God and Righteousness, which (Rom. i. 18.) he says was withheld in Unrighteousness by the Gentiles; and which (v. 18.) he calls that which may be known of God which was manifest in them; He is wary in a special manner to speak something of the sense or original of it, and how they being naturally (as we all are) so corrupt, came by it. For God (says he) hath shewed it to them; He by his secret instruction teaching them to spell those Characters of his eternal Power and Godhead written in the Creation (v. 20.) which without his teaching, and shewing them, as one doth a Child, they would never have understood. This they owed to God, and therefore this reflecting power in man that searcheth the inward Chambers of the Belly (Prov. 20. 27.) is called the Candle of the Lord: He speaks evidently of Conscience, which is that light and Faculty, which pierceth by reflections upon all Faculties, witnessing, accusing, excusing, discerning just or unjust, that is never so secretly done in any Room of the Soul. And why is it called the Candle of the Lord? But because we are all in the dark, and should have so remain'd, if God had not brought in and set up de novo that Candle within us, or at least lighted it and snuff'd it. And as a Candle is extrinsecal to the Room, at least the Light, is extrinsecal, in respect of its original, to the Candle; so here it is in this Case. And this assertion, that there is Light from God himself as the Enlightner (especially in things moral, and which concern himself) even in man fallen, is no new Opinion, even among both Jews, Heathenish or Christian Writers: And by them it is judged to be that to the Conscience or Mind (which is the natural Faculty it self,) which an external Sun or Candle is to the eye of the Body. There have been large Collections out of all these, and references to them for the demonstration of it, made unto your hands: Now this Light, though extrinsecally from God, comes to be defiled, and to have a Tincture from the defilement of the Mind, as the Light of the Sun shining on, or thro' a Glass dyed green or red, useth to receive a Tincture suitable, for Quicquid recipitur ad modum recipientis. To which that of the Apostle accords, To Unbelievers all things are impure, because their Minds and Consciences are defiled, Tit. 1. 15.

See the Schoolmen on that Question, in their Traçis de Gratia. Also Seldinus de Jure naturali, Lib. 1, Cap. 9.

I added, in the Beginning of this Assertion, That the Light was vouchsafed thus to all, more or less, thro' the mediation of Christ: By which I understand such a Mediation as he hath made for the upholding the whole Creation, which the Curse would else have pull'd about Adam's Ears. And truly that Scripture seems to look that ways, John 1. 9. He is that light which enlightneth every man that comes into the World. The Analysis of that Chapter might give light to this, if I could insist on it. The Apostle shews 1. What before the Fall Christ was to all Creatures (v. 3.) 2. What he was to man in Innocency. (v. 24.) 3. What is he to man fallen and become Darkness (v. 5.) And the light shineth in Darkness, and the Darkness comprehendeth it not. Which in this 9th verse he again enlargeth on. He is in himself that true Light, from whom all men born into the World have that Light, which accompanies their Nature. He shews what Christ was to the Jews in revealing the Law, and Gospel (v. 11.) And 5. what he is to Believers whom he regenerates (v. 12, 13.) And it is evident, that part of John's Scope is withal to distinguish this common light vouchsafed to every man in the World (v. 5. 9, 10.) from that of Faith and Regeneration, of which he speaks (v. 12, 13.) That common Light turneth not the natural darkness or Corruption of the Heart into Holiness; the Darkness comprehends it not. It changeth not the Heart into the same Image: Even as the light of Stars is such a light as serves to discover themselves, but they alter not the Air into light, as the Sun doth. And he speaks of that light specially shining into mens dark and corrupt Hearts as gives the knowledge of good or evil, and of God, because it is such a light as the darkness of man's Nature would avoid, and is some way contrary unto it, for it avoids it, receives it not, so as to have its full Effect on their Hearts, it discovering that Darknes that is found in the Chambers of the Belly. Now Natural Knowledge, in other things, Man's Darknes is not opposite unto. The drift then of what we have hitherto said hereof, is, That this Light of Conscience is not the remainder of the former Image, and so no part, or spark of the former Holiness, but a Light de novo, brought in by God and Christ, as in Common, a Mediator for all Mankind.

and

There is, or may be supposed, a Difference in the kinds, or sorts of Light, and so there is a Difference of this from what is Holy and Spiritual, altho' all be deriv'd from God as the Father of Light, as James in the Plural calls them, when he insinuates a Distinction of Gifts Perfect and Imperfect, yet it follows not that it should be Holy, no more then other Notions in the Knowledg of things meerly Natural, and Philosophical Truths are. It falls out in the Lights of the Mind, whereof God is the Father, as it doth in Bodily visible Lights, which Paul speaks of upon occasion of the Resurrection, and in setting forth the difference of the Qualities now, and after the Resurrection, 1 Cor. 15. 39. All Flesh is not the same Flesh, but there is one kind of Flesh, of Men, another of Beasts, another of Fishes, another of Birds. And v. 14. There is one Glory of the Sun, another of the Moon, and another of the Stars. Now by their Glory, he means their differing Light that is in them, and from them: So say I of these Lights vouchsafed by God, altho' they be from God, yet they differ both in their kind, and efficacy, and also according to the Tincture of the Subjects they are shed into. The light of the Natural Conscience is one kind of Light, which is as that of the Stars; the Light given the Jew from the Law, and the Light of Men that fall away (spoken of Heb. 6.) are as that of the Moon; and the Light vouchsafed the Saints in Regeneration, is as the Sun. Our Saviour Christ therefore in John gives this Note of Distinction of it from all Lights else, (tho' all be from God) in calling it the Light of Life. Joh. 8. 12. He that followeth me (saith he) shall not walk in Darknes, but shall have the Light of Life, viz. That which Converts, Saves, and only giveth Life. Which Elihu in Job speaking of (Job 33. 30.) names it a being Enlightned with the Light of the Living, which brings back a Mans Soul from the Pit. Which Distinction the Apostle John, that Wrote the Gospel, confirms (1 Joh. 2. 4, 5, 11.) when he says, (v. 4.) He that saies I know him, and keeps not his Commandments, is a Liar, and the Truth is not in him, and (v. 9.) is in Darknes even until now; that is, in his dark Condition, devoy'd of Light, and (v. 11) walks in Darknes: Now Consider that the Apostle (Rom. 1. 18.) calls that Natural Light the Heathens had, the Truth, and (v. 19.) says it was manifest in them. And these Professors of Christianity which John speaks of, were certainly enlightned with that Light (Heb. 6.) which drew them in their Profession to say that they knew God, without which in those times Men had no encouragment, but all discouragements to profess him. How then doth he say that the Truth is not in them, and that in saying they knew God, they Lyed? This could not have been, unless there had been a Knowledge which is comparatively the only true Genuine Knowledge and Light of God indeed, and in Comparison of which, the other are but as Darknes. As the Light of the Sun is such a light, and so different from all other, that it alone bears the Title of the true Light, which only makes Day, and in Comparison of which, all other is but Darknes and Night, tho' one Night may be more Light then another, as we see when the Moon shines in its brightness: And some Star-Light-Nights are clearer then other, yet still a Man that knows the Difference may say, These all are not the true Light, not the Light which makes Day; for they overcome not the Darknes, when they Shine, as the least Beam of the Sun doth. Now Regenerate Men are call'd Day, as set in the Day light: And the State of Unregeneracy is termed Night and Darknes. Now as suppose a Man that had been kept in close Darknes all his Days, and from seeing any light, yet had heard some talk in General of the Light of the Day, and the shining of Light that makes Day; and bring this Man into a Room. where a great and stately Lamp or Taper burns. Oh this is the Light I have heard so much of, would he presently say; and lo this is Day, and Oh how pleasant a thing would he Affirm it, to behold this Light in Comparison of that Darknes he had been Condemned too: So if we could suppose any one of the Sons of Men brought up in those meræ tenebrae, meer Darknes which were only Natures Legacy, and on the Suddain God should set up in the Lanthorn of his Braines the Light of the greatest Magnitude, that Plato, or Socrates ever had, how would this Man bless himself, (as much as we heard they did) Magnifie this as the only Light, and the same which God himself hath, as they also did. Well, yet for Illustrations sake, let us make a further supposition, and that is, that this Man were told, Oh but there is a further and higher Light yet, that gives Light to all the World, there is the Sun, which is placed in the Heavens, and not on a Candlestick to give Light only to one House, or one Room. And then let this Man be carried forth into the open Skye, and let any one shew him a full Moon, walking in her greatest Brightness (as Job speaks) Oh how would he kiss his Hand to it, and passionately cry out, Oh this is Light, this is Day indeed, and what a Miserable Creature was I (would that poor Man say within himself) that have hitherto Lived in such Darknes, and wanted this blessed Light of the World? Well, let this Man awhile enjoy his Fancy, and keep him still in the open Air awake, and anon when the Day is Approaching, let him discover the Twinkling Stars to close up their Lights and Vanish, and the Brightness to wash off by degrees from his so adored Moon, which he verily took for the Sun, and her Face to grow pale and wan; and a far differing stronger Light to steal in by degrees, and he looks about him, and discerns not from what cause it springs, nor can at first imagine, till at last casting his Eye to that Quarter of Heaven which is brightest, he discerns the Body of the Sun, beginning to peep up above the Horizon: Do but think with your selves upon the sight hereof what this Man would say? This is Day indeed, this is Light indeed, the only true Light I have heard spoken of; and differs (though the other had the Name and Reality of Light) as much from the former as any sorts of Creatures that are the Counterfeits of others that are genuine, can be supposed to do. This Man would acknowledge what John affixeth to Natural Men, enlightned not savingly, that he had been but in Darknes, and walkt in the Night all this while, until now; and that his Boasts and Brags that he knew Day, and had Commerce with the Sun were mistakes, and that the Truth of Life had neither been in him, nor in them, which hitherto he had seen.

Let your own Judgments, and Consciences make the Application. For like Mistakes there are about the Light of Life, and of Eternal Salvation. Neither is the difference of these several Lights, but only in and by the Effects, demonstrable to any Man, but him that hath seen the true Light of the Sun shining on him. Other Men will walk and abide in Night and Darknes, and yet will say they have the true Light, and their Error can never be discovered to them but by the arising of the true Light. Only the Saints can say (as John in their Names there) with Difference from all others, We know we know him (v.3.) and the Darknes is past, and the true Light now shineth, (v.2.) and there can be no other.

The present Drift of this Discourse hath been to shew, that a difference is and may be supposed between the light that God vouchsafes regenerate and unregenerate men in kind, as well as in degree. For if there be one glory of a Torch or Taper which is a light on Earth, another of the Stars and Moon, which is a light in and from Heaven, and yet another of the Sun, which alone deserves the name of being a true Light, which difference, God the Father of all Lights hath set amongst them: Why should we not think that the same God can diversifie and vary the Lights that he causeth to fall, and shine into mens Hearts, and make them of a several kind? Common Light in Heathens, is but as a Candle on Earth;

Earth; Light in Jews and Christians, but as the Light of the Moon; and the heavenly, yet not dispelling Night. Altho' all these be Light, and represent in many things the very same Objects (tho' somewhat more imperfectly) as all these forementioned Lights do, Yet still the Light of Regeneration describes only the name of the true Light, the Light of Life, and the other in Comparison are Darkness, according to that of Solomon (Prov. 9. 10.) The Knowledge of the Holy is Understanding, and that only.

The third Consideration is touching the Seat of the Power and Dominion of the natural Light of Conscience.

1. The Light of Conscience hath a power over the rest of the Faculties.
2. The seat of that power and dominion over the rest of the Faculties is not the whole Heart, but Conscience, which is but one Faculty. That a power and dominion it hath over a man's Heart, the forementioned effects do shew: And Paul's discourse manifests it in his Epistle to the Romans, the 6th and 7th Chapters. In the 6th Chapter the Apostle treating of that Sanctification which is in a man truly regenerate, in the 14th verse, expresseth his State thus, Ye are not under the Law, but under Grace. Wherein his state is both negatively and affirmatively set forth.

1. Negatively, it is being not under the Law, which is on purpose inserted in opposition to the contrary state of men unregenerate, who are under the Law; and the Law hath a dominion over such.

2. Affirmatively, it is set forth in those words, so as Grace comes to have a Dominion over a Man's Spirit when Sanctified, and under these two Conditions are all men cast.

Then in the 7th Chapter from the first verse, he sets out this Dominion that the Law hath over an unregenerate man in more express terms, the Law hath dominion over a man as long as he lives. Where these words, as long as he lives respect not simply the term of a man's life in this World, but limitedly the time of his continuance in that estate wherein he was at first born into the World. For life there relates to the death, mentioned v. 4, and 6. Ye are become dead to the Law (speaking of their regenerate Condition) that being dead wherein ye were held. Christ's Body which was crucified for us, in vertue of it works a dying to a mans former estate by humiliation and mortification, whereof also he speaks, Gal. 2. 19. I through the Law, am dead to the Law, that I might live unto God. He speaks particularly with respect to the Law, as an husband that had power over a man before, as it is evident from v. 1, 2. You know, Brethren, how the Law hath dominion over a man as long as he lives. For the Woman which hath an husband is bound by the Law to her husband so long as he liveth, But if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband. And suitably in following this Allegory, he expresseth the change of their Condition in those that are wrought upon, v. 4. Wherefore, Brethren, ye are become dead to the Law by the Body of Christ, that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead. So then, it is clear from this, that as Christ and Grace have a dominion over a Man after regeneration; the Law hath dominion over every man before Conversion. And to set forth this the more, the Apostle compares the unregenerate Heart of man unto the Wife, and the Law unto the Husband, who according to the Law of Nature hath dominion over the Wife, whilst both live. And that the Law was once the natural husband of mans Heart, (and God by it) you may observe out of (Jer. 31. 32.) God there speaking of the old Covenant, and expressing the tenor of that Covenant of works which was the same with that of mans Creation, says, I was an husband to them. And now that man is fallen, God still urgeth his Right, and (the Obligation which is upon a man whilst under the meer Covenant of his Creation) and the terms of his Condition

Book 6. by his Fall, are no way altered. Now further, it is the Law whether written by nature, or given by Revelation, which calls for this subjection to God, which it doth tho' men be departed, and gone a whoring from him. And urgeth all sorts of duties Conjugal upon the Heart, and the Heart cannot deny but that it is her duty to be subject, for she is conscious of her primitive allegiance, which in that state of nature she can never shake off; but is an Adulteress in every act of Disobedience or Rebellion.

2. The Seat or proper Throne of this Dominion which the Law hath, and from whence the exercise of it comes, is the Conscience of a man. The Case stands thus, The Husband and Wife are not wholly parted, altho' they live at odds, but the Husband challengeth to live under the same Roof with her; and so although the Heart would, and hath for her part cast off God; yet God keeps possession in one corner of the House, by the light of his Law, that he causeth to shine into Conscience, which (as I have shewn) is the suscipient of God's Law. Sin in the Heart hath shut God out of all the rest; and keeps it to its self, and hath crouded him up into that narrow Corner, and grudgeth him that too; and if it could possibly, would throw him out of all: But God will so far keep and maintain his Right and Possession as that the Heart may know and acknowledge his antient Right over it, and its subjection to his Law. Yea, and by means and vertue of its residence there, doth the Law continually provoke the heart to her dutie, and over rules her in many things, and tells her of her Adulteries and Departments from God, &c. But all that the Law speaks, is contrary to the full bent, and inclination of her Heart. Her desire is not to her Husband, for the Apostle (v. 5.) tells us that this Husband begets nothing but motions of Sins on her, thro' her perverseness. I may otherwise express it under the Similitude and Metaphor of a Kingdom, which the Apostle also useth (Rom. 5. 21. and chap. 6. 14.) All Mankind had clean shook off the sweet and natural subjection of the Heart to God and his Law, and Sin and self were become absolute and supream, and had got the power, and had entred upon Gods Rights and Dominions;: And tho' in title Sin be but a Tyrant, yet in power and jurisdiction it is (now man is fallen) owned by the whole man as its natural Lord and Prince, giving forth Laws (Rom. 7. 23.) which Laws being mens own Lusts, are willingly and chearfully obeyed (Rom. 6. 12.) But shall Sin think to carry it thus from God, to enjoy a settled Dominion quietly, so that God shall have no remedy, no Law to take place? The truth is; God had before-hand made and placed over the Soul of man one Tower (for so Conscience is termed by the Ancients, Arx Anima) which is by the natural situation of it so unfortifiable by the utmost power of man, and lyes so open and exposed immediately unto God, and Beams of Light from him, that let man revolt and become never so sinful and rebellious; yet he cannot keep God, nor his Forces out of it. Man can never stop that passage, but God can bring in what Forces and what number he pleaseth, and all the power in man can never hinder it. The Devil himself cannot keep God out thence, for they believe and tremble. This is the practick part of the Understanding, viz. Conscience: Yea the truth is, that but for this Principle, which is natural to Men and Devils, and can never be demolished by the Wickedness of either; God could never come to punish for sin either of them in their Spirits. Yea the Devil would wholly have escaped; for he is not capable of bodily punishment in outward things. It is Conscience, which is a tender part, and which is such in man, as God hath made in wild Beasts to tame them by, as a Snout in a Bear, and the Mouth in an Horse. It is Conscience that is only, or at least primarily sensible of God's Wrath, and Hell-Fire could not take hold on the Soul but at this Corner. And so God created it for all Events, and for all states, viz. to stop mens Mouths when he indulgeth; to execute vengeance upon them, when he punisheth in Hell; and on Earth to rule and cut short mens Spirits, and restrain them from Wickedness. There being being this difference between the state of Wicked Men, and Devils, that he doth not Rule the Devils by Conscience. It is not their Conscience that keeps them from any Evil, for they certainly make Conscience of nothing. He Punisheth them indeed by Conscience, and at that Channel lets in all the streams of the Lake of Fire and Brimstone into these Vessels of Wrath: Conscience, the Moderate Effects of which Men Magnifie so much, hath its fullest Dominion in Hell, and is in it's height of Power there.

But to return to the Similitude: God having thus afore-hand taken order to erect in Mans Soul this Out-work, this Castle upon an impregnable Rock, which can powerfully Command the Rebellious Town, and Malignant Inhabitants that dwell below it; plants his great Ordinance there, (namely the awful Knowledge of himself, of the works of the Law, and of his Wrath) Hangs out his Flags of Summons, sends out Proclamations with Sound of Trumpet, from this Mount Sinai, (as in giving the Law he did) often Thunders down with Fears, and Horrors, and Dreadful Punishments, in, and with which the Law of God is Revealed from Heaven against all Ungodliness, and Unrighteousness of Men, that withhold the Truth in Unrighteousness (as of the very Gentiles the Apostle Prefaceth, Rom. 1. 18.) yet all this while the City, and the Towns about, and adjacent parts of the Heart of Man, are perfect Malignants, stand out in Rebellion, having set up a Contrary King and Kingdom, which they obey in the Lusts thereof, and will Obey only. From this fort God now and then sends out Parties that bring them to some Contribution, that prevail to make them take many Conditions, and bring them to much outward Conformity, even to the Laws of God, yet so are still the Seat, the place of Residence to all these Foreign Forces (as these are to the Heart) is but this one Faculty, from whence God commands the rest, tho' they are not brought into a Natural Subjection. Whereas Regenerating Grace where it comes, immediately plants it self in the whole Man, takes up every Faculty, one as well as another for God, and brings every thought into Subjection, 2 Cor. 10. 5. It wins the Heart of every Faculty that had Rebelled, unto it self, and unto God, sets up a new Kingdom in the midst of the Soul, alters all the State and Form of Government, insomuch as the Laws of that Kingdom are made natural, where Grace Reigns, (Rom. 5. 21.) And the Laws of God are become the Law of a Believers Mind (Rom. 7. 23.) and and if he were to choose, he would be Governed by no other. But the Condition of an Unregenerate Man is very different, for as in a State or Kingdom, a Foreign Power may have much Quarter, and many Compliances, when yet the Laws of that Kingdom are still in Force: So in an Unregenerate Man, though the Law of God may, in the Light of it, be said to be in his Mind, and prevail much there, yet it is not become the Law of his Mind, which hath still a Contrary Law, and Government that stands in Force. The Reason whereof is clear, for the Power of it being but the Power of the Law, therefore it can never Sanctifie; and tho' it may come to have much power, Stroak, and Command amongst the Subjects of this Kingdom of Sin, yet it can never pull down the Power of Sin, or put Sin from its Dominion. It is an Apostolical Maxim resolutely delivered Rom. 6. 14. Sin shall not have Dominion over you, for ye are not under the Law: Therefore whilst a Man is in such an Estate, as he is still under the Law, Sin will retain it's Dominion. Indeed the Law by Conscience may much interrupt, and impede Sin in its proceedings, and over-rule a Man unto much Good, yet it must be something stronger than the Law, to alter the whole form of Government, and Frame of the Heart, and subdue it to God, and restore to him his Kingdom again, Christ alone can do this. The Law as it can never Justifie, so nor Sanctifie; altho' indeed what is Written in the Heart in our Sanctification, is the matter of the Law, as also in Christ the performance of the same Law is the matter of our Justification; yet it is not by the Power of the Law that we are Sanctified or Justified. If there had been a Law given which could have given Life, verily Righteousness had been by the Law, (Gal. 2. 21.) But the Apostle hath formed us, (Rom. 8. 3.) That the Law was weak through the Flesh, and could not free a Man from the Law of Sin and Death, but the Spirit and Power, that is in Jesus Christ must do this, (Rom. 8. 2, 3.) For the Law of the Spirit of Life, in Christ Jesus hath made us free from the Law of Sin and Death. For what the Law could not do, in that it was Weak through the Flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of Sinful Flesh, and for Sin, Condemned Sin in the Flesh.

The Fourth Consideration, or Assertion, is touching the Exercise of this Power, which the light of Conscience hath in a Man; Concerning which, I Assert.

1. That the Strength and Force that is in all the Workings of it, whether in Motives to Duty, or Restraint from Sin, doe, lie in the Law, and the Weapons of it's Warfare, whereby it works it's chiefest Effects, are all fetched out of that Magazine. The Great Artillery thereof are charged both with Powder and Bullets of the Law: As 'tis said, The strength of Sin is the Law, (1 Cor. 15. 56.) viz. in Respect of holding us under the Guilt of it, so the strength of Natural Conscience is but that of the Law, as to the Motive part thereof. And the Reason is clear from the Apostles forementioned Maxim, Ye are not under the Law, but Grace; therefore Sin shall not have Dominion. (Rom. 6. 14.) Hence therefore in whomsoever Sin hath Dominion, there the Law is the most prevalent Principle; and so whatever hath the Presence of goodness in them must have its rise chiefly from thence. Every thing is in working as it is in being. Now the Condition of the Person is to be under the Law, and he belongs to that Dominion, and therefore the swaying Principle of his Actings must be from the Power thereof. Inasmuch as if an Unregenerate Man be Enlightned, and Duties of the Gospel be urged upon him, as to Mourn for Sin, to Believe in Christ, &c. yet the Motives that prevail with that Man are but such as are of the same kind with those of the Law. As Faith turns the Commands of the Law into Gospel, in a Regenerate Mans Heart; so Conscience, in an Unregenerate Man, turns the Gospel into Law. As Faith Writes the Law in the Heart, and urgeth the Duties of it upon Evangelical Grounds and Motives, as the Love of Christ, Conformity to him, Union with him, and the Free Grace of God: So in a Man Unregenerate, Gospel Duties are turn'd into Legal, through the sway and influence of Conscience, and that Dominion which the Covenant of Works hath over him. And if to such a Man you use such Motives as are drawn from Christ's Love, God's Free Grace, &c. they are but as Wooden Cannons set upon the Walls for shew: But those that do Execution, make dints and impressions on the Heart, are at best in such Cases but the Threatnings of the Law. Conscience, at best, is but a Legal Preacher: I call it so, because tho' the Law laies down the Doctrines, and shews what is Mans Duty, yet Conscience is that which makes the Application, and as occasion serves, makes Uses of Direction, and Exhortation to Good, or of Comfort, if a Man doth well, or of Reproof, if he doth Evil. And let the Doctrine be what it will, yet the Motives, with which it backs its Uses are still Legal, and so 'tis but a Legal Preacher. And therefore (Gal. 5. 18.) To be led by the Spirit, and to be under the Law, or Conscience, (its Minister) are two differing things, and two distinct Principles of Mens Actions, Regenerate, or Unregenerate.

2. My Second Assertion concerneth the Kind or Condition of this Power, and the Exercise of it, which is plainly this. It is a Tyrannical and Forced Government, which Natural Conscience Exerciseth over the Heart: Whereas on the Contrary, the Government of the Grace of Regeneration in the Soul, is (so far as a Man's Heart is Regenerated) sweet and intrinsecal, congenial, and connatural to the Heart, it being endowed with Dispositions suitable; and changed into the Image of that Light; and so the subjection of the rest of the Faculties, is such as of Subjects to their Natural Prince; but on the other case, it is a Subjection as to a Foraigner, or Invader, And this Difference as to that part of it, (Conscience) viz. its Government is clear from what hath been said: For if one Faculty only rules over the rest, when their Bent remains contrary to its Laws, this Government must needs be extrinsecal, as also, if it be but a legal Government in the main and fundamental Constitution of it. I shewed (out of Rom. 7. 1, 2, 3.) that the Law in the Conscience is compared to the Husband, and the Heart of man to the Wife. Indeed for his title over the Heart, it is a natural jurisdiction, for it was once by Nature: But take the Condition of the Heart of such a man, now corrupt with Sin, it is a cruel Government. They are Man and Wife indeed, but so contrary, that there is a vexatious Life between this Couple. He offers to do his duty, and makes motions to this, and unto that, but she is averse, and the motions to the contrary often become the stronger thereby, (Rom. 7. 6.) The motions of sin which were by the Law, that is, begotten on the Heart as Children by an Husband, did work in our Members to bring forth fruit unto death. Conscience in unregenerate men finds all in the Heart arm'd against it, but Grace hath created an Interest in the Heart throughout, and made a party for it self, so as it fights not alone. Conscience in the end, as a severe Governour, comes to be imprisoned (Rom. 1. 18.) in Unrighteousness: For Men are all weary of its Yoke, and rise up against it, and are glad when it is stopt, or fear'd.

C H A P. V.

What Goodness, and of what kind, is to be acknowledged to be in this Light from God, vouchsafed to Natural Conscience, tho' it doth fall short of true Grace.

THAT Light which is in a natural Conscience being from God, who is the Father of all Lights, it must needs have a goodness in it. For as all that ever God made at first was good (Gen. 1. 31. God saw all that he had made was good) So all that ever God shall make, must be Good (1 Tim. 4. 4.) Every Creature of God is good. The very letters of the Law written on Tables of stone were good in this sense, much more the same, tho' but literally written, on men's Consciences. Let me say it, All the actings and stirrings of Conscience of Men in Hell, as they are from God and the Spirit of Bondage, they are good with this kind of goodness.

2. It hath that further goodness which the outward letter of the Law, considered as distinct from the spiritual part thereof, may be said to have.

Four things are to be explained.

- I. That there is a literal part of the Law, and a spiritual part.
 - II. That it is the spiritual part that constitutes the Law holy.
 - III. That the Light of the Law in an unregenerate man's Conscience is but literal, not spiritual, and so is but the Shadow and Picture of true knowledge of the Law, as it is spiritual.
 - IV. It will be necessary to explain what goodness is in the literal part severed from the Spirit, above what is common to all other Creatures.
- The three first I shall intermingledly handle together, because they are in a great part the subject of that 7th Chapter of the Romans, where he treats of the Light and Dominion of the Law in and over a man unregenerate, and the difference of it from that which is in a regenerate man.

1. You may observe Paul putting this difference between the Law as dwelling in his Heart or Conscience, when an unregenerate Jew and Pharisee; and in himself when renewed, and become a regenerate Christian, (Rom. 7. 6.) But now we are delivered from the Law, that being dead wherein we were held, that we should serve in newness of Spirit, and not in the oldness of the Letter. He sets forth the difference of the two states, and termeth the one, servings in the oldness of the Letter, but that of Regeneracy is in the newness of the Spirit. The oldness of the Letter, is not simply the Law of Moses in it self, as delivered to them of old (as some interpret it out of Mat. 5. 23.) But it is that Knowledge and Light of the Law, and a frame of Heart accompanying it in the old man, or in a man's unregenerate estate, which is called the state of old things (2 Cor. 5. 17.) which passeth away. And the newness of the Spirit is the light of the same Law, for the substance of it, and that frame of Heart accompanying it, as it is in the new man which is created in good works.

2. You may observe, the Spirit, or spiritual part of the Law, hath a more transcendent Goodness than the bare Letter of it; if you will suppose the one severed from the other, as in an unregenerate mans Light they are actually severed. This will appear from (Rom. 7. 12.) The Law is holy, and the Commandment holy, just and good. Here you have a goodness of Holiness; The Law is holy and good, that is, good with that kind of Goodness. Now, what is it in the Law that renders it good with this goodness of Holiness? It is the Spiritualness, the Spirit of it. Therefore (v. 14.) by way of Application, this other Epithite is added, The Law is spiritual, but I am carnal, sold under sin, Thus, in his regenerate estate he discerned and discovered the difference of things. He in these words comparing that spiritual Light (which he now when a Christian had) with his own old frame of Heart, and the remainder thereof in him in part. And all the excellency, or the best goodness thereof, he now brings to the spiritual knowledge, and Light of the Law, which as a Christian he now had obtained; which therefore by way of Emphasis and difference, he thus utters, We know the Law; that is, by the Light which is spiritual. We now have found that former estate and frame of Heart to be, and to have been but Flesh. And then he says in (v. 18.) I know (still he speaks in the stile of that his new spiritual Light he now had attained of the Law) that in my Flesh dwells no good thing; whatever I have judged aforetime of what was in my Flesh, in the state of Unregeneracy. And whereas it might be said unto Paul, Yea, but was not, and is not now the natural Light of the Law in your Conscience, and the impressions you have had from the Law then, were they not good things, and are not the remainders of them such still? Oh but (says Paul) They all fell short of the goodness of Holiness that ought to be in them, viz. of that goodness which the Spirit of the Law requires, The Law is Holy, Spiritual, and Good. But no such good thing was to be found in my Flesh. And the reason of this is, because that even the letter of the Law it self, as given by God (if you would suppose it severed from that wherein the Spirit of the Law, or wherein the holiness of it consists, and is as the Soul thereof) commandeth many outward Duties, as to pray, fast; yet if the spiritual part were taken out, and concealed, which is to perform them in a spiritual manner with holy affections of love to God, joy in God, and with holy Aims, and Ends for God and his Glory, so as to sanctifie him in the Heart: In this case, even these very Commandments alone, as so considered, could not be said to be good, with a goodness of Holiness: Nay, so considered, they are but the Carcass of the Law. And as the Body without the Soul is dead, so would these Commandments or Duties, performed thus only according to the Letter, be but the

the Dead, Letter of the Law, for the Spirit that should inspire them with that which is their proper Life, would be still wanting. So that as we may say of the Body when Dead, that it is good indeed with the Goodness that is common to other Creatures, but not with that Goodness which is proper to a Man, much less, that is proper to an Holy Man, (the proper and primary Subject of which is the Soul of a Man, which is now gone, and departed) so is it here. And in Analogie to this Notion, the Works or Actions of Men, when they are Conformed but to that outward part of the Law, and the Duties thereof, are termed in Scripture, but the Carkass of Duties, (1 Tim. 4.8.) Bodily Exercise profiteth nothing, (so here he Compareth the outward performance) but the inward part, the Spiritual part, in the words afore, he termeth Godliness, in Opposition or Distinction from the other Godliness, and as that which is the Soul, the Life, and Form of Holy Duties, and constitutes them such. Yea, and in the like Allusion he termeth such performances Dead Works, which Men use to perform from that old Legal Conscience; and for the taking away the Guilt of which, and withal to inspire their Consciences, with a New Principle to serve the Living God, a Man needs the Blood of Christ, (Heb. 9. 14.) The Blood of Christ shall purge your Conscience from Dead Works to serve the Living God.

You see what Account the outward part of the Law hath (severed from the Spirit of it) in this supposition made. Now it is certain de facto, that that Light which is in the Consciences of Men in their Natural Condition, tho' never so much raised, doth fall short of, or is severed from the Spirit, or Spiritual Genuine Tincture, or Shrine of the Law (by the Rule of this Proposition) and so is not indeed the true proper real Light of the Law: And so can no more be called the Law written in the Heart, then as I said, Bodily Exercise, or a Carcass, can properly be termed a Man, or a Picture the Man himself, of whom it is the Picture. This is Evident from what Paul acknowledgeth of himself, whilst he was a Legal Illuminate, or a Pharisee in that same Chapter (Rom. 7.) Is it not strange you should hear Paul say of himself that whilst he was a Pharisee he was without the Law? But so he expressly speaks (Rom. 7.9.) I was alive without the Law once. He speaks of his former Estate under the Light of the oldness of the Letter, of which he had spoken, (v.6.) What! Is Paul without the Law? Why his Skill and Knowledge therein, was his greatest Excellency, and if he were versed in any thing, he was in the Law. Yea, but saies Paul, it was not the Law, 'twas but the Carcass of it, which lay Buried in my Understanding; And when the Commandment came (saies he) the Commandment, that is, that which is only and properly the Commandment, and which is the Spirit of it, when it came, Sin reviv'd and I Died. It is a like Phrase of Speech, as when 'tis said of a Dead Carcass raised from the Dead (1 King. 17. 22.) That the Soul of the Child came in, or that the Spirit of Life entered in, (Rev. 11. 11.) so here a New Spiritual Light of the Law came in, and conform'd that former Light his Conscience had in the oldness of the Letter, and this he calls the Commandment, and then he saw the difference to be such as here upon he saies now, and not afore, the Commandment came, and now, and not before, (saies he) I know the Law is Spiritual, but I am Carnal, and there dwells no good in my Flesh, as in the following Verses he cries out.

3. The Light of the Law in an Unregenerate Man's Conscience is but literal, the shadow, the Carcass of the true Knowledge of the Law. This I toucht on in the Former Assertions; but further, my Text here speaks Correspondently to this. He doth not say here of the Gentiles, that the Law is Written in their Hearts, but only the $\tau\acute{o} \epsilon\rho\gamma\omega\nu \tau\acute{o} \nu\omicron\upsilon\mu\alpha$, the work, or rather the effect of the Law; but it is not affirmed that the Law is Written there, it is but the Carcass of the Law, and Conscience; whilst according to that Light it urgeth the Duty to be done, and yet by Motives short of the Spiritual End it bringeth forth but a Dead Work, a Dead Child, something only of the Law, as the Text hath it. As it self, and the best Light thereof, is but Dead a Letter, ter of the Law, so the Work or Birth thereof exceeds not the Life or Kind of the Principle or Work it came forth of, which the Apostle, if not under this Similitude, yet in the thing it self, holds forth in that forementioned (Heb. 9. 14.) He shall Purge your Consciences from Dead Works, to serve the Living God. Where 1. He conjoins these Two, Conscience, and Dead Works; Conscience is the Cause or Principle, Works are the Effect; for Conscience is the cause of all Actions or Works that pretend to any goodness in us. 2. He speaks of what our Consciences are by Nature, and in our Natural Condition, and of it self, and so it would ever be the Producer of Dead Works, which the Living God would not accept, as not suited, or proportioned to him, as he is the Living God. 3. Our Consciences therefore need the Blood of Christ to Purge them, as well from that Defilment that is in them, (which causeth them still Naturally to Miscarry, and to bring forth none but Dead Works) as well as to purge away the guilt of Sins, whereof it is the proper, and only Receptacle. 4. That the Blood of Christ is thus applied, that Conscience being Purged and Renewed may be enabled for Time to come to bring forth Living Works, or Fruit to the Living God, as formerly; for so far as it remains Unregenerate, it brings forth none but Dead Works: Conscience, whether good or bad, being in all states one Eminent Principle of either.

Now to draw up what has been said, and so to join what is yet to follow, to what hath gone before: As the outward Precepts of the Law it self, if in Supposition severed from the Spirit of the Law, are not properly the Law, but only the Carcass and shadow of it, and so have not the proper Genuine goodness of the Law in them: So Answerably the Light of Natural Conscience in Natural Men, which directs only unto this Carcass of Bodily Exercise, and wants that which is the Life and Spirit of the Law, is but the Shadow thereof: And therefore such are the Works thence issuing, they are all but Dead Works, and Works of the Flesh, performed in the oldness of the Letter.

Now to draw forth this Thread of Analogie yet further as the Scripture gives us the Clue and Line, you may find (Rom. 2. 20.) That this Light of Conscience and Knowledge in the Law, which the highest in the Form of that Padagogic, or School of the Jews attains to (that were Unregenerate) was but μορφοσις τῆς γνώσεως, a form of Knowledge, and of the Truth in the Law. I termed it even now the Picture or shadow of the Law, and this Expression here Answers for it, it being spoken as in opposition to the Truth and real spiritual Knowledge of the Law, as the very Letter of the Words imports μορφοσιν τῆς ἀληθείας ἐν τῷ νόμῳ, the form or appearance of that which is the Truth, Reality, or Spirit of the Law. There are Three things to be Considered. 1. The Truth of the Law. 2. The knowledge of that Truth. 3. That the Light a Carnal Jew had, was but the Form, or μορφοσιν of the Knowledge of the Truth, which is in that Law. Some have understood this Word, Form of the Knowledge, to signifie no more, than that the System, or Method of Knowledge which the learned Jews had in the Law drawn into a Form, such as Scholars have in other Arts and Sciences. And that which seemed to afford strength to this Notion as the sole support of it, is, that (2 Tim. 1. 13.) The Sum or Substance of that Doctrine Paul had delivered to Timothy, as a Teacher of others, is call'd a Form of wholesome words. And Paul here speaks of those that were Teachers of the Jews, that Boasted in that Knowledge. But let it be considered,

1. That the Word here is not the same with that used there. It is μορφοσιν here; it is ὑποτύπωσις there, which latter is an Artificial Draught, or Sampler, either serving for Doctrine or Practice, whereby to Teach others, or a Man's self to work by. It is not Drawn from Painters Pictures only, but from Patterns or Examples, and things lively Acted. And so Interpreters make it to be the Subject of Vehement Exhortation in Paul to Timothy to be both a real Pattern in Life, as well as a Teacher in Doctrine, according as he had presented an Example or Platform of both unto him.

But 2. Moreover, then (Rom. 2.) the word is μῆρασις, the Vizor, the Mask, the Appearance, the outward Form, of what is the truth, reality or substance; and so holds affinity with that Phrase 2 Tim. 3. 5.) Having a Form of Godliness, ('tis the same word) denying the power thereof, and so it is opposed to the reality, power, or substance of Godliness, whereof this is the shadow, the Appearance.

3. Now parallel these two places, and you will find that as the words, so the scope is the same. His scope here is to unmask the best of the unregenerate Jews, in respect of what they most prided themselves in, viz. the Knowledge and Light their Consciences had of the Law: And he accordingly fetts himself to speak by way of diminution or derogation, that the best of their Knowledge, tho' such as had the system of the whole Law in it, was but the shadow, the outward Form, in respect of what was true Knowledge, and the real truth of the Law, the spiritualness and holiness that was in it: Even as in Timothy he terms the outward profession of Godliness in the lives of Hypocrites, or the impressions of it on their Wills, but a form of Godliness severed from, and in opposition to the powers thereof. Truth and Form are opposed in the one, Power and Form in the other. Now if the Light and Knowledge in the Understandings and Consciences of the best of the Jews, was but in this sense a Form of Knowledge, and the meer outward Picture or Shadow of the Truth in the Law, and so utterly differing from the Spirituality of that Law; then the dim Light in the Gentiles (whom in the 13th and 14th verses he spake of) is so much more. And then this is the result of all, That the Light both of the one and other, and so of all men unregenerate, doth fall short of that real Goodness or Holiness that is in the Law, because it is but the shadow of the truth of it.

I proceed now to the fourth Proposition or Query, namely, What further Goodness this Light of the Law and Word hath in natural men, more than is common to other Creatures.

1. It would seem to have more, because it is the Picture of the Law, which in every part thereof hath a transcendent Goodness above what is in other Creatures.

2. So as give the Goodness it hath what title or term you please, essentially short of Holiness, and that Goodness that is in the Law, as it is spiritual and good, there will be found a moral goodness in it, which according to the rate or exchange of Philosophy is above that, which is meerly natural, or the common goodness of other Creatures. Such we grant it to be; but add withal, That still men do but afford thereby an evidence, to condemn themselves the more deeply for having abused it, and for having been unholy under it.

3. It is no dissonancy to Truth, to say that there is, if not a middle kind of Goodness, yet an Excellency above that which is natural or common to all Creatures, and this other of Holiness. As for example, there is an Image of God in man, in the substance and natural Faculties of the Soul, that it is a Spirit, and hath his Understanding, Will, and Sovereignty over the Creatures. There is a Likeness to God, which is not found in other Creatures; which (as may be inferr'd from Gen. 9. 6.) continues in a man now fallen, and for which God there puts that valuation upon the life of a man above that of a Beast, or any other Creature, and in comparison of which, the goodness that is in man's Nature substantially (tho' now fallen) hath the peculiar honour to be called the Image of God; whereas other Creatures are but Vestigia, the Foot-Prints, and no way the Image. There is a transcendent Goodness, which yet still is short and void of the Image of God, which consists fits in true Holiness which man hath utterly lost, tho' he was at first created in it, Col. 3. 3. compared with Eph. 4. 24. Now so it is with these impresses of the Law on Conscience.

Yea 4. I shall acknowledge further, That these Beams of Light are a more excellent Image of God than that natural or substantial Image spoken of, and that because they are the Shadows, and Impresses of his Law and divine Will, and so are more worth than all the Substance or Faculties of man's Soul considered apart from them: Yet still I may say comparatively of them, as Paul speaks of the old literal Covenant. (Heb. 10. 1.) They are but the shadow, and not the very Image of the reality of the things of the Law.

And the light of that Similitude which was struck out of Scripture, will help to clear this farther goodness that is in it, above that which is natural; and yet relieve no man in his thoughts that it is Holiness, or any degree of it. You have heard that it is the Form, or outward Picture of the truth of the Law. Now as in a Picture there may be considered a double truth and goodness, the one natural, in the Colours laid, which are the materials of it, especially when they are true and good Colours of their kind; the other truth in the Picture is artificial, as it is a true Picture of that which it represents, which is by so much the more esteemed true, and good, by how much it is more like unto him, for whom it is the Picture: So this form of Knowledge, and of the truth in the Law, hath a natural Goodness in it, which is in all Creatures; It hath also a further Goodness; it resembles the Law, and shadows forth the things thereof, which yet is short, far short of that Truth and Goodness of Holiness, or of the Spirit that is in the Law it self; or of that pure Light thereof which is in the Conscience of a Man Regenerate. And it ordinarily falls out, That as Pictures represent but the outwards, so this shadow of the Law in natural Conscience, represents only the outwards of the Law, the things to be done, the Letter of the Law, (as the Apostle Rom. 2. 27. speaks) but there is a Life, a Spirit, a Soul in the Law written in the Heart of a regenerate man, which this reacheth not, till God shall breathe it in, as he did a Soul into Adam's Body, which was formed first. The holy Word and Law consists of Letter and Spirit (as was said) which Letter severed from the Spirit is not holy with that Holiness which is proper to the Law, for Quicquid dicitur de toto, non dicitur de qualibet parte, What is said of the whole Law, take the spiritual part and literal part together, is not said of that one part the Letter only. Or suppose (as you will object) that in some Men Light of Conscience imitates to represent the inwards, and so instruct, and direct to the right end: Yet still as the inwards of a Man have in Anatomy their Pictures cut and drawn, as well as the outwards of a Man; so there is a literal Knowledge even of the real spiritual Knowledge, which is seen in the Effects, that it sanctifies not the Heart, nor the Conscience in which it is. Some mens Knowledge is more to the life (the Holy Ghost hath a curious Pencil) and yet but μὲρῶς τῆς γνώσεως, the form of Knowledge still, and wanting the Light of Life, as Christ calls it, John 8. 12. These goodneses I for my part shall ever acknowledge to be in the Light of Conscience, and moral Vertues, and I have the more amply insisted on it, that Protestant Doctrine may not be accounted so absurd, as to affirm that all in men unregenerate is esteemed by them so wholly sinful, as even the Light of Conscience, moral Vertues and spiritual Gifts are in themselves sinfully corrupt, but only in the subject they do become such, and in respect of the Hearts management of them.

CHAP. VI.

What is necessary to make Conscience a Good and Holy Conscience, which the Scripture describes to be only in Persons Regenerate.

THE Inquiry next will be what goodness it is in the Light of Conscience, that riseth up to the goodness of Holiness; or which is all one, When it is that a Man's Conscience in the Ballance and proper Language of the Scripture is termed, a good Conscience. To make way for the Resolution of this, and clear my way for it, I must premise Two things.

1. That a Regenerate Man is said to have a good Conscience in Two Respects. 1. In respect of this Justification of his Person, and sprinkling the Blood of Christ on his Conscience to clear him from the Guilt of his Sins: And a Man is said oppositely to have an Evil Conscience (thus, Heb. 10. 22. The sprinkling from an Evil Conscience is Termed) when his Sins are not Pardoned, but himself remains in an Unjustified Estate with the Guilt of all his Sins abiding on him, and in his Conscience, the Register of all. Look as a Bill is call'd a foul Bill when it contains many heavy Articles of sad Crimes, and Accusations; so is Conscience named too. It is also call'd a Good or Evil Conscience, as the state of the Man is good or bad: For it is the Representer of that State unto him, even as the Urine is said to be good, when it shews an Healthy and good state and habit of the Body, or to be a bad Water, when it Represents a bad Kylosis, or Distemper: For Conscience is the Sink of all Sins, as the Urine is the Drein of all humours. Now this kind of Goodness, or Evilness of Conscience belongs not unto this Subject, this is but a Relative Goodness, or Badness of it.

But 2dly. The Goodness we seek after is that of Holiness, or in Respect of Sanctification. It is this Inherent Goodness of it, I seek to define.

I premise Two things.

1. You know that God himself alone is the Fountain of Goodness, and the Measure and Standard of it.

2. In Discourfing of the Inherent Goodness of the Conscience, I am not to shew at large wherein the Holiness of all Light that is in a Believers Heart doth consist, but I shall Punctually to my Subject, confine my self to this Consideration, in what the Holiness of the Light of the Law in a Regenerate Man's Conscience, and as 'tis properly seated in that Faculty, doth Consist.

You know God himself alone is the Fountain of Goodness, and the Measure and Standard of it, (1 Kings 14. 13.) It is spoken of a Child of Jeroboam to exprefs the Truth of that Grace that was in him, that in him only was found some good thing towards the Lord God of Israel. That alone is goodness which respecteth, and is pointed unto, Him who is only Good, (Mat. 19. 17.) And so the Goodness in each Faculty consists in what sets up God in it according to it's kind. Now then by the help of this General Rule, let us proceed to the Discovery of this Goodness in Conscience.

1. That Light in Conscience which sets up the Knowledge of God, as God, is the Light of Life, This is certain, and it's common to the Light in the Con-

Book 5 science of all Men, good or bad, that it hath a Knowledge of, and an Eying God, and of a Divinity, for from thence ariseth the Power, the Obliging, or Terrifying Power that Conscience hath in any Man. The Gentiles so far as they had any Conscience, so far did a Glimmering of God rise up in their Hearts. There is an holding the Truth in Unrighteousness which is spoken of (Rom. 1. 18.) whereby is signified their Sinning against Light; and the next verse tells us that the Truth so Sinned against, was the τὸ γνωστὸν τῶ θεοῦ, something of God known, or manifest in them: And yet it is said of all these Gentiles, that they were without God in the World. (Eph. 2.) Even as of Paul you heard it said, that he was without the Law. Wherein then did this Light of theirs fall short? The Apostle hath let fall that Reduplication (I even now mentioned, (Rom. 1. 21.) on purpose to discover their deficiency, when they Glorified him not as God. Their knowledg reacht not unto that, but (as he says Rom. 3. 23.) fell short of the Glory of God. He speaks it on purpose to give a Distinction in the very Case in hand. That Knowledge they had in their Consciences, did not set God up, as God in their Knowledge, and so Glorified him not therein. It gave not that real Knowledge of him that was worthy of him, Answerable or Genuine to him, and to what he is in himself, and so Glorified him not.

Two things I urge with much Vehemency.

1. That all Unregenerate Men's Practical Light that works on them, falls short of the Knowledg of God, as God. Carry it through the whole lump of them, their Light, their Vertues; their Graces, Zeal of, and for God, still fall short in this, that, tho' some of these may be Terminated upon God, as an object of them, yet they rise not to Glorifie him as God. You may Love, and Respect God, as you do your Dead Benefactors; but if it be not as God, that is, suitable to, worthy of, and as so great a God is to be Loved with all (I speak for the kind of it) it's not that which he Regards; and thus it is also in the Knowledge of God: Yea the cause of the Defect why they fall short in Sanctifying God in their Wills, and Affections, is because they fall short, Proportionably in their Knowledge of Him, which therefore directs them not to that Spiritualness of Love, Joy, Fear of God, that is suitable to his Nature, for all these are Conformed to the Apprehensions we have of Him. The Fundamental Defect, lies here, all Men have low Thoughts of God, not only for the Degree (so no Creature can know Him as He is) but for the Kind, and this causeth the other Defects in Mens Obedience. There were Zealous Men for Sacrifices, and the Worship of the Law, (whom you Read of among the Jews, Psal. 50. God spends that whole Psalm upon them) that Professed they knew him sufficiently, and yet served him but Formally, and Outwardly, and Untowardly. God Discovers the bottom Defect, v. 21. Thou thoughtest I was altogether such an One as thy self, and so thou didst imagine that thou mightst put him off with outward Obedience and Respects. Men that Live under the Light and Revelation of the Word, yet have but Childish thoughts of God. All the Word can say, Represents Him not as in Himself Genuinely (es they take the Light thereof in) and so Men come to think they can easily Please, and Serve him. The Apostle John throughout his Epistle, Resolves all the Defects of loose Profession and Backsliders into this, They know him not. He is Peremptory in it, and Paul in like Manner, useth the same Reduplication, about Knowing Christ, which he had used about knowing God, (Rom. 1.) Knowing and Glorifying God as God (Eph. 4. 20, 21.) If so be you have Learned the Truth as it is in Jesus: Not the Truth Literally only, but of Christ, as Christ is in himself, which all Unregenerate Mens Thoughts fall short of. Now then bring it to the Point in hand, if Natural Conscience, whether by Natural Light, or from Revelation still falls short of knowing God as God, then all the Obedience, and all the Effects of it, though very Powerful and Great (because back'd, urged with, and in the Name and Authority of a Deity, threatning Wrath) yet rising not up to this Knowledg of God as God, or of God,

God, (Heb. 9. 14.) as the Living God, and as the Truth is in God, make not a God of him in the Heart, like himself in the Heavens, but must needs all fall short of Holiness, the Spirit of which is to exalt God as God. You may observe it of the Jews, that their Consciences were greatly awakned by Reiterated Sermons of Joshua's which were very pungent (Josh. 23, & 24 Chapters,) And all the People, the Multitude Answered (Chap. 24. 16.) God forbid we should be such Wretches as not to serve the Lord, or to forsake him. (v. 18.) We will serve the Lord for he is our God (say they) but says Joshua to the Unregenerate Rabble of them, (v. 24.) You speak you know not what. You know not what a God you have to do withal, and therefore you utter this, and speak thus slightly of serving him. Ye cannot serve the Lord for he is an Holy God (says he) He is Holy, and his Service must be answerably Holy as he is, and his Holiness is to exalt himself as God, but you (poor Souls) take him not in as God. Men think of him, though as of a Supreme Power above them, yet of one like themselves, their Prince, or Lord, and so think they may please him, and serve him, as they do such an one. You are mistaken, (says Joshua) He is an Holy God. Men run away with their Natural Notion of him, or with what is improved by the Letter of the Word, and so their Conscience runs away with an underObedience below what is suitable to his Nature and due to him as God, and Conscience works in the strength of that Light, it hath of God Himself, and no further. So as if it falls short, all falls short.

2. The Second thing I urge is, that when God means savingly to Convert a Man, he doth not only, or primarily, actuate, and awaken, and Snuff the Candle of the Lord, which he hath set up in the Heart, nor doth he only add more Oyl to make that Light burn brighter. All the Notions of God that can be had out of the Letter of the Word, added as Oyl to that old Light, will never cause him to know God, as God, and in himself, though these may Wonderfully enlarge it in its kind. All the Candles or Tapers in the World, will not help you to see the Sun, but where God means to save, he shines in with anew Light of Faith superiour to that which Conscience had before. God himself riseth a new upon the Heart with the Light of himself, and as the Sun riseth with its own Light, and is seen only by its own Beams; so in Gods Light you see Light. And therefore Faith is still joyned (in Paul's Epistle to Timothy) with a good Conscience; for it is the Light which Faith brings in, that Enlightneth Conscience with a New knowledg of God, which is Holy and Spiritual, as that which immediately cometh from, and so leadeth up to himself. It is New and Genuine Light and Knowledg, not from God only, but of God by Faith. I speak not now of Faith, as Justifying only, which is only Terminated on Christ, and Gods free Grace, as Justifying; but I mean Spiritual Faith, which Paul (Heb. 11.) treats of. Conscience then receiving by the means of Faith, this true Knowledge of God, as God, (for Conscience is not the First Suscipient of this Light, but Faith; as Paul in Heb. 11. Instructs us) and participating thus thereof, this Light as soon as it comes into Conscience, instantly puts and brings that Spirit we speak of with it, and adds it to that Literal Knowledge which Conscience had of the Law in the outwards of it, and is as a Soul Breathed anew into a Body or Dead Carcass. It Instructs the Heart what kind of inward Worship, what Spiritual Affections and Motions suitable to this God, must fill and inspire every outward Duty, and it is content with no other but such in the Service of God, for he knows now that none else will please that God whom he now clearly Understands. It instructs the Heart, (without more ado) what Love to, what Zeal for God, what Mourning, what Sorrow for Sin, what Joy in, and Fear to such a God is due, If he be exalted as God in the Heart, and Holy Affections be stirred up by Holy Ends and Motives, Living Affections for a Living God; Spiritual Affections, for God that is a Spirit, and will in Spirit be Worshipped. He sees now it is not all the Sacrifices in the World (as he in the 50 Psalme thought) will please him.

Book VI But he cries out (as the holy Convert David Psal. 51.) If Sacrifice would please thee, I would offer it, but thou requirest truth in the inward parts: Thou requirest a clean, upright, and renewed Heart, for thou art a God of Truth and Holiness, and wilt be served in truth. And this is the true meaning of that passage also, (which you have Hos. 6. 6. and which our Saviour so pointed to, for the legal Pharisees to learn) That God delights in the Knowledge of God more than Sacrifices. Why are these thus opposed, but because those Persons who have not the true Knowledge of God (which they wanted) think to put God off with Sacrifices, and legal performances; And what satisfies, their Consciences they think must needs satisfy God. But if once this genuine Knowledge of God as God enters into their Souls, it will call for the Inwards of the Soul to be offered up as a Burnt-Offering, and is not satisfied without it. This transforming of their Minds will teach them to know that good and acceptable Will of God, and to offer up themselves an holy, living, spiritual Sacrifice unto God, as the Apostle speaks, (Rom. 12. 1, 2.)

And that such a new Knowledge of God himself is the Foundation of writing the Law in the inward parts, (of which Jer. 31. 3, 33. speaks) and of which Knowledge the Light of Conscience falling short, is not able to do, is evident by that very Scripture, v. 34. They shall all know me from the least unto the greatest. And so you have both Texts of Paul and Jeremy brought into a Comparison. Look as the defect in natural Conscience in Jew and Gentile (spoken of Rom. 2.) is by Paul attributed to their not knowing, and not glorifying God as God (Rom. 1.) tho' they did many things of the Law, and were a Law to themselves: So on the contrary, the Ground-Work, and Foundation, the first thing taught, the first Lesson written, when the Law comes to be written in the Heart, is to know God; They shall all know me, from the least to the greatest. And this being first written in Capital Letters in the Soul, then the whole Law, not in the outward duties only, but that which is the Spirit, and the Soul of all, is written there.

As when the Sun riseth, a man looks on the World, and all things in it in a new hue, and sees all those things every where round about him, and on the face of the Earth, which he saw not till now: So is it in this case, what is it humbleth a Man for Sin, and convicteth him of it, but this new Light of God shining upon, and actuating the knowledge of the Law? It now sees Sin as a Spiritual evil in it self, contrary to this God; yea, he now sees that Contrariety which hath been in all, and every motion of the Heart unto God as holy, and falls down and cries out, I was before without the Law. So also he is hereby, convinced of Judgment, that true Holiness God as God requires in the spiritualness of it, and he sees the Beauty that is in Grace. Yea, by knowing God anew and aright, he looks with a spiritual eye upon whatever relateth unto God any way.

So then it is not the natural Light of Conscience, nor that improved by the Word, which converts any man to God (altho' this is the best spring of most men's practick part of Religion) but it is Faith bringing in a new Light into Conscience, and so Conscience lighting its Taper at that Sun which humbleth for sin in another manner, and drives men to Christ, sanctifieth, changeth, and writes the Law in the Heart. And this you will find to be the state of difference between Augustine and the Pelagians, Semi-Pelagians, which the whole stream, and Current of his Writings against them hold forth. They would have had the Light of natural Conscience, and the Seeds of Vertues in men (as in Philosophers &c.) being improved and manured by the revelation of the Word to be that Grace which the Scripture speaks of. He proclaims all their Vertues, and their use of natural Light (as in them) to be Sins, because deficient of Holiness, and requires not only the revelation of the Objects of Faith, which else natural Light could not find out, but a new Light to see them withal.

2. The second thing upon which I state the Holiness of the light of Conscience, which is proper to that Faculty, and which is the office of it, is, that in directing the Heart unto what is its dutie, or in urging the matter of of Obedience, it insists on God's Interest and Glory as the principal Motive, and doth both frame and press such Motives as are drawn from thence. I take it for granted that true Holiness, in any, or in all Faculties, lyes in setting up God as our chiefest End. All the Faculties in their Motions, like the Stars in their Courses, Fight for this Interest; yet each according unto its kind, in a way proper to it, which must be set out, and the measure of it taken from, what is by Natures Appointment proper to each Faculty; for Grace is engrafted on, and works according to the Nature, and kind of each Faculty. As in a Man's Body every part hath it's proper Office (as the Apostle 1 Cor. 12. speaks) so it is in the Faculties of the Soul.

1. Holiness engrafted on the Understanding, works it towards God, and for God, according to what is its peculiar proper Office, as to know God as God, and to admire him as God, &c.

2. Holiness in the Will and Affections, influenceth them to love God and cleave to him.

Then 3. Answerably the Conscience must Act for him according unto it's kind; and that which is proper to it, is to be the Mover to Obedience chiefly for God and his Glory: When the whole Soul therefore by Regeneration once hath received and admitted God as it's supream End, Lord, and Natural King, then the Office of Conscience as his Attorney General, or Lord Chancellor, is to frame such Pleas, and Motives on his Behalf, as shall sway the Heart, and Vigorously to press them. That this is the proper Office of Conscience, both Reason and Scripture shew.

I. Reason shews it, for Conscience is one part of Practical Reason; now the Office assigned unto Practical Reason (which guides us in our Actions in General of any kind) is to incite the Heart to Action by Motives drawn from what is a Mans End. As the Speculative Understanding Reasons from Truths, to Prove or Clear one Truth from another, so the Practical Understanding Guides us in our Actions, and fetcheth Arguments to move us: Yet as this is but the Office of Practick Reason in the General, so Conscience being the top Branch of Practick Reason hath this more eminent Office assigned to it, viz. To urge such Motives upon us in our Actions, as are drawn from Moral Goodness, or Ends. Conscience being the proper Judge of all Moral Good or Evil, and so the seat of Moral Ends, this is likewise the Kind or Office of Conscience in General. If then it be Enquired what should be the Holiness proper to it according to this kind, the Resolution is easie by the former Principles.

1. The Former Law of Holiness comes upon it, Namely, to set up God as a Man's End in it's Kind, and according to it's Kind.

2. The next Work is to draw Motives for all our Actings, from Gods Interest as our chiefest End, and to press them on the Heart naturally and fully; for no Mans Reason Deliberates about what concerns his chiefest End.

II. The Scripture Evidenceth the same, (Rom. 13. 5.) when the Apostle exhorts Christians to Obey, he useth this Phrase, for Conscience sake. He speaks there of a Regenerate Mans Conscience, and of what should move a True Christian. It is for Conscience sake (says he) which is a like and Parallel Phrase, as when the Scriptures says we are Justified by Faith, which is all one as to say, by Christs Righteousness, which is the Object of that Faith; or which Faith alone considers as that whereby a Man is Justified, and so Faith is Metonymically put for its Object: So here, because to Obey God as our chiefest End, is that which Conscience in moving Obedience ought to have in it's Eye, therefore to do a thing for Conscience sake, and for God as a Mans chief End, is all one; which when Conscience hath performed, and swayed the Heart unto it, 'tis termed, The Answer of a good Conscience towards God, (so far as that Speech Relates unto Sanctification (in 1 Pet. 3. 21.) it being God to whom Conscience is to give its account, in which, when it hath been Faithful to him as God, it is a good Conscience, and can give an Answer, a True and Just one, as having discharged it's Trust on its behalf. In like manner to be a Servant of Righteousness, and a Servant to God, is in the Apostles Language all one (Rom. 8. 18, 22. compared) for take God out of a Mans End, and it is not Righteousness. Thus here to Obey God, and to Obey Conscience, and to Obey for Conscience sake, and for Gods sake, as our utmost End, are equivalent. Now in a Man that Remains Unregenerate, this Essential property of Holiness (as it is to be in the Conscience) hath not as yet taken place in his Conscience, nor hath it become the Natural supream Law thereof. And the Reason is clear.

For 1. Until God himself hath been by a Work of Regeneration on the whole Heart, set up in the Heart as a Mans Supream End, and generally owned and Proclaimed such in the Heart, Conscience (whose Office is to Argue from what really is a Man's End) cannot Heartily and Naturally draw Motives from it; for it would Argue then from what is not, and so not have a Foundation for it's Reasonings, such as to perswade the Heart, and as should have power and force in them to prevail. And further it is so, because that until Regeneration comes, and makes this great alteration of a Man's End, it is certain that Self-Love remaineth a Man's Supream End, and the Swaying Principle in all. Self is the Soul, the Spirit of Unregeneracy, that runs through, inspires, and Leavens all the Faculties. If therefore Self be predominant in other Faculties, then also in this. If Self-Love sways in the Will, then Self Respects, and Motives must also be in the Conscience; and every thing moves according to that which is in it self, to its own Center.

Now it is certain that Conscience in Men Unregenerate remains Unsanctified, for these Two Reasons.

1. That else a Man Unregenerate might be said in respect of that one Faculty to be a Man Regenerate, when as there is not any one thing Born of the Flesh, but is Flesh.

And 2. Because else in a Regenerate Man that one Faculty needed no Renewing; seeing, according to this Supposition, it had the same Light as truly good for the kind of it, afore Regeneration, as after; when as (1 Thes. 5. v. 23.) the Apostle prays, The very God of Peace Sanctifie you wholly, your whole Man, Spirit, Soul and Body, &c. so as all are Sanctified anew, and therefore Conscience also. And the same Apostle says, (Eph. 4. 23.) Be renewed in the Spirit, in the very Spirit, the purest part of the Mind.

There is one Query, or Objection, the Answer to which will further clear the meaning of this Assertion. The Query is this, Doth not Natural Conscience in natural Men, urge obedience for God, yea, and urge respect to God as Motives thereto?

Ans. 1. If Conscience had not some Eye to God, or at least to Moral good, it were not Conscience. Conscience, as such, keeps to this as it's own Sphear; or Circle. To move for Worldly outward Ends or Respects, pertains not unto Conscience, as such, but is from Lusts to such outward things; or at best, (2 Cor. 1. 12.) it is Worldly Fleshly Wisdom, as the Apostle calls it.

Ans. 2. There are many Respects which Natural Conscience hath unto God, as an Object of its Thoughts, whilst it presseth Obedience on us, and under the Consideration of which it urgeth it; yet still if this one Respect (I insist on) be wanting and left out, or not made the main of all other, then those other Motives which Conscience useth, do not rise so high as to constitute the Conscience science holy. For tho' the subject, which in this Case it is conversant about, be God, yet still it remains defective in what is proper to it; and truly constitutive of holiness, as it ought to be in Conscience. For example, when Conscience doth consider and present God to us as a supream Law-giver and Judge, who is able to save or to condemn, as (James 4. 12.) when yet the Heart hath not entertain'd this God as its natural Lord and Liege-King: In this case, tho' obedience be urged indeed, for God, and unto God, yet not for God, as the chiefest Motive. So that, as speaking of the Knowledge of God, I said, men might have large and great literal Knowledge of God; yet if they knew not God as God in himself, they wanted an holy Knowledge of him: So say I in this case, Though Conscience may eye God in many respects, under which he is revealed unto us, as a Judge, or a Sovereign, yet if not under this, as he is set up as our chiefest end, the Conscience is not holy in respect thereof.

3. For the clearing of this I add, That natural Conscience being leavened with self-love, doth naturally and heartily urge only such Motives on the Heart as do concern self, and in such a way as self-interest is rather spoken for, than God's. The meaning is, that when such motives only are urged, and professed, as are but fitted and suited to self, altho' those Considerations be taken from God, yet in this Case not God's Interest, but our own is pleaded for. There are many Considerations may be drawn from God as presented to us in Scripture, which alone considered are fitted but to move self-love in us, which is naturally our chiefest End: As for example, The Consideration had of God as a Law-giver, a Commander, a Judge, able to save and to condemn, doth more properly speak for self, than for God; for they urge but what is in God, in relation unto self. And altho' God, and his Name be materially used and objectively, yet finally, and so formally and really, self-love is more regarded and spoken to in them, than God's Interest.

Obj. But you will yet say to me, May not, and doth not Natural Conscience hold forth to Men Unregenerate, that God ought to be a Mans utmost End, and that it is the Duty of the Heart to be moved with Arguments drawn from thence?

The Answer in General is, That if the meaning be, that such Thoughts, and Considerations do materially come to Mind, that is, that natural Conscience hath such flying thoughts under its Consideration at times, it cannot be denied, for it cannot indeed avoid them. For if God himself be the enlightner of Conscience, as hath been declared, then surely he will, to the end of leaving all men without excuse, cause at times such thoughts to pass thro' men's Hearts, as flashes of Lightning us'd to do thro' natural Darkness: And natural Conscience is not only capable thereof, but cannot resist their being the matter of its thoughts. But now in the acting and management of these and such other Considerations darted in by God, is the goodness or holiness of Conscience it self seen and discovered. The Apostle hath this saying (2 Cor. 1. 21.) speaking of the Heathen, That by the wisdom of God, the World knew not God. Which implies two things, 1. That there were suggested to their thoughts, by God's Spirit, many divine Considerations, leading on to, and tending to discover God unto them, which is therefore termed the Wisdom of God, that is, which he suggested to their thoughts, as object matter for their Thoughts to work on. But 2. Their Spirits which took in these notions of God, did make use thereof according to the predominant Principles within it self, and not according to the tendency of the things themselves suggested by God unto them: And so they thro' their own Wisdom or corrupt Principles knew not God, no, not by those Notions that God suggested unto them. Here you see the Wisdom suggested by God, is received and made use of according to the Qualification of the Receivers. Now what the Apostle speaks there of natural Wisdom of the Knowledge of God, I apply unto natural Conscience ence in the thing in hand. 'Tis true, Natural Conscience doth take in such Suggests as these, That God ought to be a Man's utmost end, and that it is the duty of the Heart to set him up as such: But still these are made use of but according to the temper and disposition of Conscience it self, (which is the Receiver of these) which is poysoned with self: So that altho' these Suggests, as to the matter of them, be good, yet the Conscience it self, that is the suscipient of them may be, and is, in the management thereof, deficient of Holiness, yea and the motives or motions themselves which Conscience maketh from hence, are (as they come from it) deficient of that Holiness is proper thereto. So then if the Conscience be holy, it must not only take in the matter of such Considerations, and suggest them to the Heart, but it must urge and enforce them with that vigour and strength which is answerable unto the Vertue, Spirit, and Power that is in them, and worthy of the Motives themselves.

2. Inasmuch as Conscience being prepossessed with Self-love's interest as its chiefest end, it thereby becomes weak, and faint in the pressing and urging of God's Interest as a man's chiefest end, for these two are inconsistent. It gives not the due Accent, putts not the Weight, the Emphasis thereon, it cryes Shiboleth in the pronouncing, and so dishonours spoyles, enervates and withers them in the propounding. Conscience being weak, thro' the Flesh, miscarries with them whilst it conceives them, and hath not strength to bring forth. Some Motives perhaps drawn from God it may, and doth with a powerful Hand shoot up to the Arrow head, so as they pierce the Soul through and through; but these Motives drawn from God as a Man's utmost end, (which in their own Nature, and Ordination are, and should be the great Artillery) Natural Conscience doth faintly and weakly pursue, lets them fall at the Canons Mouth, dischargeth them without Powder; so as they make no impression, or dint on the Heart at all; yea, they never reach it.

2. If it urgeth such Considerations, yet not constantly in the Course of a Man's Life. Alas, they come in but now and then, and but as God is pleased to convince the Soul of its defects, but this Principle is not made natural, and inlaid therein. And if such Considerations do come in, they come unseasonably, post factum, after miscarriages, and at times of God's reckonings and accountings with us (as the Prophet Daniel urged upon Belshazar a prophane Idolatrous Heathen, That that God in whose hands was his Breath and ways, him he had not glorified. (Dan. 5. 24.) so to continue and condemn us. Whereas the right cure and season of such considerations (if the Conscience were made holy) is before we act, or inter agendum, in the time of acting: Otherwise they only come as witnesses against us in obedience. And the reason of this is, because they are not natural to such a Conscience, but come in forcedly.

3. By urging Motives of so high Concernment so faintly, instead of giving demonstration of any true Holiness to be therein, it discovers the greater sinfulness, falseness, and Hypocrisie towards God. For insomuch as it taketh in, and suggesteth the matter of such Considerations, it pretends to be for God, and to discharge its trust committed to it: When yet, like a false-hearted Pleader at the Bar, who is bribed by the adverse party (for such is self-love in a man unto God) it pretends to this and that, but urgeth nothing home, and his Tongue falters whilst he seems to plead for him, whose Cause he hath undertaken. Now this is really, and in truth the greatest dishonour that can be put upon God, As in the like Case, any sovereign Prince would esteem it, if his Agent or Minister that appears for his Interest, should either urge any lower Interests or Properties than those of a King (as such which he stands upon) or urge his proper Interest, as of a King, coldly and faintly.

Doct

Docet negare, dum urget timide. His Name and the greatest Glory due to it is taken in Vain, whilst it is mentioned to no higher, or more Efficacious purpose. Chap. 6.

And Lastly, Such Motives so used deserve not the Name of Motives. They fall from that Denomination, and they are Receptions, or Motions rather made in Conscience, then Motives made by Conscience. As imperfect Wishings and Wouldings in the Will, we Term Velleities, so proportionably are these in the Conscience. Now no Power or Faculty a Man can be said to Act for God as it's utmost End, unless it Acts with a strength some way Suitably. It is an Observable Phrase (Collos. 3. 23.) Whatsoever you do, do it Heartily, or with all your Might, as to the Lord. The Import of which is this, That whatsoever is truly done to God, and for God, He being so Great a GOD, and the Nature of His Service, (as they say of a King) being such, as it falls short, and is Deficient of what deserves the Name of Service, in Respect to Him, or by way of Motive for Him, if it be not Perform'd with Vigour and Strength Answerable; it is therefore not done to the Lord, unless it be Heartily. And this is true of all the Motions Conscience makes for God, they are not for Him, nor Worthy of Him, nor indeed Motives as for God, unless Prosecuted Predominantly for him, above all other Ends.

So then Two Deficiencies, or fallings short of Holiness, have been discovered to be in Natural Conscience.

1. That it falls short in an Effectual direction to, or instruction in, the right manner of Obedience to the Law. It either not knows, or practices not, what are the Inwards of Duties, because it was never Elevated to the Knowledge of God as God in himself, and so is Ignorant how to call for a Worship or Obedience suitable unto him, which consists in Spirit and in Truth.

2. It also falls short in that which is the Eminent Part and Office of it, namely, Faithfulness to God, to try Vigorously on the Heart such Motives as are drawn from God's Interest set up therein as our utmost End. And these Defects lye in the very Light of Conscience, and in Conscience it self, besides what Deficiency is discovered in the Effects themselves, which are Answerable to these Defects in the cause it self.

3. I shall make this additional Remark, to compleat this Head, That this Deficiency in the Light it self, from Conscience to true Holiness, appears and manifests it self in the Effect, namely, that the Light that is in Natural Conscience maketh not the Heart good, it Sanctifieth not, and therefore it self is not good with that Goodness which is proper to that Faculty. As that is a good Tree which maketh the Fruit good, so that is a good Conscience which maketh the Heart good. This is a certain Truth, that the difference between saving Light or Knowledge, and common Light raised up unto a great Blaze, are difficultly distinguished in themselves abstractly considered, compared with themselves, altho' the difference in it self is great, consequently, as by the Fruits they are distinguished manifestly in the Issue and Event. Inasmuch as the difficulty in distinguishing them thus in themselves, hath occasioned a great Divine to say, Non distinguntur nisi Consequenter ad actum Voluntatis. Amesie Medulla, Lib. 1. Cap. 3. Thes. 4. That they are not distinguished unless Consequently to the Act of the Will. Which indeed holds true, in Respect of discerning that Difference, but not in the real Distinction of the Lights themselves; for the difference must needs be in the Light it self as the cause, or else one Faculty in an Unregenerate Man, need not Sanctification and Regeneration. Now that that only is a good Conscience which maketh the Heart good, appears both by Scripture and Reason.

Book VI

1. By Scripture. Paul therefore said he had a good Conscience, because he desired to Live Honestly in all things. Heb. 13. 18. For else had he had never so much Light which had still directed him, and instigated him to good, yet had not wrought in him a desire to live accordingly, he could not have termed his Conscience Good. And therefore also the having a Good Conscience is put for an Holy Conversation, (by the Apostle Peter, 1 Pet. 3. 16.) as the Cause for the Effect, for so it follows, That speaking of you as Evil doers, they may be ashamed that accuse falsely your good Conversation in Christ. Therefore a good Conscience makes the Man good.

2. In Reason it is Evident. For when any thing hath lost that Special Vertue which once it had to effect that which it was ordained for, we say of it that it is not good, which that Familiar Saying of Christ Confirms in the general, Salt is good, but if it hath lost it's Savour (or Vertue of it's Seasoning and Diffusive vertue to season other things) it is good for nothing. Compare Luke 14. 34. with Mat. 5. 13. Yea, if it might be supposed good for some other inferiour purpose then what that Native Vertue once eminently served for, yet we use to say of a thing in such a Case, that it is not good, that is, not answering it's kind. Take any Drugg, which hath a Cordial Vertue, if that Vertue be gone, you use to say it is naught, tho' some Weaker or Lower Effects, it may still retain. Take Wine when it is Soured, or the Spirits of it are gone, you say it is naught, that is, as it is Wine, it still may make good Vinegar, or may serve some other use. A Purging Drugg, when the Purgative strength of it is gone, it is not good, tho' it may have so much left, as to stir the Humours a little, yet if not enough to carry them away, it is not good, because it wants that Vertue it was ordained for, altho' still a Skilful Apothecary knows how to make some use of it. Thus Conscience, tho' it retain some weaker Acts it had in Man in Innocency, and which now are common to a Man Regenerate and Unregenerate; yet the Special Vertue, and Energie of those Acts it then had, and which now in a Regenerate Man it hath in Sanctifying and Purifying, being Lost and Gone, the special proper Goodness of it is gone and lost also. It may Serve to stir the Humours, both the Guilt and Power of Corruption, and it may serve to drive Corruption in, but it's Purging Vertue is gone. And tho' God doth make use of those weak Properties that remain, so as to discover sin, or to witness against the Sinner, yet the Native Use is extinct, and so it is not a good Conscience.

C H A P. VII.

How a Natural Conscience, in it's highest Operations, is Deficient in that which is necessary to make it really Holy.

NOW to give a Demonstration of the Deficiency of Conscience, in its Operations on the Heart in all particulars, might be too large; I shall do it but in some few, which shall be fitted to Two Cases or Conditions of Men Unregenerate, under one of which all such Men's Conditions will fall, and in either of which it will appear that Natural Conscience Sanctifies not the Heart throughout, as Regenerating Grace doth.

The First Case is, That in men Unregenerate there are to be found, besides Light of Conscience, Vertues, and Impressions on their Wills and Affections, clining them to good, which the Heathens call'd Semina Virtutum, Seeds of Vertues, inclining them unto what the light of Conscience doth direct them unto; and in this case will it not be said that it maketh the Heart good, or that a goodness of Heart doth accompany it. Chap 7.

But I. None had an Universal Goodness, no not in that sphere of Moral Good, but were deficient in some Vertues whereunto the Light of their Conscience did direct them. God did never make Light of Conscience and Moral Impressions to Vertue adequate or even in any man; that is, not of like extent; but left it so, as in those who naturally, or otherwise, have had most of moral inclinations in them, yet their Conscience have had strong Convictions to such Duties and Actions unto which their Wills and Affections have had no inclinations stamp't on them to correspond therewith, but the contrary inclinations have been left to their full strength. And this God doth, to give a ground of discovery unto all men of their natural Condition, by letting them see the strength of corrupt Inclinations, and their emptiness of good, by some such particulars. This is exemplified both in Heathens, Jews and Christians. The Heathens had dispersed among the Bulk and multitude of them, all Seeds of Vertues, but so as all were not in each, and every man; but one had Justice, another Abstinence from Pleasures, a Third Continency. God withal, left each of them in their Dispositions naked and void, in respect of some Vertues or other. Thus Socrates was given to the love of Boys, and such vile Affections is the very instance Paul gives of the wisest of their Philosophers (Rom. 1.) That so that fatal doom might with condition be pronounced of all and each, which the Apostle there recordeth, They withheld the truth in unrighteousness. Their corrupt Hearts were too head-strong for their Consciences to rule, in some particular or other.

I confess, I have sometimes wondred at those high passages I before rehearsed, both concerning their crying up Right Reason, and also of their professing to live thereto; as being a seeming Vindication of them from that which the Apostle (Rom. 1.) chargeth them withal, viz. imprisoning the Truth in unrighteousness in some things. But in the end I perceived the Juggle (for it was truly such) for whilst all cried up this Right Reason in the general, as their Rule, and professed to live by it, yet come to the particulars, Therein each Sect or Person would judge this or that to be according to Right Reason (or Nature, as they termed it) as they listed, and as agreed with their Lusts. Diogenes accounted self-pollution, or (as the Apostle terms it) defiling their Bodies ἐξ αὐτοῖς committed alone by themselves, to be lawful, and according to Nature; which the Apostle (Rom. 1. 24.) instanceth in, as one of their Philosophical Practices. Plato (the divinest of them) held communion of Wives: The like might be said of others. Though all men understand what is meant by Iron, what by Silver, as soon as they hear each named, yet (says Plato) when we use the name of just or good; one is carried to one thing as just and good, which another dislikes, and we differ therein amongst our selves. Thus he confesseth. And hence, under this general proclaiming the right Rule, and magnifying Right Reason (as all did) so many Sects arose amongst them, differing in their Judgement of what was just, or unjust, morally good or evil, lawful or unlawful, so as every one did surrender the judgement of his Reason to his Lusts; Yea, and made many abominable Vices, things in their Nature indifferent, Leges Naturæ opiniones suas faciunt: Each made his own Opinion, and what they had a mind to, the Law of Nature and Right Reason. De Repub. lib. 5. And then indeed they might well boast (as they did) they lived according to Right Reason; for wherein their Vertues fell short, or their Lusts over-ruled them, they would flatly argue for that to be lawful, or natural, or indifferent, and so blessed themselves in their own deceivings. And if I mistake not, the Apostle had this very thing in his eye, when he says, They became vain in their reasonings, and their foolish Heart was darkned (Rom. 1. 21.) and professing themselves wise (so each Sect pretend) they became Fools, the vainest that ever were, corrupting themselves in what they knew naturally, and Tertullian.  making making use of corrupt reason in them to defend what Natural Reason condemnned. And so I may make a parallel between the mystery of iniquity among the Heathen, and that in the Popish Religion. The Pope cries up the Scriptures in General, and professeth to give us Religion from thence; but then he taking on him to be the Supream Judge, can, and doth give us out from thence what Religion he pleaseth, and frameth Opinions to his own Lusts and Ambition; and so did the Philosopher whilst they cried up Reason.

2. Both the Light of their Consciences, and also their highest Vertues, when they did most exactly fall on them, did carry them but to the Letter, but not to the Spiritual part of any Vertue. At the best they are said to do but the things contained in the Law, (τὰ τὰ νόμων in the Text) even wherein they were a Law unto themselves. Observe it, they are not said to keep the Law, neither to have the Law Written in their Hearts; whereas of a Believer both these are at once Affirmed, John 14. 21. He that hath my Commandments and keepeth them, is he that Loves me. First, He is said to have the Law truly and genuinely stampt upon his Soul: And 2dly, Out of that Principle is said to keep it; whereas these have but the Duties, the outward works of it Written there, and accordingly do but the things of the Law. Or again, They may be said to have the Effect of it, as Brute Beasts are said to have the Work or Effect of Reason, as Bees in making their Hives, &c. The Works which they do are Opera Intelligentia, as if Reason had done them, but they do them not from a Principle of Reason. And this difference did Augustine long ago urge and insist on, in his Answers to Pelagius and Julianus, and the Massilienses, who urged this Text, that the Light of Conscience and Vertues, and good Works, thence flowing, were such as had a true and real Goodness in them: But he distinguisht how that in the Law Commanding, and in every Action to be done according to the Law, there were, Opus, or (as from the Stoicks he termed it) Officium quod faciendum est, the Duty that is to be done; Et Finis, vel propter quod faciendum, the end for which it is to be done. Which end he still asserts against them, to be not merely the good of any Creature, tho' a Publick good to the whole World, but the chief End of a good Action is Gods Glory, who himself is the chiefest Good, and the chiefest End. The Officia, the Duties, are not the Law, but only τὰ τὰ νόμων, the things of the Law, Officia Legis, as Beza Interprets it: But Love to God is the end of the Law, and the performance of it, (1 Tim. 1. 5.) and so it is the Soul and Spirit of it; and when it is not Written as the Supream Law, and Sovereign Dictate in the Conscience, it may be said the Law is wanting there.

Lib. 4. contra Julian.
Cap. 13.

In Heathens Nature spoke out, and their highest pitch was to Love Vertue for Vertues sake, Judging and Valuing it to be the greatest Ornament of their Rational Souls. They therefore decryed all outward Respects as Unworthy, and too mean to be Motives unto Vertuous Actions; but yet still all their Admiration was raised no further but to Vertue it self, and Vertuous Actions for themselves, as the Supream Excellency. They never raised Vertue to a Tendency or Subordination to God, and to Glorifie God, as God by it; herein they fell short, and therefore short in Holiness. For I may safely Affirm, That if a Christian himself could thus Love true Grace, and prize it as a Supream Excellency, and love Goodness, only as it is an Habit in the Soul, which makes us good, this would not be Holiness. For in so doing, a Man would value it only as a particular good unto his own Soul, which is but a small piece of the Creation of God: And the Mind in so doing would but Glory and Center still in it self, (as well as in valuing Riches or Honours) and not in the Lord, for there is the same Reason in either.

The 2d Case is this, That to the Jews and us Christians, there is by the Revelation of the Law, and Will of God, many Duties of Gods Worship (as Prayers, Meditation, holy Conference, and reading the Word) whereunto there are small, if any, Moral inclinations stampt upon mens Wills, to assist them in them, or facilitate these

these unto them: And therefore Conscience calling upon the Heart for such duties as these, is forced to raise the Tax or Levie of them, by calling in foreign Assistance and Aid. And for a supply of natural strength and inclination unto Duties of this kind, it is reduced to such Motives of the Law as are fitted to stir self-love in the Affections; as fear of Hell &c. And this is also the Case of temporary Believers under the Gospel. Now in this Case, it doth yet more evidently appear, that the Light of Natural Conscience doth not sanctifie the Heart throughout, as Grace in a regenerate man in some measure doth.

1. Natural Conscience puts a necessity upon the performance of a Duty; faith, and urgeth that it ought, and must be done; but it puts no inward freedom and willingness into the Will to the performance of it, as Grace doth. For Grace makes a man willing, as Conscience makes the Duty necessary. It puts an inclination, a Spirit of Liberty and Freedom; a free Spirit, an ingenuous Spirit (as David calls it, Psal. 51. 12.) And therefore Paul opposeth (Gal. 5. 18.) the working of the Spirit of the Law, or of Conscience by the Law, in these words, If you be led by the Spirit, ye are not under the Law; and eo contra. Now, to be led by the Spirit, is to have the Will ready to follow God in every thing, to have the Will easily carried on to a Duty, for leading implies readiness of following, Isaiah 11. 6. A Child shall lead them; that is, a little thing may persuade them.

If it be objected, That Conscience carried on the Will to do Duties, for else they would not be done.

I answer, There is a willingness which is intrinsecal, and direct, and per se, when a man hath a mind and will to a thing for it self, and there is a made willingness, which is per accidens, which is a comparative willingness. There is no man so averse to any thing, but may be thus made willing, that is comparatively, and per Accidens willing. The most covetous man in the World, that loves Money never so much, may be made willing to part with it, and glad to do so, if it concerns his life to do it; or if a great necessity of Bonds, or going to Prison, be laid on him; which is indeed a Constraint, and so Peter terms it (1 Pet. 5. 2.) and opposeth it to willingly. But a godly man hath a ready mind to whatever is good in the Principle of his heart, and often good Duties come off at the first motion; To will is present with me: (Rom. 7. 18.) Or if Flesh lie uppermost, and so there is an aversness in the entrance, yet when God and his Heart have closed in the duty, and grown familiar, he finds his whole Heart to be in it.

Now, the reason of an unregenerate mans unwillingness unto such holy Duties, lies in this, That they are appointed, and the tendency of them is, to bring God and their Hearts together, which indeed is to bring two Enemies together, for such are their Hearts and God. And the reason of a regenerate man's willingness is, that in the duty two Friends meet together, God who hath from Everlasting own'd that Soul, and the Soul, that hath chosen God to be his God.

2. Natural Conscience gives Light and Enforcements from legal Motives to the Duty, but it gives no new inward strength. And the reason is clear, for Natural Conscience carries a man on but upon the strength of the Covenant of Works: Now, the Law is weak (says the Apostle, Rom. 8.) as to any such effect. Urgency of Conscience is but as if a man should come to one that is lame, and his Joints frozen and Stiff, with a Light in one hand, and a Cudgel in the other, and waken him, and jogg him, and tell him, Here is light for you to walk by, and there are blows if you will not: Or it is as if one should ride a tyred Horse; there is a Bridle to direct, and a Spur to put him on, but the Rider giveth no strength for the Horse to travel with. Natural Conscience in its Government is tyrannical; and, like the Task-Masters of Egypt, requires Bricks to be made, and beats men, if not, but gives them no Straw: But Grace adds another Principle to Conscience, and that is Faith and the new Creature. Faith fetcheth life, and quickening, and strength from from Christ, both habitual strength, which is called strength in the inward man, and co-operating strength. I am able (says the Apostle) to do all things thro' Christ that strengthneth me. The Spirit of Adoption not only puts us on to pray, but helpeth our infirmities (Rom. 8. 26.) which is spoken in opposition to the Spirit of Bondage. The Holy Ghost comes and fills the Soul with Arguments and Motions and Inclinations to pray, insomuch as the Soul is like a full Breast till it be drawn, or a pregnant Womb, till it be delivered of what is formed in it: And the Soul rests not till it hath gone alone, and poured forth it self to God. Conscience indeed wakens the old man so, as he makes him bestir himself and his lazy stiff Joints, and so to mend his pace in duties, but still it gives no strength: So as it is extrinsecal enforcement and instigation only, and not inward strength, which Conscience doth afford.

3. Natural Conscience cannot sweeten the Law to a man, and cause him to delight in it, and the duties of it, as a regenerate man is said to do (Rom. 7.) for if it gives not suitable Strength and Will, it cannot give Delight, for Delight follows these, Whilst forced extrinsecal Motives carry us on; and there is a grievance in the Motion; for Fear is an affection which hath grief in it, (1 Job. 4. 18.) and thus, tho' they (Mal. 1. 13.) brought but the lame and lean Sacrifices, yet they grudge at it, and said what weariness is in it? They were weary of doing any thing for God, but love sweetens all to a man: This is the Love of God, that his Commandments are not grievous (1 John 5. 3.) Now it is a certain Rule, that as Natural Conscience works by fear, so Faith works by Love, and Love sweetens the Law to a man. Conscience may bring a sick man meat, but it must be the inward Constitution of a sound Mind that tastes the sweetness of meat.

Lastly, As thus its weakness is seen in Holy Duties, so in regard of Sin also it is not able to Condemn Sin in the Flesh. Of the Law it is spoken (Rom. 8. 4.) that it discovers Sin, but kills it not, it hath Power to kill the Man for Sin, and to Condemn him (2 Cor. 3. 6.) but not to kill Sin in the Man as the Phrase is, (Rom. 8. 4.) as the Law came into the World, that Sin might be imputed, that is known, and discovered, but not Destroyed: So light of Conscience hath no farther Power. Like Flashes of Lightning, it on the suddain discovers, but expells not the darkness, yea, often leaves the Soul the more in the Dark; yea, which is more, it enrageth some Lusts the more, and that whilst it restrains the outward Acts. So Paul who had a strong work of the Law, (thro' Conscience) upon him, saies (Rom. 7.) That the Law wrought all Concupiscence in him. As a Horse that is Reined, grows the more Fierce; as the Winds that go to blow out the Fire, spreads it more; as the Water in Lime, makes it burn within the more; so the Light of Conscience makes Lust inwardly the hotter, and more Violent; therefore those are more eager in Sinning, that have most Knowledge. 'Tis true indeed Violent Terrors of Conscience upon a Man, when the Guilt of Sin in it's turn comes to take the Dominion, and to Reign (which is but an after part of the Dominion of the Law over a Man) will restrain Men from Sinning, but yet the ordinary Light of it, tho' it restrains the Acts, yet increaseth the Lust; and so doth more hurt one way, than good another.

U S E. Let us then mind the main and primary Scope and Extent of Consciences Commission, and God's primary end in putting the Light of it into Men, which is the same with that of the Law; as the power of it, and the Effect of it is the same. Now the Law was sent that Mans Sinfulness might be discovered, and he convinced of it, to see his weakness, and the power of Sin, and his utter averness to good, and proneness to Evil; that so Men despairing of being saved by the Effects of it, or their Conformity to it, might seek help in Christ, and work anew from him, Gal. 3. 15, 16, 17, 18. And if this use be not made of it, then God hath ordained it for another ther use, to convince and Condemn Men by it, at the Latter Day, and leave them without excuse; which use the Apostle speaks of, (Rom. 1.) And God will make use of the Light of Natural Conscience even to Condemn the strictest Heathen.

What a great Mistake is it then, utterly to pervert this Use and Extent both of God and it, and to deem this Light of the Law, and of Conscience, and the work of it, to be Grace it self? Oh! That ever Men should thus abuse the very Witness God hath appointed to convince them, they are not in a State of Grace, and mistaking the intent of his Speech and Verdict in them, should judge it to be Grace, and because it checks them for Evil, and puts them on to good, think by Conforming a little to it, to be saved! Thus the Jews Understood the Law, and the Effects of that in them; and because they had the Law which God gave them, to see themselves out of his Favour, they thought therefore they were in it (Rom. 2.) rested in the Law, and thought if they Conformed to it, because it call'd for Obedience, they should be saved, (Rom. 10.) Whereas if Men would listen to it, it would shew them their Inability to conform to it, and so begin to humble them, and to take them off from resting in their Obedience. There is enough in the Light of it to do this, for God means to Judge them by it at the last Day.

C H A P. VIII.

The Grounds of the Mistake upon which Men proceed in Judging the Actings of Natural Conscience to be the Workings of a Principle of True Grace, Considered and Detected.

I Now come to examine those grounds of Mistake, with Unregenerate Men go upon in the Judging this Principle of Conscience, and the workings thereof to Grace and true Goodness.

1. The First Ground of Mistake is, because Men find it to be an inward Principle, as Grace is, inherent and sealed in their inward parts. (Jer. 31. 32.) And the Motions thereof unto good, are not outward, or External, but from within, nor are they outward Respects by which it moves.

Ans. 1. Tho' it be a Principle within a Man, as in Relation to it's Residence yet as to the working of it upon the rest of the Faculties, it Acts as if it were an extrinsical, and violent Principle. It may be remembered to this purpose, how I have before prov'd, that the Motives it useth, at best, to carry the rest of the Heart on to Obedience, are legal, and the Government of it Vigorous, whereas that of Grace is sweet, and natural, having the Hearts of it's Subjects, so far as a Man is Renewed. There are Three sorts of moving Principles to be found distinct in Mens Spirits. 1st. Meer outward Respects from things Worldly, and Outward; such as are the Motives which arise from our Lusts, as carried forth to outward Objects. 2^{dly}. There are the inward impulses by which Natural Conscience works. And 3^{dly}. There are the kindly, sweet, and Natural; Gracious Motions of Grace and Holiness in a Regenerate Heart. To exemplifie these Three by Similitudes: Take a Clock or a Watch, and Observe the Principles of each of their Motions. A Clock is moved by Weights that hang without it, and such are outward Worldly Respects that pertain not to Conscience, as vain Glory, Love of Praise, Filthy Lucre, &c. But a Watch hath a Motion from what is within it self, a Spring that Book 6 that sets all the Wheels on work, and yet the motion of the watch is truly, and indeed but an extrinsecal motion in comparison with what is natural. And such is that of Natural Conscience in respect of those Duties unto God which it enjoyns; both the one as well as the other are external, in respect of a violence, or a forcedness of their motion, for the Wheels which move have not a natural poise to move of themselves. But take a Bird that flies, there is truly and properly an internal Principle of Life and motion in the Wings, and all the Limbs thereof, which moves the whole, and every Member, and such a Principle is Grace, in comparison of Natural Conscience.

Ans. 3. Tho' it be thus a Principle within thee, yet it makes not up another self within thee, as Grace doth. Tho' thy Conscience is against a Sin, before or after, it is committed, yet thou canst not say, I am against the sin, which is thy beloved sin; No thy self art for it, but Conscience in thee is only against it. Hence, thou canst not say with Paul (Rom. 7.) It is not I but sin, for thy Conscience only stood out against it, when thy Heart was wholly for it. But this a regenerate man can, and doth say, And this was it which moved Austin to fall off from that interpretation of (Rom. 7.) That the passages thereof should be meant of an unregenerate man (of whom once he understood them) because he found that tho' the Light of his Conscience, was against the sin, yet made not up another whole inward man, which a man might term himself. Yea, you may observe, that when Conscience speaks against a sin, it speaks to the rest of the whole man, as to a distinct person from it self, tho' it be seated in the man; for it speaks thus, Thus thou oughtest not to do; or this thou hast done. The Language of Conscience is as the language of another person whose part it takes, even of God to a man, as Menander said ἐν τῷ ἀπείριστον ἢ οὐκ ἔστι θεός. Conscience is as God to all, and every mortal man: And therefore it acts the part of an Advocate against a man's self. But the Grace of Sanctification hath won all the Faculties in their Courses to go the same way with it self. And therefore a regenerate man can say to Conscience, that besides, and over and above thy Checks (oh Conscience) I have an whole new man, an inner man within me, that had no hand in this sin, but is for God, and his Law, as well as thou, and serves him in the inner man, even whilst the Law of the Members doth prevail to the outward action.

Ans. 3. In respect of many actings of Conscience in thee, thou art a Patient, not active, or an Agent: But on the contrary, when it checks, restrains, and condemns for Sin, or invites unto duties, thy whole Heart is against it. 'Tis true these are truly acts of a Faculty, within thee, for the Apostle (Rom. 2. 15.) calls them their thoughts (when he speaks of their Consciences accusing them) yet they are (if unregenerate) Sufferers, and Endurers, and Patients under them, because it is God (as I have shewed is the Author and Actuator of them, puts a word into Consciences mouth, as once into Balaam's, so as it cannot but speak, nor can it say the contrary, when yet (as Balaam) the whole man is against that word, and follows after the ways of unrighteousness, and would not have the Vision so to speak. It is full sore against his Will, and bent, and grain of his Spirit. In the Text (Rom. 2.) it is said συμμετροῦσθαι, its Witnesses being joined with anothers, namely, Gods. Thus checks, and terrors of Conscience are acts upon a man, rather than of a man, and so men are Endurers under them. And therefore men hate them, and would be rid of them if they could, or knew how. They secretly say of it as Ahab to Micajah, Go mine Enemy, thou never prophesiest good to me. The other Faculties do look upon it as the Sodomites did upon Lot, and cryed out, shall this stranger judge us? They would thrust it forth of their Jurisdiction, if they could, as none of their company. Men use Mirth and Jollatry to allay the checks of it, and give themselves a Medicine to kill this Worm. Speculative light Men like, for it is pleasant, but Light that is busie with them, and active in them, they like not to retain in their Knowledge (Rom. 1. 28.) Whereas a godly godly man writes up such Knowledge in his Heart, as one doth Memorandums in his Table-Book, (Prov. 3. 3.) Write them (says he) in the Tables of thy heart, Chap. 8. having said before, My Son, forget not thou my Law. He is as glad of new Light that discovers to him a sin, or Corruption he saw not before, or a Duty he knew not, as a man is of finding great spoyle. 'Tis David's comparison (Psal. 119. 162.) Whereas, another man looks upon every such discovery of sin, or duty, as men do now upon a new Tax or Levy, and hate the Light of Conscience, as a Task-Master, as the Jews did a Publican.

A second ground of mistake is, that Conscience is a good and upright Principle contrary unto Sin, and for what is good, and cannot be charmed to hold its Peace.

Answ. 1. The Goodness that is in the Light of Conscience riseth not up to the goodness of Holiness, as hath been shewed. It is but the Letter, not the Spirit of the Law. Now, consider that the shadow, as of Truth, so of Goodness, sanctifies not.

2. As for its Contrariety, and opposition unto sin, condemning, restraining, and coming in against it, I answer, There is a two-fold Contrariety, the one real, and physical, as Fire is contrary to Water, which are destructive each of other, and are armed with power to expell the one the other: And thus in a regenerate man Flesh and Spirit are contrary, Gal. 5. 17. The Flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the Flesh: And these are contrary the one to the other; so that ye cannot do the things that ye would. They therefore cannot exist in a predominancy each in the same Heart; but if the Spirit that is in man lusteth after Envy, God gives Grace to subdue it; so as to be under the dominion of Sin and Grace, cannot stand together, (Rom. 6. 12, 14.) Such a contrariety to sin as this, is not in the Light of an unregenerate man. But there is another sort of Contrariety, viz. testimonial, (for unto a Witness the Text compares it) which in appearance Conscience bears to a Sinner. But indeed it is contrary only as a Witness is to a bad Man, and a bad Cause; contrary only in this, because he comes in and gives Testimony against him, and that not out of a Contrariety or Antipathy to the man, but as Witness of the Truth. Paul hath told us such a Testimony is remote from Enmity, Gal. 4. 16. Am I therefore your Enemy because I tell you the Truth? Or the contrariety is as that of a Lawyer, that pleads a Cause against a man, he is said to be contrary only, because he speaks against the man. And indeed in these Testimonies Conscience is rather contrary to the man that sins, than to the sin it self; for it expells it not. It hath not a destructive vertue in it; but a beloved sin, notwithstanding Light of Conscience testifying against it, doth in a predominancy continue still in the Heart. Or if you will, it is but a representative, or demonstrative Contrariety, not a Natural. Light hath a natural Contrariety to Darknes, and expells it; whereas the Light of a Glow-Worm only discovers it self in the Dark, but enlightneth not the Air round about it. And therefore, tho' thou hadst never so much Light that directed to good, checked thee for evil upon all occasions, and continued to do so all thy days; if this wrought not a desire to live well in all things, but thou goest against it, and imprisonest the Light of it, this will aggravate thy sin. And however thou takest this for a good Conscience (as if Conscience had a peculiar abstract goodness in it) yet when the naughty man that lived against Conscience, goes to Hell, what will become of this good Conscience? It will even go to Hell with thee, and be thy Executioner: Yea, and even Conscience it self will be most punished there, for that is the part on which the Wrath of God lights: It is the Tonnel thro' which God fills the Vessel with Wrath, and that, both because it gave Light only, but no Power; as also because the man whose Conscience it is, was wicked, and his Heart naught. And therefore tho' Conscience was against the sin thou committedst, yet Conscience it self will be reckoned as guilty, and to be

Book VI be an Evil Conscience, because it wanted power to hinder thee, which Power it once had.

3. A Third Ground that helps forward the mistake is, that they find it a Constant Principle, which will not be charmed, nor hold it's Tongue: And as Grace is said to be a Seed that remains, so is this.

Ans. 1. Consider, That for that very cause it is not Grace, but Nature: Grace is in us not from the first, but only after that it is received, but this Light of Conscience, and these Workings of it have been always in thee for the time past.

Ans. 2. Tho' the faculty itself always remains, yet thou shalt find, if God turn thee not to him, Sin winning ground of it, and weakning the exercise of it, till it hath put thy Conscience past feeling. Whilst Men are Young their Consciences are tender, but as they grow Old they are hardned, and this is part of their growing in Wickedness: So (Eph. 4. 19.) tis said, after they are past feeling, which implies that they had a Sense once. Tis the like Phrase to that you use of a Man Dying, you say, He is past Sense, past Speaking. The Allusion there is to Palsey-benumbed Members, which are come to such a pass, that they feel no Pain. Conscience having spoken often, when it sees it cannot prevail, ceaseth to speak; yea (1 Tim. 4. 2.) Paul speaks as if some Mens Consciences were in the end Cutt (so the Phrase by Beza is interpreted) seared off with an hot Iron, as a Putrified Member, that is grown Dead and Senseless useth to be; not that the faculty is cut off, but it is meant in regard of the Acts of it, which are Cut off, and Men walk as if they had no Consciences. The Reason is, because (as I said) the Exercise of it depending upon Gods Working on it, and in it more or less; therefore when he hath striven long with Men in and thro' the checks of their Consciences, in the end ceaseth striving, and then Conscience ceaseth to check any longer. And therefore God is said to give them up to a Reprobate Mind, that is void of Judgment, even in judging those things Sins which are to the Light of Nature most abhorrent, and as the Phrase in such case is, inconvenient, (which the Apostle there useth, Rom. 1. 28.) Whereas Davids smote him for Numbring the People when he was Old (for that was towards the end of his Reign) as well as when he was Young and did so for his cutting off Sauls Lap. And Paul when Old, and the time of Departure at hand (as he says in the Second Epistle to Timothy) yet then he continued to serve God with a pure Conscience, as in the 1 Chap. of that Epistle, v. 3. himself speaks.

Or if this Light in Natural Conscience be not in the exercise of it almost extinct, yet it will be quiet, and suffer it self to be close Prisoner, not striving to get out, as (Rom. 1. 17.) the Phrase is: But any Truth in a good Conscience will make the Prison too hot for it. The Evil Conscience will keep Commissions and Writs lying by it, and not so much as open them, much less put them into suit, like those Lights in those Roman Urns that give Light within, but never break forth, because they were made of such matter as had Light only, and not Heat; and such is the Light of a Natural Conscience till God joins his Wrath with it. But on the Contrary, in a Godly Man Light against any Sin, or for the doing any Duty, like Fire Imprisoned and Smothered, burns inwardly, and ceaseth not till the Flame break forth, Jer. 20. 9. When Jeremy through Fear and Discouragement was resolved to Preach no more, but to live a quiet Life with the World, when he knew it was his Duty to do otherwise: In the End (says he) it was Fire in my Bones, and I could not stay or forbear. Men use a Natural Conscience as a Dark Lanthorn, they shut up as much of it as they please, and if it Burn, let it shine inward, it shall not outward. Grace will not be so used or dealt with, but like the Apostle (who spake it as led by this Principle) in the end, it says, I cannot but speak the things I know, Acts. 4. 20.

4. A Fourth main Ground of Mistake is, that Religion is expressed unto us, by making Conscience of what we do; and uprightnes is understood to consist in this, that we follow our Consciences. A Conscionable Man, and a Religious Man are equivalently put each for the other. Yea, did not Abimeelick plead it, (Gen. 20. 5.) and did not God acknowledge this to be Integrity, v. 6. He having in that matter of Sarah gone according to the Principles he was enlightned with? Had he known her to have been another Mans Wife, he would not have taken her, for he made Conscience of committing Adultery; and this God takes for Integrity, inasmuch as he went not against his Conscience.

Answ. 1. I Answer, That all do, and must acknowledge, that when a Man doth so act according to an Erroneous Conscience (as to the matter of Fact, taking that to be a Duty or Lawful which is an Heynous Sin, and which is incompatible with the State of Grace for the present) tho' in this he principally Acts out of, and according to his Conscience, yet therein he hath not that Integrity which is required to Salvation. For Example, Paul thought verily he ought to Persecute the Church, and what he did therein, he did out of Conscience, yet he was far enough off from Sincerity or Integrity, for the Matter of Fact could not stand with Godliness. Now as Conscience may thus in the matter it directs be Damnably Erroneous, unto the prejudice and certain Hazard (as to the present) of Mans Salvation, so it may be, and is much rather, and more usually, defiled, and deficient, and false unto God in respect of the manner of performance, and in respect of the End it moves for; and even when yet it guides aright unto what is the right matter of the Duty, yea, and is Obeyed therein by the Heart. Holiness and Integrity do always Essentially lye in urging to the right manner, and propounding right Ends in Duties, but it doth not always consist Essentially in the Matter, or outward Duty to be performed. An Action for matter mistaken, may yet in respect of the Ends of it be accepted, as in David's offering to build a Temple, but not e contra. So that in these Cases what thou doest is out of Conscience, but far off from Integrity. The Bow may be a strong Bow, and the Arrow may be good, but if the Eye that shoot it be asquint, and aims not at the right Mark, the Shot: miscarries so it is here.

2. What is truly and properly Integrity, but a Conformity of a Mans Heart and Actions unto the Rule? Even as Truth is said to be an agreeableness unto that which is it's Rule; as truth in a Mans Speeches is an agreeableness to what is in the things that a Man speaks of; and truth in the things themselves is a Conformity to those Ideas or Images of them which are in the mind of God, the Fountain of Truth. Now every Man's Conscience being every Man's immediate Rule and Square; hence, when a Man's Actions are Conformed unto the Light that is therein, there may be said to be (as to that respect, and within that sphere) an Integrity in the Action which a Man doth according to his Light. But there is an higher rule above Conscience (there is an higher than they, as Solomon speaks, and one greater than our Consciences, as Jobn says) even the Word of God, which consists of Spirit as well as the Letter, and so is a two-edged Sword, dividing between the Marrow and the Bones, which is a Judge and a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the Heart, Heb. 4. 12. And to this Spiritual Light Conscience it self must be Conformed, set and turned, and by this Light the goodness of Conscience is alone to be measured, and yet natural Conscience utterly swerves from this Light, even when it directs to the Letter and outward Action. Hence therefore those Actions so performed according to this Light, and Dictate of Conscience, want that Integrity which is the Truth and Soul of them, because they are not Conformed to, nor agreeing with the Supream Rule. 'Tis a Conscientious work, but not a Work wrought in God; because though 'tis a Conscience, yet not a Conscience of God (as Peter speaks) in the Man which doth it. For Example, take a Church-Dyal, that is joyned to a Clock, although the Dial follows the Clock never so truly, and so it's part there is a Conformity to it's next Rule, yet if the Clock be not set to the Sun, that is the supream Moderator and Keeper of time, it cannot be said to be a true Dial, nor a true Clock: For both the Clock and it also are appointed to tell the true Hour of the Day, wherein if they fail, they swerve from their Ordination they were (as such) made for. So when the Dial of thy outward Actions agrees with the Clock of thy Conscience, and thy hand turns as the Clock moves it, yet if Conscience it self be not set right, and made conformable to God's Interest and Ends, who is the supream Rule of goodness and integrity, both are false to him, and err in what he is most concerned. In a word, as Truth is Conformitas rei cum archetypo summo, so Integrity of heart is Conformity of Conscience, and of all in the Heart to the highest Rule: And yet when a Man speaks as he thinks, and what he says is an untruth, though indeed it is not a Lye, for there is some integrity in his speech; yet there is not an absolute Integrity in relation to the thing that is spoken; for it is falshood, and that which he ought not to speak: So it is here in this case.

3. As for that Allegation concerning Abimelech, that his following his Light of Conscience was acknowledged Integrity by God himself, the Answer is,

1. That that Speech of God being in answer unto Abimelech's plea made, it is to be understood as spoken in the same sense that Abimelech himself meant it. God talkt now with an Heathen, and speaks not in the Language of his Sanctuary, nor in the dialects of that Court he means to keep at the day of Judgment, but by way of Concession acknowledgeth such an Integrity to have been therein, as Abimelech stood upon, viz. a moral Integrity; which is, when the Action that is outward, agree to the inward Light that is in a man, and so is an Integrity in it's Kind, but not an Evangelical Integrity, such as should be accepted to the Salvation of a mans Person. If you bring me a brass Shilling, and plead that it is good Brass, good Metal, I should readily acknowledge it such: But if you press me to take it for a Shilling, or demand if it be good Coin? I deny it. Thus, in Ezekiel also God speaks in their Language when he says, If a righteous man fall from his Righteousness, &c. And such also was that Speech of Paul, when speaking of his unregenerate Estate he says of himself, That as touching the Righteousness which is in the Law, he was blameless, (Phil. 3. 6, 7.) which must be understood of that kind of Righteousness whereof he was there treating, which was that Righteousness which was currant among his Fellow Pharisees. So (says he v. 5.) I was according to the Law a Pharisee. Yea, (v. 6) he reckons together with it, Persecuting the Church, and all this the Pharisees judged an excellency. And he speaks in all this but their Language: And he doth the very same, being call'd before a Court of Pharisees, (Acts 23. 1.) where being accused and brought before them as guilty of high Crimes, he makes his Apology, and Justifies his whole Cause in these words, I have lived in all good Conscience before God to this day. He speaks this in their Dialect according to what they accused him, according to their Principles accounted a good Conscience. And besides that, it had been to no purpose to have alledged his Integrity as a regenerate Christian unto them that were no way apprehensive of it; the 6th verse shews also that his purpose was to get off from these his Enemies by pleading their Principles, and so in their sense he might well say (as he doth) I have lived in all good Conscience to this day. For what they counted living in a good Conscience (and was the truth in him) that he had done all his Life. He had followed his Conscience in all things according to their strictest Principles. But if you had brought him before God's Court, and bidden him speak for himself, you should have found him in another tone, as (in the same Phil. 3. 9.) You hear him uttering of himself, how for ten thousand Worlds he would not be found in that Righteousness. That I may be found in Christ (says he) not having mine own Righteousness, which is of the Law. Now then as Paul speaking before Pharisees to justify himself as in mans Court, speaks in their dialect; so God speaking to an Heathen (Abimelech) answers him in his; when he acknowledgeth in that action Integrity to have been in him. Chap. 9.

Or else (2.) It may be termed comparative Integrity as to that particular, in comparison to other Actions and Carriages of his against Conscience, and Acts of other men who sin against their Consciences: As a Judge that is free from Bribes and partiality, and injustice, is said to be a man of Integrity; that is, he is comparatively such as a Judge, tho' not in other respects, as a man personally. He may do Justice out of Vain-Glory or Importunity, as that unjust Judge did in the Gospell, and this is comparative Integrity, because he is free from those common Corruptions in judging, that others are subject to. And so compare the Carriage of Abimelech's Heart in this, with the ways of other Heathens, and it was Integrity; or with other of his Actions, and it was Integrity, but it was not absolutely so.

C H A P. IX.

That the Natural Conscience may approve of the Law, and commend the duties enjoyn'd, yet it is deficient in those Acts. A Discovery of those Defects.

TH E next Head belonging to this Discovery, is a Consideration of the Defects of Natural Conscience in all those effects fore-mentioned, which are reduced unto two Generals.

I. A respect of what good the Law requires.

II. A Restraint of Sin or Evil.

I. As to a respect of what is good.

The two first Effects are,

I. That the Conscience approves of the Law and Duties thereof as good.

II. That it commends them as such to the Heart, and binds the Soul over to the performance of them.

The Query then is, whether these two be not the same with what are the proper effects of Grace (as to these two particulars) and what difference that is specifical may be assigned thereto. For (Rom. 7. 16.) This is recorded by Paul in the Name of men regenerate, and as the voice proper to them, it is the Voice of Jacob to consent to the Law that it is good. And so in (Rom. 12. 2.) to prove what is the good Will of God, is a proper effect of the Renewing of the Mind. And be not Conformed to this World, but be ye Transformed by the Renewing of your Mind, that ye may prove, what is that Good, that Acceptable, and Perfect Will of God.

To which I answer,

I. It is true, there is a great seeming affinity and likeness between the approbation and the Instigation of Natural Conscience and Renewed Conscience.

For

For the same word, the very same would not have been used to express the one and the other by the Apostle (Rom. 2. 18.) and (Phil. 1. 10.) Of an unregenerate Jew he says in the one place, Thou knowest his Will, and approvest the Things that are excellent; that is, the Things of the Law as excellent and good. And in the other (Phil. 1. 19.) Praying for Knowledge to be given to the Philippians (and if there were any Knowledge better than this, surely he would wish them it,) I pray, &c. That ye may approve the things that are Excellent. The words are the very same; and δοκιμαζων the word there, is the same that is used (Rom. 12. 2.) when the Knowledge of a renewed Mind is spoken of. And it is taken from a Gold-Smith, that both tryes and allows of Silver as good and currant: And Silver so tryed is call'd δοκιμος. So as indeed there must needs be a Likeness.

2. The difference or deficiency of Natural Conscience will be discovered by two Things. An Enquiry

1. Into the several Grounds of the Assent of regenerate and unregenerate Mens Consciences.

2. The differing Manner of their Assent. And the Question in both is, what is that proper goodness or excellency for which the one or the other doth approve of the Law as good.

First, For Unregenerate there are two grounds, and perhaps many other which may help forward this Assent.

1. Some for the Wisdom and Concordancy unto Reason which appears in that Law, and the Commands thereof. As Reason is man's Excellency, so what agrees with Reason, it approves as most excellent. The Heathens (as you heard) magnified the dictates of Conscience under the notion of Right Reason, as the general Title they gave thereto, and so was the Ground of their assent and approbation. Now, the duties of the Law agree with the common Principles of right Reason in men, and the deductions out of those common Principles, and also the Rules of it have the greatest harmony and agreement in them one with the other that may be. And so far as Reason doth apprehend this, so far doth natural Knowledge and Conscience acknowledge a goodness and an excellency therein. And to shew this was the ground of the assent to it, we have an express Scripture speaking of the Gentiles and their approbation of Moses Law, as it was given to the Jews. And (Deut. 4. 6.) This is your Wisdom in the sight of all Nations, which shall bear all these Statutes and shall say, This is a wise and an understanding People. It is you see the Wisdom, the Harmony to Reason they are taken with, and unto which the Law did supereminently approve it self. This was Gallio's Principle, (Acts 18 14.) And when Paul was now about to open his Mouth, Gallio said unto the Jews, If it were a matter of Wrong, or Wicked Lewdness, O ye Jews, Reason would that I should bear with you. He saw reason why Wrong and Wickedness should be punished, but for God's Worship he saw none. If it were a matter of Wrong and Wickedness, Reason would (says he) or as in the Original κατὰ λόγον, according to Reason I would bear with you; that is, listen to you. But God's Worship and Paul's Doctrine he saw no reason for, and so it was out of his Element; besides or above the Rule he judged of things by, and he thought it a just Excuse. You see, he made Reason his professed Rule; and as far as that gave him Light for his particular light, so far he judged of things of this Nature; and if others go further, yet still by the same Rule. Thus Men in the Church, seeing no reason for the spiritual part of Religion and strictness in God's ways, therefore account the ways of God Foolishness. (1 Cor. 2. 14.) The reason is, because they see not the reason of them, for what we see no reason for, we use to account Folly.

A Second Ground which works on others to assent to the Law, that it is good, is, That they see how the whole and the particular Laws thereof do tend to the good of Men, and many of them Laws to a general and common good. God hath moulded and fitted the Commandments to the Condition of the reasonable Creatures and their good according to their Condition in this World, as well as for his own Glory, and to sanctifie himself, (Deut. 10. 13.) Which I command thee for thy good; That Consideration is put in as the Motive to Obedience, as being found in the Law. Men see that the tendency of the duties of the First Table, are for the good of mens Souls. Their Consciences acknowledge there is a God, and if so, then he must be worshipped or they cannot be quiet or happy. They have immortal Souls, that must live in another World, and therefore it is meet to apply themselves to this God according as he hath given command how he will be worshipped. Then for the Commands of the Second Table, All may readily see how they manifestly tend unto the general good of men. As the 5th Commandment, If there were not superiority and Obedience, as to Parents, Magistrates, &c. the World would prey one upon another, and all fall into Confusion. We should teach our Children to despise us when we come to be old and stand in need of their help. Thou shalt not murder; it is a Guard to the Lives of all. Thou shalt not steal; a Fence and Hedge to the Goods of all men. Nor commit Adultery. This proved that their own Children and not Strangers, should inherit mens Estates. Such Considerations as these, are found in most of the Commandments; and accordingly these, or whatever else like these may cause them thus to approve them.

I come to the Grounds whereupon a regenerate man doth further assent unto their goodness, upon which to be sure an unregenerate man doth not.

1. Not only because it accords with Reason, but also because it is an Expression of God's most blessed Will, which is the supream Rule of Goodness. And this especially commends it to a regenerate man also; Yea, and this commends it to him enough as good in some particulars wherein yet he sees no reason for it at present. David admires indeed the Equity, the Wisdom in the Law, for which he terms them the wonderful things of the Law. But that which commends it most to him was, that it was the Law of his mouth, as his expression is (Psal. 119) his Will, his Command who was the righteous and the holy God (Psal. 119. 138, 139.) Righteous thou art O Lord, and upright are thy Judgments, and thy Testimonies that thou hast commanded are Righteous and very Faithful. He assents to their goodness because God commands them. (Rom. 12. 1, 2.) Tho' the Service he is to perform to God, be reasonable Service (as some understand the word) yet the goodness that a renewed Mind approves in it, is, that it is the good and acceptable Will of God. And that is the goodness which the ἡ ἀρετή, or the approbation of a renewed Mind there spoken of, pitcheth upon more eminently: That it is that which God commands, and that which God is pleased to accept when performed; this is it endears it to him, and for which he accounts it good. And therefore tho' he should see no reason, yet that it is God's Will, is enough to commend it to his Conscience. So it was to Abraham when God had him sacrifice his Son. So to Ely, It is the LORD (says he, 1 Sam. 3.) let him do what seemeth to him good. What God thought good, he should think so too. Which holds as to endure God's suffering will, (which was the Case there) so to do his commanding Will. There is the same reason for both. You may see this in Christ (Psal. 40. Heb. 10. compared) Thy Law is in mine Heart; (Psal. 40. 8.) And I come to do thy Will. This principally commended the Command of laying down his Life, that it was his Fathers Will. Thy Will be done; and As my Father hath given Commandment, so do I, John 14. 31.

Book 6

2. The most proper Goodness for which a regenerate man assents to the Law is, That in the spiritual part of it, it is the Image of God's Holiness, and tends to set up God in the Hearts and Lives of men. We know the Law is holy and good, (Rom. 7.) which (v. 14.) he speaks in respect of the Spirituality of it. (Psal. 119. 140.) Thy Law is pure (says David) therefore thy Servant loves it. Purity is the holiness of it; as it is the Image of God's Purity. Blessed are the pure in Heart, that is, the holy in Heart. And all Holiness lies in setting God up. And the more of this he spies stampt upon any Command, the more he assents to that Commandment as good. To which purpose 'tis observable (Neb. 9. 13, 14.) That having said that God gave them good Laws and Statutes, and so calling them good because God gave them, he instanceth in the following verse only in that of the Sabbath. Oh that Commandment, it was a good Commandment indeed: And why? But because it was to be kept Holy to God, God is to be Sanctified upon that day, and to that end it was appointed, and an whole day set apart to that end, this took his Heart.

The 2^d thing I mentioned to manifest this difference, was the differing Manner of this Assent of the one and the other. In an Unregenerate Man it is rather an Assent of Reverence than of free Approbation.

There is a Majesty of the Lords which shines in the Uprightness of his Law, and in the Lives of his Saints, as they are Conformed thereto. Isa. 26. 10. The Life of this Transcendental Goodness of Holiness shining in the Law, lights upon the Conscience, as the splendor of the Sun doth upon a sore Eye, and finding it hath a Commanding brightness in it, it cannot but yield to be Glorious. For if it should deny this, it's own winking at it and being dazeled with it, would confute it self. And this the Apostle holds forth, (2 Cor. 3. 7.) alledging concerning the Law, that such was the Glory that shined in Moses his Countenance who was the Deliverer of it, that the People could not steadfastly behold it. It was so as they could not but acknowledge that there was a Glory in it, which typified forth what their Hearts did towards the Law it self. But as I said before, this is rather a Commanded extorted reverential Assent the Conscience gives to this it's goodness, than free and out of liking and ingenious estimation of it. So as Men's Consciences rather say as those in Acts 4. 16. We cannot deny it, than that we do freely like it. Look what kind of Approbation their Hearts give to the Holiness and Righteousness that shines in an Upright Man, the same and no other it doth or can give to the Law it self; for the Reason of both is the same, Holiness in a Godly Man being but the same Law Written in his Life, that is given in his Word. Now then observe what kind of Approbation it is a Wicked Man gives unto the Holiness of an Upright Man, and the ground of it. Herod he was Convinced of John's Holiness and Justness, it was an assent of Fear and Reverence; He knew, says the Text, he was a Just and an Holy Man, (Mark. 6. 20.) But withal it is said, Herod feared John knowing he was a Just Man, and an Holy. and observed him. And thus it is that Men assent to the Law as Holy: That part of it which Reveals the Image and the Glory of God in it, it commands an Assent and a Subjection to it, rather than they freely give it, an Assent of Reverence not of Love. So then it is rather Assent in a Wicked Man, than Consent, which implies a willing yielding up the Mind to it, and of all in a Man. That Word used Rom. 7. 16. συνήμι τῷ νόμῳ, I consent to the Law, is emphatical. It Englised is this, I say together with the Law, that it is good: Implying that it is Free and Ingenious, and that all in a Man together say and joyn with the Conscience, that it is a good Law, there was a joint Vote or Suffrage of all the Faculties. Here is Consent, not Assent only. 'Tis one thing to Receive the Truth, another thing to Receive it in the Love of it. Those in the Thessalonians received the Truth, but not in the Love of it, they Assented to it, but they Consented not to it. And therefore if you observe it in that place before quoted, 1 Phil. 10. though the same Phrase is used, that is used Rom. 2. of an Unregenerated Man; that the one is said to approve things Excellent, as well as the other, yet there is this added by way of difference, that your Love may abound in Knowledge, that ye may approve the things that are Excellent. It is an Approbation out of Knowledge, rooted in or joined with Love.

And that Wicked Mens Assent is but such as hath been described, appears by this, that they wish there was no such Law, no such Duties to bind them. As Balaam, though he assented to that word God gave him, and could speak no other, yet wished for, and desired some other Message, yea the contrary: So doth the Conscience and Heart of an Unregenerate Man. And therefore (Jer. 5. 5.) their Knowledge of the Law is compared to Bonds; as also (Psal. 2.) to Cords. For as they endeavour to imprison their Light in Unrighteousness, so they account themselves as Prisoners Fettered with the Cords of it, which they would break or shake off. Whereas a Regenerate Man looks on them as Bracelets. (So Prov. 6. 21, 22. Bind them about thine Heart, and Tye them about thy Neck) Which a Man puts Voluntarily upon him, and looks at as Ornaments. For though they Reverence the Law, yet they may wish it were not. Reverence is often severed from Love. When an Austere Holy Tutor keeps a Rakehell in awe, he may Reverence his Tutor much, as a Man that is good, and wisheth his good, and yet wish he were from him, and out of his Tuition.

The Second Effect mentioned, was, That Conscience commends the Law to the Heart as good, and lays an Injunction upon it, for the performance of it.

There are Two things in Natural Conscience makes it put two steps towards this; but there is a Third in which it fails, and makes an halt.

1. Conscience Assents to the goodness of the Duties of the Law in the General, that they are good to be done in such respects forementioned.

And 2. It further also particularly tells the Heart, that it ought now at this time to do them; yet it cannot bring the Heart to assent, that the performance of these Duties are particularly good to him, that is, that his good lyes in the performance of them.

Or thus: There is, 1. An Assent of Reason, that in General it is good. 2. An Assent of his Subjection to it, that he ought to do it out of a Sense of the Majesty and Superiority it hath over him. But 3. Not an Assent of Suitableness, or Sympathy, or mutual delight, that it is best for him; which Assent is in a Godly Man's Judgment to be found. For as he is said to Consent to the Law that it is good, so to delight in the Law as good. And the word συμφορα, implies a joint Delight, a Concurrence of all in him in that delight. Even as that other word συμψηφισις imported a joynt suffrage, or consent, and both as between things suitable, both argued the Commands as suited his whole Man: Psal. 119. 78. sets forth and illustrates his sense and meaning herein by this opposite Comparison, Their Heart is as fat as Grease, but I delight in thy Law. The Comparison carries this with it, that the same Natural delight which in outward things they found suiting with, and nourishing their Carnal Hearts to a fatness, and contentment, the same I find in thy Law, as suiting all within my Soul; and v. 72. The Law of thy Mouth is better to me than Thousands of Gold and Silver. Not better in it self only, but better to me, says he. And this ariseth out of a suitability and sweetness of Taste, which v. 66. holds forth, Teach me good Judgment and Knowledge. That which is Translated good Judgment, signifies good Taste, It being the same word that is used, Psal. 34. 9. Taste and see how good the Lord is, So David Prayed there for two sorts of Knowledge of the things of the Law. 1. Scientiam Visus, which he calls Knowledge, whereby Men see the Commandments to be good in the General; and not this only, but also, 2dly, Scientiam Gustus, Knowledge of Taste, that is, that he might have a Rectified Pallate to taste the goodness that is in the Commandments and the keeping of them. And this will lead us to another Note of Difference besides the former given upon that place, 1 Phil. 10. (where

Book VI (where when the same words are used of a Regenerate Man's approving, that are used of an Unregenerate Man's, Rom. 2. 18. as was shew'd: And therefore we had need to take hold of what differences the place will give) and it is the same we are now upon; he Prays they may abound in all Knowledg and in all sense, πάση αἰσθήσει, a Knowledg that had Sense and Taste join'd with it, that so they might, namely upon such a Knowledg, approve the things that are Excellent. And so this Prayer of Pauls accords fully with that of David, Give me good Judgment, or sense of Taste and Knowledge; which two words Paul useth, and our Translators have rendred as the former, Knowledge and Judgment. And accordingly v. 68th of that Psalm, we find the greatest good that David desired, was to know and keep these Statutes; his words are these, Lord, thou art good, and dost good. And what is the mind and meaning of these so deep Concernments? But this, Lord, as thou hast Infinite Goodness in thee, and as ever thou intendest to dome good, yea, and if ever thou wilt do any good for me, do this. What? Teach me thy Statutes. If God from Heaven should have bidden him to ask one Request that was most Eminent in his Heart and Desires, it should have been this, Teach me thy Statutes. This is a Preface to a Petition which his Heart must be in, in a peculiar and extraordinary manner affected with, that he should urge it upon the highest Consideration that can be alledged. For he calls upon, and urgeth all the goodness that is in God's Nature: Thou art good, and also all those vast purposes of his doing us good, which is above all we are able to ask or think.

Natural Conscience is able to Judge in the General, that the Law is better, than sin, and that to Obey it is better. Therefore Peter appeals even to those Wicked Pharisees, Acts 5. 39. Whether is it better to Obey God or Man, judge ye. And Socrates had done the like even to the Consciences of the Heathen Athenians in the same words well nigh, so that take it in the Abstract proposal of it, and no Man can deny it. But out of suitableness, &c. to Judge that it was better for them in particular; as David said, the Law of thy Mouth is better to me; This particular Assent out of Experience, is joined with the Taste which unregenerate Men want. It is an Assent I say out of Experience of their goodness. For as they find a suitableness to them in themselves, and a Taste of their goodness; so they find they do them good. So Mic. 2. 7. Do not my words do good to them that are good?

And whereas it will be Objected, Doth not Conscience tell Men it would be better for them if they would Obey, and that it will go worse with them, if they do not, and so presents the Duty as particularly best for them?

Therefore I add this Third Conclusion concerning their Assent: That it is one thing to present a thing as good for me by Consequent, another thing as good to me simply considered in it self such; as for Example, A Physician presents a Potion to a Patient, and bids him Drink it, tells him that it is good for him, that is by Consequent good for him, because it will restore him and deliver him from Death. But all the Physicians in the World can never perswade him, that it is simply good, and of it self good for him; for his own Smell, Pallate and Stomach tell him to his Teeth the contrary, and are ready to rise up against it: And thus even when Conscience tells a Man such and such Duties of the Law are good for him, it can nor doth say no more in effect but that they are good by consequent, that the Omission of them will be Death to him. But not all the Angels in Heaven, nor Ministers on Earth, can never work an Assent in him, that in themselves they are good for him, per se, simply good. No, for his Corrupt Heart and Judgment tells him the contrary, and he finds no Relish in them, in his Knowledge of Sense (spoken of) even his Heart pronounceth the contrary. Thus indeed, and in this sense a Righteous Man may look upon the greatest Afflictions he ever had, as good for him, that is, by consequent, It is good for me (I was Afflicted) but not of themselves, no Man rejoiceth in them. There is no Affliction, but but for the present in it self is grievous, yet by Consequent he looks on it as good, that is, that will work for good: But at no hand as upon things which a man would have to choose, as wherein his happiness lyes. But lo! that you may discern upon what terms a Godly man judgeth them good. Afflictions (which are in themselves so grievous) David esteemed good, and profitable and comfortable unto him. For this reason, that God used them as means to teach him his Statutes. Thus, (Psal. 119. 71.) It was good for me that I was afflicted, that I might learn thy Statutes. That must needs be good simply and in it self to a mans esteem, which will sweeten and make Afflictions, and the bitterest of Afflictions, good in his Esteem: Yet such are Gods Statutes to an holy Heart. So that to conclude, this Natural Conscience in such a man may tell him, that this or that Duty is to be done, and that he had best do it, or that it is best it be done; but never that the very doing of it is best for him. Of the bitter Potion, they may say it is best to be drunk by them: But that it should be judg'd and found best by a man in the present drinking of it, as Food is, so it is not nor can be. And yet the Commandments were such to David; In keeping thy Commandments there is great reward (Psal. 19.) This for the two first effects.

C H A P. X.

The Natural Conscience may prevail with men to do the Duties requir'd, yet not for Conscience sake, in the Sense which the Scripture gives.

Natural Conscience prevails with men to do that good which it enjoins; and that not only out of outward Respects or worldly Motives, but upon Principles and workings of Conscience: But the main Question or Thing to be searched out in this, is, What it is in Scripture sense truly and acceptably to do a Thing for Conscience sake. For discovery of which I must have recourse First, in the General unto what I have before premised, as an undoubted and undeniable Conclusion (by which all our Actions will be Judged at the latter Day) That in the Ballance and Estimate of the Scripture, Nothing is acceptably done for Conscience sake, but what is principally done for God, as our utmost End, and for Conscience principally as respecting God as such. Which laid as a Foundation (and it is the great Foundation of the practick part of our Religion,) All under pretences of doing things for Conscience, with which men sooth up themselves, will presently vanish and come to nothing. When the Apostle speaks of the Actings of that Affection of Sorrow for sin (1 Cor. 7. 11.) I rejoyce not (says he) in that ye sorrowed, but in that ye sorrowed κατὰ Θεόν, that is, for and according to God; and as looking at God and his Interest, as the moving Cause thereto. The Rule there given concerning the acceptableness of that affection of Sorrow for sin for its Object, holds true and good of Conscience and every Faculty, and the workings of it. So that if you sorrow for sin, committed against God, yet if not κατὰ Θεόν, respecting him chiefly therein, it is not (in Scripture sense) accounted Godly Sorrow. And so, if you do never so much out of never so violent and efficacious Impulses of Conscience, yet if Conscience doth not therein move in the vertue of respect to God chiefly, it is not to be accounted a good Conscience. And this latter is founded upon the same equitable reason whereupon the former is founded. For there is the same measure of Holiness in one Faculty that is to be found in another. If Sorrow for sin stirs upon under respects and not for God, it is not true Sorrow, altho' Sorrow for sin. So if Conscience in thee stirs up any under-respects, (which it is capable of) and not chiefly for God, it is not Conscience for God, though Conscionable Respects may move thee.

So then, here lyes the Spirit of the Answer to these Allegations of the effects of Natural Conscience, which pierce thro' and annull them all: That in Scripture sense, and in the sense of true Religion, to do a thing for Conscience sake, is opposed to all such respects as Conscience it self is capable of, if it fall short of this.

I alledged one Scripture to this purpose, unto which I shall join another, and Compare both together, (Rom. 13. 15.) Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for Wrath but also for Conscience sake. He had used in the words afore this Motive for obedience to Magistrates, that He is the Minister of God, a Revenger to execute Wrath (namely, God's Wrath on thee for sin) if thou do evil; and then inferrs, Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for Wrath but also for Conscience sake: Namely; to be subject to the Magistrate for Wraths sake as your end: Yea, for the Conscience to look up unto God as he that pours out his Wrath by him (as God speaks 2 Chron. 12. 7: My Wrath shall not be poured out by the hand of Shishack.) Yea and by the same Reason to look upon him as God that will pour forth wrath himself immediately upon thee; thus to eye God is not for Conscience sake. This is but to eye his Wrath, and thy self, although God be objectively eyed in it. Therefore that Respect which is left for Conscience to eye in God, is God himself, as severed from that or the like respects. In opposition to that other of Wrath this is put, to obey for Conscience sake. If you would be further satisfied herein, take and join with it, 1 Pet. 2. 19. This is thank-worthy if for Conscience towards God ye suffer grief. He speaks to Servants under froward Masters, exhorting them to obey them (v. 18.) as in the former place he spake to Subjects to obey their Magistrates, and in both singleth forth God as the chief Motive, and that unto Conscience. And what in the one he termeth Obedience for Conscience sake, in the other he termeth Conscience of God, δὴ τὸν θεὸν θεῶν. Now it being evident, that God subjectively hath not a Conscience proper to him, his meaning therefore must be, that our Consciences should be the Consciences of God, that is, of God tanquam objectum finale, as respecting him as our end whom our Consciences should principally eye and look unto; which (v. 20.) following, expounds: This is acceptable with God (says he) as presenting to us this Motive, this will take Gods Heart, and be pleasing to him. So look, as Sorrow, because it is moved chiefly by what concerns him, is called Sorrow πένθος ἐπὶ θεῷ, Sorrow for God; Or Fear when it is chiefly terminated on God, sanctifying and exalting God in our Hearts (as 1 Pet. 2. 15.) is styled the Fear of God, as in like sense Sincerity of Heart is termed Sincerity of God: So in the Greek (2 Cor. 1. 12.) In like manner Conscience, when it respects God chiefly, and fetcheth its Motives from him, it is termed Conscience of God, as observing or respecting none else, or nothing else above him. It is Gods Conscience in that respect more than thine own. Yea, and if Conscience had not had other respects to have been moved by, this Distinction, Conscience of God, needed not to have been made: As not that about Sorrow, which for the same cause the Apostle maketh (2 Cor 7. 11.) Sorrow for God.

Now this Conclusion being thus firmly laid, those pretensions from the effects of Natural Conscience, (whether that it prevaileth to carry the Heart on unto action, or that not outward respects move, but Principles and Workings of Conscience do,) instantly fall to the ground upon the putting this one thing to the Question, But is it Conscience of God that moves thee? This in General.

2. But more particularly what do men take, for what is done for Conscience sake, and so judge it to be Integrity.

1. Men ignorantly imagine that Sincerity and Integrity of Heart lyes in opposition to outward respects and Worldly Considerations. So that if a mans

Heart

Heart be not chiefly moved by such kind of Motives, as if the Wind of Vain-Glory, doth not set this Mill a going, nor the golden Key of covetous desires turn not about the Wards, but if they be motions from Conscience within: Then they think that their Hearts must needs be sincere and right. But they do not consider,

1. That the Spring of Conscience within will move, not only without, but sometimes against all such Respects: So in Judas, and so in Balaam, who crossed their dearest worldly Lusts, and yet the chief Motive it useth shall not be taken from God himself.

2. Men will not see, nor are able to discern that great Beam that is in the eye of Conscience it self; Not only because it is their own eye, but also because Conscience it self is the supream Judge. They will not be brought to imagine that self-love (that's the Beam I mean) should be the predominant principle in Conscience, as well as in other Faculties, but they think all that Conscience acts must needs be sincere: Not considering what that means, that there is a Defiled Conscience. (Titus 1. 16.) And that Conscience in its urging Motives to obedience shews it self as full of Self as any other Faculty. As Christ says in another Case, first make thy Conscience good, and then the Effects will be good: Otherwise let it be Conscience which prevails and acts thee; it will nothing avail thee as to Salvation.

Again, 3dly. Men judge those only to be outward respects which are taken from Things of this World, not dreaming that things of an higher Order and Nature (of which Conscience alone is apprehensive) do become by-respects when Conscience of God is not the chief.

Again, Men consider not that all Motives moving us, or prevailing with us unto that which the inward Bent and Stream and Current of the Heart is against, are in a true sense extrinsecal and outward Motives as well as Worldly, if they compare them with the movings and actings of a regenerate and renewed Conscience which works naturally, and with the joint Concurrence of the rest of the Faculties, as hath been said. That is properly an outward Motive which is against the Hair, against the Nature of a thing, and pondus of its Inclination, as when water is forced some way it would not run. Now if thy Conscience moves thee (though it be thy Conscience) to such duties as the frame of thine Heart is wholly contrary and averse unto, as to pray, to read the Word, to keep the Sabbath, unto which thou hast no inward Genius nor Inclination spiritual (these Laws not being written in thine Heart) in these thy Conscience is a violent and a forcible Worker, as truly as when outward and worldly respects do move. You all esteem the Fear of man to be an outward Motive and respect, and yet Fear is an Affection seated in our Nature and within us, and so moves from within: And yet being pitcht upon an Object which overcomes us unto what else we would not do, we use to say an outward respect moves that man. The reason is the same of the Motions of Consciences, which is but such another Principle within thee as Fear is. If Conscience apprehending the Wrath of God as an Avenger, chiefly moves thee, thy Heart is as much wrung and wrested (when thine Inclination is contrary to the thing commanded) as when the Fear of man doth move thee.

Again, Men consider not, that God himself and his Law doth then only become an intrinsecal Mover of thee in thy Conscience, when thy whole Soul hath first begun to own, entertain and receive him as thy chiefest end, and so thou hast taken in his Interest as natural to thee as thine own, when God is become Intimior intimo nostro, then, and not till then it is that Conscience moves thee as an internal Principle, and not before: But if God and thy Soul remain still at a distance, as Strangers, and thou hast not yet closed with him, all the Motives that are fetcht from him are forreign and out-outward unto thee, as much as if drawn from any Worldly thing whatsoever.

2. A Second Mistake concerning what is done for Conscience is, That Men Judge that what is done by means, or by the Influence of Conscience any way, that it is done for Conscience sake, whereas many things are done,

1. Upon the stirrings of Conscience.

2. Upon Respects which pertain some way unto Conscience only, which yet fall short of Conscience of God. And therefore although Conscience be the principal mover and swayer of such effects, yet still in Scripture sense it is not said to be done for Conscience sake. When the workings or stirrings and troubles of Conscience set Men a work, and carry them on to Actions, they then put such Actions upon this account; That they are done for Conscience sake: and this falls out in two Cases.

1. The First Ordinary, when at the importunity, and continual doggings, and yawlings of their Consciences they do what they do to satisfy their Conscience, which is the Heathens Phrase, Conscienti satisfacimus. Conscience in many Men continually lies at them to perform or do such or such a Duty, and they do it. Conscience is as the disease of the Wolf, if it be not fed daily with such and such Duties performed, it will feed upon a Man's own Heart and Breast. But this is not doing a thing for Conscience sake, but indeed for quietness sake, and for Peace sake. As a Man yields to, and doth many things to please a Shrew, that is, as a continual dropping in of Rain; a Man in that Case is not said to do it for her sake: but for a quiet Life. (Now many Men have shrewish Consciences) as Dalilah prevailed with Sampson, she wearied him of his Life, (Judg. 16. 16.) And as that Judg (Luke 19.) yielded not for the Womans sake, but for her importunity, because she wearied him. Some Men love to be at ease, to have nothing lie upon their Thoughts, to Sleep quietly, and to keep a perpetual Calm, and serenity of Mind: And out of the same Principle that they contrive to avoid other Crosses; out of the same Principle and no other, they avoid being dogg'd by their Consciences; take a great deal of pains to still the Child. In this though they act upon Conscience, and obey Conscience, yet still they do it not for God in their Consciences. A Master sends a Constable to fetch home a Run-away Servant, and the Constable hales and pulls him along, he Obeys properly neither the Constable nor his Master, but least of all his Master: So 'tis here.

2. There are also over and above this ordinary working of the Importunity of Conscience from Day to Day, which prevails to action, some extraordinary Terrors of Conscience, which do seize upon Men as Arrests in the name of God, both calling upon us for Arrears, and Non-payment of Duties, as also restraining from Evils we have formerly run into, and which like a Mighty stream carry on our Hearts in the Current and Channel of Obedience: which was Judas's Case, when the Wrath of God was upon his Conscience, he Repented, Confessed, Restored, and would have done any thing. Now if he had Liv'd, could he have Pleaded, or at the latter Day should that Plea be Accepted, I did all this for Conscience sake? No, and yet all this was done upon the Impulses and Violent provocations of Conscience. As for Terrors from God: Conscience is the only Principle that is apprehensive of them, and all other faculties by means thereof: God is the Father of Spirits, and chastiseth Men's Spirits, and Conscience is that tender place which lies exposed to, and which is most sensible of his Lash, and to be acted by this smart in doing, is but to be led by sense, as Bruits are, and not by Conscience, though Conscience be that sensible part, the torture of which extorts it. Now this then is a Manifest and Gross mistake, that because Conscience is the Subject of such feelings and smarts, that therefore what men do hereupon, they do for Conscience sake; That that they abstain from such a Sin for Conscience, when as the true English and proper Sense you must resolve it into, is the same with this, A Rogue dares not forswear himself for his Ears sake, nor a Thief steal for his Neck sake; so nor these Men for their Conscience sake, Conscience being the part subjected to this Punishment, anxiety and Disquietment, as those Members mentioned in those other Cases use to be.

To Conclude, In these Cases, and of these Men, it may be said, That Conscience makes them do what they do, rather than that they make Conscience of what is done, or of the doing of it: or they may be said to do these things for Conscience, in a Philosophical Sense, because Actings and Stirrings in Conscience are the efficient cause of them, But still not in a Theological Scripture Sense, according to which (as hath been inculcated) a Man is then only said to do a thing for Conscience sake, when Motives of God chiefly carry us on thereto.

The other Head of mistakes mentioned, was when such Respects move us, as pertain only, or properly unto Conscience, and when men act upon such respects, they still think the Action is done for Conscience sake. This is distinct from the former. For the former speak of Violent Impulses of Conscience efficiently, this speaks of Conscionable Considerations, or Respects Objectively. Now there are many Conscionable Respects which belong only to Conscience below God, which act Men: Which yet when they find, they perswade themselves they do it for pure Conscience sake.

As 1. There is a Rational Principle of Equity and Morality. A Man is alone, Conscience prompts him, what thou wouldst not have another do to thee, do not to another. This is Currant Reason. And the Reason of this Principle prevails with the Man, and no outward Respect. In this Case 'tis certain, that a meer Conscionable Respect prevailed: But how remote is this from Conscience of God. This is Conscience indeed of a Just and Good Principle, but not of God. Men do much to stick to their own Principles. Men will not be false to their own Rules, nor Conscious to themselves, that they are so. The Text here says of these Gentiles, that they were a Law unto themselves; and the truth is, that they made their own Principles their God, and men are obedient to them as unto God, and satisfie themselves herewith.

2. Conscience of the superiority of the Law, and the subjection the Heart hath to it, moves men much, and is a conscientious respect beyond all outward respects. The reason of the Law might and would move one if the Case were between Equals, if we and the Law were supposed such. Job says (Chap. 31. 13.) That he would hear his Servants Cause when they spoke reason: But the Law hath a natural Authority, Majesty, Superiority over the Conscience. It is the Husband, the Heart, the Wife which (as Rom. 7. 1, 2.) hath dominion over a man. The meer Sight of their Masters, with the noise of their Whipps, put to flight a whole Army of Russian Slaves, and brought them to obedience. So upon the very hearing of a Duty or a Threatning, Conscience acknowledgeth it ought to be subject. But still this is but Conscience of the Duty, or of the external part of the Law, not Conscience of God.

3. There is Conscience of the excellency that is in vertuous actions to adorn a man, this is also a Conscientious respect, which Natural Conscience may apprehend. Plato said, That if vertue were seen with bodily eyes, it would ravish all men with the sight of it, and the love of it. He saw something in it made him say so. Conscience may see and approve an excellency in many vertues, and judge and affect it as their excellency. So did Socrates.
So

Book 6

Malle fam-mam boni viri per-dere quam Conscien-
tiam.

So Paul (Phil. 3. 7.) accounted the righteousness of the Law his Excellency: He says he accounted it Gain to him. And therefore as the Ermine, counting her white skin her excellency, when she is hunted will die rather than go thro' a Puddle to defile it: So will many men die rather than blemish or stain their Innocency, as it is their excellency. And so is that of the Heathen to be understood, Oderunt peccare boni virtutis amore. And this men will not do, though in secret, they will not be conscious of a base act, they will not have occasion to think vilely of themselves. As a man that is of a curious neat Spirit, and affects it as an excellency, he will not do an uncomely act, no not in secret; it is against his Spirit to do it: So nor will men defile that excellency their Conscience apprehends such. And it must be acknowledged, that many of the Heathen saw that in Vertue which made them love it for it's own excellency, and as it put an Ornament on their Souls. They professed to do things virtutis amore, for the love of Vertue, they renounced vain-glory and such outward respects in many of their actions. This indeed was a conscientious respect in them, yet still it is not Conscience of God. For if vertue be considered as an Ornament (as Conscience may apprehend it, which sets a man up in his own esteem and others) that adorns the Mind, as Learning doth, men may affect it, and love it and seek it, but still so as it falls into the same sphere and account that glorying in any other particular doth, be it either Honour or Learning. Yea, and if it could be supposed, that a man prized true Grace thus, chiefly as it is an Ornament to a mans Soul, but yet abstracted from God, and not directed in order to him, this would be as great a sin, as those other Lusts in men are, who value either Honours or such other particular good things: For the reason were the same. And yet this was apparently the Heathens highest excellency, who thus left God out even in their highest Attainments. But Peter speaking of a vertue (and in it self but a moral vertue) Meekness (1 Pet. 3, 4.) says that as it is directed to God, being taken up, and exercised out of Conscience of God, and as it is acceptable to him (as the same Peter speaks in his second Chapter) So it is an Ornament of great price with God. And then God himself is respected in it: For nothing takes with God, but what relates unto himself.

To Conclude, in all these there is Conscience of an Idol (as Paul speaks) be it vertue for it self, be it Grace, but not Conscience of God. These are all Conscionable respects, Druggs only found in Consciences Natural Garden: But still the main ingredient, that should set all awork, is wanting.

C H A P.

C H A P. IX.

Another Deficiency in Natural Conscience is, That it may eye the Command, and yet not Obey for the sake of the Command, nor regard God as the utmost End in their Obedience.

N O T H E R Effect mentioned, was, that Natural Conscience in it's Instigations to Obedience, had a real respect unto God, and unto the Command of God. Laban (Gen. 31. 29.) forbore to hurt Jacob, having a Respect to Gods Charge given over Night: So likewise did Balaam, (Numb. 22. 18.)

Of this I have spoken much before, what it is to have a Conscience of God, and to do things from such a Conscience. Yet here some things practical may be added for the discovery of this, both as to the difference in the thing it self, and also as to the deceits Men run into, in thinking they act for God, and for his Command. The Foundation of which Deceit lies in this, that Corrupt Nature in us thinks much at every thing we do for God, and also having slight Apprehensions and Regards of God we are apt to put him off with any kind of Respects had to him, and we thereby so easily come to deceive our selves in a Conceit, that we act and do for him, when 'tis nothing less.

1. For that Respect which Men may have to the Command:

1. Men may have an Eye to the Command, when yet they Obey not for the sake of the Command: And so (as one says) Deo obtemperant non obsequuntur. If Men take the Command into their Thoughts, if they look at the Command as the material cause of their Obedience, and the exemplary cause they are to square their Actions to, they think they perform that regard to the Command that is due to it; when yet they regard it not so, as to do the thing because it is Commanded. They look to it as their Chart to direct, but not as the Spring that should move and steer them in and unto their Obedience. A Slave may diligently repeat over and over in his thoughts, and be carefull to remember exactly the Command of his Master, as well as a Son the Command of his Father; but yet still in the Slave it is not kindly Obedience, such as is performed chiefly with respect to his Command, as in a Son it is; Whereas David describing a Godly Man and his Obedience (Psal. 119. 1, 2, 3.) at the 4th verse shews the ground he looks at in his Obedience; Thou hast Commanded me to keep thy Precepts diligently. Others do it out of Conscience so Commanding, but not out of Conscience of the Command; which usually appears in this, that Conscience lets us alone in some Commands, when it is Vehement in urging others.

2. In looking at God in their Obedience, Men are willing to deceive themselves many ways.

1. They may have a real regard unto God as the Object of the Service they perform, and with this they do but delude themselves, if it be not also superscribed and directed to him. Now in all Duties of Worship performed by us, God is the Person to whom intentionally a Man directeth it; as in Pray-praying, the Person spoken unto is God; in Hearing, the Person that speaks to us is God, and we give him the hearing, as making account that a God speaks to us. Now, this may be, and yet still our selves may be the final Cause or end for whose sake, and upon whose interest the Duty is performed. I may speak to a man, as the person to whom my speech is directed; when yet it is my own business for which it is intended; and so I speak but for my self. And thus a man may perform a Service even to an Enemy, (as Laban and Balaam did) and intend and mind them as the Object of their Service, but not as the End. Conscience herein carries a man towards God, but this is not Conscience of God. They pray toward him rather than to him. When it is said (Zach. 5. 7.) They fast, but not to me; it cannot be so understood as if God was not the Object of the Duty, or the person it was directed and addressed unto (for they could not take on them to fast but that they dealt with him, and made their supplications to him) but the defect or default that is found is, that they made him not the End of those duties. They fast (says God) but not to me: And yet men are content to run away with this, as that regard which is due to God, in being in some regard a real respect.

2. They may further look to God as the Author and Efficient of the Command, and the Rewarder of the performance of it, and the Punisher of the Breach of it, when still they respect him not in their obedience as the final Cause. They look to him as from whom the Command comes, but they obey it not for his sake, and so Conscience moves from God, but not effectually for God. They return (says God) but not to the most high, (Hos. 7. 16.) An unregenerate mans Conscience looks to God the Commander, as well as a regenerate mans, but then it is either as a Slave hath an eye to his Master, which is termed Eye-service, as not being done heartily for him, (Col. 3. 22, 23. compared) or as an Hireling on his Master; or as a condemned man upon his Judge: But a godly man looks at God as one whose interest he hath made his own, and is therefore glad that God will command him. A godly man loves the Command the better because it comes from God, and loves God the better because he is pleased to command and use him. And when it is thus, then a mans Works are said to be wrought in God. (John 3. 21.) The want of which is oppositely that which makes other mens Works evil. (v. 20.) For every one that doth evil, hateth the Light, neither cometh to the Light, lest his Deeds should be reprov'd. But he that doth truth, cometh to the Light, that his deeds may be made manifest that they are wrought in God. Where you see, to do the Truth, or to act sincerely, is all one as to work our works in God, that is, chiefly upon his Interest. It is termed (2 Cor. 1. 12.) Sincerity of God, as having respect to him, as if none else were concerned: And no other eying God in his Commands (as appears by that place) will satisfy a regenerate Conscience.

3. Men may have a real respect to the Glory of God, when yet not to that Glory which is due to his Name (which the Psalmist calls for) and so not glorifie him as God. Haters and Persecutors of the People and Children of God, and so Haters of God, yet relieve themselves with this pretence (as having some respect thereto in their Consciences) not only that They think they do God good Service, (John 16. 2.) but farther (Isa. 66. 5.) say Let God be glorified. Hear the Word of the Lord, ye that tremble at his Word; Your Brethren that hated you, that cast you out for my Names sake, said, Let the Lord be glorified: But he shall appear to your joy, and they shall be ashamed.

But 1. They do but say it (as there) and that faintly, and when their great Zeal is in the prosecution of their lusts of Malice, they colour it over with taking that respect into their Thoughts, and so relieve themselves with the pretence of it.

2. And Secondly, If the thought thereof rise up to a zeal of God (as in Paul and the Jews (Rom. 10. 3.) it did, and may do in others) in what is truly the Service of God, yet it still comes in but secondarily, not as the predominant end, and motive, but as an end taken in by the by. They act as a man that at once can pleasure himself and another, and who will be glad it falls out so well, that what is done for himself chiefly, is also a kindness to another. And thus, a man may be glad when he can pleasure an Enemy, when withal he serves himself, and will make the best of such a kindness, as if he did it for him.

3. And again, men may aim at doing Service to God as far as they use to aim at serving men, as their King, as their Countrey: As Souldiers and Subjects use to say, that they do service to their King and Country, as it is a common Cause, magnified and cryed up to do so: And in this Service they use to spend their bloods. And after the same manner was Paul zealous for God, and the Religion of the Jews, as a man would be for his King, or the Cause of Religion as it is a Cause in common. But thus only to aim at serving God, is too low for him; It is not enough to aim at God thus far in thy Service, as much as thou wouldest aim at men: But if thou glorifiest not God as God (Rom. 12. 1.) that is, as such a great God ought to be glorified, and transcendently set up above all Creatures, even above thy self; thou dost not glorifie God as thou oughtest. Many aim at glorifying God as far as they would serve a man, a Superiour, but they must glorifie him as God, that is, above all else; even themselves and all their own Interests: Not only by going against their Interests for him, but when both fall in, yet to be moved by his above their own.

4thly and Lastly. There is no deceit more general, than is this. viz. That if in the motion to any Duty, the Considerations of God and his Command were the first Propounders or Motioners thereof in a man's Conscience, then the man thinks them to be the chiefest swaying Motives. If these get but the start, and have but the priority of time, if they put forth the first hand out of the Womb; men then put the Birth-right, the Dominion or prerogative upon them; and this they do, tho' Worldly or other self-ends do carry the work on, and are the most effectual Agents to bring it to the Birth. You will find that when a man is to do any action that is good, upon the motion twenty by-ends will come in about him, like so many Beggars about a great man, if he offers to stir abroad. Now, the main repute of bringing forth the action, will not be cast on that which was the first Propounder, but on that which was the main and strongest stickler in it, and promoted it, and brought it forth to execution. Now, Conscience is apt in most such actions, if not to be the first in them, yet to shuffle in such Considerations, as wherein God should be respected, and then to cry, this is done for God. Jehu was indeed first moved and set a work by a Prophet, and by God and his Conscience, to destroy Idolatry and Ahab's House, but it was respect to his Kingdom which maintained the action, and which fell in and carried him thro' in it: And yet because Conscience had some hand in it, he in his own deceitful thoughts ascribes all to it, entitleth Zeal for God to be the only Author of it: See my Zeal (says he) for the Lord of Hosts. Conscience often doth but cast in the Bill, and make the motion, and rules the Suit; and Worldly by-ends follow it, bears the Charges, and are the great promoters in it; yet then it must needs be made an act of Conscience, and the Verdict is given in its name alone as the Foreman of that Jury.

C H A P. XII.

H E last Effect of Natural Conscience in respect of what is good, is, That it gives forth Peace upon doing well, as God's Commissioner. And of this Tranquility of Mind, which accompanies doing Vertuously, great things are spoken by Heathens, and (as would seem) out of their own experience.

And truly in Answer unto this, I would in the first place readily grant, that God, even God himself, in and by an Unregenerate Man's Conscience, doth for particular Actions, speak an Approbation and Encouragement when they do well. That outward Blessings and outward Peace in this Life were dispensed under the Old Testament, (and are now) even to Carnal Jews and Gentiles, upon their outward doings that were Righteous, few, if any Man denies; when yet their Persons were, and are for the same Actions liable to Eternal Wrath. Now that some inward Peace from God should be vouchsafed their spirits upon such Actings, by which he should so far appear to approve and own Actions that are materially good, with a different respect from what are Evil; this holds but a due Proportion with that other dispensation of God. The Judgment of God is according to Truth, (says the Apostle, Rom. 2. 2.) that is, God will ever acknowledge a thing to be what in truth it is, and so will own what is good so far as it is good: Yea, even at the latter day, then when he pronounceth some Actions to have been deficient, and in respect of the Manner of performance deserving Wrath and Condemnation, yet then as a Righteous Judge, he will acknowledge what was any way good therein with any other sort of goodness. For every Man shall be judged with all the abatements his Condition did or would afford, even when he Perisheth, Rom. 2. 12. For as many as have sinned without Law, shall also Perish without Law; and as many as have sinned in the Law, shall be judged by the Law. And Conscience as well in excusing (which is, when a Man hath done a good Action) as in accusing for what is evil, is said συμωσι- τωσιν to witness with, Rom. 2. 15. Witness with whom? Even with God in either, God in the one Witnessing with the Conscience, as well as in the other. And as the Directing light of Conscience is from God (as hath been said) so also the Excusing light may ad tantum, that is, in some measure, be also ascribed unto him. I would but further propound Jehu's Case and Instance to any Sober Man, for the Confirmation both of this Truth, and the Reasons for it which I even now alledged, 2 Kings 10. 30. It is expressly said, that God said unto Jehu, Because that thou hast done well in Executing that which was right in my Eyes, and hast done unto the House of Ahab, according to all that was in mine Heart. God, whether by himself, or by a Prophet, or otherwise, I need not dispute, testified to him the Approbation of this Fact as good. Now hereupon I urge, that what God spake to his outward Ears, the same thing this same God might, yea, and did speak to his Conscience, which is the inward Ear, apprehensive of what God doth speak. Yea, and further, God did speak this to shew his Approbation of it, to the end that his Conscience should know so much, and view it with Comfort: And then God also makes an outward Promise hereupon, Thy Children of the Fourth Generation shall sit upon the Throne of Israel. This also his Conscience with a Joy and Contentment might take in from God, as a Reward of his well doing; which makes good the Proposition of that Reason son afore alledged. I might say the like in the Case of Gods acknowledging Abimelechs Integrity to himself, in that sense he apologiseth for himself, (Gen. Chap. 12. 20. 5, 6.)

Yet 2. I say, (that this Concession may not be mistaken) That though God thus far doth witness with Conscience in Approbation of what is good in the Fact, yet Natural Conscience usually doth (as it is apt thro' the defilement of it) carry on it's own Testimony further than God ever intended.

1. Conscience proceeds too far in assuming and taking upon it this Occasion to pronounce Peace to the State of the Person, which is as false a Conclusion upon the premises in it self, as pernicious to the Man. Cains Conscience when it was once struck and blasted from God, with the Guilt of Killing his Brother, ran out in a despairing Conclusion, My Sin is greater than that it may be forgiven, Gen. 4. 13. This Sense the Original bears, and is so varied in the Margent. Here Conscience carried it on further than that which God had spoken to his Conscience; for his Sin was not such, but it might have been forgiven; so now on the contrary, when God gives forth and speaks such an imperfect Approbation of the fact for the outward performance of it, Conscience runs away with it, and speaks Peace to the State of the Man, and from outward carriages pronounceth Justification, and Eternal Peace. Thus Paul once thought himself alive, from his doing the Law; and so they cry Peace, Peace, when there is no Peace, as the Scripture speaks. And so here that distinction Interpreters give upon that of Abimelechs Integrity, holds true: There is, Integritas facti, & integritas personæ: An Approbation of the particular Fact, when there is not so of the Person, and his State. I might give many Instances of this kind, how when God speaks but so far to a thing, Mens Hearts in the Application and Conclusion fall into the greatest delusions. This is true in Men Godly, as well as Unregenerate. No Man shall draw near to God, but God will so far draw near to him. A Temporary Believer that is not in the state of Grace, if he doth come and pray to God fervently, God will put a Joy into his Heart to encourage him to come again. No Man shall set a step towards God, but God will set a step towards him. But then Men mistake, to the perdition of their own Souls, that what is really intended but an encouragment, they draw and conclude to be an acceptation of their Persons to Eternal Life, and account Joy from God to be joy in God.

A Second Error which Natural Conscience runs into, is even concerning matters of Fact, inasmuch as God approving the Fact in and with Conscience, but so as it is morally good, Conscience is apt to pronounce the same Sentence, super totum, upon the whole of it, the carriage of the Heart in it, and all, and often blesteth and applauds it self in it. This is evident in Jehu, whose Conscience shewed it self unfaithful to God and him thus, that he overlook't the carriage of his Heart in it, and the carnal ends he drave therein; and yet pronounced Peace to himself upon the whole, both for Matter and Manner: Come see my Zeal (says he) for the Lord of Hosts: Whenas the same God pronounceth of the very same Fact, in respect of his Carnal Ends that were predominant in it, and acted him, that it was Murther, Hos. 1. 4. So that I may apply what befell that good Lord Protector in the Reign of Edward the VI. (who was acquitted of Treason, and yet Condemned for Felony) unto what befalls an Unregenerate Man in this respect: That namely, whilst for the outward fact God in this Life gives him such an answerable Approbation as hath been spoken of, yet at the same time he binds over his Person to Eternal Wrath for Treason against himself, in not having made him his chiefest End therein, nor aimed at his Glory, which is the highest Treason against the Sovereign God.

This hath been spoken by way of Concession herein, and to clear it from mistakes: I come now to a more set Examination of the difference Natural Conscience gives, from that which a Regenerate Man hath. In the Examination whereof, I shall Consider Three things.

Book IV

1. The differing Well-Springs and Fountains or Originals, whence Peace is fetcht.

2. The ways of Peace (as the Scripture phrase is) which Natural Conscience takes to fetch and bring in peace, differing from what the Spirit of God in a true Believer carries on, and directs the Heart unto.

3. I shall cast in some differences concerning the peace it self.

1. For the Source or Originals of true peace and false, I shall fully couch my intendments in it under this following Metaphor and Allegory.

You may remember how in this discourse we have carried in our eye those two dividing Covenants of Grace and of Works, under one of which all men are at present. Unregenerate men are under the Covenant of Works, Regenerate under that of Grace. And I have also shewn how each of these have a Lordship or Dominion over those that are under them, (Rom. 6. 14. Rom. 7. 1.) And so they have the power of Life and Death, Peace or Wrath, according as men demean themselves towards them. It was a Royalty which the Covenant of Works once had, to give Life and Peace, and to pronounce the Sentence hereof which stood good in Law. The Commandment (or Covenant of Works) was ordained (originally) unto Life (says Paul, Rom. 7. 10.) and the man that doth them shall live in them, (Gal. 3. 12.) and that is all one as to have Peace, Absolution, and Justification from them. And therefore in Scripture a Covenant of Peace (Is. 54. 10.) a Covenant of Life and Peace, (Mal. 2. 5.) are equivalent.

2. All Royalty and Dominions have (as you know) Courts belonging to them, unto which the subjects of their Homage come. Now these two Dominions have all their Courts and Judgment for Justification, &c. By the same reason, speaking Peace, is verbum forensecum, a forensecal act, properly belonging to Court proceedings, or holding Analogy with Sentence in a Court, and this our Divines, out of Scripture, against the Papists, have largely shewn.

3. Each of these Courts (which are first kept in the Mannor or Mansion-House of every mans own Soul, shall be more publicly held at the day of Judgment) have their two Offices, which (because we are speaking of Peace) I may term Justices of their Peace; or (if you will) two Stewards of these Courts, that are authorized to manage things in their Names. Natural Conscience is by Nature and legal Inheritance the Steward of the Covenant of Works, but Faith is by Grace appointed to transact the Affairs of the Covenant of Grace, (Eph. 2. 8.) By Grace ye are saved, through Faith.

4. Every man in either state that is a Seeker of Peace, (which I add, because some are so ignorant that they mind not any such thing; so the Apostle speaks of the Gentiles, Rom. 9. 30. The Gentiles that sought not after Righteousness) doth seek to have his Peace from that Court to which he belongs. Look what his state is, or what the Jurisdiction is which he is yet under, look what homage he belongs to, unto what he falls in his own Spirit, and unto that Court he secretly comes and hath recourse for a Sentence of Peace and Life. If a man belongs still but to the Covenant of Works, although now man being fallen, that Covenant be utterly unable to give Peace; yet this having been the ancient Custom of this Mannor in Adams time when the Covenant was in power and force unto such ends and purposes, and this being the Natural Law between the Creature and Creator: Thither therefore do poor deceived Souls come all of them still to take up their Copies for Life and Peace. And Natural Conscience being by Nature constituted the supream Judge in that Court, will hold its place, and being true to its Lord and Masters Royalty, and having never yet submitted to the supream Jurisdiction of Faith, and these poor Souls knowing no better; they come and deal deal with Conscience for Life and Peace; and Conscience takes upon it to proceed according to the ancient Rules and Customs of that Court, and so sets men on work, a doing, exacts the performances of such and such Duties, then undertakes how it will thereupon issue out Peace and Comfort. Satisfie me (says Conscience) by doing what I direct, and instigate you to, (and nothing will satisfie it but doing what it commands, nothing else will bribe it, no other pay passeth currant with it) and thou shalt have inward peace from me. Yea and further, if men be slack and negligent in those dues, it tortures, disquiets, and issues out Writs of Threatnings, &c. And thus, as it undertakes to sanctifie by urging legal Motives, so also to justifie and pronounce Peace in a legal way, for indeed it was once ordained to both.

But now 5thly. On the contrary, this Covenant being made void, and so God having given unto Free-Grace the Dominion for Justification, and true peace, (Rom. 5. 21.) Grace is said to Reign to Eternal Life, and it hath taken the Kingdom to it self. It is therefore now become the onely true Fountain of Peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ. It is written on the Frontis-piece of every one of Paul's Epistles, that by the Inscription over the Porch you may know to whom the Dominion appertaineth, even unto Grace, from God and Christ, upon whom Peace and Life do hold.

6. This Grace in Gods Heart will be applied unto only by Faith in our Hearts, for it can trust no other Principle within us. And though it be the Lord of Peace, yet it doth not issue forth a Sentence of Peace authentickly, but upon mens Believing, and by Faith; as Lords do not give possession without their Stewards. Rom. 5. 1. Therefore being justified by Faith, we have peace with God through Jesus Christ.

Lastly, These two have divided the World from the Fall to this day, into two parties, the one seeking Righteousness or Peace, by the works of the Law, the other seeking it by Faith, Rom. 10. 30, 31, 32. What shall we say then? That the Gentiles which followed not after Righteousness, have attained to Righteousness, even the Righteousness which is of Faith: But Israel which followed after the Law of Righteousness, hath not attained to the Law of Righteousness. Wherefore? Because they sought it, not by Faith; but as it were by the works of the Law; For they stumbled at that stumbling stone.

This differing way of seeking Peace by Conscience, or by the Covenant of Works one way, and by Faith in another way, began in Abel and Cain, the two Prototypes of regenerate and unregenerate men. (Jude 11.) Their way is call'd the way of Cain. And the difference is evident by the 4th of Genesis, and Heb. 11. 3. both sacrificed and worshipt God; But (Heb. 11. 3.) Abel offered it up by Faith, that is, he lookt not at the performance, as that from whence he must have his peace and acceptation with God, but by Faith, by believing he lookt on his Free-Grace and Promise of the Messiah given. But Cain erred in his Heart, not knowing this way of Peace, but thought to go the Old way of Works, when yet he wanted power to perform them, in which way Natural Conscience led him. He brought his Sacrifice as a performance, and was so stout and stiff in his Principle, that he was in a rage that God should give a manifest Token he was not accepted. And God on the other side, perceiving him so angry, says to him, Why art thou wrath and sullen, Cain, I will deal with thee according to thine own Principles. And out of his own Law and Covenant of Works, by which he thought he had the better of God, God confutes him, Gen. 4. 7. If thou dost well (or good) shalt thou not be accepted? This is plainly thy Covenant of Works, by doing good to be accepted; therefore, in the next words it is opposed to a'll sin, If thou dost not well, sin lyes at the door. He speaks to him in his own Language, and yet beats his own Weapon to his Head, and bids his Conscience for the time view over, and examine his own performances and ways, and particularly the frame of Heart wherewith he did offer this Sacrifice. The Sacrifice of the Wicked is an Abomination to the Lord, much more when he offers it with an Evil Mind, as Cain had done. And for time to come God bids him to look to it that he did well in all things (seeing he stood upon it) or he could not look for Acceptation. And thus God dealt with the Jews, when they were sturdy in the Opinion of their own Righteousness, Ezek. 18. from v. 5. to v. 10th. But if a Man be Just, and do that which is Lawful and Right, and hath not Eaten upon the Mountains, neither hath lift up his Eyes to the Idols of the house of Israel, neither hath defiled his Neighbours Wife, neither hath come near to a menstruous Woman, and hath not oppressed any, but hath restored to the Debtor his Pledge, hath spoiled none by Violence, hath given his Bread to the Hungry, and hath covered the Naked with a Garment: He that hath not given forth upon Usury, neither hath taken any increase, that hath withdrawn his Hand from iniquity, hath Executed true Judgment between Man and Man: Hath walked in my Statutes, and hath kept my Judgments to deal truly, he is just, he shall surely Live, saith the Lord God. Wherein he offers to deal with them according to that Covenant of Works they trusted in, and puts them to it, thereby to shew them their inability to perform it. Thus the Division began, and so it went on to Paul's time, (Rom. 9. 31, 32.) and as it was then, so it is now, and will be to the end of the World.
Heart

These are the two contrary Sources, and also ways of Peace in the General set out; and this Metaphor of a way the Apostle takes up and follows, (Rom. 9. 30.) terming it a seeking or purfuance, by a Metaphor from Mens running in a way or race.

2. Let us now trace and follow each of these sorts of Men in their several paths which they take, than which nothing more discovers the difference of them. And because Rectum est Index sui, et obliqui, I will first set out in few words the way of Peace by believing, or Faith, as it runs in opposition to this high way and Rode of all Mankind, which Conscience will needs mislead them in.

If God means to give true Peace to a poor Soul, by the Tenour of the Covenant of Grace, the way he takes is this.

1. He breaks the old peace which Conscience had spoken, and to that end comes in with a new Light. Upon this heavy dull ey'd Conscience (that hath but half an Eye by nature to discover to a Man his Sinfulness, and shews but the outside of it) and God by this new Light gives a Man a true and through sight into that Condition he hath continued in, and gives him a view of the sinfulness of all his Works and performances (yea of those from which Conscience hath been so bold as to speak Peace formerly unto him) by discovering to him the defect for Manner and Ends of them. Conscience plainly tells him, the true God thou hast not Glorified (as Daneel told Belsazzar, Dan. 5.) nor hadst him ever in thy thoughts to mind and pursue as thy dearest Interest. And so Conscience discovers how the inwards of his Soul are very rottenness, and that he never did a good Action (in respect of what should be the Soul that gives Life and Spirit that makes an Action truly good) no not one in his whole Life. A Man hath a New Light which runs through the inwards of all, as the Spirit that moved in the wheels. I saw (saith Paul) that all Concupiscence wrought in me, (Rom. 7. 8.) That the best and rightest Actings of the Law on my Heart by my Conscience, had only this issue to bring forth motions of Sins; and now the Law which I thought had been ordained for Life, I found to be unto Death. And my Brethren, because that Natural Conscience was the great misleader in this, therefore God's Spirit first assaults that, and storms Conscience the first of all those Towers and Faculties in Men's Souls, and makes the breach there. Yea God takes this Law, and the true light of it, and cutteth Conscience it's Throat first of all therewith; and so the whole Man dies, and all that false peace which Conscience had given him him expires for ever in hitu, Rom. 7. 9. When the Commandment came into my Soul, (as the light of the Sun into a darkish Room) this new Light caused Sin to revive in his Conscience, namely, the proper state of the Guilt of it; And I dyed (saith he) and it was the Commandment flew him. (v. 11.) And (saith he Gal. 2. 19.) I through the Law am dead to the Law. Yea, and Conscience which was the great Deceiver of the whole Man, and undertook to be the Dictatour, and Conservator pacis, the Keeper of the Peace of this old Common-Wealth, is that part of the Soul, that is made the Rendezvous of all a Man's Sins, and of all Confusion and trouble for them. All a Mans Sins do quarter upon Conscience, and now it pays for all, bears the load, the guilt of all. As in a Man in a Feavour, tho' other parts are in a distemper, yet Head and Heart most; and so here, tho' all in a Man is in a disturbance, yet Conscience is as the Stomach, whether the humours are gathered which makes the Man sick to Death.

Now 2. To be sure this Man will never put trust in Conscience for giving forth Peace to him any more, in this former way; nor will the Heart ever come to it's Court to take it up, nor to have it upon those terms as it had wont to do. Upon this discovery, yea by it, this Court of Conscience, the Chancery, is pull'd down, and so ever dissolved, and that justly too, for it had run all a Man's Life-time into a Præmunire. And now all it's decrees of Life and Peace are Casheired and Cancelled for Ever by that one Sentence which the Soul now Submits to, uttered by God upon Man's having broken the Covenant of Works: That by the works of the Law no Flesh shall be Justified, Rom. 3. 20. The Law is kill'd in the Man. (Rom. 7. 6.) That being Dead wherewith we were held, and the Man is Dead to the Law, (Gal. 2. 19.) I am Dead by the Law to the Law. He speaks of the light and works of Humiliation, by which he was kill'd by the Law. And I saw I had been so deceived by it, (says he Rom. 7. 11.) that I shall never trust the proceeding of it, or have recourse to that Court for Life and Peace any more. It is Dead, and made void to me as to any such Relief, and my Soul is as Dead to it, and I have no Heart no Spirit to have to do with it, or it's Agent Conscience, upon the old terms, to get Peace by doing any more.

3. Now let us see what way the Soul is directed unto, as the true way for Peace. it is meerly and intirely Faith on Christ, Rom. 3. 24, 25, 26. Being Justified freely by his Grace through the Redemption that is in Jesus Christ. Whom God hath set forth to be a Propitiation through Faith in his Blood, to declare his Righteousness for the Remission of Sins, that are past through the forbearance of God. To declare I say at this time his Righteousness, that he might be Just, and the Justifier of him which believeth in Jesus. Rom. 4. 5. But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that Justifieth the Ungodly, his Faith is counted for Righteousness, Rom. 15. 13. Now the God of Hope fill you with all Joy, and Peace through Believing. Rom. 5. 1. Therefore being Justified by Faith, we have Peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Yea now that this Court of Faith, is in and by Graces preogative set up to give forth Peace, now even Conscience it self, that was the great Undertaker for Peace afore, the great Non-submitter to the Righteousness and Peace of Faith (it is the Phrase Rom. 10. 3.) is now glad to come and appear in this Court, and to make use of Faith, and brings with it all the Works, that were the Darlings of Conscience, which it once Judg'd good, but now sees to be but dead works; as also all the sins, whereof it is the drein, the sink (and therefore is call'd an Evil Conscience) all these it brings with it, and comes weary and heavy loaden to Christ, and cries out, Oh Sprinkle me Lord with thy Blood, by Faith! Oh give me Joy and Peace through believing! The Scriptures are exprefs, Heb. 9. 14. The Blood of Christ purgeth your Conscience from Dead Works, when nothing else can do it. The opposition there shews how it is done, Heb. 10. 22. Let us draw near with full Assurance of Faith, having our Book VI Hearts sprinkled from an Evil Conscience. And this is that very same Conscience that once was counted so good, and spake so much Peace once. And now this Conscience that hath been made the seat of Humiliation, the Rendezvous of all Guilt, is now on the contrary made the seat of Justification, the Receptacle or Cistern of Christs Blood, which runs into it thro' the Pipe or Conveyance of Believing.

Quest. But will you say to me, Is there no use of a Regenerate Conscience in the matter of speaking peace after Believing?

Answ. 1. I Answer in General, when Conscience it's Court is down, and it self put out of Office of being the supream Judge, the room where the Audit of Gospel Peace is held, is the Ear of Faith, wherein and whereby God makes the Soul to hear of Peace and Gladness, even the Joyful Sound, yet still that Peace which Faith alone brings in and settles in the whole Soul, is that which quiets it, and establisheth it's Joy: And an Eternal prohibition is given in against all proceedings for Peace, according to the former custom of that Court, and Conscience it self hath thus submitted to Faiths court, as to this supream Jurisdiction thereof. Indeed Conscience comes to be taken in again as an Under-Officer under Faith as an Apparatur, as an Appendix or Subservient, and receives from Faith a New Commission, Gal. 3. 15, 17. There is a Phrase used of the Law, that it was added to the promises of the Gospel, added, that is, as a subservient to it: And as the Law, it's Master, so Conscience also is added to Faith to serve it in many Offices, and among other in this of Peace. It is not proper here to enlarge upon some Offices it serves in, viz. to represent what Sins are in the Heart, also to instruct and direct to what is to be done by us, and instigate thereunto, or restrain from Evil; it being as a Rule in an Artificers hand to guide us in working. These are Foreign to my Scope, the matter of speaking Peace, and the Influence a Regenerate Conscience hath thereunto, is that which lies afore me.

1. Faith must be the sole Judge to pronounce the Sentence of Peace, of Justification, and Conscience if it could bring this Verdict, I know nothing by my self (as Paul speaks of himself) yet it must be silent in this respect, and only say, I am not thereby Justified, and leave it intirely to Faith, to transact the whole of Justification another way.

Yet 2. Conscience may come in as a Witness in this Court of Faith, to confirm that Sentence.

1. It is a great Witness to the soveraign Vertue that is in Christs Blood, (as that Blind Man was to Christ himself, Whereas I was Blind, sure I am, I now see, and this Man hath opened mine Eyes, so) Conscience comes in and attests, Whereas I was wounded, Bloodied and gasht with such deep and smarting Abominations, as no Medicines in Heaven or Earth could cure or assuage, I found that Blood of my Redeemer, which Faith alone applied to me, to give me ease, yea, cure and heal those Wounds, and Wash and Purge out those stains which no Nitre nor Fullers Soap could do. The Waves rose high, the Winds blustered, and the still voice of that Blood speaking better things in me, than Abels did in Cains Conscience, calmed all. The Sea and the Winds Obeyed it, and were stilled at it. Blood is made one, yea and the first Witness (1 John 5.) which is no other than the Blood of Sprinkling, in it's efficacy upon the very sprinkling thereof to make Conscience as white as Snow, though before it was as Red as Scarlet, with bold and Bloody Transgressions. Conscience is that Faculty which gives the Testimony of that Blood, and correspondently (Heb. 10. 22.) washing with Water, which is the Second Witness in that of John, is mentioned and joined with the Sprinkling of an Evil Conscience, as here in John the witness of Blood and Water in like manner are.

2. Conscience seconds and backs the Sentence of Faith, by giving in Evidence of Graces and gracious dispositions in the Heart; and this in and by the Holy Ghost, witnessing with them that we truly believe, and are Persons Justified by Faith, 2 Cor. 1. 12. For our Rejoycing is this, the Testimony of our Conscience, that in Simplicity and Godly Sincerity, not with Fleshly Wisdom, but by the Grace of God, we have had our Conversation in the World, and more abundantly to you wards. You see it was the Testimony of his Conscience, and it is but a Secondary Testimony, coming in to make good an higher Sentence, and so still subordinate unto Faith. And here I give these Cautions.

1. That Faith is left alone to treat for a Man's Peace, and Justification, and that it alone goes to Christ to pronounce that Sentence; only Conscience gives a Testimony unto Faith and the truth thereof.

2. That the matter of Regenerate Conscience's Testimony is not only fetched from outward facts or Performances (these are Natural Conscience Court-rolls it hath recourse to, to pronounce Peace from) but Regenerate Conscience looks chiefly to the inward Sincerity and carriage of the Heart to God in a Man's Conversation, as matter of Evidence. It regards inward and gracious dispositions in the Heart; and regards not all outward Performances further than as it hath discerned inward Sincerity aiming at Gods Glory to have been the Companion or rather ground of them. Conscience discerns and finds out gracious Dispositions in the Heart, and seeks after such chiefly, and then Faith finds out a promise to such dispositions, and the Holy Ghost bears witness with both.

3. A Regenerate Conscience witnesseth not by, or with, these our Graces, but as, and when actuated by the Holy Ghost; who to be sure will not use or improve that Testimony to the prejudice of Believing. This Eminent Disposition in Paul's Heart, in wishing to be accursed for his Country Men, he thus brings forth to light, My Conscience bearing me Witness in the Holy Ghost, enlightening me in the Discovery, and strengthening Conscience to give that Evidence. The truth is, Conscience so far as it is regenerated, and as thus commissioned anew by Faith, is not, nor should not be too forward to speak, lest it intrench upon what belongs to Faith; but only to answer, and give in Testimony in a subordination to Faith, whence it is call'd in to speak. It is termed rather the Answer of a good Conscience, (1 Pet. 3. 21.) than the proposition or claim of Conscience first made of it self: And it is the Answer of Conscience, as spoken first it self unto, and having heard Christs Blood speaking better things than the Blood of Abel, and as having heard Faith first talk of Christs Death and Resurrection for its Justification, (Rom. 4.) as the Foundation of its Answer, and Apology.

But now let us see how contrary and remote from this true way of Peace, that way is, which Natural Conscience doth mislead mens Spirits into, and how much and how many ways it endeavours to set a man out of the way. You may observe (Rom. 3. 17.) in the Catalogue or Indictment of the particulars, or general heads rather, of mens Corruptions, this inserted as one, The way of Peace they have not known, as not among themselves; so nor to find it with God. Heb. 3. 10, 11. They do always err in their Heart, and have not known my ways. So I swear in my Wrath, they shall not enter into my Rest. Their erring, and erring always, this standing universal Errata that is found in all Editions and Impressions of mens Hearts; is by reason of their being thus addicted to the Covenant of Works, as the sworn Creatures and Vassals of it.

The working of this Mystery of Iniquity, you may perceive through all States and Conditions which the Sons of men run through. For either

1. Men were never enlightned, nor Natural Conscience ever yet awakened; which was Paul's Case afore Conversion, (I was alive without the Law) or before the revival of sin in his Conscience: Or
2. They come to be awakened by the Book 6 Law, and living also under the Gospel, and being enlightned therein, and instructed in the way of Salvation; and Natural Conscience plays a deceitful part in all.

The first sort, that were never struck, which were never troubled nor humbled under the sense of their lost Condition at all, are the most of Mankind. And either they are such,

1. As are regardless of Peace of Conscience or Righteousness, in order to Eternal Life: They know not what either of these mean. Either through want of a discovery of their sinfulness, or Ignorance of a Righteousness ordained to Life eternal. And such were the most of the Heathens, and such are the most of common Christians, that are ignorant and atheistical. It is said of the Universality of the Gentiles, Rom. 9. 30. The Gentiles, followed not after Righteousness, as the Jews did; that is, they lived without the sense of any such thing, and so had it not in pursuit at all. These are said to sleep, 1 Thes. 5. 6. Let us not sleep as others, namely, of Mankind do, they being in the Night, (v. 7.) that is, the darkness of Ignorance: And cry Peace and Safety, (v. 3.) of that Chapter, as being ignorant of any danger they are in, in respect of another World; but this at the best is but Quietness not Peace, A freedom from, being troubled. As if a man deep in debt is kept by them about him in ignorance of his Estate; hears of no Suits entred against him, no Serjeant to attack him, no Writ out for him: He is in a senseless Security, and not at Peace with his Adversaries. It is such a quiet as a man condemned to die next morning, hath in his Sleep over night. Tis called a Spirit of Slumber, II. 11. 8. when yet Damnation slumbreth not, as 2 Pet. 2. 3.

Now, it is Natural Conscience is in the cause for this. For whereas its office is (as the Prophets was, Ezek. 3.) to discover to man his sinfulness, And to give warning of the Judgments of God, as (Rom. 1.) Natural Conscience that is thus entrusted, seeks to hide, conceals all this, even from it self, They wink with their eyes, and are said to close their eyes, &c. lest they should see, as the Prophet, and Christ out of the Prophet speaks.

For if Conscience at any time opens an eye-lid half way, sees a little of a man's sin, a glimpse thereof, yet it will shut the same again presently, that it might not see what follows, and is the Consequent of it, what is the next behind it, Judgment and Wrath, which if it comes in so quick as it cannot shut out the sight thereof, as the Gentiles could not, Rom. 1. last: Yet it turns away the next thought, and cutts off the application thereof unto it self. Rom. 1. 28. and Chap. 2, 3. And thinkest thou this, O man, that judgest them which do such things, and dost the same, that thou shalt escape the Judgment of God? Thus they shut their eyes lest they should see, Mat. 13. Now this is wilful security of Conscience, this is not Peace. Now if mens Consciences will use such tricks as these, when a man doth ill, to keep off the consideration thereof, or of the Consequent of it, and to pocket up, and conceal the Writs of Judgment, and let them lye by and not open them. (So Hosea. 7. 2. They consider not in their Hearts that I remember all their Wickedness) And if when a man doth well (as he thinks) then to cry Peace, peace: That man shall be kept quiet all his days. But this is not so much as true, much less peace; but Deceit and Fraud. This is a making their Hearts glad with Lyes.

Or 2. Mens Case is, that they set themselves a-work to follow after a Righteousness in order to peace. As many of the Jews Rom. 9. 30, 31. are said to do: And some few Heathens, and many devout Christians among Papists and our selves use to do.

Now 1. For those few Gentiles that sought for any kind of Righteousness above the rest, they withal professed to trust in themselves. Upon these Three Principles. 1. To Obey right Reason. 2. And that they Obeyed God in obeying Right Reason. And 3. To trust in themselves, Sibi fidere. These were the professed essed Catholick Maxims, or fundamental Principles practical in their Religion. And which is strange, the very same proper Character, in the same words is attributed to the Jews, (Luke 18. 9.) That they trusted in themselves, with this addition, that they were Righteous. So then the same Spirit and mystery of Iniquity wrought the very same thing both in Jews and some Heathens, and both from the same Cause. A Righteousness both sought, and peace therefrom, and that Righteousness was in and from themselves, on which they trusted, with despising others. And this was their Sibi fidere, their trusting in themselves. Which how contrary it is to the fundamental Principle, true Christianity teacheth every ones Heart that is truly a Christian, Paul hath informed us, in making this one essential characteristic property of a true Believer, Phil. 3. 3. Who rejoyce in the Lord Jesus (as trusted in, and compleat to save) and put no confidence in the Flesh. And by Flesh he eminently intends a man's own Righteousness, which is of the Law, opposite to that by Faith, as by v. 6, 9. is evident. And how difficult a Lesson it is for us to learn, and how yet with all the main, and as it were the top, and the ultimate of all other God would bring us to, the same Apostle Paul hath in his own example after many years proficiency in Christianity, taught us, 2 Cor. 1. 9. We had the Sentence of Death in our selves, that we should not trust in our selves, neither for Bodily Life nor Strength, nor Righteousness, nor Revelations, Gifts nor Grace, nor any thing we can call ours whatever.

But 2^{dly}. As for the multitude of such as profess themselves Christians, which know the Scriptures, though they dare not in their Doctrine make such a profession of principles, yet in their Hearts they practise it.

For the Papists and their Devotionists, who profess Christ, and to trust in Christ, yet in the point of Righteousness and Life, you know what their Doctrine is. And as they set up the Pope, as holding all his power from Christ, yet exercising it against Christ, with profession it is in Christs stead; So they set up their own Righteousness, Graces and Doings, though they profess to hold all of Christ, and that by his merit these were first given: So as Nature in them too speaks out as far as it dares.

And Thirdly, For the generality of such Protestants as look after a Righteousness for their Peace, whilst they in Doctrine profess to trust in Christ alone by Faith only; and do at solemn times do homage to it, because of the Doctrine generally professed; yet practically their Hearts run the way of all Flesh before them; and having never been struck with the sense of their natural Condition, and emptiness, their Peace lies in satisfying their Consciences with Duties, which in the first and chief place raiseth up and maintaineth in them an Opinion that they are truly Religious and Conscientious in their ways, and then they are bold to add thereto Faith in Christ; yea and the opinion they have obtained of themselves from their Consciences, by complying with it in doing, is the Foundation on their Hearts of that their Faith on Christ.

Now as for this Peace of all these sorts of men, thus raised and maintained, it is sufficient by way of difference to say, that it hath been a Peace hath grown up alone out of what is in themselves; and not made and founded anew after a sight of their lost condition and of their being Enemies; or which is equivolent to it, there is not an utter renouncing of their own Righteousness as dung, and as being afraid to be found thereon (as was Pauls Case, Phil. 3.) but a Peace it is that was never concluded upon a new Treaty with God, and upon new offers of free Grace. The old title remains, and they act for the maintaining of it. For they having taken it for granted that God and they have been at Peace Conscience which they have by Nature hath struck in to be the upholder, continuer and maintainer of this Peace and the conceit hereof by doing Righteously may have uprightly, so keeping Peace (I allude to that Speech used of Christ, and indeed only proper to him, so making Peace, Eph. 2. 15.) whereas true and sound Peace is a Peace anew created, as the word is, Isa. 57. 29. I create the Fruit of the Lips; Peace created as light out of darkness at first, so 2 Cor. 4. 6. or as Creatures out of nothing. It brings a Man's former Light and Peace into Darkness and Confusion, reducing the Soul to nothing in it self, and in all its performances, and then God causing Light to spring in by the Face of Jesus Christ; it grows not up out of a mans own Heart and Conscience as a natural Soyl, as your Ears of Corn on the House tops, but its Original comes from what is without the Man, in Gods Heart and in Christ. It is a seed and fruit that drops from the lips of others Preaching the Gospel of Peace, either in their Writings or Sermons: I will create the Fruit of the Lips Peace, which (Eph. 2. 17.) Paul interprets of the Preaching of the Gospel of Peace, as it is therefore termed. It is not such a Peace as a Man behind hand in the World holds with his Creditors, Paying a little here and a little there, in some things punctually keeping his word, and so endeavouring to satisfie and keep them off from Arrests, and so thinking he holds up his Credit still with them. But it is a Peace which an utter Bankrupt hath obtained after he is utterly broke, that hath the Statute sued forth against him; and all his Creditors come in and he hath nothing to pay; yea, further, is discovered to be a perfect Cheat, Coyning himself, and then paying all he seemed to have. And what is the Peace such an one can expect? But a total forgiveness of Ten Thousand Talents out of meer Compassion, as you have it in the Parrable, Mat. 18. 24, 27. And most of all, a forgiveness of that Treason and dishonour so which the man is guilty in thinking to, put God off with his false Coin, his self coyned Righteousness, that had not his Stamp and Image on it. Rom. 5. 1. 11. compared. But the Peace which a Man justified by Faith is said to have, is by his receiving the Attonement: A total discharge and acquittance thro' the alone satisfaction of Jesus Christ, pleaded, and had recourse unto, by whom we have now received the attonement. The Debt was sued out, the man ready to be cast in Prison: Deliver him, (saith God) I have found a ransom, and he receives it, as a matter that wholly is from without him, and which comes as a new Gift, even as Rom. 9. 30. The Gentiles are said to have apprehended, received a Righteousness; so the word there used imports, κατελάβετε, laid hold on Righteousness: Even the Righteousness of Faith, as an hand lays hold of a gift without it self, as (Rom. 5. 17.) this of Righteousness is termed. Whereas the other thought to have wrought it out by doing, as men by running win a Prize: as those other words διώκων and ἐπιδραστὶ import (v. 31.)

In the Conclusion of this part of my Discourse, I cast in these three differences of true peace, from that which Natural Conscience gives.

1. True Peace is a peace comes from without you: But the peace of all these men by Natural Conscience is from within. Let me say it to you, Brethren, and be not offended by my inverting Christs word, The peace that is from within the man defiles, deceives the man. It is the peace that is wholly without, that saves and comforts the man. Only it is received within us by Faith, or we could not be comforted by it. It is compared therefore unto a Guard; The Peace of God, φρουρήσεται, shall guard your minds, προσέσται is Præsidium militare, a Guard, it is the same word that is used (1 Pet. 1. 5.) when it is said we are kept by the power of God unto Salvation: Kept as with a Garrison. Now look, as the power of God is a thing without us, and a Garrison is a forreign external defence, brought in to defend a place, and keep peace in it, which else would be at divisions within it self: So is this true peace, the Peace of God. It is therefore termed not a Peace of Conscience, but of God, (Phil. 4.) And also Peace in the Holy Ghost, (Rom. 14. 17.) and that good hope (as the Apostle calls it by way of distinction from false and untrue) Rom. 15. 13. It is from the God of hope, and through the power of the Holy Ghost. Now the God of all hope fill you with joy and peace in Believing, that ye may abound in hope thro' the power of the Holy Ghost. If thou hast not joy, thou mayst have peace: If not peace, thou mayst mayst have hope: Well, but all this joy, peace and hope come from without, from God, from the Holy Ghost; and therefore are taken in by the way of Faith, which is a receiving Faculty, it is all through believing. Yea, and they are brought in as Foreigners are, by a mighty power, which as it guards the Soul to Salvation, so it guards the Heart to peace. Or if you will, take that word of Christ, My peace (says he) by distinction. It is Christs peace which the Soul of a true Believer seeks, and which Christ in that Speech directs them to, in a double respect, and both of them exclusively spoken, as to the peace we ordinarily term peace of Conscience.

1. Because he is the sole Procurer and purchaser of, and matter of our peace. He is our peace, is the common cry of all Believers (Eph. 2. 14.) through his alone merit (Rom. 5. 1. 11.) and accordingly a Soul that seeks peace by Faith, eyes what is in Christ as the object matter of his peace with God, and is taken up with that in its pursuit after peace, (John 16. 33.) These things have I spoken that in me you might have peace. He had related in these late Sermons what he was about to do for them in dying, and also what he would do for them in Heaven. And let these things (says he) be matter of peace and comfort to your Souls; when I am gone. And therefore through Jesus Christ is every where added, where peace is spoken of, (Rom. 5. 1. Phil. 4. 6.)

2. It is Christs Peace, my Peace, and the Peace of God, because it is such, as God himself speaks and communicates when the Heart is quieted by it. And so in that respect also it is a peace without us. It is not a peace which Conscience speaketh (which is the speaker of the natural mans peace) but which Christ speaketh by Faith to Conscience, whom (Heb. 12. 25.) the Apostle termeth ὁ κύριος λαλοῦντα ἀπὸ θυγατρῶν. And so in that respect also it is Christs peace. The Scripture knows no such Phrase as Peace of Conscience. It is indeed Peace of Conscience subjective; Conscience being the principle it is spoken unto. But when it is spoken, it is so spoken as that it is the peace of God, and not peace with God only. Yea, and as a true Believer seeks for it, it is the peace of God only: He seeks not only to be at peace with God, but to have the peace of God, which God immediately from himself gives and communicates, this is that which a true Believer seeks. He goes to God and says, Lord, 'tis true I have walkt thus, and thus and have these and these Dispositions in me, but it is not the peace which these offer to give me, and in which my natural Spirit would rest in, that I wish for: But Lord, I desire thee to speak it. I will hear what the Lord will speak (says the Psalmist) He will speak peace to his People, (Psal. 88.) Oh let me hear himself speak.

A second difference is in that testimony which is allowed unto regenerate Conscience from within to give. It eyes principally what is the sincerity of Heart wherewith all hath been done in respecting God, and laying aside and renouncing carnal Ends. 2 Cor. 1, 2. This is our rejoycing, the testimony of our Conscience. What was it which this grand Jury founded its Verdict upon, and witnessed as matter of rejoycing? Even this, That in simplicity and sincerity of God: Not with fleshly Wisdom but by the grace of God we have had our Conversion in the World. So then, his having sincerity, aimed at God (in so much as he call'd it sincerity of God) and his having been moved and guided, not by principles or ends which fleshly Wisdom suggested, but by Motives and Perswasions fetcht and drawn from the Grace and Love of God, sweetly and predominantly swaying his Heart, (for so the Opposition of [By Grace] there runs unto with [Fleshly Wisdom] both being put in opposition as in eodem genere causarum, as two differing Principles, yet of the same head or kind of causes that is inducing, moving causes both; that look as Fleshly Wisdom moves and steers a Carnal Heart, so did the Grace of God move Paul's Heart) these are the things which his Regenerate Conscience was now taught to eye, or else (as in order unto Salvation) he should not have had matter of Rejoycing, for any other thing thing within the Cognizance of Conscience, though he had done more, and laboured more than all the Apostles. On the contrary his Unregenerate Conscience had eyed only the Observation of the outwards of the Law, serviſing in the Letter; Rom. 7. 5, 6. and a blameleſſneſs in the Law, and that was the matter of his Rejoycing afore, Phil. 3. which confirmeth this difference. By another Scripture you may ſee what ſort of Actings his Conſcience by the Holy Ghoſt was intent upon, not matters of outward fact, as that he made ſo many Sermons, &c. but an high and Holy Elevated and Sublimated diſpoſition of Soul, even a continual heavineſs and ſorrow of Heart; yea even wiſhing to be acurſed from Chriſt, for his Brethren the Jews, Rom. 9. 1, 2, 3. Obſerve what a Preface he maketh to it, I ſay the truth in Chriſt, I lie not, my Conſcience alſo bearing me witneſs in the Holy Ghoſt; that is acted, and enlightned not by the common light, which Natural Conſcience is acted by, but a ſpecial and evident work of the Holy Ghoſt, and enlightned thereby to Witneſs this. His Conſcience you ſee, ſingleth forth ſuch a diſpoſition of Heart as was eminently Characteriſtical of ſaving Grace, and infallibly ſuch, and is not found in any Heart that ſhall Perish. I ſpeak the truth in Chriſt, that is, as one that is in Chriſt, and hath this Evidence for it. Thus alſo ſpeaks Hezekiah, Iſa. 38. 3. Remember, Oh Lord, how I have walked before thee in Truth, and with a perfect Heart in thy ſight. His Conſcience was it that gave this Teſtimony. Now it was not his outwaad walking he inſiſts on, but his walking afore God in Sincerity or Truth, and with a perfect Heart. And this his own Conſcience was inſtructed to account and eſteem to be that true goodneſs which is good in Gods ſight. And the Reason is, becauſe when a Man is Regenerate, his Conſcience is fill'd with the Genuine Knowledge of God, as God. And ſo he looks upon things with that light God doth, and ſo only values and reckons that to be good which God doth account good: And God always in Judging of the Action takes in what the Heart is, which was the ſpring of it. 1 Kings 8. 39. Thou doſt give to every Man according to his ways, whoſe Heart thou knoweſt. And by this Rule doth Regenerate Conſcience his Vice-gerent alſo Judge. This is the ſecond difference.

3. Difference. The Peace which Natural Conſcience ſpeaks is at the height of it, but a dull flat dead Peace: Even as the Original of it are themſelves but Dead Works, Heb. 9. 14. It is with them as with thoſe that go with and carry dead Children in the Wombs of their Hearts, ſuch living throwes they know not, but (1 Pet. 1. 3.) It is called Living hope, we are begotten into, and ſuch an hope Faith affords at leaſt in the Object of it. And it often riſeth up to a Peace which paſſeth or exceedeth the Underſtanding, Phil. 4. 6. Whereas that which Natural Conſcience gives, is but ſuch as riſeth up from the Underſtanding or practical Reason; But that of Faith cometh from Heaven, and carries the Heart to Heaven: Being juſtified by Faith we have Peace with God, (Rom. 5. 1.) and rejoice in Hope of Glory, (v. 2.) yea, Rejoice in God, (v. 11.) And ſometimes this Peace riſeth up unto Joy unſpeakable, and full of Glory, 1 Peter 1. 5. which though Chriſtians always attain not to, yet the object matter which their Faith is carryed forth unto, out of themſelves, hath all this in it. Yea, and the Faith it ſelf that is in the Soul, is ſtill working the Heart up unto it, to ſeek after this, not to be quiet without it, or reſt in any Peace beſides it; Even as every Natural Faculty ſeeks and purſues after ſome way or other the higheſt perfection of that which is the proper object of it. And on the contrary, altho' the Unregenerate Man may have a further Joy than that of Natural Conſcience, from a taſting of the Powers of the World to come, (Heb. 6.) yet that joy is not from Natural Conſcience, but an effect of Supernatural enlightning in matters of Faith, and that as it is a Counterfeit of Faith, though not attaining unto true Faith. And the differences of ſuch Joys from that other Joy believers attain unto, is not proper to this diſcourſe, which only treats here of the Peace, which Natural Conſcience as ſuch affords, with difference to that which Faith gives, or riſeth up unto.

This Paul knowing full well, being trained up to the experiment thereof, no means, no works, no Testimony of Conscience could avail of it self, unless God speak peace. When therefore he would pray for peace, he frames his Prayer thus: That God himself would give it, (2 Thes. 5. 16.) It is his manner, you know, at the beginning or end of his Epistles, to wish Grace and Peace from God the Father, &c. and he had so at the beginning of that Epistle; but at the latter end, being about to renew the same again in his Farewell, he as it were corrects his Speech, and frames his Prayer thus: Now the Lord of peace himself give you peace always by all means: Both as knowing his wishes and all means else ineffectual to attain or procure true Peace: As also signifying what kind of peace it was that true Hearts desire and seek after. The Lord of peace himself giveth peace, and tho' himself blesteth means whereby he doth it, and you are to use them: Yet so, as he, the God of peace, must himself give it. Take the holiest and best man in the World, whose Conscience is the largest treasury of good done by him, or wrought in him; and although Conscience be a reflecting Faculty in all men, yet his Conscience from all the good that is betruſted with it, and it is privy unto, cannot testify a word for that mans peace and comfort, unless the Holy Ghost speaks in and unto Conscience by the light of Faith with power. For though the Spirit that is in man is said naturally to know the things that are in a man, (1 Cor. 2.) yet they are but those things which we have as men. But such things as we have as good and holy men given us by the Holy Ghost, these the Holy Ghost must by a supernatural act enable Conscience to discern, or we do not, cannot discern them. And therefore in the same Chapter it is said, He hath given us his Spirit that we might know the things that are given us of God. And his Graces in us, are Gifts, and special Gifts of Gods Grace in us.

C H A P. XIII.

The highest Degree to which a Temporary Believer can possibly attain, describ'd by the Apostle Paul, (Heb. 6.) which yet falls short of that saving Work, wrought in a Sincere Believer, there spoken of by him.

H E B. VI. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

- V. 4. For it is impossible for those who were once enlightned, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the holy Ghost,
- V. 5. And have tasted the good Word of God, and the powers of the world to come;
- V. 6. If they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance: seeing they Crucifie to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame.
- V. 7. For the Earth which drinketh in the rain which cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them by whom it is dressed, receiveth blessing from God:
- V. 8. But that which beareth thorns and briers, is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing; whose end is to be burned.
- V. 9. But beloved, we are perswaded better things of you, and things that accompany Salvation, tho' we thus speak.
- V. 10. For God is not unrighteous, to forget your work and labour of love, which ye have shewed toward his name, in that ye have ministred to the Saints and do minister.

TH E Apostle sets before these Hebrews, the most dreadful things about a Temporary's work and Condition, that is to be found in the whole Scriptures; and yet in the Occasion he took for it, he doth it with the greatest advantage for the comfort of the weakest sound Christian, and with the greatest tenderness that possibly so great a matter could be uttered in. The advantage he takes for it, appears in this, That whereas one of the greatest Objections that many sound Believers have against themselves that they are but Temporaries, ariseth from manifold defects, and (some of which are but accidental to a Christians state) the deadness of their Hearts, the lowness of their Graces, the want of Growth, Rebellion of Lusts, and the like; for there are a Thousand such might be instanced. They judg'd such like things, specially when of a long continuance, to argue them Hypocrites; which doubts of theirs, they were the more strengthened in, when withal they compared the soaring Heights, the high Enlightnings, the vehement and forward Affections, Tasts of things in the other World, which concerns Mens Salvations, that they they had observed to have been in some that had utterly fallen away. Alas thought they, when I compare what deadness is in my Heart, what little or no proficiency my Soul hath made in things Heavenly for so long a time; and on the other hand, what wonderful Enlightnings, quickness of Affections such as have fallen away have shot up into, I cannot but Conclude that I much rather shall fall away too; for alas, I am far short of them in these things. The Apostle therefore intending to discourse this great point in this Epistle, takes this strange advantage for it, and such an one as shall prevent the discouragement of the lowest Saint. The course he takes is this.

1. He presents the worst and lowest case of a sound Christian that well can be supposed, and tells those Hebrews plainly, that it was many of their cases, Chap. 5. v: 12, 13. For when for the time ye ought to have been Teachers, ye have need that one Teach you again which be the first Principles of the Oracles of God, and are become such as have need of Milk, and not of strong Meat: For every one that useth Milk is unskilful in the word of Righteousness, for he is a Babe. He instanceth indeed only in point of defect in, and want of growth in Knowledge; but that must be proportionably supposed to have been accompanied with answerable flatness and deadness of Holy Affections, and colder Exercise of Graces. 'Tis certain, if they did not grow in Knowledge in so many Years, they had not grown in Grace; Grow in Knowledge (says the Apostle) and in Grace. And 'tis as certain, that if they had not grown in Grace, there must have been a decay in Grace, and the exercises of it, and thereupon a Worldly fleshly frame, and an over-growing of many Lusts would rise instead thereof. Whereby at least they grew nigh unto a Curse from God, and were even at the very pits brink to have bin given up by God to final hardness, &c. Yet Knowledge is that thing which even Hypocrites use to grow up into, more than in any other endowment. In gifts of Knowledge, and the exercise thereof, they are Eminent. These are an Excellency which corrupt Nature affects, and seeks after above all other; that therefore such as were true Christians should not have sought to grow up in this; what a strange thing and case was this? And the ground thereof must needs be, because they had not had a great Valuation of things Heavenly, which if they had had, they would have sought to grow accordingly in the Knowledge of them.

Now take their Case as to Knowledge, as the Apostle here sets it out, it was very deplorable. (v. 12.)

1. They seem to have lost of that Spiritual Capacity to take in Spiritual things which they once had, and to have fallen from much of that Spiritual favour and quickness of Understanding in the fear of the Lord which they once had: This that word [You are become such, &c.] seems to import.

2. They are Represented like Men old, or Men in a Consumption, whose Stomachs cannot digest strong Meats (as they had wont) and are therefore glad to live on Milk, and the weakest sort of Food. You are become such (says the Apostle) as have need of Milk, and not of strong Meat: Which the Opposition, v. 14. shews and explains; but strong Meat belongeth to them that are of full Age, even those who by reason of use have their Senses exercised to discern both Good and Evil.

3. That Word [by reason of use] implies that they had not exercised their Graces, whereby their Knowledge might have been put in use, and so enlarged thereby.

2. Having thus set them forth at the lowest, he describes the Highest and Quickest sort of workings, and operations and advancers in matters of Religion ligion, made by some that yet fall away, v. 4, 5. For it is impossible for those who were once enlightned, and have tasted of the Heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost; and have tasted the good Word of God, and the Powers of the World to come; if they shall fall away, to renew them again to Repentance.

3. And yet Thirdly he Concludes, That he hoped better things, and things that accompanied Salvation, or that have Salvation in them. v. 9. But beloved we are perswaded better things of you, and things that accompany Salvation, though we thus speak; ἐξβουλεύειν ἡμᾶς καὶ σὺς ἡπίστευες, according to that saying, He that truly believes hath Eternal Life; of these concerning whom he had afore spoken the worst things that could be spoken, he yet hopes, nay is perswaded that such better things, or saving Graces, yet remained in them, than all those Enlightnings specified had bin in those other, as having been but such as never had true Salvation in them, but had all the while been short of it, and not in the event only. And the Ground of his Perswasion was,

1. That they had wrought in them at first a sound and sincere Love to God, his Name, and his Saints, which they had by Deeds and Labour therein given many real Testimonies of.

2. And to this end he bids them call to Remembrance, &c. Chap. 10. 32, 33, 34, 35. Call to Remembrance the former days in which after ye were illuminated ye endured a great Fight of Afflictions; partly whilst ye were made a gazing stock both by Reproaches and Afflictions, and partly whilst ye became Companions of them that were so used: For ye had Compassion of me in my Bonds, and took joyfully the spoiling of your Goods, knowing in your selves that ye have in Heaven a better and an enduring Substance: Cast not away therefore your Confidence, which hath great Recompence of Reward. It went it seems very low with them at present, when to perswade himself and them of their Grace he is fain to have recourse unto things so far back.

3. He elsewhere minds them also, that though they had never yet been call'd to Martyrdom, nor resisted unto Blood, (Chap. 12. 4.) yet they had continued to Fight against Sin, and with much Contest and Hazard to keep themselves from the evils of the Times, all which are a Fighting against Sin to keep a good Conscience; as also they had maintained and kept up a Conflict against Sin in their own Hearts.

4. And those things they had continued (though in some low Measure) to do for a long time from the first works upon them; and even there and then, (v. 12.) whilst he blames them for their Non-proficiency, yet those Words, That when for the time ye might have been Teachers, &c. argues them to have bin a long time Converted; then again (Chap. 10. ver. 32.) He bids to call to Remembrance the former Days, &c. when first Converted, which had been long since past.

O B S E R V. That in the Conflicts and Disquisition your Spirits may have whether your Selves be Temporary Believers or no, consider that there are many things Accidental to the state of Grace, which you are not absolutely to Conclude of your Estates by.

1. Not by a great decay of what Affections, and perhaps some Principles of strictness you had at first, now much decayed and lessened. If these he wrote to had these as fresh in them when he wrote as at the first, he would not have remitted them to their experiments in former times, (Call to remembrance (says he) &c.) Nor would he have comforted them with this, That God is not forgetful, &c. of what had been so long past, if fresher and better Fruits and more lively Evidences had of latter Years been found in them.

2. Nor

2. Nor are you to judge of your selves by a comparison of appearance made of your selves with some you have known or read of in the Word to have gone so, and so far, whom you verily think as to your own view, whilst you compare your selves with them, that they have fallen short. Alas, if These, among these Hebrews, should have compared their low present Actings, Enlightnings, Workings of Heart, &c. with those other in the appearance of them (as v. 4, & 5. he hath set them out) where would these poor ungrown Christians have appeared? As 'tis an uncertain Rule to judge a man's good by comparing himself with others that are worse, so and so fetching his Comfort thence; so 'tis as uncertain an one to judge of my self and of my Christian Estate by comparing it with others, whom I have thought better than my self, to have gone farther, who yet have proved Apostates: For what do I know what was the frame of their Hearts towards God, and the Principles of their Profession? Thou dost not know the whole of the State and Condition of such Men what it was: Bring then thy Heart to God, and view all that hath been between him and thee, either of his Love drawn forth to thee, or thine to him. Consider whether thy Heart in some degree yet cleaves to God, and continues to pursue after him: So shalt thou have Comfort from the Lord, who is not forgetful of any of these things. Cast not thy Confidence away in such a Case; If you let that go, you let all go, hold fast the beginning of thy Confidence to the end: Thus the Apostle exhorts in this Epistle again and again, Chap. 10. 35. Chap. 3. 6. But Christ as a Son over his own House, whose House are we, if we hold fast the Confidence and the rejoycing of the hope firm unto the end: This is what, above all else, the Apostle exhorts unto, v. 14. Some of these poor Hebrew Christians that were Sound-hearted, who had not fallen off and departed from Christ as others had done, yet could not but have great doubts and disputes within themselves, whether they were not Temporary Believers, and that their latter end might be like unto theirs. For such a declining and ungrowing a Condition could not but have been accompanied with such Temptations in an Heart in any measure considerative or attentive to its own Salvation. Yet you see the Course the Apostle takes with them.

1. He puts them not upon the dispute of this, which was a Controversy and Suit they could never have brought to an end, and which nothing but Faith ends.

Nor 2. Doth he seek to work in them such a work of humbling, or apprehension of their being in their Natural Condition, as useth to be at first: Wherein Converts do cast away all that had been wrought hitherto, as unsound, as if that were a necessary Foundation in such unto a new saving work. He doth not direct them to make utterly a new Beginning, as to their own apprehensions: But the case stands thus; That whereas sound Believers use to have emptyings of themselves upon discovery of their Wants and Corruptions, which causeth them to apprehend, for the present, their Conditions to be unregenerate, after which the Holy Ghost comes and takes the advantage out of themselves unto renewed Acts of Faith: So these having the Convictions of their former unsoundness laid open to them by the Holy Ghost, are thereupon Gently led into true and saving Acts of Faith, Regenerating of them. And look as afore this work, these Temporarys had a work so like true Grace, as it was very hard to distinguish it from the true; so this very new saving work in them, is hardly distinguishable from that renewed work on true Believers upon and after such Tentations.

3. He exhorts them to remember what had been wrought in them, and how God had drawn and won their Hearts unto him; and accordingly that Book V. 1 that they should hold fast the Beginning of their Confidence to the end, and they would find themselves partakers of Christ. It is unto the way of renewing their Faith he directs them; for Faith would only end it, and renew that often, says he, Chap. 4. v. 11. Let us labour to enter into that Rest, lest any man fall after the same example of Unbelief. The word is, let us study that point; and to enter into Rest is to believe, as the opposition, and likewise v. 3. shew, For we which have believed do enter into Rest.

If any one object to me, Would you have me recall my first Work, and Trust in that? Suppose it were indeed not a saving work (as in many that are after made Sound, it is not) would you have me renew my Confidence thereon?

Answer, No: That is not my meaning, nor Paul's: For if the work were never so good and sound, your Confidence must not be upon that, much less when it may be a false one; but this I say, Renew the same acts of Faith, and trust on the same God and Christ thou dealedst withal at first. Have recourse to them afresh, Reiterate again and again thy Faith on them immediately, as thou didst at first. In the Original it is, the Subsistence of your Confidence; hold God and Christ afore thee as subsistent by Faith to thee, in thy Treaties with them, and if God continues to carry on thy Heart thus to pursue after him, Christ cannot but save thee. For if thou continuest to cast thy self upon him, and still in all such disceptations about thy Estate plyest him, and puttest thy Salvation into his hands, Christ will not, cannot depart from thee whilst he continues thy Heart to trust him. He cannot but work savingly in the end on such a Soul, if he hath not done it already. Remember then whence you are fallen, and do your first Works, and repent, (Heb. 6. 11.) And we desire that every one of you do shew the same diligence to the full assurance of Hope unto the end. If you have slackned (as you have done) yet revive that diligence again, and you will find your first Confidence will come in again, if true, with advantage and encrease, even with full assurance of hope unto the end; or if there was not a true Faith at first, then a better will come in the room of it.

Only 4. He severely cautions and admonisheth them to take heed lest there be in any of them an evil Heart of Unbelief, in departing from the living God. But exhort one another daily (says he) while it is called to day, lest any of you be hardned thro' the deceitfulness of sin, Chap. 3. 12, 13. and v. 15. While it is said to day if you will hear his voice harden not your Hearts, &c. He exhorts them to take heed of indulging their Lusts, Heb. 12. 15, 16, 17. Looking diligently lest any man fail of the Grace of God, lest any Root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled: Lest there be any Fornicator or profane person as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his Birth-right; for you know how that afterward when he would have inherited the Blessing, he was rejected: For he found no place of Repentance, though he sought it carefully, with Tears. He exhorts them to take heed of leaving off Ordinances, Heb. 10. 25. Not forsaking the assembling of our selves, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, and so much the more as you see the day approaching. And many such most earnest exhortations he makes, not only in relation to their neglect of particular Duties, but in relation to their eternal Estates and Conditions.

Of the Difference of the Works on Temporary Believers, and those truly called, and that they differ in their Nature and Kind.

CHAP. I.

That the Apostle Peter, 2 Pet. I. 3, 4. 2 Pet. 2. 20, 21. makes a clear Distinction between Temporary Professors, and those truly called.

2 P E T. I. 3, 4.

- V. 3. According as his Divine Power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto Life and Godliness, thro' the knowledg of him that hath called us to Glory and Vertue.
V. 4. Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious Promises; that by these you might be partakers of the Divine Nature, having escaped the Corruption that is in the World thro' Lust.

2 P E T. II. 20, 21.

- V. 20. For if after they have escaped the Pollutions of the World thro' the Knowledg of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again intangled therein, and overcome, the latter End is worser with them than the Beginning.
V. 21. For it had been better for them not to have known the way of Righteousness, than after they have known it, to turn from the Holy Commandment delivered unto them.

I Have set these Two Passages of the same Epistle together, and by comparing the one with the other, you may easily discern that Peter would seem to speak somewhat like, yet clear differing things of two several sorts of Professors, and two several Works in those Professors of Religion. In the Second Chapter he speaks of such who professed Religion, and had once a work upon their Hearts which caused them at first so to do, and to break forth from the World (v. 18.) and that ἔστω (as the word is) that is, really had escaped from them who live in Error, or the common error of a Natural condition, common to you with other Men, but now were fallen away, and their latter end was worse with them than the beginning, (v. 20, 21, 22.) But in the First Chapter (v. 1.) he speaks of, and unto such who had obtained like precious Faith with us, viz. the Apostles of Christ: And of each of these he seems to speak like things (as on purpose) and yet how distant are they in the reality!
the

1. Of both the one and the other he says, that they escaped the defilements of the World. 2 Pet. 1. 3. Chap. 2. 20.

And 2. He tells us, that both of them were wrought upon and induced to this, by one and the same means, through the Knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, (compare v. 3. of the Chapter 1. and v. 20. of Chapter 2.) inasmuch as both are enlightened with such a Knowledge of Christ, as hath a powerful Impression upon their Hearts, as (v. 18. of Chapter 2.) it is said of these (2 Pet. 2. 18.) that thus fall away, that they did ἔστω, really and indeed, and in earnest forsake those Sins.

Yet how differing is the State of these Persons? The sum of which Difference is reduced to this, that those (of whom he speaks in the First Chapter) that were savingly wrought upon, had such a Knowledge of Christ as had thoroughly altered, and changed the inward frame of their Hearts, their very Natures and Dispositions, turning and transforming them from Sin to a Divine Nature.

1. It had prevailed to sever, and part their Souls from the power of inward Lufts as well as outward gross defilements, ἀποφυγόντες τῆς ἐν ἐπιθυμία φθορᾷ, that Corruption that consisteth in Lust or inward Concupiscence. The prevailing Knowledge of Christ had destroy'd and rent the Indentures that had been between the Soul and these Corruptions; for the word Escaping speaks and hath reference to Freedom from the Tyranny of an hard Master (or as it is, v. 19. of Chapter 2.) of being Servants of Corruption. In these Sincere Believers the divine Power had cut the very Heart-strings, Ligaments and Tyes between their Souls and their Lufts, so far that their inward Man had really parted with, and was delivered from the strength and violence of Lufts. But of those other (Chapter 2.) it is barely said, they had escaped, τὰ μασσαλά, the grosser Defilements of the World, (v. 20.) that pollute Men outwardly; in respect of which it is, that they are said to have escaped from those that live in Error, (v. 18.) He mentions nothing to express that this work had reacht to the destroying of Lufts, or alteration of their sinful Natures; but their case was as that of run-away Servants. They had made an escape from their Masters, but the inward Bonds and Indentures were not cancelled, and so they were fetcht back again, v. 19. While they promise themselves Liberty, they themselves are Servants of Corruption; for of whom a Man is overcome, of the same is he brought in Bondage; which he affirms more plainly (v. 22.) comparing them to a Sow that was once washed, which imports an External cleansing only from the Mire they wallowed in, which cleaves to the outward parts; but to escape the Corruption that consists in Lufts; to have the sinful Nature, the inward radical Constitution changed, this they wanted. The Old Man, or Nature of Man as it comes into the World, is said, (Eph. 4. 22. like to what is here) to be Corrupt in Lufts; that is, the formal being, and essence of its Corruption (as it is Corrupt) is said to consist in Lufts, and therefore to have escaped through the Knowledge of Christ, the Corruption that is in Lust, is to put off the old Nature, to have the inward dispositional-tered, which there also the Apostle affirms is done by such a Knowledge of Christ, as hath a difference in it, from what is in ordinary professors, v. 21. If

If so be ye have heard him, and been taught by him as the truth is in Jesus. It imports a distinction from what is counterfeit, therefore (Gal. 5. 24.) those that are Christs, are said to have crucified the Lusts with the Affections. Chap. 1

2. Here is another Difference, viz. The Participation of a contrary Divine Nature. This Divine Nature clearly shews a Change of Nature, and so their having escaped the Corruption that is in the World thro' Lust, (2 Pet. 1. 4.) is the putting off the old Nature which is corrupt in Lusts: And on the other side, forasmuch that such a Change from a state of Natural Corruption is specified with this Divine Nature as its Opposite, it is evident that this Participation of the Divine Nature is to be understood of the contrary Divine Qualities and Principles, but now made Natural to the Soul, as Lusts once were. But it is not the Participation of the Essence of God substantially, as some both of old and of late have offered to affirm.

My Assertion is yet more clear, inasmuch as the Apostle also calleth the Communication of this New Nature, The giving of all things belonging to Life and Godliness; that is, all inward Principles, Seeds, Powers and Abilities of Godliness, and a Spiritual Life, and those as the Roots and Habits of all Actions made natural. Now look, as there is a different Mercy or Grace in God, out of which he bestows those Gifts he vouchsafes unto men, whom in the Issue he saveth not, different far from that mercy out of which he gives that Grace and Holiness which hath Salvation accompanying it: So the like difference is to be found in the exertings of the Degrees of his Power, out of which he worketh either. His Mercies that are over all his works, are styled Common Mercies, whereas to his Elect there are peculiar special Mercies, call'd the sure Mercies of David. Answerably the works on Temporarily flow but from his common providential Mercies, only farther heightned towards such than to others of Mankind (these being choicer Mercies in themselves than Riches, Honours, &c.) and are therefore styled common Graces, as being in their general valuation cast but into the same heap with other common mercies. But they are rather call'd Common Graces, because they bear the semblance and counterfeit of true and saving Graces.

It is therefore a Subject worth the Prosecution, to shew the disproportion of power which is seen in these two works, that the measure of the one may be mutually taken from each other: For the one by the Kind of it will be found to be such a work as needeth not the exceeding greatness of Gods Power to be put forth to work it; and the other, viz. The Divine Nature, is a work of that excellency, as requires the utmost of Gods Power to be stretched forth in the working of it, or it will not be effected.

C H A P. II.

The Usefulness of this Doctrine concerning Temporary Believers, to many holy Ends and Purposes.

TH E Apostle farther in this Heb. 6. sets forth the high and great Workings which are in the Hearts of Temporary Believers that fall away, and the dreadful Event and Issue of their so falling, (v. 8.) And as there were in those times, the highest Effusions of the Spirit and Graces wrought in many true Christians, in comparison of other times; So there were answerably the highest sort of Temporaries (which v. 4, 5. doth speak of) and indeed the most sublimated, that Corrupt Nature was capable of.

He adventures this Doctrine among them true Believers that were weak and doubtful: And notwithstanding there might be very many Souls entangled in Fears that they were of that Number; yet this Doctrine is good and profitable to men, as the Apostle speaks in another Case.

Observ. The Doctrine and Knowledge, that there is only a Temporary Work in many Professors, is useful to sincere Christians for many holy Ends. Peter declares it to those he wrote to, 2 Pet. 2. 20, 21, 22. For if after they have escaped the Pollutions of the World, through the Knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein and overcome, the Latter End is worse with them than the Beginning. For it had been better for them not to have known the way of Righteousness, than after they have known it, to turn from the holy Commandment delivered unto them. But it is hapned unto them according to the true Proverb, the Dog is turned to his own Vomit again, and the Sow that was washed to her wallowing in the Mire. Jude also upon occasion of men that had once professed the Doctrine of Grace (v. 4.) turned it into wantonness, doth the like, at v. 5. I will put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that the Lord having saved the People out of the Land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not. The meaning whereof is, he would have them consider, that the Israelites coming out of Egypt was a Type of our common Salvation (as he had called it v. 3.) yea, many of them came forth through a work of God upon them, for they believed, Exodus 4. 31. And the People believed, and when they heard that the Lord had visited the Children of Israel, and that he had looked upon their Affliction, then they bowed their Heads and worshipped. They had been in great Distress, and mans Nature is apt to believe and embrace News of deliverance in such a Case, which was a great ground of that Faith in many of them: but however, this together with the sense of their Bondage, moved them to come out of Egypt. You read of the like Faith upon the great visible deliverance at the Red Sea, Exodus 14. 31. And Israel saw that great work which the Lord did upon the Egyptians, and the People feared the Lord, and believed the Lord and his Servant Moses. But, says Jude, I would have you withal remember, that though their Faith served to bring them out of Egypt, yet it was but a Temporary Faith, such as lasted not, nor served to bear the Condition of a Wilderness; their Faith failed them as to perseverance, chearfully to go on into the good Land. They would, if they could, have returned back into Egypt; and you know the sins they fell into, and concerning them Jude adds, that God afterwards destroyed them that thus believed not. And this (saith he) though you know, yet I would have you remember, and lay it to Heart, as that which was Gods Aim and Intendment in this dispensation, in relation to those their times and the Professors of it. 'Tis of special use to you all; for this is the Case of multitudes of of Professors, that come out of a gross sinful Condition; they see their former Estate to be a State of Bondage and Damnation (which is as a coming out of Egypt) but their own Lusts in their Progress in the Wilderness of this Life ruins them. And what befell the Israelites as Types, is for our Instruction. 1 Cor. 10, 11. Now, all these things hapned to them for Ensamples, and they are written for our Admonition, upon whom the ends of the World are come.

And Jude tells them, that when he set himself to write of our common Salvation, (v. 3.) the Holy Ghost, who dictated this Epistle, presented this Caution and Discourse about such temporary Professors first unto him, to present unto them.

The like to this also doth Paul in his Epistle to the Hebrews, Chap. 3, & 4. and 1 Cor. 9. 24. to the end: Know ye not that they which run in a Race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run that ye may obtain. And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things; now they do it to obtain a Corruptible Crown, but we an incorruptible. I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the Air: But I keep under my Body and bring it into subjection, lest that by any means when I have preached to others, I my self should be a Cast-away. He indeed in that Chapter presents this under another Scene, and Similitudes of the Olympick Games, in which many run, but one obtains: And so in Christianity, many beat the air, and run but uncertainly.

And how much our Saviour insisted on this Doctrine, you all know. How many Parables did he spend upon it? That Parable of Parables (as himself indigitates it to be) do you not understand to be, of all other, of the most concernment to you and others? I mean that of the Sower, and the several Grounds; and the Parable likewise of those that built their House on the Sand, when others built upon a Rock? Moreover, many Speeches there are scattered up and down to this Effect, That many are called, but few are chosen. Enter in at the strait Gate, for many will seek to enter in, and shall not be able. Luke 13: 24. The usefulness of this Doctrine is,

1. To awaken dull professors (as our Apostle terms those Hebrews, (Heb. 5: 11.) to consider their Estates: The wise Virgins sleep (Mat. 2. 54.) as well as the Foolish; and the noise of this Doctrine rowseth up such, sooner than any other.

2. This Doctrine is useful to quicken them to Holiness, and to endeavour to make sure work. Thus it wrought with Paul himself, and Paul makes use thereof to quicken Others. 1 Cor. 9. 26, 27. I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the Air: But I keep under my Body, and bring it into subjection, lest that by any means when I have preached to others, I my self should be a Cast-away. He had this in his eye to the last, after he had done all, v. 23. And this I do for the Gospels sake, that I might be partaker thereof with you. The like use he makes of it unto all, in 2 Tim. 2. 19. &c. Let every one that nameth the Name of Christ depart from Iniquity: But in a great House there are not only Vessels of Gold and of Silver, but also of Wood and of Earth, and some to Honour and some to Dishonour: If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a Vessel unto Honour, sanctified and meet for the Masters use, and prepared unto every good Work. It was upon the occasion of the examples of Hymeneus and Philetus having gone so far, but now shipwrackt both in Faith and Conscience, that he thus wrote:

3. This Doctrine exalts and magnifies unto us the Grace of God towards us, as that which hath put so vast a difference between man and man, in things that are so like to true Grace, and that make men come so near to the Kingdom of God; Who caused thee to differ (says the Apostle) from another? And that other perhaps had a mighty Work upon him, which caused him to profess more than ever thou hadst done. Judas had a work upon him as well as Peter or the rest of the Apostles, what put the difference? Gods Free Grace, Thine they were and thou gavest them me, and I have lost none but the Son of Perdition.

4. As this Doctrine is in these and many other respects useful to us, so God himself hath many Holy and Glorious Ends in ordering such a dispensation to be found amongst Professors.

1. It is for his greater Honour and Glory as he is Lord over his Church, which is his House, to have (as in great Houses there use to be) Vessels not only of Gold and Silver, but also of Wood and of Earth, and some to Honour, and some to Dishonour, 2 Tim. 2. 20.

2. These Dispensations of God, short of Regenerating Grace, do lay up matter for a great Honour unto the Man Christ Jesus, as he is to be the Judge of all the World, and to give the exact account of every Man's condition and ways, and Heart, and to Judge of them accordingly. One would think that such a work of the Spirit as hath so great a likeness, and that with a Reality joined with it in the Hearts and Spirits of Men, should make a great puzzle and blind at the latter day, how clearly to distinguish and discover to the Men themselves, and all the World, that such Professors as these were never truly Regenerate; but this will turn to the greater Glory to Christ, Heb. 4. 12. speaking of Christ the Word (as the close of his Speech, v. 13. shews, before the Eyes of him with whom we have to do) of him thus considered as the Word, he says, He the Word of God, is quick and powerful, sharper than any Two edged Sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of Soul and Spirit, and of the Joints and Marrow, and is a discerner of the Thoughts and intents of the Heart: Neither is there any Creature that is not manifest in his sight, but all things are Naked and opened unto the Eyes of him with whom we have to do. He speaks this of him, as he is to be the Judge of all Men. All things are Naked and open to the Eyes of him, Πρὸς ὃν ὁ λόγος, to whom we must give the Account. And as in the next Verses he represents him as a great High-Priest in all his Compassions, and power to help in time of need: So in these 12 & 13. verses, he sets him out as a Judge, with Ability to detect all Men to themselves; and he speaks this in a way of Admonition, especially to such as were in danger to fall from a work of God upon them, and to become Apostates. This the verse before shews us. Lest, (saith he) any Man fall after the same Example of Unbelief, of whom the Israelites in the Wilderness were Types. And because the discovery of all Mens Estates and conditions depends upon an exact dividing or differencing, what is in the Soul, what is in the Spirit, and what are the joints all Mens Actions turn upon, and what is the Marrow and intimate meaning and mind of every Man's Soul in his Actions, and ways and thoughts; and since such a Discovery consists in laying open every Mens ends and intents in his Heart, and Thoughts, and Principles; hence therefore he compares the Power of this Judge unto such things as are most quick and powerful, as among Metals, Mercury or Quicksilver is, when it is put to other Metals by them that are Refiners. And tho' Metals are blended and mingled one with another, or with Dross never so much, yet this is so quick and so active, as it will make every Metal run a several way, and sever one from the other, and shew which is which. Thus the Light that Christ shall then bring with him, will do unto all Mens Hearts, and all the Thoughts and Intents and Principles which are the Foundations of Mens Actions, and which do difference them, and give them their several kinds. These will all be clearly discovered; and though the Creatures of our Hearts (for so he compares our Thoughts, and intents and purposes, and the like) are for their kind unknown to us, because so like sometimes to true goodness; yet the Apostle says, they are all manifest in Christs sight, and all lye Naked and open unto the Eye of Him; and he, when he comes to take the Account, will lay them all open unto us, that let a Man have had never so fine spun a work upon him, never so deep a Counterfeit of what is true Grace, the Light that he will bring, will make them all naked unto Men themselves, as truly as they are to him; and it is certain that this Manifestation and laying bare all Mens Hearts, could be performed by none but him, or his Spirit, when he comes powerfully upon Men to discover their Estates to them. But the greatest difficulty of all lying in the Similitude of these workings with those that that are true and perfect, (and hence the greatest difficulty in Judging must needs lie here) therefore herein especially will Christ shew his Glory and skill, and will give every Man his Accounts perfectly, and set all right and straight unto the least Minute.

3. God dispenseth such lower workings, tho' short of Regenerating Grace, to make way for a fuller Conviction of all sorts of Wicked Men at the latter Day, and to Justify himself in his Condemnation of them. The great design God doth drive all along in this World upon the Sons of Men, is to clear himself at that Day, and to Confound them who shall be Condemned; at which Day he will have a great deal of Doe with the Hearts of Men, to Convince them, as Enoch the Seventh from Adam in his Prophecy, saying, (Jude 14, 15.) Behold, the Lord cometh with Ten Thousand of his Saints, to Execute Judgment upon all, and to convince all that are Ungodly among them, of all their Ungodly Deeds, which they have Ungodly committed, and of all their hard Speeches which Ungodly Sinners have spoken against him. The hardest Speeches that Men Living under the Gospel speak against him, are touching his Ways and Dispensations about Grace; and by this Proceeding, he prepares both to Confound the deepest Practical Opinions and Sayings in Mens Hearts, and also the Doctrinal Opinions that Men living under the Gospel do take up hereabout.

I. As for the Practical Opinions in Men's Hearts, the greatest thing that God hath to do withall in all Mens Hearts, is this Opinion, That they generally will not see nor believe that Corrupt Nature in themselves is so Corrupt and Disabled, to the attainment of that Grace which only and necessarily must save them; but on the contrary think, if they have anything that hath the Appearance of Good in them, that they can do and may do much to the Salvation of themselves; especially if they shall be assisted and Elevated by the Spirit of God above what Nature doth enable a Man to do. God hath on the one hand, as much to do with Men in this Point, as he hath on the other hand to do with Men in the breaking forth of their Lusts into grosser Sins. Men will not believe their own utter Inability, and their Dependance wholly upon Free Grace, and their total need of Regenerating Grace, and therefore by lesser Experiments of the failure of Lower and Inferiour Workings of his upon them, God goes about to convince them of this their corruption and utter disability, and of the absolute necessity of their total Dependance upon him, which yet they will not see; and therefore God justly leaves them here, and Works no further, and thereby lays a Foundation of Justifying his Condemnation of them in their several Proportions, and the rest of Mankind, by the Example of those that are wrought upon the highest. And so God provides for nothing more than the Conviction of Men at the Latter Day, concerning the falshood of their Opinion of themselves in this respect.

1. Mens Opinionativeness herein; did cause even Heathens to set up what Light or Vertues they found in themselves, as sufficient to bring them unto Happiness: we know the Stoicks did set up Recta Ratio, Right Reason for their Rule, and their Imagin'd Perfection was, Vivere secundum Naturam: To Live according to what seemed good in Nature, either in Light of Conscience, or Vertuous Dispositions, or Inclinations, when acted and put in ure: Yea so Impudent hath the Devil been, that he hath Revived this we see in our Days, in Quakers; yea, and caused them Blasphemously to call this Christ within them. Hereupon (says God) and he says it Justly, There shall be Instances of some of you in the Issue, to Confute all the rest, in whom this Light and these Dispositions shall be tryed to the utmost how far they will reach, (as in Socrates, and Cato, and Aristides, &c.) and yet in the Exercises of all these he leaves them, and gives them up unto that which shall Convince them of an Unregenerate Estate: as the Apostle doth Convince all those Philosophers, that whilst they profest themselves Wise they became Fools, and Glorified not God as God, nor were thankful; and some of them were adon'd unto Unnatural Lusts, as Socrates to the love of Alcobrades, &c. and

And however if God hath not left them unto some great sort of Wickedness or other, thereby to Convince them, yet the Discovery of the Deficiency of all the Light of their Consciences, and of all their Vertues and Vertuous Practices, and of the Ends, Intents, Thoughts, and Principles of their Hearts, which shall be laid open at the Latter Day, will abundantly Detect them, and leave this further Conviction upon them herewith, That God had made Tryal of them in their Sphere, how far Corrupt Nature could go, and yet how Infinitely it fell short of true Religion and Happiness.

2. The Jews had a further addition both of Knowledge and Impressions that accompanied it: They had the Knowledge of the Law, and God did not deal so with any Nation; and they had a Zeal of God according to this Knowledge, and they thought themselves sure to attain Salvation if they set up with this new Stock. I need not tell you (out of Rom. 11. 6.) how whilst they sought after Righteousness with all this new rais'd Stock, they did not attain unto the Law of Righteousness, v. 31. And Paul's Case you know, (Rom. 7.) that what was ordained, as he thought to Life, he found to be unto Death; and the Conclusion which the Apostle makes (in Rom. 8.) is this, That the Law was weak through the Flesh, (v. 3.) that is, all the assistance and energy which it could afford, through Mans Heart continuing still Corrupt and Flesh, remained ineffectual, like Physick in a Dead Man's Body; and the Righteousness which they went about to establish (as the Apostle says) they were not able to make it stand, though they attempted it again and again; no more than one is able to make a Dead Man stand, and to continue to do so, (Rom. 10. 3.) So that we see that this Addition also made unto the Jew, would not do; and yet Corrupt Nature finding some assistance and strength come in thereby, they thought themselves sufficiently enabled for the attainment of Salvation.

3. But then thirdly, When Christ and the light of the Gospel comes to be revealed to Men, accompanied with Divine Enlightnings and Tasts of the powers of the World to come, though still short of Regeneration, men will presently be apt to say in their Hearts, Who shall ascend to Heaven? that is to bring Christ down from above; Who shall descend into the deep? That is to bring Christ again from the Dead, and to bring him into my Heart: For still Men think, and therefore say thus in their Hearts, that by that new strength they may attain it, (I take this to be the meaning of the place) and God affords them all helps toward it, inward and outward, true Regenerating Grace and a new Principle of Faith only excepted: Still he prosecutes the same design, that Corrupt Nature may see that when it attains unto the Eleventh step of the Twelve, and that Men not far off; yet Corrupt Nature being Corrupt Nature still, though never so much assisted, falls short, and is weak, and utterly unable. And these things God works once and twice; in a Tendency to hide Pride from Man, (as Elibu speaks) that Man might be emptied of that Opinion of himself, and adore and give himself up to the Grace of him who hath said, I will have Mercy on whom I will have Mercy; and therefore it is not of him that wills, nor of him that runs, but of God that sheweth Mercy, Rom. 9. 15, 16. Paul we see there lays it upon that: God acts thus with Men also, that they might see the absolute Necessity of true Regeneration, and of a divine Nature; but this Men would not be brought to see, and therefore God justly leaves them to go on in their own way, and to enjoy their fond Opinion to their destruction; because they would needs against all these Experiments hold up this Principle and Self-Opinion, in defiance of Gods Grace; and would be saved upon such terms as would make Grace to be no Grace: for if this Opinion of Self-working the never so much assisted continues in the Heart, the Apostle tells us, Grace would be no more Grace. And seeing that the Glory of the Grace of God would hereby be soyled, if God should save Men upon such Workings as these, though never so strict or high; he therefore justly and with Indignation leaveth them unto these their own Counsels, and hereupon it is that God and they do break off, whilst they are in the midst of a Treaty with him for Salvation.

For they will never come off to receive God and his Grace upon his own terms, nor set up Gods Banners of his Free Grace to them, and of sincere Love to him, upon their Turrets above Self, and so by degrees the Lord withdraws his Treaties from them, and they by degrees become Revolters from him, and in the End return to some of their old Rebellions, upon which God says, Which Covenant and Treaty they brake, and I regarded them not.

Moreover, God by his discovering such as these never to have had true Grace under so high and eminent Workings and Actings, needs make but a short Work (as to point of Conviction) of all the rest; for all those who have lower Worksthan these, of what kind soever, are with ease discovered to have had no Grace, when these for a deficiency and want of a Wedding Garment, or Marriage Affection to God and Christ, are sent speechless to Hell: so then this design and Dispensation of God is every way prepared for Judging all Men at last day.

II. God hereby makes way to confound the corrupt doctrinal Opinions that men have of Grace. For this Iniquity in practice hath come to be established in all Ages by a Law: Inasmuch as agreeably to mens deportment, according to their fond thoughts of Corrupt Natures Abilities in point of Grace, they have framed Doctrines, and drawn Models of what they judge to be Grace. All Pelagian, Semipelagian, and Jesuitical Doctrines, and all Arminian Tenets about Converting Grace, have in their several proportions arisen from what men in their own Experience have taken to be true workings of Grace in their own Souls, or else from the Pride of carnal Wisdom, whereby men of Learning and Parts think to understand this, (as Asaph hath it, Psal. 73.) even as they think to comprehend any thing else that is within the compass of mans understanding. And hence they think themselves as sufficiently furnished to judge of matters of Grace, as of any other, yea and would be thought of all things else to have skill in matters spiritual. Whereas on the other hand there are, and have been such, who beside the doctrinal Light they have had from the Word in these Points, have also had a deep and thorough Experience of either sort of workings, both Temporary, and of those other of saving, regenerating Grace on themselves; and who by comparing what the Opinions of the Arminians are, and oppositely what are the Orthodox Doctrines, as they are stated in several Columns in Writings of either side, and then by comparing these with what hath been written on their Hearts in those two several Columns of workings (as I may so speak) have, and do clearly see and conclude that the Arminian Doctrine about Converting sufficient Grace hath been but a Copy or Model taken from the Experience of a Temporary work; yea, and but for the most part of the lowest sort, or of that of the stony ground; and tho' many Persons that hold the Arminian Doctrine in the point of Conversion may, and shall be saved (because they hold fundamental Truths otherwise, and God works beyond and besides what mens speculative Opinions are often times) yet it is no Thank to that Doctrine of theirs in that particular point of Conversion; for if only such a work be wrought in any of them that is no deeper nor higher than their Doctrine requires, they would not be saved.

And the Rule and Measure these go by in drawing such Draughts and Schemes, either of Conversion, or of sufficient Grace enabling to it; I say the rule and measure which misleads them, is, that they set up Free-will and a Grace attemper'd unto that kind of Liberty of mans Will which they have set up for themselves to be essential to it as it is Will, as they think, and by no means will permit such a Doctrine of Grace as shall detract from that kind of Liberty as they conceive: Which Liberty, say they, can no way be salved or stand with, or be preserved in that infusion of new Principles, or an infallible, effectual working and overcoming the Will, tho' done by all the Power that is in God, and by an omnipotent Sweetness that doth demulce it, as our Doctrine of Regeneration teacheth. So as they say and hold, That Free-will set free by the Light of the Gospel let into the Understanding, may, and doth yield unto God savingly, with less power of Grace than

Book 7 than our Doctrine requires. Their bottom Error lyes in this, that they think if they should pitch upon that Grace which we say is requisite, and absolutely necessary to Salvation, then they must derogate from their Diana of Free-will, and therefore they frame a Doctrine that may stand with it. And then having made these Draughts, they take Liberty to rage and rant against our Doctrine of Free-Grace, either as it is in the workings of it in our Hearts, or as we affirm it is in Gods Heart towards us, either in Electing or Regenerating Grace; and representing God with our Opinions herein, they take liberty to blaspheme Him, that if he be such a God, he is so and so, (not to repeat any.) And it is wonderful to see what hard Speeches they speak, as Jude says. And the bottom of the Quarrel is Free-will and Self, as it is in man corrupted, which is set up as the great Undertaker against God and his Grace in all these things. They pretend and plead most outrageously, that if God will but take the Shackles off with which mans Will is manacled, so as it be left to its own innate Freedom, and if God will but move, and elevate, and assist it, and work upon the Principles in it already, and strengthen them with an accessary and additional power of light and good motions, Free-will shall then understand to will and run. And men will never be disputed out of their opinion of its ability to do thus, because they will not consider and acknowledge the bottom of Corrupt Nature, that it lyes corrupt at the Bottom, in the inward Principles of it, in its Foundations; and that let it be never so much assisted, if it be not regenerated and born again, it is never able so much as to see, much less to enter, or to put one step into the Kingdom of God. They consider not, that without a regenerating passive Principle wrought, the Will it self and the Affections, and all in Man remain Corrupt as it was; and that the Understanding may be enlightned to divine Objects, and not be spiritualized, or endowed with a spiritual Capacity of knowing spiritual things in their spiritual Nature, and as they are in themselves; and such are the Enlightnings here (Heb. 6.) spoken of. They don't consider how far this boasting Will may be demulced, allured and toll'd on, and elevated to things of Salvation, without having a principle of true Love to God wrought in it; nor yet how far the Affections may be moved and stirr'd with the Cords of a man, that is, such as are suited to the Principles in man, nor what good things there are in the Promises, in Christ, in his Righteousness and Salvation, suited to work upon Self in a man; and thereupon what tafts and joys may Self be receptive of from all these: But all these workings will be found (as the Law of it is said) weak through the Flesh, through Corruption of Self remaining whole still at the Bottom. And until this be inwardly mortified and deposed in the dominion of it, and the Power of God come with that Almightyness of working that raised Christ from the dead, putting in new principles of Life and Godliness, and making us Partakers of the divine Nature; until then Free-will in all its Conversions, whether to divine Objects, or what else, is but as a Door that turns upon its own Hinges, moves but upon its own Axeltree, and within its own Sphere, let it be moved and turned which way it will; and in these workings it is but (as I use to compare it) like a Drop of Water upon a Board, which if you gently put your hot and dry Finger to, and then as softly lift it, it will a while cleave and rise up; but if but a little farther, it falls down again to its own Centure.

But oh! how severely doth God make way to confute and confound all these in their Opinions? wherein they deal most proudly, he goes beyond them, and is above them. Indeed, would there, or could there any other Course have been taken so effectually to stop their mouths, and so invincibly to convict them at the last day, as this?

1. He first in the World deals so with many of them, and with others of the Sons of men, as to answer them according to the Idol and Stumbling-Block of their Opinions, and to that end tryes to the utmost proportion in some or other, how far Corrupt Nature of it self, and left still to its innate Corruption, will rise and go, and yet remain but Corrupt Nature and Self at bottom still. He tryes how far all in man may be so wrought upon as hath been said; and yet so allays, and moderates his Workings, as their Hearts still fall short of the Glory of God, or of his regenerating Grace flowing from Election, which these men so despise: And herein Free-will and Self, which they adore so much, continues (even as they desire) with the same Principles that by nature they have, and devoid of having an inward Principle, and Root of Grace, and this according to their Doctrine, is their desire also. So that indeed by these means, by making these experiments on Corrupt Nature, God doth but make way for the Triumph of his Grace over the proud Conceits of Self, which are in Mankind, and which are most Natural, and the most deeply rooted of any other.

Then 2. When he, at the latter day, brings forth his true Saints, and his Workings upon them, and (as it is in the Prophet) says, These are my Witnesses, and then lays open (what he hid from those other, the wise and prudent) what real, true and uncounterfeit workings and experiments of his Grace there were in their Hearts, suitable unto the true Doctrines of eternal Love and invincible Grace: When he displays what a new Heart, and new Spirit he gave them, and how he wrote the Law in their Hearts, and taught them all anew to know him with a New and Spiritual Light, and put his Spirit in the midst of them, that should cause them to walk in his Commandments, and put his fear into their Hearts that they should not depart from him: And then shall produce what the Word says, together with what hath been in their Hearts and Souls, beyond what all the Doctrine of the Adversaries of his Grace taught: And when it shall be discover'd, that the workings which these Adversaries had according to their Doctrine, yet fail'd of the Grace of God (as the Apostle speaks) even for want of that farther power to be put forth by God, which they desired not of him to bestow upon them; what a fatal decision, tho' a final one, will this be, whereby God will put an end to their Controversie!

For then, 3. He will come upon them with their own Principles, Isa. 5. 3, 4. And now judge I pray you betwixt me and my Vineyard: What could have been done more to my Vineyard that I have not done in it? Wherefore when I looked that it should bring forth Grapes, brought it forth wild Grapes? This is your sufficient Grace, which your selves desired, and would have none other; Much good may your Free-will-Grace do you; You have had, many of you, enough of it, as God in that place of Isaiab speaks those words unto proud man, that under the Covenant of Works would be setting up his own Abilities, which God, according to their Principles, had assisted. This (as I take it) is the true Air of the interpretation of that place. He will in like manner plead against these at the latter day, and then must all men fall down and acknowledge, that it was the Grace of God alone could save, which before man would never understand, nor be brought unto. In these men (whose work is deciphered here Heb. 6.) God did vouchsafe as full a sufficient Grace according to their Principles, as they do describe or desire in their low model of Doctrines; for they will needs argue these men to have been actually converted, and to have walkt as true and sincere Christians, which yet how short it was of saving Grace, I have out of the 9th and 10th verses shewn. So then God will be found to have gone beyond their Doctrines and Demands: Yea and it will appear, that because God did not farther work that in them which we say saving Grace must do (and those v. 9, 10. shew) that therefore, and therein they were short of Grace.

CHAP. III.

That a Genuine Saving work of Grace is specifically distinct from that which is in a Temporary Believer, evidenced from a Consideration of the state of the Thorny Ground here in (Heb. 6.) set in Parallel with the Parable of the Sower in the Evangelists. Some Observations on the Whole.

IN prosecution of my Discourse about the Nature of, the work wrought in Temporary Believers, and to prove that the true work of Grace wrought in sincere Believers, is specifically distinct from it, I shall now Consider the State of the Thorny Ground, as represented in Heb. 6. 7, 8. For the Earth which drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth Herbs meet for them by whom it is dressed, receiveth blessing from God: But that which beareth thorns and briers, is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing; whose end is to be burned.

1. I shall consider the Parallel these words do hold with the Thorny ground, in the Parable of the Sower, in respect of what each brings forth.

2. I shall consider the Allusion whereby the Event or Issue that in the end befallerh these Thorny-ground Professours that fall away, as set forth in those words,

1. Nigh unto Cursing.

2. Whose End is to be Burned.

3. I shall consider the Import of the Similitudes whereby, the MEANS by which they are wrought upon, are set out. 1. Rain. 2. The Dressing

4. Some Observations upon All.

1. As for the Parallel which this Text, (Heb. 6. 7, 8.) holds with the Thorny-ground in the Parable of the Sower, an Allusion here seems expressly to be intended.

1. In the substance and reality of the things, the works here spoken of by Paul, from which men fall away, are one and the same with those mention'd in the Parable. For he speaks here of the highest sort of workings upon men that fall away, as the descriptions of the workings themselves shew, viz. Their being enlightned, and having tasted of the Heavenly Gift, and being made Partakers of the Holy Ghost, and having tasted the good Word of God, and the Powers of the World to come. And as in the Primitive times there were in True Believers the highest Communications of Graces, and of the Holy Ghost: So there were then the highest Elevations and raisings up of Principles in men unregenerate, and influences of the Spirit upon them; and here he mentioneth the highest of what are spoken any where in any other place of Scripture.

Now then in like manner in the Parable, the order of Christs placing the Thorny Ground, and the works thereon, doth speak the highest work of them that fall away. For, as for the Stony Ground, that imports a lower degree of working upon it, than that of the Thorny: And there is no other work mentioned by our Saviour (whose scope was perfectly to set down all the several sorts of Hearers and Professors) beyond the Thorny, but only the good Ground, the good and honest Heart that brings forth Fruit with Patience to the end. And therefore this work on the Thorny Ground is, of Temporary works the highest, and so in reality is one and the same with this in Heb. 6.

But let us compare the Analogy of the words and Phrases, and so thereby of the things that are found in that Parable, and in these words of Paul.

2. As there in the Parable you find three Hearts of Hearers compared in General unto the Ground which Seed is sown in, to the end to bring forth Fruit : So here unto the Earth which drinks in the rain from Heaven, to the end to bring forth Herbs, doth answer. For those words, The Earth that drinks in the rain (v. 7.) are to be carried down unto v. 8. in common spoken both of good and bad, and are thus to be read in v. 8. But that Earth which drinks in the rain and bears the Thorns, &c. The comparison is in all unto the Earth in bearing and bringing forth: this in General.

2. But Secondly, and more particularly, The Parallel here and there, as concerning the good Ground, agrees perfectly in both, even in this, that the good Heart, or good Ground therein the Parable is said to bring forth Fruit to perfection, Mark 4. 8. And other fell on good Ground, and did yield fruit that sprang up and increased, and brought forth some thirty, and some sixty, and some an hundred. 1. It yielded Fruit. 2. That sprang up. 3. And increased and brought forth; that is, continued to bring forth, some Thirty, &c. even till the Harvest, and so from first to last had some Fruit all along. But of the Thorny Ground it is oppositely spoken, 1. That it brought forth no Fruit, Mark 4. 7. 2. That it became Unfruitful, Mat. 13. 22. 3. That it brought no Fruit to perfection, Luke 8. 14. The meaning of all which comes to this, that it brought forth no true perfect fruit for the kind of Fruit, as also not Fruit to the end of their days, unto the Harvest, or unto maturity. Thus we have it in the Parable. And answerably we have here (Heb. 6. v. 7.) the difference between the two Earths or Soils. 1. That the Ground that is good, and blessed is said, 1. To bring forth Herbs meet for them by whom it is dressed. 2. And to receive a Blessing from God : The First imports that it brings forth true and wholsom Herbs, meet for his Use, for his Taste, his Gust, for his Diet, as the Margent varies it.

Yea and Criticks have observed this difference between the two Earths here in this place (which I make use of unto this Correspondency with the Parable) that concerning the good Earth here, and of its bringing forth its Herbs, the Phrase used is τικτωσα, it begets, and brings them forth as a mature Birth ripened to perfection; as when a Woman, goes forth her whole time. For in allusion unto a Womans bringing forth is a Womb ascribed unto this Earth, (as ordinarily it useth to be) and so a double metaphor is insinuated. But of the other Earth (v. 8. as prosecuting the same) it is said επιγονωσα, they cast out their production, as abortive Births, and so their best Fruits arrive not at perfection, but end in Abortiveness. And indeed if we would study an expression whereby to set out the difference of a Temporary and a Saving work, or an holy Calling, we could not do it more lively than to say, that the one is as a ripe and perfect Birth, the other but a Mola, an Abortive, and becomes such thro' and from the deficiency in the work it self from the first, as Womens Abortives usually are. However the Issue of this second parallel is this, That the Actings and Products of the Thorny Ground Professors were never true Fruit, for neither Christ nor the Apostle here do vouchsafe them that Name.

And I may strengthen this Parallel from that of Jude, who speaks of the same sort, or of like Professors: That those he so vehemently inveighs against, once were Professors, is many ways evident, as having been such as once had had some green fruit, v. 12. Trees whose fruit withereth (says he) and once had some Life, (why else are they call'd Trees twice dead?) once in Adam, and then wrought on anew, and then dead a second time. And yet lo, he plainly concludes of them, That they had no Fruit. They are (saith he) Trees whose Fruit withereth, and are without Fruit; wherein he corrects his first having said, whose Fruit withereth; because it might be thought thereupon that yet at least he acknowledg'd they once had some fruit, and that fresh and lively, and therein did honour them. Therefore he in this after-saying absolutely denys it, that they ever had any true Fruit. No, they are without Fruit, says he.

That a Genuine Saving work of Grace is specifically distinct from that which is in a Temporary Believer, evidenc'd from a Consideration of the state of the Thorny Ground here in (Heb. 6.) set in Parrllel with the Parable of the Sower in the Evangelists. Some Observations on the Whole.

4. Some Observations upon All.

I. As for the Parallel which this Text, (Heb. 6. 7, 8.) holds with the Thorny-ground in the Parable of the Sower, an Allusion here seems expressly to be intended.

1. In the substance and reality of the things, the works here spoken of by Paul, from which men fall away, are one and the same with those mention'd in the Parable. Therefore he in this after-saying absolutely denys it, that they ever had any true Fruit. No, they are without Fruit, says he.

Book 7 The Third Parallel is, that in the very letter the Apostle (v. 8.) doth describe these Temporaries by the same Similitude by which our Saviour sets out that Third and Highest sort of Professors, that they both bring forth Thorns. And this is the most Characteristical and most eminent deciphering whereby either of them did set them forth, and therefore besides the reality in what is the main, they in the very letter agree.

And for the farther Illustration of either, I shall pursue this Query, Whether in the Intendment both of the Apostle here, and of Christ in the Parable, be, that the Thorny Earth in both places did bring nothing but Thorns.

1. In the intention of the Apostle it is so to be understood; for not only he mentioneth no fruit at all, but Thorns only; but takes it in its comparative opposition unto the good Earths bringing forth good Herbs, as in difference from this, and therefore this other Earth brings forth no such Herbs at all, but only these Thorns instead thereof. And this sence is confirm'd by this, that seeing the best Earth or Hearts of the Holiest upon Earth, do bring forth Thorns as plentifully as it doth Herbs; therefore the point of difference in this Opposition must lie in this, that this Second Earth brings forth nothing but Thorns and Briars, and no Herbs at all, whereas that other did bring forth some Herbs, for if it also brought forth no Herbs, there would be no difference between them.

If it be said that he speaks of this bad Earth, how that in the end it brings forth Thorns, and so is cursed, but not so from the first.

The Reply is, 1. That if this Earth had brought forth Herbs at first, as well as Thorns, as the other Earth doth, then it would have received a Blessing from God upon such its bringing forth, so as to bring forth more, for that is also one difference put between the one and the other. 2. The Apostle (in the 9th & 10th verses) shews in the Persons, and instance of these Hebrews, that the difference between them was not confined unto what was the event on either side, but extended unto what from the very first of their being good Earth they had brought forth. This the Apostle doth here, and also Chap. 10. 32. In both he refers them to time past, yea, unto the first; Chap. 10. 32. But call to remembrance the former Days, in which after ye were illuminated, ye endured a great fight of Afflictions. And he doth it also here, v. 9, 10. But Beloved, we are perswaded better things of you, and things that accompany Salvation, though we thus speak; for God is not Unrighteous to forget your work and labour of Love, which ye have shewed towards his Name, in that ye have ministred to the Saints, and do minister. Therefore oppositely (in this 8th verse) speaking of the other Earth, his meaning must be, that for time past, yea, and from the first, these only had brought forth even Thorns and nothing else.

2. For the Parable I urge that in the πρότασις, or fore-part of it, there is this Expression, Luke 8. 7. Some (of the Seeds namely) fell among Thorns, and the Thorns sprang up with it. Where,

1. The Word συμμεῖσα, imports at least that from the very first together with the Word, there were Thorns sprung up. This cannot be denied, and therefore take it as it is styled, a Thorny Ground (in difference from the good ground) and it is to be understood to have been such as brought forth Thorns from the first, in such a manner as the good Ground did not, for otherwise even the good Ground doth bring forth some Thorns from the first; and it cannot be otherwise, but this of the Thorns must be understood with difference.

* Græcis 2. That word also may, and doth, sometimes import a Coalescency, or quædam a growing up into an Oneness, or a becoming one (as Grotius hath observ-dicuntur ed, * and quotes this very Phrase, Luke 8. 7. for that Signification) as well quæ in unū as a springing up together from the first, or all a long; and so implys, that coalescunt some of the Thorns did at least coalesce and become one with what these ut plantæ Men had received of the Word, and as they received it; for it is the same word quædam that is used of our Engrafture into, and our being one with Christ as our Root, Luke 8. 7. Rom. 6. 5. If we have been Planted together, &c. The main Emphasis of which
&c. Grotius in Rom. 6. 5. Speech

Speech lies not in this only, that all the Saints are engrafted together, but chiefly in this, that Christ and all, and each Saint, are planted together, and are σύνφυτοι; for it refers to it as explaining his foregoing Speech, (v. 3.) Know ye not that as many of us as were Baptized into Jesus Christ, which (here in v. 5.) he explaineth by our being planted together with him, it having been into him, and therefore were Baptized into his Death; (which here in v. 5. is explained by a being planted together into the likeness of his Death, &c.) Baptism being the Sacrament signifying our engrafture into Christ (v. 3.) and our being planted together with Christ into the same Conformity, being the thing signified thereby, (v. 5.) Now in the like fence here the Thorns and the work of the word in the Heart are said to grow into one, to be σύνφυτοι; that is, the Word they received was admitted by way of engrafture upon some Thorns or other in the Heart, and thence all the actings of their spirits were but Fruits of Flesh, as the Root of them, though conversant about spiritual Objects; and if so, then all such actings of spirits unrenewed, are no other unto God than Thorns in reality, although in view and in speciousness Herbs and Fruits.

And certainly the reason of the thing it self falls in fully for this; for to sow among Thorns, or Earth where Thorns are unplowed up, or in the midst of Thorns (as the Parable Luke 8. 7. hath it) is all one in Scripture ἐν μέσῳ. Phrase, as to sow Seed upon an Heart remaining still wholly Unregenerate, Jer. 4. 3. Break up your fallow Ground, and sow not among Thorns, which is interpreted to be (v. 4.) Circumcise your selves to the Lord, and take away the foreskin of your Hearts: so as to sow among Thorns, is to plant the Word received in an Heart that remains utterly flesh still; and as this is the mind of the Prophets Caution there, so it must be understood to be the mind of Christ here in the Parable, that there were no other Principles in the Heart to receive that Word into, - so as to affect the Heart, but what was Flesh, and so there was an engrafture of it upon, and a Coalescency with some Root of Thorns or other, and it cannot be otherwise if the Heart remains Thorny Ground.

But here may this Objection be made, That in the Interpretation of the Parable, these Thorns are said to enter in after the seed was received into the Ground, Mark 4. 19. And so the whole Sense of the Parable is to be restrained thereunto.

1. I Answer: That indeed there is one sort of Thorns that do as it were anew arise, and so are said to enter in after the seed was received into these Mens Hearts, and they are such as Christ (in that 19th verse) instances in, viz. either Worldly Lusts, or gross Sins, the tops whereof by the power of the Word, when it was received even into these Mens Hearts, were lopt off, so far as they grew above Ground; of which thing Calvin was well aware, whilest he Notes upon it, That though indeed evil Lusts before the Word riseth up unto a stalk (in these Mens Hearts) did wholly possess the Heart, that yet they did not seem to be predominant at the first beginnings (of such Mens being so wrought upon) but to come or steal upon them by little and little, after the Word is grown up into some blade, and where it promiseth some Fruit. Yet still (say I) this no way lets, but that there might be some other Thorns that should rise up with the word received even from the first, (which I will call in respect of their Objects Spiritual Thorns, seeing in their Root they are Fleshly, and indeed but the affections and actings of self, upon what is in the word suitable thereunto;) and my reason is, because these Two Speeches of Christ, (the one of which is in Luke, They sprung up together with the word, and the other is in Mark, which speaks of Lusts entering in afterward) must be reconciled; especially considering withal, that these Thorny Professors were Men Unregenerate, and by their Thorns so distinguished from the good Ground at the very first, the Reconciliation seems easie; for that Speech, They sprung up together, expresseth and takes in the whole from first to last as to this Sense; that some were still springing up, and not at last only, but from the first, insomuch as there were some or other all along. There were at first, those Spiritual Thorns,

Book 7. and afterward those other Worldly Thorns; so as what with the one, and with the other, there was still a growing up of Thorns all the while, which do both of them also tend to choak the word (as 'tis there said) received in the Heart. For selfish Affections unto Spiritual things are still behind hand with themselves, and do destroy themselves (as Aristotle says of vices) and through their intermingling with the Word received, do hinder and spoil the efficacy thereof, and turn all into Sin. And then again those other Thorns, namely Worldly Lusts supervening, do more conspicuously choak that word, by Sucking and drawing away all the Sap and Juice, and intention of the mind from those Spiritual Objects at first entertained. And these latter are said to enter in, as it were anew; because indeed the former growth of such Lusts was (so far as before this new work they appear'd above Ground) in a great measure as then cut down, what through Terrors of Conscience, sense of Sin, Tastings of the powers of the World to come, by which the intention of the mind was drawn out another way, yet still self remained in it's full Vigour the same, though diverted another way, and turned upon other objects. Hence therefore all those Worldly Lusts do in their Root remain still unstubbed up, for they are all seated in self, and if that be not mortified, then they all remain unmortified at the bottom, and will in the end rise up as much as ever; for Worldly Pleasures are the natural Objects suited to the Genius and disposition of Self-Love as it is now Corrupted, and are the natural Channel for corrupt self to run in: But on the other hand, it's diversion unto Spiritual Objects of the other World (whilst it self remains in it's Native Strength) is but forced, and with a violence offered upon it, and therefore will not continue; and for the same reason those other Worldly Lusts will sooner or later sprout and revive, as Job speaking of a Tree says, Job. 14. 7, 8, 9. There is hope of a Tree if it be cut down that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease, though the Root thereof wax old in the Earth, and the stock thereof dye in the ground, yet through the scent of Water it will bud and bring forth Boughs like a plant. Thus here in the case before us, the General Root of Self is still as much alive as ever, and upon the fresh scent of former objects presenting themselves, who had been the old and natural Acquaintance of their Hearts, they obtain their wonted life and strength again, and overcome, as Peter says.

2. The Second thing proposed, is the Dreadful Issue that befalls the Thorny Ground Professors; and the Allusions it is set forth by.

1. In this Life, Nigh unto Cursing.

2. Whose end is to be Burned, in the World to come.

Our Saviour Christ in the Parable doth not mention this dreadful Issue, for his main Scope was to shew the causes of each Grounds unfruitfulness, but Paul's drift is mainly and farther to shew the end of such Men.

1. They are Nigh unto Cursing. This hath Relation and Allusion to the condition of the Earth afore the fall, and after the fall: I say the Earth; for the Substratum or principal Subject matter or thing the Comparison runs upon, is the Earth, to which Men and their Hearts are compared; so v. 7. The Earth which brings forth, &c. v. 8. but that Earth, namely that brings forth Thorns, &c. it is that Earth is nigh unto Cursing; so as to make out the Allusion we must find out some Earth that was Cursed, and what other Earth do we find to have been Cursed, but that Earth for Adams Sin: And so as Adam himself was a Type of Christ (Rom. 5.) and Adams World afore his fall a Type of the World to come (Heb. 2.) so upon Adams falling the Curse of his Earth was the Type of such Persons that should Apostatize from Christ: And so the Allusion holds thus, That as before the fall the Earth was so Fruitful, that with a small pains it would bring forth Fruit in Comparison of what it did after the Curse, as those words, In the Sweat of thy Brow, &c. do shew. But how it was after the Fall accursed, you read, Gen. 3. 17. The Ground for thy sake is Cursed, Thorns also and Thistles shall it bring forth to thee. Now to make up this Comparison about the thing in hand; Mans Heart before the fall was a Paradise to God, planted wholly a right seed, as the Prophet expresses it; and and man himself was bless'd of God, and God rejoiced in him. (Gen. 1. 31.)

 But now man being fallen, is cursed, and brings forth nothing but Thorns and Briars: Well, but yet the Lord comes again to cultivate and till the Earth of some mens Hearts a second time, sows his seed, and comes with rain, and sends Dressers to manure it, but it still brings forth Thorns; then it is nigh unto a final Cursing (says he) as the Earth was then cursed. See Isa. 5. v. 1, 2. Jude v. 12, Trees twice dead, once in Adam, and then after their fall some little Life was put into them, but they brought forth Thorns: And Peter writing of the same sort of men (as you well know that Jude doth) his expresse Sentence of them is (2 Peter 2. 14.) curst Children.

2. Whose End is to be burned.

That the Thorns are to be burnt, is not immediately said of them, but that the Earth shall be burnt, and therefore by Consequent the Thorns that are found growing thereupon; yea and the Thorns being set on fire, do help towards that Fire that burneth the Earth together with themselves. Now the Earth notifies the man, the Person, and the Thorns his works and fruits brought forth; but it is the Man chiefly, for He is the Earth. This I take to be an allusion to the Land of Sodom and Gomorrhah, with the Inhabitants of All sorts on it. The Soil of Sodom and Gomorrhah, before its being burnt, was as you find Gen. 13. 10. Behold all the Plain of Jordan, that it was well watered every where, before the Lord destroy'd Sodom and Gomorrhah, even as the Garden of the Lord: It was like to Paradise it self (which we spoke of before) before God destroy'd it. Thus here, the rain comes often upon this Earth, and it is watered with better water than ever Paradise was, but the effect of all being that it brings forth Thorns, then follows that which is equivalent unto the Curse of Sodom: For God comes upon that Land with Fire from Heaven, and burned the very Ground, as well as all that were upon it. He did not only turn it into Barrenness, as when 'tis said a Fruitful Land shall be turned into a Defart (so the Psalmist;) but it was turned into a Lake, and that a sulphurous Lake of Fire and Brimstone, out of which such Vapours do arise as kill Birds that fly over it, and the Fruits that grow upon the Banks do, through the Heat and Fire that is in the Earth, turn to dust, which Fruits are call'd proverbially, The Apples of Sodom; The very Rocks are blasted, and the Ground smells of Fire to this day. Now to this Earth are the Hearts of Apostates here compared, in their fatal and final Punishment in the other World: And Jude's Comparison (when he speaks of these) is the same. Even as Sodom and Gomorrhah (says he) and the Cities about them, in like manner giving themselves over to Fornication, and going after strange Flesh; are set forth for an example, suffering the Vengeance of eternal Fire: He speaks of such very Apostates, and these that were Trees twice dead: And on the contrary, he thereupon comforts and encourages the Preserved in Jesus Christ, as v. 1. in a purposed opposition He styles them in reference to those Apostates. O Bless God for Election! That we were not left to be such Professors as these, bringing forth nothing but Thorns, whose end is to be burned, as if he had left us to our own Spirits, and had not changed our Hearts, we had been: Rom. 9. 27. Except the Lord had left us a Seed (viz. of Election) we had been as Sodom, and like unto Gomorrhah; It would have been the Issue of us all, we should have been burnt with our Thorns.

3. We have next the Rain falling on this Earth, and its being dress'd, spoken of. This is the third part of his Comparison, wherein he compares the Means of Grace whereby men are wrought upon, unto two things: 1. The Rain. 2. The Dressing of the Earth. The Rain I take to be inward means vouchsafed, viz. those Illapses, Enlightnings, good motions and comings of the Spirit of God upon mans Soul, falling immediately from Heaven, as the rain does. The Dressing is the outward means, as Preaching of the Word, and other Ordinances, differing from and besides the rain, as when it is said that Paul plants, Apollos waters, &c. (1 Cor. 3. 6.) there's the dressing; but the Rain is the inward means, of which I understand that of James, when he speaks of the Husband-mans waiting for the Harvest, (Isa. 5. 7.) says

Book 7 says he, He hath long Patience for it, until he receiveth the early and latter rain. These come before the Harvest, and are those inward influences and refreshments which do accompany the outward means. The Lord affords such Rain to poor Souls when they need it, some at one time, which is the Early Rain; and some again at another time, still as they need it; and All tends to ripen the Fruit, and keep the Soul in Heart, as the Rain doth the Earth. And then what man doth in the outward Ministry of the Ordinances, that is the Dressings or Culture here spoken of. Now I come to the Observations, which are of three Sorts.

1. Upon the Ground that is Cursed.
2. Upon the Ground that was fruitful.
3. Concerning the Means, Rain, &c. These two latter I shall put under one Head.

1. The first sort of Observations is upon the Ground that bore Thorns, and that was Cursed. 1. From that of the Earth bearing Thorns, although the good word had been sown into it; and although the Rain had come upon it, and it had drunk in that rain, yet the Heart remaining only carnal, and the roots of Thorns abiding (as hath been opened) it brought forth no other Product: Observe, That All means, inward and outward, and influences from Heaven, do but nourish Self, and but cause Worldly Lusts and self-love to grow. Take a poysoned Plant, plant it by another wholsom Herb in the same Ground, and let the Rain fall upon both; yet the Rain and the Ground nourishes the poyson in the one, and causes that to grow, as well as a good Plant in the other: So that we have no way but to turn to God, and to get the Thorns out, and new Principles in their room. Yea, in a regenerate man, so far forth as the roots of Thorns remain, so far forth all the actings of the Spirit will be the Actings of Flesh, and so but Thorns. The root is Thorn, and the fruit will be like the Root, as Christ says, that the Fruit was like the Tree. They are all Thorns to God; and carnal Affections to Spiritual Things, or Affections arising meerly from Self-Love to divine Objects, will make Fuel for Hell as well as Worldly Lusts; they are all Thorns in the eyes of God.

2. Observe, Concerning these Thorny Professors, that God proceedeth towards them in casting them off by degrees, and not presently upon the first Advantages against them; which is apparent out of the Text.

For 1. He continues the Rain, the inward good motions long to them: For that which is said v. 7. The Earth that oft drinks in the rain, is to be understood ἀπὸ κοινῆς, and to be carried to the 8th verse, and applyed to this Earth that brings forth Thorns, as well as to the good; for that is spoken in common, both to the one that brings forth Herbs, &c. and to that other that is rejected.

2. After such a bringing forth of Thorns for some long Space of time, he yet proceeds by degrees: As 1. Though within himself and in his own Purpose he rejects them sooner, that is, He purposeth, if they persist still to bring forth no other Fruit than Thorns, to have no more to do with them. Luke 13. 7. Then said he unto the Dresser of his Vineyard, Behold these three Years I come seeking Fruit on this Figtree, and find none; cut it down, why cumbereth it the Ground? He, after two years expectation, had his Heart taken off from them, and began to have no pleasure in them, as the Epistle to the Hebrews expresseth it; yet still continued a dressing of it, v. 8. For he answering, said unto him, Lord, let it alone this Year also, till I shall dig about it and dung it: and withal, God sends Rain upon it as aforetime. But 2. After some further expectation, it becomes nigh unto Cursing. Now what it is for God to curse finally, you may know by the contrary dispensation towards the good here in v. 7. The Earth that brings forth Herbs, &c. receives a Blessing from God; that is, so as to bring forth more Herbs, which the Parable calleth an encrease, and which Christ (John 15. 1.) thus expresseth, Every Branch that bringeth forth Fruit in Me, he purgeth it to bring forth more Fruit. And that is the Blessing it receives here in this World, nor can there be a greater Blessing in this Life vouchsafed, and yet still to be nigh unto Cursing imports Gods Lothness and Backwardness finally to pronounce it; only in the mean while he withdraws his influences; till 3. At the last he curseth them indeed, as he did those (in 2 Pet. 2. 14. Cursed Children) and as he did the Figtree, Mat. 21. 19. And when he saw a Figtree in the way, he came to it, and found nothing thereon but Leaves only, and said unto it, Let no Fruit grow on thee henceforward for ever, and presently the Figtree wither'd away. Now, as Paul says, Doth God take care of Oxen? No, his aim was further, at Ministers in them: So here, Doth Christ curse Fig-trees? No, his aim is to shew how he curseth in the end fruitless Souls. He says of such a Soul, let never Fruit grow more on thee; and look as that Tree stood still in the same place, but yet none of its former Fruit grew thereon: So men may profess Religion after such a cursing of them, and continue in the Church and under Ordinances, but never a Prayer with affection grows any more thereon, no more Dews from Heaven, or inward Correspondencies with God.

Use. Let us take heed therefore, and eye the withdrawings of God, and mourn presently, lest we grow nigh unto cursing; Let us watch the rising up of Thorns, for they will bring a Curse of bringing forth worse and sharper Thorns: And let us humble our selves for them, and seek to root them out.

3. Observe Gods dealings with these men, that having had workings on them, do fall away. You see how dreadful they are. Every where you find this dreadfulness exprest: He built his House (says Christ) upon the Sand, and the fall of that House was great. All the Sermons he had heard, and all the profession he had made, and all he had done, fell upon him and broke him to Powder. Read Jude, you have black words given to such. The blackest words that ever fell from the Holy Ghosts Pen, are to be found in Peter, (2 Pet. 3.) and in this Jude concerning such men, for whom the Blackness of Darkhess (he says) is reserved; Read but that Epistle, Then says Peter (2 Pet. 2.) If they be again entangled and overcome of Corruption, their latter end is worse than their beginning; for it had been better for them not to have known the way of Righteousness, &c. Men cannot profess Religion at that rate they may profess other things.

The Consideration of these things, should awaken and quicken us to be observant how Thorns grow in our Hearts, viz. Worldly Lusts, Cares, Murmuring, Unthankfulness, inordinate Fancies of what in the World we would be. And we should be watchful to keep them from growing up in us; as also to observe narrowly any steps or beginnings of Gods withdrawings from us, for they tend to cursing, and we should never be quiet in such a Case.

2. The Second sort of Observations, is, concerning the good Earth, and the Means vouchsafed.

1. Observe, Even in good Hearts that have a Blessing from God, the Fruit, or at least the encrease of that Fruit, doth not appear oftentimes of a long while. This is plain out of the Text; for of the good Earth that brings forth Herbs, it is said, The Earth which drinks in the rain that comes often upon it, brings forth Herbs meet, &c. and so receives a Blessing from God to bring forth more. If therefore thou dost bring forth Herbs meet for God after the rain hath come oft upon thee, it is well; thou art still within the Compass of receiving a Blessing from God. Affliction works the quiet fruit of Righteousness, after we have been exercised thereby; but it is afterward, not presently.

2. Observe, Gods saving and through workings in the Spirits of men, are not always in violent ways, but in gentle, sweet, soaking Dispensations. The word vers here, signifies your mizling rain, molliores & minores guttas (saith Hyperius) as the Israelites (1 Cor. 10.) were sprinkled in the Cloud; 'twas such a rain as falls in a mist. Multitudes of Souls are not wrought upon by

Book VII stormy showers of rain falling with thick drops, no : There comes your gentle rain, the Early and the Latter, as the poor Soul hath need thereof, and bedews his Heart. He prays and goes to bed, and it may be in the morning finds some Dew upon his Heart. Now wilt thou comfort thy self, though thy work goes on but gently, yet it goes on surely. Thou hast not those high manifestations and sudden sensible comings in thou hearest others speak of, yet thou hast Gods presence in a subsistence to thy Heart, and thy Heart drinks it in and goes away strengthened and quickened. There is a still work that doth not make a noise, when some that are far greater works decay, and like a Land-flood dry up. Of the slye Husbandman that found the Treasure in the Field, it is said, that he did hide it, but for joy thereof went and sold all he had for it, Mat. 13.44.

I shall answer but an Objection or two which good and honest Souls may make about themselves, upon occasion of these observations, and the Doctrine that hath been delivered.

1. Obj. My Heart hath a World of Thorns in it, and more of Thorns than of what I can ever hope to be good Herbs.

Ans. So hath every regenerate man a World of Thorns in him: Ay, (says Calvin) thick set Coppes of them. Every ones Grace is sown and continues amongst a Wood of Thorns: Yea, but yet there is another Root of something that grows up in thy Heart, that is not Thorns; and there is a Conflict against the Thorns, an endeavour to stub them up, and they are Thorns in thy Side. Therefore there is another Principle in thee.

Quarquam mediocris erit profectus, quisquis tamen non depererat a sin-cero Dei cultu bona terra et fertilis censetur: Etenim est centupli respectu tenuis est ejus fertilitas quae trigecupli reddit, tamen omnes si conjungit, quae agricolae laborem ac spem non frustratur; & communibonitatis Elogio inferiores quoque dignatur. Calvin. in verba.

2. Obj. Thou wilt again say; I do not grow by reason of these Thorns. But comfort thy self (says Calvin) for he that brought forth the Thirty-fold is by Christ reckoned with him that brought forth the Hundred-fold. Christ puts them all together, and dignifies them all alike with the common style of Good Ground; and where the expectation of the Husbandman (as he speaks) is not altogether frustrate, that Little they have is accepted.

3. Obj. But you will object, Alas my Affections were mightily flushed at first, and now they wither, and Worldly Lusts grow up in their stead.

Ans. Shall I yet say to thee? Doth God maintain a Conflict in thee against sin, an endeavour to stub up the Thorns? dost thou water those roots of Bitterness with bitter Tears and Sorrow, and with the Blood of Christ to kill them? Then still the root of the matter remains in thee.

Again, consider, when thou wert first converted to God, as thou hadst Grace in thee, so thou wert a Temporary Believer at first, in respect of thy unregenerate part. All was stirr'd at first; Corrupt Self-Love was stirred at first, as well as what was truly gracious; and when all was stirred, there must needs be a great flush of Affection. This was thy Case at first, and then the Stream was strong; as Take a little Rivulet which runs naturally and constantly, but as the Prophet says, runs softly, with a slow and gentle Current; let a Land-Flood come upon it, it will prove a River, a strong and violent Stream: But when that Land-Flood ceases, then the Brook is not so swell'd, tho' it goes on still, so much of it as was truly and naturally so, and had a Spring. So it is here. At first, half thy Heart, thy unregenerate Part was turned a Temporary Believer too; and Self-Love, the great Simon Magus in these was wrought upon, and became a Temporary Believer; but yet besides, and over and beyond that, there was a little Fountain opened in thy Heart, and this continues still to flow, when the Land-Flood ceases, and then look, what is true Grace indeed holds out the Conflict against it self in Worldly Lusts, and bears alone the stress of all, and then Worldly Lusts begin to contend purely with this little Grace in us, and that fights it out alone, and then is the truer Tryal of Grace, though less discernable to Sense than it was at first.

CHAP. IV.

That the Work of Grace in true Believers, differs in Kind from that which is in Temporaries, proved, because True Holiness of Heart cannot be produced by any Vertue of the Covenant of Works, since the Fall, but that it is peculiar to the Covenant of Grace to effect this.

GOD hath put that Genius and Disposition into the Grace of the New Covenant in us, as might answerably Glorifie the Grace of God in Christ towards Us, according to the tenour of that Covenant: And the Soul accordingly hath in it a Radical disposedness to give up the Soul to Christ, to be acted by him, and to be made sensible of it's own insufficiency to act it self, and so to glorifie Christ as its Root for Sanctification, as well as its Saviour for Justification; and accordingly sooner or later, both through the experience of its own inability to act it self, and of that continual infused strength which from without it feels freely derived as the Spirit pleaseth to dispense, and whereby it is carried on to motion, especially when by the Word, and the relation of that Truth out of it, it is called upon to do this, it actually doth most readily submit, and followeth the Truth revealed therein in a continual dependance upon Christ, to do all in him, and through him, as being that which glorifies Christ, and debaseth it self, and so it practiseth accordingly. But I do withal conceive, that this giving up the Soul to be acted only by Christ, doth arise rather from the Grace of Faith unto which of all Graces in Us, the predominancy and prime agency is committed under the New Covenant, (Rom. 4. 16.) whose Office it is to enervate and spoil all derived Grace in us of its strength, by discovering it's Weakness and Insufficiency, as also to carry them out of all to Christ, to abide in him as their only Element in which they move, and from whom also. And this Faith also doth from its Object Revealed to it, and Apprehended by it; namely, that the tenour of this Second Covenant (under which the Soul is now brought) is clean altered and changed in respect of Gods dispensing strength and motion, from what was in that first Covenant with Adam, with whom the Covenant was struck, being the Covenant of Nature; hence Gods concurrency with it was ordained suitable to the principles by nature bestowed, which were habitual Graces, that is, to concur with them according to their kind, as in a free agent, as with other natural Principles in their kind. And hence they had a strength to act from themselves, according to the freedom of Mans Will to use it. But now that Power is forfeited, through the breach of that Covenant which was, as now, the strength of Sin (as the Apostle speaks) so then of Grace. And therefore the strength of Grace to act under the Second Covenant, can never be in Grace it self, but in him who is the strength and foundation of that Covenant, Jesus Christ. Faith being thus taught of God (the Truth as it is in Jesus) this lesson of dependance for Motion as well as that for Justification, doth keep all those principles of Graces in Us, from attempting to put forth in their own strength, and carries them out of themselves to Christ, and teacheth them to lay down their own Abilities in subjection to his Spirit: Therefore this living in Christ, is attributed to Faith, G. 2. 20.

Book 7 The Life I now lead, is by the Faith in the Son of God; which evacuates still all the power of Grace, any otherwise than as in Christ the Fountain, and preserves the Soul in a Sense of its weakness under his second Covenant, that so the power of Christ might rest upon it, 2 Cor. 12. 9. Faith being herein to all Graces that which Moralists say that Prudence is to all other Vertues, their Governour and Tutor; was made thus the great Officer in this Second Covenant, because it would give all to Grace, and Christ, (Rom. 4. 16.) Otherwise I do not conceive that in the Graces themselves there is any such peculiar inbred instinct, differing from what under the first Covenant; and therefore the Apostle Paul and all else have found it the hardest Lesson to have their Hearts brought to this dependance, and not to trust in themselves, and act from themselves; because Grace was not at first brought up to it, to be of it self thus poor and beggarly as this second Covenant hath made it.

2. It is acknowledged that one Essential difference between a Temporary Work and a Saving, is, That the one acts all from it self, though it be received, and that Grace Evangelical acts or is in disposition to act from Christ as a Head, as well as to Christ as a Lord, and accordingly is taught to depend at length for Sanctification in working, as well as for Justification, upon Christ; which I take to be the main difference intended in that 15th Chapter of John, in the Parable of the Vine, and bringing forth Fruit in Christ, as the Syriack reads the words, through Abiding in him, in a continual Sense that they of themselves can do nothing without him: And this Fundamental Principle did Christ teach his Disciples then at his Departure. So that Christ is made to us Sanctification as well as Justification, by a new Covenant. Yet so as 1. It may be a long while ere such true Grace is taught distinctly and knowingly to it self thus to do; as may seem to have been the case of these his Disciples and of Peter, not long after this new Lesson of their Faith towards Christ; for this as in other things of more concernment, was little or not so distinctly as yet exercised; as they exercised Faith on God, but not so distinctly, on Christ, John 14. 1. therefore Christ calls for it. Thus also they had not prayed in his name, Hitherto ye have asked nothing in my Name, nor yet so distinctly knew how they were in him, and how he acted all in them, as appears by the 20th verse of the 14th Chapter of John, and yet in the mean time that Grace was acted by Christ secretly: And herein it falls out as Christ says to Peter, John 13. 7. in another case, What I do now thou knowest not, but thou shalt know hereafter. So it is with them, that Christ doth all in them they at present haply do not know, but when their Union with him is cleared up to them, and their Faith taught this Lesson more distinctly out of the Word, of their dependance upon Christ, they then more distinctly acknowledg all they formerly did was from him, and give him the Praise: And 2^{dly}, In the mean time such Souls do acknowledg all they have and do is not from themselves, but Christ only, if they do any good; which acknowledg (upon all occasion of their quickning) is to be taken interpretativè; for this doing all in Christ by Faith, is not always apprehended by many poor Souls that in a sence of their emptiness wait upon Christ for all, and do from their Souls desire to attribute all to Christ, and yet always discern not how the strength to do all flowes upon an act of Faith fetching that vertue from Christ, or from Union with him, because that their Union is yet doubted by them. They acknowledg both that Christ is and must needs be the Fountain of all, and accordingly have recourse to him by Acts of Recumbency in all, and vertue comes from him insensibly upon such acts put forth; but yet the Connexion between the Cause and the Effect they do not see, nor can hang them together, the power that works in us being as secret as that of the Heavens on our Bodies, and as strong as that of Physick, which yet is often not discerned; and therefore the Apostle prays for the Ephesians, Chapter 1. 19. That their Eyes might be opened to see that power wrought in them.

3. It is acknowledged, that all the Gifts and Graces in Temporaries, whereby they conform to the Law, &c. are all conveyed by the Knowledge of Christ, for thereby it is said they conform to the Holy Commandment, mandment, 2 Pet. 2. but yet these are by no other tenour convey'd, than as that moral Light and natural Light which Christ sets up in the dark Hearts of all Men, (John 1. 9.) neither are they any more convey'd by a Covenant, or as the Foundation of a Covenant, than such light to Heathens is or was, although they be convey'd by the Knowledge of the Word, and of the Covenant of works, set on by the Spirit of Bondage, and also of the Covenant, which being indefinitely propounded to them, as well as to the Elect in the Ministry of it, Christ for the magnifying of saving Grace in and towards his own the more, and many other ends, makes tryal how far corrupt nature remaining such, may be induced by working upon the Principles therein, and also by infusing such Principles thereupon as may stand with nature remaining still corrupt, (though adorned and garnished) and how far it may be carried on and invited by this indefinite Revelation of the Gospel, to close with Christ and the Grace of the Gospel; and as Christs phrase is, how nigh the Kingdom of God it may be brought, and accordingly be Obedient, which yet it falls short of (as the Phrase is in the Hebrews;) God meets them in the indefinite promulgation of the Gospel as he did Balaam, and enlightens them, and allures them, and as he filled the Gentiles Hearts with food and gladness, and so left not himself without Witness, acts thereby to lead them to Repentance, Rom. 2. so he makes impressions of further joyes and a sweetness from himself (tho' not in himself as their chiefest good) upon the Hearts of Temporaries, to lead 'em to Repentance and Faith; so that though it be a work tending to Salvation in this sence specified, yet not saving, or which hath Salvation annexed to it at any time, (as Heb. 6. 9.) the Apostle distinguisheth them.

4. It is acknowledged, that such thus wrought upon, though by the Gospel, do for their Persons remain still under a Covenant of works, or under the Law, because they were created under it, and having been once thus Married to the Law, 'till they Dye to the Law to be Married to Christ, they according to the rule of Law are never freed from this Husband, but (as Rom. 7. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.) the Law hath still power over them: And hence also those Graces and Gifts they use in a legal way, though they be exercised about Evangelical Objects, and do turn (as my Expression hath often been) the Gospel and the acts required therein into Law, (their Husband the Law converting all it's own way) yet they trust on their own Righteousness, and upon their own acts of Faith, Repentance, &c. (the counterfeits whereof are wrought in them) and even the Ordinances of the Ceremonial Law (which unto true Believers were then Evangelical through their Faith looking at Christ, and Justification through him, Psal. 51.) were yet all turned by the carnal Jews into pure legal performances, they going about in a legal way to expiate their Sins by Sacrifice, Rom. 9. 12. They sought Righteousness as it were by the Law, says the Apostle there; so these seek a Righteousness in their Evangelical acts (such I call them in respect of their Object) but as it were by the works of the Law. And as in point of Justification they thus err, so also in Acting of their Graces, they do all as it were by the Law, as Adam at first did, but by their own strength, and so bring not forth Fruit in me, as Christ complains (John 15.) and so are cut off, as there it is said.

5. I yield these Graces and Gifts given them to be a true real work, as Reality is opposed to Hypocrisie, taking Hypocrisie for acting a part, and so that word ἔργον, speaking of the work on them really, (2 Pet. 2. 18.) implies; yet still so as compared with true Sanctification it is but counterfeit, as of Aurichalcum we say, that it is false Gold though it be true Metal, and of a Brass Shilling it is counterfeit Coyn, though true Metal, and which otherwise may serve to many purposes, and so I ever accounted it an Expression not according to the word, to call them Hypocrites, but rather Temporaries.

6. Grant also I do, that through those Gifts and Habits they are enabled to perform Duties of the Law and Gospel; Herod heard gladly, did many things, and many others much more, yet as the Apostle says, (Rom. 2.) of the Gentiles, they do but τὰ τῆ νόμου, the things of the Law, but not in doing, do they obey the Law, nor is the action legal, or such as the Law requires, no not for Book 7. for the Kind of it; but as the Heathens did in civil things many things commanded by the Law in the Second Table, by Moral Habits of Vertues, which were yet when done splendida peccata; so these Temporaries perform the Religious Duties of the first Table, in many things (by the like Habits infused) but they serve God, but in the oldness of the Letter, as the Apostle says of the best of the Jews, Rom. 7. but still not in the newness of the Spirit, as his distinction there is, that is from a received principle of Spirit opposed to Flesh: so that indeed they conform not to the Spiritual Law, as the Apostle calls it, which only truly is the Law, as appears in that Chapter; the Law is Holy, and Spiritual, and when he thus served God, he yet says He was without the Law, v. 9. because without the Spiritual Light of it in his understanding, and therefore without all true genuine spiritual dispositions, suitable thereunto in his affections: and hence it appears to me (as many ways else) that the difference of their specious holiness from true Sanctification in the Elect, should not only lye in acting off self, or from another, though that be true, but in the materials themselves, that is, that the one reacheth not to a true Spiritual Conformity; to the Holiness of the Law, in any degree nor is such as was in Adam in innocency; whereas the other doth, neither is there true love to God, nor is God made the supream end; until which be done, there cannot be said to be true Holiness in the Heart or Action, till they be predominant; for Holiness is a setting up God as the supream end, or it is not Holiness; so until then Self-love is the predominant principle, and so they remain wholly Flesh still; though Self is diverted from Worldly to Heavenly Objects; and all their Actions from these Graces are deficient of legal Righteousness, such as should be in them; and without love to God as the predominant principle, there cannot be any true legal Sanctification; for Love is the fulfilling of the Law, and the end of the Commandment is Love, out of a pure Heart, 1 Tim. 1. 5. God requires a right Manner, and a right End, or else the Command is not said to be done at all: So Deut. 6. ult. This is your Righteousness, if you observe all these Commandments as he hath Commanded them; without which there is no more true legal Righteousness, or any thing of the Image of God, than of the true image of a Man in the Body without the Soul; and Bodily Exercise and Godliness are opposed by the Apostle.

7. I acknowledg this work to have also a goodness in it; so Hos. 6. 4. it is called: But yet which still falleth short of the goodness which is in the Law, of which the Apostle says Rom. 7. 12. The Law is Holy, Spiritual and good, for it is not the Law Written in the Heart, but τὸ ἔργον τῆ νόμου γραπτόν, Rom. 2. 14. (so in the Gentiles;) that is, something which produceth many effects of the Law: And in the Jews it is called v. 20. μὲρωςις, a Form of Knowledge and of the Truth of the Law, which he had in his mind, which as it signifies a System or Body of the Law (as we say) in his mind, so withal insinuates the slightness of it for the kind; it is but a Form, a Picture, in comparison of the real Law it self, and so 2 Tim. 3. 5. μὲρωςις, a Form of Godliness, is opposed to the power or reality of Godliness; and so I confess it hath a goodness in it. 1. Natural, as it is a Creature wrought by the Spirit. 2. Moral, so far as the letter of the Law may be called such; as in a Picture there is a double truth and goodness, the one Natural in the substance of the Colours laid on, the other Relative or artificial as it is a Picture, and as more or less it comes near the Life: But still so as it reacheth not that kind of goodness that is in the Man himself: So hath this Work, the more lively it is the more goodness, but still not that which is in the Law, which is Holy, Spiritual and Good, I call it a literal Goodness, because it is the image of the Letter, not Spiritual: As Picture represents the outwards, so this: and if it counterfeits the inwards (as in some of a finer Thread) yet still it is but the Picture there-

And that not any such a kind of true Righteousness was ever renewed in any that Perish Eternally, and that no Man that is but under a Covenant of Works attains it, nor that ever the first Covenant availed to work any such Righteousness in any one since the fall; much less in all the Jews: I prove by these Reasons among many other.

1. That is made the very Fundamental difference between that first Covenant, and that second of Grace, that in the latter God Writes the Law in the Heart, by giving a new Heart and a new Spirit, Jer. 31. 33. Heb. 8. 8, 9, 10, 11. that is, an Heart conformable to the Law; for the Law Written in the Heart, is imprinted dispositions suitable to the Law, which is called the Law of the Mind. That Scripture Heb. 8. being so express, and making this the difference of the two Covenants, that which is made the difference of the latter Covenant, cannot be made common to the first; compare with this Heb. 10. where it is said, Christ hath [for ever perfected] (therefore none of them Perish) them that are Sanctified, v. 14. And what Sanctification is it? In the 15th & 16th verses he explains it, by alledging the Words of that Second Covenant, which at once interpret what it is to be perfected for ever, and what to be Sanctified: to be perfected for ever, is to have your Sins forgiven and remembered no more; and to be Sanctified, is to have the Law written in the Heart, v. 16. what God hath thus put together for ever, let no Man sever. The same is the difference that is put between the two Covenants, 2 Cor. 3. throughout. The one Wrote it upon Mens Consciences, but as in Letters upon Stone, there they might read it; but the other in living Letters, in dispositions suitable in their whole Hearts; the Gospel changeth into the same Image, the Law not so; and this was by Moses himself put, when he came at the end of all to publish this second Covenant, which he doth in the 29th & 30th Chapters of Deuteronomy throughout. He tells them verse 1. Chapter 29th, that it was a Covenant besides that made at Horeb, which he did now Publish, that is the Second Covenant, and v. 12, 13. it was that Covenant he swore to Abraham, and that was the second Covenant, Heb. 6. 16, 17, 18. That Covenant made to Abraham with an Oath was to shew the immutability of his Counsel to the Heirs of Life, that is the Elect; and so Luke 1. 72, 73. we have it. Again, the Covenant there was the second Covenant, for Rom. 10. 6. Paul in Opposition and Distinction to the Law, quotes the words of that Covenant then promulged, in 30th Chapter, as proper to the Gospel; The Righteousness of Faith speaks on this wise, &c. Now Chap. 30. 6. among other promises peculiar to this Covenant, this is one, to Circumcise the Heart, and so to cut off the Foreskin of Flesh, and to give them an Heart to love the Lord; and this is delivered as that which should be fulfilled under the New Testament, upon the Jews at their last call, because then it eminently takes place; and in opposition to this, he speaks of those Jews who had the first Covenant, that God had not given them a Heart to perceive to that Day, by all he had wrought, so Chap. 29. 4.

2. My Second Reason is, That to be under the Law is to be under the predominancy of sin, and so their State is distinguished (Rom. 6. 14.) from that of Grace. Sin shall not have dominion over you, for you are not under the Law but under Grace: Now if those, under such a work, have still a predominancy of sin, they cannot have true legal Righteousness or Holiness, which, if not predominant, at least is not Holiness.

Again 3. In the seventh Chapter, which follows, the Apostle in his own person, now when evangelically sanctified, sets forth as his corrupt part remaining, by the Law of the Members, so the regenerate part in him by the Law of the mind, which is a conformity to the Law of God in the inward man, approving it, delighting in it, and though the imperfection of it still drives him to Christ to deliver him, to whom he flies, v. 25. yet so as he there doth abstractly, and apart consider his Grace in it self, as it is a created Habit in the Heart, and as it is a conformity to the moral Law (of which he there speaks) as it is Holy, Spiritual and Good, v. 12, 14.

4. The fourth Reason is, That in the highest instances of Temporaries, they are still reckoned men unregenerate, and Flesh, &c. and Grace evangelical as it is considered abstractly, a Qualification conformable to the Command, is mentioned as the difference from the work on them, and not only as it is acted by Christ in us, though that be true, John 15. 1, 2, &c. as I said before.

First, In the 6th of Hebrews, how are those Enlightnings, Tastings, & distinguished from true Evangelical Graces, which are called v. 9. Better things (that is in themselves for the work and substance of them) and things that have Salvation (as the word is) annexed to them? We find the Grace of Love unto the Saints in truth, and a Labour of Love thence issuing, to be the thing instanced in, and are mentioned to be in them oppositely to their Enlightnings: Answerably, the Thorny Ground, the highest degree of Temporaries, unto which these enlightned are compared, (v. 7, 8.) How is it distinguished from the fourth Ground (Luke 13. 15.) but by the change in the Subject the Heart, A Good and honest Heart receiving the word, Honest as in not robbing Christ by taking any thing to it self, so also in conforming it self to all the Commands, as truly as laying hold on Promises. And so the other; the Stony Ground, their fault was, That still they remained unrenewed at all; for the Stony Ground wants a Root in sefe, in themselves, that is, as they wanted Christ, so also a true Principle of Sanctification in themselves: But the root of the matter is in me, says Job, pleading his own Righteousness.

As in like maner, concerning the Foolish Virgins, the difference put between them and the Wise, is, that the Wise had Oyl in the Vessel, habitual Grace, which those other wanted, though they were acted for present performances, as a dead Body is by Angels for a fit, having Oyl in their Lamps for present acts. And then the Thorny Ground, was an Heart, though humbled, yet never regenerated or Sanctified: For Jer. 4. 45. The taking away the Foreskin of the Heart, is opposed to sowing among Thorns; and our Saviour shuts up all that Parable with this, From him that hath not, shall be taken what he hath; and in Luke 13. it is explained what he seems to have; So as indeed it was not true Sanctification, but seeming such. So these in 2 Pet. 2. 20. who really, escape from the World, embrace the Holy Commandment, thro' the knowledg of Christ, yet, 1. They are said but to escape τὰ μιάσματα, not τὰς ἐσθλας, that is the defilements outward, and in that respect they are called Virgins, Mat. 25. But they escape not inward corruptions at all of Lust, as by being partakers of the Divine Nature, the true Believers are said to do, (Chap. 1. v. 4.) In opposition to these, 2. They are therefore called Swine, for their Natures still remaining as afore, though washed outwardly; and Dogs vomiting out through present pain, yet with a Stomach to the Vom it; and therefore were never renewed into so much as true legal Sanctification inward; which if they were, such expressions of differences could not be given them; nay they are on purpose given them to express the contrary. And for that expression of Goats elsewhere, it seems not to note out any farther degree of Men not saved, than such as these were, but rather seems to be put for all wicked Men, placed at the left hand in opposition to the Sheep.

Object. It may be objected, that they are said to be Sanctified through Christs Blood, Heb. 10.

Mat. 27.

I answer, 1st, In that sense as elsewhere they are said to believe, and Judas to Repent. All Graces have a counterfeit call'd by their name, as in Herbs and Stones, and as the Picture of the King is called the King.

2d. Shew me a place that they are justified (when yet a promise thereof is affirmed to belong to them) which being an act of God upon us; hath no counterfeit. Yea, or shew a place that they are said to be Born again; which if they are not, they are still Flesh, and so have no Holiness begun.

3. That is said to to be sanctified, which is set apart from Common Uses, as the Priests the Sabbaths, &c. So in men their Graces, though not sanctifying their Persons inwardly, yet they set them apart to God in many works done for him, and to his Church in their Gifts outwardly.

Which 4. being the purchase of Christs Blood is said to be done by his Blood. 4. Eph. He gives Gifts to the Rebellious also, and being wrought by at knowledge knowledge of Christs Blood, as Peter speaks, and that as in the Covenant of Grace revealed, therefore they are said to be sanctified by the Blood of the Covenant. Chap. 4

Obj. That Instance of Abimelech (Gen. 20.) may be objected, he having followed his Conscience in the matter of Sarah, so as if he had known her to be Abraham's Wife, he would not have taken her, and this Act God acknowledgeth to be Integrity.

1. The Answer is, that it is acknowledged such in the sense as Abimelech meant it, who pleads there his Innocency in what he might seem to have been guilty of, speaks according to the Judgment of his Conscience, and such an Integrity God acknowledgeth; and the meaning is, Abimelech followed his Principles in it, and so it was good in its kind, but not in that Court God means to keep hereafter. So in that Speech of Paul (Acts 23. 1.) He speaking in a Court of Pharisees, where he was to justify himself and his Cause, he speaks according to their Principles, I have kept a good Conscience, (says he) and might well say so afore them, but not afore God: For in his Estate of Unregeneracy, whilst in the Flesh, he says the affection of sins which were by the Law, that is, stirred up by the Light of the Law in his Conscience, had a force in his Members to bring forth fruit unto Death, that is, outward Actions against Conscience and that light of the Law therein.

2. There is a twofold Integrity. 1. Absolute, which agrees with the first Rule of the Word. So this action of Abimelech, though he follow'd his Conscience, was not Integrity. But 2. It might be comparative Integrity, Namely, in that he followed his Conscience, which was his immediate Rule. Integrity we know is a conformity to its Rule, and so Conscience being a mans Rule when a mans Actions are squared to it, they are said to have a kind of integrity in them; but there being a rule above Conscience, to which both Conscience in the motives, matter, &c. ought to be conformed, from which Natural Conscience swerves, therefore an Act which is wrong in such a respect it is not Integrity. A man may honestly tell an untruth, because it agrees with what he thinks, yet it is an untruth, and Veritas est conformitas cum suo Archetypo, so is Integrity.

And as I have thus proved, That not true Spiritual Holiness, regularly to act according to the Law, was ever renewed in such Temporaries. So 2. That not any Promises of Life, Justification, Adoption Communion with Christ or Covenant, is made to any such works by God. And as in the former I granted some things, so in this: 1. That 'tis their Persons and Works are under a Covenant of Works (for all are either under the Law, or under Grace (Rom. 6. 14.) yet it is but by reason of their first Creation, when they were made under the Law, and had it written in their Hearts, unto which, in that respect, they are eternally subject till they die to that Law, and are married to Christ (Rom. 7.) And 2. I think that in judging men at the latter day, God will condescend to proceed with Corrupt Nature not in the rigour of that Law, but according to what was by Nature or otherwise revealed thereof unto them as appears (Rom. 2. 12, 16.) God winking at much of their Ignorance, as it is in the Acts; and the rather, because Jesus Christ he is their Judge then, who may (for he hath paid for it) relax of that righteous exaction of the Law in a way of abatement (That they without the Law, should be judged without the Written Law, by the Law written in their Hearts, by Natural Light, &c.) And so punish them with less punishment, who by reason of such Work, have had fewest sins; and as such a work is a restrainer of Corruption in them, so there will be a minoration of their punishment, unless they have returned again unto their Vomit, when their latter End is worse than their Beginning, as Peter speaks. And 3. I acknowledge that so far as any goodness is in it, 'tis respected and accepted by God himself, and so far as it serves to any end, as God hath ordained, as he did that Act of Jehu (2 Kings 10. 30.) God commends it, and says he had done well, and all that was in his Heart to do, and accepted it to a temporal Reward: But in any spiritual acceptation he rejected it, yea in one of the Prophets he calls it The murder of Jehu; having his own ends in it. No man can bring forth Fruit to God, which he accepteth, until he be married to Christ, and dead to the Law. Rom. 7. 4.

Book 7 And so in this Life whilst Christ governs he is pleased, I grant, to reward such legal performances (and as he crowns other his Graces, so those) with rewards within their own Sphere, as he did Abab for humbling himself, and in the Parable, gave the Penny to the Labourer, and accordingly also Forgiveness; Namely, in a way of forbearance, To have patience with Sinners (as in that Parable of the evil Servant, the Forgiveness is expressed but by no more) which forbearance is truly a Forgiveness, in that he loseth so much Glory so long unrecovered on them, and spendeth Riches of mercy which he will never reckon to them, farther than as they have abused them, yet this is but so much as he vouchsafed the Heathens, towards whom he exercised Riches of forbearance (Rom. 2. 4, 5.) But that he should work these common Graces in a way of any Covenant, or make any such Promises of Adoption, Justification and Forgiveness, the same for substance with these to the Elect, and these proportioned to that degree they shall act their Graces given; for this I see no Footstep at all in the Word or in any thing written to prove it. Neither can I see how without a contradiction in Adjecto any such Covenant though for Christs sake should, or could be made with Creatures fallen and sinful that had broken it already, how they could come to be capable of promises of Forgiveness, &c. for the Covenant of Works given to Adam, which we call Fædus Naturæ, and the Moral Law (the Copy of it) promulged by Moses, says expressly, Cursed is he that continueth not in all things, Gal. 3. and already all Mankind have not continued in all things, having sinned in Adam, and so are incapable of any Promises of Forgiveness, of Life Eternal, and Communion with Christ in any degree, upon condition, of imperfect doing of the Law, though never so holily; for if any such Promises be made, it must be supposed that this first Covenant of Nature (now in the renewing of it to corrupt Nature) was attempered and allay'd by Christ in the rigour of it, but how this is consistent with that Sentence yet in force, Cursed is he that continues not in all things contained in the Book of the Law to do them, I cannot conceive.

The argument in shew for it is The renewing that Covenant in Horeb with the Jews, Exodus 20. and elsewhere, which together with the Ceremonial Law joined with it, was sprinkled with Blood, with glorious Promises, that they should be to him an holy Nation, and of Priests, &c. and also Gods saying Do this and live: When also it is said that God sanctify'd that People to himself, and promised to be their God, and was present with them, &c.

For Answer, This Covenant which was Fædus subserviens to the Gospel, (as Learned Cameron calls it) had many scopes and Aspects, but none of them is that Scope which is here put upon it.

1. It was truly the promulgation of the Covenant of Nature made with Adam in Paradise, in the moral part the Ten Commandments, and did refer thereto, and so did call them to look but to that Estate they once were in, and now were fallen from; and because the Story of Adam's Righteousness was lost, what was written in his Heart was there renewed, only delivered Negatively, because man was turned against it; Thou shalt not, &c. which was written rather affirmatively, This thou shalt do, &c. in Adam's Heart; and God delivers it now Covenant-wise, because he presents himself as ready to perform his Covenant, Do this and thou shalt live; and calls on them to perform their part, they being born under the Covenant as Creatures; Hereby at once to convince man of his Impotency to fulfill it, and withal to shew what God would have done for man if he had kept it, and it was thus promulgated with Evangelical purposes to drive men to Christ; neither did the promulgation of it convey any Heart to them to do it in the least degree; for God, when they promised to fulfill it, said, Oh that there were an Heart within them, &c. Deut. 5. 9. And Joshua, at the same time when the Covenant was renewed, intimates to them that the purpose of that Covenant was not as if they could do any thing of it, but to shew them rather their inability to do it;

it, Josb. 24. 19. Thus Josbua when he renewed it, told them, Ye cannot serve the Lord, for he is Holy and Jealous, and will not forgive your sins; yet they, in confidence of their strength, would take it as a Covenant they were to perform, v. 21. And Josbua tells them, v. 22. that they were therein Witnesses against themselves: So as both God and Josbua would have them understand by it, and the promise of Life by it, their inability rather, which yet they were not brought to be sensible of: And so when Moses did so distinctly propound the second Covenant, Deut. 29, & 30. He tells them, that by the former Covenant God had not given them Ears to hear, nor Hearts to perceive, v. 4. Chap. 29. and to propound it thus Covenant-wise, was the most fit way to convince them of this their inability; that in the attempting the obedience of it they might see the weakness of the Law through the Flesh, that it could not do as afore it did in Adam, not in the least degree, (Rom. 8.4.) and answerably the Ceremonial Law annexed to it, concurred in this very scope; it was given that they, now fallen, might under their own hand as it were acknowledge themselves Debtors to this moral Law, both as Sinners fallen unto the Curse of it, and yet the obedience of it obliged, So Gal. 5.3. He that is circumcised is a Debtor to the whole Law; and so to the Curse of it, and Col. 2. 14. it is called The hand writing of Ordinances against us. God, at the same time he promulged the Ten Commandments, brought a Bond for men to seal, and therein to acknowledge themselves bound and Debtors to it.

And as this was one scope both these had, so 2. The Moral and Ceremonial put together (both which put together, I have long observed as given the Jews to be reckoned one Covenant, out of Heb. 9. 15. 18, 19. compared) became in the latter of them as to the outward performance, fit matter of an outward Covenant with these Jews, as they were a national Church; and so considered as such a Covenant, with Promises suitable, I do acknowledge it given de novo to the Jews, though fallen, as they were a Church (but this being proper to the Jews hath no influence or relation at all to Temporaries under the Gospel): And so in all those places quoted where the Law was given, did they stand as a Church to enter into Covenant with God, as in that 19th. Exod. &c. and the Apostle calls the whole as thus considered, a Carnal Commandment, Heb. 7. 6. because besides their Spiritual use in typifying things Heavenly to Spiritual Believers then, they had an outward carnal use to the whole Nation, who became a Church, and therefore called Holy, as set apart from the Nations, to be separated to Gods Service and Worship prescribed in the Law ceremonial and moral, and so as also a Nation of Priests (wherein yet was typified out the Spiritual Assemblies of true Saints and Churches under the Gospel, and is so applied by Peter, 1 Pet. 2. 5, 6.) and this Covenant was founded on a Redemption and Deliverance of that Nation out of Egypt, as that of the Gospel is upon our Redemption thro' Christ; and yet they being Sinners how should they have access to God that was holy? They therefore had Moses a Typical Mediator, Gal. 3. 19. The people stood afar off, and Moses only drew nigh, as by Christ we have access to the Father, Eph. 2. and so it had a Blood sprinkled upon the Book, Heb. 9. 19. Exod. 24. 8. and answerably outward Justifications, Sine operibus, Heb. 9. 1. as well as the Gospel, and a remission, v. 12. of that Chap. But how? Not at all purifying the Conscience from the guilt of sin from dead works, or from the power of sin, but of the Flesh and outward man, for that is the very difference that is put v. 13, 14. and therefore there was no promise of such a Forgiveness as should clear the Conscience, or reach it in the least to pacify or purify it, nor therefore of any true Ground for any such legal Faith, but a Forgiveness of repleival, not to be destroyed for their sin, if they offered Sacrifice (as it is expounded in the Psalmist exegetically, Psal. 78. 38.) and was so limited by God and Moses their Mediator also, Num. 14. 19, 20. Pardon as until now; that is, spare them at present; and God says, I have pardoned, that is, so far, but threatneth to take vengeance however afterwards when he should visit: for as their Church Fellowship was outward, so their Forgiveness, so their Promises of Blessedness were outward annexed thereunto, which God fulfilled: And they had also sins which were no sins morally, as the touching the dead, and so had a Sanctification and a Justification which were not really such, that that is, not of the Heart and Conscience from the guilt and power of Sin. And Book 7 they had Promises Typical, Heb. 8. 5, 6. and in that respect those of the Gospel are called Better: And they had an answerable Communion with God in a Church Fellowship, and an outward presence of God amongst them in visible signs of a Cloud and Ark, and the Observances of the Ceremonial Law were the Expiations of the Transgression of the moral, in respect of the outward Transgression of it, so as the outward punishment (which else to the despisers of it without Mercy had befallen him, Heb. 10. 28.) was remitted and they absolved, and stood Recti in Curia again, as we say: And they had Promises of a Life, that in doing they should Live, even in that good Land of Canaan the Type of Heaven, Deut. 6. 2. 18. And this Covenant, Promises, &c. considered in these Two forementioned Scopes thereof, was truly, and toto genere, differing from that Second Covenant of the Gospel given, Deut. 29th, & 30th, Chapters, and was that old Covenant God found fault with.

Yet so zly, As the Holy and Great God had not made such an outward Covenant with that Nation as a Church, in such promises, such a Justification, Adoption, Sanctification outward and carnal, had not he therein had a farther scope in Types, hereby to note out another Covenant, Church Promises, Justification, Sanctification, true and real, whereof he made this the shadow; and this he did for Christs sake also, whom and whose Covenant these things Typified out, and so made this Covenant and Promises in the very terms of the thing signified, thereby to point out those Glorious Promises, that real Holiness, Justification, Adoption of the Gospel, (Heb. 9. 21, 22, 23. compared,) which true Believers among them had in their Eye, and had wrought in them, and they endeavoured after, so as to them it was Gospel also; yet in this, differing from that delivered (Chap. 29, & 30, Deut.) that there it is expressed clearly and directly in plain words, here it is enfolded in a Parable that had also another Scope besides it unto the Carnal Jews. And because this Covenant had these several and various Aspects (though some more, some less principal) hence though the carnal Jews should have literally performed the Typical Covenant in the letter, yet God finds fault with them, as wanting Spiritual Holiness, to which, by the Moral Law they were obliged as Creatures, and as a Church Redeemed, and which in the Ceremonial Law was Typified out, as that which was aimed at in those Types, and hence were those continual complaints, and finding faults by the Prophets (who understood the Spiritual intent of all) for their want herein.

Now then that Covenant, those Promises, that Sanctification thus understood, how far is it from any such scope as is put upon it by some Men to convey a true Sanctification, by a meer legal Covenant, unto others of the Jews beside the Elect. I acknowledg that as it was an outward Covenant, so it had an answerable Grace went with it to some of the Jews not Regenerate, to help them outwardly to keep the Law, as it had in Paul, who was blameless in it through Conscience enlightened by it (Phil. 3.) But withall I have sometimes thought that those Heavenly Enlightnings, Tastings of the powers of the World to come, &c. which are now in Temporaries under the Gospel, were never under that Covenant wrought in the Hearts of any Unregenerate amongst them; because sinning against Truth so acknowledged seems to be proper to the times of the Gospel, and Presumptuous, sinner then did but Sin against Moses Law, which is spoken oppositely to sinning against the Truth of the Gospel (Heb. 10. 26, 28. compared) and Temporaries now under the Gospel, are not to be Church-Members, if they could be known to be such, and the Jews were not in respect of any such work from the Law as then Members but Typically only. My Reason is, because that Churches are to consist of Saints Elect, therefore only under the Covenant of Grace (1 Pet. 5. 13.) and such as are so Sanctified as that Christ will perfect the Work, Phil. 5. 6, 7. That they are admitted de facto, is because the Rules given Saints in the Word whereby we are able to judge of others by, are but such as Temporaries may seem seem to them to be true Saints, and so they are bound to receive them, yet not discerned such, for to them the Seals of the Second Covenant (which they are not under) cannot belong; but such are our Sacraments now, viz. the Seals of the Covenant of Grace, This is the Blood of the New Testament, says Christ, and only so.

So as I add this for a Conclusion, God hath made Tryal of Corrupt Nature how far it might be wrought upon, by several workings of his Spirit and Truth without attainment of true Holiness. And this is manifested in three several Degrees of the Revelation of his Truth, with workings of his Spirit proportioned thereunto.

1. He made and still makes Tryal how far the light of Nature would go without the Law, (though not derived by Nature but from Christ, John 1. 9.) which Light of Nature is Gods Truth, so called Rom. 1. 18. & v. 19. it is also called Gods manifestation of himself to them, and Gods Wisdom, 1 Cor. 1. 21. and which had that effect in the Hearts of many of them, the Law hath in some things, Rom. 2. 15. το νόμος ἔδωκεν, The effect of the Law it is the recalled, and the Revelation of this Truth had a Spirit within them, as Seneca (the highest instance among them for Knowledg Moral that ever was) calls it, est Spiritus in nobis qui ita nos tractat ut a Nobis tractatur, who made Impressions of many moral Vertues on their Wills, and also in and to their Consciences, for their Consciences are said συμωχόντων, to witness, with whom? God in their Consciences, who witnesseth also, the same word that is used of the Spirits witnessing with our Spirits, (Rom. 8. 16.) revealed and then seconded that light with a Bondage of accursing if they Transgressed, and fed the fear of Death, Heb. 2. 15. and excusing if they obeyed, Rom. 2. 15. which was a Reward for so much Integrity as was found in their Actions; and the highest instance for practice I know, of how far corrupt Nature might be empowered this way, was Socrates, who suffered for that Truth of God manifested to him.

And 2. A further Revelation of Truth was made to the Carnal Jew, who had a form of Knowledg and of the Truth of the Law, Rom. 2. 20. (But as I take it without any perceivance of the truth of the Gospel and the Spiritual Redemption by Christ, by reason of that carnal Commandment, in the letter of which they rested, 1 Cor. 3. 13, 14. through the veil on Moses face, and on their Hearts, so as the glimmering notion thereof was peculiar to the Elect during those times) and this had a further measure of the Spirit (for Neb. 9. as he gave them on Mount Sinai, good Commandments, v. 13. so also his good Spirit to instruct them, v. 25.) who became a Spirit of Bondage to them, Rom. 8. 15. and who (according as that Covenant was literal and outward, so far as de novo struck with them) did accompany the Revelation of it with habits of Devotion, and of a Zeal of God misguided, with warmth in (Rom. 10. 2.) and his Worship, to serve God according to the oldness of the letter, but not at all in the Spirit, which is to Worship only in truth: And the highest instance I know that God held forth of this work, was Paul, who was blameless, as concerning [that outward] Righteousness of the Law, Phil. 3. 6. and wherein he exceeded others of his Companions, yet without the true Holiness of the Law as it is Holy, for so he was without the Law, Rom. 7.

3. A farther discovery was made under the Gospel, wherein as there is a plain Revelation of Christ and the way of Salvation in him (which is eminently called the Truth) which is now common in the notion of it to carnal Men; so God makes a further Tryal, and Experiments the utmost how far corrupt Nature may yet be wrought upon by the Truths thereof, without his infusing or their attaining true Faith and Holiness; and answerably gives a further Spirit, Heb. 6. 4. called the Spirit of Grace, Heb. 10. 29. that is of the Gospel called Grace, Tit. 2. 11. whereby they are partakers of further Tastes than of outward Blessings, and the comforts of an excusing Conscience, even of the powers of the World to come, which was not subject to the Angels who gave the Law, Heb. 2. 2. and 5. compared) and are partakers of an Heavenly gift; yea, they may receive a work on their Hearts some way answerable to all the Truths of the Gospel; for as Junius and and others have observed, and by comparing those Six Principles mentioned v. 1, 2. of Heb. 6. (the sum of the rest) and those works on them mentioned v. 4, 5. they one answer to the other, and yet these attain not to true Holiness or any true Qualifications or Works truly such; not to true Love to the Saints, and works thence issuing for Christs sake, which is put by way of distinction as better (v. 9.) than all that work upon them: And the work there mentioned, I account the highest Instance can be given of any Temporaries. For which dealing of God with Men, I must refer the Wonderment to the deepness of the Riches both of the Wisdom and Knowledg of God: How unsearchable are his Ways, and his Judgments past finding out!

OF THE
(THE Third Person of the TRINITY)
BOOK VIII.

That there are Three parts of our Regeneration: 1. Humiliation for Sin, and the Necessity thereof in order to Faith. 2. Faith in Christ for Justification. 3. Turning from Sin unto God, or Holiness of Heart and Life: Proved, from the work which our Lord Jesus Christ ascribes to the Holy Ghost, John 16. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. from the instances of Conversion in the time when Job lived; and of the Conversion of the Apostle Paul. Of the Subserving of Humiliation unto Faith. Objections Answered. Of our turning from Sin unto God, or of Holiness in Heart, and Life.

C H A P. I.

That Conviction of Sin, Humiliation for it, Faith on Jesus Christ, Sanctification, or amendment of Heart and Life, are the parts of our Conversion to God, is demonstrated from the work which our Lord Jesus Christ ascribes to the Holy Spirit. John 16. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11.

JOHN 16. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11.

Nevertheless, I tell you the truth, it is expedient for you that I go away: For if I go not away, the comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. And when he is come, he will reprove the World of Sin, and of Righteousness, and of Judgment.

*Of Sin, because they believe not on me;
Of Righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more,
Of Judgment, because the Prince of this World is judged.*

THESSE Words contain a Summary of the Work of the Holy Ghost in Regeneration and Conversion (of which in the General so much hath been premised) throughout all the parts thereof. And the occasion occasion of Christs so distinct an enumeration of his several works in all the parts thereof, was this; In these his last Sermons he had told them, he was shortly to go away from them, and they in his absence to bear witness of him, by preaching him over all the World, (as it is in the last verse of the former Chapter) and withall, that for that their message they should find but hard Entertainment of it and of themselves at most of the Worlds Hands; (and this at the beginning of this chapter:) And because they began to be sorrowful at this, and to repine to be employed in a Business of so much danger and trouble; therefore to comfort them, he tells them, it was expedient it should be so, both for theirs and his Churches good: It is expedient (says he) for you; that is, You my Apostles, even in you particular: For I going away will send you my Spirit, who shall be a Comforter unto you in all those troubles which you are to meet withal. Neither is it for you only that I shall send my Spirit to you, but for my Elects sakes, who are now to be called over all the World by your preaching, and not only for those impaled within the Church of the Jews, (to whom only I have hitherto sent you) For (my Spirit) when he is come (on you namely) shall convince the World, that is, savingly convert my Elect in all Nations. And this work of Conversion he sets out in all the parts of it. 1. By Convincing the World. is meant Conversion: For so the word is used both in the Old and New Testament.

1. In the Old. When the Prophet speaks of the Conversion of the Gentiles, and establishing Christs Kingdom among them by his Word and Spirit, you shall find the same word in the Hebrew that is used in the Greek here thus, Isa. 2. 4. & Micah 4. 3. it is said, that the Word going forth from Jerusalem (as it did then, when the Apostles went to preach) Christ should judge among many people; that is, set up his Kingdom among them, and rule them by the Scepter of his Word. And how was it that this should come to pass? He should rebuke the Nations. Rebuke, Reprove, Convince, are all one; (as Interpreters observe) and it implies the opposition that is in mens Hearts to receive that his Word, so as they need rebuking and convincing, before they will effectually yield unto it. And whereas other Conquerors obtain their Crowns by force of Arms, He acquires his only by the Conviction of his Word and Spirit.

2. It is thus also used in the New Testament, (1 Cor. 14. 24, 25.) where the Apostle, to shew the Benefit of preaching above speaking with Tongues, giveth this Instance; Put the Case, an Unbeliever and Ignorant Person should come in; by that means (says he) he might be convinced of all; that is, truly converted from his Heathenism, Ignorance and Unbelief, unto the Profession and Worship of the True God, (as it is in the following words:) In a word, Heb. 11. 1, 2. the Apostle useth the very same word that is here, to express Saving Faith by (which will appear, if you compare the Original Texts together) he there taking it in its common Nature, as it hath all Spiritual things, for its object. The word there used is εὐαγγελίζω, Evidences or Conviction: And so here, ἐλέγξει, He shall convince. The words therefore are all one as if Christ should have said, I send you into the World to preach, and I send you my Spirit: And though the World be drown'd in Ignorance and Unbelief, and set in opposition against your Doctrine, yet my Spirit which I will send, shall convince them, make them know, believe, and yeild unto it. And because the Apostles might further desire to know what Doctrine were best to preach to convert them by, as also in what manner and order the Spirit would convert men; that they might accordingly apply themselves in their preaching, our Saviour Christ therefore at once sets forth an universal Platform both of the Sum of their Ministry, and of the Spirits working in mens Hearts, the one answering the other as the stamp doth the Image that made it. That whereas there are three things necessary to be known and believed particularly, and savingly, of all that shall be saved; so in the true conviction of them, Conversion doth consist.

1. There is Mans Sinfulness and Misery in himself, out of Christ.

2. The Way and Means appointed by God to come out of this misery, Christ's Righteousness.

3. What

3. What a man ought to do by way of thankfulness to Christ for that his delivery (unto which three Heads our Divines have reduced their Catechisms and Systems of Theology) our Saviour doth at once inform them, how the Spirit in converting them should convince them of these Three; and that in their conviction of these three the work of Conversion is absolved; and withal instructs them what particulars to insist on in their preaching, as being those things which the Spirit would make most use of to convert. So that he at once delivers both the particulars of the work of the Spirit in Conversion, as also the summ of Christian Doctrine, and the Apostles preaching, and the order and method to be used in both.

1. The Spirit will convince of sin; that is, of that miserable and sinful Estate which men live in by Nature, so long as they are out of Christ: And which, without belief in him, will prove matter of Condemnation to them; so that the Spirit will humble them, Because they believe not on Christ.

2. He will convince them of Righteousness, because I go to my Father (says Christ) that is, the Spirit shall by Faith reveal unto them the Righteousness of me, who am to ascend up to Heaven to be the only true means to be justified and saved by. He names his Ascension (which includes his Resurrection) because that declared his Righteousness to be the true Righteousness of God: Else (had he been an Impostor) God would never have suffered him to come to Heaven.

3. He will convince of Judgment, Because the Prince of this World is judged, The meaning of which Phrase, that which is in John 12. 31. evidently explains, Christ there speaking of the fruit and efficacy of his Death, as it were triumphing says, Now is the judgment of this World; and the Prince of this World shall be cast out. He there speaks of the Conversion of the Gentiles; When I am lift up (says he) I will draw all men unto me, vers. 32. Those whom Satan had ruled and subjected to his Kingdom, and who had lived according to his Laws, now were to be reformed: Now is the Judgment of this World. That is, there is now a great change and reformation to be made in the Hearts and Lives of men: For so the word Judgment signifies, namely, a Reformation made according to some Law or Statute. And so Satans Kingdom is to be destroyed, and He cast out, and Christ by his Laws to bear sway. And thus Satan is judged: So that to be convinced of Judgment, is to be convinced of that Sanctification and true change of Heart and Life which Believers ought to take up. And so in Mat. 12. 18. (out of Isa. 42. 1.) 'tis said of Christ, that he should show forth Judgment to the Gentiles, by his Ministers: That is, teach them true Holiness and Reformation of Heart and Life, and the right manner of serving and worshipping of God. And at the 20th verse 'tis said he should bring forth Judgment unto Victory: that is, carry on the work of Grace and Sanctification (began in the Heart of any Convert) unto Victory and Triumph, by upholding it and causing it to prevail, by subverting Satans Laws, and holds in the Hearts of men, and erecting his own. And this is all one with Convincing men of Judgment (as here) making them believe, submit, stoop to, embrace and take up that strictness which he in his Word requites. And so in Zeph. 2. 3. the Saints are said to be such as had wrought his Judgment; that is, had endeavoured to reform their Hearts and Lives.

CHAP. II.

In which it is proved that to convince us of sin, and to humble us in the sense of it, is the work of the Holy Ghost in converting us to God.

IT is granted, that in the humiliation of a Sinner, the vision and knowledge of Christ and his glorious Righteousness strikes the greatest, the last and most compleat stroke. But whether the first and single sight of it, without any work of the Law before Christ revealed, as a ground-Colour to make this take upon the Heart, is sufficient, This is the Question between us; and those of the contrary Opinion, of which the great and main ground is, that because the Vision of Christ doth by reflexion and comparison discover a Mans Sinfulness; that therefore there seems to be no need of any use of the Law to do it. But if this were so, then by the like reason also, Because Christs Example is a compleat Rule fully directory to a Christian, therefore there needs no direction from the Law: And so you wholly abolish the use of the Law. But that there should be a foregoing discovery of Sin by the Law, before Faith and the Revelation of Christ: And that it is an Ordinance of God to this end, and a way of Gods so to work, and so to that end, that the Law should be preached, is clearly evinced.

1. By that Instance of the first Work of Conversion, and of the first Sermon that ever was made in the World, by GOD the Father, who first gave the promise of the Son unto our first Parents. Yea, although Adam's Natural Conscience was already made sensible of his Misery, so far as the light of that Conscience left in him could Work, Gen. 3. 7, 8. (for Adam confesseth to God his being afraid, and his Sense of his own Nakedness verse 10.) yet God ere he Preacheth the Gospel, and lets fall the promise of the Seed verse 15. spends the first part of his Sermon in a further convincing him of his Sin by that Law which he had given him, and which he had Transgressed, thereby to convey the Spirit of Bondage. to work a further Conviction than Natural Conscience had wrought, expressly putting him in mind of the Command which he had broken, verse 11. and though he doth not terrifie him with the Curse annexed, because his Natural Conscience was already made sensible of it, (for that was it which he feared:) Yet because this Humiliation preparatory is mainly to be for Sin as Sin, and as a Transgression of the Law, which Natural Conscience without a further Work of the Spirit, is not apprehensive of; therefore that which God intends his Conviction in, is the hainousness of his Sin, by setting before his eyes Himself as the Commander, [which [I] commanded] and the Law it self commanded and broken: Which discovery is the main and proper end of the Law in its work. If therefore a Man whose Natural Conscience was already awakened, needed yet a further distinct, and more Spiritual conviction of Sin by the Law, ere it was fit to Preach Christ unto him; then much more, if we were to Preach to Turks or Pagans, who are past feeling (as the Apostle says) should we first awaken them ere we speak to them of Christ. And God himself being the Preacher to Adam, and appearing to him, if the Vision of his Glory alone would have done it without a distinct discovery by the Law first wrought, then surely God, might have spared this legal discovery, rather than all the Preachers that succeed him.

2. When

2. When Christ himself, the promised Seed, came to Preach the Gospel, the first Sermon Luke records; Preached at his own Town, was upon that Text; Isa. 62. 2. I am sent to Preach the Gospel unto the Captives, and in Prison. (shut up under the Law, as Paul says) to heal the broken Hearted, &c. For to such only does the Gospel belong. And therefore he sent John before him, to prepare his way; even to make way for the entertainment of his Ministry, to break and bruise and shut up such as Christ might heal and enlarge; whose Ministry, though it had Gospel in it, (for Acts 19. 4. he bids the People Believe, &c.) yet so, as that came in but in the close and up-shut of his Ministry, as the thing which his Preaching made way for. But still the eminent Impression of his Ministry upon Mens Hearts was a sense of their Sins, which legal Humiliation still left. Though a Seed of Faith was in the bud, and by his Ministry begun; yet was it not blossomed, but to be raised up to Victory by him who breaketh not the bruised Reed; And Christs Ministry was to raise Assurance in them upon whom John had wrought; and therefore John is said to have come Mourning, and to have Preached Repentance, and his Baptism is called the Baptism of Repentance. And these Titles his Ministry had given it, to shew what were the eminent effects which it was ordained to work. And accordingly though it sowed a Seed of Faith by his pointing to the Messiah, yet it left his Hearers and Converts a greater impression of legal Terrours still remaining upon their Consciences, for Christs Ministry to take off from them by a more clear Preaching the Gospel. And in this respect John was said to prepare the way of the Lord; and that by casting down Mountains, filling Valleys, and removing discouragements, so to make Christs way level, and by causing Men to see the Vanity of all Flesh, Isa. 40. 1. to the 6. v. And in some of those Sermons recorded of his, you shall observe his method to answer this, and so discern the better what was the Scope of his Ministry: For he first falls upon them and threatens them, and convinceth them of their Estates, Luke 3. 7. he tells them of Gods Wrath, and takes away those false conceits which had kept them from being sensible of their Estates, as if they were Abraham's Seed, verse 8. And further to convince Men of their particular sins, he tells them each of their Especial bosom Lusts (which is the distinct and special way to Humble, observed also by Christ to the Woman of Saxaria, and by Paul to Fælix :) So verse 11. he tells the People of their want of Charity, the Publicans of their Oppression, verse 13. and the Soldiers of their Violence and Rapine, verse 14. and Preacheth Christ as it were but by occasion of Mens Wondering whether he were the Christ, and that too, after all these other passages in his Ministry premised, verse 15, 16.

3. God the Holy Ghost who is to work with, and second our Sermons, and to deal with Mens Hearts, hath a peculiar Office assigned him; which therefore must needs be necessary; as appears by that Title given him, Rom. 8. 15. the Spirit of Bondage, and as such he is received, ere he becomes a Spirit of Adoption. Which Spirit of Bondage hath not relation to the Bondage under the Law, for he speaks it to the Romans who were Gentiles, and not nurtured up under the Law; [Ye] have not received] nor to the Bondage of natural Conscience; for it is a Spirit received, and a Spirit that returns no more to work fear, which in them that are Converted Natural Conscience still doth, yea; even in many Believers: But the Holy Ghost is a Spirit of Bondage in Conversion only; and in that it is said [to fear again] it implies it was once received. The Office of which Spirit appears by the opposite Effect of the same Spirit as he is called the Spirit of Adoption, which is to Witness Adoption and Son-ship, as the other is to witness our Slavery and Bondage to Sin and Death.

4. As the Spirit hath an Office designed him for such a Work, so God hath appointed a Word in the Hand of this Spirit, to work and engender Bondage by, as the Phrase is Gal. 4. 23, 24. And that the Law was revealed to the World to this end, and that this is as proper an use of it as any other now since the Fall; I will take that which the Epistle to the Romans affords for the proof of it.

Book 8 I come to the more direct Proofs out of that Epistle, the very method the Apostle takes up to promulge and lay open the Gospel (which is the Subject of that Epistle) offers something to me clearly to evince this ; which by the hand will bring me to what I aim at.

The Epistle (you know) is an exact System or Form of wholsom Words, such as Paul would have Timothy keep by him. After Salutations from verse 1, to the 15. he propounds the General Subject and Argument of his Epistle, the Gospel, verse 15, 16. and the main Argument of that Gospel, verse 17. Now after he had declared the Argument and drift of the whole, he enters upon this System and Method of handling and revealing it : And to clear the way for it, he convinceth the Gentiles that they are under Sin and Wrath, Chap. 2. 1. from verse 18, to the 9th verse of Chap. 2. and then he convinceth the Jews that they also are under Sin ; and this he doth by taking away their false Props, Chap. 2. from verse 9, to the 9th verse of Chap. 3. and then he enters into a proof, that all, both Jew and Gentile, and all Man-kind are wholly corrupted ; from verse 10. to the 19th, where (ver. 19, and 20.) he shews, that as the Gospel was appointed to reveal Christs Righteousness (Chap. 1. 17.) so the Law to give the Knowledge of Sin. (True, you will say) but unto whom ? ver. 19. answers us, To them that are under the Law. And therefore it is most properly given to discover to Men Unregenerate whilst under the Law, their Sins. [It saith] that is, it Preacheth to them ; and to what end ? To Humble them, that every mouth may be stopped, and so every one (in their own apprehensions) become Guilty before God. And by this Law, (says he) is the Knowledge of Sin. And to what end is this Knowledge of Sin, but to make way for the Conviction of that Righteousness which the Gospel holds forth, and unto which all this tended ? verse 20. and so on to Chap. 5. where at verse 12, he again proceeding to the discovery of the source of all that Sinfulness viz. Adams Sin, and of all that Righteousness, viz. Christs Righteousness, he at the 13th verse shews, that the end why God gave the Law was, to discover Sin : Sin indeed was in the World before Moses ; but was not imputed till the Law came, that is, not charged on Mens Consciences. And verse 20. more expressly says, The Law entered that the Offence might abound : That is, in Mens Apprehensions. For though the Law stirred up Sin, (as he shews, Chap. 7.) yet that was but an occasional and accidental end (as it is in the 8th verse of that 7th Chap.) not the primary end of Gods revealing it : And it entered not, that Sin might be more, but that it might be imputed ; and so, that that Guilt which was already contracted might be charged upon Mens Consciences, and that the Guilt imputed might abound, or appear above measure Sinful : And this, to the end to set up and to illustrate Grace and Christs Righteousness, in their Hearts who should be partakers of that Grace : Where Sin abounded, there Grace abounded much more.

If you will yet make Question, whether that the first Knowledge of Sin is to come in by the Law, so to make way for the abounding of Grace ; consider what is said in the 7th Chapter, wherein the Apostle (having proved that both Justification and Sanctification were from Christ alone, in the 3d, 4th, 5th & 6th Chapters, and having before professed, Chap. 3. last, that he did not make void the Law, but established it) undertakes to shew the ends whereto the Law now serveth unto Men. (And this, to remove that great Objection, that the Law was made void by him.) Whereof one primary and direct end unto which it serves, is, to give in Conversion the first Knowledge of Sin. So verse 7. of that Chapter, I had not known Sin but by the Law ; and what Knowledge speaks he of, but that which humbled himself at his first Conversion ? For verse 9. he says, He was once alive without the Law ; that is, without the Knowledge of it ; as the Gentiles are said to be without God in the World. Now Paul being a Pharisee, was never without the Law, and some Knowledge of it ; he being Educated in the Law from a Child ; and therefore he must needs speak of that Knowledge which he began to have when he was first Converted, differencing it from his former Pharaesical Knowledge of it ; in that he was alive, notwithstanding that Knowledge of it. Now he calls that Knowledge no Knowledge in comparison of this, for he says he was without the Commandment, when a Pharisee. And that he speaks of his knowledge in or after Conversion, is evident by this, that he knew not Original Sin, nor Lust until then. The Pharisees (as appears by Christs Sermon, Matth. 5.) thought it no Sin: But now Paul was humbled for it; he saw that in his state of Unregeneracy the Law had occasionally wrought all Concupiscence, verse 8. And that he speaks of his Knowledge not after Conversion, but in the work of Humiliation, appears by this, that Sin revived, and he dyed, who in his own apprehension was once alive, and thought himself a living Man and an Heir of Life, thinking to be Justified by the Law. And so the Law not only really put him into a State of Death, by occasioning Sin, verse 11. but stirred up in him apprehensions of his Bondage unto Death. verse 13. by discovering it unto him, he finding himself deceived in thinking to attain Life by the Law, whenas it wrought Death in him. In all which Sin every way appeared to him above measure Sinful. And this effect of the Law in his first Conversion he brings, to shew the proper use of the Law, confirming it by his own example (as he doth the other ends of the Law also,) which he shews in that whole Chapter, in three things, according to a Threefold condition wherein Men may be supposed to be:

First, Of an Unregenerate Man, having a common Knowledge of the Law, such as himself had whilst in the Flesh, verse 5. which Knowledge did then enrage his Lusts; which yet (to excuse the Law) he shews verse 8. to have been but occasional. And this condition he sets down from verse 5. to the 7th.

The Second Condition he mentions, is, when Men come to have a Spiritual conviction of their Sin by the Law, to bring them out of that estate, by being humbled: To which end the Law serveth more directly to give them the Knowledge of Sin; not such as stirs up Lust, as afore, but such as humbles them, and lays them for Dead. And this also he shews by the effect it had in himself; v. 7, 9, 10, & 13. his purpose being to confirm all by his own example throughout the Chapter.

And Thirdly, after his Conversion he shews the use of the Law to a Man Regenerate, to discover Sin and his Captivity under it, by the Spiritualness of it, from Verse 14th to the 24th, so to drive them to Christ for help; Verse 24, 25.

All which I take to be the true Analysis of the Chapter. For all which uses he brings his own Example, speaking in his own Person as a pattern herein. Now if his own particular instance before Conversion and after, be brought as a common example to shew the use of the Law in common, and after Conversion, then also in Conversion it must be taken as a common pattern also. Whose Conversion thus by the Law, had it not been extraordinary, it had not been a fit instance to vindicate and clear the Law, that it hath still it's use subservient to the Gospel, and particularly in This, To discover Mens sinfulness when first converted.

And I will add but this, That if the vision and conviction that Christ was the Messiah and Saviour of Sinners, be ordained to humble alone at first without the Law Then of all other Paul needed not to have had this Revelation by the Law added: For who ever had such a Conviction and vision of Christ upon the first moment of his Conversion, as Paul had from Heaven? If therefore he was notwithstanding by a Legal Humiliation Converted; how much more then, We? Yea, he plainly says, that he had not known Sin, but by the Law.

In which it is proved from the Instances of Conversion in the time of Job, long before Christ came, from the Instance of the Apostle Paul's Conversion, after Christs coming in the Flesh, that a Converted Soul must be convinc'd of sin, be humbled for it, and believe on Christ for Righteousness and Salvation.

SEVERAL Narrations of solemn Conversions are rarely found in the Old Testament among the Jews. We read not how, or by what means Isaac, or Jacob, or Moses, or David, were wrought upon, and turned unto God: But here, among the Records of those that were not of that Genealogy, or of the Jewish Line, and so not Members of that Church, and yet circumcised, and retaining the Profession of the True God, being Esau's Seed, we find in a Book of greatest Antiquity, a lively Description thereof; taken from the experimental observations of Elihu. He spreads them afore Job, (Chap. 33.) for his encouragement; and hopes of Mercy from God; notwithstanding his great sinfulness, which Elihu had charged him withal, in the Former chapters; or maugre those deep Afflictions God had visited him withal, in his Body, his Mind, and outward Condition: It hath rejoiced me to have met with so ancient Footsteps of the same Doctrine, of Ways, and Means, and Operations in Conversions so long ago, to have been for Substance much one and the same, as under the Gospel we have seen; and is frequently exemplified in these Last days.

The Means Elihu relates to have been, several dispensations of God; as by awakenings and Inspirations, in Dreams and Visions in the Night, which, then, when the Word was not put into writing, but conveyd either by Tradition, or immediate Revelation, was more ordinary in those times: And with this means he therefore begins: Job 32. 15, 16, 17. In a Dream, in a Vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men; in slumberings upon the Bed; then he openeth the Ears of men, and sealeth their instruction; that he may withdraw man from his purpose, and hide pride from man: He instanceth likewise in Gods visiting men, with great and sore Sickness unto Deaths door; and when humbled thereby, and not knowing what to do to be saved; He sends a Messenger to open, and make known Gods mind to them; to show and instruct such an one in the right way of Salvation: This you may see in Verse 19 unto Verse 27. And a Seasonable word coming upon Apprehensions of Death, God often both then, as now, blesteth wonderfully; to work upon men savingly: And Elihu shuts up these Instances, (which are but a few of many, and instead of All the rest he might have produced) with this Conclusion, Verse 28. 29. Lo, all these things, that is, both these and divers other ways and means (which he names not;) doth God work by: As also all these operations by those several means, doth God work. E're I draw forth the Particulars, of these workings of God with this sick man; I premise two Generals.

I. That these Instances do set forth the workings of saving Conversion unto God; both Initial at first, or renewed Conversions after great sinings: Yet Initial, especially, and most directly, as the Circumstances instanced in, do carry it: Although in the intended or useful aims of Elihu in them to Job, (who was converted already;) they are directed as a pre-script for him to take the same course that new Converts are said here to do; to be restored to the Favour of God again, by the same ways which new Converts are at first admitted into it: And indeed, Initial Conversion, and renewed, come all to one in the substantial Operations of either: All these

these things, God works in all and every Convert, whether at first, or after in repeated Repentances, the Operations are the same in both: Like as in the original draught of a Picture, the first drawing gives all the substantial Lineaments, and the after-draughts go but over the same Rudiments, in additions more to the life, and that such an Original draught is intended principally, is evident from the series of Elibu's Discourse; in that from the Instances he draws this Conclusion as from the premises; viz. a gracious Invitation made to all, or any man; and an encouragement given them in like manner to come in, and turn to God; with promises of like Grace and mercy: And that he plainly infers this as a Corollary brought of, and deduced from the Example of this sick mans Conversion; and That the Grace that God had manifested in saving him, should be shewn to any other Convert, is apparent in those words, v. 27, 28. He, (that is God) looketh upon men, and if any say, I have sinned; and perverted that which was right; and it profited me not; He will deliver his Soul from going into the Pit; and his Life shall see the Light: This is a General proposition which concerns the Sons of men; so involves those that never as yet had been wrought upon; as well as those and that had been; Elibu declaring that God would in like manner upon Faith and Repentance be gracious to them: To deliver his Soul from going into the Pit. And the argument, or encouragement, from the Conversions of men regenerate afore, must needs have more force, and persuasive power in it, to prevail with others, that are still such: For it is not only the same case; but if the instance had only intended men actually wrought upon already; the encouragement, and hopes given, had been capable of this grand exception; That those that had been in Grace already, and had a Seed of God still abiding in them, would be easily received into Gods Favour, and Grace renewed in him: As a Charcole that hath been dried will easily take fire: Oh but an unregenerate Soul might say; I who have lived all my days in such a condition of sinning, and have provoked God with so long continued a Course of sins, without any, the least spark of Good in me; how shall I hope to have it begun, and my person to be renewed: But when he shall hear of so great, and so long hardened Sinners, who have been converted, and that God hath been gracious to them, as if they had never sinned against him; and not only so, but that they have been admitted into his presence; and seen his Face with joy; (and such sinners as have utterly been strangers to God, do need the highest inducements, and widest door of hope set open to them.) such an example as this, must needs be wonderfully inviting, and give abundant hope to them: For the condition of these is just the same with their own: Yea the sick man instanced in, seems by his manner of Speech, to be one who had hitherto been Ignorant of the way of Salvation, until then: That providentially some messenger, and he one of a thousand, doth shew and discover to him that Uprightnes, and way whereby men must be saved, as good News to him, which he knew not of till then: If there be with him an Interpreter, to shew to man his uprightnes. And any intelligent Soul, that knows what it is to be converted, will be ready to acknowledge by descrying, upon view of them, several of the most eminent Lines and Lineaments of such a work drawn in this dark ancient piece: As namely, in general, it is described to be an efficacious Working, signified by the phrase of opening the Ear; in the Old Testament: Isa. 50. 5. The Lord God hath opened my Ear, and I was not Rebellious, neither turned away my Back. In the New Testament it is an opening the Heart, as Lydia's to attend to the things delivered; as likewise by a sealing of the instruction given: v. 16. impressing them as effectually on the Soul, as the Seal doth on the wax the Image engraven on it: So as finally they resist not, but become obedient thereunto: v. 16. But particularly, 1. God worketh so, as to withdraw a man from his former purpose of going on in sin, and hides pride from man; by convincing him of his sins and sinful Estate, and thereby breaking the Staff of pride of a mans Spirit, in the sense of his sinful and woful condition, in the ignorance of which he had stoutly gone on in the height and Pride of carnal Excellencies : But now is emptied of them all, and of that his conceited Righteousness, he was Opinionated of in his former estate, and brought Low, (as James word is) Humbled to the Dust in the sight of his Sin and Misery he lyes in, and thereby the Soul is wrought on, for it's Receiving, and Accepting by Faith, Christs Righteousness, and Ransom, or Redemption, which was to be given him out of the free Grace of God : verse 24. Then he is Gracious, and saith, Deliver him from going down into the Pit, I have found a Ransom ; (which Righteousness is the principal part of that blessed Message, which that Messenger or Interpreter from God, brings him then, when, 3. He closeth with, and betakes himself wholly unto that, for his alone Righteousness found, and provided by God for him ; he also 4. Is brought in, and represented to have prayed, and supplicated God, for the obtaining of these ; Prayer being the first fruits of Faith ; and 5. The consequent of that, is, Gods Gracious Acceptation ; and seeing Gods face with Joy, as the words of the 23, 24, & 26, verses, manifestly shew : If there be a Messenger with him, an Interpreter, one of a Thousand, to shew unto Man his Uprightness ; then he is Gracious unto him, and saith, Deliver him from going down to the Pit ; I have found a Ransom, he shall pray unto God, and he will be favourable unto him, and he shall see his Face with Joy : 6. He withal confessing, and forsaking his Sin, and pursuing after that Uprightness of Holiness, in Heart and Life, which is the other part of that Message the Interpreter makes known unto him. It involveth also the renewed Conversion of a Man that is declined, and hath grievously Sinned, and hainously Perverted that which is right, whom God recovers, and brings to himself again by some great Affliction, by which the Spirit works conviction of his Sin, and Reneweth Faith on the Messiahs Righteousness. Whereupon God restores him to his former Comforts out of his Graciousness, through the Redemption of the Messiah ; and from the instance of such an one brought so low, and by this means so raised again, Elibu, (who directs all this personally to Job, in his condition,) would give him ground of hopes of Grace, and Mercy from God, under this deplorable Affliction that he was in : And thus in this Parable here Elibu, Callidè (as Sanctius word is) presents himself, as a messenger from God, directing Job to the only true means, whereby God is pacified, viz. the Messiahs Ransom, and Righteousness ; and the right course he was to take, to recover the favour of God, and remove that evil that lay upon him ; namely, by having recourse to that Ransom of the Messiah, and free Grace of God, by Faith : both which he points unto, v. 24. joined with Repentance, in Confession of Sin, and turning from it, as v. 27.

See the Dutch Annotations.

Both or either of these serve to this Scope ; but eminently the first : viz. The Conversion of one Unregenerate, as being the greater Example of Mercy, and Grace, which might give the more abundant hopes to Job in this his case, who had long been savingly himself wrought upon, though as Elibu thought greatly fallen into Sin, the recovery of a Believer fallen but as the renewal of Friendship of one, who had long been in Friendship with another, whom he had unworthily provoked. But the other is as the first beginning of Friendship, of one that had continued an utter Enemy all his days till now.

2. The Second Premise, is this General Rule, for the understanding the Workings upon this sick Convert, his Heart, (which example I make my special centre, of the particulars that follow, drawing all the lines thereto) look, what in other parts of this discourse, he makes to be the inward workings upon him, he mentions afore to have been wrought upon, v. 15, 16, 17. the same must be taken in, and attributed unto, this sick Mans Conversion also ; and he to have had the same inward Operations in his Soul, also, which that other by Dreams had : And the reason is clear ; for although the outward means God used, was differing ; As a Dream or a Vision to the first, and a great sickness, &c. to this other ; yet Conversion from Sin, being said to be the effect that was wrought thereby ; this is common to either, as to any true Convert else in the World : And therefore when it is said, verse 26. Then he openeth the

the ears of Men, and sealeth their Instruction; it is to be conceived that this sick Man, when humbled by his sickness, and apprehensions of Death; and that a Messenger from God had further instructed, and informed him; That then God also opened this Mans Ear, and sealed up in his Heart effectually, those Instructions that Messenger had delivered to him; he did Hear and Obey; and therefore it is said v. 24. Then God is Gracious to him also. These were but differing ways, and Instruments, and occasions of working, but the effect the same in Both; so when in v. 17 he declares Gods end to be, that he may withdraw Man from his purpose, and hide Pride from Man; that is, to turn a Man from his sinful way and course of Life he was resolved to have persisted in: This must in like manner be supposed to have been the end, and effectual issue in this sick Mans Case: For this is common to all Converts, when likewise he further adds in the same verse, and hide Pride from Man; (that is to work Pride out of his Heart, to Bury it (as Calvins word is) extinguisheth it, which consists chiefly (as in New Testament Language) in the pulling down of strong holds, casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth it self against the knowledge of God; and bringing into Captivity every thought to the Obedience of Christ: 2 Cor. 10. 5. 'Tis that Universal Pride in Mans Heart, that is opposite to Conversion or Subjection to Christ, and not only, or chiefly the pulling down the plumes of that particular Sin of Pride before and towards Men: But this is to break the staff of the Pride of Mans Heart by Nature, which bears Men up in self Confidence of ones own Righteousness, and Creature Confidence: To work Poverty of Spirit in a Man: Now the same is to be Understood the issue, and effect that is in this Sick Mans Heart, and here intended; they are the Essentials of Conversion he sets forth; only mentioneth one piece, or strain of Spirit wrought in the one instance; another in the other; even as in the New Testament, in relating Conversion instances, we find them in like manner scatteredly narrated some in one, other effects in another, which when gathered together, give us a description of the whole work compleatly.

This General Rule I desire may not be understood, as if I meant, that God did not use sundry means: As that one Threatning, brought home to one Mans Heart, another to another Mans, to humble them; as likewise several Promises; brought home to work Faith, &c. yet still there is the same Effects, or things wrought in the Hearts of all, and common to all: As to be humbled for Sin; to confess, and forsake it; to Repent and turn to God; to Believe on Christ, and Gods Free Grace, for they are the Essentials, the Inwards of the New Creature: As every Child born into the World, hath alike the same Inwards; and of such Substantials, and none other but such, doth Elibu make mention as works in the Soul, in the whole of this his Discourse.

I come to draw out the particular workings themselves, as they are represented, either in the Instances or any other part of his Discourse.

The Parts of Conversion our Saviour reduceth unto Three; as I have shewed in opening John 16. 8.

1. The Conviction of Sin, which we call Humiliation.
2. Of Christs Righteousness, with Faith thereon.
3. Of Judgment; or Reformation of Heart and Life.

Let us consider if the Substantials of these are not to be descried in, or fairly to be collected from out of the aforesaid instances; as namely of the Sick Man, and the circumstances whereby Elibu sets forth the Story of him, or from other parts of the Discourse.

1. They shew a Conviction of Sin, and of a sinful estate that they had formerly continued in; so the Visionist had his Ear opened, and this instruction set home; that the work (as some Translate it,) his purpose (as others,) is Sinfull, and Wicked, and to be forsaken, or else he will utterly perish; this v. 17, 18. declare; in v. 17. God instructs him, That he may withdraw Man from his purpose; or [his work;] which denotes his course and way, and him to have been a worker of Iniquity; a committer of Iniquity in Christs and the Apostles sense; translated therefore his purpose, namely of continuing in his Sin; he sees likewise the danger of going

Book 8 going to the Pit, and of perishing, v. 18. And by these, as persuasives set on upon his Heart, he is induced to leave, and break off his sin; (as Daniels phrase is;) as being the way to Hell, and Destruction: This was an Instruction sealed upon his mind: But more expressly in v. 27. If any man say, I have sinned, and perverted that which was right: And perversion there notes out Great and grievous sinnings: These the Convert is brought to see, and confesseth.

And when the sick man hath also his sin, and unrighteousness laid open to him; for these words of v. 27. If any say I have sinned, &c. (which is the first A B C of true Repentance;) Thereby is strongly implied, yea declared, that the same was in this sick mans Heart—for it is an Inference drawn from his example in particular; teaching all men to do, even as this man had done: To lay to Heart his sin: It had not been an opposite general Inference, unless we suppose it to have been in that mans Spirit, who is proposed as the particular example or pattern that it is drawn from.

And if any object and say, That this would then have been expressed in words, in relating the sick mans Case. The answer is, That it needed not: It was enough to be set down in the Inference, and needless to have been repeated over and over in both. And such manner of implicarions are frequent in the Scriptures, and especially to be observed in the Proverbs:

Yea, many Interpreters, eminently skill'd and vers'd in the Hebrew, do understand and read the words of that 27th verse, as if they were the Speech of that sick penitents, when restored: And it is so varied in the Margin as to this sense. That He, the now penitent Convert, looks upon men, other men, as occasionally he meets with any; and proposeth to them his own example and says, I had sinned, and perverted that which was right, and it profited me not, but brought upon my self therewith, the danger of Death, and Guilt of Hell upon me: But He, Namely God, hath upon my Repentance, delivered my Soul from going into the Pit: And therefore do you all in like manner repent, as I have done: And 'tis certain that the Hebrew will bear either readings, though I prefer that which our Translators have given far before it. For this reason, that Phrase, He looks upon men, &c. is most properly used of God, who from Heaven looks eown upon Men, and observes whether they Repent. Neither was this sick Man only brought to be sensible of his sin, but being brought to Deaths door, is made apprehensive of Hell too, which is The wages of sin: The second Death: v. 22. Yea his Soul draweth near unto the Grave, and his Life to the Destroyers: Which words serve not simply to set out his Danger, as it was in the reality, or as it was in the thing it self; But also to shew that he had Apprehensions of it: And how often Hell is called that Pit, in the Proverbs, by Solomon, and in other Old Testament Scripture, I need not insist on: In the New, That bottomless Pit: Rev. 9. 11. The Angel of the Bottomless Pit, the Devil is called: Which is likewise as often termed Destruction, and is joined with Hell, to signifie it: Prov. 27. 20. And the word here translated Pit, in General signifies Corruption. And the dread of this for his sin, is the great distress which this sick mans Soul is brought to: And this was it which gave the advantage to this Interpreter One of a Thousand, (who took the opportunity) to strike whilst the Iron was hot: Even when his Soul drew nigh to the Grave, and his Life to the Destroyers in his own Fears: That is, to the Devils: Who (as Christ said of that rich Fool, this night [They] (the Angels of this Pit;) shall take away thy Soul;) carry it to that Pit of Destruction, whereof he hath the Power, Heb. 2. and he hath his Name from thence of Adollion, and Abaddon, in the foresaid Rev. 9. 11. That is, Destroyer: And at death stands ready by an unregenerate mans Bed-side, to take away his Soul: And as the Grave, and Pit, and Destruction, are used to express Hell, the thing it self; so in the Old Testamnet, a man that is fill'd with such apprehensions about this, is brought in as using the like Phrases to these, thereby to express his sentiments thereof: Thus Heman in trouble, and Terrors of Conscience for sin, and Gods Wrath, speaks of himself as of a man in Hell; when yet he was not sick in Body; in like Language to what Elihu speaks of this sick man here; Psal. 88. 3, 4. My Soul is full of Troubles, and my Life draweth draweth nigh to the Grave: I am counted with them that go down into the Pit: And again v. 5. Free among the Dead, cut off from thy Hand; whom thou rememberest no more: And v. 6, 7. Thou [hast laid me in the lowest Pit] in Darkness, in the deeps: [thy wrath] lyeth hard upon me; and thou hast afflicted me with all thy waves Selah: This was not sickness Bodily, or danger of the Grave. For he speaks of himself as a man already laid in the lowest Pit; and that all the waves of Gods wrath had gone over him: And how often is it that the Approaches of Death to a mans view, and fore-thoughts of these things, awaken mens Hearts, and possess them with such apprehensions, Experience abundantly shews: Mens Consciences naturally being subject to the fear of Death, all their life long: (Heb. 2. 15.) much more at the sight of Deaths approachment to them; who have heard and known that Hell immediately doth follow: As in Rev. 6. 8.

But further, in this juncture of time, Here comes a Messenger, who is one of a thousand, (as it is spoken of him:) He will be sure faithfully to second this voice of Conscience, by a further laying open his sinful Estate to him, and the Spiritual danger he is in of the second Death, if he turn not: And when he is said to shew to man his Uprightness, even whilst it is a doing, a man withal is shewn what he ought to be, and what he ought to have been; and what Righteousness he must get, and obtain: This when done, will withal effectually discover unto a man, his own Uprightness, far more than Natural Conscience alone doth do: For this man speaks the Holy, and Spiritual Word, and mind of God; and sets a mans secret sins in the light of Gods Countenance, afore the mans Conscience, which Natural Conscience could not reach to: And the Spirit of God, joyning with both these, as he did in the Heart of the Jaylor; Acts 16. Convinceth him of sin: And thus humbleth, and prepareth him: Which by Gods ordination, is the first work in mens Conversion.

And truly that joyful word (Joyful Sound the Psalmist calls it) Deliver Him; v. 24. may very rationally be judged to relate to the many Fears his Soul was in, from the sight of his sins, and apprehensions of Damnation; upon his apprehensions of Death: And that God in and by that blessed word, Deliver Him, pronounced his Absolution from his Sins and Hell: Especially it being followed, and strengthened by those promises that follow; that God would favourably accept him, as the word is; And He should see Gods face with joy; in v. 26. both which in conjunction speak that kind of Gods manifesting of his face, which is by lifting up the light of his Countenance immediately upon the Soul; which gives more joy, as the Psalmist his Experience assures us, than Oyl and Wine, or all temporal mercies whatsoever: These Speeches are too big to express the mercies of this Life only: They are promises, though in this Life, yet not of this Life; but the Beginnings of that which is to come: And those Speeches of seeing Gods face, and accepting with favour, do referr unto it. And indeed many of those Interpreters, that would understand these Phrases of Deliverance only from Bodily Death, in a great sickness; yet withal acknowledge this sick man to have been delivered therefrom, upon his true Conversion unto God in the sight of his sins, his true Faith, and sincere Repentance, and Prayer unto God, for the continuance of his Life in this World: And this every Verse and circumstance in the Story do abundantly declare: And further, that the sight of his sins, and the sense of Deaths approach, being not sufficient of themselves to work Faith and Conversion in Him; that therefore God afforded the Spiritual assistance of a Messenger, &c. whose Errand must be supposed to be, to discover and press upon his Soul, such things as are most perswasive, and productive to draw on true Faith and Repentance in him: And those things, or motives, we know are such as belong to the other World, after Death and mainly of Hell that follows it: Rev. 6. 8. Which all that die in their sins, will immediately be carried into, when they turn not from them: This Messenger also by declaring, and laying open the rich mercies that are in God, gives him Hopes, not of recovery only out of sickness, but teacheth him to pray unto God, as v. 26. for Pardon and Forgiveness

ness of his Sins, deliverance from Hell, acceptation of his Person, and seeing Gods face: And had there not been this use of such a Soul-messenger, to Instruct, Guide and Direct him, in these great concerns of his Soul; a Physitian, or worker of Miracles, that could have raised the sick, had been more useful and proper to have been sent, than such an Interpreter, if restoring unto Natural Light only had been All the intent; Nor are the simple concerns of this Life, as deliverance from Bodily Death, and bestowing Temporal Blessings of this Life, without the mixture of the Motives from, and knowledg of the things of the other, sufficient to work Spiritual Conversion, Faith and Repentance in Men, which were wrought in this Man here: And which serve not only for such low things, as those of this World are, but for the great Grace things of the other World, Pardon of Sin, Acceptation of our Persons into and Favour: For Pardon of Sins is that special Mercy, that great Grace and Spiritual Blessing appertaining to the other World: Eph. 1. 7. In whom we have Redemption through his Blood, the forgiveness of Sins, according to the riches of his Grace. And therefore it is not Bodily Life only, or Bodily Death simply, that are ultimately here intended, in those words with which he concludes, v. 39, 40. Lo all these things worketh God oftentimes with Man, to bring back his Soul from the Pit, to be enlightned with the light of the Living: And altho' it often falls out, that together with Pardon of Sins, &c. God vouchsafes a present deliverance from Bodily Death, and from out of such or such a Sicknes, and that thro' Christs Ransom; yet they are but some small things added, as Christs word is, and cast into the bargain, which is therefore mentioned v. 25. Then shall his Flesh come as the Flesh of a Child, &c. yet this were but a small thing, and for a Moment: But that God should produce, and bring forth his hidden Treasures, and alledg that infinite price of Redemption laid down for Mens Souls, when it is so rarely spoken of in the Old Testament, upon occasion of delivering a Man only from Sicknes, &c. this holds no Decorum, or proportion: That had been a light thing, as Christ in the Prophet speaks, of the reward of his Redemption; but to be delivered from Sin, and Sins infinite in their Weight, and infinite in Number, to be delivered from Hell, and Eternal Death; to be discharged at once for Ever, so as never to see Death, nor set a foot in the Pit, not to enter into Condemnation; (and he that undertook for, and paid this price, and knew best the estimate of both, thus sets out this Deliverance and Redemption purchased to Believers, and promised from the time of their Regeneration, that he that Believes in me shall never dye, John 11.) This is something indeed, this is a Redemption some way Worthy of, that is, Suitable and Answerable to so great a Ransom, and Worthy of such a mention, so rare, and so unwonted.

And then by that other Phrase, to be enlightned with the light of the Living, is meant, that through those Gracious workings upon the Soul, God gives, and brings a Man into the light of Life Eternal, which is begun here, and with which a Man is enlightned at first Conversion, and thereby brought into a New World, and to see the Kingdom of God: Arise from the Dead, and Christ shall give thee Light: They do therefore very ill, that would limit these Phrases, and the issues of these workings, to be a temporal Deliverance, (and that only)

* Mercer on the 30th verse: Piscator on verse 24. Redime eum, id est, a morte aeterna: Calvin on v. 18. He pulleth back from the Grave or Pit, these words (says he) concerns not only Bodily Death, but by a Similitude: The Everlasting Damnation, is termed here a Grave or Pit: And in his 125th Sermon, interpreting that of verse 24. Deliver him from the Pit. The case here standeth not only upon Temporal Death, but upon Damnation: And thus divers others.

ly) and restoring a penitent Sinner to Natural Life. And therefore many Interpreters, that seem to verge that way, interpose and inject in their Expositions of these Phrases, a morte utraque, from both Deaths; or a morte aeterna, from Eternal Death: And cannot forbear to do it, though literally they expound them otherwise. Thus much for the Conviction of Sin, and of the Soul thus prepared and humbled, and chastened for his Sin (as in verse 19.) which word signifies also, instructed: for his chastising thus even to Death, helps forward the instructing Man in these things.

I come to the Second work : To effect which indeed, is the main errand of this Interpreter : To whom God had committed the word of Reconciliation of such a Soul to God, and here his part begins, and Gods effectual working therewith. Chap. 3

Verse 23. If there be a Messenger with him, an Interpreter one of a Thousand, to shew unto Man his Uprightness.

I will Analise the words into these parts, or Heads.

1. I will consider what kind of Person this Messenger is, with some Observations thereupon. 'Tis a fond, and utterly unwarranted Interpretation, that it should be some good Angel sent from Heaven, as Mercer mislead by his Jewish Rabbies, would put this upon ; to whom I refer the Reader : For that which follows will not agree therewith, as not to say of an Angel sent from Heaven, he is one of a Thousand ; for in comparison unto what other Angels is it, that this is spoken? To be sure not of Devils, the Destroyers. It were a dishonour to any of these Elect Angels, to have any comparison made with them, to set forth their Excellencies thereby ; and if with others, the Good, certainly any one of those glorious Creatures coming with a message from God, would have had the same Efficacy on this mans Heart, and would have been sufficient, if that had been the meaning : Nor do we find that God used in those times their Ministry to convert, and to work saving Faith in any, though with other messages they were intrusted : They gave the Law, but that is the ministration of Death : No, God hath betruſted the Ministry of Reconciliation unto us men, and not Angels : Much less not to be Mediators between God and Souls ; and to present their prayers to God, or to be employed to carry news of their Faith and Repentance, that thereupon God should then say to that Angel, Deliver Him, I have found a Ransom, as these Interpreters would have it. But men eminently Holy, or else Prophets, Teachers, and Instructors of others, employed by God for the Conversion and Salvation of Souls, are styled Angels : That is, Gods messengers : Thus in the Old Testament, John the Baptist, Mal. 3. 1. And indeed the whole Tribe of Levi, the Priesthood, To whom was betruſted by Covenant (Mal. 25.) the Law of God, the Conversion of Souls, v. 6. [He] or the whole Fraternity of them are styled the Angel (as here) or the Messenger of the Lord, v. 7. In the New, the Ministers, or Bishops of those seven Churches are so dignified. And Souls that are truly wrought upon by them, do reverence them as an Angel of God : As the Apostle, Gal. 4. 14. And these are called Angels, or Messengers, because sent by God to work Faith in men : As Rom. 10. 15. How shall they preach, except they be sent : As it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the Gospel of Peace, and bring glad Tidings of good things.

By an Interpreter is meant an Expounder of Gods Mind and Will, in this Covenant of Grace, touching mens Salvation, and of the Way to be taken by man for the obtaining it : To shew unto man his Uprightness, is the matter of the message here. And he is one of a thousand who is able to reveal the things of God touching mans Salvation, and give right Directions unto such disconsolate Souls, that are unfeigned, and taken quite off from all their false Supports and Confidences, and their ignorant carnal pleas that their Estates were good and blessed ; to settle such Souls upon a right, sound, and new Basis, and bottom of unhinged Faith, and thorough Repentance ; this is not every mans skill, that yet is learned in many other great mysteries ; but of one who is experimentally versed in Soul-work ; to whom God hath given the Tongue of the Learned, to speak a word in season, unto him that is weary, and hit his Case and Condition home, and speak to his Heart, and apply the word aright ; and whose Spirit Gods Presence accompanieth with the power and Spirit of the Gospel : Such an one is One of a Thousand : He that converteth Souls is wise, Prov. 10.

Obf. 1. That Natural Knowledge, though improved and quickened to the height, is not sufficient to be effectual to work Regeneration in men. The Inhabitants of those Countries where Job and Elishu lived, were the most raised in Natural Knowledge, participating of all what their bordering Neighbours of Caldæa, Egypt, and Phœnicia had: Witness the many golden Sands and Oar of such Knowledge, dispersed and inserted up and down in this Book: This raised these Indwellers in those Regions, to a greater height than Greece, which lighted their Candles with the Light of these: Likewise that natural knowledge these had, though impregnated, and actuated to the height, by the apparent approach of Death, when Conscience is awakened, when sin that lay at the door, as a Dog asleep, comes in and takes a man by the Throat; when the Iniquity of a mans heels dos compass him about, as the Psalmist speaks, and the other World is near to view, and but as the Land that is on the other side of a narrow River; yet all these were not found sufficient savingly to work in any of them: It may conduce to convince, as such apprehensions did the Jaylor: Acts 16. But the work stays there, yea turns into despair, if there be not a Messenger, an Interpreter of Gods mind from Heaven, and he one of a Thousand too, to shew to man his Uprightness, the right way of Salvation, which Natural Light is utterly ignorant of; so far as may effectually bring men into Gods Favour, the State of Grace: There must be a Revelation for this; a shewing it to a man, by a farther means than Nature: Job himself had in a large Harangue discoursed this, in chap. 28. throughout: In the midst of which he cries out, v. 12. But where shall Wisdom be found? true Wisdom, The fear of the Lord, as he expounds himself, v. last: (by which Eulogy that Religion which only is saving, was still signified under the Old Testament.) And v. 20, 21. Whence then cometh Wisdom? And where is the place of understanding? Seeing it is hid from the Eyes of all the Living, and kept close from the Fowls of the Air: It is God alone that understandeth the way thereof: v. 23. that invented it of old, v. 27. Then did he see it, and declare it; He prepared it, yea and searched it out: (He searched it out, and prepared it for them that love Him:) And no man knows it, so as to be saved by it, but that man to whom He reveals it: God said unto man, &c. v. last.

Obf. 2. We see God used then the Ministry of man; that is, of men that are Interpreters of Gods mind, to open and declare his Will: Teachers of Righteousness: As Noah is called a Preacher of Righteousness, afore the Flood: And the like we see hereafter continued, and to be the ordinary Converters of Souls; and the Word, the means of Conversion: Psal. 19. 7. The Law of the Lord is perfect, converting the Soul; the Testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple: And the same Course he continueth to this day, to work saving Faith in men: Rom. 10. 14, 15. How shall they then call on him, in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a Preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent? Conversion was the same then, that now; and his ordination of Instruction from the Word by mans ministry, is the same. And the Apostle there concludes, v. 17. So then, Faith cometh by hearing; and hearing by the Word of God: That is, by the Appointment of God.

2. I come to the Matter of the Message it self, the discovery of which is used as the means of this mans Salvation and Conversion: It is summ'd up in one word, (as the Apostle speaks of the Law, Gal. 5. 14.) to shew to man his Uprightness: Which is no other than the word of Reconciliation under the new (2 Cor. 5. 19.) Revealing both on Gods part, How he comes to be reconciled to us; to wit, God was in Christ reconciling the World to himself, by making Christ Sin for us; And on our part, How we are reconciled to God, by laying hold on this by Faith, that thereby we might be made the Righteousness of God in him: And therewith turning unto God, out of love wrought by Faith, apprehending that Righteousness: These words, to shew to man his Uprightness, comprehending both these, were the message committed to this Interpreters Trust; even as the word of Reconciliation under the New, is unto ours, in these expressions, The word of Truth, the Gospel of Salvation:

vation: Eph. 1. 13. By which word, God out of his own will, doth beget all, that are begotten of Him; Jam. 1. 18. This one word, [man his uprightnes,] Chap. 3 comprehends both: And indeed those in the Old Testament were saved, by the same Grace of the Lord Jesus; (though darkly, and afar off revealed) as we under the New, (Acts 15. 11.) And the shewing this, for the substance of it, (which is the Old Testament phrase, here and elsewhere also) tho in a more obscure manner; and mans hearing, and closing with it, and obeying of this message, was that which saved them then; as well as the clearer Revelation of it (which is the New Testament Phrase,) doth us now.

The great enquiry then must be, what is to be understood by mans Uprightnes; the hearing of which shewn, and declared to him by this Interpreter, and this sick mans Soul closing with, and obeying of it, then saved him: What that is, the Papists carry it to a mans own merits; Our latter protestant Interpreters unto that duty on mans part, consisting in Faith and Repentance, and upright walking: But Calvin in his Sermons on Job, publish'd in French the year afore his Death, hath clearly and fully pitcht it on the Righteousnes of Justification; whereby God pardoning our sins, accepts us for Righteous for his Sons sake, and through his Ransom and Redemption: This is the Righteousnes, (says he) which is spoken of in this place: Thus, in Sermon 126, and again in Sermon 127; his reason is, because Elibu speaks it "Of a wretched Creature in trouble, that feels Gods Wrath and Vengeance; and there is no way to comfort him but this; that it is, not that men are Righteous in themselves, or that they are able to stand before God; But that this Righteousnes is that whereby God buryeth all their sins in the Blood of Jesus Christ: And the shewing man his Righteousnes, is his shewing good remedy for us to be discharged of the Bond of Death, wherein we were bound: Which Remedy is, to put our whole trust in the Death and Passion of our Lord Jesus: Thus He: I join to him John Cotton; (an Interpreter one of a thousand;) in those imperfect Notes of Exposition, on the 1 Epistle of John, upon those words chap. 2. 29. [If ye know that He is Righteous]" A ground (says he) of wonderful Consolation, to every poor Soul that is burthened with his own unrighteousnes: This comfort Elibu gives to a man in extremity of Body and Soul; Job. 23. 23. to declare where his Righteousnes is to be found: That is, it is not to be found in himself: God will say of such a Soul, Deliver him from going into the Pit; I have found a Ransom: I forbear to mention others, who speak near to this: But of late Mr. Caryl, in his compleat and accurate Comment on that Book on these words, doth ultimately come fully up to the Righteousnes of Justification chiefly; (as his word is,) though he takes in the whole of a mans Duty, in all other parts of Uprightnes in Himself.

And I like well enough, and exclude not any part of the Duty of Uprightnes on a mans part towards God: For unto Justification by Christs Righteousnes, Faith, or an act of closing with it, and reliance upon it, for a mans particular Justification, is necessary: Which is the duty of man: And yet requisite on mans part to his Justification. Though as such, Justification itself is not attributed unto it; otherwise then in respect unto Christ its object, and as apprehended by it: And as for Repentance, and mans turning to God, in his first Conversion, and his future obedience, that I acknowledge to be intended also; provided that this Righteousnes on Gods and Christs part, for justifying a Sinner, be first served, according to the merit thereof; and the sole Honour thereof in justifying, be kept inviolable in the prerogative thereof: And then I take both in; although these two be different Righteousnes; Because the Holy Ghost choosing out but one word to expresse the whole errand, and matter of this Interpreters exhortation, that came to instruct him in what was necessary to his Salvation: It was meet it should be such an one as was most comprehensive: And therefore we are to involve all that may any way be justly understood and signified thereby, and are consistent together: The word Righteousnes being used to expresse both Christs Righteousnes, viz. made ours by Faith only, and and our own Righteousness inherent also, and both requisite to, and concurrent in Conversion, though in various ways, and to differing purposes, and Conversion being the Subject of Elihu's Discourse, it is apposite to take in both.

I begin first to shew, that the Righteousness of Justification through Christ's Righteousness, is here intended; and this may several ways appear out of the Text.

1. Uprightness, or Rectitude (which Piscator says, ought to be retained, and Vatablus so renders it) are all one with Righteousness, in Scripture Phrase, Eccles. 7. last. God made Man Upright, that is, Righteous, and so here, only there it is used to express the Righteousness of Man in his first Creation, whose Righteousness of Justification, and of Holiness, was but one single Righteousness, and the whole of it was in himself; but herein Job is ment, the Righteousness of Man fallen, with which he must appear afore Gods Tribunal; and which must be the Righteousness of Christ alone: And indeed that Righteousness in verse 26. that flows, and Uprightness here, are in Elihu's intention one and the same, appears by comparing both Verse 23. and 26. what is Man his Uprightness in verse 23. is in verse 26. Man his Uprightness, the thing is the same, though the words are not the same, so then Righteousness it is.

2. This must be understood to be such a Righteousness, as this sick sinful dying Man, might with boldness appear afore God withal, at the Bar of his strict Justice and Judgment; it must also be a Righteousness which this Sick Man lays hold of, when now he is made sensible of his Sin, the Hainousness, the Multitudes of them, and of Hell the Desert of them, which he sees he can no way escape by himself, or any thing in himself, he looks to Dye, and expects no other, and then follows Judgment; and where shall such a Righteousness be found, to come afore God with? Not any Righteousness of a Man's own. Phil. 3. either past, (for in Unregeneracy a Man hath nothing but Unrighteousness,) or present, [that is, his present Repentance] or to come, that is his filial Obedience: No, David cuts off all Pleas, Psal. 143. 2. Enter not into Judgment with thy Servant, for in thy sight shall no Man living be Justified, no none of his best, and dearest Servants dare venture, or stand at that Bar, in their own Obedience, nor Righteousness, either at or after Conversion; and yet appear before God they must, and be Justified by some such Righteousness, or they will be Condemned, and where shall such a Righteousness be found, as Job says of Wisdom? No where but in Christ, to be prehended, and pleaded by Faith, looking out of a Mans self to Christ as a Saviour for Righteousness, and Justification thereby: These are express in Isaiab, speaking of Christ, Chap. 41. A just God, and a Saviour, there is none beside me, verse 21. There is no Saviour but me, and therefore look unto me (alone) and be saved all ye ends of the Earth, for I am God, and there is none besides me, verse 22. And this is our Christ, as appears by what follows, verse 23. I have Sworn by my self, that unto me every Knee shall Bow, and every Tongue shall Swear, which is punctually applied to Christ, and that twice in the New Testament, Rom. 14. 10. We shall all stand before the Judgment Seat of Christ, (to be Justified namely (as was said) or Condemned) For it is Written, every Knee shall Bow to me, &c. And again, Phil. 2. 10, 11. this as distinct from the Father is spoken of there, That at the Name of Jesus every Knee should Bow, and that every Tongue should Confess, that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the Glory of God the Father; and what both in this World and at the Judgment Seat, shall the Righteous confess, for their Righteousness, the Prophet goes on to tell you, verse 24. surely shall one say, (all Men shall not say this, though all shall Bow, &c.) In the Lord I have Righteousness, and Strength, and to him shall Men come (for both these) verse 25. Will you have it yet plainer? In the Lord shall all the Seed of Israel be Justified, and shall Glory: Now here is a Messenger One of a Thousand, from God, on purpose to shew a poor Wretch, wherein the Righteousness of fallen Man doth lie. And what other Righteousness can he alledge, and produce to make void that Caveat and Bar put in against him, (when ever he comes afore Gods Judgment Seat,) and all Men living, yea against the best Servants God ever had on Earth, which he finds written over the Door of that Court, at the very Entrance: Enter not into Judgment, Oh Lord. Seconded with this as the unalterable Ground thereof: Cursed is he that continues not in all things to do them; now wherewith shall the Clamours that his Soul is filled withal be quieted, but by this Perfect and Alone Righteousness of Christs, currant (we see by Isaiab,) under the Old Testament, Gods Free Grace accepting it for this Man, without works; but now the Righteousness of God, without the Law is Manifested, (Rom. 3. 21.) Being witnessed by the Law and the Prophets, and one of these Prophets that Testifies to, is this Elihu, and that in this very Speech of his in Job; who Testifies it with the rest, Even the Righteousness of God, which is by Faith of Jesus Christ, unto all, and upon all them that Believe, for there is no difference; verse 22. that 'tis said [but Now] is manifest in verse 21. respects the times of the New Testament, when this is most broadly and openly, and clearly Revealed, but was darkly afore, and whispered in the times of the Law, and the Prophets: And as in the dark was yet catcht hold of by Souls that were saved; 'twas the currant Righteousness among the Godly then; one and the same Righteousness, and but one and the same both in the Old and the New: so as we may conclude, that this Messenger had not deserved the Character of One of a Thousand, or of some Prophet, (by which Interpreters frequently notifie him,) had he not mentioned, and spoken of this Righteousness above all, he had otherwise fallen short of his Undertaking, to relieve this forlorn Soul, if this had been left out.

As the Nature, Necessity and Reason of the matter, or thing it self, and these Circumstances touching the Person in the Text, even now specified, requireth this Interpretation; so Three Words there are, and Three Sayings spoken of in the Text, which duely Examind in the Reference, or Aspect, which those Speeches of them do cast one upon the other, will prove them to be one and the same thing; and that thing to be Christs Ransom, and our Righteousness of Justification thereby: And so as if one of the Three prove to be Christs Righteousness and Redemption, then the other Two also are to be understood to be the same, and all one thereupon. These Three Words or Things spoken of, are, 1. Man his Uprightness. 2. Ransom. 3. Man his Righteousness. The Three Things or Sayings spoken of them, are, 1. [To shew] to Man his Uprightness, in verse 23. which is done by the Messenger and Interpreter, and with that Sentence he begins the round to the other Two. 2. Christs Ransom, or Price of Redemption found by God, and the Saying, or Sentence concerning this, is Gods [he (himself) says] I have found a Ransom, verse 24. and owneth it to be a Satisfactory Ransom for Righteousness, for and unto that Man; and herein himself doth Second, and verifie that word spoken by his Messenger, who had shewn the Man that a Righteousness there was to be found with God, for Man fallen; and together therewith a Righteousness which might be obtained by this Man, if he would seek out for it; which Righteousness having been first laid open by the Messenger, God himself Seconds him in it, and explains to be a Ransom of Redemption, which himself hath found. 3. There is to Man his Righteousness rendered, verse 26. and the Saying or Thing spoken thereof, is Elihu's, uttered of God, For he will [render] to Man his Righteousness: But still uttered of this same God, who in those words afore had himself said, I have found a Ransom; and Elihu hereupon says, For he renders, or gives it forth to whom it belongs as his due upon his Conversion, and laying hold upon it, and renders it as his due, which cannot be with-held from him. So then in reality these Three are One and the same thing put into Three distinct words; Uprightness, Ransom, Righteousness; and these Sentences about them, do in their mutual Aspects and References one to another, agree in one, and utter this Harmonious sound joyntly, That Man's Righteousness for his Justification, is Christs Ransom, and Redemption, at least it is included, and aimed at in them all, though Uprightness, verse 23. and Righteousness, verse 26. may perhaps secondarily involve something on our parts besides it.

1. They are One: This is Proved by parts. 1. That Uprightness, [shewn] to that poor Man, verse 23. is one with Righteousness [rendred] verse 26. not only

Book 8 only because Uprightness is used to express Righteousness, (which was afore observed) but that Addition in both places of [to Man his] Righteousness, and [shew [to Man his] Uprightness,] thus set to both, doth apparently argue them to be one thing in Elihu's Intention, for that addition is appropriative to Man, and as distinguishing it from the Righteousness of Angels. 2. That middle word, a Ransom, is as plainly comprehended in that of Uprightness, shewn by the Messenger, verse 22. for these words, I have found a Ransom, are not only Gods own verifying, and acknowledgment that he had indeed found, as this Messenger had told him that God had favour to him, and shewn the Man that it was to be found with God, and to be had from him for his Deliverance and Salvation; but in this return and Answer of Gods upon it; God particularizeth more distinctly what manner of thing, that Righteousness whereby Man is saved and delivered, is; 'tis a Deliverance by way of Ransom, a Redemption of him from Sin, Hell and the Grave, procured by a price of Redemption laid down for him by another, whom he procured to lay it down for him; Christ is made Sin, that we might be made the Righteousness of God in him; and by calling it a Ransom he beats Man off from vain imagination of his own Righteousness, for that is no where called a Ransom; no, the Redemption of the Soul is more precious than so, as the Psalmist speaks; no, it was so far from that Dream, that such way by Ransom at the full Rate and Quantum of it, as should satisfie for Sin, could never have entred into a Sinners Heart or thought to perform, 'twas past his finding out, as the Aspect intimates: But [I] (says God) have found this Ransom, and therefore give me the Glory of that. God was the Founder, or Procurer, and Christ the Finder, as we use to speak of the Price as paid in another: And then this middle Word and Speech, for I have found a Ransom, hath such a Correspondency with the Third and last Word, and Sentence of the Three, that shews that Ransom placed in the middle of the other Two, to be included in that Righteousness specified at the close spoken by Elihu upon it; He shall render, &c. and refers clearly to Gods saying, I have found; and is but as if he had said, that God had found it for that Man as a Price pay'd for him by another Redeemer, which God will surely render and give forth to that Man; and that otherwise God should retain from Man, that which himself acknowledgeth is the Mans; now this Ransom is that which God acknowledgeth he had found for him, in verse 24. and Elihu in the 26 verse, calls that which God renders to Man, The Mans Righteousness, and therefore Ransom and Righteousness are one also.

The other Instance I shall give of a Converted Souls having a sight and sense of Sin, is the Conversion of the Apostle Paul.

There are many Accounts of it of several kinds, the History of it in the Book of the Acts, related Two or Three several times, the infinite Riches of Grace that were in it. 1 Tim. 1. The work of Faith and Love wrought in him thereby toward Jesus Christ at his first turning, also in his being delivered from the power of the Law, and Married to Christ in Rom. 7. with a Narration of his Humiliation for Sin, which in him was a saving Work, in Rom. 7. verse 4, 5. he there involving his own Example, when he was in the Flesh, verse 5, 6. and from verse 7th of that Chapter and so on, he professedly applies it unto his own Conversion, and again the same, Gal. 2. 19, 20. For I through the Law am dead to the Law, that I might live unto God. I am Crucified with Christ: Nevertheless I Live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me, and the Life which I now live in the Flesh, I live by the Faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me.

The only Question that I know may be rais'd, is, Whether these words, I am dead to the Law by the Law, which are spoken of the work of Humiliation in him at Conversion, be to be understood of a saving sanctifying work begun to be wrought in him, yea or no; now that it was part of a work of that kind, is clear by the ninth verse, where that he speaks of that work which was the beginning of his Conversion out of Unregeneracy, is evident; for (says he)

I was alive without the Law once. Those words note the whole time of his Unregeneracy, which he had liv'd in until this turn, unto which those other words v. 19. I am dead by the Law to the Law, do refer, alive before once, but now dead; his death and his life must be measur'd to be of one and the same kind of Life and Death. Now the Life he had before was an Opinion of himself to have been alive by the works of the Law, and the Death he mentions must be from the contrary apprehension which did strike him dead in his Spirit. And 2dly, during his former time, when he speaks of that Once he says, he was without the Commandment, Rom. 7.9. I was alive without the Law once, but when the Commandment came, sin reviv'd and I died. How was Paul without the Law in that former time of his, but in this respect, that that which was the Soul and Spirit of the Law he was wanting in, he had not the due apprehension and right Knowledge of it, so that he reckoned as not the Law, all that he apprehended about it in the time of his Pharisaism: He says, he had liv'd without Law all that time, who yet had been so zealous for the Law, as elsewhere you read: but he wanted the true Soul and Spirit of it, which makes it the Law; he tells us in the 7th verse, I had not known sin but by the Law, for I had not known Lust unless the Law had said, Thou shalt not Covet; for the Knowledge of this inward Corruption, was that which killed him, and he calls it the Law. I had not known sin (says he) but by the Law, but by the light of this one Notion let into his Soul, he now saw, looking back upon his former Estate, this inbred sin inherent in his own Nature, had taken occasion by the Commandment, and had wrought in him all manner of Concupiscence; for without the Law sin was dead. And 2dly, I call this sight of sin, as it had been, wrought in himself, the Spirit of the Law; for in the 14th verse, he says, We know that the Law is spiritual, but I am carnal, sold under sin, even after he was converted. He speaks this of himself after his Conversion, and he speaks the same of the Law at the 10th verse, of that Law, the Knowledge whereof he now had, and not before; wherefore the Law is holy, and the Commandment holy, which had discover'd Lust to be sin to be Sin, to him; and the knowledge of this Law was that which did convert him, that struck him dead, and put him out of his jolly Life he had led, which was from the thought and apprehensions that he should have been justify'd by the outward performance of the Law, in which he was deceived. And so the Commandment which was ordained to Life, (says he) I found to be but unto Death, and this was effected in him, when the Commandment came; that is, that which was in the true light of it, the Commandment it self, that never came before, and so sin reviv'd, like the Snake in the Fable, that was brought in benumm'd with cold, but laid by the fire, the heat reviv'd it: And I died, says he, sin reviv'd, and stung me to Death, and this sin, he afterwards tells us was that sin that dwelt in him, v. 20. that sin that dwelleth in me, which causeth me to do that which I would not, and is oppos'd by another self opposite thereto: In respect whereof he says, it is no more I that do it, which opposes the corrupt self in me, which he calls sin that dwelleth in me. v. 20.

From hence I gather, That a true and spiritual sight of Lust to be sin mingling it self with all a mans ways, is from a Spirit of Holiness begun to be wrought in the mind. For such a Light as this was Paul's, wrought in the entrance into his Conversion, and such must therefore be the light in any one that hath it, and true Conversion follows upon it, as it did in Paul: And I give this reason for it, That out of that Principle, by which we see the spiritual evil of sin, whereof this was the Light that gave the Knowledge of it, it is that any man sees the Spiritual good, in opposition to Lust, to be in him. For as the same visive Faculty in man, the same Eye whereby a man discerns one contrary, it also discerns the other, as the same eye that sees White, also discerns what is Black; or e contra: So the same Light that discerns Grace in the spiritual Nature of it, discerns Sin, and on the contrary in like manner. And this principle the Apostles Discourse in this Chapter clearly runs upon.

CHAP. IV.

The Use and subserviency of Conviction of Sin, and Humiliation for it, to induce the Soul to believe on Jesus Christ for Salvation.

I shall now give you an Account of Conviction of Sin and Humiliation, not in the General only, but of every particular mentioned: To let you see the reason, the use they serve to, viz. To advance God himself as mans chiefest good, and to set up Christ, and his Righteousness, and his own Free Grace, in justifying, sanctifying, and in all.

First, That the Soul should be wounded with sin as sin, and as in it self the greatest misery, to what a blessed End tends it!

1. By this work of Humiliation, the Heart is for ever weaned from the comfort that is in sin, or in any Creature, so as never to be quiet till it meets with God, the God of comforts. For if this apprehension, that Sin is the greatest Evil, season but a mans Spirit once, it sowers all pleasant things with him, they have lost their Taste for ever: And nothing can be so Good to him as sin is evil, but only God: For nothing is so good as sin is evil, but only he; and then a man will take God and his Favour for a comfort alone; all he can ever look for, or hope to find, it must be in him: his comfort in sin and all things else, is everlastingly spoyled and marr'd: so Hos. 2. 14. when God would allure and win his Churches Heart to him, what doth he? He brings her into the Wilderness, into a barrenness of all Comforts, and then speaks comfortably to her. A man convinc'd of sin and lost state, is like a man condemned to die, the pleasure which may be had in the green Pasture he goes through to execution, affects him not; so, nor can this man take content in any thing till he hath the favour of that God he hath offended, God only can speak comfort to such a Soul, and nothing else.

And 2dly, Hereby it is made restless after Christ and his Righteousness, as the means of bringing him into Favour with God; if it were Wrath, or trouble of Conscience thereby, were all his Grief, Ease would content him; but it being Sin, nothing but Christ and his Righteousness will do it: As the Hart wounded, rests not till it comes to such an Herb as cures it; so nor he that is wounded, can take delight in any thing, till he spies Christ out, and Sighs and Pants incessantly after him.

2. For a man to see himself an Unbeliever and without Faith, without Christ; it is also exceeding necessary. John 16. v. 10.

1. Because it tends to bring in the guilt of all his sins upon him, to serve the inquest against him; for when the Conscience is charged with Oaths, Adulterys, &c. it pleads a presumptuous sinners pretensions of a Believer, I am in Christ, and I believe, and so sin cannot fasten on him, but he puts it off and flights it, and walks, outfacing it and all its Bills; but when he is convinced of unbelief, which is the Protector of all sin, then every Commandment may bring out its Bill and be heard, and serve a Writ upon him; convince him of this, and you convince him of all.

2. Because they may be convinced what is the main thing necessary, and the first thing they are to do, the next course they are to take; for if men should not be convinced of Unbelief as the great Sin of all the rest, they would not be pitcht upon Faith as the only and full Remedy of their Evil, hereby they see the necessity of Faith, the stead it must stand them in, and their aim will be to get it.

And 3dly. Hereby, and for want of Faith, seeing themselves out of Christ, they will be pitcht upon what is the especial aim of Faith, Union with him, as the Foundation of all good they must receive from him. Many being humbled for for want of Duties, pitch upon performing them, and so are eased; but when Unbelief is the main Sin, and want of Union with Christ the greatest misery, then union with him is the first aim of Faith, and the Soul is convinced that it must have his person, as Paul, Phil. 3. that I may win Christ; and then have Righteousness and all else: I must believe, and I must have Christ, or nothing is accepted, says the Soul; then

4. By seeing a mans self to have been an ungodly person, and to have done no good, and by seeing the Inwards of actions, and the carriage of the Heart in them, the Soul is convinced that this is true: That no good thing dwells in a man, and this moves the Soul to go to Christ both for Justification and Sanctification, and without it a man is in danger to err in both.

For 1. If he sees not that there is no good in him, he will certainly trust in himself, and not go wholly to Christ for Righteousness; if it hath any of its own, it will trust partly in Christ, and partly in it self: And like the Ship in the Acts, be part aground, and part in the water, and so be broken apieces when the Waves of Temptation come: Go to the first working of Faith, God will have a Man apprehend himself an ungodly person: Rom. 4. 5. To him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the Ungodly, his Faith is accounted for Righteousness: And after Faith wrought, though a man sees some good wrought in him, yet it hinders not his attributing all to Christ in Justification: Yet in the first working of Faith, it's clean otherwise upon a different Reason: For that good which is wrought after Faith, is wrought by Faith that fetcht all from Christ: And so Sanctification, being but borrowed by Faith, hinders not Faith; The Daughter hinders not the Mother: But if a man should see any good before, it being not wrought by Faith, nor fetcht from Christ, the Heart would rest in it, and oppose the work of Faith and going out to Christ: It being from a mans self, a man would rest in it, and not seek abroad for Righteousness whilst he hath any at home: As any one sin preserves the power of sin in the Heart, though a man parts with all other; so any good or Righteousness ungiven up, preserves self-confidence, and hinders Justification, as the other doth Sanctification. There is no Remedy therefore, but that all our supposed Good be discovered to be Naught and rotten; that every Burrough be stopt e're these poor helpless Creatures will go to the Rock.

2. The want of such Conviction will hinder Sanctification; for it would not renew the man throughout, but piece new Grace to old, false Grace to true, and make the rent worse; for he would rest in some false good. Christ will have all old things pass away, and all to become new; every Stud pull'd down, and nothing in the New Building that was in the Old; yea it hinders Christ from working it. He will shew his Skil in drawing his Image upon a plain Board, and so wipes out all afore. Bring to a curious Painter, that would shew his Skil, a Board with a Picture fallly drawn, and he will not go about to mend it, he can make no work of it, but he will take his Pensil and dash all out, and shew his Art in a New one; and so doth Christ. Bring a Bell to a Founder that hath a Crack in it, and he will not go about to soader that up, and so let it go; but dash all in pieces, and melt and cast it anew; and so doth Christ with those who have the seeming cast of goodness, and that by letting us see the falseness of it: For that is his end in breaking and melting the Heart, to cause us to apprehend all is naught.

3. A mans sight and sense of his utter Sinfulness, both in his Life, Heart and Nature, the multitude of sins, and the strength of sin, is necessary.

1. Because, though God pardons, he will have us know what he pardons. As he, Mat. 18. 23. Though he meant to pardon his Servants, yet would take account of them, that Pardon might be the more sweet to them. When a mans Soul draweth near to the Grave, then for God to say, Deliver him; I have found a Ransom. Job 33. how welcome is it!

2. A sight of sin is needful, to constrain us to make use of Christs Righteousness, and every part of it, to search thoroughly into it, and every parcel of it, and to see the necessity of all the Holiness of his Nature, Life, &c. that nothing could be spared. Men that are confusedly convinced that they are Sinners, their Faith is answerably as confused, they believe in Christ as a Saviour, and that is all; but their Faith improves not his Righteousness to the uttermost nor do they search into the riches of Christs active and passive Obedience, and the Holiness of his Nature, as necessary to obtain their acceptance with God.

3. It is necessary that we may not rest in a false Sanctification. Men that see but the Corruption of their outward Actions, content themselves with an outward Reformation. But men that see their Lusts, rest not till they be mortified; they bend their Force against them. A convinced Soul sees his Nature corrupted, and the Spring of all defiled, he will not rest till he hath a new Nature; as the power of Corruption he sees lies there, so the power of Godliness he will see lies in cleansing that Fountain. Paul seeing a Law of Death in his Members, rests not till the Law of life in Christ condemns it.

4. A Conviction of our sinfulness is needful, that we may see an utter helplessness and hopelessness in our selves for time to come: The Heart is ready to account it can do something for time to come, though it can do nothing rightly; yea, when it is stript of self Righteousness for time past, yet not self Ability for time to come; but now it thinks and casts with it self, I will go fast, and go Pray, and go Meditate on Christ and a Promise, and I will get him ere I have done: which Resolutions are good, when in sense of a Mans own emptiness they are stirred up and maintained by a dependance upon God, to work Faith; but the Heart naturally secretly projects this out of it's self, as they in Jam 4. 13. and not if God enable me, &c. They reckon without him; and in hopes of this the Heart rests, and thinks in the end to get Faith to come. Among other steps and degrees of our Misery this is made one, that a Man is not only ungodly, but without strength, Rom. 5. 6. A Man that hath no Money in his Purse, yet whilst he hath Hands to work, he makes no such reckoning of want; and so Men when they see they want all good for the time past, yet they hope to work it out; they have hands left, and with them they fall to work; but when a Man shall see hands cut off too, and nothing but stumps left, which are as unfit and unable to lay hold on Christ, as a Mans Arm without hands is upon a Rope to save him; and God must not only find him Christ, but his Grace must give him hands to lay hold on him also: That the apprehension of this, serves both to drive him out of himself, and to magnifie Gods free Grace in working Faith. For if any pretended power in himself were able to help him, he would never go out of himself to Christ, nor would he attribute all wholly unto Grace, which is that God intends to have exalted; Eph. 2. 13. You are saved by Grace, through Faith: Might some think we shall acknowledge Grace enough, if we acknowledge that Grace pardons all, and effects all, though Faith be of our own working: No, (says the Apostle,) and that not of your selves, not so much as Faith, it is the Gift of God: And so Paul, to magnifie Christ's Grace, He says Christ died not only for men, and ungodly persons, but also for persons without strength, Rom. 5. This you must apprehend and find, and then Grace will be Grace indeed, and nothing but Grace, and then when you despair of your selves, you will rejoyce wholly in Christ. What says Paul, Phil. 3? We have no confidence in the Flesh, but despair utterly of all in us, and rejoyce in Christ Jesus, acknowledging that he is all, and doth all. God cures one Contrary by another; Self-confidence cannot be cured but by Despair; God glorifies not, till the Body be dead and rotten in the Grave; and he sanctifies not till the Heart be dead to it self, and unable to stir, to move no more to Christ than the Earth can towards Heaven; if the Sun come nigh it, well and good, but it cannot move nigher to it: Or as Luther compares it, The barren Earth may gape for rain, but it cannot procure it, till Heaven pour it freely down into her lap: And so he calls this Righteousness of Faith, a passive Righteousness, Faith and a meer receiving Grace.

CHAP. V.

In which Answers are given to several Objections made against the Usefulness of Conviction and Humiliation, to bring the Soul to Believe on Christ.

MY next Work is to Answer the Objections and Cavils which Men make against Conviction of, or Humiliation for Sin; not only as Needless, but Dangerous; and that to trouble Mens Consciences for Sin, is to drive them to Despair.

1. They call it a Doctrine teaching men to despair; and that the issue of such troubling tender Consciences is Despair.

2. That Ministers or others who on Mens Death-Beds endeavour to discover to Men that have been Civil or Formal, their Estates, are Miserable Comforters, as Job's Friends were, who would persuade him all was naught.

3. That Mens aim in urging this Work, as first necessary, is by troubling Men's Consciences, to bring them to their bent, and to make them willing to be of their Mind and Faction, to entertain willingly their Dictates and Opinions, and so to Tyrannize over their Consciences.

4. If Men Cavil not at this Work, yet they denie it, cannot see any Reason why it should be so necessary to the power of Godliness: If I acknowledge my self ever to have been a Sinner, and to have failings in all I do, having always believed in Christ, is not this (says they) enough?

Unto the end both to Answer these Cavils, as also to Vindicate the Doctrine the more, I propose these following Assertions.

1. That to bring Men to such Apprehensions as these, is not to bring Men to Despair, but the Contrary. To make this good, we will go over all the particulars.

1. To make Men apprehensive that Sin is the greatest Evil, is not to drive them to Despair: Paul (Rom. 7. 3.) saw it to be above measure sinful, when first Converted, and you can never be enough Convinced of it, nor so much as you should; tho' the sight of it scares you, and fears you; and this you may see without Despair; yea, where that sight is, that Soul shall never Despair; for it directly leads the Soul to Christ, and causeth it to see a Beauty in Grace. If indeed we taught, it were necessary to have such Horror and Anguish of Soul, as Spirita had,—or if we endeavoured to make impression of such deep Terrors from the Wrath of God, as Judas and Cain had, then you might have reason to think that this Work tended to Despair, tho' many have had them, and have not Despaired: But we profess that as Ravishing Joy is not necessary and Essential to Faith, so nor deep vexing Gashes and Impressions of Wrath are necessary to Humiliation, tho' they often accompany it; as the one is but the overflow of Faith; so the other of Humiliation: But as to see Christ the greatest good, is Essential to Faith, so to see Sin the greatest Evil, is Essential to Humiliation, and this is the main. The Damned indeed, who are plunged in Wrath in Hell, they Despair thro' Extremity and Everlastingness of Torment: But they are far from what we urge as requisite to Humiliation, from seeing the Evil of Sin in it self: And as far are they that see Sin as Sin, to be the greatest Evil, from Despair; as the Damned, that feel nothing but Wrath, are from true Humiliation.

And

Book 8 And 2. If some drops of Wrath, and fears of Damnation be mingled with this Cup, yet it is far from Despair, for it is a work of the Spirit of God, who before he becomes a Spirit of Adoption to save, becomes a Spirit of Bondage to cause Men to fear, Rom. 8. 15.

3. To bring Men to apprehend all their Former Estate to have been hitherto throughout Sinful and Damnable, and out of Christ, is not to bring Men to Despair.

For, 1st, To apprehend that a Man's Person is simply Damned, this indeed causeth Despair; but to apprehend that my Person is in a Damnable condition, and such as if I remain in, I cannot be saved, is far from Despair; for Paul apprehended himself once a Child of Wrath, as well as others, Eph. 2. 2.

2. To apprehend their condition to be thus, is not to believe that there is no Mercy reserved for them, or that they are not capable of it; if so, then indeed it would make Men Despair, but as Peter says, 1 Pet. 2. 10. which in time past had not obtained Mercy: So to apprehend that as long as I remain in this condition I do not obtain Mercy, is not to Despair, but to apprehend the truth: For as it follows there, Those who once had not obtained Mercy, have now obtained Mercy: And so we say he may obtain Mercy, whose condition is most Sinful.

Nor 3^d, To apprehend thy self out of Christ in the condition thou art in, is not to Despair: For then the Ephesians, when they saw their former condition to have been as Eph. 2. 12. it is said once it was, and who are Exhorted to remember that they were once without Christ, and without the Promises, should have Despaired: But there is yet hope left, for the greatest Sinners, that for time to come they may be in Christ, as those Ephesians after Conversion were. To apprehend that I am absolutely Excluded from the benefit of Christ's Death, that will cause Despair, but that Humiliation teacheth not. But to apprehend that it is not yet applied to me; that it is as yet to me as if Christ had not Died; and if I die in such a condition, I should die in my Sin; this is not to Despair.

4. Again, To apprehend my Estate to be helpless and hopeless, in regard of any Duties I have or can perform, or in respect of any power in me, or any Creature to help me, is not to despair. It is indeed to despair of thy self, and all the Creatures, and to have no confidence in the Flesh; and that is a good despair. But to despair, is to despair of God and his mercy for time to come; to say that he will never be merciful, never give me Faith and Christ. I may rightly make use of that in 2 Cor. 11. 8, 9, 10. to illustrate this; which tho' spoken in regard of despairing of his Natural Life; yet for the same reason there used, will hold good of this despair of Eternal Life: We were so pressed, says he, that we despaired of Life, and had the Sentence of Death in our selves so far as by any means of our selves we could use, we saw no way but Death: But, says Paul, it was that we should not trust in our selves, but in God that raiseth the Dead: That is, though we despaired yet it was not of God's power to help us, but we despaired in our selves. And thus God deals with men, and dealt with Paul about Eternal Life, he passed a Sentence of Death on him, and Paul saw no help in himself to believe, or come out of his misery; Rom. 7. 10. I was alive, but when the Commandment came, I died; that is, received the Sentence of Death, and saw no way to escape it by anything he could do: This was, that he should not trust in himself; but this was not that he should despair of God's shewing mercy for time to come.

5. Again, Understand aright whence despair ariseth, not from the greatness or hainousness of a man's sins, or insufficiency of a man to help himself; but from stubbornness of Heart not to go out to Christ for sufficiency in him; that is the work of Despair: Ye will not come to me that ye may be saved, as Christ told the Jews.

6. Again, Poor Souls that are in this condition, God hath an especial care of, to keep them from despair, when they have renounced themselves and their former Condition. Tho' their Souls be a Tohu and Bobu, and as that first matter, Gen. 1. 2. without form, and so of themselves would sink into nothing, yet

God's

God's Spirit broods upon it and upholds it: They shall fail between those two Rocks, Blockishness and Despair; so as the convinced Sinner shall be terrified, and yet God will keep him secretly. God hath an especial Eye upon such a Soul: Isa. 66. 2. To this Man will I look, to him that is poor and contrite, and trembleth at my Word; and I will so look to him, as he shall not Despair. Isa. 57. 16. I will not always contend, for the Spirit would fail before me, and I will not suffer it: Tho' he melts it, yet he will not suffer it, when melted, to boil over into the Fire, and to be cast down and spilt into Hell-Fire irrecoverably: No, but tho' he be shut up and sees no help by any thing he can do to get out, Gal. 3. 23. yet he opens a Door of hope, Hos. 2. 15. When the Soul is in the Valley of Achor, of Starving; when Sins fly about a Mans Ears, yet God opens there a Door of Hope. And again,

4. To let Men go on without knowing their Condition, is the way to Despair at last: For when Men come to Die, and then have their Eyes opened, and their Consciences convinced, to see their Estate out of Christ wholly sinful, and themselves not able to lay hold on Christ, or Believe, and that now they have but a few Hours to get Oyl and Grace in, then they Despair indeed. Isa. 51. 11. The Prophet shews that trusting in false Righteousness, sparks of their own kindling, will bring them to Despair in the end, they shall lie down in Sorrow: Whereas, a timely discovery of this, prevents it; gives them time to use their endeavour, and to wait on Christ. To lie at God's Feet, and refer thy self to him, to Damn or Save, is not to Despair, but argues the greatest Ingenuity that may be, and argues some trust and hope in God begun, that a Man will refer himself to him, as David did, 2 Sam. 15. 26. Here I am, if he thus say, I have no Delight in thee, let him do what seemeth good in his Eyes. And whom a Man would choose as an Umpire to cast his Life upon, and to be his Judge, he hath some Confidence in him; this is not Despair.

We come to the Second Cavil, viz. That the Issue of this work in many is Despair, and well nigh undoing themselves.

1. When the Jaylor was humbled for his Sins, he had well nigh kill'd himself; shall we condemn that work was then upon his Heart, that led him to Christ, and brought him to ask, What shall I do to be saved? No.

For 2. Such Stories and Conclusions are the Devils work, to discredit the Work of the Spirit; he enters upon God's Work to spoil it: As when the incestuous Corinthian was Excommunicated, 2 Cor. 2. which was an Ordinance to humble him; Satan was ready to take the Advantage to have swallowed him up of Sorrow, v. 7. And we are not Ignorant, says the Apostle, of his Devices, v. 11. Shall we Condemn that Ordinance because Satan might abuse it? And so shall we decry this work, of humiliation because Satan adds fearful Conclusions to it? There is no work of the Spirit, but he adds false Conclusions to it if he can. If the Spirit Comforts, he endeavours to make the Soul Presumptuous: If he casts into Bondage only, the Devil labours to cast into Despair: But as we may not condemn Assurance, because sometimes it hath such an issue; so, nor Humiliation.

3. If any do Miscarry, they are but such as would ever have Perished whatever course in Preaching had been held.

The Third Cavil is, That when we labour to Humble Men, our aim is only to bring them to our Bent, and so impose on them what we please.

I Answer 1st, Then Peter might be charged with the same, when he endeavoured to humble the Jews for their Sin in Crucifying Christ; when he brought them to such a pass, that they being pricked in their Hearts, Cry out, Men and Brethren, what shall we do to be Saved? Acts 2. 37. But Peter's aim was orderly to bring them to sound Repentance, and to Believe in Christ; and that is all that we aim at also, and all the remedy we prescribe. Mark 16. 15. Christ bids them Preach, that he that Believes not, shall be Damned; one part of their Office was to Humble Men, and Discover their Estates out of Christ; and to what End? Mat. 28. 19. you shall find it was to make them Disciples, as the Word signifies; but of whom? Not of themselves, but of Christ; and to bring them to universal obedience, which without this work they will never come to: Teaching them to do whatever I have commanded, v. 20. And as Christ's promise is to be with us to the end of the World, so this must be our course to the end of the World.

And 2dly. If we did indeed, as the Friars of old, who Preached the Law, and stinging mens Consciences, took the advantage of it, to bring the People to Auricular Confession, and get their secret sins out, and so make them obnoxious to them, and then took money for Pardons and Absolutions; and set them about building this Convent and that Convent, for satisfaction: If we did it thus to make a gain of you, as Paul says, 2 Cor. 12. 17. You might suspect us in it. But we speak before God in Christ, we do all things for your edifying, as Paul says, v. 19. It is to set up Christ in your Hearts, that we endeavour to humble you; that you may see your need of him; and that you may see your own Emptiness and his Fulness, to make him precious to you, and to drive your Souls to him, and to bring every thought into the Obedience of Christ; to make you sensible of sin, that you may make Conscience of it, and know what Christ hath done for you. And if the Duties that are required be not Duty, the sins discovered be not proved to be sins, your Humiliation will not bring you to make conscience of them: It is our Masters advantage, and your Edifying, is our Aim; we seek not yours, but you.

And 3dly, If we were minded to gain a party out of the World, and to gain your Ear, it were a better course to sooth you up in a good opinion of your Estates, to sew Pillows under your Elbows, and cry Peace, Peace, when there is no Peace, as the false Prophets did.* But to go about to persuade men that their Estates are bad, and to urge a necessity of apprehending it such, this is the way to exasperate men: This provoked the Pharisees against Christ; brought the World about Paul's Ears, as Paul says, Gal. 1. Do we persuade men or God? That is for God. This Doctrine crosseth the World, sets up God; and gains but few; for men will and do stand out; and where one is throughly humbled, thousands presume, and will do so.

* It is Augustine's Argument, libro de Pastoribus, Tom. 9. p. 1333. Absit ut dicamus vobis vivite ut vultis securi estote Deus neminem perdit: Tantummodo Fidem Christianam tenete; non perdit ille quod redemit. Hæc si dixerimus Congregabimus Turbas ampliores & si sint quidam qui nos sentiunt hoc dicentes non recte sapere paucos offendimus sed multitudinem conciliamus.

For indeed 4thly, It is a mighty work of the Spirit to convince. And so when the Apostles were sent out, the Spirit is promised, and he shall convince the World of sin, John 16. 8. We could never do it, and the Devil he would never trouble men, for he keeps all in peace, and as I said, enters upon the Spirit's work to spoil it: So of all projects and Courses, this were the vainest, if it were not God's way, and he did not go forth with us in it.

And whereas 5thly, men complain that such are miserable Comforters to convince, and humble men for Sin, like Job's Friends, and that it is cruelty in men to deal so with poor Souls.

1. Consider, That such a Comforter is the Holy Ghost himself. John 16. He is promised to come as a Comforter; and what should he do for to comfort? He should convince the World of sin, because they believe not in me: For this makes way for comfort. And so Rom. 8. 15. Ere he becomes the Spirit of Adoption, he becomes a Spirit of Bondage; for none else are fit for comfort but those that are broken, Isa. 61. 1, 2, 3. The Spirit is upon me to preach glad Tidings to the meek, and comfort those that mourn, &c.

And 2dly. It is cruelty indeed to break the bruised Reed, to smite him whom God hath smitten, as David says; to break him in peices whose Bones are broken: But if mens Joynts are set wrong, it is not cruelty to break them in peices, for else they cannot be set right.

CHAP. VI.

Of the last Part of our Conversion, which is our turning from our Evil Thoughts, and Ways unto God.

HOLINESS in the Heart, is the main and ultimate Birth brought forth in Regeneration: And to make us partakers of Gods Holiness, is the Summ and Scope of all towards us, both of this Election (Eph. 1.) and of all his dealings afterwards. Heb. 12. 10. And without which (verse 14.) no Man shall see God. Now the Essential Holiness that is in God, we cannot be partakers of, neither by Imputation, as Ostander Dreamed, much less by real Transubstantiation to be Goded with God, as some have arrogantly Asserted: We can be no otherwise Partakers of it than in the Image thereof (Eph. 4. 25.) which after God (as a Pattern or Prototype) is Created in Righteousness and true Holiness. You have the same Col. 1. 10. After the Image of him that Created him.

Now Man being fallen, and having lost this Image which was at the first immediately given, without any instrumental means then used by him to stamp it on the Soul, God was pleased, in restoring and renewing this Image in Mans Heart a second time, to set up mediate Instruments that should have his Image stampd upon them first; and by the means thereof to Communicate to us this Holiness first imparted to those. Now these Patterns or middle Instruments on which God hath first stampd his Holiness; are, 1. His Word or Law Evangelized. 2. The Man Christ Jesus: And both in this respect are termed ἡ ἀρχὴ the Word of God: The First, viz. Gods Word, bearing a Doctrinal Image of Gods Holiness, the other, viz. Christ, being a Living, Transcendant Image of it. Therefore you shall find in the Scriptures of the New Testament our Sanctification or Holiness set out to us, 1. By a Change, or Conformity in the Heart to the written Word, and whole Law of God, Rom. 6. 17. Heb. 10. 16. Jam. 1. 21. And 2dly, It is set forth by a Conforming, or changing the Heart into the Image of Christ, 2 Cor. 3. 18. But we all with open Face beholding, as in a Glass, the Glory of the Lord, are changed into the same Image, from Glory to Glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord.

Now we must know that a real Conformity to the Word and Law of God, is true saving Holiness and Sanctification, as a Conformity to Christ in his Death, Resurrection, and Ascension; and though all these are never separate each from the other, yet the first is more discerned by us at first than the latter. Many in Regeneration at first find a suitability in their Hearts to the Duties and Rules of the Word, whatever they know of it, when yet they are ignorant of, or at least attend not unto, that Holiness in them as it is the Image of Christ in his Death and Resurrection. And even that other is true Holiness, and whoever hath it shall be saved: For which my Ground is in Heb. 10. 14, 15, 16. For by one Offering he hath perfected for ever them that are Sanctified. Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a Witness to us: For after that he hath said before, This is the Covenant that I will make with them, after those daies, saith the Lord; I will put my Laws into their Hearts, and in their Minds will I Write them. Where we see the Sanctification of those Christ hath for ever perfected, and whose Sins are forgiven, are set out by their having the Law written in their Hearts, &c. And therefore Paul for the comfort and support of weak Believers doth in his own Person (Rom. 7.) set forth the Holiness ness of a Believer, as it is the Law of God Written in the Heart, which (v. 23.) he termeth the Law of the Mind, by which he consents to the Spiritual Law of God in the inner Man. v. 22. which Law (v. 25.) he serveth, and would fain Obey, and have no other in his Mind, even then, when with the Flesh he serves the Law of Sin. So then this is true Sanctification, though not the total Ratio, or the whole Notion of a Christians Sanctification, who also is changed into a more Glorious Image of Christ, which at least is as the Varnish to this other, Conformity to the Word, as the ground-work of it. And accordingly it is made part of the Covenant of Grace in difference from the old Covenant, that the Law is written in the Heart, Heb. 8. 9, 10. Not according to the Covenant that I made with their Fathers, in the Day that I took them by the hand, to lead them out of the Land Ægypt; because they continued not in my Covenant, and I regarded them not, saith the Lord. For this is the Covenant that I will make with the House of Israel, after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my Laws into their Mind, and write them in their Hearts, and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a People. And David's instance in that Medal of a Gracious Heart, and the Copy of his own (Psal. 119. throughout) shews how it stood pointed to the Law of God. And answerably it is the general Description of the Saints in the Old Testament, who were taken into the Covenant of Grace, Isa. 51. 7. The People in whose Heart is my Law; yea, of Christ, and by Christ, it is said, (Psal. 40.) Thy Law is in my Heart.

For though this Holiness be legal, in respect of the Materials and Pattern of it, the Law of God, yet it is not legal in respect of the Subject or state of the Person that hath it begun, or in respect of the Tenure of the Covenant, or of the Virtue efficient that wrought it. For the Person that hath it, is the Subject of the Covenant of Grace, belongs to that Division, and Jurisdiction, and hath it wrought in him by vertue of Christs Death and Resurrection, tho' as yet he picks not out, in his own discerning, that this is the Image of Christ in him.

Now those Metaphors, or Similitudes which the Holy Ghost hath chosen forth to express that change of Heart, as it is an inward Conformity to the Law and Word of God, are especially Three; 1. Casting the Heart as in a Mold into the same Image of Spiritual Holiness, that is stampt on, and found in the Word. 2. Engrafting the Word on the Heart, and so changing the Stock (the Heart) into the same Nature. 3. Writing the Law in the Heart. All which we have implied in Rom. 6. 17. But ye have obeyed from the Heart that form of Doctrine into which ye were delivered.

The words in the Greek are εις ον παρεδωθητε τυπον διδασκεις, That form of Doctrine into which ye were delivered: And so out of the Greek the Margent varies 'em.

The Substance of his Comparison comes to this, that their Hearts having been first, in the inward inclinations and dispositions of it, framed and changed into what the Word requires, they then obeyed the same Word from the Heart naturally, willingly, and the Commandments were not grievous, because the Heart was framed and molded thereunto. The Heart must be made good, ere Men can obey from the Heart; and to this end he elegantly first compares the Doctrine of Law and Gospel delivered them, unto a Pattern or Sampler, which having in their Eye, they framed and squared their Actings and Doings unto it. And he Secondly compares the same Doctrine unto a Mold or Matrix, into which Metals being delivered, have the same figure or form left on them, which the Mold it self had, and this is spoken in respect of their Hearts. Therefore this word τυπος is a common word, and will serve both these purposes and aims, both which in common signifies the express Image, Effigies, Form, or first Draught of a thing unto which another is to be Framed or Fashioned; whether it be in a Mold into which Metals or Clay is Cast, and so have the same stamp or print upon them; as we see in Goldsmiths Work and other Trades (and this suits to the stamp in their Hearts wrought thereby) or whether it be after a Copy, Pattern, or Sampler, which one having in his view before him, frames and fashions his work unto it, as Moses framed all things according to the Pattern in the Mount. And this suits the Expression pression of their obedience from the Heart; and this he clearly intends, for the words are, eis ov παραδόντες, into which ye were delivered, rather than, which was delivered you; as our Translation was pleased to render it. Other Arts and Sciences are said to be nobis tradite, delivered to us; but of this Doctrine 'tis said, that we are delivered unto it, to be framed and conformed to it. And this is that which I have afore me, that the work of Sanctification is a work framing and casting the Heart it self into the Word of God: (as Metals use to be in a Mold) So that the Heart is made of the same Stamp and Disposition with the Word. This Similitude being opened from the Scriptures, will afford some light unto us. There are four things for the opening of it.

I. That the Word and Law of God evangelized, may truly be compared to such a Mold.

II. That our Hearts must be fashioned unto it ere they can be saved.

III. I shall shew the way how the Heart is molded to it.

IV. I shall explain the work it self, what it is to have the Heart truly molded to it.

I. The Word may truly be compared to such a Mold: A Mold (you know) is an Instrument that hath the representation or shape of something engraven in it, to the end to leave the same stamp and fashion upon the things that are cast in it. Now such an Instrument hath God appointed his Word to be: For

1. It hath the representation of his Holiness in it: For whereas Man had ras'd and defaced that Image or Likeness to God in Holiness and Righteousness, wherein he was at first created; and so that living Copy of the Law was lost (that written in Mens Hearts by Nature, being imperfect, and but some Footsteps of some outward parts of this outward Letter of the Law remaining) God therefore writ out the Copy of that Image in his most holy Word: That as Adam's Heart had then the perfect Image of God; so this Doctrine hath that absolute Form upon it now. And therefore this Law is called Holy and Righteous, which are the Attributes of God himself, and which are the parts of God's Image, whereof it consists, Eph. 4.22. Adam was the real Image, this the verbal; but both have the same Form, God being the Architype of both.

2. It hath not this Image on it, only for man to look on, and so to see the Picture of his Estate in Innocency, and bewail it as now lost (as James says of a negligent Hearer of the Word, that he beholds his Face therein as in a Glass, for the present, but forgets it) no, but God hath appointed it in the vertue of the Gospel to be, as the common standing Mold, instrumental thro' the Knowledge of it, to renew that his Image again in Man, and to cast all his Peoples Hearts into it. That whereas there are but two especial ways more eminent to work the Image of any thing in another solidly and substantially; the one by way of Engraving or Sculpture, by the hand of some Artificer, on some Stone, Metal, or other Material: The other by way of casting Metals or Plaister into a Mold, so as they are fashion'd unto the Figure of it, without losing any of their materials. Now God having once at first created his Image on man's Heart by way of engraving, as by his own Finger, and the Soul having now lost that Image, and being changed into another; namely, that of sin and wickedness, (the Image of Satan) God therefore does now rather take this second course, and new casts the Heart again, using the Artifice of his Spirit, and his Word is as the instrumental cause or mold, bearing that former Image, and fashioning the Heart thereunto.

II. Let us see why the Heart must needs be thus new cast in such a Mold; the Reasons of it are,

1. Because we are by nature cast into the Devils Image. For if we would draw the Devils Picture, we would draw Pride, and Malice, Revenge, Lying, and Murther, and all sinful Dispositions. Now Adam's Sin by its vertue does at our first Birth mold us into this Image; so says David, Psal. 51.

5. I was shapen in Iniquity, formatus, as Immins and others read it. All the Limbs of Sin are fashioned in our Hearts, and our Hearts to them, Gen. 6. 5. The Fiction, or Fashion, or Frame of the Heart is evil, as the word signifies. And we coming thus into the World with this shape on us, and thus cast, our Hearts are also daily more hardned in this sinful fashion by the examples, of men. Therefore we are said to live to the lusts of men, 1 Pet. 4. 2. That is, we apply our selves and our desires unto the common sin of others, suffering them to mold us also; which the Apostle thus expresseth, Living according to the Course of the World, Eph. 2. 1. And the same Apostle says, Rom. 12. 2. Fashione not your selves to the World, μη συχημαλιζεθε, ne accommodetis vos ad hujus Seculi figuram, to the figure or fashion of this World, so Erasmus paraphraseth it. Seeing therefore you are thus by Nature cast into a sinful frame, and are more and more in that Estate molded by the fashion and mold of others bad Examples: Upon that account the Apostle there requires a change, or metamorphosis μεταμορφωθε, that is, get the form and fashion of your Hearts altered; for so the word signifies, a transforming or changing of a thing from one form to another. Mens Hearts that are shaped like to Devils (the Lusts of your Father (says Christ) you will do) being cast anew in the Word, are made Partakers of the Divine Nature, 2 Pet. 1. 4. So that by it we come to be like to God, and have his Image again renewed in us, which that mold bears; without which Image of Holiness thus imprinted by the Word upon our Hearts, we can never come to receive Happiness from him.

Limbs

2. Reason 2. Unless our Hearts be thus new molded, we remain Vessels of Dishonour, and not fit for our Masters Service. What is it that chiefly makes one Vessel differ from another, but the fashion of it? You have Vessels made of the same matter, whereof one, because it is cast in the mold and fashion of a baser Utensil, is therefore used about dishonourable Employments. But now another that is cast in another, Mold, though of the same Metal, is served up to the Table, and used in honourable Services. Nothing puts a difference between these two, except the fashion, that they are cast in a several Mold. This is part of the Scope of the Apostles comparison, 2 Tim. 2. 20, 21. In a great House, there are some Vessels of honour, and some of dishonour. Now the Vessels of Honour are described to be such as are sanctified and prepared to every good work; and meet for the Masters use. Fitness to be employed in God's Service, is that which makes any one to be a Vessel of Honour; and that fitness it hath, is from its being sanctified, which Sanctification is a new casting of it, and a giving the Heart new Dispositions, such as the Word requires. Until therefore the Word hath changed thy Heart, thou art a Vessel of dishonour: Thou mayst indeed be gilt over with Civility and formal Profession; but till thy fashion be altered, that is, the frame of thy inward Parts, thou remainest a Vessel of dishonour, and fit for nought but wrath: Rom. 9. 22. These reasons (you see) are suited to the Expression or Similitude used in the Text.

III. In the third place, I will shew you how this is done and wrought, so far as this Metaphor will, out of the Scripture, give us light.

1. God begins to work by Humiliation and Contrition, and breaks the Heart all in pieces by the Word. A Founder that hath a Statue or Image to make of some hard Metal that hath a contrary form on it (as suppose an Horse to be cast into a mans Shape) will first knock that Metal in pieces. And so had our Hearts need be dealt withal; they not only bearing the Image of the Devil, but that Image being seated in our inward parts, and not only in the Superficies or Outside, (as artificial forms are) yea, and being as Brass and Iron, hardned in that fashion, Isa. 48. 4. I know thou'art obstinate, thy Neck is as an Iron Sinew, and thy Brow as Brass. So that the Heart will not yield or apply it self to the fashion and mold of the Word. Ministers may preach to you long enough, and your Hearts still retain the same dispositions, because they are not broken with a sense of your sinful Estate; and the Curse due unto it; For the Heart is Enmity against God, and cannot be subject to God, Rom. 8. 7. It will not yield to the Mold, therefore it must first be broken.

broken. Hence in Jer. 23. 29. The Prophet compares the word to a Hammer that breaks the rocky Hearts of men in peices.

Yet 2. That is not enough, for it must be melted also; therefore it is not only a sense of your misery that will prepare you for this new molding, but a melting also. Hence, as the Word is like a Hammer to break your Hearts, so it is like Fire to dissolve your Hearts, and make them soft and pliable, and so fit to take any Impression, Thus Jer. 23. 29. and Thus 2 Chron. 34. 27. Josiah's Heart was melted, and became tender at the reading of the Law. And this Similitude the Prophet alludes to, when shewing the inefficaciousness of the Word upon their rebellious Spirits, not praying unto Conversion; he says, The Bellows are burnt, the Founder melteth (or endeavours to melt their Hearts) in vain. Reprobate Silver shall men call them. Jer. 6. 30. And this melting of the Heart thus, contains two Things.

1. It imports the separating the corrupt Dispositions and Lusts of it (as the dross and scum useth to be in the melting of Metals) which before were blinded with it, Their dross, till then, remaining within them, as the Prophet speaks. But now he purgeth it from the midst of them, by the Spirit of burning, Isa 4. 4. or (as it is in Mal. 3. 3.) They are purified as Gold is purified: The very inward dispositions to sin being mourned for, complained of, hated, and cast out with loathing.

2. And as this melting fetcheth out the dross, so 2dly. It softneth the good Metal; it makes all the Faculties pliable, and apt to receive the impressions of the Word with meekness, as James speaks of receiving the Word. It maketh it a meek Heart, an Heart of such a Temper, as will be content to do any thing that God shall command. It can suffer exhortation, and suffer reproof Heb. 13. 23. It suffers the Word to frame it which way it will, and to that end urgeth it, presseth it, stamps it upon it self again and again in private, till an indelible impression be made; and till it finds the same dispositions wrought to obedience, which the Word requires.

3. This Transformation is done by the intervention of Knowledge or Faith. The Mind being enabled to conceive what is that good, perfect, and acceptable Will of God, and so approving of it as good for him; the whole man is thereby fashioned: So (Rom. 12. 2.) we are said to be transformed by the renewing of our Minds, to prove what is that good, perfect, and acceptable Will of God. And (Col. 3. 10.) The Image of God is said to be renewed by Knowledge. For we are not wrought on as a piece of dead Clay, but according to the nature of the Soul, which being an understanding Creature, the Heart is wrought upon by means of it. Faith believing, approving, applying the Word as good, the Will and Affections are presently fashioned to it, and so there is a Change wrought in the whole man.

IV. Now Fourthly. For the work it self, if it be askt what this Transformation of the Heart into the Word is: I answer, It is a universal frame and temper of all the Faculties of the Soul; whereby each, in their proportion, are respectively made suitable to the word in their inward several dispositions, and prepared and fitted to do what ever the Word commands.

1. It is a Change, though not of the substance or faculties of the Soul, yet of the temper, frame, and disposition of it. For a thing molded remains the same Metal it was before, only the frame and fashion of it is altered; and yet the alteration of that fashion works a great change in it, both in it's Name and Nature. And the Metal that once was a Dish being turn'd into a Pot, hath a new Name given it; and in genere artificialium the Spirit of it is altered: So when a man's Heart is changed by the Word, though the same Nature of man remain in him still, yet he receives a new name (Rev. 3. 12.) and is a new man; and so called, because the fashion of his Heart is altered; and in genere Spiritualium, he is another man: Differing from what he was before.

2. By this change all the Faculties are made suitable to the Word. Even as you see the Mold and the thing molded fit one another, as the Seal and the Wax do so too; so the Heart which before was Enmity to every Commandment, now is molded in and by the Word. It delights in the Law according to the inner Man, and finds an agreeableness between the Law and its own Disposition, there being answerable Dispositions wrought in all the Faculties of the Soul to what the Word requires. If God saies, Fear me: The Heart Answers, I desire to fear thy Name. (As 'tis said of them Nehem. 1. 11. If the Word saies, Keep the Sabbath, the Heart can say, The Sabbath is my Delight. Isa. 58. 14. If the Law saies, Love the Brethren, why the Heart finds an instinct begotten in it self to do it (as there is in Birds to love their young) thus Believers are said to be taught of God to love one another, 1 Thes. 4. 9.

3. There is a change in all the Faculties according to their several Tendencies and Poyfes.

1. There is a Change in the Understanding or Judgment, and when it is thus changed, there will be an Ability δοκιμαζειν, to try what is the acceptable Will of God, to Judge and know how he ought acceptably to be served. Such a renewed mind is quick in the Fear of the Lord. (Isa. 11. 2.) to Try it as the Touchstone doth Gold, and also to consent to the Law, that it is good, and good for him (Rom. 7.) and to esteem every Commandment concerning all things as right (Psal. 119. 128.) and to set an high price on every Ordinance, and every Duty, as being matters of great moment. And so it is ready likewise to disallow and hate every false way; as you have it expressed in the aforesaid Psalms, and also in Rom. 7.

2. The Print of this Mold in the Conscience will be a quick vigorous Light, so as the Motives that are Spiritual, and for the Glory of God, shall naturally rise up in the Mind, and move the Heart, 1 Pet. 5. 2. Feed the Flock, not for Lucre, &c. but of a ready mind.

3. The stamp of it in the Will, will be a Propensity to choose the things that please God, (as it is said of those Eunuchs, Isa. 56. 4.) those things that most of all please God, will be most of all pleasing to an Holy Soul too, and he will walk in them to choose. The Will being thus Transformed, the Mind needs not be wrought off by selfish ends unto holy Duties, but will be willing (as the Apostles Phrase is, 1 Pet. 5. 2.) in a ready mind to feed the Flock. Taking care for them naturally (as Paul says Phil. 2. 20.) even as a Nurse for the Child. And this Paul makes to be more than Obedience it self, when the Heart is thus framed (2 Cor. 8. 10. Not only to do, but to be willing. Also part of this stamp and impresson lies in the Will's having a strong bent and byass upon it, forcibly carrying it in all the turnings of a Mans Life towards the Commandment, and Obedience unto it, and causing the Will to encline to, and follow the Command, and likewise to stick unto it: Even as the Iron doth move with, follow, and apply it self to the Load-stone. I have Sworn, and I will perform it, says David, Psal. 119. 106.

4. So answerably this stamp of Inward Holiness is set on the Affections when every Affection, according to the nature of it, is exercised in and about the Law, and the things thereof. Even Sorrow is after a Godly sort, for the breach thereof, and for Sin as committed against an Holy God. Also hatred is rais'd against the things therein forbidden, and a love to the things Commanded, and joy in the performance. See Psal. 119. through out, where all sorts of such Affections as these towards the Law of God are recorded. Thus when every faculty is seasoned with a new disposition towards Gods Precepts, and the obeying of them; when there is an Universal Conformity of all Faculties according to their several kinds and offices, and also their subordinations one to another, with a natural fitness and disposedness unto what the Law requires, then is the Heart molded in the Word.

4. There is a preparedness unto all Duties revealed in the Word: and a facile readiness to be employed in them: So that (as is said 2 Chron. 30. 19.) the whole Heart is prepared for every Duty. And this the Similitude implies; for it is the end of casting Metals into this, or that form, that they may be serviceable to such or such an use. Now when the Soul is cast into such a frame, that the Heart is as a vessel meet and prepared for the Masters use (as 'tis said 2 Tim. 2. 21.) then it may be said to be molded in the Word: Even when all the powers and faculties of the Soul are become Weapons of Righteousness (as the Apostles other Similitude in this Chapter is) as being made on purpose for Righteous Uses. And it is the fashion in a Weapon that gives it the fitness for such an use, as a Spade by reason of the fashion of it is fit to dig the Earth but not to cut with; a Bowl to drink in, and a Sword to fight with. Not but that a Godly Man's Heart may at some times be dulled, but still as in a Weapon there is an habitual fitness which it hath from the fashion of it, as in a Sword or Knife to cut; and 2dly, There is an actual fitness, namely an Edge, which though it be blunted, yet the habitual fitness is not taken away, so it is in a Godly Man's Heart, though the frame and fashion of it still remains the same. Thus there is an habitual preparedness to good Duties, yet the Edge and actual Vigour may be wanting, till it be whetted again, (Deut. 6. 7.) his Heart may be hackt, and battered, and so at the present made unfit, yet the fashion is still the same, and one good prayer, or Sermon whets it again, and brings it's Edge again. Now Wicked Men want both these fitnesses. Indeed in the Furnace they will bow to any fashion (as the Heart of Saul and of Pharaoh did) but when they are once out of it, they will return to their own frame again.

5. This inward stamp of Holiness is both an Universal, and proportionable impression upon the Heart, which the mold of the Word leaves upon it.

1. It is Universal. There is no small scratch, or rase in the Mold, but it will appear in the thing cast in it: Therefore Civil Men that have impressions of the second Table, and few or none of the first, were never truly molded in the Word.

2. It is proportionable. Look what Cuts and Engravings are deepest in the Mold, these will make the highest and fairest Embossments on the things cast in them, the very smallest and shallowest being visible too: So it is with one Converted by the Word, and who hath his Heart molded in it. The stamps of those Duties which God most of all requires of him in his particular and general Calling, will be most eminent upon his Heart. The great things of the Law will be the great desires of his Heart to fulfil, and not be taken up about Mint and Cummin only, Mat. 22. 27.

The Second Similitude. The Holy God is pleased to use to express the change of the Heart into the Word and Law of God, is this of Engrafting the Word upon the Heart, as a Graffe on a Stock, with ability to save and change it, James. 1. 21. Wherefore lay apart all Filthiness, and Superfluity of Naughtiness, and receive with Meekness the engrafted Word which is able to save your Souls. I must first fix the Interpretation, because this Translation is Controverted by some Interpreters, although not many.

1. Some say that the word ἐμπεφυγός imports that which is natural, and is so far from signifying the engrafted word, that it is opposed thereto, so natural Branches are to be engrafted, Rom. 11. And the Greek Scholiast kept so close to that meaning, that he plainly interprets the engrafted Word here to be the natural light of Reason. But this Interpretation is manifestly false. For 1. This Word is to be received, and therefore is not by Nature, nor any thing natural. And 2dly, It is said to be able to save our Souls, which the light of Nature is not.

Book 8 2. Others would have the word of God called ἐμφυτος, in this Sense, that it is Native and Genuine, which signification is opposed unto, what is Artificial, Affected, Adulterate or Counterfeit: As if you should call a true Vertue ἐμφυτή ἀρετή, that is, a genuine true Vertue, not acted or counterfeited. And so ἐμφυτος λόγος would signifie the pure naked Word in it's simplicity, unmixed, unadulterate with man's inventions; and so it would be all one (as they urge it) with what this same Apostle had call'd it, the Word of Truth. v. 18. with the Word of Truth he begat you. For God useth not falshood nor error to beget men to himself. And I confess, I was tempted to this interpretation, by paralleling it with 1 Pet. 2. 2. where he exhorts them to desire the sincere milk of the Word; ἀδολον λόγον without deceit, but as it comes from the Dug, not mixt with Medicines or Waters. The like to which also you have So 2 Cor. 2. 17. And that which further strengthens it is, That in the other Words and Phrases, in coherence with these in either places, both in Peter and James, there seems to be a parallel, and therefore in this also: Both James and Peter using the same words before in either. The one says, Laying aside all naughtiness receive this Word; the other says, Laying aside all superfluity of naughtiness, desire the sincere milk of the Word. And thus the meaning of James's exhortation should be as if he had said, You that were begotten at first by the Word of Truth, (that is, the sincere Word,) take heed you receive that only which is the True, Pure, and genuine Word of Truth; as that which is only able to save your Souls: For as it was that pure Word which begat you at first, so that alone must build you up to Life.

But that which I have to say concerning this Interpretation is,

1. That it is not called the Word of Truth (Jam. 1. v. 18.) in opposition to Error and Falshood, so much as by way of eminency, as it is thus call'd too, Eph. 1. 13. The Word of Truth, the Gospel of your Salvation. It is too low an Epithet to say it is stiled the Word of Truth in opposition to what is erroneous, feigned, and false, or devised, for that is but what is common with it to every Philosophical Truth: But it is so called for the eminency of Truth in it. With which also that Elogium of Paul concurreth, This is a faithful Saying, worthy of all acceptation.

2. When ever the word ἐμφυτος is used to signifie that which is genuine in their sense, yet then withal it is applied to, and made the Epithet of some inward Quality, or Disposition of the mind of man which is inbred, and inherent therein, as when it is applied to vertues and the like. And so according to this meaning of it, if we would suppose the Word of God were termed ἐμφυτος, as noting forth Purity, Sincerity, or Truth of it, yet still withal it would connote and import this other interpretation also; namely, inherent or inbred, in our Hearts and Minds or that which is ordeined to be inwrought, or engrafted in us.

I come therefore to the 3^d and most usual Interpretation, which our Translators have chosen, namely, that it signifies the engrafted, or rather engraftable Word: (for it is nomen verbale, not Participium) That is, it is that Word, whose end use, intent, and ordination by God, is to be engrafted, inbred, and ingenerated into the Souls of men, and is to be received to that end. And so it is a metaphorical allusion to Seed or a Plant that is sown, ingrafted or inoculated either in Ground, or into a Stock, and especially the Latter. That look, as the word συνμυτός, used Rom. 6. 5. which is a kin to this, and of the same Stock (as I may so speak) and which, as there used, signifies planted together; being there spoken of Christ and his Members, being planted together in one, as two Twigs growing, or set in one common Stock becoming and growing up into one Tree: So ἐμφυτος here spoken of the Word of God, signifies planted, or plantable within us, these two words differing but in this, that the word there is a Compound with συν, that is, together with, but this here is compounded with εν or in, and so the one signifies grafted, or planted together one with another. This other here signifies planted in: The first being spoken of Christ and us, and our being planted together in one; this Latter being spoken of the Word of God as planted, or to be planted in our Hearts.

Obj. But some urge that this Interpretation cannot stand, because the same word cannot signifie both what is natural, and what is engrafted too, for these two are opposed, Rom. 11. 17. 21. The natural Branches are opposed to those those grafted in. Now it is evident (say they) that the word ἐμφυτός doth signify (at least sometimes) that which is Natural.

Answer 1. But First. I answer, The word in Rom. 11. used for engrafted, is not ἐμφυτός, but another word; and so prejudgeth not this Sanctification here.

Answer 2. The word ἐμφυτός in common imports whatsoever is inbred and seated in the Inwards, whether it be by Nature, or otherwise set in, so as that it becomes as Nature. And thus the Latin word insitum answers to it in the like large signification; or as we say in English, implanted in one, whereby we express, not only what hath been by Nature, but as well what otherwise is inwrought, though acquired by Education, Breeding, or habitual Custom. So then this word, though upon other occasions, it may be used for what is originally natural, and inbred by Nature; yet withal, it still allows us that other signification of what is inwrought by an ingrafture, or otherwise acquired. In the Book of Wisdom (Chap. 12. v. 10.) μίσος ἐμφυτόν, is put to signify an inbred Hatred, or Grudge, not that which was by Nature, which we call an Antipathy; but that which had been inbred by Injuries, and yet was so deeply rooted, that it is as if it were natural. And thus, ἐμφύσιον is all one with ἐνδεδυότος, that is, seated in the Heart: So that this word ἐμφυτός may well bear either Sense.

Even as σύμπεφυτος (which is of the same Kindred) imports both engrafted with another: And with all what is together in Nature with another Simul Naturā. See Stephanus in σύνουθενω.

This being cleared, it is evident that the Apostle James's comparison and allusion is to liken the Word to Seed cast into the Earth, or to a graft or more noble Plant set into a Stock, being ordained to take root, or to be inoculated and made co-natural with, and so to bear fruit in the Heart according to it's Kind; which Interpretation is most natural to this place.

For, 1. This Interpretation excludes not that other of being natural, taking it in respect of what the Word doth consequenter, and in the Event become to the Heart by it's ingrafture; for thereby it doth become natural and inbred in, and genuine to the Heart, and as a new Nature.

2. It agrees in this sense with the coherence and scope of the Apostle, and his foregoing Passages, For

1. Whereas he had declared (v. 18.) how they had been begotten by the Word as of Seed (which is formed into, and becomes the Substance of the new Creature) Now in this 21st verse, he exhorts them to receive this Word they had been thus begotten by, so as to grow up more and more, and to bring forth Fruit; which he expresseth by being Doers of the Word, in the following 22 verse. Only in carrying on of this Exhortation, he takes up this other Metaphor, as genuine to this Scope, as that other of begetting was to the former; namely, comparing the same Word of God, in that respect, unto Seed sown in a Soil, or to a Graft ingrafted on a Stock, which by becoming one nature with our Hearts, and by changing the stock thereof into it's own Nature, doth increase our Graces in us more and more, and causeth us to bring forth fruit, which he termeth doing of the Word. And this is withal a better parallel with that place of Peter forementioned, and his Scope, then the former Interpretation. For even just thus, Peter had spoken of the Word first, as the means of begetting us (Chap. 1. 23.) Being born again, not of corruptible Seed, by the Word of God. And then (Chap. 2. v. 2.) he exhorts them under a new metaphor, as new-born Babes to desire that Word as Milk to grow thereby: Even as we have the Like.

2. He had indeed begun, and laid a foundation for this very Allusion in v. 18. in stiling Believers, and men begotten again, the first fruits of God's Creation, as ordained so to be after Regeneration. He begat us (says he) that we should be a kind of first fruits of his Creation (Even as 1 Cor. 15. 23. Christ is termed the first fruits of them that sleep) alluding to Jer. 2. 3. Israel is Holiness to the Lord, the first fruits of his Increase. They are then begotten to that end, that in their future Course of Life themselves, and all their Actions might be consecrated to God as the first fruits of the Creation (Holiness in one man being more to God than all the Creation without it.) Now then in answer to, and prosecution of this allusion there begun, to the end, to exhort them to accomplish this, what could be more proper than to make use of this new Book 8 Comparison of the Word of God unto a Graft ordained to be engrafted on their Hearts; and accordingly to exhort them to receive it as such into their Souls, unto the end that they might in the sequel of their Lives be consecrated wholly to God, in bringing forth fruits to be offered up unto God, as the first fruits were.

3. The very words here used, Receive, and Receive with Meekness, these words comply evidently with that sense of engrafting, rather than any other. The Phrase to Receive, is proper thereto; for we say the stock receives the Graft as let into it, and the words with Meekness, are added, for it is received into such a stock, Mans Heart, as hath the life of Sense in it: And also because that in order to this receiving the word by an engrafture, the Corruption of the Heart is to be parted with, yea, and cut off, as the old Top is, to make way for the new graft: He might well add with Meekness, for thus to cut off Lusts is painful and troublesome; Christ tells us it is to cut off Members, to cut off Hands, and pull out Eyes, and this Tree to be lopt is the Heart of a Man.

4. Other Scriptures do fall in, to confirm this Metaphor (here used) of the Engrafture, or Sowing the word of God in our Hearts, in order to the bringing forth of Fruit in us. 1 Cor. 3. 9. You are Gods Husbandry. And we are Labourers together with God: Which Work or Labour is in the verses aforegoing said to be Planting and Watering. v. 6, 7. again (John 15. 16.) Christ sending forth his Disciples to Preach the Word, and to Convert Souls, and to build them up to Life, expresth it thus, I have chosen you, that you should go forth, (namely to Preach) and bring forth Fruit, therein comparing their Preaching to sowing seed, or engrafting Plants which should bring forth Fruit: Again, Col. 1. 6. The Word of Truth, as thus planted by the Apostles, is said, to bring forth Fruit in them, and in all the World. Moreover in the same 15th Chapter of John, Christ is not only said to bear Fruit in us by our abiding in him, as the Vine, but also by his Word abiding in us. For as at the 1st & 4th verses, he had said, The Branch bringeth not forth Fruit, unless it abide in the Vine: So at the 7th verse he says, If you abide in me, and my words abide in you. So then where we, that is our Persons, are said to be engrafted into Christ, even there also it is said, that in order to bringing forth Fruit, his Word must be engrafted into us also as we are into him, he expressing the one as well as the other, by one and the same word of abiding in: And thus James his εὐαγγέλιος, spoken of the Word, and Paul's εὐαγγέλιον: Rom. 6. spoken of Christ and us, do well agree in one and the same kind of Allusion. Thus I have fixed the Interpretation.

To come now to the opening of the particulars contained and implied in the Metaphor.

1. God (whose Word this is) is tacitly compared unto a Tree, who hath all Excellencies, Perfections of Holiness, Justice, Wisdom, Truth, Righteousness, Goodness in him Essentially.

2. His Word is as the Seed, or as Twiggs growing out of the Tree, fit to be Sown, inoculated, or ingrafted in the Hearts of Men.

3. And look as Seed or Twiggs pluckt, or fallen from a Tree hath virtually all the Perfections of the Tree it comes from, and being planted, or inoculated spreads forth into the same likeness, and brings forth like Fruits; So this Word of Truth fallen from God, containeth in it all his Perfections communicable to us, Holiness, Mercy, Goodness, &c. The Law, or his Commandment, is Holy, Spiritual, Just and Good, (Rom. 7. 12, 14.) as God himself is, and the Gospel hath the mind of God and of Christ in it, 1 Cor. 2. 16.

Only 4. Look as Seed, or a Graft, brings forth no Fruit if it remain alone unset, but it must be engrafted into some stock, or sown in some Soil, if it brings forth Fruit: So this word of Truth remains as a dead Letter, unfruitful, unless it be received into Mens Hearts, and there takes root, and abides; even as Christ says the Branch cannot bring forth fruit of it self, unless it abide in the Vine (John 15.) so the Word brings not forth fruit unless engrafted into us; yea, to that end it was ordained and delivered by God, and Preached by us. The Epithet here given it imports this end and ordination of it. It is called the Engrastable Word, and so termed as it is in it self, in respect of this end and ordination, ere that yet it is received into the Heart; for he thereupon founds his Exhortation to them to receive it as such; as being the Word that is ordained, intended for this, and whose end is to be engrafted, to be infititious as the perfection thereof ('tis a Noun, not a Participle) as when we say, a Child bearing Woman, that phrase imports not so much one actually with Child, as fit in respect of Age or Condition for it.

5. To be engrafted, is not barely to be outwardly let into the Ear, or Understanding, but to be let into the Heart to be there recreated, there to abide, and become one therewith, and (if you will) to be naturalized into the Heart. The Graft, if it take on the Stock, is let into the very Pith: So must the Word be, and then it is, that it becomes λογος ἐμφυτος. Then is the Word Insouled: (ἐμψυτος and ἐγκαρδιος are used for one) and so the Interpretation of natural comes fitly in; the Word and the Heart becoming one in Nature. The Word is not only received into the Conscience, to be a Guide or Rule of Life, but also into the Heart, as a Graft that doth naturally coalesce with the stock. Other Scriptures express this under other Metaphors, comparing the Word to Milk and Meat, which received into the Stomach are turned by the digestive Faculty into the Spirits, Blood, Bones, Flesh, &c. And this is the true import of that Phrase in Heb. 4. 2. μη συγκεραιμένους τῇ πίστει speaking of the Word, that it profited not, because it was not digested by Faith, and so turn'd into Blood and Nourishment.

6. And Lastly, It imports not barely it's being made natural to the Soul, as Meat is with the Body, when turned into Flesh and Blood; for the Meat turns not Mans Nature into its Nature, but the Mans Nature assimilates it unto it self: But this Metaphor further imports, that the Word turns the Soul of Man and the dispositions of it, into the nature of it self, as a Noble Plant doth a more Wild Stock, Isa. 55. 11. He speaks of his Word, and the Power thereof, which shall prosper to the ends he sends it, whereof one end is, v. 13. that instead of the Thorn, shall come up the Fir Tree; instead of the Bryar, shall come up the Mirtle Tree; that is, the nature of the Trees themselves shall be changed by it. Again, in Meat Digested, the nature of Man useth all the Blood and Spirits gotten by it according to its own will and temper, which still remains the same; but this Word engrafted into the Heart, Converts all the the Sapp and Strength in the stock to bring forth Fruit according to its own kind, for the vertue of it over rules all, and it brings forth according to the kind of it self. And therefore in that Col. 1. the Word is said to bring forth fruit in us, and not so much we our selves to do it. Grace is the Word concocted, and the Fruit of Holiness is but the Word brought forth into the Life.

Therefore be exhorted to get the Word thus received into your Hearts, or it will not save your Souls. The engrafted Word (says James) is able to save your Souls. It saves only, as 'tis engrafted, else the whole Word of God is not able to save you, but will Condemn you. Men that hear the Word, and are enlightned by it, either receive it as the Earth doth the Rain, and brings forth Thorns and Briars, (Heb. 6.) the very Rain making Lust more fruitful, or else they receive it as engrafted (as James speaks) and that is, when it changeth the Heart, and then it saves. Whereas, of the other it is said, that they are near to Cursing, whose end is to be Burned. Nor is it having the Graft tyed about with a Thred, or the Word to stand in the Memory, or outward Profession, but it must take Root, and become one with thy Heart.

The third Similitude whereby the Holy Ghost expresseth Sanctification to be a conformity to the Word or Law of God, is here in Heb. 10. 14, 16. For by one Offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified. v. 16. This is the Covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my Laws into their Hearts, and in their Minds will I write them. 1. Says, I will put my Law into their Hearts. 2. And in their Minds will I write them. And thereby he intendeth to express Sanctification as differing from Justification.

For so he distinguisheth them in the Prophets Intention: For having said (v. 14.) That by one Offering Christ had perfected for ever them that are sanctified; he alledgeth the Saying of the Prophet, as in one including sufficient proof of this assertion, and punctually alledgeth both for the Subject and Predicate thereof. The Subject is them that are Sanctified, to which he applies these words, Those in whose Hearts he puts and writes his Laws; that is, those whom he sanctifies: Such he hath perfected for ever, in respect of Justification by that one Offering; which he proves from these words of the Prophet, which follow v. 17. And their Sins and Iniquities will I remember no more, and therefore they are perfected for ever. So then writing the Law in the Heart, is true and genuine Sanctification. It is such, that to the Persons that have it, Justification belongeth. Now let us consider these two Phrases.

1. Putting the Laws into their Hearts.
2. Writing the Laws in their Minds, which still aim both at one meaning.

1. He is said to put the Law into their Hearts, which you may conceive by what he did to Adam at the first, into whose Heart he put his Law. Now what was that Law, as it was put into Adam's Heart, but all sorts of holy Instincts, Properties, and Inclinations unto whatever God did command; and an antipathy against whatever God did forbid; this was the Law of Nature in his Heart. The Laws of God in Adam were Adam's original Nature, and the constitution of his Soul and Spirit. Which we may all easily apprehend by what we conceive to be the Law of Nature in Beasts, and other Creatures, which God hath put into them to act according to their kind, as to Beasts to love their Young, to Birds to build their Nests at such a season, with skill to do it. When God created man at first, he gave him not an outward Law written in Letters, or delivered by words; but an inward Law put into his Heart, and concreated with him, and wrought in the frame of his Soul. And the whole substance of this Law of God, the mass of it, was not barely Dictates or Beams of Light in his Understanding, directing what to do; but also real, lively, and spiritual Dispositions, and Inclinations in his Will and Affections, carrying him on to what was so directed; as to pray, to love God, and fear him, to seek his Glory in a spiritual and holy manner. They were inward Abilities suitable to every Duty. And as an evidence of the Law, having been Adam's Nature, we have the shadow of it in the Hearts of all men, which evinceth it. For they do by Nature τὰ τῆ φύσεως (Rom. 2. 14.) the things of the Law: Tho' the inward part of the Law, the Holiness and Spiritualness of it be blotted out, which was then Adam's Nature. And the remainder of this, even in Corrupt Nature, and by Nature without outward Revelation of the Law, is an evidence that this Spiritual part (which is that of the Law which is lost) was once in man as his Nature: As we know what Corn the Earth once bore by the Stubble that is found upon the Field. So then, that Just, and Holy, and Spiritual Law, we now have extant in the Word, is but Historia Adami, The Story of Adam's Heart, viz. Of those Instincts and Properties which were once there: As Plinies Natural History, or Aristotles Historia Animalium, is the story of the several Instincts, Properties, and living Dispositions, and Postures of all sorts of living Creatures, painting out in a lifeless story, that which (when you come to see these several Creatures) you shall perceive naturally acted by them. And because the same Law is renewed again in the Soul, it is termed the Law of the Mind, which serves and observes the Law of God, as the Heliotrope doth the Sun, or the Needle the Loadstone, being pointed and touched by it. The Law of God is become the Law of the new Nature, and so the Law of Nature anew: And commands as a Law (Even as Sin is termed the Law of the members Rom. 7. 23.) ruling also as a Law useth to do.

2. The second Phrase is in Heb. 10. 16, Writing the Law in the Heart, which imports the very same thing. And one Contrary serving to explain another, We may fitly understand what it is to have God's Law written in the Heart, by what is meant by the writing its Contrary; namely, Sin and Corruption in the Heart (Jer. 17. 1.) There Sin is said to be Written in their Hearts, as with the point of a Diamond; that is, deeply engraven. Now what manner of Letters these are wherewith Sin is written in our Hearts we have woful and daily experience of. They are letters suitable to the paper they are writ on. The Soul is a living active Creature, never resting; and these letters are answerably strong, vigorous, active, and lively Inclinations, and Provocations unto what is Evil and Wicked in all the varieties of it, which naturally arise. Such answerably are those holy Characters written on a living Soul; and this the Apostle expresseth, 2 Cor. 3. 3. For as much as ye are manifestly declared to be the Epistle of Christ, ministred by us, written not with Ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not in Tables of stone, but in fleshy Tables of the Heart. His scope is to clear that different writing of the Word of God by the power of Christ in Regenerate mens Hearts, from what it is on unregenerate mens Hearts, who also have the Law written in a Sort in them. He compares the latter to that writing the Law by God at first on a stone, or by Moses on a Book: So comparatively, it's written on unrenewed Hearts, where when written in their Understandings, Memories and Consciences, it appears and remains: Yet for the powerful efficacy of it, 'tis but as if it were written on Stone. There indeed he that hath it may read it written, for in the letter of it, it shews it self; but yet, it's but written on a Stone or in a Book. But now, says the Apostle, suppose you see the same Law, by the Power and Finger of God written on Flesh, on a Creature active and living; If you see this Law thus written by the same Power and Finger of God, which first put Laws into living Creatures to act so and so; What difference would there be evident between the former Writing and this? Such is the writing the Law in regenerate mens Hearts, (says the Apostle) It is written, not with Ink, but with the Spirit of the Living God; not in Tables of Stone, but in the fleshy Tables of the Heart, that is, (says he) you must understand these Letters and Characters of the Word written to be answerable to the Spirit, with which they are written: Now this is the Spirit of the Living God who is a pure and meer Act, and his Life is Holiness and Righteousness, and he acts accordingly, and these Letters therefore are such dispositions of Life (like unto Gods) as shall incline the Creature by a vital Principle to act holily. The Letters are Spirit and Life in the Soul, and not dead Characters as on stone, such as in unregenerate mens Minds the Law makes. They are also written there as on fleshy Tables; that is, suppose you should see the Living God would say, he would write on a living Heart, these Letters wrote, must bear a Likeness to the Subject or Paper written on, and so have living impressions suited to every Faculty and Power in the Soul; expressing the outward letter in living, and active Energies and Vertues, according to the capacity of each Faculty. Conceive it thus, If you should see the Statue of a man compleatly cut out in Stone (which is one part of the Apostles comparison, to which he compares unregenerate mens Hearts) having all outward members, yea and the inward Parts also cut by a dead Tool by the same Artificer: And you should hear God (who is the Father of Life, and is able to raise, out of Stones, Children to Abraham) say you behold this Man of Stone, this dead Nose, Eyes, &c. which bear the Resemblance of a Man: Come, you shall see what manner of Man I, that am the living God, will make of him, after my Image; what would you expect, but such a man as now you see your selves to be, having all the members answerable to those in that Man of Stone, and also not only the outward shape of a dead Eye carved in stone; but a living, quick, sparkling, sprightly Eye, that could discover this World and all things in it, out of a vital Principle? What would you expect to see, but an Heart likewise and Pulse beating, Veins full of blood, the Arterys of Spirits, a living fleshy Man, having all members like to that Man in Stone, but living and acting according to their several Offices and Properties enlivened with a restless Soul that enflames them? So it is here. Paul, when a Pharisee, had the Law carv'd forth in all the lineaments of it on his Conscience, and Understanding. He had a form of truth and knowledge in the Law; but when Paul became a Believer, he had all this form and the members of it turn'd into Spirit and Life in him, into properties and instincts answerable to that outward Form, as hath been expressed.

 OF THE
 (THE Third Person of the TRINITY)

BOOK IX.

Of the Eminency of Mercy and Grace discovered in this Work of Regeneration, comparatively with other Works wrought in us. Of the Greatness of the Power which God manifests in Regenerating us. Of the Influence which Christs Resurrection hath on our Regeneration.

CHAP. I.

The eminent Mercy of God, toward us in our Regeneration, evidenc'd, because it is the first apparent discovery to us of our Election. And because this work alone, makes an alteration in our State, doth it once for all, brings us into an eternal State of Happiness, and alone, makes a specifical Change in us.

I Have Discours'd of the Nature of the work wrought in us by God in Regenerating us, and of the several Parts of it; the next thing to be consider'd is the eminency of Mercy, which is shewn in this work. So eminent it is, that it hath singularly obtained the Title of Mercy, and obtaining Mercy.

I who before (says Paul, 1 Tim. 1. 13.) was a Blasphemer, and a Persecutor, and Injurious, but I obtained mercy: He speaks of his Conversion: And the Grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant, (namely in that first work, in working Faith and Love) as it follows, with Faith and Love which is in Christ Jesus: And thereupon he breaks forth into that high celebration of God for the mercy in it, v. 17. Now unto the King Eternal, Immortal, Invisible, the only wise God, be Honour and Glory for ever and ever.

There are three sorts of works whereby our Salvation is compleated and accomplished.

1. Immanent in God towards us, as his Eternal Love set and past upon us; out of which he chose us, and designed this and all Blessings to us.

2. Transient, in Christ done for us; in all he did or suffered representing of us, and in our stead.

3. Applicatory, wrought in us, and upon us, in the endowing us with all those Blessings by the Spirit: As Calling, Justification, Sanctification, Glorification.

My purpose is not to institute a Comparison of this work in us, with those two mentioned transacted towards us or for us, by God and Christ, but only with those other of the latter sort, wrought in us after Conversion. And so compared, this first work, and the Concomitants of it at first, have some things therein which may and should cause us to look upon it as a most abounding mercy; surpassing those other fore-mentioned that follow after it.

1. Because it is the first discovery, appearance and manifestation of the first Two, Election and Redemption; in the persons to whom they were intended, Titus 3. 4. when the Kindness and Love of God appeared: And how, and when did it appear? v. 5. According to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of Regeneration, &c. Gods Eternal Love, like a mighty River, had from everlasting ran, as it were, under Ground: And when Christ came, it took its course through his Heart, hiddenly ran through it; He bearing when on the Cross, the Names of them whom God had given him; but was yet still hidden here, as to us, and our knowledge of it: But the first breaking of it forth, and particular appearing of it in and to the persons, is when we are converted, and is as the first opening of a Fountain: Whereto the calling of the elect Jews in the last days, is compared, Zach. 13. And accordingly in the first of the Galatians, Paul expresseth his Conversion to be the first revealing Christ in Him, and of Gods Grace towards Him: But when it pleased God, who called me by his Grace, to reveal his Son in me, Chap. 1. 15, 16.

2. There is no other Spiritual mercy we can lay claim unto, as ours, before this, or without this; but upon it we are led unto all mercies; This Peter (1 Epistle chap. 2. v. 9, 10.) expresseth, both in the Negative, and Affirmative thereof: The Negative, in saying that afore their calling, (of which in the words afore he speaks) they had not obtained mercy: The Affirmative, But now (namely upon calling) they had obtained mercy. Whilst a man lives without Regeneration, He is also without Promise, Eph. 2. 5. He hath now quickned you, who in times past were Strangers to the Covenant of Grace. And what are Promises but the Golden Veins or Rivulets that mercies run into? As the Dust and Sand of the purest Gold, use in several rills to do. Which Promises, though they were bequeathed before by Gods Eternal Decrees, and purchased by Christs Death; yet the right to them, the Seisin, the possession of them, is given at Conversion: 2 Pet. 1. 3, 4. After he had said, That His Divine Power had given to them all things belonging to Life and Godliness; (that is, furnish'd us with all requisite Abilities thereunto) through the knowledge of him that called us to Glory and Vertue, He adds, Whereby are given to us (delivery of Seisen thereby is made) exceeding great and Precious Promises; so as the younger Convert may upon Regeneration go over and run through all the Scriptures, and view and lay claim to what ever is promised of Spiritual Blessings therein. And oftentimes all the Promises are brought by the Spirit in unto this young Heir, upon his first Birth, for them to do Homage, at least to own him, and acknowledge him as their Heir.

3. Then it is that both the first and the greatest Sum of pardoning mercy is granted and expended on us in the forgiving both of more sins, and of them at once, than perhaps ever after at several times. All the sins a man had committed for twenty, thirty, or perhaps more Years, lay on heaps. And forgiveness had not been given forth, not so much as for one of them, all that time. And every Commandment brought in his Bill, which the Spirit reduced unto Heads, and made Catalogues of particulars under each Head. I was a Blasphemer, says Paul (and had Blasphemed times without number) a Persecutor, Injurious, and God forgave them all at once, as 'tis said Mat. 18. 24, 27. even ten thousand Talents at once. All the Debt and Arrears that had run on score so many years, were then acquitted. In the last chapter of James and the last verse, the Apostle exhorting to convert Souls to God, says, He that Converts a Soul, though but one Soul, hides a multitude of sins. For all his sins, till then, lay unforgiven. This you have Col. 3. 13. Where setting forth the mercy of their calling out of their unregenerate Condition, which he describes in these words, And you being dead in your sins, and the uncircumcision of your Flesh: And going on, You hath he quickned together with him. (There is their first Conversion) Then follows, Having forgiven you all Trespases; All, and at once together; namely, then when quickned. Which great Debts in that former estate had been so long contracting.

I need not here debate that Point, whether all the sins Christ died for, for are at that time forgiven, though that Forgiveness be renewed every day, when pardon for new sins is asked by us, and so is to be sought for everyday, as our Lord in his Prayer hath taught us. It is enough for the proof of my assertion, and acknowledged by all, that then it is, that such a multitude of sins past, so long continued in, come first to be actually forgiven; and that after calling he gives them forth pardon by the day, every day for the sins of the day, peccata quotidiana incursonis. He that is in the State of Grace, asketh pardon every day for the sins of the day, as he committeth them; as well as we do pray for daily Bread (as in the Lords-Prayer we are taught) And we daily confessing our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive them, 1 John 1. 7, 9. And Christs Blood still cleanseth us from all sin. All along he speaks of it, as of the continuation of a continual Act that cleanseth; as a running Fountain doth what defiled things are brought to it: As in that respect it is compared to a Fountain opened for sin and uncleanness, Zach. 3. Fountains are called Living Waters, because they continually run, after their first springing, and cease not, and thus the Blood of Christ doth, and washes from the sinful flowings of that original uncleanness which is continually bubbling up in us: Yet at this first opening of it it may be compared unto a Sea, in that respect we are now upon, of pardoning us at first, as (Micah 7. 19.) Gods pardoning mercies are compared; but in respect unto the continual cleansing us, it is compared unto a Fountain that always runs. And the difference of these two may be thus illustrated. There is a Father that spares and forgives a Son that serves him every day, and dischargeth his dribbling debts (As I may, in comparison of the ten thousand Talents at first, term them) still as he runs into them: But Gods first forgiveness is, as that of the Father of the Prodigal, who had spent all his Stock given him, and run out of Cash Millions: Or as a Father that hath a Son that is a Merchant, who breaks, and is found thousands in Debt, and he at once dischargeth all, and gives him a new Stock to set up; and to begin the World anew with. A Father brings forth his Bags at such a time, and layeth forth more mercy at one clap, than by daily supplies all a mans Life after.

4. This work of Regeneration doth alone make that great Alteration (mentioned) of a mans State before God for all, and that for ever: That this makes the alteration of a mans State, I have shewn. The Apostle Paul hath it Tit. 3. 5. Hath saved us by the washing of Regeneration.

1. That this alone doth make the alteration of the State, is evident, because all other alterations after, are gradual, and additions of degrees, within the compass of the same State. Yea, even that great change from Grace to Glory, is but from Faith to Sight, from Imperfect to Perfect: We know but in part (yet in part) as 1 Cor. 13. 12. Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face: Now I know in part, but then I shall know even as I am known. The same things which we believe, and know in part, we shall then see the whole and full of it: And it is but instead of seeing them in a Glass as now, then to see them Face to Face. The State of the man is one and the same, as to the Grace of God, when a Christian liveth, and after when he dies. To be the Lords, is the State of the man in both. The fellowship the same, it is but the change of place, not Company. Rom. 14. 8. Whether we live or die, we are the Lords. Faith it self hath Eternal Life in it, (1 John 5. 11, 13.) And not in hopes only, but it is in part abiding in him, 1 John 3. 15. Death and Heaven are accounted the great changes. As Job 14. 14. I will wait till my change will come. But this is a greater, a Turning from Darknes to Light, from Satan to God. Acts 26. 18. Yea, indeed God then actually gives the whole right of all, that ever he gives forth afterwards; Then in the Lump, afterwards by parcells. The Scripture calls it Salvation, and being saved, speaking in the great and the whole of it.

And 2. This great change is made but once. There is but one Baptism, as one Faith; and as the Faith was but once delivered to the Saints, Jude 3. So Baptism is but once to be administred; and why? Because the thing signified, sealed up thereby, which is Regeneration, is but once wrought, (but the Lords-Supper is often celebrated, 1 Cor. 11. As oft as ye receive) which is therefore called a Baptizing into the likenes of his Death and Resurrection. Rom. 6. 4, 5. And that in two respects, which are the same with those before us. 1. Inas much as Christ died but once, and rose but once, Heb. 7. 27. and Heb. 9. 26, 27. Once in the end of the World he died, and offered up himself, even as it is appointed for men once to die. And 2. That the estate he rose into, is an eternal State of Life, Heb. 10. 12. He for ever sat down on the Right Hand of God. Now both these the Apostle applies in that Rom. 6. unto men Regenerated, and Baptized into Christ, by instituting the Parallel between our State by Regeneration, signified by Baptism into Christs Death and Resurrection; and Christs Death and Resurrection it self, in both these very respects forementioned, in these words, 9, 10, 11. Knowing that Christ being raised from the dead, dieth no more; Death hath no more dominion over Him: For in that he died, he died unto sin once, but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God. Likewise reckon ye also your selves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord: From whence he infers, v. 12. That Sin shall not reign. 'Tis a Promise, as well as a Command: And those words, Likewise reckon your selves, import the Parallel to lie in this, That as Christ died but once, and rose but once, so we are planted by Baptism and Regeneration, (which work bears the resemblance of his Death and Resurrection, and whereof Baptism is the sign) but only once: And thus, as in Heb. 9. we heard the Apostle saying, that Christ dyed but once, so in Heb. 10. 26. We read, that for that very reason it is, that those that have been illuminated, and made Partakers of the Holy Ghost, &c. (of whom you read in the 6th Chapter of that Epistle) that if they shall sin wilfully, after they have received the knowledge of the Truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin: Which is all one as to have said on Christs part for us, for Christ died but once. And it is once, therefore answerably hereunto there cannot be a new Repetition of the work of Regeneration, which they professed to have received at their Baptism; which that 6 Chapter of the Hebrews v. 6. had given a clearer explanation of. That those who have been enlightened and tasted of the good Word of God, and have been Partakers of the Heavenly Gift, &c. if they shall fall away, it is impossible to renew them again unto Repentance.

And why? But because as Christ died but once, so men are renewed but once. And therefore those that hold total falling away from Regeneration, must either hold no second Regeneration for such, which is to put them into despair, or they must say, that Regeneration is often reiterated, and then that Baptism, the sign of it, ought also to be repeated (even as the Lords-Supper is) and then Christs Death reiterated also; for these are Parallels in the Apostles intention.

4. As the change wrought in Regeneration is once for all, so the Estate we are brought into thereby, is an Eternal Estate, never to be changed. As Christ dyed once, and Lives ever, and Death hath no more Dominion over him, likewise reckon your selves: This Second Adam, Christ, that came to restore us, being immutable, and his state unchangeable, such is the State and Condition of the Members of him, (1 Cor. 15. 45.) And they are called Christs Fellows, (Psal. 45. 7.) being made partakers of Fellowship with him, in his Death, and in the Vertues and Glories of his Resurrection, (Phil. 3. 7.) and Regeneration, (whereof Baptism is the sign,) is their Admission into that Society. And they are admitted, in Socios Perpetuos. In that they Live, they live unto God, and Sin hath no more Dominion over them.

Chap. 1.

Now then, All this put together. 1. Regeneration changeth the state of a Man. 2. This alone doth it. 3. Once for all. 4. Brings him into a perpetual Estate; all this (I say) put together, Argues the Mercy Transcendant. And further, by how much, the misery of that estate from which, may be greatened, or the Priviledge of that estate, into which we are by Regeneration brought, may be agrandized, (which is not my Scope) by so much is the Mercy of this New Birth to be Estimated by us.

5. This alone makes the Specificall change: All other changes that follow, are but Gradual. I intend to make this Branch distinct from the former, as to my purpose in hand, (though I confess it may be made one branch, involved in the foregone,) the change of a Mans state of Salvation, is mainly a Moral, Legal, Forinsecal change: as that change which of a Man Condemned to Dye, unto a state of Life, or that of a Servant, to a Son, (which out of Rom. 6. was instanced in) of an Heir of Hell, to be an Heir of Eternal Life: And the greatest change of our estate lies in such priviledges: Or as John expresseth it, John 1. 13. in giving us Authority to be the Sons of God. But over and above such as these, there is a Physical change, which is more properly the impres of Regeneration, which is a work in us: The other changes are the consequents, or concomitants thereof; and that is it that makes a Specificall change, as all Births, and Generations, and Corruptions, are said to do: Other changes, by growings up in Grace; are but Gradual, From Faith to Faith: Rom. 11. 17. from Strength to Strength, Psal. 84. 7. From Glory to Glory, 2 Cor. 3. last. Tis true, the substance of a Mans Nature, as a Man, is one and the same afore and after. It is therefore called but putting off an Old Man, and putting on a New: Even as you cast off, or put on another Garment. And also that Holiness, or the Divine Nature, is but a quality, which as it is more worth than a Mans Soul, devoid of it, so doth raise the Soul into another kind, or species of Man, taking it together with that indwelling, and information of the Holy Ghost, Who dwells in that inner Man, (Eph. 3. 16.) As another Soul in our Souls. Nay the very Body, the Animal part, is said to be the Temple of the Holy Ghost. And it is added, who is in you, in your Souls, namely by a nearer conjunction, than in your Bodies. John 14. 17. He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you. And the conclusion of both is, that take this new Creature, with this indwelling of the Holy Ghost, in it, and the Old Man, with the Inhabitation of Satan in him, and it makes analogice, a greater change in kind, than if a Beast were made a Man, a Clod of Earth, a Star.

If the Spiritual body, and the natural Body, (of which the Apostle speaks 1 Cor. 15. 44.) If the Heavenly Man Christ, and those that appertain to him; and the Earthly Man Adam, and his Earthly ones, (v. 47, 48.) may by the Apostles Arguings, and Comparisons, (and so in his account and intentions) be said to differ, like the several Species of Creatures, which you reckon differing in kind, (v. 39.) By these differing Species, he sets out the difference of the Natural and Spiritual Body (v. 44.) whenas that is but the change of qualities in them, which yet is said to make this vast difference: A vaster difference must needs hold much more in this Transmutation of our Souls, we treat of. The one is Natural, the other is Spiritual. The Persons are in the Scripture termed, another Generation of Men. Peter distinguisheth those Book 9 those that are disobedient. (1 Ep. Cap. 2. v.) 8. and those Born again, (v. 9.) with a [But] of discrimination. But ye are a chosen Generation. Christ calls the other a Generation of Vipers. The Psalmist says, these are the Generation of them that seek thee. And to the other a distinct Generation is attributed by Christ, As in that Speech, they are wiser in their Generation, than the Children of Light, who are of another sort. And hence it comes to pass, that the change made by the New Birth, is in Scripture expressed by such changes; or as the Apostles word is (Rom. 12. 2.) by such a μεταμορφωσις, be Transformed by the renewing of your Minds. It is a word which the Poets used to express those changes they feigned, from Men to Beasts; or Beasts to Men. The Reality of which in this Work, might by many Scriptures be made good, by shewing how the Specific Properties of Mens Spirits are altered. Like as if a Lion were made a Lamb, and such like: And this change the New Birth makes at first, and that alone in wholly beginning that New kind, which was not before.

C H A P. II.

The Eminency of Gods Mercy in our Regeneration Evidenced from these considerations. That no Motives from us can be supposed to incite God to do this for us. That we do not so much as concur to the Work, but are meerly passive to it. The Uses of the Doctrine.

UNTO all that hath been said, this may be added further, That there can be supposed no Motives inciting God to bestow this blessed change. It is not according to Works of Righteousness which we had done: In giving other Mercies, after he hath begotten us, he may at least take occasion from something in us to move him: As to give perseverance, for he that hath begun a good work will perfect it; for Artifex amat opus: And he is Faithful that hath begun it, to finish it; so to him that hath brought forth Fruit already, he is therefore moved to Purge him, that he may bring forth more Fruit, John 15. 1. And to him that hath, shall be given, as Matth. 25. and often elsewhere. He Crowns his own works in us with a farther encrease. But before Regeneration, there is neither any work of ours by us, nor work of his own in us, to move him. In giving Glory, though he doth not bestow it propter opera, for our work, yet Secundum opera, according to Works, I speak as to degrees of Glory. (So every where up and down in Scriptures) only in this work of Regeneration, there is neither Propter nor Secundum. Even according to works is excluded. No Secundum, but of his Mercy. According to Mercy. (So Paul.) According to his abundant Mercy. (So Peter) hath he renewed us.

2. The lesser Concurrence man himself may be supposed to have in any work done by God for us, the greater, the intirer is the Mercy shewn in it, for then 'tis wholly Gods. Now of all things whatever may be supposed we can do for our selves, we cannot beget our selves. As not at first could we have created our selves. Neither can any Creature do this for us. So John 1. 13. Who were Born (says the Evangelist) not of Blood, nor of Flesh, nor of the Will of Man, but of God. This Birth goes not by Blood. Neither, that we are born of great Parents, or of good. Therefore Say not, (says Christ) you have Abraham to your Father. Nor is it of the will of the Flesh, the power power of man's Corrupt Will, who is born nothing but Flesh. Water may as soon of it self attain the form of Fire, as the will of the Flesh, that is, the Will as acted and enformed by Flesh, elevate it self, or be elevated (remaining Flesh) into the least disposition or act of Holiness. It is not in him that wills or runs, but in God that shews mercy. Nor is it in the will of man, nor of our Parents or Friends, that use all means to do us good; nor of the Holiest through their Prayers or endeavours to work it. Abraham would have had Ishmael, but God would not. No power or will of any Creature whatsoever can regenerate us: But it is God who of his own will begetteth us, as it is James 1. 18. Chap. 2

And the reason of this is founded upon this observation, which holds in Nature, That the more noble the Birth is, the more God hath a hand in it: And this being the most noble and wholly Divine and Heavenly, therefore it is alone from God. Animals are only said to be begotten: Now Beasts being more ignoble Creatures, unto their begetting God concurs but by the ordinary way of Providence: For they traduce both Soul and Body: But the birth of Man being of the most noble Creature, God therefore reserves the main immediate stroke in it unto himself; and the Parents having prepared the Body through that plastica & prolifica Seminis vis, God comes and infuses the Soul. And therefore (Heb. 12. 9.) He is called the Father of Spirits, and they but the Parents of our Bodies. Sol & homo generant hominem, says the Philosopher: That is, God and Man do beget man. But in this new birth, because the most noble of all, God doth all, and all is to be ascribed to him, James 1. 17. Every good Gift, and every perfect Gift, is from above, and cometh down from the Father of Lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning: And then he instanceth in this of Regeneration, of his own Will he begat us. The Coherence evidently argues this to be so noble and so perfect a work of Gods, and of such a kind as is wholly Heavenly and Divine, and from him as the Father of Lights. That as nothing but the Sun it self, that is the visible Father of Lights, can cause a true genuine Likeness or Image of it self, whether in the Eye, or in a Glass, or in a Parrelion in the Clouds. So none but God alone can and doth frame the true Image of himself in the Hearts of men. This rich and noble begetting us of his will, is therefore wholly Heavenly and from above, for it is a perfect Birth, a good and perfect gift, and so entirely descending from above: Whereas the works raised in the Hearts of Temporary Believers are made up partly, through the influence of Heaven, partly from self-love stirred up and excited thereby, and so are but imperfect Gifts; Like those Creatures begotten by the Sun warming and shining on Mud, as Frogs and other creeping things, whose form is raised and educed out of that corrupt matter the Beams of the Sun fell on.

I add, That take the Substantials of it, we contribute nothing, but are meerly passive. Therefore an Infant is as capable of all the Essentials of Regeneration as a man grown up is: And therefore of Baptism. For what are the Essentials of Regeneration?

1. Christs apprehending us ere we him, Phil. 3. Thus Children are capable of being apprehended by Christ: Even as Children in the Womb are comprehended by the Mother, though they hang as the Earth, in the middle, not laying hold on her.

2. The Holy Ghost shed down into the Heart, as here in the Text. This Children are capable of, for John Baptist was filled with the Holy Ghost from the Womb, Luke 15.

3. The New Creature in all the Principles of it, the Habits of Holiness wrought, the Workmanship (as 'tis call'd) which Children are also as capable of: For as they are capable of all the evil dispositions of sin, and inclinations to it, so of Holiness: Yea and therefore of sin now, because once of Holiness; So as in receiving all these, a man may be wholly passive: And yet these are the Substantials. All that follow are but the actings, by the Spirit, of that New Creature in us; and our apprehending that for which we are comprehended (as the Apostle speaks) yea and it is as certain, That ere any man can be born of Christ, he must be apprehended of Christ, And ere he have Spirit or Divine Nature begotten in him, he must have the Spirit come upon him, As also ere he can put forth the least Act of Holiness, he must have the Principle of Holiness: As no man that hath not a Principle of Life can stir a Finger, or that hath not an Eye, can see. So then, in receiving all these a man of riper years is passive; and the receiving of all depends upon no foregoing actings of his. Turn me (say they in the Prophet) and I shall be turned. (Jer. 31. 18.) Whereas afterwards acti agimus, (Rom. 8. 13.) We by the Spirit do mortifie the Deeds of the Flesh: Not the Spirit alone, but we by the Spirit, who in our Prayers is said to help our Infirmities, (v. 26.) And therefore they are said to be our Prayers as well as the Spirit's in us. When the Lamp is once lighted put, oyl to it and it burns; but who shall light it? When the Wheel is made round, an easy touch sets it a going; but who shall round it? In this therefore we are meerly passives. Though when thus turned, we also turn to God, Jer. 38. 18.

8. Even of all the good works we are enabled afterwards to do, this is the Womb, the Foundation: So as without this one work first begun in thee, no work thou doest or canst do, hath the Name of good: Even as all evil thoughts and lusts in the Heart proceed from that corrupt Nature we had at our Birth, That is the Mother of all Abominations, Which David in his Confession Psal. 51. had recourse unto. So is this Seed of God, the Divine Nature at first put into us, The Seed abiding, whence all that is good and acceptable springeth. They are all fruits of the Spirit as the other of the Flesh, Gal. 5. All the good we bear is from the Root. First (says Christ) make the Tree good. In some trades there is required frames of workmanship to be set up, or cast, ere they can work: As to a Printer, a Press: To him that will cast Letters, a Matrix (as they call it) To a Weaver, a Loom: To a Smith, a Forge: To a Goldsmith, &c. Molds to cast Metals in, from whence they receive their fashion. And the whole actings in their Callings afterwards, do depend upon such Workmanships and Fabricks at first erected: Now so is it here, as in two places to follow these Metaphors the Apostle holds forth. The one 2 Eph. 10. Ye are his Workmanship created to good works. A new Workmanship must be created, ere any good work will be effected. The other text is, Rom. 6. 17. You have obeyed from the Heart that Form, Mould, or Pattern of Doctrine ye were delivered into, τύπον εἰς ὃν παρεδόθητε. The Word of God he compares both to a Pattern or Sampler of Obedience; and to a Mold, or Matrix, which their Hearts were first cast in themselves; that so they might become a meet, fitted and prepared Womb, in which, and from which all obedience might receive its formation and shape, and there be cast. Now you know that such as the Mold is, such are the things cast therein; if they be mishapen, then are all the metals cast therein spoil'd, As in some Wombs the formation of Children also is. Thou mayst perform works of all sorts that are good; but let me tell thee, unless thou hast thine own Heart first made a new workmanship, a workmanship created and forged by the Spirit anew, as a Principle thereunto, thou spoilest all in the doing, thou marrest all in the making. This for the Reasons of this point,

Use 1. Let the Saints bless God in a more special manner, for this work of Conversion and Regeneration wrought in them. Study the Riches of that mercy, which have been shewn in it. Put this eminently and usually into that Catalogue of mercies which thou givest thanks to God for. Two things are not reminded enough by us, our first Birth-sin, to humble us in our Confessions; our first Birth-mercy to make us thankful; wherein abundance of mercy is shewn, there God looks for abundance of thanks-giving. Many Years after Peter remembers it, to bless God for it, and stirs up them to it, and puts himself into the number, who hath begotten us. So Paul also speaks, (who delights and takes often occasion to tell that Story) to the King immortal, &c. 1 Tim. 1. The Links of that Chain, Whom he hath predestinated, them he hath called; them he hath justified, because he hath glorified, we should always wear about our Hearts, to oblige us to thankfulness and obedience. Kings usually owe more to their Births, in which they were meer passives, than to all their after Atcheivements. Kings are therefore wont to celebrate their Births. At the beginning, and the laying the first foundation of God's great works of wonder, the Angels are still brought in singing and rejoycing. At the foundation of the Earth, Job 38. 7. When the morning Stars sang together, and all the Sons of God shouted for joy. So at the Birth of Christ, an Heavenly Host, a multitude sang. We read not so at his Resurrection. Again, at the Conversion of a Sinner, there is joy amongst all the Angels. Heaven rings of it, that a new Heir, a new Prince is born. And besides, the substance of the mercy it self, if thou canst find out any peculiarity of mercies that environ it in the Circumstances of it, consider them, and bleis God for them, this work being one of the greatest Acts that ever God did about thee, or towards thee. God sometimes plots to set forth the mercy of it, to make his hand and love in it the more eminent and remarkable. Christ's Birth was accompanied with a Star, which made it observed by the wise men: And all Jerusalem was troubled at it. And as our late Chronologers undertake, it fell out in the four thousandth Year of the World, as the finishing the Temple, his Type, in the three thousandth: And also at a time of general and universal Peace. Some Circumstances or other, perhaps, thou mayst discern in thy new Birth (if thou hast had the advantage to discern the time or occasion of it) I shall mention some that are not meerly circumstantial: Whereof, though some one may be different from the other, yet in their variety, they have some peculiarity of mercies.

1. The longer thou didst live before God turned thee, and yet did it, and the more sinful thou wert, this, in one respect, wonderfully heightens the mercy of it. Christ encountred Paul as a man would do an Enemy, in the open Field; Unhors'd him in full careire; when his Heart was more than ever set to do mischief, and near the place of doing it.

2. On the contrary, The sooner God turn'd thee, if in thy Youth, this was mercy to thee, for God had thy Virginitie, thy first love, before Lovers had bruised thy Breasts. I remember (says God) the Kindness of thy Youth, when thou wentest after me in the Wilderness. Paul in this respect complains of it as a disadvantage to him, That he was born out of time, and like a Truant had been put to this School or Academy, long after other Apostles, who had the Start of him. He seems to mention it with a little holy Envie at that honour others had before him, who were (says he) afore me in Christ; and thereby were elder Disciples than himself.

Rom. 16. 7

3. If God at thy Conversion gives thee a greater stock and measure of Grace, brings thee forth in a fuller Stature in Christ the first day, herein is great mercy shewn. Thus Paul was recompensed. He was born a strong man the first Hour, Infomuch as being the chief of the Apostles added nothing to him in experience or Knowledge, Gal. 2. Many are born Weaklings in comparison, and are long a growing up to what thou, perhaps, at first receivedst.

4. If when God began to work it, he did effect it speedily, in this he was kind to thee, Hos. 13. 13. phraiem is an unwise Son, he stayed long in the place of the breaking forth of Children. If as Mathew, we come at the first call. (The rude and barbarous Jaylor had quick dispatch: He came in trembling at Midnight to Paul, and was converted with joy before Break of day; Yea, the same hour, Acts 16. 25, 29, 33, 34. The Philipians, the first day they heard it, Phil. 1. 5.) If as Paul, immediately thou conferrest not with Flesh and Blood, Gal. 1. 16. If as soon as God called, thou heardst, and wert not rebellious, but openedst thine Ear, this is an effect of Gods peculiar love to thee.

5. If God put thee to less trouble and horror, brought thee forth with less pains, in this, his mercy appears. Some Souls have very hard labour. Paul lay but three days, and Christ from Heaven pities him, and sends Ananias to him. The Stone in some mens Hearts God dissolves, when others are cut for it, and lie roaring night

Book 9 night and day. Lydia's Heart was gently opened, and by Faith closed up again (as Adam's was for Eve) ere she was aware. Though sometimes it falls out, the lesser Fine, the more there is in Rent after, in greater Temptations.

6. Greater mercy is display'd to thee, if God came in then with much joy, when as he deals so roughly with others, as Joseph did with his Brethren; but no sooner thou hadst begun to confess and open thy mouth to speak to him for his love, but he fell on thy Neck and kissed thee: Yea, came and kiss'd thee sleeping, and with joys first awakened thee: And instead of shewing thee the Rack, the Dungeon, the everlasting Chains of Wrath, and shutting thee up under the Law; he had thee down into his Wine-Cellar, and brought thee to a Banquet. The Thessalonians were thus dealt with, 1 Thes. 1. 9. Ye became Followers of the Lord, having received the Word with joy in the Holy Ghost, &c. In a thousand of these varieties doth he deal with Souls, and playeth with us in his wooings, that his ways should be past finding out. And if all the stories of Souls Converted in this, as well as in the primitive times, were written, you would admire Christ for nothing more than his Art of Love, and the variety of his Artifices in wooing; and his manifold Wisdom in contriving Mercies in Conversions.

7. The more exemplary our Conversion was, the more peculiar was the mercy shewn in it. And such was that of those forenamed Thessalonians, 1 Thes. 1. 7, 8. Ye were Ensamples to all that believe, and in every place your Faith to Godward was spread abroad. Such likewise was that of the Romans, Rom. 1. 8. And of the Ephesians, so Eph. 2. 7. And thus Paul also speaks of his Conversion: That he was a Pattern of mercie to them that should afterward believe. And thus much shall serve to shew the greatness of this work from the abundance of mercie that God shews forth in it.

Use 2. You that have received this mercy from God, shew mercy to others; if in any thing, in endeavours what in you lies, to beget men to God; tho' God alone doth it, yet he useth means, though those means contribute nothing, yet God useth them, as the Clay to open the Eyes. Hast thou a Chamber-Fellow, a Pupil, a Friend, a Brother, still in their natural estate? Oh if thou hast received mercy from God, endeavour to bring them in to obtain like mercy with thy self. On some have compassion, save them with fear, pulling them out of the Fire. With fear least they should die ere converted, snatching them with all violence. Can you endure to see men burn? Hear what James also says in his last words, If any of you do err from the Truth, and one convert him; let him know that he which converteth the Sinner from the error of his way, shall save a Soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins. Let him know; he speaks of it as a matter of such high worth and moment as few consider the worth, the greatness of such a work. Let him know he saves a Soul from Death, and whom would not that move? And it is a means of forgiving innumerable sins. Who, with speaking a word would not get a man in debt for thousands, freed. A man that converts another (though he contribute so little that God doth all) yet the person converted owes himself to him, Philemon 9. Oh what dowe then owe to Christ? And we have nothing but our selves to give to him.

Use 3. Despise not the Ministry, nor work of it: It is to convert Souls, and therefore it's the best Calling in the World, 1 Tim. 1. 12. And I thank Jesus our Lord, who hath enabled me: For that he counted me Faithful, putting me into the Ministry; The despised Ministry, that few of you now a-days will be of that calling, The Wares it deals in is Souls, Men and their Salvation. 1 Tim. 4. 16. Thou shalt save thy self and them that hear thee. He could not give a greater motive unto any work. God had but one Son, and he made him a Minister, Rom. 15. 8. Christ was a Minister of the Circumcision for the truth of God, which he preach'd among the Jews, through all their Cities. One of his Royal Titles is, a Bishop of Souls, 1 Pet. 2. 25. Only he is the chief, the Arch-Bishop, 1 Pet. 5. 4. and we under-Shepherds.

Use 4. Lastly, What is then, the Glory of the Church, and so should be of Universities? Even this, that multitudes of Converts are Born again therein, and they fill'd with such. In the 57th Psalm, 3, 4, 5, 6. the Psalmist enters into a Comparison, in this very respect, of the Surpassing Glory of Sion and Jerusalem, the Mother of us all above all those Nations, and Cities that were then Renowned in the World, as Babylon, Tyre, Ægypt, &c. who boasted of those Worthies and Heroes that had brought forth and been the Mothers of their Belus, Trismagistus, Glorious things (says he) are spoken of thee, Oh City of God, and far more Glorious, than all the Nations. I will make Mention of Rahab, and Babylon to them that know me. Behold Philistia and Tyre with Æthiopia. This Man was Born there Among their Familiars they used to Boast and Brag of their Brave and Gallant Men, as born among them. But of Sion it shall be said, This and that Man was Born in her. If he had intended to vye and Compare Sion with Babylon and Ægypt, in respect of an outward Birth, and Nobleness in that Respect, or for Worldly Excellencies, that make Men Renowned, they might have excell'd Sion, at least, equal'd her Sons in that Respect. But Sion, considered here as the City of God, her Glory Spiritual, her Children here spoken of, Born of the Spirit, and she a Spiritual Mother of them, (as Gal. 4. 25, 26, 27, 29. the Apostle speaks,) and so their Birth answerable and suitable to the Dignity of the Mother, that she brought forth every day multitudes of Saints and Regenerate Men, Children and Citizens of that Hierusalem and Sion that is above, the Mother of us; her Glory in Gods account was Ten Thousand times greater then what the flower of all other Nations could pretend to. And therefore he adds that God when he makes up his Catalogue of those whom he accounts of, should pass by all theirs, and leave them out, and set down them only, that were Regenerate and Born in Sion, as the only excellent ones of the Earth. As it follows, The Lord himself shall establish her, (as having such a Royal Generation for her Race and Progeny) the Lord shall Write when he counts up the People, that this Man was Born there. All which the Apostle alludes to, speaking of this Heavenly City, and her Children: Ye are come to Mount Sion, the City of the Living God, the Heavenly Jerusalem, the first Born which are Written in Heaven, Hcb. 12. 22, 23. And this was Sion's Glory and Establishment then, Psal. 127. As Arrows in the hand of a Mighty Man, such were the Children of her Youth as these. Oh that such may be Yours. And whilst former times have boasted they have sent forth out of such a Colledge so many Bishops, Deans, &c. or Famous Writers, Men of such and such Learning, and Renown, the Memory of whom you continue in your Windows, let the Glory which you affect be, that such and such a Man was Born again here; and blessed are the Colledges that have their Quiver full of them as the Psalmist there goes on. And these shall more speak for you, with your Enemies in the Gate, then all other Arguments. Yea, God himself will Establish you; and these that Cry, Down with her, Down with her, shall not dare to attempt it, much less to effect it.

C H A P. III.

The Eminent Mercy of God in our Regeneration appears inasmuch as all Three Persons Concur in it, though it be attributed efficiently, more Eminently to the Holy Ghost.

I SHALL farther Demonstrate this Truth, from the Solemnity that is in Heaven at the effecting of this Work of Regeneration, in a set distinct Concurrence and Appearance of all Three Persons, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost therein. Which will yet further shew the greatness of Divine Mercy in this work.

This Great and Happy Conjunction appears in Titus 3.4, 5, 6. But after that the Kindness and Love of God our Saviour, toward Man appeared; Not by Works of Righteousness which we have done, but according to his Mercy, he Saved us, by the Washing of Regeneration, and Renewing of the Holy Ghost; which he shed on us abundantly, through Jesus Christ our Saviour. There is a Distinct and Conspicuous Appearance of these Three, The Word used in the Text is επεφάνη After that the Love and Kindness of God [APPEARED] when our Lord and Saviour was Born, it is said his Star Appeared, Matth. 2. 7. The same Word is used, and the Remembrance thereof, the Church call'd επιφανία the Epiphany unto this Day. But here is a greater Epiphany than that was, an Appearance, not of One Star, but of Three, the Three Persons, not a Constellation, but a Great Conjunction in the Heaven of Heavens.

1. There is the Father, who in the 4th verse is call'd, God our Saviour, as a Distinct Person from Christ, who is also call'd Our Saviour, verse 6. And of the Father, it must be meant, that it is said, that HE hath Saved us, and that HE hath shed on us the Holy Ghost, through Christ Our Saviour, the Father is spoken of as distinct from those Two.

2. There is the Holy Ghost's Appearance, who is said to be Richly, or Abundantly shed, which in those times often was visible: Peter and the rest, having received the Holy Ghost, he doth appear to the Senses of the Standers by, Acts 2. 33. He hath shed forth this (namely the Holy Ghost (mentioned and spoken of in the very words afore) which we see and hear: Your Senses may inform and convince you, it was so evident an appearance, both in the shapes of Tongues, as also in the Gifts and Graces on a sudden poured forth upon illiterate and sinful men. The same appearance of the Holy Ghost you have in Cornelius, Acts 12. 44. which was conspicuous to Standers by: That it is said v. 45. They of the Circumcision were astonished, because on the Gentiles also was poured out the Gift of the Holy Ghost. For they heard them speak with Tongues and glorify God, v. 46.

And 3. Here is Christ's Concurrence also. Which he shed on us through Christ, says the Text. For upon the preaching of Christ, and upon mentioning of his Name, did the Holy Ghost fall upon men. Peter Preaching Christ, and Peace by him, (Acts 10. from v. 36. to v. 44.) When he had centred his Discourse in v. 43. That to this Christ all the Prophets gave witness, that through his Name whosoever believeth in him shall receive Remission of sins, the next words tell us, That whilst Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the Word. The Holy Ghost took that very Cue (as we say) to come in and enter upon the Stage; that is, then to fall down on all that heard heard the Word; thereby witnessing, that as Remission of sins was through his Name only, so that the Holy Ghost, to work Faith in his Name, was poured forth through his Name also. As the same Peter had before in that, Acts 2. 33. Enformed his Hearers, That Christ being exalted at the Right Hand of God, Having received of the Father, the promise of the Holy Ghost, hath shed forth this.

For explication of this: 'Tis true, there is a joint concurrence of all three Persons in every Action that is done: For Opera Trinitatis ad extra sunt indivisa. But then of such lesser Works and Appearances of God, you read the mention of their Concurrence but singly, in several and scattered places of Scriptures. So it is scatteredly attributed to the Father to create, and to the Word, and to the Spirit. But where and when in any work you find at once and together all three appear; all mentioned in a Chapter, as here in the Text for Regeneration; that work is ever some eminent work; and hath a Not only upon it, a Solemnity in it. Yea and thereby is signified, that over and above their ordinary and common Influence, they have a special, distinct, and extraordinary hand and operation. As Gods Presence was ordinarily in the Pillar of Fire, and the Cloud in the Wilderness; but if the Glory of God at any time appeared over and above, upon the Tabernacle, then some great thing was in hand, either of Judgment or Mercy. Perhaps many other Instances might be brought, wherein these three great Persons are together brought in as met in the like near conjunction. I shall instance but in two, the greatest of all other, and but in these, because they hold some parallel, with work of our Regeneration, and are Patterns of it, They both of them apertain to our Lord Christ our Head, to whose Image we are ordained to be conformed, and so will serve to illustrate the like done towards us in this Regenerating of us.

1. What was the greatest work of wonder that ever God did in the World? It was the Incarnation of the Son of God, Jer. 31. 22. God hath created (says the Prophet, speaking of it) a new thing in the Earth, viz. That a Woman should encompass in her Womb that Gheber, that strong and Giant-like Man, Christ, God and Man, without the help of Man.

Now at the Instant time and moment when this was to be done, there was a manifestation and declaration of all three Persons in it. A Record is extant how all, though invisibly, concurred in it, not darkly, with an Us in general words, as at the Creation, Let us make man; but clearly and distinctly. And as at the Transfiguration of Christ (which Peter maketh the solemnest and most glorious manifestation of God, that ever he had been a Eye and Ear-Witness of, 2 Pet. 1. 16, 17.) You find, to grace the Solemnity of it, Moses, Christ, and Elias talking and conferring together: So here, there is the very Conference recorded: A set and solemn Conference it was in Heaven, and the words spoken set down at the Instant of Christs Conception: The Father declaring his decree about it to the Son.) And the Son speaking to the Father of his willingness to it. Paul hath recorded and set down the very words, as a great Secret, as it must be accounted, Heb. 10. 5. When he comes into the World he says, 'tis the Son of God he speaks of, as existing afore he took mans Nature, and the words that follow, spoken by him, are expressly said to be at the time, instant, or moment of his coming into the World, and his being made Flesh when he came into the World, as prophesied of by David, and Paul affirms he then did utter them. This his taking Flesh, was a going forth from his Father (as himself stiles it in John) the setting out upon the greatest Adventure and Design that ever was. And therefore Christ, at the time of his first setting forth, thought fit to speak something about it, as a distinct Person from his Father, as he that should be interested in it; (for none was to be made a Sacrifice but he;) to let him know upon what ground it was he undertook it, meerly in obedience to his Will. The like he did when he Suffered, Not my will, but thine be done, which was his Motto from first to last. Sacrifice and Offering thou (as speaking to his Father) wouldest not, but a Body hast thou prepared me.

Now

Book 9 Now as Christ is thus expressly introduced, so it is to be noticed, that his Father, had given the occasion, having first declared to him and reviv'd the remembrance of his everlasting Decrees and Prophecies about it. For the Speech of Christ, (v. 7. Then said I, lo I come to do thy Will,) Is evidently in answer to another Speech first uttered and declared to him by his Father, which he repeats v. 6. when in Burnt Offerings and Sacrifices for sins, thou O Father, hadst had no pleasure: Then or thereupon said I, Lo, I come; Reviewing also the memory of God's Decree, and an old Record about it: In the Volume of thy Books it is written of me, to do thy Will O God. God the Father had declared his Will, both viva voce, & Scriptis; and the Son his; And the Holy Ghost, the Secretary of Heaven, is brought in as the Recorder of all this, v. 15. Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a Witness. That word [also] bids us take in this Allegation of Christs Speech, as that which it referr'd to, as well as to that Quotation which followed. And he was in a peculiar manner in this, for none else could have told it, as uttered at that very time, but he.

And for this Christ hath expressly told us, That as he and his Father do confer together about the great transactions of mans Salvation: So that the Spirit hears all that passeth, John 16. 13. Nor yet did he stand by as a bare Witness, to relate it and confirm it to us, but was sent down by both as a principal Actor, that had the great and ultimate hand in effecting of it.

The Son of God speaks of a Body prepared by the Father for him to take up. A Body hast thou prepared me. The Father had a hand in it then, but by whom? By the Holy Ghost; so expressly, Luke 1. 35. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: Therefore shall that holy thing that shall be born of thee be called the Son of God. Here is then, if not a visible θεσπυζία, as our Divines call that at his Baptism: Yet an evident Record of an invisible and distinct conjunction of all three Persons, at the Instant of Christs Conception, bearing their parts in it.

1. The Father declaring it as his Will, both to the Son and the Spirit.

2. The Holy Ghost, as the Person sent by the Father, to perform and fashion that Body in Mary's Womb. This Tabernacle being of another building, which God pitch'd, and not Man, Heb. 9. 11. and 8. 2.

And 3. The Son, as the Person that owns and assumes that Body so prepared for him, to dwell in it, as in a Tabernacle (as the Author to the Hebrews terms it) Lo I come into the World, which was only done by his taking that Body to himself, into one Person with him.

And this great and eminent concurrence of all three, may perhaps more clearly be gathered from the Story of the Angel's coming to Mary Luke 1. 26, 27, &c.

1. God the Father sent his Angel. The Angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a City of Galilee named Nazareth, to a Virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the House of David; and the Virgins name was Mary. God the Father gave his Angel his Commission, and a particular note of all the Circumstances, as punctually as any one that sends a Messenger of an Errand. God sent him to a City of Galilee, and by Name Nazareth: To a Virgin espous'd, and her Husbands Name is in the Note, A man whose Name is Joseph, and his Lineage of the House of David. You see God the Father was deeply in it.

2. The Holy Ghost, he was sent, as was observed v. 35. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee.

3. God the Son must needs be supposed most in it of all Three. For by vertue of his assuming unto one Person, that holy thing which was conceived in her, it was, that (v. 32.) He was called the Son of the Highest. And if he had not actually assumed, married into one Person with himself, that which was formed in her Womb by the Holy Ghost, it had not been called the Son of God, as v. 35. it is. He it was, who put on and wore, and married this Flesh made of a Woman; and therefore his consent was of all other most explicite.

And thus began the New Testament (as became it) with the discovery of the Three persons in that great work, at which the Æra of the New Testament itself began. And this so distinct a discovery of the Three at the Incarnation, being thus express and eminent, hath not been enough noticed by our Divines; nor added in handling this Argument, unto those other at Christ's Baptism and Transfiguration: How this at Christs Conception, and that happy Contract and Espousal and Union made between the humane and divine Nature; will conduce to illustrate the like at our Regeneration, I shall shew, when I have added another Conjunction, more famous, because more visible, namely, at Christs Baptism; Where usually our Divines begin the Discovery of the Three out of the new Testament. And this I shall also speak (though more briefly) unto, because both these, put together, will have their joint Vertual Influence of tending to clear the Point in hand.

The meeting of the three Persons at his Conception was invisible: For the formation and union of his humane Nature was, as ours, in the lower parts of the Earth, hidden and under ground, as the Psalmist speaks. And unto which, speaking of Christs formation in the Womb of a Virgin, the Apostle alludes Eph. 4. 9. But what was as then uttered and transacted between the three Persons in secret, was at his Baptism to be proclaimed upon the House Top. It was the publick Owing, Inauguration, and Installment of the Son of God. It was the Solemnization of that Marriage between the two Natures, Humane and Divine, which had been carried more privately yet, by all the same three Witnesses. And accordingly God took a time for this, when all the People were Baptized and standing by (so Luke 3. 21. Mat. 3. 5.) who had come out of Hierusalem, and all Judæa, and the Region about Jordan; when they were all thus standing by. And Jesus was Baptized praying, v. 21. Heaven opened, which is the greatest outward Miracle in the Heavens; as an Earth-quake, or opening of the Earth, is on the Earth. And Heaven opened to let down the Revelation of the greatest Mystery; which only could be Celitus, or from Heaven revealed: A Light comes down from the Throne of God; and all three Persons make an outward manifestation of themselves. Pater in Voce, Filius in Homine, Spiritus sanctus in Columba. And what is the business they appear about? But to own their former Act and Work. To proclaim that Christ they had met to make the Christ at his Conception: Now they meet openly to proclaim him to be the Messiah and Son of God: Yea, and to seal up and give Testimony to the humane Nature it self (who had lived 30 Years without any such extraordinary Revelation) That he was indeed the Son of God: That this holy thing born of that Virgin, was the Son of the most high God, as the Angel told Mary. And unto both these Testimonies and Transactions of God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, both at his Conception and Baptism, doth that tripple Testimony of the Three in Heaven refer, mentioned by John the Apostle, John 1. 5. v. 5, 7. Even to this, That Christ is the Son of God.

John.*

But have I told this long Story meerly to this general purpose, to shew that in Gods greatest works of wonder there is a distinct appearance of the Three? Or withal to add a new Instance of the cooperatio of the Three; And indeed the first mentioned in the New Testament, and upon the greatest occasion. No, not to these ends only or chiefly have I told this Story, as singly to be considered; but further, as more particularly conjunct with the thing in hand, as parallels with all, tho' transcending this of our new Birth and first Conception of the new Creature in us, or that other work, the manifestation of it at the sealing of Salvation, or the revealing Christ in us, (at it is call'd Gal. 1. 16.) The forming the new Creature, for Christ and the three Persons to dwell therein.

There is nothing in Christ, or of Christ, but it is set up as an Image, or Pattern of the like to be done to us in our measure, being Predestinated to be Conformed to the Image of his Son, Rom. 8. As he was Circumcised, so we have a Circumcision ordained for us, Col. 2 We have a Crucifying, Burial, Resurrection, as he had: We have a Conception, a Forming Christ in us, an Uniting us to Christ. As in him there was the Union of Two Natures; there is a time wherein we are made Adopted Sons, as well as there was a time in which he was born the Natural Son: I might Quote Scriptures for all these, but you know them. In the 4th of the Galatians the 4th and 6th Verses compared, the Apostle seems to institute a Parallel between God sending forth His Son made of a Woman, and his sending forth (for he useth that word of both in common) the Spirit of his Son into our Hearts, Crying, Abba Father. But when the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his Son made of a Woman, made under the Law. And because ye are Sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your Hearts, Crying, Abba Father: Thus clearly Parallelling the Conception of the Humane Nature and Union with the Natural Son of God, and our being made Adopted Sons by the coming of the Holy Ghost, into our Hearts. Observe the Parallel in this Respect by compareing Scriptures.

1. As there was a fulness of Time, an instant of Time when the Son of God was to be made Flesh, and so be admitted a Member of this World; so there is a fulness of Time, a set Time to send down his Spirit into the Heart to Regenerate it. Gal. 1. 15, 16. But when it pleased God to Reveal his Son in me, (says Paul,) God let me run on much of my Time, of which he speaks, v. 13, 14. but having chosen me before, and separated me from the Womb, he had a set Time when to Reveal his Son in me.

2. When that set Time is come, set by the Father, of whom Paul there speaks; The Father begins and sets all a work in the Conversion of that Soul. This Christ Expresseth in the 6th of John: Where Christ giving the Reason, why some Souls come to him, and not others, He resolves it into His Fathers Act and Will, as the main; (verse 64, 65. which is the Conclusion of his Discourse about it.) But there are some of you that Believe not. For Jesus knew from the Beginning, who they were that Believed not, and who should Betray him. And he said, Therefore, said I unto you, that no Man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father. Now he attributes to his Father a double Hand or Stroke in it, one towards the Soul it self, the other unto Christ himself, that is to be Married now to it.

1. There is God the Fathers Actual drawing the Soul to Christ, a Whispering to the Heart to perswade it to take his Son; himself secretly wooes the Heart for him, verse 44, 45. No Man can come unto me, except the Father which hath sent me, draw him, and I will raise him up at the last Day. It is Written in the Prophets, And they shall be Taught of God. Every Man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father cometh unto me. Of this you read (Psalms 45.) what kind of words he speaks, and what Counsel he gives a Soul, that is brought to Christ, as verse 14. Harken, Oh Daughter, and give Ear; even as He had spoken to his Son, to make himself a Sacrifice.

2. As He thus actually draws the Soul to Christ, (and the Father is at that Work, and at the Cords end) so He Actually gives the Soul unto Christ, that Christ would both take the Soul, and own it, when it cometh to him. Thus verse 37. All my Father giveth me, shall come to me; and him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out. And he speaks this as the Reason, why some Believe, and some not, though they hear the same Sermon, and have the same means. So verse 36. But I said unto you, That ye also have seen me and Believe not. Now Christ giving these as Reasons, why some came, and some not; and why, he Receives those that come, because the Father draws, and the Father gives; speaks of both as of Two like Acts of the Fathers, done by him at Conversion; then it is the Father thus gives, and the Father thus draws. And though God had given them to the Son of God, from Everlasting, as (John 17. Thine they were, and thou gavest them me.) Yet now he renews that act of giving them to Christ. Therefore de Presenti, Christ useth the present tense. All that the Father gives me, it is a giving, de presenti, as a drawing de Presenti, to distinguish it from that, from Everlasting. And so as Christ resolved it into his Fathers Will, Heb. 10. (as you heard) why he came into the World at all, so verse 38. He resolves the Reason why he owns and receives them that come to him, unto his Fathers Will in like manner. For I came down from Heaven, not to do my own Will, but the Will of him that sent me.

me. And this Gift or Donation is as if then, and at that time, the Father should rise up in Heaven, and say to his Son, Yonder is a Soul which I gave thee from Everlasting, whom thou Diedst for upon the Cross; and now is the fulness of time Written in my Book, the set time appointd by me to have Mercy on him, for him to come unto thee, now take him for thine, take hold of him, and draw him to thy self, and so joyns with Christ in drawing him. This is the Fathers work in Regenerating us. Chap. 3

2. The Sons Work is as follows.

1. Of Himself, he says John 10. 14, 15. I am the good Shepherd, and know my Sheep, and am known of mine. As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father, and I lay down my Life for the Sheep. He knows them particularly, and personally, as they know him, even by name. And as he loves us, ere we love him, so he knows us ere we can know him. Yea, look as distinctly as the Father knows him, and he knows the Father; even so distinctly doth he know, and take notice of all his Sheep, and this when he is to bring them to himself, as v. 16.

2. At that time he first takes and apprehends that Soul as his, and to be his for ever, in answer to that Gift of his Father then made, Phil. 3. 12. I follow after, if that I may apprehend that, for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus. He speaks of that Act put forth by Christ in apprehending him first, ere he did him, which is the fundamental Act of Union. As Christ loves first so he apprehends first. And as he had compared before his Christian Life to a race which he was to run, so here he tells us how Christ took him first by the hand, and held him when he first entred into that race. However he means it of that act of Christs at his first Conversion, which is the foundation of all that we afterward pursue after. And herein you see the parallel runs on, as at Christs Conception: As then the Son of God his work was to take to that Body fitted for him, (Heb. 2. 16. He took not to, or he took not hold of Angels, but the Seed of Abraham.) So us at our Conversion, and thus works the union.

3. The Spirits work hath been discours'd of before. I shall now only mention that Text in Gal. 4. 6. Because ye are Sons (namely by Election) God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your Hearts, crying, Abba, Father. And this Spirit works Faith in us, which is Hands, and Feet, and all. It is feminally the whole New Creature, Hands to lay hold on Christ again; and we embrace him (Heb. 11.) And embrace him gladly, Acts 2. 41.

4. As all three Persons thus between, and among themselves deal secretly, and treat with each other for us; the Father giving and recommending, the Son apprehending, both sending the Holy Ghost into the Heart: So in our coming to God, both first and last, we have our pass from one Person to the other, and have distinctly to deal with them all. Which is contained in one verse, Eph. 2. 18. For through him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father. And this is more open and more sensible to us, as the other more secret. The word in the original is προσαγωγῆν. The Spirit being come into the Heart leads us by the hand back again to Christ: And Christ leads us to the Father.

I will give you but one Instance of one Conversion, which I have had recourse to hitherto all along, and which is Paul's, who professeth himself converted, as for the substance of it his τύπον, for a Pattern, 1 Tim. 1. And though his Story hath this extraordinary in it, that Christ visibly apprehended, him. And the Holy Ghost fell on him in laying on of hands upon him; yet for substance the same things are done in Heaven for us by the Three, who love us as they loved him: Even as at Christs Baptism all Three appeared, but at ours not, yet we are Baptized in the Name of all the Three. In the substance of Salvation, Conversion, Faith, &c. The Apostles had not any Privilege, that we have not.

Book 9 1. The Fathers good pleasure appeared in Paul's Conversion, as you have it expressed Gal. 1. 15. 16. When it pleased God, who separated me from the Womb, to reveal his Son in me.

2. Of Jesus Christ, you may read twice in the Acts, chap. 9. from the 6th verse, and Chapter 26. How Christ bestirred himself at his Conversion. He meets him in the way at the place and time appointed. And himself speaks to him v. 5, 6. And he said, Who art thou Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest: It is hard for thee to kick against the Pricks. And he trembling and astonished said, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the City, and it shall be told thee what thou shalt do. And Christ directed him what to do: And not only so, but speaks himself to Ananias, v. 11. And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the Street which is called Streight, and enquire in the House of Judas, for one called Saul of Tarsus: For behold, he prayeth. You see he gives as particular directions as God the Father did to the Angel, when he sent him about the Conception of his Son. It is to shew what notice he takes of all the Circumstances of a Souls Conversion. No kind Husband could more bestir himself at his Wives Labour than Christ did at Paul's travel in the New Birth. He calls up Ananias at midnight, as it were, bids him go in all haste to help him, Behold, (saies he) he prays, v. 11. He is in his throws.

3. The Holy Ghost (v. 17, 18.) wholly falls upon him, and this at his laying on of hands, and hi being Baptized.

Use. You that are Regenerate, and born again, the Saints and Children of God, shall I affect your Hearts a little? Whom would not this love move? There was a time, though perhaps thou knowest it not, when all this ado was in Heaven about thee, unknown to thee, when thou wert first married unto Christ, the greatest Espousal that ever was transacted, one alone excepted, and that was when the humane Nature and Divine were espoused together in Christ. And the same kind of stir that was for Paul, was also for thee; what was done extraordinarily and visibly by him, was as effectually and strongly carried on and done for thee. He was directed by Christ what to do, and Ananias directed to go to him, and his Condition made known to him, that he might know what to speak unto him. Now the same hand did secretly guide and direct thee: Perhaps to go to such a Congregation, which thou hadst no mind unto; or for fashion-sake frequentedst: Or thou fell'st into such or such a Company of such or such persons, who spake so or so unto thee: Or such and such an accident befell thee as thou wert going such or such a Journey: As Saul in seeking his Fathers Asses, was meet by Samuel in the way, and he is anointed unto a Kingdom: And so wert thou taken in the heat of the pursuit of Vanities. And as his secret Providence directed thee, so perhaps the Minister or Person that spake unto thee, when thou wert first drawn to believe or close with Christ, had such a word put by God into his mouth, as if he had known thy very Heart and Condition, such promises as most nearly concern'd and suited thy Spirit and Condition, and Temptations. Even as he directed Ananias to speak to Paul what most concern'd him. And when by this invisible Conduct he had brought thy Heart and his Word together; He then shed forth his Spirit upon thee, Who made that good word effectual to thee, and it return'd not empty to him that sent it, but had that blessed Effect that he intended. Or perhaps when thou wert first humbled and stricken for sin, God took a keen Arrow out of the Quiver of his Word, and put it into the hand of an able Minister or Friend, which shot by him at random (as when Ahab was stuck) was carried home by the wind of the Spirit that went with it into the Heart and wounded it. And such Circumstances as these may move thee to acknowledge that good hand, that was the Mover and Orderer of them in Heaven, in Analogie to his Dealings with Paul. But above all the Three persons affect thy Heart with the love of God the Father unto thee. At such a time when thou wert in the Church in the midst of the Croud; first the Father he spied thee out there, and remembers it was the time, the full time to have mercy on thee, which he had written in his Book. And thereupon riseth up (as it were) in Heaven, and saith unto his Son (as Christ Christ upon the Cross did to his Mother, Woman behold thy Son) See, Son, says he, behold thy Spouse, designed unto thee from Everlasting. Take him and apprehend him for thine at my hand: I will see you married, and the indissoluble knot tyed ere he stir from hence. Which is more, than as if the greatest King on Earth should espye, in the midst of Multitudes, a Beggar standing in Rags, and say to the Prince, his eldest Son, Go marry her here afore me. And then when he had bespoke Christs Heart, he also bespoke thine. He let down a Cord of love into it, which took hold thereof, and drew thee by it to his Son and to himself.

And when Jesus Christ had thy Soul actually a new commended to him, by his Father, he looking on thee, said with himself, That Soul! Surely I should know it. This is the very same that my Father presented unto me from everlasting, says the Second Person, in all that glorious Array which I am to be the Endower of her with, which made her appear so lovely, as it then took my Heart; but it is so much altered since, I scarce can know it, being defiled with so many Sins. And yet again, saith the man Christ Jesus, it is the same was presented unto me by name with all these very sins, when I was to suffer. I know her sure enough by a good Token; for she was brought and presented to me in the Garden, and hanging on the Cross, with these very sins, she is now guilty of, and I have the Remembrance in Scars upon my Soul, which these sins made, when my Soul was made an Offering for sin: And so he takes her for his. And then he sends his Spirit into thy Heart; And what the Spirit wrought upon thee when he drew thee unto Christ; I leave that to thine own experience to bring to mind.

Now the joy that was thereupon in the Brest and Bosom of God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, was not contained alone in this Transaction, but to make the Solemnity the greater, it was diffused throughout the Heavens. Not one, but two Parables are made on purpose by our Lord Christ to express this Jubilee unto us, in Luke 15. First, there is a man that sought his lost Sheep, than a poor woman that sought her lost Groat. The Stir and Zeal each shewed about it is sufficiently expressed; as deciphering the Heart of God and Christ therein to such a Soul, in that he leaves Ninety nine to seek such a Soul, long before it thinks of seeking him, which it doth not, but is prevented by him. And he goes out, with that resolution, not to give over seeking until he hath found it, come what will. And this eager resolution is expressed v. 4. He leaves the Ninety nine in the Wilderness, and goes after that which is lost, until he find it. And then when he hath found it, he lays it on his Shoulders rejoicing. What doth this signifie, but his own abundant gladness? He hath at last found it, with care to keep it: And this Action of laying it on his Shoulders speaks his Heart, as saying within himself, Have I now got you with all this trouble and pursuit? I will now make sure work of letting you run away again, or giving me, any more, the slip. So doth he rejoice, and so careful is he, that he lays it on his Shoulders, he doth not venture to drive it afore him: No, he will not trust it so loosely. He doth not only hold it in his Hands; (though therein (as Christ says) 'tis safe enough, for my Sheep none shall pull out of my Hands;) But puts himself to some trouble and care about it, lays it on his Shoulders Rejoicing. Oh how full of joy is Gods Heart and Christs Heart that he cannot contain it in his own Brest, but makes a solemnity of it! Calls together a Parliament of his Neighbours and of his Friends, v. 6.) and makes such a matter and story of it; saying unto them Rejoice with me, for I have found my Sheep that was lost. So then, it's having been lost, is that which increaseth his Joy. And yet when all is done, it is but a ragged, scabby Sheep all this ado is about. Oh but God loves it, Christ hath laid down his Life for it. For who is this Sheep? v. 7. It is a Sinner that repents. And who are those Friends God calls together thus to rejoice? v. 10. There is joy in the presence of the Angels of God. The higher House of Heaven is call'd together on purpose to rejoice, though the lower House regards not such a poor Soul.

Well, but it will be said it may be thus at so great a Shoal of Converts, as in the Conversion of the Jews shall fall out, or when 3000 in a day are Converted, as (Acts 2.) Nay, but this is at the Conversion of one Sinner: And as Abraham made a Feast at Isaac's weaning, so God feasts the Angels with the Conversion of each and every Sinner. And 'tis emphatically said the Angels of God, even those that have God to rejoice in, have their joy yet more full by the Addition. But it carries with it this Reason, That it is because they are Friends. The account is v. 6. God and Christ are so well pleased with it, as the Angels know and perceive full well, their Nearness and One-ness with God, and ingratiate themselves by Joyful acclamations at their Conversion.

C H A P. IV.

That there is an exceeding Greatness of Gods Power apparent in our Regeneration. This is demonstrated from the nature of the work in General.

TH E R E is not only Infinite mercy, but the almighty power of God manifested in our Regeneration. It is exceeding greatness of Gods power, no less than that which raised Christ up to Glory, which is necessary to work Faith and Grace in the Heart of every true Believer. I desire that all those who in their Opinions and Expressions do lessen and extenuate Gods work herein (as Arminians do; or others who in the secret sayings of their Hearts, and practise in their Lives, make the work of Grace very easy, and in their own power, and therefore refer their Repentance to their own leisure) would but come and consider what the Spirit of God tells us, Eph. 1. 19, 20. And what is the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power; v. 20. Which he wrought in Christ when he raised him from the Dead, and set him at his own right hand in the Heavenly places. Whatsoever low, and mean, and slight Conceit we, not knowing the power of Gods Grace, may have of it; yet let us but consider,

1. Who it is that let fall these words, it was not only Paul (who had the deepest experience and insight into a work of Grace, more than all the Discourfers in the World) whose authority were enough in the case; But it is the Spirit of God in Paul, from whom they dropt, 2 Pet. 1. 10. compared with the Chap. 3. v. 15, 16. Now it is this Spirit of God that gave out these words, who is the great Agent in the Business, and employed in it, (Luke 1. 35.) It is the power of the Highest (as it is call'd Luke 1. 35.) who works it; who hath been the Converter of the Apostle Paul, and of many millions of Souls; that expressly says there is thus much power goes to it. If at any time God will convert any Soul, he must put forth the exceeding greatness of his power. If we would know how much Force goes to the effecting of any thing, the surest way is to hear the Agent himself speak; The Standers by, nay, nor the Patient it self, doth not, so fully discern it often; when Christ healed the woman of the Bloody Flux and that but by the touch of the Garment, the Standers by, the Disciples, they discerned nothing; but hear Christ himself speak, Δυναμις, Power or Vertue (says he) is gone out from me; He could tell, and best might, what pains went to effect that miracle; because it went from him. So now also for the work of Grace, because it is dispatched often and done in a trice, as we see in Paul and the Thief, and done as it were by the touch or striking of the words of a weak man at the Ears of another, therefore the Standers by think there is no great power power goes to all this; but ask him whose work it is, and he tells you, it is the exceeding greatness of his power, &c. If a strong man lift up a great weight, and doth it slightly; the Standers by are not competent Judges what force goes to it, but only the man himself that felt the stress put to it. So it is here. Indeed the Spirit of God cloaths and hides this exceeding greatness of power working in Believers Hearts, by using such sweet persuasive motives, and gentle, rational Inducements, as Cords do draw mens Hearts, as the Word of God hath in it; which is the reason why some bring down all this great power spoken of, to moral persuasion, making the working power of the Spirit of God in drawing mens Hearts, but as an Engineer that draws and winds up some heavy weight by Ropes fastned to it; as in Cranes and the like Artifices: So as the Ropes bear the stress, and all is done by their force; and if the weight be too heavy, it cracks them, and down falls all again; and so the Spirit works not but by those moral persuasions in the Word, by enlightning, fastning 'em to the Heart; and if the Poise of the Will, and weight of Sin, (which so presseth down, Heb. 12. 1.) If it breaks those Bands asunder, all the Spirits work is lost; the Heart falls down and settles again in the same Estate it was; which if it were true, wherein should this exceeding greatness of Gods power be spent? Doth the Spirit make more of it than it is? if the Spirit effected but by his power concurring with the force of such Twine threads only in themselves; why should such big Words be used about it? You see in such kind of working, the power of a Child is able to wind up great Weights, if the Cords hold: But the Truth is my Brethren, That the Spirit, willing to hide the greatness of his power, immediately working, and having hold on the heart, [the Work of Grace being the only standing miracle in the Church] useth these Instruments in the working of it, yet doth it not according to the Strength and Force of these, but according to the exceeding greatness of his power alone. As when the Angel stir'd the Water of the Pool, it was not the Angels stirring that Healed; but the immediate power of God then extended, and by that means, So nor is it the stirring of Gods Spirit of the Heart by good motions, or moral persuasions, though these be used, that work Grace; but the exceeding greatness of Gods Power extended in and by these; working beyond the sphere of their power and activity: And that this is so, will be evident if you

2. Consider Secondly, the Instance given; It is said to be the same Power that wrought in Jesus Christ in raising him from the Dead: Now to raise any one from the Dead, is an act of the immediate power of God. Christ in raising up Lazarus said indeed, Lazarus, Come forth, John 11. 45. But was it the Word think we, or the Power of God that went with this Word, rais'd him? And so the Spirit useth Persuasions to the Heart, but there is a farther power goes with them; But yet if you observe the Words of the Text, the working of Gods power here in Believers Hearts, is not simply Parallell'd with the power of raising Christ from Death to Life; but from Death even to that glorious Estate, he now in the Heavens enjoys, which is a work of further power than the raising up of Lazarus and any Dead man; for there is a great distance between Death and Life, so as it must be a great Power to raise one from the One to the Other; but between Glory and Life, there is yet a hundred times a vaster difference; So that now to raise Jesus Christ, so low laid in the Grave, and Subdued by Death, not to Life only, but far above Principalities, &c. to that Top of Glory in Heaven; this is the exceeding Greatness of Gods power indeed: Therefore (Rom. 1. 4.) this work of raising himself thus up, is made the greatest that ever God did by his power; and which of all other manifested to the utmost, That Christ was the Son of God; put that out of question, more than all his Miracles; he was Declared to be the Son of God with power by the Resurrection from the Dead; such was the Power shewn in that work above all else; and therefore the Holy Ghost singles out that, to express his power in raising men from Sin to Grace; a greater distance being between them, than simply the natural Death and Life; even as much as between the estate of Christ humbled in the Grave, and Glorified in Heaven; and the like exceeding greatness of power worketh in the one and other.

3. Again

Again. 3. Consider the great Superlative Expressions the Holy Ghost useth, besides the Paralleling it with the instance given. It is not only great power, but greatness of power, and that exceeding greatness: Now such superlative expressions are never used, concerning any Attribute, but when it is manifested in some work of God to the utmost, and more then in other former works of his: In comparison of which, these superlative expressions are used and taken up: And indeed you shall find them only used in the expressing his Works of Grace; which being as it were Nova Scena et ultima Representatio, The last stage whereon his Attributes are to shew themselves, and act their parts; therefore every Attribute that appears on this Stage in any Act, doth its utmost, most superlatively, beyond what was done in former works of Creation, Providence, &c. and therefore every Attribute that bears a part herein, hath superlative Expressions of it. Take any Attribute, viz. his Mercy, which he shews in other Works, when he speaks of them as shewn in other Works, 'tis in the positive degree, simply thus, His Mercy is over all his Works; that is, shewed in, and to them all: But when he comes to speak of the Mercy and Love shewn in the Work of Grace, he contents not simply so to express it, but he tells us of the Riches of his Glory, and the Height, Breadth, &c. of his Love, which passeth Knowledge, Eph. 3. 16, 18, 19. And he speaks of God who is rich in Mercy, according to the great Love whereby he hath loved us, Eph. 2. 4. See what Superlative Terms he here useth, that are in no work of common Mercy, because indeed more Mercy is shewn to one poor Redeemed Soul, than to all the World besides; The like is of his Power here, expressed in other works of Creation, it is expressed in the positive degree, Rom. 1. 20. They (says the Apostle) express his Power and Godhead: But when he comes to speak of the power shewn in the working of Grace and second Creation, then nothing serves to express it, you see, but the exceeding greatness of his power: For it being a New Creation, his last Work and way of manifesting his Attributes, so every attribute must exceed in it; for that is Gods manner, that his last Works if he do any, should be greater, and clean put down the former. He observes it in Deliverances (Jer. 23. 7.) and so in all other Works, so as if he shewed power in Creating at first; if he come to Create again, he will have it be such a Work wherein much more power shall be shown, even the exceeding greatness of his power; for every Wise Agent, if he doth a thing over again, will be sure to exceed; he Reserves the Greatest to the last. Now therefore will you set the Work of Creation by this Work, and equal Gods Power in that with this here, see how it equals it: Creation is a making something out of nothing: Why this Work is a Creation also, 'tis called (2 Cor. 5. 17.) a Creature, and we are said (Eph. 2. 10.) to be Created to good Works. But yet there is something more, for it is said to be a New Creature; now as in the case of the Covenants, (Heb. 8. 13.) speaking of the New Covenant, he hath made the first Old; so this Phrase, the New Creature, implies, that there was an abolishing of some old thing first; and so the next words do certifie us, 2 Cor. 5. 17. Old things are past away, all are become New. Behold here is a greater Work than was at the First Creation, in that there was but a making something out of nothing; here are Old things first to be Destroyed, to pass away (that is) come to nothing) which to do, requires as much power as to Create) and then New to be made. There is a Great Building, Old things pull'd down, and abundance of Rubbish to be pull'd down and carried away, and then a New Erected; yea, all Old things must be done away; and all must be made New, not a Stick, or Stud that goes to Old Building, will serve in the New: And yet this is not all; For in the First Creation, only nothing was before, and nothing that opposed it; though all made of nothing, yet nothing against it; but now in this Work, these Old things do mightily oppose it, 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. Rom. 8. 7. God hath much more therefore to do, not only to destroy Old things before he make New, but Old things that are Enmity.

There is not only a changing of Water into Wine, which is done daily in the Grape, as (John 2.) but of contrary into contrary, of Hearts of Stone into Flesh, Flies and Wolves into Lambs, Ezek. 36. 26. Isa. 11. 6. This is greater than any Miracle Christ shewed, and therefore he tells his Apostles that were Workers with God as it were in this Work, that greater Works than he did, they should do, even as Great as the Greatest and last Work Christ ever did, in raising himself from Death to Glory. Chap. 4.

Use. Is there such an exceeding Greatness of power in the saving Work of Gods Grace, which interests us in the rich Inheritance of Glory? Why methinks this should begin to Rowse and Startle many of us, and make every one of us, that look for a part and Portion in that Inheritance, to consider with himself, whether there is such a Work of Grace in his Heart, as bears proportion, correspondency, and in the working of it answers to such an exceeding Greatness of Power, so as necessarily it should draw forth so much Power from God, to work it. For we cannot imagine God doth overdo any thing, without imputation of Folly; no Wise Agent will put more strength to the working and effecting of a Business than will necessarily work it, for there would be so much strength as is overplus, spent in vain, as the Prophet complains. A King will not stretch out his Perogative Royal, or send an absolute mandate, use his extraordinary power, when the bare intimation of his Pleasure will do it; and therefore certainly God, who is said to do all things in weight and measure; and who doth always proportion his power to the Work, will never exert such an exceeding graetness of power, if less would serve the turn; Conclude therefore we must that the true Work of Grace, hath all this Power spoken of necessarily drawn out to work it; and therefore we should do all well to examine whether we have had such a working on our Hearts, as bears proportion with such a power, so as we can Conclude and say, I feel such a Work wrought in me, which no power but the power of God thus mightily unbarred and manifested, could ever have wrought; and the Prints of such a Work we may safely build on, as a note of Election, as the Apostle makes it, 1 Thes. 4. 5. Knowing your Election for that the Word came to you in power, &c. And indeed, I know, no better way to distinguish the common workings of the Spirit, which so many falsely take for Notes of Electi-on, than by this Truth now in hand; for though they be all Works of the Holy Ghost, and Works of power also, yet not such as the exceeding greatness of power here spoken of, and no less, should be engaged in them; and therefore now to lay aside such as have had no working on their Hearts by the Spirit more then nature, who as those (Acts 19. 2.) cannot tell by any Working that they have felt of the Word and Spirit, whether there be any Holy Ghost, Yea, or No; and who are Resembled unto the High-way side, to let them pass as those in Jude 10. Who as Brute Beasts, know no more then Nature: Let us Examin you that think you have some Work of Grace to shew for Heaven.

1. First, Some will say, I am no Adulterer, no Drunkard, no Unjust Person, but Sober, Chaste, &c. and is not this a Work of a Gods Power in me, and of his Grace, being more than Nature?

For Answer.

1. I Grant it is a Work of God, more then Nature, Mans Nature being as fully prone to these Sins as any other, and the Scripture telling expresly that God restrains such Dispositions in Men, God kept Abimelech from Adultery, (Gen. 20. 2.) And Laban from hurting Jacob, Gen. 31, 34. &c.

Yea, and 2. I grant it to be a Work of Power, as great as to say to the proud Waves of the Sea stay here your Waves, and overflow not; or as it was to chain up the power of the Fire, from singeing the Garments of the Three Children; so to say effectually to the Pride, Malice, and envy, &c. of a Wicked Man, Boil not over, requires as great power; and not only so, but to Work and Stamp slight Impressions and Tinctures of Moral Vertues, is a Work of great power. Yet,

3. It

3. It is not comparable to that Power which wrought in Jesus Christ, in raising him from the Dead.

1. Because the instance of Restraining Grace alledg'd, is but keeping the Dead Body from stinking, and putrifying so much as else it would, and causing it to retain some of the colours a Living Body hath, though Wan and Liveless, which Embalming of a Dead Body will do, for many a Year: And so indeed that Men are kept from stinking, and retain some Colours of Justice, Chastity, &c. is from an answerable Embalming power of the Spirit, but this is far from that power which puts a new Principle of Life into a Dead Man, and raiseth him up to Life.

2. Restraining Grace, is but keeping in, and restraining Sin in Men, yet so as still there is not the less of it in a Mans Heart, as there is not the less Water in the Sea, for Bridling the Foaming and Raging Waves of it; whereas in the Work of Grace, there is an Abolition or Annihilation in part begun of old things, so as they pass away, and cease to be; now that is a power equal to Creating.

And 2. There is an alteration, of Corrupt Nature in as much as a New Creature, and contrary Workmanship wrought, so as the Dross is turned into pure Gold throughout; but those Tinctures of Moral Vertues are not a New Creature in Nature, changing it throughout, but a slight and superficialy Gilding of the Dross, corrupt Nature remaining so still; which impressions also are wrought and maintained, even by the help of what is left in Corrupt Nature, namely, the Natural Conscience, in which stamps of Law are written, and natural Wisdom improved, both which stirred up, and actuated by these apprehensions that Vice is evil, Vertue good, and that in Wisdom it is best, in a Mans Carriage here; to shun the one, and follow the other, and that it is of Profit and good Report amongst Men, by means of these thoughts, I say, such Restraint, and he impressions of Vertues are easily wrought, even by the help of what is left in Nature it self; whereas now in the Work of Grace, the Spirit doth create a new by his immediate power, and therefore 'tis called a New Creature, and this made out of nothing that was in the Heart before to further the Work. To Conclude, This stirring up of Moral Vertues, &c. is but as a new dressing of an old Garment, which though it may deceive some, and make them think it is a New Creature, yet, there is nothing added to it that was not, or might not be in it before, only by the help of Conscience and natural Wisdom some Tufts of good, are stirred up; but in the Work of Grace, there is not only a new dressing of Corrupt Nature but a putting it off; and then a new Man Created, and that put on, Eph. 4. 22, 24. not a Gilding only, but a renewing throughout, changing us in the Spirit of the mind, turning the Metal into Gold to the bottom, verse 23. But as for the superficialy Tincture in such civil Men, if not in time worn off, as Gilding is, and though it appears in their ordinary Carriages of their Lives, as set in such and such a condition, yet let them be melted a little, and tryed, put upon some new Temptation, cast into another Fashion, then the base metal, the corruption and naughtiness of their Hearts appear: Whereas a Godly Man, whose Heart is throughout changed, try him how you will, cast him into what Mould you will, yet the Grace appears. I therefore earnestly desire those that find no further work, of Power on their Hearts, then restraint from Evil, and slight dispositions to Moral Vertues, to consider of their Estates.

I come to a Second sort of Men, and to a further Work: For some will now Plead, I find not only my Heart thus Embalmed, as you call it, by the Spirit, and the corrupt Lusts of the Old and Dead Man, as they are called, (Eph. 4. 22.) kept from stinking and putrifying, together with some additions of Moral Vertues; But I find some lively Warmth wrought in my Heart, and Affections by the Word and Spirit, even to such things, and by such Motives as the Word delivers. In Hearing and Praying, &c. my Eyes are enlightned to understand and assent to those Spiritual Truths in the Word, my Heart so far wrought on, and such stirrage of Affections, upon the consideration of the Truths delivered therein, as I can sorrow for my Sin, tremble at the Threatnings, Joy in the Promises, and find flickerings also of good purposes, desires to obey, and some endeavours, and I hope you will say, that it is impossible, but that such a working as this, should be only from the exceeding greatness of Gods power, a meer supernatural work of the Spirit of Christ, above the power of Nature, in it self, as it is for a dead Man to have Warmth, or move, or speak, and one now that hath such a work of power will presently say, as the Magicians did, (Exo. 8. 16, 17.) This surely is the Finger of God; a work of the greatness of Gods power, such as this no wicked man can have that is Dead in Trespases and Sins.

1. I grant it is a work of the Spirit, and above the Sphere of Nature, and its activity in it self alone, for it is a sure Rule the Apostle gives, 1 Cor. 12. 3. that no Man says Jesus is the Lord, without the Spirit; that is, no Man can have his Understanding brought to assent to, and profess Christ to be the Lord and Saviour, or any other truth preached in the Gospel, unless the Spirit perswade his Judgment of it; much more to have the Heart wrought upon, and stir'd up to good, by such Truths, is a Work above Nature, and therefore of the Spirit; why but yet this is little for a Mans comfort, for the Apostle in that place, as the rest of the Chapter, speaks of common gifts of the Spirit, communicable to Reprobates, as that of healing, &c. and besides the ensurance shews, That many wicked in the Church, even such as sin against the Holy Ghost, have had a supernatural working of the Spirit, for they are Convinc'd of the Truth of Religion and ways of Grace, which by Nature they could never be, but by the Holy Ghost, which therefore they are said to sin against; so that a man, you see, may have a supernatural working of the Spirit in him and upon him; and yet not a work of saving Grace; the very insensible Creatures have workings of the Spirit on them; (Gen. 1. 2.) 'Tis said, the Spirit of God moved upon the Waters; and suppose he moves upon the Surface of thy Heart; and hath some supernatural working upon it; doth it presently follow then that thou art in the Estate of Grace? No more than it doth that the Waters are.

2. I grant that it is the work of power and that more extended and greater than the former. For the former was but a power restraining Corrupt Nature, but this is an elevating, raising it to such acts as are simply, and of its self, above its reach and own pitch; and therefore (Heb. 6. 4.) It is so expressed and called, a Tasting of the Power of the World to come; that is, the apprehensions of the World to come; as Heaven, Hell, the day of Judgment; of things belonging to another World, have powerful workings on mens Affections, being enlightned by the Spirit to apprehend them in some measure and sort; insomuch as in Felix (Acts 24. 26.) The Discourse of Judgment to come made him tremble, so powerfully it wrought on him, it shook his Heart, as a mighty Wind doth an Aspen Leaf; so King Agrippa's Heart at the hearing of Paul's Conversion, and of Christs Sufferings and Rising from the Dead, (Acts 26.) began to be stir'd, to have provocations to become a Christian. I forbear Instances any more, and yet it doth not follow that such a work as this holds proportion with the exceeding greatness of Gods power.

1. For though it be a work of the Spirit, yet it doth not follow it is saving Grace. Indeed if the Spirit of God were a meer natural agent in working, and always did work ad ultimum potentiae suae, to the utmost of his Power, as Fire, which when it burns must needs burn as much as in it can; and the Sun when it shines, shineth according to the fulness of its Strength; then indeed every man that had any working of the Spirit of God upon his Heart, might certainly conclude that he wrought it by the exceeding greatness of his power; but the Spirit of God is a free and voluntary Agent; who therefore may, and doth moderate his Power in his Works; puts more or less to,

Book 9 according to the working of his good pleasure; and hence now it comes to pass, that every man who is yet Partaker of the Holy Ghost and of his workings, hath not yet a saving work wrought in him, such an one as draws forth the exceeding greatness of his power; for though it is the same Spirit that is in the Regenerate and works thus mightily; yet you must learn to know from the Apostle, (1 Cor. 12. 6.) That there may be diversities of Operations, tho' the same God which worketh all in all; and all these worketh the self-same Spirit, according as he will v. 10, 11. And that you may see the Truth of this, viz. That you may be Partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have your Judgments thus wrought on, by Enlightnings and Affections stirr'd by supernatural Objects; and yet all this not be a saving work; take only one Instance; which is that of Balaam, that remained a Wizard, a Wretch, a Devil, who went after the Wages of Unrighteousness: (2 Pet. 2. 15. Numb. 24.) First the Spirit of the Lord came on him; Secondly, marvelously Enlightened his Eyes to see some Glimmerings of the true God, (v. 3, 4.) and of the Blessed Estate of Gods People, witness his expressions, (v. 5, 6. to the 9th) and that so also as his Heart was wrought upon and stirred to desire that condition, Chap. 23. 10. Let me dye the Death of the Righteous, &c. and yet who will say his Heart was changed?

2. There may be such a work upon a mans Heart, and yet not the exceeding Greatness of Gods power go to work it.

1. As in the former Instance of restraining power; so here in the Spirits elevating power, as I may so call it; Let us suppose a Dead Body lay before you, it is in the power of a man bringing it to a Fire, or by rubbing, to stir up Warmth in it; let an Angel come, He can take it up, enform it, act it, so as it shall serve to move; speak, and perform the like Actions of Life: And yet this Body is not all this while raised up from Death to Life, nor can all the sole-rubbing, or all simple moving it so by all the Anpower of Gods Angels ever do it. So now my Brethren, is it in the point in hand; besides the enabling or restraining mens corrupt Lusts; there is a farther working on corrupt Nature remaining still dead in Trespasses and Sins; a power elevating corrupt Nature to perform acts of Life in shew, and as it were the Spirit enlightning, warming, rubbing on mens Affections by the Word, and the things revealed therein, moving them and carrying them on to good purposes, endeavours, and yet still this Heart may be in it self dead, no new principle of Life put in, besides the present actings of the Spirit: No new Breath of Life as was breathed into Adam, who (1 Cor. 15. 45.) was made a Living Soul, and therefore now when the Spirit ceaseth to move on this Heart, as the Angel sometimes did on the Waters of the Pool, all Smyptoms of Life vanish, warmth is gone, and the Heart is as dead as a Log, as ever it was; as Balaam's also was out of that good mood; so that you see this is far short of the working of his power, which wrought on Jesus Christ when he was raised from the Dead; a less power than this goes to the working of it: For such a raising of Dead Bodies the Devil hath often practised, carrying Dead Bodies out of their Graves: There is no such exceeding greatness of power goes to such a work.

2. In reason also it may appear, That to the effecting such a work as this in mans Heart, There needed not such an exceeding greatness of power be drawn forth. For there need not any new Principle, any new Soul or Life, be created, or infused into mans Heart, to make it capable of such a work as this is. For there are principles remaining in corrupt Nature, which if but stirred, acted, elevated by the Spirit of God, are capable of all this: And simply to stir those Principles up, and propound Objects to them, and so to act and affect them, is not a work of the exceeding greatness of Gods Power.

First, I will shew this in the work of Enlightning: And Secondly, In the work of being affected with the things that Word delivers.

First, For the work of Enlightning, there is in every man an eye of Understanding and Conscience which though Sin-shot (that I may allude to the Phrase of Blood-shot in the eye) and defiled, (Titus 1 15.) by reason of which defilement it cannot indeed see the Spiritual goodness as it is in Spiritual things things themselves. (1 Cor. 2. 14.) Yet even this Blood-shot eye being able truly and really to apprehend the fearfulness of Gods Wrath, and the torments in Hell which come by Sin ; is therefore by consequence capable to see an accidental Goodness in Christ and the ways of God, viz. That by them this misery may be escaped. And this defiled Understanding is capable to apprehend that the Estate of the Righteous after this Life is Glorious and Blessed (as Balaam did) though indeed and in truth, if once they came to partake of it in Heaven, the Presence of God would be Hell to them. Mans Understanding being naturally in the dark, to make it apprehensive of the goodness of Spiritual things thus far, there must be not only a propounding these Objects to it, but also a new Light brought into it, which may make manifest this accidental Goodness, this Goodness of them in the general spoken ; for we are Darkness, and it is Light makes all things manifest ; and therefore those that taste of the powers of the World to come (Heb. 6.) are said to be enlightened ; that is, there is a new Light brought in, which did not shine about their Minds before : But now to bring barely a new Light into the Mind, is not a work of the exceeding greatness of Gods power on the Mind it self ; for it is but extrinsecal and outward, no more than to bring a Candle into a Room to a man that hath some sight already whereby he sees new things, which being in the dark before, he saw not ; but there is thereby no intrinsecal Principle put into the eye of the man ; no alteration wrought in it by this : As in a new Creation, and in a Resurrection, (to which this work of Grace is parallell'd) there must be supposed to be ; and yet in some degree or other God vouchsafes to every man that comes into the World (John 1. 9.) some Light wherewith their minds are enlightened.

But you will say what is there further wrought on the Understanding of a regenerate man ; which will hold proportion with the power manifested in Creation, and the Resurrection of Jesus Christ ?

Answer, That besides shining upon the mind with a new supernatural Light, there is a new Principle, a new Eye, as I may call it ; a new power of discerning, put into and created in the Understanding of a man ; whereby he is further enabled to see the Intrinsecal, Spiritual Goodness, which is in Christ and Grace ; to see the Beauty, the Goodness of Holiness, of Gods Face and Presence ; which never entered into the Heart of any carnal man. Therefore to this enlightning, there is not only the Spirit of revelation given (Eph. 1. 18.) that is, the Holy Ghost coming with a new external Light, making them manifest ; but there is also given an inward Spirit of wisdom created in the mind it self ; a new Habit and Principle of Spiritual discerning and of the wisdom of the Just, (for so Spirit is taken often in Scripture) whereas the other are barely said to be enlightened. There is a new eye Created ὡς ἐπιγνοῦς, on purpose to know them (Col. 3. 10.) so it is in the original ; There is a new Principle of Life put in, as in a Resurrection, there useth to be : For so Christ expresth it (John 12.) calling it the Light of Life, that is such a Light as hath a new Principle of Light joined with it, and enableth a man to see Spiritual things as a Living, Spiritual man should see them, which is Spiritually (1 Cor. 2. 15.) so that such a work as this holds you see in Scripture expressions proportion with the Creation and Resurrection of Christ, to annihilate and bring to nothing Flesh and Corruption, in the Judgment, &c. and in the room a new Spirit of judging things aright it is Created a new Principle of discerning Spiritual things Spiritually, (Eph. 1. 17.) called a Spirit of Wisdom ; Spirit is taken for a new habit or principle of judging wisely of things ; and herein now the exceeding greatness of Gods Power is manifested in a work, in and upon the Judgment it self ; in taking away that Sin which covering it, made it as a dead eye, in regard of a right discerning of Spiritual things ; and then putting a new Principle of seeing things, as a living man sees them ; call'd therefore by Christ, as distinguishing it from the Light of wicked men, (John 8. 12.) the Light of Life ; Here now is a work holds proportion with the power spoken of, raising up a dead man to Life; whereas in the en-lightning of a wicked man there is no renewing of the Judgment, but barely a Light brought in, actuating and elevating it to see and discern, so far as sin and that Veil which covers it, will suffer it; and to that no such greatness of power is required: For there is not a new living Eye put in, but only a new light; there being a principle of Seeing and Understanding in a man by Nature, already able, by the help of the Spirit shining upon it, to have some Glimmerings of Spiritual things.

And 2. For the work of good motions of joy, fear, and good purposes in the Will and Affections: There is a Principle already also in the Will and Affections of a carnal Heart, which if it be awakened by such Enlightnings, stirs up such good motions and purposes in carnal men. If you ask what this Principle is? I answer. It is Self-love; which is the General that commands the Will and Affections, and rowzeth them; but it and all the Affections are set afloat, and raised up only to those Objects which a man by self-love apprehends to be hurtful or good for him; Nay, then when by such common Enlightnings, a mans carnal Understanding apprehends Hell to be a dangerous Condition; and that Sin is the way to it; that Heaven is an excellent Condition, and that to leave Sin and do Good, &c. is the way to it; and by those moral perswasions are in the Word, self-love is once awakened as easily it is; a mans Affections are set a-work to fear Hell as an evil, to sorrow for Sin, that will bring him to it; to rejoice in the News of Heaven, as attainable; and to desire and begin to endeavour to take such Courses as will bring a man to it; and so that affection of joy, sorrow, fear, desire, may be elevated, lifted up, to be conversant about Spiritual Objects, such as are Sin and good Duties, Heaven and Hell; and yet not the exceeding greatness of Gods Power go to work it, because there is already a Principle even in a Carnal Heart, which may be stirr'd with the apprehension of these; and so set all these a-work, namely self-love. So as the Spirit to work such good motions, shall not need to stretch forth the greatness of his Power to change the Heart, and to create any thing anew in it; as he doth in a Regenerate man; but the old Heart remaining carnal still, may by perswasions, such as are in the Word, and such considerations of being damned and saved, and the like; be stirred to all this: And to move only by such Perswasions and Considerations, and to propound them in such a manner as they should move, is no such great work of power; a good Orator will do as much in another case; so as the Spirit doth no more upon the Heart, in this case than the Light and Heat of the Sun doth upon a Dunghil; shining upon it and heating of it; by the power of both which it elevates and raises up Vapours in it, which yet were in it before; to a higher place indeed than of themselves they would ascend; namely into the Air; yet these Vapours are not changed, they are as stinking as before. So now is it in the working of the Spirit. John the Baptist preaching the Kingdom of Heaven was at Hand; the Spirit of God went with this News to mens Hearts: Both darted in Beams of Light to understand some Goodness in that Kingdom preached, and also warmed mens Hearts and Affections with the apprehensions of it; there went both light and heat with it; (John 5.35.) both which raised up and elevated their Understandings with the light to some glimmering apprehensions of Heavens Goodness, and their Affections, yea, and Wills also, (for it is said they rejoiced willingly, &c.) with the warmth to desire, and joy in the news of so great a Happiness; Here indeed both were elevated to a higher Object than ever of themselves, without the concurrence and existence of this light and heat from the Spirit, they would have ascended; yet without any powerful change wrought in the mens Hearts themselves, or any new Principle put into the Heart, only the carnal Heart still so remaining by self-love stirred up; for in the 3^d verse he says, that though they rejoiced thus in Johns Ministry, yet they would not believe in him, and in v. 42. that though they did thus out of Love to themselves rejoice in the News of Heaven, as good for them; yet they

they had not the love of God in them, to seek his Honour only and principally, and not their own (v. 44.) and certain it is that their Affections of Joy and Desire, which out of self-love were stirr'd to desire Honour from men, rather than for God; the same Affections, out of the same Principle of self-love, were stirr'd then to desire and rejoice in that Kingdom of Heaven offered; and yet still the Heart was as carnal, as unchanged, as empty of the Law of God as before, it being self-love only that set afloat both the one and the other: And so in Felix (Acts 24. 20.) the same principle of self-love that would have made his carnal Heart have trembled at the News of being brought to Cæsar's Judgment Seat, made his Heart, remaining still as carnal, trembled at Paul's preaching of Christs Judgment to come; and so in Esau, (Heb. 12. 17.) the self same carnal affection of Sorrow, which self-love would have stirred up in him for the loss of any outward thing, was stirred up in him to sorrow and weep for the loss of his Birth-right and Blessing, Types to him of Heaven; and all in vain for want of true Repentance, as some interpret, which he found no place for, though he sought it with tears: And therefore thus to stir mens Affections, is not simply in it self a work which argues the exceeding greatness of Gods power: Seeing there needs no new Principle be created in the Heart which was not there before, only the old ones stirr'd up and elevated and acted to a higher pitch; neither is there any true and intrinsecal change and alteration wrought on mens Hearts, or the Affections themselves, only a setting them afloat about new propounded Objects, such as Heaven and Hell, they remaining still the same: There is indeed a new working upon the Heart, which was not on it before: You will ask then what is it that is wrought beyond this, which is an effect of this great power?

I answer First, By paralleling it with the power shewn in the Creation (Eph. 2. 10.) it is a Workmanship created, as it were, a purpose to good Works: The difference of which from the former, I express by this Similitude. An old Clock that is out of frame and set wrong, may be brought to move about without any new Workmanship bestowed upon it, meerly by new weights hung on it; and so may the Old Man, the Carnal, remaining so, and the Wheels, Affections thereof, be stirred by the moral perswasions and Considerations of Heaven and Hell, hung on by the Spirit; and this is but an artificial kind of working, which argues no great power in the Agent; but a Skill rather, that knows how to apply things will move it; but now when the exceeding greatness of Gods power comes to work, he takes the old Frame in pieces, and creates and fetts up a new Frame, a new piece of Workmanship, created on purpose for good works, by changing the Heart intrinsecally, putting new Principles of Life and motion to what is good, and though indeed those weights and considerations which move the carnal hart makes it move the faster to what is good; yet this in it self is a frame made on purpose Created to good Works; which Phrase implies and imports a principle of motion inclining the Heart that way of it self; for when God is said to create things to such and such an action; as the Heaven to move, the Fire to burn, the Ground to bring forth Herbs: The meaning is, he hath put such Principles into it as tend to produce such actions; and so to create a Workmanship to good Works, is to endow the Heart with such abilities, and Actus primi, as they are called, as should enliven the Heart to good works, as Actus Secundi: And therefore this difference will evidently appear between the work of good motions on a carnal Heart only; and a work of the greatness of Gods power, creating a new Workmanship; namely by this, viz. That when such considerations are taken off, then the Heart stands still; hath no inclinations towards what is good in it; when the Spirit ceaseth thus sensibly to move and act the dead Heart, it lies as a Logg, without any Principle or Symptom of Life in it; whereas now a changed Heart, even in the greatest desertions, hath still a new Workmanship in it, The bent whereof is contrary to what is evil; and if the weights of sin wring it to what is evil, (Heb. 12. 1.) yet it is as winding the Frame of a Watch the the wrong way; and the inward frame and constitution whereof still is for what is good and holy, and God and the Law commands; and why? because this Workmanship, though not stirred about, yet was created for good works. And it is against the inward framing of it to be moved the other way.

In the second place, I answer, by paralleling it with the power shewn in raising up Christ from Death to Glory, which is the instance in the Text, and which I mean principally to prosecute and insist on; only I take the other also for further confirmation-sake, and because the Scripture instanceth in that also, as an expression of the power which worketh in this work of Grace, calling it a Creation; for now if it be asked what new Principle it is which is thus created and brought into the Soul, I answer, it is a Principle of new Life; which as another Soul raiseth it: For the satisfaction of such, I will therefore add this, before I come to what I have further to deliver; and it is a difference answering to, and serving further to discover in what this exceeding greatness of power consists; for no other must here be handled; and in brief it is this; If thou findest another and a further Principle than self-love stirring in, and raising up these thy Affections, namely Godliness, and respect to God; than the exceeding greatness of his Power hath been, and doth work in thy Heart; first mark the reason and ground of this, for the thing in hand; He tells you the exceeding greatness of Gods power is seen in this, in putting in and creating a new Principle and Soul of Spiritual Life into the Heart; and not simply in stirring up the old one of self-love; now what think you, is this new Principle of Life which this great power puts in besides that of self-love? Look into 2 Pet. 1. 4. According as his Divine Power hath given (mark here, he speaks of a work of the exceeding greatness of his Power) us all things to Life, That is, all the exceeding greatness of his power all things to Life and what is that? It is Energetically explained in the next words Godliness; Herein then consists the working of such a power as raised Christ to Life and Glory; giving or putting certain powers and abilities of a new life, namely Godliness into the Soul; and indeed to work this there must be stretched forth such a power; for tho' there be a Principle of self-ness, as I may so call it; which makes the carnal Heart respect the good of it self, and to be affected with joy or sorrow about that which tends to the Hurt or Happiness of a man's self: Yet in that vast Ocean of mans Heart by Nature, there is not the least drop or disposition of Godliness to be found; which should stir a mans Affections and raise them so high as to be answerably affected, with those things which touch simply upon God, have relation purely to him; and therefore now though the Heart of a Carnal Man may be stir'd at the consideration of such things out of the Word as are suitable to, and apt, and fitted to stir self-love; and thus it may be more violently and turbulently than one who is sincere, yet in regard of Godliness his Heart is dead; such considerations wherein God is involved and his Glory and Cause, is the principal Ingredient; these lie in their Hearts and Affections like Pills in a dead mans Body; they not the Humours, nor these the Affections; or if they work, yet no further than their own Heart or Happiness is enwrapped up with the other; for why, there is no suitable Principle of Life and Godliness to work upon: Wouldst thou therefore now distinguish thy affections of Sorrow or Joy at the hearing of the Word, or at other times in thy own Meditations, from those in a carnal Heart? Mark if there be any drops or strains and dispositions of pure Godliness mingled with a great deal of Flesh and Corruption in the Affections; for as Oyl, a few drops of it, keep themselves severed from the Water, though jumbled with them; so will small drops of Godliness, and the having respect to keep themselves pure in a Sea of Corruption, in thy Affections: There is a meaning in every Affection; as of the Good, (Rom. 8. 27.) so also of Bad; when thou art stirred to Sorrow or Joy in meditating or hearing of the Word, observe the full meaning of those Affections; upon what kind of Considerations they are thus set afloat; And that you may see this difference between carnal Affections and sincere renewed ones, under this very notion grounded upon Scripture; and

and so may more distinctly know how to apply it: (2 Cor. 7. 9.) Paul had sent a Letter, wherein he had sharply reprov'd the Corinthians for a sin committed and suffered amongst them; by which this affection of sorrow for Sin was much stirr'd in them; now mark how Paul, in this second Epistle, speaks of this their Sorrow; Now I rejoyce (says he) not that you were made sorry; [not simply that their affection of sorrow was stirr'd for the sin, that it might have been, and they never the better] but that Ye were made sorry after a Godly manner; mark it, here comes in this very distinction, even to this very purpose in hand; if when a man sorrows for sin, it be the consideration of Gods dishonour that is wounded by it, that is thus laid to Heart; and if such motives as lay open Gods Interest and Relation in it, that wounded the Heart; that raised up this sorrow in any measure in truth to God; so as it is not for that misery only, which sin would bring on a man, that makes him sorrow; but that it is done against his God, whose Favour he accounts more than his Life, and whom to displease is as Death to him; as they (Zach. 12. 10.) that are not said to mourn so much for sin, or themselves, as for God, whom they had offended, and Christ whom they had pierced; then thy sorrow is after a Godly sort. Which sorrow being for thy Offence against God, so much the more encreaseth, by how much thou apprehendest he is pacified towards thee; (as they Ezek. 16. last) and though thy Heart should not apprehend so much, yet there are some relentings in it, for offending him whom thy Soul loves; so as if now the Sentence of Death were pass'd against thee, as at the latter day; and thou wert out of hope; yet at thy doleful farewell from him, thou couldst find in thy Heart to down on thy Knees and ask him forgiveness First, for all the Wrongs thou hast done him: Is there any such whisperings of such a meaning in thy sorrow? This is from a new Principle of Life and Godliness infused into it; which nothing but the exceeding greatness of his power could have infused; so also for thy joys, dost not only rejoyce in the hopes of Glory which thou conceivedst as good for thy self, (as it is Rom. 5. 2.) but also (mark the Gradate on v. 11. of that Chapter) not only so, but also thou rejoycest in God, apprehending thy Heaven to consist in him, and communion with him, as one who is suitable to thy Inward man, with whom therefore thou shouldst find in thy Heart to live and die; and this barely for those excellencies of Holiness, Wisdom, Goodness, and loving Kindness that is in him: This being the Top of thy Joy, That he is such a God, so Holy, &c. and that he is a God to whom thou hast a relation, and a reference; and in whom thou hast an Interest. If there be the least drop of such dispositions running in thy joys, and discovering themselves in them; then is there something pertaining to Life and Godliness wrought in thee by his Divine power; for there is no Principle at all left in Corrupt Nature which could ever elevate thy Joys so high; but it ariseth from a Divine Nature infused; which in the same place (2 Pet. 1. 4.) he says the same power of God makes us Partakers of; for only simile gaudet simili. And so Lastly, for thy good purposes and designs to fear and obey his Commandments: Are they stirr'd up in thee only because sin is the way to Death, and good Duties the way to Life? Or is there some further meaning in thy desires; so as Hypocrite, or not Hypocrite, Heaven, or not Heaven, in the end thou desirest and purposest to obey him; and though in the end thy labour should be lost to thy self, yet if God be a Gainer by thee, thou shouldst not altogether be sorry; but yet sorry truly for this, thou canst do no more; are there any, the least part of such dispositions covered and taken up in thy desires and purposes: There then hath been the exceeding greatness of Gods power dealing and tampering with thy Heart, putting in a New Principle of Godliness and Life; to which thy Nature is as truly dead, as Christs Body was in the Grave. Such small drops and sparks as these, cost the Lord more power than creating the whole frame of Heaven and Earth; and sooner shall they be dissolved than the least Iota of these shall utterly perish; if all the power that is in God can preserve them to Salvation, believe it, and build upon it, such dispositions, and such tangs of Godliness seasoning thy Sorrows, Joys and Desires fires shall never go to Hell with thee, nor thou with them; therefore now to Conclude this, as Paul speaks of the Corinthian's Sorrow, so do I of all Affections and good Motions, rejoyce not simply in this, that you feel such Affections stir'd in you when you hear Sermons, &c. but if you find them stirring in the least measure according to God, that he be aimed at in them, then Rejoyce; by which Principle of Godliness also, a Man sets up God in his Heart above himself, is willing to deny himself, so God may be Exalted.

If then thou hast found a work of God in thee, which hath took thee off from, and hath prevented thee in all thy natural designs, purposes, and intents of thy Heart, which thou hadst for thy self, and hath wrought thee another way; hath disposed thee to another end, set all that is in thee a work for God, and his Glory; this is Godliness, this is a mighty Power, as much as bringing in a new Soul into a Body, for a New End, is a new Form. Thus Paul was prevented of all his Natural aims taken off from him, and he makes it an Evidence of his Conversion, (Gal. 1.) when he was most hot in the pursuit of Eminency in Learning, Credit among his Nation, (v. 13.) then did God (says he) who had separated me. (v. 11.) that is, appointed and destined me to another end, Call me by his Grace. And the Life I now lead, is not my own, (Chap. 2. 20.) It is not I, but Christ lives in me; as when he Sins, he says, It is not I, but Sin; so here, It is not I, but Christ, when any good is done; that is, I am not guided by the Principles and Ends of my former Life, when I did all for my self, but all is from Christ, and for Christ; he is the Beginning and the End. That whereas all were dead; (2 Cor. 5. 14, 15.) he quickens them with a new Principle of Life and Godliness, whereby they live not to themselves, that is, they make not themselves their end, but they live to him, that Dyed and Rose again for them, and this Life is Godliness. Whereas every Man that is Born into the World, begins as Paul did to Trade for himself, and is bound somewhither, where he thinks Happiness is to be had; and he takes in Loading accordingly, with thick Clay or Pleasures, &c. fills himself with a Thousand Vanities, but when thou art Converted to God, a contrary Wind takes thee, as it did Paul, and defeateth thee utterly of all thine own Purposes, carries thee strongly to another Haven, to have another Loadstar in thy Eye, a new Principle sets thee a work, to be a Factor as much for God, as ever thou wert for thy self, and to that end thou throwest out all those Vanities, which will tend no way to his advantage, as being bound for a Port, where thou canst vent none of those thy former Wares; and this not as Merchants do their Lading, in a Storm, because they may Sink thee into the bottomless Lake, but because they are unprofitable for God; and as willingly as ever thou tookest them in, thou throwest them out. Thy Heart can know what Wares will be most for Gods Advantage, using thy Wisdom to see what will bring him in most Glory, and thou dealest accordingly in such things, as may increase his Revenue, and though thou lovest, yet art sure he shall be no loser; being made as Faithful to God, as once thou wert for thy self: This is Godliness, this is a New Life, a New Principle, and as great a power must go to this, as to raise up Christ from the Grave to Glory; for this raiseth thy Soul from Earth to Heaven, out of thy self to God; and is as much as to turn the Sun in his Course, or to invert the order of Nature. Thus nothing but an Almighty Power can thus advance a Mans aims out of himself, and make all in a Man subordinate to another. There is no Principle in Nature, if not enformed by Godliness, can reach thus high, much less in Corrupt Nature. Only let me add this, That the Principle of Self Love still remains in the Heart of a Godly Man, sets his Affections afloat, and is a Weight makes the Wheel move, and acts him in his Actions also, and it ought to do; yet so as there is a farther Principle of Godliness, which elevates selflove higher, and makes it subordinate. For as when the reasonable Soul is infused and annexed to the Sensitive, The Acts of Reason do not extinguish the Acts of Sense; nay, the Senses are helped and perfected much by them, and they subordinately concur and joyn together in most; yet still, so as the Acts of Reason reach higher, and do Guide and Moderate the other: So this New Created Principle, ple, and Fountain of Life and Godliness, infused into the Soul by Gods power, doth not destroy the acts of Self-love, only winds up the Will and Affections to have higher reaches, even as high as God, in whose Glory our Happiness lies, and so guides and moderates this other. But now it may be said, that though indeed to put in and to create in the Soul such a new Principle of Life and Godliness, argues great power indeed; and as much as was spent in the Creation of the World, but yet no more, if this were all; for simply to infuse and introduce into the Soul, this new Life, is no more then the breathing the breath of Life into Adam, whereby he was made a living Soul. But this is not simply a Creation, as I said before, but a new Creation; wherein, not only a new Life is put in, but old things, which resist the bringing in of this Life, are to be destroyed also. Yea, further, it is parallell'd we see with the Resurrection of Jesus Christ, wherein there was more then ordinary power spent, more then in the Resurrections of others we read of; for (Rom. 1. 4.) he was thereby with power mightily declared to be the Son of God: Wherein then was this exceeding greatness of power spent? Was it simply in bringing his Soul into, or joyning it unto his Dead Body again? Thus much power must and did go to the raising again of Lazarus, of him also who was raised by the Prophets Bones, there was something else therefore which in his rising drew forth this exceeding greatness of power spoken of, for which I refer you to the (Acts 2. 24.) where Peter proving to the Jews that Jesus was the Messiah and Son of God; he argues it from the power manifested in his rising again, and that power not simply shewn in bringing his Soul into his Body, or raising him up, but principally in rescuing his Soul first, and loosing it from the pains of Death, which if it had been possible would have held him, but it was impossible they should. There were certain pains then which hindered, and with much power would have detained; had not the exceeding greatness of his power broken their power; and in breaking this their power, lay the Miracle. God raised him up, says the Text, having (first) loos'd the pains of Death, &c. Now what pains of Death means he? Bodily death only; those the Soul is rescued from in dying, and from these also were they rescued, who were raised before Christ: The word is ωόνας, the throwes and pangs of a Woman in Travel, which Isa. 53. 11. are called the Travel of his Soul, he in his Soul bearing that Wrath which was due to us, verse 5th of that 53d Chapter, which Pangs, because they tended unto Death, and would have carried his Soul to Hell with them, would have stab'd him out right, and sped'd it for ever rising again, therefore they are called the pains of Death, which pains had they seized upon any of our Souls would have for ever killed them, and detained them; for they had the power of Death in them; for if it had been possible they would have held him, but that they were encountred by the power of his God head. They light upon one was more than a Creature, who was back'd by the Almighty power of God, by which power he was rescued from them, they and his Soul were loosened, their power being first subdued, and therefore Peter out of the Psalms, at the 27th verse, speaks of a Resurrection of his Soul out of Hell, and then a Resurrection of his Body from Corruption in the Grave. These Pains encountred his Soul whilst it was in his Body, but God left it not to their power, but raised it up to Paradise, and then put it into his Body again, and therein principally was this great Transcendent power seen, which was declared by the rising of his Body; and therefore he says, Death is swallowed up in Victory; now there is never a Victory gotten, but where there is a contrary power opposing, and that power subdued, crusht, swallowed up, so says that Text, if it had been possible they would have held him.

Answerably now, In this great Work of Grace, That which draws forth this exceeding greatness of Gods power here spoken of, is not merely putting in a new Principle of Life and Godliness into the Soul, but it lies in dissolving the works of the Devil; (1 John 3. 8.) as in the other the pains of Death were loosened: For there are certain strong potent Detayners, Allurers of the Soul, to keep it in the estate of Death, answerable to the pains of Death, which have a mighty power, over-Book 9 sway, and interest in the Heart of Man; which nothing but the like power to that wrought in Christ, could dissolve and subdue; which when God doth begin to work effectually, do put forth their power, and if possible would hold him; but that a stronger comes and subdues, conquers and destroys that power, and so loosens them and the Soul, and rescues the Soul from them.

 This you shall find expressed, Col. 1. 13. where the Apostle with thanks ascribes it to the power of God the Father, that we are Translated into the Kingdom of his Son, and delivered from the powers of Darkness: For all lies not in bare Translating us into the Kingdom of his Son. There must first be a Delivering out of the powers of Darkness, which Words tell us, First, That Sin is nothing but Darkness, and Satan the prince of Darkness, hath a power, over and a Kingdom in a Man, and such a power as will not easily give up and yield up a Mans Heart to God, but will strive to hold a Man as long as they have any power left; for so, Secondly, the Word Delivering, Implies, namely signifying a forcible snatching out and rescuing from the Enemies hands; it must be by a greater power encountering that power; Sin will not part with a Man without blows, and stronger than the strong Man must come and bind him, yea, disarm him, kill, subdue, and destroy this power, or it will never yield. For it is with this Delivering out of the power of Darkness, as it was in Delivering Israel out of Egypt, (which was a Type of this) God is said to have brought them out of Egypt; with a strong Hand, and a stretched-out Arm; that is, with power drawn forth. Now what was it drew out his power? Not barely carrying them out, but that he did it maugre the opposition of Pharaoh, and all the power of Egypt which withstood it to the utmost; therefore it is said Rom. 9. 17. Even for this same purpose, have I raised thee (Oh Pharaoh) up; that I might shew my Power on thee. That he rescued them out of Pharaoh's hands by destroying his power, therein was the stretching out of his Arm seen. Answerably, Is it in the Work of Conversion, the power of Darkness, is set up to draw forth the exceeding greatness of his power in destroying it: For as God sent Messages to Pharaoh by Moses to let his People go, so God deals first with the Heart, by his Word and Spirit, striving and perswading to let the Soul go free, and to turn to him; but the power of Sin denies it, and will not let the Heart to turn; God then sends Judgment after Judgment, and what will you yet let the Soul go? The Pleasures of Sin, say no, and though some slight flitting Resolutions are often wrought, and purposes to turn; yet as Pharaoh still returned to hardness, and Israel was undelivered, so do those purposes vanish, and still the Heart is kept under the power of Darkness; and if it were possible to hold the Heart, Sin and Satan would. Well, but in the End, God comes with his Almighty power, and kills, and subdues the first born, that is, the strength of Sin, (for so the first born is called, Gen. 49. 3.) snatcheth a man out, and yet when the Heart, is a going once in good earnest, Satan and Sin in the Heart muster up all the power and forces that Egypt can make to stop the heart and detain it, and bring it back again, as Pharaoh did.
 Then all the strength Sin hath, begins to bestir it self, and make out after it: And then is that great and main Battle fought; (even at the first Conversion) and the main and famous Victory gotten, and great overthrow given to the power of Hell and Darkness in a Man. By this exceeding greatness of Gods power, subduing killing, and giving it a deadly Wound, and destroying it, as he did the Aegyptians in the Red Sea, the Soul is rescued and delivered from the Dominion of them. This we may Note in the General, to help us to discern a true Work of Grace, wherein the exceeding greatness of Gods power is drawn, from those inferiour Works of the Spirit, formerly spoken of, namely, That the true Work of Grace is such a Work, as wherein there was and is the utmost opposition that Sin can make, shewn; and yet a foil given, a Victory, a Conquest gotten; which is not so in those inferiour Works of the Spirit: There is not a Delivering out of the power of Darkness in them; that is, Sin doth not shew its utmost Opposition, against the infe-riour Works of the Spirit, and so is not foiled, having that power broken; as in this great Work it is; for otherwise this exceeding greatness of power would not be seen, for the power of the Conquerour is not drawn forth but by bringing forth the strength of the Adversary and subduing it: Now in those other lesser Works of the Spirit, whether of restraining, enlightning, and enlarging Grace, it is not so: For those Works are not directly contrary to corrupt Nature, though indeed above it, and elevating it higher than of it self, it could reach, yet not changing it by destroying Corruption: It is supra, not contra; for it works upon those Principles are left in it, namely, of Conscience and Self-love, and so insinuates its self, and therefore is not contrary to it, as Heat and Fire is to Cold and Water; which when they meet, do fight to the utmost, to destroy each other, and shew their utmost power in opposing, the Conquest of the other; but they are in Corrupt nature rather as those qualities the Philosophers call Symbolical, namely, as moisture stands with Cold in Water; and therefore a form of Godliness stands with the power of sin, and often of some particular Master-Lust. However, though the Work of Enlightning may procure a Combat in the Conscience against the power of Sin, in other faculties: yet not such as raiseth the utmost of the power of Sin, and then foils it; neither doth it fight against corrupt Nature, but acts with Motives suitable to Self-love in Corrupt Nature, drawn from such inconveniences as Self-love in Corrupt Nature is sensible of, as shame, and Hell, &c. so as it sets but Self-love against it self, by raising carnal desires after Heaven, and to avoid Hell, or desires of the World. So as there is not stirred up a full, a direct and high opposition in summo gradu; corrupt nature is not provoked to bring forth its utmost Forces: Neither indeed doth the Spirits Work in those inferiour Works, by Delivering the Soul out of the power of Darkness, making an Insurrection against its Working, but by restraining it only; wherein therefore corrupt Nature puts not forth much Resistance. It is but binding of the strong Man, and simply to be bound, he will endure and suffer it, and resists not, as Sampson did not; and a strong Man laid asleep may easily be bound, and be kept under by a Child when he doth not put forth his strength; and so the Spirit, in those Workings in Civil Men and others, layeth Lusts Asleep, and binds them with Purposes and Resolutions to leave them, and they resist not; so as to do this, there needs not the exceeding greatness of Gods power. But now true Grace and the power of God coming in, the Work of it is to deliver a Man out of the power of Darkness, by destroying it; and by coming to set up and introduce into the Heart a contrary Principle of Godliness in the Soul, to which Corrupt Nature, is in summo gradu, contrary, and is called Enmity; and therefore a Mans Lusts and all the power of Sin, fortify themselves against it; shew their utmost power; as Sampson though being Asleep was Bound, yet when the Philistines his Enemies came upon him to take him and kill him, he stirs up himself and his utmost strength; and the Devil knows all lies upon that Battel; so that by this you may know whether it be such a Work as in proportion of power answers to Christs Resurrection by this, if in thy Conversion thou didst feel the power of Sin to the utmost opposing it, so as thou didst not think it had half so much power and interest in thy Heart as then thou sawest it had; (for when one comes to grapple with one, then he knows his strength) and yet for all that, thy Sin and Lusts were back'd by the power of Hell, so as had it been possible they would have deteyned thee; yet thou didst find they had the foil in thy Heart, lost Ground, and God and Christ was set up as King there, so as thou feltst thy Heart loosened from them; and that as willingly and freely as ever thou wert subject to it, then know this power hath wrought in thee.

The Greatness of Divine Power in our Regeneration, Manifested from Instances of the several parts of that Work.

BUT you will say unto me, Shew us (as he said to Sampson) in what things principally this great power lyeth, what there is in the Heart thus strongly to detain it, answerable to the pains of Death, which Gods power is to encounter with, and loosen the Soul from, and which to subdue, this exceeding greatness of power must be drawn forth.

The First particular Instance we find (2 Cor. 10. 4.) and we have it there brought in just to our purpose in hand. For speaking of the mighty power of God working with the Word, he illustrates and sets forth that power, by shewing the powerful opposition it meets with, and overcomes: The Weapons of our Warfare are mighty through God: And wherein is their Might seen? In pulling down strong holds, &c. You see there is such opposition in the Heart to be converted, as useth to be in a besieged Town of War, which will hold out as long as possibly it can, and to that end it builds and casteth up strong Holds and high Forts, strong and high; which the Heart sticks to, and will not be beaten from, till they be beaten down; To the pulling down, &c. says the Text; for yield it will not, till they be pull'd down: Now the Particulars he there instanceth in, are Reasonings and Imaginations. Some translate the one, some the other: That is, secret dislikings, or not fancying the ways of God; with secret Objections and Arguments against them, and the subjection to them; as also high thoughts that exalt themselves, high, proud, contrary, thoughts of enmity: Two great and mighty Armies to overcome, and the Spirit had need to come against them with no less than the exceeding greatness of his power; For you must know, That when the Spirit effectually converts any Soul, he brings Jesus Christ into his Heart, and sets up Jesus Christ there as King, and causeth this Fundamental Law to pass, and be enacted by the consent of the whole Heart and greater party, in all the Faculties as the predominant Rule and Principle to guide a mans whole Life; That it is absolutely best to obey Christ in every particular passage of Life, in every thought, in all conditions; that this I say, is absolutely best for him, and necessary to begin presently: This you have in the following Words expressed, To bring every thought into the Obedience of Christ; this Conclusion hath been irremoveably and irrevocably laid and fixed in the Hearts of all the Saints: So in the Apostles; as you may see by their expressing their Resolution in a case of the greatest difficultie, when they were most strongly tempted.

2. Another particular Instance of the greatness of Gods power in our Regeneration, is his breaking off a mans Heart from the pleasures of sin, and inordinate Lusts. A man is as unwilling to part with them as with Life, and therefore all the power that is in the Heart resists what would loosen them and the Soul, and raise it out of that Estate of Spiritual Death: As any thing would resist what would take Life from it: And as Death is a strong thing, so is Life also, and the Law of it: And therefore the Law of Pleasures is strong in all men that lie buried in them, we being by Nature Lovers of Pleasures, more than of God; (2 Tim. 3. 4.) Pleasures are so powerful, because so suitable to the disposition of a mans Heart; that a man hath not the power, because not the Heart, to resist them; And therefore you shall find that that men will say, (and the Scripture expresseth it in their own Phrase) that such a pleasure they cannot leave; It is as the Life to them; and they can no more part with it, than be willing to cease to live: So Unclean wantons, (2 Pet. 2. 14.) Eyes have they full of Adultery, which cannot cease from sin; such power, Interest and Sway it hath in their Hearts: So (Luke 14. 20.) when one who had lately married a Wife was invited; He professeth plainly, without any excuse, I have married a Wife, and I cannot come. The inordinacy of his pleasure in her, had such hold in, and power over his Heart, that tho he be damn'd for it, and lose Heaven for it, he could not part with it. So that the same power which rescued Christs Soul from the pains of death, to that glorious Life in Heaven; must work to raise that dead Soul from the pleasure of sin, unto the participation of the Life of God, and to delight himself in the pleasures thereof; (for without pleasure the Creature cannot live) from which, by reason of those sinful pleasures, he is estranged. Therefore our Saviour Christ, speaking of the power and prevalency, that the pleasure and sweetness of Riches (for Gain hath its sweetness) have in the Heart; says, Mat. 19. 24. It is as easy for a Camel to go through the Eye of a Needle, &c. As for a man that trusts in his Riches, (as Mark 10. 24. it is Expounded) to enter into Heaven; Riches being also one of a mans strong holds or Towers, formerly spoken of: So Solomon says, Prov. 18. 11. possessing the midst of the Heart, and so commanding the whole Heart, as Holds use to do the Cities they are in, and chaining all the munition and strength of the Heart, as it is reckoned an impossibilitie to scale these Forts and break the Heart from them; therefore the Apostles, apprehending that every man had some dear pleasure or other; Even poor men as well as rich, which was as dear to them; they stand amazed, and ask who then shall be saved? And our Saviour Christ goes not back from his word, only by way of distinction adds, that with Man this is impossible indeed: That is, all the power that is in man, all the reasons, all the motives and persuasions he can be made apprehensive of, cannot ever effect this, divorce the Heart and them; but subjoins, That with God all things are possible: Shewing plainly, as the greater power pleasures have in the Heart, so what power it is must go to work a separation between the Heart and them: No less than that power to which all things are possible, even the greatest Impossibilities; if God could not do all things, he could not do this. And, my Brethren, do you know what it is to part with the pleasure of a sin? Which there is none knows but he who has done it indeed, And he that hath done it, finds a greater Strength working in him than all the Creatures have in them: It is not all the persuasions of Angels and Men, not all the offers of Eternity can make a man forego the Bird in the Hand, the present Pleasures of sin, tho' but for a season; And till a man come to part with them in earnest, he never knew the greatness of their strength, and what power they have in him: For then all the pleasure that ever a man did enjoy by and in a Lust, and all that he might do still, will be united and collected into one Temptation, to make it work the more effectually: And that which is of all most dear, will the Devil set upon a man, as his last and strongest means to prevail with him: As Uncleaness did with Augustine (as in his Case thus he relates it) it came to me, says he, when I was resolving to turn to God, and pluck'd me by the Sleeve, and casting the most pleasing Countenance that ever he saw, said, What will you forgo Me, and that for ever? Now therefore to find so mighty a power in a man, as with Ephraim to say at thy Conversion, What have I to do with Idols? So with all the pleasures thou hast doted on, and to part with them as freely as ever thou didst follow them; even as young Commencers do with their money, as we use to say: Then know this exceeding greatness of power hath began to work in thy Heart.

3. The third particular which, to loosen the Heart from it, and to overcome it in the Heart, draws forth this great power, is the World. For we are dead in Sins and Trespasses, and yet walk according to the Course of this World; (2 Eph. 1. 2.) and live to the Lusts of men, 1 Pet. 4. 3. And this World hath a mighty power in it to detain a man in the Grave of Death: The men of the World and the things of the World, are as Grave-Cloaths, as our Coffins, as the mould of Earth that covers us, and hinders us from rising; as the great Stone did Christ And that a great power comes and says, Arise, and stand up from the Dead; must be that power which wrought in Christ when he was raised from Death to Life; John 5. 4. Whosoever is born of God, overcometh the World. Which argueth the World hath a great power, it puts forth to hold a man; for where there is no Army, no Fight, no Power put forth, there is no overcoming, no Victory: And what is the power by which we are enabled thus to overcome the World? 1 John 4. 4. Stronger is he who is in you, than he who is in the World. The World hath a great power in you, and such a power as none but Gods Spirit could overcome, and encounter with, and scatter; and therefore Conversion is call'd, Gal. 1. 4. a delivering us out of this present evil World, by the Lord Christ, who having overcome the World for us, overcame it also in us: For both the things of the World, and the Men of the World, have a great power in our Hearts; the good things of it, and the bad things of it: The good things of it, the World is a large Shop of Vanities, and every mans eye is fastned upon something, which works and draws mightily; his Heart stands as Jacl at the door of her Tent, with milk in her hand, and cries come in my Lord; and we have all as thirsty Hearts as he had after the flattering Courtesies, the Honour of the World, and the good Opinion and good Word of the World, what strong Biasses are all these, to draw a man out of his way and course, into the ways of the World? Receiving Honour from men, how did it hinder the Jews from Christ? John 5. 44. And so the disgraces and discouragements from the World, from Carnal Friends that have power over us, as Parents, Masters, Husbands very much prevail: Many would have believed, but that they should have been cast out of the Synagogues. There is a corrupt Strain and Fashion of the World, which the Apostle calls the Course of the World, which men are carried away with, as men in a Dream: Which not to conform unto, is accounted matter of greatest shame, and thought the greatest folly: And then also there are many Entanglements and Correspondencies with Carnal Companions, and with those we have been by many kindneses endear'd to; which are most powerful Bands and Tyes to ingenuous Natures: And all these doth the God of this World, represent at a mans Conversion usually, as he did to Christ when he Tempted him with the Glory of all the good things of it: And he knows how to varnish and paint, and set them forth in their best Splendour; and so also the disgraces, discouragements, and dangers from the World; and these he represents in their worst Vizour: Now to be able to look upon all these goodly things as crucified things, and as dead Flowers, which the Spirit of God hath blown upon; to choose rather to suffer Afflictions with a poor few despised ones in the World, who are not of it; to get and stand out of the Crowd, as a man wondred at; to be able to swim against the Stream and Tyde of the Multitude, the rage and fury of Oppressors: To have strength to break thro' all those Weeds of Correspondencies with men, though never so great; to break off the strongest Leagues and Treaties with them; and to venture all their Enmity: If Wife and Children (which are as hostages given to the World of amity with it) hang about thy Neck (as Hierom says in his first Epistle) if Father and Mother down upon their Knees, to fling away the one, and trample upon the other: If thy Friend, which is as thy own Soul, entice thee (Deut. 13. 6.) to forsake him; to have a Heart and Strength to do all this, and not to be overcome, is from the Cords of Gods Almighty Power drawing the Heart. And yet the Child of God finds such power working in him, as if all the World lay between Christ and him, Christ would draw his Heart through, nothing can hold him from Christ.

4. You have seen how the exceeding greatness of Gods power is drawn out in the work of Sanctification; let us see it also a little in the Work of true Justifying Faith; which though to carnal men seems of all things the most easy, yet to educe and bring forth the least act of it, requires as great a power er as hath been spoken of, and therefore it is called, (1 Thef. 1. 3.) τὸ ἐργον Chap. 5 τὸ ἐργον, the work of Faith, for the difficulty of it, the same τὸ ἐργον the work of God κατ' ἐργον (John 6. 29.) which he especially commands, and shews most power in working of, yea, the same power that was shewn in Creating the World, and raising up Jesus Christ: We have an express place for this, Col. 2 12.

We are risen with him through Faith of the Operation of God, who hath raised him from the Dead. Faith, you see, is a Work of Gods power only, Faith of the Operation of God, as you say of things that some one man only can make, it is an instrument of such a mans making; so because God only can make true Faith, it is called, by way of distinction from false Faith, a work of the Operation of God; and if you would know what power goeth to work and effect it, he adds, it is of that God who raised up Christ; for no less goes to make Faith, whereby indeed a Resurrection is wrought likewise in the Soul; for he says, We are risen with him through Faith; that is, in Believing, there is a Work wrought in your Soul, resembling the Resurrection of Christ, which therefore must have the same power drawn forth to work it.
 But you will say wherein?

1. To open this. Consider, That the raising one is putting Life into a Dead Man. Therefore, Faith, you know, is a new Principle of Life put into the Soul. The Just shall live by Faith; as our Life lay in Doing, under the Covenant of Works, Do this and thou shalt Live; so now in Believing. The Life that I now Live is by Faith of the Son of God, Gal. 2. 20. It is a principle of Living in another, and fetching Life from another, even from Christ, in whom our Life is hid, a going out of a Man's self, for Life to him.

2. Consider, That every Man by Nature, would and doth Live in himself, and that also by doing still; tho' indeed and in truth all hope of Life by works of Righteousness is cut off; tho' all our works are Dead Works, yet we would live of our own tho' it be less; are loth to go out of our selves for Life to another, to depend upon another, in so great a matter as Life is; to have the breath we live with, breathed out of another; Nature is averse to nothing more than to this: Tho' Adam lost this power of living in himself, yet as Sampson, tho' his Strength was gone, thought to do as in former times; so do we, tho' dead and lost; think to live in our selves still; To live by our hands, by doing still; and therefore all the Righteousness we have of our own, every good Inclination, every good performance, maintains an opinion of Life in us: As that Church had a Name she lived, when she was dead; so we have an opinion we live, when we are dead. So says Paul, (Rom. 7.) I was alive, says he, when I was a Pharisee; he thought himself a living man in Gods sight, by reason of what Righteousness he had of his own, which he thought living works.

3. No v therefore, that we may be driven out of our selves to seek Life in another by Faith, It is necessary we should be kill'd in our selves, and see, and apprehend our selves dead men, and all our Works dead Works; so says Paul in the verse before that, 20 v. of the 2d Chapter, lately Quoted to this purpose: I through the Law am dead to the Law, that I might live unto God; I must be dead first in my self; (he speaks it in point of Justification, as appears by the scope of the place) that I might live in another: And therefore he adds, Nevertheless I live: And the Life I now live is by Faith; which Life of Faith can never come to be in the Soul, till the opinion of living in my self, and in my own Righteousness, be destroyed: And therefore says Paul in the same, Rom. 7. I was alive indeed, says he, thought my self a living man; but when the Law came, sin reviv'd, and I died: That is, when I came to see the Spiritual meaning of the Law, and what true Holiness it required to Life; I saw, that all my works were unholy, dead works: That was one Death, he saw he had no true Life of Godliness in him, no ability to bring forth a living work; and so could not live by doing: But there was a Second Death worse than this: For sin revived; he before had lookt upon all his sin

Book 9 as small matters that would never hurt him, no more than Dead Serpents would; and had regarded his own Righteousness, as living Works, which would maintain him Eternally; but now when God opened his Eyes, Sin revived; he saw an Eternal abounding Guilt in the least Sin; which Stab'd and Wounded his Soul, for it Condemned him; and says he, then I Died; I was so far from thinking my self a Living Man, that I received the Sentence of Death in my self, and thought that if there had been no more Men in the World, I should have been Damned; and I saw no hope of Life in my self, and no more power to attain to it, then is in a Dead Man.

4. Now then to infuse into this Man, a new power of Believing, a new Principle of Life, namely, Faith, by which he may see himself twice Dead, pluckt up by the Roots; Dead in regard of any Work of Righteousness, whereby to be Justified, or to Live in Gods favour; Dead in regard of Millions of Transgressions, the Guilt of which like poisoned Arrows have Wounded him; and seeing himself thus Dead, he is engrafted into another, and comes to apprehend and believe himself an Heir of Life, and to Live in Gods sight; from him to suck Life and Power to bring forth new Works of Life: Thus to Raise him up when once laid for Dead, is a Work of Gods mighty Power. For as soon may a Dead Tree ingraft and joyn it self to a Living Root, or being set in, as soon, may it draw Life from that Root, and Live again, and bring forth Fruit, as this man can come to live by Faith in Christ. It is exceeding great power to bring a Man that is alive in himself, to see he is Dead; we are so conceited of our own Righteousness, as to take any thing as a sign of Life; and as Men fight and strive for Life, so do Moral and Civil Men against that Word that would kill them, and bring them out of conceit with themselves. But when once the Soul apprehends it self Dead in it self, it is Ten Thousand times harder to Raise it up to fetch Life from Christ, to get it set into Christ: As before a Man is Humbled, there are many Carnal Pleas the Heart hath for it self, that make a Man think he is a Living Man; so when a Man is once humbled, there are as many pleas against the work of Faith, that do detain a Man in the estate and opinion of Death and Condemnation; especially when it is deeply wounded and stab'd with the guilt of sin; for the wounds of the guilt of sin are as incurable as the Wounds of the power of sin: (So Ps. 88. 10.) says Heman (being wounded within, and apprehending himself thus, a condemned man) Wilt thou shew wonders to the Dead? That is, wilt thou ever raise my poor Soul up to live in thy sight, pardon and heal all these Sins? It is a wonder, says he, if ever this be done; as great a wonder as to raise up a dead man to Life, or a man out of Hell; for as the pains of Death detained Christs Soul from rising; so the Guilt of Sin coming upon the Conscience, with a Thousand fears and objections, keep a mans Thoughts from ever daring to think that he shall yet live, and that God will accept him; Even to raise up the Soul to the lowest act of Faith, this power is required; even to believe a mans sins to be pardonable, this is required: For before he believes this, he must be made partaker of Gods vast thoughts in pardoning, (Isa. 55. 8.) A man must forsake his own Thoughts; and therefore a man that comes to believe the pardon of his sins, must not bring the thoughts of a man with him: (for in that sense also he may be said to forsake his Thoughts) For they can never imagine God will pardon so much, till they be enlarged by a new Principle. Now the most in the World having never been laid for dead thus, think it nothing to believe; but those that have, find nothing harder and of greater difficulty. It is not in us to apprehend what infinite, vast thoughts of mercy there are in God: And though this seems easy, yet when a man is once enlightned to see the sinfulness of sin to be above measure sinful, (Rom. 7. 13.) And that for multitude, they are as Piles heaped up as high as Heaven, and as low as Hell; then to be enabled to see, and be convinced that there are such thoughts of mercy in God, as will swallow up all these sins, as the Heavens do the Earth; and that they are but a point, in comparison; to think that God thinks, when he looks upon these sins, that though there are millions of them, yet he can pass by them, can find mercy enough to par-pardon them. And upon these thoughts, to rest and stay a mans self; and so to seek him, as not to be denied: These Thoughts are as far above mans Thoughts, as the Heavens are above the Earth. Therefore doth the Apostle pray, (Eph. 3. 17, 18, 19, 20.) that they might have Faith, and so be grounded in Love; that they might be able to comprehend the height, depth, breadth of Gods Love and Mercy, pardoning and swallowing a mans sins up; which passeth Knowledge, that is, above the reach of Natural Men: It can never enter into their Hearts, that there is such a depth, until God elevates them to such thoughts of it, and therefore the Apostle farther adds, Now unto him that is able to do abundantly, &c.

2. I will demonstrate this exceeding great power in working, in paralleling it also with the work of Creation; as I did the other: To which end consider, That to see the least Creature arise and start out of nothing, argues an almighty power; so also to lay and found so great and weighty a Bulk, as is that of the Earth, upon meer nothing, that the Axle-tree and Hinges of it should be nothing, is one of those great Works of wonder, whereby God in Scripture sets forth his glorious power to us: Now such is the work of Faith, whereby I believe Christ made all things to me, and in him all things to be mine; for it ariseth out of nothing, is founded upon Nothing in a mans self; which is the greatest miracle in the World. But you will ask me, what my meaning is, that true Faith is founded on nothing, and how I demonstrate it?

For answer, When God, and where God means to work true Faith, he first brings the Heart unto nothing: To nothing in its own Righteousness, to nothing in its own abilities; that is, to see and apprehend it self meer nothing. By nature we all apprehend our selves to be something, and to have something, out of that self-flattery which is in us (Rev. 3. 17.) Thou sayst, I am Rich, and increased with Goods, and hast need of nothing, and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and naked. Now ere God works Faith in us, he makes us know and apprehend this our nothing, which the Scripture calleth Poverty of Spirit: And this is the nothing which I mean; not in statu entitatis, as in the rank of Creatures; but nothing as in statu Gratie; nothing in Righteousness, nothing in abilities, ever to please God; nothing in the new World, tho' something in the old. The Soul sees it self to be worth nothing as to what is to be possess'd in the new Creation; unable to purchase any thing which is to be enjoyed there, to have Interest in nothing but Sin and Hell, God by saving things, that are not, confoundeth things that are: (1 Cor. 1. 28.) That is, he confounds the Carnal men in the World, which think they Are Something in Wisdom, in Power, in Righteousness; and have a subsistence within themselves, and on their own Bottom. These he confounds by things that are not, whom he brings to apprehend and profess themselves Nothing: That no Flesh should rejoyce in his sight: (v. 29.) That they might have a new Being and Subsistence in Christ, (v. 30.) of him ye are in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us, Righteousness, Wisdom, Sanctification and Redemption: When we are thus annihilated in our selves, he makes Christ ours; and in him we see all things made ours. That which makes these things real, and to have a Being, and a Subsistence to me, is my Faith, Heb. 11. 1. which is therefore call'd the substance of things hoped for, and evidence of things not seen; and therefore a mighty power must concur with it to effect this. Then (2 Cor. 4. 6.) He compareth that power, which God shewed in creating the first perfect and glorious Creature, Light. God who commanded Light to shine out of Darkness, hath shined in our Hearts to give the Light of the knowledge of the Glory of God in the Face of Jesus Christ: What was before the Light was made: You shall find nothing but a rude, void Chaos a darkness and emptiness of all Form; a Tobu and Bobu, which was next door to nothing; which the Spirit immediately sustained and hatched, it had vanish'd to nothing else. And God said there, Let there be Light; and there was Light. Any one that reads this will say, that God here manifested the exceeding greatness of his Power: Just so doth God deal in creating Faith in our Hearts, which are nothing but darkness in themselves. He brings them first to a Tobu & Bobu, an apprehension of their own emptiness of Grace, as that was of Form; to be nothing but darkness in thine own apprehension, so as the Soul is sinking, falling, going into nothing; and then didst thou feel the Spirit of God moving upon thy Heart, working in thee, and commanding Light to shine out of thy Heart; Even the Knowledge of Gods free-Grace, making Christ to be Righteousness, Sanctification, and all things to thee.

 But now the common mock Faith, which is in the World, which is so easy, which comes up alone, of it self, riseth still out of something in a mans self; is not thus founded upon nothing, their Hearts never having been throughly emptied of themselves, nor humbled, nor brought to nothing; their Faith stands not on the power of God, but upon themselves, and therefore they think it so easy: Their own Natural Righteousness, Goodness of Nature, Justness of dealing, every good motion, holy duty performed, emboldeneth them to believe, and think they shall be saved: And they are deluded by that self-flattery which is in mens Hearts; whereby they are apt to believe good News, or any thing which may make for themselves, and whereby they think well of themselves, and are loath to think so harshly, that they shall be damned. And therefore they are light of belief to think Salvation theirs, and to take any thing as an evidence of it: Even as Haman, when he heard that the King would honour a man, presently he thought, out of his pride and self-flattery, that he was the man whom the King would honour: So says every mans Heart naturally, as soon as he hears of such good news as the Gospel; I am the man whom God will save. If there were but one to be saved, self-love should easily perswade him, he was the man: For Pride makes him think better, and hope better, and believe better of himself than of any one else: Especially if he hath any natural goodness or acts of Righteousness to shew for it; which being his own, he thinks well of: And this is the foundation and rise of common Faith, which is engendred out of the principles of self-flattery in a mans self; and nourished, and back'd, and fed by the Righteousness which is in a mans self; and what great power is there in working this? Nothing is more easy; nay, nothing is more hard, than to beat a man off from believing thus well of himself: But if this were true Faith, a man should have wherewith to boast: God therefore, in those whom he means to save works true Faith, which shall ascribe all to Christ and his free Grace; blows down all the Building of presumption; the Foundation whereof was laid in self-flattery, and natural Pride, and good opinion of a mans self; the Walls whereof were doubled with untemper'd mortar of a mans own Righteousness, (for the Heart gets all the rubbish it can, to maintain and strengthen it self in a good opinion of it self:) and God razeth down all these to the very Foundation; Puts a man clean out of conceit with himself; that instead of thinking, he is the man whom God will save, he begins to think, that of all men in the World, he is the man must die; and sees more reason for it, than why all the Men in the World should be damned; and instead of having any good in him, he sees he is an ungodly person, void of all Grace and Goodness (Rom. 4. 3, 5.) and that he is without all ability or strength to help himself: No more able to believe, than to climb up to Heaven. When he is thus brought to nothing in himself, and to see no reason why he, of all men else, should be sav'd; a mighty power is necessary to draw him to believe on him that justified the Ungodly, (Rom. 4. 5.) and to build his Faith upon nothing in himself, but upon Gods free Grace in Christ, and so to raise his Soul plunged into a Gulph of misery, Bladders prick'd, no hands to swim; that it can stand on the Rock (that is higher than I, as David says) Christ; and find footing on him, and so is raised out of apprehension of nothing, now to be all things, and to have all things in Jesus Christ: The power of God working in that great work, τὸ ἐξ οὐκ οὐδένος, the work of Faith, is declared to be as great as to create the World, by these three things.

1. By raising up a Soul, sinking in its own apprehension into nothing, to believe seriously, that yet he is, and may be all things in Christ, and tho' he hath nothing of Righteousness, Wisdom, &c. yet that he possesseth all things, as Paul speaks, (2 Cor. 6. 10.) that out of such low annihilating thoughts, a Mans Heart should be raised to such vast and high Thoughts, that once a Man should dare to think that Christ and all his Righteousness is his, that Sanctification, Heaven, Redemption is his, who even now was nothing but Sin, Hell, wrath and destruction: This is a Work of Almighty Power, greater than the Creation of the World; for here is all things come into the room of nothing.

2. Yea and further, Whereas all the things Christ is made to me by Faith, as Righteousness, &c. are all things not seen, (Heb. 11. 1.) things out of a mans self, yea, out of a mans ken and reach by Nature, and so are to all carnal Men in the World as if they were not; and so they reckon them as nothing, because not seen; reckon them as empty Notions, that have no being, no subsistence, because none in view: That all these absent things not seen, should by an unheard of Art and way, be presented all before me as real, present, subsisting things, to have a being to me, and in me; as true, and real, and sensible a being to Faith, as the Sun which I see before me, (John 14. 21.) as the Meat which I eat, (as Christ says, John 6. 55.) As real as the things I handle or embrace. (Heb. 11. 13.) That Faith should thus be the Evidence of things not seen, and the Substance of things absent and hoped for, and cause therefore the Heart to part with all things at the present he enjoys and sees, to be made a Possessor of these, such reality doth he find in them; what mighty power, think we, must accompany the Work of Faith, that works so great a Wonder and Miracle? As to make absent things present, things hoped for to subsist, things afar off, to be in a Mans Heart?

3. Whereas a Man hath no power to go out of himself, to lay hold on these things, thus presented and offered to him, finds in himself no more ability to embrace, and grasp, and reach them, than to lay hold on yonder Star, or upon the Sun, and a Man truly sees he hath no strength; (Rom. 5. 6.) But is like one falling from an high Pinnacle of self Confidence and Presumption, which is blown down from under him, and though looking up to Heaven, he sees Righteousness, Glory, all things in Christ, offered to be his, if he could catch hold upon them; yet Alas, he is not only sinking and falling down headlong further and further from them, but wants hands to lay hold on them if he were at them, and nigh them: In this Case now, to have a Mans Soul drawn and wound up by the power of God, (John 6. 44.) and carried up by the wings of the Spirit, to the Throne of Christ in Heaven, and to have new hands of Faith given him, to embrace and apprehend him of whom he is comprehended: All these are so many wonders in the Work of Faith, which requires as much power to effect, as was seen in the Creation of the World.

And if any have not observed this power working thus in their Hearts at first, in bringing them first to nothing, (God working upon some insensibly and by degrees,) yet they may discern the power of God working in their Faith, in continuing, backing, strengthening and preserving of it; for he filleth the Work of Faith with power, as well as he begins it with Power; and if Man lives not by Bread only, but by Gods Command and power; then the Life of Faith is much more continued with power, And indeed if we would define Faith, what is it but the power of God drawing the Heart to Christ and holding it to him, John 6. 44. and 1 Pet. 1. 5. Ye are kept by the power of God through Faith; that is, the power of God is seen in Faith, and that in Temptation especially, verse 6. 7. and though in ordinary passages of a Mans Life, when Faith is not put to it, a Man will scarce discern this power backing it, when Signs, and the witness of the Spirit, and assistance in Duties, do take part with Faith, yet in time of Temptation, this will more evidently appear,

Book 9 *pear, when the spurious Faith that is but a fruit of the Flesh, will fail; but if true, he that maintained the Oil in the Cruse, that it decayed not in the time of the Famine, he will maintain that little drop of Faith in the time of Temptation. For this is a sure Rule, That which backs thy Faith in Temptation was the begetter of it; as the Woman, when her Child was like to be divided, laboured to save it, because it was her Child, so will God preserve that Faith that is begotten by himself when it is like to be over-born. And know this, That if thy Faith be true, it will be Tempted; Satan hath desired to Winnow thee, but I have Prayed (says Christ) that thy Faith fail not: Faith being that thing that Satan desires most to winnow. Dost thou therefore feel the power of God backing, strengthening, joyning, with thy Faith, drawing thy Heart to cleave to Christ, maugre all Temptations? Dost thou feel Faith an invincible thing that will never be Nonplust? It is because Gods power is in it; let a Flood of Temptations come in, yet Faith, like a small drop of Oyl, will be above them all: And like a Man hanging upon the top of a Pinnacle, tho' ordinarily he hath a stool to ease his hand, yet when the stool is taken away, still he hangs; so Faith, when Temptation takes all signs and props away, then upholdeth the Heart, though the Devil not only plucks the stool away, but also strikes at the hand that holds it, yet still Faith cleaves to Christ; and that so as sometimes the hand is benumbed also, and feels not that it holds it.*

USE 1. The First USE is to convince those, who defer Repentance, of their low and slight esteem of the VVork of Grace, they erring herein, not knowing the power of God; whereas if men apprehended that this Work is as much as to dissolve the VVorld to nothing, and make it new again, and that it is as impossible for them, by their own power to Repent, as to do this; they would set all aside, and think this one thing necessary, as Mary did, and immediately begin to seek to God for it, and think that little time they have to Live, were little enough for to beg so great a thing at Gods hands, and be glad if they could obtain it at last. But such is the Foolish Wisdom of Men, that think to grasp both the pleasures of Sin here, and Heaven in the end, that think to go beyond God and the Devil also, thinking to put God off with any Repentance at their cast-away leisure, after the strength and flower of their Youth and Years are spent in the Service of Sin; and after a long Apprentiship served to the Devil, who takes them Captive at his Will, think yet to give him at last the slip, to knock off his Fetters, and to escape; as if Repentance were within their own power, so playing with it, as the Cat doth with it's silly Prey, thinking that one sudden leap will Translate them at once from Death to Life; between which yet there is great a Gulf, as between Heaven and Hell. Away, you foolish Sinners, that say in your Hearts, as he (Deut. 29. 19.) We shall have Peace, &c. Go on to make your own Ghosts, (as they Jam. 4. 13, 14, 15.) chalk out what ways of Pleasures this day and the next you mean to walk in, at last meaning (as your Hearts tell you) to turn in and see where true Repentance dwells, I tell you, (as James says, Jam. 4. 13, 14, 15. in matters of far less dependance, and more in your own power than Repentance is) you reckon without your Host; it must be the exceeding greatness of Gods power, must work it. If you dare yet think it in your own power, go on and prosper, set your own times, put off God still, who it may be now offers and begins to Work it, and in your own deceitful Hearts appoint and take a longer Day, and then break it and perish for ever; do: But if you think it to be in Gods power only (as if this Text be true, it is,) tremble to have such a Thought; take his time who hath appointed a time for every Work under the Sun, the Grass to Grow, Flowers to Spring, Trees to Blossom and all in their Season; which when past, Dung, and Water, and use what means you will, they appear no more.

But you will say, If the greatness of his power Work it, then he is able to do it as well at one time as another, and so no time is past with him.

t Answer,

I Answer, That his power is regulated by his Will, for his power working any thing, is his Will. He worketh all things according to his good pleasure, and the Council of his Will; therefore speaking of Works of Regeneration, 'tis said, Of his Will he begat us., Jam. 1. 18. He is a Free Agent, Breathing when and where he pleaseth; and therefore presume not on his power at all times, unless thou be'st sure of his Will at all times; now that thou art not; for after that day appointed, he swears in his Wrath, they shall never enter, Chap. 3. 18. as he dealt with Saul in the matter of the Kingdom, 1 Sam. 13. 13, 14, 15. So with men for matter of Grace, Ezek. 24. 13. when I would, they would not; therefore I will not, says God.

But you will say, I will seek him, and that earnestly.

I Answer, Remember Esau, who in this is made a Type of all Neglecters of Grace offered in the Gospel, Heb. 12 17. as the Birth-right is made a Type of the Grace offered in the Gospel, so his Father is a Type of God offering it; he having sold it, as Men do the offer of Grace, for their Lusts; his Father could not change his Mind, though he sought it with Tears; he found no place for Repentance: Weep thy Eyes out, it will do no good.

But you will say, I will then turn from my Sins, take up new purposes and resolutions to forsake them, and confess them, and then I hope he will repent and have Mercy on me.

To this I Answer, I Confess you may do so; only take this with you, that there is a kind of Repentance which is partly in your own power, such as Abab had, who Mourned and went softly; such as Judas, Mat. 27. who Repented himself, Confest and Restored; such as they performed, Hos. 7. last, They returned; but not to God, not doing it out of a changed Heart, which moves not God. But to have a changed Heart, a new Life of Godliness put in, is not in thy power. For thou canst not make a Hair Black or White, nor can a Blackamore alter his Colour, tho' his blackness be but in his Skin; and canst thou change thy Heart; thinkest thou, Sin being incorporated and blended with thy Nature, so baked into thy Bones, and the Spirit of thy Mind? Tell me, can this heavy massy lump, the dregs of the World, the Earth fastned in its own Center, can it remove it self, and become a Star? Can all the Creatures, Angels, Men, if they set their Shoulders to it, with all Engines, move it a jot off the Hinges it hangs on? No more can thy Heart move it self, being as averse to what is good the Earth as is to move upward, as fixt upon Sin, as the Earth upon its Center; and as great a distance is there between the State of Grace and Nature, as between Heaven and Earth.

But you will say, I will send for a Minister or some good Man to help me, and speak peace to me, at my Death.

Still this Doctrine answers you; it is Gods Power only can do it: Send for all the Angels from Heaven, the whole Colledge of Physitians, let them come with all their Balms, yet as he said (2 Kings 6. 27.) if God do not help thee, they cannot; for this Birth is (John 1. 13.) not of self, or the will of Man, but of God: Though the Minister Preach then the Gospel of Peace to thee, yet unless God makes an Echo to thy Heart, they are but tinkling Cymbals. Isa. 59. 17. I Create the Fruit of the Lips Peace; talk they of Peace never so much, unless God speak Peace, and Create it, as the Fruit of those Words, by an Almighty Power, thou canst not have Peace. The Wicked are as the Troubled Sea, which cannot rest; when the Sea was troubled (Mat. 8. 24.) could all the Disciples still it? Could all their Anchors save the Ship and stay it? No, (verse 27.) Christ only did it: So when thy Conscience is tossed at Death, and when the Waves of thy Sins arise, and the Devils, as the Winds, are let loose to joyn with those Waves, Book 9 Waves, who can Command them silent? Sooner mayest thou Command the Thunder silent, that Roars in the midst of Heaven; and then thou poor Wicked Wretch art tost, over-whelmed, and no Anchor will hold or stay thee; no Prince of Peace Comfort thee; and suppose now all Men speak things of Peace to thee, yet there is no Peace to the Wicked, says my God; and if He says No, His Word will stand.

But thou wilt say, I am of an Ingenuous Temper, and soft to the Impressions of good, so as at any time, when I consider things, I find my Heart moved.

I Answer, Suppose it; yet, if this be true, that Gods power must work it, thou for all thy good Nature, art as far off as another, in regard of any active concurrence to it; as take a piece of soft Wax, and another of hard, the soft is no more able of it self to work the image and impression of any thing upon it, than the hard; but a Hand and Seal must stamp the one, as well as the other. So is a good nature, as you use to call it, as empty of the image of God, as the crookedest, and as unable to stamp that image as the most perverse: It must be Gods Spirit, (for it is the Seal of God, and so called, Eph. 4. 30.) must stamp and work an Impression, as well as upon the hardest Heart; upon thy soft Heart; this you may see in the example of the young man, who was ingenuous, soft, plyable, and Christ loved him; yet of him Christ says, and upon occasion of him, that it was as easie for a Camel to go through the eye of a Needle, as for a Rich Man to go to Heaven.

But some will say, If I should now set my self to turn, I fear my case is desperate and there is no hope, I am so hardned in evil.

Answer, The power of God being it which must do it, thou mayest come to Repentance, tho' thy Heart be never so hard. At the latter Day the Earth and Elements shall melt with fervent heat, and is not he able to melt thy Heart? Look now on the Frosty Weather, tho' all Men could not thaw it, yet stay, thou shalt see it thawed; and cannot he dissolve thy Heart?

But thou wilt say, My Heart is full of Sin, and of the Works of the Devil in it, and hath so long lain in them, that it cannot be heal'd.

I Answer, He raised Lazarus, tho' Dead Four Days, and he stunk; and why not thee also, tho' thou art not only Dead, but stinkest in thy sins?

CHAP. VI.

That the Virtual Cause of Regeneration is the Resurrection of JESUS CHRIST: What Influence it hath to raise us to a Newness of Life.

I PETER I. 3.

Blessed be the God, and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant Mercy, hath Begotten us again into a Lively Hope, by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ from the Dead.

By the Resurrection of Jesus Christ from the Dead.

THE next thing to be considered is the Virtual Cause of Regeneration, namely, The Resurrection of Christ.
These Words may First, Either refer to our hope, as being the Cause

Cause of it: For in that Christ is risen and ascended, lies our hope that we also shall, as the Apostle connects them (1 Cor. 15. 17, 20.) and it is the Inference which the Apostle makes, Col. 3. 1, 3, 4. compared, That He being Risen ver. 1. and being our Life, ver. 4. Therefore when He appears in Glory, We shall appear with Him. And this it was, that made the primitive Christians, (as with good News) thus to salute one another, Christ is risen, Christ is risen. Because I live (says Christ) you shall live also, John 14. 19. and therefore (1 Tim. 1.) Christ is called our Hope.

Or else 2. It refers to being Begotten again. And this seems here to be the most probable reference. Only this is a Rule, take in interpreting Scriptures, That when any Passage relates to two things, I take them both. But here I shall only speak of the last Reference, because the dependence between Christ's Resurrection and the New Birth, is the most difficult to discern. To shew the Affinity of these two, and to explain this in General, I shall say two things.

1. That Christ's own Resurrection is called his being Begotten: So (Acts 13. 33.) that place in the 2d Psalm is applied to his Resurrection, This day have I Begotten thee, &c. The reason whereof, I take to be this: Because when the Humane Nature first entered into that Estate, which primitively was ordained for Him by his Father: (For he should not have come into this World clothed with Infirmities, but for sin. (Rom. 8. 3.) But the World to come was ordained for Him, as this World was for the first Adam.) His first Entrance into that his World, being at his Resurrection; it may truly be called his Begetting, as being then first brought forth into that his World. And so I understand the coherence of those two verses, Heb. 1. 5, 6. That Begetting spoken of v. 5. was his Resurrection, which was that his first coming into the World, mentioned v. 6. namely, that World which is call'd the World to come, chap. 2. 5. Now, as his Resurrection is called his Begetting again, so our Resurrection is called our Regeneration. So you have it in those Words of Christ, Mat. 19. 28. Those that follow me in [the Regeneration] shall sit on twelve Thrones, &c. which refer rather to the time of the Resurrection; which is the Restitution of all things, (as Peter calls it) than to the time of following Christ here, altho' they may relate to both. And therefore we find, (Luke 20. 36.) the Children of God are called by a new Title; which ariseth from God's raising them up; it being a begetting them anew, as his Children. The Words are observable; for they are said to be the Children of God, they being the Children of the Resurrection, or peculiarly for this, that they are raised up by God. And there is this particular reason in it: For in their first begetting, as men, God was but the Father of their Spirits, they having other Bodily Parents of their Bodies and Flesh, Heb. 12. 9. But now in the Resurrection, God becomes a Father anew unto their Bodies, and the whole Man raising them up, and joining both Body and Soul together: And so they become the Children of God, being the Children of the Resurrection. And therefore also it is, that the Redemption at the Resurrection of the Body is called the Adoption. Rom. 8. And to this purpose also, is that Phrase (Col. 2. 18.) where Christ is called the first Begotten of the Dead; the Resurrection being a Begetting, both unto Him and Them; and because they are raised by vertue of his Resurrection, therefore he is called the first Begotten. Wherefore, that there should be some special Affinity between Christs Resurrection and our New Birth, is not unlikely. But more exprestly those two places, Col. 2. 12. and 1 Pet. 3. 21. do ascribe the new Birth of a Believer unto the Resurrection of Jesus Christ. The like Figure whereunto, even Baptism doth now save us, by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ. Baptism is the Sacrament of Regeneration; and when the Apostle says, Baptism saves, his meaning is, that the Grace in Baptism, which is Regeneration (for that is the thing sealed up) wrought by Christs Resurrection, doth save us. And the like to this, is that in 2 Col. 12.

The 2d Thing in General to be observed is, That though all the works of Christ for us have an Influence into his work in us, and upon us; yet so, as some are more especially attributed to some work of Christ than to another, and Book 9 and some things in every work in us, more peculiarly to some of his Works for us, than to others. That being true of Christs works for us, that is of the works of the Trinity: That though all works are common to all the Persons, yet some are more peculiarly attributed to the Father, as Election, some to the Son, as Redemption, &c. and likewise in every work something more peculiarly attributed to one than to another; as in Conversion, drawing us to Christ, is attributed to the Father, (John 6. 44.) and Sanctification to the Holy Ghost. And answerably is it in the thing in hand, the work of Regeneration: Wherein Mortification, or destroying the Body of Sin, which is one part of it, is attributed to his Death, (Rom. 6. 4.) and the Begetting, or infusing a New Principle of Life into us unto his Resurrection; verse 5. of the same Chapter. And thus likewise in Justification; the Matter of our Righteousness, which is imputed, is Christs obedience unto Death: But the imputation it self is ascribed to his Resurrection: (Rom. 4. last.) And so (Rom. 5. 10.) our Reconciliation is attributed to his Death, but our Preservation in that Estate, unto his Life and Intercession.

1. It is not by way of Merit only, for the Merit or Price laid down, was fully accomplish'd and paid at that Instant when he arose out of the Grave, (which was the last part of his satisfaction, and when he arose out of debasement): But his Resurrection was the entrance and first step into his Glorified Condition.

Neither 2. Is it simply, in respect of Application; That he arose again to live and send the Spirit to work Regeneration in us; (as Rom. 5. 10. Where we are said to be saved by his Life): For in this respect, his Resurrection hath but the same common Influence which it hath into all other works, as upon Justification, &c. And indeed, to speak properly, His death is the Meritorious Cause, his Intercession, the Applicatory Cause: But his Resurrection is the Virtual Cause; as by virtue of which, it is wrought. And therefore (Phil. 3. 20.) it is called, the vertue of his Resurrection. A Dew comes from his Resurrection, like the Dew of Herbs, as the Prophet Isaiah calls it, in the 26th Chapter of his Prophecy, v. 19. which (as there) causeth the Conversion and Calling of the Jews, and their Resurrection unto Life, even as the Dew from Heaven causeth the Herbs to grow out of the dead Womb of the Earth. Therefore Christ is called a quickening Spirit, as Adam a Living Soul, 1 Cor. 15. 45. Adam being able indeed to convey Life, but not to quicken dead Hearts, as Christ doth. Now this Vertue consisteth in, or ariseth from two things, or rather shews it self in Two things.

1. In that the very same power that wrought in Christ when he was raised up, works in Us to Beget us again. So Eph. 1. 19, 20. It is Expressly said, That the same power that wrought in Christ when he was raised from the Dead, works in them that Believe. It is no less; yea, it is the same; and this, to work Faith: (Col. 2. 12.) And so (Rom. 8. 11.) the same Spirit that raised up Christ, raiseth us up; our Souls here, and our Bodies hereafter. And it not only required the same power, (as I have else-where shewn) but the same power was engaged by his Resurrection, to work this new Birth in us. For Christ rose not as a private man, but as a Head, and as the first fruits of them that sleep; 1 Cor. 15. 20. and the first begotten of the dead; and so, in a way of representing their Persons therein; thereby engaging the same power to work in them the Members, that wrought in Him the Head; because he rose with Them considered as in Him, and he having that power for their sakes; to shew that first in his Natural Body, which afterward he was to shew in his mystical.

2. Christs Resurrection is the exemplary Cause of our Regeneration, according to which, the Spirit, or that same power that wrought in Him, works a work in us conformable to his Resurrection, as the pattern of it. And so, although an exemplary Cause, hath of all ordinary Causes the least influence; yet this hath more than such ordinary Causes use to have, And that, by

by vertue of a Decree, or Ordinance given out by God. That we should as well bear the Image of the Heavenly, as of the Earthly Adam. This Law was given to Grace, as well as Nature: And so gives force to Christs actions, to conform us and ours unto them; as it did to Adam's Actions, to transform our Nature unto His (as his Corruption doth, by the Law of Nature.) And thus our begetting again, (which is by the infusion of a new Life) bears the Image of Christs Resurrection, and so is attributed unto it. The Rule being, That that in Christ should have an Influence more special to work in us that which was most like thereto. Thus Rom. 6. 5. It is expressly said, We shall be Baptized into the Likeness of his Resurrection. Now Baptism is the Sacrament of Regeneration, which resembles, in the dipping under water and coming forth again, our Burial with Christ in his Grave, and our rising again by Faith and a new Life: Col. 2. 12. Now then, I shall let you see in General the similitude between Christs Resurrection and our Regeneration.

1. As the Resurrection of Christ was the great Declaration of him to be the Son of God, with power; Rom. 1. 4. So is the Regeneration of a Believer the first Declaration of his being a Son of God, and the first discovery of his Election.

2. As Christ's Resurrection was the first step unto his Glory, and to that exaltation that followed that his Resurrection; So Regeneration is the Foundation and first step unto all those Priviledges of a Christian that follow upon the State of Grace, whereunto this is the door, or first entrance. I might shew this more particularly in the principal Parts of Regeneration; as,

1. In the work of Faith, in a rising from under the guilt of sin.

2. In the work of Sanctification, in a rising from under the power of sin. For we are dead in respect of both: Dead in respect of Guilt; as a man condemned is said to be a dead man, bound over to Death. Dead in respect of the power of sin, as a man whose Soul is gone is dead, he being unable to move or stir, because he wants a Principle of Life. It is Faith which raiseth us to a Life of Justification, as Rom. 5. 18. it is called. And this it doth, as really, from the state of Condemnation, which change is called a passing from Death to Life: So also apprehensively; that is, from the apprehension of our being under the guilt and condemnation of sin: Which apprehension is wrought by Humiliation, wherein the Spirit condemns a man, and binds him over to Guilt and Death: (And therefore, Rom. 8. 15. he is called the Spirit of Bondage) and also gives a man up to the Law, which shuts a man up with a Guard or Garison, as one Condemned, until Faith comes: Gal. 3. 22. For therein God's dealing with the Jews was a Type of his proceeding by a Spirit of Bondage, wrought in those God means to convert: And so the Romans are said to have received the Spirit of Bondage. God also slayeth the Sinner with that guilt: Rom. 7. 10, 11. Sin revived, and I died, says Paul, when he was humbled. And out of this Death doth Faith raise the Soul up to a Justification of Life. Therefore (Col. 2. 12.) it is said, You are risen with him through Faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the Dead. For it is Faith which makes a man live in God's sight, and enjoy his Favour, which is the Life of the Soul.

Of the Two Essential Properties of Inherent Holiness and Sanctification. That a Regenerate Man makes God his chiefest Good : That he also sets up God and his Glory as his chiefest End. Lay not up for your selves Treasures upon Earth, where Moth, and Rust doth corrupt, and where Thieves break through, and Steal.

But lay up for your selves Treasure in Heaven, where neither Moth nor Rust, doth Corrupt, and where Thieves do not break through, nor Steal.

For where your Treasure is, there will your Hearts be also.

ALL Creatures are said to have their Life, Motion and Being in God, Acts 17. 28. But that is only as he is their Efficient Cause, and Up-holder of them by his power, It is in like manner said, that God hath Book 10 hath made all things for himself, even the Wicked, Prov. 16. 4. namely, as the Finis cui, or external end. He by his Power and Wisdom ordered all their Beings and Motions to his own Glory. But it is the Priviledge, yea Essential Constitution of the New Creature, to hold of God by a more near and intrinsecal Tenure or Copy, even for it's very being, to have its Life bound up in God; and that in a double further respect unto him. Namely,

1. To have it's Life, Actuation, and Motion, and Stirrings of all within it self, to lye and consist in God himself, as known and loved by it self, as the close Object and Matter of it's Happiness and Comfort. And

2. To have God made unto it from the inward Constitution and Tendency of it self, its proper natural principal End, it's own intrinsecal end, or Finis cuius; and more intrinsecal unto it, then its self is to its self. He is the Load-star that Guides, and Load-stone which quickens all the motions and tendencies of all within it, and which draws them all into, and carries them along with it's self.

And look as the Understanding and Will, are two Essential Faculties in the Soul, so to make God a Man's cheifest Good, and a Man's cheifest End, these are the Two Essential Properties of the new Nature, that do Constitute it such, and are proper thereunto. The Soul was originally made for God, so as both to Glorifie him, and also to be made happy in him; and Holiness in the Soul, and that Principle alone, doth fit it for, and elevate it unto both these. Therefore in some Scriptures you find it Termed, The Life of God, as Eph. 4. 16. sometimes the Glory of God. Rom. 3. 23.

The First of these is my present Subject in design, and to call all your Souls to an account, what it is you account your cheifest Good. All Men of Knowledge brought up under the Light we enjoy, out of ordinary conviction of what God is, and out of common experience of the Vanity of the Creature, do acknowledge and profess this God to be the cheifest Good, as to the speculative part; but that which we seek after, is a discovery of what Men do herein, practically and really, in the daily actings and Motions of their Souls towards God, and into God; and not what Men profess him to be in Reverfion: All will say, we hope for Happiness from God in the other World, when they can live no longer; though all their Lives here, they live in the Creatures: But the Inquisition is, what Men do make here, in this Life, their cheifest Good, and do live upon it, and are taken up therewith, either in the pursuance, or enjoyment of it; and this with difference from all Carnal Men in the World.

It is uttered as the common Cry and Voice of the many or multitude, Pfal. 4. 6. The many will say, Who will shew us any good. That's the Common Voice and Cry of Nature, common to good and bad; but how then are Wicked and Godly Men differenced and distinguished? Even by this, What good things their Souls make their good things. There are multitudes of Scriptures to evidence this; Luke 16. Christs chief scope indeed was to shew the vastly differing conditions of a Rich Wicked Man, and of a poor Saint, in this World, and in that to come. How plentifully the Rich Man lived, and what he enjoyed according to the opinion and desire of his own Heart; the 19th verse Relates, There was a certain Rich Man, which was Cloathed in Purple and fine Linnen, and fared Sumptuously every Day. And how Miserable the poor Man was, verse 20, 21. And there was a certain Beggar, named Lazarus, which was laid at his Gate full of Sores, and desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the Rich Man's Table; moreover, the Dogs came and licked his Sores. He was in his Body full of Sores, and so in continual Tortures, unable to stir, for he was laid at the Rich Mans outward Gate, not having to sustain nature; for he desired Crums, which are the allowance of Doggs, and these were denied him; and on the contrary, the Rich Mans Dogs licked and sucked his Blood, refreshing themselves therewith, a Dead Carcass, he unable so much as to drive them away. This Difference is in their Lives.

The other is in their Death: Poor Lazarus dies, and the Angels carry his Soul to Feast in Heaven; which Christ elsewhere expresseth, by sitting down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, as at a Feast; and here, by his being placed in Abraham's Bosom, as next Guests to him: It being the manner at Feasts to lean on the Bosom of him that was next him, as John did in Christs, John 13. 23. The Rich Man Dies, and hath a stately Funeral; He was Buried; that's added; which you may observe is not spoken of the other; but withal, the next News you hear of him, is, his being in Hell, where, in the words of my Text, he is upbraided with, and reminded of this, Remember thou receivedst thy good things in thy Life-time, but Lazarus evil things. Souls in Hell meditate and perfectly remember what in this World they had been, and what Sins they committed, what Pleasures they enjoyed, and in the Conscience and Remembrance of such things, do lye that Worm that never Dyeth; and the 21st Verse of the 50th Psalm tells us, That their Sins are set in order, or Marshal-Array, afore them.

Nor is it simply said, Thou receivedst good things; as of Lazarus, 'tis said he received Evil; as if that were the Rule God went by? No, for even this very Abraham, who is here brought in speaking this to him, is an undeniable instance to the contrary. And the Rich Man had had from thence, wherewith to have retorted to him. Gen. 13. 2. Abraham was very Rich in Cattel, in Silver, and in Gold. And this was spoken of him many Years afore he dyed, and 'tis to be supposed he increased therein. The Sting therefore which he sets and leaves in this Rich Mans Heart, lies in this Word, [THY] good things; that is, which thy Soul pitcht upon as such, as the chief Object of it's desires, the Darling of thy Delights, or (as it is uttered by God to the Inhabitants of that Great City, when in like manner Destroyed and cast to Hell, Rev. 18. 14.) The Fruits which thy Soul lusted after, and all things that were dainty and goodly, (namely, in thine own Eyes) are departed from thee. And this the very Text, with difference, puts the Emphasis upon. For of Lazarus he says, that he Received Evil things; but thou, thy good things.

So then, Carnal Men make the good things, that are in this Life, their chief and only good things, which their Souls lust after, and live upon. And the Reason is in Eph. 4. 18. They being estranged from God, and the life of God, through ignorance and unbelief, they know no better. And all Mens Souls cry out, Who will shew us any good? And therefore they, as the Prodigal (whose story is the lively Type of this) being ready to starve, and no saving intercourse being betwixt God and them, they content themselves with what is afore them, though but husks. Nor can they relish, or take in, or delight in any other. And so are confined and shut up to these.

And 2. In that other Scripture, Matth. 6. 19, 20, 21. Christ holds forth, as to this point in hand, These Two things, 1. That every Man hath some thing or other he accounts his Treasure, which in like manner, speaking to every Man, he calls their Treasure, where YOUR Treasure is, there will your Hearts be. Every Man that hath an Heart, hath also some Treasure. For it will be taken up with something or other; and the reason is, because every Man hath self to provide for, and lay up for. Christ hath expressed it in these very words, Luke 12. 21. A man laying up Treasure, says he, for himself, and of what his Heart judgeth best, and finds naturally most content in, it lays out for such things. 'Tis not Riches only, that are the Treasures of the Sons of men (tho' some mens) but whatever thing the Heart fancies, and is set upon, as its chiefest good. The poorest have their Treasure in this respect, of what is in their Sphear and Compass: 'Tis that on which their Hearts are, as the Pharise is, verse 21. that is, which he vallues, and esteems as his chiefest good. So then, thy good things, in Luke, is all one with thy Treasure in Matthem; only the one is a real expression, the other only a Metaphorical. A Treasure hath this Addition, that it is some eminent good thing, which he accounts such, and so his chiefest good. Treasure, you know, is of what a man counts most precious. Rich and Covetous men, (from whom the Metaphor is taken) heap not up for Treasures, Iron, Lead, or Pebbles; but Gold, precious Stones, the World which in common estimation hath turned up trump, Book 10 trump. We may approve of many things in their kind, which we make not our Treasure: But Treasure is still the choicest and the chiefest: And so here is put to express what a man hath pitch'd on as his chiefest Good. A Godly man accounts the things of this Life Good, for he useth them; yet he reckons them not as his Treasure. And a wicked man may acknowledge, and cannot but say of the things of the other World, God and Christ, and Grace, that they are things that are Good; yet he makes them not his Treasure.

The Second thing that Christ holds out, is, That there are two differing Treasuries or Store-houses, Repositories or Places in which the chief good things of the Sons of men are found; and but two: And they are Earth and Heaven. These are the two great Staples of differing Commodities: Look as Heaven and Hell will one day make a perfect dichotomy, disjunction, or a single division of mens persons hereafter, so here; on Earth, and on Heaven, do mens Hearts and Affections divide.

Now as the general Reason afore given, was That every man hath a self to provide for: So the reason of this different Treasure and Provision is the difference of that Self that is in men. Some have nothing but an Earthly Self. All their Affections, and Inclinations of their Souls, are through sin become Members upon Earth, Col. 3. 5. and Earth will to Earth. But a man born again, hath another self begun in him. For what is it else that is born again, but another self, by this second Birth, (as the Product thereof) as that former self was by the other Birth? And is therefore call'd the New Creature, as that which is made for, and fitted to the things of another World. And these things on Earth will no more make that self happy, than Meat and Drink, and Cloaths or Beauty, would conduce to make an Angel, or a separated Spirit happy, or contribute to their well being.

I need not open to you these two vast Treasuries; they are known to you all. The World is a large Shop of Vanity, and one Heart hath a mind to this thing, another to that, viz. Beauty, Credit, Learning, Wit, Conversation, Riches, Honour, Power. (Soul thou hast Goods for many Years, (Luke 12. 19.) Eat, drink, and be merry.) Which, because the World generally knows no better, and uttering their very Hearts, they use to give the name of Goods unto: Yea and of Substance forsooth, it being so to them; and therefore John is fain to distinguish them upon the mention of them, from the true good, terming them the Worlds good, (1 John 3. 17.) that is, which they count such. It is the name the World gave, and in the other part of the distinction, or rather in opposition thereto (Luke 16. 9.) The other are termed the true Riches, by Christ, and (Chap. 12. 21.) Riches to God, that is, in Gods account and valuation such, whereas the others are such in the Worlds.

But not Riches only, but any thing else more Mental and Aerial; as Honours, Learning, yea legal Righteousness it self, outward Priviledges and Duties of Christians (when God is not made a mans chief End in the performance or enjoyment of them) come under this Inventory of mens Treasuries, Phil. 3. 5, 6. Circumcised the eighth day, of the Stock of Israel, of the Tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew, of the Hebrews, touching the Law, a Pharisee: Concerning Zeal, persecuting the Church: Touching the Righteousness that is in the Law, blameless. Now he counted these his Excellency, and his Gain: He useth both expressions in what follows, v. 7, 8. What things were Gain to me, I accounted Loss; for the Excellency of the Knowledge of Christ. Yea, put in all things, for so Paul doth; I account all things now but loss. Or

2. Heavens Treasury you have set out under that notion, (for I shall quote no other than such as speak in the Language of this Metaphor) I am thy exceeding great Reward, says God to Abraham, Gen. 15. 1. after he had refused the spoil of five Kings. By this metaphor are set forth.

1. God, who in Job 22. 25. is termed a Righteous mans best Gold: See the Margent.
2. Christ, in whom are unsearchable Riches, Eph. 3. 8.
3. The Promises, which are the Veins, the Mines those Treasures are laid up in: They are great and precious, 2 Pet. 1. 4.
4. The Graces that do interest us in these Riches, as Faith, 'tis call'd precious Faith

Faith, 1 Pet. 1. 1. Yea, much more precious than Gold, 1 Pet. 1. 7. So Wisdom also is stiled whether you understand it of Christ, or the wisdom of Salvation, through Faith in him, Prov. 8. 19, 20, 21. My Fruit is better than Gold, yea, than fine Gold, and my revenue than choice Silver. I lead in the way of Righteousness, in the midst of the paths of Judgement. That I may cause those that love me, to inherit Substance; and I will fill their Treasure.

And 2. That the Soul of a man born again is thus framed, as to place in God, and these things of God, his chiefest and sole supreme comfort; and this by way of difference from wicked men, the Scripture throughout sheweth: David is a sufficient Instance, who utters this disposition of his both absolutely, or singly, as also comparatively, or with difference to what wicked men account their chiefest good.

1. Absolutely or singly, Psal. 73. 25. Whom have I in Heaven but thee? Or in Earth, in comparison of thee?

2. Comparatively, with wicked men, as a difference from them, Psal. 4. 6, 7. There be many that will say, Who will shew us any good? Lord lift up the light of thy Countenance upon us. Thou hast put gladness in my Heart, more than when their Corn, and their Wine encreased. Where, 1. He brings in the common cry of all mankind, as hunger starved Creatures, Who will shew us any good? Then 2. Shews, what chief good the option of himself and of all the Saints is, in whose Name he uttereth it, as Paul, in the like case, instancing in his own Perswasion, but speaking in this Name of the whole Us of Believers, Rom. 7. 37, 38, 39. Nay, in all these things we are more than Conquerers, through him that loved us, v. 38. For I am perswaded, that neither Death, nor Life, nor Angels, nor Principalities, nor Powers, nor things present, nor things to come; Nor height, nor depth, nor any other Creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. Lord lift upon us the Light of thy Countenance; this we have pitch'd on, as that in which our joy and happiness lies: And the Light or Communication thereof unto us, is the pursuit of us all which are the chosen of God: v. 3. Know that the Lord hath set apart him that is Godly for himself, to enjoy himself, to be made happy in himself; ordained him and singled him out to communicate himself unto. And accordingly hath given him a principle of Godliness suited to himself. He hath set out him that is godly for himself, making him capable of himself, as the Faculty is of its natural Object, and the eye of Colours, &c. Whereas wicked men (says he) have their Corn and Wine. Observe how he calls it their Corn, &c. Had not David Corn and Wine too? Oh but these were these mens chief good things, which their Souls had seized upon, as the Bee doth on the Flowers, to suck honey out of.

Again, You find the same request with this very difference, Psal. 17. 14. The men of the World (says he) which have their portion in this Life: There is the one sort, who have their Name from the things they affect: The men of this World; that look as things of this World, in relation to their adherence to them, are call'd the Goods of this World, 1 John 3. 17. So David calls carnal men the men of this World. They have their denomination and distinction from what their Hearts are set on, and addicted unto: Even as Esau is call'd a man of the Field, like as the Birds are call'd the Birds of the Air; because that is the Element they live in. And their portion is in this Life: Their portion, that is, that which themselves seek and choose. Remember thou hadst thy good things in thy life time. The Prodigal's portion, was that which himself desired, Luke 15. 12. of which (Mat. 6. 2.) Christ speaks: That as they seek Glory from men, so they have their reward; still it is call'd theirs, That is, what they pitch'd on, expected, desired, Covenanted for.

Now how doth David? As a Godly man he distinguisheth himself from these, follows v. 15. As for me, I will behold thy Face in Righteousness. He severs himself from them, as a man of another genius. 'Tis as when we say, [For my part] so he speaks to God, The Happiness I look for, lies in thy Face, in thy Self, that in thy Person and Favour, (as Face is taken) this I pursue after in this Life, upon the glimps I have of it. And in expectation of that, my desires grow dead and flat to all other things here. So, as though the chief of my affections towards Book 10 it here are but desires; yet when I awake from the dust (Isa. 26. 19.) I shall be satisfied with thy Image; the light, sight, and knowledge of thee, and of him whom thou hast sent, Christ the express Image of thy Person. That desire or aim of Paul's, (Phil. 3. 11.) did fully interpret this. He look'd not to things that are seen, which are Temporal, but his eyes were upon things that are not seen, but are Eternal; as himself speaks, 2 Cor. 4. last.

So that as in Philosophy we say, Potentia distinguntur per Actus & Objecta, as Sight from Hearing; as having Colours for it's Object; whereas Hearing hath Sounds: So shall the distinction of Persons, and their fatal Conditions, at the Latter day, be fetched from the Objects their Souls pursued after, as their chiefest Good, as that which they enjoy, or hope to arrive at, Psal. 24. 6. They are a Generation, that is, a sort or kind of Men whose differencing Property is this, that they seek thy face. This is the Generation of them that seek him. That seek thy face, in opposition to which, Christ using the same denomination David had done, termeth the other sort the Children of this World. And then adds, who are wiser in their Generation, Luke 16. 8. Thus terming them in that very respect, a Generation distinct from the Children of Light. Inasmuch as this distinction riseth up to be an essential difference, and to make a several Kind and Generation of men. Psal. 24. 6.

CHAP. II.

That we may know what we make our chiefest Good, let us enquire in what things we take most pleasure and delight.

LET us all narrowly enquire in what good things our Treasury doth lye: Which will be the great Inquest at the latter day. Hell, you see, getts those that do make the good things of this Life their good things. It is that which stops the mouth of one in Hell. Thou receivedst thy good things in thy Life. And at latter day when men shall see what a good and glorious God they have neglected, for the desires of, or pursuit after these low vanities, all mens mouths will be stop'd, and have nothing to say. That therefore which I put to the question is, in what dost thou place thy Treasure? I examine not the particulars; let thy Conscience do that. But deal impartially, to what World doth it belong? Wherein lyes it, and what is it your Hearts do trade for? Every man is a Merchant-man. Romes Customers are termed Merchants upon Earth, Rev. 18. 11. And of the Commodities they traffick for, you have the Bill of Trade in the 12 and 13th verses. The Merchandize of Gold and Silver, and pretious Stones, and of Pearls, and fine Linnen, and Purple, and Silk, and Scarlet, and all thyme Wood, and all manner of Vessels of Ivory, and all manner of Vessels of most precious Wood, and of Brass, and Iron, and Marble: And Cinnamon, and Odors, and Oyntments, and Frankincense, and Wine, and Oyl, and fine Flower, and Wheat, and Beasts, and Sheep, and Horses, and Chariots, and Slaves, and Souls of men. The other are termed, on the contrary, Merchants for Heaven, and the Commodities of the Kingdom you have Mat. 13. 45. The Kingdom of Heaven is like a Merchant-man who sought out good Pearls. And I may say, the Pearls of that Kingdom are good; as 'twas said of the Gold in the Land of Havilah, Gen. 2. 12. No Christ tells us, it is the Heart that lays up this Treasure. And the Heart deep, and of all things else, Treasures are the most hidden things in the Heart. Men seek to hide them; God is said to have hid his in the Field, and so Men. Psal. 17. Their Treasure is call'd the hid Treasure. Yet the He knows where it is, and what 'tis; for they are buried there. As therefore Searchers into Mines have long Borers or Wimbles, which put down into the Bowels of the Earth, do bring up some of the Oar with them, and discover what Mine is there: So there is a Virgula divina, will go down into the bottom of your Hearts. Two ways I shall now proceed in it according to the differing Language of these Texts. 1. The real naked question, What are thy good things? 2. The Metaphorical one. What is thy Treasure?

1. For the real part of this question, I shall propound two Tryals.

1. What things doth thy Soul favour; and relish most? The things of this World; or God, and the things of the other World? The truth of this sign is evident. For whatever is good and convenient to any Creature, it hath a suitableness thereto. And if it be a sensitive or natural Creature, it hath a favouring or relishing thereof. For, omnis Vita gustu ducitur, Is maintained by a drawing in unto it self, and by a pleasing tasting of what is that good thing is appointed for it. As thou hast a Soul (which is of it self a meer empty stomach) So that Soul hath a Pallate to favour and relish what is good for it self. Which is fitted to take in the sweetness of some good thing or other. And as that Palate is affected, or possessed with its native soundness of Taste, or with a vitiated humour (as we see in sickness) accordingly it doth favour and relish things in the like difference with which men in health or sickness use to do. Now upon that which is the Palate of the Soul of man, there is by the Fall contracted vitiated humour; which maketh sin and the good things of this World only pleasing to it. Job 20. 12. Wickedness is said to be sweet in his mouth. I might give you this difference out of Rom. 8. 5 For they that are after the Flesh, do mind the things of the Flesh: But they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit. They do mind, or favour, or relish, as the Word is translated, Mark 8. 33. Those two Scriptures are sufficient, the one spoken of carnal Professors, 2 Tim. 3. 4. Lovers of Pleasure more than God; of Pleasure, namely in other things than in God, that are besides God. The other Scripture speaks of every Babe in Christ. Let a man be but a Christian of a days standing, and a new Palate is given him, clean altered to the taste of things, 1 Pet. 2. 2, 3. As new born Babes desire the sincere milk of the Word: If so be that ye have tasted that the Lord is Gracious. I take the Connexion thus, I cannot say, it is a meer Exegetis, that is, explaining the same thing in new words. Nor is it yet a new Argument drawn from a further experiment. As if he should first urge, if you be Babies, then 2. If afterwards in process of Gods dealings with you, you have further tasted, &c. (thus most carry it) But it is a most vehement Indigation of what is the true ground and reason why, if they were but even new born Babes, they must needs desire the sincere milk of the Word, drawn from what is the first and essential propertie, accompanying that new Estate. Even to taste how good the Lord is. And is as if we should say, As you are a man; and add, If you so be, you have reason in you: Which is proper to a man, as a man; so urging them with what is most immediate and essential to them. So as Peter's scope is, that they must renounce their being so much as Babies, if they have not found something of this Faculty and Act of tasting in them. Lawyers give this evidence of a Child that is new born, its being alive, that it cries. Peter here gives another as characteristical of this new Birth, that it hath a taste to discern how good the Lord is. And whereas here in Peter, it is that the Lord is Gracious; there is therein an allusion unto that of David, Psal. 34. 8. Oh taste and see how good the Lord is. The Septuagint renders it χρησός Gracious, but the Hebrew Tob, how good; and because to a Soul new born, that part of Gods goodness which allures his Heart to him is his free Grace, and lets in all his goodness into the Soul: And so it is as that Pap or Dug the Soul sucks his goodness by and through; therefore Peter chooseth rather to say, if ye have tasted how gracious the Lord is. And so as new born Babes have this desire in you. For taste, we know is the Foundation of the most eager desires, and imports, that look as a Child come new out of the Womb, though there it never had occasion to exercise the Faculty of taste; for it took its nourishment at the Navel: Yet being being come into the World, it instantly seeks after Milk, and tastes it, and in it the Mothers Blood; which argues the constitution thereof so framed, as it hath such a Faculty of tasting congenite, whereof it had before no use, whilst in the Womb. Now thus constituted, says Peter, is the new Creature towards God. There is such a Faculty of taste in every new born Babe, framed to things of the other World by its new Birth: Unto which World it is on purpose now new brought. And one of the first Spiritual Senses it exerciseth, is a tasting how good the Lord is. Are the pleasures of sin yet more to thee, and so have been hitherto all thy days, more than all that goodness that is in God, (who is a Sea of Honey) whereof yet thou sayst, as Solomon of his old man doth, I have no pleasure in them? It is an evident sign thou retainest wholly still the old man, and hast nothing of the new Babe in thee. Or as Barzillai (2 Sam. 19. 32.) Thou sayst, Can I taste what I hear in Sermons or Prayers, or read in the Word? Yea, perhaps thou hast no more taste of these things, than thou findest, as Job speaks, in the white of an Egg (Job 6. 6.) Thou art not yet so much as a Babe.

But now whilst I make this so great a difference between a regenerate and unregenerate man; the objection will be, That Regenerate men find a sweetness in the good things of this life; yea, often in the pleasures of Sin. And unregenerate men that fall away, do taste of the powers of the World to come.

1. For a regenerate mans tasting the pleasures of sin. There are indeed fits and paroxisms in which, as in mans Body, that is in an Ague (and the state of the most regenerate is but made up of such a mixture) corrupt Humours overflow and prevail, and vitiate and distemper this renewed Palate: Which when they do, no wonder if God and Spiritual things be out of taste with him, and he relisheth Things Worldly, yea simple. It may strike, and yet withal Comfort the Hearts of the best here to hear Christ our Lord and Saviour speak of Peter, that holy Apostle, (as to that present prevailing frame of his Spirit) such sharp and strange Language as once upon occasion he utters of him; such as worse could not be given an unregenerate man, Mat. 16. 23. Get thee behind me, Satan. For Satan then possess'd his Soul, and suggested that wicked Speech he tempted Christ withal, as the Devil could not have uttered a worse; neither doth Christ lay all the fault on Satan (as we should not) for Peter's own Heart was in a prevailing Distemper, overflown with the Gall or Jaundies. So as it follows, Thou savourest not the things of God, but those that are of men. At present his Palate was in favouring these, rendred as carnal as an unregenerate mans. It was so to Christ that knew his Heart, and therefore might be so to his own sense. Yea, a man in an Ague or Feaver thinks, he shall never relish his meat again. Here is the very distinction I have put, 1. The things of God, 2. The things of man, that is, which are suited to the Corrupt Nature of man, which is nothing but Flesh (and therefore to be carnal, and to walk as man, is made all one, 1 Cor. 3. 3.) but this was but a fit, a paroxism for the present, Peter's taste came to him again, (John 6. 68.) Whether shall we go? Thou hast the Words of Eternal Life. The Foot of his Soul was here taken off from all other between, and knew not where else to rest it self. So then, this is but as the fit of a man that is of a sound Constitution.

2. The Delight he takes in sin, is but a broken delight, for the principle is broken and wounded. And lesa principia habent lasas operationes, as a Man that walks with a bone out of joynt, he doth it lamely, if he chews the Bread of Wickedness, or as the Psalmist, the Dainties of the Wicked, Psal. 141. 4.

Yet 1. It is as with a broken Tooth.

Or 2. Not so as to swallow it down; (as they Prov. 19. 28. The mouth of the Wicked is said to devour Iniquity.) Not so as to return to a greediness. (as Eph. 4. 18.) but tho' he tastes, he soon spits it out again, as they did that Broth, of which they cried, There is Death in the Pot.

Or 3. If he takes it down for a fit, he comes not to take that pleasure in it for the future, as to retain it as a sweet bit which of a Wicked Man is said that that he rowles it under his Tongue, to the end to protract his Pleasure in it all his Life (as Children will do Sugar Candy all day long.) Which also he hides and forsakes not, (as Job. 20. 12.) But this Man soon casts it out again, with the deepest detestation.

Chap 2

4. The Heart if never wholly overcome with it, as Peter's Phrase is, (2 Pet. 2. 20.) Overcome he may be, to an Act, the grossest, and in the Hour of Temptation, the major part of his Will must needs be for it, or he would not act it; but so as to make it his rest, to sit down in it as the Swine, to wallow in the Mire, which is Peter's Character of one so overcome in his sense, to Center in it, as the chief pleasure of his Life; He can never come to do it any more. The Impressions he hath had of God and Christ, which are indelible in his Soul, and the remembrance from whence he is fallen, or falling, (as Rev. 2. 5.) brings his Heart off, and about again. He still says the Old Wine is better, as Christ speaks, or as H. J. 2. 7. I will return to my first Husband, for it was better with me then, than now.

For the Second part of the Objection, That Unregenerate Men taste of the powers of the World to come. The only Answer I shall now give, is,

That a right and true Parallel between a Godly Man in tasting the pleasures of sin after Regeneration, the remaining a radical constitution of soundness in him, and an Unregenerate Mans tasting the powers of the other World, doth help to clear this, and indeed each one doth illustrate the other. To make forth which, I express my self thus. The Palate of such an Unregenerate Man, remains in the inward constitution and temper of it, still wholly corrupt, namely in respect of this Radical corruption of it, wherein the bottom of Mans Corruption doth consist; and that is, SELF; whatever object it relisheth and pitcheth upon, it is only such as is suited unto self. Now in the things revealed in the Gospel, there are two sorts or kinds of Goodness; the one is, the Essential, Substantial Goodness of things themselves, the other is an accidental Goodness cleaving hereunto, over and above the substantial Goodness of them, and this latter, suiteth self-love that is in every Mans Heart. The promise of Heaven, taken in under the notion of an happiness to a man's self, is in that respect an object suited to self in a man; and any man in respect of self love in him, is thereby capable to be enveigled with it, and struck with the news of it, as to listen after it, to taste and relish, to be taken with what can be said of it, so far as it may suit that Principle: Though take Heaven substantially, as it is the enjoyment of God himself, heirs with Christ of God, as the Apostle says, Rom. 8. For God himself is Christs inheritance, as avowedly himself speaks, Psal. 16.) so conceived, it is suited only to a Heart Regenerate. The Holy Ghost may set on the former as he did on Balaam, and give or convey unto self in a Man a taste of a supernatural sweetness; to toll on and entice the Creature to himself, when yet that taste and sweetness is not of God himself, as pitcht upon alone as our Happiness. I might make the like distinction of Christ as a Saviour only, and Christ as in himself, as I have done of Heaven.

So then in such an Heart the Competition betwixt the taste which self meerly hath had, of that accidental goodness in the things of the other World, so far as it is capable thereof, and the same self in a Man, as it is still naturally Rooted and set in this World, and hath tasted the pleasures of this World, and is suited unto them. Now mark it, the things of the other World (take them in their own Nature, and own proper Notion,) these no ways suit such a Mans Heart at all, but all within him is Enmity, and Averseness to the things themselves. And it is nothing else, for he is in his Root and Conjugal Constitution as a Man of this World. And so look as it is only accidental goodness, which is in the things which he tasteth, so his own Natural and Radical Disposition, verging wholly another way, these his Motions and Elevations towards them, are in like manner but Accidental to his Spirit, that is, only as he is set in such and such Circumstances of Distress of Conscience, or Fear of Wrath, and is influenced by such apprehensions as comes upon him for the present. All which are but Foreign and Extrinsecal to his genial Constitution, or inward Nature. And thus Self in him is but forcedly raised up to that Joy he hath in the things of the other

Book 10 ther World, even as they come so to be set home, as to amuse Self awhile, with the strange News of Happiness, as in another Country to be had. But his Joy in things in this World is Natural Congenial. Now that which is Natural, and agrees with the whole inward Constitution of any thing, must needs be stronger, and so eat out what is but forced and extrinsecal. For what is good naturally to a Man, is always so, and is so per se. What is good accidentally, hold only in such a Distress, in such a Case or Circumstance, or apprehension as Man is in, and so wears off, as Colours laid on use to do. The stoney Ground received the Word with Joy, (namely in this sense as hath been explained) but their Defect is noted to be the same that I have said, That they wanted Root in themselves, (Mat. 13. 20, 21.) that is a Congenial natural Principle suited to things Heavenly. Self was taken awhile with the Hear-say of them. But the Root of their Hearts and Natures, remained still fixt in the things of this World. in Earth. And the Root went on to bring forth according to its kind, and to draw the juice of the Earth it was fixt in, to it self; which dried up that moisture that fed those Plants which were adventitious and set in made Earth for a while. So likewise of the Thorny Ground, tis said (v. 22. compared with Mark 4. 19.) The Cares of this World, and the Lusts of other things entering again (which are, and were Natural to the Heart and the soyl of it) choke the Word that was superficially cast in; for why the Heart is wholly a step-Mother to the one, and a natural Mother to the other, and so the Heart in the end returns to it self. But now in Regeneration we affirm, That a Man receives an Heavenly Nature, Which is a Noble Plant of the Lords planting naturally rooted in Heaven, and things Heavenly, as in its proper Soil it is to grow up and thrive in. And although there is another Root that is seated on Earth, that remains still in the Heart, yet it is a Dying, and that Heavenly Plant is that which is deepest in and nearest the Heart as the inner-man, and the other but as the outward.

Hence then the Parallel runs clear between these Two in an opposite way (though I acknowledge a difference in one respect :) That look as an Unregenerate Man may taste (as hath been explained) of the Accidental Goodness that is in things Heavenly; yet all that while his inward Natural Constitution in him remaining wholly disposed to things in this World of it self, and to them for themselves. Hence, let him have what Tastes (he so remaining is capable of) concerning things Heavenly, that you can or will suppose, yet he is overcome again of what is Natural to him. For it is certain that Actio-nes sequuntur animi Constitutionem, and the remembrance of former Pleasures entering in, do wither and shale off again, all Accidental Joy and Sweetness in things Heavenly, which are to him also, and to his radical Constitution, but Accidental.

The contrary falls out in a Regenerate Man: That though he hath that corruption in him, which may make the pleasures of Sin sweet to him, and he may again taste of their Dainties, yet he having a New Divine Nature, which God upholds, and will bring forth to Victory, as Christ speaks, as being ordained for Eternity, and which is now become a Mans self, and is as Health is, in a Temper made sound, that hath yet some Humour remaining, and the things of the other World (which it is now rooted in, and is naturally suited unto) being of such a Greatness and Glory in themselves; they still leave those Impressions behind them upon his Heart, that upon the least reviving of them by the Spirit, the Heart is fetcht off from the Pleasures of Sin, as the other is by his Sin, drawn off from tasting the powers of the VWorld to come. I may say as Christ says, John 4. 13. Whoever drinketh and tasteth of Heavenly things (but only as Unregenerate Men have been said to do) he will Thirst again after Earthly, and be overcome of them; (And this I speak by way of Allusion,) but what follows v. 14. is really true and intended by Christ of a Man Regenerate. Whosoever drinketh of the Water, Christ shall give him, he shall never Thirst; that is, never come to have that impetuousness of full desire; and so not that pleasure or delight in other things carnal and outward (which Christ resembles the VWater of of that Well to) as he formerly had : He shall never add Drunkenness to Thirst (as Moses speaks) his Thirst thereto will be, by the Taste of this Water Christ gives him, allayed; that that Vehemency and Greediness he formerly had, is for ever taken off and abated, and this because the Water which Christ gives him, becomes a Well of Water springing up in him to Eternal Life, so it follows in the same verse; it is not adventitious, as Water in a Cistern, but as in a Spring, & it continually aspires to things above. And though it may be dam'd up with that Earth that environs it, yet it works out that Earth, and overflows in the Heart again.

To the 3d part of the Objection concerning a Godly man's finding Comfort in things outward that are Lawful.

The Answer is, and it is a great Invitement to Religion, that he may, and it is his own fault if he does not find more Comfort even in them, than Carnal Men use to do. (Psal. 36. 16.) A little that the Righteous hath, is better than the Riches of many Wicked. He opposeth, 1. A little unto Riches and Abundance, And 2. The little of one Man, to the Riches of many Men, whereof each are Rich. So as if one Man alone had the Riches that many great Rich Men have; yet a Righteous Man that hath but a little, hath more Comfort in it than he; yea then all those Rich Men have, put their Comforts all together, Therefore Godliness is said with Contentment to be great gain; for it alone brings Contentment. For tho' the Creature is (taken in it self alone) more Vain to a Godly Man, than to another: And so if he should go about to seek his Contentment from it, as Carnal Men do, I may then invert it, that the little which a VVicked Man hath, is more to him, than all abundance would be to the other: Solomon that pursued this (being a Godly man) could best Write of the Vanity of these things: But yet when the Heart is set a VVork to seek God, and hath the Scent of him, as I may so say, mingled with the outward things he doth enjoy, or if it have the light of his Countenance, it puts a fulness into the Creature. A Dinner of Herbs, sawced with his Love, and served up by him, is more than the greatest Feast. And surely God traineth up his Children one way or other unto this. The more a Man truly Godly will seek to find Comfort in the Creatures, the more Thorns he shall find in his way, (Hos. 2. 6. 7.) the more Comfortless they will be to him than to another, because his Soul is used to better fare. His Faculties have been widened and extended by having tasted, or by having had impressions of the sweetness and goodness that is in the Lord. And so the Creature in it self is more emptiness and vexation than to another Man. And therefore a Godly man, if he will Live, and but keep up the Comfort of his Life, and not fall lower in this respect, nor live at a lower rate than he did in his Natural Condition, he must necessarily (even for his daily comfort) seek after God, and hold up Entercourse and Communion with him; so to fill up that Chasma that is otherwise made, the Creature is rendred more vain to him than afore.

CHAP. III.

If we would know whether we make God our chiefest, and supream Good; let us observe by what things the Comfort of our Lives is principally maintained, and upheld.

ENquire by what things the Comfort of thy Life, is principally maintained and upheld from day to day: For it is that which is good in this Life, whereby the Comfort of ones life is nourished, as Fire by Fuel. We all live here in a miserable World, and our Life is a Pilgrimage of many a weary step: And the Soul must have Baitings and Refreshings, or it will faint and fail, and not hold out to its Journey's end. The Comfort of a mans Soul in Scripture is termed a mans Life, Luke 12. 15. Life, (says (says Christ) consists not in abundance ; by Life there, he means the Comfort and Joy of Life, which all abundance of outward things cannot give. And in this very respect, when Comfort in outward things is gone and departed, the Heart dies, as 1 Sam. 25. 37. Nabal's Soul is said to die within him, tho' he was merry over night, yet when he fell into the fear of losing all by David's plundering him, he having provoked him, it is said that his Heart died within him. He lived ten days after, (v. 38.) but his Heart died, and became as a Stone, says the Text, that look as if you had beheld Lot's Wife when her Soul went out, and she was Metamorphosed to a Stone, or rather a Pillar of Salt; such was, in respect of the life of Comfort, this mans Condition. Look, as the Body is not able to sustain and support it self without the Soul: So, nor is the Soul, which is meer emptiness, able to sustain it self in life without some good thing it hath conjunction and commerce with. Now then, what is the Element thy Soul lives in? 'Tis certain that in him that is truly born again, his Conversion wrought these two things in him. 1. his Soul was struck dead, as to the making the Comforts of this Life his chiefest good. And this Humiliation usually doth work. Rom. 7. 10. I was once alive, but I died. Gal. 2. 19. I through the Law am dead to the Law, that I might live unto God. and v. 20. I am crucified with Christ. There are these more eminent parts of Humiliation. 1. To bring a man to nothing in his own Righteousness; (as 1 Cor. 1.) last verses, and to kill and slay a man thereunto, that so he may be brought to accept of Gods Righteousness in Christ, prepared for him, and to live thereby. 2. To bring the Soul to nothing in outward Comforts in Sins, or in the Creatures. And this also is the work of the Law through the Cross of Christ, which goes with it, Isa. 40. 7. It is made the effect of John Baptists Ministry, (of which v. 3. speaks. The Voice of him that crieth in the Wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the Desert a high way for our God.) That at his voice, the Grass withered, the Flower faded, because the Spirit of the Lord had blown upon it. He speaks not simply of the vanity of the Creature in its self, but what it became to his Hearers, that received the Spirit of Bondage from his Ministry; as those words that follow do shew, because the Spirit of the Lord; namely, in his Ministry, had blown upon them all, and was ventus, a Wind that blasted and withered all their good things to them; so as now they looked upon them all as withered Flowers. And therefore Paul in the next verse, in that Gal. 2. says he was Crucified with Christ also. Which Gal. 6. 14. he interprets among other things to be a Crucifying of the World to him, which was done by the power of the Cross virtually, though by the Law humbling a man instrumentally, as that Gal. 2. to me evidently importeth.

Now the end why God thus kills man by Humiliation to his own Righteousness, and to all Comforts, so as never to have help to his Soul in them, is to the end he may live a new, and have a new Life in both. 1. To live by going out to Christ for Righteousness, the Just shall live by Faith. And 2. To cause the Soul to pitch upon God for ever as his chiefest good: And all that desired good it ever looks for in this World, or the World to come. So you have it, Psal. 16. 5, 6. The Lord is the Portion of mine Inheritance, and of my Cup: Thou maintainest my Lot. The Lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea, I have a goodly Heritage. And this is done by Faith; as it sanctifies, and by Instinct of the new Creature, 1 Cor. 1. 7. Paul termeth God both the Father of mercies, as in relation to Justification and pardon, and then the God of all Comfort. 'Tis an Attribute he hath taken on him, as he is an Object of his Peoples Hearts And thus, in respect of Sanctification, all the Comfort we look for, is from him.

USE. Improve, and take the light of these Tryals, and go down into your Hearts and take the Keys of them, and ransack your private Cupboards, and narrowly observe what Junkets your Souls have hitherto lived upon, and gone behind the door, and there secretly and stoutly have made a meal of them. Delights are secret things, (Prov. 14 10.) as Treasures are. As Doggs (and carnal men are so compared) have Bones they hide, and secretly steal forth to to gnaw upon : So men have sins they hide under their Tongues as sweet Bits, Job 14. 12. But examine what your Comforts principally consist in.

Now if you would further know how it may be discerned in what your chief Comforts lie.

1. Look what in Distress your Souls have Recourse unto for Relief and Support.

2. In ordinary Cases take this Division to help you. A survey either, 1. Of things Present. 2. Past. 3. To come. For in and from all these, Men take up their Comforts.

1. Observe what your Hearts have their ordinary Recourse unto in Cases of Distress, or the ordinary discomfitures of this Life ; which God in a Mans Race layeth on purpose even in every Mans way. Mens expectations are usually and often disappointed, especially at times, and then their Hearts and Spirits fail. And look as in Fears, or in a Swoon, Mens Vital Spirits run to the Heart to Comfort it ; so in Distress, the Heart runs out to something else, which it is enured unto, to comfort it as a Cordial and Consolation. And as the Otter when in times of Frost it is kept under Water by the Ice ; yet by its Breath keeps open some place, as a Breathing hole, so doth the Heart. Now Watch and Observe, the Haunts and Breathing-holes which in Distress thy Soul keeps open to it self, to fetch in fresh Air from, or look as if you should see a Company of Rabbits grazing in a Sun-shiny-day, and a Man come by whom they fear, or a storm, you shall see them all instantly run into their several Burrows which are proper to them ; and by the place whether each of them doth run, you may discern which is proper to each : Now thus in Distress doth the Heart run to it's Holes. The like Men do in times of War to their several Forts or Garrisons, and so you may know what Party they belong unto. Prov. 18. 11. The Name of the Lord is a strong Tower, and the Righteous runs to it, and is safe ; that is, if he be a Righteous Man, that is his Refuge, as, Jer. 16. 19. O Lord, my Strength and my Fortrefs, and my Refuge in the Day of Affliction, the Gentiles shall come unto thee, from the ends of the Earth, and shall say, Surely our Fathers have Inherited Lies, Vanity, and things wherein there is no Profit. On the Contrary, take a Carnal Rich Man who puts Trust in his Riches ; he also in ordinary Distresses runs to his Tower, from the same place of the Proverbs, v. 12. The substance of the Rich Man is his strong City. If a Cross in other things befall him, Discredit, Hatred of Men, as an Oppressour, yet he is still counting with himself, reckoning, Nummos in Arca, the Moneys in his Chest, or out at Use, or in Revenue, Populus sibi sibiulet : At mihi plaudo, he the next Morning when he Wakes bids good Morrow to his Gold. And thus if one Comfort be gone, he runs to another, as the Prophet told that Wretched Man he should run from Chamber to Chamber for his Life. You may see this Difference amplified in Esau and Jacob, Saul and David. The first pair Compeers for a Birthright, the other two for a Kingdom. Esau, Gen. 27. when he had that great loss befalln him as ever befall a Man, namely, the loss of his Birthright, and himself made apprehensive of it, Witness his Tears : What doth he comfort himself withal? v. 42. saies Rebecka to Jacob, Behold thy Brother Comforteth himself, purposing to Kill thee. 'Twas Revenge ; which, to a Man of his Constitution, an Hairy Man of the Field, is the sweetest Lust in the World to accomplish. But Jacob, on the contrary, when he was distressed greatly, Gen. 32. 7. as the Text there saies, Whether hath he recourse ? Even to God, so v. 9. and you may see by his Prayer and Hopes in Gods Promise, v. 12. that God would surely do him good.

See it also in Saul and David, Saul was made sensible by Samuel, that he had lost a Kingdom, 1 Sam. 15. 30. Yet Honour me (saies he) afore the People. David lost all at Ziglag, Wives, Estate, and was put into as great a ground of Fear, of Hazard of Life (and so of his Kingdom promised) as Man could probably be in (for the People spake of Stoning him) And in this Case what had David recourse unto? The Story tells you, 1 Sam. 30. 6. David encouraged himself in his God. So elsewhere David saies, My Heart fails, and my Flesh

Flesh fails but God is the strength of my Heart, Psal. 73. 26. and Psal. 119. 92. Unless thy Word had been my Delight, I had Perished in my Affliction.

2. Observe whence your Comforts come in, Which is discerned by the Hearts recourse, either unto things present, past, or to come.

1. For things Present: Men use to take an Inventory of their present things afore them to comfort their Hearts with. So doth the Rich Man in the Gospel, Soul, take thine ease, thou hast (now at present, by thee) Goods laid up for many Years. As Rich Men count their Estates with themselves, and love to do it: So doth the Soul in secret reckon up it's Comforts and opportunities to satisfy it's Lusts. In a Morning when Men wake, their Souls look out what Sports, Pleasures, are ready to wait upon them that day. So they in the Prophet, 10 Day shall be as to Morrow, and much more abundant. Whereas if a Godly Man hath the sense of the Favour of God, he Triumphs in it, and makes his Breast in God all the Day long. Psal. 44. 8. He often counts with himself, If I shall hear a good Sermon this Day, and receive the Sacraments, meet with my Saviour, my Lord and Husband, when the day comes, and longs for it afore hand.

Again 2d. Mens Souls have recourse for Comfort unto what is past. Thus a Schollar, that is low and mean in his outward condition, takes a pleasing survey of what Credit he got by such a performance, at such a time; how he was applauded, and in the Contemplation thereof, his Soul bears up it self. When other streights and wants to satisfy other Lusts, do depress him, he Swims and Floats in his own Conceits by means of these Bladders, and his Soul is thereby kept up from sinking. Yea, he is carried aloft (as he vainly thinks) on the Breaths and Opinions of Men, as feathers and bubbles which Children make, for their pastime on them. Thus also men make and revive in their Fancies, the actings of former pleasures, and Dalliances, &c. whereas a Godly man in the present want of outward Comforts, yea, the present sense of the withdrawings of Gods Love, hath recourse to times past, the daies of old, as David recounts with himself, what Songs had been Sung in the Night, between God and him, what earnest Desires: My Soul hath longed for thee in the Night. What Love and Joys, sweet intercourse and Communion, hath been between God and him; at such and such a time.

3. And especially you may discover this, by what recourse the Soul hath to things to come in future hopes, and what kind of good things those are the Soul hath thus recourse unto. Mens Souls do live by hopes as much, and more than by any thing past or present; and we use to take up our Comforts beforehand. The Miserablest Man that is, hath yet usually a loop hole of Hope to look out of, a door of Hope for his Soul to go out at, and relieve it self. Now, 1 Cor. 15. 19. The hopes of a Godly and Carnal Man are distinguished. If we (that are Believers) had hopes only in this Life (as all Carnal Worldlings have) we were of all Men the most miserable, as having given up this World for Grace, both in the present and the future; and betaken our selves to what is in the other World, by which we relieve and Comfort our selves, against the miseries of this World that befall us every day more than they do other Men. Christ is our hope, so (1 Tim. 1. 1.) that is Generally of all Christians, and our Life is hid in God with him, Whereas a Carnal Man makes his Gold (or some like Worldly Comfort or other) his Hope, Heb. 31. 24.

I shall to clear this Point further, remove one Scruple, which good Souls who are left to a dry Faith, and to follow after God in a Barren land, may, and will upon hearsay of this, be apt unto, and to say, This Doctrine strikes me Dead, for I have not, nor cannot yet find any comfortable Relish or Enjoyment of God, but a great deal of Carnal Relish of things of the World, and deeper and more impressions of sweetness from thence, than these Impressions are, which the Word, or thing of another World brings in; and how is God my chiefest good?

Answer 1. It is a false Rule which will deceive to measure out what is our chiefest good by what our enjoyments possessions of, or delights are in, that which we pitch upon as our chiefest good. The Rule would fail us whether we be Carnal or Regenerate Men. This is common to both, that in respect of Enjoyment, they have their disappointments, even the most Godly, in this Life

Life of him whom their Souls desire. A Soul that hath pitcht its Happiness on such an outward Worldly Comfort, may yet perhaps, never have come to enjoy it, Chap. 4 as in Men that desire to be Rich and are disappointed in their hopes, &c. we see it verified, so as the case of the one comes all to one, and holds true as well as in the other. And a Man that is Carnal, Lustful, Worldly, may as well say he makes not Preferment, or Riches, or Beauty his greatest good, because still he hath been kept under, and disappointed; and sensible sweetness ariseth always from Enjoyment.

2. Answer. But hast thou not had thy Heart emptied of all these Earthly enjoyments, by what light and taste thou hast had from God? Hast thou not had such a Spiritual Appetite, as all created Comforts can never fill or quiet instead of himself? so as thou pursuest after him with the strong intent of this, day and night. What is it thy Soul hath set up in it's Eye, as thy Mark thou intendedst for? (as Paul speaks,) is it not Gods Favour, which thou prizest seekest for with thy greatest Contention? Affections are to be measured by what we labour after day, and night to arrive at.

And 3. In the mean time thou sayest, of all outward Comforts, what good will all these do me? And what are they, if I want thy Favour? As a Man looking diligently for a Pearl or Jewel meets with many things that may entertain him; but still saies his Soul, This is not the Pearl I seek for. Now as in Heb. 11. 14. The Apostle says of the Patriarchs, that they which say such things, declare plainly that they seek a Country: So say I of thee, (the discomfort of whose Life lyes in the want of God, who can't not sit down in any thing on this side of him; these longings of thy Soul do declare plainly that thy Rest is not here in the World. Yea, if Wordly things Court thee, and come in upon thee, so as thou couldst (as to outward advantages) return to make and patch up a life of Comfort in them; yet still thou canst never do it, so (v. 15.) of the Patriarchs, the same Apostle speaks; if they had been mindful of the Country (and the Comforts of it from whence they came out, they might have had opportunities to have returned but they would not, as their Children would have done into Egypt. Therefore upon this Demonstration he Concludes, v. 16. But now, (that is, having such a frame of Spirit) they desired a better Country, wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God. For he was the chief and chocest of their desires, and nothing else would satisfie; and therefore he was their chiefest good. God is much Glorified as thy chiefest good in such desires that can rest no where else but in him; he is equally Glorified by thee, who waitest thus for him, and can't find no sweetness but in him, as he is by another in their Enjoyments of him. For the Affections stir as well one way as the other towards him, and from either, Glory ariseth alike unto him. And what Affections of Love the one Soul shews in joy, and in sweet Enjoyments of his goodness, the other shews in restless desires after his Goodness.

C H A P. IV.

If we would know whether we make God our chief Good, we must enquire what are the things which we value as our dearest Treasures.

THUS much as to such signs which that plain and simple Expression, what are thy good things? hath afforded. I come to the second, as the same thing is represented under this Metaphor of What is thy Treasure?

The First sign at to this Head, is that which Christ, (Matth. 6. 21.) holds forth, who is to be our Judge (Heb. 4. 12.) and who is a Discerner of the thoughts and intents of the Heart.

Now where your Treasure is, (says Christ Matth. 6. 2.) there will your Hearts be also. No Mans Heart is in his own keeping; but his Treasure, be it what it will, or take it away from him, yet the Heart will be where it loves. If God be made a Mans Treasure he calls for the Heart, Prov. 23. 26. My Son give me thy Heart. And let any Earthly thing be a Mans Treasure, and it takes the Heart away without asking leave, Hos. 4. 11. Whoredom and Wine (saies God) take away the Heart, Ezek. 33. 31. Their Hearts go after their Covetousness.

1. What hath thy Heart, hath thy Thoughts most, the chiefest and the dearest of thy Thoughts are spent upon what is thy Treasure. Now therefore go down into thy Heart and examine what thing it is that takes up and engrotheth to it self the musings and devisings of thy Soul: What it is the eyes of thy Mind still are glancing, yea, fix'd upon, with dearest contentment, and scarce ever off. That is thy Treasure, and that hath thine Heart. Thus as a passionate Lover delights to revive, in his captivated Fancy, the Image and Likeness of the Party he loves; draws Pictures of her in his Fancies; and as the thoughts are the only means to bring things absent and the Heart together; so the Soul feeds and increaseth the love it hath to a thing it desires, by thinking of it. Affections chain the Thoughts, and fasten the mind and intention of it to the thing they affect: And such a thing is certainly a Treasure to thee. For take but the exemplification of it in outward Treasures. You may observe it in men that have Treasures, any Jewels, &c. They will still be unlocking the Casket, and viewing of them, eyeing of them. They love still to be opening the Baggs; and telling, and counting of what is within. And so it is with the Mind, what the Heart hath pitch'd upon as it's Treasure, it ever and anon reviews and visits with its Thoughts. For there is a fresh contentment and security ariseth to the Mind thereby: Be it Goods laid up for many Years, the thoughts of this gives an ease to the Mind; be it the credit of something past, men love to chew the Cud of it in their thoughts, and run it over all again in their Minds. Or be it the pleasure of some sin to come as a sin of Uncleaness, how do men anticipate the pleasure of it in their Fancies, rowling it over and over again, act it over again and again, e're they do it as Players do their parts. And this we all find, That the chiefest pleasure of our Lives is brought us in by our Thoughts; and when we enjoy not the things we desire, we please our selves with our own Fancies, and Idea's of them, which help to entertain the Soul till it doth enjoy them. And we may observe it in Scripture, that Men are differenced by the Objects of their thoughts, and of the musings of the Heart, as well as by any thing else. Isa. 32. 7, 8. A Covetous man deviseth wicked things, but the Liberal liberal things. Such as the things are, men spend their devisings upon, it is certain such are the Men. If they mind chiefly Earthly things, as it is, (Phil. 3. 19.) Then they are Earthly men, whose End is Damnation. And in the first Psalm, 'tis made a distinctive note of a Godly man from a wicked; that he meditates in the Law, day and night. The Scope of David is to distinguish men; and there is good reason why men may be differenced by their thoughts, and the things they are conversant about. For 1. Noscitur ex Socio. A mans disposition may be known by his Companion whom he is most entire and familiar with. Now, those things a man thinks on most, he makes his most familiar Friends, is most entire with; by our thoughts we have the entirest acquaintance that we can have with any thing, the closest that we can any way arrive at: For it takes the things into our Bosom. And therefore Solomon (Prov. 6. 22.) speaking of meditating in the Law, when a man wakes in the morning, compares it to a familiar Friend talking with a man; When thou awakest it shall talk with thee. And A man is therefore termed a Friend to the World. James 4. 1, 2, 3, 4.

2. The thoughts do most distinguish mens Hearts, because they are the freest acts of the Mind, wherein the Mind is the most it self, and acts it self else, Prov. 23. 7. For as he thinketh in his Heart, so is he. And therefore the Proverb is, that thoughts are free. And in this sense it is true, that of all acts else, they are the least enforced, which do follow the free disposition of the Heart. Men cannot speak what they would, or do what they would, these are subject to enforcement. And therefore in judging by speeches and by actions, there may be deceit. But a man may think what he will; and indeed usually men do pore on that which pleaseth them, in their thoughts, they act themselves, what soever they do in their Actions. We do not know the disposition of Players as acting their parts upon the Stage, but look into the Tying-house, and there you

3. They are the immediate acts of the Soul; And therefore shew what Temper it is of. For the Thoughts, (as I may so say) are as they came, new from the Heart; they are the Figments of it, and so the Image of the Heart is fresh on them, as coming new out of the Mint. If you would taste a Grape, take the Juice as it is new squeezed out into the Wine-press, and before adulterated with other Mixtures.

4. Thoughts are the most continual actings of the Soul of any else which the Soul abounds in most, and therefore discovers the Heart most; for of all Faculties, that is always a work The thinking faculty is as that little Wheel in a Jack, that moves twenty times faster than any of the rest. And when we have not liberty to satisfy our desires; yet our thoughts are working so as the Heart cannot be kept off from thinking of what it would enjoy. Christ calls the Thoughts the Treasure both of a good and bad man, for the abundance there is of them, as in that Speech, a good man out of the good Treasure of his Heart, brings forth good, an evil man evil. Mat. 12. 34, 35. For out of the abundance of the Heart the mouth speaketh; a good man out of the good treasure of the Heart bringeth forth good things; and an evil man out of the evil Treasure, bringeth forth evil things. Christ you see, when he would give a reason why men might be distinguished by their Speeches, and with what kind men abound therein most, he reduceth it to the Heart, as the Fountain. For out of the abundance of the Heart, (says he) the Mouth speaketh; that is, out of the abundance of the thoughts, Some persons have many restraints, even of speaking of good; and are disadvantaged, when yet their Hearts are working upon them. Therefore look what thoughts the Heart abounds in, (it is the sure Rule) such is the Heart. There is no good man but he hath a Treasure and a Spring of good Thoughts within him, which no wicked man in the World hath. And though there is a Spring of Mud and Filth runs with them of vain Thoughts, and sinful Thoughts, which intermingles it self with the current of them at the best, and which doth often stop the current of them; yet this Spring works it self out again, the Current riseth up again, and though with many windings and turnings, keeps its Course. And as Rivers run into the Sea, so there is a Spring in his Heart tends God-ward. Another man, though he may have a Land-flood of good Thoughts, in a good mode, yet they are soon dried up again; there is not a Spring of them. Prov. 12. 2d and 5th verses compared together. A wicked man is called a man of wicked devices or imaginations; that is, a man of wicked thoughts, as it were, made up of them, whereas in the 5th verse, a Godly mans Thoughts, in opposition, are termed right. The thoughts of the Righteous are right. That is, for the tendency the Current of them they are exercised about righteous things. Therefore David (Psal. 139. 17, 18.) says not only that the thoughts of God are precious to him, but for multitude more than the Sand. It may be interpreted of his thoughts of God which he could not tell the total Sum of: For, says he, every morning when I awake, I am with thee. Whereas, of a wicked man Psal. 10. 4. it is said, God is scarce in all his thoughts. And Jer. 2. 32. God, upbraiding the People of Israel, says, Can a Maid forget her Ornaments, not go abroad but be sure to be dressed; and when she hath prickt up her self her mind is still on them; but my People have forgotten me (says he) days without number. But in Prov. 6. 14. it is said of a wicked mans Heart, it forgeth mischief continually, as a Smith forgeth Iron; he is still hammering of it. And because vain are all their thoughts, therefore a wicked mans Heart is said to be little worth. Prov. 10. 20.

There are two Scruples and Objections which as to this branch of Tryal, some, yea, most good Souls may, and do make.

1. The swarming of evil, vain or foolish thoughts, that are so frequent and such Familiars, That they are bold to knock and draw the Latch when we have separated our selves the most solemnly, and shut our selves up for God in holy duties, and on the Sabbath days. If therefore I should judge, by my thoughts, the World, and a thousand Vanities are my Treasure.

I. A

1. A man is not to judge herein by the Crowd and swarming, or barely by the multitude, the Noise, the humming, the buzzing they keep. For these will, and do arise naturally out of the Heart, as Christ says. And the Imagination of mans Heart is evil continually. And it is certain that the bulk or quantity of the unregenerate part in most Christians is far more and greater than the regenerate part, tho' that be major Virtute, greater in power, in carrying the Heart on against Corruptions and strong steering a man in his Course; especially in the great turns of his Life, and in the end Christ bringing it forth to Victory. So that if a Man would go to measure by the bulk, or by the Bushel, every mans Heart would be found to have quarters of Chaff, the flying Thoughts which rise up in it, unto a Peck of good Grain, and true Corn; but thou must take estimate by the Entertainment, which vain and Worldly Thoughts, after they have risen, have in thy Heart; by their taking Root again, thro' its indulgency to them, nourishing of them and intention upon them, and Delight in them, Jer. 4. 14. How long shall vain Thoughts lodge within thee? Lodge, and nest and find the most pleasing welcome and harbour; Lodge as thy best Friends and Pleasantest Companions, that lie down with thee, when thou lyeest down to Sleep, and thou invitest them to Bed with thee, that talk with thee, when thou awakest with deepest Pleasure, and delight: Gods speech in Jeremy is all one, as if God, or a Father should say to his Son, a Riotous entertainer of Lewd Company, how long shall thy vain Companions lodge with thee, that Eat thee out of House or Home, Consume that Provision which thy Wife and Children should have? So here, How long shall thy vain Thoughts lodge with thee that prey upon the best of thy Heart, and dearest of thy Affections? The Regenerate part in a Man is in that Condition, in respect of his Thoughts, that a Man is in that walks in the midst of Dust continually raised about him, or of little Flies, that in Summer swarm, against which he shuts his Eyes and holds his Breath, but cannot hinder their coming about him, tho' he carries Boughs in his Hands, or the like, to keep them off. Thus 'tis with a Regenerate Man; but to another Man these vain Thoughts are as the free Air, which he breaths in with Contentment and Refreshment. They are his Element.

The thoughts a Man hath of his Treasure, are the thoughts of greatest delight and Contentment; not dry Thoughts, but drencht and loakt deep in the whole of the Affections, and they hugg and intwine about them; and of which the Affections say, Whither you go, we will go; whom you will bring with you, we will entertain. They may and do come into a good Mans Heart, as Gypsies by swarms; but by his good will they should not loge there; he goes often to God for a Passport, and for a Whip to send them away. And these may trouble thee most in Holy Duties which the Unregenerate part doth naturally hinder and disturb. It is strange, that afore Prayer a Man would fain have recal'd and remembered them, but could not; as soon as a Man falls down to Prayer, they come in instantly. And the Devil waits that occasion for Injections also; to be sure, what is like to strike the Affections deepest, and to stick there, and so to hurry away the Heart in the instant, that will be cast in at such Cue and Nick, when the Heart is coming to such passages in Prayer, as his present condition hath most need of, and which he longs most to be at, so as the Heart is carried out of the common stream into a Creek or Rivolet ere he is aware, insomuch as sometimes a man kpees but (I use to say) a Negative Sabbath, the negative part of an Holy Duty: That is, it is his task upon that day, or in that Duty to keep a Ward, or Court of Guard against the troopings of vains thoughts: Or (if you will) to keep the Doors either so as vain thoughts should not croud in, or if they do, still to be turning them forth. So as it often befalls the Sons of Abraham in Prayer, &c. in respect of inward disturbances, as it befall our Father Abraham when he was offering a Sacrifice to God, in respect of outward disturbance, (Gen. 15. 12.) The Fowls still ever and anon came down upon the Carcasses: For it said, when the Fowles came down, Abraham drave them away. He hunted them away with his Breath, as the Original imports, or crying out with a noise upon them, when he should have had his mind wholly intent on Prayer and Divine Meditation, which that solemn Duty call'd for: Then his work must be to howte away the Fowles which came flying down upon the Sacrifices. And at that time they did it especially, for there was prey for them. And Abraham could not hinder their coming down, for Fowls fly aloft, and the same individual Birds would come again and again, and he could not help it; that was not in his power; but when they came, he could drive them away, and that was all he could do to them; yea, it took up his time when he was to have been at his Devotion, was his main Work. And so it is here, the best of Souls cannot help nor hinder these unclean and ravenous Fowls from coming down upon the Sacrifices; but they still endeavour to drive them away, &c.

A Second thing I would say, in Answer to this, is, That altho' vain thoughts may be more by far, yet the Heart of Regenerate man (take the whole course) follows God and returns to him and keeps it's way. A Spanniel that follows his Master in a Journey, runs out after every Bird, after every Flock of Sheep, which he sees in his way, and in such goings out, runs over Ten or Twenty times more Ground, spends more pains in them, than in the way his Master goes in, or than it comes to; yet still he is sure to have an Eye to his Master, returns again to him, and follows him to the Journies end. And so it is with the Soul, in this respect.

2. Object. Are not Godly Mens thoughts to be taken up with their Worldly Business? Are not Men to contrive and devise and mold what they are therein to do, especially in some callings; and therefore to spend the most of their Thoughts thereon? How then can we make a Judgment by our Thoughts?

Answer. 1. A good man must do diligently that business, to which he may be called, And whatever Work thy Hand finds to do, thou oughtest to do with all thy might, Eccl. 9. 10.

Yet 2. There may be, and is an Habitual Fear runs along and poiseth the Heart all day long, Prov. 23. 17. Be thou in the fear of the Lord all the day long: These Two Commands of the same Pen cross not one the other; an Inferiour that hath business to do in a room, where his Master, or one eminently superior is present all day, he may be all along intent and sufficiently thoughtful on his business, and that in respect unto his Master. For there is with all an Habitual Reverence which all along doth awe and poise his mind to act nothing unseemly of such a presence as he is afore.

But, 3. Observe, What Thoughts return upon thee, when the Mill of thy Calling stands still; at such times when thy Heart is left free; as at spare hours, a Mornings, when thou liest awake, &c. Observe, the Vergencies and the haunts of thy Heart at such times, as thou wouldst of a Servant or an Apprentice, who though whilst he is kept at home works dilligently, yet the free time he hath, or if he can but steal forth, he is still at such an house, if he be sent out of an Errand, he steps in there; in like manner, watch thou the haunts of thine Heart, when thou art retired, when the Shop-windows of thy Calling are shut, and thou art free in thy Thoughts to enjoy what thou pleasest; then see what secret Treasury thy Thoughts steal to unlock and to view with Contentment. The Wicked imagin Mischief on their Beds, they sleep not till they have mallowed and tumbled in such Fancies as naturally suit their spirits. For these lighten their Spirits, and make way for sleep. But with my Soul, saith the Church, I have desired thee in the Night, Isa. 26. David remembers the sweet Songs in the Night, God and he had together. When I awake, I am still with thee, Psal. 139. 18. and Prov. 6. 22. When thou awakest, the Law of God as Companion it shall talk with thee.

Last of all, If thou beest overwhelmed with such Thoughts as keep thee off from the free air to breathe up to God, thou wilt find thy Heart like a Mole under Ground, Heaving and Working upwards, tossing up the Earth that keeps under, till thou art above ground.

As to the rest of those Signs that follow, I must premise, (as in Relation to that part; namely, What Carnal Men do make their Treasure;) That some sinners Treasures (I term them such, because they are such to their Hearts and the Affections thereof, tho' not to their Judgments) lye in things more base, base, more vile, as in debauched Courses of Uncleaness, Drunkenness, vain Company, Joviality, Mirth, &c. Which are so base that if you ask their Consciences, or their Judgments, they must acknowledge such things to be their Shame. Some are Swine, and wallow in open Mire which stinks in all mens nostrils; and yet as to their Hearts and Affections, they are that chiefest good they doat on; like Beasts, in what they know naturally, they corrupt themselves. Others are more clean, as Dogs and Goats; to which those others of wicked men are compared, that feed more clean, and yet are Beasts. These put the treasure of their Hearts in things outwardly commendable, as Riches, Honours, Learning, Wit, Reputation, quick Conversation, &c. Yea, sometimes in outward Righteousness, and a fair Deportment in this World: And yet not making God their Treasure, and not subordinating all these to him, and not preferring him, and the things of God, to the chief of their joy; they evidently lay but up Treasures on Earth. I shall leave the first sort, as self-convicted, and as judged wicked by the World it self, and as sentenced by such cutting Sayings of the Word, 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. Neither Fornicators, nor Adulterers, nor Effeminate, nor Abusers of themselves with mankind, nor Thieves, nor Covetous, nor Revilers, nor Extortioners, shall inherit the Kingdom of God.

But as touching the second sort, who place their good things in what the World highly esteems, as Christ says; to convince them, and to comfort the Hearts of the Godly, by distinguishing and separating them from them: I shall give these following Evidences or Discoveries, which shall be fitted to the Metaphor of a Treasure, or what a man really makes his Treasure.

I shall premise this, That in the Hearts and Lives of many Saints, yea, in all more or less, there are Corruptions answering unto what I shall instance in, to convince wicked men by, that such and such things on Earth are their Treasure: That yet a man truly holy doth still in the pursuit, and valuation and endeavours, and reaching forth of the Soul, make God his chief Treasure (notwithstanding those Corruptions,) in comparison of all things else.

1. Examine thy practical Esteem and Valuation of things; that is, what it that is most precious to thee? That's thy Treasure, 1 Pet. 2. 7. Unto you that believe, Christ is precious. As in Himself such, (v. 4.) A Stone chosen of God and precious; so in the esteem of Believers; Unto you he is precious. And he speaks it by way of discrimination from Carnal Men that have not true Faith. But to them, says he, that be disobedient, he is a Rock of offence v. 7. Why doth he in this opposition, give the Title of Disobedient to them Rather than of Unbelievers, which is the opposite term unto the former, To that Believe; But because the valuation of Christ, or undervaluing him, seen and discovered as in the pursuit after him; so in the obedience to him or in Disobedience. Thus David; Psal. 119. 14. I have rejoiced in the way of thy Testimonies, as much as in all Riches. Even in the way of them; mark it because they did lead to God, as a man would do in a way, though never so craggy, that did certainly lead him to an hidden Treasure: And in the way to them, in the pursuance towards God, he delighted as much and above Riches in present possession: Yea, and above all Riches too, of what sort soever, the Men count Riches; which is not in Money only. So then he esteemed God his Treasure, and manifested this by diligence in the way unto him, the way of his Testimonies. Thus of Hezekiah, of whom Interpreters do understand that passage, it is said Isa. 33. 6. The fear of the Lord is his Treasure. So of Moses Heb. 11. 26. It is said that he esteemed the very reproach of Christ, greater Riches than the Treasures of Egypt. With other Men, how doth the market go? It is apparent, 1. That they undervalue God and Christ, and those things of the other World; and hold them at the rate of common things: So in the Original the Expression is (Heb. 10. 28.) though 'tis rendered an unholy thing which though there uttered of men that sin against the Holy Ghost with the highest contempt of Christs Blood; and was therefore so rendered Yet to esteem Christ and his Blood a common ordinary thing, is common with the other wicked men as their respect thereunto manifests, in comparison of other other things) a wicked man is a prophane person, as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his Birth-right, Heb. 12. 16. And for this his so manifest a demonstration of his undervaluing it to a Mess of Pottage (and the pleasure of Lust is but just like it) he is termed a prophane Person, who is one which esteemeth holy things, and precious things, as common, for that is properly Prophanation.

And 2: Instead of these, what are their Dainties? Sins and the pleasures of them, Psal. 141. 4. Encline not mine Heart to any evil thing, to practice wicked works with men that work Iniquity, and let me not eat of their Dainties. And so the good things of this World, whereof, (Rev. 18. 12, 13, 14) were dainty and goodly in their Esteem, and so (as there) their Souls lusted after them. Now then let us examine our selves hereby.

1. This thy esteem of God and Christ, if true, and in any proportion rising up to the worth of the things themselves, will shew it self, as in thy first Conversion, in selling all for them, (Mat. 13. 45.) So after Conversion, in thy diligent pursuit after them. Treasures lie buried under ground to a great depth often. Therefore says Solomon, speaking of Christ and all his Graces, (by which we come to have Interest in him,) under the name of Wisdom, Prov. 2. 4. If thou seek for her as Silver, and searchest as for hidden Treasure. The mind of the Similitude is, That as God in his common Providence hath hidden the Mines of rich Metals in the Bowels of the Earth, because he would have men take pains for them: So in the course of his dispensations to his Children, he hath hidden his Christ, whom he so values, in himself; your life is hid with Christ in God, Col. 3. 3. And all the Riches of Christ, which are unsearchable, they are hid in God, Eph. 3. 10. and hidden deep. They are the deep things of God, (1 Cor. 2. 10.) To the end he may be treated with by every Soul that will have them. And although he gives them freely, and sells them not for any, or all of our endeavours: (And therefore, say not in your Hearts, that is, think not within your selves (as Paul interprets Moses) who shall ascend up into Heaven, as if any may by his endeavours bring Christ down from thence; or who shall descend into the Deep? (Rom. 10. 7.) Yet before he usually brings Christ down into the Heart, or discovers his own Heart and Face, he orders so that men shall take the utmost pains, and use the utmost diligence, to the end, to shew their valuation of these things. Many shall strive, to possess Christ. You must do more, work as at a Mine; if thou search for her as Silver: To work in Mines is the toylsomest work in the World. The Romans Old, and the Spaniards now in the West-Indies, condemn their Slaves there. And indeed what a man values and esteems pretious, his desire will set in him a work to seek, Prov. 18. 1. Through desire, a man having separated himself, he seeketh and intermedleth with all wisdom. Others read (as also the argument varies it) intermedleth with every matter. That is, what a man longly desires and esteems, it will make him separate, or set himself apart wholly to it. He will deal in every matter, that is, way or course, whereby it is to be attained. He will turn every Stone, or (which is all as we read it) will intermedle with all Wisdom. He will use his Wits to cast with himself how it may be compassed. Now down into your own Hearts, think, and think seriously, what doth the length of thy Intention run out upon? Is it after God, and the things of that other World, or things in this? If thou hast been truly wrought upon, perhaps at the first thou wert so affected, as wholly to separate thy self thro' desire after God and his favour, because thou didst thus judge, it is not necessary for me to be eminently Learned or Rich, &c. but to be saved, is that thing necessary, and so didst nothing else, with thy heart, until thy Spirit was settled and quieted in some good measure. Then afterward thou wast settled; and so that present and absolute necessity thy Soul was put upon at that time, as in respect to that distress and unsettlement, is not the same as before, thy esteem continues such to the things themselves. As, though thou didst not the greatest outward Bulk of thy diligence, because thy outward calling in this World calls for it: Yet the greatest strength of thy intentness of Spirit, and heedfulness, is spent upon them so, as not to lose thy interest, in them. And to that end a Godly Man will intermeddle with every Duty, and he will deal in all Ordinances, take the advantage of all Opportunities.

On the other hand, My Brethren, what is the reason, that Men search for Learning as for Silver, and dig for it as for Gold, separate themselves unto it; intermeddle with every Author, as the Bee with every flower, and yet neglects God, days without number? Or if not that way given (I would it were so commonly) men spend their intention and dilligence (what it is) in Idleness, vain Company, which we term passing away the time: But as for God and Christ, and the ways of Holiness, they are so far off from separating themselves unto them, through desire, that they scarce intermeddle with them in a Week, a Month. These, as Pebbles in the streets, they are so far from digging for them, that they trample as Swine upon them (as Christ speaks) or at least stoop not to take them up: They think they may have them at any time for stooping for, at their cast-away leisure, or on their Death Bed. What is the reason of this? Even because they are not their Treasure. God hath not yet given thee an Heart to value them at their own rate. Suppose thou hadst liv'd in Solomon's times, when Gold and Silver were as Stones in the streets, or wert in the Indies, where at least, for the seeking or digging for them, thou mightest have enough, and yet all thy time were spent to load thy poor back with Peacocks Feathers, which you read of also in Solomons times (which were indeed those Glorious Birds, we now a days see brought from the hotter Climates) would any Man think, or couldst thou in reason think that thou didst make Gold and Silver thy Treasure, in such a Case?

Consider, You live in times and places, in which the unsearchable Riches of Christ are shovell'd up to your Hands, every day offered, tendered, yea put (as it were) into your Hands. The Word we Preach is nigh thee, even in thy Ears and Heart; and yet as Solomon says, Prov. 17. 16. A Fool hath a Price in his hand, only wants an Heart towards it. Go Home and Consider with thy self, These things are not yet my Treasure, nor hath as yet God given me an Heart to make them such.

Again, If these had been thy Treasure, thou wouldst have parted with all for them: Sold all thou hast, as Christ speaks of that good Pearl. For all men, will do for what is pretious to them. What says God, Isa. 44. Since thou wert precious to me, I gave Nations for thy Life. And so wouldst thou have done for Christ ere this, and never have repented of your bargain. 'Tis Repentance never to be repented of. I have accounted all things loss, Phil. 3. And I do account them so still, says Paul. And still he pressed forward to attain them with the greatest diligence. But thou partest for unworthy courses, uncleanness, drunkenness, or such petty base Lusts, which the best part of thee, the speculative part of thy mind, is so far from reckoning a Treasure, as they are thy shame; yet to the practical part, they are really thy pretious things, thou in thy great Wisdom seekest after. Thou canst sell all for them, as Esau his Birth-right, thy Soul, thy Books, thy good Name, the hopes of Preferment in the place thou art in, thy health, thy strength, thy wits, thy favour, expectations and joy, thy Friends might have in thee, to pursue them. A goodly Treasure sure! Are they not? Yet they must be reckoned thine.

2. Wherein, or in what dost thou account thy greatest gains, and thy greatest losses to lye? That, in the Valuation of thine Heart, is thy Treasure.

You find, 1 Tim. 6. 6. Paul speaking of the Opposite Disposition of a Man truly Godly, and who seeks the things of Jesus Christ, from his that is Carnal. He expresth it with a [But] But Godliness with Contentment is great Gain: or as the Word is, Self-Sufficiency $\mu\epsilon\lambda\ \alpha\upsilon\tau\alpha\rho\kappa\alpha\tau\alpha\varsigma$, that is, Godliness hath such a sufficiency in it self, that with, or thro' that sufficiency, it alone is great Gain to him, in whose Heart it is placed, and by whose Spirit it is truly valued. And he speaks this in perfect opposition to the Spirit of Carnal Gospellers and Professors, of whom he had spoken the Verse afore, and which was the occasion of the Saying annexed Men of Corrupt minds, supposing that Gain is Godliness; that is, their secret opinion and esteem, that Gain in outward things is the best Religion in the World. But our Religion which we profess is to serve him that is God; now, Phil. 3. 19. Paul speaking of the same sort of Persons, (for of those of the Circumcision he speaks in both places) Whose God is their Belly He compares the Lusts and Appetites of Natural mens Hearts, unto those of the Belly, that is the furious desire to the Pleasures thereof; and such are theirs to Earthly Things; as it follows, who mind Earthly Things; unto which Psalms 17 v. 14. accords. The men of this World (saies David) who have their portion in this Life, Whose Belly thou fillest with thy hid-Treasure, namely, of the Earth, (which also speaks home to the Metaphor of the Text) So then, Earthly Things were their God: That is, their chiefest Good, instead of God. And the eager pursuit with which they adored their God, he as justly terms their Religion; especially when under the presence of Religion, they serve those ends.

1st. The Result is this, (which is the thing in hand) That Earthly Things are in the valuation of Carnal men, professing Religion, their gain; and their Religion also, supposing Gain is Godliness. But to Godly men Godliness is Great, true Gain, having a sufficiency in it. Unto which accords that also of Solomon, Pro. 3. 14. The Merchandize thereof is better than the Merchandize of Silver, and the gaine thereof than of fine Gold. Hast thou ever been brought to such dispositions of Heart and Spirit as these?

1. To suffer (in thine own resolutions and account) the loss of all things that thou mightest win or gain Christ? 'Tis Paul who is your pattern, Phil. 3. 6. 7. What things were gain to me, that I accounted loss for Christ; for whom I suffered the loss of all things that I might win Christ: Conversion to God is a great Shipwreck of an old man and all his goods and appurtenance. I do not know how Conversion goes now-a-days, when you may judge the World favours Religion: But I will tell you how the price of the Market went in our days.) A mans Conversation was such, as not only some things, but all things he most valued, he was faine to bring it and lay it down at Christs Feet, as they did their money at the Apostles; and by Wholesale give it up to him. For he knew not but that for the sincere profession of Christ, he might lose all presently. Take a Scholar in the University, whose Education was as Paul's, profiting in the Jewish Learning above his Equals; yet the Learning then cryed up, and the way of preaching in quotations of Fathers, Poets, Apothegems, Stories, &c. was such, as when a man had profitted therein seven or ten Years, and had a dispute with, or above his Equals: If he were humbled for sin, and came to Christ for Righteousness, and treated with God for Salvation, God Would say to him, What advantage or use will all this your Learning, you have counted your Treasure, be of to me? This poor Soul was faine to give it all up for ever as lost, And was turn'd into the World a Dunce, stript of all his plumes; for the other was loss and useless, and all this to win Christ. And then his carnal Friends would come upon him too, and say they had lost all their hopes, their Cost upon him. Thus a proud Scholar was at once undone by Bankrupt. Again, his Heart, was swollen with hopes of preferment, his Sail's fill'd with the wind of it: And he had ordered his Studies, his Comportment accordingly; taken in Commodities for that Port. And as he, in Habbakuck, had in his conceits, gathered to himself all Nations, all sorts of preferments as his prey, but when he came truly to turn to Christ and enter into a profession of strictness: He was brought in his own resolution, to lay down all he was in hopes of, and all which he had laid up as Gains, towards the procuring of it: And to be a poor Schoolmaster, or a Levite in a private Gentlemans House, was what in his future projections or expectations this man was brought to. Conversion was a great Shipwreck. And sure it is, and will be to every one, that turns to Christ still in something or other.

2. Again, after thou art turn'd, wherein dost thou reckon thy comings in to lie, and thy truest Gains? Paul being a Preacher of the Gospel, as before a Persecutor, (to instance therein) what were the chiefest of his Gains he lookt at, what to get Livings, &c. No, but that he might win some Souls converted, or quickened by his Ministry, he accounted his Treasure. What is our Crown (says he 1 Thes. 2. 19, 20.) but even ye in the presence of the Lord? He acknowledged every such Soul added as a Jewel to his Crown; and every degree of Grace that was added to those Souls, as so many Carrats in Diamonds, which encreaseth their value. Thou hast an outward man with many appurtenances; a Name and Repute in the World, outward Comforts about thee, Health, Vigour, the World fair on thy side. All these in Scripture-Language are termed the outward man. Well, and thou pretendest to have an inward man in thee, that is, to have a repute and acceptation with God, made to enjoy Communion with him every day: Unto which the Things and Comforts of another World; do as properly and as suitably belong, as the other to that outward. To instance first in that part of thy outward man, thy good Name. God comes and makes a breach upon thy Name: And this partie of men, they report this, another that; yea, and pervert thy best and sincerest Actions, to thy reproach, turn thy Glory into Shame. And these losses and revilings daily come in, like Job's Messengers, upon the neck of one another. These are shrewd losses. But what dost thou reckon thy Gains? All this while thou findest God draw near to thee, own thee, testifie thy sincerity to thee. Thou hast an inward man, whose praise is with God, and not with men. And thou hast further a name in thy eye, at the latter day, above every name that is in this World. Yea, and every reproach will turn to encrease it at that day. Even this shall turn to my Salvation Phil. 1. 19. Every thing written or spoken against thee, will then be a Crown about thine Head; as (Job 31. 35.) and every Scoff and Contempt a Fence. And thine Heart all this while finds a self-sufficiency in Godliness betwixt God and Thee in which thou rejoicest And reckonest all these things thy Gains, and secretly rejoicest Heartily herein upon this Account; thus it was with Moses, Heb. 11. 26. He esteemed the reproach of Christ, or for Christs sake, greater Riches. He lookt on them as his Gains.

And thus it is in all other kinds of outward losses, which are of the appurtenances of the outward Man. See Paul's Spirit, 2 Cor. 4. 16. Though our outward Man perish, yet I thank God, my inward Man is renewed day by day. I find comings in more or less every day thereby, and what do I lose by that then? And therefore I value not my Losses of this kind, whilst a Gain comes in the other way.

Yea, upon this account all Afflictions, are therefore but light, and so all losses of all sorts whatever, because they work for us an exceeding weight of Glory: So it follows, verse 20.

And reason good, why we should thus judge: For the things we lose, are but things temporal; but the things we have in exchange for them, are things eternal. So again it follows v. 21. We look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen, are Temporal; but the things which are not seen, are Eternal. That true Believers do really and in the private estimation of their Souls thus judge, you may also see by the instance of the Beleiving Hebrems, whose Hearts Paul cuts up, Heb. 10. 33, 34. *Ye were made a gazing stock, by reproaches and afflictions, and took joyfully the spoiling of your goods, (as great losses as can be supposed to befall men) What should be the reason of this? They knew that they were Gainers, that they got well by it. Knowing in your selves (mark that) that you have in Heaven a better and an enduring substance, (which as Paul told us even now) is wrought and increased by all these losses an hundred fold, as Christ speaks. It was the knowledge and actual application of this, caused them to rejoice as well as they might. But how did they know it? The Text says, In themselves. When the great providence of God took away these, or any thing from them, God was graciously pleased still to seal to them a Bill of Exchange in their own Hearts; to return instead thereof, so much better and enduring substance by way of Exchange,*

Exchange in the other World ; and he writ this Bill in their Hearts, they had it in themselves, the earnest of it, (as 1 John 5.) he that believes is said to have the witness in himself) and look as all a mans actions are written in a Mans Conscience, which he shall not be able to deny ; so all such Impressions from God are also Written in the Heart. And God will own all these his Bills of Exchange at the latter day. So then, a Christian accounts these his greatest gains. And well he may ; for if one should come into your House, and take all your Pewter, and all your Brasses, and melt it before your Face ; but then come and sprinkle some of the Elixar upon it (which you call the Philosophers Stone) and turn it all into Gold ; I pray, what loss had you ? Yea, what gains ? And truly thus by Faith you may, and in the issue, in experience all you true Christians must look upon all Afflictions, and Losses whatever. By Faith you may aforehand, as knowing this will be the Issue ; therefore says James, James 1. 2. Count it all Joy, when ye fall into divers Temptations ; observe his When, not when after ye are fallen, but at first, when you do fall ; Rejoice thus aforehand : Suppose thy Afflictions be for thy Sins, no matter ; Wait and thou shalt gain by them. They bring forth a quiet fruit of Righteousness, that is, that issue which so quiets, as it causeth the Soul to say, I am satisfied ; it was well for me, I was thus Afflicted. Thou lovest a Child dear to thee, for 'tis thine Image. And God renews (upon the occasion and by the affliction of it) his own Image, or some member of it more fair and fresh than ever. What are an Hundred Thousand Children to the least degree of Grace ? The comings in by one good Prayer, is worth them. God takes a Pin off thy sleeve, and puts into thine Heart the white stone which hath a new name on it. It was good for me, I was Afflicted, says David ; that is, he reckoned it his Gains. To be kept but from one Sin by an Affliction, is greater gain than this World hath to afford. I went Astray, says David, afore I was Afflicted. Crosses which break other Men's Hearts, and which they can never get off, but are sunk with the burthen of to their Graves, they are made light to a Believer (as Paul speaks) they bring him near to God, and he blesteth God, that ever it befel him. 'Tis true indeed, he desires rather, and he is to seek it, that God would sanctifie Mercies to him. Yet if there be no other way to be made a partaker of Gods Holiness (as the Apostle speaks) but this, he would not care what God did with him. If by any means I may attain the Resurrection of the Dead, says Paul, (Phil. 3. 11.) He speaks it in respect of the Holiness that will be in that state. Let God take what course he will, what means he will : he should be glad. It was because he reckoned God and the things of God his Treasure, and so his gains to lye there. By these two Dealings of God with thee put together, thou mayest make forth a great and mighty Evidence of thy Election.

1. That however God deals with thee in what thy flesh and outward Man desires, whether Rich or Poor, despised or in repute, &c. Yet still thou canst and mayest observe that by all such dispensations God seasonably keeps thee, or breaks thee off from Sin. Draws thee nearer, and puts thee upon praying and crying out to him. What is this, but that his Eternal Love hath taken care of an inward Man in thee, which he doth renew from day to day, (if thy Crosses be such) or from Month to Month, from Week to Week. And therefore will not let thee go on in such a Sin as others do, or in that dead frame, but it shall cost thee this Affliction or that, a loss in this thing or that thing, which is dear to thee ; another piece of thy name must go for it, or t'other Child, or some of thy Estate. This is a sign Eternal Love carries on its design towards thee and not common or Providential Love.

2. Then Secondly, Dost thou find this still, upon all such Losses and Perishings of thy outward Man, thy Heart to have some quietness and rejoicing from this, that though God hath dealt thus bitterly with me, yet he hath made it up by a supply of his Spirit some way or other, either in preserving from sin, stirring up Conscience, quickening to prayer, exercising Faith, waiting submission. And then with all thy Heart thou dost value these more than all thy losses; and dost say, howsoever, I see it was good and best for me, I gat by such a sickness, brokenness of Heart, both off from, and for such a Lust; and though I cannot say I have grown much, yet my inward Man hath been renewed, some Life of Graces have been kept in ure hereby, so as I would not for all the World, but God should have dealt thus with me; I would not have been Rich, or Great, or Honourable, instead thereof, though still what God will do with me at last I know not. I tell thee such Thoughts and Dispositions as these do manifestly declare that thy Treasure lyes not on this side of Heaven, but it is in the other World, which appears by thine own Audit-Book in which Losses and Gains are written; that is, what things they are thou esteemest thy greatest Losses, and thy greatest Gains. Thy Gains in this Case lye in things of the other World.

Now, further to give you an Evidence that net in this World, but in the other, a Christians Treasure lies: Not only that he accounts the Afflictions of this present Life gains, but even Death it self; concerning which, other Mens Hearts say, When I am gone, all is gone. Death is the great Murderer, like a sweeping rain, dispoils a Man of all in this World at once. But what says Paul, Phil. 1. 21. To me to die is gain. So a good Soul looks upon the thing in it self, And Oh! That I had assurance, that I might account it so for me; yet such it is in his Estimation, in his hopes, though not in his particular Confidence: Oh, says he, I heartily value the things of that World, so as that I would not care if I were well there; this Wife, these good Houses, Children, Credit, Honours, what good will they do me? Whom have I in affection in Heaven but thee? In Earth I have too many Harlotry things which draw away my Heart from thee. Oh, would I were with thee, and in thy Bosome! So he prays and sighs. And why is this? Because the true Treasure thy Heart values, is laid up there; and there is an enduring substance. And then says the Heart, If I dye, I should go and receive all my Bills of Exchange, into which all the Comforts I have had first or last, have been one way or other turned. I shall meet with every Prayer, Tear, Sigh, Groan, and have all mine Afflictions returned me with infinite advantage. To me to live is Christ, and to dye is Gain.

Again, I shall add, VVhat dost thou endeavour to add to, daily? Therein lies the Gains, and that is thy Treasure. It is in the Text, What is a Mans Treasure, he will lay up, and be still adding to that heap. For a Treasure lies in an abundance, which a Man seeks to heap up; whereas of other things, he only provides so much as barely serves his present Use, as Coles for Firing, &c. Of the Believing Corinthians Paul gives this Testimony, and withal this Motive; which he knew would take with their Hearts, *2 Cor. 8. 7. Therefore, as ye abound in every thing, in Faith, in utterance, in Knowledge, and in your Love to us; see that ye abound in this Grace also: VVherein lay the force of this Exhortation; but, that they accounted the Graces of the Spirit their Treasure? And so had a principle provoking them to abound in all sorts of them. The like Exhortation you have 1 Cor. 15. last. Always abounding in the work of the Lord; that is, in some good thing or other that is for God. Knowing your Labour is not in vain; for the more you abound, the more Treasure you lay up in Heaven. Consider, therefore, what heap thou art endeavouring to add unto, as thy Treasure: I do not say which of the heaps are bigger, thy good Works, or thy Sins; but which heap is it thou seekest to add to, and to abound in? Dost thou go on retchlessly, to add Sin to Sin. Isa. 30. 4. till the measure of thine Iniquity is full? Thou and thy Companions say, (as Isa. 56. last,) Come, to day shall be as to Morrow, and much more abundant. Abundance of Sin, and pleasure by sin, is that thou seekest; adding Drunkenness to Thirst, as (Deut. 29. 19.) Moses his Phrase is; that is, a full satisfaction to every Lust thou hast a mind to; if Covetous, seekest to add, Land to Land; if a Scholar, Notion to Notion; but neglectest, yea, valuest not to add Grace to Grace, one good Prayer to another, as Peter Exhorts, *2 Pet. 1. 5. dost thou give all diligence to add Grace to Grace, to that end, that you may be rich in Faith, James 2. 5. Rich in good Works, in good Speeches, good Thoughts as accounting these your Treasure; then God is the chief Portion and Treasure. And this by so much the more as thou hast formerly added Sin to Sin. And if thou sayest, Alas, my Lusts abound, and Deadness and Unfruitfulness; well, but then thou aboundest in Complaints hereof, and addest Complaint to Complaint; and it makes thy life bitter to thee, as a sorer Vanity than any Solomon instanceth in.

Again, What times of thy Life dost thou look upon as lost time, or else, as most pretious and gainful to thee? Days of greatest Receipts of what is ones Treasure, it reckons his best daies. A man counts that time lost in which what he principally intends goes not forward. A Scholar that makes haste to be Rich in Knowledge, as othersto be Rich in Estates, looks upon Times that Conscience puts him upon Holy Duties in, as interruptions, which he thinks much at, as impediments to his main end: So of the Sabbath; when will it be gone? As they in the Prophet. Or, as the Heathens scott the Jews, that they lost the Seventh part of their Lives. Dost thou so? It is because thou makest not God, nor the things of God, thy Treasure. What made David account one day in Gods House better than a Thousand? Psal. 84. 10. What makes one Day better then another? But that gain which the day brings in? Oh, say they that run into excess of Riot, What a gallant Night had we on't! when their Wits and Spirits were flusht with Wine, and Joviality; but on the contrary, what says a Good and Holy Soul? I have had a good Day of it, or a good Night of it, when God hath been near him in private prayer, or at Meetings with others, Isa. 58. 13. To a Godly Man, a Fast-day, or a Sabbath-day is said to be Honourable; that is, pretious and high in his esteem. Hence when a Man comes to turn to God, he accounts all the time before, however spent, to be lost time. You have therefore Paul complaining that he was Converted later than the rest of the Apostles, 1 Cor. 15. 8. That he was born out of time: As a Scholar that is kept from School, or from going to the University till Twenty Years old, or upwards, bewails his Loss, or his having been a Truant. And yet Paul had spent his time well in the Jewish Learning, and profited therein above measure. Yea, but I knew not Christ, says he, for the excellent Knowledge of whom, I account all things loss. To this also refers that Speech of Christ, Matth. 10. 3. 6. Why stand ye here idle all the Day long in the Marketplace? And therefore a Godly Man also looking back upon the times past after his Conversion, those days wherein (though under bitter Temptations) yet he sought God much, and with the utmost intentions of his Soul: Or wherein there was a quick Trade and Entercourse between God and him, or others and him in the things of God; he notes them in his Almanack, with a White Stone. And these, wherein he Considers that the World and vain Thoughts have, as the lean Years, eaten up the fat; he looks on these with sadness; and with bitterness cries out, Amici perdidimus Diem, Friends, we have lost a Day, in which he hath not made some addition to his Treasure. This is the great Rule in Moses his Arithmetick, which he hath Taught us, to number our Days, by applying our Hearts to Wisdom. Which Rule by proportion holds and instructs for time past, as well as time to come; That a Man reckons that time lost, in which he hath not applied his Heart to Wisdom.

C H A P. III.

To know whether we make God our chiefest Good, we must state the account, upon what it is that we most value our selves, or other men.

TH E last Head of Signs from this metaphorical Expression [what is thy Treasure?] Is, What thou dost value and estimate thy self by, as also other Men?

This Note differs from the former. For when I ask'd what was precious to thee, it signified what valuation thou hadst of the things in themselves, which is a direct act of valuation. But this Query is by what things you put a value upon your selves or others. Which is as the reflex Act (as in other Cafes we use to distinguish.) That I may give a right stating of this Note, that it may be fitted for all sorts to apply it without mistake of what I intend, or disquietment to their own Souls: I shall premise these things by way of Explication.

1. That this Note holds in an Affirmative a Positive sense true, of Unregenerate men; who may be convinced by this what their Hearts do really value themselves by, when it is found to be some Earthly Excellency or other which therefore is their Treasure.

2. Of Godly men, it holds true Negatively; as to what they have learned not to value themselves by; Not by Earthly and Worldly Excellencies; that Rate Book is cancell'd in a great measure with them. And as for a positive valuing carnal Self, in a way of being lift up: They have learn'd to be as Cyphers in their own Hearts, To be nothing in a mans self: This is the A B C in Christianity (though we are always a learning it) Ask an humble Soul, what dost thou value thy self by? He will readily answer (as to what he is of himself, and in himself,) Alas, by nothing. Thus Paul, in divers places, two especially. 1 Cor. 15. 9. I am the least of the Apostles, that am not meet to be called an Apostle. Again, 2 Cor. 12. 11. I am nothing.

And yet 3. For all this, you shall find the same Apostle value himself as he was a man in Christ, and according to what he had by Grace, as he had lived in and to Christ, and acted for Christ, he doth value himself thereby: Yet still vailing, and attributing all unto that Grace of God which had done it for him; even at the same time and with the same Breath with which he lays himself thus low; which is sufficient ground to the Note in hand; That even regenerate men have also that Treasure of another kind belonging to them; which they do and may value themselves by: Even whilst they really profess themselves as nothing: As in respect both to themselves as in themselves, and unto the Grace of God working in them and with them, which is one Branch of the point in hand. Consult we for this the places cited, 1 Cor. 15. I am the least of the Apostles. So (v. 9.) But then at the tenth verse he riseth again. But by the Grace of God I am what I am. Well, and what was he? It follows. I laboured more abundantly than they all; there he pulls forth his Treasure. Yet still (lest he should have said too much) he distinguisheth again upon it. Yet not I, but the Grace of God that was with me. And in 2 Cor. 12. 11. with the same Breath, with which before he had said I am nothing, he boldly premiseth this, In nothing am I behind the very chiefest Apostles, though I be nothing. Paul had then, wherewith he valued himself, you see. And in the same Chapter he gives you that other part of the distinction I mentioned, v. 2, 5. I knew a man in Christ, of such a man I will glory: But of my self I will not Glory, but of mine Infirmities, as in that respect; and yet it was himself he speaks of. So then take himself as in himself (and so carnal men never thoroughly humbled never do, and of that self, abstracted from my relation to Christ, says he, I profess my self nothing. But of such a man, and so of my self as conjunct with Christ, what I am in Christ, I may and will glory. So then, the right state of this note of difference between a Godly and an ungodly man, lies fair afore us. Chap. 3

1. That a carnal unregenerate man doth positively value himself and others by some Excellency that is Earthly, if he have any to value himself by. Or if not, he values others by what his Heart accounts truly a Treasure.

2. A Godly man hath learnt not to value neither himself nor others, chiefly, by such things.

But 3. His Heart being pitcht upon living upon God in Christ, he values himself, if he hath assurance of his being in Christ by what he is in Christ, and by the Grace of God, as by a rich Treasure still with vailing to Grace, and distinguishing himself as in Christ, from himself as in himself.

And 4. So far as he wants assurance, and so can value himself by nothing as assuredly his own, yet what his Heart truly maketh its Treasure, may be discovered in him, and by himself in this, what things they are he values others by. It being thus stated, Let us come to the proof and application of it.

The reason why carnal men value themselves by outward Excellencies is, That man naturally would not be a meer Cypher to himself and others: He must be somebody, a μεγας τις as 'tis said of Simon Magus, Acts 8. 9. Now the Souls of men upon the same account that Aristotle calls them, abrasæ Tabule, in point of notion and intellectual species, may be called Cyphers, considered as separated from all outward Excellencies and Endowments, as Wit, Learning, Estates, Beauty, Riches, Power, or some such things. And they stand and appear to themselves as Cyphers in comparison of others. But look as any of these things are added to them, which they see are in high esteem with men in the World, then this poor naked Cypher will begin to reckon it self a Number, and still the more that is added, the greater number it goes on to think it self to be; as the more Figures, the more the value of a Cypher is encreased. You may see the truth of this too true a Similitude in the instance of Saul. When Saul was Young and a Strippling, and a private person, Samuel reminds him, thou wert little in thine own eyes, 1 Sam. 15. 17. The Cypher had but a few figures then set or belonging to it: And he was though something, as the Word little imports, (according to what he then possess'd when he went to seek his Fathers Asses) yet little then in comparison of what the value of himself did rise to, when a Kingdom, with all its Glories and Priviledges, were added to him. A Kingdom, set to Original sin, huft and blew him up, so that he thought himself worth no less than all the Kingdom besides (as we have heard and seen other Kings have been wont to do) he grew too great for God himself to rule, and to have respect to his Commands: To intimate which to his Conscience, was Samuel's Scope.

The Prince of Tyre is another Instance, Ezek. 28. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, verses. It seems he was a man eminent in Wisdom and Knowledge, as v. 4. With thy Wisdom and Understanding thou hast gotten thee Riches, and Gold, and Silver, into thy Treasures. And by reason of all this, (as v. 2.) thy Heart was lifted up. As the Ark was, as the Waters that bore it did rise and encrease. Well, and how big was this Cypher, this Mote, this Atome, this less than nothing lift up? Even as high as the Throne of God. So God, the Searcher of Hearts, chargeth him, v. 2. Thus saith the Lord God, Because thy Heart is lifted up, and thou hast said I am God, I sit in the Seat of God, in the midst of the Seas, yet thou art a man and not God, tho' thou set thine Heart as the Heart of God. Oh how big did this Toad swell in his own imagination! Therefore God, to confute him, and to bring him to his native Cypherhood, threatneth to bring a Sword against him and all his Glory, that should strip him of all his Excellencies he valued himself by, and should slay him, v. 7, 8. And then says God, (and it was as great a Sarcasme, as that shot at our first Parents, Man is become Book 10 as one of us) v. 9. Wilt thou yet say before him that slayeth thee, I am God. He will make but a poor God of thee. God prick'd the Toad and he fell to nothing. As also He did Herod, (Acts 12.) when swoln with the flattering Breath of the People for his eloquent Oration. God sent his Angel to cut the Bladder, and how did it fall? I have instanced in Kings, because they are Suns of the greatest Magnitude, any of the Cyphers of Mankind grow to: But it holds proportionably in all men else. If a man scrape together a little Riches and Scraps of Wit and Learning, mens Souls presently value themselves thereby, 1 Tim. 6. 19. Charge them that are rich in this World, that they be not high minded. As Riches encrease, the Heart encreaseth. This is one reason why a carnal Man comes to value himself by things outward.

2. If you will see a reason of the difference of the second thing propounded; viz. how it comes to pass, that a Godly man and a Carnal do differ thus in the valuation of themselves: Among others therere are two several Rate-Books; or Books of Valuation, which according as Men have Eyes given 'em to discern, and Spirits, impartially to view themselves in, and guided to judge themselves by; accordingly will they come to rate and value themselves with this vast difference spoken of.

1. There is the Worlds Book, which is that common esteem which the generality of Men have of things and do cry up, and magnifie them by. Now what things do bare a rate and value with the World, but things Worldly? Psal. 12. last. Vanity with Mortal Men, highly is extolled. And Christ, Luke 16. 15. hath this expression of it, Things highly esteemed by Men. Now a Worldly natural Man, having the Spirit of this World, as yet predominant in him (1 Cor. 2. 12. which is especially there spoken in relation to his judging of persons and things, for he exposeth it there to the Spiritual Mans Judging of things spiritually.) Such a Man therefore jumps with the Carnal World in his Judgment, both about men and things, looks upon himself and all things with the Worlds Eye, and is said to walk according to the course of the World. Eph. 2. 2. and so rates and values himself by the Worlds Book; that is, by the Common Opinion and Price, which things by the World are taken up at.

On the contrary, there is Gods Book, (as you say. the Kings Book, by which you know the value of Livings.) 'Tis Doomsday Book if you will, In which the rate of all Persons and things are laid down according as the value of things shall go at the latter day. And this was written to that end, to correct and amend the common account of things; that men might judge Righteous Judgment, and learn to esteem of themselves as they are indeed. And this Book heightens the price of the things of the other World, which Carnal men undervalue. Sets down a Thousand, where the World sets down nothing, Vanity of Vanities, Dung, Dross, where they write down an Hundred. And therefore in that Luke 16. 15. It is said, that what is in high esteem with men is an Abomination unto God. So Christ there exposeth and setts at distance, Gods esteem of things and Mans. You find the same opposition of these two, in Paul's Spirit. 1 Cor. 4. 3. I care not to be Judged by Mans day (As in the Greek) Translated Man's Judgment. God hath a day of Judgment, and man hath his day of Judging things so called, because Mans Judgment carries it from God. Men are Clerks of this Market, the Prizers of this Dead Worlds Goods: Now what Gods Judgment is of things and persons, his own Book doth perfectly serve to enform us, and so how to value our selves and others, so as the greatest Monarch in the World, whose Glory and Greatness this World Adores, if he comes, as Hezekiah, to read himself in Gods Book, he finds himself nothing, of no value therein. And in Deut. 17. you find that God hath written this Book in a special manner, for this very end. verse 18. It shall be when he sits on the Throne of his Kingdom, (speaking of their Kings, as they should be surrounded with all things which make them Great and Glorious.)

That he shall Write a Copy of this Law in a Book, and he shall Read therein all the days of his Life: And one end is, (verse 20.) That his Heart be not lifted up above his Brethren. If he looks upon himself as he stands in the Worlds Book, He will rate himself worth more than Ten Thousand others; but when he comes unto Gods Book, which presents unto him, as in a Glafs, how persons stand in Gods Eye, (who judgeth without respect of Persons, Acts 10. 34. That is, without those outward Garbs of conditions men are in. For in the Sun, a Beggar and a King have both the same shadow.) Therein a King, reading, with the Spirit of God enlightning him, falls as low as the poorest Beggar; yea, lower, if he hath Grace. Now, a Godly man hath not received the Spirit of the World, but the Spirit, which is of God. That we may know the things which are freely given us of God, (1 Cor. 2. 12.) so as v. last, we have the mind of Christ, and do look upon things with that light in our measure, wherewith he doth. And hence comes that great change and alteration in a Godly man in judging of himself, valuing himself by what he is in Christ, by the things he hath received of God. David, who knew himself designed unto a Kingdom, made that Psalm 131. on purpose to shew the frame of his Heart this way. Lord (says he, appealing to him that knew the Heart) mine Heart is not haughty, nor mine eyes lofty. It is a strange Level that Grace makes in the view and prospect of him that hath it. It makes, as John's Ministry, the Mountains in the Worlds eye, Valleys; and fills up the Valleys that were low and empty, in the apprehensions of those men that have it. And this is perfectly James's Scope, James 1. 9, 10. Let a Brother of low degree rejoice, in that he is exalted; but the Rich, in that he is made low. Which when converted, the light of God discovers to him. James wrote to comfort poor Believers, and to humble the rich Professors; (whereof many, being but temporary Believers, despised the poor, chap. 2. 6.) This you may see run along, as a Vein, throughout his Epistle. Chap. 1. 9, 10, 11, 12. Chap. 2. v. 1, 2. to the 6th. Chap. the 4th and Chap. 5. And because in the Worlds light and eyes, and afore Regeneration, there appears so mighty a distance and disproportion in a poor mans condition, and in a rich: He therefore sets afore them what the true saving light of Christianity works in the apprehensions and valuations of men converted, whether poor or rich. He supposeth to be afore-hand both to a poor man that is Godly, and a rich man that is Godly: supposing such a Brother a Believer, as v. 9. shews. A rich man, afore Conversion, look'd upon the poor man with a lofty eye, as one so far above him, and a poor man look'd upon himself as mean and ordained to misery, in comparison, and calls the Rich happy. Well, the Spirit comes and converts the one and the other. And then the Wheel turns (as the Poets feigned of Fortune) the World is turn'd upside down: Saith the poor man, when converted, I that had nothing to betake to in this World, nor much hopes of being any thing, I find I am an Heir of Glory, and higher than all the Kings and Great ones of the Earth. Hath not God chosen the poor of this World, rich in Faith, Heirs of the Kingdom? chap. 2. 5. This therefore gives the poor man ground to rejoice, as well he may, that he is exalted. Let the Brother of low degree rejoice, (says James) in that he is exalted. And let him value himself with joy unspeakable and glorious, by what he reads and finds himself to be in that other World. On the contrary, a rich man, when converted to God, and he begins first to be humbled, he, as he is a rich man, is as much cast down and dejected. For seeing his sinfulness and nothingness, through the light of the Spirit and the Word, and his obnoxiousness to Eternal Death, Thinks he, the poor man that hath but Grace, and an Interest in Christ, is infinitely happier than I. He lyes low and puts his mouth in the Dust; if there may be Hope. And when Faith and Assurance of the other World comes in, he rejoiceth in this his happy misfortune he hath had, to be humbled and levelled in his outward Condition, with the poorest Cobler, whom if he have more Grace than he, he looks upon as a better man than himself. And with this high and differing valuation (as it is kept up in their Spirits) do these two Book 10 look upon things and persons for ever after. A Bond-man, a Slave, was taught not to care, for he is Christs Free-man. Masters were taught, that they have a Master in Heaven, who hath no respect of Persons, (Eph. 6. 9.) The new Creature teacheth a man to know no man after the Flesh, 2 Cor. 5. 16. That is, to estimate no man from outward things, that is, with that high valuation and admiration a man had wont to do. Had any man any special, Spiritual Priviledge Paul learnt to value that man by it, and that afore himself. Such an one was in Christ afore me (saies he.) He is my Elder, and of more standing in Grace; and he gave them a reverence accordingly. Yea, take a poor Soul that dares not yet say that it is in Christ, and so cannot value it self thereby: Yet this true valuation is seen by what it hath of others. When he sees the greatest King in the World, living in his Natural Estate, and swimming in Greatness, he would not change Conditions with him for Tenthousand Worlds: For altho' his own being in the Estate of Grace, is yet uncertain to him; yet the others (supposed in his natural condition) is certainly at present damnable. Also every one he looks upon as Godly, are the precious ones of the Earth with him, as the Psalmist speaks: And oh (says he) that I were but an hired Servant amongst them, in the meanest condition, so one of that number, as the prodigal Convert wished. And what is the reason of all this? Because his esteem and valuation of things is altered.

Now then, for the application of all this, Consider by what Principles the valuation or disvaluation of thy self is measured or guided; To what Beam or Ballance dost thou come to weigh thy self; whether in the Ballance of the Sanctuary, or the Ballance of common opinion, which is hung up in the Worlds great Market-place. Thou mayst be Great, and Happy, and Honourable, in thine own eyes, as also the Worlds, when thou art miserable and abominable in Gods. Thus a rich man, or one in power, men account a Great man: But what is that Greatness, but such as a man that is fat and purfy hath? And so men weigh Fat and all, and account a man Great. So Nabal, 1 Sam. 25. 2. is termed a Great man, because he had three thousand Sheep and a thousand Goats; which was a great Estate in those days: But this kind of greatness God and his Word regards not. Therefore God pronounceth of Belsazar, tho' he had the whole Babylonian Monarchy, and all the Glory and Riches of it, environing of him, to put into the Scale, Thou hast been weighed, and art found too light. Here we might, for our help, run over all sorts of Instances of things of value, either Worldly or Heavenly, as the Scripture sets the one against the other: And how thereby this difference in Godly mens Hearts and others may evidently appear unto themselves.

1. There is that which is Honour in the Worlds esteem; and that which is truly and indeed such with God. Hast thou an ambitious Heart (God allows an Ambition, pitcht right as we see in Paul's Speech of his ambition to preach the Gospel) There is an honour to satisfy it. And doth thy valuation thereof carry forth thy Spirit thereto? Christ gives us the distinction, John 5. 44. How can ye believe which receive Honour of one another, and seek not the Honour which cometh from God only? Here is Honour from God only, and Honours from men, and mens Estate distinguished by their pursuit after them. The Glory of God himself, and the seeking thereof, in aiming at him, that is not here meant; but it is that Honour which is from God, and with God, and which by approving a mans self to him alone, obtains with him. Gods Favour is true honour in such a mans esteem. Isa. 43. 4. Since thou wast precious in my sight, thou hast been honourable, and I have loved thee: Therefore will I give Men for thee, and People for thy Life. So that, though before a man hath valued himself by those things which have brought him in honour from men; yet when converted, he takes another account, Knowing that Gods Favourites only, and whom he loves, are only truly honourable: And that his ways are only honourable, (as the Sabbath is call'd, Isa. 58. 13.) And that to lay hold of his Covenant, and keep his Sabbaths, purchaseth himself a better Name, and more lasting than Sons and Daughters, as it is (Isa. 56. 4, 5, 6.) On the contrary, he looks on others as vile Persons God abhorring them, Plal.

10. 3. He abhorreth them also : Whereas a wicked man bleffeth the Covetous whom God abhorreth. And so for things he once made his Glory, and valued himself by, he now accounts to have been his shame, (Phil. 3. 19.) and that would bring him to confusion of face. Chap. 5

So also 2. This holds in Wisdom; (hence that distinction, (1 Cor. 2. 6, 7. The Wisdom of the World, that comes to nought, and the Wisdom of God. Wisdom to Salvation, as in Timothy.) So that a man who hath valued himself by his Learning, Knowledge, Wits, Parts, and Policy, when he comes to be converted, finds, (as Rom. 1. 22.) That whilst he hath profess'd and thought himself wise (as of the Philosophers it is said there) he is become a Fool, and he finds that the Word proves him so to be, and he thinks so of himself; that he hath but even studied all his life to be a Fool, because he wants true Wisdom to save his Soul: Which Wisdom now he magnifies; for this Wisdom is justified and magnified of all her Children; and is glad to become a Fool, that he may be wise. And on the contrary, with carnal men, Worldly Wisdom is justified of her Children; and this unto Salvation is counted Foolishness, 1 Cor. 2. 14.

So also 3. Is it in Riches? (which is another thing men use to value themselves by) Take that distinction of Christ Luke 16. 9. of the unrighteous Mammon and true Riches. So that a man that hath thought himself a rich man in the Worlds Books, upon Conversion becomes a Beggar in his own eyes. It is therefore call'd Poverty of Spirit. For why, as Christ says, (Luke 12. 21.) He that lays up this as Treasure for himself, is not rich towards God. he thought himself rich and encreased with Goods, as the Church of Laodicea says of her self, (Rev. 3. 17.) Thou sayst I am Rich, and encreased with Goods; when as God knows and says it, and the Soul now finds it, That it is wretched, miserable, poor and naked. Whereas God values him as rich, that hath Faith and good Works, (Rev. 2. 9.) I know thy Poverty, but thou art rich. And so now a fair Woman, whose Treasure lay in her Face and good Cloaths, by which she once rated her self, when she look'd into the Worlds Glass, because all men run doting and wondering after such an one, as the World once did after the Beast, (Rev. 13. 3.) When she comes to take account of the Word, and to look thereunto, she finds another Beauty; which is so in Gods esteem, (1 Pet. 3. 3, 4.) Whose Adorning let it not be in the outward plaiting of the Hair, &c. But let it be of the hidden man of the Heart, the ornament of a meek and quiet Spirit (which is a lasting Ornament, the other decays,) which in the sight of God is of great price. I might instance in many more. Further take a Note or two.

1. That which thou valuest thy self by most, thou gloriest most in: Makest it thy glory either in the secret applaudings of thine own Heart, or else it may be of others, (Phil. 3. 19.) Among other expressions which the Apostle hath to express the over-valuing of Earthly things by Earthly minded men: One is, whose Glory is their Shame, who mind Earthly things. Hence you find boasting in Riches spoken of, (Psal. 49. 6. and 52. 17.) you also have that example of Nebuchadnezar, Dan. 4. 30. Who walking in his Gallery, and as it may seem, alone; you find him, like a Fool, talking to himself. Is not this the great Babel which I have built, by the might of my power, and for the honour of my Majesty! As many a Scholar in his own Heart saith, Was it not such an Act I kept, or Disputation I performed, such an Oration that I made? That one place more is enough, and fit for this purpose, (Jeremy 9. 23.) Let not the wise man glory in his Wisdom, nor the rich man in his Riches, nor the mighty or potent man in his might and Power. God speaks thus severally, for men make any of these their Treasure, and will glory of these; and in these do men Glory, if they know not God. But if he be a Godly man, what doth he Glory in? It follows, Let him Glory in this, that he knows me; that I am the Lord, that shews him mercy, and am his God and Treasure. And of thee, say they in Psal. 44. 8. and our Interest in thee, oh God, will we make our boast all the day long. Carnal men, says the Apostle, Glory in outward appearances: But says he, (Gal.

(Gal. 6:14.) God forbid I should Glory, save in the Cross of Christ. And why might not Paul Glory in the Flesh and in the World, as well as others? (It is well known he had where withal to do it, as he tells us elsewhere.) Why, he Answers, That the Cross of Christ, and the power thereof in him had Crucified the World to him, had spoil'd all the Glos of it to his Heart, wip't the Varnish off: For who values a dead Man, a Crucified man, at any thing? Thus Jesus Christ being a Crucified man, (Isa. 53: 2, 3.) He is said to have no Form nor Comeliness in him. And when we shall see him, he will have no Beauty to a Carnal Eye, why it should desire him, being a despised and rejected Man. Now so says the Apostle. The World is to me a Crucified thing, through Grace wrought in me by the Cross of Christ. Again, Had not Paul many outward Excellencies, to make him Glorious in the Worlds Eyes, and might he not Glory in them? Yes, that he had; as great a Confluence of all Excellencies of Learning, Knowledge, &c. as any, and was so accounted too. If I would Glory, says he, (1 Cor. 11. 23.) I could too. But his turning Christian, spoil'd all, Crucified them, Marred the Splendour of them in the Worlds Eyes; so that if he would have Boasted of them now, he could not. For they had lost their Grace and Colour; Grace, had foiled them. And now though he could vye Learning with the best of them in any thing, yet his being of that new Sect, his professing the Cross of Christ, which was foolishness to the World, spoil'd all, made him be thought a Mad Man by him that thought he had Learning enough, and too much; so that it was no Booty to Glory in any of these, tho he would; and besides, saies he in the next verse, Nothing avails but the New Creature; neither Circumcision, nor Uncircumcision (he means the greatest Priviledges, by a Synecdoche of those which the Jews or Gentiles had and boasted of) And he says they avail not, they are little worth, of little value, as being able to do little, nay, just nothing with God, with whom we have to do: They are Nullius pretij with him, and therefore with me also. But being a New Creature, that's worth having indeed, because it did interest him into Christ, and avails much with God in him. And yet not simply the New Creature neither, as in it self, for so it avails nothing, as other things do, tho it be an excellency; but in Christ Jesus a New Creature, avails; that is, as it is in Christ. So a Man may Glory of it, and so Paul did, (2 Cor. 12. verse 1, 2, 5.) speaking of his Revelations and Raptures, he would not simply Glory in those as in themselves, or in himself as having these. But says he at verse 2. And of such a Man I will Glory, though of my self I will not Glory; and yet it was himself. And Chap. 11. v. 16, 17. What I speak, says he, of other things, I speak as it were Foolishly in Boasting. He was ashamed to do it; but they despising him, he would shew that he could vye with the best of them in those things they made their chiefest Glory. Yet still so, as he is ashamed to do it; and therefore in the midst of all, at verse 23. he comes in with this Parenthesis, I am a Fool, saies he, to stand Boasting thus. For he thought them all not worth talking of in themselves. Yea, and he Glories to choose, in his Infirmities, as of more value than all his Sermons; because in them he was debased for Christ, in the other fill'd and assisted by Christ:

CHAP. VI.

How the New Creature makes God and his Glory its utmost End.

PSAL. XXIX. 1, 2.

Verl. 1. Give unto the Lord, O ye Mighty, give unto the Lord Glory and Strength.

Verl. 2. Give unto the Lord the Glory due unto his Name ; Worship the Lord in the Beauty of Holiness.

First. HERE is the Duty, Give Glory unto God. Secondly, Upon the most just Reason, For it is due unto his Name. Of all Duties it is the most Large and Comprehensive ; for it includes all Obedience in it ; Praise, Blessing, Thankfulness, are contained in it. But I will confine my Discourse of it, to some such Particulars which the Scripture mentions under the Notion of Giving Glory to God.

I shall do Two Things,

1. Give Reasons of this Duty and Disposition.
2. Insist on those Particulars wherein especialy we are to give, and the New Creature doth give Glory to God.

1. The First Reason is in the Text, Glory is due unto his Name, because he is most Glorious ; it is the Reason given, Psal. 138. 5. For Great is the Glory of the Lord ; yea, his is Glory, and his alone. Glory is the superlative effulgence of Goodness, many things are good, yea, many things are excellent, which are not Glorious ; to things which are good, Praise and Commendation is due ; to things which are more excellent than our selves, Honour is due, so to Superiours and Magistrates. Rom. 13. 7. but such things as do super-excel to Wonderment and Amazement, such things are only Glorious. Thus the Sun is called Glorious, because it dazleth the Eye, it is excellently sensible ; and such is God to the Heart ; his Name is Glorious because he is above all Excellency, Neb. 9. 5. and (Pf. 8. 1.) it is not simply said, thy Name is excellent, but how excellent is thy name ! It is above all Expression. Therefore he is called God of Glory, Acts 7. 2. King of Glory, Psal. 24. 10. For as Kings are the Fountain of all Nobility, so is God of Glory. He is the Father of all the Glory which Christ hath, therefore Christ Prays to him for it, John 17. 1.

1. God is most Glorious in himself, Tho no Creature had been to Glorifie him. He was as Glorious when there was no World, as now he is. Mens Honours depend upon the opinion and apprehensions of them that honour them. Where is the Gloty of a King, but in the Multitude of his Subjects, but God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, are sufficient to Glorify each other, if

if there were no Creatures. If thou art Righteous, what dost thou, Job 35. Book 10 7. How do Wise Men contemn the Approbation and Praises of the Weak, and Foolish? God might much more despise the Adoration, and Praise of us Wretched Creatures. We are therefore the more engag'd to give him all Glory upon this consideration, that tho he needs it not, yet he condescends to receive the inconsiderable Tribute from us.

2. All things which are in him are all Glorious, take the best and excellentest of the Creatures, and still it is said of them that one particular part in them is their Excellency and Glory, but all in them is not so, but other things in them are but common and mean to set off their excellencies. So in Men, so in the members of Man, his Tongue is called his Glory, Psal. 57. 8. but that it may appear to be so, other parts must be mean, less Honourable, as Paul says, 1 Cor. 12. 25. But all in God are, and that all alike, Glorious; his whole Name, and all the Letters in it. Exod 33. 18. Show me thy Glory, says Moses, I will proclaim my Name before ye, says God, v. 19. His Mercy is called Riches of Glory, Rom. 9. 22. his Holiness also, is Glorious, thus when Isaiab saw his Glory the Angels cryed, Holy, Holy, Isa. 6. 3. his power is Glorious, Rom. 6. 4. his Grace is Glorious, Eph. 6.

3. When he would manifest this his Glory to others, all that comes from him is Glorious; all his works are Glorious. 1. The Earth is full of his Glory, as it shews forth his Glory, which yet is but his Footstool (Isa. 6. 4.) much more his own Habitation; (Isa. 63. 15.) which by Peter is styled (2 Pet. 1. 17.) the Excellent Glory. 2. His Word, both Law and Gospel are most Glorious, 2 Cor. 4. 3. Much more all his Saints; his Servants, his Courtiers are all Glorious within, Psal. 45. 13. His Image, whether Substantial (as his Son is called the brightness of his Glory, Heb. 1. 2.) or Representative or Similitudinary, as Grace in his Saints, his Image in Adam, is called Glory, 2 Cor. 3. the last verse, we are said to be changed from Glory to Glory; and he being thus Glorious, to Glorifie him is a Due to his Name. Psal. 29. 2. As we cannot but love things beautiful, and love is a due to them, so is Honour to things Honourable. Rom. 13. 7. Render Honour to whom Honour is due, and therefore Glorifie God, who is so Glorious.

2. Reason. As it is a Due to him, as he is the Glorious God, so it is due from us his Creatures.

1. He made all Creatures for himself, Prov. 16. 4. It is Reason, if all things be of him, they should be to him, Rom. 11. 10. therefore he there adds, To him be Glory for Ever. But in a more especial manner he made us Reasonable Creatures for himself.

The unreasonable Creatures are in some sort said to glorifie him, Pf. 19. 1. The Heavens declare the Glory of God. How? They give occasion and afford matter whence we may take hints to glorifie him. As in Musick there are the Notes set out in a Book, and the Tongue that sings, or Hand that plays, which make the musick. The Creatures are the Notes, or Musick, that is set and have the Notes, the Keys, and Characters of the Harmonious Glory of God stamp't upon them, (Rom. 1. 20.) But then there must be an understanding Creature that hath skill, and ability to utter forth the musick and harmony of all these. Therefore between the reflexion, or shine of Gods Glory from the Creatures, and the Glory he hath from us who are reasonable Creatures, there is as much difference as between the Glory of the Sun appearing in its shining upon a Wall, and in a Looking-glass: Now such hath God made our Understandings, in comparison of other Creatures, or as the eye is to the Sun, on purpose that we might see his Glory as it is (John 17. 24.) and so reflect and beat it back again to him, so that after God had emblazoned his rich, and glorious power and wisdom in all the frame of Heaven and Earth, as in a Coat of Arms; yet still there wanted Heralds to conceive of, and proclaim and adore his glorious Name; and therefore he created reasonable Creatures, whose sole and adequate end was to reflect Glory upon him, even as the sole end of a Mirour is to reflect the Image of things presented to it; and therefore (1 Cor. 11. 7.) man is said to be the Glory of God.

3. Reason. But especially this is requir'd of his Saints, Psal. 145. 10, 11. All thy works shall praise thee, O Lord, and thy Saints shall bless thee. v. 11. They shall speak of the Glory of thy Kingdom, and talk of thy Power. Not only their making as Creatures, but their whole formation, as new Creatures, is to this end: For this they were elected to be to the praise of the Glory of his Grace, (Eph. 1. 6.) To this end were they redeemed, yea, were bought with a price (therefore, says the Apostle, Glorifie God in your Bodies, and in your Spirits) a price which was paid by laying down and debasing Christs Glory (Phil. 2. 7.) Therefore we should endeavour to restore it to him: We should Glorifie God, that was in our Nature debased for us. To this end we are made and created New Creatures. Isa. 6. 2. They are the planting of the Lord: That he may be Glorified. Isa. 43. 7.

4. Reason. They shall be Glorified of God for ever; And should therefore here Glorifie God: Christ argues it, I have Glorified thee on Earth, now Glorifie me. (John 17.) Much more may it be urged on us: That if we pray that he would Glorifie us hereafter, we should Glorifie him here: And the rather, because here only is an opportunity of Glorifying him actively: Hereafter we are rather Glorified of him, than do Glorifie him; as we are said to be rather known of him, than to know him.

5. Reason. All three Persons do mutually endeavour to give Glory each to other, and shall not we their Creatures. The Father hath committed all Judgment to the Son, that all might honour the Son as the Father. John 5. 22, 23. The Son he honoured the Father. John 17. 4. I have Glorified thee on Earth, &c. And the Holy Ghost Glorifies the Son. John 16. 14. He shall Glorifie me: For he shall receive of mine: For he is continually magnifying Christ and his Love, unto Believers Hearts. Now if they do so, shall not we? if they do it, who are equal each to other; Shall not we who are so inferiour, made for them? If one King honours another, shall not their Subjects?

6. Reason. God is infinitely desirous of it, and exacts it. If a man looks for respect, and is worthy of it, and assumes not above his desert, Those under him are the more careful to give it him. Others value a man as he sets a due and reasonable value on himself; but if he degrades himself, they give him the less respect. Now God with the highest reason doth value himself above all things, and will accordingly be Glorified. Glory is mine, says he, (Isa. 42. 8.) He is so desirous of it, That he lays a Tribute of Glory upon every action: 1 Cor. 10. 11. Whatsoever you do, eating and drinking, do all to the Glory of God.

7. Reason. Glory is all that God doth require of us, for all we receive from him. He would freely have us to take all the comfort that is to be had out of his Blessings; But the Glory of all, and for all, he reserves to himself, Rom. 29. 11, 12. Both Riches and Honour come of thee: Thine is the Glory, &c. That is, though Riches and all good Blessings are of him, yet are his so his, that they are ours also; but the Glory of them all are his. This is his Prerogative, his Crown, wherein no Subject shall partake with him: As Pharaoh said to Joseph, I am Pharaoh, and all Egypt is thine. Gen. 41. 44. and v. 40. only in the Throne will I be greater than thou: So says God, I am God, and all the World, my Son, my Self, are thine; all things are yours: But the Glory of all is mine: That is, my Throne, my Crown. It is not your your Prayers, nor is it your Duties he regards; but to be Glorified in all these: Therefore in the Lords-Prayer, the first petition is, Hallowed, or Glorified be thy Name: That should be the main thing that should run through all the rest that follow, and which the Heart should primarily fall upon, and eye in all. And as he teacheth them to begin, so also to end with an acknowledgment, Thine is the Kingdom, Power, and Glory. The end of all duties of Gods worship are 1. Communion with God and in God on our part; and 2. Glorifying and Sanctifying God in our Hearts, on his part: And as we are not to rest in a Peace of Conscience, simply from having performed Duties, but upon account of Communion and meeting with God in them: So in like manner, we are much less to rest in having done them for the satisfaction of our Consciences But so as to give in our Heart that Glory that is due to God, whom we deal with in them, And without this God reckons all but as Dung. In the 2d of Mal. God had called upon the Priests who brought Sacrifices to him, to give Glory to him therein, v. 2. in the 3d v. he threatens them that, if you will not, I will fling back your Sacrifices as Dung in your Faces. You know they Sacrificed Beasts then: To shew how abominable to him without these Sacrifices were to him, he compares them to Dung, that is found in the Belly, or ventricle of those Beasts they offered; and to express his abomination of such Duties and Services, he says he would fling them as Dung in their Faces: To fling Dung in ones Face, is a note of the highest indignation and rejection, Men in applying themselves to those they desire to approve themselves unto, diligently use to observe what they look for, and expect, and what is their disposition: If a Prince be covetous, they about him project all ways to bring him Moneys in; if vain glorious to flatter him, &c. Thus Let us apply our selves to God: He is not taken with Riches, nor Duties, nor Tears; With nothing but Glory.

8 Reason. Therefore if this Tribute be not paid, God will curse all good Blessings to us. So it follows in that Mal. 2. 2. says God to the Preists, If you will not lay it to Heart, To give glory to my Name, I will send a Curse upon you, and will curse your Blessings. For should we hold all of God, and his due be withholden from him? The Kings Rents and Customs are still most strictly exacted upon the greatest forfeitures. If a man steals Custom and be taken in it, he forfeits all: So do we our Blessings, If Gods Due, his Glory, be not rendred him. The God, in whose hands are thy breath and thy ways, hast thou not glorified. Dan. 5. 23. Thy Kingdom is departed, and given to others, in the following verses, said God to Belshazar.

9 Reason. God will be sure to recover it on us, some other way; if he be not glorified by us, he will be glorified on us. He will be sure not to lose by any of his Creatures, if we are not active, he will make us passively to Glorify him. He will have it out of us; we must pay the utmost Farthing: And seeing his Tribute lies in Glory, there are two ways of bringing of it, or whence it riseth. 1. In and by our free giving it to him. 2. By his vindicating it upon us. To be glorified on us, is as much to him as our Obedience, and brings him in as much: For his Wrath, his Power, his Justice, his Holiness, &c. are enacted, made known and acknowledged that way, as much as by our giving Glory to him; so as it is all one to him. And therefore he calls this a glorifying of himself, as well as the other: Thus he spake of Pharaoh, whom Moses had long call'd upon to give glory to God, Exodus 14. 17, 18. I will get honour, or be glorified upon Pharaoh. So Ezek. 28. 22. I will set my Face against Tyre, and I will be glorified in the midst of thee; and they shall know that I am the Lord, when I have executed Judgment in her, and I shall be sanctified in her. His Glory is the making known of his Name and Attributes; which he doth in punishing as well as any other way, and he is said to be sanctified therein, Rom. 9. 22. What if God, willing to shew his Wrath, and to make his Power known, endured with much long-suffering the Vessels of Wrath fitted to destruction. Therefore (Rev. 15.) it is said, give glory to God for his Judgments are made manifest; Because his Attributes being therein manifested, He

He is adored in mens Hearts. So Levit. 10. 3. when he brought the punishment on Nadab and Abihu, he gives this reason of it, I will be sanctified in them that draw nigh to me: Either sanctified in their own Hearts by themselves, or on them in the view of others. So as punishment on us executed, is as much to God as our Holiness in us. And therefore in the Prophet, the destruction of wicked men is call'd a Sacrifice to God: He expresseth it by the same Name he doth that worship he had then, as being as pleasing to him: So that indeed the one is as much unto God as the other, if we do but consider the Concernment of his Glory. It is true, That out of his further goodness unto the Creature, and his respects unto it, he declares himself more desirous of Obedience from them, than their destruction: But otherwise as for his Glory, it is all one to him; for he is sanctified in either, and will be the one way, if not the other, as that speech implies: Oh how much better is it for us so to glorifie him, as to be glorified of him and in him: (as we find both joined, 2 Thes. 1. 12. where he praysthey may be holy, v. 11. that the Name of Christ may be glorified in them, and they in him) than for him to glorifie himself on us, in our Confusion. The one or the other must be: It is all one to him which. And if it be done by your destruction, This is unprofitable for you.

2. I now come to enumerate some dispositions and duties of the new Creature, by which it ought to reflect Glory on God.

1. It ought to endeavour to know him, and to conceive a-right of him, and to have such thoughts of him, as become him. So Moses desires to see his Glory, That is, to know him and the Excellencies which were in him. So David and all the Saints desired to see him in the beauty of Holiness, to see his Face, and to have the light of his Countenance lifted up, (as Psal. 62. 3.) So to rejoice, (as Jer. 9. 24.) in that we know God, which exerciseth loving kindness in the Earth. And that thus to do, is to glorifie him, is evident, for (Rom. 1.) when the Gentiles are said not to have glorified God, they are said (v. 28.) not to have liked to retain God in their Knowledge. And if his manifestative Glory be the reflexion of it, upon the understanding of another, then when we are ignorant of him, and conceive amiss of him, so much of his Glory is lost, and therefore the Gentiles which know him not, are said to live without God in the World, being estranged from him through ignorance; ignorance makes him as no God to thee, and therefore thou dishonourest him in the highest degree; if thou knowest him not, thou makest him no God to thee. On the contrary, to endeavour to know him, and think much of him, is a glorifying of him, Psal. 46. 10. Be still and know me, and I will be exalted. If we spend many thoughts upon, and do study a mans worth, we honour him exceedingly thereby in our thoughts. If we study any mans Writings much, and preserve every Note of his, we honour him exceedingly: So we Honour God if we think of God much, and labour and desire to know him still better, more and better for the Excellencies sake that are in him; and study his works that we may know him, and knowing him we may honour him in our thoughts and glorifie him.

2. When we admire him in all we know by him, and stand agast at him, then we glorifie him. And therefore in 2 Thes. 1. 10. to be glorified and made wonderful, are joined together; things we wonder at, we glorifie; and therefore Rev. 10. 3, 4. to wonder at the Beast, is made all one as to worship him, saying? Who is like unto the Beast, or able to make war with him, &c. So it is an Honour to God to stand and to wonder at God, and every part of his Name, which is called Wonderful, as David did, Psal. 8. 1. How excellent is thy Name in all the Earth! To wonder at his Mercy, as they, Mich. 7. 18. Who is a God like to thee, in pardoning Iniquity, Transgression and Sin! So likewise to advance his infinite Wisdom, as David doth, Psal. 147. 5. And his goodness is unsearchable. Psal. 145. 3. To stand admiring a mans Picture, or peice of his workmanship, magnifies the workman that made it. Beauty, if not lookt upon, thinks it self contemned: So doth God account himself neglected, if you do not know him.

3. We Glorify God, when we speak much of him to others, as of what we wonder der at, we use to do; for with men, then a thing is said to be glorious when it is spoken of much, when the World rings of it, and Gods Glory is such a great glory as it is able to fill all the World, and all Mouths with it. A good Name is as a Box of Ointment, says Solomon, which when broken fills the whole House. Now Gods Name is a Box of such Ointment as may fill all the World. Psal. 113. 3. It is to be praised from one end of the World to the other; yea, and from one Generation unto another, it fills all Time also. So ver. 4. of the 145. Psal. Therefore the Saints should have their mouths fill'd with his praise. Psal. 71. 8. But his Saints bless him; all his Works praise him, by talking of his power and mighty acts, Psal. 145. 12. And therefore the Tongue is called mans Glory, Psal. 57. 8. Because it is the instrument to set forth Gods Glory, therewith bless we God, says James.

4. We glorifie God, when we ascribe all to him. So David did, 1 Chron. 29. 11, 12. Thine is all (says he) and all comes of thee, we have given thee but thine own. And so Isa. 26. 18. We have not wrought any deliverance, but v. 12. Thou hast wrought all our works in us and for us. So if thou prayest, acknowledge thou canst not as thou oughtest, but it is the Spirit helps thine Infirmities. Before we do any thing, we should by Faith draw all power from him: And then when we have done, we shall ascribe all to him. Psal. 115. 1. Not to us, not to us, but unto thy Name be the Glory. They speak like those that refuse a Bribe, and shew the greatest vehemence against the very offering of one: Their Corrupt part in them suggesting Thoughts of assuming to themselves: But they cry out Not unto us. I will give you the highest instance that can be given, to be an example unto you. The Holy Ghost, when he works any thing in us, tho the power be essentially his own, yet he Glorifies the Son by taking of his, (John 16. 14.) And working through him. How much more should we, when all we have, is received? When Joab would honour David, and let him have the honour of the Victory, he sends for him to take the City and wear the Crown, 2 Sam. 12. 16. and yet it was but David's Men, and Money did it; but Joab's Wisdom and Valour had a hand in it. Wouldest thou honour God? Send for him into thine Heart, after a serious Prayer, and give him the Glory, for with his might thou didst it. Paul that did more than all the Apostles yet says he had done nothing, but the Grace of God that was with him.

5. We glorifie God when we suffer for him, 1 Pet. 4. 14, 16. He is on your part glorified. So the three Children Glorified God in Daniel when they said, that God they served was able to deliver them; if he would not, they would not go against his command. Nebuchadnezzar that glorious King, could not have found one in all his Dominions would have glorified him so; therefore Christ, by suffering for God, is said to Glorifie him, John 12. 23.

6. We glorifie God by getting his Image into our Hearts, and imitating him: Imitation of any one is a great Glory to him: To have a great mans Picture is his honour. If a great man be in favour, all follow his fashion, and therein they shew they honour him. And therefore (1 Cor. 11. 7.) the man is said to be the Image and Glory of God: Both are joined, get therefore the Image of God into thy Heart; be holy, even as he is holy; kind as he is kind; as he is patient and long-suffering, shew them forth in thy Life; shew forth the praises of him who hath called you; Mat. 5. 16. Let your Light so shine, that you may glorifie your Father. When the Stars shine, they glorifie the Sun, because they shine with his Light; thus a Christian glorifies God when he lets any Grace shine forth.

7. We glorifie God by Glorifying in him, and boasting of our Portion and Happiness in him. (1 Cron. 16. 10. and Psal. 44. 8.) For as they are his Glory, so he is theirs, Psal. 3. 3.

8. We glorifie God by living according to his Will, and abounding in the fruits of Holiness. So sayeth Christ, Hereby is my Father glorified, if you bring forth much Fruit. John 15.

9. We glorifie God by doing all things for his Glory, as the end, (1 Cor. 19. 31.) This is more than all the rest; (you may imitate Kings, and suffer for Friends, and yet you make not them your end;) For it is to acknowledge that nothing in the World is so worthy as he, no not your selves; and not only so, but that that we are so infinitely below him, so dependant on him, and he so glorious, as we are not only subject to him, but made for him; and that all else are made for him: For therefore is all for him, because by him, Rom. 11. last. and therefore Glory be to him, and of all the greatest. And in this sense the Woman is said be the Glory of the Man, because made for him, 1 Cor. 11. 7, 8. and so Man of God.

10. Unto that of doing all to Gods Glory, as our End; must be added, Doing all we do in Christ. God hath made Christ the Partner of his Glory, his Will being that Men should Honour the Son as the Father. And Men Honour the Son by offering up all they do to his Glory through Christ and his Name. Phil. 1. 11. the fruits of Righteousness that please God, must be by Jesus Christ to the Glory of God, and Phil. 2. 8, 10, 11. God hath given Christ that great Name above every Name, that every Knee should bow to him; that is, all was to be done to him, and through him, to the Glory of the Father, v. 11. which is an exceeding great Favour, that God would accept of no Glory given him, but through him; for in one place you hear God say of him, This is my Beloved Son in whom I am well pleased, and with all others in him, so in another, This is my Servant in whom I will be Glorified, and by others through him, so Isa. 49. 5. And God hath stampt upon his Face his Glory, that we might behold it, and hath ordained him his Servant, through whose hands he will receive Glory again Therefore (Psal. 22. 22, 23.) after Christs Death is there prophesied of, and his declaring his Name in the great Congregation: All are called to Glorifie God and Praise him; for without Christ, God had had none of Mankind to fear him, and worship him, and (Isa. 45. 5.) God inviting Men to the Covenant of Grace, which he calls the sure Mercies of David, that is, of Christ, (as Acts 15. they are Interpreted,) he makes this promise to Christ, That Nations should come to Christ, because God had Glorified him, that is ordained him to be the Mediator through whom he would convey all to us, and receive all from us: Whom therefore he made a Co-partner with him therein.

11. We Glorify God by Repenting and turning to him, when he Punisheth and Afflicts us. Rev. 16. 19. when the Fourth Vial was poured out, it is said, They Repented not, to give God the Glory. Repentance and turning from a Mans Evil ways, brings in much Glory to God; by confessing our Sins, and acknowledging our Deserts, we Magnifie his Patience, and Long-suffering and Justice on us, and Wisdom in finding us out. Confess (says Joshua) and give Glory to God. By being Vile in our own Eyes, we exalt him. The most proper way a Sinner that hath Dishonoured him, hath to Glorifie him again, is by debasing himself for that his Dishonour of him; and by turning from our Evil ways upon his punishing us, we yield and subject to him, which gives him Honour as much as Obeying him. The Submission and coming in again of Rebels, establisheth and exalteth the Honour of a King, as much, if not more, then the continued obedience of good Subjects. For 'tis Glory with a Victory, a Conquest. And to hate Sin because it provokes the eyes of his Glory as the Phrase is, Isa. 3. 8. is to Glorify him, as those that respect a superiour, a Prince shew it, by doing nothing before him which might be unworthy the presence of such a Majesty, to give him the least distaste: The lesser the thing is we forbear, in such a respect, the more respect give we them.

12. We Glorify God by calling upon him in time of Trouble, and praising him for Delivering us out of it, Psal. 50. 15. Thou shalt call upon me in the day of Trouble, and I will deliver thee, and thou shalt Glorifie me; to make God our Refuge afore trouble, and to acknowledge him after, Exceedingly Honours him: How Glorious doth it make a Prince to take part with the Oppressed, and to vindicate them upon their Cry, Isa. 25. 3, 4. Therefore shall the strong People Glorify thee, &c. For thou hast been a strength to the Poor, a strength to the Needy in his Distress, a Refuge from the Storm, &c.

13. By Believing on him, we give Glory to him, of Abraham it is said, Rom. 4. 20. He was strong in Faith giving Glory to God. No Man thinks himself more Honoured then when he is trusted; and in trusting on God, especially fro for Salvation, we give him the Glory of all his Attributes at once, for there all Attributes meet; if any were wanting in its concurrence, we could not be saved. That 115th Psalm is a Psalm on purpose, made to call upon People to trust in God, as appears. v. 8, 9, 10, 11. and from the 12th Verse to the end, he expresseth nothing but peremptory conclusions of Faith. God hath been mindful of us, and would bless us, &c. And how begins he that Psalm? Not unto us, but unto thy Name give Glory, for thy Mercy, and Truth sake. It is the pure Voice of Faith, it is a self-emptying Grace. Not unto us, and it refuseth again to take any thing to himself, not unto us, but unto thy Name give Glory, for thy Mercy, and thy Truth's sake, those two Attributes, Faith gives especial Glory unto. They are what Faith rests in, and they are what God especially desires the Glory of. Therefore Exod. 34. His Mercy and Truth are those Attributes he only or chiefly proclaims, when he shews Moses his Glory. 1. The Scriptures call Mercy the Riches of his Glory, Rom. 9. 23. if it be the Glory of a Man to pass by an Offence, as Prov. 19. 11. then it is the Glory of God, To pass by so many. For all the Promises are Yea and Amen, that is Truth, to the Glory of God, 2 Cor. 1. 20. God engageth at once not his Truth only, but all his Attributes, his whole Glory to perform them; and therefore to believe them, gives this Glory to him. and therefore upon believing God, is said to shew his Glory. John 11. 40.

14. We Glorify God by fearing God above all, Rev. 14. 7. Fear God and give glory to him: To fear God that can cast Body and Soul into Hell, in opposition to man whose Breath is in his Nostrils, how doth it exalt him? Deut. 28. 58. It is call'd fearing his fearful and glorious Name: All Glory carries an awe and reverence with it, they are therefore joined; and by reverence we give an honour unto Majesty.

5. We Glorify God by joining our selves unto the Assemblies of his Saints, and in the publick Duties and Ordinances of his Worship. Isa. 60. 7, 8, 9. He calls it the House of his Glory, speaking of the flocking of Gods People, as Doves to the Windows, or as Clouds, (v. 8.) unto the House of his Glory with Sacrifices; v. 7. and he speaks of the times of the Gospel, when the Gentiles were converted. Now he says they should flie as a Cloud, which removes sometimes from far, from one Country to another, above the Mountains that might hinder their course, and all impediments; so they move to enjoy Ordinances, and fly as Doves to their Windows or Dove-houses, which especially they do when a Storm is towards: For Gods House is the best shelter and Dove-House against a Storm. And thither they come, as to the House of Gods Glory (v. 7.) so called, because 1. There they see the Glory of God. So David desired, Psal. 63. 2. To see thy Power and thy Glory as I have seen thee in thy Sanctuary. And 2. There this Glory is spoken of; Psal. 29. 9. In his Temple doth every one speak of his Glory. And 3. There they Worship and Glorifie him. So David foretells, Psal. 22. 23, 24. &c. and Psal. 18. Where when all are Saints and Holy ones, and none else admitted, his Glory is the more set up, As Isa. 60. v. 21. They shall also be all Righteous, &c. that I may be glorified. For it is a dishonour to him that Persons prophane and unrighteous should have communion with him, and eat at his Table. He is a glorious God, (Psal. 5. 4, 5, 6, 7.) and so hath no pleasure in Unrighteousness, neither shall evil dwell with thee, or stand before thee: But as for me, I will come into thy House, &c. For he will be sanctified or glorified (as the Septuagint renders it) in all that draw near to him, (Levit. 10. 3.) he puts an Emphasis there, specially of the Priests, Mal. 2. 1. 3. This Commandment, says he, (v. 1.) is for you oh Priests. And the Command is (v. 3.) to give Glory to God: That is, this most of all concerns or lies upon you: A King looks more especially to be honoured of his nearest Servants and Followers. The Gospel they preach is for their Glory, (1 Cor. 2.) and they therefore should be for Gods.

Obs. 2. That in Glorifying God we must give him the Glory due unto his Name, or which is some way suitable and worthy of it. God hath much
Glory

God hath much Glory and Worship given him in the World, but it is not such as becomes the Great God to have, or which is due unto his Name. In Rom. 1. 21. the Gentiles are found fault with, that they glorified not God as God. There is a respecting of him, a doing something for him, and in relation to him, performed by many, but it is not a glorifying of him as God. The Philistines, 1 Sam. 6. 5. When they made Images of their punishments inflicted, and consecrated them to God, they thought it a giving Glory to the God of Israel. But they glorified him not as that great God that made Heaven and Earth, with a Glory due unto his Name. He will be served by us as a God; and if our service falls short of this, he rejects it.

1. Reason. For otherwise it satisfies not his Aim in his designs of Glory which he looks for. He would not at all have gone about a glorifying of himself in his Works, but to shew himself a God in them; and so, nor would he have exacted it as a Duty of us, to glorifie him; if he had not design'd that it should be done to a God so Great, so Glorious: As that King said to Alexander, when he asked him how he would be used, βασιλικως says he, Like a King. So if you ask the Word of God how he will be worship'd, Like a God, says it. He stands upon it, and takes upon him in it, as Psal. 46. 10. Be still and know that I am God; I will be exalted among the Heathen, I will be exalted in the Earth. It is a Phrase of one exacting respect, due to him in his place; as if a Master should take on him, and say, Know I am your Master: Or as if a King should exact obedience of his Subjects that slighted him; Know I am your King, and I will be obeyed. So says God it is not a little respect will satisfy a King, and it is not a little slight respect will satisfy God. All things must be carry'd to a King, suitably to Majesty in Speeches, in Gestures, &c. and all must be carried unto God as God. God stands upon it as much as any of them, He in his place, as They in theirs. Mal. 1. 6. If I be a Father, where is my Honour? If I be a Master, where is my Fear? They served him but with the Lame, the Sick, and the Blind, (v. 8.) and thought to put him off with any thing, but how doth he confute them? Offer it now to thy Governour. (They had then no King) and yet he, tho' no King, would not accept such a Present from you saies God: And will you serve your God with it, will he accept it? In the Original it is, If he will except (I F) being put for (N O T) as often in the Hebrew; as, If they shall enter into my Rest; That is, they shall not enter, and therefore v. last, he takes upon him and says, I am a great King, and my Name is dreadful among the Heathen: And therefore, I will be worshipped accordingly, How do Kings stand upon points and terms of Honour, and will not lower 'em: How jealous are they to preserve their prerogative State, &c. in its height. They are not so in matter of money, they will give away of that, but not abate of their Power and State, because it is proper to them as Kings, it is that which constitutes them such; and thus is the God of Glory, a jealous God, he will abate no whit there, he will be God; my Glory I will not give, (says he) to another Isa. 42. 8. He cares not to give away Kingdoms, and Worlds, Heaven, his Son; but not an Iota of Glory.

2. Reason. Because if he be not glorified as God, he is dishonoured; if respect be given to a man, but not such as his place requires, he thinks himself slighted; to honour a King as a Justice of Peace, were to dishonour him. For Honour lies in a proportion, a suitableness, a comeliness, as Beauty, &c. doth. And therefore in that forenamed place, (Mal. 1.) when they served him thus below his worth, he says, they despised his Name, v. 6. and made his Table contemptible, (v. 7.)

3. Reason. If we glorifie not God as God, it is not Godliness, but Bodily Exercise, or Selfness, Natural Devotion, Hypocrisie; For Godliness is that which exalts God as God. Thence it hath its Name and Denomination, which applies it self to God and all his Attributes, as becomes the Creature

ture to do. That is, Godliness if it be allayed with any thing that makes God less than a God to a mans Heart, it is debased, and is not Godliness. As in Justification, if we leave never so little to Works, it is not Faith: For then the Grace we relied on, is no more Grace (as the Apostle says:) So in Sanctification, if we bow and bend our Religion to any lower Principles than what exalt God wholly as God, it is no longer Godliness.

U S E. You have heard one of the truest and exactest Tryals of your Grace and Religion. And that is, whether you glorifie God as a God. It holds univerversally true, That all mens Religion, and the God they serve, are proportioned the one to the other. The Religion the Word requires, sets up our God as God. And so do all they, in whose Hearts the Law is written, and who have Faith. To know God as God, is indeed revealed in his Word; (so you have it Jer. 31. 33, 34.) and the taking in of God by Faith, under the true and real Notion of him, moulds all in a man to glorifie him according as he is apprehended; and as men fall short of Honour in their apprehensions, thro' unbelief, of this God, accordingly do they fall short in that Service and Devotion they honour him with. And it is as certain that all carnal men in the World do, thro' Atheism and Unbelief, take into their Hearts a false God, or false apprehensions of the true God. That he is not to them as God, and so accordingly they worship him. The Jews, who had the same revelation of God in his Word as we have, yet still, thro' Atheism, they took in such low apprehensions of him, as they mistook the way of serving him. They glorified him not as God. When Joshua (Chap. 24.) pressed them to serve the Lord and fear him, they thought with themselves that they would, and hoped to please him too, and far be it from us, (say they) to forsake him, v. 16, 17, 18. But Joshua tells them, v. 19. they were mistaken in him; if you knew what a God he is, (saith he) you would see that this service you think to please him with, would not be sufficient. Ye cannot serve the Lord, for he is an holy God; and so requires to be worshipp'd not outwardly; or formally; but to be made your End, your Guide, and to have all within you subject to him, according to all his glorious Attributes and such service your carnal Hearts can never perform unto him. The like Instance you have, Psal. 50. A Formalist there, thought to serve him full well with Sacrifices, with the Blood of Bulls and Goats whereas he took liberty to live in known Sins. What was the reason? He thought God would be pleased with such a Form of Religion. It all arose from Mistakes of God, v. 21. Thou didst think (says God) that I was like Thee. His Heart, thro' Atheism, framed a God to his own frame of Spirit, one that was of his Mind, and his Religion. And as David was a man after Gods own Heart, so they make a God after their Hearts. They so temper their Thoughts of him, and his Mercy, Justice, Holiness, &c. in such a sense and interpretation as may stand with their ways and courses, and which doth indeed make him no God, or not as that God the Word sets him out. What is the reason that men living in the Church, and hearing all the Glory of the Great God set forth, yet worship this God with no more devotion in their Hearts, nor obedience in their Lives, than the Turks worship Mahomet with, and the Heathens did their Gods with? It is because they, in the interpretations their Atheism puts upon all is said of him make him but as one of their Gods. And not only they; but those who are most enlightned (if not with a saving Light) as their apprehensions of God falls short, so the Principles which they walk by (what ever they may profess) in the course of their Lives to serve this God with, fall short also: Their conceits of him and about him, are tempered so as to make him approving their ways, tho' in all the obedience they perform'd to him, they seek themselves, and make themselves their end; and so bow God to their Ends, and make a Bridge of him, and go about but to serve their Turns of him; which did they Spiritually conceive how Holy a God he is, they durst not make bold to do; but would seek Salvation from him, as aiming at him in all, and submitting themselves, their own ends and Salvation tion to him. Men do with God, as the Venetians do with their Duke; they set him up in all matters of State-Attendance, as a Sovereign Prince, but level his power so low, that he is no more than an ordinary Senator, for in the carriage of Affairs of State, when any thing comes to be done, they over-rule him, bow him to their suffrages, contradict his Will, and yet all the Conclusions made, go forth in his Name, as if he were a Sovereign Prince. Thus do Men give unto God all Titles of Respect, acknowledge him in all his Glorious Attributes to be as great a God as he proclaims himself in his Word; yet in the secret Senate-House of the Understanding, Will, &c. where all actions are concluded, consulted on, and published they Un-God him again, walk by such principles therein, as take all away again from him, setting up themselves in his room, making themselves their end, yea, carry things against him; and yet when any good is done, they cry still as they, Isa. 66. 5. Let God be Glorified, when yet they cast out the Saints for his Names sake, as there it is said. Men haply will shew as much respect to God as they would do to a Man like themselves, whom they Reverence, or conceive thus or thus well of; but we are to Glorifie him as a God, as he shews himself as God, and more than Man in his Dis-pensations towards us; which are such as none but a God so Great, so Merciful, &c. would continue to dispence, to forbear us so as he does, as Hos. 11. 9. I will not execute the fierceness of my Wrath, for I am God, and not Man. So must we respect him as God, and not as we would a Man only endued with such perfections.

If we trust him, we must trust him as God, and not so far as we would a Faithful Man only, though never so honest; put our Souls Salvation, Obedience and all into his hands. For Grace is his Faithfulness. We must so submit to him as to suffer him to alter all a Mans ways and thoughts, and overturn all his Spirits in Obedience and dependance on him.

When we come for Pardon to him, seeing the greatness and Multitudes of our Sins he must think higher thoughts of Pardoning to be in him, than in a Man. My thoughts are as far above them, says God, Isa. 55. (he speaks of Pardoning) as the Heavens are above the Earth, for I will multiply to Pardon or as we read it, I am the great Pardoner.

If any Business be to be done, any Deliverance be to be wrought, let us trust his Power, beyond that of second causes, trust him as a God that can do whatever he will on the Earth and in the Sea, and not limit the Holy One, as the People of Israel did, when they said, can he provide a Table in the Wilderness to provide for so great a Multitude?

If we love him, let us love him as God; for as Christ saies, He that hates not Father and Mother for my sake, is not worthy of me.

If we Fear him, let us Fear him more than man, never so great or powerful; as Moses did, in whose Eyes, the Wrath of Pharaoh was but, in comparison of God, as a Rod of Straws in the hand of a Child, to a Rod of Iron in the hands of a Giant; who hath known the power of his Wrath? Says Moses, Psal. 90. As is our fear, so great is thy Displeasure, and greater. Fear not them, says Christ, that can but Kill the Body, but him that can cast Body and Soul into Hell: Who art thou, that thou shouldst be afraid of a Man that shall dye, and forgettest the Lord thy Maker, that hath stretched forth the Heaven? Isa. 51.

So if we know his Holiness and Sovereignty, we would submit to him, more than to any Man; in all Afflictions, in all our dependances upon his pleasure, yea, in the matter of Salvation it self.

We should also Live to him, so as we do to no one else; turn all our causes for him, take all our Hearts and Ends in pieces, and mould them all to him.

To Conclude, this is certain, That all the principles we take up to serve God by, and which we walk by (if our Hearts be right) are such and so framed, as to set God up as God, or all is naught; we should put an estimate upon sin, by his Greatness we sin against, and should say and hold to the Conclusion which Joseph did, How shall I do this, and

Book 10 sin against God? We should not slight him in the least, or think any Fear or Care herein, too much strictness for him: Nor would Men sin in Private if Men thought him Omniscient, nor would our Consciences be content with Obedience, without making God our chiefest end, if we know him in his Holiness, which makes him exact all from the Creature for himself, and justly too, seeing he is their Maker and End: Nor would Men rest in Duties of his Worship, without Communion apprehended or sought for, with him above all. If they made him their chiefest good in Worshipping him, men would Worship him only according to his own Will and Word, and not teach his fear by the principles of Men, as Mark 7. 7, 8, 9. for can Men tell what will please the great God? The Heathens thought that their Gods were to be Worshipped according to their own Prescriptions: So those that were placed in the room of the Ten Tribes, (2 Kings 17. 26.) thought that they must Worship the God of the Land after his own manner, they should not make a God of him else. So v. 27. the King of Assyria said, let them take a Priest, to go and dwell there, and teach them the manner of the God of the Land. and v. 28. he taught them how they should fear the Lord. And as for matter, so for manner; Men would Worship him in Spirit, if they knew him to be a Spirit, as Christ says, and would bring living Sacrifices, not dead formal performances if they knew him the living God. There are Three Cautions I will add, to explain my meaning in this point.

1. When I say, The Glory due to God is to be given him, the meaning is not, that which is simply due to so great a Majesty; that no Creature can give him; but such as in your condition, Creatures Sanctified, can return to him.

2. That in the Best, there is an Unregenerate part which is a very Atheist, and doth say, there is no God, but denies all of him, as Unregenerate Men do; for which, Men judging their Estates, must give allowance, yet so as there is a Regenerate whole Man in them, that sets God up as God. Thus,

3. This setting God thus up as God, is best discerned by those principles which we habitually have taken up to our selves to live by, which we will not leave but stick unto, which lye in the Heart continually drawing up the whole Man to them, moulding all according to them, and of which when we fall short through the Atheism of the Unregenerate part, we judge our selves. Now if so, then still God is then set and acknowledged as God, either when we keep to them, or when we fall short; when we pass sentence on all that pass, according to such Laws as stand in force, enacted in our Hearts.

CHAP. VII.

That one eminent Disposition immediately flowing from the New Creature, is a desire to Convert, and beget others to God.

PSAL. LVI. 13.

Then wilt I teach Transgressours thy ways, and Sinners shall be Converted unto thee.

IN this Psalm you have the lively workings and beatings of an Holy Heart, recovering from a great fall and lapse into gross Sins. Which is also a renewed draught, or going over again of the first work of Con-

Conversion of the Soul unto God. And you have them as lively represented, as if you should behold an Animal, or living Beast, cut up and dissected alive, and therein see the Circulation of the Blood, the beatings and pantings of the Heart, the motion of the Pulse, &c. As First, How deeply he humbleth himself for his Sin actual, v. 4. and original, v. 5. Secondly, Seeketh Pardon and Justification, as under the Types of the old Law it was signified, which David full well understood; Purge me with Hyssop, and I shall be clean; Wash me, and I shall be whiter than Snow. Thirdly, You have him seeking the assurance and joy of this to his own Soul, and the shining of Gods Countenance (now eclipsed) again, v. 8, 9. The Prophet, as the story shews, had told him infallibly, that his Sin was pardoned; and he believed it, but yet that satisfied him not. His Spirit had been used to anothers Voice, even of the Spirit of God speaking peace in his own Soul immediately. And I would hear God speaking it, (says he.) The Ingenuity of his Heart could not bear, that God should be strange to him, though he knew his Sin was Pardoned, v. 9. Fourthly, He seeks both, 1. For the renewal of that inward Principle of Grace and Holiness in the Heart, v. 10. Create in me a clean Heart, O God, and renew a right Spirit within me. 2. The continuance of the Holy Ghost's dwelling in him as the Fountain, and Author, and Actor of all Grace, and Giver of all Joy, v. 11. And this I observe, He frames not the matter of his Petition into a positive Request, as in all the other, as Give me thy Holy Spirit; but Negative, Take not, &c. Cast me not, &c. The cause of which was, 1. He had seen by woful experience, that God had taken his Spirit away from his Predecessor Saul, for smaller sins, 1 Sam. 15. 23, 26. Chap. 16. 14. Chap. 18. 12. And 2. He shews what of all else would be most dreadful to befall him, either to be cast forth of Gods presence, and God and he part; or that God should call back his Holy Spirit, as he had done from Saul.

The rest of the Psalms from the 13th verse, is most spent in Holy Resolutions and Vows, of what he would do for the future, if God would thus restore and equip him again: Which to do, is the manner and duty of Sinners turning, or returning unto God.

As 1. He would teach Sinners the ways of God, in order and aim at their Conversion.

2. He makes Returns of High Praise, and Loud Thanksgivings and Celebrations of Gods Mercy, verse 14, 15. Deliver me from Blood guiltiness, O God, thou God of my Salvation, and my Tongue shall Sing aloud of thy Righteousness. O Lord open thou my Lips, and my Mouth shall shew forth thy Praise.
