TO THE

Moſt HIGH and MIGHTY PRINCE,

CHARLES

By the Grace of GOD,

KING of Great-Britain, France, and Ireland,

Defender of the Faith, &c.

May it pleaſe your moſt Excellent Majeſty,

Preſent, with all humility, to Your moſt Sacred Hands, a Defence of that Cauſe which is and ought to be infinitely dearer to You than all the World: Not doubting but upon this Dedication I ſhall be cenſured for a double boldneſs; both for undertaking ſo great a Work, ſo far beyond my weak abilities; and again, for preſenting it to ſuch a Patron, whoſe judgment I ought to fear more than any Adverſary. But for the firſt, it is a ſatisfaction to my ſelf, and may be to others, that I was not drawn to it out of any vain opinion of my ſelf, (whoſe perſonal defects are the only thing which I preſume to know) but undertook it in obedience to Him who ſaid, Tu converſus confirma fratres, not to St. Peter only, but to all men: being encouraged alſo to it by the goodneſs of the Cauſe, which is able to make a weak man ſtrong. To the belief hereof I was not led partially, or by chance, as many are, by the prejudice and prepoſſeſſion of their Country, Education, and ſuch like inducements; which if they lead to Truth in one place, perhaps lead to Error in a hundred; but having with the greateſt equality and indifferency, made enquiry and grounds on both Sides, I was willing to impart to others, that ſatisfaction which was given to my ſelf. For my inſcribing to it Your Majeſties Sacred Name, I ſhould labour much in my excuſe of it from high preſumption, had it not ſome appearance of Title to Your Majeſties Patronage and protection, as being a defence of that Book, which by ſpecial Order from Your Majeſty was written ſome years ſince, chiefly for the general good, but peradventure not without ſome aim at the recovery of One of your meaneſt Subjects from dangerous deviation; and ſo due unto Your Majeſty, as the fruit of Your own High Humility and moſt Royal Charity. Beſides, it is in a manner nothing elſe, but a purſuance of, and a ſuperſtruction upon that bleſſed Doctrine, wherewith I have adorned and armed the Frontiſpiece of my Book, which was ſo earneſtly recommended to Your Royal Father of happy memory, to all the lovers of Truth and Peace; that is, to all that were like Himſelf, as the only hopeful means of healing the Breaches of Chriſtendom, whereof the Enemy of Souls makes ſuch peſtilent advantage. The luſtre of this bleſſed Doctrine I have endeavoured to uncloud and unvail, and to free it from thoſe miſts and fumes which have been raiſed to obſcure it, by one of that Order, which envenoms even Poyſon it ſelf, and makes the Roman Religion much more malignant and turbulent than otherwiſe it would be: whoſe very Rule and Doctrine, obliges them to make all men, as much as lies in them, Subjects unto Kings, and Servants unto Chriſt, no farther than it ſhall pleaſe the Pope. So that whether Your Majeſty be conſidered, either as a Pious a Pious Son towards Your Royal Father King James, or as a tender-hearted and compaſſionate Son towards Your diſtreſſed Mother, the Catholick Church, or as a King of Your Subjects, or as a Servant unto Chriſt, this Work, (to which I can give no other commendation, but that it was intended to do you ſervice in all theſe capacities) may pretend, not unreaſonably, to Your Gracious acceptance. Laſtly, being a defence of that whole Church and Religion You profeſs, it could not be ſo proper to any Patron as to the great Defendor of it; which Style Your Majeſty hath ever ſo exactly made good, both in ſecuring it from all dangers, and in vindicating it (by the well ordering and rectifying this Church) from all the foul aſperſions both of Domeſtick and Forein Enemies, of which they can have no ground, but their own want of Judgment, or want of Charity. But it is an Argument of a deſpairing and loſt cauſe to ſupport it ſelf with theſe impetuous out-cries and clamours, the faint refuges of thoſe that want better Arguments; like that Stoick in Lucian, that cried ὦ κατάρατε! O damned Villain! when he could ſay nothing elſe. Neither is it credible the wiſer ſort of them ſhould believe this their own horrid Aſſertion, That a God of goodneſs ſhould damn to Eternal Torments, thoſe that love him and love Truth, for Errors which they fall into through Humane Frailty! But this they muſt ſay, otherwiſe their only great Argument from their damning us, and our not being ſo peremptory in damning them, becauſe we hope unaffected Ignorance may excuſe them, would be loſt: And therefore they are engaged to act on this Tragical part, only to fright the Simple and Ignorant, as we do little Children, by telling them that bites, which we would not have them meddle with. And truly that herein they do but act a part, and know themſelves to do ſo, and deal with us here, as they do with the King of Spain at Rome, whom they accurſe and Excommunicate for faſhion ſake on Maundy-Thurſday, for detaining part of St. Peters Patrimony, and abſolve him without ſatisfaction on Good-Friday; methinks their faltring and inconſtancy herein, makes it very apparent: For though for the moſt part, they ſpeak nothing but Thunder and Lightning to us, and damn us all without mercy or exception; yet ſometimes to ſerve other purpoſes, they can be content to ſpeak to us in a milder ſtrain, and tell us, as my Adverſary does more than once, That they allow Proteſtants as much Charity as Proteſtants allow them. Neither is this the only contradiction which I have diſcovered in this uncharitable Work; but have ſhewed that by forgetting himſelf, and retracting moſt of the principal grounds he builds upon, he hath ſaved me the labour of a Confutation: which yet I have not in any place found any ſuch labour or difficulty, but that it was undertakable by a man of very mean, that is, of my Abilities. And the reaſon is, becauſe it is Truth I plead for; which is ſo ſtrong an Argument for it ſelf, that it needs only light to diſcover it; whereas it concerns Falſhood and Error to uſe diſguiſes and ſhadowings, and all the fetches of Art and Sophiſtry; and therefore it ſtands in need of abler men, to give that a colour at leaſt, which hath no real body to ſubſiſt by. If my endeavours in this kind may contribute any thing to this diſcovery, and the making plain that Truth (which my Charity perſuades me the moſt part part of them diſaffect, only becauſe it hath not been well repreſented to them) I have the fruit of my labour, and my wiſh, who deſire to live to no other end, than to do ſervice to Gods Church, and Your moſt Sacred Majeſty, in the quality of

Your MAJESTIES

Moſt faithful Subject, and moſt humble

William Chillingworth.

To the AUTHOR of

WITH

An Answer to his Pamphlet, Entituled, A Direction to N. N.

SIR,

UPon the first news of the publication of your Book, I used all diligence, with speed to procure it; and came with such a mind to the reading of it, as St. Austin, before he was a setled Catholick, brought to his Conference with Faustus the Manichee. For, as he thought that if any thing more than ordinary might be said in defence of the Manichean Doctrine, Faustus was the man from whom it was to be expected: So my persuasion concerning you was, —Si Pergama dextrâ Defendi possunt, certè hac defensa videbo. For I conceived that among the Champions of the Roman Church, the English in reason must be the best, or equal to the best, as being by most expert Masters trained up purposely for this War, and perpetually practised in it. Among the English, I saw the Jesuites would yield the first place to none; and men so wise in their generation as the Jesuits were, if they had any Achilles among them, I presumed, would make choice of him for this service. And besides, I had good assurance, that in the framing of this building, though you were the only Architect, yet you wanted not the assistance of many diligent hands to bring you in choice materials towards it; nor of many careful and watchful eyes, to correct the errors of your Work, if any should chance to escape you. Great reason therefore had I to expect great matters from you, and that your Book should have in it the Spirit and Elixir of all that can be said in defence of your Church and Doctrine; and to assure my self, that if my resolution not to believe it, were not built upon the Rock of evident grounds and reasons, but only upon some sandy and deceitful appearances, now the wind and storm and floods were coming, which would undoubtedly overthrow it.

2. Neither truly were you more willing to effect such an alteration in me, than I was to have it effected. For my desire is to go the right way to eternal happiness. But whether this way lie on the right hand or the left, or straight forwards; whether it be by following a living Guide, or by seeking my direction in a Book, or by hearkning to the secret whisper of some private Spirit, to me it is indifferent. And he that is otherwise affected, and hath not a travellers indifference, which Boëtius requires in all that would find the truth, but much desires in respect of his ease, or pleasure, or profit, or advancement, or satisfaction of friends, or any humane consideration, that one way should be true rather than another; it is odds but he will take his desire that it should be so, for an assurance that it is so. But, I for my part, unless I deceive my self, was, and still am so affected, as I have made profession, not willing I confess to take any thing upon trust, and to believe it without asking my self why; no, nor able to command my self (were I never so willing) to follow, like a sheep, every Shepherd that should take upon him to guide me; or every flock that should chance to go before me: but most apt and most willing to be led by reason to any way, or from it, and always submitting all other reasons to this one, God hath said so, therefore it is true. Nor yet was I so unreasonable as to expect Mathematical demonstrations from you in matters plainly incapable of them, such as are to be believed, and, if we speak properly, cannot be known; such therefore I expected not. For, as he is an unreasonable Master, who requires a stronger assent to his Conclusions than his Arguments deserve; so I conceive him a froward and undisciplin'd Scholar, who desires stronger arguments for a conclusion than the Matter will bear. But, had you represented to my understanding such reasons of your Doctrine, as, being weighed in an even ballance, held by an even hand, with those on the other side, would have turned the Scale, and have made your Religion more credible than the contrary; certainly, I should have despised the shame of one more alteration, and with both mine arms and all my heart most readily have embraced it. Such was my expectation from you, and such my preparation, which I brought with me to the reading of your Book.

3. Would you know now what the event was, what effect was wrought in me, by the perusal and consideration of it? To deal truly and ingenuously with you, I fell somewhat in my good opinion both of your sufficiency and sincerity: but was exceedingly confirmed in my ill opinion of the Cause maintained by you. I found every where Snares that might entrap, and colours that might deceive the simple; but nothing that might perswade, and very little that might move an understanding man, and one that can discern between Discourse and Sophistry. In short, I was verily perswaded that I plainly saw and could make it appear, to all dis-passionate and unprejudicate Judges, that a vein of sophistry and calumny did run clean thorow it from the beginning to the end. And letting some Friends understand so much, I suffered my self to be perswaded by them, that it would not be either unproper for me, nor unacceptable to God, nor peradventure altogether unserviceable to his Church, nor justly offensive to you (if you indeed were a lover of Truth, and not a maintainer of a Faction,) if setting aside the Second Part, which was in a manner wholly employed in particular disputes, repetitions and references, and in wranglings with D. Potter about the sense of some supernumerary quotations, and whereon the main question no way depends, I would make a fair and ingenuous answer to the First, wherein the substance of the present Controversie is confessedly contained; and which, if it were clearly answered, no man would desire any other answer to the Second. This therefore I undertook with a full resolution to be an adversary to your Errors, but a Friend and Servant to your Person: and so much the more a friend to your person, by how much the severer and more rigid adversary I was to your Errors.

4. In this Work my conscience bears me witness that I have, according to your advice, proceeded always with this consideration, that I am to give a most strict account of every line, and word, that passeth under my Pen: and therefore have been precisely careful for the matter of my Book to defend truth only, and only by Truth. And then, scrupulously fearful of scandalizing you or any man with the manner of handling it. From this Rule, sure I am, I have not willingly swerved in either part of it; and, that I might not do it ignorantly, I have not only my self examined mine own Work, (perhaps with more severity than I have done yours, as conceiving it a base and unchristian thing to go about to satisfie others with what I my self am not fully satisfied;) but have also made it pass the fiery trial of the exact censures of many understanding Judges, always heartily wishing that you your Self had been of the Quorum. But they who did undergo this burthen, as they wanted not sufficiency to discover any heterodox Doctrine, so I am sure, they have been very careful to let nothing slip dissonant from truth or from the authorized Doctine of the Church of England: and therefore whatsoever causeless or groundless jealousie, any man may entertain concerning my Person, yet my Book, I presume, in reason and common equity should be free from them; wherein I hope, that little or nothing hath escaped so many eyes, which being weighed in the balance of the Sanctuary, will be found too light. And in this hope hope I am much confirmed, by your strange carriage of your self in this whole business. For though by some crooked and sinister Arts, you have got my Answer into your hands, now a year since and upwards, as I have been assured by some that profess to know it, and those of your own party; though you could not want every day fair opportunities of sending to me, and acquainting me with any Exceptions, which, you conceived, might be justly taken to it, or any part of it (than which nothing could have been more welcome to me) yet hitherto you have not been pleased to acquaint me with any one. Nay more, though you have been at sundry times, and by several ways, entreated and sollicited, nay, pressed and importuned by me, to joyn with me in a private discussion of the Controversie between us, before the publication of my Answer, (because I was extremely unwilling to publish any thing which had not passed all manner of tryals, as desiring not that I, or my Side, but that Truth might overcome on which Side soever it was;) though I have protested to you, and sent it under my hand, (which Protestation by Gods help I would have made good) if you, or any other would undertake your Cause, would give me a fair meeting, and chuse out of your whole Book any one argument, whereof you were most confident, and by which you would be content the rest should be judged of, and make it appear that I had not, or could not answer it, that I would desist from the work which I had undertaken, and answer none at all; though by all the Arts which possibly I could devise, I have provoked you to such a trial, in particular by assuring you that if you refused it, the World should be informed of your tergiversation: notwithstanding all this, you have perpetually, and obstinately declined it; which to my understanding is a very evident sign that there is not any truth in your Cause, nor (which is impossible there should be) strength in your Arguments, especially considering what our Saviour hath told us, Every one that doth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved; but he that doth truth, cometh to the light that his deeds may be made manifest that they are wrought in God.

5. In the mean while though you despaired of compassing your desire this honest way; yet you have not omitted to tempt me, by base and unworthy considerations, to desert the Cause which I had undertaken; letting me understand from you, by an Acquaintance common to us both, how that in case my Work should come to light, my inconstancy in Religion (so you miscall my constancy in following that way to heaven which for the present seems to me the most probable) should be to my great shame painted to the life; that my own Writings should be produced against my self; that I should be urged to answer my own Motives against Protestantism, and that such things should be published to the World touching my belief, (for my Painter I must expect should have great skill in Perspective) of the Doctrine of the Trinity, the Deity of our Saviour, and all supernatural Verities, as should endanger all my Benefices present or future: that this warning was given me, not out of fear of what I could say (for that Catholicks if they might wish any ill would beg the Publication of my Book, for respects obvious enough,) but out of a meer charitable desire of my good and reputation: and that all this was said upon a supposition that I was answering, or had a mind to answer Charity Maintained; If not, no harm was done. To which courteous Premonition, as I remember, I desired the Gentleman, who dealt between us, to return this Answer, or to this effect; That I believed the Doctrine of the Trinity, the Deity of our Saviour, and all other supernatural Verities revealed in Scripture, as truly and as heartily as your self, or any man, and therefore herein your Charity was very much mistaken; but much more and more uncharitably in conceiving me a man that was to be wrought upon with these Terribiles visu formæ, those carnal and base fears which you presented to me, which were very proper motives for the Devil and his instruments to tempt poor-spirited men out of the way of conscience and honesty, but very incongruous, either for Teachers of Truth to make use of, or for Lovers of Truth (in which Company I had been long agon matriculated) to harken to, with any regard. But if you were indeed desirous that I should not answer Charity Maintain'd, one way there was, and but one, whereby you might obtain your desire; and that was, by letting me know, when and where I might attend you, and by a fair conference, to be written down on both sides, convincing mine understanding (who was resolved not to be a Recusant if I were convicted,) that any one part of it, any one Argument in it, which was of moment and consequence, and whereon the cause depends, was indeed unanswerable. This was the effect of my Answer, which I am well assured was delivered: but Reply from you I received none but this, That you would have no conference with me but in Print; and soon after finding me of proof against all these batteries, and thereby (I fear) very much enraged, you took up the resolution of the furious Goddess in the Poet, madded with the unsuccessfulness of her malice, Flectere si nequeo superos, Acheronta movebo!

6. For certainly, those indign contumelies, that mass of portentous and execrable calumnies, wherewith in your Pamphlet of Directions to N. N. you have loaded not only my Person in particular, but all the learned and moderate Divines of the Church of England, and all Protestants in general, may, all wise men of all Religions but your own, could not proceed from any other fountain.

7. To begin with the last; You stick not in the beginning of your first Chapter, to fasten the imputation of Atheism and Irreligion upon all wise and gallant men, that are not of your own Religion. In which uncharitable and unchristian judgment, void of all colour or shadow of probability, I know yet by experience, that very many of the Bigots of your Faction, are partakers with you. God forbid I should think the like of you! Yet, if I should say, that in your Religion there want not some temptations unto, and some Principles of Irreligion and Atheism; I am sure I could make my Assertion much more probable than you have done, or can make this horrible imputation.

8. For to pass by, First, that which experience justifies, That where and when your Religion hath most absolutely commanded, there and then Atheism hath most abounded: To say nothing, Secondly, of your notorious and confessed forging of so many false Miracles, and so many lying Legends, which is not unlikely to make suspicious men to question the truth of all: Nor to object to you, Thirdly, the abundance of your weak and silly Ceremonies, and ridiculous observances in your Religion; which, in all probability, cannot but beget secret contempt and scorn of it, in wise and considering men; and, consequently, Atheism and Impiety, if they have this persuasion setled in them (which is too rife among you, and which you account a piece of Wisdom and Gallantry) that if they be not of your Religion, they were as good be of none at all: Nor to trouble you, Fourthly, with this, that a great part of your Doctrine, especially in the points contested, makes apparently for the temporal ends of the Teachers of it; which yet, I fear, is a great scandal to many Beaux Esprits among you: Only I should desire you to consider attentively, when you conclude so often from the Differences of Protestants, that they have no certainty of any part of their Religion, no not of those points wherein they agree, Whether you do not that which so Magisterially you direct me not to do, that is, proceed a destructive way, and object arguments against your Adversaries, which tend to the overthrow of all Religion? And whether, as you argue thus, Protestants differ in many things, therefore they have no certainty of any thing: So, an Atheist or a Sceptique may not conclude as well, Christians and the Professors of all Religions differ in many things, therefore they have no certainty in any thing? Again, I should desire you to tell me ingenuously, Whether it be not too probable that your portentous Doctrine of Transubstantiation joyned with your fore-mentioned persuasion of, No Papists no Christians, hath brought a great many others, as well as himself, to Averroes his resolution, Quandoquidem Christiani adorant quod comedunt, sit anima mea cum Philosophis? Whether your requiring men upon only probable and prudential Motives, to yield a most certain assent unto things in humane reason impossible; and telling them, as you do too often, that they were as good not believe at all, as believe with any lower degree of faith; be not a likely way to make considering men scorn your Religion, (and consequently all, if they know no other) as requiring things contradictory, and impossible to be performed? Lastly, Whether your pretence that there is no good ground to believe Scripture, but your Churches infallibility, joyned with your pretending no ground for this but some Texts of Scripture, be not a fair way to make them that understand themselves, believe neither Church nor Scripture?

9. Your calumnies against Protestants in general, are set down in these words, Chap. 2. §. 2. The very Doctrine of Protestants if it be followed closely, and with coherence to it self, must of necessity induce Socinianism. This I say confidently, and evidently prove, by instancing in one error which may well be termed the Capital, and mother-Heresie, from which all other must follow at ease; I mean, their Heresie in affirming, That the perpetual visible Church of Christ, descended by a never interrupted succession from our Saviour, to this day, is not infallible in all that it proposeth to be believed, as revealed truths. For if the infallibility of such a publique Authority be once impeached; what remains, but that every man is given over to his own wit, and discourse? And talk not here of Holy Scripture. For if the true Church may err, in defining what Scriptures be Canonical; or in' delivering the sense and meaning thereof; we are still devolved, either upon the private spirit, (a foolery now exploded out of England, which finally leaving every man to his own conceits, ends in Socinianism;) or else upon natural wit, and judgment, for examining and determining, what Scriptures contain true or false Doctrine, and in that respect, ought to be received, or rejected. And indeed, take away the authority of God's Church, no man can be assured, that any one Book, or parcel of Scripture, was written by divine inspiration: or that all the contents, are infallibly true; which are the direct errors of Socinians. If it were but for this reason alone, no man, who regards the eternal salvation of his soul, would live or die in Protestancy from which so vast absurdities as these of the Socinians must inevitably follow. And it ought to be an unspeakable comfort to all us Catholicks, while we consider, that none can deny the infallible authority of our Church, but joyntly he must be left to his own wit and ways; and must abandon all infused faith, and true Religion, if he do but understand himself aright. In all which discourse, the only true word you speak is, This I say confidently. As for proving evidently, that I believe you reserved for some other opportunity: for the present I am sure you have been very sparing of it.

10. you say, indeed confidently enough, that The denial of the Churches infallibility is the Mother-Heresie, from which all other must follow at ease: Which is so far from being a necessary truth, as you make it, that it is indeed a manifest falshood. Neither is it possible for the wit of man, by any good, or so much as probable consequence, from the denial of the Churches Infallibility to deduce any one of the ancient Heresies, or any one error of the Socinians, which are the Heresies here entreated of. For who would not laugh at him that should argue thus; Neither the Church of Rome, nor any other Church is infallible, Ergo, The Doctrine of Arrius, Pelagius, Eutyches, Nestorius, Photinus, Manicheus, was true Doctrine? On the other side, it may be truly said, and justified by very good and effectual reason, that he that affirms, with you, the Pope's infallibility, puts himself into his hands and power, to be led by him at his ease and pleasure into all Heresie, and even to Hell it self; and cannot with reason say (so long as he is constant to his grounds) Domine, cur ita facis? but must believe white to be black, and black to be white; vertue to be vice, and vice to be vertue; nay (which is a horrible, but a most certain truth) Christ to be Antichrist, and Antichrist to be Christ, if it be possible for the Pope to say so: Which, I say, and will maintain, howsoever you daub and disguise it, is indeed to make men Apostate from Christ to his pretended Vicar, but real Enemy. For that name and no better

(if we may speak truth without offence) I presume He deserves, who under pretence interpreting the Law of Christ (which Authority without any word of express warrant he hath taken upon himself,) doth in many parts evacuate and dissolve it: So dethroning Christ from his dominion over mens consciences, and instead of Christ, setting up Himself; Inasmuch as he that requires that his interpretations of any Law should be obeyed as true and genuine, seem they to mens understandings never so dissonant and discordant from it, (as the Bishop of Rome does,) requires indeed that his interpretations should be the Laws; and he that is firmly prepared in mind to believe and receive all such interpretations without judging of them, and though to his private judgment they seem unreasonable, is indeed congruously disposed to hold Adultery a venial sin, and Fornication no sin, whensoever the Pope and his Adherents shall so declare. And whatsoever he may plead, yet either wittingly or ignorantly, he makes the Law and the Law-maker both stales, and obeys only the Interpreter. As if I should pretend that I should submit to the Laws of the King of England, but should indeed resolve to obey them in that sense which the King of France should put upon them, whatsoever it were; I presume every understanding man would say, that I did indeed obey the King of France, and not the King of England. If I should pretend to believe the Bible, but that I would understand it according to the sense which the chief Musty should put upon it, Who would not say that I were a Christian in pretence only, but indeed a Mahumetan?

11. Nor will it be to purpose for you to pretend that the Precepts of Christ are so plain that it cannot be feared that any Pope should ever go about to dissolve them, and pretend to be a Christian: For, not to say that you now pretend the contrary, (to wit,) that the Law of Christ is obscure even in things necessary to be believed and done, and by saying so, have made a fair way for any foul interpretation of any part of it: certainly that which the Church of Rome hath already done in this kind, is an evident Argument, that (if she once had this power unquestioned, and made expedite and ready for use, by being contracted to the Pope) she may do what she pleaseth with it. Who that had lived in the Primitive Church, would not have thought it as utterly improbable, that ever they should have brought in the worship of Images, and picturing of God as now it is, that they should legitimate Fornication? Why may we not think, they may in time take away the whole Communion from the Laity, as well as they have taken away half of it? Why may we not think that any Text and any Sense may not be accorded, as well as the whole 14 Ch. of the 1 Ep. of S. Paul to the Corinth. is reconciled to the Latine-Service? How is it possible any thing should be plainer forbidden, than the worship of Angels, in the Epist. to the Colossians? than the teaching for Doctrines mens commands in the Gospel of St. Mark? And therefore seeing we see these things done, which hardly any man would have believed, that had not seen them, Why should we not fear that this unlimited power may not be used hereafter with as little moderation? Seeing devices have been invented how men may worship Images without Idolatry, and kill innocent men, under pretence of Heresie, without murder; Who knows that some tricks may not be hereafter devised, by which, Lying with other mens Wives shall be no Adultery, taking away other mens goods no Theft? I conclude therefore, That if Solomon himself were here, and were to determine the difference, Which is more likely to be mother of all Heresie, The denial of the Churches, or the affirming of the Popes infallibility; that he would certainly say, This is the mother, give her the Child.

12. You say again confidently, That if this Infallibility be once impeached, every man is given over to his own wit and discourse: which, if you mean discourse, not guiding it self by Scripture, but only by Principles of nature, or perhaps by prejudices and Popular Errors, and drawing Consequences, not by Rule, but Chance, is by no means true; if you mean, by Discourse, right Reason, grounded on Divine Revelation and common Notions, written by God in the hearts of all men; men; and deducing, according to the never failing rules of Logick, consequent deductions from them: If this be it which you mean by discourse, it is very meet, and reasonable, and necessary that men, as in all their actions, so especially in that of greatest importance, the choice of their way to happiness, should be left unto it: and he that follows this in all his opinions and actions, and does not only seem to do so, follows always God; whereas he that followeth a Company of men, may oft-times follow a company of beasts, And in saying this, I say no more than St. John to all Christians in these words, Dearly beloved, believe not every spirit; but try the spirits, whether they be of God, or no: and the rule he gives them to make this trial by, is, to consider, Whether they confess Jesus to be Christ; that is, the Guide of their Faith, and Lord of their Action; not, whether they acknowledge the Pope to be his Vicar: I say no more than St. Paul, in exhorting all Christians, To try all things, and hold fast that which is good: than St. Peter in commanding all Christians, To be ready to give a reason of the hope that is in them: than our Saviour himself, in forewarning all his Followers, that if they blindly followed blind guides, both leaders and followers should fall into the ditch: and again, in saying even to the people, Yea, and why of your selves judge ye not what is right? And though by passion, or precipitation, or prejudice, by want of reason, or not using what they have, men may be, and are oftentimes, led into error and mischief; yet, that they cannot be misguided by Discourse, truly so called, such as I have described, you your self have given them security. For, what is Discourse, but drawing conclusions out of premises by good consequence? Now, the Principles which we have settled, to wit, the Scriptures, are on all sides agreed to be infallibly true. And you have told us in the fourth Chapter of this Pamphlet, That from truth no man can, by good consequence, infer falshood: Therefore, by Discourse, no man can possibly be led to Error: but if he err in his Conclusions, he must of necessity, either err in his Principles, (which here cannot have place) or commit some error in his Discourse; that is, indeed, not Discourse, but seem to do so.

13. You say, Thirdly, with sufficient confidence, That if the true Church may err in defining what Scriptures be Canonical, or in delivering the sense thereof, then we must follow either the private Spirit, or else natural wit and judgment; and by them examine what Scriptures contain true or false Doctrine, and in that respect ought to be received or rejected. All which is apparently untrue, neither can any proof of it be pretended. For though the present Church may possibly err in her judgment touching this matter, yet have we other directions in it, besides the private spirit, and the examination of the contents, (which latter way may conclude the Negative very strongly, to wit, that such or such a Book cannot come from God, because it contains irreconcileable Contradictions; but the Affirmative it cannot conclude, because the contents of a Book may be all true, and yet the Book not written by Divine inspiration:) other direction therefore I say we have, besides either of these three, and that is, the testimony of the Primitive Christians.

14. You say, Fourthly, with convenient boldness, That this infallible Authority of your Church being denied, no man can be assured, that any parcel of Scripture was written by Divine inspiration: which is an untruth, for which no proof is pretended; and besides, void of modesty, and full of impiety. The first, because the experience of innumerable Christians is against it, who are sufficiently assured, that the Scripture is divinely inspired, and yet deny the infallible authority of your Church, or any other. The second, because if I have not ground to be assured of the Divine authority of Scripture, unless I first believe your Church infallible, then I can have no ground at all to believe it: because there is no ground, nor can any be pretended, why I should believe your Church infallible, unless I first believe the Scripture Divine.

15. Fifthly and lastly, You say, with confidence in abundance, that none can deny deny the infallible authority of your Church, but he must abandon all infused faith and true religion, if he do but understand himself: Which is to say, agreeable to what you had said before, and what out of the abundance of your heart you speak very often, That all Christians besides you, are open Fools, or concealed Atheists. All this you say with notable confidence (as the manner of Sophisters is, to place their confidence of prevailing in their confident manner of speaking,) but then for the evidence you promised to maintain this confidence, that is quite vanished and become invisible.

16. Had I a mind to recriminate now, and to charge Papists (as you do Protestants) that they lead men to Socinianism, I could certainly make a much fairer shew of evidence than you have done. For I would not tell you, You deny the infallibility of the Church of England; ergo, you lead to Socinianism, which yet is altogether as good an Argument as this; Protestants deny the infallibility of the Roman Church; ergo, they induce Socinianism: Nor would I resume my former Argument, and urge you, that by holding the Popes infallibility, you submit your self to that Capital and Mother-Heresie, by advantage whereof, he may lead you at ease to believe vertue vice, and vice vertue; to believe Antichristianity Christianism, and Christianity Antichristian; he may lead you to Socinianism, to Turcism, nay, to be Devil himself if he have a mind to it: But I would shew you that divers ways the Doctors of your Church do the principal and proper work of the Socinians for them, undermining the Doctrine of the Trinity, by denying it to be supported by those Pillars of the Faith, which alone are fit and able to support it, I mean Scripture, and the Consent of the ancient Doctors.

17. For Scripture, your men deny very plainly and frequently, that this Doctrine can be proved by it. See, if you please, this plainly taught, and urged very earnestly by Cardinal Hosius, De Author. Sac. l. 3. p. 53. By Gordonius Huntæus. Tom. 1. Controv. 1. De verbo Dei C. 19. By Gretserus and Tannerus, in Colloquio Ratisbon. And also by Vega, Possevin, Wickus, and others.

18. And then for the consent of the Ancients; That that also delivers it not, by whom are we taught but by Papists only? Who is it that makes known to all the world, that Eusebius, that great Searcher and devourer of the Christian Libraries, was an Arrian? Is it not your great Achilles, Cardinal Perron, in his 3. Book 2. Chap. of his Reply to King James? Who is it that informs us that Origen (who never was questioned for any error in this matter, in or near his time) denied the Divinity of the Son and the Holy Ghost? Is it not the same great Cardinal, in his Book of the Eucharist against M. du Plessis l. 2. c. 7? Who is it that pretends that Irenæus hath said those things which he that should now hold, would be esteemed an Arrian? Is it not the same Perron, in his Reply to King James, in the fifth Chapter of his fourth Observation? And doth he not in the same place peach Tertullian also, and in a manner give him away to the Arrians? And pronounce generally of the Fathers before the Council of Nice, That the Arrians would gladly be tried by them? And are not your fellow-Jesuits also, even the prime men of your Order, prevaricators in this point as well as others? Doth not your Friend Mr. Fisher, or Mr. Floyd, in his Book of the Nine Questions proposed to him by King James, speak dangerously to the same purpose, in his discourse of the resolution of Faith, towards the end? Giving us to understand, That the new Reformed Arrians bring very many testimonies of the Ancient Fathers to prove that in this Point they did contradict themselves, and were contrary one to another: which places whosoever shall read, will clearly see, that to common people they are unanswerable, yea, that common people are not capable of the answers that learned men yield unto such obscure passages. And hath not your great Antiquary Petavius, in his Notes upon Epiphanius in Her. 69. been very liberal to the Adversaries of the Doctrine of the Trinity, and in a manner given them for Patrons and Advocates? first Justin Martyr, and then almost all the Fathers before the Council of Nice, whose speeches, he says, touching this point, cum Orthodoxæ fidei regula minimè consentiunt. Hereunto I might add, that the Dominicans and Jesuits between them in another another matter of great importance, viz. God's Prescience of future contingents, give the Socinians the premises, out of which their conclusion doth unavoidably follow. For the Dominicans maintain on the one side, that God can foresee nothing but what he decrees: The Jesuits on the other Side, that he doth not decree all things: And from hence the Socinians conclude (as it is obvious for them to do) that he doth not foresee all things. Lastly, I might adjoyn this, that you agree with one consent, and settle for a rule unquestionable, that no part of Religion can be repugnant to reason, whereunto you in particular subscribe unawares in saying, From truth no man can by good consequence infer Falshood, which is to say in effect, that Reason can never lead any man to Error: And after you have done so, you proclaim to all the world (as you in this Pamphlet do very frequently,) that if men follow their Reason and discourse, they will (if they understand themselves) be lead to Socinianism. And thus you see with what probable matter I might furnish out and justifie my accusation, if I should charge you with leading men to Socinianism; Yet I do not conceive that I have ground enough for this odious imputation. And much less should you have charged Protestants with it, whom you confess to abhor and detest it, and who fight against it, not with the broken reeds, and out of the paper-fortresses of an imaginary Infallibility, which were only to make sport for their Adversaries; but with the sword of the Spirit, the Word of God: Of which we may say most truly, what David said of Goliah's Sword, offered by Abimelech, Non est sicut iste, There is none comparable to it.

19. Thus Protestants in general, I hope, are sufficiently vindicated from your calumny. I proceed now to do the same service for the Divines of England; whom you question first in point of learning and sufficiency, and then in point of conscience and honesty, as prevaricating in the Religion which they profess, and inclining to Popery. Their Learning (you say) consists only in some superficial talent of preaching, languages, and elocution, and not in any deep knowledge of Philosophy, especially of Metaphysicks, and much less of that most solid, profitable, subtile, and (Orem ridiculam, Cato, & jocosam!) succinct method of School-Divinity. Wherein you have discovered in your self the true Genius and spirit of detraction. For taking advantage from that wherein Envy it self cannot deny but they are very eminent, and which requires great sufficiency of substantial learning, you disparage them as insufficient in all things else. As if forsooth, because they dispute not eternally, Utrum Chimera bombinans in vacuo, possit comedere secundas intentiones? Whether a Million of Angels may not sit upon a Needle's point? Because they fill not their brains with Notions that signifie nothing, to the utter extermination of all reason and common sense, and spend not an Age in weaving and unweaving subtil Cobwebs, fitter to catch Flies than Souls; therefore they have no deep knowledge in the Acroamatical part of Learning! But I have too much honoured the poorness of this detraction, to take notice of it.

20. The other Part of your accusation strikes deeper, and is more considerable: And that tells us, that, Protestantism waxeth weary of it self; that the Professors of it, they especially of greatest wroth learning and authority, love Temper and Moderation; and are at this time more unresolved where to fasten, than at the infancy of their Church: That, Their Churches begin to look with a new face: Their walls to speak a new language: Their Doctrine to be altered in many things for which their Progenitors forsook the then visible Church of Christ: For example. The Pope not Antichrist: Prayer for the dead: Limbus Patrum: Pictures; That the Church hath Authority in determining Controversies of Faith, and to interpret Scripture; about Freewill, Predestination, Universal Grace: That all our works are not sins: Merit of good works: Inherent Justice: Faith alone doth not justifie: Charity to be preferred before knowledge; Traditions: Commandments possible to be kept: That their thirty nine Articles are patient, nay, ambitious, of some sense wherein they may seem Catholick: That to alledge the necessity of Wife and Children in these days, is but a weak plea for a married Minister to compass a Benefice: That Calvinism is at length accounted Hereſie, and little leſs than Treaſon: That men in talk and writing uſe willingly the once fearful names of Prieſts and Altars: That they are now put in mind, that for expoſition of Scripture they are by Canon bound to follow the Fathers: which if they do with ſincerity, it is eaſie to tell what doom will paſs againſt Proteſtants, ſeeing, by the confeſſion of Proteſtants, the Fathers are on the Papiſts ſide, which the Anſwerer to ſome ſo clearly demonſtrated, that they remained convinced: In fine, as the Samaritans ſaw in the Diſciples countenances that they meant to go to Jeruſalem, ſo you pretend it is even legible in the fore-heads of theſe men, that they are even going, nay, making haſt, to Rome. Which ſcurrilous Libel void of all truth, diſcretion and honeſty, what credit it may have wrought, what credit it may have gained with credulous Papiſts, (who dream what they deſire, and believe their own dreams,) or with ill-affected, jealous, and weak Proteſtants, I cannot tell: But one thing I dare boldly ſay, that you your ſelf did never believe it.

21. For did you indeed conceive, or had any probable hope, that ſuch men as you deſcribe, men of worth, of learning and authority too, were friends and favourers of your Religion, and inclinable to your Party, Can any imagine that you would proclaim it, and bid the world take heed of them? Sic notus Ulyſſes? Do we know the Jeſuits no better than ſo? What, are they turned prevaricators againſt their own Faction? Are they likely men to betray and expoſe their own Agents and Inſtruments, and to awaken the eyes of Jealouſie, and to raiſe the clamour of the people againſt them? Certainly, your Zeal to the See of Rome, teſtified by your fourth Vow of ſpecial obedience to the Pope, proper to your Order, and your cunning carriage of all affairs for the greater advantage and advancement of that See, are clear demonſtrations that, if you had thought thus, you would never have ſaid ſo. The truth is, they that run to extreams in oppoſition againſt you, they that pull down your infallibility and ſet up their own, they that declaim againſt your tyranny, and exerciſe it themſelves over others, are the Adverſaries that give you greateſt advantage, and ſuch as you love to deal with: whereas upon men of temper and moderation, ſuch as will oppoſe nothing becauſe you maintain it, but will draw as near to you, that they may draw you to them, as the truth will ſuffer them; ſuch as require of Chriſtians to believe only in Chriſt, and will damn no Man nor Doctrine without expreſs and certain warrant from God; upon ſuch as theſe you know not how to faſten: but if you chance to have conference with any ſuch, (which yet as much as poſſibly you can you avoid and decline,) you are very ſpeedily put to ſilence, and ſee the indefenſible weakneſs of your cauſe laid upon to all men. And this, I verily believe, is the true reaſon that you thus rave and rage againſt them, as foreſeeing your time of prevailing, or even of ſubſiſting, would be ſhort, if other Adverſaries gave you no more advantage than they do.

22. In which perſuaſion alſo I am much confirmed by conſideration of the ſillineſs and poorneſs of thoſe Suggeſtions, and partly of the apparent vanity and falſhood of them, which you offer in juſtification of this wicked Calumny. For what, if out of devotion towards God, out of a deſire that he ſhould be worſhipped as in Spirit and truth in the firſt place, ſo alſo in the beauty of holineſs? What if out of fear that too much ſimplicity and nakedneſs in the publick Service of God, may beget in the ordinary ſort of men a dull and ſtupid irreverence; and, out of hope that the outward ſtate and glory of it, being well-diſpoſed and wiſely moderated, may ingender, quicken, increaſe and nouriſh, the inward reverence, reſpect, and devotion which is due unto God's Soveraign Majeſty and Power? what if out of a perſuaſion and deſire that Papiſts may be won over to us the ſooner, by the removing of this ſcandal out of their way; and out of an holy jealouſie, that the weaker ſort of Proteſtants might be the eaſier ſeduced to them by the magnificence and pomp of their Church ſervice in caſe it were not removed? I ſay, What if out of theſe conſiderations, the Governours of our Church, more of late than formerly, have ſet themſelves to adorn and beautifie the the places where God's Honour dwels, and to make them as heaven-like as they can with earthly ornaments? Is this a ſign that they are warping towards Popery? Is this devotion in the Church of England, an Argument that ſhe is coming over to the Church of Rome? Sir Edwin Sands, I preſume, every man will grant, had no inclination that way; yet he, forty years ſince, highly commended this part of devotion in Papiſts, and makes no ſcruple of propoſing it to the imitation of Proteſtants: Little thinking that they who would follow his counſel, and endeavour to take away this diſparagement of Proteſtants, and this glorying of Papiſts, ſhould have been cenſured for it, as making way and inclining to Popery. His words to this purpoſe are excellent words; and becauſe they ſhew plainly, that what is now practiſed was approved by zealous Proteſtants ſo long ago, I will here ſet them down.

23. This one thing I cannot but highly commend in that ſort and order: They ſpare nothing which either coſt can perform in enriching, or skill in adorning the Temple of God, or to ſet out his Service with the greateſt pomp and magnificence that can be deviſed. And although, for the moſt part, much baſeneſs and childiſhneſs is predominant in the Authors and contrivers of their Ceremonies, yet this outward ſtate and glory being well diſpoſed, doth ingender, quicken, increaſe, and nouriſh the inward reverence, reſpect, and devotion which is due unto Soveraign Majeſty and Power. And although I am not ignorant that many men well reputed have embraced the thrifty opinion of that Diſciple, who thought all to be waſted that was beſtowed upon Chriſt in that ſort, and that it were much better beſtowed upon him or the poor, (yet with an eye perhaps that themſelves would be his quarter-Almoners) notwithſtanding I muſt confeſs, it will never ſink into my heart, that in proportion of reaſon, the allowance for furniſhing out of the ſervice of God ſhould be meaſured by the ſcant and ſtrict rule of meer neceſſity, (a proportion ſo low, that nature to other moſt bountiful, in matter of neceſſity hath not failed, no not the moſt ignoble creatures of the world,) and that for our ſelves no meaſure of heaping but the moſt we can get, no rule of expence but to the utmoſt pomp we liſt: Or that God himſelf had ſo enriched the lower parts of the world with ſuch wonderful varieties of beauty and glory, that they might ſerve only to the pampering of mortal man in his pride; and that in the Service of the high Creator Lord and giver (the outward glory of whoſe higher pallace may appear by the very lamps that we ſee ſo far off burning gloriouſly in it) only the ſimpler, baſer, cheaper, leſs noble, leſs beautiful, leſs glorious things ſhould be imployed. Eſpecially ſeeing, as in Princes Courts, ſo in the Service of God alſo, this outward ſtate and glory, being well diſpoſed, doth (as I have ſaid) ingender, quicken, increaſe and nouriſh the inward reverence, reſpect, and devotion, which is due to ſo Soveraign Majeſty, and Power: Which thoſe whom the uſe thereof cannot perſuade unto, would eaſily, by the want of it, be brought to confeſs; for which cauſe I crave leave to be excuſed by them herein, if in Zeal to the common Lord of all, I chooſe rather to commend the vertue of an enemy, than to flatter the vice and imbecillity of a friend. And ſo much for this matter.

24. Again, what if the names of Prieſts and Altars, ſo frequent in the ancient Fathers, though not in the now Popiſh ſenſe, be now reſumed and more commonly uſed in England than of late times they were: that ſo the colourable argument of their conformity, which is but nominal, with the ancient Church, and our inconformity, which the Governours of the Church would not have ſo much as nominal, may be taken away from them; and the Church of England may be put in a ſtate, in this regard more juſtifiable againſt the Roman than formerly it was, being hereby enabled to ſay to Papiſts (whenſoever theſe names are objected,) we alſo uſe the names of Prieſts and Altars, and yet believe neither the corporal Preſence, nor any Proper and propitiatory Sacrifice?

25. What if Proteſtants be now put in mind, that, for expoſition of Scripture, they are bound by a Canon to follow the ancient Fathers: which whoſoever doth with ſincerity, it is utterly impoſſible, he ſhould be a Papiſt? And it is moſt falſly ſaid by you, that you know, that to ſome Proteſtants I clearly demonſtrated, or ever ſo much as undertook, or went about to demonſtrate the contrary. What if the Centuriſts be cenſured ſomewhat roundly by a Proteſtant Divine for affirming, that the keeping of the Lord's day was a thing indifferent for two hundred years? Is there in all or any part of it any kind of proof of this ſcandalous Calumny?

26. As for the points of Doctrine wherein you pretend that theſe Divines begin of late to falter, and to comply with the Church of Rome; upon a due examination of particulars it will preſently appear, Firſt, that part of them always have been, and now are, held conſtantly one way by them; as, the Authority of the Church in determining Controverſies of faith, though not the infallibility of it: That there is Inherent Juſtice, though ſo imperfect that it cannot juſtifie: That there are Traditions, though none neceſſary: That Charity is to be preferred before knowledge: That good Works are not properly meritorious. And laſtly, that Faith alone juſtifies, though that Faith juſtifies not which is alone. And ſecondly, for the remainder, that they, every one of them, have been anciently without breach of charity diſputed among Proteſtants: ſuch for example were the Queſtions about the Pope's being the Antichriſt, The lawfulneſs of ſome kind of Prayers for the dead; The Eſtate of the Fathers Souls, before Chriſt's Aſcenſion; Freewill, Predeſtination, Univerſal grace: The poſſibility of keeping God's Commandments; The uſe of Pictures in the Church: Wherein that there hath been anciently diverſity of opinion amongſt Proteſtants, it is juſtified to my hand by a Witneſs, with you, beyond exception, even your great friend Mr. Breerly, whoſe, care, exactneſs, and fidelity (you ſay in your Preface) is ſo extraordinary great. Conſult him therefore: Tract. 3. Sect. 7. of his Apology: And in the 9, 10, 11, 14, 24, 26, 27, 37. Subdiviſions of that Section; you ſhall ſee as in a mirror, your ſelf proved an egregious Calumniator, for charging Proteſtants with innovation and inclining to Popery, under pretence forſooth, that their Doctrine begins of late to be altered in theſe points. Whereas, Mr. Breerly will inform you, They have been anciently, and even from the beginning of the Reformation, controverted amongſt them, though perhaps the ſtream and current of their Doctors run one way, and only ſome brook or rivulet of them the other.

27. And thus my Friends, I ſuppoſe, are clearly vindicated from your ſcandals and calumnies: It remains now that in the laſt place I bring my ſelf fairly off from your foul aſperſions, that ſo my Perſon may not be (as indeed howſoever it ſhould not be) any diſadvantage or diſparagement to the Cauſe, nor any ſcandal to weak Chriſtians.

28. Your injuries then to me (no way deſerved by me, but by differing in opinion from you, wherein yet you ſurely differ from me as much as I from you,) are eſpecially three. For firſt, upon hearſay, and refuſing to give me opportunity of begetting in you a better underſtanding of me, you charge me with a great number of falſe and impious Doctrines, which I will not name in particular, becauſe I will not aſſiſt you ſo far in the ſpreading of my own undeſerved defamation: but whoſoever teaches or holds them, let him be Anathema! The ſum of them all caſt up by your ſelf, in your firſt Chapter, is this, Nothing ought or can be certainly believed, farther than it may be proved by evidence of Natural Reaſon, (where I conceive, Natural reaſon is oppoſed to ſupernatural Revelation;) and whoſoever holds ſo, let him be Anathema! And moreover to clear my ſelf once for all, from all imputations of this nature, which charge me injuriouſly with denial of ſupernatural Verities, I profeſs ſincerely, that I believe all thoſe Books of Scripture, which the Church of England accounts Canonical, to be the infallible Word of God: I believe all things evidently contained in them; all things evidently, or even probably deducible from them: I acknowledge all that to be Hereſie, which by the Act of Parliament primo of Queen Eliz. is declared to be ſo, and only to be ſo: And though in ſuch points which may be held diverſly of divers men ſalvâ Fidei compage, I would not take any man's liberty from him, and and humbly beſeech all men, that they would not take mine from me: Yet thus much I can ſay (which I hope will ſatisfie any man of reaſon,) that whatſoever hath been held neceſſary to ſalvation, either by the Catholick Church of all Ages, or by the conſent of Fathers, meaſured by Vincentius Lyrinenſis his rule, or is held neceſſary, either by the Catholick Church of this Age, or by the conſent of Proteſtants, or even by the Church of England, that, againſt the Socinians, and all others whatſoever, I do verily believe and embrace.

29. Another great and manifeſt injury you have done me, in charging me to have forſaken your Religion, becauſe it conduced not to my temporal ends, and ſuited not with my deſires and deſigns: Which certainly is an horrible crime, and whereof if you could convince me, by juſt and ſtrong preſumptions, I ſhould then acknowledge my ſelf to deſerve that Opinion, which you would fain induce your Credents unto, that I changed not your Religion for any other, but for none at all. But of this great fault my conſcience acquits me, and God, who only knows the hearts of all men, knows that I am innocent! Neither doubt I but all they who know me, and amongſt them many Perſons of place and quality, will ſay, they have reaſon in this matter to be my Compurgators. And for you, though you are very affirmative in your accuſation, yet you neither do, nor can produce any proof or preſumption for it, but forgetting your ſelf (as it is God's will oft times that Slanderers ſhould do,) have let fall ſome paſſages, which being well weighed, will make conſidering men apt to believe, that you did not believe your ſelf. For how is it poſſible you ſhould believe that I deſerted your Religion for ends, and againſt the light of my conſcience, out of a deſire of preferment; and yet, out of ſcruple of conſcience, ſhould refuſe (which alſo you impute to me,) to ſubſcribe the 39. Articles, that is, refuſe to enter at the only common door, which here in England leads to preferment? Again, How incredible is it that you ſhould believe, that I forſook the profeſſion of your Religion, as not ſuting with my deſires and deſigns, which yet reconciles the enjoying of the pleaſures and profits of ſin here, with the hope of happineſs hereafter, and propoſes as great hope of great temporal advancements to the capable ſervants of it, as any, nay, more than any Religion in the world; and inſtead of this ſhould chuſe Socinianiſm, a Doctrine, which howſoever erroneous in explicating the Myſteries of Religion, and allowing greater liberty of opinion in ſpeculative matters, than any other Company of Chriſtians doth, or they ſhould do; yet certainly which you, I am ſure, will pretend and maintain to explicate the Laws of Chriſt with more rigour, and leſs indulgence and condeſcendence to the deſires of fleſh and bloud than your Doctrine doth! And beſides, ſuch a Doctrine by which no man in his right mind, can hope for any honour or preferment, either in this Church or State, or any other! All which clearly demonſtrates that this foul and falſe aſperſion, which you have caſt upon me, proceeds from no other fountain, but a heart abounding with the gall and bitterneſs of uncharitableneſs, and even blinded with malice towards me; or elſe from a perverſe zeal to your ſuperſtition, which ſecretly ſuggeſts this perſuaſion to you, That for the Catholick cauſe nothing is unlawful, but that you may make uſe of ſuch indirect and crooked Arts, as theſe, to blaſt my reputation, and to poſſeſs mens minds with diſaffection to my Perſon, leſt otherwiſe peradventure they might with ſome indifference hear reaſon from me. God, I hope, which bringeth light out of darkneſs, will turn your counſels to fooliſhneſs, and give all good men grace to perceive how weak and ruinous that Religion muſt be, which needs ſupportance from ſuch tricks and devices! So I call them, becauſe they deſerve no better name. For what are all theſe Perſonal matters, which hitherto you have ſpoke of, to the buſineſs in hand? If it could be proved that Cardinal Bellarmine was indeed a Jew, or that Cardinal Perron was an Atheiſt, yet I preſume you would not accept of this for an Anſwer to all their Writings in defence of your Religion. Let then my actions, and intentions, and opinions be what they will, yet I hope,

Truth

Truth is nevertheleſs Truth, nor Reaſon ever the leſs Reaſon, becauſe I ſpeak it. And therefore the Chriſtian Reader, knowing that his Salvation or Damnation depends upon his impartial and ſincere judgment of theſe things, will guard himſelf, I hope, from theſe impoſtures, and regard not the perſon, but the cauſe and the reaſons of it; not who ſpeaks, but what is ſpoken: Which is all the favour I deſire of him, as knowing that I am deſirous not to perſuade him, unleſs it be truth whereunto I perſuade him.

30. The third and laſt part of my Accuſation was, That I anſwer out of Principles which Proteſtants themſelves will profeſs to deteſt: which indeed were to the purpoſe, if it could be juſtified. But, beſides that it is confuted by my whole Book, and made ridiculous by the Approbations premiſed unto it, it is very eaſie for me out of your own mouth and words to prove it a moſt injurious calumny. For what one concluſion is there in the whole fabrick of my Diſcourſe, that is not naturally deducible out of this one Principle, That all things neceſſary to ſalvation are evidently contained in Scripture? Or, what one Concluſion almoſt of importance is there in your Book, which is not by this one clearly confutable?

31. Grant this, and it will preſently follow in oppoſition to your firſt Concluſion, and the Augument of your firſt Chapter, that amongſt men of different opinions, touching the obſcure and controverted Queſtions of Religion, ſuch as may with probability be diſputed on both Sides (and ſuch are the diſputes of Proteſtants;) Good men and lovers of truth of all Sides may be ſaved; becauſe all neceſſary things being ſuppoſed evident concerning them, with men ſo qualified, there will be no difference: There being no more certain ſign that a Point is not evident, than that honeſt and underſtanding and indifferent men, and ſuch as give themſelves liberty of judgment after a mature conſideration of the matter, differ about it.

32. Grant this, and it will appear Secondly, that the means whereby the revealed Truths of God are conveyed to our underſtanding, and which are to determine all Controverſies in Faith, neceſſary to be determined, may be, for any thing you have ſaid to the contrary, not a Church, but the Scripture; which contradicts the Doctrine of your Second Chapter.

33. Grant this, and the diſtinction of Points Fundamental and not Fundamental, will appear very good and pertinent. For thoſe truths will be Fundamental, which are evidently delivered in Scripture, and commanded to be preached to all men; Thoſe not Fundamental, which are obſcure. And nothing will hinder but that the Catholick Church may err in the latter kind of the ſaid Points: becauſe Truths not neceſſary to the Salvation, cannot be neceſſary to the Being of a Church; and becauſe it is not abſolutely neceſſary that God ſhould aſſiſt his Church any farther than to bring her to Salvation; neither will there be any neceſſity at all of any infallible Guide, either to conſign unwritten Traditions, or to declare the obſcurities of the Faith. Not for the former end, becauſe this Principle being granted true, nothing unwritten can be neceſſary to be conſigned. Nor for the latter, becauſe nothing that is obſcure can be neceſſary to be underſtood, or not miſtaken. And ſo the diſcourſe of your whole Third Chapter will preſently vaniſh.

34. Fourthly, for the Creeds containing the Fundamentals of ſimple belief, though I ſee not how it may be deduced from this Principle, yet the granting of this, plainly renders the whole diſpute touching the Creed unneceſſary. For if all neceſſary things of all ſorts, whether of ſimple belief or practice, be confeſſed to be clearly contained in Scripture, What imports it whether thoſe of one ſort be contained in the Creed?

35. Fifthly, let this be granted, and the immediate Corollary in oppoſition to your fifth Chap. will be and muſt be, That not Proteſtants for rejecting, but the Church of Rome, for impoſing upon the Faith of Chriſtians, Doctrines unwritten and unneceſſary, and for diſturbing the Churches peace, and dividing Unity for ſuch matters, is in a high degree preſumptuous and Schiſmatical.

36. Grant

36. Grant this ſixthly, and it will follow unavoidably that Proteſtants cannot poſſibly be Hereticks, ſeeing they believe all things evidently contained in Scripture, which are ſuppoſed to be all that is neceſſary to be believed: and ſo your Sixth Chapter is clearly confuted.

37. Grant this laſtly, and it will be undoubtedly conſequent, in contradiction of your Seventh Chapter, that no man can ſhew more charity to himſelf than by continuing a Proteſtant; ſeeing Proteſtants are ſuppoſed to believe, and therefore may accordingly practiſe, at leaſt by their Religion are not hindered from practiſing and performing all things neceſſary to Salvation.

38. So that the poſition of this one Principle, is the direct overthrow of your whole Book, and therefore I needed not, nor indeed have I made uſe of any other. Now this Principle, which is not only the corner-ſtone or chief Pillar, but even the baſis, and adequate foundation of my Anſwer; and which while it ſtands firm and unmoveable, cannot but be the ſupport of my Book, and the certain ruine of Yours, is ſo far from being, according to your pretence, deteſted by all Proteſtants, that all Proteſtants whatſoever, as you may ſee in their harmony of Confeſſions, unanimouſly profeſs and maintain it. And you your ſelf, Chap. 6. §. 30. plainly confeſs as much, in ſaying, The whole Edifice of the Faith of Proteſtants is ſetled on theſe two Principles: Theſe particular Books are Canonical Scripture: And the ſenſe and meaning of them is plain and evident, at leaſt, in all Points neceſſary to Salvation.

39. And thus your Venom againſt me is in a manner ſpent, ſaving only that there remain two little Impertinencies, whereby you would diſable me from being a fit Advocate for the cauſe of Proteſtants. The firſt, becauſe I refuſe to ſubſcribe the Articles of the Church of England: The ſecond, becauſe I have ſet down in writing, Motives which ſometime induced me to forſake Proteſtantiſm, and hitherto have not anſwered them.

40. By the former of which Objections it ſhould ſeem, that either you conceive the 39 Articles the common Doctrine of all Proteſtants: and if they be, Why have you ſo often upbraided them with their many and great differences? Or elſe, that it is the peculiar defence of the Church of England, and not the common cauſe of all Proteſtants, which is here undertaken by me: which are certainly very groſs miſtakes. And yet why he who makes ſcruple of ſubſcribing the truth of one or two Propoſitions, may not yet be fit enough to maintain that thoſe who do ſubſcribe them are in a ſavable condition, I do not underſtand. Now though I hold not the Doctrine of all Proteſtants abſolutely true, (which with reaſon cannot be required of me while they hold Contradictions,) yet I hold it free from all impiety, and from all error deſtructive of Salvation, or in it ſelf damnable: And this I think in reaſon may ſufficiently qualifie me, for a maintainer of this aſſertion, that Proteſtancy deſtroys not Salvation. For the Church of England, I am perſwaded, that the conſtant Doctrine of it is ſo pure and Orthodox, that whoſoever believes it, and lives according to it, undoubtedly he ſhall be ſaved; and that there is no Error in it which may neceſſitate or warrant any man to diſturb the peace, or renounce the Communion of it. This in my opinion is all intended by Subſcription; and thus much if you conceive me not ready to ſubſcribe, your Charity I aſſure you is much Miſtaken.

41. Your other objection againſt me, is yet more impertinent and frivolous than the former: Unleſs perhaps it be a juſt exception againſt a Phyſitian, that himſelf was ſometimes in, and recovered himſelf from, that diſeaſe which he undertakes to cure; or againſt a Guide in a way, that at firſt, before he had experience himſelf, miſtook it, and afterwards found his errour and amended it. That noble Writer Michael de Montaigne, was ſurely of a far different mind; for he will hardly allow any Phyſitian competent, but only for ſuch diſeaſes as himſelf had paſſed through: And a far greater than Montaigne, even he that ſaid, Tu converſus confirma fratres, gives us ſufficiently to underſtand that they which have themſelves themſelves been in ſuch a ſtate as to need converſion, are not thereby made incapable of, but rather engaged and obliged unto, and qualified for, this charitable function.

42. Neither am I guilty of that ſtrange and prepoſterous zeal (as you eſteem it) which you impute to me; for having been ſo long careleſs in removing this ſcandal againſt Proteſtants, and anſwering my own Motives, and yet now ſhewing ſuch fervour in writing againſt others. For neither are they other Motives, but the very ſame for the moſt part with thoſe which abuſed me, againſt which this Book which I now publiſh, is in a manner wholly imployed: And beſides, though you Jeſuits take upon you to have ſuch large and univerſal intelligence of all State-affairs and matters of importance; yet I hope ſuch a contemptible matter, as an Anſwer of mine to a little piece of paper, may very probably have been written and eſcaped your Obſervation. The truth is, I made an Anſwer to them three years ſince and better, which perhaps might have been publiſhed, but for two reaſons: One, becauſe the Motives were never publick, until you made them ſo: The other, becauſe I was loath to proclaim to all the world ſo much weakneſs as I ſhewed, in ſuffering my ſelf to be abuſed by ſuch ſilly Sophiſms; All which proceed upon miſtakes and falſe ſuppoſitions, which unadviſedly I took for granted; as when I have ſet down the Motives in order, by ſubſequent Anſwers to them, I ſhall quickly demonſtrate, and ſo make an end.

43. The Motives then were theſe.

1. Becauſe perpetual viſible profeſſion, which could never be wanting to the Religion of Chriſt, nor any part of it, is apparently wanting to Proteſtant Religion, ſo far as concerns the points in conteſtation.

2. Becauſe Luther and his Followers, ſeparating from the Church of Rome, ſeparated alſo from all Churches, pure or impure, true or falſe then being in the World; upon which ground I conclude, that either Gods promiſes did fail of performance, if there were then no Church in the world, which held all things neceſſary, and nothing repugnant to Salvation; or elſe that Luther and his Sectaries, ſeparating from all Churches then in the World, and ſo from the true, if there were any true, were damnable Schiſmaticks.

3. Becauſe, if any credit may be given to as creditable Records as any are extant, the Doctrine of Catholicks hath been frequently confirmed; and the oppoſite Doctrine of Proteſtants confounded, with ſupernatural and divine Miracles.

4. Becauſe many points of Proteſtant Doctrine, are the damned opinions of Hereticks, condemned by the Primitive Church.

5. Becauſe the Prophecies of the Old Teſtament, touching the converſion of Kings and Nations to the true Religion of Chriſt, have been accompliſhed in and by the Catholick Roman Religion, and the Profeſſors of it; and not by Proteſtant Religion, and the Profeſſors of it.

6. Becauſe the Doctrine of the Church of Rome is conformable, and the Doctrine of Proteſtants contrary to the Doctrine of the Fathers of the Primitive Church, even by the confeſſion of Proteſtants themſelves; I mean, thoſe Fathers, who lived within the compaſs of the firſt 600. years; to whom Proteſtants themſelves do very frequently and very confidently appeal.

7. Becauſe the firſt pretended Reformers had neither extraordinary Commiſſion from God, nor ordinary Miſſion from the Church, to Preach Proteſtant Doctrine.

8. Becauſe Luther, to preach againſt the Maſs (which contains the moſt material points now in Controverſie) was perſuaded by reaſons ſuggeſted to him by the Devil himſelf, diſputing with him. So himſelf profeſſeth in his Book de Miſſa Privata: That all men might take heed of following him, who profeſſeth himſelf to follow the Devil.

9. Becauſe the Proteſtant cauſe is now, and hath been from the beginning, maintained with groſs falſifications, and Calumnies; whereof their prime Controverſie-Writers, are notoriouſly and in high degree guilty.

10. Becauſe by denying all humane authority, either of Pope, or Councils, or Church, to to determine Controverſies of Faith, they have aboliſhed all poſſible means of ſuppreſſing Hereſie, or reſtoring Unity to the Church.

Theſe are the Motives; now my Anſwers to them follow briefly and in order.

44. To the firſt: God hath neither decreed nor foretold, that his true Doctrine ſhould de facto be always viſibly profeſſed, without any mixture of falſhood.

To the ſecond: God hath neither decreed nor foretold, that there ſhall be always a viſible company of men free from all error in it ſelf damnable. Neither is it always of neceſſity Schiſmatical to ſeparate from the external Communion of a Church, though wanting nothing neceſſary. For if this Church ſuppoſed to want nothing neceſſary, require me to profeſs againſt my conſcience, that I believe ſome error, though never ſo ſmall and innocent, which I do not believe, and will not allow me her Communion but upon this condition; In this caſe the Church for requiring this condition is Schiſmatical, and not I for ſeparating from the Church.

To the third: If any credit may be given to Records far more creditable than theſe, the Doctrine of Proteſtants, that is, the Bible, hath been confirmed, and the Doctrine of Papiſts, which is in many points plainly oppoſite to it, confounded with ſupernatural and divine Miracles, which for number and glory out-ſhine Popiſh pretended Miracles, as much as the Sun doth an Ignis fatuus; thoſe I mean which were wrought by our Saviour Chriſt and his Apoſtles: Now this Book, by the confeſſion of all ſides confirmed by innumerous Miracles, foretels me plainly, that in after-ages great ſigns and wonders ſhall be wrought in confirmation of falſe doctrine, and that I am not to believe any doctrine which ſeems to my underſtanding repugnant to the firſt, though an Angel from Heaven ſhould teach it; which were certainly as great a Miracle as any that was ever wrought in atteſtation of any part of the doctrine of the Church of Rome. But that true doctrine ſhould in all Ages have the teſtimony of Miracles, that I am no where taught; So that I have more reaſon to ſuſpect, and be afraid of pretended Miracles, as ſigns of falſe Doctrine, than much to regard them as certain Arguments of the Truth. Beſides, ſetting aſide the Bible, and the Tradition of it, there is as good ſtory for Miracles wrought by thoſe who lived and died in oppoſition to the Doctrine of the Roman Church, (as by S. Cyprian, Colmanus, Columbanus, Aidanus, and others,) as there is for thoſe that are pretended to be wrought by the members of that Church. Laſtly, it ſeems to me no ſtrange thing that God in his Juſtice ſhould permit ſome true Miracles to be wrought to delude them, who have forged ſo many as apparently the profeſſors of the Roman Doctrine have, to abuſe the World.

To the fourth: All thoſe were not [a] Hereticks which by Philaſtrius, Epiphanius, or S. Auſtin were put in the Catalogue of Hereticks.

To the fifth: Kings and Nations have been and may be converted by men of contrary Religions.

To the ſixth: The Doctrine of Papiſts, is confeſſed by Papiſts contrary to the Fathers in many points.

To the ſeventh: The Paſtors of a Church cannot but have authority from it, to Preach againſt the abuſes of it, whether in Doctrine or Practice, if there be any in it: Neither can any Chriſtian want an ordinary Commiſſion from God to do a neceſſary work of Charity after a peaceable manner, when there is no body elſe that can or will do it. In extraordinary caſes, extraordinary courſes are not to be diſallowed. If ſome Chriſtian Layman ſhould come into a Country of Infidels, and had ability to perſuade them to Chriſtianity, Who would ſay, he might not uſe it for want of Commiſſion?

To the eighth: Luther's conference with the Devil might be, for ought I know, nothing but a melancholy Dream. If it were real, the Devil might perſuade Luther from the Maſs, hoping by doing ſo to keep him conſtant to it: Or that others would make his diſſuaſion from it an Argument for it, (as we ſee papists do) and be afraid of following Luther, as confessing himself to have been persuaded by the Devil.

[a] See this acknowledged by Bellar. de Script. Eccleſ. in Phi aſſirio. By Petavius Animad. in Epiph. de inſcrip. operis. By S. Auſtin Lib. de Her. 80.

To the ninth; Iliacos intra muros peccatur & extra. Papists are more guilty of this fault than Protestants. Even this very Author in this very Pamphlet hath not so many leaves as falsifications and calumnies.

To the tenth: Let all men believe the Scripture, and that only, and endeavour to believe it in the true sense, and require no more of others, and they shall find this not only a better, but the only means to suppress Heresie, and restore Unity. For he that believes the Scripture sincerely, and endeavours to believe it in the true sense, cannot possibly be an Heretick. And if no more than this were required of any man, to make him capable of the Churches Communion, then all men so qualified, though they were different in opinion, yet notwithstanding any such difference, must be of necessity one in Communion.

The

The AUTHOR of CHARITY MAINTAINED, His Preface to the READER.

GIve me leave (good Reader) to inform thee, by way of Preface, of three Points. The first concerns D. Potter's Answer to Charity Mistaken. The second relates to this Reply of mine. And the third contains some Premonitions, or Prescriptions, in case D. Potter, or any in his behalf, think fit to Rejoyn.

2. For the first point, concerning D. Potter's Answer, I say, in general, referring particulars to their proper places, that in his whole Book he hath not so much as once truly and really fallen upon the point in question, which was, Whether both Catholicks and Protestants can be saved in their several professions? And therefore Charity Mistaken judiciously pressing those particulars, wherein the difficulty doth precisely consist, proves in general that there is but one true Church; that all Christians were obliged to hearken to her; that she must be ever visible, and infallible; that to separate ones self from her communion is Schism; and to dissent from her Doctrine is Heresie, though it be in points never so low, or never so small in their own nature; and therefore that the distinction of points Fundamental, and not Fundamental, is wholly vain, as it is applyed by Protestants. These (I say) and some other general grounds, Charity Mistaken handles, and out of them doth clearly evince, that any least difference in faith cannot stand with Salvation on both sides: and therefore since it is apparent, that Catholiques and Protestants disagree in very many points of faith, they both cannot hope to be saved without repentance: and consequently, as we hold, that Protestancy unrepented destroys Salvation; so must they also believe that we cannot be saved, if they judge their own Religion to be true, and ours to be false. And whosoever disguiseth this truth, is an enemy to souls, which he deceives with ungrounded false hopes of Salvation, in different Faiths, and Religions. And this charity Mistaken performed exactly, according to that which appears to have been his design, which was not to descend to particular disputes, as D. Potter affectedly does, namely, Whether or no the Roman Church be the only true Church of Christ; and much less, Whether general Councils be infallible; whether the Pope may err in his Decrees common to the whole Church; whether he be above a general Council; whether all points of Faith be contained in Scripture; whether Faith be resolved into the Authority of the Church, as into his last formal Object, and Motive; and, least of all did he discourse of Images, Communion under both kinds, publique service in an unknown Tongue, Seven Sacraments, Sacrifice of the Mass, Indulgences, and Index Expurgatorius: All which, and divers other articles, D. Potter (as I said) draws by violence into his Book: and he might have brought in Pope Joan, or Antichrist, or the Jews who are permitted to live in Rome, which are common Themes for men that want better matter, as D. Potter was fain to fetch in the aforesaid Controversies, that so he might dazle the eyes and distract the mind of the Reader, and hinder him from perceiving, that in his whole answer he uttereth nothing to the purpose and point in question: which, if he had followed closely, I dare well say, he might have dispatched his whole Book, in two or three sheets of paper. But the truth is, he was loth to affirm plainly, that generally both Catholiques and Protestants may be saved: and yet seeing it to be most evident that Protestants cannot pretend to have any true Church before Luther, except the Roman, and such as agreed with her, and consequently, that they cannot hope for Salvation, if they deny it to us: he thought best to avoid this difficulty by confusion of Language, and to fill up his Book with points which make nothing to the purpose. Wherein he is less excusable, because he must grant, that those very particulars to which he dispersedly, are not Fundamental errors, though it should be granted that they be Errors, which indeed are Catholique Verities. For since they be not Fundamental, not destructive of Salvation, what importeth it, Whether we hold them or no, for as much as concerns our possibility to be saved?

3. In one thing only he will perhaps seem to have touched the point in question, to wit, in his distinction of points Fundamental, and not Fundamental: because some may think, that a difference in points which are not Fundamental, breaks not the Unity of Faith, and hinders not the hope of Salvation in persons so disagreeing. And yet, in this very distinction, he never speaks to the purpose indeed, but only says, That there are some points so Fundamental, as that all are obliged to know and believe them explicitely? but never tells us, whether there be any other points of Faith, which a man may deny or disbelieve, though they be sufficiently presented to his understanding, as truths revealed, or testified by Almighty God; which was the only thing in question. For if it be damnable, as certainly it is, to deny or disbelieve any one truth witnessed by Almighty God, though the thing be not in it self of any great consequence, or moment: and since of two disagreeing in matters of Faith one must necessarily deny some such truth; it clearly follows that amongst men of different Faiths, or Religions, one only can be saved, though their difference consist of divers, or but even one point, which is not in his own nature Fundamental, as I declare at large in divers places of my first Part. So that it is clear, D. Potter even in this his last refuge and distinction, never comes to the point in question; to say nothing that he himself doth quite overthrow it, and plainly contradict his whole design, as I shew in the third Chapter of my first Part.

4. And as for D. Potter's manner of handling those very points, which are utterly besides the purpose: it consists only in bringing vulgar mean Objections which have been answered a thousand times, yea, and some of them are clearly answered even in Charity Mistaken; but he takes no knowledge at all of any such answers, and much less doth he apply himself to confute them. He alledgeth also Authors with so great corruption and Fraud, as I would not have believed, if I had not found it by clear and frequent experience. In his second Edition, he hath indeed left out one or two gross corruptions, amongst many others no less notorious, having, as it seems, been warned by some friends; that they could not stand with his credit: but even in this his second Edition he retracts them not at all, nor declares that he was mistaken in the First, and so his Reader of the first Edition shall ever be deceived by him, though with all he read the Second. For preventing of which inconvenience, I have thought it necessary to take notice of them, and discover them in my Reply.

5. And for conclusion of this point I will only say, that D. Potter might well have spared his pains if he had ingeniously acknowledged, where the whole substance, yea and sometimes the very words and phrases of his Book may be found in far briefer manner, namely, in a Sermon of D. Usher's preached before our late Sovereign Lord King James, the 20. of June, 1624. at Ansfield, containing A Declaration of the Universality of the Church of Christ, and the Unity of Faith professed therein; which Sermon having been roundly and wittily confuted by a Catholique Divine, under the name of Paulus Perlicus, within the compass of about four sheets of Paper, D. Potter's Answer to Charity Mistaken was in effect confuted before it appeared. And this may suffice for a general Censure of his Answer to Charity Mistaken.

Concerning my Reply.

6. For the second, touching my Reply: if you wonder at the Bulk thereof, compared either with Charity Mistaken, or D. Potter's Answer, I desire you to consider well of what now I am about to say, and then I hope you will see, that I was cast upon a meer necessity of not being so short, as otherwise might peradventure be desired. Charity Mistaken is short, I grant, and yet very full, and large, for as much as concerned his design, which you see was not to treat of particular Controversies in Religion no not so much as to debate whether or no the Roman Church be the only true Church of Christ, which indeed would have required a larger Volume, as I have underslood there was one then coming forth, if it had not been prevented by the Treatise of Charity Mistaken, which seemed to make the other intended work a little less seasonable at that time. But Charity Mistaken proves only in General out of some Universal Principles, well backed and made good by choice and solid Authorities, that of two disagreeing in points of Faith, one only without repentance can be saved; which aim exacted no great bulk. And as for D. Potter's Answer, even that also is not so short, as it may seem. For if his marginal notes printed in a small letter were transferred into the Text, the Book would appear to be of some bulk: though indeed it might have been very short, if he had kept himself to the point treated by Charity Mistaken, as shall be declared anon. But contrarily, because the question debated betwixt Charity Mistaken and D. Potter, is a point of the highest consequence that can be imagined, and in regard that there is not a more pernicious Hereste, or rather indeed ground of Atheism, than a perswasion that men of different Religions may be saved, if otherwise, forsooth, they lead a kind of civil and moral life: I conceive, that my chief endeavour was not to be employed in answering D. Potter, but that it was necessary to handle the Question it self somewhat at large, and not only to prove in general, that both Protestants and Catholiques cannot be saved; but to shew also, that Salvation cannot be hoped for out of the Catholique Roman Church; and yet withal, not to omit to answer all the particulars of D. Potter's Book which may any way import. To this end I thought it fit to divide my Reply into two Parts; in the former whereof, the main question is handled by a continued discourse without stepping aside to confute the particulars of D. Potter's Answer, though yet so, as even that in this first Part, I omit not to answer such passages of his, as I find directly in my way, and naturally belong to the points whereof I treat: and in the second Part I answer D. Potter's Treatise, Section by Section, as they lie in order. I here therefore intreat the Reader, that if heartily he desire satisfaction in this so important Question, he do not content himself with that which I say to D. Potter in my second Part, but that he take the First before him, either all, or at least so much as may serve most to his purpose of being satisfied in those doubts which press him most. For which purpose, I have caused a Table of the Chapters of the first Part, together with their Titles and Arguments, to be prefixed before my Reply.

7. This was then a chief reason why I could not be very short. But yet there wanted not also divers other causes of the same effect. For there are so several kinds of Protestants through the difference of Tenets which they hold, as that it a man convince but one kind of them, the rest will convince themselves to be as truly unsatisfied, and even unspoken to, as if nothing had been said therein at all. As for example: Some hold a necessity of a perpetual visible Church, and some hold no such necessity. Some of them hold it necessary to be able to prove it distinct from ours; and others, that their business is dispatched when they have proved ours to have been always visible: for then they will conceive that theirs hath been so: And the like may be truly said of very many other particulars. Besides it is D. Potter's fashion, (wherein as he is very far from being the first, so I pray God he prove the last of that humour) to touch in a word many trivial old Objections, which, if they be not all answered, it will and must serve the turn, to make the ignorant sort of men believe and brag, as if some main unanswerable matter had been subtilly and purposely omitted; and every body knows that some Objection may be very plausibly made in few words, the clear and solid answer whereof will require more leaves of paper than one. And in particular D. Potter doth couch his corruption of Authors within the compass of so few lines, and with so great confusedness and fraud, that it requires much time, pains and paper to open them so distinctly, as that they may appear to every mans eye. It was also necessary to shew what D. Potter omits in Charity Mistaken, and the importance of what is omitted, and sometimes to set down the very words themselves that are omitted, all which could not but add to the quantity of my Reply. And as for the quality thereof, I desire thee (good Reader) to believe, that whereas nothing is more necessary than Books for answering of Books: yet I was so ill furnished in this kind, that I was forced to omit the examination of divers Authors cited by D. Potter, meerly upon necessity; though I did very well percieve by most apparent circumstances, that I must probably have been sure enough to find them plainly misalledged, and much wronged: and for the few which are examined, there hath not wanted some difficulties to do it. For the times are not for all men alike; and D. Potter hath much advantage therein. But Truth is truth, and will ever be able to justifie it self in the midst of all difficulties which may occur. And as for me, when I alledge Protestant Writers as well domestical as Foreign, I willingly and thankfully acknowledge my self obliged for divers of them to the Author of the Book entituled, The Protestants Apology for the Roman Church, who calls himself John Brerely, whose care, exactness and fidelity is so extraordinary great, as that he doth not only cite the Books, but the editions also, with the place and time of their Printing, yea and often the very page, and line, where the words are to be had. And if you happen not to find what he cites, yet suspend your judgment, till you have read the corrections placed at the end of his Book, though it be also true, that after all diligence and faithfulness on his behalf, it was not in his power to amend all the faults of the Prints: in which Prints we have difficulty enough for many evident reasons, which must need occur to any prudent man.

8. And forasmuch as concerns the manner of my Reply, I have procured to do it without all bitterness or gall of invective words, both for as much as may import either Protestants in general, or D. Potter's person in particular; unless, for example, he will call it bitterness for me to term a gross impertinency, a slight, to a corruption, by those very names, without which I do not know how to express the things; and yet there-in I can truly affirm that I have studied how to deliver them in the most moderate way, to the end I might give give as little offence as possibly I could without betraying the Cause. And if any unfit phrase may peradventure have escaped my pen (as I hope none hath) it was beside and against my intention, though I must needs profess, that D. Potter gives so many and so just occasions of being round with him, as that perhaps some will judge me to have been rather remiss than moderate. But since in the very title of my Reply I profess to maintain Charity, I conceive that the excess will be more excusable amongst all kinds of men, if it fall to be in mildness, than if it had appeared in too much zeal. And if D. Potter have a mind to charge me with ignorance or any thing of that nature, I can, and will ease him of that labour, by acknowledging in my self as many and more personal defects than he can heap upon me, Truth only, and sincerity, I so much value and profess, as that he shall never be able to prove the contrary in any one least passage or particle against me.

9. In the third and last place, I have thought to express my self thus. If D. Potter, or any other resolve Rules to be to answer my Reply; I desire that he would observe some things which may tend to his own reputation, the observed, if saving of my unnecessary pains, and especially to the great advantage of truth. I wish then that he would be careful to consider, wherein the point of every difficulty consists, and not impertinently to shoot at Rovers, and affectedly misiake one thing for another. As for example, to what purpose (for as much as concerns the question between D. Potter and Charity Mistaken,) doth he so often and seriously labour to prove, that Faith is not resolved into the Authority of the Church, as into the formal Object and Motive thereof? Or that all Points of Faith are contained in Scripture? Or that the Church cannot make new Articles of Faith? Or that the Church of Rome, as it signifies that particular Church or Diocess, is not all one with the Universal Church? Or that the Pope as a private Doctor may err? With many other such points as will easily appear in their proper places. It will also be necessary for him not to put certain Doctrines upon us, from which he knows we disclaim as much as himself. D. Potter is desired to consider well of what now I am about to say, and then I hope you will see, that I was cast upon a meer necessity of not being so short, as otherwise might peradventure be desired. Charity Mistaken is short, I grant, and yet very full, and large, for as much as concerned his design, which you see was not to treat of particular Controversies in Religion no not so much as to debate whether or no the Roman Church be the only true Church of Christ, which indeed would have required a larger Volume, as I have understood there was one then coming forth, if it had not been prevented by the Treatise of Charity Mistaken, which seemed to make the other intended work a little less seasonable at that time. But Charity Mistaken proves only in General out of some Universal Principles, well backed and made good by choice and solid Authorities, that of two disagreeing in points of Faith, one only without repentance can be saved; which aim exacted no great bulk. And as for D. Potter's Answer, even that also is not so short, as it may seem. For if his marginal notes printed in a small letter were transferred into the Text, the Book would appear to be of some bulk: though indeed it might have been very short, if he had kept himself to the point treated by Charity Mistaken, as shall be declared anon. But contrarily, because the question debated betwixt Charity Mistaken and D. Potter, is a point of the highest consequence that can be imagined, and in regard that there is not a more pernicious Hereste, or rather indeed ground of Atheism, than a perswasion that men of different Religions may be saved, if otherwise, forsooth, they lead a kind of civil and moral life: I conceive, that my chief endeavour was not to be employed in answering D. Potter, but that it was necessary to handle the Question it self somewhat at large, and not only to prove in general, that both Protestants and Catholiques cannot be saved; but to shew also, that Salvation cannot be hoped for out of the Catholique Roman Church; and yet withal, not to omit to answer all the particulars of D. Potter's Book which may any way import. To this end I thought it fit to divide my Reply into two Parts; in the former whereof, the main question is handled by a continued discourse without stepping aside to confute the particulars of D. Potter's Answer, though yet so, as even that in this first Part, I omit not to answer such passages of his, as I find directly in my way, and naturally belong to the points whereof I treat: and in the second Part I answer D. Potter's Treatise, Section by Section, as they lie in order. I here therefore intreat the Reader, that if heartily he desire satisfaction in this so important Question, he do not content himself with that which I say to D. Potter in my second Part, but that he take the First before him, either all, or at least so much as may serve most to his purpose of being satisfied in those doubts which press him most. For which purpose, I have caused a Table of the Chapters of the first Part, together with their Titles and Arguments, to be prefixed before my Reply.

10. I must in like manner intreat him not to recite my reasons and discourses by halfs, but to set them down faithfully and entirely, for as much as in very deed concerns the whole substance of the thing in question; because the want sometime of one word, may chance to make void or lessen the force of the whole Argument. And I am the more solicitous about giving this particular caveat, because I find how ill he hath complied with the premise which he made in his Preface to the Reader, not to omit without answer any one thing of moment in all the discourse of Charity Mistaken. Neither will this course be a cause that his Rejoynder grow too large, but it will be occasion of brevity to him, and free me also from the pains of setting down all the words which he omits, and himself of demonstrating, that what he omitted was not material. Nay, I will assure him, that if he keep himself to the point of every difficulty, and not weary the Reader, and overcharge his margent with unnecessary quotations of Authors in Greek and Latine, and sometime also in Italian and French, together with Proverbs, Sentences of Poets, and such Grammatical fluff, nor affect to cite a multitude of our Catholique School-Divines to no purpose at all; his Book will not exceed a competent size, nor will any man in reason be offended with that length which is regulated by necessity. Again before he come to set down his answer, or propose his Arguments, let him consider very well what may be replyed, and whether his own objections may not be retorted against himself, as the reader will perceive to have happened often to his disadvantage in my Reply against him. But especially I expect, and Truth it self exacts at his hand, that he speak clearly and distinctly, and not seek to walk in darkness, so to delude and deceive his Reader, now saying, and then denying, and always speaking with such ambiguity, as that his greatest care may seem to consist in a certain Art to find a shift, as his occasions might chance, either now, or hereafter to require, and as he might fall out to be urged by diversity of several Arguments. And to the end it may appear that I deal plainly, as I would have him also do, I desire that he declare himself concerning these points.

11. First, whether our Saviour Christ have not always had, and be not ever to have, a visible true Church on earth: and whether the contrary Doctrine be not a damnable heresie.

12. Secondly, what visible Church there was before Luther, disagreeing from the Roman Church, and agreeing with the pretended Church of Protestants.

13. Thirdly, since he will be forced to grant, That there can be assigned no visible true Church of Christ, distinct from the church of Rome, and such Churches as agreed with her, when Luther first appeared; whether it doth not follow, that the hath not erred fundamentally: because every such error destroys the nature and being of the Church, and so our Saviour Christ should have had no visible Church on earth.

14. Fourthly, if the Roman Church did not fall into any Fundamental error, let him tell us how it can be damnable to live in her Communion, or to maintain errors, which are known and confessed, not to be Fundamental, or damnable.

15. Fifthly, if her Errors were not damnable, nor did exclude salvation, how can they be excused from Schism, who forsook her Communion upon pretence of errors, which were not damnable.

16. Sixthly, if D. Potter have a mind to say, that her errors are Damnable, or Fundamental, let him do us so much charity, as to tell us in particular, what those Fundamental Errors be. But he must still remember (and my self must be excused for repeating it) that if he say, The Roman Church erred Fundamentally, he will not be able to shew, that Christ our Lord had any visible Church on earth when Luther appeared: and let him tell us, How Protestants had, or can have, any Church which was universal, and extended herself to all ages, if once he grant that the Roman Church ceased to be the true Church of Christ; and consequently, how they can hope for Salvation, if they deny it to us.

17. Seventhly, whether any one error maintained against any one Truth, though never so small in it self, yet sufficiently propounded as testified or revealed by Almighty God, do not destroy the Nature and Unity of Faith, or at least is not a grievous offence excluding Salvation.

18. Eighthly, if this be so, how can Lutherans, Calvinists, Zwinglians, and all the rest of disagreeing Protestants, hope for Salvation, since it is manifest, that some of them must needs err against some such truth as is testified by Almighty God, either Fundamental, or at least not Fundamental.

19. Ninthly, we constantly urge, and require to have a particular Catalogue of such Points as he calls Fundamental: a Catalogue, I say, in particular, and not only some general definition, or description, wherein Protestants may perhaps agree, though we see that they differ, when they come to assign what Points in particular be Fundamental; and yet upon such a particular Catalogue much depends: as for example, in particular, Whether or no a man doth not err in some Point Fundamental or necessary to salvation; and whether or no Lutherans, Calvinists, and the rest, do disagree in Fundamentals; which if they do, the same heaven cannot receive them all.

20. Tenthly and lastly, I desire that in answering to these Points, he would let us know distinctly, what is the Doctrine of the Protestant English Church concerning them, and what he utters only as his own private opinion.

21. These are the Questions, which, for the present, I find it fit and necessary for me to ask of D. Potter, or any other who will defend his cause, or impugn ours. And it will be in vain to speak vainly, and to tell me, that a Fool may ask more questions in an hour, than a wise man can answer in a year; with such like proverbs as that. For I ask but such questions as for which he gives occasion in his Book, and where he declares not himself, but after so ambiguous and confused a manner, as that Truth it self can scarce tell how to convince him so, but that with ignorant and ill judging men, he will seem to have somewhat left to say for himself, though Papists (as he calls them) and Puritans should press him contrary ways at the same time: and these questions concern things also of high importance: as whereupon the knowledge of God's Church, and true Religion, and consequently, Salvation of the soul, depends. And now because he shall not tax me with being like those men in the Gospel, whom our blessed Lord and Saviour charged with laying heavy burdens upon other mens shoulders, who yet would not touch them with their finger: I oblige my self to answer upon any demand of his, both to all these Questions, if he find that I have not done it already, and to any other, concerning matter of Faith that he shall ask. And I will tell him very plainly, what is Catholique Doctrine, and what is not, that is what is demand, or what is not defined, and rests but in discussion among Divines.

22. And it will be here expected, that he perform these things, as a man who professeth learning should do, not flying from questions which concern things as they are considered in their own nature, to accidental or rare circumstances, of ignorance, incapacity, want of means to be instructed, erroneous conscience, and the like; which being very various and different, cannot be well comprehended under any general Rule. But in delivering general Doctrines, we must consider things, as they be in rerum natura, or per se loquendo (as Divines speak) that is, according to their natures, if all circumstances concur proportionable thereto. As for example, some may for a time have invincible ignorance, even of some Fundamental Article of Faith, through want of capacity, instruction, or the like, and so not offend either in such ignorance or error, and yet we must absolutely say, that error in any one Fundamental point is damnable; because so it is, if we consider things in themselves, abstracting from accidental circumstances in particular persons: as contrarily, if some man judge some act of virtue, or some indifferent action to be a sin, in him it is a sin indeed, by reason of his erroneous conscience; and yet we ought not to say absolutely, that virtuous or indifferent actions are sins: and in all sciences we must distinguish the general Rules from their particular Exceptions. And therefore when, for example, he answers to our Demand, Whether we hold that Card'nalists may be saved, or, Whether their pretended errors be Fundamental and damnable, he is not to change the state of the question, and have recourse to Ignorance, and the like; but to answer concerning the errors being considered what they are apt to be in themselves, and as they are neither increased nor diminished, by accidental circumstances.

23. And the like I say of all the other Points, to which I once again desire an answer without any of these or the like ambiguous terms, in some sort, in some sense, in some degree, which may be explicated afterward, as strictly or largely as may best serve his turn; but let him tell us roundly and particularly in what sort, in what sense, in what degree he understands those, and the like obscure mincing phrases. If he proceed solidly after this manner, and not by way of meer words, more like a Preacher to a vulgar Auditor, than like a learned man with a pen in his hand, thy patience shall be less abused, and truth will also receive more right. And since we have already laid the grounds of the question, much may be said hereafter in few words, If (as I said) he keep close to the real point of every difficulty without wandring into impertinent disputes, or multiplying vulgar and thred-bare objections and arguments, or labouring to prove what no man denies, or making a vain ostentation by citing a number of Schoolmen, which every Pony brought up in Schools is able to do; and if he cite his Authors with such sincerity, as no time need be spent in opening his corruptions; and finally, if he set himself a work with this consideration, that we are to give a most strict account to a most just and impartial Judge, of every period, line, and word that passeth under our pen. For if at the latter day we shall be arraigned for every idle word which is spoken, so much more will that be done for every idle word which is written, as the deliberation wherewith it passeth makes a man guilty of more malice, and as the importance of the matter which is treated of in Books concerning true Faith and Religion, without which no Soul can be saved, makes a mans Errors more material, than they would be if the question were but of toys.

The

The Answer to the PREFACE.

AD 1. & 2. 6. If beginnings be ominous (as they say they are,) D. Potter hath cause to look for great store of uningenuous dealing from you; the very first words you speak of him, viz. That he hath not so much as once truely and really fallen upon the Point in question, being a most unjust and immodest imputation.

2. For first; The Point in question, was not that which you pretend, Whether both Papists and Protestants can be saved in their several Professions? But, Whether you may without uncharitableness affirm that Protestancy unrepented destroys Salvation? And that this is the very question, is most apparent and unquestionable, both from the title of Charity Mistaken, and from the Arguments of the three first Chapters of it, and from the title of your own Reply. And therefore if D. Potter had joyned issue with his Adversary only thus far; and, not medling at all with Papists, but leaving them to stand or fall to their own Master, had proved Protestants living and dying so, capable of Salvation; I cannot see how it could justly be charged upon him, that he had not once truly and really fallen upon the Point in Question. Neither may it be said that your Question here and mine, are in effect the same, seeing it is very possible that the true Answer to the one might have been Affirmative, and to the other Negative. For there is no incongruity, but it may be true, That You and We cannot both be saved: And yet as true, That without uncharitableness you cannot pronounce us damned. For, all ungrounded and unwarrantable sentencing men to Damnation, is either in a propriety of speech uncharitable, or else (which for my purpose is all one,) it is that which Protestants mean, when they say, Papists for damning them are uncharitable. And therefore though the Author of C. M. had proved as strongly as he hath done weakly, That one heaven could not receive Protestants and Papists both; yet certainly, it was very hastily and unwarrantably, and therefore uncharitably concluded, that Protestants were the part that was to be excluded, As, though Jews and Christians cannot both be saved, yet a Jew cannot justly, and therefore not charitably, pronounce a Christian damned.

3. But then secondly, to shew your dealing with him very injurious; I say, he doth speak to this very Question very largely, and very effectually; as by confronting his Work and Charity M. together, will presently appear. Charity M. proves, you say, in general, That there is but one Church. D. Potter tells him, His labour is lost in proving the unity of the Catholick Church, whereof there is no doubt or controversie: and herein, I hope, you will grant he answers right and to the purpose. C. M. proves (you say) secondly, That all Christians are obliged to hearken to the Church. D. Potter answers, It is true: yet not absolutely in all things, but only when she commands those things which God doth not countermand. And this also, I hope, is to his purpose, though not to yours. C. M. proves, you say, thirdly, That the Church must be ever visible and infallible. For her Visibility, D Potter denies it not; and as for her Infallibility, he grants it in Fundamentals, but not in Superstructures. C. M. proves, you say, fourthly, That to separate one's self from the Churches Communion, is Schism. D. Potter grants it, with this exception, unless there be necessary cause to do so; unless the conditions of her Communion be apparently unlawful. C. M. proves, you say, lastly, That to dissent from her Doctrine is Heresie, though it be in points never so few, and never so small, and therefore that the distinction of points fundamental and unfundamental, as it is applied by Protestants, is wholly vain. This D. Potter denies; shews the Reasons brought for it, weak and unconcluding; proves the contrary, by Reasons unanswerable: and therefore that The distinction of points into fundamental and not fundamental, as it is applied by Protestants, is very good. Upon these grounds you say.

say, C. M. clearly evinces, That any least difference in faith cannot stand with salvation, and therefore seeing Catholicks and Protestants disagree in very many points of faith, they both cannot hope to be saved without Repentance, you must mean, without an explicite and particular repentance, and dereliction of their errors; for so C. M. hath declared himself, p. 14. where he hath these words, We may safely say that a man who lives in Protestancy, and who is so far from Repenting it, as that he will not so much as acknowledge it to be a sin, though he be sufficiently informed thereof, &c. From whence it is evident, that in his judgment there can be no repentance of an error, without acknowledging it to be a sin. And to this D. Potter justly opposes: That both Sides, by the confession of both Sides, agree in more points than are simply and indispensably necessary to Salvation, and differ only in such as are not precisely necessary: That it is very possible, a man may die in error, and yet die with Repentance, as for all sins of ignorance, so, in that number, for the errors in which he dies; with a repentance though not explicit and particular which is not simply required, yet implicit and general which is sufficient: so that he cannot but hope, considering the goodness of God, that the truth is retained on both Sides: especially those, of the necessity of Repentance from dead Works and Faith in Jesus Christ, if they be put in Practice, may be an Antidote against the errors held on either Side; to such he means, and says, as being diligent in seeking truth, and desirous to find it, yet miss of it through humane frailty, and die in error. If you will but attentively consider and compare the undertaking of C. M. and D. Potter's performance in all these points, I hope, you will be so ingenuous as to acknowledge, that you have injured him much, in imputing tergiversation to him, and pretending that through his whole Book he hath not once truly and really fallen upon the Point in Question. Neither may you or C. M. conclude him from hence (as covertly you do) An enemy to souls by deceiving them with ungrounded false hopes of Salvation; seeing the hope of salvation cannot be ungrounded, which requires and supposes belief and practice of all things absolutely necessary unto salvation, and repentance of those sins and errors which we fall into by humane frailty: Nor a friend to indifferency in Religion, seeing he gives them only hope of pardon of Errors who are desirous, and, according to the proportion of their opportunities and abilities, industrious to find the truth; or at least truly repentant, that they have not been so. Which Doctrine is very fit to excite men to a constant and impartial search of truth, and very far from teaching them that it is indifferent what Religion they are of; and, without all controversie, very honourable to the Goodness of God, with which how it can consist, not to be satisfied with his servants true endeavours to know his will, and do it, without full and exact performance, I leave it to you and all good men to judge.

4. As little justice me-thinks you shew, in quarrelling with him for descending to the particular disputes here mentioned by you. For to say nothing that many of these Questions are immediately and directly pertinent to the business in hand, as the 1. 2, 3. 5, 6. and all of them fall in of themselves into the stream of his Discourse, and are not drawn in by him, and besides are touched for the most part, rather than handled; to say nothing of all this, you know right well, if he conclude you erroneous in any one of all these, be it but in the Communion in one kind, or the Language of your service, the infallibility of your Church is evidently overthrown: And this being done, I hope, there will be no such necessity of hearkening to her in all things: It will be very possible to separate from her Communion in some things, without Schism; and from her Doctrine, so far as it is erroneous, without Heresie: Then all that she proposes will not be, eo ipso, fundamental, because she proposes it: and so presently all Charity Mistaken will vanish into smoak, and clouds, and nothing.

5. You say he was loth to affirm plainly, that generally both Catholicks and Protestants may be saved: which yet is manifest he doth affirm plainly, of Protestants throughout his Book; and of erring Papists that have sincerely sought the truth, and and failed of it, and die with a general repentance, p. 77, 78. And yet you deceive your self, if you conceive he had any other necessity to do so, but only that he thought it true. For we may and do pretend that before Luther there were many true Churches, besides, the Roman, which agreed not with her: in particular, The Greek Church. So that what you say is evidently true, is indeed evidently false. Besides, if he had had any necessity to make use of you in this matter, he needed not for this end to say, that now in your Church Salvation may be had, but only that before Luthers time it might be: Then when your means of knowing the Truth were not so great, and when your ignorance might be more invincible, and therefore more excusable. So that you may see, if you please, it is not for ends, but for the love of truth, that we are thus charitable to you.

6. Neither is it material that these particulars he speaks against, are not fundamental errors; for though they be not destructive of salvation, yet the convincing of them may be, and is, destructive enough of his Adversarie's assertion: and if you be the man I take you for, you will not deny they are so. For certainly, no Consequence can be more palpable than this; The Church of Rome doth err in this or that, therefore it is not infallible. And this perhaps you perceived your self, and therefore demanded not Since they be not fundamental, what imports it whether we hold them or no? simply: But, for as much as concerns our possibility to be saved. As if we were not bound by the love of God and the love of Truth to be zealous in the defence of all Truths, that are any way profitable, though not simply necessary to salvation! Or, as if any good man could satisfie his conscience without being so affected and resolved! Our Saviour himself having assured us, * That he that shall break one of his least Commandments (some whereof you pretend are concerning venial sins, and consequently the keeping of them not necessary to salvation) and shall so teach men, shall be called the least in the Kingdom of Heaven. * Mat. 5, 19.

7. But then it imports very much, though not for the possibility that you may be saved, yet for the probability that you will be so: because the holding of these errors, though it did not merit, might yet occasion damnation. As the doctrine of Indulgences may take away the fear of Purgatory, and the doctrine of Purgatory the fear of Hell; as you well know it does too frequently. So that though a godly man might be saved with these errors, yet by means of them, many are made vicious, and so damned. By them I say, though not for them. No godly Layman who is verily persuaded that there is neither impiety nor superstition in the use of your Latine-Service, shall be damned, I hope, for being present at it; yet the want of that devotion which the frequent hearing the Offices understood, might happily beget in them, the want of that instruction and edification which it might afford them, may very probably hinder the salvation of many which otherwise might have been saved. Besides, though the matter of an Error may be only something profitable, not necessary, yet the neglect of it may be a damnable sin; As, not to regard venial sins is in the Doctrine of your Schools, mortal. Lastly, as venial sins, you say, dispose men to mortal; so the erring from some profitable, though lesser truth, may dispose a man to error in greater matters. As for example: The belief of the Pope's infallibility is, I hope, not unpardonably damnable to every one that holds it; yet if it be a falshood (as most certainly it is) it puts a man into a very congruous disposition to believe Antichrist, if he should chance to get into that See.

8. Ad §. 3. In his Distinction of, points fundamental and not fundamental, he may seem, you say, to have touched the point, but does not so indeed. Because though he says, There are some points so fundamental, as that all are obliged to believe them explicitly, yet he tells you not, whether a man may disbelieve any other points of faith, which are sufficiently presented to his understanding, as Truths revealed by Almighty God. Touching which matter of Sufficient Proposal, I beseech you to come out of the clouds, and tell us roundly and plainly, what you mean by Points of faith sufficiently propounded to a man's understanding, as Truths revealed by God. Perhaps you mean such, as the person to whom they are proposed, understands sufficiently to be Truths revealed by God. But how then can he possibly chuse but believe them? Or how is it not an apparent contradiction, that a man should disbelieve what himself understands to be a Truth; or any Christian what he understands or but believes to be testified by God? Dr. Potter might well think it superfluous to tell you This is damnable; because indeed it is impossible. And yet one may very well think, by your saying, as you do hereafter, That the impiety of heresie consists in calling God's truth in question, that this should be your meaning. Or do you esteem all those things sufficiently presented to his understanding as Divine truths, which by you, or any other man, or any Company of men whatsoever, are declared to him to be so? I hope you will not say so: for this were to oblige a man to believe all the Churches, and all the men in the world, whensoever they pretend to propose Divine Revelations. Dr. Potter, I assure you from him, would never have told you this neither. Or do you mean by sufficiently propounded as Divine Truths, all that your Church propounds for such? That you may not, neither; For the Question between us, is this; Whether your Churches Proposition be a sufficient Proposition? And therefore to suppose this, is to suppose the Question; which you know in Reasoning is always a fault. Or lastly, do you mean (for I know not else what possibly you can mean,) by sufficiently presented to his understanding as revealed by God; that which, all things considered, is so proposed to him, that he might and should and would believe it to be true and revealed by God, were it not for some voluntary and avoidable fault of his own that interposeth it self between his understanding and the truth presented to it; This is the best construction that I can make of your words; and if you speak of truths thus proposed and rejected, let it be as damnable, as you please, to deny or disbelieve them. But then I cannot but be amazed to hear you say, That Dr. Potter never tells you whether there be any other Points of faith, besides those which we are bound to believe explicitly, which a man may deny or disbelieve, though they be sufficiently presented to his understanding as truths revealed or testified by Almighty God; seeing the light it self is no more clear than Dr. Potter's Declaration of himself for the Negative in this Question, p. 245, 246, 247, 249, 250. of his Book. Where he treats at large of this very Argument, beginning his discourse thus: "It seems fundamental to the faith, and for the "salvation of every member of the Church, that he acknowledge and believe all such "points of faith, as whereof he may be convinced that they belong to the Doctrine "of Jesus Christ." To this conviction he requires three things; Clear Revelation, "Sufficient Proposition, and Capacity and Understanding in the Hearer. For want of "clear Revelation, he frees the Church before Christ and the Disciples of Christ, from "any damnable error, though they believed not those things, which he that should now "deny, were no Christian. To Sufficient Proposition, he requires two things: 1. That "the points be perspicuously laid open in themselves. 2. So forcibly, as may serve to "remove reasonable doubts to the contrary, and to satisfie a teachable mind concerning "it, against the Principles in which he hath been bred to the contrary. This Pro- "position, he says, is not limited to the Pope or Church, but extended to all means "whatsoever, by which a man may be convinced in conscience, that the matter pro- "posed is divine Revelation; which he professes to be done sufficiently, not only when "his Conscience doth expressly bear witness to the truth; but when it would do so, if "it were not choaked, and blinded by some unruly and unmortified lust in the will. "The difference being not great between him that is wilfully blind, and him that "knowingly gainsayeth the Truth. The third thing he requires, is Capacity and "Ability to apprehend the Proposal, and the Reasons of it: the want whereof excuseth "fools and mad men, &c. But where there is no such impediment, and the will "of God is sufficiently propounded, there (saith he) he that opposeth is convinced "of error; and he who is thus convinced, is an Heretick; and Heresie is a work of "the

"the Flesh which excludeth from salvation, (he means without Repentance.) And "hence it followeth, that it is fundamental to a Christian's faith, and necessary for "his salvation, that he believe all revealed truths of God, whereof he may be con- "vinced that they are from God." This is the conclusion of Dr. Potter's Discourse; many passages whereof you take notice of in your subsequent disputations, and make your advantage of them. And therefore I cannot but say again, that it amazeth me to hear you say, that he declines this Question, and never tells you whether or no there be any other points of faith, which being sufficiently propounded as divine Revelations may be denied and disbelieved. He tells you plainly, there are none such: and therefore you cannot say, that he tells you not whether there be any such. Again, it is almost as strange to me, why you should say, this was the only thing in question, Whether a man may deny or disbelieve any point of faith, sufficiently presented to his understanding as a truth revealed by God. For to say that any thing is a thing in question, me thinks, at the first hearing of the words, imports, that it is by some affirmed, and denied by others. Now you affirm, I grant; but, What Protestant ever denied, that it was a sin, to give God the lie? Which is the first and most obvious sense of these words. Or, which of them ever doubted, that to disbelieve is then a fault, when the matter is so proposed to a man, that he might and should, and, were it not for his own fault, would believe it? Certainly, he that questions either of these, justly deserves to have his wits called in question, Produce any one Protestant that ever did so, and I will give you leave to say, It is the only thing in question. But then I must tell you, that your ensuing Argument, viz. To deny a truth witnessed by God is damnable, But of two that disagree one must of necessity deny some such truth, Therefore one only can be saved; is built upon a ground clean different from this postulate. For though it be always a fault to deny what either I do know, or should know, to be testified by God; yet that which by a cleanly conveyance you put in the place hereof, To deny a truth witnessed by God simply, without the circumstance of being known or sufficiently proposed, is so far from being certainly damnable, that it may be many times done without any the least fault at all. As if God should testifie something to a man in the Indies, I that had no assurance of this testification should not be obliged to believe it. For in such cases the Rule of the Law hath place, Idem est non esse & non apparere: not to be at all, and not to appear to me, is to me all one. If I had not come and spoken unto you (saith our Saviour) you had had no sin.

10. As little necessity is there for that which follows: That of two disagreeing in a matter of faith, one must deny some such truth. Whether by [such] you understand, Testified at all by God; or, testified and sufficiently propounded. For it is very possible the matter in controversie may be such a thing wherein God hath not at all declared himself, or not so fully and clearly, as to oblige all men to hold one way; and yet be so over-valued by the parties in variance, as to be esteemed a matter of faith, and one of those things of which our Saviour says, He that believeth not shall be damn'd. Who sees not that it is possible, two Churches may excommunicate and damn each other for keeping Christmass ten days sooner or later; as well as Victor excommunicated the Churches of Asia, for differing from him about Easter day? And yet I believe you will confess, that God had not then declared himself about Easter, nor hath now about Christmass. Anciently some good Catholick Bishops excommunicated and damned others for holding there were Antipodes; and in this question I would fain know on which side was the sufficient proposal. The contra-Remonstrants differ from the Remonstrants about the point of Predetermination as a matter of faith: I would know in this thing also, which way God hath declared himself; whether for Predetermination, or against it. Stephen Bishop of Rome held it as a matter of Faith and Apostolick Tradition,

That Hereticks gave true Baptism: Others there were, and they as good Catholicks as he, that held that this was neither matter of Faith, nor matter of Truth. Justin Martyr, and Irenæus, held the Doctrine of the Milleneries as a matter of faith: and though Justin Martyr deny it, yet you, I hope, will affirm, that some good Christians held the contrary. St. Augustine, I am sure, held the communicating of Infants as much Apostolick tradition, as the Baptizing of them: whether the Bishop and the Church of Rome of his time, held so too, or held otherwise, I desire you to determine. But, sure I am, the Church of Rome at this present holds the contrary. The same St. Austin held it no matter of faith that the Bishops of Rome were Judges of Appeals from all parts of the Church Catholick, no not in Major Causes and Major Persons: whether the Bishop or Church of Rome did then hold the contrary, do you resolve me; but now I am resolved, they do so. In all these differences, the point in question is esteemed and proposed by one side at least as a matter of faith, and by the other rejected, as not so: and either this is to disagree in matters of faith, or you will have no means to shew that we do disagree. Now then to shew you how weak and sandy the foundation is, on which the whole Fabrick both of your Book and Church depends, answer me briefly to this Dilemma. Either, in these oppositions, one of the opposite Parts erred damnably, and denied God's truth sufficiently propounded; or they did not. If they did, then they which do deny God's truth sufficiently propounded, may go to heaven; and then you are rash and uncharitable in excluding us, though we were guilty of this fault. If not, then there is no such necessity that of two disagreeing about a matter of faith, one should deny God's truth sufficiently propounded. And so the Major and Minor of your Argument, are proved false. Yet though they were as true as Gospel, and as evident as Mathematical Principles, the Conclusion (so impertinent is it to the Premises) might still be false. For that which naturally illues from these Propositions is not, Therefore one only can be saved: But, Therefore one of them does something that is damnable. But, with what Logick, or what Charity you can infer either as the immediate production of the former premises, or as a Corollary from this Conclusion, Therefore one only can be saved, I do not understand; unless you will pretend that this Consequence is good, Such a one doth something damnable, therefore he shall certainly be damned: Which whether it be not to overthrow the Article of our Faith, which promises remission of sins upon repentance; and consequently, to ruine the Gospel of Christ, I leave it to the Pope and the Cardinals to determine. For if against this it be alledged, that no man can repent of the sin wherein he dies: This Muce I have already stopped, by shewing, that if it be a sin of Ignorance, this is no ways incongruous.

11. Ad §. 4. You proceed in sleighting and disgracing your Adversary, Pretending his objections are mean and vulgar, and such as have been answered a thousand times. But if your cause were good, these Arts would be needless. For though some of his Objections have been often shifted, by men * that make a profession of devising shifts and evasions to save themselves and their Religion from the pressure of truth, by men that are resolved they will say something, though they can say nothing to purpose; yet I doubt not to make it appear, that neither by others have they been truly and really satisfied; and that the best Answer you give them, is to call them, Mean and vulgar Objections.

12. Ad §. 5. But this pains might have been spared: For the substance of his Discourse is in a Sermon of D. Ushers, and confuted four years ago by Paulus Veridicus. It seems then, the substance of your Reply is in Paulus Veridicus, and so your pains also might well have been spared. But had there been no necessity to help and piece out your confuting his Arguments with disgracing his Person, (which yet you cannot do) you would have considered, that to them who compare D. Potters Book, and the Archbishops Sermon, this aspersion will presently appear a poor Detraction, not to be answered, but scorned. To say nothing, that in D. Potter, being

* I mean the Divines of Douay: whose profession we have in your Belgick Expurgatories, p. 12. in cursoria Bertrami, in these words: Seeing in other ancient Catholicks, we let watt, extenuate, and excuse very many errors, and devising some shift often deny them, and put upon them a convenient sense when they are objected to us in disputations and conflicts with our Adversaries; we see no reason why Bertram may not deserve the same equity.

being to answer a Book by express Command from Royal Authority to leave any thing material unsaid, because it had been said before, especially being spoken at large, and without any relation to the Discourse which he was to answer, had been a ridiculous vanity and foul prevarication.

13. Ad §. 6. In your sixth Parag. I let all pass saving only this, That a persuasion that men of different Religions (you must mean, or else you speak not to the point, Christians of divers Opinions and Communions) may be saved, is a most pernitious Heresie, and even a ground of Atheism. What strange extractions Chymistry can make I know not; but sure I am, he that by reason would infer this Conclusion, That there is no God; from this ground, That God will save men in different Religions, must have a higher strain in Logick, than you or I have hitherto made shew of. In my apprehension, the other part of the Contradiction. That there is a God, should much rather follow from it. And whether Contradictions will flow from the same fountain, let the Learned judge. Perhaps you will say, You intended not to deliver here a positive and measured truth, and which you expected to be called to account for; but only a high and tragical expression of your just detestation of the wicked Doctrine against which you write. If you mean so, I let it pass: only I am to advertise the less-wary Reader, that, passionate Expressions, and vehement Asseverations are no Arguments; unless it be, of the weakness of the cause that is defended by them, or the man that defends it. And to remember you of what Boethius says of some such things as these, —— Nubila mens est, Hæc ubi regnant. For my part, I am not now in passion; neither will I speak one word which I think I cannot justifie to the full: and I say, and will maintain, that to say, That Christians of different Opinions and Communions (such I mean, who hold all those things that are simply necessary to Salvation) may not obtain pardon for the Errors wherein they die ignorantly, by a general Repentance; is so far from being a ground of Atheism, that to say the contrary, is to cross in Diameter: main Article of our Creed, and to overthrow the Gospel of Christ.

14. Ad §. 7. & 8. To the two next Parag. I have but two words to say. The one is, that I know no Protestants that hold it necessary to be able to prove a Perpetual Visible Church distinct from Yours. Some perhaps undertake to do so, as a matter of courtesie; but I believe you will be much to seek for any one that holds it necessary, For though you say, that Christ hath promised there shall be a perpetual Visible Church; yet you your selves do not pretend that he hath promised, there shall be Histories and Records always extant of the Professors of it in all Ages: nor that he hath any where enjoyned us to read those Histories, that we may be able to shew them.

15. The other is, That Breerelie's great exactness, which you magnifie so, and amplifie, is no very certain demonstration of his fidelity. A Romance may be told with as much variety of circumstances, as a true Story.

16. Ad 9, & 10. §. Your desires that I would, in this rejoynder, Avoid impertinencies: Not impose doctrines upon you which you disclaim: Set down the substance of your Reasons faithfully and entirely: Not weary the Reader with unnecessary Quotations: Object nothing to you which I can answer my self, or which may be returned upon my self: And lastly, (which you repeat again in the end of your Preface) Speak as clearly and distinctly and univocally as possibly I can, are all very reasonable, and shall be by me most punctually and fully satisfied. Only I have reason to complain, that you give us rules only, and not good example in keeping them. For in some of these things I shall have frequent occasion to shew, that Medice, cura teipsum, may very justly be said unto you; especially for objecting what might very easily have been answered by you, and may be very justly returned upon you.

17. To your ensuing demands, though some of them be very captious and ensnaring; yet I will give you as clear and plain ingenuous Answers as possibly I can.

18. Ad

18. Ad 11 §. To the first then, about the Perpetuity of the visible Church, my Answer is: That I believe our Saviour, ever since his Ascension, hath had in some place or other a Visible true Church on earth: I mean a Company of men, that professed at least so much truth as was absolutely necessary for their Salvation. And I believe that there will be somewhere or other such a Church to the Worlds end. But the contrary Doctrine, I do at no hand believe to be a damnable Heresie.

19. Ad §. 12. To the second, What Visible Church there was before Luther, disagreeing from the Roman? I answer, that before Luther there were many Visible Churches, in many things disagreeing from the Roman: But not that the whole Catholick Church disagreed from her, because she her self was a Part of the Whole, though much corrupted. And to undertake to name a Catholick Church disagreeing from her, is to make her no Part of it, which we do not, nor need not pretend. And for men agreeing with Protestants in all points, we will then produce them, when you shall either prove it necessary to be done, which you know we absolutely deny; or when you shall produce a perpetual succession of Professors, which in all points have agreed with you, and disagreed from you in nothing. But this my promise, to deal plainly with you, I conceive, and so intended it to be very like his, who undertook to drink up the Sea, upon condition, that he to whom the promise was made, should first stop the Rivers from running in. For this unreasonable request which you make to us, is to your selves so impossible, that in the very next Age after the Apostles, you will never be able to name a man, whom you can prove to have agreed with you in all things, nay, (if you speak of such, whose Works are extant and unquestioned) whom we cannot prove to have disagreed from you in many things. Which I am so certain of, that I will venture my credit, and my life upon it.

20. Ad §. 13. To the third, Whether, seeing there cannot be assigned any visible true Church distinct from the Roman, it follows not that she erred not fundamentally? I say, in our sense of the word Fundamental, it does follow, For, if it be true, that there was then no Church distinct from the Roman, then it must be, either because there was no Church at all, which we deny: Or because the Roman Church was the whole Church, which we also deny: Or because she was a Part of the Whole, which we grant. And if she were a true Part of the Church, then she retained those truths which were simply necessary to Salvation and held no errors which were inevitably and unpardonably destructive of it. For this is precisely necessary to constitute any man or any Church a member of the Church Catholick. In our sense therefore of the word Fundamental, I hope she erred not fundamentally: but in your sense of the word, I fear she did: that is, she held something to be Divine Revelation, which was not; something not to be, which was.

21 Ad §. 14. To the fourth. How it could be damnable to maintain her Errors, if they were not fundamental? I answer. 1. Though it were not damnable, yet if it were a fault, it was not to be done. For a venial sin with you is not damnable; yet you say, it is not to be committed for the procuring any good. Non est faciendum malum vel minimum, ut eveniat bonum vel maximum. 2. It is damnable to maintain an error against Conscience, though the error in it self, and to him that believes it, be not damnable. Nay, the profession not only of an error, but even of a truth, if not believed when you think on it again, I believe you will confess to be a mortal sin; unless you will say, Hypocrisie and Simulation in Religion is not so. 3. Though we say, the Errors of the Roman Church were not destructive of Salvation, but pardonable even to them that died in them, upon a general repentance: yet we deny not but in themselves they were damnable. Nay, the very saying they were pardonable, implies they needed pardon, and therefore in themselves were damnable: damnable meritoriously, though not effectually. As a poyson may be deadly in it self, and yet not kill him, that together with the Poyson takes an Antidote: or as Felony may may deserve death, and yet not bring it on him that obtains the Kings Pardon.

22. Ad §. 15. To the fifth. How they can be excused from Schism, who forsook her Communion upon pretence of Errors which were not damnable! I answer. All that we forsake in you, is only the belief, and practice, and profession of your Errors. Hereupon you cast us out of your Communion. And then with a strange, and contradictious, and ridiculous hypocrisie, complain that we forsake it. As if a man should thrust his friend out of doors, and then be offended at his departure. But for us not to forsake the belief of your Errors, having discovered them to be Errors, was impossible; and therefore to do so could not be damnable, believing them to be Errors. Not to forsake the practice and profession of them, had been damnable hypocrisie; supposing that (which you vainly run away with, and take for granted) those Errors in themselves were not damnable. Now to do so, and, as matters now stand, not to forsake your Communion, is apparently contradictious: seeing the condition of your Communion is, that we must profess to believe all your Doctrines not only not to be damnable Errors (which will not content you,) but also to be certain and necessary and revealed Truths. So that to demand, Why we forsake your Communion upon pretence of Errors which were not damnable, is, in effect, to demand why we forsook it upon our forsaking it? For to pretend that there are Errors in your Church though not damnable, is ipso facto, to forsake your Communion, and to do that which both in your account, and as you think, in Gods account, puts him that does so, out of your Communion. So that either you must free your Church, from requiring the belief of any Error whatsoever, damnable and not damnable; or whether you will or no, you must free us from Schism. For Schism there cannot be, in leaving your Communion, unless we were obliged to continue in it. Man cannot be obliged by Man, but to what either formally or vertually he is obliged by God; for, all just power is from God. God the Eternal Truth neither can nor will oblige us to believe any the least and the most innocent falshood to be a Divine truth, that is, to err; nor, to profess a known Error, which is to lie. So that if you require the belief of any Error among the conditions of your Communion, our Obligation to communicate with you ceaseth, and so the imputation of Schism to us vanisheth into nothing; but lies heavy upon you for making our separation from you just and necessary, by requiring unnecessary and unlawful conditions of your Communion. Hereafter therefore, I intreat you, let not your demand be, How could we forsake your Communion without Schism, seeing you erred not dammably? But, How we could do so without Schism, seeing you erred not at all? Which if either you do prove, or we cannot disprove it, we will (I at least will for my part) return to your Communion, or subscribe my self Schismatick. In the mean time, μένωμεν ὥσπερ ἐσμεν.

23. Yet notwithstanding all your Errors, we do not renounce your Communion totally and absolutely, but only leave Communicating with you in the practice and profession of your Errors. The trial whereof will be to propose some form of worshipping God, taken wholly out of Scripture; and herein if we refuse to joyn with you, then, and not till then, may you justly say, We have utterly and absolutely abandoned your Communion.

24. Ad §. 16. Your sixth demand I have already satisfied in my Answers to the Second and the Fourth: and in my Reply ad §. 2. toward the end. And though you say, your repeating must be excused, yet I dare not be so confident, and therefore forbear it.

25. Ad §. 17. To the seventh, Whether error against any one truth sufficiently propounded as testified by God, destroy not the Nature and Unity of faith, or, at least, is not a grievous offence excluding salvation? I answer; If you suppose, as you seem to do, the proposition so sufficient, that the party to whom it is made is convinced that it is from God, so that the denial of it involves also with it the denial of Gods veracity; any such Error destroys both faith and salvation. But if the Propofal be only fo fufficient, not, that the party to whom it is made is convinced, but only that he fhould, and but for his own fault, would have been convinced of the Divine Verity of the Doctrine propofed; The crime then is not fo great; for the belief of Gods Veracity may well conſiſt with ſuch an Error. Yet a fault I confeſs it is, and (without Repentance) damnable, if, all circumſtances conſidered, the Propofal be fufficient. But then I muſt tell you, that the Propofal of the preſent Roman Church is only pretended to be fufficient for this purpoſe, but is not ſo: eſpecially all the Rays of the Divinity, which they pretend to ſhine ſo conſpicuouſly in her Propoſals, being ſo darkned and even extinguiſhed with a cloud of contradiction, from Scripture, Reaſon, and the Ancient Church.

26. Ad §. 18. To the Eighth, How of diſagreeing Proteſtants, both parts may hope for ſalvation, ſeeing ſome of them muſt needs err againſt ſome Truth teſtified by God? I anſwer, The moſt diſagreeing Proteſtants that are, yet thus far agree; 1. That thoſe Books of Scripture which were never doubted of in the Church, are the undoubted Word of God, and a perfect Rule of faith. 2. That the ſenſe of them, which God intended, whatſoever it is, is certainly true; So that they believe implicitly even thoſe very Truths againſt which they err; and, Why an implicite faith in Chriſt and his Word, ſhould not ſuffice as well as an implicite faith in your Church? I have deſired to be reſolved by many of your Side, but never could. 3. That they are to uſe their beſt endeavours to believe the Scripture in the true ſenſe, and to live according to it. This if they perform (as I hope many on all Sides do) truly and ſincerely, it is impoſſible but that they ſhould believe aright in all things neceſſary to ſalvation; that is, in all thoſe things which appertain to the Covenant between God and man in Chriſt; for ſo much, is not only plainly, but frequently, contained in Scripture. And believing aright touching the Covenant, if they for their parts perform the condition required of them, which is ſincere obedience, Why ſhould they not expect that God will perform his promiſe and give them ſalvation? For, as for other things which lie without the Covenant, and are therefore leſs neceſſary, if by reaſon of the ſeeming conflict which is oftentimes between Scripture and Reaſon, and Authority on the one Side; and Scripture, Reaſon, and Authority on the other; if by reaſon of the variety of tempers, abilities, educations, and unavoidable prejudices, whereby mens underſtandings are variouſly formed and faſhioned, they do embrace ſeveral Opinions, whereof ſome muſt be erroneous; to ſay that God will damn them for ſuch Errors, who are lovers of him, and lovers of Truth, is to rob man of his comfort, and God of his goodneſs; it is to make Man deſperate, and God a Tyrant. But they deny Truths teſtified by God, and therefore ſhall be damned. Yes, if they knew them to be thus teſtified by him and yet would deny them, that were to give God the lie, and queſtionleſs damnable. But if you ſhould deny a truth which God had teſtified, but only to a man in the Indies, (as I ſaid before,) and this teſtification you had never heard of, or at leaſt had no ſufficient reaſon to believe that God had ſo teſtified, Would not you think it a hard caſe to be damned for ſuch a denial? Yet conſider, I pray, a little more attentively the difference between them, and you will preſently acknowledge, the queſtion between them is not at any time, or in any thing, Whether God ſays true or no? or, Whether he ſays this or no? But, ſuppoſing he ſays this, and ſays true, Whether he means this or no? as for example: Between Lutherans, Calviniſts, and Zuinglians, it is agreed that Chriſt ſpake theſe words, This is my Body; and that, whatſoever he meant in ſaying ſo is true: But what he meant and how he is to be underſtood, that is the queſtion. So that though ſome of them deny a Truth by God intended, yet you can with no Reaſon or Juſtice accuſe them of denying the truth of Gods Teſtimony, unleſs you can plainly ſhew that God hath declared, and that plainly and clearly, what was his meaning in theſe words. I ſay, plainly and clearly. For he that ſpeaks obſcurely and ambiguouſly, and no where declares himſelf plainly, ſurely he hath no reaſon to be much offended if he be miſtaken. When there-therefore you can ſhew, that in this and all other Controverſies, God hath interpoſed his Teſtimony on one ſide or other; ſo that either they do ſee it, and will not; or, were it not for their own voluntary and avoidable fault, might and ſhould ſee it and do not; let all ſuch Errors be as damnable as you pleaſe to make them. In the mean while, if they ſuffer themſelves neither to be betrai'd into their Errors, nor kept in them by any ſin of their will; if they do their beſt endeavour to free themſelves from all Errors, and yet fail of it through humane frailty; ſo well am I perſwaded of the goodneſs of God, that if in me alone, ſhould meet a confluence of all ſuch Errors of all the Proteſtants in the World, that were thus qualified, I ſhould not be ſo much afraid of them all, as I ſhould be to ask pardon for them. For, whereas that which you affright us with, of calling Gods Veracity in Queſtion, is but a Panick fear, a fault that no man thus qualified, is or can be guilty of; to ask pardon of ſimple and purely involuntary Errors is tacitely to imply that God is angry with us for them, and that were to impute to him the ſtrange tyranny of requiring brick, when he gives no ſtraw; of expecting to gather, where he ſtrewed not; to reap where he ſowed not: of being offended with us for not doing what he knows we cannot do. This I ſay upon a ſuppoſition, that they do their beſt endeavours to know Gods will and do it; which he that denies to be poſſible, knows not what he ſays; for he ſays in effect, That men cannot do, what they can do; for to do what a man can do, is to do his beſt endeavour. But becauſe this Suppoſition, though certainly poſſible, is very rare, and admirable, I ſay, ſecondly, that I am verily perſwaded, that God will not impute errors to them as ſins, who uſe ſuch a meaſure of induſtry, in finding truth, as humane prudence and ordinary diſcretion (their abilities and opportunities, their diſtractions and hinderances, and all other things conſidered) ſhall adviſe them unto, in a matter of ſuch conſequence. But if herein alſo we fail, then our errors begin to be maligant, and juſtly imputable, as offences againſt God, and that love of his truth which he requires in us. You will ſay then, that for thoſe erring Proteſtants, which are in this caſe, which evidently are far the greater part, they ſin damnably in erring, and therefore there is little hope of their Salvation. To which I anſwer, that the conſequence of this Reaſon is ſomewhat ſtrong againſt a Proteſtant; but much weakned by coming out of the mouth of a Papiſt. For all ſins with you are not damnable; and therefore Proteſtant errors might be ſins, and yet not damnable. But yet out of courteſie to you, we will remove this rub out of your way; and for the preſent ſuppoſe them mortal ſins; and is there then no hope of Salvation for him that commits them? Not, you will ſay, if he die in them without repentance; and ſuch Proteſtants you ſpeak of, Who without Repentance die in their Errors. Yea but what if they die in their errors with repentance? then I hope you will have Charity enough to think they may be ſaved. Charity Miſtaken takes it indeed for granted, that this ſuppoſition is deſtructive of it ſelf; and that it is impoſſible, and incongruous, that a man ſhould repent of thoſe errors wherein he dies; or die in thoſe whereof he repents. But it was wiſely done of Him to take it for granted; for moſt certainly, He could not have ſpoken one word of ſenſe for the confirmation of it. For ſeeing Proteſtants believe, as well as you, God's infinite and moſt admirable perfections in himſelf, more than moſt worthy of all poſſible love: ſeeing they believe, as well as you, his infinite goodneſs to them, in creating them of nothing; in creating them according to his own Image; in creating all things for their uſe and benefit; in ſtreaming down his favours on them every moment of their lives; in deſigning them, if they ſerve him, to infinite and eternal happineſs; in redeeming them, not with corruptible things, but the precious blood of his beloved Son; ſeeing they believe, as well as you, his infinite goodneſs and patience towards them, in expecting their Converſion; in wooing, alluring, leading, and by all means which his wiſdom can ſuggeſt unto him, and man's nature is capable of, drawing them to Repentance and Salvation: Seeing they believe theſe things as well as you, and, for ought you know, consider them as much as you, (and if they do not, it is not their Religion, but They that are to blame) what can hinder, but that the consideration of God's most infinite goodness to them, and their own almost infinite wickedness against him, God's Spirit co-operating with them, may raise them to a true and sincere and a cordial love of God? And seeing sorrow for having injured or offended the person beloved, or when we fear we may have offended him, is the most natural effect of true love; what can hinder, but that love which hath oft-times constrained them to lay down their lives for God, (which our Saviour assures us is the noblest sacrifice we can offer) may produce in them an universal sorrow for all their sins, both which they know they have committed, and which they fear they may have? In which number, their being negligent, or not dispassionate, or not unprejudicate enough in seeking the truth, and the effect thereof, their errors, if they be sins, cannot but be comprized. In a word, what should hinder, but that that Prayer——Delicta sua quis intellegit? Who can understand his faults? Lord, cleanse thou me from my secret sins, may be heard and accepted by God, as well from a Protestant that dies in some errors, as from a Papist that dies in some other sins of Ignorance, which perhaps he might more easily have discovered to be sins, than a Protestant could his errors to be errors? As well from a Protestant, that held some error, which (as he conceived) God's word, and his reason, (which is also in some sort God's word) lead him unto; as from a Dominican, who perhaps took up his opinion upon trust, not because he had reason to believe it true, but because it was the Opinion of his Order; for the same man, if he had light upon another Order, could in all probability, have been of the other opinion: For what else is the cause, that generally all the Dominicans are of one opinion, and all the Jesuits of the other? I say, from a Dominican who took up his opinion upon trust; and that such an opinion (if we believe the Writers of your Order) as, if it be granted true, it were not a point-matter what opinions any man held, or what actions any man did; for the best would be as bad as the worst, and the worst as good as the best. And yet such is the partiality of your Hypocrisie, that, of disagreeing Papists, neither shall deny the truth testified by God, but both may hope for salvation: but, of disagreeing Protestants (though they differ in the same thing) one side must deny God's Testimony, and be incapable of salvation. That a Dominican through culpable negligence, living and dying in his error, may repent of it, though he knows it not; or be saved, though he do not: But if a Protestant do the very same thing, in the very same point, and die in his error, his case is desperate. The sum of all that hath been said to this Demand, is this. 1. That no erring Protestant denies any truth testified by God, under this formality, as testified by him; nor which they know or believe to be testified by him. And therefore it is an horrible calumny in you to say, They call God's Veracity in question. For God's undoubted and unquestioned Veracity, is to them the ground why they hold all they do hold: neither do they hold any opinion so stiffly, but they will forgo it rather than this one, That all which God says is true. 2. God hath not so clearly and plainly declared himself in most of these things which are in Controversie between Protestants, but that an honest man, whose heart is right to God, and one that is a true lover of God, and of his truth, may, by reason of the conflict of contrary Reasons on both sides, very easily, and therefore excusably mistake, and embrace error for truth, and reject truth for error. 3. If any Protestant or Papist be betrayed into, or kept in any Error, by any sin of his will (as it is to be feared many millions are) such Error is, as the cause of it, sinful and damnable: yet not exclusive of all hope of Salvation, but pardonable, if discovered, upon a particular explicite repentance; if not discovered, upon a general and implicite Repentance for all Sins known and unknown: in which number all sinful Errors must of necessity be contained.

17. Ad §. 19. To the 9. wherein you are so urgent for a particular Catalogue of of Fundamentals: I answer almost in your own words, that we also constantly urge and require to have a particular Catalogue of your Fundamentals, whether they be written Verities, or unwritten Traditions, or Church-Definitions, all which, you say, integrate the material object of your Faith: In a word, of all such Points as are defined and sufficiently proposed; so that whosoever denies, or doubts of any of them, is certainly in the state of damnation. A Catalogue I say in particular of the Propofals: and not only some general definition, or description, under which you lurk deceitfully, of what and what only is sufficiently propofed: wherein yet you do not very well agree. For many of you hold the Pope's proposal Ex Cathedra, to be sufficient and obliging: Some, a Council without a Pope: Some, of neither of them severally, but only both together: Some, not this neither in matter of manners, which Bellarmine acknowledges, and tels us, it is all one in effect, as if they denied it sufficient in matter of faith: Some not in matter of faith neither think this proposal infallible, without the acceptation of the Church universal: Some deny the infallibility of the Present Church: and only make the Tradition of all Ages the infallible Propounder. Yet if you were agreed, what, and what only, is the infallible Propounder, this would not satisfie us; nor yet to say that all is Fundamental which is propounded sufficiently by him. For though agreeing in this, yet you might still disagree whether such or such a Doctrine were propounded or not: or, if propounded, whether sufficiently, or only unsufficiently. And it is so known a thing, that in many Points you do so, that I assure my self you will not deny it. Therefore we constantly urge and require a particular and perfect Inventory of all those Divine Revelations, which, you say, are sufficiently propounded; and that, such an one to which all of your Church will subscribe, as neither redundant, nor deficient: which when you give in with one hand, you shall receive a particular Catalogue of such Points as I call Fundamental, with the other. Neither may you think me unreasonable in this Demand, seeing upon such a particular Catalogue of your sufficient Propofals as much depends, as upon a particular Catalogue of our Fundamentals. As for example; Whether or no a man do not err in some Point defined and sufficiently proposed: and whether or no those that differ among you, differ in Fundamentals; which if they do, One Heaven (by your own Rule) cannot receive them All. Perhaps you will here complain, that this is not to satisfie your demand, but to avoid it, and to put you off, as the Areopagites did hard causes, ad idem longissimum, and bid you come again an hundred years hence. To deal truly, I did so intend it should be. Neither can you say my dealing with you is injurious, seeing I require nothing of you, but that, what you require of others, you should shew it possible to be done, and just and necessary to be required. For, for my part, I have great reason to suspect, it is neither the one nor the other. For whereas the Verities which are delivered in Scripture, may be very fitly divided into such as were written because they were necessary to be believed; (of which rank are those only, which constitute and make up the Covenant between God and Man in Christ:) and then such as are necessary to be believed not in themselves, but only by accident, because they were written; Of which rank are many matters of History, of Prophecy, of Mystery, of Policy, of Oeconomy, and such like, which are evidently not intrinseal to the Covenant: Now, to sever exactly and punctually these Verities one from the other, what is necessary in it self and antecedently to the writing, from what is but only profitable in it self, and necessary only because written, is a business of extreme great difficulty, and extreme little necessity. For first, he that will go about to distinguish especially in the Story of our Saviour, what was written because it was profitable, from what was written because necessary, shall find an intricate piece of business of it, and almost impossible that he should be certain he hath done it, when he hath done it. And then it is apparently unnecessary to go about it, seeing he that believes all, certainly believes all that is necessary;

This great diversity of opinions among you, touching this matter, if any man doubt of it, let him read Franciscus Picus Mirandula in l. Theorem. in exp. f. Theor. quarti; & Th. Waldensis Tom. 3. de Sacramentalibus. doct. 3. tol. 5. and he shall be fully satisfied that I have done you no injury.

And he that doth not believe all (I mean all the undoubted parts of the undoubted Books of Scripture) can hardly believe any, neither have we reason to believe he doth so. So that, that Protestant give you not a Catalogue of Fundamentals, it is not for Tergiversation (as you suspect, who for want of Charity to them always suspect the worst,) but from Wisdom and Necessity. For they may very easily err in doing it; because though all which is necessary be plain in Scripture, yet all which is plain, is not therefore written because it was necessary. For what greater necessity was there that I should know S. Paul left his Cloak at Troas, than those words of Miracles, which our Saviour did, which were never written. And when they had done it, it had been to no purpose; There being, as matters now stand, as great necessity of believing those Truths of Scripture which are not Fundamental, as those that are. You see then what reason we have to decline this hard labour, which you a rigid Task-master have here put upon us. Yet instead of giving you a Catalogue of Fundamentals, with which I dare say you are resolved, before it come, never to be satisfied, I will say that to you, which, if you please, may do you as much service; and this it is: That it is sufficient for any man's Salvation that he believe the Scripture: that he endeavour to believe it in the true sense of it, as far as concerns his duty: And that he conform his life unto it either by Obedience or Repentance. He that does so (and all Protestants according to the Dictamen of their Religion should do so) may be secure that he cannot err Fundamentally. And they that do so, cannot differ in Fundamentals. So that, notwithstanding their differences, and your presumption, the same Heaven may receive them All.

28. Ad §. 20. Your tenth and last request is, to know distinctly what is the Doctrine of the Protestant English Church, in these Points; and what is my private opinion. Which shall be satisfied when the Church of England hath expressed her self in them; or when you have told us what is the Doctrine of your Church, in the Question of Predetermination, or the Immaculate Conception.

29. Ad 21, & 22. §. These answers, I hope, in the judgment of indifferent men are satisfactory to your Questions, though not to you, for I have either answered them, or given you a reason why I have not. Neither, for ought I can see, have I flitted from things considered in their own nature, to accidental or rare Circumstances, but told you my opinion plainly what I thought of your Errors in themselves: and what as they were qualified or malignified with good or bad circumstances. Though I must tell you truly, that I see no reason, the Question being of the damnableness of Error, why you should disesteem ignorance, incapacity, want of means to be instructed, accidental and rare Circumstances: As if knowledge, capacity, having means of Instruction, concerning the truth of your Religion or ours, were not as rare and unusual in the adverse part of either, as Ignorance, Incapacity, and want of means of instruction. Especially how, erroneous Conscience can be a rare thing in those that err, or how unerring Conscience is not much more rare, I am not able to apprehend. So that to consider men of different Religions (the subject of this Controversie) in their own nature and without circumstances, must be to consider them, neither as ignorant, nor as knowing: neither as having, nor as wanting means of Instruction: neither as with Capacity, nor without it: neither with erroneous, nor yet with unerring conscience. And then what judgment can you pronounce of them, all the goodness and badness of an Action depending on the Circumstances? Ought not a Judge living to give sentence of an Action, to consider all the Circumstances of it? or is it possible he should judge rightly that doth not so? Neither is it to purpose, That Circumstances being various, cannot be well comprehended under any general rule: For though under any general rule they cannot, yet under many general rules they may be comprehended. The Question here is, you say, Whether men of different Religions may be saved? Now the subject of this Question is an ambiguous term, and may be determined and invested with diverse and contrary contrary Circumstances: and accordingly, contrary judgments are to be given of it. And who then can be offended with D. Potter for distinguishing before he defines, (the want whereof is the chief thing that makes defining dangerous?) Who can find fault with him for saying, If, through want of means of instruction, incapacity, invincible or probable ignorance a man die in error, he may be saved. But if he be negligent in seeking Truth, unwilling to find it, either doth see it and will not, or might see it and will not, that his case is dangerous, and without repentance desperate. This is all that D. Potter says, neither rashly damning all that are of a different opinion from him, nor excusing any that are in matter of Religion sinfully, that is, willingly erroneous. The Author of this Reply (I will abide by it) says the very same thing, neither can I see what adversary he hath in the main Question but his own shadow: and yet, I know not out of what frowardness, finds fault with D. Potter for affirming that which himself affirms: And to cloud the matter, whereas the Question is, Whether men by ignorance, dying in error, may be saved, he would have the men considered neither as erring, nor ignorant. And when the question is, whether The Errors of Papists be damnable, to which we answer, That to them that do or might know them to be errors, they are damnable; to them that do not, they are not: He tells us that this is to change the state of the Question, whereas indeed it is to state the Question, and free it from ambiguity before you answer it: and to have recourse to Accidental Circumstances; as if Ignorance were accidental to error, or as if a man could be considered as in error, and not be considered as in ignorance of the Truth from which he errs! Certainly, Error against a Truth, must needs presuppose a nescience of it: unless you will say that a man may at once resolve for a Truth and resolve against it; assent to it, and dissent from it; know it to be true, and believe it not to be true. Whether Knowledge and Opinion touching the same thing may stand together, is made a Question in the Schools: But he that would question, Whether knowing a thing and doubting of it, much more, whether knowing it to be true, and believing it to be false, may stand together, deserves without question no other Answer but laughter. Now if Error and Knowledge cannot consist, then Error and Ignorance must be inseparable. He then that professeth your errors may well be considered either as knowing or as Ignorant. But him that does err indeed, you can no more conceive without ignorance, than Long without Quantity, Vertuous without Quality, a Man and not a living Creature, to have gone ten miles and not to have gone five, to speak sense and not to speak. For as the latter in all these is implyed in the former, so is Ignorance of a Truth, supposed in Error against it. Yet such a man, though not conceivable without ignorance simply, may be very well considered either as with, or without voluntary and final Ignorance. And he that will give a wise answer to this Question, Whether a Papist dying a Papist may be saved, according to God's ordinary proceedings; must distinguish him according to these several considerations, and say, He may be saved, If his Ignorance were either invincible, or at least unaffected, and probable: if otherwise, without repentance he cannot.

To the rest of this Preface, I have nothing to say, saving what hath been said, but this, That it is no just exception to an argument to call it vulgar and thredbare. Truth can neither be too common nor super-annuated, nor Reason ever worn out. Let your Answers be solid and pertinent, and we will never find fault with them for being old or common.

The First Part.

Chap. I.

The State of the Question; with a Summary of the Reasons for which, amongst men of different Religions, one Side only can be saved.

NEver is malice more indiscreet, than when it chargeth others with imputation of that, to which it self becomes more liable, even by that very act of accusing others. For, though guiltiness be the effect of some error, yet usually it begets a kind of moderation, so far forth, as not to let men cast such aspersions upon others, as must apparently reflect upon themselves. Thus cannot the Poet endure that Gracchus, who was a factious and unquiet man, should be inveighing against Sedition: And the Roman Orator rebukes Philosophers; who, to wax glorious, superscribed their Names upon those very Books, which they entituled, Of the contempt of Glory. What then shall we say of D. Potter, who in the Title and Text of his whole Book, doth so tragically charge want of Charity on all such Romanists as dare affirm, that Protestancy destroyeth Salvation; while he himself is in act of pronouncing the like heavy doom against Roman Catholiques? For, not satisfied with much uncivil language, in affirming the Roman Church many (a) ways to have plaid the Harlot, and in that regard deserved a bill of divorce from Christ, and detestation of Christians; in flying her that proud (b) and cruel Dame of Rome, which takes upon her to reveal in the House of God; in talking of an Idol (c) to be worshiped at Rome; he comes at length to thunder out this fearful sentence against her: For that (d) Mass of Errors (saith he) in judgment and practice, which is proper to her, and wherein she differs from us, we judge a reconciliation impossible, and to us, (who are convicted in conscience of her corruptions) damnable. And in another place he saith: For us who (e) are convinced in conscience, that she errs in many things, a necessity lies upon us, even under pain of damnation, to forsake her in those Errors. By the acerbity of which Censure, he doth not only make himself guilty of that which he judgeth to be a heinous offence in others, but freeth us also from all colour of crime by this his unadvised recrimination. For, if Roman Catholiques be likewise convicted in conscience of the Errors of Protestants, they may, and must, in conformity to the Doctor's own rule, judge a reconciliation with them to be also damnable. And thus, all the want of Charity, so deeply charged on us, dissolves it self into this poor wonder, Roman Catholiques believe in their conscience, that the Religion which they profess, is true, and the contrary false.

2. Nevertheless, we earnestly desire, and take care, that our doctrine may not be defamed by misinterpretation. Far be it from us, by way of insultation, to apply it against Protestants, otherwise than as they are comprehended under the generality of those who are divided from the only one true Church of Christ our Lord, within the Communion whereof he hath confined salvation. Neither do we understand, why our most dear Countrymen should be offended if the Universality be particularized under the name of Protestants, first given (f) to certain Lutherans, who protested that they would stand out against the Imperial decrees, in defence of the confession exhibited at Ausburge, were termed Protestants, in regard of such their protesting: which Confessio Augustana, disclaiming from, and being disclaimed by Calvinists and Zwinglians, our naming or exemplifying a general doctrine under the particular name of Protestantism, ought not in any particular manner to be odious in England.

(f) Sleidan. l. 6. fol. 84.

3. Moreover our meaning is not, as misinformed persons may conceive, that we give Protestants over to reprobation; that we offer no prayers in hope of their salvation; that we hold their case desperate. God forbid! We hope, we pray for, their Conversion; and sometimes we find happy effects of our charitable desires. Neither is our Censure immediately directed to particular persons. The Tribunal of particular Judgment is God's alone. When any man, esteemed a Protestant, leaveth to live in this world, we do not instantly with precipitation avouch, that he is lodged in Hell. For we are not always acquainted with what sufficiency of means he was furnished for instruction; we do not penetrate his capacity to understand his Catechist; we have no revelation what light might have cleared his errors, or Contrition retracted his sins, in the last moment before his death. In such particular cases, we wish more apparent signs of Salvation, but do not give any dogmatical sentence of Perdition. How grievous sins, Disobedience, Schism and Heresie are, is well known. But to discern how far the natural malignity of those great offences might be checked by Ignorance, or by some such lessening circumstance, is the office rather of Prudence than of Faith.

4. Thus we allow Protestants as much Charity, as D. Potter spares us, for whom in the words above mentioned, and elsewhere, he (g) makes Ignorance the best hope of salvation. Much less comfort can we expect from the fierce doctrine of those chief Protestants, who teach that for many Ages before Luther, Christ had no visible Church upon earth. Not these men alone, or such as they, but even the 39. Articles, to which the English Protestant Clergy subscribes, censure our belief so deeply, that Ignorance can scarce, or rather not at all, excuse us from damnation. Our Doctrine of Transubstantiation, is affirmed to be repugnant to the plain words of (h) Scripture; our Masses to be blasphemous (i) Fables, with much more to be seen in the Articles themselves. In a certain Confession of the Christian Faith, at the end of their books of Psalms collected into Meeter, and printed Cum privilegio Regis Regali, they call us Idolaters and limbs of Antichrist; and having set down a Catalogue of our doctrines, they conclude, that for them we shall after the General Resurrection be damned to unquestionable fire.

5. But yet lest any man should flatter himself with our charitable Mitigations, and thereby wax careless in search of the true Church, we desire him to read the Conclusion of the Second Part, where this matter is more explained.

6. And because we cannot determine what Judgment may be esteemed rash, or prudent, except by weighing the reasons upon which it was grounded, we will here, under one aspect, present a Summary of those Principles, Principles, from which we infer, that Protestancy in it self unrepented destroys Salvation, intending afterward to prove the truth of every one of the grounds; till, by a concatenation of sequels, we fall upon the Conclusion, for which we are charged with want of Charity.

7. Now this is our gradation of reasons: Almighty God, having ordained Mankind to a supernatural End of eternal felicity, hath in his holy Providence settled competent and convenient Means, whereby that end may be attained. The universal grand Origen of all such means, is the Incarnation and Death of our Blessed Saviour, whereby he merited internal grace for us; and founded an external visible Church, provided and stored with all those helps which might be necessary to Salvation. From hence it followeth, that in this Church, among other advantages, there must be some effectual means to beget and conserve Faith, to maintain Unity, to discover and condemn Heresies, to appease and reduce Schisms, and to determine all Controversies in Religion. For without such means the Church should not be furnished with helps sufficient to salvation, nor God afford sufficient means to attain that End, to which himself ordained Mankind. This means to decide Controversies in Faith and Religion (whether it should be the holy Scripture, or whatsoever else) must be indued with an Universal Infallibility in whatsoever it propoundeth for a divine Truth, that is, as revealed, spoken, or testified by Almighty God, whether the matter of its nature be great or small. For if it were subject to Error in any one thing, we could not in any other yield it infallible assent; because we might with good reason doubt, whether it chanced not to err in that particular.

8. Thus far all must agree to what we have said, unless they have a mind, to reduce Faith to Opinion. And even out of these grounds alone, without further proceeding, it undeniably follows, that of two men dissenting in matters of faith, great or small, few or many, the one cannot be saved without repentance, unless Ignorance accidentally may in some particular person plead excuse. For in that case of contrary belief, one must of necessity be held to oppose Gods Word, or Revelation sufficiently represented to his understanding by an infallible Propoundel; which opposition to the Testimony of God is undoubtedly a damnable sin, whether otherwise the thing so testified, be in it self great or small. And thus we have already made good what was promised in the argument of this Chapter, that amongst men of different Religions, one is only capable of being saved.

9. Nevertheless, to the end that men may know in particular what is the said infallible means upon which we are to rely in all things concerning Faith, and accordingly may be able to judge in what safety or danger, more or less they live; and because D. Potter descendeth to divers particulars about Scriptures and the Church, &c. we will go forward, and prove, that although Scripture be in it self most sacred, infallible, and divine, yet it alone cannot be to us a Rule, or Judge, fit and able to end all doubts and debates emergent in matters of Religion; but that there must be some external, visible, publique, living Judge, to whom all sorts of persons, both learned and unlearned, may without danger of error have recourse; and in whose judgment they may rest for the interpreting and propounding of Gods Word or Revelation. And this living Judge we will most evidently prove to be no other, but that Holy, Catholique, Apostolique, and visible Church, which our Saviour purchased with the effusion of his most precious blood.

10. If once therefore it be granted, that the Church is that means which God hath left for deciding all Controversies in Faith, it manifestly will follow, that the must be infallible in all her determinations, whether the matters of themselves be great or small; because, as we said above, it must be agreed on all sides, that if that means which God hath left to determine Controversies were not infallible in all things proposed by it, as truths revealed by Almighty God, it could not settle in our minds a firm and infallible belief of any one.

11. From this Universal infallibility of God's Church, it followeth, that whosoever wittingly denyeth any one Point propoſed by her, as revealed by God, is injurious to his divine Majesty, as if he could either deceive, or be deceived in what he testifieth. The averring whereof, were not a Fundamental error, but would overthrow the very foundation of all Fundamental Points, and therefore, without repentance, could not possibly stand with salvation.

12. Out of these grounds we will shew, that although the distinction of Points Fundamental, and not Fundamental be good and useful, as it is delivered and applyed by Catholique Divines, to reach what principal Articles of faith, Christians are obliged explicitly to believe; yet that it is impertinent to the present purpose of excusing any man from grievous sin, who knowingly disbelieves, that is, believes the contrary of that which God's Church proposeth as Divine Truth. For it is one thing not to know explicitely something testified by God, and another positively to oppose what we know he hath testified. The former may often be excused from sin, but never the latter, which only is the case in Question.

13. In the same manner shall be demonstrated, that to alledge the Creed, as containing all Articles of Faith, necessary to be explicitely believed, is not pertinent to free from sin, the voluntary denial of any other Point known to be defined by God's Church. And this were sufficient to overthrow all that D. Potter alledgeth concerning the Creed, though yet, by way of Supererogation, we will prove, that there are divers important matters of Faith which are not mentioned at all in the Creed.

14. From the aforesaid main Principle, that God hath always had, and always will have on earth, a Church Visible, within whose Communion Salvation must be hoped; and infallible, whose definitions we ought to believe; we will prove, that Luther, Calvin, and all other, who continue the division in Communion, or Faith, from that Visible Church, which at and before, Luther's appearance was spread over the world, cannot be excused from Schism and Heresie, although they opposed her Faith but in one only Point; whereas it is manifest, they dissent from her in many and weighty matters, concerning as well belief, as practice.

15. To these reasons drawn from the vertue of Faith, we will add one other taken from Charitas propria, the Vertue of Charity, as it obligeth us, not to expose our soul to hazard of perdition, when we can put our selves in a way much more secure, as we will prove that of the Roman Catholiques to be.

16. We are then to prove these points: First, that the infallible means to determine controversies in matters of Faith, is the visible Church of Christ. Secondly, that the distinction of Points Fundamental, and not Fundamental, maketh nothing to our present Question. Thirdly, that, to say the Creed contains all Fundamental Points of Faith, is neither pertinent nor true. Fourthly, that both Luther, and all they who, after him, persist in division from the Communion and Faith of the Roman Church, cannot be excused from Schism. Fifthly, nor from Heresie, Sixthly and lastly, that in regard of the present of charity towards one's self, Protestants be in a state of sin, as long as they remain divided from the Roman Church. And these six Points, shall be several Arguments for so many ensuing Chapters.

17. Only I will observe, that it seemeth very strange that Protestants should charge us so deeply with want of Charity, for only teaching, that both they and we cannot be saved, being themselves must affirm the like of whosoever opposeth any least Point delivered in Scripture, which they hold to be the sole Rule of Faith. Out of which ground they must be enforced to let all our former Inferences pass for Good. For, is it not a grievous sin, to deny any one truth contained in Holy Writ? Is there in such denial, any distinction between Points Fundamental, and not Fundamental, sufficient to excuse from Heresie? Is it not impertinent, to alledge the Creed containing all Fundamental Points of Faith, as if, believing it alone, we were at liberty to deny all other Points of Scripture? In a word: According to Protestants; Oppose not Scripture, there is no Error against Faith; Oppose it in any least Point, the Error (if Scripture be sufficiently proposed, which proposition is also required before a man can be obliged to believe even Fundamental Points) must be damnable. What is this, but to say with us, Of Persons contrary in whatsoever Point of belief, one party only can be saved? And D. Potter must not take it ill, if Catholiques believe they may be saved in that Religion for which they suffer. And if by occasion of this doctrine, men will still be charging us with want of Charity, and be resolved to take scandal where none is given; we must comfort our selves with that grave and true saying of S. Gregory: If scandal (k) be taken from declaring a truth, it is better to permit scandal, than forsake the truth. But the solid grounds of our Assertion, and the sincerity of our Intention in uttering what we think yields us confidence, that all will hold for most reasonable the saying of Pope Gelasius to Anastasius the Emperor: Far be it from the Roman Emperor that he should hold it for a wrong, to have truth declared to him. Let us therefore begin with that Point which is the first that can be controverted betwixt Protestants, and us, for as much as concerns the present Question, and is contained in the Argument of the next ensuing Chap.

(k) S. Greg. Hom. 7. in Ezek.

The ANSWER to the FIRST CHAPTER.

Shewing, that the Adversary grants the Former Question and proposeth a New one: And that there is no reason, why among men of different opinions and Communions, one side only can be saved.

D. 1. §. Your first onset is very violent, D. Potter is charged with malice and indiscretion, for being uncharitable to you, while he is accusing you of uncharitableness. Verily, a great fault, and folly, if the accusation be just; if unjust, a great Calumny. Let us see then how you make good your charge. The effect of your discourse, if I mistake not, is this: D. Potter chargeth the Roman Church with many and great Errors; judgeth reconciliation between her Doctrine and ours, impossible; and that for them who are convicted in Conscience of her Errors, not to forsake her in them, or to be reconciled unto her, is damnable: Therefore, if Roman Catholiques be convicted in Conscience of the Errors of Protestants, they may and must judge a reconciliation with them damnable; and consequently to judge so, is no more uncharitable in them, than it is in the Doctrine to judge as he doth. All this I grant; nor would any Protestant accuse you of want of Charity, if you went no further: if you judged the Religion of Protestants damnable to them only who profess it, being convicted in conscience that is erroneous. For, if a man judge some act of vertue to be a sin, in him it is a sin indeed: So you have taught us, p. 19. So if you be convinced, or rather, to speak properly, perswaded in conscience, that our Religion is erroneous, the profession of it, though it self most true, to you would be damnable. This therefore I subscribe very willingly, and withal, that if you said no more, D. Potter and my self should be not to Papists only, but even to Protestants, as uncharitable as you are. For I shall always profess and glory in this uncharitableness of judging hypocrisie a damnable sin. Let Hypocrites then and Dissemblers on both sides pass. It is not towards them, but good Christians; not to Protestant Professors, but Believers, that we require your Charity. What think you of those that believe so verily the truth of our Religion, that they are resolved to die in it, and, if occasion were, to die for it? What Charity have you for them? What think ye of those that, in the days of our Fathers, laid down their lives for it? Are you content that they shall be saved, or do you hope they may be so? Will you grant, that, notwithstanding their Errors, Errors, there is good hope they might die with repentance? and if they did so, certainly they are saved? If you will do so, this Controversie is ended. No man will hereafter charge you with want of Charity. This is as much as either we give you, or expect of you, while you remain in your Religion. But then you must leave abusing silly people, with telling them (as your fashion is) that Protestants confess, Papists may be saved, but Papists confess not so much of Protestants; therefore yours is the safer way, and in Wisdom and Charity to our own souls we are bound to follow it. For granting this, you grant as much hope of salvation to Protestants, as Protestants do to you. If you will not, but will still affirm, as (charity Mistaken doth, that Protestants, not dissemblers, but believers, without a particular repentance of their Religion cannot be saved: This, I say, is a want of Charity, into the society whereof D. Potter cannot be drawn but with palpable and transparent Sophistry. For, I pray Sir, what dependance is there between these Propositions: We that hold Protestant Religion false should be damned if we should profess it, Therefore they also shall be damned, that hold it true? Just as if you should conclude, Because he that doubts is damned if he eat, Therefore he that doth not doubt, is damned also if he eat. And therefore though your Religion to us, and ours to you, if professed against Conscience, would be damnable; yet may it well be uncharitable to define it shall be so, to them that profess either this or that according to Conscience. This recrimination therefore upon D. Potter wherewith you begin, is a plain Fallacy: And, I fear, your proceedings will be answerable to these beginnings.

2. Ad §. 2. In this Paragraph, Protestants are thus far comforted, that they are not sent to Hell without Company; which the Poet tels us, is the miserable comfort of miserable Men. Then we in England are requested not to be offended with the name of Protestants. Which is a favour I shall easily grant, if by it be understood those that Protest, not against Imperial Edicts, but against the Corruptions of the Church of Rome.

3. Ad §. 3, 4, 5, 6. That you give us not over to reprobation, That you pray and hope for our Salvation, if it be a Charity, it's such an one as is common to Turks, and Jews, and Pagans with us. But that which follows, is extraordinary; neither do I know any man that requires more of you than there you pretend to. For there you tell us, That when any man, esteemed a Protestant, dies, you do not instantly avouch that he is lodged in Hell. Where the word, esteemed, is ambiguous: For it may signifie, esteemed truly, or esteemed falsly. He may be esteemed a Protestant that is so: And he may be esteemed a Protestant that is not so. And therefore I should have had just occasion to have laid to your charge the transgression of your own chief Prescription, which you say, Truth exacts at our hands, that is, to speak clearly or distinctly, and not to walk in darkness; but that your following words, to my understanding, declare sufficiently, that you speak of both sorts. For there you tell us, that the Reasons, why you damn not any man that dies with the esteem of a Protestant, are, 1. Because you are not always acquainted with what sufficiency of means he was furnished for instruction; You must mean touching the falsehood of his own Religion, and the truth of yours. Which reason is proper to those that are Protestants in truth, and not only in estimation. 2. Because you do not penetrate his capacity to understand his Catechisme; which is also peculiar to those, who for want of capacity (as you conceive) remain Protestants indeed, and are not only so accounted. 3. Because you have no Revelation what light might clear his errors; which belongs to those which were esteemed Protestants, but indeed were not so. 4. Because you have no Revelation what Contrition might have retracted his sins: which reason being distinct from the former, and divided by it by the disjunctive Particle, Or, insinuates unto us, that though no light did clear the errors of a dying Protestant; yet Contrition might, for ought you know, retract his sins: which appropriates this reason also to Protestants truly so esteemed. I wish with all my heart that in obedience to your own Prescription, you had expressed your self in this matter more fully and plainly. Yet that which you say, doth plainly enough afford us these Corallaries.

1 That whatsoever Protestant wanteth capacity, or having it, wanteth sufficient means of instruction to convince his Conscience of the falshood of his own, and the truth of the Roman Religion, by the confession of his most rigid Adversaries, may be saved, notwithstanding any error in his Religion.

2 That nothing hinders, but that a Protestant, dying a Protestant, may die with Contrition for all his sins.

3 That if he do die with Contrition, he may and shall be saved.

4. All these acknowledgments we have from you, while you are, as you say, stating, but, as I conceive, granting the very Point in question; which was, as I have already proved out of C. M. Whether, without uncharitableness, you may pronounce, that Protestants dying in the belief of their Religion and without particular repentance and derelection of it, cannot possibly be saved. Which C. M. affirms universally, and without any of your limitations. But this presumption of his, you thus qualifie, by saying, that This sentence cannot be pronounced truly, and therefore sure not charitably; Neither of those Protestants that want means sufficient to inform and convince them of the truth of your Religion, and the falshood of their own; Nor of those, who though they have neglected the means they might have had, died with Contrition, that is, with a sorrow for all their sins, proceeding from the love of God. So that, according to your Doctrin, it shall remain upon such only as either were, or, but for their own fault, might have been, sufficiently convinced of the truth of your Religion, and the falshood of their own, and yet die in it without Contrition. Which Doctrin if you would stand to; and not pull down, and pull back with one hand, what you give and build with the other, this Controversie were ended; and I should willingly acknowledge that which follows in your fourth Paragraph, That you allow Protestants as much charity as D. Potter allows you. But then I must intreat you to alter the argument of this Chapter, and not to go about to give us reasons, why, amongst men of different Religions, one side only can be saved absolutely, which your reasons drive at: But you must temper the confidence of your Assertion, by saying, One side only can be saved, unless want of Conviction, or else Repentance, excuse the other. Besides, you must not only abstain from damning any Protestant in particular, but, from affirming in general, that Protestants dying in their Religion cannot be saved: for you must always remember to add this Caution, unless they were excusably Ignorant of the falshood of it, or died with Contrition. And then, considering that you cannot know, whether or no, all things considered, they were convinced sufficiently of the truth of your Religion, and the falshood of their own, you are obliged by Charity to judge the best, and hope they are not. Considering again, that, notwithstanding their Errors, they may die with Contrition, and that it is no way improbable that they do so, and the contrary you cannot be certain of, You are bound in Charity to judge and hope they do so. Considering thirdly and lastly, that if they die not with Contrition, yet it is very probable they may die with Attrition, and that this pretence of yours, that Contrition will serve without actual Confession, but Attrition will not, is but a nicety or fancy, or rather to give it the true name, a Device of your own, to serve ends and purposes; God having no where declared himself, but that whersoever he will accept of that Repentance, which you are pleased to call Contrition, he will accept of that which you call Attrition; For, though he like best the bright flaming holocaust of Love, yet he rejects not, he quencheth not, the smoaking flax of that Repentance (if it be true and effectual) which proceeds from hope and fear: These things, I say, considered (unless you will have the Charity of your Doctrin rise up in judgment against your uncharitable Practice) you must not only not be be peremptory, in damning Protestants, but you must hope well of their Salvation: and, out of this hope, you must do for them as well as others, those, as you conceive, Charitable Offices, of Praying, giving Alms, and offering Sacrifice, which usually you do, for those of whose Salvation you are well and charitably perswaded; (for, I believe, you will never conceive so well of Protestants, as to assure your selves they go directly to heaven.) These things when you do, I shall believe you think as charitably as you speak. But until then as he said in the Comedy, Quid verba audiam, cum facta videam? so may I say to you, Quid verba audiam, cum facta non videam? To what purpose should you give us charitable words, which presently you retract again, by denying us your charitable actions? And as these things you must do, if you will stand to and make good this pretended Charity, so must I tell you again and again, that one thing you must not do; I mean, You must not affright poor people out of their Religion, with telling them, that, By the confession of both sides, your way is safe, but, in your judgment, ours undoubtedly damnable. Seeing neither you deny Salvation to Protestants dying with Repentance, nor we promise it to you, if ye die without it. For to deal plainly with you, I know no Protestant that hath any other hope of your Salvation, but upon these grounds, that unaffected ignorance may excuse you, or true repentance obtain pardon for you; neither do the heavy censures, which Protestants (you say) pass upon your errors, any way hinder, but they may hope as well of you, upon Repentance, as I do. For the fierce Doctrin, which God knows who, teacheth, that Christ for many Ages before Luther had no visible Church upon earth; will be mild enough, if you conceive them to mean (as perhaps they do) by no visible Church, none pure and free from corruptions, which in your judgment is all one with no Church. But the truth is, the corruption of the Church, and the destruction of it, is not all one. For, if a particular Man or Church may (as you confess they may) hold some particular Errors, and yet be a Member of the Church Universal; why may not the Church hold some Universal Error, and yet be still the Church? especially seeing, you say, it is nothing but opposing the Doctrin of the Church that makes an Error damnable, and it is impossible, that the Church should oppose the Church, I mean, that the present Church should oppose it self. And then for the English Protestants, though they censure your Errors deeply, yet, by your favour, with their deepest censures it may well consist, that invincible ignorance may excuse you from damnation for them. For you your self confess, That Ignorance may excuse Errors, even in Fundamental Articles of Faith: so that a man so erring shall not offend at all in such his ignorance or error: they are your own words, Pref. §. 22. And again, with their heaviest censures it may well consist, that your Errors, though in themselves damnable, yet may prove not damning to you, if you die with true repentance, for all your sins known and unknown.

5. Thus much Charity therefore, if you stand to what you have said, is interchangeably granted by each Side to the other, that neither Religion is so fatally destructive, but that by Ignorance or Repentance Salvation may be had on both Sides: though with a difference that keeps Papists still on the more uncharitable side. For whereas we conceive a lower degree of Repentance (that which they call Attrition) if it be true, and effectual, and convert the heart of the penitent, will serve in them: They pretend (even this Author which is most charitable towards us) that without Contrition there is no hope for us. But, though Protestants may not obtain this purchase at so easie a rate as Papists; yet (even Papists being Judges) they may obtain it: and, though there is no entrance for them but at the only door of Contrition, yet they may enter; Heaven is not inaccessible to them. Their errors are not such impenetrable Isthmus's between them and Salvation, but that Contrition may make a way through them. All their Schism and Heresie is no such fatal poison, but that, if a man joyn with it the Antidote of a generatl Repentance, he may die in it, and live for ever. Thus much then being acknowleged, I appeal to any indifferent Reader, whether C. M. be not by his Hyperaspist forsaken in the plain field, and the Point in question granted to D. Potter, viz. That Protestancy, even without a particular Repentance, is not destructive of Salvation. So that all the Controversie remaining now, is not simply Whether Protestancy unrepented destroys Salvation? as it was at first proposed, but, Whether Protestancy in it self (that is, abstracted from Ignorance and Contrition) destroys Salvation? So that, as a foolish fellow who gave a Knight the Lye, desiring withal leave of him to set his Knighthood aside, was answered by him, that he would not suffer any thing to be set aside that belonged unto him: So might we justly take it amiss, that, conceiving as you do, Ignorance and Repentance such necessary things for us, you are not more willing to consider us with them, than without them. For my part, such is my Charity to you, that considering what great necessity You have, as much as any Christian Society in the World, that these Sanctuaries of Ignorance and Repentance should always stand open, I can very hardly perswade my self so much as in my most secret consideration to devest you of these so needful qualifications: But whensoever your Errors, Superstitions, and Impieties come into my mind, (and, besides the general bonds of Humanity and Christianity, my own particular Obligations to many of you, such and so great, that you cannot perish without a part of my Self,) my only comfort is, amidst these Agonies, that the Doctrin and Practice too of Repentance, is yet remaining in your Church: And that, though you put on a face of confidence of your innocence in point of Doctrin, yet you will be glad to stand in the eye of Mercy as well as your fellows, and not be so stout, as to refuse either God's pardon or the King's.

6. But for the present, Protestancy is called to the bar, and though not sentenced by you to death without Mercy, yet arraigned of so much natural malignity, (if not corrected by Ignorance or Contrition) as to be in it self destructive of Salvation. Which controversie I am content to dispute with you, tying my self to follow the Rules prescribed by you in your Preface. Only I am to remember you, that the adding of this limitation (in it self) hath made this a new Question; and that this is not the Conclusion, for which you were charged with want of Charity. But that, whereas, according to the grounds of your own Religion, Protestants may die in their supposed errors, either with excusable Ignorance, or with Contrition, and if they do so, may be saved, you still are peremptory in pronouncing them damned. Which Position, supposing your Doctrine true, and ours false, as it is far from Charity, (whose essential Character it is, to judge and hope the best,) so I believe that I shall clearly evince this new, but more moderate, Assertion of yours to be far from Verity, and that it is Popery, and not Protestancy, which in it self destroys Salvation.

7. Ad. §. 7. & 8. In your gradation I shall rise so far with you as to grant, That Christ founded a visible Church, stored with all helps necessary to Salvation, particularly with sufficient means to beget and conserve Faith, to maintain Unity, and compose Schisms, to discover and condemn Heresies, and to determine all Controversies in Religion, which were necessary to be determined. For all these purposes, he gave at the beginning (as we may see in the Epistle to the Ephesians) Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, Pastors and Doctors: who by word of mouth taught their Contemporaries, and by writings (wrote indeed by some, but approved by all of them) taught their Christian Posterity to the world's end, how all these ends, and that which is the End of all these ends, Salvation, is to be atchieved. And these means the Providence of God hath still preserved, and so preserved, that they are sufficient for all these intents. I say, sufficient, though, through the Malice of men, not always effectual; for that the same means may be Sufficient for the compassing an end, and not Effectual, you must not not deny, who hold, that God gives to all men sufficient means of Salvation, and yet that all are not saved. I said also, Sufficient to determine all Controversies, which were necessary to be determined. For, if some Controversies may for many Ages be undetermined, and yet in the mean-while men be saved; why should, or how can the Church's being furnisht with effectual means to determine all Controversies in Religion, be necessary to Salvation; the end it self, to which these means are ordained, being, as experience shews, not necessary? Plain sense will teach every man, that the necessitiy of the means must always be measured by, and can never exceed, the necessity of the end. As, if eating be necessary, only that I may live; then certainly if I have no necessity to live, I have no necessity to eat. If I have no need to be at London, I have no need of a horse to carry me thither. If I have no need to fly, I have no need of wings. Answer me then I pray directly, and categorically, Is it necessary that all Controversies in Religion should be determined? or, is it not? if it be, Why is the Question of Predetermination, of the immaculate Conception, of the Pope's indirect power in Temporalities, so long undetermined? If not, What is it but hypocrisie to pretend such great necessity of such effectual means, for the atchieving that end, which is it self not necessary? Christians therefore have and shall have means sufficient (though not always effectual) to determine, not all Controversies, but all necessary to be determined. I proceed on farther with you, and grant that this means to decide Controversies in Faith and Religion, must be endued with an Universal Infallibility in whatsoever it propoundeth for a divine Truth. For if it may be false in any one thing of this nature, in any thing which God requires men to believe, we can yield unto it but a wavering and fearful assent in any thing. These Grounds therefore I grant very readily, and give you free leave to make your best advantage of them. And yet, to deal truly, I do not perceive how from the denial of any of them it would follow that Faith is Opinion: or, from the granting them, that it is not so. But for my part whatsoever clamour you have raised against me, I think no otherwise of the Nature of Faith, I mean, Historical Faith, than generally both Protestants and Papists do; for, I conceive it an assent to Divine Revelations upon the Authority of the Revealer. Which though in many things it differ from Opinion, (as commonly the word opinion is understood) yet in some things, I doubt not but you will confess, that it agrees with it. As first, that as Opinion is an Assent, so is Faith also. Secondly, that as Opinion, so Faith, is always built upon less evidence than that of Sense or Science, which Assertion you not only grant, but mainly contend for in your sixth Chapter. Thirdly and lastly, that, as Opinion, so Faith admit degrees; and that, as there may be a strong and weak Opinion, so there may be a strong and weak Faith. These things if you will grant (as sure if you be in your right mind you will not deny any of them) I am well contented that this ill-sounding word, Opinion, should be discarded, and that among the Intellectual habits you should seek out some other Genus for Faith. For I will never contend with any man about words, who grants my meaning.

8. But though the essence of Faith exclude not all weakness and imperfection, yet may it be enquired, Whether any certainty of Faith, under the highest degree, may be sufficient to please God and attain Salvation? Whereunto I answer, that though Men are unreasonable, God requires not any thing but Reason. They will not be pleased without a down-weight, but God is contented if the scale be turned. They pretend, that heavenly things cannot be seen to any purpose, but by the mid-day light: But God will be satisfied, if we receive any degree of light which makes us leave the works of darkness, and walk as Children of the light. They exact a certainty of Faith above that of sence or science; God desires only that we believe the Conclusion, as much as the Premisses deserve; that the strength of our Faith be equal or proportionable to the credibility of the Motives tives to it. Now though I have and ought to have, an absolute certainty of this Thesis, All which God reveals for truth, is true, being a Proposition, that may be demonstrated, or rather so evident to any one that understands it, that it needs it not; Yet of this Hypothesis, That all the Articles of our Faith were revealed by God, we cannot ordinarily have any rational and acquired certainty, more than moral, founded upon these Considerations: First, that the goodness of the precepts of Christianity, and the greatness of the promises of it, shews it, of all other Religions, most likely to come from the Fountain of goodness. And then that a constant, famous, and very general Tradition, so credible that no wise man doubts of any other which hath but the fortieth part of the credibility of this; such and so credible a Tradition, tells us, that God himself hath set his Hand and Seal to the truth of this Doctrin, by doing great, and glorious, and frequent Miracles in confirmation of it. Now our Faith is an assent to this Conclusion, that the Doctrin of Christianity is true, which being deduced from the former Thesis, which is Metaphysically certain, and from the former Hypothesis, whereof we can have but a moral certainty, we cannot possibly by natural means be more certain of it than of the weaker of the Premisses; as a River will not rise higher than the fountain from which it flows. For the Conclusion always follows the worser part, if there be any worse: and must be Negative, particular, Contingent, or but Morally certain, if any of the Propositions, from whence it is derived, be so: Neither can we be certain of it in the highest degree, unless we be thus certain of all the Principles whereon it is grounded. As a man cannot go or stand strongly, if either of his legs be weak. Or as a building cannot be stable, if any one of the necessary pillars thereof be infirm and instable. Or as, If a message be brought me, from a man of absolute credit with me, but by a messenger that is not so, my confidence of the Truth of the Relation, cannot but be rebated and lessened, by my diffidence in the Relator.

9. Yet all this I say not, as if I doubted, that the Spirit of God, being implored by devout and humble prayer, and sincere obedience, may, and will by degrees, advance his servants higher, and give them a certainty of adherence, beyond their certainty of evidence. But, what God gives as a reward to believers, is one thing; and what he requires of all men, as their duty, is another; and what he will accept of, out of grace and favour, is yet another. To those that believe, and live according to their faith, he gives by degrees the spirit of obsignation and confirmation, which makes them know (though how they know not) what they did but believe: And to be as fully and resolutely assured of the Gospel of Christ, as those which heard it from Christ himself with their ears, which saw it with their eyes, which looked upon it, and whose hands handled the Word of Life. He requires of all, that their Faith should be (as I have said) proportionable to the Motives or Reasons enforcing to it; he will accept of the weakest and lowest degree of Faith, if it be living and effectual unto true Obedience. For he it is that will not quench the smoaking flax, nor break the bruised Reed. He did not reject the prayer of that distressed man that cryed unto him, Lord, I believe; Lord, help mine unbelief. He commands us to receive them that are weak in faith, and thereby declares that he receives them. And as nothing avails with him, but Faith which worketh by love; So any Faith, if be it but as a grain of mustard-seed, if it work by love, shall certainly avail with him, and be accepted of him. Some experience makes me fear, that the faith of considering and discoursing men, is like to be crackt with too much straining: And that being possessed with this false principle, that it is in vain to believe the Gospel of Christ, with such a kind or degree of assent, as they yield to other matters of Tradition: And finding that their faith of it, is to them undiscernable, from the belief they give to the truth of other Stories; are in danger either not to believe at all, thinking, not at all as good as to no purpose; purpose; or else, though indeed they do believe it, yet to think they do not, and to cast themselves into wretched agonies and perplexities, as fearing they have not that, without which it is impossible to please God, and obtain eternal happiness. Consideration of this advantage, which the Devil probably may make of this Fancy, made me willing to insist somewhat largely upon the Refutation of it.

10. I return now thither from whence I have digressed, and assure you, concerning the grounds afore-said, which were that there is a Rule of Faith whereby Controversies may be decided, which are necessary to be decided; and that this Rule is universally infallible, That notwithstanding any opinion I hold, touching Faith or any thing else, I may, and do believe them, as firmly as you pretend to do. And therefore you may build on, in God's name; for by God's help, I shall always embrace, whatsoever structure is naturally and rationally laid upon them, whatsoever conclusion, may to my understanding be evidently deduced from them. You say, out of them it undeniably follows, That, of two disagreeing in matter of Faith, the one cannot be saved, but by repentance or ignorance. I answer, by distinction of those terms, two dissenting in a matter of faith. For it may be either in a thing which is indeed a matter of Faith in the strictest sense; that is, something, the Belief whereof God requires under pain of damnation: And so the Conclusion is true, though the Consequence of it from your former premisses either is none at all, or so obscure, that I can hardly discern it. Or it may be, as it often falls out concerning a thing which being indeed no matter of Faith, is yet overvalued by the parties at variance, and esteemed to be so. And in this sense it is neither consequent, nor true. The untruth of it I have already declared in my examination of your Preface. The inconsequence of it, is of it self evident; for, Who ever heard of a wilder Collection than this?

God hath provided means sufficient to decide all Controversies in Religion necessary to be decided;
This means is universally infallible;
Therefore of two, that differ in any thing which they esteem a matter of Faith, one cannot be saved.

He that can find any connection between these Propositions, I believe will be able to find good coherence between the deaf Plaintiff's Accusation, in the Greek Epigram, and the deaf Defendant's Answer, and the deaf Judge's Sentence: And to contrive them all into a formal Categorical Syllogism.

11. Indeed, if the matter in agitation were plainly decided, by this infallible means of deciding Controversies, and the Parties in variance knew it to be so, and yet would stand out in their dissention; this were, in one of them, direct opposition to the Testimony of God, and undoubtedly a damnable sin. But, if you take the liberty to suppose what you please, you may very easily conclude what you list. For, who is so foolish as to grant you these unreasonable Postulates, that every emergent Controversie of Faith is plainly decided by the means of decision which God hath appointed; and that, of the parties litigant, one is always such a convicted Recusant as you pretend? Certainly, if you say so, having no better warrant than you have, or can have for it, this is more proper and formal uncharitableness, than ever was charged upon you. Me-thinks, with much more Reason, and much more Charity, you might suppose, that many of these Controversies, which are now disputed among Christians (all which profess themselves lovers of Christ, and truly desirous to know his will and do it) are either not decidable by that means which God hath provided, and so not necessary to be decided: or if they be, yet not so plainly and evidently, as to oblige all men to hold one way: or Lastly, if decidable, and evidently decided, yet you may hope that the erring party, by reason of some veil before his eyes, some excusable ignorance or unavoidable prejudice, doth not see the Question to be decided against him, and so opposeth not that which He doth know to be the Word of God, but only that which You know to be so, and which he might know, were he void of prejudice. Which is a fault I confess, but a fault, which is incident even to good and honest men very often: and not of such a gigantique disposition, as you make it, to fly directly upon God Almighty, and to give him the Lye to his face.

12. Ad §. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16. In all this long Discourse you only tell us what you will do, but do nothing. Many Positions there are, but proofs of them you offer none, but reserve them to the Chapters following; and there, in their proper places, they shall be examined. The sum of all your Assumpts collected by your self, §. 16. is this, That the infallible means of determining Controversies, is the Visible Church.

That the distinction of Points Fundamental, and not-Fundamental, maketh nothing to the present Question.

That, to say, the Creed containeth all Fundamentals, is neither pertinent nor true.

That, whosoever persist in Division from the Communion and Faith of the Roman Church, are guilty of Schism and Heresie.

That, in regard of the Precept of Charity towards one's self, Protestants are in state of sin, while they remain divided from the Roman Church.

To all these Assertions I will content my self for the present to oppose this one, That not one of them all is true. Only I may not omit to tell you, that if the first of them were as true as the Pope himself desires it should be, yet the Corollary, which you deduce from it, would be utterly inconsequent, That, Whosoever denies any Point proposed by the Church, is injurious to God's Divine Majesty; as if He could deceive, or be deceived. For though your Church were indeed as Infallible a Propounder of Divine Truths as it pretends to be, yet, if it appeared not to me to be so, I might very well believe God most true, and your Church most false. As, though the Gospel of S. Matthew be the Word of God; yet, if I neither knew it to be so, nor believed it, I might believe in God, and yet think that Gospel a Fable. Hereafter therefore I must intreat you to remember, that our being guilty of this impiety, depends not only upon your being, but upon our knowing that you are so. Neither must you argue thus; The Church of Rome is the Infallible Propounder of Divine Verities, therefore he that opposeth Her calls God's Truth in Question: But thus rather, The Church of Rome is so, and Protestants know it to be so; therefore in opposing her, they impute to God, that either he deceives them, or is deceived himself. For as I may deny something which you upon your knowledge have affirmed, and yet never disparage your honesty, if I never knew that you affirmed it: So I may be undoubtedly certain of God's Omniscience, and Veracity, and yet doubt of something which he hath revealed; provided, I do not know, nor believe that he hath revealed it. So, that though your Church be the appointed witness of God's Revelations, yet until you know, that we know she is so, you cannot without foul calumny impute to us, That, we charge God blasphemously with deceiving, or being deceived. You will say perhaps, that this is directly consequent from our Doctrin, That the Church may err, which is directed by God in all her Propositals. True, if we knew it to be directed by him, otherwise not; much less if we believe, and know the contrary. But then, if it were consequent from our Opinion, have you so little Charity, as to say, that men are justly chargeable with all the consequences of their Opinions; Such Consequences, I mean, as they do not own, but disclaim; and, if there were a necessity of doing either, would much rather forsake their Opinion, than embrace those Consequences? What opinion is there that draws after it such a train of portentous blasphemies, as that of the Dominicans, by the judgment of the best Writers of your own Order? And will you say now, that the Dominicans are justly chargeable with all those Blasphemies? If not, seeing our case (take it at the worst) is but the same, why should not not your judgment of us be the same? I appeal to all those Protestants that have gone over to your Side; whether when they were most averse from it, they did ever deny or doubt of God's Omniscience or veracity: whether they did ever believe or were taught, that God did deceive them, or was deceived himself. Nay, I provoke you your self, and desire you to deal truly, and to tell Us, whether you do in your heart believe, that we do indeed not believe the eternal Veracity of the eternal Verity? And, if you judge so strangely of us, having no better ground for it, than you have or can have, we shall not need any farther proof of your uncharitableness towards us, this being the extremity of true uncharitableness. If not, then, I hope, having no other ground but this (which sure is none at all) to pronounce us damnable Heretiques, you will cease to do so; and hereafter (as, if your ground be true, you may do with more Truth and charity) collect thus, They only err damnably, who oppose what they know God hath testified; But protestants sure do not oppose what they know God hath testified, at least we cannot with Charity say they do; Therefore they either do not err damnably, or with Charity we cannot say they do so.

13. Ad §. 17. Protestants (you say) according to their own grounds must hold, that of persons contrary in whatsoever Point of belief one part only can be saved, therefore it is strangely done of them to charge Papists with want of Charity for holding the same. The Consequence I acknowledge, but wonder much what it should be that lays upon Protestants any necessity to do so! You tell us, it is their holding Scripture the sole Rule of Faith: For this, you say, obligeth them to pronounce them damned, that oppose any least Point delivered in Scripture. This I grant, If they oppose it after sufficient declaration, so that either they know it to be contained in Scripture, or have no just probable Reason, and which may move an honest man to doubt, Whether or no it be there contained. For to oppose in the first case, in a man that believes the Scripture to be the Word of God, is, to give God the lie. To oppose in the second, is, to be obstinate against Reason; and therefore a sin, though not so great as the former. But then this is nothing to the purpose of the necessity of damning all those that are of contrary belief; and that for these Reasons. First, because the contrary belief may be touching a Point not at all mentioned in Scripture; and such Points, though indeed they be not matters of Faith, yet by men in variance are often over-valued and esteemed to be so. So that, though it were damnable to oppose any Point contained in Scripture, yet Persons of a contrary belief (as Victor, and Polycrates, S. Cyprian, and Stephen) might both be saved, because their contrary belief was not touching any Point contained in Scripture. Secondly, because the contrary belief may be about the sense of some place of Scripture which is ambiguous, and with propability capable of divers senses; and in such cases it is no marvel, and sure no sin, if several men go several ways. Thirdly, because the contrary belief may be concerning Points wherein Scripture may, with so great probability, be alledged on both sides, (which is a sure note of a Point not-necessary) that men of honest and upright hearts, true lovers of God and of Truth, such as desire above all things, to know God's will and to do it, may, without any fault at all, some go one way, and some another, and some (and those as good men as either of the former) suspend their judgments, and expect some Elias to solve doubts, and reconcile repugnancies. Now in all such Questions, one side or other (which soever it is) holds that which indeed is opposite to the sense of the Scripture, which God intended; for it is impossible that God should intend Contradictions. But then this intended sense is not so fully declared, but that they which oppose it, may verily believe that they indeed maintain it, and have great shew of reason to induce them to believe so; and therefore are not to be damned, as men opposing that which they either know to be a Truth delivered in Scripture, or have no probable Reason to believe the contrary; but rather, in Charity to be acquitted and absolved, as men who endeavour to find the Truth, but fail of it through humane frailty.

This ground being laid, the Anſwer to your enſuing Interrogatories, which you conceive impoſſible, is very obvious and eaſie.

14. To the firſt, Whether it be not in any man a grievous ſin to deny any one Truth contained in holy Writ? I anſwer, Yes, if he knew it to be ſo, or have no probable Reaſon to doubt of it: otherwiſe, not.

15. To the ſecond: Whether there be in ſuch denial any diſtinction between Fundamental and not-Fundamental ſufficient to excuſe from Hereſie? I anſwer, Yes, There is ſuch a Diſtinction. But the Reaſon is, becauſe thoſe Points, either in themſelves, or by accident, are Fundamental, which are evidently contained in Scripture, to him that knows them to be ſo: Thoſe not-Fundamental, which are there-hence deducible, but probably only, not evidently.

16. To the third: Whether it be not impertinent to alledge the creed as containing all Fundamental Points of Faith, as if believing it alone we were at Liberty to deny all other Points of Scripture? I anſwer, It was never alledged to any ſuch purpoſe; but only as a ſufficient, or rather more than a ſufficient Summary of thoſe Points of Faith which were of neceſſity to be believed actually and explicitly; and that only of ſuch which were meerly and purely Credenda, and not Agenda.

17. To the fourth, drawn as a Corollary from the former, Whether this be not to ſay, that, of perſons contrary in belief, one part only can be ſaved? I anſwer, by no means. For they may differ about Points not contained in Scripture. They may differ about the ſenſe of ſome ambiguous Text of Scripture: They may differ about ſome Doctrines, for, and againſt which Scriptures may be alledged with ſo great probability, as may juſtly excuſe either Part from Hereſie, and a ſelf-condemning Obſtinacy. And therefore, though D. Potter do not take it ill, that you believe your ſelves may be ſaved in your Religion; yet, notwithſtanding all that hath yet been pretended to the contrary, he may juſtly condemn you, and that out of your own principles, of uncharitable preſumption, for affirming as you do, that no man can be ſaved out of it.

CHAP. II.

What is that means, whereby the revealed Truths of God are conveyed to our Underſtanding, and which muſt determin Controverſies in Faith and Religion.

IF our eſtimation, reſpect, and reverence to holy Scripture, even Proteſtants themſelves do in fact give teſtimony, while they poſſeſs it from us, and take it upon the integrity of our cuſtody. No cauſe imaginable could avert our will from giving the function of ſupreme and ſole Judge to holy Writ, if both the thing were not impoſſible in it ſelf, and if both reaſon and experience did not convince our underſtanding, that, by this Aſſertion Contentions are increaſed, and not ended. We acknowledge holy Scripture to be a moſt perfect Rule, for as much as a Writing can be a Rule: We only deny that it excludes, either divine Tradition, though it be unwritten, or an external Judge to keep, to propoſe, to interpret in a true, Orthodox, and Catholique ſenſe. Every ſingle Book, every Chapter, yea, every period of holy Scripture is infallibly true, and wants no due perfection. But muſt we therefore infer, that all other Books of Scripture are to be excluded, left, by addition of them, we may ſeem to derogate from the perfection of the former? When the firſt Books of the Old and New Teſtament were written, they did not exclude unwritten Traditions, nor the Authority of the Church to decide Controverſies: and who hath then ſo altered their nature, and filled them with ſuch jealouſies, as that now they cannot agree for fear of mutual diſparagement? What greater wrong is it for the written Word, to be compartner now with the unwritten, than for the unwritten, which was once alone, to be afterward joyned, with the written? Who ever heard, that, to commend the fidelity of a Keeper, were to diſauthorize the thing committed to his cuſtody? Or that, to extol the integrity and knowledge, and to avouch the neceſſity of a Judge in ſuits of Law, were to deny perfection in the Law? Are there not in Common-wealths, beſides the Laws, written and unwritten cuſtoms, Judges appointed to declare both the one, and the other, as ſeveral occaſions may require?

2. That the Scripture alone cannot be Judge in Controverſies of Faith, we gather it very clearly, From the quality of a writing in general: From the nature of holy Writ in particular, which muſt be believed as true, and infallible: From the Editions, and Tranſlations of it: From the difficulty to underſtand it without hazard of Error: From the inconveniences that muſt follow upon the aſcribing of ſole Judicature to it: and finally, From the Confeſſions of our Adverſaries. And on the other ſide, all theſe difficulties ceaſing, and all other qualities requiſite to a Judge concurring in the viſible Church of Chriſt our Lord, we muſt conclude, that the it is, to whom, in doubts concerning Faith and Religion, all Chriſtians ought to have recourſe.

3. The name, notion, nature, and properties of a Judge cannot in common reaſon agree to any meer meer writing, which, be it otherwiſe in its kind, never ſo highly qualified with ſanctity and infallibility; yet it muſt ever be, as all writings are, deaf, dumb, and inanimate. By a Judge, all wiſe men underſtand a perſon endued with life, and reaſon, able to hear, to examine, to declare his mind to the diſagreeing parties, in ſuch ſort as that each one may know whether the ſentence be in favour of his cauſe, or againſt his preſence; and he muſt be applyable, and able to do all this, as the diverſity of Controverſies, Perſons, Occaſions, and Circumſtances may require. There is a great and plain diſtinction betwixt a Judge and a Rule. For, as in a Kingdom, the Judge hath his Rule to follow, which are the received Laws and Cuſtoms; ſo are not they fit or able to declare, or be Judges to themſelves, but that office muſt belong to a living Judge. The holy Scripture may be, and is, a Rule, but cannot be a Judge, becauſe, it being always the ſame, cannot declare it ſelf any one time, or upon any one occaſion, more particularly than upon any other; and let it be read over an hundred times, it will be ſtill the ſame, and no more fit alone to terminate Controverſies in Faith, than the Law would be to end ſuits, if it were given over to the fancy, and gloſs of every ſingle man.

4. This difference betwixt a Judge and a Rule, D. Potter perceived, when, more than once, having ſtiled the Scripture a Judge, by way of correcting that term, he adds, or rather a Rule; becauſe he knew that an inanimate writing could not be a Judge. From hence alſo it was, that, though Proteſtants in their beginning affirmed Scripture alone to be the Judge of Controverſies; yet, upon a more adviſed reflection, they changed the phraſe, and ſaid, that not Scripture, but the Holy Ghoſt ſpeaking in Scripture, is Judge in Controverſies. A difference without a diſparity. The Holy Ghoſt ſpeaking only in Scripture, is no more intelligible to us, than the Scripture in which he ſpeaks: as a man ſpeaking only Latin, can be no better underſtood, than the tongue wherein he ſpeaketh. And therefore to ſay, A Judge is neceſſary for deciding Controverſies, about the meaning of Scripture, is as much as to ſay, He is neceſſary to decide what the holy Ghoſt ſpeaks in Scripture. And, it were a conceit, equally fooliſh and pernitious, if one ſhould ſeek to take away all Judges in the Kingdom, upon this nicety, that albeit Laws cannot be Judges, yet the Law-maker ſpeaking in the Law, may perform that Office; as if the Law-maker ſpeaking in the Law, were with more perſpicuity underſtood, than the Law wherebe he ſpeaketh.

5. But though ſome writing were granted to have a privilege, to declare it ſelf upon ſuppoſition that it were maintained in being, and preſerved intire from corruptions; yet it is manifeſt, that no writing can conſerve it ſelf, nor can complain, or denounce the falſifier of it; and therefore it ſtands in need of ſome watchful and not-erring eye, to guard it, by means of whoſe aſſured vigilancy, we may undoubtedly receive it ſincere and pure.

6. And, ſuppoſe it could defend it ſelf from corruption, how could it aſſure us that it ſelf were Canonical, and of infallible verity? By ſaying ſo? Of this very Affirmation, there will remain the ſame Queſtion ſtill; how it can prove it ſelf to be infallibly true? Neither can there ever be an end of the like multiplyed demands, till we reſt in the external Authority of ſome perſon or perſons bearing witneſs to the world, that ſuch, or ſuch a Book is Scripture; and yet upon this Point, according to Proteſtants, all other Controverſies in Faith depend.

7. That Scripture cannot aſſure us, that it ſelf is Canonical Scripture, is acknowledged by ſome Proteſtants, in expreſs words; and by all of them, in deeds. Mr. Hooker, whom D. Potter ranketh (a) among men of great Learning and Judgment, ſaith, Of things (b) neceſſary, the very chiefeſt is to know what Books we are to eſteem Holy; which Point is confeſſed impoſſible for the Scripture it ſelf to teach. And this he proveth by the ſame Argument, which we lately uſed, ſaying thus, It is not (c) the word of God which doth, or poſſibly can aſſure us, that we do well to think it his word. For, if any one Book of Scripture did give teſtimony of all, yet ſtill that Scripture, which giveth teſtimony to the reſt, would require another Scripture to give credit unto it. Neither could we come to any paſſe whereon to reſt, unleſs, beſides Scripture, there were ſomething which might aſſure us, &c. And this he acknowledges to be the (d) Church. By the way, If Of things neceſſary the very chiefeſt cannot poſſibly be taught by Scripture, as this man of great learning and judgment affirmeth, and demonſtratively proveth; how can the Proteſtant Clergy of England ſubſcribe to their ſixth Article? Wherein it is ſaid of the Scripture, whatſoever is not read, therein not may be proved thereby, is not to be required of any man, that it ſhould be believed as an Article of the Faith, or be thought requiſite or neceſſary to Salvation: and concerning their belief and profeſſion of this Article, they are particularly examined when they be ordained Prieſts and Biſhops. With Hooker, his defendant Covel doth punctually agree. Whitaker likewiſe confeſſeth, that the queſtion about Canonical Scriptures, is defined to us, not by teſtimony of the private Spirit, which (ſaith he) being private and ſecret, is (e) unfit to teach and reſt others; but (as he acknowledgeth) by the (f) Eccleſiaſtical Tradition, An argument (ſaith he) whereby we are aſſured, and convinced, what Books be Canonical, and what be not. Luther ſaith, This (g) indeed the Church hath, that ſhe can diſcern the word of God, from the word of men: as Auguſtine confeſſeth, that he believed the Goſpel, being moved by the Authority of the Church, which did preach this to be the Goſpel. Fulk teacheth, that the Church (h) hath judgment to diſcern true writings from counterfeit, and the Word of God from the writing of men; and that this judgment ſhe hath not of her ſelf, but of the holy Ghoſt. And, to the end that you may not be ignorant, from what Church you muſt receive Scriptures, hear your firſt Patriarch Luther ſpeaking againſt them, who (as he ſaith) brought in Anabaptiſm, to a counterfeit by this means, they ought to deny the whole Scripture, and the Office of Preaching. For, all thoſe we have from the Pope: otherwiſe we muſt go make a new Scripture.

8. But now in deeds, they all make good, that, without the Churches Authority, no certainty can be had what Scripture is Canonical, while they cannot agree in aſſigning the Canon of holy Scripture. Of the Epiſtle of S. James, Luther hath theſe words: The (k) Epiſtle of James is contentious, ſwelling, dry, ſtrawy, and unworthy of an Apoſtolical Spirit. Which cenſure of Luther, Illiricus acknowledgeth and maintaineth. Kemnitius teacheth, that the ſecond Epiſtle (l) of Peter, the ſecond and third of John, the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, the Epiſtle of James, the Epiſtle of Jude, and the Apocalyps of John are Apocryphal, as not having ſufficient Teſtimony (m) of their authority, and therefore that nothing in Controverſie can be proved out of theſe (n) Books. The ſame is taught by divers other Lutherans: and, if ſome other amongſt them, be of a contrary opinion ſince Luther's time, I wonder what new infallible ground they can alledge, why they leave their Maſter, and ſo many of his prime Scholars? I know no better ground, than becauſe they may with as much freedom aband on him, as he was bold to after that Canon of Scripture, which he found received in God's Church.

9. What Books of Scripture the Protestants of England, hold for Canonical, is not easie to affirm: In their sixth Article they say, In the name of the holy Scripture, we do understand those Canonical Books of the Old and New Testament, of whose Authority was never any doubt in the Church. What mean they by these words? That by the Churches consent they are assured what Scriptures be Canonical? This were to make the Church Judge, and not Scriptures alone. Do they only understand the agreement of the Church to be a probable inducement? Probability is not sufficient ground for an infallible assent of Faith. By this rule (of which Authority was NEVER any doubt in the Church) the whole book of Esther must quit the Canon, because some in the Church have excluded it from the Canon. as (o) Melito Asianus, (p) Athanasius, and (q) Gregory Nazianzen. And Luther, (if Protestants will be content that he be in the Church) saith, The Jews (r) place the book of Esther in the Canon; who is it, if I might be Judge, doth rather deserve to be put out of the Canon. And of Ecclesiastes he saith, This, (if a book is not full; there are in it many abrupt things: no warts boats and spars, that is, he hath no perfect sentence, he sits upon a large sea like me when I was in the Monastery. And much more is to be read in him: who (s) saith further, that the said book was not written by Solomon, but by Syrach in the time of the Machabees, and that it is like to the Talmud (the Jews Bible) out of many books heaped into one work, perhaps out of the Library of king Ptolomeus. And further he saith, that (u) he doth not believe all to have been done as there is set down. And he teacheth the (w) book of Job to be as it were, an argument for a fable; or Comedy to set before us an example of Patience. And he (x) delivers this general censure of the Prophets books, the Sermons of no Prophet were written whole and perfect, but their Disciples, and Auditors snatched, now one, however, and then another, and so put them all into one book, and by this means the Bible was conserved. If this were so, the books of the Prophets, being not written by themselves, but promiscuously and casually, by their Disciples, will soon be called in question. Are not these errors of Luther fundamental? and yet, if Protestants deny the Infallibility of the Church, upon what certain ground can they disprove these and worse, and Lucifarian Blasphemies? O Godly Reformer of the Roman Church! But to return to our English Canon of Scripture. In the New Testament by the above-mentioned rule (of whose authority Patrick & Pio. was never any doubt in the Church) divers Books of the New Testament must be discanonized, to wit, all those of which some Ancients have doubted, and those which divers Lutherans have of late denied. It is worth the observation, how the before-mentioned sixth Article, doth specifie by name all the Books of the Old Testament which they hold for Canonical; but those of the New Testament, as they are commonly received, we do receive and account them Canonical. The Mystery is easily to be unfolded. If they had descended to particulars, they must have contradicted some of their chiefest Brethren. As they are commonly received, &c. I ask, By whom? By the Church of Rome? Then, by the same reason they must receive divers Books of the Old Testament, which they reject. By Lutherans? Then with Lutherans they may deny some Books of the New Testament. If it be the greater, or less number of Voices, that must cry up or down, the Canon of Scripture, our Romish Canon will prevail: and among Protestants the Certainty of their Faith must be reduced to an uncertain Controversie of Fact, Whether the number of those who reject, or of those others who receive such and such Scriptures, be greater. The Faith must alter according to years and days. When Luther first appeared, he, and his Disciples were the greater number of that new Church; and so this claim (Of being commonly received) stood for them, till Zuinglius or Calvin grew to some equal, or greater number than that of the Lutherans, and then this rule of (commonly received) will canonize their Canon against the Lutherans. I would gladly know, why, in the former part of their Article, they saw both of the Old and New Testament: In the name of the holy Scripture, we do understand those Canonical Books of the Old and New Testament, of whose Authority was never any doubt in the Church; And in the latter part, speaking again of the New Testament, they give a far different rule, saying, All the Books of the New Testament, as they are commonly received, we do receive, and account them Canonical. This, I say, is a rule much different from the former (of whose Authority was NEVER any doubt in the Church); For some Books might be said to be commonly received, although they were sometime doubted of by some. If to be commonly received, pass for a good rule to know the Canon of the New Testament, why not of the Old? Above all we desire to know, Upon what infallible ground in some Books they agree with us against Luther, and divers principal Lutherans, and in others jump with Luther against us? But seeing they disagree among themselves, it is evident that they have no certain rule to know the Canon of Scripture, in affigning whereof some of them must of necessity err; because, of contradictory Propositions both cannot be true.

10. Moreover, the letters, syllables, words, phrase, or matter contained in holy Scripture have no necessary, or natural connection with divine Revelation or Inspiration: and therefore by seeing, reading, or understanding them, we cannot infer that they proceed from God, or be confirmed by divine Authority; as because Creatures involve a necessary relation, connection and dependance on their Creator, Philosophers may by the light of natural reason, demonstrate the existence of one prime cause of all things. In Holy Writ there are innumerable truths not surpassing the sphere of humane wit, which are, or may be delivered by Pagan Writers, in the self same words and phrase as they are in Scripture. And as for some truths peculiar to Christians (for example, the Mystery of the blessed Trinity, &c.) The only setting them down in Writing is not enough to be assured that such a Writing is the undoubted Word of God: otherwise some sayings of Plato, Trismegistus, Sibyls, Ovid, &c. must be esteemed Canonical Scripture, because they tell us on some truth, proper to Christian Religion. The internal light, and inspiration, which directed and moved the Authors of Canonical Scriptures, is a hidden Quality infused into their understanding and will, and hath no such particular sensible influence into the external Writing, that in it we can discover, or from it demonstrate any such secret Light and inspiration; and therefore to be assured that such a writing is divine, we cannot know from it self alone, but by some other extrinseed Authority.

11. And here we appeal to any man of judgment, whether it be not a vain brag of some Protestants to tell us, that they wot full well what is Scripture, by the light of Scripture it self, or (as D. Potter words it) by (y) that glorious beam of divine light which shines therein; even as our eye distinguisheth Light from darkness, without any other help than light it self; and as our ear knows a voice, by the voice it self alone. But this vanity is refuted, by what we said even now; that the external Scripture hath no apparent or necessary connexion with divine inspiration or revelation. Will D. Potter hold all his Brethren for blind men, for not seeing that glorious beam of divine light which shines in Scripture, about which they cannot agree? Corporal light may be discerned by it self alone, as being evident, proportionate, and connatural to our faculty of seeing. That Scripture is Divine, and inspired by God,

God, is a truth exceeding the natural capacity and compass of man's understanding, to us obscure, and to be believed by divine Faith, which, according to the Apostle, is, argumentum (z) non apparentium; an argument, or conviction, of things not evident; and therefore no wonder if Scripture do not manifest it self by it self alone, but must require some other means for applying it to our understanding. Nevertheless their own similitudes and instances make against themselves: For, suppose a man had never read, or heard of Sun, Moon, Fire, Candle, &c. and should be brought to behold a light, yet in such sort as that the Agent, or Cause efficient from which it proceeded, were kept hidden from him; could such a one, by only beholding the light, certainly know, Whether it were produced by the Sun, or Moon, &c? Or, if one heard a voice, and had never known the Speaker, could he know from whom in particular that voice proceeded? They, who look upon Scripture, may well see, that some one wrote it; but that it was written by divine inspiration, how shall they know? Nay, they cannot so much as know who wrote it, unless they first know the Writer, and what hand he writes: as likewise I cannot know whose voice it is which I hear, unless I first both know the person who speaks, and with what voice he useth to speak; and yet, even all this supposed, I may perhap be deceived. For there may be voices so like, and Hands so counterfeited, that men may be deceived by them, as Birds were by the Grapes of that skilful Painter. Now since Protestants affirm, knowledge concerning God as our supernatural end, must be taken from Scripture, they cannot in Scripture alone discern that it is his voice, or writing, because they cannot know from whom a writing, or voice proceeds, unless first they know the person who speaketh, or writeth. Nay, I say more, by Scripture alone, they cannot so much as know, that any person doth in it, or by it, speak any thing at all: because one may write without intent to signifie, or affirm any thing, but only to set down, or, as it were, paint, such characters, syllables, and words; as men are wont to set copies, not caring what the signification of the words imports: or as one transcribes a writing which himself understands not: or when one writes what another dictates, and in such cases, wherein it is clear, that the Writer speaks or signifies nothing in such his writing; and therefore by it we cannot hear, or understand his voice. With what certainty then can any man affirm, that by Scripture it self they can see, that the Writers did intend to signifie any thing at all: that they were Apostles, or other Canonical Authors: that they wrote their own sense, and not what was dictated by some other man: and finally and especially, that they wrote by the infallible direction of the holy Ghost?

12. But let us be liberal, and for the present suppose (not grant) that Scripture is, like to corporal light, by it self alone able to determine, and move our understanding to assent; yet the Similitude proves against themselves. for light is not visible, except to such as have eyes, which are not made by the light, but must be presupposed as produced by some other cause. And therefore, to hold the similitude, Scripture can be clear in y to those who are endued with the eye of faith; or as D. Potter above cited saith, to all that have (a) eyes to discern the shining beams thereof; that is, to the believer, as immediately after he speaketh. Faith then must not originally proceed from Scripture, but is to be presupposed, before we can see the light thereof; and consequently there must be some other means precedent to Scripture, to beget Faith, which can be no other than the Church,

13. Others affirm, that they know Canonical Scriptures to be such, by the Title of the Books. But how shall we know such Inscriptions, or Titles, to be infallibly true? From this their Answer our argument is strengthned, because divers Apocriphal writings have appeared, under the Titles, and Names of sacred Authors, as the Gospel of Thomas mentioned by (b) S. Agustine, the Gospel of Peter, which the Nazarei did use, as (c) Theodoret witnesseth, with which Seraphion a Catholique Bishop, was for some time deceived, as may be read in (d) Eusebius, who also speaketh of the Apocalyps of (e) Peter. The like may be said of the Gospels of Barnabas, Bartholomew, and other such writings specified by Pope (f) Gelasius. Protestants reject likewise some part of Esther and Daniel, which bear the same Titles with the rest of those Books, as also both we, and they hold for Apocryphal, the third and fourth Books which go under the name of Esdras, and yet both of us receive his first and second book. Wherefore Titles are not sufficient assurances what Books be Canonical: which (h) D. Covel acknowledgeth in these words, It is not the word of God, which doth, or possibly can assure us, that we do well to think it is the word of God: the first outward motion leading men so to esteem of the Scripture, is the Authority of Gods Church, which teacheth us to receive Mark's Gospel, who was not an Apostle, and to refuse the Gospel of Thomas who was an Apostle: and to retain Luke's Gospel who saw not Christ, and to reject the Gospel of Nicodemus who saw him.

14. Another Answer, or rather Objection they are wont to bring: That the Scripture being a principle needs no proof among Christians. So (i) D. Potter. But this is either a plain begging of the question, or manifestly untrue, and is directly against their own Doctrine, and Practice. If they mean, that Scripture is one of those principles, which being the first, and most known in all Sciences, cannot be demonstrated by other principles, they suppose that which is in question, Whether there be not some Principle, (for example, the Church) whereby we may come to the knowledg of Scripture. If they intend, that Scripture is a Principle, but not the first, and most known in Christianity, then Scripture may be proved. For Principles, that are not the first, nor known of themselves, may, and ought to be proved, before we can yield assent, either to them, or to other verities depending on them. It is repugnant to their own Doctrin, and practice, in as much as they are wont to affirm, that one part of Scripture may be known to be Canonical, and may be interpreted by another. And since every Scripture is a Principle sufficient, upon which to ground divine Faith, they must grant, that one Principle may, and sometime must, be proved by another. Yea this their Answer, upon due ponderation, fals out to prove, what we affirm. For since all Principles cannot be proved, we must (that our labour may not be endless) come at length, to rest in some Principle, which may not require any other proof. Such is Tradition, which involves an evidence of fact; and from hand to hand, and age to age, bringing us up to the times, and Persons of the Apostles, and our Saviour himself, cometh to be confirmed by all those Miracles, and other arguments, whereby they convinced their doctrin to be true. wherefore the ancient Fathers avouch that we must receive the sacred Canon upon the credit of God's Church. (k) S. Athanasius saith, that only four Gospels are to be received, because the Canons of the holy and Catholique Church have so determined. The third Council of (l) Carthage having set down the Books of holy Scripture, gives the reason, because, we have received from our Fathers that these are to be read in the Church. S. Augustine (m) speaking of the Acts of the Apostles, saith, To which book I must give credit, if I give credit to the Gospel, because the Catholique Church doth alike recommend to me both these Books. And in the same place he hath also these words: I would not believe the Gospel, unless the authority of the Catholique Church did move me.

15. But suppose they were assured what Books were Canonical, this will little avail them, unless they be likewise certain in what language they remain uncorrupted, or what Translations be true. Calvin (o) acknowledgeth corruption in the Hebrew Text; which if it be taken without points, is so ambiguous, that scarcely any one Chapter, yea period, can be securely understood without the help of some Translation. If with points, These were after S. Hieroms time, invented by the perfidious Jews, who either by ignorance might mistake, or upon malice force the Text, to favour their impieties. And that the Hebrew Text still retains much ambiguity, is apparent by the disagreeing Translation of Novellists; which also proves the Greek, for the New Testament, not to be void of doubtfulness, as Calvin (p) confesseth it to be corrupted. And although both the Hebrew and Greek were pure, what doth this help, if only Scripture be the rule of Faith, and so very few be able to examine the Text in these languages. All then must be reduced to the certainty of Translations into other Tongues, wherein no private man having any promise, or assurance of infallibility, Protestants who rely upon Scripture alone, will find no certain ground for their faith: as accordingly Whitaker (q) affirmeth: How can they who understand not the Hebrew and Greek, do it often, and unavoidably.

16. Now concerning the Translations of protestants, it will be sufficient to set down what the laborious, exact, and judicious Author of the Protestants Apology, &c. dedicated to our late King James of famous memory, hath to this (r) purpose. To omit (saith he) particulars whose recital would be infinite, and to touch this point but generally only, the Translation of the New Testament by Luther is condemned by Andreas, Osiander, Kyckermannus, and Zuinglius, who saith hereof to Luther, Thou dost corrupt the Word of God, thou art seen to be a manifest and common corrupter of the holy Scriptures: how much are we ashamed of thee who have hitherto esteemed thee beyond all measure, and now prove thee to be such a man? And in like manner doth Luther reject the Translation of the Zuinglians, terming them in matter of Divinity, Fools, Asses, Antichrists, Deceivers, and of Asse-like understanding. In so much that when Froschoverus the Zuinglian Printer of Zwich sent him a Bible translated by the Divines there, Luther would not receive the same, but sending it back rejected it, as the Protestants Writers Hospinianus, and Lavaterus witness. The Translation set forth by Oecolampadius, and the Divines of Basil, is reproved by Beza, who affirmeth that the Basil Translation is in many places wicked, and altogether differing from the mind of the holy Ghost. The Translation of Castalio is condemned by Beza, as being sacrilegious, wicked, and Ethnical. As concerning Calvins Translation, that learned Protestant Writer Carolus Molinæus saith therefore, Calvin in his Harmony maketh the Text of the Gospel to leap up and down, he useth violence to the letter of the Gospel; and, besides this, addeth to the Text. As touching Beza's Translation, (to omit the dislike had thereof by Selneccerus the German Protestant of the University of Jena) the foresaid Molinæus saith of him, de facto mutat textum; he actually changeth the text, and giveth farther sundry instances of his corruptions: as also Castalio that learned Calvinist, and most learned in the tongues, reprehendeth Beza in a whole Book, of this matter, and saith, that to note all his errors in translation, would require a great volume. And M. Parkes saith, As for the Geneva Bibles, it is to be wished that either they may be purged from those manifold errors, which are both in the text, and in the margent; or else utterly prohibited. All which confirmeth your Majesties grave and learned Censure, in your thinking the Geneva translation to be worst of all; and that in the Marginal notes annexed to the Geneva translation, some are very partial, untrue, seditious, &c. Lastly, concerning the English translation, the Puritans say, Our translation of the Psalms, comprized in our Book of Common Prayer, doth in addition, substraction, and alteration, differ from the truth of the Hebrew, in two hundred places at the least. In so much as they do therefore profess to rest doubtful, whether a man with a safe conscience may subscribe thereunto. And M. Cartile saith of the English Translators, that they have depraved the sense, obscured the truth, and deceived the Ignorant, that in many places they do detort the Scriptures from the right sense. And that, they shew themselves to love darkness more than light, falshood more than truth. And the Ministers of Lincoln-Diocess, give their publique testimony, terming the English Translation, A Translation that taketh away from the Text; that addeth to the Text; and that sometime to the changing, or obscuring, of the meaning of the holy Ghost. Not without cause therefore, did your Majesty affirm, that you could never see a Bible well Translated into English. Thus far the Author of the Protestants Apologie, &c. And I cannot forbear to mention, in particular, that famous corruption of Luther, who in the Text, where it is said (Rom. 3. v. 28. We account a man to be justified by faith, without the works of the Law) in favour of Justification by faith alone, translateth (justified by faith ALONE) As likewise the falsification of Zuinglius is no less notorious, who in the Gospels of S. Matthew, Mark, and Luke, and in S. Paul, in place of, This is my Body, this is my Blood, translates, This signifies my Body, this signifies my Blood. And here let Protestants consider duely of these Points. Salvation cannot be hoped for, without true Faith: Faith, according to them, relies upon Scripture alone: Scripture must be delivered to most of them, by the Translations: Translations depend on the skill and honesty of men, in whom nothing is more certain than a most certain possibility to err, and no greater evidence of truth, than that it is evident some of them embrace falshood, by reason of their contrary Translations. What then remaineth, but that Truth, Faith, Salvation, and All, must in them rely upon a fallible and uncertain ground? How many poor souls are lamentably seduced, while from preaching Ministers, they admire a multitude of Texts of divine Scripture, but are indeed the false Translations and corruptions of erring men? Let them therefore, if they will be assured of true Scriptures, fly to the always visible Catholique Church, against which the gates of hell can never so far prevail, as that she shall be permitted to deceive the Christian world with false Scriptures. And Luther himself, by unfortunate experience, was at length forced to confess thus much, saying, If the (f) world last longer, it will be again necessary to revelve the Decrees of Councils, and to have recourse to them, by reason of divers interpretations of Scripture which now reign. On the contrary side, the Translation approved by the Roman Church, is commended even by our Adversaries: and D. Covell in particular saith, that it was used in the Church, one thousand (t) three hundred years ago, and doubteth not to prefer (u) that Translation before others. In so much, that whereas the English-Translations be many, and among themselves disagreeing, he concludeth, that of all those the approved Translation authorized by the Church of England, is that which cometh nearest to the vulgar, and is commonly called the Bishops Bible. So that the truth of that Translation which we use, must be the rule to judge of the goodness of their Bibles: and therefore they are obliged to maintain our Translations, if it were but for their own sake.

17. But

17. But doth indeed the source of their manifold uncertainties stop here? No, the chiefest difficulty remains, concerning the true meaning of Scripture: for attaining whereof, if Protestants had any certainty, they could not disagree so hugely as they do. Hence Mr. Hooker saith, We are (w) right sure of this, that Nature, Scripture, and Experience have all taught the world to seek for the ending of contentions, by submitting it self unto some judicial, and definitive sentence, whereunto neither part that contendeth may, under any pretence, refuse to stand. Doctor Fields words, are remarkable to this purpose, Seeing (saith he) the Politic Controversies (x) of Religion in our times are grown in number so many, and in nature so intricate that few have time and leisure, fewer strength of understanding, to examin them; what remaineth for men desirous of satisfaction in things of such consequence, but diligently to search out which among all the societies in the world, is that blessed company of holy ones, that but hold the Faith, that Spouse of Christ, and Church of the living God, which is the Pillar and Ground of Truth, that so they may embrace her Communion, follow her Directions, and rest in her Judgment?

18. And now that the true Interpretation of Scripture ought to be received from the Church, it is also proved by what we have already demonstrated, that she it is, who must declare what Books be true Scripture; wherein if she be assisted by the holy Ghost, Why should we not believe her to be infallibly directed concerning the true meaning of them? Let Protestants therefore either bring some proof out of Scripture, that the Church is guided by the holy Ghost in discerning true Scripture, and not in delivering the true sense thereof; Or else give us leave to apply against them, the argument which S. Augustine opposed to the Manichæans, in these words, I would not (y) believe the Gospel, unless the Authority of the Church did move me. Them therefore whom I obeyed, saying, Believe the Gospel, why should I not obey saying to me, Do not believe Manicheus, (Luther, Calvin, &c.) Choose what thou pleasest. If thou shalt say, Believe the Catholiques; they warn me, not to give any credit to you. I therefore I believe them, I cannot believe thee. If you say, Do not believe the Catholiques, then shalt not do well in forcing me to the faith of Manicheus, because, by the Preaching of Catholiques, I believed the Gospel it self. If thou say, You did well to believe them (Catholiques) commending the Gospel, but you did not well to believe t'em, discommending Manicheus; Dost thou think me so very foolish that, without any reason at all I should believe what thou write, and not believe what thou wilt not? And do not Protestant perfectly resemble these men, to whom S. Augustine spake, when they will have men to believe the Roman-Church delivering Scripture, but not to believe her condemning Luther, and the rest? Against whom, when they first opposed themselves to the Roman-Church, S. Augustine may seem to have spoken no less Prophetically, than Doctrinally, when he said, Why should I not most (z) diligently enquire what Christ commanded of them before all others, by whose authority I was moved to believe, that Christ commanded any good thing; Canst thou bitter declare to me what he said, whom I would not have thought to have been, or to be, if the belief thereof had been recommended by thee to me? This therefore I believed by fame, strengthened with celebrity, consent, Antiquity. But every one may see that you, so few, so turbulent, so new, can produce nothing deserving authority. What manifest is this? Believe them (Catholiques) that we ought to believe Christ; but learn of us, what Christ said. Why, I beseech thee? Surely if they (Catholiques) were not at all, and could not teach me any thing, I would more easily perswade my self, that I were not to believe Christ, than that I should learn any thing concerning him from any other than them by whom I believed him. If therefore we receive the knowledge of Christ, and Scriptures from the Church, from her also must we take his Doctrin, and the interpretation thereof.

y Con. Ep. Fund. cap. 5.

z Lib. de Util. Cred. cap. 14.

19. But besides all this, the Scriptures cannot be Judge of Controversies; who ought to be such, as that to him not only the learned, or Veterans, but also the unlearned, and Novices, may have recourse: for these being capable of Salvation, and endued with Faith of the same nature with that of the learned, there must be some universal Judge, which the ignorant may understand, and to whom the greatest Clerks must submit. Such is the Church; and the Scripture is not such.

20. Now, the inconveniences which follow by referring all Controversies to Scripture alone, are very clear. For by this Principle, all is finally in very deed and truth reduced to the internal private Spirit, because there is really no middle way betwixt a publique external, and a private internal voice; and whosoever refuseth the one, must of necessity adhere to the other.

21. This Tenet also of Protestants, by taking the office of Judicature from the Church, comes to confer it upon every particular man, who being driven from submission to the Church, cannot be blamed if he trust himself as far as any other, his conscience dictating, that wittingly he means not to cozen himself, as others malitiously may do. Which inference is so manifest, that it hath extorted from divers Protestants the open confession of so vast an absurdity. Hear Luther, the Governours of (a) Churches, and Pastors of Christs Sheep, have indeed power to teach, but the Sheep ought to give judgment, whether they propound the voice of Christ, or of Aliens. Likewise saith, As we have (b) demonstrated that all publique Judges may be deceived in interpreting; so we affirm, that they may err in judging. All faithful men are private Judges, and they also have power to judge of Doctrin, and interpretations. Whitaker, even of the unlearned, saith, They (c) ought to have recourse unto the more learned; but in the mean time we must be careful not to attribute to them over-much, but so, that still we retain our own freedom. Bilson also affirmeth, that, The People (d) must be discerners, and Judges of that which is taught. The same pernicious Doctrin is delivered by Brentius, Zanchius, Cartwright, and others exactly cited by (e) Brerely; and nothing is more common in every Protestants mouth, than that he admits of Fathers, Councils, Church, &c. as far as they agree with Scripture; which upon the matter is himself. Thus Heroise ever falls upon extreams. In pretends to have Scripture alone for Judge of Controversies, and in the mean time sets up as many Judges, as there are men and women in the Christian world. What good Statesmen would they be, who should ideate, or fancy, such a Common-wealth, as these men have framed to themselves a Church? They verifie what St. Augustine objecteth against Heretiques. You see (f) that you go about to overthrow all authority of Scripture, and that every mans mind may be to himself a Rule, what he is to allow, or disallow in every Scripture.

22. Moreover, what confusion to the Church, what danger to the Common-wealth, this denial of the Authority of the Church, may bring, I leave to the consideration of any judicious, indifferent man, I will only set down some words of D. Potter, who speaking of the Proposition of revealed Truths, sufficient to prove him that gain-saith them, to be an Heretique, saith thus: This Proposition (g) of revealed truths, is not by the infallible determination of Pope, or Church; (Pope, and Church being excluded, let us hear what more secure rule he will prescribe) but by whatsoever means a man may be convinced in conscience of divine Revelation. If a Preacher do clear any Point of Faith to his Hearers; if a private Christian do make it appear pear to his Neighbour, that any Conclusion, or Point of Faith is delivered by divine recitation of Gods word; if a man himself (without any Teacher) by reading the Scriptures, or hearing them read, be convinced of the truth of any such Conclusion; this is a sufficient Proposition to prove him that gainsayeth any such proof, to be an Heretique, an obstinate oppose of the Faith. Behold, what goodly safe Propounders of Faith arise in place of Gods universal visible Church, which must yield to a single Preacher, a Neighbour, a man himself if he can read, or at least have ears to hear Scripture read. Verily I do not see, but that every well-governed civil Common-wealth, ought to concur towards the exterminating of this Doctrin, whereby the Interpretation of Scripture is taken from the Church, and conferred upon every man, who, whatsoever i pretended to the contrary, may be a passionate seditious creature.

23. Moreover, there was no Scripture, or written Word for about two thousand years from Adam to Moses, whom all acknowledge to have been the first Author of Canonical Scripture: And again, for about two thousand years more, from Moses to Christ our Lord, holy Scripture was only among the people of Israel; and yet there were Gentiles endued in those days with divine Faith, as appeareth in Job, and his friends. Wherefore, during so many Ages, the Church alone was the Decider of Controversies, and Instructor of the faithful. Neither did the Word written by Moses, deprive the Church of her former Infallibility, or other qualities requisite for a Judge: yea D. Potter acknowledgeth, that besides the Law, there was a living Judge in the Jewish Church, endued with an absolutely infallible direction in case of moment; as all Points belonging to divine Faith are. Now, the Church of Christ our Lord, was before the Scriptures of the New Testament, which were not written instantly, nor all at one time, but successively upon several occasions; and some after the decease of most of the Apostles: and after they were written, they were not presently known to all Churches: and of some there was doubt in the Church for some Ages after our Saviour. Shall we then say, that according as the Church by little and little received holy Scripture, the was by the like degrees devested of her possessed Infallibility, and Power to decide Controverses in Religion? That sometime Churches had one Judge of Controversies, and others another? That with months, or years, as new Canonical Scripture grew to be published, the Church altered her whole Rule of Faith, or Judge of Controverses? After the Apostles time, and after the writing of Scriptures, Heresies would be sure to rise, requiring in God's Church, for their discovery and condemnation, infallibility, either to write new Canonical Scripture, as was done in the Apostles time by occasion of emergent Heresies; or Infallibility to interpret Scriptures, already written, or without Scripture, by divine unwritten Traditions, and Assistance of the holy Ghost to determine all Controversies, as Irenæus saith: The soul is (h) before the letter; and Spirit before Books; and sense before style. Certainly such addition of Scripture, with derogation, or subtraction from the former power and infallibility of the Church, would have brought to the world division in matters of faith, and the Church had rather lost than gained by holy Scripture, (which ought to be far from our tongues and thoughts) it being manifest, that for decision of Controversies, Infallibility settled in a living Judge, is incomparably more useful and fit, than if it were conceived, as inherent in some inanimate writing. Is there such repugnance betwixt Infallibility of the Church, and Existence of Scripture, that the production of the one, must be the destruction of the other? Must the Church wax dry, by giving to her Children milk of sacred Writ? No, No. Her Infallibility was, and is, derived from an inexhausted Fountain. If Protestants will have the Scripture alone for their Judge, let them first produce some Scripture affirming, that by the entring thereof, Infallibility went out of the Church. D. Potter may remember what himself teacheth; That the Church is still endued with Infallibility in Points Fundamental; and consequently, that Infallibility in the Church doth well agree with the truth, the Sanctity, yea with the sufficiency, of Scripture for all matters necessary to Salvation. I would therefore gladly know, out of what Text he imagineth that the Church by the coming of Scripture, was deprived of Infallibility in some Points, and not in others? He affirmeth, That the Jewish Synagogue retained infallibility in her self, notwithstanding the writing of the Old Testament; and will he so unworonsly and unjustly deprive the Church of Christ of Infallibility by reason of the New Testament? Especially, if we consider, that in the Old Testament, Laws, Ceremonies, Rites, Punishments, Judgments, Sacraments, Sacrifices, &c. were more particularly, and minutely delivered to the Jews, than in the New Testament is done; our Saviour leaving the determination or declaration, of particulars to his Spouse the Church, which therefore stands in need of infallibility more than the Jewish Synagogue. D. Potter (i) against this argument, drawn from the power and infallibility of the Synagogue, objects, That we might as well infer, that Christians must have one Sovereign Prince over all, because the Jews had one chief Judge. But the disparity is very clear. The Synagogue was a type, and figure of the Church of Christ; not so their civil Government, of Christian Common-wealths or Kingdoms. The Church succeeded to the Synagogue, but not Christian Princes to Jewish Magistrates: And the Church is compared to a house, or (k) family; to an (l) Army, to a (m) body, to a (n) Kingdom, &c. all which require one Master, one General, one head, one Magistrate, one spiritual King; as our blessed Saviour with sit unum ovile, (o) joyned unus Pastor: One Sheepfold, One Pastor: But all distinct Kingdoms, or Common-wealths, are not one Army, Family, &c. And finally, it is necessary to Salvation, that all have accounte to one Church; but for temporal weal, there is no need that all submit, or depend upon one temporal Prince, Kingdom, or Common wealth: and therefore our Saviour hath left to his whole Church, as being One, one Law, one Scripture, the same Sacraments, &c. Whereas Kingdoms have their several Laws, different governments, diversity of Powers, Magistracy, &c. And to this objection returneth upon D. Potter. For as in the One Community of the Jews, there was one Power and Judge, to end debates, and resolve difficulties; so in the Church of Christ, which is One, there must be some one Authority to decide all Controversies in Religion.

24. This Discourse is excellently proved by ancient S. Irenæus (p) in these words; What if the Apostles had not left Scriptures, ought we not to have followed the ord er of Tradition which they delivered to those to whom they committed the Churches? to which order many Nations yield assent, who believe in Christ, having Salvation written in their hearts by the Spirit of God, without letters or Ink, and diligent keeping ancient Tradition. It is safe t receive the truth from God's Church, seeing the Apostles have most fully deposited in her, as in a rich store-house, all things belonging to truth. For what? if there should arise any contention of some small question, ought we not to have recourse to the most ancient Churches, and from them to receive what is certain and clear concerning the present question?

25. Besides all this, the doctrin of Protestants is destructive of it self. For either they have certain and and infallible means, not to err in interpreting Scripture; or they have not. If not, then the Scripture (to them) cannot be a sufficient ground for infallible Faith, nor a meet Judg in Controverses. If they have certain infallible means, and so cannot err in their interpretations of Scriptures; then they are able with infallibility to hear, examine, and determine all Controversies of Faith: and so they may be, and are Judges of Controverses, although they use the Scripture as a Rule. And thus, against their own doctrin, they constitute another Judg of Controverses, besides Scripture alone.

26. Lastly, I ask D. Potter, Whether this Assertion (Scripture alone is Judg of all Controversies in Faith) be a Fundamental Point of Faith, or no? He must be well advised, before he say, that it is a Fundamental Point. For he will have against him, as many Protestants as teach that by Scripture alone, it is impossible to know what Books be Scripture, which yet, to Protestants, is the most necessary and chief Point of all other. D. Carell expressly saith, Doubtless (q) it is a safer side option to the Church of Rome, if they go no further, & some of them do not (he should have said, as most of them do) to affirm, that the Scriptures are holy and divine in themselves, but so esteemed by us, for the authority of the Church. He will likewise oppose himself to those his Brethren, who grant that Controverses cannot be ended, without some external living Authority, as we noted before. Besides, how can it be in us a fundamental Error to say, the Scripture alone is not Judg of Controverses, seeing (notwithstanding this our belief) we use for interpreting of Scripture, all the means which they prescribe; as Prayer, Conferring of places, Consulting the Originals, &c. and to these add the Instruction, and Authority of God's Church, which even by his confession cannot err damnably, and may afford us more help, than can be expected from the industry, learning, or wit of any private person: and finally, D. Potter grants, that the Church of Rome doth not maintain any fundamental error against Faith; and consequently, he cannot affirm that our doctrin, in this present Controversie, is damnable. If he answer, that their Error, about the Scriptures being the only Judg of Controverses, is not a Fundamental Point of Faith: then, as he teacheth, that the universal Church may err in Points Fundamental; so, I hope, he will not deny, but particular Churches, and private men, are much more obnoxious to error in such Points; and in particular in this, that Scripture alone is Judg of Controverses; And so, the very principle upon which their whole Faith is grounded, remains to them uncertain: and on one other side, for the selfsame reason, they are not certain, but that the Church is Judg of Controverses; which if he be, then their case is lamentable, who in general deny her this Authority, and in particular Controverses oppose her definitions. Besides among publique Conclusions defended in Oxford the year 1633. to the question, whether the Church have authority to determin Controversies in Faith; And, to interpret holy Scripture? The answer to both is Affirmative.

27. Since then, the Visible Church of Christ our Lord, is that infallible Means whereby the revealed truths of Almighty God, are conveyed to our understanding; it followeth, that to oppose her definitions is to resist God himself; which blessed St. Augustine plainly affirmeth, when, speaking of the Controversie about Rebaptization of such as were baptized by Heretiques, he saith, This (r) is neither openly, nor evidently read; neither by you nor by me: yet if there were any wise man of whom our Saviour had given testimony, and that he should be consulted in this question, we should make no doubt to perform what he should say, lest we might seem to gain-say not him so much as Christ, by whose testimony he was recommended. Now Christ beareth witness to his Church. And a little after, Whosoever resisteth to follow the practise of the Church, doth resist our Saviour himself, who by his testimony recommends the Church. I conclude therefore with this argument; Whosoever resisteth that means which infallibly proposeth to us God's Word or Revelation, commits a sin, which, unrepented, excludes Salvation: But whosoever resisteth Christ's visible Church, doth resist that means, which infallibly proposeth to us God's Word or Revelation. Therefore, whosoever resisteth Christ's visible Church, commits a sin, which unrepented, excludes Salvation. Now, what visible Church was extant, when Luther began his pretended Reformation whether it were the Roman, or Protestant Church; and whether he, and other Protestants do not oppose that visible Church, which was spread over the World, before, and in Luther's time, is easie to be determined, and importeth every one most seriously to ponder, as a thing whereon eternal Salvation dependeth. And because our Adversaries do here most insist upon the distinction of Points Fundamental, and not-Fundamental; and in particular teach, that the Church may err in Points not-Fundamental, it will be necessary to examine the truth, and weight of this evasion, which shall be done in the next Chapter.

An ANSWER to the SECOND CHAPTER.

Concerning the means, whereby the revealed Truths of God are conveyed to our Understanding; and which must determin Controverses in Faith and Religion.

1. He that would usurp an absolute Lordship and tyranny over any people, need not put himself to the trouble and difficulty of abrogating and disanulling the Laws, made to maintain the common liberty; for he may frustrate their intent, and compass his own design as well, if he can get the power and authority to interpret them as he pleases, and add to them what he pleases, and to have his interpretations and additions stand for Laws; if he can rule his People by his Laws, and his Laws by his Lawyers. So the Church of Rome to establish her tyranny over mens consciences, needed not either to abolish or corrupt the holy Scriptures, the Pillars and supporters of Christian liberty (which in regard of the numerous multitude of Copies disperſed through all places, tranſlated into almoſt all Languages, guarded with all ſolicitous care and induſtry, had been an impoſſible attempt:) But the more expedite way, and therefore more likely to be ſucceſsful, was, to gain the opinion and eſteem of the publique and authoriz'd Interpreter of them, and the Authority of adding to them what Doctrin ſhe pleaſed under the title of Traditions or Definitions. For by this means, ſhe might both ſerve her ſelf of all thoſe clauſes of Scripture, which might be drawn to caſt a favourable countenance upon her ambitious pretences, which in caſe the Scripture had been aboliſhed, ſhe could not have done; and yet be ſecure enough of having either her power limited, or her corruptions and abuſes reformed by them; this being once ſetled in the minds of men, that unwritten doctrine, if propoſed by her, were to be received with equal reverence to thoſe that were written; and that the ſenſe of Scripture was not that which ſeemed to mens reaſon and underſtanding to be ſo, but that which the Church of Rome ſhould declare to be ſo, ſeemed it never ſo unreaſonable and incongruous. The matter being once thus ordered, and the holy Scriptures being made in effect not your Directors and Judges (no farther than you pleaſe) but your ſervants and inſtruments, always preſt and in readineſs to advance your deſigns, and diſabled wholly with minds ſo qualified to prejudice or impeach them; it is ſafe for you to put a Crown on their head, and a reed in their hands, and to bow before them, and cry, Hail King of the Jews! to pretend a great deal of eſteem, and reſpect, and reverence to them, as here you do. But to little purpoſe is verbal reverence without intire ſubmiſſion and ſyncere obedience; and, as our Saviour ſaid of ſome, ſo the Scripture, could it ſpeak, I believe would ſay to you, Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not that which I command you? Caſt away the vain and arrogant pretence of Infallibility, which makes your errors incurable. Leave picturing God, and worſhiping him by pictures. Teach not for Doctrin the commandments of men. Debar not the Laity of the Teſtament of Chriſt's Blood. Let your publique Prayers, and Pſalms, and Hymns be in ſuch language as is for the edification of the Aſſiſtents. Take not from the Clergy that liberty of Marriage which Chriſt hath left them. Do not impoſe upon men that Humility of worſhiping Angels which S. Paul condemns. Teach no more proper ſacrifices of Chriſt but one. Acknowledg them that die in Chriſt to be bleſſed, and to reſt from their labours. Acknowledg the Sacrament after Conſecration, to be Bread and Wine, as well as Chriſts body and bloud. Acknowledg the gift of continency without Marriage, not to be given to all. Let not the weapons of your warfare be carnal, ſuch as Maſſacres, Treaſons, Perſecutions, and, in a word, all means either violent or fraudulent: Theſe and other things, which the Scripture commands you, do, and then we ſhall willingly give you ſuch Teſtimony as you deſerve; but till you do ſo, to talk of eſtimation, reſpect, and reverence to the Scripture, is nothing elſe but talk.

2. For neither is that true which you pretend, That we poſſeſs the Scripture from you, or take it upon the integrity of your Cuſtody; but upon Univerſal Tradition, of which you are but a little part. Neither, if it were true that Proteſtants acknowledged, The integrity of it to have been guarded by your alone Cuſtody, were this any argument of your reverence towards them. For firſt, you might preſerve them entire, not for want of Will, but of Power to corrupt them, as it is a hard thing to poyſon the Sea. And then having prevailed ſo far with men, as either not to look at all into them, or but only through ſuch ſpectacles as you ſhould pleaſe to make for them, and to ſee nothing in them, though as clear as the ſun, if it any way made againſt you, you might keep them entire, without any thought or care to conform your doctrin to them, or reform it by them (which were indeed to reverence the Scriptures;) but, out of a perſwaſion, that you could quality them well enough with your gloſſes and interpretations, and make them ſufficiently conformable to your pretent Doctrin, at leaſt in their judgment, who were prepoſſeſſed with this perſwaſion, that your Church was to judge of the ſenſe of Scripture, not to be judged by it.

3. For

3. For, whereas you ſay, No cauſe imaginable could avert your will, for giving the function of ſupreme and ſole Judg to holy Writ; but that the thing is impoſſible, and that by this means Controverſies are increaſed and not ended: you mean perhaps, ——That you can or will imagine no other cauſe but theſe. But ſure there is little reaſon you ſhould meaſure other mens imaginations by your own, who perhaps may be ſo clouded and vailed with prejudice, that you cannot, or will not, ſee that which is moſt manifeſt. For what indifferent and unprejudicate man may not eaſily conceive another cauſe which (I do not ſay does, but certainly) may pervert your wills, and avert your underſtandings from ſubmitting your Religion and Church to a tryal by Scripture? I mean the great and apparent and unavoidable danger which by this means you would fall into, of loſing the Opinion which men have of your Infallibility, and conſequently your power and authority over mens conſciences, and all that depends upon it. So that though Diana of the Epheſians be cryed up, yet it may be feared that with a great many among you (though I cenſure or judg no man) the other cauſe which wrought upon Demetrius and the Craftsmen, may have with you alſo the more effectual, though more ſecret influence: and that is, that by this craft we have our living; by this craft, I mean, of keeping your Proſelytes from an indifferent tryal of your Religion by Scripture, and making them yield up and captivate their judgment unto yours. Yet had you only ſaid de facto, that no other cauſe did avert your own will from this, but only theſe which you pretend; out of Charity I ſhould have believed you. But ſeeing you ſpeak not of your ſelf, but of all of your Side, whoſe hearts you cannot know; and profeſs not only, That there is no other cauſe, but that No other is imaginable, I could not let this paſs without a cenſure. As for the impoſſibility of Scriptures being the ſole Judg of Controverſies, that is the ſole Rule for men to judg them by (for we mean nothing elſe) you only affirm it without proof, as if the thing were evident of it ſelf, and therefore I, conceiving the contrary to be evident, might well content my ſelf to deny it without refutation. Yet I cannot but deſire you to tell me, If Scripture cannot be the Judg of any Controverſie, how ſhall that touching the Church and the Notes of it, be determined? And if it be the ſole Judg of this one, why may it not of others? Why not of All? Thoſe only excepted, wherein the Scripture it ſelf is the ſubject of the Queſtion, which cannot be determined but by natural reaſon, the only principle, beſide Scripture, which is common to Chriſtians.

4. Then for the Imputation of increaſing contentions and not ending them, Scripture is innocent of it; as alſo this opinion, That Controverſies are to be decided by Scripture. For if men did really and ſincerely ſubmit their judgments to Scripture, and that only, and would require no more of any man but to do ſo, it were impoſſible but that all Controverſies, touching things neceſſary and very profitable ſhould be ended: and if others were continued or increaſed, it were no matter.

5. In the next words we have direct Boyes-play; a thing given with one hand, and taken away with the other; an acknowledgment made in one line, and retracted in the next. We acknowledg (ſay you) Scripture to be a perfect rule, for as much as a writing can be a Rule; only we deny that it excludes unwritten Tradition. As if you ſhould have ſaid, We acknowledg it to be as perfect a Rule as a Writing can be; only we deny it to be as perfect a Rule as a writing may be. Either therefore you muſt revoke your acknowledgment, or retract your retractation of it; for both cannot poſſibly ſtand together. For if you will ſtand to what you have granted, That Scripture is as perfect a Rule of Faith as a writing can be: you muſt then grant it both ſo Compleat, that it needs no addition, and ſo Evident, that it needs no interpretation: For both theſe properties are requiſite to a perfect Rule, and a writing is capable of both theſe properties.

6. That both theſe properties are requiſite to a perfect Rule, it is apparent; Becauſe that is not perfect in any kind which wants ſome parts belonging to its integrity; As, he is not a perfect man that wants any part appertaining to the Integrity of a man; and therefore that which wants any accession to make it a perfect Rule, of it self is not a perfect Rule. And then, the end of a Rule is to regulate and direct. Now every instrument is more or less perfect in its kind, as it is more or less fit to attain the end for which it is ordained: But nothing obscure or unevident while it is so, is fit to regulate and direct them to whom it is so: Therefore it is requisite also to a Rule (so far as it is a Rule) to be evident; otherwise indeed it is no Rule, because it cannot serve for direction. I conclude therefore, that both these properties are required to a perfect Rule: both to be so compleat as to need no Addition; and to be so evident as to need no Interpretation.

7. Now that a writing is capable of both these perfections, it is so plain, that I am even ashamed to prove it. For he that denies it, must say, That something may be spoken which cannot be written. For if such a compleat and evident Rule of Faith may be delivered by word of mouth, as you pretend it may, and is; and whatsoever is delivered by word of mouth may also be written; then such a compleat and evident Rule of Faith may also be written. If you will have more light added to the Sun, answer me then to these Questions. Whether your Church can set down in writing all these, which she pretends to be divine unwritten Traditions, and add them to the verities already written? And, Whether she can set us down such interpretations of all obscurities in the Faith as shall need no farther interpretations? If she cannot, then she hath not that power which you pretend she hath, of being an Infallible Teacher of all divine verities, and an infallible Interpreter of obscurities in the Faith: for she cannot teach us all divine verities, if she cannot write them down; neither is that an interpretation which needs again to be interpreted. If she can; Let her do it, and then we shall have a writing, not only capable of, but actually endowed with, both these perfections, of being both so compleat as to need no Addition, and so evident as to need no Interpretation. Lastly, whatsoever your Church can do or not do, no man can, without Blasphemy, deny, that Christ Jesus, if he had pleased, could have writ us a Rule of Faith so plain and perfect, as that it should have wanted neither any part to make up its integrity, nor any clearness to make it sufficiently intelligible. And if Christ could have done this, then the thing might have been done; a writing there might have been, indowed with both these properties. Thus therefore I conclude; a writing may be so Perfect a Rule, as to need neither Addition nor Interpretation; But the Scripture you acknowledg a prefect Rule for as much as a writing can be a Rule, therefore it needs neither Addition nor Interpretation.

8. You will say, that though a writing be never so perfect a Rule of Faith, yet it must be beholden to Tradition to give it this Testimony, that it is a Rule of Faith, and the word of God. I answer: First there is no absolute necessity of this, For God might, if he thought good, give it the attestation of perpetual miracles. Secondly, that it is one thing to be a perfect Rule of Faith, another to be proved so unto us. And thus though a writing could not be proved to us to be a perfect rule of Faith, by its own saying so, for nothing is proved true by being said or written in a book, but only by Tradition which is a thing credible of it self: yet it may be so in it self, and contain all the material objects, all the particular articles of our Faith, without any dependance upon Tradition; even this also not excepted, that this writing doth contain the rule of Faith. Now when protestants affirm against Papists, that Scripture is a perfect Rule of Faith, their meaning is not, that by Scripture all things absolutely may be proved, which are to be believed: For it can never be proved by Scripture to a gainsayer, that there is a God, or that the book called Scripture is the word of God; For he that will deny these Assertions when they are spoken, will believe them never a whit the more, because you can shew them written: But their meaning is, that the Scripture to them which presuppose it Divine, and a Rule of Faith, as Papists and Protestants do, contains all the material objects of Faith, is a compleat and total, and not onely an imperfect and a partial Rule.

9. But every Book, and Chapter, and Text of Scripture is infallible and wants no due perfection, and yet excludes not the Addition of other books of Scripture: Therefore the perfection of the whole Scripture excludes not the Addition of unwritten Tradition. I answer; Every Text of Scripture though it hath the perfection belonging to a Text of Scripture, yet it hath not the perfection requisite to a perfect Rule of Faith; and that only is the perfection which is the subject of our discourse. So that this is to abuse your Reader with the ambiguity of the word perfect. In effect, as if you should say, A text of Scripture may be a perfect Text, though there be others beside it; therefore the whole Scripture may be a perfect Rule of Faith, though there be other parts of this Rule, besides the Scripture, and though the Scripture be but a part of it.

10. The next argument to the same purpose is, for Sophistry, cousin-german to the former. When the first Books of Scripture were written, they did not exclude unwritten Tradition: Therefore now also, that all the books of Scripture are written, Traditions are not excluded. The sense of which argument (if it have any) must be this. when only a part of the Scripture was written, then a part of the divine doctrine was unwritten; Therefore now when all the Scripture is written, yet some part of the divine doctrine is yet unwritten. If you say, your Conclusion is not, that it is so, but, without disparagement to Scripture, may be so: without disparagement to the truth of Scripture, I grant it; but without disparagement to the Scriptures being a perfect Rule, I deny it. And now the Question is not of the Truth, but the perfection of it; which are very different things, though you would fain confound them. For Scripture might very well be all true, tho it contain not all necessary Divine Truth. But unless it do so, it cannot be a perfect Rule of Faith; for that which wants any thing is not perfect. For, I hope, you do not imagine, that we conceive any antipathy between God's Word written and unwritten, but that both might very well stand together. All that we say is this, that we have reason to believe that God, de facto, hath ordered the matter so, that all the Gospel of Christ, the whole Covenant between God and man, is now written. Whereas, if he had pleased, he might so have disposed it, that, part might have been written, and part unwritten: but then he would have taken order, to whom we should have had recourse, for that part of it which was not written; which seeing he hath not done (as the progress shall demonstrate) it is evident he hath left no part of it unwritten. We know no man therefore that says, It were any injury to the written Word to be joyned with the unwritten, if there were any wherewith it might be joyned: but that, we deny. The Fidelity of a keeper may very well consist with the authority of the thing committed to his custody. But we know no one society of Christians that is such a Faithful keeper as you pretend. The Scripture it self was not kept so faithfully by you, but that you suffered infinite variety of Readings to creep into it; all which could not possibly be divine, and yet, in several parts of your Church, all of them, until the last age, were so esteemed. The interpretations of obscure places of Scripture, which without Question the Apostles taught the Primitive Christians, are wholly lost; there remains no certainty scarce of any one. These Worlds of Miracles, which our Saviour did, which were not written, for want of writing are vanished out of the memory of men. And many profitable things which the Apostles taught and writ not, as that which S. Paul glanced at in his second Epistle to the Thessal. of the cause of the hinderance of the coming of Antichrist, are wholly lost and extinguished. So unfaithful or negligent hath been this keeper of Divine Verities; whose eyes, like the keepers of Israel (you say) have never slumbered nor slept. Lastly, we deny not but a Judg and a Law might well stand together, but we deny that there is any such Judg of Gods appointment.

Had

Had he intended any such Judg, he would have named him, lest otherwise (as now it is) our Judg of Controversies should be our greatest Controversie.

11. Ad §. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. In your second Paragraph, you sum up those Arguments wherewith you intend to prove that Scripture alone cannot be Judg in Controversies. Wherein I profess unto you before-hand, that you will fight without an adversary. For though Protestants, being warranted by some of the Fathers, have called Scripture the Judg of Controversie; and you, in saying here, That Scripture alone cannot be Judg, imply that it may be called in some sense a Judg, though not alone: Yet to speak properly (as men should speak when they write of Controversies in Religion) the Scripture is not a Judg of Controversies, but a Rule only, and the only Rule for Christians to judg them by. Every man is to judg for himself with the judgment of discretion, and to choose either his Religion first, and then his Church, as we say: or, as you, his Church first, and then his Religion. But, by the consent of both sides, every man is to judg and choose: and the Rule whereby he is to guide his choice, if he be a natural man, is Reason; if he be already a Christian, Scripture; which we say is the Rule to judg Controversies by. Yet not all simply, but all the Controversies of Christians, of those that are already agreed upon This first Principle, that the Scripture is the word of God. But that there is any man, or any Company of men appointed to be judg for all men, that we deny; and that I believe, you will never prove. The very truth is, we say no more in this matter, than evidence of Truth hath made you confess in plain terms in the beginning of this Chapter, viz. That Scripture is a perfect Rule of Faith, for as much as a writing can be a Rule. So that all your Reasons, whereby you labour to dethrone the Scripture from this Office of judging, we might let pass as impertinent to the Conclusion which we maintain, and you have already granted; yet out of courtesie we will consider them.

12. Your first is this; A judg must be a person fit to end Controversies; but the Scripture is not a person, nor fit to end Controversies, no more than the Law would be without the Judges; therefore though it may be a Rule, it cannot be a judg. Which conclusion I have already granted. Only my request is, that you will permit Scripture to have the properties of a Rule, that is, to be fit to direct every one that will make the best use of it, to that end for which it was ordained: And that is as much as we need desire. For, as if I were to go a journey, and had a guide which could not err, I needed not to know my way: so on the other side, if I know my way, or have a plain rule to know it by, I shall need no guide. Grant therefore Scripture to be such a Rule, and it will quickly take away all necessity of having an infallible guide. But without a living Judg it will be no fitter (you say) to end Controversies, than the Law alone to end suits. I answer, If the Law were plain and perfect, and men honest and desirous to understand a right, and obey it, he that says it were not fit to end Controversies, must either want understanding himself, or think the world wants it. Now the Scripture, we pretend, in things necessary is plain and perfect; and men, we say, are obliged under pain of Damnation, to seek the true sense of it, and not to wrest it to their preconceived Fancies. Such a Law therefore to such men, cannot but be very fit to end all Controversies necessary to be ended. For others that are not so, they will end when the world ends, and that is time enough.

13. Your next encounter is with them, who acknowledging the Scripture a Rule only and not a judg, make the holy Ghost, speaking in Scripture, the Judg of Controversies. Which you disprove by saying, That, the holy Ghost speaking only in Scripture is no more intelligible to us, than the Scripture in which he speaks. But by this reason, neither the Pope, nor a Council can be a Judg neither. For first, denying the Scriptures, the writings of the holy Ghost, to be Judges; you will not, I hope, offer to pretend, that their Decrees, the writings of men, are more capable of this function: the same exceptions at least, if not more, and greater lying against them as do against Scripture. And then what you object against against the holy Ghost, speaking in Scripture, to exclude him from this office, The same I return upon them and their Decrees, to debar them from it; that they speaking unto us only in their Decrees, are no more intelligible than the Decrees in which they speak. And therefore if the Holy Ghost speaking in Scripture may not be a Judg for this Reason; neither may they, speaking in their Decrees, be Judges for the same Reason. If the Pope's Decrees (you will say) be obscure, he can explain himself; and so the Scripture cannot. But the holy Ghost, that speaks in Scripture, can do so, if he please; and, when he is pleased, will do so. In the mean time, it will be fit for you to wait his leisure, and to be content, that those things of Scripture which are plain should be so, and those which are obscure should remain obscure, until he please to declare them. Besides, he can (which you cannot warrant me of the Pope or a Council) speak at first so plainly, that his words shall need no farther explanation; and so in things necessary we believe he hath done. And if you say, The Decrees of Councils touching Controversies, though they be not the Judg, yet they are the Judg's sentence: So, I say, the Scripture, though not the Judg, is the sentence of the Judg. When therefore you conclude, That, to say a Judg is necessary for deciding Controversies about the meaning of Scripture, is as much as to say, He is necessary to decide what the holy Ghost speaks in Scripture: This, I grant, is true; but I may not grant that a Judg (such an one as we dispute of) is necessary either to do the one, or the other. For, if the Scripture (as it is in things necessary) be plain, why should it be more necessary to have a Judg to interpret them in plain places, than to have a Judg to interpret the meaning of a Council's Decrees, and others to interpret their Interpretations, and others to interpret theirs, and so on for ever? And where they are not plain, there if we, using diligence to find the Truth, do yet miss of it and fall into Errour, there is no danger in it. They that err, and they that do not err, may both be saved. So that those places, which contain things necessary, and wherein Errour were dangerous, need no infallible interpreter, because they are plain: and those that are obscure need none, because they contain not things Necessary, neither is Errour in them dangerous.

13. The Law-maker speaking in the Law, I grant it, is no more easily understood than the Law it self; for his speech is nothing else but the Law: I grant it very necessary, that, besides the Law-maker speaking in the Law there should be other Judges to determin Civil and Criminal Controversies, and to give every man that justice which the Law allows him. But your Argument drawn from hence to shew a necessity of a Visible Judg in Controversies of Religion, I say, is Sophistical: and that for many Reasons.

14. First, Because the variety of Civil cases is infinite, and therefore there cannot be possibly Laws enough provided for the determination of them: and therefore there must be a Judg to supply out of the Principles of Reason the interpretation of the Law where it is defective. But the Scripture (we say) is a perfect Rule of Faith, and therefore needs no supply of the defects of it.

15. Secondly, To execute the Letter of the Law, according to rigor, would be many times unjust, and therefore there is need of a Judg to moderate it; whereof in Religion there is no use at all.

16. Thirdly, In Civil and Criminal Causes the parties have for the most part so much interest, and very often so little honesty, that they will not submit to a Law though never so plain, if it be against them; or will not see it to be against them, though it be so never so plainly: whereas if men were honest, and the Law were plain and extended to all cases, there would be little need of Judges. Now in matters of Religion, when the Question is, whether every man be a fit Judg and chooser for himself, we suppose men honest, and such as understand the difference between a Moment and Eternity. And such men we conceive, will think it highly concerns them to be of the true Religion, but nothing at all that this or that Religion should be the true. And then we suppose that all the the necessary points of Religion are plain and easie, and consequently every man in this cause to be a competent Judg for himself; because it concerns himself to judge right as much as carnal happiness is worth. And if, through his own default he judge amiss, he alone shall suffer for it.

17. Fourthly, In Civil Controversies we are obliged only to external passive obedience, and not to an internal and active. We are bound to obey the sentence of the Judg, or not to resist it, but not always to believe it just. But, in matters of Religion, such a Judg is required whom we should be obliged to believe, to have judged right. So that in Civil Controversies every honest understanding man is fit to be a Judg; But in Religion none but he that is infallible.

18. Fifthly, In Civil Causes there is means and power, when the Judg hath decreed, to compel men to obey his sentence: otherwise, I believe, Laws alone, would be to as much purpose for the ending of differences, as Laws and Judges both. But all the power in the world is neither fit to convince, nor able to compel a man's conscience to consent to any thing. Worldly terror may prevail so far as to make men profess a Religion which they believe not, (such men I mean, who know not that there is a Heaven provided for Martyrs, and a Hell for those that dissemble such Truths as are necessary to be professed:) But to force, either any man to believe what he believes not, or any honest man to dissemble what he does believe, (if God commands him to profess it,) or to profess what he does not believe, all the Powers in the World are too weak, with all the Powers of Hell to assist them.

19. Sixthly, In Civil Controversies the case cannot be so put, but there may be a Judg to end it, who is not a party: In Controversies of Religion, it is in a manner impossible to be avoided, but the Judg must be a party. For this must be the first, Whether he be a Judg or no, and in that he must be a party. Sure I am, the Pope, in the Controversies of our time, is a chief party; for it highly concerns him, even as much as his Popedom is worth, not to yield any one point of his Religion to be erroneous. And he is a man subject to like passions with other men. And therefore we may justly decline his sentence, for fear temporal respects should either blind his judgment, or make him pronounce against it.

20. Seventhly, In Civil Controversies, it is impossible Titius should hold the land in question and Sempronius too: and therefore either the Plaintiff must injure the Defendant by disquieting his possession, or the Defendant wrong the Plaintiff by keeping his right from him. But in Controversies of Religion, the Case is otherwise. I may hold my opinion and do you no wrong, and you yours and do me none. Nay, we may both of us hold our opinion, and yet do our selves no harm; provided, the difference be not touching any thing necessary to salvation, and that we love truth so well, as to be diligent to inform our Conscience, and constant in following it.

21. Eighthly, For the deciding of Civil Controversies, men may appoint themselves a Judg. But, in matters of Religion, this office may be given to none but whom God hath designed for it: who doth not always give us those things which we conceive most expedient for our selves.

22. Ninthly, and lastly, For the ending of Civil Controversies, Who does not see, it is absolutely necessary, that not only Judges should be appointed, but that it should be known and unquestioned who they are? Thus all the Judges of our Land are known men, known to be Judges, and no man can doubt or question, but these are the Men. Otherwise, if it were a disputable thing, Who were these Judges, and they had no certain warrant for their Authority, but only some Topical congruities; Would not any man say, such Judges, in all likelihood, would rather multiply Controversies than end them? So likewise, if our Saviour, the King of Heaven, had intended that all Controversies in Religion should be by some visible Judg finally determined, Who can doubt, but in plain terms he would have expressed himself about this matter? He would have said plainly,

The

The Bishop of Rome I have appointed to decide all emergent Controversies, For that our Saviour designed the Bishop of Rome to this Office, and yet would not say so, nor cause it to be written ——ad Rei memoriam—— by any of the Evangelists or Apostles, so much as once; but leave it to be drawn out of uncertain Principles, by thirteen or fourteen more uncertain Consequences, He that can believe it, let him.

23. All these Reasons, I hope, will convince you, that though we have, and have great necessity of, Judges in Civil and Criminal Causes: yet you may not conclude from thence, that there is any publick authorized Judge to determine Controversies in Religion, nor any necessity there should be any.

24. But the Scripture stands in need of some watchful and unerring eye to guard it, by means of whose assured Vigilancy, we may undoubtedly receive it sincere and pure. Very true, but this is no other than the watchful eye of Divine Providence: the goodness whereof will never suffer, that the Scripture should be depraved, and corrupted, but that in them should be always extant a conspicuous and plain way to eternal happiness. Neither can any thing be more palpably unconsistent with his goodness, than to suffer Scripture to be undiscernably corrupted in any matter of moment, and yet to exact of men the belief of those verities, which without their fault, or knowledge, or possibility of prevention, were defaced out of them. So that God requiring of men to believe Scripture in its purity, ingages himself to see it preserved in sufficient purity; and you need not fear but he will satisfie his engagement. You say, We can have no assurance of this, but your Churches Vigilancy. But if we had no other, we were in a hard case: for, Who could then assure us that your Church hath been so vigilant, as to guard Scripture from any the least alteration? There being various Lections in the ancient Copies of your Bibles. What security can your new raised Office of Assurance give us, that that Reading is true which you now receive, and that false which you reject? Certainly, they that anciently received and made use of those divers Copies, were not all guarded by the Churches Vigilancy from having their Scripture altered from the purity of the Original in many places. For of different Readings, it is not in nature impossible that all should be false, but more than one cannot possibly be true. Yet the want of such a protection, was no hinderance to their salvation, and Why then shall the having of it be necessary for ours? But then, this Vigilancy of your Church, what means have we to be ascertained of it? First, the thing is not evident of it self; which is evident, because many do not believe it. Neither can any thing be pretended to give evidence to it, but only some places of Scripture; of whose incorruption more than any other, what is it that can secure me? If you say the Churches Vigilancy, you are in a Circle, proving the Scriptures uncorrupted by the Churches Vigilancy, and the Churches Vigilancy by the incorruption of some places of Scripture, and again the incorruption of those places by the Churches Vigilancy. If you name any other means; then, that means which secures me of the Scriptures incorruption in those places, will also serve to assure me of the same in other places. For my part, abstracting from Divine Providence, which will never suffer the way to Heaven to be blocked up, or made invisible, I know no other means (I mean, no other natural and rational means) to be assured hereof, than I have that any other Book is uncorrupted. For, though I have a greater degree of rational and humane Assurance of that than this, in regard of divers considerations which make it more credible, That the Scripture hath been preserved from any material alteration; yet my Assurance of both is of the same kind and condition; both Moral Assurances, and neither Physical or Mathematical.

25. To the next Argument the Reply is obvious; That though we do not believe the Books of Scripture to be Canonical, because they say so, (For other Books that are not Canonical may say they are, and those that are so, may say nothing of it:) yet we believe not this upon the Authority of your Church, but upon the Credibility of Universal Tradition, which is a thing Credible of it self, and therefore fit to be rested on; whereas the Authority of your Church is not so. And therefore your rest thereon is not Rational, but meerly voluntary. I might as well rest upon the judgment of the next man I meet, or upon the chance of a Lottery for it. For by this means I only know I might err, but by relying on you I know I should err. But yet (to return you one Suppose for another) suppose I should for this and all other things submit to her direction, How could she assure me that I should not be misled by doing so? She pretends indeed infallibility herein, but how can she assure us that she hath it? What, by Scripture? That, you say, cannot assure us of its own Infallibility, and therefore not of yours. What then, by Reason? That, you say, may deceive in other things, and why not in this? How then will she assure us hereof, By saying so? Of this very affirmation there will remain the same Question still, How can it prove it self to be infallibly true? Neither can there be an end of the like multiplied Demands, till we rest in something evident of it self which demonstrates to the world that the Church is infallible. And seeing there is no such Rock for the Infallibility of this Church to be settled on, it must of necessity, like the Island of Delos, store up and down for ever. And yet upon this Point according to Papists, all other Controversies in faith depend.

26. To the 7,8,9,10,11,12,13,14. §. The sum and substance of the Ten next Paragraphs, is this, That it appears, by the Confession of some Protestants, and the Contentions of others, that the Questions about the Canon of Scripture, what it is; and about the Various Reading and Translations of it, which is true, and which not: are not to be determined by Scripture, and therefore that all Controversies of Religion are not decidable by Scripture.

27. To which I have already answered; saying, That when Scripture is affirmed to be the Rule by which all Controversies of Religion are to be decided, Those are to be excepted out of this generality, which are concerning the Scripture it self. For, as that general saying of Scripture, He hath put all things under his feet, is most true, though yet St. Paul tells us, That when it is said, he hath put all things under him, it is manifest he is excepted who did put all things under him: So when we say, that all Controversies of Religion are decidable by the Scripture, it is manifest to all, but cavillers, that we do, and must, except from this generality, those which are touching the Scripture it self. Just as a Merchant shewing a Ship of his own, may say, All my substance is in this Ship; and yet never intend to deny, that his Ship is part of his substance, nor yet to say that his Ship is in it self. Or, as a man may say, that a whole house is supported by the foundation, and yet never mean to exclude the foundation from being a part of the house, or to say, that it is supported by it self. Or as you your selves use to say, that the Bishop of Rome is Head of the whole Church, and yet would think us but captious Sophisters, should we infer from hence, that either you made him no part of the whole, or else made him head of himself. Your Negative Conclusion, therefore, that these Questions touching Scripture, are not decidable by Scripture, you needed not have cited any Authorities, nor urged any Reason to prove it; it is evident of it self, and I grant it without more ado. But your corollary from it, which you would insinuate to your unwary Reader, That therefore they are to be decided by your, or any, Visible Church, is a meer Consequence, and very like his Collection, who, because Pamphilus was not to have Glycerium for his Wife, presently concluded that he must have her; as if there had been no more men in the World but Pamphilus and himself. For so you, as if there were nothing in the World capable of this Office, but the Scripture, or the present Church; having concluded against Scripture, you conceive, but too hastily, that you have concluded for the Church. But the truth is, neither the one nor the other have any thing to do with this matter. For first, the Question whether such or such a Book be Canonical Scripture, though it may be decided negatively out of Scripture, by shewing shewing apparent and irreconcilable contradictions between it and some other Book confessedly Canonical; but affirmatively it cannot but only by the testimonies of the Ancient Churches: any Book being to be received as undoubtedly Canonical, or to be doubted of as Uncertain, or rejected as Apocryphal, according as it was received, or doubted of, or rejected by them. Then for the Question, Of various readings which is the true? It is in reason evident, and confessed by your own Pope, that there is no possible determination of it, but only by comparison with ancient Copies. And lastly, for Controversies about different translations of Scripture, the Learned have the same means to satisfie themselves in it, as in the Questions which happen about the translation of any other Author; that is, skill in the Language of the Original, and comparing Translations with it. In which way if there be no certainty, I would know what certainty you have, that your Doway old, and Rhemish New Testament, are true translations? And then for the unlearned, those on your side are subject to as much, nay, the very same uncertainty with those on ours. Neither is there any reason imaginable, why an ignorant English Protestant may not be as secure of the Translation of our Church, that it is free from error, if not absolutely, yet in matters of moment, as an ignorant English Papist can be of his Rhemish Testament, or Doway Bible. The best direction I can give them, is, to compare both together, and where there is no real difference (as in the Translation of controverted places I believe there is very little) there to be confident, that they are right; where they differ, there to be prudent in the choice of the Guides they follow. Which way of proceeding if it be subject to some possible error, yet is it the best that either we, or you have; and it is not required that we use any better than the best we have.

28. You will say, Dependence on your Churches infallibility is a better. I answer, it would be so, if we could be infallibly certain, that your Church is infallible, that is, if it were either evident of it self, and seen by its own light, or could be reduced unto, and settled upon, some Principle that is so. But seeing you your selves do not so much as pretend to enforce us to the belief hereof, by any proofs infallible and convincing; but only to induce us to it, by such as are, by your confession, only probable and prudential Motives; certainly it will be to very little purpose, to put off your uncertainty for the first turn, and to fall upon it at the second: to please your selves in building your house upon an imaginary Rock when you your selves see and confess, that this very Rock stands it self at the best but upon a frame of timber. I answer secondly, that this cannot be a better way, because we are infallibly certain that your Church is not infallible, and indeed hath not the real Prescription of this Priviledge, but only pleaseth her self with a false imagination and vain presumption of it; as I shall hereafter demonstrate by many unanswerable Arguments.

29. Now seeing I make no scruple or difficulty to grant the conclusion of this Discourse, that, These controversies about Scripture, are not decidable by Scripture; and have shewed, that your deduction from it, that therefore they are to be determined by the Authority of some present Church, is irrational, and inconsequent; I might well forbear to tire my self with an exact and punctual examination of your premises κτ' ἄνδρα, which whether they be true or false, is to the Question disputed wholy impertinent. Yet because you shall not complain of tergiversation, I will run over them, and let nothing, that is material and considerable, pass without some stricture or animadversion.

30. You pretend that M. Hooker acknowledgeth, that, That wherein we must rest our assurance that the Scripture is God's Word, is the Church: and for this acknowledgment you refer us to l. 3. §. 8. Let the Reader consult the place, and he shall find that he and M. Hooker have been much abused, both by you here, and by M. Breerly, and others before you; and that M. Hooker hath not one syllable to your pretended purpose, but very much directly to the contrary.

There he tells us indeed, That, ordinarily the first Introduction and probable Motive to the belief of the verity, is the Authority of the Church; but that it is the last Foundation whereon our belief hereof is rationally grounded, that in the same place he plainly denies. His words are, Scripture teacheth us that saving Truth which God hath discovered unto the world by Revelation, and it presumeth us taught otherwise, that it self is Divine and Sacred. The Question then being, by what means we are taught this: * Some answer, That to learn it we have no other way than Tradition. As, namely, that so we believe, because we from our Predecessors, and they from theirs, have so received. But is this enough? That which all mens experience teacheth them, may not in any wise be denied: and by experience we all know, that (a) the first outward Motive leading men to esteem of the Scripture, is, the authority of God's Church. For when we know (b) the whole Church of God hath that opinion of the Scripture, we judge it at the first an impudent thing for any man, bred and brought up in the Church, to be of a contrary mind without cause. Afterwards, the more we bestow our labour upon reading or hearing the mysteries thereof, (c) the more we find that the thing it self doth answer our received opinion concerning it: so that the former inducement, prevailing (d) somewhat with us before, doth now much more prevail, when the very thing hath ministred farther reason. If Infidels or Atheists chance at any time to call it in question, this giveth us occasion to sift what reason there is, whereby the testimony of the Church, concerning Scripture, and our own persuasion, which Scripture it self hath settled, may be proved a truth infallible. (e) In which case the ancient Fathers, being often constrained to shew what warrant they had so much to rely upon the Scriptures, endeavoured still to maintain the Authority of the Books of God, by Arguments, such as the unbelievers themselves must needs think reasonable, if they judge thereof as they should. Neither is it a thing impossible or greatly hard, even by such kind of proofs, so to manifest and clear that Point, that no man living shall be able to deny it, without denying some apparent Principle, such as all men acknowledge to be true. (f) By this time, I hope, the Reader sees sufficient proof of what I said in my Reply to your Preface, that Mr. Breerelie's great ostentation of exactness, is no very certain Argument of his fidelity.

(* Some answer so, but he doth not.)

(a) The first outward Motive, not the last assurance whereon we rest.

(b) The whole Church that he speaks of, seems to be that particular Church wherein a man is bred and brought up; and the Authority of this he makes an Argument which pretends a man's modesty more than his reason. And in saying, It seems impudent to be of a contrary mind, without cause, he implies, There may be a just cause to be of a contrary mind, and that then it were no impudence to be so.

(c) Therefore the Authority of the Church is not the pause whereon we rest: we had need of more assurance, and the intrinsecal Arguments afford it.

(d) Somewhat, but not much, until it be backed and inforced by farther reason. It self therefore is not the farthest reason, and the last resolution.

(e) Observe, I pray; Our persuasion, and the testimony of the Church concerning Scripture, may be proved true; Therefore neither of them was in his account the farthest proof.

(f) Natural reason then built on Principles common to all men, is the last resolution; unto which the Churches Authority is but the first inducement.

31. But, seeing the belief of Scripture is a necessary thing, and cannot be proved by Scripture, How can the Church of England teach, as she doth, Art. 6. That all things necessary are contained in Scripture?

32. I have answered this already. And here again, I say, That all but Cavillers will easily understand the meaning of the Article to be, That all the Divine verities, which Christ revealed to his Apostles, and the Apostles taught the Churches, are contained in Scripture; That is, all the material objects of our Faith; whereof the Scripture is none, but only the means of conveying them unto us: which we believe not finally, and for it self, but for the matter contained in it. So that, if men did believe the Doctrine contained in Scripture, it should no way hinder their salvation, not to know whether there were any Scripture or no. Those barbarous Nations Irenæus speaks of, were in this case, and yet no doubt but they might be saved. The end that God aims at, is the belief of the Gospel, the Covenant between God and Man; the Scripture he hath provided as a means for this end, and this also we are to believe, but not as the last Object of our Faith, but as the Instrument of it. When therefore we subscribe to the 6 Art. you must understand, that, by Articles of Faith, they mean the final and ultimate Objects of it, and not the Means and instrumental Objects; and then then there will be no repugnance between what they say, and that which Whitaker, and D. Covel, and D. Whitaker, and Luther here say.

33. But, Protestants agree not in assigning the Canon of Holy Scripture. Luther and Illyricus reject the Epistle of St. James: Kemnitius, and other Lutherans, the second of Peter, the second and third of John. The Epistle to the Hebrews, the Epistle of James, of Jude, and the Apocalyps. Therefore without the Authority of the Church, no certainty can be had what Scripture is Canonical.

34. So also the Ancient Fathers, and not only Fathers, but whole Churches, differed about the certainty of the Authority of the very same Books: and by their difference shewed, they knew no necessity of conforming themselves herein to the judgment of your or any Church. For had they done so, they must have agreed all with that Church, and consequently among themselves. Now, I pray, tell me plainly, Had they sufficient certainty what Scripture was Canonical, or had they not? If they had not, it seems there is no great harm or danger in not having such a certainty whether some Books be Canonical, or no, as you require: If they had, Why may not Protestants, notwithstanding their differences, have sufficient certainty hereof, as well as the ancient Fathers and Churches, notwithstanding theirs?

35. You proceed. And whereas the Protestants of England in the 6. Art. have these words, In the name of the Holy Scripture we do understand those Books, of whose Authority was never any doubt in the Church; you demand, What they mean by them? Whether that, by the Churches consent they are assured what Scriptures be Canonical? I answer for them, Yes, they are so. And whereas you infer from hence, This is to make the Church Judge: I have told you already, That, of this Controversie we make the Church the Judge; but not the present Church, much less the present Roman Church, but the consent and testimony of the Ancient and Primitive Church, Which, though it be but an highly probable inducement, and no demonstrative enforcement; yet me-thinks you should not deny but may be a sufficient ground of Faith: Whose Faith, even of the Foundation of all your Faith, your Churches Authority is built lastly and wholly upon Prudential Motives.

36. But, by this Rule the whole Book of Esther must quit the Canon; because it was excluded by some in the Church: by Melito, Athanasius, and Gregory Nazianzen, Then, for ought I know, he that should think he had reason to exclude it now, might be still in the Church as well as Melito, Athanasius, Nazianzen were. And while you thus inveigh against Luther, and charge him with Luciferian Heresie, for doing that which you in this very place confess, that Saints in Heaven before him have done; are you not partial, and a Judge of evil thoughts?

37. Luther's censures of Ecclesiastes, Job, and the Prophets, though you make such tragedies with them, I see none of them but is capable of a tolerable construction, and far from having in them any fundamental Heresie. He that condemns him for saying, the Book of Ecclesiastes is not full, That it hath many abrupt things, condemns him, for ought I can see, for speaking truth. And the rest of the censure is but a bold and blunt expression of the same thing. The Book of Job may be a true History, and yet, as many true stories are, and have been, an Argument of a Fable to set before us an example of Patience. And though the Books of the Prophets were not written by themselves, but by their Disciples, yet it does not follow that they were written casually: (though I hope, you will not damn all for Hereticks, that say, Some Books of Scripture were written casually.) Neither is there any reason they should the sooner be called in question for being written by their Disciples, seeing being so written, they had attestation from themselves. Was the Prophesie of Jeremy the less Canonical, for being written by Baruch? Or, Because St. Peter the Master, dictated the Gospel and St. Mark the Scholar writ it, is it the more likely to be called in Question?

38. But leaving Luther, you return to our English Canon of Scripture; And tell tell us, That, in the New Teſtament, by the above-mentioned Rule (of whoſe Authority was never doubt in the Church) divers Books muſt be diſ-canonized. Not ſo. For I may believe even thoſe queſtioned Books to have been written by the Apoſtles, and to be Canonical: but I cannot in reaſon believe this of them ſo undoubtedly, as of thoſe Books which were never queſtioned. At leaſt I have no warrant to damn any man that ſhall doubt of them or deny them now: having the example of Saints in Heaven, either to juſtifie, or excuſe ſuch their doubting or denial.

39. You obſerve in the next place, That our ſixth Article, ſpecifying by name all the Books of the Old Teſtament, ſhuffles over thoſe of the New with this generality —— All the Books of the New Teſtament, as they are commonly received, we do receive, and account them Canonical: And in this you fancy to your ſelf a myſtery of iniquity. But if this be all the ſhuffling that the Church of England is guilty of, I believe the Church, as well as the King, may give for her Motto, Honi ſoit qui maly penſe. For all the Bibles, which ſince the compoſing of the Articles have been uſed and allowed by the Church of England, do teſtifie and even proclaim to the World, that by Commonly received, they meant, received by the Church of Rome, and other Churches before the Reformation. I pray, take the pains to look in them, and there you ſhall find the Books, which the Church of England counts Apocryphal, marked out, and ſevered from the reſt, with this Title in the beginning, The Books called Apocrypha; and with this cloſe or ſeal in the end, The end of the Apocrypha. And having told you by name, and, in particular, what Books only ſhe eſteems Apocryphal, I hope you will not put her to the trouble of telling you, that the reſt are in her judgment Canonical.

40. But, if by Commonly-received, She meant, by the Church of Rome; then by the ſame reaſon, muſt ſhe receive divers Books of the Old Teſtament which ſhe rejects.

41. Certainly, a very good conſequence. The Church of England receives the Books of the New Teſtament, which the Church of Rome receives: Therefore ſhe muſt receive the Books of the Old Teſtament which ſhe receives. As if you ſhould ſay, If you will do as we, in one thing, you muſt in all things. If you will pray to God with us, ye muſt pray to Saints with us. If you hold with us, when we have reaſon on our ſide, you muſt do ſo, when we have no reaſon.

42. The Diſcourſe following, is but a vain Declamation. No man thinks that this Controverſie is to be tried by moſt voices, but by the Judgment and Teſtimony of the Ancient Fathers and Churches.

43. But, with what Coherence can we ſay in the former part of the Article, That, by Scripture we mean thoſe Books that were never doubted of, and in the latter ſay, We receive all the Books of the New Teſtament, as they are commonly received, whereas of them many were doubted? I anſwer, When they ſay, of whoſe Authority there was never any doubt in the Church, They mean not, thoſe only of whoſe Authority there was ſimply no doubt at all, by any man in the Church; But ſuch as were not at any time doubted of by the whole Church, or by all Churches; but had atteſtation, though not univerſal, yet, at leaſt, ſufficient to make conſidering men receive them for Canonical. In which number they may well reckon thoſe Epiſtles which were ſometimes doubted of by ſome, yet whoſe number and authority was not ſo great, as to prevail againſt the contrary ſuffrages.

44. But, if to be commonly received, paſs for a good Rule to know the Canon of the New Teſtament by, why not of the Old? You conclude many times very well, but ſtill when you do ſo, it is out of Principles which no man grants: for, who ever told you, that to be commonly received is a good Rule to know the Canon of the New Teſtament by? Have you been trained up in Schools of ſubtilty, and cannot you ſee a great difference between theſe two, We receive the Books of the New Teſtament as they are commonly received, and we receive thoſe that are commonly received, becauſe they are ſo? To ſay this, were indeed to make being commonly received, a Rule or reaſon to know the Canon by. But to ſay the former, doth doth no more make it a Rule than you ſhould make the Church of England the Rule of your receiving them, if you ſhould ſay, as you may, The Books of the New Teſtament we receive for Canonical, as they are received by the Church of England.

45. You demand, Upon what infallible ground we agree with Luther againſt you in ſome, and with you againſt Luther in others? And I alſo demand, Upon what infallible ground you hold your Canon, and agree neither with us, nor Luther? For ſure your differing from us both, is of it ſelf no more apparently reaſonable, than our agreeing with you in part, and in part with Luther. If you ſay, Your Churches infallibility is your ground: I demand again ſome infallible ground, both for the Churches infallibility, and for this, that Yours is the Church; and ſhall never ceaſe multiplying demands upon demands, until you ſettle me upon a Rock; I mean, give ſuch an Anſwer, whoſe Truth is ſo evident, that it needs no further evidence. If you ſay, This is Univerſal Tradition: I reply, your Churches infallibility is not built upon it, and that the Canon of Scripture, as we receive it, is. For we do not profeſs our ſelves ſo abſolutely, and undoubtedly certain, neither do we urge others to be ſo, of thoſe Books, which have been doubted, as of thoſe that never have.

46. The concluſion of your tenth § is, That the Divinity of a writing cannot be known from it ſelf alone, but by ſome extrinſecal Authority; Which you need not prove, for no wiſe man denies it. But then, this Authority is that of Univerſal Tradition, not of your Church. For to me it is altogether as ἀνάθεμα, that the Goſpel of St. Matthew is the Word of God as that all which your Church ſays, is true.

47. That believers of the Scripture, by conſidering the Divine matter, the excellent precepts, the glorious promiſes contained in it, may be confirmed in their faith of the Scriptures Divine Authority; and that among other inducements and enforcements hereunto, internal arguments have their place and force, certainly no man of underſtanding can deny. For my part I profeſs, if the Doctrine of the Scripture were not as good, and as fit to come from the Fountain of goodneſs, as the Miracles by which it was confirmed, were great, I ſhould want one main Pillar of my faith: and for want of it, I fear, ſhould be much ſtagger'd in it. Now this, and nothing elſe, did the Doctor mean in ſaying, The Believer ſees, by that glorious Beam of Divine light which ſhines in Scripture, and by many internal Arguments, that the Scripture, is of Divine Authority. By this (ſaith he) he ſees it, that is, he is moved to, and ſtrengthened in, his belief of it: and by this partly, not wholly; by this, not alone, but with the concurrence of other Arguments. He that will quarrel with him for ſaying ſo, muſt find fault with the Maſter of the Sentences, and all his Scholars, for they all ſay the ſame. The reſt of this Paragraph, I am as willing it ſhould be true, as you are to have it: and ſo let is paſs, as a diſcourſe wherein we are wholly unconcerned. You might have met with an Anſwerer, that would not have ſuffered you to have ſaid ſo much Truth together; but to me it is ſufficient, that it is nothing to the purpoſe.

48. In the next Diviſion, out of your liberality, you will ſuppoſe, that Scripture, like to a corporal light, is by it ſelf alone able to determine and move our underſtanding to aſſent: yet notwithſtanding this ſuppoſal, Faith ſtill (you ſay) muſt go before Scripture, becauſe as the light is viſible only to thoſe that have eyes: ſo the Scripture, only to thoſe that have the Eye of Faith. But to my underſtanding, if Scripture do move and determine our Underſtanding to aſſent, then the Scripture, and its moving, muſt be before this aſſent, as the cauſe muſt be before its own effect; now this very aſſent is nothing elſe but Faith, and Faith nothing elſe than the Underſtanding's aſſent. And therefore (upon this ſuppoſal) Faith doth, and muſt, originally proceed from Scripture, as the effect from its proper cauſe: and the influence and efficacy of Scripture is to be preſuppoſed before the aſſent of Faith, unto which it moves and determines, and conſequently if this ſuppoſi-

tion of yours were true, there ſhould need no other means precedent to Scripture to beget Faith, Scripture it ſelf being able (as here you ſuppoſe) to determine and move the Underſtanding to aſſent, that is, to believe them, and the Verities contained in them. Neither is this to ſay, that the eyes with which we ſee, are made by the light by which we ſee. For you are miſtaken much, if you conceive that in this compariſon, Faith anſwers to the Eye. But if you will not pervert it, the Analogy muſt ſtand thus; Scripture muſt anſwer to light; The eye of the ſoul, that is, the Underſtanding, or the faculty of aſſenting, to the Bodily eye: And laſtly, aſſenting or believing to the act of Seeing. As therefore the light, determining the Eye to ſee, though it preſuppoſeth the Eye which it determines, as every Action doth the object on which it is imployed, yet it ſelf is preſuppoſed and antecedent to the act of ſeeing, as the cauſe is always to its effect: So, if you will ſuppoſe that Scripture, like light, moves the Underſtanding to aſſent, the Underſtanding (that is, the eye and object on which it works) muſt be before this influence upon it; But the aſſent, that is, the belief whereto the Scripture moves, and the Underſtanding is moved, which anſwers to the act of ſeeing, muſt come after. For if it did aſſent already, To what purpoſe ſhould the Scripture do that which was done before? Nay indeed, How were it poſſible it ſhould be ſo, any more than a Father can beget a Son that he hath already? Or an Architect build a houſe that is built already? Or that this very world can be made again before it be unmade? Tranſubſtantiation indeed is fruitful of ſuch Monſters. But they that have not ſworn themſelves to the defence of Error, will eaſily perceive, that jam factum facere, and factum infectum facere, are equally impoſſible. But I digreſs.

50. The cloſe of this Paragraph, is a fit cover for ſuch a diſh. There you tell us, That if there muſt be ſome other means precedent to Scripture to beget faith, this can be no other than the Church. By the Church, we know you do, and muſt underſtand the Roman Church: ſo that in effect you ſay, no man can have faith, but he muſt be moved to it by your Churches Authority. And that is to ſay, that the King and all other Proteſtants, to whom you write, though they verily think they are Chriſtians and believe the Goſpel, becauſe they aſſent to the truth of it, and would willingly die for it, yet indeed are Infidels, and believe nothing. The Scripture tells us, The heart of man knoweth no man, but the ſpirit of man which is in him. And who are you, to take upon you to make us believe, that we do not believe, what we know we do? But if I may think verily that I believe the Scripture, and yet not believe it; how know you that you believe the Roman Church? I am as verily and as ſtrongly perſuaded that I believe the Scripture, as you are that you believe the Church. And if I may be deceived, why may not you? Again, what more ridiculous, and againſt ſenſe and experience, than to affirm, That there are not millions amongſt you and us that believe, upon no other reaſon than their education, and the authority of their Parents and Teachers, and the opinion they have of them? The tenderneſs of the ſubject, and aptneſs to receive impreſſions, ſupplying the defect and imperfection of the Agent. And will you proſcribe from heaven all thoſe believers of your own Creed, who do indeed lay the foundation of their Faith (for I cannot call it by any other name) no deeper than upon the authority of their Father, or Maſter, or Pariſh-Prieſt? Certainly, if theſe have no true faith, your Church is very full of Infidels. Suppoſe Xaverius by the holineſs of his life had converted ſome Indians to Chriſtianity, who could (for ſo I will ſuppoſe) have no knowledge of your Church but from him, and therefore muſt laſt of all build their faith of the Church, upon their opinion of Xaverius: Do theſe remain as very Pagans after their converſion, as they were before? Are they brought to aſſent in their ſouls, and obey in their lives the Goſpel of Chriſt, only to be Tantaliz'd and not ſaved, and not benefited, but deluded by it, becauſe, forſooth, it is a man and not the Church that begets faith in them? What if their motive to believe be not in reaſon ſufficient?

Do

Do they therefore not believe what they do believe, becauſe they do it upon inſufficient motives; They chuſe the Faith imprudently perhaps, but yet they do chuſe it. Unleſs you will have us believe, that that which is done, is not done, becauſe it is not done upon good reaſon: which is to ſay, that never any man living ever did a fooliſh action. But yet I know not why the authority of one holy man, which apparently hath no ends upon me, joyn'd with the goodneſs of the Chriſtian faith, might not be a far greater and more rational motive to me to embrace Chriſtianity, than any I can have to continue in Paganiſm. And therefore, for ſhame, if not for love of Truth, you muſt recant this fancy when you write again: and ſuffer true faith to be many times, where your Churches infallibility hath no hand in the begetting of it. And be content to tell us hereafter, that we believe not enough, and not go about to perſuade us we believe nothing, for fear with telling us what we know to be manifeſtly falſe, you ſhould gain only this, Not to be believed when you ſpeak truth. Some pretty Sophiſms you may haply bring us, to make us believe, we believe nothing: but wiſe men know that Reaſon againſt Experience is always Sophiſtical. And therefore as he that could not anſwer Zeno's ſubtilties againſt the exiſtence of Motion, could yet confute them by doing that, which he pretended could not be done: So, if you ſhould give me a hundred Arguments to perſuade me, becauſe I do not believe Tranſubſtantiation, I do not believe in God, and the Knots of them I could not unty, yet I ſhould cut them in pieces with doing that, and knowing that I do ſo, which you pretend I cannot do.

50. In the thirteenth Diviſion, we have again much ado about nothing. A great deal of ſtir you keep in confuting ſome, that pretend to know Canonical Scripture to be ſuch, by the Titles of the Books. But theſe men you do not name, which makes me ſuſpect you cannot. Yet it is poſſible there may be ſome ſuch men in the world; for Guſman de Alfarache hath taught us that, The Fools Hoſpital is a large place.

51. In the fourteenth §. we have very artificial jugling. Dr. Potter had ſaid, That the Scripture (he deſires to be underſtood of thoſe books wherein all Chriſtians agree) is a Principle, and needs not be proved among Chriſtians. His reaſon was, becauſe, that needs no farther proof which is believed already. Now by this (you ſay) he means either, that the Scripture is one of theſe firſt Principles, and moſt known in all Sciences, which cannot be proved: which is to ſuppoſe, it cannot be proved by the Church; and that is to ſuppoſe the Queſtion: Or, he means, That it is not the moſt known in Chriſtianity, and then it may be proved. Where we ſee plainly, That two moſt different things, Moſt known in all Sciences, and, Moſt known in Chriſtianity, are captiouſly confounded. As if the Scripture might not be the firſt and moſt known Principle in Chriſtianity, and yet not the moſt known in all Sciences: Or, as if to be a firſt Principle in Chriſtianity, and in all Sciences, were all one. That Scripture is a Principle among Chriſtians, that is, ſo received by all that it need not be proved in any emergent Cotroverſie to any Chriſtian, but may be taken for granted, I think few will deny. You your ſelves are of this a ſufficient Teſtimony; for urging againſt us many Texts of Scripture, you offer no proof of the truth of them, preſuming we will not queſtion it. Yet, this is not to deny, that Tradition is a Principle more known than Scripture; But to ſay, It is a Principle not in Chriſtianity, but in Reaſon, nor proper to Chriſtians, but common to all men.

52. But, It is repugnant to our practice to hold Scripture a Principle; becauſe we are wont to affirm, that one part of Scripture may be known to be Canonical, and may be interpreted by another. Where the former device is again put in practice. For to be known to be Canonical, and to be interpreted, is not all one. That Scripture may be interpreted by Scripture, that Proteſtants grant, and Papiſts do not deny; neither does that any way hinder but that this aſſertion —— Scripture is the Word of God, may be among Christians a common Principle. But the first —— That one part of Scripture may prove another part Canonical, and need no proof of its own being so; for that, you have produced divers Protestants that deny it; but who they are that affirm it, nondum constat.

53. It is superfluous for you to prove out of St. Athanasius, and St. Austin, that we must receive the sacred Canon, upon the credit of Gods Church. Understanding by Church, as here you explain your self, The credit of Tradition. And that not the Tradition of the present Church, which we pretend may deviate from the Ancient, but such a Tradition, which involves an evidence of Fact, and from hand to hand, from age to age, bringing us up to the times and persons of the Apostles, and our Saviour himself, cometh to be confirmed by all those Miracles, and other Arguments, whereby they convinced their doctrine to be true. Thus you. Now prove the Canon of Scripture which you receive by such Tradition, and we will allow it. Prove your whole doctrine, or the infallibility of your Church by such Tradition, and we will yield to you in all things. Take the alledged places of St. Athanasius, and St. Austin, in this sense, (which is your own,) and they will not press us any thing at all. We will say, with Athanasius. That only four Gospels are to be received, because the Canons of the Holy and Catholick Church (understand of all ages since the perfection of the Canon) have so determined.

54. We will subscribe to St. Austin, and say, That we also would not believe the Gospel, unless the Authority of the Catholick Church did move us, (meaning by the Church, the Church of all ages, and that succession of Christians which takes in Christ himself and his Apostles.) Neither would Zuinglius have needed to cry out upon this saying, had he conceived as you now do, that by the Catholick Church, the Church of all Ages, since Christ, was to be understood. As for the Council of Carthage, it may speak not of such Books only, as were certainly Canonical; and for the regulating of Faith; but also of those which were only profitable, and lawful to be read in the Church. Which in England is a very slender Argument that the Book is Canonical, where every body knows that Apocryphal books are read as well as Canonical. But however, if you understand by Fathers, not only their immediate Fathers and Predecessors in the Gospel but the succession of them from the Apostles; they are right in the Thesis, that whatsoever is received from these Fathers, as Canonical, is to be so esteemed; Though in the application of it, to this or that particular book they may haply err, and think that book received as Canonical, which was only received as profitable to be read; and think that Book received always, and by all, which was rejected by some, and doubted of by many.

55. But we cannot be certain, in what Language the Scriptures remain uncorrupted. Not so certain, I grant, as of that which we can demonstrate: but certain enough, morally certain, as certain as the nature of the thing will bear: So certain we may be, and God requires no more. We may be as certain as St. Austin was, who in his second Book of Baptism, against the Donatists, c. 3. plainly implies, the Scripture might possibly be corrupted. He means, sure, in matters of little moment, such as concern not the Covenant between God and Man. But thus he saith, The same St. Austin in his 48. Epist. clearly intimates, (a) That in his judgment, the only preservative of the Scriptures integrity, was the translating into so many Languages, and the general and perpetual use and reading of it in the Church: for want whereof the works of particular Doctors were more exposed to danger in this kind; but the Canonical Scripture being by this means guarded with universal care and diligence, was not obnoxious to such attempts. And this

assurance of the Scriptures incorruption, is common to us with him, we therefore are as certain hereof, as St. Austin was, and that, I hope, was certain enough. Yet if this does not satisfie you, I say further, We are as certain hereof as your own Pope Sixtus Quintus was. He in his Preface to his Bible tells us, 'That in the prevestigation of the true and genuine Text, it was perspicuously manifest to all men, that there was no Argument more firm and certain to be relied upon, than the Faith of Ancient Books. Now this ground we have to build upon as well as he had: and therefore our certainty is as great, and stands upon a certain ground as his did.

a In hac germani textus prævestigatione, satis perspicue inter omnes constat, nullum argumentum esse certius ac firmius, quam antiquorum probatorum codicum Latinorum fides, &c. Sic Sixtus in Præf.

56. This is not all I have to say in this matter. For I will add moreover, that we are as certain in what Language the Scripture is uncorrupted, as any man in your Church was, until Clement the Eighth set forth your own approved Edition of your Vulgar Translation. For you do not, nor cannot, without extreme impudence, deny, that until then, there was great variety of Copies current in divers parts of your Church, and those very frequent in various lections: all which Copies might possibly be false in some things, but more than one sort of them, could not possibly be true in all things. Neither were it less impudence to pretend, that any man in your Church, could until Clement's time have any certainty what that one true Copy and Reading was, (if there were one perfectly true.) Some indeed that had got Sixtus his Bible, might, after the Edition of that, very likely think themselves cock-sure of a perfect, true, uncorrupted Translation, without being beholden to Clement; but how foully they were abused and deceived that thought so, the Edition of Clements, differing from that of Sixtus in a great multitude of places, doth sufficiently demonstrate.

57. This certainty therefore, in what language the Scripture remains uncorrupted, is it necessary to have it, or is it not? If it be not, I hope we may do well enough without it. If it be necessary, what became of your Church for 1500 years together? All which time, you must confess she had no such certainty: no one man being able truly and upon good ground to say, This or that Copy of the Bible is pure, and perfect, and uncorrupted in all things. And now at this present, though some of you are grown to a higher degree of Presumption in this Point, yet are you as far as ever, from any true, real, and rational assurance of the absolute purity of your Authentick Translation: which I suppose my self to have proved unanswerably in divers places.

58. In the sixteenth Division, It is objected to Protestants in a long discourse transcribed out of the Protestants Apology, That their Translations of the Scripture are very different, and by each other mutually condemned. Luther's Translation by Zulius, and others: That of the Zuinglians, by Luther. The Translation of Oecolampadius, by the Divines of Basil: that of Castalio, by Beza: That of Beza, by Castalio. That of Calvin, by Carolus Molinæus. That of Geneva, by M. Parks, and King James. And lastly, One of our Translations by the Puritans.

59. All which might have been as justly objected against that great variety of Translations extant in the Primitive Church, and made use of by the Fathers and Doctors of it. For which, I desire not that my word, but St. Austin's may be taken. They, which have translated the Scriptures out of the Hebrew into Greek, may be numbred; but the Latine Interpreters are innumerable. For, whensoever any one, in the first times of Christianity, met with a Greek Bible, and seemed to himself to have some ability in both Languages, he presently ventured upon an Interpretation. So He, in his second Book of Christian Doctrine, Cap. 11. Of all these, that which was called the Italian Translation was esteemed best; so we may learn from the same St. Austin in Chap. 15. of the same Book. Amongst all these Interpretations (saith he) let the Italian be preferred: for it keeps closer to the Letter, and is perspicuous in the sense. Yet so far was the Church of that time from presuming upon the absolute purity and perfection, even of this best Translation, that St. Hierom thought it necessary to make a new Translation, of the Old Testament, out of the Hebrew Fountain,(which himſelf teſtifies in his Book de Viris illuſtribus;) and to correct the vulgar Verſion of the New Teſtament, according to the truth of the Original Greek; amending many errors which had crept into it, whether by the miſtake of the Author, or the negligence of the Tranſcribers; which work he undertook and performed at the requeſt of Damaſus, Biſhop of Rome. You conſtrain me (ſaith he) to make a new work of an old: that, after the Copies of the Scriptures have been diſperſed through the whole World, I ſhould ſit, as it were, an Arbitrator amongſt them, and, becauſe they vary among themſelves, ſhould determine what are thoſe things (in them) which conſent with the Greek verity. And after: Therefore this preſent Preface promiſes the four Goſpels only, corrected by collation with Greek Copies. But, that they might not be very diſſonant from the cuſtom of the Latine reading, I have ſo tempered with my ſtile, the Tranſlation of the Ancients, that, thoſe things amended which did ſeem to change the ſenſe, other things I have ſuffered to remain as they were. So that in this matter Proteſtants muſt either ſtand or fall with the Primitive Church.

60. The Corruption that you charge Luther with, and the falſification that you impute to Zuinglius, What have we to do with them? Or why may not we as juſtly lay to your charge the Errors, which Lyranus, or Paulus Brugenſis, or Laurentius Valla, or Cajetan, or Eraſmus, or Arias Montanus, or Auguſtus Nebienſis, or Pagnine, have committed in their Tranſlations?

61. Which yet I ſay not, as if theſe Tranſlations of Luther and Zuinglius were abſolutely indefenſible; for what ſuch great difference is there between Faith without the Works of the Law, and Faith alone without the Works of the Law? Or why does not, Without, Alone, ſignifie all one with, Alone, Without? Conſider the matter a little better, and obſerve the uſe of theſe phraſes of ſpeech in our ordinary talk, and perhaps you will begin to doubt whether you had ſufficient ground for this invective. And then for Zuinglius, if it be true (as they ſay it is) that the language our Saviour ſpake in, had no ſuch word as To ſignifie, but uſed always, to be, inſtead of it, as it is certain the Scripture does in an hundred places; then this Tranſlation, which you ſo declaim againſt, will prove no falſification in Zuinglius, but a calumny in you.

62. But the faith of Proteſtants relies upon Scripture alone; Scripture is delivered to moſt of them by Tranſlations; Tranſlations depend upon the skill and honeſty of Men, who certainly may err becauſe they are Men, and certainly do err, at leaſt ſome of them, becauſe their Tranſlations are contrary. It ſeems then the Faith, and conſequently the Salvation of Proteſtants, relies upon fallible and uncertain grounds.

63. This Objection, though it may ſeem to do you great ſervice for the preſent; yet I fear, you will repent the time that ever you urged it againſt us as a fault, that we make mens ſalvation depend upon uncertainties; For the Objection returns upon you many ways, as firſt thus; The ſalvation of many millions of Papiſts (as they ſuppoſe and teach) depends upon their having the Sacrament of Pennance truly adminiſtred unto them. This again upon the Miniſter's being a true Prieſt. That ſuch or ſuch a man is Prieſt, not himſelf, much leſs any other can have any poſſible certainty: for it depends upon a great many contingent and uncertain ſuppoſals. He that will pretend to be certain of it, muſt undertake to know for a certain all theſe things that follow.

64. Firſt, That he was baptized with due matter. Secondly, with the due form of words, (which he cannot know, unleſs he were both preſent and attentive.) Thirdly, he muſt know that he was baptized with due Intention, and that is, that the Miniſter of his Baptiſm was not a ſecret Jew, nor a Moor, nor an Atheiſt, (of all which kinds, I fear, experience gives you juſt cauſe to fear, that Italy and Spain have Prieſts not a few) but a Chriſtian in heart, as well as Profeſſion; (otherwiſe, believing the Sacrament to be nothing, in giving it he could intend to give nothing,) nor a Samoſatenian, nor an Arrian: but one that was capable of having due intention, from which they that believe not the Doctrine of the Trinity nity are excluded by you. And laſtly, That he was neither drunk nor diſtracted at the adminiſtration of the Sacrament, nor out of negligence or malice omitted his intention.

65. Fourthly, he muſt undertake to know, that the Biſhop, which ordained him Prieſt, ordained him compleatly with due Matter, Form, and intention: and conſequently, that he again was neither Jew, nor Moor, nor Atheiſt, nor liable to any ſuch exception, as is unconſiſtent with due Intention in giving the Sacrament of Orders.

66. Fifthly, he muſt undertake to know, that the Biſhop, which made him Prieſt, was a Prieſt himſelf; for your Rule is, Nihil dat quod non habet: And conſequently, that there was again none of the former nullities in his Baptiſm, which might make him incapable of Ordination; nor no invalidity in his Ordination, but a true Prieſt to Ordain him again, the requiſite matter, and form, and due intention, all concurring.

67. Laſtly, he muſt pretend to know the ſame of him that made him Prieſt, and him that made him Prieſt, even until he comes to the very fountain of Prieſthood, For, take any one in the whole train and ſucceſſion of Ordainers, and ſuppoſe him, by reaſon of any defect, only a ſuppoſed and not a true Prieſt, then according to your Doctrine he could not give a true, but only a ſuppoſed Prieſthood; and they that receive it of him, and again they that derive it from them, can give no better than they receive; receiving nothing but a name and ſhadow, can give nothing but a name and ſhadow; and ſo from Age to Age, from Generation to Generation, ſeeing equivocal Fathers beget only equivocal Sons; No Principle in Geometry being more certain than this, That the unſuppliable defect of any neceſſary Antecedent, muſt needs cauſe a nullity of all thoſe Conſequences which depend upon it. In fine, to know this one thing you now firſt know ten thouſand others, whereof not any one is a thing that can be known, there being no neceſſity that it ſhould be true, which only can qualifie any thing for an object of Science, but only, at the beſt, a high degree of probability that it is ſo. But then, that of ten thouſand probables, no one ſhould be falſe; that of ten thouſand requiſites, whereof any one may fail, not one ſhould be wanting, this to me is extreamly improbable, nay, even Couſin-german to Impoſſible. So that the aſſurance hereof is like a Machin compoſed of an innumerable multitude of pieces, of which it is ſtrangely unlikely but ſome will be out of order; and yet, if any one be ſo, the whole Fabrick of neceſſity falls to the ground. And he that ſhall put them together, and maturely conſider all the poſſible ways of lapſing, and nullifying a Prieſthood in the Church of Rome, I believe, will be very inclinable to think, that it is an hundred to one, that, amongſt an hundred ſeeming Prieſts, there is not one true one. Nay, that it is not a thing very improbable, that, amongſt thoſe many millions, which make up the Romiſh Hierarchy, there are not twenty true. But be the truth in this what it will be, once this is certain, that They, which make mens ſalvation (as you do) depend upon Prieſtly Abſolution; and this again (as you do) upon the truth and reality of the Prieſthood that gives it; and this laſtly upon a great multitude of apparent uncertainties, are not the fitteſt men in the world, to object to others, as a horrible crime, That they make mens Salvation depend upon fallible and uncertain foundations. And let this be the firſt retortion of your Argument.

68. But ſuppoſe, this difficulty aſſoyled, and that an Angel from Heaven ſhould aſcertain you (for other aſſurances you can have none) that the perſon you make uſe of, is a true Prieſt, and a competent Miniſter of the Sacrament of Pennance; yet ſtill the doubt will remain, Whether he will do you that good which he can do, whether he will pronounce the abſolving words with intent to abſolve you! For perhaps, he may bear you ſome ſecret malice, and project to himſelf your damnation, for a compleat Italian revenge. Perhaps (as the tale is of a Prieſt that was lately burnt in France) he may upon ſome conditions have

Compacted

Compacted with the Devil to give no Sacraments with Intention. Laſtly, he may be (for ought you can poſſibly know) a ſecret Jew, or Moor, or Anti-Trinitarian, or perhaps ſuch a one as is ſo far from intending your forgiveneſs of ſins and ſalvation by this Sacrament, that in his heart he laughs at all theſe things, and thinks Sin nothing, and Salvation a word. All theſe doubts you muſt have clearly reſolved (which can hardly be done but by another Revelation,) before you can upon good grounds aſſure your ſelf, that your true Prieſt gives you true and effectual abſolution. So that when you have done as much as God requires for your Salvation, yet can you by no means be ſecure, but that you may have the ill luck to be damned: which is to make Salvation a matter of chance, and not of choice; and which a man may fail of, not only by an ill life, but by ill fortune. Verily, a moſt comfortable Doctrine for a conſidering man lying upon his death-bed, who, either feels or fears that his repentance is but attrition only, and not contrition, and conſequently believes, that, if he be not abſolved really by a true Prieſt, he cannot poſſibly eſcape damnation. Such a man for his comfort, you tell, firſt (you that will have mens ſalvation depend upon no uncertainties) that though he verily believe that his ſorrow for ſins is a true ſorrow, and his purpoſe of amendment a true purpoſe; yet he may deceive himſelf, perhaps it is not; and, if it be not, he muſt be damned. Yet you bid him hope well: But, Spes eſt rei incertæ nomen. You tell him ſecondly, that though the party he confeſſes to, ſeem to be a true Prieſt, yet for ought he knows, or, for ought himſelf knows, by reaſon of ſome ſecret undiſcernable invalidity in his Baptiſm or Ordination, he may be none, and if he be none, he can do nothing. This is a hard ſaying, but this is not the worſt. You tell him thirdly, that he may be in ſuch a ſtate that he cannot, or, if he can, that he will not give the Sacrament with due Intention: and, if he does not, all is in vain. Put caſe, a man by theſe conſiderations ſhould be caſt into ſome agonies; what advice, what comfort would you give him? Verily, I know not what you could ſay to him, but this; that, firſt, for the Qualification required on his part, he might know that he deſired to have true ſorrow, and that that is ſufficient. But then, if he ſhould ask you, Why he might not know his ſorrow to be a true ſorrow, as well as his deſire to be ſorrowful, to be a true deſire; I believe you would be put to ſilence. Then ſecondly, to quiet his fears, concerning the Prieſt and his Intention you ſhould tell him, by my advice, that God's goodneſs (which will not ſuffer him to damn men for not doing better than their beſt,) will ſupply all ſuch defects, as to humane endeavours were unavoidable. And therefore though his Prieſt were indeed no Prieſt, yet to him he ſhould be as if he were one: and if he gave Abſolution without Intention, yet in doing ſo he ſhould hurt himſelf only, and not his Penitent. This were ſome comfort indeed, and this were to ſettle mens ſalvation upon reaſonable certain grounds. But this, I fear, you will never ſay; for theſe were to reverſe many Doctrines eſtabliſhed by your Church; and beſides, to degrade your Prieſthood from a great part of their honour, by leſſening the ſtrict neceſſity of the Laities dependance upon them. For it were to ſay, that the Prieſts Intention is not neceſſary to the obtaining of Abſolution; which is to ſay, that it is not in the Parſon's power to damn whom he will in his Pariſh, becauſe, by this Rule, God ſhould ſupply the defect which his malice had cauſed. And beſides, it were to ſay, that, Infants dying without Baptiſm might be ſaved, God ſupplying the want of Baptiſm which to them is unavoidable. But beyond all this, it were to put into my mouth a full and ſatisfying Anſwer to your Argument, which I am now returning; ſo that in anſwering my Objection you ſhould anſwer your own. For then I ſhould tell you, that it were altogether as abhorrent from the goodneſs of God, and as repugnant to it, to ſuffer an ignorant Lay-mans ſoul to periſh, meerly for being miſled by an undiſcernable falſe Tranſlation, which yet was commended to him by the Church, which (being of neceſſity to credit ſome in this matter) he had reaſon to rely upon, either above all all other, or as much as any other, as it is to damn a penitent ſinner for a ſecret defect in that deſired Abſolution, which his Ghoſtly Father perhaps was an Atheiſt, and could not give him, or was a Villain and would not. This anſwer therefore, which alone would ſerve to comfort your penitent in his perplexities, and to aſſure him that he cannot fail of Salvation if he will not, for fear of inconvenience you muſt forbear. And ſeeing you muſt, I hope you will, come down from the Pulpit, and preach no more againſt others for making mens Salvation depend upon fallible and uncertain grounds, leſt by judging others, you make your ſelves, and your own Church inexcuſable, who are ſtrongly guilty of this fault, above all the men and Churches of the World: whereof I have already given you two very pregnant demonſtrations, drawn from your preſumptuous tying God and Salvation to your Sacraments; And the efficacy of them to your Prieſt's Qualifications and intentions.

69. Your making the Salvation of Infants depend on Baptiſm a Caſual thing, and in the power of man to confer, or not confer, would yield me a Third of the ſame nature. And your ſuſpending the ſame on the Baptizers Intention, a Fourth. And laſtly, your making the Real preſence of Chriſt in the Euchariſt depend upon the caſualties of the Conſecrators true Prieſthood and Intention, and yet commanding men to believe it for certain that he is preſent, and to adore the Sacrament, which, according to your Doctrine, for ought they can poſſibly know, may be nothing elſe but a piece of Bread, ſo expoſing them to the danger of Idolatry, and conſequently of damnation, doth offer me a Fifth demonſtration of the ſame Concluſion, if I thought fit to inſiſt upon them. But I have no mind to draw any more out of this Fountain; neither do I think it charity to cloy the Reader with uniformity, when the Subject affords variety.

70. Sixthly, therefore, I return it thus. The Faith of Papiſts relies alone upon their Churches infallibility. That there is any Church infallible, and, that Theirs is it, they pretend not to believe, but only upon prudential Motives. Dependance upon prudential Motives they confeſs to be obnoxious to a poſſibility of erring. What then remaineth, but Truth, Faith, Salvation, and All, muſt in them relie upon a fallible and uncertain ground.

71. Seventhly, The Faith of Papiſts relies upon the Church alone. The Doctrine of the Church is delivered to moſt of them by their Pariſh-Prieſt, or Ghoſtly Father, or, at leaſt, by a company of Prieſts, who, for the moſt part, ſure, are men and not Angels, in whom nothing is more certain than a moſt certain poſſibility to err. What then remaineth, but that Truth, Faith, Salvation, and All, muſt in them rely upon a fallible and uncertain ground.

72. Eighthly thus. It is apparent and undeniable, that many Thouſands there are, who believe your Religion upon no better grounds, than a man may have for the belief almoſt of any Religion. As ſome believe it, becauſe their Forefathers did ſo, and they were good People. Some, becauſe they were Chriſtened, and brought up in it. Some, becauſe many Learned and Religious men are of it. Some, becauſe it is the Religion of their Country, where all other Religions are perſecuted and proſcribed. Some, becauſe Proteſtants cannot ſhew a perpetual ſucceſſion of Profeſſors of all their Doctrines. Some, becauſe the Service of your Church is more ſtately, and pompous, and magnificent. Some, becauſe they find comfort in it. Some, becauſe your Religion is farther ſpread, and hath more Profeſſors of it, than the Religion of Proteſtants. Some, becauſe your Prieſts compaſs Sea and Land to gain Proſelytes to it. Laſtly, an infinite number, by chance, and they know not why, but only becauſe they are ſure they are in the right. This which I ſay, is a moſt certain experimented truth, and, if you will deal ingenuouſly, you will not deny it. And, without queſtion, he that builds his faith upon our Engliſh Tranſlation, goes upon a more prudent ground than any of theſe can, with reaſon, be pretended to be. What then can you alledge but that with you, rather than with us, Truth, and Faith, and Salvation, and All, relie upon fallible and uncertain grounds?

73. Ninthly. Your Rhemiſh and Doway Tranſlations are delivered to your Proſelytes, (ſuch, I mean, that are diſpenced with, for the reading of them,) for the direction of their Faith and Lives. And the ſame may be ſaid of your Tranſlations of the Bible into other National Languages, in reſpect of thoſe that are licenced to read them. This, I preſume, you will confeſs. And moreover, that theſe Tranſlations came not by inſpiration, but were the productions of humane Induſtry; and that, not Angels, but men were the Authors of them. Men, I ſay, meer men, ſubject to the ſame paſſions, and to the ſame poſſibility of erring with our Tranſlators. And then how does it not unavoidably follow, that in them which depend upon theſe Tranſlations for their direction, Faith, and Truth, and Salvation, and All, relies upon fallible and uncertain grounds?

74. Tenthly and laſtly, (to lay the axe to the root of the tree) the Helena which you ſo fight for, your vulgar Tranſlation, though ſome of you believe, or pretend to believe it to be in every part and particle of it, the pure and uncorrupted Word of God: yet others among you, and thoſe as good and zealous Catholicks as you, are not ſo confident hereof.

75. Firſt, for all thoſe who have made Tranſlations of the whole Bible or any part of it different many times in ſenſe from the Vulgar, as Lyranus, Cajetan, Pagnine, Arias, Eraſmus, Valla, Steuchus, and others, it is apparent, and even palpable, that they never dreamt of any abſolute perfection and authentical infallibility of the Vulgar Tranſlation. For, if they had, Why did they in many places reject it and differ from it?

76. Vega was preſent at the Council of Trent, when that Decree was made, which made the Vulgar Edition (then not extant any where in the world) authentical, and not to be rejected upon any pretence whatſoever. At the forming this Decree, Vega I ſay, was preſent, underſtood the mind of the Council, as well as any man, and profeſſes that he was inſtructed in it by the Preſident of it, the Cardinal S. Cruce. And yet he hath written that the Council in this Decree means to pronounce this Tranſlation free (not ſimply from all Error) but only from ſuch Errors, out of which any opinion pernitious to faith and manners might be collected. This, Andradius in his defence of that Council reports of Vega, and aſſents to it himſelf. Driedo, in his Book of the Tranſlation of holy Scripture, hath theſe words very pregnant and pertinent to the ſame purpoſe; The See Apoſtolick, hath approved or accepted Hierom's Edition, not as ſo wholly conſonant to the Original, and ſo entire, and pure, and reſtored in all things, that it may not be lawful for any man, either by comparing it with the Fountain to examine it, or, in ſome places, to doubt, Whether or no Hierom did underſtand the true ſenſe of the Scripture; but only, as an Edition to be preferred before all others then extant, and no where deviating from the Truth in the rules of faith and good life. Mariana, every where he is a moſt earneſt Advocate for the Vulgar Edition, yet acknowledges the imperfection of it in theſe words, The faults of the Vulgar Edition are not approved by the Decree of the Council of Trent, a multitude whereof we did collect from the variety of Copy. And again, We maintain that the Hebrew and Greek, were by no means rejected by the Trent-Fathers: And that the Latine Edition is indeed approved: yet not ſo, as if they did deny that ſome places might be tranſlated more plainly, ſome more properly; whereof it were eaſie to produce innumerable examples. And this he there profeſſes to have learnt of Laines the then General of the Society: who was a great part of that Council, preſent at all the Actions of it, and of very great authority in it.

Proleg. Bibl. Polyg. c. 2. §. 9.

77. To this ſo great authority he adds a reaſon of his opinion; which with all indifferent men will be of a far greater authority. If the Council (ſaith he) had purpoſed to approve an Edition in all reſpects, and to make it of equal authority and credit with the Fountains, certainly they ought with exact care firſt to have corrected the Errors of the Interpreter: which certainly they did not.

78. Laſtly,

78. Laſtly, Bellarmine himſelf, though he will not acknowledge any imperfection in the Vulgar Edition, yet he acknowledges that the caſe may, and does oft-times, ſo fall out, that it is impoſſible to diſcern which is the true reading of the Vulgar Edition, but only by recourſe unto the Originals and dependance upon them.

79. From all which it may evidently be collected, that though ſome of you flatter your ſelves with a vain imagination of the certain abſolute purity and perfection of your Vulgar Edition, yet the matter is not ſo certain, and ſo reſolved, but that the beſt learned men amongſt you are often at a ſtand, and very doubtful ſometimes whether your Vulgar Tranſlation be true, and ſometimes whether this or that be your Vulgar Tranſlation, and ſometimes undoubtedly reſolved that your Vulgar Tranſlation is no true Tranſlation, nor conſonant to the Original, as it was at firſt delivered. And what then can be alledged, but that out of your own grounds it may be inferred and inforced upon you, that not only in your Lay-men, but your Clergy-men and Scholars, Faith, and Truth, and Salvation, and All, depends upon fallible and uncertain grounds? And thus, by ten ſeveral retortions of this one Argument, I have endeavoured to ſhew you, How ill you have complied with your own advice, which was to take heed of urging Arguments that might be returned upon you. I ſhould now, by a direct Anſwer, ſhew, that it preſſeth not us at all: but I have in paſſing, done it already in the end of the ſecond retortion of this Argument, and thither I refer the Reader.

80. Whereas therefore you exhort them that will have aſſurance of true Scriptures, to fly to your Church for it: I deſire to know (if they ſhould follow your advice) how they ſhould be aſſured that your Church can give them any ſuch aſſurance; which hath been confeſſedly ſo negligent, as to ſuffer many whole Books of Scripture to be utterly loſt. Again, in thoſe that remain, confeſſedly ſo negligent as to ſuffer the Originals of theſe that remain to be corrupted. And laſtly, ſo careleſs of preſerving the integrity of the Copies of her Tranſlation, as to ſuffer infinite variety of Readings to come into them, without keeping any one perfect Copy, which might have been as the Standard, and Polycletus his Canon to correct the reſt by. So that which was the true reading, and which the falſe, it was utterly undiſcernable, but only by comparing them with the Originals, which alſo ſhe pretends to be corrupted.

81. But Luther himſelf, by unfortunate experience, was at length enforced to confeſs thus much, ſaying, If the World laſt longer, it will be again neceſſary to receive the Decrees of Councils, by reaſon of divers interpretations of Scripture which now reign.

82. And what if Luther having a Pope in his belly, (as he was wont to ſay that moſt men had,) and deſiring perhaps to have his own Interpretations paſs without examining, ſpake ſuch words in heat of Argument? Do you think it reaſonable that we ſhould ſubſcribe to Luther's divinations and angry ſpeeches? Will you oblige your ſelf to anſwer for all the aſſertions of your private Doctors? If not; Why do you trouble us with what Luther ſays, and what Calvin ſays? Yet this I ſay not, as if theſe words of Luther made any thing at all for your preſent purpoſe. For what if he feared, or pretended to fear, that the infallibility of Councils being rejected, ſome men would fall into greater Errors than were impoſed upon them by the Councils? Is this to confeſs that there is any preſent viſible Church, upon whoſe bare Authority we may infallibly receive the true Scriptures and the true ſenſe of them? Let the Reader judge. But, in my opinion, to fear a greater inconvenience may follow from the avoiding of the leſs, is not to confeſs that the leſs is none at all.

83. For Dr. Covel's commending your Tranſlation, What is it to the buſineſs in hand? Or how proves it the perfection of it, which is here conteſted, any more than St. Auguſtine's commending the Italian Tranſlation, argues the perfection of that, or that there was no neceſſity that St. Hierom ſhould correct it? Dr. Covel commends your Tranſlation, and ſo does the Biſhop of Chicheſter, and ſo does Dr. James, and ſo do I. But I commend it for a good Tranſlation, not for a perfect. Good may be good, and deserve commendations; and yet Better may be better. And though he says, that the then approved Translation of the Church of England, is that which cometh nearest the Vulgar, yet he does not say, that it agrees exactly with it. So that whereas you infer, that the Truth of your Translation must be the Rule to judge of the goodness of ours: this is but a vain flourish. For, to say of our Translations, That is the best which comes nearest the Vulgar, (and yet it is but one man that says so,) is not to say, it is therefore the best because it does so. For this may be true by accident, and yet the truth of our Translation no way depend upon the truth of yours. For, had that been their direction, they would not only have made a Translation that should come near to yours, but such a one which should exactly agree with it, and be a Translation of your Translation.

84. Ad 17. §. In this Division you charge us, with great uncertainty, concerning the true meaning of Scripture. Which hath been answered already, by saying, That, if you speak of plain places, (and in such all things necessary are contained,) we are sufficiently certain of the meaning of them, neither need they any Interpreter. If of obscure and difficult places, we confess we are uncertain of the sense of many of them. But then we say there is no necessity we should be certain. For, if God's will had been, we should have understood him more certainly, he would have spoken more plainly. And we say besides, that as we are uncertain, so are You too; which he that doubts of, let him read your Commentators upon the Bible, and observe their various and dissonant interpretations, and he shall in this point need no further satisfaction.

85. But seeing there are contentions among us, we are taught by nature and Scripture, and experience (so you tell us out of M. Hooker) to seek for the ending of them, by submitting unto some Judicial sentence, whereunto neither part may refuse to stand. This is very true. Neither should you need to persuade us to seek such a means of ending all our Controversies, if we could tell where to find it. But this we know, that none is fit to pronounce for all the world a judicial definitive obliging sentence in Controversies of Religion, but only such a man, or such a Society of Men, as is authorized thereto by God. And besides, we are able to demonstrate, that it hath not been the pleasure of God to give to any Man, or Society of Men, any such authority. And therefore, though we wish heartily that all Controversies were ended, as we do that all sin were abolisht, yet we have little hope of the one, or the other, till the World be ended. And in the mean while, think it best to content our selves with, and to persuade others unto, an Unity of Charity, and mutual Toleration; seeing God hath authorized no man to force all men to Unity of Opinion. Neither do we think it fit to argue thus, To us it seems convenient there should be one Judge of all Controversies for the whole world, therefore God hath appointed one: But more modest and more reasonable to collect thus, God hath appointed no such Judge of Controversies, therefore, though it seems to us convenient there should be one, yet it is not so: Or though it were convenient for us to have one, yet it hath pleased God (for Reasons best known to himself) not to allow us this convenience.

86. Dr. Field's words which follow, I confess, are somewhat more pressing: and if he had been infallible, and the words had not slipt unadvisedly from him, they were the best Argument in your Book. But yet it is evident out of his Book, and so acknowledged by some of your own, That he never thought of any one company of Christians invested with such authority from God, that all men were bound to receive their Decrees without examination, though they seem contrary to Scripture and Reason, which the Church of Rome requires. And therefore, if he have in his Preface strained too high in commendation of the Subject he writes of, (as Writers very often do in their Prefaces and Dedicatory Epistles) what is that to us? Besides, by all the Societies of the World, it is not impossible, nor very improbable, he might mean, all that are, or have been in the the world, and so include even the Primitive Church: and her Communion we shall embrace, her Direction we shall follow, her Judgment we shall rest in; if we believe the Scripture, endeavour to find the true sense of it, and live according to it.

87. Ad §. 18. That the true interpretation of the Scripture ought to be received from the Church, you need not prove; for it is very easily granted by them, who profess themselves very ready to receive all Truths, much more the true sense of Scripture, not only from the Church, but from any society of men, nay, from any man whatsoever.

88. That the Churches Interpretation of Scripture is always true, that is it which you would have said: and that in some sense may be also admitted, viz. if you speak of that Church (which before you spake of in the 14. §.) that is, of the Church of all Ages since the Apostles. Upon the Tradition of which Church you there told us, we were to receive the Scripture, and to believe it to be the Word of God. For there you teach us, that our Faith of Scripture depends on a Principle, which requires no other proof; And that, such is Tradition, which, from hand to hand, and age to age, bringing us up to the Times and Persons of the Apostles and our Saviour himself, cometh to be confirmed by all those Miracles, and other Arguments whereby they convinced their Doctrine to be true. Wherefore the Ancient Fathers avouch that we must receive the sacred Scripture upon the Tradition of this Church. The Tradition then of this Church you say must teach us what is Scripture: and we are willing to believe it. And now, if you make it good unto us, that the same Tradition down from the Apostles, hath delivered from age to age, and from hand to hand, any interpretation of any Scripture, we are ready to embrace that also. But now, if you will argue thus: The Church in one sense tells us what is Scripture, and we believe it; therefore, if the Church, taken in another sense, tell us, This or that is the meaning of the Scripture, we are to believe that also; this is too transparent Sophistry, to take any but those that are willing to be taken.

89. If there be any Traditive Interpretation of Scripture, produce it, and prove it to be so; and we embrace it. But the Tradition of all Ages is one thing; and the Authority of the present Church, much more of the Roman Church, which is but a Part, and a corrupted Part, of the Catholick Church, is another. And therefore, though we are ready to receive both Scripture, and the sense of Scripture upon the Authority of Original Tradition, yet we receive neither the one, nor the other, upon the Authority of your Church.

90. First for the Scripture, How can we receive them upon the Authority of your Church, who hold now those Books to be Canonical, which formerly you rejected from the Canon? I instance in the Book of Macchabees, and the Epistle to the Hebrews. The first of these you held not to be Canonical in St. Gregorie's time, or else he was no member of your Church; for it is apparent (a) He held otherwise. The second you rejected from the Canon in St. Hierom's time, as it is evident out of (b) many places of his Works.

91. If you say (which is all you can say) that Hierom spake this of the particular Roman Church, not of the Roman Catholick Church; I answer, there was none such in his time, None that was called so. Secondly, What he spake of the Roman Church, must be true of all other Churches, if your Doctrine of the necessity of the Conformity of all other Churches to that Church, were then Catholick Doctrine. Now then chuse whether you will, Either that the particular Roman Church was not then believed to be the Mistress of all other Churches notwithstanding, Ad hanc Ecclesiam, necesse est omnem convenire Ecclesiam, hoc est; omnes qui sunt undique fideles; Which Cardinal Perron, and his Translatress so often translates false: Or, if you say she was, you will run into a greater inconvenience, and be forced to say, that all the Churches of that time rejected from the Canon, the Epistle to the Hebrews, together with the Roman

(a) See Greg. Mor. 19. c. 13.
(b) Thus he testifies. Com. in Isa. c. 6. in these words: Unde & Paulus Apost. in Epist. ad Heb. (quam Latina consuetudo non recipit.) And again in c. 8. in these. In Epistolâ ad Hebræos scribitur, (licet eam Latina Consuetudo non recipiat,) &c.

Church. And conſequently, that the Catholick Church may err in rejecting from the Canon, Scriptures truly Canonical.

92. Secondly, How can we receive the Scripture upon the Authority of the Roman Church, which hath delivered at ſeveral times Scriptures in many places different and repugnant, for Authentical and Canonical? Which is moſt evident out of the place of Malachy, which is ſo quoted for the Sacrifice of the Maſs, that either all the ancient Fathers had falſe Bibles, or yours is falſe. Moſt evident likewiſe from the comparing of the ſtory of Jacob in Geneſis, with that which is cited out of it, in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, according to the vulgar Edition. But above all, to any one who ſhall compare the Bibles of Sixtus and Clement, ſo evident, that the wit of man cannot diſguiſe it.

93. And thus you ſee what reaſon we have to believe your Antecedent, That your Church it is which muſt declare, what Books be true Scripture. Now, for the conſequence, that certainly is as liable to exception as the Antecedent. For, if it were true, that God had promiſed to aſſiſt you, for the delivering of true Scripture, would this oblige Him, or would it follow from hence that He had obliged himſelf, to teach you, not only ſufficiently, but effectually and irreſiſtibly the true ſenſe of Scripture? God is not defective in things neceſſary: neither will he leave himſelf without witneſs, nor the World without means of knowing his Will and doing it. And therefore it was neceſſary that by his Providence he ſhould preſerve the Scripture from any undiſcernable corruption in thoſe things which he would have known: otherwiſe it is apparent, it had not been his Will, that theſe things ſhould be known, the only means of continuing the knowledge of them being periſhed. But now neither is God laviſh in ſuperfluities, and therefore having given us means, ſufficient for our direction, and power ſufficient to make uſe of theſe means, he will not conſtrain or neceſſitate us to make uſe of theſe means. For that were to croſs the end of our Creation, which was to be glorified by our free obedience: whereas Neceſſity and Freedom cannot ſtand together. That were to reverſe the Law which he hath preſcribed to himſelf in his dealing with Man; and that is, to ſet life and death before him, and to leave him in the hands of his own Counſel. God gave the Wiſemen a Star to lead them to Chriſt, but he did not neceſſitate them to follow the guidance of this Star: that was left to their liberty. God gave the Children of Iſrael a Fire to lead them by night, and a Pillar of Cloud by day; but he conſtrained no man to follow them: that was left to their liberty. So he gives the Church the Scripture; which in thoſe things which are to be believed or done, are plain and eaſie to be followed, like the Wiſemens Star. Now, that which he deſires of us on our part, is, the Obedience of Faith, and love of the Truth, and deſire to find the true ſenſe of it, and induſtry in ſearching it, and humility in following, and conſtancy in profeſſing it: all which, if he ſhould work in us by an abſolute irreſiſtible neceſſity, he could no more require of us as our duty, than he can of the Sun to ſhine, of the Sea to ebb and flow, and of all other Creatures to do thoſe things which by meer neceſſity they muſt do, and cannot chuſe. Beſides, What an impudence is it to pretend that your Church is infallibly directed concerning the true meaning of the Scripture, whereas there are thouſands of places of Scripture, which you do not pretend certainly to underſtand, and about the Interpretation whereof, your own Doctors differ among themſelves? If your Church be infallibly directed concerning the true meaning of Scripture, why do not your Doctors follow her infallible direction? And, if they do, How comes ſuch difference among them in their Interpretations?

94. Again, Why does your Church thus put her Candle under a Buſhel, and keep her Talent of interpreting Scripture infallibly, thus long wrapt up in Napkins? Why ſets ſhe not forth Infallible Commentaries or Expoſitions upon all the Bible? Is it, becauſe this would not be profitable for Chriſtians, that Scripture ſhould be interpreted? It is blaſphemous to ſay ſo. The Scripture it ſelf ſelf tells us, All Scripture is profitable. And the Scripture is not ſo much the Words as the Senſe. And, if it be not profitable, Why does ſhe imploy particular Doctors to interpret Scriptures fallibly? unleſs we muſt think that fallible interpretations of Scripture are profitable, and infallible interpretations would not be ſo.

95. If you ſay, The Holy Ghoſt, which aſſiſts the Church in interpreting, will move the Church to interpret when he ſhall think fit, and that the Church will do it when the Holy Ghoſt ſhall move her to do it. I demand, Whether the Holy Ghoſt's moving of the Church to ſuch works as theſe, be reſiſtible by the Church, or irreſiſtible. If reſiſtible, then the Holy Ghoſt may move, and the Church may not be moved. As certainly the Holy Ghoſt doth always move to an action, when he ſhews us plainly, that it would be for the good of men, and honour of God: As he that hath any ſenſe will acknowledge that an infallible Expoſition of Scripture could not but be; and there is no conceivable reaſon, Why ſuch a work ſhould be put off a day, but only becauſe you are conſcious to your ſelves, you cannot do it, and therefore make excuſes. But if the moving of the Holy Ghoſt be irreſiſtible, and you are not yet ſo moved to go about this work; then I confeſs you are excuſed. But then I would know, Whether thoſe Popes, which ſo long deferred the calling of a Council for the Reformation of your Church, at length pretended to be effected by the Council of Trent, whether they may excuſe themſelves, for that they were not moved by the Holy Ghoſt to do it? I would know likewiſe, as this motion is irreſiſtible when it comes, ſo whether it be ſo ſimply neceſſary to the moving of your Church to any ſuch publick Action, that it cannot poſſibly move without it? That is, Whether the Pope now could not, if he would, ſeat himſelf in Cathedra, and fall to writing Expoſitions upon the Bible for the direction of Chriſtians to the true ſenſe of it? If you ſay, He cannot, you will make your ſelf ridiculous; If he can, then I would know, Whether he ſhould be infallibly directed in theſe Expoſitions, or no; If he ſhould, then what need he to ſtay for irreſiſtible motion? Why does he not go about this noble work preſently? If he ſhould not, How ſhall we know that the calling of the Council of Trent was not upon his own voluntary motion, or upon humane importunity and ſuggeſtion, and not upon the motion of the Holy Ghoſt? And conſequently, How ſhall we know whether he were aſſiſtant to it or no, ſeeing He aſſiſts none but what He himſelf moves to? And whether He did move the Pope to call this Council, is a ſecret thing, which we cannot poſſibly know, nor perhaps the Pope himſelf.

96. If you ſay, your meaning is only, That the Church ſhall be infallibly guarded from giving any falſe ſenſe of any Scripture, and not infallibly aſſiſted poſitively to give the true ſenſe of all Scripture: I put to you your own Queſtion, Why ſhould we believe the Holy Ghoſt will ſtay there? Or, Why may we not as well think he will ſtay at the firſt thing, that is, in teaching the Church what Books be true Scripture? For, if the Holy Ghoſt's aſſiſtance be promiſed to all things profitable, then will he be with them infallibly, not only to guard them from all Errors, but to guide them to all profitable truths, ſuch as the true ſenſes of all Scripture would be. Neither could he ſtay there, but defend them irreſiſtibly from all Vices; Nor there neither, but infuſe into them irreſiſtibly all Vertues: for all theſe things would be much for the benefit of Chriſtians. If you ſay, he cannot do this without taking away their free-will in living; I ſay, neither can he neceſſitate men to believe aright, without taking away their free-will in believing, and in profeſſing their belief.

97. To the place of St. Auſtin; I anſwer, That, not the Authority of the preſent Church, much leſs of a Part of it (as the Roman Church is) was that which alone moved St. Auſtin to believe the Goſpel, but the perpetual Tradition of the Church of all Ages. Which you your ſelf have taught us to be the only Principle by which the Scripture is proved, and which it ſelf needs no proof; and to which you have referred this very Saying of St. Auſtin, Ego verò Evangelio non crederem, niſi, &c. Chap. 2. §. 14. And in the next place, which you cite out of his Book De Util. Cred. c. 14, he ſhews, That his motives to believe, were Fame, Celebrity, Conſent, Antiquity. And ſeeing this Tradition, this Conſent, this Antiquity did as fully and powerfully move him not to believe Manichæus, as to believe the Goſpel, (the Chriſtian Tradition being as full againſt Manichæus, as it was for the Goſpel) therefore he did well to conclude upon theſe grounds that he had as much reaſon to diſ-believe Manichæus, as to believe the Goſpel. Now, if you can truly ſay, that the ſame Fame, Celebrity, Conſent, Antiquity, that the ſame Univerſal and Original Tradition, lies againſt Luther and Calvin, as did againſt Manichæus, you may do well to apply the Argument againſt them; otherwiſe it will be to little purpoſe to ſubſtitute their names inſtead of Manichæus, unleſs you can ſhew the thing agrees to them as well as him.

you

98. If you ſay that St. Auſtin ſpeaks here of the authority of the preſent Church, abſtracted from conſent with the Ancient, and therefore you, ſeeing you have the preſent Church on your ſide againſt Luther and Calvin, as St. Auſtin againſt Manichæus, may urge the ſame words againſt them which St. Auſtin did againſt him.

99. I anſwer, Firſt, that it is a vain preſumption of yours that the Catholick Church is of your ſide. Secondly, that, if St. Auſtin ſpeak here of that preſent Church, which moved him to believe the Goſpel, without conſideration of the Antiquity of it, and its both Perſonal and Doctrinal Succeſſion from the Apoſtles; his Argument will be like a Buskin that will ſerve any Leg. It will ſerve to keep an Arrian, or a Grecian, from being a Roman Catholick, as well as a Catholick from being an Arrian, or a Grecian: In as much as the Arrians and Grecians did pretend to the title of Catholicks, and the Church, as much as the Papiſts now do. If then you ſhould have come to an ancient Goth or Vandal, whom the Arrians converted to Chriſtianity, and ſhould have moved him to your Religion; might he not ſay the very ſame words to you as St. Auſtin to the Manichæans? I would not believe the Goſpel, unleſs the Authority of the Church did move me. Them therefore whom I obeyed, ſaying, Believe the Goſpel, why ſhould I not obey ſaying to me, Do not believe the Homo-ouſians? Chuſe what thou pleaſeſt: If thou ſhalt ſay, Believe the Arrians, they warn me not to give any credit to you. If therefore I believe them, I cannot believe thee. If thou ſay, Do not believe the Arrians, thou ſhalt not do well to force me to the faith of the Homo-ouſians becauſe by the preaching of the Arrians, I believed the Goſpel it ſelf. If you ſay, You did well to believe them, commending the Goſpel, but you did not well to believe them, diſcommending the Homo-ouſians: Doſt thou think me ſo very fooliſh, that, without any reaſon at all, I ſhould believe what thou wilt, and not believe what thou wilt not? It were eaſie to put theſe words into the mouth of a Grecian, Abyſine, Georgian, or any other of any Religion. And I pray bethink your ſelves, What you would ſay to ſuch a one in ſuch a caſe, and imagine that we ſay the very ſame to you.

100. Whereas you ask, Whether Proteſtants do not perfectly reſemble thoſe men to whom St. Auſtin ſpake, when they will have men to believe the Roman Church delivering Scripture, but not to believe her condemning Luther? I demand again, Whether you be well in your wits to ſay, that Proteſtants would have men believe the Roman Church delivering Scripture, whereas they accuſe her to deliver many Books for Scripture which are not ſo? And do not bid men to receive any Book which ſhe delivers, for that reaſon, becauſe ſhe delivers it? And, if you meant only, Proteſtants will have men to believe ſome Books to be Scripture which the Roman Church delivers for ſuch, may not we then ask as you do, Do not Papiſts perfectly reſemble theſe men, which will have men believe the Church of England delivering Scripture, but not to believe her condemning the Church of Rome?

101. And whereas you ſay, St. Auſtin may ſeem to have ſpoken Prophetically againſt Proteſtants, when he ſaid, Why ſhould I not moſt diligently enquire what Chriſt commanded commanded of them before all others, by whoſe Authority I was moved to believe, that Chriſt commanded any good thing? I anſwer, Until you can ſhew that Proteſtants believe that Chriſt commanded any good thing, that is, That they believe the Truth of Chriſtian Religion upon the Authority of the Church of Rome, this place muſt be wholly impertinent to your purpoſe; which is to make Proteſtants believe your Church to be the infallible Expounder of Scriptures and judge of Controverſies, Nay rather, is it not directly againſt your purpoſe? For why may not a Member of the Church of England, who received his Baptiſm, Education, and Faith from the Miniſtery of this Church, ſay juſt ſo to you as St. Auſtin here to the Manichees? Why ſhould I not moſt diligently enquire, what Chriſt commanded of them (the Church of England) before all others, by whoſe Authority I was moved to believe, that Chriſt commanded any good thing? Can you, F. or K. or whoſoever you are, better declare to me what he ſaid, whom I would not have thought to have been, or to be, if the belief thereof had been recommended by you to me? This therefore (that Chriſt Jeſus did thoſe Miracles, and taught that Doctrine which is contained evidently in the undoubted Books of the New Teſtament) I believed by Fame, ſtrengthened with Celebrity, and conſent, (even of thoſe which in other things are at infinite variance one with another,) and laſtly, by Antiquity (which gives an univerſal and a conſtant atteſtation to them,) But every one may ſee that you, (ſo few in compariſon of all thoſe upon whoſe conſent we ground our belief of Scripture,) ſo turbulent, (that you damn all to the fire, and to Hell, that any way differ from you; that you profeſs it is lawful for you, to uſe violence and power whenſoever you can have it, for the planting of your own Doctrine, and the extirpation of the contrary;) Laſtly, ſo new in many of your Doctrines, as in the lawfulneſs and expedience of debarring the Laity the Sacramental Cup; the lawfulneſs and expedience of your Latine Service, Tranſubſtantiation, Indulgences, Purgatory, the Pope's Infallibility, his Authority over Kings, &c. So new, I ſay in compariſon of the undoubted Books of Scripture, which evidently containeth, or rather is our Religion, and the ſole, and adequate object of our Faith: I ſay, every one may ſee that you, ſo few, ſo turbulent, ſo new, can produce nothing deſerving Authority (with wiſe and conſiderate men.) What madneſs is this? Believe then the conſent of Chriſtians, which are now, and have been ever ſince Chriſt in the world, that we ought to believe Chriſt; but learn of us what Chriſt ſaid, which contradict and damn all other parts of Chriſtendom. Why, I beſeech you? Surely, if they were not at all, and could not teach me any thing, I would more eaſily perſuade my ſelf, that I were not to believe in Chriſt, than that I ſhould learn any thing concerning him, from any other, than them by whom I believed him: at leaſt, than that I ſhould learn what his Religion was from you, who have wronged ſo exceedingly his Miracles and his Doctrine, by forging ſo evidently ſo many falſe Miracles for the Confirmation of your new Doctrine; which might give us juſt occaſion had we no other aſſurance of them but your Authority, to ſuſpect the true ones. Who, with forging ſo many falſe Stories, and falſe Authors, have taken a fair way to make the faith of all Stories queſtionable, if we had no other ground for our Belief of them but your Authority; who have brought in Doctrines plainly and directly contrary to that which you confeſs to be the Word of Chriſt, and which, for the moſt part, make either for the honour or profit of the Teachers of them: which (if there were no difference between the Chriſtian and the Roman Church) would be very apt to make ſuſpicious men believe that Chriſtian Religion was a humane invention, taught by ſome cunning Impoſtors, only to make themſelves rich and powerful; who make a profeſſion of corrupting all ſorts of Authors: a ready courſe to make it juſtly queſtionable whether any remain uncorrupted. For, if you take this Authority upon you, upon the ſix Ages laſt paſt; how ſhall we know, that the Church of that time, did not uſurp the ſame Authority upon upon the Authors of the six last Ages before them, and so upwards, until we come to Christ himself? Whose questioned Doctrines, none of them came from the Fountain of Apostolick Tradition, but have insinuated themselves into the Streams, by little and little; some in one age, and some in another; some more anciently, some more lately; and some yet are Embrio's, yet hatching, and in the shell; as the Pope's infallibility, the blessed Virgin's immaculate Conception, the Pope's power over the Temporalties of Kings, the Doctrine of Predetermination, &c. all which yet are, or in time may be, imposed upon Christians under the Title of Original and Apostolick Tradition; and that with that necessity, that they are told, they were as good believe nothing at all, as not believe these things to have come from the Apostles, which they know to have been brought in but yesterday, which whether it be not a ready and likely way to make men conclude thus with themselves — I am told, that I were as good believe nothing at all, as believe some points which the Church teacheth me, and not others: and some things which she teacheth to be Ancient and Certain, I plainly see to be New and False; therefore I will believe nothing at all. Whether, I say, the foresaid grounds be not a ready and likely way to make men conclude thus; and whether this Conclusion be not too often made in Italy, and Spain, and France, and in England too, I leave it to the judgment of those that have wisdom and experience. Seeing therefore the Roman Church is so far from being a sufficient Foundation for our Belief in Christ, that it is in sundry regards a dangerous temptation against it; why should I not much rather conclude, seeing we receive not the knowledge of Christ and Scriptures from the Church of Rome, neither from her must we take his Doctrine, or the Interpretation of Scripture.

102. Ad §. 19. In this number, this Argument is contained. The Judge of Controversies ought to be intelligible to learned and unlearned; The Scripture is not so, and the Church is so; Therefore the Church is the Judge, and not the Scripture.

103. To this I answer: As to be understandable is a condition requisite to a Judge, so is not that alone sufficient to make a Judge; otherwise you might make your self Judge of Controversies, by arguing, The Scripture is not intelligible by all, but I am; therefore I am Judge of Controversies. If you say, Your intent was to conclude against the Scripture, and not for the Church: I demand why then, but to delude the simple with Sophistry, did you say in the close of this §, Such is the Church, and the Scripture is not such? but that you would leave it to them, to infer in the end, (which indeed was more than you undertook in the beginning) Therefore the Church is Judge, and the Scripture not. I say Secondly, that you still run upon a false supposition: that God hath appointed some Judge of all Controversies that may happen among Christians, about the sense of obscure Texts of Scripture: whereas he hath left every one to his liberty herein, in those words of St. Paul, Quisque abundet in sensu suo, &c. I say thirdly, Whereas some Protestants make the Scripture Judge of Controversies, that they have the Authority of Fathers to warrant their manner of speaking: as of * Optatus.

* Cont. Parmen. l. 5. in Princ.

104. But speaking truly and properly, the Scripture is not a Judge, nor cannot be, but only a sufficient Rule, for those to judge by, that believe it to be the Word of God (as the Church of England, and the Church of Rome both do,) what they are to believe, and what they are not to believe. I say sufficiently perfect, and sufficiently intelligible, in things necessary, to all that have understanding, whether they be learned or unlearned. And my reason hereof is convincing and Demonstrative; because nothing is necessary to be believed, but what is plainly revealed. For to say, that when a place of Scripture, by reason of ambiguous terms lies indifferent between divers senses, whereof one is true, and the other is false, that God obliges men under pain of damnation, not to mistake through error and humane frailty, is to make God a Tyrant; and to say that he requires us certainly to attain that end, for the attaining whereof we have have no certain means: which is to say, that, like Pharaoh, he gives no straw, and requires brick; that he reaps where he sows not; that he gathers where he strews not; that he will not be pleased with our utmost endeavours to please him, without full, and exact, and never-failing performance; that his will is, we should do what he knows we cannot do; that he will not accept of us according to that which we have, but requireth of us what we have not. Which, whether it can consist with his Goodness, with his Wisdom, and with his Word, I leave it to honest men to judge. If I should send a servant to Paris, or Rome, or Jerusalem, and he using his utmost diligence not to mistake his way, yet notwithstanding, meeting often with such places where the Road is divided into several ways, whereof every one is as likely to be true, and as likely to be false as any other, should at length mistake and go out of the way, Would not any man say that I were an impotent, foolish and unjust Master, if I should be offended with him for doing so? And shall we not tremble to impute that to God, which we would take in foul scorn if it were imputed to our selves? Certainly, I, for my part, fear I should not love God, if I should think so strangely of him.

105. Again, when you say, That unlearned and ignorant men cannot understand Scripture, I would desire you to come out of the Clouds, and tell us what you mean: Whether, that they cannot understand all Scripture, or that they cannot understand any Scripture, or that they cannot understand so much as is sufficient for their direction to heaven. If the first, I believe the Learned are in the same case. If the second, Every man's experience will confute you: for, Who is there that is not capable of a sufficient understanding of the Story, the Precepts, the Promises, and the Threats of the Gospel? If the third, that they may understand something, but not enough for their Salvations; I ask you, first, Why then doth St. Paul say to Timothy, The Scriptures are able to make him wise unto Salvation? Why doth St. Austin say, Ea quæ manifestè posita sunt in sacris Scripturis, omnia continent quæ pertinent ad Fidem, Moresque vivendi? Why does every one of the four Evangelists intitle their Book The Gospel, if any necessary and essential part of the Gospel were left out of it? Can we imagine, that either they omitted something necessary, out of ignorance not knowing it to be necessary? Or, knowing it to be so, maliciously concealed it? Or, out of negligence, did the work they have undertaken by halfs? If none of these can without Blasphemy be imputed to them, considering they were assisted by the Holy Ghost in this work, then certainly it most evidently follows, that every one of them writ the whole Gospel of Christ; I mean, all the essential and necessary parts of it. So that if we had no other Book of Scripture, but one of them alone, we should not want any thing necessary to Salvation. And what one of them hath more than another, it is only profitable and not necessary. Necessary indeed to be believed, because revealed; but not therefore revealed, because necessary to be believed.

106. Neither did they write only for the Learned, but for all men. This being one special means of the preaching of the Gospel, which was commanded to be preached, not only to learned men, but to all men. And therefore, unless we will imagine the Holy Ghost and them, to have been wilfully wanting to their own desire and purpose, we must conceive, that they intended to speak plain, even to the capacity of the simplest; at least, touching all things necessary to be published by them, and believed by us.

107. And whereas you pretend it is so easie, and obvious both for the learned and the ignorant, both to know, Which is the Church, and what are the Decrees of the Church, and what is the sense of the Decrees: I say, this is a vain pretence.

108. For first, How shall an unlearned man whom you have supposed now ignorant of Scripture, how shall he know which of all the Societies of Christians is indeed the Church? You will say perhaps, He must examine them by the notes of the Church, which are, perpetual Visibility, Succession, Conformity with the Ancient Church, &c. But how shall he know, first, that these are the notes of the Church unless by Scripture, which, you say, he understands not? You may say perhaps, he may be told so. But seeing men may deceive, and be deceived, and their words are no demonstrations, How shall he be assured that what they say is true? So that at the first he meets with an impregnable difficulty, and cannot know the Church but by such notes, which whether they be the notes of the Church he cannot possibly know. But let us suppose this Isthmus digged through, and that he is assured, These are the notes of the true Church: How can he possibly be a competent Judge, which society of Christians hath title to these notes, and which hath not? Seeing this trial of necessity requires a great sufficiency of knowledge of the monuments of Christian Antiquity, which no unlearned man can have, because he that hath it canot be unlearned. As for example, how shall he possibly be able to know whether the Church of Rome hath had a perpetual Succession of Visible Professors, which held always the same Doctrine which they now hold, without holding any thing to the contrary; unless he hath first examined, what was the Doctrine of the Church in the first Age, what in the second, and so forth? And whether this be not a more difficult work, than to stay at the first Age, and to examine the Church by the conformity of her Doctrine with the Doctrine of the first Age, every man of ordinary understanding may judge.

108. Let us imagine him advanc'd a step farther, and to know which is the Church: how shall he know what that Church hath decreed, seeing the Church hath not been so carefull in keeping her decrees, but that many are lost, and many corrupted? Besides, when even the Learned among you are not agreed concerning divers things, whether they be De fide, or not, how shall the unlearned do? Then for the sense of the Decrees, how can he be more capable of the understanding of them, than of plain Texts of Scripture, which you will not suffer him to understand? Especially, seeing the Decrees of divers Popes and Councils are conceived so obscurely, that the Learned cannot agree about the sense of them. And then they are written all in such Languages which the ignorant understand not, and therefore must of necessity relie herein, upon the uncertain and fallible authority of some particular men, who inform them that there is such a Decree. And if the Decrees were translated into Vulgar Languages, why the Translators should not be as infallible as you say the Translators of Scripture are, who can possibly imagine?

109. Lastly, how shall an unlearned man, or indeed any man, be assured of the certainty of that Decree, the certainty whereof depends upon suppositions, which are impossible to be known whether they be true or no? For, it is not the Decree of a Council, unless it be confirmed by a true Pope. Now the Pope cannot be a true Pope, if he came in by Simony: which whether he did or no, who can answer me? He cannot be a true Pope unless he were baptized, and baptized he was not, unless the Minister had due Intention. So likewise he cannot be a true Pope, unless he were rightly ordained Priest, and that again depends upon the Ordainer's secred Intention, and also upon his having the Episcopal Character. All which things, as I have formerly proved, depend upon so many uncertain suppositions, that no humane judgment can possibly be resolved in them. I conclude therefore, that not the learnedst man amongst you all, no not the Pope himself, can, according to the grounds you go upon, have any certainty, that any Decree of any Council is good and valid, and consequently, not any assurance that it is indeed the Decree of a Council.

110. Ad §. 20. If by a private Spirit, you mean, a particular persuasion that a Doctrine is true, which some pretend, but cannot prove to come from the Spirit of God: I say, to refer Controversies to Scripture, is not to refer them to this kind of private Spirit. For is there not a manifest difference between saying, The Spirit of God tells me that this is the meaning of such a Text (which no man can possibly know to be true, it being a secret thing) and between saying, These

These and these reasons I have to shew, that this or that is true Doctrine, or that this or that is the meaning of such a Scripture? Reason being a Publick and certain thing, and exposed to all mens trial and examination. But now, if by private Spirit you understand every mans particular Reason, then your first and second inconvenience will presently be reduced to one, and shortly to none at all.

111. Ad §. 20. And does not also giving the office of Judicature to the Church, come to confer it upon every particular man? For, before any man believes the Church infallible, must he not have reason to induce him to believe it to be so? And, must he not judge of those reasons, whether they be indeed good and firm, or captious and sophistical? Or, would you have all men believe all your Doctrine upon the Churches Infallibility, and the Churches Infallibility they know not why?

112. Secondly, supposing they are to be guided by the Church, they must use their own particular reason to find out which is the Church. And to that purpose, you your selves give a great many notes, which you pretend first to be Certain notes of the Church, and then to be Peculiar to your Church, and agreeable to none else; but you do not so much as pretend, that either of those pretences is evident of it self, and therefore you go about to prove them both by reasons; and those reasons, I hope, every particular man is to judge of, whether they do indeed conclude and convince that which they are alledged for: that is, that these marks are indeed certain notes of the Church; and then, that your Church hath them, and no other.

113. One of these notes, indeed the only note of a true and uncorrupted Church, is Conformity with Antiquity; I mean, the most ancient Church of all, that is the Primitive and Apostolick. Now, how is it possible any man should examine your Church by this note, but he must by his own particular judgment, find out what was the Doctrine of the Primitive Church, & what is the Doctrine of the present Church, and be able to answer all these Arguments which are brought to prove repugnance between them? otherwise, he shall but pretend to make use of this note for the finding the true Church, but indeed make no use of it, but receive the Church at a venture, as the most of you do; not one in a hundred being able to give any tolerable reason for it. So that instead of reducing them to particular reasons, you reduce them to none at all, but to chance, and passion, and prejudice, and such other ways; which, if they lead one to the truth, they lead hundreds, nay, thousands to falshood. But it is a pretty thing to consider, how these men can blow hot and cold out of the same mouth to serve several purposes. Is there hope of gaining a Proselyte? Then they will tell you, God hath given every man Reason to follow; and if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the Ditch. That it is no good reason for a mans Religion, that he was born and brought up in it: For then a Turk should have as much reason to be a Turk, as a Christian to be a Christian. That every man hath a judgment of Diseretion; which if they will make use of, they shall easily find, that the true Church hath always such and such marks, and that their Church hath them, and no others but theirs. But then if any of theirs be perswaded to a sincere and sufficient trial of their Church, even by their own notes of it, and to try whether they be indeed so conformable to Antiquity as they pretend, then their note is changed. You must not use your own reason, nor your judgment, but refer all to the Church, and believe her to be conformable to Antiquity, though they have no reason for it, nay, though they have evident reason to the contrary. For my part, I am certain that God hath given us our Reason, to discern between Truth and Falshood, and he that makes not this use of it, but believes things he knows not why; I say, it is by chance that he believes the truth, and not by choice: and that I cannot but fear, that God will not accept of this Sacrifice of fools.

114. But you that would not have men follow their Reason, what would you have them follow? their Passion? Or pluck out their eyes and go blindfold?

No, you say, you would have them follow Authority. On God's name let them; we also would have them follow Authority, for it is upon the Authority of Universal Tradition, that we would have them believe Scripture. But then as for the Authority which you would have them follow, you will let them see reason why they should follow it. And is not this to go a little about? To leave Reason for a short turn, and then to come to it again; and to do that which you condemn in others? It being indeed a plain impossibility for any man to submit his reason but to Reason: for he that doth it to Authority, must of necessity think himself to have greater reason to believe that Authority. Therefore the confession cited by Breerely you need not think to have been extorted from Luther and the rest. It came very freely from them, and what they say, you practise as much as they.

115. And whereas you say that a Protestant admits of Fathers, Councils, Church, as far as they agree with Scripture, which upon the matter is himself: I say, you admit neither of them, nor the Scripture it self, but only so far as it agrees with your Church: and your Church you admit, because you think you have reason to do so: so that by you as well as by Protestants all is finally resolved into your own reason.

116. Nor do Hereticks only, but Romish Catholicks also, set up as many Judges, as there are men and women in the Christian World. For do not your men and women judge your Religion to be true, before they believe it, as well as the men and women of other Religions? Oh but, you say, They receive it, not because they think it agreeable to Scripture, but because the Church tells them so. But then, I hope, they believe the Church, because their own reason tells them they are to do so. So that the difference between a Papist and a Protestant is this, not that the one judges, and the other does not judge, but that the one judges his guide to be infallible, the other his way to be manifest. This same pernicious Doctrine is taught by Brentius, Zanchius, Cartwright, and others. It is so, in very deed: But it is taught also by some others, whom you little think of. It is taught by St. Paul, where he says, Try all things, hold fast that which is good. It is taught by St. John, in these words, Believe not every Spirit, but try the Spirits whether they be of God or no. It is taught by St. Peter, in these, Be ye ready to render a reason of the hope that is in you. Lastly, this very pernicious Doctrine is taught by our Saviour, in these words, If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch. And, Why of your selves judge you not what is right? All which speeches, if they do not advise men to make use of their Reason for the choice of their Religion, I must confess my self to understand nothing. Lastly, not to be infinite, it is taught by Mr. Knot himself, not in one page only, or chapter of his Book, but all his Book over; the very writing and publishing whereof, supposeth this for certain, that the Readers are to be Judges, whether his Reasons which he brings, be strong and convincing, of which sort we have hitherto met with none: or else captious, or impertinences as indifferent men shall (as I suppose) have cause to judge them.

117. But you demand, What good Statesmen would they be, who should ideate, or fancy such a Common-wealth, as these men have framed to themselves a Church? Truly if this be all the fault they have, that they say, Every man is to use his own judgement in the choice of his Religion, and not to believe this or that sense of Scripture, upon the bare Authority of any learned man or men, when he conceives he hath reasons to the contrary, which are of more weight than their Authority: I know no reason but, notwithstanding all this, they might be as good Statesmen as any of the Society. But what hath this to do with Common-wealths, where men are bound only to external obedience unto the Laws and Judgment of Courts, but not to an internal approbation of them, no nor to conceal their Judgment of them, if they disapprove them? As if I conceived I had reason to mislike the Law of punishing simple theft with death, as Sir Thomas Moore did, I might profess lawfully my judgment; and represent my Reasons to the King or Common-wealth in a Parliament, as Sir Thomas Moore did, without committing any fault, or fearing any punishment.

118. To

118. To the place of St. Austin, wherewith this Paragraph is concluded, I shall need give no other Reply, but only to desire you to speak like an honest man, and to say, Whether it be all one for a man, to allow and disallow in every Scripture what he pleases, which is, either to dash out of Scripture such Texts or such Chapters, because they cross his opinion? or to say (which is worse,) Though they be Scripture, they are not true? Whether, I say, for a man thus to allow and disallow in Scripture what he pleases, be all one, and no greater fault, than to allow that sense of Scripture which he conceives to be true and genuine, and deduced out of the words, and to disallow the contrary? For Gods sake, Sir, tell me plainly; In those Texts of Scripture, which you alledge for the Infallibility of your Church, do you not allow what sense you think true, and disallow the contrary? And do not you this, by the direction of your private reason? If you do, why do you condemn it in others; If you do not, I pray you tell me what direction you follow? or whether you follow none at all? If none at all, this is like drawing Lots, or throwing the Dice for the choice of a Religion. If any other, I beseech you tell me what it is. Perhaps you will say, the Churches Authority; and that will be to dance finely in a round, thus, To believe the Churches infallible Authority, because the Scriptures avouch it; and to believe that Scriptures say and mean so, because they are so expounded by the Church. Is not this for a Father to beget his Son, and the Son to beget his Father? For a foundation to support the house, and the house to support the foundation? Would not Campian have cried out at it, Ecce quos gyros, quos Maeandros? And to what end was this going about, when you might as well at first have concluded the Church infallible, because she says so; as thus to put in Scripture for a meer stale, and to say the Church is infallible because the Scripture says so, and the Scripture means so, because the Church says so, which is infallible? Is it not most evident therefore to every intelligent man, that you are enforced of necessity to do that your self, which so tragically you declaim against in others? The Church, you say, is infallible; I am very doubtful of it: How shall I know it? The Scripture, you say, affirms it, as in the 59. of Esay, My Spirit that is in thee, &c. Well, I confess I find there these words: but I am still doubtful, whether they be spoken of the Church of Christ: and if they be, whether they mean as you pretend. You say, the Church says so, which is infallible. Yea, but that is the Question; and therefore not to be begg'd but proved. Neither is it so evident as to need no proof: otherwise, why brought you this Text to prove it? Nor is it of such a strange quality, above all other Propositions, as to be able to prove it self. What then remains but that you say, Reasons drawn out of the Circumstances of the Text, will evince that this is the sense of it. Perhaps they will. But reasons cannot convince me, unless I judge of them by my Reason; and, for every man or woman to relie on that, in the choice of their Religion, and in the interpreting of Scripture, you say, is a horrible absurdity; and therefore must neither make use of your own in this matter, nor desire me to make use of it.

119. But, Universal Tradition (you say, and so do I too) is of it self credible: and that hath, in all ages, taught the Churches Infallibility with full consent. If it have, I am ready to believe it: But that it hath, I hope you would not have me take upon your word; for that were to build my self upon the Church, and the Church upon You. Let then the Tradition appear; for a secret Tradition is somewhat like a silent Thunder. You will perhaps produce, for the confirmation of it, some sayings of some Fathers, who in every Age taught this Doctrine; (as Gualterius in his Chronology undertakes to do, but with so ill success, that I heard an able Man of your Religion profess, that in the first three Centuries, there was not one Authority pertinent:) but how will you warrant that none of them teach the contrary? Again, how shall I be assured that the places have indeed this sense in them? Seeing there is not one Father for 500. years years after Christ, that does say in plain terms, The Church of Rome is infallible. What, shall we believe your Church that this is their meaning? But this will be again to go into the Circle, which made us giddy before; To prove the Church Infallible, because Tradition says so; Tradition to say so, because the Fathers say so; The Fathers to say so, because the Church says so, which is infallible. Yea, but reason will shew this to be the meaning of them. Yes, if we may use our Reason, and relie upon it. Otherwise, as light shews nothing to the blind, or to him that uses not his eyes; so reason cannot prove any thing to him that either hath not, or useth not his reason to Judge of them.

120. Thus you have excluded your self from all proof of your Churches Infallibility from Scripture or Tradition. And if you flie, lastly, to Reason it self for succour, may not it justly say to you as Jephte said to his Brethren, Ye have cast me out and banished me, and do you now come to me for succour? But if there be no certainty in Reason, how shall I be assured of the certainty of those which you alledge for this purpose? Either I may judge of them, or not: If not, why do you propose them? If I may, why do you say I may not, and make it such a monstrous absurdity, That men in the chioce of their Religion should make use of their Reason? which yet, without all question, none but unreasonable men can deny, to have been the chiefest end why Reason was given them.

121. Ad §. 22. An Heretick he is (saith D. Potter) who opposeth any truth, which to be a divine revelation he is convinced in conscience by any means whatsoever: Be it by a Preacher or Lay-man, be it by reading Scriptures, or hearing them read. And from hence you infer, that he makes all these safe Propounders of Faith. A most strange and illogical deduction! For, may not a private man by evident reason convince another man, that such or such a Doctrine is divine Revelation, and yet though he be a true Propounder in this point, yet propound another thing falsely, and without proof, and consequently not be a safe Propounder in every point? Your Preachers in their Sermons, do they not propose to men divine Revelations, and do they not sometimes convince men in conscience, by evident proof from Scripture, that the things they speak are divine Revelations? And whosoever, being thus convinced, should oppose this divine Revelation, should he not be an Heretick, according to your own grounds, for calling Gods own Truth into question? And would you think your self well dealt with, if I should collect from hence, that you make every Preacher a safe, that is, an infallible Propounder of Faith? Be the means of Proposal what it will, sufficient or insufficient, worthy of credit or not worthy; though it were, if it were possible, the barking of a Dog, or the chirping of a Bird, or were it the discourse of the Devil himself, yet if I be, I will not say convinced but perswaded, though falsly, that it is a divine Revelation, and shall deny to believe it I shall be a formal though not a material Heretick. For he that believes, though falsly, any thing to be a divine Revelation, and yet will not believe it to be true, must of necessity believe God to be false, which, according to your own Doctrine, is the formality of an Heretick.

122. And how it can be any way advantageous to Civil Government, that men without warrant from God should usurp a Tyranny over other mens consciences, and prescribe unto them, without reason, and sometime against reason, what they shall believe, you must shew us plainer if you desire we should believe. For to say, Verily I do not see but that it must be so, is no good demonstration. For whereas you say, That a man may be a passionate and seditious creature, from whence you would have us infer, that he may make use of his interpretation to satisfie his passion, and raise sedition: There were some colour in this consequence, if we (as you do) make private men infallible Interpreters for others; for then indeed they might lead Disciples after them, and use them as instruments for their vile purposes. But when we say, they can only interpret for themselves, what harm they can do by their passionate or seditious Interpretations, but but only endanger both their temporal and eternal happiness, I cannot imagine. though we deny the Pope or Church of Rome to be an infallible Judge, yet we do not deny, but that there are Judges which may proceed with certainty enough against all seditious Persons, such as draw men to disobedience either against Church or State, as well as against Rebels, and Traitors, and Thieves, and Murderers.

123. Ad §. 23. The next §. in the beginning argues thus: For many ages there was no Scripture in the world: and for many more, there was none in many places of the world: yet men wanted not then and there some certain direction what to believe: Therefore there was then an infallible Judge. Just as if I should say, York is not my way from Oxford to London, therefore Bristol is: Or, a Dog is not a Horse, therefore he is a Man. As if God had no other ways of revealing himself to men, but only by Scripture and an infallible Church. * St. Chrysostom and Isidorus Pelusiota conceived, He might use other means. And St. Paul telleth us that the γνωστον τȣ̃ Θεȣ̃, might be known by his works; And that they had the Law written in their hearts. Either of these ways might make some faithful men, without either necessity of Scripture or Church.

* See Chrysost. Hom. viii Matt. Isidor. Pelusiot. l. 3. ep. 56. and also Basil in Psal. 28. and then you shall confess, that by other means besides these, God did communicate himself unto men, and made them receive and understand his laws: See also to the same purpose, Heb. 1. 1.

124. But Dr. Potter says, you say, In the Jewish Church there was a living Judge, indowed with an absolute infallible direction in cases of moment: as all points belonging to divine Faith are. And where was that infallible direction in the Jewish Church when they should have received Christ for their Messias, and refused him? Or perhaps this was not a case of moment. Dr. Potter indeed might say very well, not that the High Priest was infallible, (for certainly he was not) but that his determination was to be of necessity obeyed, though for the justice of it there was no necessity that it should be believed. Besides, it is one thing to say, that the living Judge in the Jewish Church had an infallible direction: another, that he was necessitated to follow this direction. This is the priviledge which you challenge. But it is that, not this, which the Doctor attributes to the Jews. As a man may truly say, the Wisemen had an infallible direction to Christ without saying or thinking that they were constrained to follow it, and could not do otherwise.

125. But either the Church retains still her Infallibility, or it was devested of it upon the receiving of Holy Scripture; which is absurd. An Argument me thinks like this, Either you have horns, or you have lost them: but you never lost them, therefore you have them still. If you say, you never had horns; so, say I, for ought appears by your reasons, the Church never had Infallibility.

126. But some Scriptures were received in some places and not in others: therefore if Scriptures were the Judge of Controversies, some Churches had one Judge and some another. And what great inconvenience is there in that, that one part of England should have one Judge, and another another? especially seeing the Books of Scripture which were received by those that received fewest, had as much of the Doctrine of Christianity in them, as they all had which were received by any; all the necessary parts of the Gospel being contained in every one of the four Gospels, as I have proved: So that they which had all the Books of the New Testament, had nothing superfluous: For it was not superfluous but profitable, that the same thing should be said divers times, and be testified by divers witnesses: And they that had but one of the four Gospels wanted nothing necessary: and therefore it is vainly inferred by you, that with months and years, as new Canonical Scriptures grew to be published, the Church altered her rule of Faith and judge of Controversies.

127. Heresies, you say, would arise after the Apostles time, and after the writing of Scriptures: These cannot be discovered, condemned, and avoided, unless the Church be infallible; therefore there must be a Church infallible. But I pray tell me, Why cannot Heresies be sufficiently discovered, and condemned and avoided, by them which believe Scripture to be the rule of Faith? If Scripture be sufficient ſufficient to inform us what is the Faith, it muſt of neceſſity be alſo ſufficient] to teach us what is Hereſie: ſeeing Hereſie is nothing but a manifeſt deviation from, and an oppoſition to, the Faith. That which is ſtreight will plainly teach us what is crooked; and one contrary cannot but manifeſt the other. If any one ſhould deny, that there is a God; that this God is Omnipotent, Omniſcient, Good, Juſt, True, Merciful, a Rewarder of them that ſeek him, a Puniſher of them that obſtinately offend him; That Jeſus Chriſt is the Son of God, and the Saviour of the World; that it is He, by obedience to whom men muſt look to be ſaved: If any man ſhould deny either his Birth, or Paſſion, or Reſurrection, or Aſcenſion, or Sitting at the right hand of God: his having all power given him in Heaven and Earth: That it is he whom God hath appointed to be Judge of the quick and the dead: That all men ſhall riſe again at the laſt day: That they which believe and repent ſhall be ſaved: That they which do not believe and repent ſhall be damned: If a man ſhould hold that either the keeping of the Moſaical Law is neceſſary to Salvation: or that good works are not neceſſary to Salvation: In a word, if any man ſhould obſtinately contradict the truth of any thing plainly delivered in Scripture, who does not ſee, that every one which believes the Scripture, hath a ſufficient means to diſcover, and condemn, and avoid that Hereſie without any need of an infallible guide? If you ſay, that the obſcure places of Scripture contain matters of Faith: I anſwer, that it is a matter of faith to believe that the ſenſe of them, whatſoever it is, which was intended by God, is true; for he that doth not do ſo, calls Gods Truth into queſtion. But to believe this or that to be the true ſenſe of them, or, to believe the true ſenſe of them, and to avoid the falſe, is not neceſſary either to Faith or Salvation. For if God would have had his meaning in theſe places certainly known, how could it ſtand with his wiſdom, to be ſo wanting to his own will and end, as to ſpeak obſcurely? or how can it conſiſt with his Juſtice, to require of men to know certainly the meaning of thoſe words, which he himſelf hath not revealed? Suppoſe there were an abſolute Monarch, that in his own abſence from one of his Kingdoms, had written Laws for the government of it, ſome very plainly, and ſome very ambiguouſly, and obſcurely, and his Subjects ſhould keep thoſe that were plainly written with all exactneſs, and for thoſe that were obſcure, uſe their beſt diligence to find his meaning in them, and obey them according to the ſenſe of them which they conceived; ſhould this King either with juſtice or wiſdom be offended with theſe ſubjects, if, by reaſon of the obſcurity of them, they miſtook the ſenſe of them; and failed of performance, by reaſon of their error?

128. But, It is more uſeful and fit, you ſay, for the deciding of Controverſies, to have, beſides an infallible rule to go by, a living infallible Judge to determine them: and from hence you conclude, that certainly there is ſuch a Judge. But why then may not another ſay, that it is yet more uſeful for many excellent purpoſes, that all the Patriarchs ſhould be infallible, than that the Pope only ſhould? Another, that it ſhould be yet more uſeful, that all the Archbiſhops, of every Province ſhould be ſo, than that the Patriarchs only ſhould be ſo. Another, That it would be yet more uſeful, if the Biſhops of every Dioceſs were ſo. Another, that it would be more available, that all the Parſons of every Pariſh ſhould be ſo. Another, that it would be yet more excellent, if all the Fathers of Families were ſo. And laſtly, another that it were much more to be deſired that every Man and every Woman were ſo: juſt as much as the prevention of Controverſies, is better than the deciſion of them; and the prevention of Hereſies better than the condemnation of them; and upon this ground conclude, by your own very conſequence, That not only a general Council, nor only the Pope, but all the Patriarchs, Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Paſtors, Fathers, nay, all the men in the world are infallible: If you ſay now, as I am ſure you will, that this Concluſion is moſt groſs and abſurd, againſt ſenſe and experience, then muſt alſo the ground be falſe, from which it evidently and undeniably follows, viz. that that courſe of dealing with with men ſeems always more fit to Divine Providence, which ſeems moſt fit to humane reaſon.

129. And ſo likewiſe, That there ſhould men ſucceed the Apoſtles, which could ſhew themſelves to be their Succeſſors, by doing of Miracles, by ſpeaking all kind of Languages, by delivering men to Satan, as St. Paul did Hymenæus, and the inceſtuous Corinthian; it is manifeſt in humane reaſon, it were incomparably more fit and uſeful for the deciſion of Controverſies, than that the Succeſſor of the Apoſtles ſhould have none of theſe gifts, and for want of the ſigns of Apoſtleſhip, be juſtly queſtionable, whether he be his Succeſſor or no: and will you now conclude, That the Popes have the gift of doing Miracles as well as the Apoſtles had?

130. It were in all reaſon very uſeful and requiſite, that the Pope ſhould, by the aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit, be freed from the vices and paſſions of men, leſt otherwiſe, the Authority given him for the good of the Church, he might imploy (as divers Popes you well know have done) to the diſturbance, and oppreſſion, and miſchief of it. And will you conclude from hence, That Popes are not ſubject to the ſins and paſſions of other men? That there never have been ambitious, covetous, luſtful, tyrannous Popes?

131. Who ſees not that for mens direction it were much more beneficial for the Church, that Infallibility ſhould be ſetled in the Popes Perſon, than in a General Council: That ſo the means of deciding Controverſies might be ſpeedy, eaſie, and perpetual, whereas that of general Councils is not ſo. And will you hence infer, that not the Church Repreſentative, but the Pope is indeed the infallible Judge of Controverſies? Certainly, if you ſhould, the Sorbon Doctors would not think this a good Concluſion.

132. It had been very commodious (one would think) that ſeeing either Gods pleaſure was, the Scripture ſhould be tranſlated, or elſe in his Providence he knew it would be ſo, that he had appointed ſome men for this buſineſs, and by his Spirit aſſiſted them in it, that ſo we might have Tranſlations as Authentical as the Original: yet you ſee God did not thunk fit to do ſo.

133. It had been very commodious (one would think) that the Scripture ſhould have been, at leaſt for all things neceſſary, a Rule, plain and perfect: and yet you ſay, it is both imperfect and obſcure, even in things neceſſary.

134. It had been moſt requiſite (one would think) that the Copies of the Bibles, ſhould have been preſerved free from variety of Readings, which makes men very uncertain in many places, which is the Word of God, and which is the Error or preſumption of man: and yet we ſee God hath not thought fit ſo to provide for us.

135. Who can conceive, but that an Apoſtolick Interpretation of all the difficult places of Scripture, would have been ſtrangely beneficial to the Church, eſpecially there being ſuch danger in miſtaking the ſenſe of them, as is by you pretended, and God in his providence foreſeeing that the greateſt part of Chriſtians, would not accept of the Pope for the Judge of Controverſies? And yet we ſee God hath not ſo ordered the matter.

136. Who doth not ſee, that, ſuppoſing the Biſhop of Rome had been appointed Head of the Church, and Judge of Controverſies, that it would have been infinitely beneficial to the Church, perhaps as much as all the reſt of the Bible, that in ſome Book of Scripture which was to be undoubtedly received, this one Propoſition had been ſet down in Terms, The Biſhops of Rome ſhall be always Monarchs of the Church, and they either alone, or with their adherents, the Guides of Faith, and the Judges of Controverſies that ſhall ariſe amongſt Chriſtians? This, if you will deal ingenuouſly, you cannot but acknowledge; for then all true Chriſtians would have ſubmitted to him, as willingly as to Chriſt himſelf, neither needed you and your Fellows have troubled your ſelf to invent ſo many Sophiſms for the proof of it. There would have been no more doubt of it among Chriſtians, than there is of the Nativity, Paſſion, Reſurrection, or Aſcenſion of Chriſt. You were beſt now rub your forehead hard, and conclude upon us, that becauſe this would have been ſo uſeful to have been done, therefore it is done. Or if you be (as I know you are) too ingenuous to ſay ſo, then muſt you acknowledge, that the ground of your Argument, which is the very ground of all theſe abſurdities, is moſt abſurd; and that it is our duty to be humbly thankful for thoſe ſufficient, nay abundant means of Salvation, which God hath of his own goodneſs granted us: and not conclude he hath done that which he hath not done, becauſe, forſooth, in our vain judgments, it ſeems convenient he ſhould have done ſo.

137. But you demand, What repugnance there is betwixt infallibility in the Church, and exiſtence of Scripture, that the production of the one muſt be the deſtruction of the other? Out of which words I can frame no other Argument for you than this; There is no repugnance between the Scripture's exiſtence, and the Churches infallibility, therefore the Church is infallible. Which conſequence will then be good, when you can ſhew that nothing can be untrue, but that only which is impoſſible; that whatſoever may be done, that alſo is done. Which, if it were true, would conclude both you and me to be infallible, as well as either your Church, or Pope: in as much as there is no more repugnance between the Scripture's exiſtence and our infallibility, than there is between theirs.

138. But, if Proteſtants will have the Scripture alone for their Judge, let them firſt produce ſome Scripture, affirming, that by the entring thereof, infallibility went out of the Church. This Argument put in form, runs thus. No Scripture affirms, that by the entring thereof, infallibility went out of the Church: Therefore there is an infallible Church, and therefore the Scripture alone is not Judge, that is, the Rule to judge by. But as no Scripture affirms, that by the entring of it, infallibility went out of the Church, ſo neither do we, neither have we any need to do ſo. But we ſay, that it continued in the Church even together with the Scriptures, ſo long as Chriſt and his Apoſtles were living, and then departed: God in his providence having provided a plain and infallible Rule, to ſupply the defect of living and infallible Guides. Certainly, if your Cauſe were good, ſo great a Wit as yours is, would deviſe better Arguments to maintain it. We can ſhew no Scripture affirming Infallibility to have gone out of the Church, therefore it is infallible. Somewhat like his diſcourſe that ſaid, It could not be proved out of Scripture, that the King of Sweden was dead, therefore he is ſtill living. Me-thinks in all reaſon, you that challenge priviledges, and exemption from the condition of Men, which is to be ſubject to error; You that by vertue of this priviledge uſurp authority over mens conſciences, ſhould produce your Letters Patents from the King of Heaven, and ſhew ſome expreſs warrant for this Authority you take upon you, otherwiſe you know the Rule is, Ubi contrarium non manifeſte probatur, præſumitur pro libertate.

139. But Dr. Potter may remember what himſelf teacheth, That the Church is ſtill endued with infallibility in points Fundamental, and conſequently that Infallibility in the Church doth well agree with the Truth, the Sanctity, yea, with the ſufficiency of Scripture, for all matters neceſſary to ſalvation. Still your diſcourſe is ſo far from hitting the White, that it roves quite beſides the Butt. You conclude, that the infallibility of the Church may well agree with the Truth, the Sanctity, the Sufficiency of Scripture. But what is this but to abuſe your Reader with the proof of that which no man denies? The Queſtion is not, Whether an Infallible Church might agree with Scripture, but whether there be an Infallible Church? Jam dic, Poſthume, de tribus Capellis. Beſides, you muſt know, there is a wide difference between being infallible in Fundamentals and being an infallible Guide even in Fundamentals. Dr. Potter ſays, that the Church is the former: that is, There ſhall be ſome men in the world, while the world laſts, which err not in Fundamentals; for otherwiſe there ſhould be no Church: For to ſay, the Church,

Church, while it is the Church, may err in Fundamentals, implies a contradiction, and is all one as to ſay, The Church while it is the Church, may not be the Church. So that to ſay, that the Church is infallible in Fundamentals, ſignifies no more but this, There ſhall be a Church in the world for ever. But we utterly deny the Church to be the latter; for to ſay ſo were to oblige our ſelves to find ſome certain Society of men, of whom we might be certain, that they neither do, nor can, err in Fundamentals, nor in declaring what is Fundamental, what is not Fundamental: and conſequently, to make any Church an infallible Guide in Fundamentals, would be to make it infallible in all things, which the propoſes and requires to be believed. This therefore we deny both to your and all other Churches of any one denomination, as the Greek, the Roman, the Abyſſine: that is indeed, we deny it ſimply to any Church. For no Church can poſſibly be fit to be a Guide, but only a Church of ſome certain denomination. For otherwiſe no man can poſſibly know which is the true Church, but by a pre-examination of the Doctrine controverted, and that were, not to be guided by the Church to the true Doctrine, but by the true Doctrine to the Church. Hereafter therefore, when you hear Proteſtants ſay, The Church is infallible in Fundamentals, you muſt not conceive them as if they meant, as you do, that ſome Society of Chriſtians, which may be known by adhering to ſome one Head, for example, the Pope, or the Biſhop of Conſtantinople, is infallible in theſe things: but only thus, That true Religion ſhall never be ſo far driven out of the world, but that it ſhall have always, ſome where or other, ſome that believe and profeſs it, in all things neceſſary to ſalvation.

140. But, You would therefore gladly know out of what Text he imagines that the Church, by the coming of Scripture, was deprived of infallibility in ſome points, and not in others? And I alſo would gladly know, Why you do thus frame to your ſelf vain imaginations, and then father them upon others? We yield unto you, That there ſhall be a Church which never erreth in ſome points, becauſe (as we conceive) God hath promiſed ſo much; but not, there ſhall be ſuch a Church which doth or can err in no points, becauſe we find not, that God hath promiſed ſuch a Church; and therefore we may not promiſe ſuch a one to our ſelves. But, for the Churches being deprived by the Scripture of Infallibility, in ſome points, and not in others, that is a wild Notion of your own, which we have nothing to do with.

141. But he affirmeth, That The Jewiſh Church retained Infallibility in her ſelf; and therefore it is unjuſtly, and unworthily done of him to deprive the Church of Chriſt of it. That the Jews had ſometimes an infallible miraculous direction from God in ſome caſes of moment, he doth affirm, and had good warrant: but that the Synagogue was abſolutely infallible, he no where affirms; and therefore it is unjuſtly and unworthily done of you to obtrude it upon him. And indeed how can the Infallibility of the Synagogue be conceived, but only by ſetling it in the High-Prieſt, and the company adhering and ſubordinate unto him? And whether the High-Prieſt was Infallible, when he believed not Chriſt to be the Meſſias, but condemned and excommunicated them that ſo profeſſed, and cauſed him to be crucified for ſaying ſo, I leave it to Chriſtians to judge. But then ſuppoſe God had been ſo pleaſed to do as he did not, to appoint the Synagogue an infallible Guide? Could you by your rules of Logick conſtrain him to appoint ſuch an one to Chriſtians alſo; or ſay unto him, that in wiſdom he could not do otherwiſe; Vain man, that will be thus always tying God to your imaginations. It is well for us that he leaves us not without directions to him; but if he will do this ſometime by living Guides, ſometime by written Rules, What is that to you? May not he do what he will with his own?

142. And whereas you ſay, for the further enforcing of this Argument, that there is greater reaſon to think the Church ſhould be infallible, than the Synagogue: becauſe to the Synagogue all Laws and Ceremonies, &c. were more particularly, and minutely delivered, than in the New Teſtament is done; our Saviour leaving particulars to the determination of the Church. But I pray walk not thus in generality, but tell us, what particulars? If you mean particular Rites and Ceremonies, and Orders for government, we grant it, and you know we do ſo. Our Saviour only hath left a general injunction by St. Paul, Let all things be done Decently, and in Order. But what Order is fitteſt, i.e. what Time, what Place, what Manner, &c. is fitteſt? That he hath left to the diſcretion of the Governours of the Church. But, if you mean, that he hath only concerning matters of Faith, the ſubject in Queſtion, preſcribed in general that we are to hear the Church, and left it to the Church to determine what particulars we are to believe, The Church being nothing elſe but an aggregation of Believers; this is in effect to ſay, He hath left it to all Believers to determine what Particulars they are to believe. Beſides, it is ſo apparently falſe, that I wonder you could content your ſelf, or think we ſhould be contented with a bare ſaying, without any ſhew or pretence of proof.

143. As for Dr. Potter's Objection againſt this Argument, That as well you might infer, that Chriſtians muſt have all one King, becauſe the Jews had ſo. For ought I can perceive, notwithſtanding any thing anſwered by you, it may ſtand ſtill in force; though the truth is, it is urged by him not againſt the Infallibility but the Monarchy of the Church. For whereas you ſay, The diſparity is very clear: He that ſhould urge this Argument for one Monarch over the whole world, would ſay that this is to deny the Concluſion, and reply unto you, that there is diſparity as matters are now ordered, but that there ſhould not be ſo. For that there was no more reaſon to believe that the Eccleſiaſtical Government of the Jews was a Pattern for the Eccleſiaſtical Government of Chriſtians, than the Civil of the Jews, for the Civil of the Chriſtians. He would tell you, that the Church of Chriſt, and all Chriſtian Commonwealths, and Kingdoms, are one and the ſame thing: and therefore he ſees no reaſon why the Synagogue ſhould be a Type and Figure of the Church, and not of the Commonwealth. He would tell you, that as the Church ſucceeded the Jewiſh Synagogue, ſo Chriſtian Princes ſhould ſucceed to Jewiſh Magiſtrates: That is, the Temporal Governours of the Church ſhould be Chriſtians. He would tell you, that as the Church is compared to a Houſe, a Kingdom, an Army, a Body, ſo all diſtinct Kingdoms might and ſhould be one Army, one Family, &c. and that it is not ſo, is the thing he complains of. And therefore you ought not to think it enough to ſay, It is not ſo; but you ſhould ſhew, why it ſhould not be ſo; and why this Argument will not follow, The Jews had one King, therefore all Chriſtians ought to have, as well as this. The Jews had one High-Prieſt over them all, therefore all Chriſtians alſo ought to have. He might tell you moreover, that the Church may have one Maſter, one General, one Head, one King, and yet he not be the Pope, but Chriſt. He might tell you, that you beg the Queſtion, in ſaying without proof, that it is neceſſary to ſalvation, that all (whether Chriſtians or Churches) have recourſe to one Church, if you mean by one Church, one particular Church which is to govern and direct all others: and, that unleſs you mean ſo, you ſay nothing to the purpoſe. And beſides, he might tell you, and that very truly, that it may ſeem altogether as available for the Temporal good of Chriſtians to be under one Temporal Prince, or Commonwealth; as for their ſalvation, to be ſubordinate to one Viſible Head. I ſay, as neceſſary, both for the prevention of the effuſion of the bloud of Chriſtians by Chriſtians, and for the defence of Chriſtendom, from the hoſtile invaſions of Turks, and Pagans. And from all this he might infer, that though now, by the fault of men, there were in ſeveral Kingdoms, ſeveral Laws, Governments, and Powers; yet that it were much more expedient, that there were but one. Nay, not only expedient, but neceſſary; if once your ground be ſetled for a general Rule, that what kind of Government the Jews had, that the Chriſtians muſt have. And, if you you limit the generality of this Propoſition, and frame the Argument thus: What kind of Eccleſiaſtical Government the Jews had, that the Chriſtians muſt have: But, They were governed by one High-Prieſt, Therefore, Theſe muſt be ſo: He will ſay, that the firſt Propoſition of this Syllogiſm, is altogether as doubtful as the Concluſion; and therefore neither fit nor ſufficient to prove it, until it ſelf be proved. And then beſides, that there is as great reaſon to believe this, That what kind of Civil Government the Jews had, that the Chriſtians muſt have. And ſo Dr. Potter's Objection remains ſtill unanſwered: That there is as much reaſon to conclude a neceſſity of one King over all Chriſtian Kingdoms, from the Jews having one King; as one Biſhop over all Churches, from their being under one High-Prieſt.

144. Ad §. 24. Neither is this diſcourſe confirmed by Irenæus at all: Whether by this diſcourſe you mean that immediately foregoing, of the Analogy between the Church and the Synagogue, to which this ſpeech of Irenæus, alledged here by you, is utterly and plainly impertinent; Or whether by this diſcourſe, you mean (as I think you do) not your Diſcourſe, but your Concluſion which you diſcourſe on, that is, that Your Church is the infallible Judge in Controverſies. For neither hath Irenæus one ſyllable to this purpoſe; neither can it be deduced out of what he ſays, with any colour of conſequence. For, firſt in ſaying, What if the Apoſtles had not left Scripture, ought we not to have followed the order of Tradition? And in ſaying, That to this order many Nations yield aſſent, who believe in Chriſt, having Salvation written in their hearts by the Spirit of GOD, without Letters or Ink, and diligently keeping ancient Tradition: Doth he not plainly ſhew, that the Tradition he ſpeaks of is nothing elſe, but the very ſame that is written: nothing but to believe in Chriſt? To which, whether Scripture alone, to them that believe it, be not a ſufficient guide, I leave it to you to judge. And are not his words juſt as if a man ſhould ſay, If God had not given us the light of the Sun, we muſt have made uſe of Candles and Torches: If we had no eyes, we muſt have felt out our way: If we had no legs, we muſt have uſed crutches. And doth not this in effect import, that while we have the Sun we need no Candles? While we have our eyes, we need not feel out our way? While we enjoy our Legs, we need not Crutches? And, by like reaſon, Irenæus in ſaying, If we had no Scripture, we muſt have followed Tradition; and they that have none, do well to do ſo; Doth he not plainly import, that to them that have Scripture and believe it, Tradition is unneceſſary? Which could not be, if the Scripture did not contain evidently the whole Tradition. Which, whether Irenæus believed or no, theſe words of his may inform you, Non enim per alios, &c, we have received the diſpoſition of our Salvation from no others, but from them by whom the Goſpel came unto us. Which Goſpel truly the Apoſtles firſt preached, and afterwards by the will of God delivered in writing to us, to be the Pillar and Foundation of our Faith. Upon which place, Bellarmine's two Obſervations, and his acknowledgment enſuing upon them are very conſiderable; and, as I conceive, as home to my purpoſe as I would wiſh them. His firſt Notandum is, That, in the Chriſtian Doctrine, ſome things are ſimply neceſſary for the Salvation of all men; as the knowledge of the Articles of the Apoſtle's Creed; and beſides, the knowledge, of the Ten Commandments, and ſome of the Sacraments. Other things are not ſo neceſſary, but that a man may be ſaved without the explicit knowledge, and belief, and profeſſion of them. his ſecond Note is, That thoſe things, which were ſimply neceſſary, the Apoſtles were wont to preach to all men; But of other things not all to all, but, ſome things to all, to wit, thoſe things which were profitable for all, other things only, to Prelates and Prieſts. Theſe things premiſed, he acknowledgeth, That all thoſe things were written by the Apoſtles which are neceſſary for all, and which they were wont openly to preach to all; But that other things were not all written: And therefore, when Irenæus ſays, that the Apoſtles wrote what they preached in the World, it is true ſaith he, and not againſt Traditions, becauſe they preached not to the People all things, but only those things which were necessary or profitable for them.

145. So that at the most you can infer from hence but only a suppositive necessity of having an infallible Guide, and that grounded upon a false supposition, in case we had no Scripture: but, an absolute necessity hereof, and to them who have and believe the Scripture, which is your Assumption, cannot with any colour from hence be concluded, but rather the contrary.

146. Neither because (as He says) it was then ease to receive the Truth from God's Church; then, in the Age next after the Apostles, Then, when all the Ancient and Apostolick Churches were at an agreement about the Fundamentals of Faith: Will it therefore follow, that now, 1600 years after, when the ancient Churches are divided almost into as many Religions as they are Churches, every one being the Church to it self, and Heretical to all other, that it is as easie, but extremely difficult, or rather impossible, to find the Church first independently of the true Doctrine, and then to find the truth by the Church?

147. As for the last clause of the Sentence, it will not any whit advantage, but rather prejudice your Assertion. Neither will I seek to avoid the pressure of it, by saying that he speaks of small Questions, and therefore not of Questions touching things necessary to Salvation, which can hardly be called small Questions; But I will favour you so far, as to suppose, that saying this of small Questions, it is probable he would have said it much more of the Great: but I will answer that which is most certain and evident, and which I am confident you your self, were you as impudent as I believe you modest, would not deny, That the Ancient Apostolick Churches are not now, as they were in Irenæus his time: then they were all at Unity about matters of Faith, which Unity was a good assurance that what they so agreed in, came from some one common Fountain, and that no other than of Apostolick Preaching. And this is the very ground of Tertullian's so often mistaken Prescription against Hereticks: Varietâsse debuerat Error Ecclesiarum; quod autem apud multos unum est, non est erratum sed traditum: If the Churches had erred, they could not but have varied: but that which is one among so many, came not by Error but Tradition. But now the case is altered, and the mischief is, that these ancient Churches are divided among themselves; and if we have recourse to them, one of them will say, This is the way to heaven, another that. So that now in place of receiving from them certain and clear truths, we must expect nothing but certain and clear contradictions.

148. Neither will the Apostle's depositing with the Church all things belonging to truth, be any proof that the Church shall certainly keep this depositum, entire and sincere, without adding to it, or taking from it; for this whole depositum was committed to every particular Church, nay, to every particular man which the Apostles converted. And yet no man, I think, will say that there was any certainty, that it should be kept whole and inviolate by every man, and every Church. It is apparent out of Scripture it was committed to Timothy, and by him consigned to other faithful men: and yet S. Paul thought it not superfluous, earnestly to exhort him to the careful keeping of it: which exhortation you must grant had been vain and superfluous, if the not keeping of it had been impossible. And therefore though Irenæus says, The Apostles fully deposited in the Church all truth, yet he says not, neither can we infer from what he says, That the Church should always infallibly keep this depositum, entire, without the loss of any truth, and sincere without the mixture of any falshood.

149. Ad §. 25. But you proceed and tell us, That, besides all this, the Doctrine of Protestants is destructive of it self. For either they have certain and infallible means not to err in interpreting; or not. If not, Scripture to them cannot be a sufficient ground for infallible faith: If they have, and so cannot err in interpreting Scripture, then they are able with infallibility to hear and determine all Controversies of Faith; and so they may be, and are, Judges of Controversies, although they use the Scripture as a Rule. And thus against their own Doctrine, they constitute another Judge of Controversies beside Scripture alone. And may not we with as much reason substitute Church and Papists instead of Scripture and Protestants, and say unto you, Besides all this, the Doctrine of Papists is destructive of it self? For either they have certain and infallible means not to err, in the choice of the Church, and interpreting her Decrees, or they have not: If not, then the Church to them cannot be a sufficient (but meerly a phantastical) ground for infallible faith, nor a meer Judge of Controversies: (For unless I be infallibly sure that the Church is infallible, How can I be upon her Authority infallibly sure, that any thing she says is Infallible?) If they have certain infallible means, and so cannot err in the choice of their Church, and in interpreting her Decrees, then they are able with infallibility to hear, examine, and determine all Controversies of Faith, although they pretend to make the Church their Guide. And thus against their own Doctrine, they constitute another Judge of Controversies, besides the Church alone. Nay, every one makes himself a chuser of his own Religion, and of his own sense of the Churches Decrees, which very thing in Protestants they so highly condemn: and so, in judging others, condemn themselves.

150. Neither in saying thus have I only cried quittance with you: but that you may see how much you are in my debt, I will shew unto you that for your Sophism against our way, I have given you a Demonstration against yours. First, I say, your Argument against us is a transparent fallacy. The first Part of it lies thus: Protestants have no means to interpret, without Error, obscure and ambiguous Places of Scripture; therefore plain places of Scripture cannot be to them a sufficient ground of Faith. But though we pretend not to certain means of not erring in interpreting all Scripture, particularly such places as are obscure and ambiguous, yet this me-thinks, should be no impediment but that we may have certain means of not erring in and about the sense of those places, which are so plain and clear that they need no Interpreters; and in such we say our Faith is contained. If you ask me, How I can be sure that I know the true meaning of these places? I ask you again, Can you be sure, that you understand what I, or any man else says? They that heard our Saviour and the Apostles preach, could they have sufficient assurance, that they understood at any time what they would have them do? If not, to what end did they hear them? If they could, Why may we not be as well assured that we understand sufficiently what we conceive plain in their Writings?

151. Again, I pray tell us, whether you do certainly know the sense of these Scriptures, with which you pretend you are led to the knowledge of your Church? If you do not, How know you that there is any Church Infallible, and that these are the notes of it, and that this is the Church that hath these notes? If you do, then give us leave to have the same means, and the same abilities to know other plain places, which you have to know these. For, if all Scripture be obscure, how come you to know the sense of these places? If some places of it be plain, Why should we stay here?

152. And now to come to the other part of your Dilemma? In saying, If they have certain means, and so cannot err, me-thinks you forget your self very much, and seem to make no difference between having certain means to do a thing, and the actual doing of it. As if you should conclude, because all men have certain means of Salvation, therefore all men certainly must be saved, and cannot do otherwise; as if, Whosoever had a horse must presently get up and ride; Whosoever had means to find out a way, could not neglect those means and so mistake it. God be thanked that we have sufficient means to be certain enough of the truth of our Faith: But the priviledge of not being in possibility of erring, that we challenge not, because we have as little reason as you to do so: and you have none at all. If you ask, seeing we may possibly err, How can we be assured we do not? I ask you again, seeing your eye-sight may deceive you, How can you be sure you see the Sun, when you do see it? Perhaps you may be in a dream, and perhaps you, and all the men in the world have been so, when they thought they were awake, and then only awake, when they thought they dreamt. But this I am sure of, as sure as that God is good, that he will require no impossibilities of us: not an Infallible, nor a certainly-unerring belief, unless he hath given us certain means to avoid error; and, if we use those which we have, will never require of us, that we use that which we have not.

and

153. Now from this mistaken ground, That it is all one to have means of avoiding error, and to be in no danger nor possibility of error; You infer upon us an absurd Conclusion, That we make our selves able to determine Controversies of Faith with Infallibility, and Judges of Controversies, For the latter part of this Inference, we acknowledge and embrace it. We do make our selves Judges of Controversies, that is, we do make use of our own understanding in the choice of our Religion. But this, if it be a crime, is common to us with you, (as I have proved above) and the difference is, not that we are chusers, and you not chusers, but that, we, as we conceive, chuse wisely, but you, being wilfully blind, chuse to follow those that are so too; not remembring what our Saviour hath told you, When the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch. But then again I must tell you, You have done ill to confound together, Judges, and Infallible Judges; unless you will say, either that we have no Judges in our Courts of Civil Judicature, or that they are all Infallible.

154. Thus have we cast off your Dilemma, and broken both the horns of it. But now my retortion lies heavy upon you, and will not be turned off. For first you content not your selves with a moral certainty of the things you believe, nor with such a degree of assurance of them, as is sufficient to produce obedience to the condition of the new Covenant, which is all that we require. God's Spirit, if he please, may work more, a certainty of adherence beyond a certainty of evidence: But neither God doth, nor man may, require of us as our duty, to give a greater assent to the conclusion, than the premisses deserve; to build an Infallible Faith upon Motives that are only highly credible, and not infallible, as it were a great and heavy building upon a foundation that hath not strength proportionable. But though God require not of us such unreasonable things, You do; and tell men, They cannot be saved, unless they believe your Propositals with an infallible Faith. To which end they must believe also your Propounder, your Church to be simply Infallible. Now how is it possible for them to give a rational assent to the Churches infallibility, unless they have some infallible means to know that she is infallible? Neither can they infallibly know the infallibility of this means, but by some other, and so on for ever: unless they can dig so deep as to come at length to the Rock, that is, to settle all upon something evident of it self, which is not so much as pretended. But the last resolution of all is into Motives, which indeed upon examination will scarce appear probable, but are not so much as avouched to be any more than very credible. For example, if I ask you, Why you do believe Transubstantiation? What can you answer, but because it is a Revelation of the Prime Verity. I demand again, How can you assure your self or me of that, being ready to embrace it if it may appear to be so? And what can you say, but that you know it to be so, because the Church says so, which is infallible? If I ask, What mean you by your Church? You can tell me nothing but the company of Christians which adhere to the Pope. I demand then further: Why should I believe this company to be the infallible Propounder of Divine Revelation? And then you tell me, that there are many Motives to induce a man to this belief. But are these Motives fully infallible? No say you, but very credible. Well, let them pass for such, because now we have not leisure to examine them. Yet methinks seeing the Motives Motives to believe the Church's infallibilty are only very credible, it should also be but as credible that your Church is infallible; and as credible, and no more, perhaps somewhat less, that her propositals, particularly Transubstantiation, are Divine Revelations. And me-thinks you should require only a Moral, and modest assent to them, and not a Divine, as you call it, and infallible Faith. But then of these motives to the Church's infallibility, I hope you will give us leave to consider, and judg whether they be indeed Motives, and sufficient; or whether they be not Motives at all, or not sufficient; or whether these Motives or inducements to your Church be not impeached, and opposed with Compulsives and enforcements from it; or lastly, Whether these Motives which You use, be not indeed only Motives to Christianity, and not to Popery: give me leave for distinction-sake to call your religion so. If we may not judg of these things, How can my judgment be moved with that which comes not within its Cognizance? If I may, then at least I am to be a judg of all these Controversies. 1. Whether every one of these Motives be indeed a Motive to any Church? 2. If to some, whether to Yours? 3. If to Yours, whether sufficient, or insufficient? 4. Whether other Societies have not as many, and as great Motives to draw me to them? 5. Whether I have not greater reason to believe you do err, than that you cannot? And Now Sir, I pray let me trouble You with a few more Questions. Am I a sufficient judg of these Controversies, or no? If of these, why shall I stay here, why not of others? Why not of all? Nay, doth not the true examining of these few contain and lay upon me the examination of all? What other Motives to your Church have you, but your Notes of it? Bellarmine gives some 14 or 15. And one of these fifteen contains in it the examination of all Controversies; and not only so, but of all uncontroverted Doctrins. For how shall I, or can I, know the Church of Rome's conformity with the Ancient Church, unless I know first what the Ancient Church did hold, and then what the Church of Rome doth hold; and lastly, whether they be conformable, or, if in my judgment they seem not conformable, I am then to think the Church of Rome not to be the Church, for want of the Note which she pretends, is proper, and perpetual to it. So that, for ought I can see, Judges we are and must be of all sides; every one for himself, and God for us all.

155. Ad §. 26 I answer; This Assertion, that Scripture alone is judg of all controversies in Faith, if it be taken properly, is neither a Fundamental nor Unfundamental point of Faith, nor no point of Faith at all, but a plain falshood. It is not a Judg of Controversies, but a Rule to judg them by; and that not an absolutely perfect Rule, but as perfect as a written Rule can be; which must always need something else, which is either evidently true, or evidently credible, to give attestation to it, and that in this case is Universal Tradition. So that Universal Tradition is the Rule to judg all Controversies by. But then because nothing, besides Scripture, comes to us with as full a stream of Tradition as Scripture, Scripture alone, and no unwritted Doctrin, nor no Infallibility of any Church, having attestation from Tradition truly Universal; for this reason we conceive, as the Apostles persons while they were living were the only Judges of Controversies, so their writings, now they are dead, are the only Rule for us to Judg them by; There being nothing unwritten, which can go in upon half so fair cards, for the Title of Apostolick Tradition, as these things, which by the confession of both sides are not so: I mean the Doctrin of the Millenaries, and of the necessity of the Eucharist for Infants.

156. Yet when we say, The Scripture is the only Rule to judg all Controversies by; me-thinks you should easily conceive, that we would be understood, of all those that are possible to be judged by Scripture, and of those that arise among such as believe the Scripture. For, if I had a Controversie with an Atheist whether there were a God or no, I would not say, that the Scripture were a Rule to judg this by; seeing that, doubting whether there be a God or no, he must needs doubt whether the Scripture be the word of God: or, if he does not, he grants the Question, and is not the man we speak of. So likewise, if I had a Controversie about the Truth of Christ with a Jew, it would be vainly done of me, should I press him with the Authority of the New Testament which he believes not, until out of some principles common to us both, I had perswaded him that it is the Word of God. the New Testament therefore, while he remains a Jew, would not be a fit Rule to decide this Controversie; in as much as that which is doubted of it self, is not fit to determine other doubts. So likewise, if there were any that believed Christian Religion, and yet believed not the Bible to be the Word of God, though they believed the matter of it to be true, (which is no impossible supposition; for I may believe a Book of S. Austin's to contain nothing but the Truth of God, and yet not to have been inspired by God himself,) against such men therefore there were no disputing out of the Bible; because nothing in Question can be a proof to it self. When therefore we say, Scripture is sufficient means to determine all controversies, we say not this, either to Atheists, Jews, Turks, or such Christians (if there be any such) as believe not Scripture to be the Word of God. But among such men only, as are already agreed upon this, that the Scripture is the Word of God, we say, All Controversies that arise about Faith, are either not at all decidable, and consequently not necessary to be believed one way or other; or they may be determined by Scripture. In a word, that all things necessary to be believed are evidently contained in Scripture, and what is not there evidently contained, cannot be necessary to be believed. And our reason hereof is convincing, because nothing can challenge our belief, but what hath descended to us from Christ by Original and Universal Tradition: Now nothing but Scripture hath thus descended to us, Therefore nothing but Scripture can challenge our belief. Now then to come up closer to you, and to answer to your Question, not as you put it, but as you should have put it: I say, That this Position, Scripture alone is the Rule whereby they which believe it to be God's Word, are to judg all Controversies in Faith, is no fundamental point, Though not for your Reasons: For, your first and strongest reason, you see, is plainly voided and cut off by my stating of the Question as I have done, and supposing in it, that the parties at variance, are agreed about this, That the Scripture is the word of God; and consequently that this is none of their Controversies. To your second, That Controversies cannot be ended without some living Authority, We have said already, that Necessary Controversies may be and are decided. And, if they be not ended, this is not through defect of the Rule, but through the default of men. And, for these that cannot thus be ended, it is not necessary they should be ended. For, if God did require the ending of them, he would have provided some certain means for the ending of them. And to your Third, I say, that Your pretence of using these means, is but hypocritical; for you use them with prejudice, and with a setled resolution not to believe any thing which these means happily may suggest into you, if it any way cross your pre-conceived perswasion of your Church's Infallibility. You give not your selves liberty of judgment in the use of them, nor suffer your selves to be led by them to the Truth, to which they would lead you, would you but be as willing to believe this Consequence, Our Church doth oppose Scripture, therefore it doth err, therefore it is not infallible; as you are resolute to believe this, The Church is infallible, therefore it doth not err, and therefore it doth not oppose Scripture, though it seem to do so never so plainly.

157. You pray, but it is not that God would bring you to the true Religion, but that he would confirm you in your own. You confer places, but it is that you may confirm, or colour over with plausable disguises your erroneous doctrin, not that you may judge of them, and forsake them, if there be reason for it. You

You consult the Originals, but you regard them not when they make against your Doctrin or Translation.

158. You add not only the Authority, but the Infallibility, not of God's Church, but of the Roman, a very corrupt and degenerous part of it: whereof D. Potter never confessed, that it cannot err damnably. And which being a company made up of particular men, can afford you no help, but the industry, learning, and wit of private men: and, that these helps may not help you out of your error, tell you, that you must make use of none of all these to discover any error in the Church, but only to maintain her impossibility of erring. And lastly, D. Potter assures himself that your Doctrin and Practices are damnable enough in themselves; only he hopes (and spes est rei incertæ nomen) he hopes, I say, that the Truths which you retain, especially the necessity of repentance and faith in Christ, will be as an Antidote to you against the errors which you maintain; and that your superstruction may burn, yet they amongst you, qui sequuntur Absolonem in simplicitate cordis, may be saved, yet so as by fire. Yet his thinking so, is no reason for you or me to think so, unless you suppose him infallible; and, if you do, Why do you write against him?

159. Notwithstanding, though not for these reasons, yet for others, I conceive this Doctrin not Fundamental: Because, if a man should believe Christian Religion wholely, and entirely, and live according to it, such a man, though he should not know or not believe the Scripture to be a Rule of Faith, no nor to be the Word of God, my opinion is, he may be saved; and my reason is, because he performs the entire Condition of the new Covenant, which is, that we believe the matter of the Gospel, and not that it is contained in these or these Books. So that the Books of Scripture are not so much the Objects of our faith, as the instruments of conveying it to our understanding; and not so much of the being of the Christian Doctrin, as requisite to the well-being of it. Irenæus tells us (as M. K. acknowledgeth) of some barbarous Nations, that believed the Doctrin of Christ, and yet believed not the Scripture to be the Word of God; for they never heard of it, and Faith comes by hearing: But these barbarous people might be saved: Therefore men might be saved without believing the Scripture to be the Word of God; much more without believing it to be a Rule, and a perfect Rule of Faith. Neither doubt I, but if the Books of Scripture had been proposed to them by the other parts of the Church, where they had been before received, and had been doubted of, or even rejected by those barbarous Nations, but still by the bare belief and practice of Christianity, they might be saved; God requiring of us under pain of damnation, only to believe the verities therein contained, and not the divine Authority of the Books wherein they are contained. Not but that it were now very strange and unreasonable, if a man should believe the matter of these Books, and not the Authority of the Books: and therefore, if a man should profess the not-believing of these, I should have reason to fear he did not believe that. But there is not always an equal necessity for the belief of those things, for the belief whereof there is an equal reason. We have, I believe, as great reason to believe there was such a man as Henry the eighth King of England, as that Jesus Christ suffered under Pontius Pilate: yet this is necessary to be believed, and that is not so. So that, if a man should doubt of or disbelieve that, it were most unreasonably done of him, yet it were no mortal sin, nor no sin at all: God having no where commanded men under pain of damnation to believe all which reason induceth them to believe. Therefore as an Executor, that should perform the whole will of the dead, should fully satisfie the Law, though he did not believe that Parchment to be his written Will, which indeed is so: So I believe, that he, who believes all the particular Doctrins which integrate Christianity, and lives according to them, should be saved, though he neither believed nor knew that the Gospels were written by the Evangelists, or the Epistles by the Apostles.

160. This discourse, whether it be rational, and concluding or no, I submit to better judgment; but sure I am, that the Corollary, which you draw from this Position, that this Point is not Fundamental, is very inconsequent; that is, that we are uncertain of the truth of it, because we say, The whole Church, much more particular Churches and private men may err in points not Fundamental. A pretty Sophism, depending upon this Principle, that whosoever possibly may err, he cannot be certain that he doth not err. And upon this ground, what shall hinder me from concluding, that seeing you also hold, that neither particular Churches nor private men are infallible even in Fundamentals, that even the Fundamentals of Christianity, remain to you uncertain? A Judg may possibly err in judgment, can he therefore never have assurance that he hath judged right? A Traveller may possibly mistake his way, must I therefore be doubtful whether I am in the right way from my Hall to my Chamber? Or can our London Carrier have no certainty, in the middle of the day, when he is sober and in his wits, that he is in the way to London? These, you see, are right worthy consequences, and yet they are as like your own, as an egg to an egg, or milk to milk.

161. And, for the self same reason (you say) we are not certain, that the Church is not Judg of Controversies: But now this self same appears to be no reason; and therefore, for all this, we may be certain enough that the Church is no Judg of Controversies. The ground of this Sophism is very like the former, viz. that we can be certain of the falshood of no propositions, but these only which are damnable errors. But, I pray, good Sir, give me your opinion of these: The Snow is black, the Fire is cold, that M. Knot is Arch-Bishop of Toledo, that the whole is not greater than a part of the whole, that twice two make not four: In your opinion, good Sir, are these damnable Heresies? Or, because they are not so, have we no certainty of the falshood of them? I beseech you Sir, to consider seriously, with what strange captions you have gone about to delude your King and your Country; and, if you be convinced they are so, give glory to God, and let the world know it by your deserting that Religion, which stands upon such deceitful foundations.

162. Besides (you say) among publique Conclusions defended in Oxford, the year 1633. to the Questions, Whether the Church have Authority to determine Controversies of Faith? And to interpret holy Scripture? The Answer to both is affirmative. But what now if I should tell you, that, in the year 1632. among publique Conclusions defended in Doway, one was, That God predeterminates men to all their actions, good, bad, and indifferent? Will you think your self obliged to be of this opinion? If you will, say so: If not, do as you would be done by. Again, me-thinks, so subtile a man as you are, should easily apprehend a wide difference between Authority to do a thing, and Infallibility in doing it: and again, between a Conditional Infallibility and an Absolute. The former, the Doctor, together with the Article of the Church of England, attributeth to the Church, nay to particular Churches, and I subscribe to his opinion; that is, an Authority of determining Controversies of Faith, according to plain and evident Scripture and Universal Tradition; and Infallibility while they proceed according to this Rule. As if there should arise an Heretique, that should call in question Christ's Passion and Resurrection, the Church had Authority to decide this Controversie, and infallible direction how to do it, and to excommunicate this man, if he should persist in error. I hope, you will not deny but that the Judges haue Authority to determine Criminal and Civil Controversies; and yet, I hope, you will not say, that they are absolutely infallible in their determination. Infallible while they proceed according to Law, and if they do so: but not infallibly certain that they shall ever do so. But that the Church should be infallibly assisted by God's Spirit to decide rightly all emergent Controversies, even such as might be held diversly of divers men, Salva compage fidei, and that we might be absolutely certain that the Church should never fail to decree the truth, whether she used means means or no, whether she proceed according to her Rule or not; or lastly, that we might be absolutely certain that she would never fail to proceed according to her Rule, this the Defender of these Conclusions said not: and therefore said no more to your purpose, than you have all this while, that is, just nothing.

163. Adj. 27. To the place of S. Austin alledged in this Paragraph, I Answer, First, that in many things you will not be tried by S. Augustin's judgment, nor submit to his Authority; not concerning Appeals to Rome, not concerning Transubstantiation, not touching the use and worshipping of Images, not concerning the State of Saints Souls before the day of Judgment, not touching the Virgin Maries freedom from actual and original sin, not touching the necessity of the Eucharist for Infants, not touching the damning Infants to hell that die without Baptism, not touching the knowledg of Saints departed, not touching Purgatory, not touching the fallibility of Councils, even general Councils; not touching perfection and perspicuity of Scripture in matters necessary to Salvation, not touching Auricular Confession, not touching the half-Communion, not touching prayers in an unknown tongue; In these things, I say, you will not stand to S. Austin's judgment, and therefore can with no reason or equity require us to do so in this matter. 2. To S. Augustine in heat of disputation against the Donatists, and ransacking all places for Arguments against them, we oppose S. Austin out of this heat, delivering the Doctrin of Christianity calmly and moderately; where he says, In iis quæ apertè posita sunt in sacris Scripturis, omnia ea reperiuntur quæ continent fidem, moresque vivendi. 3. We say, he speaks not of the Roman but the Catholique Church, of far greater extent, and therefore of far greater credit and authority than the Roman Church. 4. He speaks of a point not expressed, but yet not contradicted by Scripture; whereas the errors we charge you with, are contradicted by Scripture. 5. He says not that Christ hath recommended the Church to us for an infallible definer of all emergent Controversies, but for a credible witness of ancient Tradition. Whosoever therefore refuseth to follow the practice of the Church (understand of all places and ages) though he be thought to resist our Saviour, what is that to us, who cast off no practices of the Church, but such as are evidently post-nate to the time of the Apostles, and plainly contrary to the practice of former and purer times. Lastly, it is evident, and even to Impudence it self undeniable, that upon this ground, of believing all things taught by the present Church as taught by Christ, Error was held; for example, the necessity of the Eucharist for Infants, and that in S. Austin's time, and that by S. Austin himself: and therefore without controversie this is no certain ground for truth, which may support falshood as well as truth.

164. To the Argument wherewith you conclude, I answer, That though the Visible Church shall always without fail propose so much of God's Revelation, as is sufficient to bring men to Heaven, for otherwise it will not be the visible Church; yet it may sometimes add to this revelation things superfluous, nay, hurtful, nay in themselves damnable, though not unpardonable; and sometimes take from it things very expedient and profitable; and therefore it is possible, without sin, to resist in some things the Visible Church of Christ. But you press us farther, and demand, What visible Church was extant, when Luther began, whether it were the Roman or Protestant Church? As if, it must of necessity either be Protestant or Roman; or Roman of necessity, if it were not Protestant. Yet this is the most usual fallacy of all your Disputers, by some specious Arguments to perswade weak men, that the Church of Protestants cannot be the true Church; and thence to infer, that without doubt it must be the Roman. But why may not the Roman be content to be a part of it, and the Grecian another? And if one must be the whole why not the Greek Church, as well as the Roman? there being not one Note of your Church which agrees not to her as well as to your own; unless it be, that she is poor, and oppressed by the Turk, and you are in glory and splendor.

165. Neither

165. Neither is it fo eaſie to be determined as you pretend, That Luther and other Proteſtants oppoſed the whole viſible Church in matters of Faith; neither is it ſo evident, that the Viſible Church may not fall into ſuch a ſtate wherein ſhe may be juſtly oppoſed. And laſtly, for calling the diſtinction of points into Fundamental and not Fundamental, an Evaſion, I believe, you will find it eaſier to call it ſo, than to prove it ſo. But that ſhall be the iſſue of the Controverſie in the next Chapter.

CHAP. III.

That the diſtinction of Points Fundamental and not Fundamental, is neither pertinent, nor true in our preſent Controverſie. And that the Catholique Viſible Church cannot Err, in either kind of the ſaid Points.

THis diſtinction is abuſed by Proteſtants to many purpoſes of theirs; and therefore if it be either untrue or impertinent (as they underſtand, and apply it) the whole edifice built thereon, muſt be ruinous and falſe. For, if you object their bitter and continued diſcords in matters of Faith, without any means of agreement: they inſtantly tell you (as Charity Miſtaken plainly ſhews) that they differ only in Points not Fundamental. If you convince them, even by their own Confeſſions, that the Ancient Fathers taught divers Points held by the Roman Church againſt Proteſtants: they reply, that thoſe Fathers may nevertheleſs be ſaved, becauſe thoſe errors were not Fundamental. If you will them to remember, that Chriſt muſt always have a Viſible Church on earth, with adminiſtration of Sacraments, and ſucceſſion of Paſtors, and that when Luther appeared there was no Church diſtinct from the Roman, whole Communion and Doctrine, Luther then forſook, and for that cauſe muſt be guilty of Schiſm and Hereſie: they have an Anſwer (ſuch as it is) that the Catholique Church cannot periſh, yet may err in Points not Fundamental, and therefore Luther and other Proteſtants were obliged to forſake her for ſuch errors, under pain of Damnation: as if (forſooth) it were Damnable, to hold an error not Fundamental, nor Damnable. If you wonder how they can teach, that both Catholiques and Proteſtants may be ſaved in their ſeveral Profeſſions: they ſalve this contradiction, by ſaying, that we both agree in all Fundamental Points of Faith, which is enough for ſalvation. And yet, which is prodigiouſly ſtrange, they could never be induced to give a Catalogue what Points in particular be Fundamental, but only by ſome general deſcription, or by referring us to the Apoſtles Creed, without determining, what Points therein be Fundamental, or not Fundamental for the matter: and in what ſenſe they be, or be not, ſuch: And yet concerning the meaning of divers Points contained in, or reduced to the Creed, they differ both from us, and among themſelves. And indeed, it being impoſſible for them to exhibit any ſuch Catalogue, the ſaid diſtinction of Points, although it were pertinent and true, cannot ſerve them to any purpoſe, but ſtill they muſt remain uncertain, whether or not they diſagree from one another, from the ancient Fathers, and from the Catholique Church, in Points Fundamental: which is ſo ſay, they have no certainty whether they enjoy the ſubſtance of Chriſtian Faith, without which they cannot hope to be ſaved. But of this more hereafter.

2. And to the end, that what ſhall be ſaid concerning this diſtinction may be better underſtood, we are to obſerve, that there be two precepts which concern the vertue of Faith, or our obligation to believe divine Truths. The one is by Divines called Affirmative, whereby we are obliged to have a poſitive explicit belief of ſome chief Articles of Chriſtian Faith. The other is termed Negative, which ſtrictly binds us not to diſbelieve, that is, not to believe the contrary of any one Point ſufficiently repreſented to our underſtandings, as revealed or ſpoken by Almighty God. The ſaid Affirmative Precept (according to the nature of ſuch commands) injoyns ſome Act to be performed but not at all times, nor doth it equally bind all ſorts of perſons, in reſpect of all Objects to be believed. For Objects; we grant that ſome are more neceſſary to be explicitely and ſeverally believed than other: either becauſe they are in themſelves more great, and weighty; or elſe in regard they inſtruct us in ſome neceſſary Chriſtian duty towards God, our ſelves, or our Neighbour. For Perſons; no doubt but ſome are obliged to know diſtinctly more than others, by reaſon of their office, vocation, capacity, or the like. For Times; we are not obliged to be ſtill in act of exerciſing acts of Faith, but according as ſeveral occaſions permit or require. The ſecond kind of Precept called Negative, doth (according to the nature of all ſuch commands) oblige univerſally, all Perſons, in reſpect of all Objects; and at all Times; ſemper & pro ſemper, as Divines ſpeak. This general Doctrin will be more clear by Examples. I am not obliged to be always helping my Neighbour, becauſe the Affirmative Precept of Charity bindeth only in ſome particular caſes: But I am always bound by a Negative Precept, never to do him any hurt, or wrong. I am not always bound to utter what I know to be true: yet I am obliged, never to ſpeak any one leaſt untruth, againſt my knowledge. And (to come to our preſent purpoſe) there is no affirmative Precept, commanding us to be at all times actually believing any one, or all Articles of Faith; But we are obliged, never to exerciſe any act againſt any one truth, known to be revealed. All ſorts of Perſons are not bound explicitely and diſtinctly to know all things teſtified by God either in Scripture, or otherwiſe: but every one is obliged, not to believe the contrary of any one Point, known to be teſtified by God. For that were in fact to affirm, that God could be deceived, or would deceive, which were to overthrow the whole certainty of our Faith, wherein the thing moſt principal, is not the Point which we believe, which Divines call the Material Object, but the chiefeſt is the Motive for which we believe, to wit, Almighty God's infallible Revelation, or Authority, which they term the Formal Object of our Faith. In two ſenſes therefore, and with a double relation, Points of Faith may be called Fundamental, and neceſſary to Salvation: The one is taken with reference to the Affirmative Precept, when the Points are of ſuch quality that there is obligation to know and believe them explicitely and ſeverally. In this ſenſe we grant that there is difference betwixt Points of Faith, which D. Potter (a) to no purpoſe laboureth to prove againſt his Adverſary, who in expreſs words doth a Pag. 209. grant and explicate (b) it. But the Doctor thought good to diſſemble the matter, and not to ſay one b Charity Mi- pertinent word in defence of his diſtinction, as it was impugned by Charity Miſtaken, and as it is wont to be applyed by Proteſtants. The other ſenſe, according to which Points of Faith may be called Fundamental, and neceſſary to Salvation, with reference to the Negative Precept of Faith, is ſuch, that we cannot without grievous ſin, and forfeiture of Salvation, diſbelieve any one Point, ſufficiently propounded, as revealed by Almighty God. And in this ſenſe we avouch, that there is no diſtinction in Points of Faith, as if to reject ſome muſt be damnable, and to reject others, equally propoſed as God's Word, might ſtand with Salvation. Yea, the obligation of the Negative Precept is far more ſtrict, than is that of the Affirmative, which God freely impoſed, and may freely releaſe. But it is impoſſible, that he can diſpenſe, or give leave to diſbelieve, or deny what he affirmeth; and in this ſenſe ſin and damnation are more inſeparable from Error in Points not Fundamental, than from Ignorance in Articles Fundamental. All this I ſhew by an example, which I wiſh to be particularly noted for the preſent, and for divers other occaſions hereafter. The Creed of the Apoſtles contains divers Fundamental Points of Faith, as the Deity, Trinity of Perſons, Incarnation, Paſſion, and Reſurrection of our Saviour Chriſt, &c. It contains alſo ſome Points, for their matter, and nature in themſelves not Fundamental; as under what Judg our Saviour ſuffered, that he was buried, the circumſtance of the time of his Reſurrection the third day, &c. But yet nevertheleſs, whoſoever once knows that theſe Points are contained in the Apoſtles Creed, the denial of them is damnable, and is in that ſenſe a Fundamental error: and this is the preciſe Point of the preſent Queſtion.

3. And all that hitherto hath been ſaid, is ſo manifeſtly true, that no Proteſtant or Chriſtian, if he do but underſtand the terms, and ſtate of the queſtion, can poſſibly deny it: Inſomuch as I am amazed, that men who otherwiſe are indued with excellent wits, ſhould ſo enſlave themſelves to their Predeceſſors in Pro cthanitm, as ſtill to harp on this diſtinction, and never regard how impertinently, and untruly it was employed by them at firſt, to make all Proteſtants ſeem to be of one Faith, becauſe forſooth they agree in Fundamental Points. For the difference amongſt Proteſtants, conſiſts not in that ſome believe ſome Points, of which others are ignorant, or not bound expreſly to know (as the diſtinction ought to be applyed;) but that ſome of them diſbelieve, and directly, wittingly, and willingly oppoſe what others do believe to be teſtified by the Word of God, wherein there is no difference between Points Fundamental, and not Fundamental: Becauſe, till Points Fundamental be ſufficiently propoſed as revealed by God, it is not againſt Faith to reject them, or rather without ſufficient propoſition it is not poſſible prudently to believe them; and the like is of Points not Fundamental, which as ſoon as they come to be ſufficiently propounded as divine Truths, they can no more be denied, than Points Fundamental propounded after the ſame manner. Neither will it avail them to their other end, that, for preſervation of the Church in being, it is ſufficient that ſhe do not err in Points Fundamental. For, if in the mean time ſhe maintain any one Error againſt Gods Revelation, be the thing in it ſelf never ſo ſmall, her Error is damnable and deſtructive of Salvation.

4. But D. Potter forgetting to what purpoſe Proteſtants make uſe of their diſtinction, doth finally overthrow it, and yields to as much as we can deſire. For ſpeaking of that meaſure (c) and quantity of Faith without which none can be ſaved, he ſaith, it is enough to believe ſome things by a virtual Faith, or by a general, and as it were, a negative Faith, whereby they are not denied or contradicted. Now our queſtion is in caſe that divine Truths, although not Fundamental, be denied and contradicted: and therefore, even according to him, all ſuch denial excludes Salvation. After, he ſpeaks more plainly. It is true (faith he) whatſoever (d) is revealed in Scripture, or propounded by the Church out of Scripture, is in ſome ſenſe Fundamental, in regard of the divine authority of God, and his Word, by which it is recommended: that it, ſuch as may not be denied, or contradicted without Infidelity: ſuch as every Chriſtian is bound, with humility and reverence to believe, whenſoever the knowledg thereof is offered to him. And further, where (e) the revealed will or word of God is ſufficiently propounded; there he that oppoſeth, is convinced of Error, and he, who is thus convinced, is an Heretick, and Hereſie is a work of the fleſh which excludeth from heaven, (Gal. 5. 20, 21.) And hence it followeth, that it is FUNDAMENTAL to a Chriſtian's FAITH, and neceſſary for his Salvation, that he believe all revealed Truths of God, whereof he may be convinced that they are from God. Can any thing be ſpoken more clearly or directly for us, that it is a Fundamental Error to deny any one Point, though never ſo ſmall, if once it be ſufficiently propounded as a Divine Truth, and that there is in this ſenſe, no diſtinction betwixt Points Fundamental, and not Fundamental, and if any ſhould chance to imagin, that it is againſt the Foundation of Faith, not to believe Points Fundamental, although they be not ſufficiently propounded, D. Potter doth not admit of this (f) difference betwixt Points Fundamental, and not Fundamental. For he teacheth, that ſufficient propoſition of revealed Truth is required before a man can be convinced, and for want of ſufficient conviction he excuſeth the Diſciples from Hereſie, although they believed not our Saviour's Reſurrection, (g) which is a very Fundamental Point of Faith. Thus then I argue out of D. Potter's own confeſſion: No error is damnable unleſs the contrary Truth be ſufficiently propounded as revealed by God: Every error is damnable, if the contrary Truth be ſufficiently propounded as revealed by God: Therefore all Errors are alike for the general effect of damnation, if the difference ariſe not from the manner of being propounded. And what now is become of their diſtinction?

5. I will therefore conclude with this argument. According to all Philoſophy and Divinity, the Unity and Diſtinction of every thing followeth the Nature and Eſſence thereof; and therefore, if the Nature and Being of Faith, be not taken from the matter which a man believes, but from the motive for which he believes, (which is God's Word or Revelation) we muſt likewiſe aſſiem that the unity and Diverſity of Faith, muſt be meaſured by God's Revelation (which is alike for all objects) and not by the fmalneſs, or greatneſs of the matter which we believe. Now that the nature of Faith is not taken from the greatneſs or ſmalneſs of the things believed, is manifeſt; becauſe otherwiſe one who believes only Fundamental Points, and another, who together with them, doth alſo believe Points not Fundamental, ſhould have Faith of different natures, yea there ſhould be as many differences of Faith, as there there are different Points which men believe, according to different capacities or instructions, &c. all which consequences are absurd, and therefore we must say, that unity in Faith doth not depend upon Points Fundamental, or not Fundamental, but upon Gods Revelation equally or unequally propated: and Protestants pretending an unity only by reason of their agreement in Fundamental Points, do indeed induce as great a multiplicity of Faith as there is multitude of different objects which are believed by them, and since they disagree in things Equally revealed by Almighty God, it is evident that they forsake the very Formal motive of Faith, which is God's revelation, and consequently lose all Faith and unity therein.

6. The first part of the Title of this Chapter (That the distinction of Points Fundamental, and not Fundamental in the sense of Protestants, is both impertinent and untrue) being demonstrated; let us now come to the second: That the Church is infallible in all her definitions, whether they concern Points Fundamental, or not Fundamental. And this I prove by these reasons.

7. It hath been shewed in the precedent Chapter, that the Church is Judg of Controversies; which she could not be, if she could err in any one Point; as D. Potter would not deny, if he were once perswaded that she is Judg. Because, if she could err in some Points, we could not rely upon her Authority and Judgment in any one thing.

8 This same is proved by the reason we alledged before, that seeing the Church was infallible in all her definitions e're Scripture was written (unless we will take away all certainty of Faith for that time) we cannot with any shew of reason affirm, that she hath been deprived thereof by the adjoyned comfort and help of Sacred Writ.

9. Moreover, to say that the Catholique Church may propose any false Doctrin, maketh her liable to damnable sin and error; and yet D. Potter teacheth that the Church cannot err damnably. For if in that kind of Oath, which Divines call assertorium, wherein God is called to witness, every falshood is a deadly sin in any private person whatsoever, although the thing be of it self neither material nor prejudicial to any; because the quantity or greatness of that sin is not measured so much by the thing which is affirmed, as by the manner, and authority whereby it is avouched, and by the injury that is offered to Almighty God, in applying his testimony to a falshood: in which respect it is the unanimous consent of all Divines, that in such kind of Oaths, no levitas materiæ, that is smallness of matter, can excuse from a moral sacriledg, against the moral vertue of Religion, which respects worship due to God: If, I say, every least falshood be deadly sin in the forelaid kind of Oath, much more pernicious a sin must it be in the publick person of the Catholique Church to propound untrue Articles of Faith, thereby fastening God's Prime Verity to a falshood, and inducing, and obliging the world to do the same. Besides, according to the Doctrin of all Divines, it is not only injurious to God's Eternal Verity, to disbelieve things by him revealed, but also to propose as revealed Truths, things not revealed: as in Commonwealths it is a heinous offence to coin either by counterfeiting, the metal or the stamp, or to apply the King's Seal to a writing counterfeit, although the contents were supposed to be true. And whereas to shew the detestable sin of such pernicious fictions, the Church doth most exemplarily punish all broachers of feigned revelations, visions, miracles, prophecies, &c. as in particular appeareth in the Council of (n) Lateran; excommunicating such persons; if the Church her self could propose false revelations, she her self should have been the first, and chiefest deserver to have been censured, and, as it were, excommunicated by her self. For as the Holy Ghost saith in (i) Job, Doth God need your lye, that for him you may speak deceits? And that of the Apocalyps is most truly verified in fictious revelations: If any (k) shall add to these things, God will add unto him the plagues which are written in this Book: and D. Potter saith, to add (l) to it (speaking of the Creed) is high presumption, almost as great as to detract from it. And therefore to say the Church may add false revelations, is, to accuse her of high presumption, and of pernicious errors excluding Salvation.

10. Perhaps some will here reply, that although the Church may err, yet it is not imputed to her for sin, by reason she doth not err upon malice or wittingly, but by ignorance, or mistake.

11. But it is easily demonstrated that this excuse cannot serve. For if the Church be assisted only for Points Fundamental, she cannot but know, that she may err in Points not Fundamental, at least she cannot be certain that she cannot err, and therefore cannot be excused from headlong and pernicious temerity, in propoſing Points not Fundamental, to be believed by Christians, as matters of Faith, wherein she can have no certainty, yea, which always imply a falshood. For although the thing might chance to be true, and perhaps also revealed; yet for the matter, she for her part, doth always expose her self to danger of falshood and error; and in fact doth always err in the manner in which she doth propound any matter not Fundamental; because she propoſeth it as a Point of Faith certainly true, which yet is always uncertain, if she in such things may be deceived.

12. Besides, if the Church may err in Points not Fundamental, she may err in propoſing some Scripture for Canonical, which is not such: or else err in not keeping and conserving from corruptions such Scriptures as are already believed to be Canonical. For I will suppose, that in such Apocryphal Scripture as she delivers, there is no Fundamental Error against Faith, or that there is no falshood at all, but only want of Divine testification: in which case D. Potter must either grant that it is a Fundamental Error to apply Divine revelation to any Point not revealed, or else must yield, that the Church may err in her Propoſition, or Custody of the Canon of Scripture: and so we cannot be sure whether she hath not been deceived already, in Books recommended by her, and accepted by Christians. And thus we shall have no certainty of Scripture, if the Church want certainty in all her definitions, And it is worthy to be observed, that some Books of Scripture which were not always known to be Canonical, have been afterward received for such; but never any one Book or syllable defined by the Church to be Canonical, was afterward questioned, or rejected for Apocryphal. A sign that God's Church is infallibly assisted by the Holy Ghost, never to propose as Divine truth, any thing not revealed by God: and that, omission to define Points not sufficiently discussed is laudable, but commission in propounding things not revealed, inexcusable; into which precipitation our Saviour Christ never hath, nor never will, permit his Church to fall.

13. Nay, to limit the general promises of our Saviour Christ made to his Church to Points only m Mat. 16. 18. Fundamental, namely, that the gates (m) of hell shall not prevail against her: and that the Holy Ghost n Joan. 16. 13. (n) shall lead her into all Truth, &c. is to destroy all Faith. For we may by that Doctrin, and manner ner of interpreting the Scripture, limit the Infallibility of the Apostles words, and preaching, only to Points Fundamental: and whatsoever general Texts of Scripture shall be alledged for their infallibility, they may by D. Potter's example be explicated, and restrained to Points Fundamental. By the same reason it may be further affirmed, that the Apostles, and other Writers of Canonical Scripture, were indued with infallibility, only in setting down Points Fundamental. For, if it be urged, that all Scripture is divinely inspired; that it is the Word of God, &c. D. Potter hath afforded you a ready answer, to say, that Scripture is inspired, &c. only in those parts, or parcels, wherein is delivereth Fundamental Points. In this manner D. Potter by faith, The Apostle (o) writes to one o Tullis Ser-warrant of the express Word of God, that part of his writings should be observed as the word of man. D. pag. 52.

Potter also speaks very dangerously towards this purpose, Sect. 5. where he endeavoureth to prove, that the infallibility of the Church is limited to Points Fundamental, because, as Nature, so God is p Pag. 150.
neither defective in (p) necessaries, nor lavish in superfluities. Which reason doth likewise prove, that the infallibility of Scripture, and of the Apostles must be restrained to Points necessary to Salvation, that so God be not accused, as defective in (p) necessaries, or lavish in superfluities. In the same place he hath a discourse much tending to this purpose, where speaking of these words: The Spirit shall lead you q Joan. c. 16.

marily made to the Apostles (who had the Spirits guidance in a more high and absolute manner than any since 13 &c. 14. 16. them) yet it was made to them for the behoof of the Church, and is verified in the Church Universal. But all truth is not simply all, but all of some kind. To be lead into all truths, is to know and believe them. And who is so simple, as to be ignorant, that there are millions of Truths (in Nature, History, Divinity) where of the Church is simply ignorant? How many Truths lie concealed in the infinite Treasury of God's wisdom, wherewith the Church is not acquainted, &c. So then, the Deity it self obligeth us to confess of (all Truths) not simply all, nor all which God can possibly reveal, but all pertaining to the substance of Faith, all Truth absolutely necessary to Salvation. Mark what he saith. That promise (The Spirit shall lead you into all Truth) was made directly to the Apostles, and is verified in the Universal Church, but by a sense not restrained simply all, but all appertaining to the substance of Faith, and absolutely necessary to Salvation. Do it not hence follow, that the promise made to the Apostles of being led into all Truth, is to be understood only of all Truth absolutely necessary to Salvation; and consequently their preaching, and writing were not infallible in Points not Fundamental? or, if the Apostles were infallible in all things which they propoſed as divine Truth, the like must be affirmed of the Church, because D. Potter teacheth, the said promise to be verified in the Church, and as he limits the aforesaid words to Points Fundamental; so may he restrain, what other Text soever, that can be brought for the universal infallibility of the Apostles or Scriptures. So he may; and so he must, lest otherwise he receive this answer of his own from himself, How many Truths lie concealed in the infinite Treasury of God's wisdom, wherewith the Church is not acquainted? And therefore to verifie such general sayings, they must be understood of Truths absolutely necessary to Salvation. Are not these fearful consequences? And yet D. Potter will never be able to avoid them, till he come to acknowledg the infallibility of the Church in all Points by her propoſed as divine Truths; and thus it is universally true that she is led into all Truth, in regard that our Saviour never permits her to define, or teach any falshood.

14. All, that with any colour may be replyed to this Argument, is; That, if once we call any one Book, or parcel of Scripture in question; although for the matter it contain no Fundamental error, yet it is of great importance and Fundamental, by reason of the consequence; because, if once we doubt of one Book received for Canonical, the whole Canon is made doubtful and uncertain, and therefore the infallibility of Scripture must be universal, and not confined within compass of Points Fundamental.

15. I answer: For the thing it self it is very true, that if I doubt of any one parcel of Scripture received for such, I may doubt of all: and thence by the same parity I infer, that, if we did doubt of the Churches infallibility in some Points, we could not believe her in any one, and consequently not in propounding Canonical Books, or any other Points Fundamental, or not Fundamental; which thing being most absurd, and withal most impious, we must take away the ground thereof, and believe that she cannot err in any Point great or small: and so this reply doth much more strengthen what we intend to prove. Yet I add, that Protestants cannot make use of this reply with any good coherence to this their distinction, and some other Doctrins which they defend. For, if D. Potter can tell what Points in particular be Fundamental (as in his 7. Sect. he pretendeth) then he might be sure, that whensoever he meets with such Points in Scripture, in them, it is infallibly true, although it may err in others: and not only true but clear, because Protestants teach, that, in matters necessary to salvation, the Scripture is so clear, that all such necessary Truths are either manifestly contained therein, or may be clearly deduced from it. Which Doctrins being put together, to wit: That Scriptures cannot err in Points Fundamental; that they clearly contain all such Points; and that they can tell what Points in particular be such, I mean Fundamental; it is manifest, that it is sufficient for Salvation, that Scripture be infallible only in Points Fundamental. For supposing these Doctrins of theirs to be true, they may be sure to find in Scripture all Points necessary to Salvation, although it were fallible in other Points of less moment. Neither will they be able to avoid this impiety against Holy Scripture, till they renounce their other Doctrins, and in particular, till they believe that Christ's promises to his Church, are not limited to Points Fundamental.

16. Besides, from the fallibility of Christ's Catholique Church in some Points, it followeth, that no true Protestants, learned or unlearned, do or can with assurance believe the universal Church in any one Point of Doctrin. Nor in Points of leſſer moment, which they call not-Fundamental; because they believe that in such Points she may err. Not in Fundamental; because they must know what Points be Fundamental, before they go to learn of her, lest otherwise they be rather deluded than instructed; in regard that her certain, and infallible direction extends only to Points Fundamental. Now, if before they address themselves to the Church, they must know what Points are Fundamental, they learn not of her, but will be as fit to teach, as to be taught by her: How then are all Christians so often, so seriously, upon so dreadful menaces, by Fathers, Scriptures, and our blessed Saviour himself, counselled and commanded to seek, to hear, to obey the Church; St. Austin was of a very different mind from Protestants: If (s) faith he) the (t) Church through the whole world publish any s Epist. 112.

those things, to dispute whether that ought to be so done, is a most insolent madness. And in another place he saith, That which (t) the whole Church holds, and is not ordained by councils, but hath always been kept, is most rightly believed to be delivered by Apostolical Authority. The same holy Father teacheth, that the custom of baptizing children cannot be proved by Scripture alone, and yet that it is to be believed, as deriv'd from the Apostles. The custom of our Mother the (u) Church (saith he) in baptizing Infants is in no wise to be contemned, nor to be accounted superfluous, nor is it at all to be believed, unless it were an Apostolical Tradition. And elsewhere. Christ (w) is of profit to Children baptized, is he the cause of profit to persons not believing? But, God forbid, that I should say, Infants do not believe. I have already said, he believes in another, who joined in another. It is said, he believes, and it is of force, and he is reckoned among the faithful that are baptized. This the Authority of our Mother the Church hath; against this strength, against this invincible wall whosoever rashly shall be crushed in pieces. To this argument the Protestants in the Conference at Ratisbon gave this round answer : Nos ab Augustino baptizing Infants be not Fundamental in D. Potter's sense, then according to S. Augustine, the infallibility of the Church extends to Points not Fundamental. But if on the other side it be a Fundamental Point; then, according to the same holy Doctor, we must relie on the authority of the Church for some Fundamental Point not contained in Scripture, but delivered by Tradition. The like argument I frame out of the same Father about the not re-baptizing of those who were baptized by Hereticques, whereof he excellently to our present purpose speaketh in this manner, We follow (y) indeed in this matter even the most certain authority of Canonical Scriptures. But how? consider his words; Although verily there be brought no example for this Point out of the Canonical Scriptures, yet even in this Point the truth of the same Scripture is held by us, while we do that, which the authority of Scriptures doth recommend, that is, because the holy Scripture cannot deceive us, whosoever is afraid to be deceived by the obscurity of this question, must have recourse to the same Church concerning it, which without any ambiguity the holy Scripture doth demonstrate to us. Among many other Points in the aforesaid words, we are to observe, that according to this holy Father, when we prove some Points not particularly contained in Scripture, by the authority of the Church; even in that case we ought not to be said to believe such Points without Scripture, because Scripture it self recommends the Church; and therefore relying on her, we relie on Scripture, without danger of being deceived by the obscurity of any question defined by the Church. And elsewhere he saith, seeing this is (z) written in no Scripture, we must believe the testimony of the Church, which Christ declareth to speak the truth. But it seems D Potter is of opinion that this Doctrin about not re-baptizing such as were baptized by Hereticques, is no necessary Point of Faith, nor the contrary an Heresie: wherein he contradicteth S. Augustine, from whom we have now heard, that what the Church teacheth, is truly said to be taught by Scripture; and consequently to deny this particular Point, delivered by the Church, is to oppose Scripture it self. Yet if he will needs hold, that this Point is not Fundamental, we must conclude out of S. Augustine, (as we did concerning the baptizing of Children) that the infallibility of the Church reacheth to Points not Fundamental. The same Father in another place, concerning this very question of the validity of Baptism conferred by Hereticques, saith, The (a) Apostles indeed have prescribed nothing of this, but this Custom ought to be believed, to be originally taken from their Tradition, as there are many things that the universal Church observeth, which are therefore with good reason believed to have been commanded by the Apostles, although they be not written, No less clear is S. Chrysostom for the infallibility of the Traditions of the Church. For, treating on these words (2 Thes. 2. Stand, and hold the Traditions which you have learned, whether by speech or by Epistle) he saith: Hence it is (b) manifest that they delivered not all things by letter, but many things also without writing, and these also are worthy of belief. Let us therefore account the Tradition of the Church to be worthy of belief, It is a Tradition: Seek no more. Which words are so plainly against Protestants, that Whitaker is as plain with S. Chrysostom, saying: I answer (c) that this is an inconsiderate speech, and unworthy so great a Father. But let us conclude with S. Augustine, that the Church cannot approve any Error against Faith, or good manners. The Church (saith he) being (d) placed between much chaff and cockle, doth tolerate many things; but yet she doth not approve, nor dissemble, nor do those things which are against Faith, or good life.

17. And as I have proved that Protestants, according to their grounds, cannot yield infallible assent to the Church in any one Point: so by the same reason I prove, that they cannot relie upon Scripture it self in any one Point of Faith. Not in points of lesser moment (or not Fundamental) because in such Points the Catholique Church, (according to D. Potter) and much more any Protestant may err, and think it is contained in Scripture, when it is not. Not in Points Fundamental, because they must first know what Points be Fundamental, before they can be assured, that they cannot err in understanding the Scripture; and consequently, independently in Scripture, they must foreknow all Fundamental Points of Faith: and therefore they do not indeed relie upon Scripture either for Fundamental, or not Fundamental Points.

18. Besides. I mainly urge D. Potter, and other Protestants, that they tell us of certain Points which they call Fundamental, and we cannot wrest from them a list in particular of such Points, without which no man can tell whether or no he err in Points Fundamental, and be capable of Salvation. And which is most lamentable, instead of giving us such a Catalogue, they fall to wrangle among themselves about the making of it.

19. Calvin holds the (e) Popes Primacy, Invocation of Saints, Freewill, and such like, to be Fundamental Errors overthrowing the Gospel. Others are not of his mind, as Melanthon, who saith, in the name of himself, and other his Brethren, That the Monarchy of the Bishop of Rome, is of use, or profit, to this end, that consent of Doctrin may be retained. An agreement therefore may easily be established in this Article of the Pope's Primacy, if other Articles could be agreed upon. If the Pop's Primacy be a means, that consent of Doctrin may be retained, first submit to it, and other Articles will be easily agreed upon. Luther also saith of the Pope's Primacy, it may be born (g) with it. And why then, O Luther, did you not bear with it? And how can you and your followers be excused from damnable Schism, who chose rather to divide God's Church, than to bear with that, which you confess may be born with it? But let us go forward. That the Doctrin of Free-will, Prayer for the dead, worshiping of Images, Worship and Invocation of Saints, Real presence, Transubstantiation, Receiving under one kind, Satisfaction, and Merit of Works, and the Mass be not Fundamental errors, is taught (reflective) fective) by divers Protestants carefully alledged in the Protestants (h) Apology, &c. as namely by Perkins, Cartwright, Fulk, Sadeel, Spalatin, Goad, Luther, Reynolds, Whitaker, Tindal, Francis Johnson, with others. Contrary to these, is the confession of the Christian Faith, so called by Protestants, which I mentioned (i) heretofore, wherein we are damned into unquenchable fire, for the Doctrin of Mass, Prayer to Saints, and for the Dead, Freewill, Presence at Idol-service; Mans Merit, with such like, Justification by Faith alone is by some Protestants affirmed to be the seal of the (k) Church: The only principal origin of (l) Salvation, of all other Points of (m) Doctrin the chiefest and weightiest. Which yet, as we have seen is contrary to other Protestants, who teach that merit of good works is not a Fundamental Error; yea, divers Protestants defend merit of good works, as may be seen in (n) Bilson. One would think that the King's Supremacy, for which some likened men lost their lives, was once amongst Protestants held for a Capital Point: but now D. Andrews late of Winchester in his Book against Bellarmine tells us, that it is sufficient to reckon it among true Doctrins. And Whitgift denies that Protestants (o) hold the King's Supremacy to be an essential Point of Faith. O freedom of the new Gospel! Hold with Catholiques, the Pope; or with Protestants, the King; or with Puritans, neither Pope, nor King, to be Head of the Church, all is one, you may be saved. Some, as Calvin, (p) and the whole Sect of the Academical Protestants hold, that Doctrin, about the Supper, Baptism, the state, and office of Christ, how he is one with his Father, the Trinity, Predestination, and divers other such questions are not necessary to Salvation. And (that you may observe how ungrounded, and partial their Assertion be) Perkins teacheth, that the Real presence of our Saviour's Body in the Sacrament, as it is believed by Catholiques, is a Fundamental Error; and yet afterwards the Confubstantiation of Lutherans, not to be such, notwithstanding that divers chief Lutherans, to their Confubstantiation joyn the prodigious Heresie of Ubiquitation. D. Usher in his Sermon of the Unity of the Catholique Faith, grants Salvation to the Ethiopians, who yet with Christian Baptism joyn Circumcision. D. Potter (q) cites the Doctrin of some, whom he termeth men of great learning and judgment; that, all who profess to love and honour JESUS CHRIST are in the visible Christian Church, and by Catholiques to be reputed Brethren. One of these men of great learning and judgment, is Thomas Morton, by D. Potter cited in his Margent, whose love and honour to Jesus Christ, you may perceive by this saying, that the Churches of Arians (who denied our Saviour Christ to be God) are to be accounted the Church of God: because they do hold the foundation of the Gospel, which is Faith in Jesus Christ the Son of God, and Saviour of the world. And, which is more, it seemeth by these ridiculous men, that for being a member of the Church it is not necessary to believe one only God. For D Potter (r) among the arguments to prove Hooker's and Morton's opinion, brings this: The people of the ten Tribes after their defection, notwithstanding their gross corruption and Idolatry, remained still a true Church. We may also, as it seemeth by these mens reasoning, deny the Resurrection, and yet be members of the true Church. For a learned man (saith D. Potter (f) in behalf of Hooker's and Morton's opinion) was answered made a Bishop of the Catholique Church, though he did professedly doubt of the last Resurrection of our Body. Dear Saviour! What times do we behold? If one may be a member of the true Church, and yet deny the Trinity of the Persons, the Godhead of our Saviour, the necessity of Baptism, if we may use Circumcision, and with the worship of God joyn Idolatry, wherein do we differ from Turks, and Jews? or rather, are we not worse than either of them? If they who deny our Saviour's Divinity, might be accounted the Church of God, How will they deny that favour to those ancient Hereticques, who denied our Saviour's true humanity? and so the total denial of Christ will not exclude one from being a member of the true Church. S. Hilary (t) makes it of equal necessity for Salvation, that we believe our Saviour to be true God, and true Man, saying: This manner of Confession we are to hold, that we remember him to be the Son of God, and the Son of Man, because the one without the other, can give no hope of Salvation. And yet D. Potter saith of the aforesaid Doctrin of Hooker and Morton: The (u) Reason may be pleaded to appease, or reject it, as he shall find cause. And in another place (w) he sheweth to much good liking of this Doctrin, that he explicateth and proveth the Churches perpetual Visibility by it. And in the second Edition of his Book, he is careful to declare, and illustrate it more at large than he had done before: howsoever, this sufficiently sheweth, that they have no certainty what Points be Fundamental. As for the Arians in particular, the Author whom D. Potter cites for a moderate Catholique, but is indeed a plain Heretique, or rather Atheist, Lucian-like, jesting at all Religion (x) plays the name of Irenæus Philalethes, in a little Book in Latine, intituled, Dissertatio de fide, & concordia Ecclesiæ, endeavoureth to prove, that even the denial of the Blessed Trinity may stand with Salvation. Divers Protestants have taught, that the Roman Church, erreth in Fundamental Points. But D. Potter, and others teach the contrary, which could not happen if they could agree what be Fundamental Points. You brand the Donatists with the note of an error, in the matter (y) and the nature of it properly heretical; because they taught that the Church remained only with them, in the part of Donatus. And yet many Protestants are so far from holding that Doctrin to be a Fundamental Error, that themselves go further, and say; that for divers ages before Luther there was no true visible Church at all. It is then too too apparent, that you have no agreement in specifying, what be Fundamental Points; neither have you any means to determin what they be; for, if you have any such means, Why do you not agree? You tell us, the Creed contains all Points Fundamental: which, although it were true, yet we see it serves not to bring you to a particular knowledge, and agreement in such Points. And no wonder, For (besides what I have said already in the beginning of this Chapter, and am to deliver more at large in the next) after so much labour and paper spent to prove that the Creed contains all Fundamental Points, you conclude: It remains (a) very probable, that the Creed is the perfect Summary of those Fundamental truths, wherein consists the Unity of Faith, and of the Catholique Church. Very probable? Then according to all good Logick, the contrary may remain very probable, and so all remain as full of uncertainty as before. The whole Rule, say you, and the sole Judg of your Faith, must be Scripture. Scripture doth indeed deliver divine Truths, but seldom doth qualifie them, or declare whether they be, or be not, absolutely necessary to Salvation. You fall (b) heavy upon Charity Mistaken, because he demands a particular Catalogue of Fundamental Points, which yet you are obliged in conscience to do, if you be able. For without such a Catalogue, no man can be assured whether or no he have Faith sufficient to Salvation. And therefore take it not in ill part, if we again and again demand such a Catalogue. And that you may see we proceed fairly, I will perform, on our behalf, what we requeſt of you, and do here deliver a Catalogue, wherein are comprised all Points by us taught to be neceſſary to Salvation in theſe words: we are obliged under pain of damnation, to believe whatſoever the Catholique Viſible Church of Chriſt propoſeth, as revealed by Almighty God. If any be of an other mind, all Catholiques denounce him to be no Catholique. But enough of this. And I go forward with the Infallibility of the Church in all Points.

20. For even out of your own Doctrin, that the Church cannot err in Points neceſſary to Salvation, any wiſe man will infer, that it behoves all who have care of their ſouls, not to forſake her in any one Point. 1. Becauſe they are aſſured, that although her Doctrin proved not to be true, in ſome Point, yet, even according to D. Potter, the Error cannot be Fundamental, nor deſtructive of Faith, and Salvation: neither can they be accuſed of any the leaſt imprudence, in erring (if it were poſſible) with the univerſal Church. Secondly, ſince ſhe is, under pain of eternal damnation, to be believed, and obeyed in ſome things, wherein confeſſedly ſhe is indued with infallibility; I cannot in wiſdom ſuſpect her credible in matters of leſs moment. For who would truſt another in matters of higheſt conſequence, and be afraid to rely on him in things of leſs moment? Thirdly, ſince (as I ſaid) we are undoubtedly obliged not to forſake her in the chiefeſt, or Fundamental Points, and that there is no Rule to know preciſely what, and how many thoſe Fundamental Points be; I cannot without hazard of my ſoul leave her in any one Point, leſt perhaps that Point, or Points, wherein I forſake her, prove indeed to be Fundamental, and neceſſary to Salvation. Fourthly, that Viſible Church, which cannot err in Points Fundamental, doth without diſtinction propound all her Definitions concerning matters of Faith to be believed under Anathema's or Curſes (excuſing all thoſe who reſiſt) to be deſervedly caſt out of her Communion, and holding it a Point neceſſary to Salvation, that we believe ſhe cannot err: wherein if he ſpeak true, then to deny any one point in particular, which ſhe defineth, or to affirm in general, that ſhe may err, puts a man into a ſtate of damnation. Whereas to believe her in ſuch Points as are not neceſſary to Salvation, cannot endanger Salvation; and likewiſe to remain in her Communion can bring no great harm, becauſe ſhe cannot maintain any damnable error, or practice: but to be divided from her (ſhe being Chriſt's Catholique Church) is moſt certainly damnable. Fifthly, the true Church, being in lawful and certain poſſeſſion of Superiority and Power, to command and require Obedience, from all Chriſtians in ſome things; I cannot without grievous ſin withdraw my obedience in any one, unleſs I evidently know, that the thing commanded comes not within the compaſs of thoſe things to which her Power extendeth. And who can better inform me, how far God's Church can proceed, than God's Church her ſelf? Or to what Doctor can the Children and Scholars, with greater reaſon, and more ſecurity ſly for direction, than to the Mother, and appointed Teacher of all Chriſtians: In following her, I ſhall ſooner be excuſed, than in cleaving to any particular Sect, or Perſon, teaching or applying Scriptures againſt her Doctrin, or Interpretation. Sixthly, the fearful examples of innumerable perſons, who, forſaking the Church upon pretence of her Errors, have failed even in Fundamental Points, and ſuffered ſhipwrack of their Salvation, ought to deter all Chriſtians from oppoſing her in any one Doctrin, or practice: as (to omit other, both ancient and modern hereſies) we ſee that divers chief Proteſtants, pretending to reform the corruptions of the Church, are come to affirm firm, that for many ages ſhe erred to death, and wholly periſhed: which D. Potter cannot deny to be a Fundamental Error againſt that Article of our Creed, I believe the Catholique Church, as he affirmeth it of the Donatiſts, becauſe they conduced the Univerſal Church within Africa, or ſome other ſmall tract of ſoil. Leſt therefore I may fall into ſome Fundamental Error, it is moſt ſafe for me to believe all the Decrees of that Church which cannot err Fundamentally: eſpecially if we add, That, according to the Doctrin of Catholique Divines, one error in Faith, whether it be for the matter it ſelf, great or ſmall, deſtroys Faith, as is ſhewed in Charity Mild-ayes; and conſequently to accuſe the Church of any one Error, is to affirm, that ſhe loſt all Faith, and erred damnably: which very ſaying is damnable, becauſe it leaves Chriſt no viſible Church on earth.

21. To all theſe arguments I add this Demonſtration: D. Potter teacheth, that there neither were (e) nor can be any juſt cauſe to depart from the Church of Chriſt, no more than from Chriſt himſelf. But if the Church of Chriſt can err in ſome Points of Faith, men not only may, but muſt forſake her in thoſe; (unleſs D. Potter will have them believe one thing, and profeſs an other:) and if ſuch errors and corruptions ſhould fall out to be about the Churches Liturgy, publick Service, adminiſtration of Sacraments, and the like; they who perceive ſuch errors, muſt of neceſſity leave her external Communion. And therefore, if once we grant the Church may err, it followeth that men may, and ought to forſake her (which is againſt D. Potter's own words) or elſe they are inexcuſable who left the Communion of the Roman Church, under pretence of errors, which they grant not to be Fundamental. And, if D. Potter think good to anſwer this argument, he muſt remember his own Doctrin to be, that even the Catholique Church may err in Points not Fundamental.

22. Another argument for the univerſal Infallibility of the Church; I take out of D. Potter's own words. If (ſaith he) we (d) did not diſſent in ſome opinions from the preſent Roman Church, we could not agree with the Church truly Catholique. Theſe words cannot be true, unleſs he preſuppoſe that the Church truly Catholique, cannot err in Points not Fundamental. For if ſhe may err in ſuch Points, the Roman Church which he affirmeth to err only in Points not Fundamental, may agree with the Church truly Catholique, if the likewiſe may err in Points not Fundamental. Therefore either he muſt acknowledg a plain contradiction in his own words, or elſe muſt grant that the Church truly Catholique cannot err in Points not Fundamental, which is what we intended to prove.

23. If Words cannot perſwade you, that in all Controverſies you muſt rely upon the infallibility of the Church; at leaſt yield your aſſent to Deeds. Hitherto I have produced Arguments drawn as it were, ex natura rei, from the wiſdom and goodneſs of God, who cannot fail to have left ſome infallible means to determine Controverſies, which, as we have proved, can be no other, except a Viſible Church, infallible in all her Definitions. But becauſe both Catholiques and Proteſtants receive holy Scripture, we may thence alſo prove the infallibility of the Church in all matters which concern Faith and Religion. Our Saviour ſpeaketh clearly: The Gates of Hell (e) ſhall not prevail againſt her. And, I will aſk my (f) Father, and he will give you another Paraclete, that he may abide with you for ever, The Spirit of Truth. And, not when he, the Spirit of (g) Truth cometh, he ſhall teach you all truth. The Apoſtle ſaith, that the Church is the Pillar, and ground of (h) Truth. And, He gave ſome Apoſtles, and ſome Prophets, and other ſome Evangeliſts, and others ſome Paſtors and Doctors to the conſummation of the Saints unto the work of the Miniſtry, unto the edifying of the Body of Chriſt: until we meet all into the unity of Faith, and knowledg of the Son of God, into a perfect man, into the meaſure of the age of the fulneſs of Chriſt: that now we be not Children, wavering, and carried about with every wind of Doctrin in the wickedneſs of men, In craftineſs, to the circumvention (i) of Error. All which words ſeem clearly enough to prove, that the Church is univerſally infallible, without which, unity of Faith could not be conſerved againſt every wind of Doctrin. And yet D. Potter (k) limits theſe promiſes and priviledges to Fundamental Points, in which he grants the Church cannot err. I urge the words of Scripture which are univerſal, and do not mention any ſuch reſtraint. I alledg that moſt reaſonable, and received Rule, that Scripture is to be underſtood literally, as it ſoundeth, unleſs ſome manifeſt abſurdity force us to the contrary. But all will not ſerve; to accord our different interpretation. In the mean time divers of D. Potter's Brethren ſtep in, and reject his limitation, as over-large, and ſomewhat taſting of Papiſtry: And therefore they reſtrain the mentioned Texts, either to the infallibility which the Apoſtles, and other learned writers had in penning of Scripture: or elſe to the inviſible Church of the Elect; and to them, not abſolutely, but with a double reſtriction, that they ſhall not fall damnably, and finally; and other men have as much right as theſe, to interpoſe their opinion and interpretation. Behold we are three at debate about the ſelf-ſame words of Scripture: We conſer divers places and Texts: We conſult the Originals: We examin Tranſlations: We endeavour to pray heartily: We profeſs to ſpeak ſincerely: To ſeek nothing but Truth, and Salvation of our own Souls, and that of our Neighbours; and finally, we uſe all thoſe means, which by Proteſtants themſelves are preſcribed for finding out the true meaning of Scripture: Nevertheleſs we neither do, or have any poſſible means to agree, as long as we are left to our ſelves; and when we ſhould chance to be agreed, the doubt would ſtill remain whether the thing it ſelf be a Fundamental Point or no: And yet it were great impiety to imagin that God, the lover of Souls, hath left no certain infallible means, to decide both this, and all other differences ariſing about the interpretation of Scripture, or upon any other occaſion. Our remedy therefore in theſe contentions muſt be, to conſult; and hear Gods Viſible Church, with ſo much acknowledgment of her Power, and Infallibility in whatſoever ſhe propoſeth as a revealed Truth: according to that divine advice of S. Auguſtin in theſe words: If at length (l) thou ſtim to be ſufficiently toſſed, and haſt a deſire to put an end to thy pains, follow the way of the Catholique Diſcipline, which from Chriſt himſelf, by the Apoſtles, hath come down even to us, and from us ſhall deſcend to all poſterity. And though I conceive that the diſtinction of Points Fundamental, and not Fundamental, hath now been ſufficiently confuted; yet that no ſhadow of difficulty may remain, I will particularly refel a common ſaying of Proteſtants, that it is ſufficient for Salvation, to believe the Apoſtles Creed, which they hold to be a Summary of all Fundamental Points of Faith.

k Pag. 151.

l De Util. credi. cap. 8.

The ANSWER to the THIRD CHAPTER.

Wherein it is maintained, that the diſtinction of Points Fundamental and not Fundamental, is in this preſent Controverſie good and pertinent: And that the Catholique Church may err in the latter kind of the ſaid Points.

1. THis Diſtinction is implyed by Proteſtants to many purpoſes, and therefore, if it be pertinent and good, (as they underſtand and apply it) the whole edifice built thereon, muſt be either firm and ſtable, or, if it be not, it cannot be for any default in this Diſtinction.

2. If you object to them diſcords in matter of Faith without any means of agreement, They will anſwer you, that they want not good and ſolid means of agreement in matters neceſſary to Salvation, viz. Their belief of all thoſe things which are plainly and undoubtedly delivered in Scripture, which whoſo believes, muſt of neceſſity believe all things neceſſary to Salvation: and their mutual ſuffering one another to abound in their ſeveral ſenſe, in matters not plainly and undoubtedly there delivered. And for their agreement in all Controverſies of Religion, either they have means to agree about them, or not: If you ſay they have, why did you before deny it; If they have not means, why do you find fault with them, for not agreeing?

3. You will ſay, that their fault is, that by remaining Proteſtants, they exclude themſelves from the means of agreement, which you have, and which by ſubmiſſion to your Church they might have alſo. But if you have means of agreement, the more ſhame for you that you ſtill diſagree. For who, I pray, is more inexcuſably guilty, for the omiſſion of any duty; they that either have no means to do it, or elſe know of none they have, which puts them in the ſame caſe, as if they had none: or they which profeſs to have an eaſie and expedite means to do it, and yet still leave it undone? If you had been blind (saith our Saviour to the Pharisees) you had had no sin; but now you say you see, therefore your sin remaineth.

4. If you say, you do agree in matters of Faith, I say this is ridiculous, for you define matters of Faith to be those wherein you agree. So that to say, you agree in matters of Faith, is to say, you agree in those things wherein you do agree. And do not Protestants do so likewise? Do not they agree in those things, wherein they do agree?

5. But you are all agreed, that only those things wherein you do agree are matters of Faith. And Protestants, if they were wise, would do so too. Sure I am they have reason enough to do so: seeing all of them agree with explicite Faith in all those things, which are plainly and undoubtedly delivered in Scripture, that is, in all which God hath plainly revealed: and with an implicite Faith, in that sense of the whole Scripture which God intended whatsoever was. Secondly, That which you pretend is false; or else, why do some of you hold it against Faith, to take or allow the Oath of allegiance; others as learned and honest as they, that it is against Faith, and unlawful to refuse it, and allow the refusing of it? Why do some of you hold that it is de Fide, that the Pope is Head of the Church by divine Law, others the contrary? Some hold it de Fide, that the Blessed Virgin was free from Actual sin; others that it is not so. Some, that the Popes Indirect power over Princes in Temporalties is de Fide; Others the contrary. Some, that it is Universal Tradition, and consequently de Fide, that the Virgin Mary was conceived in original sin, Others the contrary.

6. But what shall we say now, if you be not agreed touching your pretended means of Agreement, how then can you pretend to Unity either Actual or Potential more than Protestants may? Some of you say, the Pope alone without a Council may determine all Controversies: But others deny it. Some that a general Council without a Pope may do so: Others deny this. Some, Both in conjunction are infallible determiners: Others again deny this. Lastly, some among you, hold the Acceptation of the decrees of Councils by the Universal Church to be the only way to decide Controversies: which others deny, by denying the Church to be infallible. And indeed, what way of ending Controversies can this be, when either part may pretend, that they are part of the Church, & they receive not the Decree, therefore the whole Church hath not received it?

7. Again, Means of agreeing differences are either rational and well-grounded, and of Gods appointment; or voluntary and taken up at the pleasure of men. Means of the former nature, we say, you have as little as we. For where hath God appointed, that the Pope, or a Council, or a Council confirmed by the Pope, or that Society of Christians which adhere to him, shall be the infallible Judg of Controversies? I desire you to shew any one of these Assertions plainly set down in Scripture, (as in all reason a thing of this nature should be) or at least delivered with a full consent of Fathers, or at least taught in plain terms by any one Father for four hundred years after Christ. And if you cannot do this (as I am sure you cannot) and yet will still be obtruding your selves upon us for our Judges, Who will not cry out, ———periisse frontem de rebus?

8. But then for means of the other kind, such as yours are, we have great abundance of them. For besides all the ways which you have devised, which we may make use of when we please, we have a great many more, which you yet have never thought of, for which we have as good colour out of Scripture, as you have for yours. For first, we could, if we would, try it by Lots, whose Doctrine is true, and whose false. And you know it is written, (a) The Lot is cast into the Lap, but the whole disposition of it is from the Lord. 2. We could refer them to the King, and you know it is written, (b) A Divine sentence is in the lips of the King; his mouth transgresseth not in judgment. (c) The Heart of the King is in the hand of the Lord. We could refer the matter to any assembly of Christians a Prov. 16. 33.

b Prov. 16. 10. c Prov. 21. 1.

Christians assembled in the Name of Christ, seeing it is written, (d) Where two or three are gathered together in my Name, there am I in the midst of them. We may refer it to any Priest, because it is written, (e) The Priests lips shall preserve knowledg. (f) The Scribes and Pharisees sit in Moses chair, &c. To any Preacher of the Gospel, to any Pastor, or Doctor, for to every one of them Christ hath promised, (g) He will be with them alwaies even to the end of the world: and of every one of them it is said (h) He that heareth you, heareth me, &c. To any Bishop, or Prelate; for it is written, (i) Obey your Prelates, and again, (k) He hath given Pastors, and Doctors, &c. lest we should be carryed about with every wind of Doctrin. To any particular Church of Christians, seeing it is a particular Church which is called (l) The house of God, the Pillar and Ground of Truth: and seeing of any particular Church it is written, (m) He that heareth not the Church, let him be unto thee as a Heathen or publican. We might refer it to any man that prayes for Gods Spirit; for it is written, (n) Every one that asketh, receiveth: and again, (o) If any man want wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not. Lastly, we might refer it to the Jews, for without all doubt of them it is written, (p) My Spirit that is in thee, &c. All these means of agreement, whereof not any one but hath as much probability from Scripture, as that which you obtrude upon us, offer themselves upon a sudden to me: haply many more might be thought on, if we had time, but these are enough to shew, that would we make use of voluntary and devised means to determine differences, we had them in great abundance. And if you say, These would fail us and Contradict themselves: So as we pretend, yours have. There have been Popes against Popes: Councils against Councils: Councils confirmed by Popes against Councils confirmed by Popes: Lastly, the Church of some Ages against the Church of other Ages.

9. Lastly, whereas you find fault, That Protestants upbraided with their discords, answer, that they differ only in Points not Fundamental: I desire you tell me, Whether they do so, or do not so; If they do so, I hope you will not find fault with the Answer; If you say, they do not so, but in Points Fundamental also, then they are not members of the same Church one with another, no more than with you: And therefore why should you object to any of them, their differences from each other, any more than to your selves, their more and greater differences from you?

10. But they are convinced sometimes even by their own confessions, that the Ancient Fathers taught divers Points of Popery: and then they reply, those Fathers may nevertheless be saved, because those errors were not Fundamental. And may not you also be convinced by the confessions of your own men, that the Fathers taught divers Points held by Protestants against the Church of Rome, and divers against Protestants and the Church of Rome? Do not your Purging Indexes clip the tongues, and seal up the lips of a great many for such confessions? And is not the above-cited confession of your Doway Divines, plain and full to the same purpose? And do not you also, as freely as we, charge the Fathers with errors, and yet say they were saved. Now what else do we understand by an unfundamental error, but such a one with which a man may possibly be saved? So that still you proceed in condemning others for your own faults, and urging Arguments against us, which return more strongly upon your selves.

11. But your will is, We should remember that Christ must alwaies have a Visible Church. Ans. Your pleasure shall be obeyed, on condition you will not forget, that there is a difference between perpetual Visibility, and perpetual Purity. As for the Answer which you make for us, true it is, we believe the Catholique Church cannot perish, yet that she may, and did, err in Points not Fundamental; and that Protestants were obliged to forsake these errors of the Church, as they did, though not the Church for her errors, for that they did not, but continued still Members of the Church. For it is not all one (though you perpetually confound confound them) to forsake the errors of the Church, and to forsake the Church: or to forsake the Church in her error, and simply to forsake the Church: no more than it is for me to renounce my Brothers or my Friends Vices or errors, and to renounce my Brother or my Friend. The former then was done by proteſtants, the latter was not done. Nay not only, not from the Catholique, but not ſo much as from the Roman, did they ſeparate per omnia; but only in thoſe practices which they conceived ſuperſtitious or impious. If you would at this time propoſe a form of Liturgy, which both ſides hold lawful, and then they would not joyn with you in this Liturgy, you might have ſome colour then to ſay, they renounce your Communion abſolutely. But as things are now ordered, they cannot joyn with you in prayers, but they muſt partake with you in unlawful practices, and for this reaſon, they (not abſolutely, but thus far) ſeparate from your Communion. And this, I ſay, they were obliged to do under pain of damnation. Not as if it were damnable to hold an error not damnable, but becauſe it is damnable outwardly to profeſs and maintain it, and to joyn with others in the practice of it, when inwardly they did not hold it. Now had they continued in your Communion, that they muſt have done, viz. have profeſſed to believe, and externally practiſed your Errors, whereof they were convinced that they were Errors: which, though the matters of the Errors had been not neceſſary, but onely profitable, whether it had not been damnable diſſimulation and Hypocriſie, I leave it to you to judg. You your ſelf tell us within two pages after this, That you are obliged, never to ſpeak any one leaſt lye againſt your knowledg, §. 2. Now what is this but to live in a perpetual lye?

12. As for that which in the next place you ſeem ſo to wonder at That both Catholiques and Proteſtants, according to the opinion of Proteſtants, may be ſaved in their ſeveral profeſſions, becauſe forſooth, we both agree in all Fundamental points, I anſwer, this Propoſition ſo crudely ſet down, as you have here ſet it down, I know no Proteſtant will juſtifie. For you ſeem to make them teach, that it is an indifferent thing, for the attainment of Salvation, whether a man believe the Truth or the falſhood; and that they care not in whether of theſe Religions a man live or die, ſo he die in either of them: whereas all that they ſay is this, That thoſe amongſt you which want means to find the Truth, and ſo die in Error; or uſe the beſt means they can with induſtry, and without partiality to find the Truth, and yet dye in error, theſe men, thus qualified, notwithſtanding theſe errors may be ſaved. Secondly, for thoſe that have means to find the Truth, and will not uſe them, they conceive, though their caſe be dangerous, yet if they die with a general repentace for all their ſins, known and unknown, their Salvation is not deſperate. The Truths which they hold of Faith in Chriſt, and Repentance, being as it were an Antidote againſt their Errors, and their negligence in ſeeking the Truth. Eſpecially, ſeeing by confeſſion of both ſides we agree in much more than is ſimply, and indiſpenſably neceſſary to ſalvation.

13. But ſeeing we make ſuch various uſe of this Diſtinction, is it not prodigiouſly ſtrange that we will never be induced to give in a particular Catalogue what points be Fundamental? And why, I pray, is it ſo prodigiouſly ſtrange, that we give no anſwer to an unreaſonable demand? God himſelf hath told us, (a) That where much is given, much ſhall be required; where little is given, little ſhall be required. To Infants, Deaf-men, Mad-men, nothing, for ought we know, is given; and if it be ſo, of them nothing ſhall be required. Others perhaps may have means only given them to believe, (b) That God is, and that he is a rewarder of them that ſeek him; and to whom thus much only is given, to them it ſhall not be damnable, that they believe but only thus much. Which me-thinks is very manifeſt from the Apoſtle, in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, where having firſt ſaid, That without Faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God, he ſubjoyns as his reaſon, For whoſoever cometh unto God, muſt believe that God is, and that he is a Rewarder of them that ſeek him.

him. Where, in my opinion, this is plainly intimated, that this is the minimum quod ſic, the loweſt degree of Faith, wherein, in men capable of Faith, God will be pleaſed: and that with this loweſt degree he will be pleaſed, where means of riſing higher are deficient. Beſides, if without this belief, That God is, and that he is a Rewarder of them that ſeek him, God will not be pleaſed, then his will is, that we ſhould believe it. Now his will it cannot be, that we ſhould believe a Falſhood. It muſt be therefore true, that he is a Rewarder of them that ſeek him. Now it is poſſible, that they which never heard of Chriſt, may ſeek God: therefore it is true, that even they ſhall pleaſe him, and be rewarded by him; I ſay, rewarded, not with bringing them immediately to Salvation without Chriſt, but with bringing them according to his good pleaſure, firſt, to Faith in Chriſt, and ſo to Salvation. To which belief the Story of Cornelius in the 10. Chapter of the Acts of the Apoſtles, and St. Peter's words to him, are to mea great inducement. For firſt it is evident he believed not in Chriſt, but was a meer Gentile, and one that knew not but men might be worſhipped, and yet we are aſſured, that his Prayers and Alms (even while he was in that ſtate) came up for a memorial before God; That his Prayer was heard, and his Alms had in remembrance in the ſight of God, ver. 4. That upon his Then fearing God, and working righteouſneſs, (ſuch as it was) he was accepted with God. But how accepted? Not to be brought immediately to Salvation, but to be promoted to a higher degree of the knowledge of Gods will: For ſo it is in the 4, and 5. ver. Call for Simon whoſe ſirname is Peter, he ſhall tell thee what thou oughteſt to do: and at the 33. ver. We are all here preſent before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God. So that though even in his Gentiliſm, he was accepted in his preſent ſtate, yet if he had continued in it, and refuſed to believe in Chriſt after the ſufficient revelation of the Goſpel to him, and God's Will to have him believe it, he that was accepted before, would not have continued accepted ſtill; for then that condemnation had come upon him, That light was come unto him, and he loved darkneſs more than light. So that (to proceed a ſtep farther) to whom Faith in Chriſt is ſufficiently propounded as neceſſary to Salvation, to them it is ſimply neceſſary and fundamental to believe In Chriſt, that is, to expect remiſſion of ſins and Salvation from him, upon the performance of the conditions he requires; among which conditions one is, that we believe what he hath revealed, when it is ſufficiently declared, to have been revealed by him: For by doing ſo, we ſet to our Seal, that God is true, and that Chriſt was ſent by him. Now that may be ſufficiently declared to one, (all things conſidered,) which (all things conſidered) to another is not ſufficiently declared: and conſequently that may be Fundamental and neceſſary to one, which to another is not ſo. Which variety of Circumſtances, makes it impoſſible to ſet down an exact Catalogue of Fundamentals, and proves your requeſt as reaſonable, as if you ſhould deſire us (according to the Fable) to make a Coat to fit the Moon in all her changes; or to give you a garment that will fit all ſtatures; or to make you a Dial to ſerve all Meridians; or to deſign particularly, what proviſion will ſerve an Army for a year: whereas there may be an Army of ten thouſand, there may be of one hundred thouſand. And therefore without ſetting down a Catalogue of Fundamentals in particular, (becauſe none that can be given, can univerſally ſerve for all men, God requiring more of them to whom he gives more, and leſs of them to whom he gives leſs) we muſt content our ſelves by a general deſcription to tell you what is Fundamental, and to warrant us in doing ſo, we have your example §. 19. where being engaged to give us a Catalogue of Fundamentals, inſtead thereof you tell us only in general, That all is Fundamental, and not to be diſbelieved under pain of damnation, which the Church hath defined. As you therefore think it enough to ſay in general, That all is Fundamental which the Church hath defined, without ſetting down in particular a compleat Catalogue of all things, which in any Age the Church hath defined (which, I believe, you will not undertake to do; and if you do, it will be contradicted by your Fellows:) So in reaſon you might think it enough for us also to say in general, That it is sufficient for any mans salvation to believe that the Scripture is true, and contains all things necessary for salvation; and to do his best endeavour to find and believe the true sense of it: without delivering any particular Catalogue of the Fundamentals of Faith.

14. Neither doth the want of such a Catalogue leave us in such a perplexed uncertainty as you pretend. For though perhaps we cannot exactly distinguish in the Scripture, what is revealed because it is necessary, from what is necessary, consequently and accidentally, meerly because it is revealed: yet we are sure enough, that all that is necessary any way, is there; and therefore in believing all that is there, we are sure to believe all that is necessary. And if we err from the true and intended sense of some, nay, of many obscure and ambiguous Texts of Scripture, yet we may be sure enough, that we err not damnably: because, if we do indeed desire and endeavour to find the Truth, we may be sure we do so, and as sure that it cannot consist with the revealed goodness of God, to damn him for error, that desires and indeavours to find the Truth.

15. Ad §. 2. The effect of this Paragraph (for as much as concerns us) is this, That for any man to deny belief to any one thing, be it great or small, known by him, to be revealed by Almighty God for a Truth, is in effect to charge God with falshood: for it is to say, that God affirms that to be Truth, which he either knows to be not a Truth, or which he doth not know to be a Truth; and therefore without all controversie this is a damnable sin. To this I subscribe with hand and heart: adding withal that not only he which knows, but he which believes (may, though it be erroneously) any thing to be revealed by God, and yet will not believe it nor assent unto it, is in the same case, and commits the same sin of derogation from Gods most perfect and pure Veracity.

16. Ad §. 3. I said purposely (known by himself, and believes himself) For as, without any disparagement of a mans honesty, I may believe something to be false, which he affirms, of his certain knowledge to be true; provided I neither know nor believe that he hath so affirmed: So without any the least dishonour to Gods eternal never-failing Veracity, I may doubt of, or deny some Truth revealed by him, if I neither know nor believe it to be revealed by him.

17. Seeing therefore the crime of calling Gods Veracity into question, and consequently (according to your grounds) of erring Fundamentally, is chargeable upon those only, that believe the contrary of any one point known (not by others, but themselves) to be testified by God: I cannot but fear (though I hope otherwise) that your heart condemned you of a great calumny and egregious sophistry in imputing Fundamental, and damnable Errors to disagreeing Protestants; Because forsooth, some of them disbelieve, and directly, wittingly, and willingly oppose, what others do believe to be testified by the Word of God. The sophistry of your Discourse will be apparent, if it be contrived into a Syllogism: Thus therefore in effect you argue;

Whosoever disbelieves any thing known by himself to be revealed by God, imputes falshood to God, and therefore errs Fundamentally:

But some Protestants disbelieve those things, which Others believe to be testified by God;

Therefore they impute falshood to God, and err Fundamentally.

Neither can you with any colour pretend, that in these words known to be testified by God, you meant, not by himself, but by any other: Seeing he only in fact affirms, that God doth deceive or is deceived, who denies some things which himself knows or believes to be revealed by God, as before I have demonstrated. For otherwise, if I should deny belief to some things which God had revealed secretly to such a man as I had never heard of, I should be guilty of calling Gods Veracity into Question, which is evidently false. Besides, how can it be avoided, but the Jesuits and Dominicans and Franciscans must upon this ground differ Fundamentally, and one of them err damnably, seeing the one of them disbelieves, and willingly opposes, what the others believe to be the Word of God?

18. Whereas

18. Whereas you say, that the difference among Protestants consists not in this, that some believe some points, of which others are ignorant, or not bound expresly to know: I would gladly know, whether you speak of Protestants differing in profession only, or in opinion also. If the first, why do you say presently after, that some disbelieve, what others of them believe? If they differ in opinion, then sure they are ignorant of the truth of each others opinions: it being impossible and contradictious, that a man should know one thing to be true, and believe the contrary; or know it, and not believe it. And if they do not know the truth of each others opinions, then, I hope, you will grant they are ignorant of it. If your meaning were, they were not ignorant, that each other held these Opinions, or of the sense of the opinions which they held; I answer, This is nothing to the convincing of their understandings of the truth of them; and these remaining unconvinced of the truth of them, they are excusable if they do not believe.

19. But, ignorance of what we are expresly bound to know, is it self a fault, and therefore cannot be an excuse: and therefore if you could shew, the Protestants differ in those Points, the truth whereof (which can be but one) they were bound expresly to know, I should easily yield that one side must of necessity be in a mortal crime. But for want of proof of this, you content your self only to say it; and therefore I also might be contented only to deny it, yet I will not, but give a reason for my denial. And my reason is, because our Obligation expresly to know any Divine truth, must arise from Gods manifest revealing of it, and his revealing unto us that he hath revealed it, and that his will is, we should believe it: Now in the Points controverted among Protestants, he hath not so dealt with us, therefore he hath not laid any such Obligation upon us. The Major of this Syllogism is evident, and therefore I will not stand to prove it. The Minor also will be evident to him that considers, That in all the Controversies of Protestants, there is a seeming conflict of Scripture with Scripture, Reason with Reason, Authority with Authority: which how it can consist with the manifest revealing of the truth of either Side, I cannot well understand. Besides, though we grant that Scripture, Reason, and Authority, were all on one side, and the appearances of the other side all easily answerable: yet if we consider the strange power that Education, and Prejudices instilled by it, have over even excellent understandings, we may well imagine, that many truths which in themselves are revealed plainly enough, are yet to such or such a man, prepossest with contrary opinions, not revealed plainly. Neither doubt I but God, who knows whereof we are made, and what passions we are subject unto, will compassionate such infirmities, and not enter into judgment with us for those things, which, all things considered, were unavoidable.

20. But till Fundamentals (say you) be sufficiently proposed (as revealed by God) it is not against Faith to reject them; or rather, it is not possible, prudently to believe them: And points unfundamental being thus sufficiently proposed as divine Truths, may not be denied: Therefore you conclude, there is no difference between them. Ans. A Circumstantial point may by accident become Fundamental, because it may be so proposed, that the denial of it, will draw after it the denial of this Fundamental truth, That all which God says is true. Notwithstanding in themselves there is a main difference between them: Points Fundamental being those only which are revealed by God, and commanded to be preached to all, and believed by all. Points Circumstantial, being such, as though God hath revealed them, yet the Pastors of the Church are not bound under pain of damnation particularly to teach them unto all men every where, and the people may be securely ignorant of them.

21. You say, Not erring in Points Fundamental, is not sufficient for the preservation of the Church; because any Error maintained by it against Gods Revelation is destructive. I answer, If you mean against Gods revelation known by the Church to be so, it is true; but impossible that the Church should do so; for ipso Facto in doing it, it were a Church no longer. But, if you mean against some Revelation, which the Church by error thinks to be no Revelation, it is false. The Church may ignorantly disbelieve such a Revelation, and yet continue a Church; which thus I prove: That the Gospel was to be preached to all Nations, was a Truth revealed before our Saviour's Ascension, in these words, Go and teach all Nations, Mat. 28.19. Yet through prejudice or inadvertence, or some other cause, the Church disbelieved it, as it is apparent out of the 11. and 12. Chap. of the Acts, until the conversion of Cornelius; and yet was still a Church. Therefore to disbelieve some divine Revelation, not knowing it to be so, is not destructive of salvation, or of the being of the Church. Again, it is a plain Revelation of God, that (a) the Sacrament of the Eucharist should be administred in both kinds: and (b) that the publick Hymns and Prayers of the Church should be in such a Language as is most for edification; Yet these Revelations the Church of Rome not seeing, by reason of the veil before their eye, their Churches supposed Infallibility; I hope, the denial of them shall not be laid to their charge, no otherwise than as building hay and stubble on the Foundation, not overthrowing the Foundation it self.

b 1 Cor. 14. 15, 16, 20.

22. Ad §. 2. In the beginning of this Paragraph, we have this Argument against this Distinction; It is enough (by D. Potter's confession) to believe some things negatively, i.e. not to deny them; Therefore all denial of any divine truth excludes Salvation. As if you should say, One Horse is enough for a man to go a journey; Therefore without a Horse no man can go a journey. As if some Divine Truths, viz. those which are plainly revealed, might not be such, as of necessity were not to be denied: and others, for want of sufficient declaration, deniable without danger. Indeed, if D. Potter had said there had been no divine Truth, declared sufficiently or not declared, but must upon pain of damnation be believed, or at least not denied; then might you justly have concluded as you do: but now, that some may not be denied, and that some may be denied without damnation, why they may not both stand together, I do not yet understand.

23. In the remainder you infer out of Dr. Potter's words, That all errors are alike damnable, if the manner of propounding the contrary Truths be not different: which, for ought I know, all Protestants, and all that have sense must grant. Yet I deny your Illation from hence, That the distinction of points into Fundamental and Unfundamental, is vain and uneffectual for the purpose of Protestants. For though being alike proposed as divine Truths, they are by accident alike necessary, yet the real difference still remains between them, that they are not alike necessary to be proposed.

24. Ad §. 5. The next Paragraph, if it be brought out of the clouds, will, I believe, have in it these Propositions: 1. Things are distinguished by their different natures. 2. The Nature of Faith is taken, not from the matter believed, for then they that believed different matters should have different Faiths, but from the Motive to it. 3. This Motive is Gods Revelation. 4. This Revelation is alike for all objects. 5. Protestants disagree in things equally revealed by God: Therefore they forsake the formal motive of Faith: and therefore have no Faith nor Unity therein. Which is truly a very proper and convenient Argument to close up a weak Discourse, wherein both the Propositions are false for matter, confused and disordered for the form, and the Conclusion utterly inconsequent. First, for the second Proposition; Who knows not that the Essence of all Habits (and therefore of Faith among the rest) is taken from their Act, and their Object? If the Habit be general, from the Act and Object in general; if the Habit be special, from the Act and Object in special. Then for the Motive to a thing; that it cannot be of the Essence of the thing to which it moves, who can doubt that knows that a Motive is an efficient cause, and that the efficient is always extrinsecal to the effect? For the fourth, that Gods Revelation is alike for all objects, It is ambiguous: and if the sense of it be, that his Revelation is an equal Motive to induce us to believe all objects revealed by him, it is true, but impertinent: If the sense of it be, that all objects revealed by God are alike (that is, alike plainly and undoubtedly) revealed by by him, it is pertinent, but most untrue. Witness the great diversity of Texts of Scripture, whereof some are so plain and evident, that no man of ordinary sense can mistake the sense of them. Some are so obscure and ambiguous, that to say, this or this is the certain sense of them, were high presumption. For the fifth; Protestants disagree in things equally revealed by God; In themselves perhaps, but not equally to them, whose understandings by reason of their different Educations are fashioned, and shaped for the entertainment of various opinions, and consequently some of them, more enclined to believe such a sense of Scripture, others to believe another; which to say that God will not take into his consideration in judging mens opinions, is to disparage his goodness. But to what purpose is it, that these things are equally revealed to both, (as the light is equally revealed to all blind men) if they be not fully revealed to either? The sense of this Scripture, Why are they then baptized for the dead? and this, He shall be saved, yet so as by fire, and a thousand others, are equally revealed to you and to another Interpreter, that is, certainly to neither. He now conceives one sense of them, and you another; And would it not be an excellent Inference, if I should conclude now as you do; That you forsake the formal motive of Faith, which is Gods Revelation, and consequently lose all Faith and Unity therein? So likewise the Jesuites and Dominicans, the Franciscans and Dominicans, disagree about things equally revealed by Almighty God: and seeing they do so, I beseech you let me understand, why this reason will not exclude them as well as Protestants from all Faith and Unity therein? Thus you have failed of your undertaking in your first part of your Title, and that is a very ill Omen, especially in points of so streight mutual dependance, that we shall have but slender performance in your second Assumpt. Which is, That the Church is infallible in all her definitions, whether concerning Points Fundamental, or not Fundamental.

25. Ad §. 7, & 8. The Reasons in these two Paragraphs, as they were alledged before, so they were before answered, Cap. 2. and thither I remit the Reader.

26. Ad §. 9, 10, 11. I grant that the Church cannot without damnable sin, either deny any thing to be Truth, which she knows to be Gods Truth: or propose any thing as his Truth, which she knows not to be so. But that she may not do this by ignorance or mistake, and so without damnable sin, that you should have proved, but have not. But, say you, This excuse cannot serve: for if the Church be assisted only for Points Fundamental, she cannot but know that she may err in points not Fundamental. Answ. It does not follow, unless you suppose, that the Church knows that she is assisted no farther. But if, being assisted only so far, she yet did conceive by error her assistance absolute and unlimited, or, if knowing her assistance restrained to Fundamentals, she yet conceived by error, that she should be guarded, from proposing any thing but what was fundamental, then the consequence is apparently false. But at least she cannot be certain that she cannot err, and therefore cannot be excused from headlong and pernicious temerity in proposing points not fundamental, to be believed by Christians as matters of Faith. Answ. Neither is this deduction worth any thing, unless it be understood of such unfundamental points, as she is not warranted to propose by evident Text of Scripture. Indeed, if she propose such, as matters of Faith certainly true, she may well be questioned, Quo Warranto? She builds without a foundation, and says, Thus saith the Lord, when the Lord doth not say so: which cannot be excused from rashness and high presumption; such a presumption, as an Embassadour should commit, who should say in his Masters name that for which he hath no Commission; Of the same nature, I say, but of a higher strain: as much as the King of Heaven, is greater than any Earthly King. But though she may err in some points not fundamental, yet may she have certainty enough in proposing others; as for example, these, That Abraham begat Isaac. that St. Paul had a Cloak, that Timothy was sick; because these, though not

Fundamental,

Fundamental, i.e. no eſſential parts of Chriſtianity, yet are evidently, and undeniably ſet down in Scripture, and conſequently, may be without all raſhneſs propoſed by the Church as certain divine Revelations. Neither is your Argument, concluding, when you ſay: If in ſuch things ſhe may be deceived, ſhe muſt be always uncertain of all ſuch things. For, my ſenſe may ſometimes poſſibly deceive me, yet I am certain enough that I ſee what I ſee, and feel what I feel. Our Judges are not infallible in their judgments, yet are they certain enough, that they judge aright, and that they proceed according to the Evidence that is given, when they condemn a Thief, or a Murderer to the Gallows. A Traveller is not always certain of his way, but often miſtaken: and doth it therefore follow that he can have no aſſurance that Charing-Croſs is his right way from the Temple to White-Hall? The ground of your Error here is your not diſtinguiſhing between Actual Certainty and Abſolute Infallibility. Geometricians are not infallible in their own Science: yet they are very certain of thoſe things which they ſee demonſtrated. And Carpenters are not Infallible, yet certain of the ſtraightneſs of thoſe things which agree with their Rule and Square. So though the Church be not infallibly certain, that in all her Definitions, whereof ſome are about diſputable and ambiguous matters, ſhe ſhall proceed according to her Rule; yet being certain of the Infallibility of her Rule, and that in this or that thing ſhe doth manifeſtly proceed according to it, ſhe may be certain of the Truth of ſome particular Decrees, and yet not certain that ſhe ſhall never decree but what is true.

27. Ad §. 12. But if the Church may err in Points not Fundamental, ſhe may err in propoſing Scripture, and ſo we cannot be aſſured whether ſhe have not been deceived already. The Church may err in her Propoſition or cuſtody of the Canon of Scripture, if you underſtand by the Church, any preſent Church of one denomination; for example, the Roman, the Greek, or ſo. Yet have we ſufficient certainty of Scripture, not from the bare teſtimony of any preſent Church, but from Univerſal Tradition, of which the teſtimony of any preſent Church is but a little part. So that here you fall into the Fallacy, à dicto ſecundum quid ad dictum ſimpliciter. For in effect this is the ſenſe of your Argument: Unleſs the Church be infallible, we can have no certainty of Scripture from the Authority of the Church: Therefore unleſs the Church be infallible, we can have no certainty hereof at all. As if a man ſhould ſay, If the Vintage of France miſcarry, we can have no Wine from France: Therefore, if that Vintage miſcarry, we can have no Wine at all. And, for the incorruption of Scripture; I know no other rational aſſurance we can have of it, than ſuch as we have of the incorruption of other ancient Books, that is, the conſent of ancient Copies: ſuch, I mean for the kind, though it be far greater for the degree of it. And if the Spirit of God give any man any other Aſſurance hereof, this is not rational and diſcurſive, but ſupernatural and infuſed. An Aſſurance it may be to himſelf, but no Argument to another. As for the infallibility of the Church; it is ſo far from being a proof of Scriptures Incorruption that no proof can be pretended for it, but incorrupted places of Scripture: which yet are as ſubject to corruption as any other, and more likely to have been corrupted (if it had been poſſible) than any other, and made to ſpeak as they do, for the advantage of thoſe men, whoſe ambition it hath been a long time, to bring all under their Authority. Now then, if any man ſhould prove the Scriptures uncorrupted, becauſe the Church ſays ſo, which is infallible: I would demand again touching this very thing, That there is an Infallible Church, ſeeing it is not of it ſelf evident, how ſhall I be aſſured of it? And what can he anſwer, but that the Scripture ſays ſo, in theſe and theſe places? Hereunto I would ask him, how ſhall I be aſſured, that the Scriptures are incorrupted in theſe places? ſeeing it is poſſible, and not altogether improbable, that theſe men, which deſire to be thought Infallible, when they had the government of all things in their own hands, may have altered them for their purpoſe. If to this he anſwer again, that the Church is infallible and therefore cannot do; I hope it would be apparent, that he runs round in a circle, and proves the Scriptures incorruption, by the Churches infallibility; and the Churches infallibility, by the Scriptures incorruption; and that is in effect the Churches infallibility by the Churches infallibility, and the Scriptures incorruption by the Scriptures incorruption.

28. Now for your Obſervation, that ſome Books, which were not always known to be Canonical have been afterwards received for ſuch. But never any Book or Syllable defined for Canonical, was afterwards queſtioned or rejected for Apocryphal: I demand, touching the firſt ſort, Whether they were commended to the Church by the Apoſtles as Canonical? If not, ſeeing the whole Faith was preached by the Apoſtles to the Church, and ſeeing, after the Apoſtles, the Church pretends to no new Revelations, How can it be an Article of Faith to believe them Canonical? And how can you pretend, that your Church, which makes this an Article of Faith, is ſo aſſiſted as not to propoſe any thing as a Divine Truth which is not revealed by God? If they were, How then is the Church an infallible keeper of the Canon of Scripture, which hath ſuffered ſome Books of Canonical Scripture to be loſt? and others to loſe for a long time their being Canonical, at leaſt, the neceſſity of being ſo eſteemed, and afterwards, as it were by the Law of Poſtliminium hath reſtored their Authority and Canonicalneſs unto them? If this was delivered by the Apoſtles to the Church, the point was ſufficiently diſcuſſed, and therefore your Churches omiſſion to teach it for ſome Ages, as an Article of Faith, nay, degrading it from the number of Articles of Faith, and putting it among diſputable Problems, was ſurely not very laudable. If it were not revealed by God to the Apoſtles, and by the Apoſtles to the Church, then can it be no Revelation, and therefore her preſumption in propoſing it as ſuch, is inexcuſable.

29. And then for the other part of it, That never any Book or Syllable defined for Canonical, was afterward queſtioned or rejected for Apocryphal: Certainly it is a bold Aſſeveration, but extremely falſe. For I demand, The Book of Eccleſiaſticus and Wiſdom, the Epiſtle of St. James, and to the Hebrews, were they by the Apoſtles approved for Canonical: or no? If not, with what face dare you approve them, and yet pretend that all your Doctrine is Apoſtolical; Eſpecially, ſeeing it is evident that this Point is not deducible by rational diſcourſe from any other defined by them. If they were approved by them, this, I hope, was a ſufficient definition: and therefore you were beſt rub your forehead hard, and ſay, that theſe Books were never queſtioned. But if you do ſo, then I ſhall be bold to ask you, what Books you meant in ſaying before, Some Books which were not always known to be Canonical, have been afterwards received? Then for the Book of Macchabees, I hope, you will ſay it was defined for Canonical before St. Gregorie's time: and yet he, lib. 19. Moral. c. 13. citing a Teſtimony out of it, prefaceth to it after this manner, Concerning which matter we do not amiſs, if we produce a Teſtimony out of Books, although not Canonical, yet ſet forth for the edification of the Church. For Eleazer in the Book of Macchabees, &c. Which, if it be not to reject it from being Canonical, is, without queſtion, at leaſt to queſtion it. Moreover, becauſe you are ſo punctual, as to talk of words and ſyllables, I would know whether before Sixtus Quintus his time, your Church had a defined Canon of Scripture or not? If not, then was your Church ſurely a moſt Vigilant Keeper of Scripture, that for 1500. years had not defined what was Scripture, and what was not. If it had, then I demand, Was it that, ſet forth by Sixtus? or that, ſet forth by Clement? or a third different from both? If it were that ſet forth by Sixtus, then is it now condemned by Clement: if that of Clement, it was condemned I ſay, but ſure you will ſay contradicted and queſtioned by Sixtus; If different from both, then was it queſtioned and condemned by both, and ſtill lies under the condemnation. But then laſtly, Suppoſe

it had been true, That both some Book not known to be Canonical had been received, and that never any, after receiving had been questioned: How had this been a sign that the Church is infallibly assisted by the Holy Ghost? In what mode or figure would this Conclusion follow out of these Premisses? Certainly, your flying to such poor signs as these are, is to me a great sign, that you labour with penury of better Arguments: and that thus to catch at shadows and bulrushes, is a shrewd sign of a sinking Cause.

30. Ad §. 13. We are told here, That the general promises of Infallibility to the Church, must not be restrained only to points Fundamental; Because then the Apostles words and writings may also be so restrained. The Argument put in form, and made compleat by supply of the concealed Proposition, runs thus;

The infallibility promised to the present Church of any Age, is as absolute and unlimited, as that promised to the Apostles in their Preaching and Writings:

But the Apostles Infallibility is not to be limited to Fundamentals:

Therefore neither is the Churches Infallibility thus to be limited. Or thus;

The Apostles Infallibility in their Preaching and Writing may be limited to Fundamentals, as well as the Infallibility of the present Church: But that is not to be done: Therefore this also is not to be done.

Now to this Argument, I answer, that, if by may be as well, in the Major Proposition, be understood, may be as possibly: it is true, but impertinent. If by it we understand, may be as justly and rightly, It is very pertinent, but very false. So that as D. Potter limits the infallibility of the Present Church unto Fundamentals, so another may limit the Apostles unto them also. He may do it de facto, but de jure he cannot; that may be done, and done lawfully: this also may be done, but not lawfully. That may be done, and, if it be done, cannot be confuted: This also may be done, but, if it be done, may easily be confuted. It is done to our hand in this very Paragraph, by five words taken out of Scripture, All Scripture is divinely inspired. Shew but as much for the Church: Shew where it is written, That all the Decrees of the Church are divinely inspired; and the Controversie will be at end. Besides, there is not the same reason for the Churches absolute Infallibility, as for the Apostles and Scriptures. For, if the Church fall into error, it may be reformed by comparing it with the Rule of the Apostles Doctrine and Scripture. But, if the Apostles have erred in delivering the Doctrine of Christianity, to whom shall we have recourse, for the discovering and correcting their error? Again, there is not so much strength required in the Edifice as in the Foundation: and, if but wise men have the ordering of the building, they will make it much a surer thing, that the foundation shall not fail the building, than that the building shall not fall from the foundation. And though the building be to be of Brick, or Stone, and perhaps of Wood; yet, if it may be possibly, they will have a Rock for their Foundation, whose stability is a much more indubitable thing, than the adherence of the structure to it. Now the Apostles, and Prophets, and Canonical Writers, are the Foundation of the Church, according to that of St. Paul, Built upon the Foundation of Apostles and Prophets; therefore their stability in reason ought to be greater than the Churches, which is built upon them. Again, a dependant Infallibility (especially if the dependance be voluntary) cannot be so certain as that on which it depends: But the Infallibility of the Church, depends upon the Infallibility of the Apostles, as the straitness of the thing regulated, upon the straitness of the Rule: and besides, this dependance is voluntary; for it is in the power of the Church to deviate from this Rule; being nothing else but an aggregation of men, of which every one hath free-will, and is subject to passions and error: Therefore the Churches Infallibility, is not so certain as that of the Apostles.

31. Lastly, Quid verba audiam, cum facta videam? If you be so Infallible as the the Apostles were, shew it as the Apostles did; They went forth (saith S. Mark) and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming their words with Signs following. It is impossible that God should lye, and that the eternal Truth should set his hand and seal to the confirmation of a falshood, or of such Doctrine as is partly true, and partly false. The Apostles Doctrine was thus confirmed, therefore it was intirely true, and in no part either false or uncertain. I say, in no part of that which they delivered constantly, as a certain divine Truth, and which had the Attestation of Divine Miracles. For that the Apostles themselves, even after the sending of the Holy Ghost, were, and through inadvertence or prejudice, continued for a time in an error, repugnant to a revealed Truth, it is, as I have already noted, unanswerably evident, from the Story of the Acts of the Apostles. For notwithstanding our Saviour's express Warrant and Injunction, To go and preach to all Nations, yet until St. Peter was better informed by a Vision from Heaven, and by the conversion of Cornelius; both he and the rest of the Church, held it unlawful for them, to go or preach the Gospel to any but the Jews.

32. And for those things which they profess to deliver as the Dictates of humane reason and prudence, and not as divine Revelations, why we should take them to be divine Revelations, I see no reason; nor how we can do so, and not contradict the Apostles, and God himself. Therefore when St. Paul says, in the 1 Epist. to the Corinth. 7. 12. To the rest speak I, not the Lord; And again, Concerning Virgins I have no commandment of the Lord, but I deliver my judgment: If we will pretend that the Lord did certainly speak, what St. Paul spake, and that this judgment was God's commandment, shall we not plainly contradict St. Paul, and that Spirit by which he wrote? which moved him to write, as in other places, divine Revelations, which he certainly knew to be such; so in this place, his own judgment touching some things which God had not particularly revealed unto him. And, if Dr. Potter did speak to this purpose (that the Apostles were Infallible only in these things which they spake, of certain knowledge) I cannot see what danger there were in saying so. Yet the Truth is, you wrong Dr. Potter. It is not he, but Dr. Stapleton in him, that speaks the words you cavil at. Dr. Stapleton, saith he, p. 140. is full and punctual to this purpose: then sets down the effect of his discourse l. 8. Princ. Doct. 4. c. 15. and in that, the words you cavil at; and then p. 150. he shuts up this Paragraph with these words; Thus Dr. Stapleton. So that, if either the Doctrine, or the Reason, be not good, Dr. Stapleton not Dr. Potter is to answer for it.

33. Neither do Dr. Potter's ensuing words limit the Apostles infallibility to truths absolutely necessary to salvation, if you read them with any candor: for it is evident, he grants the Church infallible in Truths absolutely necessary; and as evident, that he ascribes to the Apostles, the Spirit's guidance, and consequently infallibility in a more high and absolute manner than any since them. From whence, thus I argue: He that grants the Church infallible in Fundamentals, and ascribes to the Apostles the infallible guidance of the Spirit, in a more high and absolute manner than to any since them, limits not the Apostles infallibility to Fundamentals; But Dr. Potter grants to the Church such a limited infallibility, and ascribes to the Apostles, the Spirit's infallible guidance in a more high and absolute manner; Therefore he limits not the Apostles infallibility to Fundamentals. I once knew a man out of courtesie help a lame Dog over a stile, and he for requital bit him by the fingers: Just so you serve Dr. Potter. He out of courtesie grants you, that those words, The Spirit shall lead you into all Truth, and shall abide with you ever, though in their high, and most absolute sense they agree only to the Apostles, yet in a conditional, limited, moderate, secundary sense, they may be understood of the Church. But says, that if they be understood of the Church, All, must not be simply all, No, nor so large an All, as the Apostles all, but all necessary to salvation. And you, to requite his courtesie in granting you thus much, cavil at him, as if he had preſcribed theſe bounds to the Apoſtles alſo, as well as the preſent Church. Whereas, he hath explained himſelf to the contrary, both in the clauſe fore-mentioned, The Apoſtles, who had the Spirit's guidance in a more high and abſolute manner than any ſince them; and in theſe words enſuing, whereof the Church is ſimply ignorant; and again, wherewith the Church is not acquainted. But moſt clearly in thoſe which being moſt incompatible to the Apoſtles, you with an &c. I cannot but fear, craftily have concealed: How many obſcure Texts of Scripture which ſhe underſtands not? How many School-Queſtions which ſhe hath not, happily cannot determine? And for matters of fact, it is apparent that the Church may err; and then concludes, That we muſt underſtand by All truths, not ſimply All, But (if you conceive the words as ſpoken of the Church) All truth abſolutely neceſſary to ſalvation. And yet, beyond all this, the negative part of his anſwer agrees very well to the Apoſtles themſelves; for that All which they were lead into, was not ſimply All, otherwiſe St. Paul erred in ſaying, we know in part; but ſuch an All as was requiſite to make them the Churches Foundations. Now ſuch they could not be, without freedom from error in all thoſe things which they delivered conſtantly, as certain revealed Truths. For, if we once ſuppoſe they may have erred in ſome things of this nature, it will be utterly undiſcernable what they have erred in, and what they have not. Whereas though we ſuppoſe the Church hath erred in ſome things, yet we have means to know, what ſhe hath erred in, and what ſhe hath not. I mean, by comparing the Doctrine of the preſent Church, with the Doctrine of the Primitive Church delivered in Scripture. But then, laſt of all, ſuppoſe the Doctor had ſaid (which I know he never intended) that this promiſe in this place made to the Apoſtles, was to be underſtood only of Truths abſolutely neceſſary to ſalvation; Is it conſequent that he makes their Preaching and Writing not infallible in Points not Fundamental? Do you not bluſh for ſhame at this Sophiſtry? The Doctor ſays, no more was promiſed in this place; Therefore he ſays no more was promiſed! Are there not other places beſides this? And may not that be promiſed in other places, which is not promiſed in this?

34. But, if the Apoſtles were Infallible in all things propoſed by them as Divine Truths, the like muſt be affirmed of the Church, becauſe Dr. Potter teacheth the ſaid promiſe to be verified in the Church. True, he doth ſo, but not in ſo abſolute a manner. Now what is oppoſed to Abſolute, but Limited, or reſtrained? To the Apoſtles then it was made, and to them only, yet the words are true of the Church. And this very promiſe might have been made to it, though here it is not. They agree to the Apoſtles in a higher, to the Church in a lower ſenſe: to the Apoſtles in a more abſolute, to the Church in a more limited ſenſe. To the Apoſtles abſolutely for the Churches direction: to the Church Conditionally by adherence to that direction, and ſo far as ſhe doth adhere to it. In a word, the Apoſtles were lead into all Truths by the Spirit, efficaciter: The Church is lead alſo into all Truth by the Apoſtles writings, ſufficienter. So that the Apoſtles and the Church may be fitly compared to the Star and the Wiſemen, The Star was directed by the finger of God, and could not but go right to the place where Chriſt was: But the Wiſemen were lead by the Star to Chriſt; led by it, I ſay, not efficaciter or irreſiſtibiliter, but ſufficienter, ſo that if they would, they might follow it; if they would not, they might chuſe. So was it between the Apoſtles writing Scriptures, and the Church. They in their writing were infallibly aſſiſted to propoſe nothing as a divine Truth, but what was ſo. The Church is alſo led into all Truth, but it is by the intervening of the Apoſtles writing: But it is as the Wiſemen were led by the Star, or as a Traveller is directed by a Mercurial Statue, or as a Pilot by his Card and Compaſs: led ſufficiently, but not irreſiſtibly: led as that ſhe may follow, not ſo that ſhe muſt. For, ſeeing the Church is a Society of men, whereof every one (according to the Doctrine of the Romiſh Church) hath free-will in believing, it follows, that the whole Aggregate hath free-will in believing.

And

And if any man ſay that at leaſt it is morally impoſſible, that of ſo many whereof all may believe aright, not any ſhould do ſo: I anſwer, it is true, if they did all give themſelves any liberty of Judgment. But if all (as the caſe is here) captivate their underſtandings to one of them, all are as likely to err as that one. And he more likely to err than any other, becauſe he may err and thinks he cannot, and becauſe he conceives the Spirit abſolutely promiſed to that Succeſſion of Biſhops, of which many have been notoriouſly and confeſſedly wicked men, Men of the World: whereas this Spirit is the Spirit of Truth, whom the world cannot receive, becauſe he ſeeth him not, neither knoweth him. Beſides, let us ſuppoſe, that neither in this, nor in any other place, God had promiſed any more unto them, but to lead them into all Truth, neceſſary for their own and other mens ſalvation: Doth it therefore follow that they were, de facto, led no farther? God indeed is obliged by his Veracity to do all that he hath promiſed, but is there any thing that binds him to do no more? May not he be better than his word, but you will quarrel at him? May not his Bounty exceed his Promiſe? And may not we have certainty enough that oft-times it doth ſo? God at firſt did not promiſe to Solomon, in his Viſion at Gibeon, any more than what he ask'd, which was wiſdom to govern his people, and that he gave him. But yet, I hope, you will not deny that we have certainty enough that he gave him ſomething which neither God had promiſed, nor he had asked. If you do, you contradict God himſelf: For Behold (ſaith God) becauſe thou haſt asked this thing, I have done according to thy word. So, I have given thee a Wiſe and an Underſtanding heart, ſo that there was none like thee before thee, neither after thee ſhall any ariſe like unto thee. And I have alſo given thee that which thou haſt not asked, both riches and honour, ſo that there ſhall not be any among the Kings like unto thee in all thy days. God, for ought appears, never obliged himſelf by promiſe, to ſhew St. Paul thoſe Unſpeakable myſteries, which in the third Heaven he ſhewed unto him: and yet, I hope, we have certainty enough that he did ſo. God promiſes to thoſe that ſeek his Kingdom, and the righteouſneſs thereof, that all things neceſſary ſhall be added unto them, and in rigour by his promiſe he is obliged to do no more, and if he give them neceſſaries he hath diſcharged his Obligation: Shall we therefore be ſo injurious to his bounty towards us, as to ſay it is determined by the narrow bounds of meer Neceſſity? So, though God had obliged himſelf by promiſe to give his Apoſtles infallibility only in things neceſſary to ſalvation; nevertheleſs it is utterly inconſequent, that he gave them no more, than by the rigour of his promiſe he was engaged to do; or that we can have no aſſurance of any farther aſſiſtance that he gave them: eſpecially when he himſelf, both by his word, and by his works, hath aſſured us, that he did aſſiſt them farther. You ſee by this time that your chain of fearful conſequences (as you call them) is turned to a rope of ſand, and may eaſily be avoided without any flying to your imaginary infallibility of the Church in all her propoſals.

35. Ad §. 14, & 15, Doubting of a Book received for Canonical, may ſignifie, either doubting whether it be Canonical; or ſuppoſing it to be Canonical, whether it be True If the former ſenſe were yours. I muſt then again diſtinguiſh of the term, Received; For it may ſignifie, either received by ſome particular Church, or by the preſent Church Univerſal, or the Church of all Ages, If you meant the word in either of the former ſenſes, that which you ſay is not true. A man may juſtly and reaſonably doubt of ſome Texts, or ſome Book received by ſome particular Church, or by the Univerſal Church of this preſent time, whether it be Canonical or no: and yet have juſt reaſon to believe, and no reaſon to doubt, but that other Books are Canonical. As Euſebius perhaps had reaſon to doubt of the Epiſtle of S. James; the Church of Rome, in Hieroms time, of the Epiſtle to the Hebrews. And yet they did not doubt of all the Books of the Canon, nor had reaſon to do ſo. If by Received, you mean Received by the Church of all Ages, I grant, he that doubts of any one ſuch book, hath as much reaſon to doubt of all. But yet here again

I tell you, that it is possible a man may doubt of one such book, and yet not of all: because it is possible men may do not according to reason. If you meant your words in the latter sense; then I confess, he that believes such a Book to be Canonical, i. e. the Word of God, and yet (to make an impossible Supposition) believes it is not to be true, if he will do according to reason, must doubt of all the rest, and believe none. For there being no greater reason to believe any thing true, than because God hath said it, nor no other reason to believe the Scripture to be true, but only because it is Gods Word; he that doubts of the Truth of any thing said by God, hath as much reason to believe nothing that he says: and therefore, if he will do according to reason, neither must nor can believe any thing he says. And upon this ground you conclude rightly, that the infallibility of true Scripture must be Universal, and not confined to Points Fundamental.

36. And this Reason why we should not refuse to believe any part of Scripture, upon pretence that the matter of it is not Fundamental, you confess to be convincing. But the same reason you say is as convincing for the Universal infallibility of the Church. For (say you) unless she be infallible in all things, we cannot believe her in any one. But by this reason your Proselytes, knowing you are not infallible in all things, must not, nor cannot believe you in any thing. Nay, you your self must not believe your self in any thing, because you know that you are not infallible in all things. Indeed, if you had said, We could not rationally believe her for her own sake, and upon her own word and authority in any thing, I should willingly grant the consequence. For an authority subject to error can be no firm or stable foundation of my belief in any thing: and if it were in any thing, then this authority being one and the same in all proposals, I should have the same reason to believe all, that I have to believe one: and therefore must either do unreasonably in believing any one thing, upon the sole warrant of this authority; or unreasonably, in not believing all things equally warranted by it. Let this therefore be granted; and what will come of it? Why then, you say, we cannot believe her in propounding Canonical Books. If you mean still (as you must do unless you play the Sophister) not upon her own Authority, I grant it: For we believe Canonical Books not upon the Authority of the present Church, but upon Universal Tradition. If you mean, not at all, and that with reason we cannot believe these Books to be Canonical, which the Church proposes, I deny it. There is no more consequence in the Argument than in this, The devil is not infallible, therefore if he says there is one God, I cannot believe him. No Geometrician is infallible in all things, therefore not in these things which he demonstrates, Mr. Knot is not infallible in all things, therefore he may not believe that he wrote a Book entituled, Charity Maintained.

37. But though the Reply be good, Protestants cannot make use of it, with any good coherence to this distinction, and some other Doctrines of theirs: because they pretend to be able to tell what Points are Fundamental, and what not; and therefore though they should believe Scripture erroneous in others, yet they might be sure it erred not in these. To this I answer, That if without dependance on Scripture, they did know what were Fundamental, and what not, they might possibly believe the Scripture true in Fundamentals, and erroneous in other things. But seeing they ground their belief, that such and such things only are Fundamental, only upon Scripture, and go about to prove their assertion true, only by Scripture, then must they suppose the Scripture true absolutely and in all things, or else the Scripture could not be a sufficient warrant to them, to believe this thing, that these only Points are Fundamental. For who would not laugh at them if they should argue thus, The Scripture is true in something, the Scripture says that these Points only are Fundamental, therefore this is true, that these only are so: For every Fresh-man in Logick knows, that from meer particulars nothing can be certainly concluded. But on the other side, this reason is firm, and demonstrative, The Scripture is true in all things; but the Scripture says, that these only Points are the Fundamentals of Christian Religion; therefore it is true, that these only are so. So that the know-knowledge of Fundamentals being it self drawn from Scripture, is so far from warranting us to believe the Scripture is, or may be, in part True, and in part False; that it self can have no foundation, but the Universal truth of Scripture. For, to be a Fundamental Truth, presupposes to be a Truth; now I cannot know any Doctrine to be a divine and supernatural Truth, or a true part of Christianity, but only because the Scripture says so which is all true: Therefore, much more can I not know it to be a Fundamental Truth.

38. Ad §. 16. To this Paragraph I answer. Though, the Church being not infallible, I cannot believe her in every thing she says; yet I can and must believe her in every thing she proves, either by Scripture, Reason, or Universal Tradition, be it Fundamental, or be it not Fundamental. This you say, we cannot in Points not Fundamental, because in such we believe she may err. But this I know, we can: because though she may err in some things, yet she does not err in what she proves, though it be not Fundamental. Again you say, We cannot do it in Fundamentals, because we must know what Points be Fundamental, before we go to learn of her. Not so. But seeing Faith comes by Hearing, and by hearing those who give testimony to it which none doth but the Church and the Parts of it; I must learn of the Church, or of some part of it, or I cannot know any thing Fundamental or not Fundamental. For how can I come to know, that there was such a man as Christ, that he taught such Doctrine, that he and his Apostles did such Miracles in Confirmation of it, that the Scripture is GOD's Word, unless I be taught it? So then, the Church is, though not a certain Foundation and proof of my Faith, yet a necessary introduction to it.

39. But the Churches infallible direction, extending only to Fundamentals, unless I know them before I go to learn of her, I may be rather deluded than instructed by her. The reason and connexion of this consequence, I fear neither I nor you do well understand. And besides, I must tell you, you are too bold in taking that which no man grants you, That the Church is an Infallible Director in Fundamentals. For if she were so, then must we not only learn Fundamentals of her, but also learn of her what is Fundamental, and take all for Fundamental which she delivers to be such. In the performance whereof, if I knew any one Church to be Infallible, I would quickly be of that Church. But, good Sir, you must needs do us this favour, to be so acute, as to distinguish between being infallible in Fundamentals, and being an infallible Guide in Fundamentals. That there shall be always a Church infallible in Fundamentals, we easily grant; for it comes to no more but this, that there shall be always a Church. But that there shall be always such a Church, which is an infallible Guide in Fundamentals, this we deny. For this cannot be without setling a known Infallibility in some one known Society of Christians, (as the Greek or the Roman, or some other Church) by adhering to which Guide, men might be guided to believe aright in all Fundamentals. A man that were destitute of all means of communicating his thoughts to others, might yet, in himself, and to himself, be infallible, but he could not be a Guide to others. A man or a Church that were invisible, so that none could know how to repair to it for direction, could not be an infallible Guide, and yet he might be in himself infallible. You see then, there is a wide difference between these two, and therefore I must beseech you not to confound them, nor to take the one for the other.

40. But they that know what Points are Fundamental, otherwise than by the Churches Authority, learn not of the Church: Yes, they may learn of the Church, that the Scripture is the Word of God, and from the Scripture, that such Points are Fundamental, others are not so; and consequently learn, even of the Church, even of your Church, that all is not Fundamental, nay, all is not true, which the Church teacheth to be so. Neither do I see what hinders, but a man may learn of a Church, how to confute the errors of that Church which taught him: as well as of my Master in Physick, or the Mathematicks, I may learn those Rules and Principles, by which I may confute my Master's erroneous Conclusions.

41. But

41. But you ask, If the Church be not an Infallible Teacher, how are we commanded to hear, to seek, to obey the Church? I answer. For Commands to seek the Church, I have not yet met with any; and, I believe, you, if you were to shew them, would be your self to seek. But yet, if you could produce some such, we might seek the Church to many good purposes, without supposing her a Guide infallible. And then for hearing and obeying the Church, I would fain know, Whether none may be heard and obeyed, but those that are Infallible; Whether particular Churches, Governours, Pastors, Parents be not to be heard and obeyed? Or whether all these be infallible? I wonder you will thrust upon us so often, these worn-out Objections, without taking notice of their Answers.

42. Your Argument from St. Austins first place, is a Falacy, A dicto secundum quid ad dictum simpliciter, If the whole Church practise any of these things, (matters of order and decency, for such only there he speaks of,) to dispute whether that ought to be done, is insolent madness. And from hence you infer, If the whole Church practise any thing, to dispute whether it ought to be done, is insolent madness, As if there were no difference between any thing, and any of these things? Or, as if I might not esteem it pride and folly, to contradict and disturb the Church for matter of order, pertaining to the time and place, and other Circumstances, of Gods Worship; and yet account it neither pride nor folly, to go about to reform some errors, which the Church hath suffered to come in, and to vitiate the very substance of Gods worship. It was a practice of the whole Church in St. Austins time, and esteemed an Apostolick Tradition, even by St. Austin himself, That the Eucharist should be administred to Infants: Tell me, Sir, I beseech you; Had it been insolent madness to dispute against this practice, or had it not? If it had, how insolent and mad are you, that have not only disputed against it, but utterly abolished it? If it had not, then, as I say, you must understand St. Austins words, not simply of all things; but (as indeed he himself restrained them) of these things, of matter of Order, Decency, and Uniformity.

43. In the next place, you tell us out of him, That that which hath been always kept, is most rightly esteemed to come from the Apostles: Very right, and what then? Therefore the Church cannot err in defining of Controversies. Sir, I beseech you, when you write again, do us the favour to write nothing but Syllogisms: for I find it still an extreme trouble to find out the concealed Propositions, which are to connect the parts of your Enthymems. As now for example, I protest unto you, I am at my wits end, and have done my best endeavour, to find some glue, or fodder, or cement, or chain, or thread, or any thing to tye this antecedent and this consequent together, and at length am enforced to give it over, and cannot do it.

44. But the Doctrines, That Infants are to be baptized, and, those that are baptized by Hereticks, are not to be rebaptized, are neither of them to be proved by Scripture: And yet according to St. Austin they are true Doctrines, and we may be certain of them upon the Authority of the Church, which we could not be, unless the Church were Infallible; therefore the Church is infallible. I answer, that there is no repugnance but we may be certain enough, of the Universal Traditions of the ancient Church; such, as in St. Austins account, these were which here are spoken of, and yet not be certain enough, of the definitions of the present Church. Unless you can shew (which I am sure you can never do) that the Infallibility of the present Church, was always a Tradition of the Ancient Church. Now your main business is to prove the present Church infallible, not so much in consigning ancient Tradition, as in defining emergent Controversies. Again, it follows not, because the Churches Authority is warrant enough for us to believe some Doctrine, touching which the Scripture is silent; therefore it is warrant enough to believe these, to which the Scripture seems repugnant. Now the Doctrines, which St. Austin received upon the Churches Authority, were of the first sort; the Doctrines for which we deny your Churches Infallibility, are of the second. And therefore though the Churches Authority might be strong enough to bear the the weight which S. Austin laid upon it, yet haply it may not be strong enough, to bear that which you lay upon it. Though it may support some Doctrines without Scripture, yet surely not against it. And last of all, to deal ingenuously with You and the World, I am not such an Idolater of St. Austin, as to think a thing proved sufficiently because he says it, nor that all his Sentences are Oracles; and particularly in this thing, that whatsoever was practised or held by the Universal Church of his time, must needs have come from the Apostles. Though, considering the nearness of his time to the Apostles, I think it a good probable way, and therefore am apt enough to follow it, when I see no reason to the contrary. Yet, I profess, I must have better satisfaction, before I can induce my self to hold it certain and infallible. And this, not because Popery would come in at this door, as some have vainly feared, but because by the Church Universal of some time, and the Church Universal of other times, I see plain contradictions held and practised. Both which could not come from the Apostles; for then the Apostles had been teachers of falshood. And therefore the belief or practice of the present Universal Church, can be no infallible proof, that the Doctrine so believed, or the Custom so practised, came from the Apostles. I instance in the Doctrine of the Millenaries, and the Eucharists necessity for Infants: both which Doctrines have been taught by the consent of the eminent Fathers of some Ages, without any opposition from any of their Contemporaries: and were delivered by them, not as Doctors, but as Witnesses, not as their Opinions,, but Apostolick Traditions. And therefore measuring the Doctrine of the Church by all the Rules which Cardinal Perron gives us for that purpose, both these Doctrines must be acknowledged to have been the Doctrines of the ancient Church of some Age or Ages; And that the contrary Doctrines were Catholick at some other time, I believe you will not think it needful for me to prove. So that either I must say, the Apostles were fountains of contradictious Doctrines, or that being the Universal Doctrine of this present Church, is no sufficient proof that it came originally from the Apostles. Besides, who can warrant us, that the Universal Traditions of the Church were all Apostolical? seeing in that famous place for Traditions, in Tertullian, (a) Quicunque Traditor, Any Author whatsoever is Founder good enough for them. And who can secure us that Humane inventions, and such as came à quocunque Traditore might not in short time, gain the reputation of Apostolick? Seeing the Direction, then was, (b) Præcepta majorum Apostolicas Traditiones quisque existimat.

a De corona Militis. 3. & 4. Where having recounted sundry unwritten Traditions then observed by Christians, many whereof, by the way, (notwithstanding the Council of *Trent*s profession, to receive them and the written word with like affection of Piety) are now rejected and neglected by the Church of Rome: For example, Immersion in Baptism, Fasting a mixture of Milk and Honey presently after abstaining from Baths for a week after; Accounting it an impiety to pray kneeling on the Lords Day, or between Easter and Pentecost: I say, having reckoned up these and other Traditions in Chap. 3. He adds another in the 4. of the Veiling of Women; And then adds, Since I find no law for this, it follows, that Tradition must have given the observation to Custom, which shall gain in time, Apostolick Authority by the interpretation of the reason of it. By these examples therefore it is declared, That the observing of unwritten Tradition, being confirmed by Custom, may be defended. The perseverance of the observation, bring a good testimony of the goodness of the Tradition. Now Custom even in Civil affairs where a Law is wanting, passeth for a Law. Neither is it material, on which it is grounded, Scripture or Reason, seeing Reason is commendation enough for a Law. Moreover, if Law be grounded on Reason, all that must be Law, which is so grounded —— A quocunque productum —— Whosoever is the producer of it. Do ye think it is not lawful, Omni fideli, for every faithful man to conceive and constitute? Provided he constitute only what is not repugnant to Gods Will, what is conducible for Discipline, and available to Salvation? seeing the Lord says, Why even of your selves judge ye not what is right? And a little after, This Reason now demands, saving the respect of the Tradition —— A quocunque Traditore censetur, nec Authorem respiciens sed Authoritatem: From whatsoever Tradition it comes, neither regard the Author but the Authority. b Hier.

45. No less, you say, is St. Chrysostom, for the infallible Traditions of the Church. But you were to prove the Church infallible, not in her Traditions (which we willingly grant, if they be as Universal as the Tradition of the undoubted Books of Scripture is, to be as infallible as the Scripture is; for neither doth being written make the Word of God, the more infallible, nor being unwritten make it the less infallible:) Not therefore in her Universal Traditions, were you to prove the Church infallible, but in all her Decrees and definitions of Contro-Controverſies. To this Point when you ſpeak, you ſhall have an Anſwer; but hitherto you do but wander.

46. But let us ſee what St. Chryſoſtom ſays, They (the Apoſtles) delivered not all things in writing, (who denies it?) but many things alſo without writing (who doubts of it?) and theſe alſo are worthy of belief. Yes, if we knew what they were. But many things are worthy of belief, which are not neceſſary to be believed: As that Julius Ceſar was Emperour of Rome is a thing worthy of belief, being ſo well teſtified as it is, but yet it is not neceſſary to be believed; a man may be ſaved without it. Thoſe many works which our Saviour did (which St. John ſuppoſes, would not have been contained in a world of Books) if they had been written, or if God by ſome other means had preſerved the knowledge of them, had been as worthy to be believed, and as neceſſary, as thoſe that are written. But to ſhew you how much more a faithful keeper Records are than Report, thoſe few that were written are preſerved and believed; thoſe infinitely more that were not written are all loſt and vaniſhed out of the memory of men. And ſeeing God in his Providence hath not thought fit to preſerve the memory of them, he hath freed us from the Obligation of believing them: for every Obligation ceaſeth, when it becomes impoſſible. Who can doubt but the Primitive Chriſtians, to whom the Epiſtles of the Apoſtles were written, either of themſelves underſtood, or were inſtructed by the Apoſtles, touching the ſenſe of the obſcure places of them? Theſe Traditive Interpretations, had they been written and diſperſed, as the Scriptures were, had without queſtion been preſerved, as the Scriptures are. But to ſhew how excellent a Keeper of the Tradition, the Church of Rome hath been, or even the Catholick Church, for want of writing they are all loſt, nay, were all loſt, within a few Ages after Chriſt. So that if we conſult the Ancient Interpreters, we ſhall hardly find any two of them agree about the ſenſe of any one of them. Cardinal Perron, in his Diſcourſe of Traditions, having alledged this place for them. Hold the Traditions, &c. tells us, We muſt not anſwer that St. Paul ſpeaks here, only of ſuch Traditions, which (though not in this Epiſt. to the Theſſ. yet) were afterwards written, and in other Books of Scripture: becauſe it is upon occaſion of Tradition (touching the cauſe of the hinderance of the coming of Antichriſt) which was never written, that he lays this injunction upon them, to hold the Traditions. Well, let us grant this Argument good, and concluding; and that the Church of the Theſſalonians, or the Catholick Church (for what St. Paul writ to one Church, he writ to all) were to hold ſome unwritten Traditions, and among the reſt, what was the cauſe of the hinderance of the coming of Antichriſt. But what if they did not perform their duty in this point, but ſuffered this Tradition to be loſt out of the memory of the Church? Shall we not conclude, that ſeeing God would not ſuffer any thing neceſſary to Salvation to be loſt, and he hath ſuffered this Tradition to be loſt, therefore the knowledge or belief of it, though it were a profitable thing, yet it was not neceſſary? I hope you will not challenge ſuch Authority over us, as to oblige us to impoſſibilities, to do that which you cannot do your ſelves. It is therefore requiſite that you make this command poſſible to be obeyed, before you require obedience unto it. Are you able then to inſtruct us ſo well, as to be fit to ſay unto us, Now ye know what withholdeth? Or do you your ſelves know that ye may inſtruct us? Can ye, or dare you ſay, this or this was this hinderance which St. Paul here meant, and all men under pain of damnation are to believe it? Or if you cannot, (as I am certain you cannot) go then, and vaunt your Church, for the only Watchful, Faithful, Infallible Keeper of the Apoſtles Traditions; when here this very Tradition, which here in particular was depoſited with the Theſſalonians and the Primitive Church, you have utterly loſt it, ſo that there is no footſtep or print of it remaining, which with Divine Faith we may rely upon. Bleſſed therefore be the goodneſs of God, who, ſeeing that what was not written, was in ſuch danger to be loſt, took order, that what was neceſſary ſhould be written!

written! St. Chryſoſtom's counſel therefore, of accounting the Churches Traditions worthy of belief, we are willing to obey: And, if you can of any thing make it appear, that it is Tradition, we will ſeek no farther. But this we ſay withal, that we are perſuaded you cannot make this appear in any thing, but only the Canon of Scripture; and that there is nothing now extant, and to be known by us, which can put in ſo good plea, to be the unwritten Word of God, as the unqueſtioned Books of Canonical Scripture, to be the written Word of God.

47. You conclude this Paragraph with a Sentence of St. Auſtins, who ſays, The Church doth not approve, nor diſſemble, nor do, theſe things which are againſt Faith or good life: and from hence you conclude, That it never hath done ſo, nor ever can do ſo. But though the Argument hold in Logick à non poſſe, ad non eſſe, yet I never heard that it would hold back, à non eſſe, ad non poſſe. The Church cannot do this, therefore it does not, follows with good conſequence: but the Church doth not this, therefore it ſhall never do it, nor can never do it, this, I believe will hardly follow. In the Epiſtle next before to the ſame Januarius, writing of the ſame matter, he hath theſe words, It remains, that the thing you enquire of, muſt be of that third kind of things, which are different in divers places. Let every one therefore do, that which he finds done in the Church to which he comes; for none of them is againſt Faith or good manners. And why do you not infer from hence, that no particular Church can bring up any Cuſtom that is againſt Faith or good manners? Certainly this Conſequence hath as good reaſon for it as the former. If a man ſay of the Church of England, (what St. Auſtin of the Church) that ſhe neither approves nor diſſembles, nor doth any thing againſt Faith or good manners, would you collect preſently, that this man did either make or think the Church of England infallible? Furthermore, it is obſervable out of this, and the former Epiſtle, that this Church, which did not (as St. Auſtin, according to you, thought) approve, or diſſemble, or do any thing againſt faith or good life, did not tolerate and diſſemble vain ſuperſtitions, and humane preſumptions, and ſuffer all places to be full of them, and to be exacted, as, nay, more ſeverely than, the Commandments of God himſelf. This St. Auſtin himſelf profeſſeth in this very Epiſtle. This (ſaith he) I do infinitely grieve at, that many moſt wholſom Precepts of the divine Scripture, are little regarded; and in the mean time all is ſo full of ſo many preſumptions, that he is more grievouſly found fault with, who during his Octaves, toucheth the earth with his naked foot, than he that ſhall bury his ſoul in drunkenneſs. Of theſe he ſays, That they were neither contained in Scripture, decreed by Councils, nor corroborated by the Cuſtom of the Univerſal Church. And though not againſt Faith, yet unprofitable burdens of Chriſtian Liberty, which made the condition of the Jews more tolerable than that of Chriſtians. And therefore he profeſſeth of them, Approbare non poſſum, I cannot approve them. And, Ubi facultas tribuitur, reſecanda exiſtimo; I think they are to be cut off, whereſoever we have power. Yet ſo deeply were they rooted, and ſpread ſo far, through the indiſcreet devotion of the people, always more prone to ſuperſtition than true piety, and through the connivence of the Governours, who ſhould have ſtrangled them at their birth, that himſelf, though he grieved at them, and could not allow them, yet for fear of offence he durſt not ſpeak againſt them, Multa hujuſmodi, propter nonnullarum vel ſanctarum vel turbulentarum perſonarum ſcandala devitanda, liberius improbare non audeo. Many of theſe things for fear of ſcandalizing many holy perſons, or provoking thoſe that are turbulent, I dare not freely diſallow. Nay, the Catholick Church it ſelf, did ſee and diſſemble, and tolerate them; for theſe are the things of which he preſently ſays after, The Church of God (and you will have him ſpeak of the true Catholick Church) placed between Chaff and Tares, tolerates many things. Which was directly againſt the command of the holy Spirit, given the Church by St. Paul, To ſtand faſt in that liberty wherewith Chriſt hath made her free, and not to ſuffer her ſelf to be brought in bondage to theſe ſervile burdens. Our Saviour tells the Scribes and Phariſees,

That in vain they worshipped God, teaching for Doctrines mens Commandments: For that laying aside the Commandments of God, they held the Traditions of men, as the washing of pots, and cups, and many other such like things. Certainly, that which St. Augustin complains of, as the general fault of Christians of his time, was parallel to this: Multa (saith he) quæ in divinis libris salubérrimè præcepta sunt, minus curantur; This, I suppose, I may very well render in our Saviour's Words, The Commandments of God are laid aside; And then, Tam multis præsumptionibus sic plena sunt omnia, All things, or all places, are so full of so many presumptions, and those exalted with such severity, nay, with Tyranny, that he was more severely censured, who in the time of his Octaves touched the earth with his naked feet, than he which drowned and buried his soul in drink. Certainly, if this be not to teach for Doctrines mens Commandments, I know not what is. And therefore these superstitious Christians might be said to worship God in vain, as well as the Scribes and Pharisees. And yet great variety of superstitions of this kind, were then already spread over the Church, being different in divers places. This is plain from these words of St. Austin concerning them, Diversorum locorum diversis moribus innumerabiliter variantur; and apparent, because the stream of them was grown so violent, that he durst not oppose it, Liberiùs improbare, non audeo, I dare not freely speak against them. So that to say the Catholick Church tolerated all this, and for fear of offence, durst not abrogate or condemn it, is to say (if we judge rightly of it) that the Church with silence and connivence generally tolerated Christians to worship God in vain. Now how this tolerating of Universal superstition in the Church, can consist with the assistance and direction of Gods omnipotent Spirit to guard it from superstition, and with the accomplishment of that pretended Prophecy of the Church, I have set Watchmen upon thy Walls, O Jerusalem which shall never hold their peace day nor night; Besides, how these Superstitions being thus nourished, cherished, and strengthened by the practice of the most, and urged with great violence upon others as the Commandments of God, and but fearfully opposed or contradicted by any, might in time take such deep root, and spread their branches so far, as to pass for Universal Customs of the Church, he that does not see, sees nothing. Especially, considering the catching and contagious nature of this sin, and how fast ill weeds spread, and how true and experimented that Rule is of the Historian, Exempla non consistunt ubi incipiunt, sed quamlibet in tenuem recepta tramitem latissimè evagandi sibi faciunt potestatem. Nay, that some such superstition had not already even in St. Austin's time, prevailed so far, as to be Consuetudine universa Ecclesiæ roboratum, Who can doubt that considers, that the practice of Communicating Infants, had even then got the credit and authority, not only of an universal Custom, but also of an Apostolick Tradition.

48. But (you will say) notwithstanding all this, St. Austin here warrants us, that the Church can never either approve, or dissemble, or practise any thing against Faith or good life, and so long you may rest securely upon it. Yea, but the same St. Austin tells us in the same place, That the Church may tolerate humane presumptions, and vain superstitions, and those urged more severely than the commandments of God: And whether superstition be a sin or no, I appeal to our Saviour's words before-cited, and to the consent of your Schoolmen. Besides, if we consider it rightly, we shall find, that the Church is not truly said only to tolerate these things, but rather, that a part, and far the lesser, tolerated and dissembled them in silence, and a part, and a far greater, publickly avowed and practised them, and urged them upon others with great violence, and yet continued still a part of the Church. Now why the whole Church might not continue the Church, and yet do so, as well as a part of the Church might continue a part of it, and yet do so, I desire you to inform me.

49. But now after all this ado, what if St. Austin says not this which is pretended of the Church, viz. That she neither approves, nor dissembles, nor practises any any thing against Faith or good life, but only of good men in the Church? Certainly, though some Copies read as you would have it, yet you should not have dissembled, that others read the place otherwise, viz. Ecclesia multa tolerat; & tamen quæ sunt contra Fidem & bonam vitam, nec bonus approbat, &c. The Church tolerates many things, and yet what is against Faith or good life, a good man will neither approve, nor dissemble, nor practise.

50. Ad §. 17. That Abraham begat Isaac, is a Point very far from being Fundamental; and yet, I hope, you will grant, that Protestants believing Scripture to be the Word of God, may be certain enough of the truth and certainty of it. For what if they say that the Catholick Church, and much more themselves may possibly err in some unfundamental Points, is it therefore consequent, they can be certain of none such? What if a wiser man than I may mistake the sense of some obscure place of Aristotle, may I not therefore without any arrogance or inconsequence, conceive my self certain that I understand him in some plain places, which carry their sense before them? And then for Points Fundamental, to what purpose do you say, That we must first know what they be, before we can be assured that we cannot err in understanding the Scriptures; when we pretend not at all to any assurance that we cannot err, but only to a sufficient certainty, that we do not err, but rightly understand those things that are plain, whether Fundamental, or not Fundamental: That God is, and is a Rewarder of them that seek him: That there is no salvation but by Faith in Christ: That by Repentance from dead works, and Faith in Christ, Remission of sins may be obtained: That there shall be a Resurrection of the Body? These we conceive both true, because the Scripture says so, and Truths Fundamental, because they are necessary parts of the Gospel, whereof our Saviour says, Qui non crediderit, damnabitur. All which we either learn from Scripture immediately, or learn of those that learn it of Scripture; so that neither Learned nor Unlearned pretend to know these things independently of Scripture. And therefore in imputing this to us, you cannot excuse your self from having done us a palpable injury.

51. Ad §. 18. And I urge you as mainly as you urge Dr. Potter and other Protestants, that you tell us that all the Traditions, and all the Definitions of the Church are Fundamental Points, and we cannot wrest from you a list in particular of all such Traditions and Definitions, without which, no man can tell whether or no he err in Points Fundamental, and be capable of Salvation; (For, I hope, erring in our Fundamentals is no more exclusive of Salvation than erring in yours.) And, which is most lamentable, instead of giving us such a Catalogue, you also fall to wrangle among your selves about the making of it; some of you, as I have said above, holding some things to be matters of Faith, which others deny to be so.

52. Ad §. 19. I answer, That these differences between Protestants concerning Errors damnable and not damnable, Truths Fundamental and not-Fundamental, may be easily reconciled. For either the Error they speak of may be purely and simply involuntary, or it may be in respect of the cause of it voluntary. If the cause of it be some voluntary and avoidable fault, the error is it self sinful, and consequently in its own nature damnable; As, if by negligence in seeking the Truth, by unwillingness to find it, by pride, by obstinacy, by desiring that Religion should be true which suits best with my ends, by fear of mens ill opinion, or any other worldly fear, or any other worldly hope, I betray my self to any error contrary to any divine revealed Truth, that Error may be justly stiled a sin, and consequently of it self to such a one damnable. But if I be guilty of none of these faults, but be desirous to know the Truth, and diligent in seeking it, and advise not at all with flesh and bloud about the choice of my opinions, but only with God, and that Reason that he hath given me, If I be thus qualified, and yet through humane infirmity fall into error, that error cannot be damnable. Again, the party erring may be conceived either to die with contrition for all his ſins known and unknown, or without it; If he die without it, this error in it ſelf damnable, will be likewiſe ſo unto him: If he die with contrition (as his error can be no impediment but he may) his error though in it ſelf damnable, to him, according to your Doctrine, will not prove ſo. And therefore ſome of thoſe Authors whom you quote, ſpeaking of Errors whereunto men were betrayed, or wherein they were kept by their Fault, or Vice, or Paſſion, (as for the moſt part men are:) Others ſpeaking of them, as errors ſimply and purely voluntary, and the effects of humane infirmity; ſome, as they were, retratted by Contrition (to uſe your own phraſe;) others, as they were, not; no marvel though they have paſt upon them, ſome a heavier, and ſome a milder, ſome an abſolving, and ſome a condemning ſentence. The leaſt of all theſe errors, which here you mention, having malice enough too frequently mixed with it, to ſink a man deep enough into Hell: and the greateſt of them all, being according to your Principles, either no fault at all, or very Venial, where there is no malice of the Will conjoyned with it. And if it be, yet, as the moſt malignant poyſon will not poyſon him that receives with it a more powerful Antidote: ſo, I am confident, your own Doctrine will force you to confeſs, that whoſoever dies with Faith in Chriſt, and Contrition for all his ſins known and unknown (in which heap all his ſinful errors muſt be comprized) can no more be hurt by any the moſt malignant and peſtilent error, than St. Paul by the Viper which he ſhook off into the fire. Now touching the neceſſity of Repentance from dead works, and Faith in Chriſt Jeſus the Son of God, and Saviour of the World, they all agree; and therefore you cannot deny, but they agree about all that is ſimply neceſſary. Moreover, though, if they ſhould go about to chuſe out of Scripture all theſe Propoſitions and Doctrines which integrate and make up the body of Chriſtian Religion, peradventure there would not be ſo exact an agreement amongſt them, as ſome ſay there was between the 70 Interpreters, in tranſlating the Old Teſtament; yet thus far without controverſie they do all agree, that in the Bible all theſe things are contained, and therefore, that whoſoever doth truly and ſincerely believe the Scripture, muſt of neceſſity, either in Hypotheſi, or at leaſt in Theſi, either formally, or at leaſt virtually, either explicitely, or at leaſt implicitely, either in Act, or at leaſt in preparation of mind, believe all things Fundamental: It being not Fundamental, nor required of Almighty God, to believe the true ſenſe of Scripture in all places, but only that we ſhould endeavour to do ſo, and be prepared in mind to do ſo, whenſoever it ſhall be ſufficiently propounded to us. Suppoſe a man in ſome diſeaſe were preſcribed a medicine, conſiſting of twenty ingredients, and he, adviſing with Phyſicians ſhould find them differing in opinion about it, ſome of them telling him, that all the ingredients were abſolutely neceſſary; ſome, that only ſome of them were neceſſary, the reſt only profitable, and requiſite ad melius eſſe; laſtly, ſome, that ſome only were neceſſary, ſome profitable, and the reſt ſuperfluous, yet not hurtful; yet all with one accord agreeing in this, That the whole Receipt had in it all things neceſſary for the recovery of his health, and that, if he made uſe of it, he ſhould infallibly find it ſucceſsful: what wiſe man would not think they agreed ſufficiently for his direction to the recovery of his health? Juſt ſo, theſe Proteſtant Doctors, with whoſe diſcords you make ſuch Tragedies; agreeing in Theſi thus far, That the Scripture evidently contains all things neceſſary to Salvation, both for matter of Faith, and of Practice, and that whoſoever believes it, and endeavours to find the true ſenſe of it, and to conform his life unto it, ſhall certainly perform all things neceſſary to Salvation, and undoubtedly be ſaved; agreeing, I ſay, thus far, What matters it for the direction of men to Salvation, though they differ in opinion, touching what Points are abſolutely neceſſary, and what not? What Errors abſolutely repugnant to Salvation, and what not? Eſpecially conſidering that although they differ about the queſtion of the neceſſity of theſe Truths, yet for the moſt part they agree in this, that Truths they are, and pro-profitable at leaſt, though not ſimply neceſſary. And though they differ in the Queſtion, Whether the contrary Errors be deſtructive of Salvation, or no: yet in this they conſent, that Errors they are, and hurtful to Religion, though not deſtructive of Salvation. Now that which God requires of us, is this, That we ſhould believe the Doctrines of the Goſpel to be Truths, not all, neceſſary Truths, for all are not ſo; and conſequently, the repugnant Errors to be falſhoods: yet not all, ſuch falſhoods, as unavoidably draw with them damnation upon all that hold them; for all do not ſo.

53. Yea, but you ſay, It is very requiſite we ſhould agree upon a particular Catalogue of Fundamental Points; for without ſuch a Catalogue, no man can be aſſured whether or no, he hath Faith ſufficient to Salvation. This I utterly deny as a thing evidently falſe, and I wonder you ſhould content your ſelf magiſterially to ſay ſo, without offering any proof of it. I might much more juſtly think it enough barely to deny it, without refutation, but I will not: Thus therefore I argue againſt it.

Without being able to make a Catalogue of Fundamentals, I may be aſſured of the Truth of this Aſſertion, if it be true, That the Scripture contains all neceſſary Points of Faith, and know that I believe explicitely all that is expreſt in Scripture, and implicitely all that is contained in them: Now he that believes all this, muſt of neceſſity believe all things neceſſary; Therefore without being able to make a Catalogue of Fundamentals, I may be aſſured that I believe all things neceſſary, and conſequently that my Faith is ſufficient.

I ſaid, of the truth of this Aſſertion, if it be true: Becauſe I will not here enter into the Queſtion of the truth of it, it being ſufficient for my preſent purpoſe, that it may be true, and may be believed without any dependance upon a Catalogue of Fundamentals. And therefore, if this be all your reaſon, to demand a particular Catalogue of Fundamentals, we cannot but think your demand unreaſonable. Eſpecially having your ſelf expreſſed the cauſe of the difficulty of it, and that is, Becauſe Scripture doth deliver Divine Truths, but ſeldom qualifies them, or declares whether they be or be not abſolutely neceſſary to ſalvation. Yet not ſo ſeldom, but that out of it I could give you an abſtract of the Eſſential parts of Chriſtianity, if it were neceſſary, but I have ſhewed it not ſo, by confuting your reaſon, pretended for the neceſſity of it, and at this time I have no leiſure to do you courteſies that are ſo troubleſom to my ſelf. Yet thus much I will promiſe, that when you deliver a particular Catalogue of your Church Propoſals with one hand, you ſhall receive a particular Catalogue of what I conceive Fundamental, with the other. For as yet, I ſee no ſuch fair proceeding as you talk of, nor any performance on your own part of that which ſo clamorouſly you require on ours. For, as for the Catalogue which here you have given us, in ſaying, You are obliged under pain of damnation to believe whatſoever the Catholick viſible Church of Chriſt propoſeth as revealed by Almighty God, it is like a Covey of one Partridge, or a Flock of one Sheep, or a Fleet compoſed of one Ship, or an Army of one Man. The Author of Charity Miſtaken, demands a particular Catalogue of Fundamental Points; And We (ſay you) again and again demand ſuch a Catalogue. And ſurely, If this one Propoſition, which here you think to ſtop our mouths with, be a Catalogue, yet at leaſt ſuch a Catalogue it is not, and therefore as yet you have not performed what you require. For, If to ſet down ſuch a Propoſition, wherein are comprized all Points taught by us to be neceſſary to ſalvation, will ſerve you inſtead of a Catalogue, you ſhall have Catalogues enough. As, we are obliged to believe all under pain of damnation which God commands us to believe. There's one Catalogue. We are obliged under pain of damnation, to believe all, whereof we may be ſufficiently aſſured, that Chriſt taught it his Apoſtles, his Apoſtles the Church. There's another. We are obliged under pain of damnation to believe God's Word, and all contained in it to be true. There's a Third. If theſe generalities will not ſa-tisfie you, but you will be importuning us to tell you in particular, what those Doctrines are which Christ taught his Apostles, and his Apostles the Church, what Points are contained in Gods Word; Then I beseech you do us reason, and give us a particular and exact Inventory of all your Church-Propofals, without leaving out, or adding any, such a one which all the Doctors of your Church will subscribe to, and if you receive not then a Catalogue of Fundamentals, I for my part will give you leave to proclaim us Bankrupts.

54. Besides, this deceitful generality of your Catalogue (as you call it) another main fault we find with it, that it is extremely ambiguous; and therefore to draw you out of the Clouds, give me leave to propose some Questions to you concerning it. I would know therefore, whether by believing, you mean explicitely or implicitely? If you mean implicitely, I would know, Whether your Churches Infallibility be under pain of damnation to be believed explicitely, or no? Whether any other Point or Points besides this, be under the same penalty, to be believed explicitely, or no? and if any, what they be? I would know what you esteem the Propofals of the Catholick visible Church? In particular, whether the Decree of the Pope ex Cathedra, that is, with an intent to oblige all Christians by it, be a sufficient and an obliging Propofal? Whether men without danger of Damnation may examine such a Decree, and, if they think they have just cause, refuse to obey it? Whether the Decree of a Council, without the Pope's Confirmation, be such an obliging Propofal, or no? Whether it be so in case there be no Pope, or in case it be doubtful who is Pope? Whether the Decree of a General Council confirmed by the Pope, be such a Propofal, and whether he be an Heretick that thinks otherwise? Whether the Decree of a particular Council confirmed by the Pope, be such a Propofal? Whether the General uncondemned practice of the Church for some Ages be such a sufficient Proposition? Whether the consent of the most eminent Fathers of any Age, agreeing in the affirmation of any Doctrine, not contradicted by any of their Contemporaries, be a sufficient Proposition? Whether the Fathers testifying such or such a Doctrine, or practice to be a Tradition, or to be the Doctrine or practice of the Church, be a sufficient assurance that it is so? Whether we be bound under pain of damnation, to believe every Text of the vulgar Bible, now authorized by the Roman Church, to be the true Translation of the Originals of the Prophets, and Evangelists, and Apostles, without any the least alteration? Whether they that lived when the Bible of Sixtus was set forth, were bound under pain of damnation to believe the same of that? And if not of that, of what Bible they were bound to believe it? Whether the Catholick visible Church be always that Society of Christians which adheres to the Bishop of Rome? Whether every Christian, that hath ability and opportunity, be not bound to endeavour to know explicitely the Propofals of the Church? Whether Implicite Faith in the Churches Veracity, will not save him that actually and explicitely disbelieves some Doctrine of the Church, not knowing it to be so; and actually believes some damnable Heresie, as that God hath the shape of a man? Whether an ignorant man be bound to believe any point to be decreed by the Church, when his Priest or Ghostly Father assures him it is so? Whether his Ghostly Father may not err in telling him so, and whether any man can be obliged under pain of damnation, to believe an Error? Whether he be bound to believe such a thing defined, when a number of Priests, perhaps ten or twenty tell him it is so? And what assurance he can have, that they neither err, nor deceive him, in this matter? Why Implicite Faith in Christ or the Scriptures should not suffice for a mans salvation, as well as implicite faith in the Church? Whether when you say, Whatsoever the Church propofeth, you mean all that ever she propofed, or that only which she now propofeth; and whether she now propofeth all that ever she did propose? Whether all the Books of Canonical Scripture were sufficiently declared to the Church to be so, and propofed as such by by the Apostles? And if not, from whom the Church had this Declaration afterward? If so, whether all men ever since the Apostles time, were bound under pain of damnation to believe the Epistle of St. James, and the Epistle to the Hebrews, to be Canonical? at least, not to disbelieve it, and believe the contrary? Lastly, why it is not sufficient for any mans Salvation to use the best means he can to inform his conscience, and to follow the direction of it? To all these demands when you have given fair and ingenuous Answers, you shall hear farther from me.

55. Ad § 20. At the first entrance into this Paragraph, From our own Doctrine, That the Church cannot err in Points necessary, it is concluded, if we are wise, we must forsake it in nothing, lest we should forsake it in something necessary. To which I answer, First, that the supposition, as you understand it, is falsly imposed upon us, and as we understand it, will do you no service. For when we say, that there shall be a Church always, some where or other, unerring in Fundamentals, our meaning is but this, that there shall be always a Church, to the very being whereof it is repugnant that it should err in Fundamentals; for if it should do so, it would want the very Essence of a Church, and therefore cease to be a Church. But we never annexed this priviledge to any one Church of any one Denomination, as the Greek or the Roman Church: which if we had done, and set up some setled certain Society of Christians, distinguishable from all others by adhering to such a Bishop for our Guide in Fundamentals, then indeed, and then only, might you with some colour, though with no certainty, have concluded that we could not, in wisdom, forsake this Church in any one point, for fear of forsaking it in a necessary point. But now that we say not this of any one determinate Church, which alone can perform the office of Guide or Director, but indefinitely of the Church, meaning no more but this, That there shall be always in some place or other, some Church that errs not in Fundamentals; will you conclude from hence, that we cannot in wisdom forsake this or that, the Roman or Greek Church, for fear of erring in Fundamentals?

56. Yea, but you may say, (for I will make the best I can of all your Arguments) That this Church thus unerring in Fundamentals, when Luther arose, was by our confession the Roman; and therefore in wisdom we ought not to have departed from it in any thing. I answer, First, that we confess no such thing, that the Church of Rome was then this Church, but only a Part of it, and that the most corrupted, and most incorrigible. Secondly, that if by adhering to that Church, we could have been thus far secured, this Argument had some shew of reason. But seeing we are not warranted thus much by any priviledge of that Church, that she cannot err fundamentally, but only from Scripture, which assures us that she doth err very heinously, we collect our hope, that the Truths she retains, and the practice of them, may prove an Antidote to her against the Errors which she maintains in such Persons, as in simplicity of heart follow this Absalom; we should then do against the light of our conscience, and so sin damnably if we should not abandon the profession of her Errors though not Fundamental. Neither can we thus conclude, We may safely hold with the Church of Rome in all her Points, for she cannot err damnably; For this is false, she may, though perhaps she doth not: But rather thus; These Points of Christianity, which have in them the nature of Antidotes against the poyson of all sins and errors, the Church of Rome, though otherwise much corrupted, still retains; therefore we hope she errs not Fundamentally, but still remains a Part of the Church. But this can be no warrant to us to think with her in all things: seeing the very same Scripture which puts us in hope she errs not Fundamentally, assures us that in many things, and those of great moment, she errs very grievously. And these Errors, though to them that believe them, we hope they will not be pernicious, yet the professing of them against conscience, could not but bring to us certain Damnation. As for the fear of departing from some Fundamental mental truths withal, while we depart from her errors. Haply it might work upon us, if adhering to her might secure us from it, and if nothing else could: But both these are false. For first, adhering to her in all things cannot secure us from erring in Fundamentals: Because though de facto we hope she doth not err, yet we know no priviledges she hath but she may err in them her self: and therefore we had need have better security hereof than her bare Authority. Then secondly, without dependance on her at all, we may be secured that we do not err Fundamentally; I mean, by believing all things plainly set down in Scripture, wherein all necessary, and most things profitable, are plainly delivered. Suppose I were travelling to London, and knew two ways thither, the one very safe and convenient, the other very inconvenient, and dangerous, but yet a way to London; and that I overtook a Passenger on the way, who himself believed, and would fain persuade me, there was no other way but the worse, and would persuade me to accompany him in it, because I confessed his way, though very inconvenient, and very dangerous, yet a way; so that going that way we might come to our journeys end by the consent of both parties: but he believed my way to be none at all; and therefore I might justly fear, lest out of a desire of leaving the worst way, I left the true and the only way: If now I should not be more secure upon my own knowledge, than frighted by this fallacy, would you not beg me for a fool? Just so might you think of us, if we would be frighted out of our own knowledge by this Bugbear. For the only and the main reason why we believe you not to err in Fundamentals, is your holding the Doctrines of Faith in Christ and Repentance: which knowing we hold as well as you, notwithstanding our departure from you, we must needs know that we do not err in Fundamentals, as well as we know that you in some sort do not err in Fundamentals, and therefore cannot possibly fear the contrary. Yet let us be more liberal to you, and grant that which can never be proved, that God had said in plain terms, The Church of Rome shall never destroy the Foundation, but withal had said, That it might and would lay much hay and stubble upon it; That you should never hold any Error destructive of Salvation, but yet many that were prejudicial to Edification: I demand, Might we have dispensed with our selves in the believing and professing these Errors in regard of the smalness of them? Or, had it not been a damnable sin to do so, though the Errors in themselves were not damnable? Had we not had as plain direction to depart from you in some things profitable, as to adhere to you in things necessary? In the beginning of your Book, when it was for your purpose to have it so, the greatness or smalness of the matter was not considerable, the Evidence of the Revelation was all in all. But here we must err with you in small things, for fear of losing your direction in greater: and for fear of departing too far from you, not go from you at all, even where we see plainly that you have departed from the Truth.

57. Beyond all this, I say, that this which you say in wisdom we are to do, is not only unlawful, but if we will proceed according to reason, impossible. I mean to adhere to you in all things, having no other ground for it, but because you are (as we will now suppose) infallible in some things, that is in Fundamentals. For whether by skill in Architecture a large structure may be supported by a narrow foundation, I know not; but sure I am, in reason no Conclusion can be larger than the Principles on which it is founded. And therefore if I consider what I do, and be persuaded that your Infallibility is but limited, and particular, and partial; my adherence upon this ground cannot possibly be absolute, and Universal and Total. I am confident, that should I meet with such a man amongst you, (as I am well assured there be many) that would grant your Church infallible only in Fundamentals, which what they are he knows not, and therefore upon this only reason adheres to you in all things; I say that I am confident, that it may be demonstrated, that such a man adheres to you, with with a fiducial and certain assent in nothing. To make this clear (because at the first hearing it may seem strange) give me leave, good Sir, to suppose you the man, and to propose to you a few questions, and to give for you such answers to them, as upon this ground you must of necessity give, were you present with me. First, supposing you hold your Church infallible in Fundamentals, obnoxious to error in other things, and that you know not what Points are Fundamental, I demand, C. Why do you believe the Doctrine of Transubstantion? K. Because the Church hath taught it, which is Infallible. C. What? Infallible in all things, or only in Fundamentals? K. In Fundamentals only. C. Then in other Points she may err? K. She may. And do you know what Points are Fundamental, what not? K. No, and therefore I believe her in all things, lest I should disbelieve her in Fundamentals. C. How know you then, whether this be a Fundamental Point or no? K. I know not. C. It may be then (for ought you know) an unfundamental Point? K. Yes, it may be so. C. And in these, you said, the Church may err? K. Yes, I did so. C. Then possibly it may err in this? K. It may do so. C. Then what certainty have you that it does not err in it? K. none at all, but upon this supposition, that this is a Fundamental. C. And this supposition you are uncertain of? K. Yes, I told you so before. C. And therefore you can have no certainty of that which depends upon this uncertainty, saving only a suppositive certainty, if it be a Fundamental truth; which is in plain English to say, you are certain it is true, if it be both true and necessary. Verily Sir, if you have no better Faith than this, you are no Catholick. K. Good words I pray! I am so, and God willing will be so. You mean in outward profession and practice, but in belief you are not, no more than a Protestant is a Catholick. For every Protestant yields such a kind of assent to all the proposals of the Church, for surely they believe them true, if they be Fundamental truths. And therefore you must either believe the Church Infallible in all her proposals, be they foundations, or be they superstructions; or you must believe all Fundamental which she proposes, or else you are no Catholick. K. But I have been taught, that seeing I believed the Church infallible in Points necessary, in wisdom I was to believe her in every thing. C. That was a pretty plausible inducement, to bring you hither; but now you are here, you must go farther, and believe her infallible in all things, or else you were as good go back again, which will be a great disparagement to you, and draw upon you both the bitter and implacable hatred of our Part, and even, with your own, the imputation of rashness and levity. You see, I hope by this time, that though a man did believe your Church infallible in Fundamentals, yet he hath no reason to do you the courtesie of believing all her Proposals; nay, if he be ignorant what these Fundamentals are, he hath no certain ground to believe her, upon her Authority, in any thing. And whereas you say, it can be no imprudence to err with the Church; I say, it may be very great imprudence, if the question be, Whether we should err with the present Church, or hold true with God Almighty.

58. But we are, under pain of damnation, to believe and obey her in greater things, and therefore cannot in wisdom suspect her credit in matters of less moment. Answ. I have told you already, that this is falsly to suppose, that we grant that in some certain Points, some certain Church were infallibly assisted, and under pain of damnation to be obeyed: whereas all that we say is this, that in some place or other, some Church there shall be, which shall retain all necessary Truths. Yet if your supposition were true, I would not grant your Conclusion, but with this Exception, unless the matter were past suspition, and apparently certain, that in these things I cannot believe God, and believe the Church. For then I hope you will grant, that be the thing of never so little moment, were it, for instance, but that St. Paul left his Cloak at Troas, yet I were not to gratifie the Church so far, as for her sake to disbelieve what God himself hath revealed.

59. Whereas you say, Since we are undoubtedly obliged to believe her in Fundamentals, and cannot know preciſely, what thoſe Fundamentals be, we cannot without hazard of our ſouls leave her in any Point; I anſwer, Firſt, that this argument proceeds upon the ſame falſe ground with the former. And then, that I have told you formerly, that you fear where no fear is; And though we know not preciſely, juſt how much is Fundamental, yet we know, that the Scripture contains all Fundamentals, and more too; and therefore that in believing that, we believe all Fundamentals, and more too. And conſequently, in departing from you, can be in no danger of departing from that which may prove a Fundamental Truth: For we are well aſſured that certain Errors can never prove Fundamental Truths.

66. Whereas you add, That that Viſible Church which cannot err in Fundamentals, propounds all her definitions without diſtinction to be believed under Anathema's: Anſw. Again you beg the queſtion, ſuppoſing untruly, that there is any that Viſible Church. I mean any Viſible Church of one Denomination, which cannot err in Points Fundamental. Secondly, propoſing definitions to be believed under Anathema's, is no good Argument, that the Propounders conceive themſelves infallible; but only that they conceive the Doctrine they condemn is evidently damnable. A plain proof hereof is this, that particular Councils, nay, particular Men, have been very liberal of their Anathema's, which yet were never conceived infallible, either by others or themſelves. If any man ſhould now deny Chriſt to be the Saviour of the World, or deny the Reſurrection, I ſhould make no great ſcruple of Anathematizing his Doctrine, and yet am very far from dreaming of infallibility.

61. And for the Viſible Churches holding it a Point neceſſary to Salvation, that we believe ſhe cannot err, I know no ſuch tenet; unleſs by the Church, you mean the Roman Church, which you have as much reaſon to do, as that petty King in Africk hath, to think himſelf King of all the World. And therefore your telling us, If ſhe ſpeak true, what danger is it, not to believe her? and if falſe, that it is not dangerous to believe her, is ſomewhat like your Pope's ſetting your Lawyers to diſpute whether Conſtantine's Donation were valid or no; whereas the matter of fact was the far greater queſtion, whether there were any ſuch Donation, or rather when without queſtion there was none ſuch. That you may not ſeem to delude us in like manner, make it appear that the Viſible Church doth hold ſo as you pretend: and then whether it be true or falſe, we will conſider afterwards. But for the preſent, with this inviſible Tenet of the Viſible Church, we will trouble our ſelves no farther.

62. The effect of the next Argument is this, I cannot without grievous ſin diſobey the Church, unleſs I know ſhe commands thoſe things which are not in her power to command: and how far this power extends, none can better inform me than the Church. Therefore I am to obey, ſo far as the Church requires my obedience. I anſwer: Firſt, that neither hath the Catholick Church, but only a corrupt part of it, declared her ſelf, nor required our obedience, in the Points conteſted among us. This therefore is falſly, and vainly ſuppoſed here by you, being one of the greateſt Queſtions amongſt us. Then ſecondly, that God can better inform us, what are the limits of the Churches power, than the Church her ſelf, that is, than the Roman Clergy, who being men ſubject to the ſame paſſions with other men, why they ſhould be thought the beſt Judges in their own cauſe, I do not well underſtand; but yet we oppoſe againſt them, no humane deciſive Judges, not any Sect or Perſon, but only God and his Word. And therefore it is in vain to ſay, That in following her, you ſhall be ſooner excuſed, than in following any Sect or Man applying Scriptures againſt her Doctrine, In as much as we never went about to arrogate to our ſelves that Infallibility or abſolute Authority, which we take away from you. But if you would have ſpoken to the purpoſe, you ſhould have ſaid, that in following her you ſhould ſooner have been excuſed, than in cleaving to the Scripture, and to God himſelf.

63. Whereas you ſay, The fearful examples of innumerable perſons, who forſaking forſaking the Church, upon pretence of her errors, have failed even in Fundamental Points, ought to deter all Chriſtians from oppoſing her in any one Doctrine or Practice; This is, juſt as if you ſhould ſay, Divers men have fallen into Scylla, with going too far from Charybdis; be ſure therefore ye keep cloſe to Charybdis: Divers leaving Prodigality, have fallen into covetouſneſs: therefore be you conſtant to Prodigality: Many have fallen from worſhipping God perverſly and fooliſhly, not to worſhip him at all; from worſhipping many Gods to worſhip none; this therefore ought to deter men from leaving Superſtition or Idolatry, for fear of falling into Atheiſm and Impiety. This is your counſel and Sophiſtry: but God ſays clean contrary; Take heed you ſwerve not, either to the right hand or to the left: you muſt not do evil that good may come thereon; therefore neither, that you may avoid a greater evil, you muſt not be obſtinate in a certain error, for fear of an uncertain. What if ſome, forſaking the Church of Rome, have forſaken Fundamental truths? Was this becauſe they forſook the Church of Rome? No ſure, this is non cauſa pro cauſa: for elſe all that have forſaken that Church ſhould have done ſo, which we ſay they have not. But becauſe they went too far from her, the golden mean, the narrow way, is hard to be found, and hard to be kept; hard, but not impoſſible: hard, but yet you muſt not pleaſe your ſelf out of it, though you err on the right hand, though you offend on the milder part; for this is the only way that leads to life, and few there be that find it. It is true, if we ſaid there were no danger in being of the Roman Church, and there were danger in leaving it, it were madneſs to perſuade any man to leave it. But we proteſt and proclaim the contrary, and that we have very little hope of their Salvation, who either out of negligence in ſeeking the truth, or unwillingneſs to find it, live and die in the errors and impieties of that Church: and therefore cannot but conceive thoſe fears to be moſt fooliſh, and ridiculous, which perſuade men to be conſtant in one way to hell, leſt haply, if they leave it, they ſhould fall into another.

64. But, Not only others, but even Proteſtants themſelves, whoſe example ought moſt to move us, pretending to reform the Church, are come to affirm that ſhe periſhed for many ages: which Dr. Potter cannot deny to be a Fundamental error, againſt the Article of the Creed, I believe the Catholick Church, ſeeing he affirms, Donatiſts erred Fundamentally in confining it to Africa. To this I anſwer, Firſt, that the error of the Donatiſts was not, that they held it poſſible that ſome, or many, or moſt parts of Chriſtendom, might fall away from Chriſtianity, and that the Church may loſe much of her amplitude, and be contracted to a narrow compaſs, in compariſon of her former extent: which is proved not only poſſible, but certain, by irrefragable experience. For who knows not that Gentiliſm, and Mahumetiſm, mans wickedneſs deſerving it, and Gods providence permitting it, have prevailed, to the utter extirpation of Chriſtianity, upon far the greater part of the world? And St. Auſtin when he was out of the heat of Diſputation, confeſſes the Militant Church to be like the Moon, ſometimes increaſing, and ſometimes decreaſing. This therefore was no error in the Donatiſts, that they held it poſſible that the Church, from a large extent, might be contracted to a leſſer: nor that they held it poſſible to be reduced to Africa; (for why not to Africk then, as well as within theſe few Ages you pretend it was to Europe?) But their Error was, that they held de facto, this was done when they had no juſt ground or reaſon to do ſo: and ſo, upon a vain pretence which they could not juſtifie, ſeparated themſelves from the Communion of all other parts of the Church: and that they required it as a neceſſary condition, to make a man a member of the Church, that he ſhould be of their Communion, and divide himſelf from all other Communions from which they were divided: which was a condition both unneceſſary and unlawful to be required, and therefore the exacting of it was directly oppoſite to the Churches Catholiciſm; in the very ſame nature with their errors who required Circumciſion, and the keeping of the Law of Moſes, as neceſſary to ſalvation. For whoſoever requires harder or heavier conditions of men, than God requires of them, he it is that is properly an Enemy of the Churches Univerſality, by hindering either Men or Countries from adjoyning themſelves to it; which, were it not for theſe unneceſſary and therefore unlawful conditions, in probability would have made them Members of it. And ſeeing the preſent Church of Rome perſuades men they were as good (for any hope of ſalvation they have) not to be Chriſtians, as not be Roman Catholicks; believe nothing at all, as not believe all which ſhe impoſes upon them; be abſolutely out of the Churches Communion, as be out of her Communion, or be in any other. Whether ſhe be not guilty of the ſame crime, with the Donatiſts and thoſe Zealots of the Moſaical Law, I leave it to the judgment of thoſe that underſtand reaſon: This is ſufficient to ſhew the vanity of this Argument. But I add moreover, that you neither have named thoſe Proteſtants who held the Church to have periſhed for many Ages, who perhaps held not the deſtruction, but the corruption of the Church; not that the true Church, but that the pure Church periſhed: or rather that the Church periſhed not from its life and exiſtence, but from its purity and integrity, or perhaps from its ſplendor and viſibility: Neither have you proved by any one reaſon, but only affirmed it, to be a Fundamental Error, to hold that the Church Militant may poſſibly be driven out of the world, and aboliſhed for a time from the face of the earth.

65. But to accuſe the Church of any Error in Faith, is to ſay, ſhe loſt all Faith: For this is the Doctrine of Catholick Divines, that one Error in Faith deſtroys Faith. To which I anſwer, that to accuſe the Church of ſome Error in Faith, is not to ſay, ſhe loſt all Faith: For this is not the Doctrine of all Catholick Divines; but that he which is an Heretick in one Article, may have true Faith of other Articles. And the contrary is only ſaid and not ſhewed in Charity Miſtaken.

66. Ad §. 21. Dr. Potter ſays, We may not depart from the Church abſolutely, and in all things: and from hence you conclude, Therefore we may not depart from it in any thing. And this Argument you call a Demonſtration. But, a Fallacy à dicto ſimpliciter ad dictum ſecundum quid, was not uſed heretofore to be called a Demonſtration. Dr. Potter ſays not, that you may not depart from any opinion or any practice of the Church: for you tell us in this very place, that he ſays, even the Catholick may err: and every man may lawfully depart from Error. He only ſays, You may not ceaſe to be of the Church, nor depart from thoſe things which make it ſo to be; and from hence you infer a neceſſity of forſaking it in nothing. Juſt as if you ſhould argue thus: You may not leave your friend or brother, therefore you may not leave the Vice of your Friend, or the Error of your Brother. What he ſays of the Catholick Church, p. 75. the ſame he extends preſently after, to every true, though never ſo corrupted, part of it. And why do you not conclude from hence, that no particular Church (according to his judgment) can fall into any Error, and call this a Demonſtration too? For, as he ſays, p. 75. That there can be no juſt cauſe to depart from the whole Church of Chriſt, no more than from Chriſt himſelf; So p. 76. he tells you, That whoſoever forſakes any one true member of this body, forſakes the whole. So that what he ſays of the one, he ſays of the other; and tells you, that neither Univerſal nor particular Church, ſo long as they continue ſo, may be forſaken; he means, Abſolutely, no more than Chriſt himſelf may be forſaken abſolutely: For the Church is the body of Chriſt, and whoſoever forſakes either the body, or his coherence to any one part of it, muſt forſake his ſubordination, and relation to the Head. Therefore whoſoever forſakes the Church, or any Chriſtian, muſt forſake Chriſt himſelf.

67. But then he tells you plainly in the ſame place, That it may be lawful and neceſſary to depart from a Particular Church in ſome Doctrines and Practices; And this he would have ſaid even of the Catholick Church, if there had been occaſion, but there was none. For there he was to declare and juſtifie our departure, not from the Catholick Church, but the Roman, which we maintain to be a particular Church. But in other places, you confeſs his Doctrine to be, that even the Catholick Church may err in Points not Fundamental; which you do not pretend that he ever imputed to Chriſt himſelf. And therefore you cannot with any candor interpret his words, as if he had ſaid, We may not forſake the Church in any thing, no more than Chriſt himſelf: but only thus, We may not ceaſe to be of the Church, nor forſake it abſolutely and totally, no more than Chriſt himſelf. And thus we ſee ſometimes, a Mountain may travel, and the production be a Mouſe.

68. Ad §. 22. But Dr. Potter either contradicts himſelf, or elſe muſt grant the Church infallible; Becauſe, he ſays, if we did not differ from the Roman, we could not agree with the Catholick; which ſaying ſuppoſes, the Catholick Church cannot err. Anſwer. 'Tis Argument, to give it the right name, is an obſcure and intricate Nothing. And to make it appear ſo, let us ſuppoſe, in contradiction to your ſuppoſition, either that the Catholick Church may err, but doth not, but that the Roman actually doth: or that the Catholick Church doth err in ſome few things, but that the Roman errs in many more. And is it not apparent in both theſe caſes, (which yet both ſuppoſe the Churches Fallibility) a man may truly ſay, Unleſs I diſſent in ſome opinions from the Roman Church, I cannot agree with the Catholick? Either therefore you muſt retract your imputation laid upon Dr. Potter, or do that which you condemn in him, and be driven to ſay, that the ſame man may hold ſome errors with the Church of Rome, and at the ſame time with the Catholick Church not to hold but condemn them. For otherwiſe, in neither of theſe caſes is it poſſible for the ſame man, at the ſame time, to agree both with the Roman, and the Catholick.

69. In all theſe Texts of Scripture, which are here alledged in this laſt Section of this Chapter, or in any one of them, or in any other, Doth God ſay clearly and plainly, The Biſhop of Rome, and that Society of Chriſtians which adheres to him, ſhall be ever the infallible guide of Faith? You will confeſs, I preſume, he doth not; and will pretend, it was not neceſſary. Yet if the King ſhould tell us, the Lord Keeper ſhould judge ſuch and ſuch cauſes; but ſhould either not tell us at all, or tell us but doubtfully, who ſhould be Lord-Keeper, ſhould we be any thing the nearer for him to an end of contentions? Nay rather, would not the diſſentions about the Perſon who it is, increaſe contentions, rather than end them? Juſt ſo it would have been, if God had appointed a Church to be Judge of Controverſies, and had not told us which was that Church. Seeing therefore God doth nothing in vain, and ſeeing it had been in vain, to appoint a Judge of Controverſies, and not to tell us plainly who it is; and ſeeing laſtly he hath not told us plainly, no not at all who it is; is it not evident he hath appointed none? Objection, But (you will ſay perhaps) if it be granted once, that ſome Church of one denomination, is the infallible Guide of Faith, it will be no difficult thing to prove, that yours is the Church, ſeeing no other Church pretends to be ſo. Anſw. Yes, the Primitive and the Apoſtolick Church pretends to be ſo. That aſſures us, that the Spirit was promiſed, and given to them, to lead them into all ſaving truth, that they might lead others. Objection, But that Church is not now in the world, and how then can it pretend to be the Guide of Faith? Anſw. It is now in the world ſufficient to be our Guide; not by the Perſons of thoſe men that were Members of it, but by their Writings, which do plainly teach us, what truth they were lead into, and ſo lead us into the ſame truth. Object. But theſe Writings were the writings of ſome particular men, and not of the Church of thoſe times: how then doth that Church guide us by theſe Writings? Now theſe places ſhew that a Church is to be our Guide, therefore they cannot be ſo avoided. Anſw. If you regard the conception and production of theſe Writings, they were the Writings of particular men:

men: But if you regard the Reception and approbation of them, they may be well called the Writings of the Church, as having the attestation of the Church to have been written by those that were inspired and directed by God. As a Statute, though penned by some one man, yet being ratified by the Parliament, is called the Act, not of that man, but of the Parliament. Object. But the words seem clearly enough to prove, that the Church, the Present Church of every Age, is Universally Infallible. Answ. For my part, I know I am as willing and desirous, that the Bishop or Church of Rome should be infallible, (provided I might know it) as they are to be so esteemed. But he that would not be deceived must take heed, that he take not his desire that a thing should be so, for a reason that it is so. For, if you look upon Scripture, through such Spectacles as these, they will appear to you, of what colour pleases your fancies best: and will seem to say, not what they do say, but what you would have them. As some say, the Manna wherewith the Israelites were fed in the Wilderness, had in every mans mouth, that very taste which was most agreeable to his palate. For my part I profess, I have considered them a thousand times, and have looked upon them (as they say) on both sides, and yet to me they seem to say no such matter.

70. Not the first. For the Church may err, and yet the gates of Hell not prevail against her. It may err, and yet continue still a true Church, and bring forth Children unto God, and send souls to Heaven. And therefore this can do you no service, without the plain begging of the point in question, viz. That every error is one of the gates of Hell. Which we absolutely deny, and therefore, you are not to suppose, but to prove it. Neither is our denial without reason. For seeing you do, and must grant, that a particular Church, may hold some error, and yet be still a true Member of the Church: Why may not the Universal Church hold the same error, and yet remain the true Universal?

71. Not the Second or Third. For, the Spirit of Truth, may be with a Man, or a Church for ever, and teach him all Truth: And yet he may fall into some error, if this all, be not simply all, but all of some kind: which you confess to be so unquestioned and certain, that you are offended with Dr. Potter, for offering to prove it. Secondly, he may fall into some error, even contrary to the truth which is taught him, if it be taught him only sufficiently, and not irresistibly, so that he may learn it if he will, not so that he must and shall whether he will or no. Now, who can ascertain me, that the Spirit's teaching is not of this nature; or how can you possibly reconcile it, with your Doctrine of Free-will in believing, if it be not of this nature? Besides, the word in the Original is ὁδηγήσει, which signifies, to be a guide and director only, not to compel or necessitate. Who knows not, that a Guide may set you in the right way, and you may either negligently mistake, or willingly leave it? And to what purpose doth God complain so often, and so earnestly of some, that had eyes to see and would not see, that stopped their ears, and closed their eyes, lest they should hear and see? Of others, that would not understand, lest they should do good: That the light shined, and the darkness comprehended it not: That he came unto his own, and his own received him not: That light came into the world, and men loved darkness more than light? To what purpose should he wonder, so few believed his report, and that to so few his Arm was revealed; And that when he comes, he should find no Faith upon Earth, if his outward teaching were not of this nature, that it might be followed, and might be resisted. And if it be, then God may teach, and the Church not learn: God may lead, and the Church be refractory, and not follow. And indeed, who can doubt, that hath not his eyes vailed with prejudice, that God hath taught the Church of Rome plain enough in the Epistle to the Corinthians, that all things in the Church are to be done for edification; and that in any Publick Prayers, or Thanksgivings, or Hymns, or Lessons of Instruction, to use a Language, which the assistants generally understand not, is not for edification?

on? Though the Church of Rome will not learn this, for fear of confessing an Error, and so overthrowing her Authority; yet the time will come, when it shall appear, that not only by Scripture, they were taught this sufficiently, and commanded to believe it, but by reason and common sense. And so for the Communion in both kinds, who can deny but they are taught it by our Saviour, Joh.6. in these words, according to most of your own Expositions, Unless you eat the Flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his Blood, you have no life in you. (If our Saviour speak there, of the Sacrament, as to them he doth, because they conceive he doth so.) For though they may pretend, that receiving in one kind, they receive the Blood together with the Body, yet they can with no face pretend that they drink it: And so obey not our Saviour's Injunction according to the letter, which yet they profess, is literally always to be obeyed, unless some impiety, or some absurdity force us to the contrary: and they are not yet arrived to that impudence, to pretend, that either there is impiety or absurdity in receiving the Communion in both kinds. This therefore, they, if not others, are plainly taught by our Saviour in this place: But by St. Paul all without exception, when he says; Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of this bread, and drink of this Chalice. This (a Man) that is to examine himself, is every man, that can do it: as is confessed on all hands. And therefore it is all one, as if he had said, Let every man examine himself, and so let him eat of this Bread, and drink of this Cup. They which acknowledge St. Paul's Epistles, and St. John's Gospel, to be the Word of God, one would think should not deny, but that they are taught these two Doctrines plain enough. Yet we see they neither do, nor will learn them. I conclude therefore, that the Spirit may very well teach the Church, and yet the Church fall into and continue in Error, by not regarding what she is taught by the Spirit.

72. But all this I have spoken upon a supposition only, and shewed unto you, that though these Promises had been made unto the present Church of every Age (I might have said though they had been to the Church of Rome by name) yet no certainty of her Universal Infallibility could be built upon them. But the plain truth is, that these Promises are vainly arrogated by you, and were never made to you, but to the Apostles only. I pray deal ingenuously, and tell me, Who were they of whom our Saviour says, These things have I spoken unto you being present with you, c.14.25. But the Comforter shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have told you, ver.26? Who are they to whom he says, I go away and come again unto you; And I have told you before it come to pass, ver. 28, 29. You have been with me from the beginning. c.15. v.27? And again; These things I have told you, that when the time shall come, you may remember that I told you of them: and these things I said not to you at the beginning, because I was with you, c.16.v.14. And, Because I said these things unto you, sorrow hath filled your hearts, v. 6. Lastly, Who are they of whom he saith, v.12. I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now? Do not all these circumstances appropriate this whole discourse of our Saviour to his Disciples, that were then with him, and, consequently, restrain the Promises of the Spirit of Truth, which was to lead them into all truth, to their Persons only? And seeing it is so, is it not an impertinent arrogance and presumption, for you to lay claim unto them, in the behalf of your Church? Had Christ been present with your Church? Did the Comforter bring these things to the Remembrance of your Church, which Christ had before taught, and she had forgotten? Was Christ then departing from your Church? And did he tell of his departure before it came to pass? Was your Church with him from the beginning? Was your Church filled with sorrow, upon the mentioning of Christ's departure? Or lastly, Did he, or could he have said to your Church, which then was not extant, I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now? As he speaks in the 13. ver. immediately before the words by you quoted. And then goes on, How- keit when the Spirit of Truth is come, he will guide you into all Truth. Is it not the ſame You he ſpeaks to in the 13. ver. and that he ſpeaks to in the 14? And is it not apparent to any one that hath but half an eye, that in the 13. he ſpeaks only to them that then were with him? Beſides, in the very Text by you alledged, there are things promiſed, which your Church cannot with any modeſty pretend to. For there it is ſaid, The Spirit of Truth not only will guide you into all Truth, but alſo will ſhew you things to come. Now your Church (for ought I could ever underſtand) doth not ſo much as pretend to the ſpirit of Propheey, and knowledge of future events: And therefore hath as little cauſe to pretend to the former promiſe of being led by the Spirit into all Truth. And this is the Reaſon, why both You in this place, and generally, your Writers of Controverſies, when they entreat of this Argument, cite this Text perpetually by halfs; there being in the latter part of it, a clear, and convincing Demonſtration, that you have nothing to do with the former. Unleſs you will ſay, which is moſt ridiculous, that when our Saviour ſaid, He will teach you, &c. and he will ſhew you, &c. he meant one You in the former Clauſe, and another You in the latter.

73. Object. But this is to confine God's Spirit to the Apoſtles only, or to the Diſciples, that then were preſent with him: which is directly contrary to many places of Scripture. Anſw. I confeſs, that to confine the Spirit of God to thoſe that were then preſent with Chriſt, is againſt Scripture. But, I hope, it is eaſie to conceive a difference, between confining the Spirit of God to them, and confining the promiſes made in this place to them. God may do many things which he doth not promiſe at all; much more, which he doth not promiſe in ſuch or ſuch a place.

74. Object. But it is promiſed in the 14. Chap. that this Spirit ſhall abide with them for ever: Now they in their perſons were not to abide for ever, and therefore the Spirit could not abide with them, in their Perſons for ever, ſeeing the coexiſtence of two things, ſuppoſes of neceſſity, the exiſtence of either. Therefore the Promiſe was not made to them only in their Perſons, but by them to the Church, which was to abide for ever. Anſw. Your Concluſion is, not to them only, but your Reaſon concludes, either nothing at all, or that this Promiſe of abiding with them for ever, was not made to their Perſons at all; or, if it were, that it was not performed, Or, if you will not ſay (as I hope you will not) that it was not performed, nor that it was not made to their Perſons at all; then muſt you grant, that the word for ever, is here uſed in a ſenſe reſtrained, and accommodated to the ſubject here entreated of; and that it ſignifies, not eternally, without end of time, but perpetually, without interruption, for the time of their lives. So that the force, and ſenſe of the words is, that they ſhould never want the Spirit's aſſiſtance, in the performance of their function: And that the Spirit would not (as Chriſt was to do) ſtay with them for a time, and afterwads leave them, but would abide with them, if they kept their ſtation, unto the very end of their lives, which is man's for ever. Neither is this uſe of the word, for ever, any thing ſtrange, either in our ordinary ſpeech, wherein we uſe to ſay, This is mine for ever, This ſhall be yours for ever, without ever dreaming of the Eternity, either of the Thing or Perſons. And then in Scripture, it not only will bear, but requires, this ſenſe very frequently, as Exod. 21. 6. Deut. 15. 17. His Maſter ſhall bore his ear through with an awl and he ſhall ſerve him for ever. Pſal. 52. 9. I will praiſe thee for ever. Pſal. 61. 4. I will abide in thy Tabernacle for ever. Pſal. 119. 111. Thy Teſtimonies have I taken as mine heritage for ever. And laſtly, in the Epiſtle to Philemon, He therefore departed from thee for a time, that thou ſhouldſt receive him for ever.

75. And thus, I preſume, I have ſhewed ſufficiently, that this for ever, hinders not, but that the Promiſe may be appropriated to the Apoſtles, as by many other circumſtances I have evinced it muſt be. But what now, if the place produced by you, as a main pillar of your Churches Infallibility, prove upon trial, an engine engin to batter and overthrow it, at leaſt, (which is all one to my purpoſe) to take away all poſſibility of our aſſurance of it? This will ſeem ſtrange news to you at firſt hearing, and not far from a prodigy. And I confeſs, as you here in this place, and generally all your Writers of Controverſie, by whom this Text is urged, order the matter, it is very much diſabled, to do any ſervice againſt you in this queſtion. For with a bold facriledge, and horrible impiety, ſomewhat like Procruſtes his cruelty, you perpetually cut off the head and foot, the beginning and end of it; and preſenting your Confidents, (who uſually read no more of the Bible, than is alledged by you) only theſe words, I will ask my Father, and he ſhall give you another Paraclete, that he may abide with you for ever, even the Spirit of Truth, conceal in the mean time, the words before, and the words after; that ſo the promiſe of God's Spirit, may ſeem to be abſolute, whereas it is indeed moſt clearly and expreſly conditional: being both in the words before, reſtrained to thoſe only, that love GOD, and keep his Commandments: and in the words after, flatly denied to all, whom the Scripture ſtile by the name of the World, that is, as the very Antitheſis gives us plainly to underſtand, to all wicked and worldly men. Behold the place entire, as it is ſet down in your own Bible: If ye love me keep my Commandments, and I will ask my Father, and he ſhall give you another Paraclete, that he may abide with you for ever, even the Spirit of the Truth, whom the world cannot receive. Now from the place thus reſtored and vindicated from your mutilation, thus I argue againſt your pretence. We can have no certainty of the Infallibility of your Church, but upon this ſuppoſition, that your Popes are infallible in confirming the Decrees of General Councils: we can have no certainty hereof, but upon this ſuppoſition, that the Spirit of Truth is promiſed to them for their direction in this work: And of this again we can have no certainty, but upon ſuppoſal, that they perform the condition, whereunto the promiſe of the Spirit of Truth is expreſly limited, viz. That they love God and keep his Commandments: And of this finally, not knowing the Popes heart, [illegible] no certainty at all of your Churches Infallibility. This is my firſt Argument. Another follows, which will charge you as home as the former. If many of the Roman See, were ſuch men as could not receive the Spirit of Truth, even men of the World, that is, Worldly, Wicked, Carnal, Diabolical men; then the Spirit of Truth is not here promiſed, but flatly denied them: and conſequently we can have no certainty, neither of the Decrees of Councils, which theſe Popes confirm, nor of the Churches Infallibility, which is guided by theſe Decrees: But many of the Roman See, even by the confeſſion of the moſt zealous Defenders of it, were ſuch men: Therefore the Spirit of Truth is not here promiſed, but denied them; and conſequently we can have no certainty, neither of the Decrees, which they confirm, nor of the Churches Infallibility, which guides her ſelf by theſe Decrees.

76. You may take as much time as you think fit, to anſwer theſe Arguments. In the mean while I proceed to the conſideration of the next Text alledged for this purpoſe by you; out of S. Paul, 1 Ep. to Timothy, where he ſaith, as you ſay, The Church is the Pillar and Ground of Truth, But the truth is, you are ſomewhat too bold with S. Paul; For he ſays not in formal terms, what you make him ſay, The Church is the Pillar and Ground of Truth, neither is it certain that he means ſo: for it is neither impoſſible nor improbable, that theſe words, the pillar and ground of truth, may have reference not to the Church, but to Timothy, the ſenſe of the place that thou maiſt know how to behave thy ſelf, as a Pillar and Ground of the Truth, in the Church of God, which is the houſe of the living God, which expoſition offers no violence at all to the words, but only ſuppoſes an Elliptis of the Particle ὡς, in the Greek very ordinary. Neither wants it ſome likelihood, that S. Paul comparing the Church to a houſe, ſhould here exhort Timothy, to carry himſelf, as a Pillar in that houſe ſhould do, according as he had given other principal men in the Church, the name of Pillars; rather than having called the Church a Houſe, to call it preſently a Pillar; which may ſeem ſomewhat heterogeneous. Yet if you will needs have S. Paul refer this not to Timothy, but to the Church, I will not contend about it any farther, then to ſay, Poſſibly it may be otherwiſe, But then ſecondly, I am to put you in mind, that the Church which S. Paul here ſpeaks of, was that in which Timothy converſed, and that was a Particlar Church, and not the Roman; and ſuch you will not have to be Univerſally Infallible.

77. Thirdly, if we grant you out of courteſie (for nothing can enforce us to it) that he both ſpeaks of the Univerſal Church, and ſays this of it; then I am to remember you, that many Attributes in Scripture, are not notes of performance, but of duty, and teach us not what the Thing or Perſon is of neceſſity, but what it ſhould be.. Ye are the Salt of the Earth, ſaid our Saviour to his Diſciples: not that this quality was inſeperable from their Perſons, but becauſe it was their Office ſo to be. For, if they muſt have been ſo of neceſſity, and could not have been otherwiſe, in vain had he put in them fear of that which follows, If the Salt have loſt his ſavour, wherewith ſhall it be ſalted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be caſt forth, and to be trodden under foot. So the Church may be by duty, the pillar and ground, that is, the Teacher of Truth, of all Truth, not only neceſſary, but profitable to Salvation; and yet ſhe may neglect and violate this duty, and be in fact the teacher of ſome Error.

78. Fourthly and laſtly, if we deal moſt liberally with you, and grant that the Apoſtle here ſpeaks of the Catholique Church, calls it the Pillar and Ground of Truth, and that not only becauſe it ſhould, but becauſe it always ſhall and will be ſo, yet after all this, you have done nothing; your bridge is too ſhort to bring you to the bank where you would be, unleſs you can ſhew, that by Truth here is certainly meant, not only all neceſſary to ſalvation, but all that is profitable, abſolutely and ſimply All. For that the true Church always ſhall be the maintainer and teacher of all neceſſary Truth, you know we grant, and muſt grant; for it is of the eſſence of the Church to be ſo, and any company of men were no more a Church without it, than any thing can be a man, and not be reaſonable. But as a man may be ſtill a man, though he want a hand or an eye, which yet are profitable parts; ſo the Church may be ſtill a Church, though it be defective in ſome profitable truth. And as a man may be a man that hath ſome biles and botches on his body; ſo the Church may be the Church, though it have many corruptions both in Doctrine and Practice.

79. And thus you ſee we are at liberty from the former places; having ſhewed that the ſenſe of them, either muſt or may be ſuch as will do your Cauſe no ſervice. But the laſt you ſuppoſe will be a Gordian knot, and tye us faſt enough: The words are, He gave ſome Apoſtles, and ſome Prophets, &c. to the conſummation of Saints, to the work of the Miniſtry, &c. Until we all meet into the Unity of faith, &c. That we be not hereafter Children, wavering and carryed up and down with every wind of Doctrin. Out of which words this is the only Argument which you collect, or I can collect for you.

There is no means to conſerve Unity of Faith, againſt every wind of Doctrin, unleſs it be a Church univerſally infallible.

But it is impious to ſay, there is no means to conſerve Unity of Faith againſt every wind of Doctrin:

Therefore there muſt be a Church Univerſally Infallible.

Whereunto I anſwer, that your Major is ſo far from being confirmed, that it is plainly confuted by the place alledged. For that tells us of another means for this purpoſe, to wit, the Apoſtles, and Prophets, and Evangeliſts, and Paſtors, and Doctors, which Chriſt gave upon his Aſcenſion, and that their conſummating the Saints, doing the work of the Miniſtry, and edifying the body of Chriſt, was the means to bring thoſe (which are there ſpoken of, be they who they will) to the Unity of Faith, and to perfection in Chriſt, that they might not be wavering, and carried about with every wind of falſe Doctrin. Now the Apoſtles, and Prophets, and Evan-Evangeliſts, and Paſtors, and Doctors, are not the preſent Church; therefore the Church is not the only means for this end, nor that which is here ſpoken of.

80. Peradventure by he gave, you conceive, is to be underſtood, he promiſed that he would give unto the worlds end. But what reaſon have you for this conceit? Can you ſhew that the word ἔδωκε, hath this ſignification in other places, and that it muſt have it in this place? Or, will not this interpretation drive you preſently to this blaſphemous abſurdity, that God hath not performed his promiſe? Unleſs you will ſay, which for ſhame I think you will not, that you have now, and in all Ages ſince Chriſt have had Apoſtles, and Prophets and Evangeliſts: for as for Paſtors, and Doctors alone, they will not ſerve the turn. For if God promiſed to give all theſe, then you muſt ſay, He hath given all, or elſe that he hath broke his promiſe. Neither may you pretend, that the Paſtors and Doctors were the ſame with the Apoſtles and Prophets, and Evangeliſts, and therefore having Paſtors and Doctors, you have all. For it is apparent, that by theſe names, are denoted ſeveral Orders of men, clearly diſtinguiſhed and diverſified by the Original Text; but much more plainly by your own Tranſlations, for ſo you read it, ſome Apoſtles, and ſome Prophets, and other ſome Evangeliſts, and other ſome Paſtors and Doctors: and yet more plainly in the parallel place, 1 Cor. 12. to which we are referred by your Vulgar Tranſlation, God hath ſet ſome in the Church, firſt Apoſtles, ſecondarily Prophets, thirdly Teachers; therefore this ſubterfuge is ſtopped againſt you. Object. But how can they, which died in the firſt Age, keep us in Unity, and guard us from Error, that live now, perhaps in the laſt? This ſeems to be all one, as if a man ſhould ſay, that Alexander, or Julius Cæſar, ſhould quiet a mutiny in the King of Spain's Army. Anſw. I hope you will grant, that Hippocrates, and Galen, and Euclid, and Ariſtotle, and Saluſt, and Cæſar, and Livie, were dead many Ages ſince; and yet that we are now preſerved from error by them, in a great part of Phyſick, of Geometry, of Logick, of the Roman Story. But what if theſe men had writ by Divine Inſpiration, and writ compleat bodies of the Sciences they profeſſed, and writ them plainly and perſpicuouſly; You would then have granted, I believe, that their works had been ſufficient to keep us from error, and from diſſention in theſe matters. And why then ſhould it be incongruous to ſay, that the Apoſtles, and Prophets, and Evangeliſts, and Paſtors, and Doctors, which Chriſt gave upon his Aſcenſion, by their writings, which ſome of them writ, but all approved, are even now ſufficient means, to conſerve us in Unity of Faith, and guard us from error? Eſpecially, ſeeing theſe writings are, by the confeſſion of all parts, true and divine, and, as we pretend, and are ready to prove, contain a plain and perfect Rule of Faith; and as the * Chiefeſt of you acknowledge, contain immediately, all the Principal and fundamental Points of Chriſtianity, referring us to the Church and Tradition only for ſome minute particularities. But tell me I pray, the Biſhops that compoſed the Decrees of the Council of Trent, and the Pope that confirmed them, are they means to conſerve you in Unity, and keep you from Error, or are they not? Peradventure you will ſay, Their Decrees are, but not their Perſons: but you will not deny I hope, that you owe your Unity, and freedom from Error, to the Perſons that made theſe Decrees; neither will they deny, that the writings which they have left behind them, are ſufficient for this purpoſe. And why may not then the Apoſtles writings be as fit for ſuch a purpoſe, as the Decrees of your Doctors? Surely, their intent in writing was to conſerve us in Unity of Faith, and to keep us from error, and we are ſure God ſpake in them: But your Doctors from whence they are, we are not ſo certain. Was the Holy Ghoſt then unwilling, or unable to direct them ſo, that their writings ſhould be fit and ſufficient to attain the end they aimed at in writing? For if he were both able and willing to do ſo, then certainly he did do ſo. And then their writings may be very ſufficient means, if we would uſe them as we ſhould do, to preſerve us in Unity, in all neceſſary points of Faith, and to guard us from all pernitious Error.

* Perron.

81. If yet you be not ſatisfied, but will ſtill pretend, that all theſe words by you cited, seem clearly enough to prove, that the Church is Universally Infallible, without which, Unity of Faith could not be conserved against every wind of Doctrin: I answer, That to you which will not understand, that there can be any means to conserve the Unity of Faith, but only that which conserves your Authority over the Faithful, it is no marvel that these words seem to prove, that the Church, nay that your Church is universally infallible. But we that have no such end, no such desires, but are willing to leave all men to their liberty, provided they will not improve it to a Tyranny over others, we find it no difficulty to discern between dedit and promisit, he gave at his Ascension, and he promised to the worlds end. Besides, though you whom it concerns, may haply flatter your selves, that you have not only Pastors, and Doctors, but Prophets, and Apostles, and Evangelists, and those distinct from the former still in your Church; yet we that are disinteressed persons, cannot but smile at these strange imaginations. Lastly, though you are apt to think your selves such necessary instruments for all good purposes, and that nothing can be well done unless you do it; that no unity or constancy in Religion can be maintained, but inevitably Christendom must fall to ruin, and confusion, unless you support it: yet we that are indifferent, and impartial, and well content, that God should give us his own favors, by means of his own appointment, not of our chusing, can easily collect out of these very words, that not the Infallibility of your, or of any Church, but the Apostles, and Prophets, and Evangelists, &c. which Christ gave upon his Ascension, were deligned by him, for the compassing all these excellent purposes, by their preaching while they lived, and by their writings for ever. And if they fail hereof, the Reason is not any insufficiency or invalidity in the means, but the voluntary perverseness of the subjects they have to deal with: who, if they would be themselves, and be content that others should be, in the choice of their Religion, the servants of God and not of men; if they would allow, that the way to heaven is no narrower now, than Christ left it, his yoak no heavier than he made it; that the belief of no more difficulties, is required now to Salvation, than was in the Primitive Church; that no error is in it self destructive, and exclusive from Salvation now, which was not then; if, instead of being zealous Papists, earnest Calvinists, rigid Lutherans, they would become themselves, and be content that others should be plain and honest Christians, if all men would believe the Scripture, and freeing themselves from prejudice and passion, would sincerely endeavor to find the true sense of it, and live according to it, and require no more of others, but to do so; nor denying their Communion to any that do so, would so order their publick service of God, that all which do so may without scruple, or hypocrisie, or protestation against any part of it, joyn with them in it: who doth not see that seeing (as we supposse here, and shall prove hereafter) all necessary truths, are plainly and evidently set down in Scripture, there would of necessity be among all men, in all things necessary, Unity of Opinion? And, notwithstanding any other differences that are or could be, Unity of Communion, and Charity, and mutual toleration? By which means, all Schism and Heresie would be banished the world, and those wretched contentions which now rend and tear in pieces, not the coat, but the members and bowels of Christ, which mutual pride and Tyranny, and cursing, and killing, and damning, would fain make immortal, should speedily receive a most blessed catastrophe. But of this hereafter, when we shall come to the Question of Schism, wherein I persuade my self, that I shall plainly shew, that the most vehement accusers, are the greatest offenders, and that they are indeed at this time, the greatest Schismaticks, who make the way to heaven narrower, the yoak of Christ heavier, the differences of Faith greater, the conditions of Ecclesiastical Communion harder, and stricter, than they were made at the beginning by Christ and his Apostles: they who talk of Unity, but aim at Tyranny, and will have peace with none, but with their slaves and vassals. In the mean while, though I have shewed how Unity of Faith, and Unity of Charity too, may be preserved without your Churches Infallibility, fallibility, yet seeing you modestly conclude from hence, not that your Church is, but only seems to be universally infallible, meaning to your self, of which you are a better Judge than I: Therefore I willingly grant your Conclusion, and proceed.

82. Whereas you say, That D. Potter limits those promises and privileges to Fundamental points; The truth is, with some of them he meddles not at all, neither doth his adversary give him occasion: Not with those out of the Epistle to Timothy, and to the Ephesians. To the rest he gives other answer besides this.

83. But the words of Scripture by you alledged are Universal, and mention no such restraint to Fundamentals, as D. Potter applies to them: I answer, That, of the five Texts which you alledge, four are indefinite, and only one universal, and that you confess is to be restrained, and are offended with D. Potter for going about to prove it. And Whereas you say, they mention no restraint, intimating that therefore they are not to be restrained, I tell you, This is no good consequence; for it may appear out of the matter and circumstances, that they are to be understood in a restrained sense, notwithstanding no restraint be mentioned, That place quoted by S. Paul, and applied by him to our Saviour, He hath put all things under his feet, mentions no exception; yet S. Paul tells us, not only that it is true or certain, but it is manifest, that He is excepted which did put all things under him.

84. But your interpretation is better than D. Potters, because it is literal. I answer, His is litteral as well as yours: and you are mistaken if you think a restrained sense may not be a literal sense; for to Restrained, Literal is not opposed, but unlimited or absolute; and to Literal, is not opposed Restrained, but Figurative.

85. Whereas you say, D. Potters Brethren, rejecting his limitation, restrain the mentioned Texts to the Apostles, implying hereby a contrariety between them and him: I answer, So doth D. Potter restrain all of them which he speaks of, in the pages by you quoted, to the Apostles, in the direct and primary sense of the words: Though he tells you there, the words in a more restrained sense are true, being understood of the Church Universal,

86. As for your pretence, That to find the meaning of those places, you confer divers Texts, you consult Originals, you examine Translations, and use all the means by Protestants appointed, I have told you before, that all this is vain and hypocritical, if (as your manner and your doctrine is) you give not your selves liberty of judgment in the use of these means; if you make not your selves Judges of, but only Advocates for, the Doctrine of your Church, refusing to see what these means shew you, if it any way make against the Doctrine of your Church, though it be as clear as the light at noon. Remove Prejudice, even the Ballance, and hold it even, make it indifferent to you which way you go to heaven so you go the true, which Religion be true so you be of it, then use the means, and pray for Gods assistance, and as sure as God is true, you shall be led into all necessary Truth.

87. Whereas you say, you neither do, nor have any possible means to agree, as long as you are left to your selves: The first is very true, That while you differ, you do not agree. But for the second, That you have no possible means of agreement, as long as you are left to your selves, i. e. to your own reasons and judgment, this sure is very false, neither do you offer any proof of it, unless you intend this, that you do not agree, for a proof that you cannot; which sure is no good consequence, not half so good as this which I oppose against it: D. Potter and I, by the use of these means by you mentioned, do agree, concerning the sense of these places, therefore there is a possible means of agreement; and therefore you also, if you would use the same means, with the same minds, might agree so far as it is necessary, and it is not necessary that you should agree farther. Or if there be no possible means to agree about the sense of these Texts, whilst we are left to our selves, then sure it is impossible that we should agree in your sense of them, which was, That the Church is universally infallible. For if it were possible for us to agree in this sense of them, then it were possible for us to agree. And why then ſaid you of theſelf ſame Texts but in the page next before, Theſe words ſeem clearly enough to prove that the Church is Univerſally infallible. A ſtrange forgetfulneſs, that the ſame man, almoſt in the ſame breath, ſhould ſay of the ſame words, They ſeem clearly enough to prove ſuch a Concluſion true, and yet that three indifferent men, all preſumed to be lovers of Truth, and induſtrious ſearchers of it, ſhould have no poſſible means, while they follow their own reaſon to agree in the Truth of this Concluſion!

88. Whereas you ſay, that, It were great impiety to imagine that God, the lover of Souls, hath left no certain infallible means to decide both this and all other differences ariſing about the interpretation of Scripture, or upon any other occaſion: I deſire you to take heed, you commit not an impiety in making more impieties than Gods Commandments make. Certainly, God is no way obliged either by his Promiſe or his Love to give us all things, that we may imagine would be convenient for us, as formerly I have proved at large. It is ſufficient that he denies us nothing neceſſary to Salvation. Deus non deficit in neceſſariis, nec redundat in ſuperfluis: So D. Stapleton. But that the ending of all Controverſies, or having a certain means of ending them, is neceſſary to Salvation, that you have often ſaid and ſuppoſed, but never proved, though it be the main pillar of your whole diſcourſe. So little care you take how ſlight your Foundations are, ſo your Building make a fair ſhew. And as little care, how you commit thoſe faults your ſelf, which you condemn in others. For you here charge them with great impiety, who imagine that, God the lover of Souls, hath left no infallible means to determine all differences ariſing about the interpretation of Scripture, or upon any other occaſion: And yet afterwards being demanded by D. Potter, Why the Queſtions between the Jeſuits and Dominicans remain undetermined? You return him this croſs Interrogatory, Who hath aſſured you that the Point wherein theſe learned men differ, is a revealed Truth, or capable of definition; or is not rather by plain Scripture indeterminable, or by any Rule of Faith? So then when you ſay, It were great impiety to imagin that God hath not left infallible means to decide all differences; I may anſwer, It ſeems you do not believe your ſelf. For in this Controverſie which is of as high conſequence as any can be, you ſeem to be doubtful whether there be any means to determine it. On the other ſide, when you ask D. Potter, Who aſſured him that there is any means to determine this Controverſie? I anſwer for him, that you have; in calling it a great impiety to imagine that there is not ſome infallible means to decide this and all other differences ariſing about the Interpretation of Scripture, or upon any other occaſion. For what trick you can deviſe to ſhew that this difference between the Dominicans and Jeſuits, which includes a difference about the ſenſe of many Texts of Scripture, and many other matters of moment, was not included under this and all other differences, I cannot imagine. Yet if you can find out any, thus much at leaſt we ſhall gain by it, that general ſpeeches are not always to be underſtood generally, but ſometimes with exceptions and limitations.

89. But if there be any infallible means to decide all differences, I beſeech you name them. You ſay it is to conſult and hear Gods Viſible Church with ſubmiſſive acknowledgment of her Infallibility. But ſuppoſe the difference be (as here it is) whether your Church be Infallible, what ſhall decide that? If you would ſay (as you ſhould do) Scripture and Reaſon, then you foreſee that you ſhould be forced to grant, that theſe are fit means to decide this Controverſie, and therefore may be as fit to decide others. Therefore to avoid this, you run into a moſt ridiculous abſurdity, and tell us that this difference alſo, Whether the Church be infallible, as well as others, muſt be agreed by a ſubmiſſive acknowledgment of the Churches Infallibility. As if you ſhould have ſaid, My Brethren, I perceive there is a great Contention amongſt you, whether the Roman Church be infallible? If you will follow my advice, I will ſhew you a ready means to end it; you you muſt firſt agree that the Roman Church is infallible, and then your contention whether the Roman Church be infallible, will quickly be at an end. Verily, a moſt excellent advice, and moſt compendious way of ending all Controverſies, even without troubling the Church to determine them! For why may not you ſay in all other differences, as you have done in this? Agree that the Pope is ſupream head of the Church: That the ſubſtance of the Bread and Wine in the Sacrament, is turned into the Body and Blood of Chriſt: That the Communion is to be given to Lay-men but in one kind: That Pictures may be worſhiped: That Saints are to be invocated; and ſo in the reſt: and then your differences about the Popes Supremacy, Tranſubſtantiation, and all the reſt, will ſpeedily be ended. If you ſay, the advice is good in this, but not in other caſes, I muſt requeſt you, not to expect always, to be believed upon your word, but to ſhew us ſome reaſon, why any one thing, namely the Churches Infallibility, is fit to prove it ſelf; and any other thing, by name the Popes Supremacy, or Tranſubſtantiation, is not as fit? Or if for ſhame you will at length confeſs, that the Churches infallibility is not fit to decide this difference, Whether the Church be infallible, then you muſt confeſs it is not fit to decide all: Unleſs you will ſay, it may be fit to decide all, and yet not fit to decide this, or pretend that this is not comprehended under all. Beſides, if you grant that your Churches Infallibility cannot poſſibly be well grounded upon, or decided by it ſelf, then having profeſſed before, that there is no poſſible means beſides this, for us to agree hereupon, I hope you will give me leave to conclude, that it is impoſſible upon good ground for us to agree that the Roman Church is infallible. For certainly, light it ſelf is not more clear than the evidence of this Syllogiſm;

If there be no other means to make men agree upon your Churches Infallibility, but only this, and this be no means; then it is ſimply impoſſible for men upon good grounds to agree that your Church is Infallible:

But there is (as you have granted) no other poſſible means to make men agree hereupon, but only a ſubmiſſive acknowledgment of her Infallibility, And this is apparently no means;

Therefore it is ſimply impoſſible for men upon good grounds to agree that your Church is infallible.

90. Laſtly, to the place of S. Auſtin, wherein we are advis'd to follow the way of Catholique Diſcipline, which from Chriſt himſelf by the Apoſtles hath come down even to us, and from us ſhall deſcend to all poſterity; I anſwer, That the way which S. Auſtin ſpake of, and the way which you commend, being divers ways, and in many things clean contrary, we cannot poſſibly follow them both; and therefore for you to apply the ſame words to them is a vain equivocation. Shew us any way, and do not ſay, but prove it to have come from Chriſt and his Apoſtles down to us, and we are ready to follow it. Neither do we expect demonſtration hereof, but ſuch reaſons as may make this more probable than the contrary. But if you bring in things into your now Catholique Diſcipline, which Chriſtians in S. Auſtins time held abominable, (as the picturing of God,) and which you muſt, and ſome of you do confeſs to have come into the Church ſeven hundred years after Chriſt: if you will bring in things, as you have done the half Communion, with a non obſtante, notwithſtanding Chriſts Inſtitution, and the practice of the Primitive Church, were to the contrary: If you will do ſuch things as theſe, and yet would have us believe, that your whole Religion came from Chriſt and his Apoſtles, this we conceive a requeſt too unreaſonable for modeſt men to make, or for wiſe men to grant.

CHAP.

CHAP. IV.

To say that the Creed contains all Points necessarily to be believed, is neither pertinent to the Question in hand; nor in it self true.

I SAY, neither pertinent nor true. Not pertinent: Because our Question is not, What Points are necessary to be explicitely believed: but what Points may be lawfully disbelieved, or rejected after sufficient proposition that they are divine Truths. You say, the Creed contains all Points necessary to be believed: Be it so. But doth it likewise contain all Points not to be disbelieved? Certainly it doth not. For how many Truths are there in holy Scripture not contained in the Creed, which we are not obliged distinctly, and particularly to know and believe, but are bound under pain of damnation not to reject, as soon as we come to know that they are found in holy Scripture? And we having already shewed, that whatsoever is proposed by God's Church as a Point of Faith, is infallibly a truth revealed by God; it followeth that whosoever denieth any such Point, opposeth God's sacred testimony, whether that Point be contained in the Creed, or no. In vain then, was your care employed to prove that all Points of Faith necessary to be explicitely believed, are contained in the Creed. Neither was that the Catalogue which Charity Mistaken demanded. His demand was (and it was most reasonable) that you would once give us a List of all Fundamentals, the denial whereof destroys Salvation; whereas the denial of other Points not Fundamental may stand with Salvation, although both these kinds of Points be equally proposed as revealed by God. For if they be not equally proposed, the difference will arise from diversity of the Proposal, and not of the Matter fundamental, or not fundamental. This Catalogue only, can shew how far Protestants may disagree without breach of Unity in Faith; and upon this, may other matters depend according to the ground of Protestants. But you will never adventure to publish such a Catalogue. I say more: You cannot assign any one Point so great, or fundamental, that the denial thereof will make a man an Heretique, if it be not sufficiently propounded, as a divine Truth: Nor can you assign any one Point so small, that it can without Heresie be rejected, if once it be sufficiently represented as revealed by God.

2. Nay, this your instance in the Creed is not only impertinent, but directly against you. For all Points in the Creed are not of their own nature Fundamental, as I shewed (a) before: And yet it is damnable to deny any one Point contained in the Creed. So that it is clear, that to make an error damnable, it is not necessary that the matter be of it self fundamental. a Cap. 3. n. 3.

3. Moreover, you cannot ground any certainty upon the Creed it self, unless first you presuppose that the Authority of the Church is universally infallible, and consequently that it is damnable to oppose her Declarations, whether they concern matters great, or small, contained, or not contained in the Creed. This is clear. Because we must receive the Creed it self upon the credit of the Church, without which we could not know that there was any such thing as that which We call the Apostles Creed: and yet the Argument whereby you endeavour to prove, that the Creed contains all Fundamental Points, are grounded upon supposition, that the Creed was made either by the Apostles themselves, or by the Church of their times from them: which thing we could not certainly know, if the succeeding and still continued Church may err in her Traditions: neither can we be assured, whether all Fundamental Articles which you say were out of the Scriptures, summed and contracted into the Apostles Creed, were faithfully summed, and contracted, and not one praetermitted, altered, or mistaken, unless we undoubtedly knew that the Apostles composed the Creed; and that they intended to contract all Fundamental Points of Faith into it; or at least that the Church of their times (for it seemeth you doubt whether Indeed it were composed by the Apostles themselves) did understand the Apostles aright; and that the Church of their times, did intend that the Creed should contain all Fundamental Points. For if the Church may err in points not Fundamental, may she not also err in the particulars which I have specified? Can you shew it to be a Fundamental Point of Faith, that the Apostles intend to comprize all Points of Faith necessary to Salvation in the Creed? Your self say no more than that it is very (c) probable; which is far from reaching to a Fundamental Point of Faith. Your probability is grounded upon the Judgment of Antiquity, and even of the Roman Doctors, as you say in the same place. But if the Catholique Church may err, what certainty can you expect from Antiquity, or Doctors? Scripture is your total Rule of Faith. Cite therefore some Text of Scripture, to prove that the Apostles, or the Church of their times, composed the Creed, and composed it with a purpose that it should contain all Fundamental Points of Faith. Which being impossible to be done, you must for the Creed it self relie upon the infallibility of the Church. b Pag. 216. c Pag. 241.

4. Moreover, the Creed confisteth not so much in the words, as in their sense and meaning. All such as pretend to the name of Christians, recite the Creed, and yet many have erred fundamentally, as well against the Articles of the Creed, as other Points of Faith. It is then very frivolous to say, The Creed contains all Fundamental Points, without specifying; both in what sense the Articles of the Creed be true, and also in what true sense, they be Fundamental. For, both these tasks you are to perform, who teach that all Truth is not Fundamental: and you do but delude the ignorant, when you say, that the Creed, taken in a Catholique (e) sense, comprehendeth all Points Fundamental: because, with you all Catholique sense is not Fundamental: for so it were necessary to Salvation that all Christians should know the whole Scripture, wherein every least Point hath a Catholique sense. Or if, by Catholique sense, you understand that sense which is so universally to be known, and believed by all, that whosoever fails therein cannot be saved, you trifle, and say no more than this, All Points of the Creed in a sense necessary to Salvation, are necessary to Salvation. Or, All Points Fundamental, are Fundamental After this manner it were an easie thing to make many true Prognostications, by saying it will certainly rain, when it raineth. You say the Creed (f) was opened and explained, in some parts in the Creeds of Nice, &c. But how shall we understand the other parts, not explained in those Creeds? e Pag. 216. f Pag. 216.

5. For what Article in the Creed is more Fundamental, or may seem more clear, than that wherein we we believe JESUS CHRIST to be the Mediator, Redeemer, and Saviour of Mankind, and the Founder and Foundation of a Catholique Church expressed in the Creed? And yet about this Article, how many different Doctrins are there, not only of old Heretiques, as Arius, Nestorius, Eutiches, &c. but also Protestants, partly against Catholiques, and partly against one another? For the said main Article of Christ's being the only Saviour of the world, &c. according to different senses of disagreeing Sects, doth involve these, and many other such questions; That Faith in JESUS CHRIST doth justifie alone; that Sacraments have no efficiency in Justification; That Baptism doth not avail Infants for Salvation, unless they have an Act of Faith; That there is no Sacerdotal Absolution from sins; That good works proceeding from God's grace are not meritorious; That there can be no Satisfaction for the temporal punishment due to sin, after the guilt or offence is pardoned; No Purgatory; No Prayers for the Dead; No Sacrifice of the Mass; No Invocation; No Mediation, or Intercession of Saints; No inherent Justice; No supreme Pastor, yea, No Bishop by divine Ordinance; No Real presence; No Transubstantiation, with divers others. And why? Because (forsooth) these Doctrins derogate from the Titles of Mediator, Redeemer, Advocate, Foundation, &c. Yea and are against the truth of our Saviours humane nature, if we believe divers Protestants, writing against Transubstantiation. Let then any judicious man consider, whether D. Potter, or others, do really satisfie, when they send men to the Creed for a perfect Catalogue, to distinguish Points Fundamental, from those which they say are not Fundamental. If he will speak indeed to some purpose, let him say, This Article is understood in this sense, and in this sense it is Fundamental. That other is to be understood in such a meaning; yet according to that meaning, it is not so fundamental, but that men may disagree, and deny it without damnation. But it were no policy for any Protestant to deal so plainly.

6. But to what end should we use many arguments? Even your self are forced to limit your own Doctrin, and come to say, that the Creed is a perfect Catalogue of Fundamental Points. Taken as it was further opened and explained in some parts (by occasion of emergent Heresies) in the other Catholick Creeds of Nice, Constantinople, (g) Ephesus, Chalcedon, and Athanasius. But this explication, or restriction overthroweth your assertion. For as the Apostles Creed was not to us a sufficient Catalogue, till it was explained by the first Council, nor then till it was declared by another, &c. So now also, as new Heresies may arise, it will need particular explanation against such emergent errors; and so it is not yet, nor ever will be, of it self alone, a particular Catalogue, sufficient to distinguish betwixt fundamental, and not fundamental points. g Pag. 216.

7. I come to the second part: That the Creed doth not contain all main and principal Points of Faith. And to the end we may not strive about things either granted by us both, or nothing concerning the point in question, I must premise these Observations.

8. First, That it cannot be denied, but that the Creed is most full and complete, to that purpose for which the holy Apostles, inspired by God, meant that it should serve, and in that manner as they did intend it, which was, not to comprehend all particular Points of Faith, but such general heads, as were most befitting, and requisite for preaching the Faith of Christ to Jews and Gentiles, and might be briefly and compendiously set down, and easily learned and remembred. And therefore, in respect of Gentiles, the Creed doth mention God as Creator of all things; and for both Jews and Gentiles, the Trinity, the Messias, and Saviour, his birth, life, death, resurrection, and glory, from whom they were to hope remission of sins, and life everlasting, and by whose sacred name they were to be distinguished from all other professions, by being called Christians. According to which purpose S. Thomas of Aquine (h) doth distinguish all the Articles of the Creed into these general heads: That some belong to the Majesty of the Godhead, others to the Mystery of our Saviour Christs Humane nature: Which two general objects of Faith, the holy Ghost doth express and conjoyn, Joan. 17. Hæc est vita æterna, &c. This is life everlasting, that they know the true GOD, and whom thou hast sent JESUS CHRIST. But it was not their meaning to give us as it were a course of Divinity, or a Catechism, or a particular expression of all Points of Faith, leaving those things to be performed, as occasion should require, by their own word or writing, for their time, and afterward for their successors in the Catholique Church. Our question then is not, whether the Creed be perfect, as far as the end for which it was composed, did require; For we believe and are ready to give our lives for this; but only we deny, that the Apostles did intend to comprize therein all particular Points of belief, necessary to Salvation, as even by D. Potter's own (k) confession, it doth not comprehend Agenda, or things belonging to practice, as Sacraments, Commandments, the acts of Hope, and duties of Charity, which we are obliged not only to practise, but also to believe to be divine infallible faith. Will he therefore infer that the Creed is not perfect, because it contains not all those necessary and Fundamental objects of Faith? He will answer, No, because the Apostles intended only to express credenda, things to be believed, not practised. Let him therefore give us leave to say, that the Creed is perfect, because it wanteth none of those objects of belief which were intended to be set down as we explicated before. h 2. 2. q. 1. art. 8. k Pag. 235. 215.

9. The second Observation is, that to satisfie our question what Points in particular be fundamental, it will not be sufficient to alledg the Creed, unless it contains all such Points either expressly, and immediately; or else in such manner, that by evident and necessary consequence they may be deduced from Articles both clearly and particularly contained therein. For if the deduction be doubtful, we shall not be sure, that such conclusions be fundamental: or if the Articles themselves which are said to be fundamental, be not distinctly, and particularly expressed, they will not serve us to know, and distinguish all Points Fundamental, from those which they call, not Fundamental. We do not deny but that all Points of Faith, both fundamental and not fundamental, may be said to be contained in the Creed, in some sense; as for example, implicitely, generally, or in such involved manner. For when we explicitely believe the Catholick Church, we do not implicitely believe whatsoever she proposeth as belonging to Faith; or else by way of resolution, that is when we are once instructed in the belief of particular Points of Faith, not expressed, nor by necessary consequence deducible from the Creed; we may afterward by some analogie, or proportion, and resemblance, reduce it to one or more of those Articles which are explicitely contained in the Symbole. Thus S. Thomas the Cherubim among Divines, teacheth (l) that the miraculous existence of our blessed Saviours Body in the Eucharist, as likewise all his other miracles are reduced to God's Omnipotency, expressed in the Creed. And D. Potter saith, The Eucharist (m) being a Seal of that holy union which we have with christ our Head, by his Spirit and Faith, and with the Saints his Members by charity, is evidently included in the Communion of Saints. But this reductive way, is far from being sufficient l 2. 2. q. 1. Ar. 8. ad. 6. m Pag. 231.

to infer out of the Articles of God's Omnipotency, or of the Communion of Saints, that our Saviours body is in the Eucharist, and much less whether it be only in figure, or else in reality; by Transubstantiation, or Consubstantiation, &c. and least of all, whether or no these Points be Fundamental. And you hyperbolize, In saying, the Eucharist is evidently included in the Communion of Saints, as if there could not have been, or was not, a Communion of Saints, before the blessed Sacrament was instituted. Yet it is true, that after we know, and believe, there is such a Sacrament, we may refer it to some of those heads expressed in the Creed, and yet so, as S. Thomas refers it to one Article, and D. Potter to an other; and in respect of different analogies or effects, it may be referred to several Articles. The like I say of other Points of Faith, which may in some sort be reduced to the Creed, but nothing to D. Potter's purpose: But contrarily it sheweth, that your affirming such and such Points to be Fundamental or not Fundamental, is meerly arbitrary, to serve your turn, as necessity, and your occasions may require. Which was an old custom amongst Heretiques, as we read in (n) S. Austin, Pelagius and Coelestius, desiring fraudulently to n De peccat. Orig. li. 2 c. 22. avoid the hateful name of Heresies, affirmed that the question of Original sin may be disputed without danger of faith. But this holy Father affirms that it belongs to the foundation of Faith. We may (saith he) endure a disputant who errs in other questions not yet diligently examined, not yet diligently established by the whole Authority of the Church, their error may be born with: but it must not pass so far as to attempt to shake the Foundation of the Church. We see S. Augustine placeth the being of a Point Fundamental or not Fundamental, in that it hath been examined, and established by the Church, although the Points of which he speaketh, namely, Original Sin, be not contained in the Creed.

10. Out of that which hath been said, I infer, that D. Potters pains in alledging Catholique Doctors, the ancient Fathers, and the Council of Trent, to prove that the Creed contains all Points of Faith, was needless; since we grant it in manner aforesaid. But D. Potter cannot in his conscience believe, that Catholique Divines, or the Council of Trent, and the holy Fathers did intend, that all Points in particular which we are obliged to believe, are contained explicitely in the Creed; he knowing well enough, that all Catholicks hold themselves obliged, to believe all those Points which the said Council define, to be believed under an Anathema, and that all Christians believe the Commandments, Sacraments, &c. which are not expressed in the Creed.

11. Neither must this seem strange. For who is ignorant, that Summaries, Epitomes, and the like brief Abstract, are not intended to specifie all particulars of that Science, or Subject, to which they belong. For as the Creed is said to contain all Points of Faith; so the Decalogue comprehends all Articles (as I may term them) which concern charity, and good life: and yet this cannot be so understood, as if we were disobliged from performance of any duty, or the eschewing of any vice, unless it be expressed in the ten Commandments. For, (to omit the precepts of receiving Sacraments, which belong to practice, or manners; and yet are not contained in the Decalogue) there are many sins, even against the law of nature, and light of reason, which are not contained in the ten Commandments, except only by similitude, analogy, reduction, or some such way. For example, we find not expressed in the Decalogue, either divers sins, as Gluttony, Drunkenness, Pride, Sloth, Covetousness in desiring either things superfluous, or with too much greediness; or divers of our chief obligations, as Obedience to Princes, and all Superiours, not only Ecclesiastical, but also Civil, whose laws Luther, Melanthon, Calvin, and some other Protestants do dangerously affirm not to oblige in conscience, and yet these men think they know the ten Commandments: as likewise divers Protestants defend Usury, to be lawful; and the many Treatises of Civilians, Canonists, and Casuists are witnesses, that divers sins against the light of reason, and law of nature, are not distinctly expressed in the ten Commandments; although when by others diligence they are found unlawful, they may be reduced to some of the Commandments, and yet not so evidently, and particularly but that divers do it in divers manners.

12. My third Observation is, That our present question being Whether or no the Creed contain so fully all Fundamental Points of Faith, that whosoever do not agree in all, and every one of those Fundamental Articles, cannot have the same substance of Faith, nor hope of Salvation; if I can produce one, or more Points, not contained in the Creed, in which if two do not agree, both of them cannot expect to be saved, I shall have performed as much as I intend; and D. Potter must seek out some other Catalogue for Points Fundamental, than the Creed. Neither is it material to the said purpose, whether such Fundamental Points rest only in knowledg, and speculation or belief, or else be farther referred to work and practice. For the habit, or vertue of Faith, which inclineth, and enableth us to believe both speculative and practical verities, is of one and the self same nature and essence. For example, by the same Faith, whereby I speculatively believe there is a God, I likewise believe, that he is to be adored, served, and loved; which belong to practice. The reason is, because the Formal Object, or motive, for which I yield assent to those different sorts of material objects, is the same in both, to wit, the revelation, or Word of God. Where, by the way I note, that if the unity, or Distinction, and nature of Faith were to be taken from the diversity of things revealed, by one faith I should believe speculative verities, and by another such as tend to practice, which I doubt whether D. Potter himself will admit.

13. Hence it followeth, that whosoever denieth any one main practical revealed truth, is no less an Heretique, than if he should deny a Point resting in belief alone. So that when D. Potter (to avoid our argument, that all Fundamental Points are not contained in the Creed, because in it there is no mention of the Sacraments, which yet are Points of so main importance, that Protestants make the due administration of them, to be necessary and essential to constitute a Church) answereth, that the Sacraments are to be (p) reckoned, rather among the Agenda of the Church, than the Credenda; they are rather Divine Rites and Ceremonies, than Doctrins; he either grants what we affirm, or in effect says, Of two kind of revealed Truths which are necessary to be believed, the Creed contains one sort only, ergo, it contains all kind of revealed Truths necessary to be believed. Our question is not, de nomine, but re; nor what he called Points of Faith, or of Practice, but what Points indeed he necessarily to be believed, whether they be termed Agenda, or Credenda: especially the chiefest part of Christian perfection consisting more in Action, than in barren Speculation; in good works, than bare belief; in doing, than knowing. And there are no less contentions concerning practical, than speculative truths: as Sacraments, obtaining remission of sin, Invocation of Saints, Prayers for the dead, Adoration of Christ in the Sacrament, and many other: all which do do so much the more import, as on them, beside right belief, doth also depend our practice, and the ordering of our life. Though D. Potter could therefore give us (as he will never be able to do) a iminute, and exact Catalogue of all Truths to be believed: that would not make me able enough to know, whether or no I have Faith sufficient for Salvation; till he also did bring in a particular List, of all believed Truths, which tend to practice, declaring which of them be fundamental, which not; that so every man might know, whether he be not in some Damnable Error, for some Article of Faith, which farther might give influence into Damnable works.

14. These Observations being premised, I come to prove, that the Creed doth not contain all Points of Faith necessary to be known and believed. And, to omit, that in general it doth not tell us, what Points be fundamental, or not fundamental, which in the way of Protestants is most necessary to be known; in particular, there is no mention of the greatest evils, from which mans calamity proceeded, I mean, the sin of the Angels, of Adam, and of Original sin in us: nor of the greatest Good from which we expect all good, to wit, the necessity of Grace for all works tending to piety. Nay, there is no mention of Angels good or bad. The meaning of that most general head (Oportet accedentem, &c. It behoves (q) him that comes to God, to believe that He is, and is a Rewarder,) is questioned, by the denial of Merit, which makes God a Giver, but not a Rewarder. It is not expressed whether the Article of Remission of sins be understood by Faith alone, or else may admit the efficiency of Sacraments. There is no mention of Ecclesiastical, Apostolical, Divine Traditions, one way or other; or of holy Scriptures in general, and much less of every Book in particular; nor of the Name, Nature, Number, Effects, Matter, Form, Ministry, Intention, Necessity of Sacraments: and yet the due Administration of Sacraments, is with Protestants an essential Note of the Church. There is nothing for Baptism of Children, nor against Re-baptization. There is no mention in favour, or against the Sacrifice of the Mass, of Power in the Church to institute Rites, Holy Days, &c. and to inflict Excommunication, or other Censures: or Priesthood, Bishops, and the whole Ecclesiastical Hierarchy, which are very Fundamental Points; of S. Peter's Primacy, which to Calvin seemeth a fundamental error; not of the possibility, or impossibility to keep God's Commandments; of the procession of the holy Ghost from the Father and Son; of Purgatory, or Prayer for the dead, in any sense: And yet D. Potter doth not deny, but that Arius was effeemed an Heretique, for denying (r) all sort of Commemoration for the dead. Nothing of the Churches Visibility or Invisibility, Fallibility or Infallibility; nor of other Points controverted betwixt Protestants themselves, and between Protestants and Catholiques, which to D. Potter seems so heinous corruptions, that they cannot without damnation joyn with us in profession thereof. There is no mention of the Cessation of the Old Law, which yet is a very main Point of Faith. And many other might be also added.

r Pag. 35.

15. But what need we labour to specifie particulars? There are as many important Points of Faith not expressed in the Creed, as, since the worlds beginning, now, and for all future times there have been, are, and may be innumerable, gross, damnable Heresies, whose contrary truths are not contained in the Creed. For, every Fundamental Error must have a contrary Fundamental Truth; because of two contradictory Propositions in the same degree, if the one is false, the other must be true. As for example, if it be a damnable error to deny the blessed Trinity, or the Godhead of our Saviour, the belief of them must be a Truth necessary to Salvation; or rather, if we will speak properly, the Error is damnable, because the opposite Truth is necessary, as death is frightful, because life is sweet; and according to Philosophy, the Privation is measured by the Form to which it is repugnant. If therefore the Creed contain in particular all fundamental Points of Faith, it must explicitely, or by clear consequence, comprehend all Truths opposite to innumerable Heresies of all Ages past, present, and to come, which no man in his wits will affirm it to do.

16. And here I cannot omit to signifie how you (s) applaud the saying of D. Usher, That in those Propositions which without all controversie are universally received in the whole Christian world, so much Truth is contained, as being joyned with holy Obedience, may be sufficient to bring a man to everlasting Salvation; neither have we cause to doubt but as many as walk according to this Rule (neither, overthrowing that which they have builded, by superinducing any damnable heresies thereupon, nor otherwise vitiating their holy faith, with a lewd and wicked conversation) peace shall be upon them, and upon the Israel of God. Now D. Potter knows, that the Mystery of the B. Trinity is not universally received in the whole Christian world, as appears by very many Heresies, in Polony, Hungary and Transilvania, and therefore according to this Rule of D. Usher, approved by D. Potter, the denial of the B. Trinity, shall not exclude Salvation.

17. Let me note, by the way, that you might easily have espied a foul contradiction in the said words of D. Usher, by you recited, and so much applauded. For he supposeth, that a man agrees with other Churches in belief, which joyned with holy Obedience may bring him to everlasting Salvation, and yet, that he may superinduce damnable heresies. For how can he superinduce damnable heresies, who is supposed to believe all Truths necessary to Salvation? Can there be any damnable heresie, unless it contradict some necessary Truth, which cannot happen in one who is supposed to believe all necessary Truths? Besides, if one believing all Fundamental Articles in the Creed may superinduce damnable heresies, it followeth, that the Fundamental Truths contrary to those damnable heresies, are not contained in the Creed.

18. According to this Model of D. Potter's foundation, consisting in the agreement of scarce one Point of Faith; what a strange Church would he make of men concurring in some one or few Articles of belief, who yet for the rest should be holding conceits plainly contradictory: so patching up a Religion of men, who agree only in the Article, That Christ is our Saviour, but for the rest, are like to the parts of a Chimara; having the head of a man, the neck of an horse, the shoulder of an Ox, the foot of a Lion, &c. I wrong them not herein. For in good Philosophy there is greater repugnancy between assent and dissent, affirmation and negation, est, est, non, non, (especially when all these contradictories pretend to rely upon one and the self same Motive, the infallible Truth of Almighty God) than between the integral parts, as head, neck, &c. of a man, horse, lion, &c. And thus Protestants are far more bold to disagree even in matters of Faith, than Catholique Divines in questions meerly Philosophical, or not determined by the Church. And while thus they they ſtand only upon Fundamental Articles, they do by their own confeſſion deſtroy the Church, which is the houſe of God. For the foundation alone of a houſe, is not a houſe, nor can they in ſuch an imaginary Church any more expect Salvation, than the foundation alone of a houſe is fit to afford a man habitation.

19. Moreover, it is moſt evident that Proteſtants by this Chaos rather than Church, do give unavoidable occaſion of deſperation to poor ſouls. Let ſome one who is deſirous to have his ſoul repair to D. Potter, who maintains theſe grounds, to know upon whom he may relie, in a matter of ſo great conſequence; I ſuppoſe the Doctors anſwer will be, Upon the truly Catholique Church. She cannot err damnably. What underſtand you by the Catholique Church? cannot general t Pag. 167. Councils, which are the Church repreſentative, err? Yes, they may weakly, or (t) miſfally miſapply, or miſunderſtand, or neglect Scripture, and ſo err damnably. To whom then ſhall I go for my particular inſtruction? I cannot confer with the united body of the whole Church about my particular difficul-u Pag. 27. ties, as your ſelf affirms, that the Catholique Church cannot be told (u) of private injuries. Muſt I then conſult with every particular perſon of the Catholique Church? So it ſeems by what w Pag. 150. you write in theſe words, The whole (w) Militant Church (that is, all the members of it) cannot poſſibly err either in the whole Faith, or any neceſſary Article of it. You ſay, M. Doctor, I cannot for my inſtruction acquaint the univerſal Church with my particular ſcruples. You ſay, the Prelates of God's Church meeting in a lawful general Council may err damnably: It remains then that for my nex Pag. 151. ceſſary inſtruction, I muſt repair to every particular member of the univerſal Church, ſpred over the face of the earth: and yet you teach that the Promiſes (x) which our Lord hath made unto his Church for his aſſiſtance, are intended not to any particular perſons or Churches, but only to the Church Catholique, with which (as I ſaid) it is impoſſible for me to confer. Alas! O moſt unconfortable ghoſtly Father, you drive me to deſparation! How ſhall I confer with every Chriſtian ſoul, man and woman, by ſea and by land, cloſe priſoner or at liberty? &c. Yet, upon ſuppoſal of this miraculous Pilgrimage for Faith, before I have the faith of Miracles, how ſhall I proceed at our meeting? Or how ſhall I know the man on whom I may ſecurely relie? Procure (will you ſay) to know whether he believe all Fundamental Points of Faith. For if he do, his faith, for point of belief, is ſufficient for Salvation, though he err in an hundred things of leſs moment. But how ſhall I know, whether he hold all Fundamental Points or no? For till you tell me this, I cannot know whether or no his belief be ſound in all Fundamental Points. Can you ſay the Creed? Yes and ſo can many damnable Hereticques. But why do you ask me this queſtion? Becauſe the Creed contains all fundamental Points of Faith.
y Pag. 241. Are you ſure of that? Not ſure: I hold it very probable. (y) Shall I hazard my ſoul on probabilities, or even wagers? This yields a new cauſe of diſpair. But what? doth the Creed contain all Points neceſſary to be believed, whether they reſt in the underſtanding, or elſe do further extend to practice? No. It was compoſed to deliver Credenda, not Agenda to us; Faith, not Practice. How then ſhall I know what Points of belief, which direct my practice, be neceſſary to Salvation? Still you chalk out new paths for Deſparation Well, are all Articles of the Creed, for their nature and matter, Fundamental? I cannot ſay ſo. How then ſhall I know which in particular be and which be not fundamental? Read my Anſwer to a late Popiſh Pamphlet intituled Charity Miſtaken, &c. there you ſhall find, that fun-z Pag. 211, 213, 214. damental Doctrins are ſuch Catholique Veritiis, as principally and eſſentially pertain (z) to the Faith, ſuch as properly conſtitute a Church, and are neceſſary (in ordinary courſe) to be diſtinctly believed by every Chriſtian that will be ſaved. They are thoſe grand, and capital Doctrins which make up our Faith in Chriſt; that is, that common Faith which is alike precious in all, being one and the ſame in the higheſt Apoſtle, and the meaneſt Believer, which the Apoſtle elſewhere calls the firſt Principles of the Oracles of God, and the form of ſound words. But how ſhall I apply theſe general definitions, or deſcriptions, or (to ſay the truth) theſe only varied words and phraſes (for I underſtand the word fundamental, as well as the word principal, eſſential, grand, and capital doctrins, &c.) to the particular Articles of the Creed, in ſuch ſort, as that I may be able preciſely, exactly, particularly, to diſtinguiſh fundamental Articles from Points of leſs moment? You labour to tell us what Fundamental Points be, but not which they be: and yet unleſs you do this, your Doctrin ſerves only, either to make men diſpair, or elſe to have recourſe to thoſe whom you call Papiſts, and which give one certain Rule, that all Points defined by Chriſts viſible Church belong to the fountain of Faith, in ſuch ſenſe, as that to deny any one cannot ſtand with Salvation. And ſeeing your ſelf acknowledges that theſe men do not err in Points Fundamental, I cannot but hold it moſt ſafe for me to joyn with them, for the ſecuring of my ſoul, and the avoiding of deſperation, into which this your Doctrin muſt caſt all them who underſtand and believe it. For the whole diſcourſe, and inferences which here I have made, are either your own direct Aſſertions, or evident Conſequences clearly deduced from them.

20. But now let us anſwer ſome few Objections of D. Potter's, againſt that which we have ſaid before, to avoid our argument, that the Scripture is not ſo much as meationed in the Creed, he ſaith, The Creed a Pag. 234. is an abſtract of ſuch (a) neceſſary Doctrins as are delivered in Scripture, or collected out of it; and therefore needs not expreſs the Authority of that which it ſuppoſes.

21. This Anſwer makes for us. For by giving a reaſon why it was needleſs that Scripture ſhould be expreſſed in the Creed, you grant as much as we deſire, namely, that the Apoſtles judged it needleſs to expreſs all neceſſary Points of Faith in their Creed. Neither doth the Creed ſuppoſe, or depend on Scriptures in ſuch ſort as that we can by any probable conſequence, infert from the Articles of the Creed, that there is any Canonical Scripture at all; and much leſs that ſuch Books in particular be Canonical. Yea, the Creed might have been the ſame, although holy Scripture had never been written; and, which is more, the Creed even in priority of time, was before all the Scripture of the New Teſtament; except the Goſpel of S. Matthew. And ſo, according to this reaſon of his, the Scripture ſhould b Pag. 234. not mention Articles contained in the Creed. And I note in a word, how little connexion D. Potter's arguments have, while he tels us, that The Creed (b) is an Abſtract of ſuch neceſſary Doctrins as are delivered in Scripture, or collected out of it, and therefore needs not expreſs the authority of that which it ſuppoſes; it doth not follow: The Articles of the Creed are delivered in Scripture: therefore the Creed ſuppoſeth Scripture. For two diſtinct writings may well deliver the ſame Truths, and yet one of them not ſuppoſe the other, unleſs D. Potter be of opinion, that two Doctors cannot, at one time, ſpeak the ſame truth.

22. And notwithſtanding, that D. Potter hath now told us, it was needleſs that the Creed ſhould expreſs preſs Scripture whoſe Authority it ſuppoſes? he comes at length to ſay, that the Nicene Fathers in their Creed confeſſing that the holy Ghoſt ſpake by the Prophets, doth thereby ſufficiently avow the divine Authority of all Canonical Scripture. but I would ask him, whether the Nicene Creed be not alſo an Abſtract of Doctrins delivered in Scripture, as he ſaid of the Apoſtles Creed, and thence did infer, that it was needleſs to expreſs Scripture, whoſe Authority it ſuppoſes? Beſides, we do not only believe in general, that Canonical Scripture is of divine Authority, but we are alſo bound under pain of damnation to believe, that ſuch and ſuch particular Books not mentioned in the Nicene Creed, are Canonical. And laſtly, D. Potter in this anſwer grants as much as we deſire, which is, that all Points of Faith are not contained in the Apoſtles Creed, even as it is explained by other Creeds. For theſe words (who ſpake by the Prophets) are no way contained in the Apoſtles Creed, and therefore contain an Addition, not an Explanation thereof.

23. But, how can it be neceſſary (ſaith D. Potter) for any Chriſtian to have more in his Creed than the c Pag. 225. (c) Apoſtles had, and the Church of their times? Anſwer, You trifle, not diſtinguiſhing between the Apoſtles belief, and that abridgment of ſome Articles of Faith, which we call the Apoſtles Creed; and withal you beg the queſtion, by ſuppoſing that the Apoſtles believed no more, than is contained in their Creed, which every unlearned perſon knows and believes: and I hope you will not deny but the Apoſtles were endued with greater knowledg than ordinary perſons.

24. Your pretended proof out of the Acts, that the Apoſtles revealed to the Church the whole counſel of God, keeping (d) back nothing with your gloſs (needful for our Salvation) is no proof, unleſs you ſtill
d Act. 20. 27. beg the queſtion, and do ſuppoſe, that whatſoever the Apoſtles revealed to the Church, is contained in the Creed. And I wonder you do not reflect that thoſe words were by S. Paul particularly directed to Paſtors, and Governors of the Church, as is clear by the other words, He called the Ancients of the Church. And afterward, Take heed to your ſelves, and to the whole flock, wherein the holy Ghoſt hath placed you Biſhops to rule the Church. And your ſelf ſay, that more knowledg is (e) neceſſary in Biſhops, and Prieſts, e Pag. 244. to whom is committed the government of the Church, and the care of ſouls, than in vulgar Laicks. Do you think that the Apoſtles taught Chriſtians nothing but their Creed? Said they nothing of the Sacraments, Commandments, Duties of Hope, Charity, &c.?

25. Upon the ſame affected ambiguity is grounded your other Objection: To ſay, the whole faith of thoſe times (f) is not contained in the Apoſtles Creed, is all one, as if a man ſhould ſay, This is not the Apoſtles
f Pag. 225, 226. Creed, but a part of it. For the Faith of the Apoſtles is not all one with that which we commonly call their Creed. Did not, I pray you, S. Matthew, and S. John believe their writings to be Canonical Scripture? and yet their writings are not mentioned in the Creed. It is therefore more than clear that the Faith of the Apoſtles is of larger extent, than the Apoſtles Creed.

26. To your demand, Why amongſt many things of equal neceſſity to be believed, the Apoſtles ſhould (g) ſo diſtinctly ſet down ſome, and be altogether ſilent of others? I anſwer, That you muſt anſwer your g Pag. 223. own demand. For in the Creed their be divers Points, in their nature, not fundamental or neceſſary to be explicitely and diſtinctly believed, as above we ſhewed; Why are theſe Points which are not fundamental expreſſed, rather than other of the ſame quality? Why our Saviours deſcent to Hell, and Burial expreſſed, and not his Circumciſion, his Manifeſtation to the three Kings, working of Miracles, &c.? Why did they not expreſs Scriptures, Sacraments, and all Fundamental Points of Faith tending to practice, as well as thoſe which reſt in belief? Their intention was, particularly to deliver ſuch Articles as were fitteſt for thoſe times, concerning the Deity, Trinity, and Meſſias, (as heretofore I have declared) leaving many things to be taught by the Catholick Church, which in the Creed we all profeſs to believe. Neither doth it follow, as you infer, That as well, may better, they might have given no Article, but that (of the Church) and ſent us to the Church for all the reſt. For in ſetting down others beſides that, and not all, they make us believe we have all, when (h) we have not all. For by this kind of arguing, what h Pag. 223. may not be deduced? One might, quite contrary to your inference, ſay, if the Apoſtles Creed contain all Points neceſſary to Salvation, what need we any Church to teach us? and conſequently what need of the Article concerning the Church? What need we the Creeds of Nice, Conſtantinople, &c? Superfluous are your Catechiſms, wherein, beſides the Articles of the Creed, you add divers other particulars. Theſe would be poor conſequences, and ſo are yours. But ſhall I tell you news; For ſo you are pleaſed to eſteem it. We grant your inference thus far; That our Saviour Chriſt referred us to his Church, by her to be taught, and by her alone. For ſhe was before the Creed, and Scripture; And ſhe, to diſcharge this impoſed office of inſtructing us, hath delivered us the Creed, but not it alone, as if nothing elſe were to be believed. We have, beſides it, holy Scripture; we have unwritten, Divine, Apoſtolical, Eccleſiaſtical Traditions. It were a childiſh Argument, The Creed contains not all things which are neceſſary to be believed: Ergo, it is not profitable. Or, The Church alone, is ſufficient to teach us by ſome convenient means: Ergo, the muſt teach us without all means, without Creeds, without Councils, without Scripture, &c. If the Apoſtles had expreſſed no Article, but that of the Catholique Church, ſhe muſt have taught us the other Articles in particular, by Creeds, or other means as in fact we have even the Apoſtles Creed from the Tradition of the Church. If you will believe you have all in the Creed, when you have not all, it is not the Apoſtles, or the Church, that makes you ſo believe, but it is your own error, whereby you will needs believe that the Creed muſt contain all. For neither the Apoſtles nor the Church, nor the Creed it ſelf tell you any ſuch matter; and what neceſſity is there, that one means of inſtruction, muſt involve whatſoever is contained in all the reſt? We are not to recite the Creed with anticipated perſwaſions, that it muſt contain what we imagin it ought, for better maintaining ſome opinions of our own; but we ought to ſay, and believe, that it contains what we find in it; of which one Article is, to believe the Catholique Church, ſurely to be taught by her, which preſuppoſeth that we need other inſtruction beſide the Creed: and in particular we may learn of her, what Points be contained in the Creed, what otherwiſe; and ſo we ſhall not be deceived, by believing we have all in the Creed, when we have not all: and you may in the ſame manner ſay, As well may better, the Apoſtles might have given us no Articles at all, as have left our Articles tending to practice. For in ſetting down one ſort of Articles, and not the other, they make us believe we have all, when we have not all.

27. To our Argument, that Baptiſm is not contained in the Creed, D. Potter, beſides his anſwer, that Sacraments belong rather to practice than faith, (which I have already confuted, and which indeed maketh againſt himſelf, and ſerveth only to ſhew that the Apoſtles intended not to comprize all Points in the Creed which we are bound to believe) adds, that the Creed of (i) Nice expreſſed Baptiſm by name i Pag. 237. con-

[confess one Baptism for the remission of sins.] Which answer is directly against himself, and manifestly proves that Baptism is an Article of Faith, and yet is not contained in the Apostles Creed, neither explicitely, nor by any necessary consequence from other Articles expressed therein. If, to make it an Article of Faith, be sufficient that it is contained in the Nicene Council; he will find that Protestants maintain many errors against faith, as being repugnant to definitions of general Councils: as, in particular, that the very Council of Nice, which (saith M. Whitgift, (k) is of all wise and learned men reverenced, esteemed and embraced, next unto the Scriptures themselves) decreed, that to those who were chosen to the Ministry unmarried, it was not lawful to take any wife afterwards, is affirmed by Protestants. And your grand Reformer Luther (Lib. de Concilijs parte prima) saith, that he understands not the holy Ghost in that Council. For in one Canon it saith, that those who have gelded themselves are not fit to be made Priests, in an other it forbids them to have wives. Hath (saith he) the holy Ghost nothing to do in Councils, but to bind and load his Ministers with impossible, dangerous, and unnecessary laws? I forbear to shew that this very Article, I confess one Baptism for the Remission of sins, will be understood by Protestants in a far different sense from Catholiques; yea Protestants among themselves do not agree, How Baptism forgives sins, nor what grace it confers. Only concerning the Unity of Baptism against re-baptization of such as were once baptized (which I noted as a Point not contained in the Apostles Creed) I cannot omit an excellent place of S. Augustine, where, speaking of the Donatists, he hath these words: They are so bold as (l) to re-baptize Catholiques, wherein they shew themselves to be greater Heretiques themselves. In which few words, this holy Father delivereth against the Donatists these Points which do also make against Protestants: That to make an Heresie, or an Heretique, known for such, it is sufficient to oppose the definition of God's Church: That a Proposition may be Heretical, though it be not repugnant to any Texts of Scripture. For S. Augustine teacheth that the doctrin of re-baptization is heretical, and yet acknowledgeth it cannot be convinced for such out of Scripture. And that, neither the Heresie of re-baptization of those who were baptized by Heretiques, nor the contrary Catholique truth being expressed in the Apostles Creed, it followeth that it doth not contain all Points of Faith necessary to Salvation. And so we must conclude, that to believe the creed, is not sufficient for Unity of Faith, and Spirit, in the same Church, unless there be also a total agreement both in belief of other Points of Faith, and in external profession, and Communion also (whereof we are to speak in the next Chapter) according to the saying of S. Augustine, You are (m) with us in Baptism, and in the Creed; but in the Spirit of unity, and bond of peace, and lastly in the Catholique Church, you are not with us.

The ANSWER to the FOURTH CHAPTER.

Wherein is shewed, that the Creed contains all necessary Points of meer Belief.

1. AD §. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. Concerning the Creed's containing the Fundamentals of Christianity, this is D. Potter's Assertion, delivered in the 207. p. of his Book. The Creed of the Apostles (as it is explained in the latter Creeds of the Catholique Church) is esteemed a sufficient Summary or Catalogue of Fundamentals, by the best learned Romanists, and by Antiquity.

2. By Fundamentals he understands not the Fundamental Rules of good life and action, (though every one of these is to be believed to come from God, and therefore virtually includes an Article of Faith:) but the Fundamental Doctrins of Faith, such, as though they have influence upon our lives, as every essential doctrin of Christianity hath, yet we are commanded to believe them, and not to do them. The assent of our understandings is required to them, but not obedience from our wills.

3. But these speculative Doctrins again he distinguisheth out of Aquinas, Occham, and Canus, and others, into two kinds: of the first are those which are the Objects of Faith, in, and for themselves, which by their own nature and God's prime intention, are essential parts of the Gospel: such as the Teachers in the Church, cannot without Mortal sin omit to teach the learners: such as are intrinsecal to the Covenant between God and man; and not only plainly revealed by God, and so certain truths, but also commanded to be preacht to all men, and to be believed distinctly by all, and so necessary truths. Of the second sort are Accidental, Circumstantial, Occasional objects of Faith: millions whereof there are in holy Scripture; such as are to be believed, not for themselves, but because they are joyned with others, that are necessary to be believed, and be delivered by the same Authority which delivered these. Such as we are not bound to know to be be divine Revelations, (for without any fault we may be ignorant hereof, nay believe the contrary;) such as we are not bound to examine, Whether or no they be divine Revelations: such as Pastors are not bound to teach their Flock, nor their Flock bound to know and remember: no nor the Pastors themselves to know them or believe them, or not to disbelieve them absolutely and always; but then only when they do see, and know them to be delivered in Scripture, as divine Revelations.

4. I say when they do so, and not only when they may do. For to lay an obligation upon us of believing, or not disbelieving any Verity, sufficient Revelation on God's part, is not sufficient: For then, seeing all the expresse Veritics of Scripture are either to all men, or at least to all learned men sufficiently revealed by God, it should be a damnable sin, in any learned man actually to disbelieve any one particular Historical verity contained in Scripture, or to believe the contradiction of it, though he knew it not to be there contained. For though he did not, yet he might have known it; it being plainly revealed by God, and this revelation being extant in such a Book, wherein he might have found it recorded, if with diligence he had perused it. To make therefore any Points necessary to be believed, it is requisite, that either we actually know them to be divine Revelations: and these though they be not Articles of Faith, nor necessary to be believed, in and for themselves, yet indirectly, and by accident, and by consequence, they are so: The necessity of believing them, being inforced upon us by a necessity of believing this Essential, and Fundamental Article of Faith, That all Divine Revelations are true, which to disbelieve, or not to believe, is for any Christian not only impious, but impossible. Or else it is requisite that they be, First actually, re vealed by God: Secondly, commanded under pain of damnation, to be particularly known (I mean known to be divine Revelations,) and distinctly to be believed, And of this latter sort of speculative divine Verities, D. Potter affirmed, that the Apostles Creed was a sufficient summary: yet he affirmed it, not as his own opinion, but as the doctrin of the ancient Fathers, and your own Doctors. And besides he affirmed it not as absolutely certain, but very probable.

5. In brief, all that he says is this: It is very probable, that according to the judgment of the Roman Doctors, and the ancient Fathers, the Apostles Creed is to be esteemed a sufficient summary of all those Doctrins which being meerly Credenda, and not Agenda, all men are ordinarily, under pain of damnation, bound particularly to believe.

6. Now the Assertion (you say) is neither pertinent to the question in hand, nor in it self true. Your Reasons to prove it impertinent, put into form and divested of impertinencies, are these. 1. Because the question was not, What points were necessary to be explicitely believed, but what Points were necessary not to be disbelieved after sufficient proposal. And therefore to give a Catalogue of Points necessary to be explicitely believed, is impertinent.

7. Secondly, because errors may be damnable, though the contrary truths be not of themselves fundamental; as, that Pontius Pilate was our Saviours Judge, is not in it self a Fundamental Truth, yet to believe the contrary were a damnable error. And therefore to give a Catalogue of Truths in themselves fundamental, is no pertinent satisfaction to this demand, what errors are damnable?

8. Thirdly, because if the Church be not universally infallible, we cannot ground any certainty upon the Creed, which we must receive upon the Credit of the Church: and, if the Church be not universally infallible, it is damnable to oppose her declaration in any thing, though not contained in the Creed.

9. Fourthly, because not to believe the Articles of the Creed in the true sense is damnable, therefore it is frivilous to say, the Creed contains all Fundamentals, without specifying in what sense the Articles of it are fundamental.

10. Fifthly, because the Apostles Creed (as D. Potter himself confesseth) was not a sufficient Catalogue, till it was explained by the first Council; nor then until it was declared in the second, &c. by occasion of emergent Heresies: Therefore now also, as new Heresies may arise, it will need particular explanation; and so is not yet, nor ever will be, a compleat Catalogue of Fundamentals.

11. Now to the first of these Objections I say, First, that your distinction between Points necessary to be believed, and necessary not to be disbelieved, is more subtil than sound; a distinction without a difference: There being no point necessary to be believed, which is not necessary not to be disbelieved: Nor no Point to any man, at any time, in any circumstances, necessary not to be disbelieved, but it is to the same man, at the same time, in the same circumstances, necessary to be believed. Yet that which (I believe) you would have said, I acknowledge true, that many Points which are not necessary to be believed absolutely, are yet necessary to be believed upon a supposition, that they are known to be revealed by God: that is, become then necessary to be believed, when they are known to be Divine Revelations. But then I must needs say, you do very strangely, in saying, That the Question was, what Point might lawfully be disbelieved, after sufficient Proposition that they are divine Revelation. You affirm, that none may; and so doth D. Potter, and with him all protestants, and all Christians. And how then is this the question? Whoever said or thought, that of Divine Revelations, known to be so, some might safely and lawfully be rejected, and disbelieved, under pretence that they are not Fundamental; Which of us ever taught, that it was not damnable, either to deny, or so much as doubt of the truth of any thing, whereof we either know, or believe that God hath revealed it? What Protestant ever taught that it was not damnable, either to give God the lye, or to call his Veracity into question? Yet you say, The demand of Charity Mistaken was, and it was most reasonable, that a List of Fundamentals should be given, the denial whereof destroys Salvation, whereas the denial of other Points may stand with Salvation, although both kinds be equally proposed, as revealed by God.

12. Let the Reader peruse Charity Mistaken, and he shall find that this qualification, although both kinds of Points be equally proposed as revealed by God, is your addition, and no part of the demand. And if it had, it had been most unreasonable, seeng he and you know well enough, that (though we do not presently without examination, fall down and worship all your Churches Proposals, as divine Revelations) yet, we make no such distinction of known divine revelations, as if some only of them were necessary to be believed, and the rest might safely be rejected. So that to demand a particular minute Catalogue of all Points that may not be disbelieved after sufficient Proposition, is indeed to demand a Catalogue of all Points that are or may be, in as much as none may be disbelieved, after sufficient Proposition, that it is a divine Revelation. At least it is tod esire us, First, To transcribe into this Catalogue, every Text of the whole Bible. Secondly, to set down distinctly, those innumerous millions of negative and positive consequences, which may be evidently deduced from it: For these we say, God hath revealed. And indeed your are not ashamed in plain terms to require this of us. For having first told us, that the command was What points were necessary not to be disbelieved, after sufficient proposition that they are Divine Truth: you come to say, Certainly the Creed contains not all these. And this you prove by asking, How many Truths are there in holy Scripture, or contained in the Creed, which we are not bound to know and believe, but are bound under pain of damnation not to reject, as soon as we come to know that they are found in holy Scripture? So that in requiring a particular Catalogue of all Points not to be disbelieved, after sufficient Proposal, you require us to set you down all Points contained in Scripture, or evidently deducible from it. And yet this you are pleased to call a reasonable, nay, a most reasonable Demand: whereas having ingaged your self to give a Catalogue of your Fundamentals, you conceive your ingagement very well satisfied by saying, All is Fundamental which the Church proposeth, without going about to give us an endless Inventory of her Proposals. And therefore from us, instead of a perfect Particular of Divine Revelations of all sorts, (of which with a less Hyperbole than St. John useth, we might say, If they were to be written, the world would not hold the books that must be written;) methinks you should accept of this general, All Divine Revelations are true, and to be believed. Which yet I say, not as if I thought the belief of this General sufficient to Salvation; but because I conceive it as sufficient as the belief of your General: and therefore I said not, Methinks all should accept of this General, but, Methinks you should accept of it.

13. The very truth is, The main Question in this business is not, What divine Revelations are necessary to be believed, or not rejected when they are sufficiently proposed: for all without exception, all without question are so; But what Revelations are simply and absolutely necessary to be proposed to the belief of Christians, so that that Society, which doth propose, and indeed believe them, hath for matter of Faith, the essence of a true Church; that which doth not, hath not. Now to this Question, though not to yours, Dr. Potter's Assertion (if it be true) is apparently very pertinent. And though not a full and total satisfaction to it, yet very effectual, and of great moment towards it. For the main Question being, What Points are necessary to Salvation: and Points necessary to Salvation, being of two sorts, some of simple belief, some of Practice and Obedience, he that gives you a sufficient summary of the first sort of necessary Points, hath brought you half way towards your Journeys end. And therefore that which he doth, is no more to be slighted, as vain and impertinent, than an Architect's work is to be thought impertinent towards the making of a house, because he doth it not all himself. Sure I am, if his Assertion be true, as I believe it is, a Corrollary may presently be deduced from it, which, if it were embraced cannot in all reason, but do infinite service, both to the Truth of Christ, and the Peace of Christendom. For seeing falshood and error could not long stand against the power of Truth, were they not supported by Tyranny and worldly advantages, he that could assert Christians to that liberty which Christ and his Apostles left them, must needs do Truth a most Heroical service. And seeing the overvaluing of the differences among Christians, is one of the greatest maintainers of the Schisms of Christendom, he that could demonstrate, that only these Points of Belief are simply necessary to Salvation, wherein Christians generally agree, should he not lay a very fair and firm foundation of the Peace of Christendom? Now the Corollary, which, I conceive, would produce these good effects, and which flows naturally from Dr. Potter's Assertion, is this, That what Man or Church soever believes the Creed, and all the evident consequences of it sincerely and heartily, cannot possibly (if also he believe the Scripture) be in any Error of simple belief which is offensive to God; nor therefore deserve for any such Error to be deprived of his life, or to be cut off from the Churches Communion, and the hope of Salvation. And the production of this again would be this (which highly concerns the Church of Rome to think of,) That whatsoever Man or Church doth for any error of simple belief, deprive any man so qualified as above, either of his temporal life, or livelihood, or liberty, or of the Churches Communion, and hope of Salvation, is for the first, unjust, cruel, and tyrannous: Schismatical, presumptuous, and uncharitable for the second.

14. Neither yet is this (as you pretend) to take away the necessity of believing those verities of Scripture, which are not contained in the Creed, when once we come to know that they are written in Scripture, but rather to lay a necessity upon men of believing all things written in Scripture, when once they know them to be there written. For he that believes not all known Divine Revelations to be true, How doth he believe in God? Unless you will say, that the same man, at the same time, may not believe God, and yet believe in him. The greater difficulty is, How it will not take away the necessity of believing Scripture to be the Word of God? But that it will not neither. For though the Creed be granted a sufficient Summary of Articles of meer Faith, yet no man pretends that it contains the Rules of obedience; but for them, all men are referred to Scripture. Besides, he that pretends to believe in God, obligeth himself to believe it necessary to obey that which Reason assures him to be the Will of God. Now Reason will assure him that believes the Creed, that it is the Will of God he should believe the Scripture: even the very same Reason which moves him to believe the Creed: Universal, and never-failing Tradition, having given this testimony both to Creed and Scripture, that they both by the works of God were sealed, and testified to be the words of God. And thus much be spoken in Answer to your first Argument; the length whereof will be the more excusable, if I oblige my self to say but little to the rest.

14. I come then to your second. And, in Answer to it, deny flatly, as a thing destructive of it self, that any Error can be damnable, unless it be repugnant immediately or mediately, directly or indirectly, of it self, or by accident, to some Truth for the matter of it Fundamental. And to your example of Pontius Pilat's being Judge of Christ, I say, the denial of it in him that knows it to be revealed by God, is manifestly destructive of this Fundamental Truth, that all Divine Revelations are true. Neither will you find any error so much as by accident damnable, but the rejecting of it will be necessarily laid upon us, by a real belief of all Fundamentals, and simply necessary Truths. And I desire you would reconcile with this, that which you have said §. 15. Every Fundamental Error must have a contrary Fundamental Truth, because, of two Contradictory Propositions, in the same degree, the one is false, the other must be true, &c.

15. To the third I answer, That the certainty I have of the Creed, that it was from the Apostles, and contains the Principles of Faith, I ground it not upon Scripture, and yet not upon the Infallibility of any present, much less of your Church, but upon the Authority of the Ancient Church, and written Tradition, which (as D. Potter hath proved) gave this constant testimony unto it. Besides, I tell you, it is guilty of the same fault which Dr. Potter's Assertion is here accused of: having perhaps some colour toward the proving it false, but none at all to shew it impertinent.

16. To the Fourth, I answer plainly thus, that you find fault with D. Potter for his Vertues: you are offended with him for not usurping the Authority which he hath not; in a word, for not playing the Pope. Certainly, if Protestants be faulty in this matter, it is for doing it too much, and not too little. This presumptuous imposing of the senses of men upon the words of God, the special senses of men upon the general words of God, and laying them upon mens consciences together, under the equal penalty of death and damnation; this vain conceit that we can speak of the things of God, better than in the words of God: This defying our own Interpretations, and Tyrannous inforcing them upon others; This restraining of the word of God from that latitude and generality, and the understandings of men from that liberty, wherein Christ and the Apostles left them, (a) is, and hath been the only fountain of all the Schisms of the Church, and that which makes them immortal: the common incendiary of Christendom, and that which (as I said before) tears into pieces, not the coat, but the bowels, and members of Christ: Ridente Turcâ nec dolente Judæo. Take away these Walls of separation, and all will quickly be one. Take away this Persecuting, Burning, Cursing, Damning of men for not subscribing to the words of men, as the words of God; Require of Christians only to believe Christ, and to call no man Master but him only; Let those leave claiming Infallibility, that have no title to it, and let them that in their words disclaim it, disclaim it likewise in their actions. In a word, take away Tyranny, which is the Devils instrument to support errors, and superstitions, and impieties, in the several parts of the world, which could not otherwise long withstand the power of Truth; I say, take away Tyranny,

(a) This persuasion is no singularity of mine, but the Doctrine which I have learned from Divines of great learning and judgment. Let the Reader be pleased to peruse the seventh book of Acont. de Strat. Satanæ, and Zanchius his last Oration delivered by him after the composing of the discord between him and Amerbachius, and he shall confess as much.

ranny, and restore Christians to their just and full liberty of captivating their understanding to Scripture only, and as Rivers when they have a free passage, run all to the Ocean, so it may well be hoped by God's blessing, that Universal Liberty thus moderated, may quickly reduce Christendom to Truth and Unity. These thoughts of peace (I am persuaded) may come from the God of Peace, and to His blessing I commend them, and proceed.

18. Your fifth and last Objection stands upon a false and dangerous supposition: That new Heresies may arise. For an Heresie being in it self nothing else but a Doctrine repugnant to some Article of the Christian Faith, to say that new Heresies may arise, is to say, that new Articles of Faith may arise: and so some great Ones among you stick not to profess in plain terms, who yet at the same time are not ashamed to pretend that your whole Doctrine is Catholick and Apostolick. So Salmeron: Non omnibus omnia dedit Deus, ut quælibet ætas suis gaudeat veritatibus, quas prior ætas ignoravit. God hath not given all things to All: So that every Age hath its proper verities, which the former Age was ignorant of: Disp. 57. in Epist. ad Rom. And again in the Margin, Habet unumquodque seculum peculiares revelationes divinas, Every Age hath its peculiar Divine Revelations. Where that he speaks of such Revelations, as are, or may by the Church be made matters of Faith, no man can doubt that reads him; an example whereof, he gives us a little before in these words, Unius Augustini doctrina Assumptionis B. Deiparæ cultum in Ecclesiam introduxit. The Doctrine of Augustine only, hath brought into the Church the Worship of the Assumption of the Mother of God, &c. Others again mince and palliate the matter with this pretence, that your Church undertakes not to coyn new Articles of Faith, but only to declare those that want sufficient Declaration. But if sufficient declaration be necessary to make any Doctrine an Article of Faith, then this Doctrine, which before wanted it, was not before an Article of Faith; and your Church by giving it the Essential form, and last complement of an Article of Faith, makes it, though not a Truth, yet certainly an Article of Faith. But I would fain know, whether Christ and his Apostles knew this Doctrine, which you pretend hath the matter, but wants the form of an Article of Faith, that is, sufficient declaration, whether they knew it to be a necessary Article of the Faith, or no? If they knew it not to be so, then either they taught what they knew not, which were very strange; or else they taught it not: and if not, I would gladly be informed, seeing you pretend to no new Revelations, from whom you learned it? If they knew it, then either they concealed or declared it. To say, they concealed any necessary part of the Gospel, is to charge them with far greater sacriledge, than what was punished in Ananias and Saphira. It is to charge these glorious Stewards, and Dispensers of the Mysteries of Christ, with want of the great vertue requisite in a Steward, which is Fidelity. It is to charge them with presumption for denouncing Anathema's even to Angels, in case they should teach any other Doctrine, than what they had received from them, which sure could not merit an Anathema, if they left any necessary part of the Gospel untaught. It is in a word, in plain terms to give them the lye, seeing they profess plainly and frequently, that they taught Christians the whole Doctrine of Christ. If they did know and declare it, then it was a full and formal Article of Faith; and the contrary a full and formal Heresie, without any need of further declaration; and then their Successors either continued the declaration of it, or discontinued it: If they did the latter, How are they such faithful Depositaries of Apostolick Doctrine as you pretend? Or, what assurance can you give us, that they might not bring in new and false Articles, as well as suffer the old and true ones to be lost? If they did continue the declaration of it, and deliver it to their Successors, and they to theirs, and so on perpetually; then continued it still a full and formal Article of Faith, and the repugnant doctrine a full and formal Heresie, without and before the definition or declaration of a Council. So that Councils, as they cannot make that a truth or falsehood, which before was not ſo: ſo neither can they make or declare that to be an Article of Faith, or an Hereſie, which before was not ſo. The ſuppoſition therefore on which this Argument ſtands, being falſe and ruinous, whatſoever is built upon it, muſt together with it fall to the ground. This explication therefore, and reſtriction of this Doctrine, (whereof you make your advantage) was to my underſtanding unneceſſary. The Fathers of the Church in after-times might have juſt cauſe to declare their judgment, touching the ſenſe of ſome general Articles of the Creed: but to oblige others to receive their declarations under pain of damnation, what warrant they had, I know not. He that can ſhew, either that the Church of all Ages was to have this Authority, or that it continued in the Church for ſome Ages, and then expired: He that can ſhew either of theſe things, let him: for my part, I cannot. Yet I willingly confeſs the judgment of a Council, though not infallible, is yet ſo far directive, and obliging, that without apparent reaſon to the contrary, it may be ſin to reject it, at leaſt not to afford it an outward ſubmiſſion for publick peace ſake.

19. Ad §. 7, 8, 9. Were I not peradventure more fearful than I need to be of the imputation of tergiverſation, I might very eaſily rid my hands of the remainder of this Chapter: For in the Queſtion there diſcuſſed, you grant (for ought I ſee) as much as D. Potter deſires; and D. Potter grants as much as you deſire: and therefore that I ſhould diſeaſe my ſelf, or my Reader with a punctual examination of it, may ſeem ſuperfluous. Firſt, that which you would have, and which your Arguments wholly drive at, is this, That the Creed doth not contain all main and principal points of Faith of all ſorts, whether they be ſpeculative, or practical, whether they contain matter of ſimple belief, or whether they contain matter of practice and obedience. This D. Potter grants, p. 215. 235. And you grant that he grants it, §. 8. Where your words are, even by Dr. Potter's own confeſſion, it (the Creed) doth not comprehend Agenda, or things belonging to practice, as Sacraments, Commandments, the Act of Hope, and duties of Charity. And if you will infer from hence, that therefore C. M. hath no reaſon to reſt in the Apoſtles Creed, as a perfect Catalogue of Fundamentals, and a full ſatisfaction to his demand, I have without any offence of Dr. Potter, granted as much, if that would content you. But ſeeing you go on, and, becauſe his aſſertion is not (as neither is it pretended to be) a total ſatisfaction to the demand, caſheer it as impertinent, and nothing towards it, here I have been bold to ſtop your proceeding as unjuſt and unreaſonable. For, as if you ſhould requeſt a Friend to lend you, or demand of a debtor to pay you, a hundred pounds, and he could or ſhould let you have but fifty, this were not fully to ſatisfied your demand, yet ſure it were not, to do nothing towards it: Or, as this rejoynder of mine, though it be not an anſwer to all your Book, but only to the Firſt conſiderable Part of it, and ſo much of the Second as is material, and falls into the firſt, yet I hope you will not deal ſo unkindly with me, as for this reaſon, to condemn it of impertinence: So D. Potter being demanded a Catalogue of Fundamentals of Faith, and finding them of two kinds, and thoſe of one kind ſumm'd up to his hand in the Apoſtles Creed, and this Creed conſigned unto him for ſuch a Summary by very great Authority; if upon theſe conſiderations he hath intreated his Demander to accept of thus much in part of payment, of the Apoſtles Creed, as a ſufficient Summary of theſe Articles of Faith, which are meerly Credenda, methinks he hath little reaſon to complain, that he hath not been fairly, and ſquarly dealt with. Eſpecially, ſeeing, for full ſatisfaction, by Dr. Potter and all Proteſtants he is referred to Scripture, which we affirm contains evidently all neceſſary points of Faith, and rules of obedience: and ſeeing D. Potter in this very place hath ſubjoyned, though not a Catalogue of Fundamentals, which (becauſe to ſome more is Fundamental, to others leſs, to others nothing at all) had been impoſſible, yet ſuch a comprehenſion of them, as may ſerve every one that will make a conſcionable uſe of it, inſtead of a Catalogue. For thus he ſays, It ſeems to be Fundamental to the Faith, and for the ſalvation of every every Member of the Church, that he acknowledge and believe all ſuch Points of Faith, whereof he may be ſufficiently convinced that they belong to the Doctrine of Jeſus Chriſt. This general Rule, If I ſhould call a Catalogue of Fundamentals, I ſhould have a Preſident for it with you above exception, I mean your Self; for, Chap. 3. §. 19. juſt ſuch another Propoſition you have called by this name. Yet becauſe it were a ſtrange figure of ſpeech, I forbear it; only I will be bold to ſay, that this Aſſertion is as good a Catalogue of Fundamentals, as any you will bring of your Church Propoſals, though you take as much time to do it, as he that undertook to make an Aſs ſpeak.

20. I come now to ſhew that you alſo have requited Dr. Potter with a mutual courteous acknowledgment of his Aſſertion, That the Creed is a ſufficient Summary of all the neceſſary Articles of Faith, which are meerly Credenda.

21. Firſt then, §. 8. you have theſe words, It cannot be denied that the Creed is moſt full and compleat to that purpoſe, for which the holy Apoſtles, inſpired by God, meant that it ſhould ſerve, and in that manner as they did intend it, which was, not to comprehend all particular Points of Faith, but ſuch general heads as were moſt befitting and requiſite for preaching the Faith of Chriſt, to Jews and Gentiles, and might be briefly and compendiouſly ſet down, and eaſily learned and remembred. Theſe words, I ſay, being fairly examined, without putting them on the rack, will amount to a full acknowledgment of Dr. Potters Aſſertion. But before I put them to the queſtion, I muſt crave thus much right of you, to grant me this moſt reaſonable poſtulate, that the Doctrine of Repentance from dead works, which St. Paul faith, was one of the two only things which he preached, and the Doctrine of Charity, without which (the ſame St. Paul aſſures us that) the knowledge of all myſteries, and all faith is nothing, were Doctrines more neceſſary and requiſite, and therefore more fit to be preached to Jews and Gentiles than theſe, under what Judge our Saviour ſuffered, that he was buried, and what time he roſe again: which you have taught us, cap. 3. §. 2, for their matter and nature in themſelves not to be fundamental.

22. And upon this grant, I will ask no leave to conclude, that, whereas you ſay, the Apoſtles Creed was intended for a comprehenſion of ſuch heads of faith, as were moſt befitting and requiſite, for preaching the faith of Chriſt, &c. You are now, for fear of too much debaſing thoſe high Doctrines of Repentance and Charity, to reſtrain your Aſſertion, as Dr. Potter doth his, and (though you ſpeak indefinitely) to ſay you meant it, only of thoſe heads of Faith, which are meerly Credenda. And then the meaning of it (if it have any) muſt be this, That the Creed is full for the Apoſtles intent, which was to comprehend all ſuch general heads of Faith, which being points of ſimple belief, were moſt fit and requiſite to be preached to Jews and Gentiles, and might be briefly and compendiouſly ſet down, and eaſily learned and remembred. Neither I nor you, I believe, can make any other ſenſe of your words than this. And upon this ground thus I ſubſume. But all the points of belief, which were neceſſary, under pain of damnation, for the Apoſtles to preach, and for thoſe to whom the Goſpel was preached, particularly to know and believe, were moſt fit and requiſite, nay, more than ſo, neceſſary to be preached to all both Jews and Gentiles, and might be briefly and compendiouſly ſet down, and eaſily learned and remembred: Therefore the Apoſtle's intent by your confeſſion was in this Creed, to comprehend all ſuch points. And you ſay, The Creed is moſt full and compleat, for the purpoſe which they intended. The Major of this Syllogiſm is your own. The Minor, I ſhould think, needs no proof; yet becauſe all men may not be of one mind, I will prove it by its parts; and the firſt part thus:

There is the ſame neceſſity, for the doing of theſe things, which are commanded to be done, by the ſame Authority, under the ſame penalty.

But the ſame Authority, viz. Divine, under the ſame penalty, to wit, of damnation, commanded the Apoſtles to preach all theſe Doctrines which we ſpeak speak of, and those to whom they were preached, particularly to know and believe them: For we speak of those only, which were so commanded, to be preached and believed.

Therefore all these points were alike necessary to be preached to all both Jews and Gentiles.

Now that all these Doctrines we speak of, may be briefly and compendiously set down and easily learned and remembred, he that remembers, that we speak only of such Doctrines as are necessary to be taught and learned, will require hereof no farther demonstration. For, (not to put you in mind of what the Poet says, Non sunt longa quibus nihil est quod demere possis,) who sees not, that seeing the greatest part of men are of very mean capacities, that it is necessary that that may be learned easily, which is to be learned of all? What then can hinder me from concluding thus:

All the Articles of simple belief, which are fit and requisite to be preached, and may easily be remembred, are by your confession comprized in the Creed:

But all the necessary Articles of Faith are requisite to be preached, and easie to be remembred;

Therefore they are all comprized in the Creed:

Secondly, From grounds granted by you, I argue thus:

Points of belief in themselves Fundamental, are more requisite to be preached than those which are not so, (this is evident.)

But the Apostles have put into their Creed some Points that are not in themselves Fundamental: (so you confess, ubi supra.)

Therefore if they have put in all most requisite to be preached, they have put in all that in them selves are Fundamental.

Thirdly and lastly, From your own words, §. 26. thus I conclude for my purpose;

The Apostles intention was, particularly to deliver in the Creed such Articles as were fittest for those times, concerning the Deity, Trinity, and Messias; (Thus you: now I subsume,)

But all Points simply necessary, by vertue of Gods command, to be preached and believed in particular, were as fit for those times as these here mentioned;

Therefore their intention was, to deliver in it particularly all the necessary points of Belief.

23. And certainly, he that considers the matter advisedly, either must say that the Apostles were not the Authors of it, or that this was their design in composing it, or that they had none at all. For whereas you say, Their intent was, to comprehend in it such general heads as were most befitting and requisite for preaching the Faith; and elsewhere, Particularly to deliver such Articles as were fittest for those times; Every wise man may easily see that your desire here was, to escape away in a Cloud of indefinite terms. For otherwise, instead of such general heads, and such Articles, why did not you say plainly, All such, or some such? This had been plain dealing, but I fear, cross to your design, which yet you have failed of. For that which you have spoken (though you are loath to speak out) either signifies nothing at all, or that which I and Dr. Potter affirm, viz. That the Apostles Creed contains all those Points of Belief, which were by Gods command, of necessity to be preached to all, and believed by all. Neither when I say so, would I be so mistaken, as if I said, that all points in the Creed are thus necessary: For Punies in Logick, know that universal affirmatives, are not simply converted. And therefore it may be true, that all such necessary points, are in the Creed; though it be not true, that all points in the Creed are thus necessary: which I willingly grant of the points by you mentioned. But this rather confirms, than any way invalidates my Assertion. For how could it stand with the Apostles wisdom, to put in any points circumstantial and not necessary, and, at the same time, to leave out any that were essential essential and necessary for that end, which you say, they proposed to themselves, in making the Creed, that is, The preaching of the Faith to Jews and Gentiles?

24. Neither may you hope to avoid the pressure of these acknowledgments, by pretending as you do §. 10. that you do indeed acknowledg the Creed to contain all the necessary Articles of Faith; but yet so, that they are not either there expressed in it, or deducible from it, by evident consequence, but only by way of Implication or Reduction. For first, not to tell you, that no Proposition is implied in any other, which is not deducible from it; nor secondly, that the Article of the Catholick Church, wherein you will have all implied, implies nothing to any purpose of yours, unless out of meer favour we will grant the sense of it to be, that the Church is infallible, and that yours is the Church: to pass by all this, and require no answer to it, this one thing I may not omit; that the Apostles intent was (by your own confession) particularly to deliver in the Creed such Articles of belief as were fittest for those times (and all necessary Articles I have proved were such:) now to deliver particularly, and to deliver only implicitely; to be delivered particularly in the Creed, and only to be reducible to it; I suppose are repugnancies hardly reconcileable. And therefore, though we desire you, not to grant, that the Creed Contains all Points of Faith of all sorts, any other way than by implication or reduction, no nor so neither; yet you have granted, and must grant, of the Fundamental Points of simple belief, those which the Apostles were commanded in particular to teach all men, and all men in particular to know and believe, that these are delivered in the Creed, after a more particular and punctual manner, than implication or reduction comes to.

25. Ad §. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15. It is vain for you to hope, that the testimonies of the Ancient and Modern Doctors, alledged to this purpose by Dr. Potter in great abundance, will be turned off, with this general deceitful Answer, That the Allegation of them was needless to prove, that the Creed contains all Points of Faith, under pretence that you grant it in manner aforesaid. For what if you grant it in manner aforesaid, yet if you grant it not (as indeed you do but inconstantly) in the sense which their testimonies require, then for all this their testimonies may be alledged to very good purpose. Now let any man read them, with any tolerable indifference, and he shall find they say plainly, that all Points of Faith, necessary to be particularly believed, are explicitely contained in the Creed; and that your Glosses of Implication and Reduction, had it been confronted with their sentences, would have been much out of countenance, as having no ground nor colour of ground in them. For example, If Azorius had thought thus of it, how could he have called it, (a) A brief comprehension of the Faith, and a sum of all things to be believed, and, as it were, a sign or cognizance whereby Christians are to be differenced and distinguished, from the impious and misbelievers, who profess either no faith, or not the right? If Huntly had been of this mind, how could he have said of it with any congruity, (b) That the rule of Faith is expressly contained in it, and all the prime foundations of Faith: And, That the Apostles were not so forgetful as to omit any prime principal foundation of Faith in that Creed which they delivered to be believed by all Christians. The words of Filiucius are pregnant to the same purpose, (c) There cannot be a fitter Rule from whence Christians may learn what they are explicitely to believe, than that which is contained in the Creed. Which words cannot be justified, if all Points necessary to be believed explicitely, be not comprised in it. To this end (saith Putean) (d) was the Creed composed by the Apostles, that Christians might have a form whereby they might profess themselves Catholicks. But certainly, the Apostles did this in vain, if a man might profess this, and yet for matter of Faith be not a Catholick.

26. The words of Cardinal Richelieu, (e) exact this sense, and refuse your glosses as much as any of the former: The Apostles Creed is the Summary and Abridgement of that Faith which is necessary for a Christian; These holy persons being by the Commandment of Jesus Christ to disperse themselves over the world, and in all parts by by preaching the Gospel to plant the Faith, esteemed it very necessary to reduce into a short sum, all that which Christians ought to know, to the end that being dispersed into divers parts of the world, they might preach the same thing in a short Form, that it might be the easier remembred. For this effect, they called this Abridgment a Symbole, which signifies a mark, or sign, which might serve to distinguish true Christians which imbraced it, from Infidels which rejected it. Now, I would fain know how the composition of the Creed could serve for this end, and secure the Preachers of it, that they should preach the same thing, if there were other necessary Articles, not comprized in it? Or how could it be a sign to distinguish true Christians from others, if a man might believe it all, and for want of believing something else, not be a true Christian?

f Ch.3.Consid.i. 2.t.5.p.119. 27. The words of the (f) Author of the Consideration of four heads propounded to King James, require the same sense, and utterly renounce your qualification. The Symbole is a brief yet entire Methodical sum of Christian Doctrine, inclining all Points of Faith, either to be preached by the Apostles, or to be believed by their Disciples: Delivered both for a direction unto them, what they were to preach, and others to believe, as also to discern and put a difference betwixt all faithful Christians and mis-believing Infidels.

g 2.2.dis.1.q.2. p.4. in fin. 28. Lastly, (g) Gregory of Valence affirms our Assertion even in terms: The Articles of Faith contained in the Creed, are, as it were, the first Principles of the Christian Faith, in which is contained the sum of Evangelical Doctrine, which all men are bound explicitely to believe.

29. To these Testimonies of your own Doctors, I should have added the concurrent Suffrages of the ancient Fathers, but the full and free acknowledgment of the same Valentia, in the place above quoted, will make this labour unnecessary. So judge (saith he) the holy Fathers affirming that this Symbole of Faith was composed by the Apostles, that all might have a short sum of those things which are to be believed, and are dispersedly contained in Scripture.

30. Neither is there any discord between this Assertion of your Doctors, and their holding themselves obliged to believe all the Points which the Council of Trent defines. For Protestants and Papists may both hold, that all Points of Belief necessary to be known and believed, are summed up in the Creed: and yet both the one and the other think themselves bound to believe whatsoever other Points they either know, or believe to be revealed by God. For the Articles which are necessary to be known that they are revealed by God, may be very few; and yet those which are necessary to be believed, when they are revealed and known to be so, may be very many.

31. But Summaries and Abstracts are not intended to specifie all the particulars of the Science or Subject to which they belong. Yes, if they be intended for perfect Summaries, they must not omit any necessary Doctrine of that Science whereof they are Summaries; though the Illustration and Reasons of it they may omit. If this were not so, a man might set down forty or fifty of the principal Definitions and Divisions, and Rules of Logick, and call it a Summary or Abstract of Logick. But sure, this were no more a Summary, than that were the picture of a man in little, that wanted any of the parts of a man; or that a total sum, wherein all the particulars were not cast up. Now the Apostles Creed, you here intimate that it was intended for a Summary; otherwise why talk you here of Summaries, and tell us that they need not contain all the particulars of their Science; And of what I pray may it be a Summary, but of the Fundamentals of Christian Faith? Now you have already told us, That it is most full and compleat to that purpose for which it was intended. Lay all this together, and I believe the product will be, That the Apostles Creed is a perfect Summary of the Fundamentals of the Christian Faith; and what the duty of a perfect Summary is, I have already told you.

32. Whereas therefore to disprove this Assertion, in divers Particles of this Chapter, but especially the fourteenth, you muster up whole Armies of Doctrines, which which you pretend are necessary, and not contained in the Creed; I answer, very briefly thus: That the Doctrines you mention, are either concerning matters of practice, and not simple Belief; or else they are such Doctrines wherein God hath not so plainly revealed himself, but that honest and good men, true Lovers of God and of Truth, those that desire above all things to know his will and do it, may err, and yet commit no sin at all, or only a sin of infirmity, and not destructive of Salvation; or lastly, they are such Doctrines which God hath plainly revealed, and so are necessary to be believed, when they are known to be divine, but not necessary to be known and believed; not necessary to be known for divine, that they may be believed. Now all these sorts of Doctrines are impertinent to the present Question. For Dr. Potter never affirmed either that the necessary duties of a Christian, or that all Truths piously credible, but not necessary to be believed, or that all Truths necessary to be believed upon the supposal of divine Revelation, were specified in the Creed. For this he affirms, only of such speculative divine Verities, which God hath commanded particularly to be preached to all, and believed by all. Now let the Doctrines objected by you be well considered, and let all those that are reducible to the three former heads be discarded; and then of all these Instances against Dr. Potter's Assertion, there will not remain so much as one.

33. First, the Questions touching the conditions to be performed by us to obtain remission of sins; the Sacraments, the Commandments, and the possibility of keeping them: the necessity of imploring the assistance of Gods Grace and Spirit for the keeping of them: how far obedience is due to the Church: Prayer for the Dead: the cessation of the old Law, are all about Agenda, and so cut off upon the first consideration.

34. Secondly, the Question touching Fundamentals, is profitable, but not fundamental. He that believes all Fundamentals, cannot be damned for any error in Faith, though he believe more or less to be Fundamental than is so. That also of the procession of the Holy Ghost from the Father and the Son, of Purgatory, of the Churches Visibility, of the Books of the New Testament, which were doubted of by a considerable part of the Primitive Church: (until I see better reason for the contrary than the bare authority of men) I shall esteem of the same condition.

35. Thirdly, This Doctrines, That Adam and the Angels sinned: that there are Angels good and bad: that those Books of Scripture which were never doubted of by any considerable part of the Church, are the Word of God: That St. Peter had no such Primacy as you pretend: that the Scripture is a perfect Rule of Faith, and consequently that no necessary Doctrine is unwritten: that there is no one Society or Succession of Christians absolutely infallible: These to my understanding are Truths plainly revealed by God, and necessary to be believed by them who know they are so. But not so necessary, that every man and woman is bound under pain of damnation particularly to know them to be divine Revelations, and explicitely to believe them. And for this reason, these with innumerable other Points, are to be referred to the third sort of Doctrines above-mentioned, which were never pretended to have place in the Creed. There remains one only Point of all that Army you mustered together, reducible to none of these heads, and that is, that God is, and is a Remunerator, which you say is questioned by the denial of Merit. But if there were such a necessary indissoluble coherence between this Point and the Doctrine of Merit, me-thinks with as much reason, and more charity you might conclude, That we hold Merit, because we hold this Point; than that we deny this Point, because we deny Merit. Besides, when Protestants deny the Doctrine of Merits, you know right-well, for so they have declared themselves a thousand times, that they mean nothing else, but with David, that their well-doing extendeth not, is not truly beneficial to God: with our Saviour when they have done all which they are commanded, they have done their duty only, and no courtesie: And lastly, with St. Paul, that all which they can suffer for God (and yet suffering is more than doing) is not worthy to be compared to the glory which shall be revealed. So that you must either misunderstand their meaning in denying Merit, or you must discharge their Doctrine of this odious consequence, or you must charge it upon David, and Paul, and Christ himself. Nay, you must either grant their denial of true Merit just and reasonable; or you must say, that our good actions are really profitable to God: that they are not debts already due to him, but voluntary and undeserved Favours: and that they are equal unto and well worthy of eternal glory which is prepared for them. As for the inconvenience which you so much fear, That the denial of Merit makes God a Giver only, and not a Rewarder; I tell you, good Sir, you fear where no fear is: And that it is both most true on the one side, that you in holding good Works meritorious of eternal glory, make God a Rewarder only, and not a Giver, contrary to plain Scripture, affirming that The gift of God is eternal life; And that it is most false on the other side, that the Doctrine of Protestants makes God a Giver only, and not a Rewarder; In as much as their Doctrine is, That God gives not Heaven but to those which do something for it, and so his Gift is also a Reward; but withal, that whatsoever they do is due unto God before-hand, and worth nothing to God, and worth nothing in respect of Heaven, and so mans work is no Merit, and Gods Reward is still a Gift.

36. Put the case the Pope, for a reward of your service done him in writing this Book, had given you the honour and means of a Cardinal, would you not, not only in humility, but in sincerity have professed, that you have not merited such a Reward? And yet the Pope is neither your Creator, nor Redeemer, nor Preserver, nor perhaps your very great Benefactor; sure I am, not so great as God Almighty, and therefore hath no such right and title to your service as God hath in respect of precedent Obligations. Besides, the work you have done him hath been really advantageous to him: and lastly not altogether unproportionable to the forementioned Reward. And therefore if by the same work you will pretend that either you have or hope to have deserved immortal happiness, I beseech you consider well whether this be not to set a higher value upon a Cardinals Cap, than a Crown of immortal glory, and with that Cardinal to prefer a part in Paris, before a part in Paradise.

37. In the next Paragraph you beat the air again, and fight manfully with your own shadow. The Point you should have spoken to, was this, That there are some Points of simple belief necessary to be explicitely believed, which yet are not contained in the Creed. Instead hereof you trouble your self in vain to demonstrate, That many important Points of Faith are not contained in it, which yet D. Potter had freely granted, and you your self take particular notice of his granting of it. All this pains therefore you have imployed to no purpose; saying that to some negligent Reader you may seem to have spoken to the very Point, because that which you speak to, at the first hearing, sounds somewhat near it. But such a one I must intreat to remember, there be many more Points of Faith, than there be Articles of Simple belief, necessary to be explicitely believed: And that though all of the former sort are not contained in the Creed, yet all of the latter sort may be. As for your Distinction between Heresies that have been, and Heresies that are, and Heresies that may be, I have already proved it vain; and that whatsoever may be an Heresie, that is so; and whatsoever is so, that always hath been so, ever since the publication of the Gospel of Christ. The Doctrine of your Church may like a Snow ball increase with rowling, and again, if you please, melt away and decrease: But as Christ Jesus, so his Gospel, is yesterday, and to day, and the same for ever.

38. Our Saviour sending his Apostles to preach, gave them no other Commission than this, Go teach all Nations, baptizing them in the Name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things, whatsoever I have commanded you. These were the bounds of their Commission. If your Church have any larger, or if we have a Commission at large, to teach what she pleaseth, and ca call it the Gospel of Christ, let her produce her Letters-patents from heaven for it. But if this be all you have, then must you give me leave to esteem it both great sacriledge in you to forbid any thing, be it never so small or ceremonious, which Christ hath commanded; as the receiving of the Communion in both kinds: and as high a degree of presumption, to enjoyn men to believe, that there are or can be any other Fundamental Articles of the Gospel of Christ, than what Christ himself commanded his Apostles to teach all men; or any damnable Heresies, but such as are plainly repugnant to these prime Verities.

39. Ad §. 16, 17. The saying of the most learned Prelate, and excellent man, the Archbishop of Armach, is only related by Dr. Potter, p. 155. and not applauded: though the truth is, both the Man deserves as much applause as any man, and his saying as much as any saying; it being as great, and as good a Truth, and as necessary for these miserable times, as possibly can be uttered. For this is most certain, and I believe you will easily grant it, that to reduce Christians to Unity of Communion, there are but two ways that may be conceived probable: The one, by taking away diversity of Opinions touching matters of Religion: The other, by shewing that the diversity of Opinions, which is among the several Sects of Christians, ought to be no hinderance to their Unity in Communion.

40. Now the former of these is not to be hoped for without a miracle, unless that could be done, which is impossible to be performed, though it be often pretended; that is, unless it could be made evident to all men, that God hath appointed some visible Judge of Controversies, to whose judgment all men are to submit themselves. What then remains, but that the other way must be taken, and Christians must be taught to set a higher value upon these high Points of Faith and Obedience wherein they agree, than upon these matters of less moment wherein they differ; and understand, that agreement in those, ought to be more effectual to joyn them in one Communion, than their difference in other things of less moment to divide them? When I say, in one Communion, I mean, in a common Profession of those Articles of Faith, wherein all consent: A joynt worship of God, after such a way as all esteem lawful; and a mutual performance of all those works of Charity, which Christians owe one to another. And to such a Communion what better inducement could be thought of, than to demonstrate that what was universally believed of all Christians, if it were joyned with a love of truth, and with holy obedience, was sufficient to bring men to heaven? For why should men be more rigid than God; Why should any error exclude any man from the Churches Communion, which will not deprive him of eternal Salvation? Now that Christians do generally agree in all those Points of Doctrine, which are necessary to Salvation, it is apparent, because they agree with one accord in believing all those Books of the Old and New Testament, which in the Church were never doubted of to be the undoubted Word of God. And it is so certain that in all these Books, all necessary Doctrines are evidently contained, that of all the four Evangelists this is very probable, but of S. Luke most apparent, that in every one of their Books they have comprehended the whole substance of the Gospel of Christ. For what reason can be imagined, that any of them should leave out any thing which he knew to be necessary, and yet (as apparently all of them have done) put in many things which they knew to be only profitable and not necessary? What wise and honest man that were now to write the Gospel of Christ, would do so great a work of God after such a negligent fashion? Suppose Xaverius had been to write the Gospel of Christ for the Indians, think you he would have left out any Fundamental Doctrine of it? If not, I must beseech you to conceive as well of St. Matthew, and St. Mark, and St. Luke, and St. John, as you do of Xaverius. Besides, if every one of them have not in them all necessary Doctrines, how have they complied with their own design, which was, as the Titles of their Books shew, to write the Gospel of Christ, and not a part of it? Or how have they not deceived us, in giving them such Titles? By the whole Gospel of Christ, I understand not the whole History of Christ, but all that makes up the Covenant between God and man. Now if this be wholly contained in the Gospel of St. Mark, and St. John, I believe every considering man will be inclinable to believe that then without doubt, it is contained, with the advantage of many other profitable things, in the larger Gospels of St. Matthew, and St. Luke. And that St. Mark's Gospel wants no necessary Article of this Covenant, I presume you will not deny, if you believe Irenæus, when he says, Matthew to the Hebrews in their tongue published the Scripture of the Gospel: When Peter and Paul did preach the Gospel, and found the Church, or a Church at Rome, or of Rome, and after their departure Mark, the Scholar of Peter, delivered to us in writing those things which had been preached by Peter; and Luke, and the follower of Paul, compiled in a Book the Gospel which was preached by him: And afterwards John, residing in Asia, in the City of Ephesus, did himself also set forth a Gospel.

41. In which words of Irenæus, it is remarkable that they are spoken by him against some Heretiques, that pretended (as you know who do now adays) that some necessary Doctrines of the Gospel were unwritten, and that out of the Scriptures, truth (he must mean sufficient truth,) cannot be found by these which know not Tradition. Against whom to say, that part of the Gospel which was preached by Peter, was written by St. Mark, and some other necessary parts of it omitted, had been to speak impertinently, and rather to confirm than confute their error. It is plain therefore, that he must mean, as I pretend, that all the necessary Doctrine of the Gospel which was preached by St. Peter, was written by St. Mark. Now you will not deny, I presume, that St. Peter preached all, therefore you must not deny that St. Mark wrote all.

42. Our next inquiry let it be touching St. John's intent in writing his Gospel, whether it were to deliver so much truth, as being believed and obeyed would certainly bring men to eternal life, or only part of it, and to leave part unwritten? A great man there is, but much less than the Apostle, who saith, that writing last, he purposed to supply the defects of the other Evangelists that had wrote before him: which (if it were true) would sufficiently justifie what I have undertaken, that at least all the four Evangelists have in them, all the necessary parts of the Gospel of Christ. Neither will I deny, but St. John's secondary intent might be to supply the defects of the former three Gospels, in some things very profitable. But he that pretends, that any necessary Doctrine is in St. John, which is in none of the other Evangelists, hath not so well considered them as he should do, before he pronounce sentence of so weighty a matter. And for his prime intent in writing his Gospel, what that was, certainly no Father in the world understood it better than himself. Therefore let us hear him speak: Many other signs (saith he) also did Jesus in the sight of his Disciples, which are not written in this Book: But these are written, that you may believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God, and that believing you may have life in his Name. By (these are written) may be understood either these things are written, or these signs are written. Take it which way you will, this conclusion will certainly follow, That either all that which St. John wrote in his Gospel, or less than all, and therefore all much more was sufficient to make them believe that, which being believed with lively faith, would certainly bring them to eternal life.

43. That which hath been spoken (I hope) is enough to justifie my undertaking to the full, that it is very probable that every one of the four Evangelists hath in his Book the whole substance, all the necessary parts of the Gospel of Christ. But for St. Luke that he hath written such a perfect Gospel, in my judgment, it ought to be with them that believe him, no manner of question. Consider first the introduction to his Gospel, where he declares what he intends to write, in these words, Forasmuch as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things, which are most surely believed amongst us, even as they delivered delivered unto us, which from the beginning were eye-witnesses, and Ministers of the Word, it seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of things from the first, to write to thee in order, most excellent Theophilus, that thou mightest know the certainty of those things wherein thou hast been instructed. Add to this place, the entrance to his History of the Acts of the Apostles: The former Treatise have I made, O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and teach, until the day in which he was taken up. Weigh well these two places, and then answer me freely and ingenuously to these demands. 1. Whether St. Luke doth not undertake the very same thing which he says, many had taken in hand? 2. Whether this were not to set forth in order, a declaration of those things which are most surely believed amongst Christians? 3. Whether the whole Gospel of Christ, and every necessary Doctrine of it, were not surely believed among Christians? 4. Whether they which were Eye-witnesses and Ministers of the word from the beginning, delivered not the whole Gospel of Christ? 5. Whether he doth not undertake to write in order these things whereof he had perfect understanding from the first? 6. Whether he had not perfect understanding of the whole Gospel of Christ? 7. Whether he doth not undertake to write to Theophilus of all those things wherein he had been instructed? 8. And whether he had not been instructed in all the necessary parts of the Gospel of Christ? 9. Whether in the other Text, All things which Jesus began to do and teach, must not at least imply, all the Principal and necessary things? 10. Whether this be not the very interpretation of your Rhemish Doctors, in their Annotation upon this place? 11. Whether all these Articles of the Christian Faith, without the belief whereof, no man can be saved, be not the Principal and most necessary things which Jesus taught? 12. And lastly, Whether many things which St. Luke hath wrote in his Gospel, be not less principal, and less necessary, than all and every one of these? When you have well considered these Proposals, I believe you will be very apt to think (if St. Luke be of credit with you) That all things necessary to salvation, are certainly contained in his Writings alone. And from hence you will not chuse but conclude, that seeing all the Christians in the world, agree in the belief of what St. Luke hath written, and not only so, but in all other Books of Canonical Scripture, which were never doubted of, in and by the Church, the learned Arch-Bishop had very just and certain ground to say, That in these Propositions, which without Controversie are universally received in the whole Christian world, so much truth is contained, as, being joyned with holy obedience, may be sufficient to bring a man to everlasting Salvation; and that we have no cause to doubt, but that, as many as walk according to this rule, neither overthrowing that which they have builded, by superinducing any damnable Heresie thereupon, nor otherwise vitiating their holy Faith, with a lewd and wicked conversation, peace shall be upon them, and upon the Israel of God.

44. Against this, you object two things: The one, that by this Rule, Seeing the Doctrine of the Trinity is not received universally among Christians, the denial of it shall not exclude Salvation. The other, That the Bishop contradicts himself, in supposing a man may believe all necessary Truths, and yet superinduce some damnable Heresies.

45. To the first I answer, what I conceive he would, whose words I here justifie, that he hath declared plainly in this very place, that he meant, not an absolute, but a limited Universality, and speaks not of propositions universally believed by all Professions of Christianity that are, but only, by all those several Professions of Christianity that have any large spread in any part of the world. By which words he excludes from the universality here spoken of, the deniers of the doctrine of the Trinity, as being but a handful of men, in respect of all, nay, in respect of any of these Professions which maintain it. And therefore it was a great fault in you, either willingly to conceal these words, which evacuate your Objection, or else negligently to oversee them. Especially seeing your friend, to whom you are ſo much beholden, Paulus Veridicus, in his ſcurrilous and ſophiſtical Pamphlet, againſt B. Uſher's Sermon, hath ſo kindly offered to lead you by the hand to the obſervation of them, in theſe words: To conſider of your Coinopiſta, or communiter Credenda, Articles, as you call them, univerſally believed of all theſe ſeveral Profeſſions of Chriſtianity, which have any large ſpread in the World: Theſe Articles for example, may be the Unity of the Godhead, the Trinity of Perſons, the immortality of the Soul, &c. Where you ſee that your friend, whom you ſo much magnifie, hath plainly confeſſed, that notwithſtanding the Biſhop's words, the denial of the Doctrine of the Trinity may exclude Salvation; and therefore in approving and applauding his Anſwer to the Biſhop's Sermon, you have unawares allowed this Anſwer of mine to your own greateſt Objection.

46. Now for the foul contradiction, which you ſay the Doctor might eaſily have eſpied in the Biſhop's ſaying, he deſires your pardon for his overſight, for Paulus Veridicus his ſake; who though he ſet himſelf to find fault with the Biſhop's Sermon, yet it ſeems this he could not find, or elſe queſtionleſs we ſhould have heard of it from him. And therefore, if Dr. Potter, being the Biſhop's friend, have not been more ſharp-ſighted than his enemies, this, he hopes, to indifferent Judges will ſeem no unpardonable offence. Yet this I ſay, not as if there were any contradiction at all, much leſs any foul contradiction, in the Biſhop's words; but as Antiferon's Picture, which he thought he ſaw in the Air before him, was not in the Air, but in his diſturbed fancy: ſo all the contradiction which here you deſcant upon, is not indeed in the Biſhop's Saying, but in your Imagination. For wherein, I pray, lies this foul contradiction? In ſuppoſing (ſay you) a man may believe all Truths neceſſary to ſalvation, and ſuperinduce a damnable Hereſie. I anſwer, It is not certain that his words do ſuppoſe this: neither, if they do, doth he contradict himſelf. I ſay, it is not certain that his words import any ſuch matter. For ordinarily men uſe to ſpeak and write ſo, as here he doth, when they intend not to limit or reſtrain, but only to repeat, and preſs, and illuſtrate what they have ſaid before. And I wonder, why with your Eagles eyes you did not eſpy another foul contradiction in his words as well as this; and ſay, that he ſuppoſes a man may walk according to the rule of holy obedience, and yet vitiate his holy Faith with a lewd and wicked Converſation? Certainly, a lewd Converſation is altogether as contradictious to holy Obedience, as a damnable Hereſie to neceſſary Truth. What then was the reaſon that you eſpied not this foul contradiction in his words as well as that? Was it becauſe, according to the Spirit and Genius of your Church, your zeal is greater to that which you conceive true doctrine than holy obedience; and think ſimple error a more capital crime than ſins committed againſt knowledge and conſcience? Or was it becauſe your Reaſon told you, that herein he meant only to repeat and not to limit what he ſaid before? And why then had you not ſo much candour to conceive that he might have the ſame meaning in the former part of the diſjunction; and intend no more but this, Whoſoever walks according to this rule of believing all neceſſary Truths, and holy Obedience, (neither poyſoning his faith of thoſe Truths which he holds, with the mixture of any damnable Hereſie, nor vitiating it with a wicked life) Peace ſhall be upon him! In which words what man of any ingenuity will not preſently perceive that the words within the Parentheſis, are only a repetition of, and no exception from, thoſe that are without? St. Athanaſius in his Creed tells us, The Catholick Faith is this, that we worſhip one God in Trinity, and Trinity in Unity, neither confounding the Perſons, nor dividing the Subſtance; and why now do you not tell him that he contradicts himſelf, and ſuppoſes that we may worſhip a Trinity of Perſons, and one God in ſubſtance, and yet confound the Perſons, or divide the ſubſtance: which yet is impoſſible, becauſe Three remaining Three, cannot be confounded, and One remaining One cannot be divided? If a man ſhould ſay unto you, he that keeps all the Commandments of God, committing no ſin either againſt the love of God, or the

the love of his neighbour, is a perfect man: Or thus, he that will live in conſtant health had need be exact in his diet, neither eating too much, nor too little: Or thus, he that will come to London, muſt go on ſtraight forward in ſuch a way; and neither turn to the right hand nor to the left, I verily believe you would not find any contradiction in his words, but confeſs them as coherent and conſonant as any in your Book. And certainly, if you would look upon this ſaying of the Biſhop with any indifference, you would eaſily perceive it to be of the very ſame kind, and capable of the very ſame conſtruction. And therefore one of the grounds of your accuſation is uncertain. Neither can you aſſure us, that the Biſhop ſuppoſes any ſuch matter as you pretend. Neither, if he did ſuppoſe this (as perhaps he did) were this to contradict himſelf. For though there can be no damnable Hereſie, unleſs it contradict ſome neceſſary Truth, yet there is no contradiction but the ſame man may at once believe this Hereſie and this Truth; becauſe there is no contradiction that the ſame man, at the ſame time, ſhould believe contradictions. For firſt, whatſoever a man believes true, that he may and muſt believe; But there have been ſome who have believed and taught that contradictions might be true, againſt whom Ariſtotle diſputes in the third of his Metaphyſicks; Therefore it is not impoſſible that a man may believe Contradictions. Secondly, they which believe there is no certainty in Reaſon, muſt believe that contradictions may be true: For otherwiſe there will be certainty in this Reaſon; This contradicts Truth, therefore it is falſe. But there be now divers in the world, who believe there is no certainty in Reaſon, (and whether you be of their mind or no, I deſire to be informed;) Therefore there be divers in the world who believe contradictions may be true. Thirdly, They which do captivate their underſtandings to the belief of thoſe things which to their underſtanding ſeem irreconcileable contradictions, may as well believe real contradictions: (For the difficulty of believing ariſes not from their being repugnant, but from their ſeeming to be ſo:) But you do captivate your underſtandings to the belief of thoſe things which ſeem to your underſtandings irreconcileable contradictions; Therefore it is as poſſible and eaſie for you to believe thoſe that indeed are ſo. Fourthly, ſome men may be confuted in their errors, and perſuaded out of them; but no mans error can be confuted, who together with his error doth not believe and grant ſome true Principle that contradicts his Error: for nothing can be proved to him who grants nothing, neither can there be (as all men know) any rational diſcourſe but out of grounds agreed upon by both parts. Therefore it is not impoſſible, but abſolutely certain, that the ſame man at the ſame time may believe contradictions. Fifthly, It is evident, neither can you without extreme madneſs and uncharitableneſs, deny that we believe the Bible, thoſe Books, I mean, which we account Canonical: Otherwiſe why diſpute you with us out of them, as out of a common Principle? Either therefore you muſt retract your opinion, and acknowledge that the ſame man at the ſame time may believe contradictions, or elſe you will run into a greater inconvenience, and be forced to confeſs, that no part of our Doctrine contradicts the Bible. Sixthly, I deſire you to vindicate from contradiction theſe following Aſſertions: That there ſhould be Length and nothing long: Breadth, and nothing broad: Thickneſs, and nothing thick: Whiteneſs, and nothing white: Roundneſs, and nothing round: Weight, and nothing heavy: Sweetneſs, and nothing ſweet: Moiſture, and nothing moiſt: Fluidneſs, and nothing flowing: many Actions, and no Agent: many Paſſions, and no Patient: That is, that there ſhould be a long, broad, thick, white, round, heavy, ſweet, moiſt, flowing, active, paſſive Nothing! That Bread ſhould be turned into the ſubſtance of Chriſt, and yet not any thing of the Bread become any thing of Chriſt; neither the matter, nor the Form, nor the Accidents of Bread, be made either the matter, or the Form, or the Accidents of Chriſt. That Bread ſhould be turned into nothing, and at the ſame time with the ſame action turned into Chriſt, and yet Chriſt ſhould not be nothing. That the ſame thing at the ſame time should have its just dimensions, and just distance of its parts, one from another, and at the same time not have it, but all its parts together in one and the self same point. That the body of Christ, which is much greater, should be contained wholly and in its full dimensions without any alteration, in that which is lesser, and that not once only, but as many times over as there are several points in the Bread and Wine. That the same thing at the same time should be wholly above it self, and wholly below it self, within it self, and without it self, on the right hand, and on the left hand, and round about it self. That the same thing at the same time should move to and from it self, and lie still: Or that it should be carried from one place to another through the middle space, and yet not move. That it should be brought from heaven to earth, and yet not come out of Heaven, nor be at all in any of the middle spaces between Heaven and Earth. That to be one, should be to be undivided from it self, and yet that one and the same thing should be divided from it self. That a thing may be, and yet be no where. That a Finite thing may be in all places at once. That a Body may be in a place, and have there its dimensions, and colour, and all other qualities, and yet that it is not in the power of God to make it visible, and tangible there, nor capable of doing or suffering any thing. That there should be no certainty in our senses, and yet that we should know something certainly, and yet know nothing but by our senses. That that which is, and was long ago, should now begin to be. That that is now to be made of nothing, which is not nothing but something. That the same thing should be before and after it self. That it should be truly and really in a place, and yet without Locality. Nay, that he which is Omnipotent, should not be able to give it Locality in this place, where it is, as some of you hold: Or, if he can, as others say he can, that it should be possible, that the same man, for example You or I, may at the same time, be awake at London, and not awake but asleep at Rome: There run or walk, here not run or walk, but stand still, sit, or lie along: There study or write, here, do neither, but dine or sup: There speak, here be silent. That he may in one place freeze for cold, in another place burn with heat. That he may be drunk in one place, and sober in another: Valiant in one place, and a Coward in another: A Thief in one place, and honest in another. That he may be a Papist, and go to Mass in Rome; A Protestant, and go to Church in England. That he may die in Rome, and live in England: or dying in both places may go to Hell from Rome, and to Heaven from England. That the Body and Soul of Christ should cease to be where it was, and yet not go to another place, nor be destroyed. All these, and many other of the like nature are the unavoidable, and most of them the acknowledged Consequences of your Doctrine of Transubstantiation, as is explained one way or other by your Schoolmen. Now I beseech you, Sir, to try your skill, and, if you can compose their repugnance, and make peace between them, certainly, none but you shall be Catholick Moderator. But if you cannot do it, and that after an intelligible manner, then you must give me leave to believe, that either you do not believe Transubstantiation, or else that it is no contradiction, that men should subjugate their understandings to the belief of contradictions.

47. Lastly, I pray tell me whether you have not so much Charity in store for the Bishop of Armach, and Dr. Potter, as to think, that they themselves believe this saying, which the one preacht and printed, the other reprinted, and, as you say, applauded? If you think they do, then certainly, you have done unadvisedly, either in charging it with a foul contradiction, or in saying, it is impossible, that any man should at once believe contradictions. Indeed, that men should not assent to contradictions, and that it is unreasonable to do so, I willingly grant: But to say, it is impossible to be done, is against every mans experience, and almost as unreasonable, as to do the thing which is said to be impossible. For though perhaps it may be very difficult for a man in his right wits to believe a contradiction expressed in terms; especially if he believe it to be a contradiction, yet yet for men being cowed and awed by superstition, to persuade themselves upon slight and trivial grounds, that these or these, though they seem contradictions, yet indeed are not so, and so to believe them: or if the plain repugnance of them, be veiled or disguised a little, with some empty unintelligible non-sense distinction; or if it be not expresst but implyed, nor direct but by consequence, so that the parties, to whose faith the propositions are offered are either innocently, or perhaps affectedly ignorant of the contrariety of them: for men in such cases, easily to swallow and digest contradictions, he that denies it possible, must be a meer stranger in the world.

48. Ad §. 18. This Paragraph consists of two immodest Untruths, obtruded upon us without shew, or shadow of Reason: and an evident Sophism, grounded upon an affected mistake of the sense of the word Fundamental.

49. The first Untruth is, that Dr. Potter makes a Church, of men agreeing scarcely in one Point of Faith: of men concurring in some one or few Articles of Belief, and in the rest holding conceits plainly contradictory: Agreeing only in this one Article, that Christ is our Saviour, but for the rest, like to the parts of a Chimæra, &c. Which I say is a shameless calumny, not only because Dr. Potter in this Point delivers not his own judgment, but relates the opinion of others, M. Hooker, and M. Merton; but especially, because even these men (as they are related by Dr. Potter) to the constituting of the very Essence of a Church, in the lowest degree, require not only Faith in Christ Jesus the Son of God and Saviour of the World, but also submission to his Doctrine in mind and will. Now, I beseech you Sir, tell me ingenuously, whether the Doctrine of Christ may be called without blasphemy, scarcely one Point of Faith? Or whether it consists only, of some one or few Articles of Belief? Or whether there be nothing in it, but only this Article, That Christ is our Saviour? Is it not manifest to all the world, that Christians of all Professions do agree with one consent, in the belief of all those Books of Scripture, which were not doubted of in the Ancient Church, without danger of damnation? Nay, is it not apparent that no man at this time, can without hypocrisie, pretend to believe in Christ, but of necessity he must do so? Seeing he can have no reason to believe in Christ, but he must have the same to believe the Scripture. I pray then read over the Scripture once more, or, if that be too much labour, the New Testament only; and then say, whether there be nothing there, but scarcely one Point of Faith? But some one or two Articles of Belief? Nothing but this Article only, That Christ is our Saviour? Say, whether there be not there an infinite number of Divine Verities, Divine Precepts, Divine Promises, and those so plainly and undoubtedly delivered, that if any sees them not, it cannot be because he cannot, but because he will not! So plainly, that whosoever submits sincerely to the Doctrine of Christ, in mind and will, cannot possibly but submit to these in act and performance. And in the rest, which it hath pleased God, for reasons best known to himself, to deliver obscurely or ambiguously, yet thus far at least they agree, that the sense of them intended by God, is certainly true, and that they are without passion or prejudice to endeavour to find it out: The difference only is, Which is that true sense which God intended. Neither would this long continue, if the walls of separation, whereby the Devil hopes to make their Divisions eternal, were pulled down; and error were not supported against Truth, by humane advantages? But for the present, God forbid the matter should be so ill as you make it! For whereas you looking upon their Points of difference and agreement, through I know not what strange glasses, have made the first innumerable, and the other scarce a number: the truth is clean contrary; That those Divine Verities Speculative and Practical, wherein they universally agree (which you will have to be but a few, or but one, or scarcely one) amount to many millions, (if an exact account were taken of them:) And on the other side, the Points in variance, are in comparison but few, and those not of such a quality, but the Error in them may well consist with the belief and obedience of the entire Covenant, ratified by Chriſt between God and man. Yet I could not be ſo miſtaken, as if I thought the errors even of ſome Proteſtants unconſiderable things, and matters of no moment. For the truth is, I am very fearful, that ſome of their opinions, either as they are, or as they are apt to be miſtaken, (though not of themſelves ſo damnable, but that good and holy men may be ſaved with them, yet) are too frequent occaſions of our remiſneſs, and ſlackneſs, in running the race of Chriſtian Profeſſion, of our deferring Repentance, and Converſion to God, of our frequent relapſes into ſin, and not ſeldom of ſecurity in ſinning; and conſequently, though not certain cauſes, yet too frequent occaſions of many mens damnation: and ſuch I conceive all theſe Doctrines, which either directly or obliquely, put men in hope of eternal happineſs by any other means ſaving only the narrow way of ſincere and univerſal obedience, grounded upon a true and lively Faith. Theſe errors therefore, I do not elevate or extenuate: and, on condition the ruptures made by them might be compoſed, do heartily wiſh, that the cement were made of my deareſt bloud, and only not to be an Anathema from Chriſt: Only this I ſay, that neither are their Points of Agreement ſo few, nor their differences ſo many, as you make them; nor ſo great as to exclude the oppoſite Parties from being Members of one Church Militant, and joynt-heirs of the glory of the Church Triumphant.

50. Your other palpable untruth is, that Proteſtants are far more bold to diſagree even in matters of Faith, than Catholick Divines (you mean your own) in Queſtions meerly Philoſophical, or not determined by the Church. For neither do they differ at all, in matters of Faith, if you take the word in the higheſt ſenſe, and mean, by matters of Faith, ſuch Doctrines as are abſolutely neceſſary to Salvation to be believed, or not to be diſbelieved. And then in thoſe wherein they do differ, with what colour or ſhadow of Argument, can you make good, that they are more bold to diſagree, than you are in Queſtions meerly Philoſophical, or not determined by the Church? For is there not as great repugnancy between your aſſent and diſſent, your affirmation and negation, your Eſt Eſt, Non Non, as there is between theirs? You follow your Reaſon, in thoſe things which are not determined by your Church; and they theirs, in things not plainly determined in Scripture. And wherein then conſiſts their greater, their far greater boldneſs? And what if they in their contradictory opinions, pretend both to relie upon the truth of God, doth this make their contradictions ever a whit the more repugnant? I had always thought, that all contradictions had been equally contradictions, and equally repugnant; becauſe the leaſt of them are as far aſunder as Eſt and Non eſt can make them, and the greateſt are no farther. But then you in your differences, (by name, about Predetermination, the Immaculate Conception, the Pope's Infallibility) upon what other motive do you relie? Do not you cite Scripture, or Tradition, or both, on both ſides? And do you not pretend, that both theſe are the infallible Truths of Almighty God?

51. You cloſe up this Section with a fallacy, proving forſooth, that we deſtroy, by our confeſſion, the Church which is the houſe of God, becauſe we ſtand only upon Fundamental Articles, which cannot make up the whole fabrick of the Faith, no more than the foundation of a houſe alone can be a houſe.

52. But I hope, Sir, you will not be difficult in granting, that this is a houſe which hath all the neceſſary parts belonging to a houſe: Now by Fundamental Articles, we mean all thoſe which are neceſſary. And you your ſelf, in the very leaſe after this, take notice that Dr. Potter doth ſo. Where to this Queſtion, How ſhall I know in particular which Points be, and which be not Fundamental? You ſcurrilouſly bring him in making this ridiculous anſwer, Read my Anſwer to a late Pamphlet intituled Charity Miſtaken, &c. There you ſhall find that Fundamental Doctrines are ſuch Catholick Verities, as principally, and eſſentially pertain to the Faith, ſuch as properly conſtitute a Church, and are neceſſary (in ordinary courſe) to be diſtinctly believed by every Chriſtian that will be ſaved. All which words words be uſed, not to tell what Points be Fundamental, as you diſhoneſtly impoſe upon him, but to explain what he meant by the word Fundamental. May it pleaſe you therefore now at laſt, to take notice, that by Fundamental, we mean all and only that which is neceſſary; and then I hope you will grant, that we may ſafely expect Salvation in a Church which hath all things Fundamental to Salvation: Unleſs you will ſay, that more is neceſſary, than that which is neceſſary.

53. Ad §. 19. This long diſcourſe, ſo full of un-ingenuous dealing with your adverſary, perhaps would have done reaſonably in a Farce or a Comedy, and I doubt not but you have made your ſelf and your courteous Readers good ſport with it. But if Dr. Potter, or I, had been by, when you wrote it, we ſhould have ſtopt your career at the firſt ſtarting, and have put you in mind of theſe old School-Proverbs, Ex falſo ſuppoſito ſequitur quodlibet, and Uno abſurdo dato, ſequuntur mille. For whereas you ſuppoſe, firſt, that to a man deſirous to ſave his ſoul, and requiring whoſe direction he might rely upon? The Doctors anſwer would be, Upon the true Catholick Church, I ſuppoſe upon better reaſon, becauſe I know his mind, that he would advice him to call no Man Maſter on Earth, but, according to Chriſts command, to relie upon the direction of God himſelf. If he ſhould enquire, where he ſhould find this direction? He would anſwer him; In his Word contained in Scripture. If he ſhould enquire what aſſurance he might have, that the Scripture is the Word of God? He would anſwer him, that the Doctrine it ſelf is very fit and worthy to be thought to come from God, nec vox hominem ſonat, and that they which wrote and delivered it, confirmed it to be the word of God by doing ſuch works as could not be done, but by power from God himſelf. For aſſurance of the Truth hereof he would adviſe him to rely upon that, which all wiſe men in all matters of belief relie upon; and that is the conſent of Ancient Records, and Univerſal Tradition. And that he might not inſtruct him as partial in this advice, he might farther tell him, that a Gentleman that would be nameleſs, that has written a Book againſt him, called Charity maintained by Catholicks, though in many things he differ from him, yet agrees with him in this, that Tradition is ſuch a Principle as may be reſted in, and which requires no other proof. As indeed no wiſe man doubts but there was ſuch a man as Julius Ceſar, or Cicero, that there are ſuch Cities as Rome or Conſtantinople, though he have no other aſſurance for the one or the other, but only the ſpeech of people. This Tradition therefore he would counſel him to rely upon, and to believe that the Book which we call Scripture, was confirmed abundantly by the works of God, to be the Word of God. Believing it the Word of God, he muſt of neceſſity believe it true: and if he believe it true, he muſt believe it contains all neceſſary direction to eternal happineſs, becauſe it affirms it ſelf to do ſo. Nay he might tell him that ſo far is the whole Book, from wanting any neceſſary direction to his eternal Salvation, that one only Author, that hath writ but two little Books of it, St. Luke by name, in the beginning of his Goſpel, and in the beginning of his Story, ſhews plainly that he alone hath written at leaſt ſo much as is neceſſary. And what they wrote, they wrote by Gods direction, for the direction of the world, not only for the Learned, but for all that would do their true endeavour to know the will of God, and to do it; therefore you cannot but conceive, that writing to all and for all, they wrote ſo as that in things neceſſary they might be underſtood by all. Beſides that, here he ſhould find, that God himſelf has engaged himſelf by promiſe, that if he would love him, and keep his Commandments and pray earneſtly for his Spirit, and be willing to be directed by it, he ſhould undoubtedly receive it, even the Spirit of Truth which ſhall lead him into all truth; that is certainly, at leaſt into all neceſſary Truths, and ſuffer him to fall into no pernicious error. The ſum of his whole direction to him briefly would be this, Believe the Scripture to be the Word of God, uſe your true endeavour to find the true ſenſe of it, and to live according to it, and then you may reſt ſecurely that you are in the true way to eternal happineſs. This is the Subſtance of that Anſwer which the Doctor would make to any man in this caſe; and this is a way ſo plain, that fools, unleſs they will, cannot err from it. Becauſe, not knowing abſolutely all truth, nay, not all profitable truth, and being free from error; but endeavouring to know the truth and obey it, and endeavouring to be free from error, is by this way made the only condition of Salvation. As for your ſuppoſition, That he would adviſe ſuch a man to rely upon the Catholick Church for the finding out the doctrine of Chriſt; he utterly diſclaims it, and truly very juſtly: There being no certain way to know that any Company is a true Church, but only by their profeſſing the true doctrine of Chriſt. And therefore as it is impoſſible I ſhould know that ſuch a company of Philoſophers are Peripateticks, or Stoicks; unleſs I firſt know what was the doctrine of the Peripateticks, and Stoicks; ſo is it impoſſible that I ſhould certainly know any company to be the Church of Chriſt, before I know what is the doctrine of Chriſt, the profeſſion whereof conſtitutes the viſible Church, the Belief and Obedience the inviſible. And therefore whereas you would have him be directed by the Catholick Church to the doctrine of Chriſt; the contrary rather is moſt certain and neceſſary, that by the fore-knowledg of the doctrine of Chriſt, he muſt be directed to a certain aſſurance, which is the Catholick Church, if he mean not to chuſe at a venture, but deſire to have certain direction to it. This ſuppoſition therefore, being the hinge whereon your whole Diſcourſe turns, is the Minerva of your own Brain; and therefore, were it but for this, have we not great reaſon to accuſe you of ſtrange immodeſty, in ſaying as you do, That the whole Diſcourſe and Inferences which here you have made, are either Dr. Potters own direct aſſertions, or evident conſequences clearly deduced from them? Eſpecially ſeeing your proceeding in it, is ſo conſonant to this ill beginning, that it is in a manner wholly made up, not of Dr. Potters aſſertions, but your own fictions obtruded on him.

54. To the next Queſtion, Cannot General Councils err? You pretend he anſwers, They may err damnably. Let the Reader ſee the place, and he ſhall find, damnably is your addition. To the third Demand, Muſt I conſult, (about my difficulties) with every particular perſon of the Catholick Church? You anſwer for him, (that which is moſt falſe) that it ſeems ſo by his words; The whole militant Church, that is, all the members of it cannot poſſibly err either in the whole faith, or any neceſſary Article of it: which is very certain, for ſhould it do ſo, it ſhould be the Church no longer. But what ſenſe is there that you ſhould collect out of theſe words, that every member of the militant Church muſt be conſulted with? By like reaſon, if he had ſaid that all men in the world cannot err; If he ſaid that God in his own perſon, or his Angels could not err in theſe matters, you might have gathered from hence, that he laid a neceſſity upon men in doubt, to conſult with Angels, or with God in his own perſon, or with All men in the world. Is it not evident to all ſober men, that to make any man or men fit to be conſulted with, beſides the underſtanding of the matter, it is abſolutely requiſite that they may be ſpoken with? And is it not apparently impoſſible, that any man ſhould ſpeak with all the members of the Militant Church? Or, if he had ſpoken with them All, know that he had done ſo? Nay, does not D. Potter ſay as much in plain terms? Nay more, do not you take notice that he does ſo in the very next words before theſe, where you ſay, he affirms that the Catholick Church cannot be told of private injuries: unleſs you will perſuade us there is a difference between the Catholick Church, and the whole Militant Church. For whereas you make him deny this of the Catholick Church united, and affirm it of the Militant Church diſperſed into particulars; The truth is, he ſpeaks neither of united nor diſperſed, but affirms ſimply (as appears to your ſhame by your own quotations (that the Catholick Church cannot be told of private injuries: and then, that the whole Militant Church cannot err. But then beſides, that the united Church cannot be conſulted, and the diſperſed may, What a wild imagination is it? and what a ſtrange injuſtice was it in you to father it upon him?

I

I beſeech you Sir, to conſider ſeriouſly, how far blind zeal to your ſuperſtition hath tranſported you beyond all bounds of honeſty and diſcretion, and made you careleſs of ſpeaking either truth or ſenſe, ſo you ſpeak againſt D. Potter!

55. Again, you make him ſay, The Prelates of Gods Church meeting in a lawful Council may err damnably: and from this you collect, It remains then, for your neceſſary inſtruction you muſt repair to every particular member of the Univerſal Church ſpread over the face of the earth. And this is alſo Pergula pictoris, veri nihil, omnia ficta. The Antecedent falſe (not for the matter of it, but) that D. Potter ſays it, And the conſequence as far from it as Gades from Ganges; and as coherent as a rope of Sand. A general Council may err; therefore you muſt travel all the world over, and conſult with every particular Chriſtian! As if there were nothing elſe to be conſulted with: Nay, as if, according to the Doctrine of Proteſtants, (for ſo you muſt ſay,) there were nothing to be conſulted with, but only a general Council, or all the Word! Have you never heard that Proteſtants ſay, That men for their direction muſt conſult with Scripture? Nay, doth not Dr. Potter ſay it often in this very Book which you are confuting? Nay more, in this very Page out of which you take this piece of your Cento, A General Council may err damnably? Are there not theſe plain words, In ſearches of Truth (he means divine Truth) God ever directs us to the infallible Rule of Truth, The Scripture? With what conſcience then, or modeſty, can you impoſe upon him this unreaſonable conſequence, and pretend that your whole diſcourſe, is either his own direct aſſertions, or evident conſequences, clearly deduced from them? You add, that yet he teaches (as if he contradicted himſelf) that the promiſes of God made to the Church for his aſſiſtance, are not intended to particular perſons, but wholly to the Catholick Church: which ſure agrees very well with any thing ſaid by Dr. Potter. If it be repugnant to what you ſaid for him falſely, what is that to him?

56. Neither yet is this to drive any man to deſperation: unleſs it be ſuch an one, as hath ſuch a ſtrong affection to this word Church, that he will not go to Heaven, unleſs he hath a Church to lead him thither. For what though a Council may err, and the whole Church cannot be conſulted with, yet this is not to ſend you on the Fool's Pigrimage for Faith, and bid you go and confer with every Chriſtian ſoul, man and woman, by Sea and by Land, cloſe priſoner or at liberty, as you dilate the matter: But to tell you very briefly, that Univerſal Tradition directs you to the Word of God, and the Word of God directs you to Heaven. And therefore here is no cauſe of deſperation, no cauſe for you to be ſo vain, and tragical, as here you would ſeem. Tet upon Suppoſal (you ſay) of this miraculous pilgrimage for Faith, before I have the Faith of Miracles, how ſhall I proceed at our meeting? Or how ſhall I know the man, on whom I may ſecurely rely? And hereunto you frame this Anſwer for the Doctor, Procure to know whether he believe all Fundamental Points of Faith: Whereas in all the doctors Book, there is no ſuch Anſwer to any ſuch Queſtion, or any like it. Neither do you, as your cuſtom is, note any Page where it may be found; which makes me ſuſpect, that ſure you have ſome private licenſe to uſe Hereticks (as you call them) at your pleaſure, and make them anſwer any thing to any thing.

57. Wherein I am yet more confirmed, by the anſwer you put in his mouth to your next demand, How ſhall I know whether he hold all Fundamental Points or no? For, whereas hereunto Dr. Potter having given one Anſwer fully ſatisfactory to it, which is, If he truly believe the undoubted Books of Canonical Scripture, he cannot but believe all Fundamentals; and another, which is but ſomething towards a full ſatisfaction of it, That the Creed contains all the Fundamentals of ſimple Belief: you take no notice of the former, and pervert the latter, and make him ſay, The Creed contains all Fundamentals of Faith. Whereas you know, and, within ſix or ſeven lines after this, confeſs, that he never pretended it to contain all ſimply, but all of one ſort, all neceſſary Points of ſimple belief. Which aſſertion becauſe becauſe he modeſtly delivers as very probable (being willing to conclude rather leſs than more than his reaſons require,) hereupon you take occaſion to ask: Shall I hazard my ſoul on probabilities, or even wagers? As if, whatſoever is but probable, though in the higheſt degree of probability, were as likely to be falſe as true! Or becauſe it is but Morally, not Mathematically, certain that there was ſuch a woman as Queen Elizabeth, ſuch a man as Henry VIII. that is in the higheſt degree probable, therefore it were an even wager there were none ſuch! By this reaſon, ſeeing the truth of your whole Religion depends finally upon Prudential motives, which you do but pretend to be very credible, it will be an even wager that your Religion is falſe. And by the ſame reaſon, or rather infinitely greater, ſeeing it is impoſſible for any man (according to the grounds of your Religion) to know himſelf, much leſs another to be a true Pope, or a true Prieſt; nay, to have a Moral certainty of it; becauſe theſe things are obnoxious to innumerable ſecret and undiſcernable nullities it will be an even wager, nay, (if we proportion things indifferently,) a hundred to one, that every Conſecration and Abſolution of yours is void, and that whenſoever you adore the Hoſt, you and your Aſſiſtants commit Idolatry: That there is a nullity in any Decree that a Pope ſhall make, or any Decree of a Council which he ſhall confirm: Particularly, it will be, at leaſt an even wager, that all the Decrees of the Council of Trent are void, becauſe it is at moſt but very probable that the Pope which confirmed them was true Pope. If you miſlike theſe Inferences, then confeſs you have injur'd Dr. Potter in this alſo, that you have confounded and made all one, Probabilities, and even Wagers. Whereas every ordinary Gameſter can inform you, that though it be a thouſand to one that ſuch a thing will happen, yet it is not ſure, but very probable.

58. To make the meaſure of your injuſtice yet fuller, you demand, If the Creed contains only points of ſimple belief, how ſhall you know what points of belief are neceſſary which direct our practice? Dr. Potter would have anſwered you in our Saviours words, Search the Scriptures. But you have a great mind it ſeems to be deſpairing, and therefore, having propoſed your Queſtion, will not ſuffer him to give you an Anſwer, but ſhut your ears and tell him, ſtill he chalks out new paths for deſperation.

59. In the reſt of your interlude, I cannot but commend one thing in you, that you keep a decorum, and obſerve very well the Rule given you by the great Maſter of your Art,

——Servetur ad imum
Qualis ab incepto proceſſerat, & ſibi conſtet:

One vein of ſcurrility and diſhoneſty runs clean through it, from the beginning to the end. Your next demand then is, Are all the Articles of the Creed for their nature and matter Fundamental? And the Anſwer, I cannot ſay ſo. Which Anſwer (though it be true) Dr. Potter no where gives it, neither hath he occaſion, but you make it for him, to bring in another queſtion, and that is, How then ſhall I know, which in particular be, and which be not Fundamental? Dr. Potter would have anſwered, It is a vain queſtion: believe all, and you ſhall be ſure to believe all that is Fundamental.

60. But what ſays now his prevaricating Proxy? What does he make him ſay? This which follows: Read my Anſwer to a late Popiſh Pamphlet, intituled, Charity Miſtaken: There you ſhall find that Fundamental Doctrines, are ſuch Catholick Verities, as principally and eſſentially pertain to the Faith, ſuch as properly conſtitute a Church, and are neceſſary in ordinary courſe, to be diſtinctly believed by every Chriſtian that will be ſaved. They are thoſe Grand and Capital Doctrines which make up our Faith, that is, the Common Faith, which is alike pretious in all; being one and the ſame, in the higheſt Apoſtle, and the meaneſt Believer, which the Apoſtle elſewhere calls, The firſt Principles of the Oracles of God, and, The form of ſound words.

61. But in earneſt, Good Sir, doth the Doctor in theſe places by you quoted, make to this queſtion this ſame ſottiſh anſwer? Or do you think that againſt an Heretick Heretick nothing is unlawful? Certainly, if he doth anſwer thus, I will make bold to ſay, he is a very fool. But if he does not, (as indeed he does not) then ——: But I forbear you, and beſeech the Reader to conſult the places of Dr. Potter's Book; and there he ſhall find, that, in the former half of theſe (as you call them) varied words and phraſes, he declared only what he meant by the word Fundamental, which was needful to prevent miſtakes, and cavilling about the meaning of the word, which is Metaphorical, and therefore Ambiguous; and that the latter half of them, are ſeveral places of Scripture imployed by Dr. Potter, to ſhew that his diſtinction of Fundamental and not Fundamental hath expreſs ground in it. Now of theſe two places, very pertinent unto two very good purpoſes, you have exceeding fairly patcht together a moſt ridiculous Anſwer, to a Queſtion, that Dr. Potter never dreamed of. But the words, you will ſay, are in Dr. Potters Book, though in divers places, and to other purpoſes. Very true: And ſo the words of Auſonius his obſcene Peſcennine, are taken out of Virgil, yet Virgil ſurely was not the Author of this Poem. Beſides, in Dr. Potters book, there are theſe words, Dread Sovereign, amongſt the many excellent vertues, which have made your Majeſties perſon ſo dear unto God, &c. And why now may you not ſay as well, that in theſe he made Anſwer to your former queſtion, what Points of the Creed were, and what were not Fundamentals?

62. But unleſs this queſtion may be anſwered, his doctrine (you ſay) ſerves only either to make men deſpair, or elſe to have recourſe to theſe whom we call Papiſts. It ſeems, a little thing will make you deſpair, if you be ſo ſullen as to do ſo, becauſe men will not trouble themſelves to ſatisfie your curious queſtions. And I pray be not offended with me for ſo eſteeming it, becauſe, as before I told you, if you will believe all the Points of the Creed, you cannot chuſe but believe all the Points of it that are Fundamental, though you be ignorant which are ſo, and which are not ſo. Now, I believe, your deſire to know which are Fundamentals, proceeds only from a deſire to be aſſured that you do believe them; which ſeeing you may be aſſured of, without knowing which they be, what can it be but curioſity to deſire to know it? Neither may you think to mend your ſelf herein one whit by having recourſe to them whom we call Papiſts; for they are as far to ſeek as we in this Point, which of the Articles of the Creed are, for their nature, and matter, Fundamental, and which are not. Particularly you will ſcarce meet with any amongſt their Doctors, ſo adventurous as to tell you for a certain, Whether or no the conception of Chriſt by the Holy Ghoſt, his being born of a Virgin, his Burial, his Deſcent into Hell, and the Communion of Saints, be Points of their own nature and matter Fundamental. Such I mean, as without the diſtinct and explicite knowledge of them no man can be ſaved.

63. But you will ſay, at leaſt they give this certain Rule, that all Points defined by Chriſt's viſible Church, belong to the foundation of faith, in ſuch ſenſe, as, to deny any ſuch, cannot ſtand with Salvation. So alſo Proteſtants give you this more certain Rule, That whoſoever believes heartily thoſe Books of Scripture, which all the Chriſtian Churches in the world acknowledge to be Canonical, and ſubmits himſelf indeed to this, as to the Rule of his belief, muſt of neceſſity believe all things Fundamental; and, if he live according to his Faith, cannot fail of Salvation. But beſides, What certainty have you, that that rule of Papiſts is ſo certain? By the viſible Church it is plain, they mean only their own: and why their own only ſhould be the Viſible Church, I do not underſtand: and as little, why all Points defined by this Church ſhould belong to the foundation of faith, Theſe things you had need ſee well and ſubſtantially proved, before you relie upon them, otherwiſe you expoſe your ſelf to danger of imbracing damnable errors inſtead of Fundamental truths. But you will ſay, Dr. Potter himſelf acknowledges, that you do not err in Fundamentals. If he did ſo, yet me thinks you have no reaſon to reſt upon his acknowledgement with any ſecurity, whom you condemn of error in many other matters. Perhaps, exceſs of Charity to your perſons, persons, may make him censure your errors more favourably than he should do. But the truth is, and so I have often told you, though the Doctor hopes that your errors are not so unpardonably destructive, but that some men who ignorantly hold them may be saved, yet in themselves he professes and proclaims them damnable, and such as, he fears, will be certainly destructive to such as you are, that is, to all those, who have eyes to see and will not see them.

64. Ad §. 20,21,22,23. In the Remainder of this Chapter, you promise to answer Dr. Potter's Arguments against that which you said before. But presently forgetting your self, instead of answering his Arguments, you fall a confuting his Answers to your own. The Arguments objected by you which here you vindicate, were two. 1. The Scripture is not so much as mentioned in the Creed, therefore the Creed contains not all things necessary to be believed. 2. Baptism is not contained in the Creed, therefore not all things necessary. To both which Arguments my answer shortly is this, that they prove something, but it is that which no man here denies. For, Dr. Potter (as you have also confessed) never said, nor undertook to shew, that the Apostles intended to comprize in the Creed, all Points absolutely, which we are bound to believe, or after sufficient proposal, not to disbelieve; which yet here and every where you are obtruding upon him: But only that they purposed to comprize in it, all such doctrines purely speculative, all such matters of simple belief, as are in ordinary course, necessary to be distinctly and explicitly believed by all men: Now neither of these objections do any way infringe or impeach the truth of this Assertion. Not the first because according to your own doctrine, all men are not bound to know explicitely what books of Scripture are Canonical. Nor the second, because Baptism is not a matter of Faith, but practice: not so much to be believed, as to be given, and received. And against these Answers, whether you have brought any considerable new matter, let the indifferent Reader judge. As for the other things, which Dr. Potter rather glanceth at than builds upon in answering these objections, as the Creeds being collected out of Scripture, and, supposing the Authority of it, which Gregory of Valentia in the place above cited, seems to me to confess, to have been the Judgment of the Ancient Fathers: and the Nicene Creeds intimating the authority of Canonical Scripture, and making mention of Baptism: These things were said ex abundanti; and therefore I conceive it superfluous to examine your exceptions against them. Prove that Dr. Potter did affirm that the Creed contains all things necessary to be believed of all sorts, and then these objections will be pertinent, and deserve an answer. Or produce some Point of simple belief, necessary to be explicitely believed, which is not contained either in terms, or by consequence in the Creed, and then I will either answer your Reasons, or confess I cannot. But all this while you do but trifle, and are so far from hitting the mark, that you rove quite beside the Butt.

65. Ad §. 23,24,25. Dr. Potter demands, How it can be necessary for any Christian to have more in his Creed than the Apostles had, and the Church of their times? You Answer, That he trifled, not distinguishing between the Apostles belief, and that abridgment of some Articles of faith, which we call the Apostles Creed. I reply, that it is you which trifle, affectedly confounding (what Dr. Potter hath plainly distinguished) the Apostles belief of the whole Religion of Christ, as it comprehends both what we are to do, and what we are to believe, with their belief of that part of it, which contains not duties of obedience, but only the necessary Articles of simple Faith. Now though the Apostles Belief be, in the former sense, a larger thing than that which we call the Apostles Creed: yet in the latter sense of the word, the Creed (I say) is a full comprehension of their belief, which you your self have formerly confessed, though somewhat fearfully, and inconstantly: and here again unwillingness to speak the the truth, makes you speak that which is hardly sense, and call it an abridgment of some Articles of Faith. For I demand, these some Articles which you speak of, Which are they? Those that are out of the the Creed, or those that are in it? Those that are in it, it comprehends at large, and therefore it is not an abridgment of them: Those that are out of it, it comprehends not at all, and therefore it is not an abridgment of them. If you would call it now an abridgment of the Faith, this would be sense, and signifie thus much, That all the necessary Articles of the Christian Faith are comprised in it. For this is the proper duty of Abridgments, to leave out nothing necessary, and to take in nothing unnecessary.

66. Moreover, in answer to this demand you tell us, that the Doctor begs the Question, supposing that the Apostles believed no more than is contained in their Creed, I answer, He supposes no such matter; but only that they knew no more necessary Articles of simple belief, than what are contained in their Creed. So that here you abuse D. Potter and your Reader, by taking sophistically without limitation, that which is delivered with limitation.

67. But this Demand of D. Potter's, was equivalent to a Negation, and intended for one: How can it be necessary for any Christian to have more in his Creed, than the Apostles had? All one with this, It cannot be necessary, &c. And this negation of his, he forces with many arguments which he proposes by way of interrogation, thus. May the Church of after ages make the narrow way to Heaven, narrower than our Saviour left it? Shall it be a fault to straiten and encumber the King's high way with publique nuisances; And is it lawful by adding new Articles to the Faith, to retrench any thing from the Latitude of the King of Heavens high way to eternal Happiness? The yoke of Christ, which he said was ease, may it be justly made heavier by the Governors of the Church in after ages? The Apostles professe they revealed to the Church the whole Counsel of God, keeping back nothing needful for our Salvation: what tyranny then, to impose any new unnecessary matters on the Faith of Christians, especially (as the late Popes have done under the high commanding form, Qui non crediderit, damnabitur. If this may be done, Why then did our Saviour reprehend the Pharisees so sharply, for binding heavy burdens, and laying them on mens shoulders? And why did he teach them, that in vain they worshiped God teaching for Doctrines mens Traditions? And why did the Apostles call it tempting of God, to lay those things upon the necks of Christians, that were not necessary?

68. All which Interrogations seem to me to contain so many plain and convincing Arguments of the premised Assertion; to all which (one excepted,) according to the advice of the best Masters of Rhetorick in such Cases, you have answered very discreetly, by saying O. But when you write again, I pray take notice of them: and, if you can devise no fair, and satisfying Answer to them, then be so ingenuous as to grant the Conclusion, That no more can be necessary for Christians to believe now, than was in the Apostles time. A conclusion of great importance, for the decision of many Controversies, and the disburdening of the Faith of Christ from many incumbrances.

69. As for that one, which you thought you could fasten upon, grounded on the 20. Act. 27. let me tell you plainly, that by your Answering this, you have shewed plainly that it was wisely done of you to decline the rest. You tell D. Potter, That needful for salvation is his gloss, which perhaps you intended for a piece of an answer. But, good Sir, consult the place, and you shall find, that there S. Paul himself says that he kept back οὐδὲν τῶν συμφερόντων, not any thing that was profitable: and, I hope, you will make no difficulty to grant, that whatsoever is needful for salvation, is very profitable.

70. But then you say, This is no proof unless he beg the Question, and suppose, that whatsoever the Apostles revealed to the Church is contained in the Creed. I Answer, it is not D. Potter that begs the Question, but you that mistake it: which is not here in this particular place, Whether all Points of simple Belief necessary for the salvation of the Primitive Christians, were contained in the Apostles Symbol? (for that and the proofs of it follow after, in the next §, p. 223. of D. Potter's Book:) but, Whether any thing can be neceſſary for Chriſtians to believe now, which was not ſo from the beginning? D. Potter maintains the Negative; and to make good his opinion, thus he argues; S. Paul declared to the Epheſians the whole Counſel of God touching their Salvation; Therefore that which S. Paul did not declare, can be no part of the Counſel of God, and therefore not neceſſary. And again: S. Paul kept back nothing from the Epheſians that was profitable; Therefore he taught them all things neceſſary to ſavlation. Conſider this, I pray, a little better, and then, I hope you will ackowledge, that here was no Petitio principii, in D. Potter; but rather Ignoratio Elenchi, in you.

71. Neither is it material, that theſe words were particularly directed by S. Paul, to the Paſtors of the Church: For (to ſay nothing that the Point here iſſuable, is not, Whom he taught, Whether Prieſts or Laymen? But how much he taught, and whether all things neceſſary?) it appears plainly out of the Text, and I wonder you ſhould read it ſo negligently as not to obſerve it, that though he ſpeaks now to the Paſtors, yet he ſpeaks of what he taught not only them, but alſo the Laity as well as them. I have kept back nothing (ſays S. Paul) that was profitable, but have ſhewed, and have taught you publickly, and from houſe to houſe Teſtifying (I pray obſerve) both to the Jews, and alſo to the Greeks, Repentance towards God, and Faith towards our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. And a little after, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the Kingdom of God, ſhall ſee my face no more: Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am innocent from the blood of all men; for I have kept nothing back, but have ſhewed you all the Counſel of God. And again, Remember that by the ſpace of three years I ceaſed not to warn every one, night and day with tears. Certainly, though he did all theſe things to the Paſtors among the reſt, nay above the reſt, yet, without Controverſie, they whom he taught publickly, and from houſe to houſe: The Jews and Greeks to whom he teſtified, (i.e.) preached Faith and Repentance: Thoſe all, among whom he went preaching the kingdom of God: Thoſe every one, whom for the three years together he warned, were not Biſhops and Paſtors only.

72. Neither is this to ſay, that the Apoſtles taught Chriſtians nothing but their Creed, nothing of the Sacraments, Commandments, &c. for that is not here the Point to be proved: but only, that they taught them all things neceſſary, ſo that nothing can be neceſſary which they did not teach them. But how much of this they put into their Creed, Whether all the neceſſary Points of ſimple Belief, as we pretend, or only as you ſay, I know not what, is another Queſtion and which comes now to be farther examined. D. Potter in confirmation of it, beſides the authorities which you formerly ſhifted off, with ſo egregious tergiverſation, urges five ſeveral Arguments.

73. The ſenſe of the firſt is this, If all the neceſſary Points of ſimple Belief be not comprized in the Creed, it can no way deſerve the name of the Apoſtles Creed, as not being their Creed in any ſenſe, but only a part of it. To this you anſwer §. 25. Upon the ſame affected ambiguity, &c. Anſ. It is very true that their whole faith was of a larger extent, but that was not the Queſtion: But whether all the Points of ſimple belief which they taught as neceſſary to be explicitly believed, be not contained in it? And if thus much at leaſt of Chriſtian Religion, be not comprized in it, I again deſire you to inform me, How it could be called the Apoſtles Creed!

74. Four other reaſons D. Potter urges to the ſame purpoſe, grounded upon the practice of the Ancient Church; The laſt whereof you anſwer in the ſecond part of your Book. But to the reſt, drawn from the ancient Churches appointing her Infants to be inſtructed (for matters of ſimple belief,) only in the Creed: From her admitting Catechumens unto Baptiſm: and of Strangers to her Communion upon their only profeſſion of the Creed, you have not, for ought I can perceive, thought fit to make any kind of Anſwer.

75. The difficulties of the 27. and laſt §. of this Chapter, have been ſatisfied. So that there remains unexamined only the 26. Section, wherein you exceed your ſelf ſelf in Sophiſtry: Eſpecially in that trick of Cavillers, which is to anſwer objections by other objections; an excellent way to make controverſies endleſs! D. Potter deſires to be reſolved, why amongſt many things of equal neceſſity to be believed, the Apoſtles ſhould diſtinctly ſet down ſome in the Creed, and be altogether ſilent of others? Inſtead of reſolving him into his difficulty, you put another to him, and that is, Why are ſome Points not Fundamental expreſſed in it, rather than others of the ſame quality? Which demand is ſo far from ſatisfying the former Doubt, that it makes it more intricate. For upon this ground it may be demanded, How was it poſſible that the Apoſtles ſhould leave out any Articles ſimply neceſſary, and put in others not neceſſary, eſpecially if their intention were (as you ſay it was) to deliver it in ſuch Articles as were fitteſt for thoſe times? Unleſs (which were wondrous ſtrange) unneceſſary Articles were fitter for thoſe times, than neceſſary. But now to your Queſtion, the Anſwer is obvious: Theſe unneceſſary things might be put in, becauſe they were circumſtances of the neceſſary; Pontius Pilate, of Chriſt's Paſſion; The third day, of the Reſurrection. Neither doth the adding of them make the Creed ever a whit the leſs portable, the leſs fit to be underſtood, and remembred. And for the contrary reaſons, other unneceſſary things might be left out. Beſide, who ſees not, that the addition of ſome unneceſſary circumſtances is a thing that can hardly be avoided without affectation! And therefore not ſo great a fault, nor deſerving ſuch a cenſure, as the omiſſion of any thing eſſential to the work undertaken, and neceſſary to the end propoſed in it.

76. You demand again (as it is no hard matter to multiply demands) why our Saviour's deſcent to hell, and Burial was expreſſed, and not his Circumciſion, his manifeſtation to the three Kings, and working of miracles? I anſwer: His Reſurrection, Aſcenſion, and Sitting at the right hand of God are very great Miracles, and they are expreſſed. Beſides, S. John aſſures us, That the Miracles which Chriſt did, were done and written not for themſelves that they might be believed; but for a farther end, that we might believe that Jeſus was the Chriſt, and believing have eternal life. He therefore that believes this may be ſaved, though he have no explicite and diſtinct faith of any Miracle that our Saviour did. His Circumciſion and Maiſeſtation to the Wiſe men (for I know not upon what grounds you call them Kings) are neither things ſimply neceſſary to be known, nor have any near relation to thoſe that are ſo. As for his Deſcent into hell, it may (for ought you know) be put in as a thing neceſſary of it ſelf to be known. If you ask, why more than his Circumciſion? I refer you to the Apoſtles for an anſwer, who put that in, and left this out of their Creed: and yet ſure, were not ſo forgetful after the receiving of the Holy Ghoſt, as to leave out any prime and principal foundation of the Faith, which are the very words of your own Gordonius Huntlæus, Contr. 2 c. 10. num. Likewiſe his Burial was put in perhaps as neceſſary of it ſelf to be known. But though it were not, yet hath it manifeſtly ſo near relation to theſe that are neceſſary, his Paſſion, and Reſurrection; being the Conſequent of the one, and the Antecedent of the other, that it is no marvel if for their ſakes it was put in. For though I verily believe that there is no neceſſary Point of this nature, but what is in the Creed, yet I do not affirm, becauſe I cannot prove it, that there is nothing in the Creed but what is neceſſary. You demand thirdly, Why did they not expreſs Scriptures, Sacraments, and all Fundamental Points of Faith tending to Practice, as well as thoſe which reſt in Belief? I anſwer; Becauſe their purpoſe was to comprize in it only thoſe neceſſary Points which reſt in Belief: which appears, becauſe of practical Points there is not in it ſo much as one.

77. D. Potter ſubjoyns to what is ſaid above, That as well, nay better they might have given no Article but that of the Church, and ſent us to the Church for all the reſt: For in ſetting down others beſides that, and not all, they make us believe we have all, when we have not all. This conſequence you deny: and neither give reaſon againſt it, nor ſatisfie his reaſon for it, which yet in my judgment is good and concluding. The Propoſition to be proved is this: That, if your Doctrin were true, this ſhort Creed, I believe the Roman Church to be Infallible, would have been better, that is, more effectual to keep the believers of it from Hereſie, and in the true Faith, than this Creed which now we have. A propoſition ſo evident, that I cannot ſee how either you, or any of your Religion, or indeed any ſenſible man can from his heart deny it. Yet becauſe you make ſhew of doing ſo, or elſe, which I rather hope, do not rightly apprehend the force of the Reaſon, I will endeavour briefly to add ſome light and ſtrength to it, by comparing the effects of theſe ſeveral ſuppoſed Creeds.

78. The former Creed therefore would certainly produce theſe effects in the believers of it: An impoſſibility of being in any formal Hereſie: A neceſſity of being prepared in mind to come out of all Error in Faith, or material Hereſie; which certainly you will not deny; or if you do, you pull down the only pillar of your Church and Religion, and that which is in effect the only thing you labour to prove through your whole Book.

79. The latter Creed which now we have, is ſo uneffectual for theſe good purpoſes, that you your ſelf tell us of innumerable, groſs, damnable Hereſies, that have been, are and may be, whoſe contrary Truths are neither explicitly, nor by conſequence comprehended in this Creed: So that no man by the belief of this Creed without the former, can be poſſibly gaurded from falling into them, and continuing obſtinate in them. Nay, ſo far is this Creed from guarding them from theſe miſchiefs, that it is more likely to enſnare them into them, by ſeeming and yet not being a full comprehenſion of all neceſſary Points of Faith: which is apt (as experience ſhews,) to miſ-guide men into this (as you conceive it) pernitious error, That believing the Creed, they believe all neceſſary Points of Faith, whereas indeed, according to you, they do not ſo. Now upon theſe grounds I thus conclude: That Creed, which hath great commodities and no danger, would certainly be better than that which hath great danger, and wants many of theſe great commodities; But the former ſhort Creed propos'd by me, I believe the Roman Church to be infallible, (if your Doctrin be true) is of the former condition, and the latter, that is, the Apoſtles Creed, is of the latter: Therefore the former (if your doctrin be true) would without controverſie be better than the latter.

80. But (ſay you) by this kind of arguing, one might infer quite contrary. If the Apoſtles Creed contain all Points neceſſary to Salvation, What need have we of any Church to teach us? And conſequently what need of the Article of the Church? To which I anſwer, that having compared your inference and D. Potter's together, I cannot diſcover any ſhadow of reſemblance between them, nor any ſhew of Reaſon, why the perfection of the Apoſtles Creed, ſhould exclude a neceſſity of ſome body to deliver it. Much leſs why the whole Creeds containing all things neceſſary ſhould make the belief of a part of it unneceſſary. As well (for ought I underſtand) you might avouch this inference to be as good as D. Potters: The Apoſtles Creed contains all things neceſſary, therefore there is no need to believe in God. Neither doth it follow ſo well as D. Potter's Argument follows, That if the Apoſtles Creed contains all things neceſſary, that all other Creeds and Catechiſms, wherein are added divers other Particulars, are ſuperfluous. For theſe other Particulars may be the Duties of obedience, they may be profitable Points of Doctrin, they may be good expoſitions of the Apoſtles Creed, and ſo not ſuperfluous; and yet for all this the Creed may ſtill contain all Points of Belief that are ſimply neceſſary. Theſe therefore are poor conſequences, but no more like D. Poiters than an apple is like an oiſter.

81. But this conſequence after you have ſufficiently ſlighted and diſgraced it, at length you promiſe us news, and pretend to grant it. But what is that which you mean to grant? That the Apoſtles did put no Article in their Creed but only that of the Church? Or that, if they had done ſo, they had done better than than now they have done? This is D. Potter's inference out of your Doctrin: and truly, if you ſhould grant this, this were news indeed? Yes, ſay you, I will grant it, but only thus far, that Chriſt hath referred us only to his Church. Yea, but this is clean another thing, and no news at all, that you ſhould grant that, which you would fain have granted to you. So that your dealing with us is juſt as if a man ſhould proffer me a courteſie, and pretend that he would oblige himſelf by a note under his hand, to give me twenty Pound; and inſtead of it write, that I owe him forty, and deſire me to ſubſcribe to it and be thankful. Of ſuch favours as theſe it is very ſafe to be liberal.

82. You tell us afterward (but how it comes in I know not) that it were a childiſh argument, The Creed contains not all things neceſſary: Ergo, It is not profitable: Or, The Church alone is ſufficient to teach us by ſome convenient means: Ergo, She muſt teach us without means. Theſe indeed are Childiſh arguments; but, for ought I ſee, you alone are the father of them: for, in D. Potter's book, I can neither meet with them, nor any like them. He indeed tells you, that if (by an impoſſible ſupoſition) your Doctrin were true, another and a far ſhorter Creed would have been more expedient: even this alone, I believe the Roman Church to be infallible. But why you ſhould conclude, he makes this Creed which we have, unprofitable; becauſe he ſays another that might be conceived upon this falſe ſuppoſition, would be more profitable: or, that he lays a neceſſity upon the Church, of teaching without means: or, of not teaching this very Creed which now is taught; theſe things are ſo ſubtil that I cannot apprehend them. To my underſtanding, by thoſe words, And ſent us to the Church for all the reſt, he does rather manifeſtly imply, that the reſt might be very well, not only profitable but neceſſary, and that the Church was to teach this by Creeds or Catechiſms, or Councils, or any other means which ſhe ſhould make choice of; for being Infallible, ſhe could not chuſe amiſs.

83. Whereas therefore you ſay, If the Apoſtles had expreſt no Article but that of the Catholique Church, ſhe muſt have taught us the other Articles in particular by Creeds, or other means: This is very true, but no way repugnant to the truth of this which follows, that the Apoſtles (if your Doctrin be true) had done better ſervice to the Church, though they had never made this Creed of theirs which now we have, if, inſtead thereof, they had commanded in plain terms that for mens perpetual direction in the Faith, this ſhort Creed ſhould be taught all men, I believe the Roman Church ſhall be for ever infallible. Yet you muſt not ſo miſtake me, as if I meant, that they had done better, not to have taught the Church the ſubſtance of Chriſtian Religion; For then the Church not having learnt it of them, could not have taught it us, This therefore I do not ſay: but, ſuppoſing they had written theſe Scriptures as they have written, wherein all the Articles of their Creed are plainly delivered, and preached that Doctrin which they did preach, and done all other things as they have done, beſides the compoſing their Symbol: I ſay, if your Doctrine were true, they had done a work infinitely more beneficial to the Church of Chriſt, if they had never compoſed their Symbol, which is but an imperfect comprehenſion of the neceſſary Points of ſimple Belief, and no diſtinctive mark (as a Symbol ſhould be) between thoſe that are good Chriſtians, and thoſe that are not ſo; But inſtead thereof, had delivered this one Propoſition, which would have been certainly effectual for all the aforſaid good intents and purpoſes, The Roman Church ſhall be for ever infallible in all things, which ſhe propoſes as matters of Faith.

84. Whereas you ſay, If we will believe we have all in the Creed when we have not all, it is not the Apoſtles fault but our own: I tell you plainly, if it be a fault, I know not whoſe it ſhould be but theirs. For ſure it can be no fault in me to follow ſuch guides whitherſoever they lead me; Now, I ſay, they have led me into this perſwaſion, becauſe they have given me great reaſon to believe it, and none to the contrary. The reaſon they have given me to believe it, is, becauſe it is apparent apparent and conteſt, they did propoſe to themſelves in compoſing it, ſome good end or ends; As that Chriſtians might have a form, by which (for matter of Faith) they might profeſs themſelves Catholiques. So Petan out of Tho. Aquinas: That the faithful might know, what the Chriſtian people is to believe explicitly. So Vincent Filiucius: That being ſeparated into divers parts of the World, they might preach the ſame thing: And, that, that might ſerve as a mark to diſtinguiſh true Chriſtians from Infidels, So Card. Richeom. Now for all theſe and for any other good intent, I ſay, it will be plainly uneffectual, unleſs it contain at leaſt all Points of ſimple Belief, which are, in ordinary courſe, neceſſary to be explicitly known by all men. So that if it be a fault in me to believe this, it muſt be my fault to believe the Apoſtles, wiſe and good men: which I cannot do if I believe not this. And therefore, what Ricardus de ſancto Victore ſays of God himſelf, I make no ſcruple at all to apply to the Apoſtles, and to ſay, Si error eſt quod credo, a vobis deceptus ſum: If it be an error which I believe, it is you, and my reverend eſteem of you and your actions, that hath led me into it. For as for your ſuſpition, That we are led into this perſwaſion, out of a hope that we may the better maintain by it ſome opinions of our own, It is plainly uncharitable. I know no opinion I have which I would not as willingly forſake as keep, if I could ſee ſufficient reaſon to induce me to believe, that it is the will of God I ſhould forſake it. Neither do I know any opinion I hold againſt the Church of Rome, but I have more evident grounds than this whereupon to build it. For let but theſe Truths be granted: That the authority of the Scripture is independent on your Church, and dependent only in reſpect of us upon univerſal Tradition; That Scripture is the only Rule of Faith: That all things neceſſary to ſalvation are plainly delivered in Scripture: Let, I ſay, theſe moſt certain and Divine Truths be laid for Foundations, and let our ſuperſtructions be conſequent and coherent to them; and, I am confident, Peace would be reſtored, and Truth maintained againſt you, though the Apoſtles Creed were not in the World.

CHAP. V.

That Luther, Calvin, their Aſſociates, and all who began or continue the Separation from the external Communion of the Roman Church, are guilty of the proper, and formal ſin of Schiſm.

THE Searcher of all Hearts is witneſs with how unwilling minds, we Catholiques are drawn to faſten the denomination of Schiſmatiques, or Hereticques, on them, for whoſe ſouls, if they empl yed their beſt blood, they judge that it could not be better ſpent! If we rejoyce, that they are contriſtated at ſuch titles, our joy riſeth not from their trouble or grief, but, as that of the Apoſtles did, from the fountain of Charity, becauſe they are contriſtated to repentance; that ſo, after unpartial examination, they finding themſelves to be what we ſay, may, by God's holy grace, begin to diſlike, what themſelves are. For our part, we muſt remember that our obligation is, to keep within the mean, betwixt uncharitable bitterneſs, and pernitious flattery, not yielding to worldly reſpects, nor offending Chriſtian Modeſty, but uttering the ſubſtance of truth in ſo Charitable manner, that not ſo much we, as Truth, and Charity, may ſeem to ſpeak, according to the wholeſom advice of S. Gregory Nazianzen in a Orat. 3. these divine words: We do not affect peace with (a) prejudice of the true doctrine, that ſo we may get a name of being gentle, and mild, and yet we ſeek to conſerve peace, fighting in a lawful manner, and containing our ſelves within our compaſs, and the rule of Spirit. And of theſe things my judgment is, and, for my part, I tranſcribe the ſame law to all that deal with ſouls, and treat of true Doctrine, that neither they exaſperate mens minds by boldneſs, nor make them haughty or inſolent, by ſubmiſſion; but that, in the cauſe of Faith they behave themſelves prudently, and adviſedly, and do not in either of theſe things exceed the mean. With whom agreeth S. Leo, ſaying: It behoveth us, in ſuch cauſes to be (b) moſt careful, that b Epiſt. 8. without noiſe of contentions, but in Charity be conſerved, and Truth maintained.

2. For better method, we will handle theſe Points in order. Firſt, we will ſet down the nature, and eſſence, or, as I may call it, the Quality of Schiſm. In the ſecond place, the greatneſs, and grievouſneſs, or (ſo to term it) Quantity thereof. For the Nature, or Quality, will tell us who may without injury be judged Schiſmatiques: and by the greatneſs, or quantity, ſuch as find themſelves guilty thereof, will remain acquainted with the true ſtate of their ſoul, and whether they may conceive any hope of Salvation or no. And becauſe Schiſm will be found to be a diviſion from the Church, which could not happen, unleſs there were always a viſible Church; we will, Thirdly, prove or rather take it as a Point to be granted by all Chriſtians, that in all Ages, There hath been ſuch a Viſible Congregation of Faithful People. Fourthly, we will demonſtrate, that Luther, Calvin, and the reſt, did ſeparate themſelves from the Communion of that always viſible Church of Chriſt, and therefore were guilty of Schiſm. And fifthly, we will make it evident, that the viſible true Church of Chriſt, out of which Luther and his followers departed, was no other but the Roman Church; and conſequently, that both they, and all others who perſiſt in the ſame diviſions, are Schiſmatiques by reaſon of their ſeparation from the Church of Rome.

3. For

3. For the firſt Point touching the Nature, or Quality of Schiſm: As the natural perfection of man conſiſts in his being the Image of God his Creator, by the powers of his ſoul; ſo his ſupernatural perfection is placed in ſimilitude with God, as his laſt End and Felicity; and, by having the ſaid ſpiritual faculties, his underſtanding and Will is linked to him. His underſtanding is united to God by Faith, his Will, by charity. The former relies upon his infallible Truth: The latter carrieth us to his infinite Goodneſs. Faith hath a deadly oppoſite, Hereſie. Contrary to the Union, or Unity of Charity, is Separation and Diviſion. Charity is twofold. As it reſpects God, his Oppoſite Vice is Hatred againſt God: as it unireth us to our Neighbour, his contrary is Separation or diviſion of affections and will, from our Neighbour. Our Neighbour may be conſidered, either as one private perſon hath a ſingle relation to another, or as all concur to make one Company or Congregation, which we call the chiefeſt Unity is that of the Whole, to which the particular Unity of Parts is ſubordinate. This Unity, or Oneneſs, (if ſo I may call it) is effected by Charity, uniting all the members of the Church in one Myſtical Body; contrary to which, is Schiſm, from the Greek word ſignifying Sciſſure, or Diviſion. Wherefore upon the whole matter, we find that Schiſm, as the Angelical Doctor, S. Thomas deſines it, is; A Voluntary ſeparation (c) from the Unity of that Charity, whereby all the members of the Church are united. From hence he deduceth, that Schiſm is a ſpecial and particular vice, diſtinct from Hereſie, becauſe they are oppoſite to two diſtinct Vertues: Hereſie, to Faith: Schiſm to Charity. To which purpoſe he fitly alledgeth S. Hierom upon theſe words, (Tit. 3.) A man that is an Hereticque after the firſt and ſecond Admonition avoid, ſaying: I conceive that there is this difference betwixt Schiſm and Hereſie, that Hereſie involves ſome perverſe aſſertion: Schiſm for Epiſcopal diſſention doth ſeparate men from the Church. The ſame Doctrine is delivered by S. Auſtin in theſe words: Hereticques (d) and Schiſmatiques call their congregations, (whether: but Hereticques corrupt the Faith by believing of God falſe things: but Schiſmatiques by wicked diviſions break from fraternal Charity, although they believe what we believe. Therefore the Hereticque belongs not to the Church, becauſe ſhe loves God: nor the Schiſmatique, becauſe ſhe loves her Neighbour. And in another place he ſaith: It is wont to be demanded (e) how Schiſmatiques, be diſtinguiſhed from Hereticques: and this difference is found, that not a diverſe Faith, but the divided ſociety of communion doth make Schiſmatiques. It is then evident that Schiſm is different from Hereſie. Nevertheleſs (ſaith S. Thomas) (f) As he who is deprived of Faith muſt needs want Charity: ſo every Hereticque is a Schiſmatique, but not converſively every Schiſmatique is an Hereticque; though becauſe want of Charity diſpoſes and makes way to the deſtruction of Faith (according to thoſe words of the Apoſtle, which [a good conſcience] ſome caſting off, have ſuffered ſhipwrack in their Faith) Schiſm ſpeedily degenerates to Hereſie, as S. Hierom after the rehearſed words teacheth, ſaying: Though Schiſm in the beginning may in ſome ſort be underſtood different from Hereſie; yet there is no Schiſm which doth not feign ſome Hereſie to it ſelf, that ſo it may ſeem to have departed from the Church upon good reaſon. Nevertheleſs when Schiſm proceeds originally from Hereſie, Hereſie as being in that caſe the predominant quality in theſe two peccant humours, giveth the denomination of an Hereticque; as on the other ſide we are wont, eſpecially in the beginning, or for a while, to call Schiſmatiques, thoſe men who firſt began with only Schiſm, though in proceſs of time they fell into ſome Hereſie, and by that means are indeed both Schiſmatiques and Hereticques.

4. The reaſon why both Hereſie and Schiſm are repugnant to the being of a good Catholique, is: Becauſe the Catholique, or Univerſal Church ſignifies One Congregation, or Company of faithful people, and therefore implies not only Faith, to make them Faithful believers, but alſo Communion, or common Union, to make them One in Charity, which excludes Separation, and Diviſion: and therefore in the Apoſtles Creed, Communion of Saints, is immediately joyned to the Catholique Church.

5. From this definition of Schiſm may be inferred, that the guilt thereof is contracted, not only by diviſion from the Univerſal Church, but alſo, by a Separation from a particular Church or Dioceſs which agrees with the univerſal. In this manner Meletius was a Schiſmatique, but not an Hereticque, becauſe as we read in S. Epiphanius (h) he was of the right Faith, for his Faith was not altered at any time from the holy Catholique Church, &c. He made a Sect, but departed not from Faith. Yet becauſe he made to himſelf a particular Congregation againſt S. Peter Arch-Biſhop of Alexandria his lawful Superiour, and by that means brought in a diviſion in that particular Church, he was a Schiſmatique. And it is well worth the noting, that the Meletians building new Churches, put this Title upon them, The Church of Martyrs: and upon the Ancient Churches of thoſe who ſucceeded Peter, was inſcribed, The Catholique Church. For ſo it is. A new Sect muſt have a new name, which though it be never ſo gay and ſpecious, as the Church of Martyrs: the Reformed Church, &c. yet the Novelty ſheweth that it is not the Catholique, not a true Church. And, that Schiſm may be committed by diviſion from a particular Church, we read in Optatus Milevitanus (i) theſe remarkable words, (which do well declare who be Schiſmatiques) brought by him to prove that not Cæcilianus but Parmenianus was a Schiſmatique: For Cæcilianus went not out from Majorinus thy Grand-Father (he means his next predeceſſour, but one, in the Biſhoprick, but Majorinus from Cæcilianus: neither did Cæcilianus depart from the Chair of Peter, or of Cyprian (who was but a particular Biſhop,) but Majorinus, in whoſe Chair thou ſitteſt, which had no beginning before Majorinus himſelf. Seeing it is manifeſtly known that theſe things were ſo done, it evidently appeareth, that you are heirs both of traditors (that is, of thoſe who delivered up the holy Bible to be burned) and of Schiſmatiques. And it ſeemeth that this kind of Schiſm muſt principally be admitted by Proteſtants, who acknowledge no one viſible Head of the whole Church, but hold that every particular Dioceſs, Church, or Country is governed by it ſelf independently of any one Perſon, or General Council, to which all Chriſtians have obligation to ſubmit their judgments, and wills.

6. As for the grievouſneſs or quantity of Schiſm (which was the ſecond Point propoſed) S. Thomas teacheth, that amongſt ſins againſt our Neighbour, Schiſm (1) is the moſt grievous; becauſe it is againſt the ſpiritual good of the multitude, or Community. And therefore as in a Kingdom or Commonwealth, there is as great difference between the crime of rebellion or ſedition, and debates among private men, as there is inequality betwixt one man, and a whole kingdom; ſo in the Church, Schiſm is as much more grievous than Sedition in a Kingdom, as the ſpiritual good of ſouls ſurpaſſeth the civil and politica weal. And S. Thomas adds further, and they loſe the ſpiritual Power of Juriſdiction; and if they go about to adminiſter from him, or to excommunicate, their actions are invalid; which he proves out of the Canon Novitianus, Causa 7. quæst. 1. which saith: He that keepeth neither the unity of spirit, nor the peace of agreement, and separates himself from the bond of the Church, and the College of Priests, can neither have the Power, nor dignity of a Bishop. The Power also of Order (for example, to consecrate the Eucharist, to ordain Priests, &c.) they cannot lawfully exercise.

7. In the judgment of the holy Fathers, Schism is a most grievous offence. S. Chrysostom (m) compares these Schismatical dividers of Christ's mystical body, to those who sacrilegiously pierced his natural body, saying: Nothing doth so much incense God, as that the Church should be divided. Although we should do innumerable good works, if we divide the full Ecclesiastical Congregation, we shall be punished no less than they who tore his (natural) body. For that was done to the ruin of the whole world, although this was done with intention: but this hath no profit at all, but there ariseth from it most great harm. These things are spoken, not only to those who bear office, but also to those who are governed by them. Behold how neither a moral good life (which conceit deceiveth many) nor authority of Magistrates, nor any necessity of obeying Superiors can excuse Schism from being a most heinous offence. Optatus Milevitanus (o) calls Schism, Ingens flagitium, a huge crime. And speaking to the Donatists, saith, That Schism is evil in the highest degree, even you are not able to deny. No less pathetical is S. Augustine upon this subject. He reckons Schismatiques amongst Pagans, Heretiques, and Jews, saying: Religion is to be sought, neither in the confusion of Pagans, nor (p) in the filth of Heretiques, nor in the languishing of Schismatiques, nor in the Age of the Jews; but amongst those alone who are called Christian Catholiques, or Orthodox, that is, lovers of unity in the whole body, and followers of truth. Nay, he esteems them worse than Infidels and Idolaters, saying: Those whom the Donatists (q) heal from the wound of Infidelity and Idolatry, they hurt more grievously with the wound of Schism. Let here those men who are pleased unruly to call us Idolaters, reflect upon themselves, and consider, that this holy Father judgeth Schismatiques (as they are) to be worse than Idolaters, which they absurdly call us. And this he proveth by the example of Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, and other rebellious Schismatiques of the old Testament, who were conveyed alive down into Hell: and punished more openly than Idolaters. No doubt (saith this holy Father) but (r) that was committed most wickedly, which was punished most severely. In another place he yoaketh Schism with Heresie, saying upon the Eighth Beatitude: Many (s) Heretiques under the name of Christians, deceiving mens souls, do suffer many such things; but therefore they are excluded from this reward, because it is not only said, Happy are they who suffer persecution, but there is added, for Justice. But where there is not found Faith, there cannot be justice. Neither can Schismatiques promise to themselves any part of this reward, because likewise where there is no Charity, there cannot be Justice. And in another place, yet more effectually he saith: Being cut off (t) the Church, and divided from the heap of unity, and the bond of Charity, thou shalt be punished with eternal death, though thou shalt be burned alive for the name of Christ. And in another place, he hath these words: If he hear not the Church, let him be to (u) thee, as an Heathen or Publican; which is more grievous than if he were smitten with the sword, consumed with flames, or cast to wild beasts. And elsewhere. Out of the Catholique Church (saith he) are (w) may have Faith, Sacraments, Orders, and in fine, all things except Salvation. With S. Augustine, his Countryman and second self in sympathy of spirit, S. Fulgentius agreeth, saying: Believe thus (x) stedfastly without doubting, that every Heretique or Schismatique, baptized in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, if before he end of his life he be not reconciled to the Catholique Church, what Alms soever he give, yea though he should shed his blood for the name of Christ, he cannot obtain Salvation. Mark again, how no moral honesty of life, no good deeds, no Martyrdom, can without repentance avail any Schismatique for Salvation. Let us also add that D. Potter saith: Schism is no less (y) damnable than Heresie.

8. But O you Holy, Learned, Zealous, Fathers, and Doctors of God's Church; out of these premisses, of the grievousness of Schism, and of the certain damnation which it bringeth (if unrepented) what conclusion draw you for the instruction of Christians? S. Augustine maketh this wholsom intercence. There is (z) no just necessity to divide unity. S. Irenæus concludeth: They cannot (a) make any so important information, as the evil of the Schism is pernitious. S. Denis of Alexandria saith: Certainly, (b) all things should rather be endured, than to consent to the division of the Church of God: those Martyrs being no less glorious, that expose themselves to hinder the dismembring of the Church, than those that suffer rather than they will offer sacrifice to Idols. Would to God all those who divided themselves from that visible Church of Christ, which was upon earth when Luther appeared, would rightly consider of these things! And thus much of the second Point.

9. We have just and necessary occasion, eternally to bless Almighty God, who hath vouchsafed to make us members of the Catholique Roman Church, from which while men fall, they precipitate themselves into so vast absurdities, or rather sacrilegious blasphemies, as is implyed in the Doctrin of the total deficiency of the visible Church, which yet is maintained by divers chief Protestants, as may at large be seen in Iewel, and others; out of whom I will here name Iewel, saying: The truth was unknown (c) at that time, and unheard of, when Martin Luther, and Ulderick Zwinglius first came unto the knowledge and preaching of the Gospel. Perkins saith: We say, that (d) before the dayes of Luther for the space of many hundred years, an universal Apostasy overspread the whole face of the earth, and that our (Protestant) Church was not then visible to the world. Napier upon the Revelations teacheth, that from the year of (e) Christ three hundred and sixteen, the Antichristian and Papistical reign hath begun, reigning universally, and without any debatable contradiction, one thousand two hundred sixty years (that is, till Luther's time:) And that, from the year of (f) Christ three hundred and sixteen, God hath withdrawn his visible Church from open Assemblies, to the hearts of particular godly men, &c. during the space of one thousand two hundred threescore years. And that, the (g) Pope and Clergy have possessed the outward visible Church of Christians even one thousand two hundred threescore years. And that, the (h) true Church abode latent, and invisible. And Brocard (i) upon the Revelations, professeth to joyn in opinion with Napper. Fulk affirmeth, that in the (k) time of Boniface the third, which was the year six hundred and seven, the Church was invisible, and fled into the wilderness, there to remain a long season. Luther saith: Primo solus eram: so the first (l) I was alone. Jacob Hallbonrius one of the Disputants for the Protestant Party, in the conference at Ratisbon, affirmeth (m) that the true Church was interrupted by Apostasie from the true Faith. Calvin saith: It is absurd in the way (n) beginning to break one from another, after we have been forced to make a separation from the whole world. It were over long to alledge the words of Ioannes

Ioannes Regius, Daniel Chamierus, Beza, Ochinus, Castalio, and others to the same purpose. The reason which cast them upon this wicked Doctrin, was a desperate voluntary necessity: because they being resolved not to acknowledge the Roman Church to be Christ's true Church, and yet being convinced by all manner of evidence, that for divers Ages before Luther there was no other Congregation of Christians, which could be the Church of Christ; there was no remedy but to affirm, that upon earth Christ had no visible Church: which they would never have avouched, if they had known how to avoid the aforesaid inconvenience (as they apprehended it) of submitting themselves to the Roman Church.

10. Against these exterminating spirits, D. Potter, and other more moderate Protestants, profess, that Christ always had, and always will have, upon earth a Visible Church: otherwise (saith he) our Lord's (o) promise of her stable (p) edification should be of no value. And in an other place, having affirmed that Protestants have not left the Church of Rome, but her corruptions, and acknowledging her still to be a member of Christ's body, he seeketh to clear himself and others from Schism, because (saith he) the property (q) of Schism is (witness the Donatists and Luciferians) to cut off from the Body of Christ, and the hope of Salvation; the Church from which it separates. And, if any Zelots amongst us have proceeded to heavier censures, their zeal may be excused, but their charity and wisdom cannot be justified. And elsewhere he acknowledgeth, that the Roman Church hath those main and (r) essential truths, which give her the name and essence of a Church.

11. It being therefore granted by D. Potter, and the chiefest and best learned English Protestants, that Christ's Visible Church cannot perish, it will be needless for me in this occasion to prove it. S. Augustine doubted not to say: The Prophets (s) spoke more obscurely of Christ, than of the Church: because, as I think, they did foresee in spirit, that men were to make parties against the Church, and that they were not to have so great strife concerning Christ: therefore that was more plainly foretold, and more openly prophesied, about which greater contentions were to rise, that it might turn to the condemnation of them who have seen it, and yet gone forth. And in an other place he saith: How do we confide (t) to have received manifestly Christ himself from holy Scriptures, if we have not also manifestly received the Church from them? And indeed to what Congregation shall a man have recourse for the affairs of his soul, if upon earth there be no Visible Church of Christ? Beside, to Imagine a company of men believing one thing in their heart, and with their mouth professing the contrary, (as they must be supposed to do; for, if they had professed what they believed, they would have become Visible) is to dream of a damned crew of dissembling Sycophants, but not to conceive a right notion of the Church of Christ our Lord. And therefore S. Augustine saith: we cannot be saved, unless labouring also for the (u) Salvation of others, we profess with our mouths, the same Faith which we bear in our hearts. And if any man hold it lawful to dissemble, and deny matters of Faith, we cannot be assured, but that they actually dissemble, and hide Anabaptism, Arianism, yea Turcism, and even Atheism, or any other false belief, under the outward profession of Calvinism. Do not Protestants teach that preaching of the Word, and administration of Sacraments (which cannot but make a Church Visible) are inseparable notes of the true Church? And therefore they must either grant a Visible Church, or none at all. No wonder then, if S. Austin account this Heresie so gross, that he saith against those who in his time defended the like error: But this Church which (w) hath been of all Nations is no more, she hath perished; so say they that are not in her. O impudent speech! And afterward; This voice so abominable, so detestable, so full of presumption and falshood, which is sustained with no truth, inlightned with no wisdom, seasoned with no salt, vain, vasb, heady, pernitious, the holy Ghost foresaw, &c. And peradventure some (x) one may say, there are other sheep I know not where, with which I am not acquainted, yet God hath care of them. But he is too absurd in humane sense, that can imagine such things. And these men do not consider, that while they deny the perpetuity of a Visible Church, they destroy their own present Church, according to the argument, which S. Augustine urged against the Donatists in these words (y) If the Church were lost in Cyprians (we may say in Gregory's) time, from whence did Donatus (Luther) appear? From what earth did he spring? From what sea is he come? From what heavens did he drop? And in an other place: How can they vaunt (z) to have any Church, if he have ceased ever since those times? And all Divines by defining Schism to be a division from the true Church, suppose that there must be a known Church, from which it is possible for men to depart. But enough of this in these few words.

12. Let us now come to the fourth, and chiefest Point, which was, to examin whether Luther, Calvin, and the rest, did not depart from the external Communion of Christ's Visible Church, and by that separation became guilty of Schism. And that they are properly Schismatiques clearly followeth from the grounds which we have laid, concerning the nature of Schism, which consists in leaving the external Communion of the Visible Church of Christ our Lord: and it is clear by evidence of fact, that Luther and his followers forsook the Communion of that Ancient Church.

4. Point. Luther and all that follow him are Schismatiques.

For they did not so much as pretend to joyn with any Congregation, which had a being before their time; for they would needs conceive that no Visible Company was free from errors in Doctrin, and corruption in practice: And therefore they opposed the Doctrin; they withdrew their obedience from the Prelates: they left participation in Sacraments; they changed the Liturgy of publique Service of whatsoever Church then extant. And these things they pretend to do out of a perswasion, that they were bound (forsooth) in conscience so to do, unless they would participate with errors, corruptions, and superstitions. We dare not (saith D. Potter) communicate (a) with Rome, either in her publique Liturgy, which is manifestly polluted with gross superstition, &c. or in those corrupt and ungrounded opinions, which she hath added to the Faith of Catholiques. But now let D. Potter tell me with what visible Church extant before Luther, he would have adventured to communicate in her publique Liturgy and Doctrin, since he durst not communicate with Rome? He will not be able to assign any, even with any little colour of common sense. If then they departed from all visible Communities professing Christ, it followeth that they also left the Communion of the true visible Church, which forever it was, whether that of Rome, or any other; of which Point I do not for the present dispute. Yea this the Lutherans do not only acknowledg; but prove, and brag of. If (saith a learned Lutheran) there had been right (b) Believers which went before Luther in his office, there had then been no need of a Lutheran Reformation. Another affirmeth it to be ridiculous, to think that in the time (c) before Luther, any had the purity of Doctrin; and that Luther should receive it from them, and not they from Luther.

We have heard Calvin laying of Proteſtants in general; we were, even, forced (e) to make a ſeparation from the whole world. And, Luther of himſelf in particular: In the beginning (f) I was alone. Ergo (ſay I, by your good leave) you were at leaſt a Schiſmatique, divided from the Ancient Church, and a member of no new Church. For no ſole man can conſtitute a Church; and though he could, yet ſuch a Church could not be that glorious Company, of whoſe number, greatneſs, and amplitude ſo much hath been ſpoken, both in the old Teſtament, and in the New.

(f) In Præfat. operum ſuorum.

13. D. Potter endeavours to avoid this evident Argument by divers evaſions; but by the conſutation thereof I will (with God's holy aſſiſtance) take occaſion, even out of his own Anſwers and grounds, to bring unanſwerable reaſons to convince them of Schiſm.

14. His chief Anſwer is: That they have not left the Church, but her corruptions.

15. I reply. This anſwer may be given either by thoſe furious people, who teach that thoſe abuſes, and corruptions in the Church were ſo enormous, that they could not ſtand with the nature, or being of a true Church of Chriſt: Or elſe by thoſe other more calm Proteſtants, who affirm, that thoſe errors did not deſtroy the being, but only deform the beauty of the Church. Againſt both theſe ſorts of men, I may fitly uſe that unanſwerable Dilemma, which S. Auguſtine brings againſt the Donatiſts in theſe concluding words: Tell me whether the (g) Church at that time when you ſay ſhe entertained (g) Lib. 2. cont. Epiſt. Gaudent. cap. 7. thoſe who were guilty of all Crimes, by the contagion of thoſe ſinful perſons, periſhed or periſhed not? Anſwer; whether the Church periſhed, or periſhed not? Make choice of what you think. If then ſhe periſhed, what Church brought forth Donatus? (we may ſay Luther.) But if ſhe could not periſh, becauſe ſo many were incorporated into her, without Baptiſm, (that is without a ſecond baptiſm, or rebaptization, and I may ſay, without Luther's Reformation) anſwer me I pray you, What madneſs did move the Sect of Donatus to ſeparate themſelves from her upon pretence to avoid the communion of bad men? I beſeech the Reader to ponder every one of S. Auguſtin's words; and to conſider, whether any thing could have been ſpoken more directly againſt Luther, and his followers of what ſort ſoever.

16. And now to anſwer more in particular; I ſay to thoſe who teach that the viſible Church of Chriſt periſhed for many Ages, that I can eaſily afford them the courteſie, to free them from meer Schiſm; but all men touched with any ſpark of zeal to vindicate the wiſdom and goodneſs of our Saviour from blaſphemous injury, cannot chuſe but believe and proclaim them to be ſuperlative Arch-heretiques. Nevertheleſs, if they will needs have the honour of Singularity, and deſire to be both formal Heretiques, and properly Schiſmatiques, I will tell them, that while they dream of an inviſible Church of men, which agreed with them in Faith, they will upon due reflection find themſelves to be Schiſmatiques, for thoſe corporeal Angels, or inviſible men, becauſe they held external Communion with the viſible Church of thoſe times, the outward Communion of which viſible Church thoſe modern hot-ſpurs forſaking, were thereby divided from the outward Communion of their hidden Brethren, and ſo are Septuatiſts from the external Communion of them, with whom they agree in Faith; which is Schiſm in the moſt formal, and proper ſignification thereof. Moreover, according to D. Potter, thoſe boiſterous Creatures are properly Schiſmatiques. For, the reaſon why he thinks himſelf, and ſuch as he is, to be cleared from Schiſm, notwithſtanding their diviſion from the Roman Church, is, becauſe (according to his Divinity) the property of (h) Schiſm; is, (witneſs, the (h) Pag. 76. Donatiſts and Luciferians) to cut off from the Body of Chriſt, and the hope of Salvation, the Church from which it ſeparates: But thoſe Proteſtants of whom we now ſpake, cut off from the body of Chriſt, and the hope of Salvation, the Church from which they ſeparated themſelves; and they do it directly as the Donatiſts (in whom you exemplifie) did, by affirming that the true Church had Periſhed: and therefore they cannot be cleared from Schiſm, if you may be their Judge. Conſider, I pray you, how many prime Proteſtants both domeſtical and foreign you have at one blow ſtruck off from hope of Salvation, and condemned to the loweſt pit for the grievous ſin of Schiſm. And withal it imports you to conſider, that you alſo involve your ſelf, and other moderate Proteſtants in the ſelf-ſame crime, and puniſhment, while you communicate with thoſe, who according to your own principles, are properly, and formally Schiſmatiques. For, if you held your ſelf obliged under pain of damnation to forſake the Communion of the Roman Church, by reaſon of their Errors and Corruptions, which yet you confeſs were not Fundamental; ſhall it not be much more damnable for you, to live in Communion and Confraternity, with thoſe who defend an error of the failing of the Church; which in the Donatiſts you confeſs (i) to have been properly hæretical againſt the Article of our Creed, I believe the Church? (i) Pag. 126. And I deſire the Reader, here to apply an authority of S. Cyprian (Epiſt. 76.) which he ſhall find alledged in the next number. And this may ſuffice for confutation of the aforeſaid Anſwer, as it might have relation to the rigid Calviniſts.

17. For Confutation of thoſe Proteſtants, who hold that the Church of Chriſt had always a being, and cannot err in Points Fundamental, and yet teach that ſhe may err in matters of leſs moment, wherein, if they forſake her, they would be accounted not to leave the Church, but only her corruptions; I muſt ſay that they change the ſtate of our preſent Queſtion, not diſtinguiſhing between Internal Faith, and external Communion, not between Schiſm and Hereſie. This I demonſtrate out of D. Potter himſelf, who in expreſs words teacheth, that the promiſes which our Lord hath made (k) unto his (k) Pag. 151. Church for his aſſiſtance, are intended not to any particular Perſons or Churches, but only to the Church Catholique: and they are to be extended not to every parcel, or particularity of truth, but only to Points of Faith, or Fundamentals. And afterwards ſpeaking of the Univerſal Church, he ſaith: It is comfort (l) enough for (l) Pag. 155. the Church, that the Lord in mercy will ſecure her from all capital dangers, and conſerve her on earth againſt all enemies; but ſhe may not hope to triumph over all ſin and error, till ſhe be in Heaven. Out of which words I obſerve, that, according to D. Potter, the ſelf-ſame Church, which is the Univerſal Church, remaining the Univerſal true Church of Chriſt, may fall into errors and corruptions: from whence it clearly followeth, that it is impoſſible to leave the external Communion of the Church ſo corrupted, and retain external communion with the Catholique Church; ſince the Church Catholique, and the Church ſo corrupted is the ſelf-ſame one Church, or company of men. And the contrary imagination talks in a dream, dream, as if the errors and infections of the Catholique Church were not inherent in her, but were ſeparate from her, like to Accidents without any Subject, or rather indeed, as if they were not Accidents, but Hypoſtates, or Perſons, ſubſiſting by themſelves; for men cannot be ſaid to live, in, or out of, the Communion of any dead creature, but with perſons, endued with life and reaſon; and much leſs can men be ſaid to live in the Communion of Accidents, as errors and corruptions are: and therefore it is an abſurd thing to affirm, that Proteſtants divided themſelves from the corruptions of the Church, but not from the Church her ſelf, ſeeing the corruptions of the Church were inherent in the Church. All this is made more clear, if we conſider, that when Luther appeared, there were not two diſtinct viſible true Catholique Churches, holding contrary Doctrins, and divided in external Communion; one of the which two Churches did triumph over all errors, and corruption in Doctrine and practice; but the other was ſtained with both. For to feign this diverſity of two Churches, cannot ſtand with record of hiſtories, which are ſilent of any ſuch matter. It is againſt D. Potter's own grounds, that the Church may err in Points not Fundamental, which were not true, if you will imagine a certain viſible Catholique Church free from error even in Points not Fundamental. It contradicteth the words in which he ſaid, the Church may not hope to triumph over all errors, till ſhe be in Heaven. It evacuateth the brag of Proteſtants, that Luther reformed the whole church: and laſtly, it maketh Luther a Schiſmatique, for leaving the Communion of all viſible Churches, ſeeing (upon this ſuppoſition) there was a viſible Church of Chriſt free from all corruption, which therefore could not be forſaken without juſt imputation of Schiſm. We muſt therefore truly affirm, that ſince there was but one viſible Church of Chriſt, which was truly Catholique, and yet was (according to Proteſtants) ſtained with corruption; when Luther left the external Communion of that corrupted Church, he could not remain in the Communion of the Catholique Church, no more than it is poſſible to keep company with D. Chriſtopher Potter, and not to keep company with the Provoſt of Queen Colledge in Oxford, if D. Potter and the Provoſt be one and the ſelf-ſame man: For ſo one ſhould be, and not be, with him at the ſame time. This very Argument, drawn from the Unity of God's Church, S. Cyprian urgeth to convince, that Novatianus was cut off from the Church, in theſe words: The Church is (m) One, which being One (m) Epiſt. 76. ad Mag. cannot be both within and without. If ſhe be with Novatianus, ſhe was not with Cornelius; But if ſhe were with Cornelius, who ſucceeded Fabianus, by Divine ordination. Novatianus is not in the Church. I purpoſely here ſpeak only of external Communion with the Catholique Church. For in this Point there is great difference between internal acts of our underſtanding, and will; and of external deeds. Our Underſtanding and Will, are faculties (as Philoſophers ſpeak) abſtractive, and able to diſtinguiſh, and, as it were, to part things, though in themſelves they be really conjoyned. But real external deeds do take things in groſs as they find them, not ſeparating things which in reality are joyned together. Thus, one man may conſider and love a ſinner as he is a man, friend, benefactor, or the like; and at the ſame time not conſider him and love him as he is a ſinner; becauſe theſe are acts of our Underſtanding and Will, which may reſpect their objects under ſome one formality, or conſideration, without reference to other things contained in the ſelf ſame objects. But if one ſhould ſtrike, or kill a ſinful man, he will not be excuſed by alledging that he killed him, not as a man, but as a ſinner; becauſe the ſelf ſame perſon being a man, and the ſinner, the external act of murder fell joyntly upon the man, and the ſinner. And for the ſame reaſon one cannot avoid the company of a ſinner, and at the ſame time be really preſent with that man who is a ſinner. And this is our caſe: and in this our Adverſaries are egregiouſly, and many of them affectedly miſtaken. For one may in ſome Points believe as the Church believeth, and diſagree from her in other. One may love the truth which ſhe holds, and deteſt her (pretended) corruptions. But it is impoſſible that a man ſhould really ſeparate himſelf from her external Communion, as ſhe is corrupted, and be really within the ſame external Communion as ſhe is found; becauſe ſhe is the ſelf-ſame Church which is ſuppoſed to be found in ſome things, and to err in others. Now, our queſtion for the preſent doth concern only this Point of External Communion: becauſe Schiſm, as it is diſtinguiſhed from Hereſie, is committed when one divides himſelf from the External Communion of that Church with which he agrees in Faith; Whereas Hereſie doth neceſſarily imply a difference in matter of Faith, and belief: and therefore to ſay, that they left not the viſible Church, but her errors, can only excuſe them from Hereſie (which ſhall be tryed in the next Chapter) but not from Schiſm, as long as they are really divided from the External Communion of the ſelf-ſame viſible Church; which, notwithſtanding thoſe errors wherein they do in judgment diſſent from her, doth ſtill remain the true Catholique Church of Chriſt; and therefore while they forſake the corrupted Church, they forſake the Catholique Church. Thus then it remaineth clear, that their chiefeſt Anſwer changeth the very ſtate of the queſtion; confoundeth internal acts of the Underſtanding with the external Deeds; both not diſtinguiſhed between Schiſm and Hereſie; and leaves this demonſtrated againſt them, That they divided themſelves from the Communion of the viſible Catholique Church, becauſe they conceived that ſhe needed Reformation. But whether this pretence of Reformation will acquit them of Schiſm, I refer to the unpartial Judges hereafore (n) alledged; as to S. Irenæus, who plainly ſaith: They cannot make any ſo important REFORMATION, as the Evil of the Schiſm is pernitious. To S. Denis of Alexandria, (n) Numb. 8. (ſaying: Certainly all things ſhould be endured rather than to conſent to the diviſion of the Church of God: thoſe Martyrs bring no leſs glorious that expoſe themſelves to hinder the diſmembring of the Church, than thoſe that ſuffer rather than they will offer ſacrifice to Idols. To S. Auguſtine, who tells us: That not to hear the Church, is a more evituous thing than if he were ſtricken with the ſword, confumed with flames, expoſed to wild Beaſts. And to conclude all in few words, he giveth this general preſcription: There is no juſt neceſſity to divide unity; And D. Potter may remember his own words: There neither was (s) nor can be any juſt cauſe to depart (s) Pag. 75. from the Church of Chriſt; no more than from Chriſt himſelf. But I have ſhewed that Luther, and the reſt departed from the Church of Chriſt (if Chriſt had any Church upon earth:) Therefore there could be no juſt cauſe (of Reformation, or what elſe ſoever) to do as they did; and therefore they muſt be contented to be held for Schiſmatiques.

18. Moreover, I demand whether thoſe corruptions which moved them to forſake the Communion of the Viſible Church, were in manners, or doctrin? Corruption in manners yields no ſufficient cauſe to leave the Church, otherwiſe men muſt go not only out of the Church, but out of the world, as the Apoſtle (t) ſaith. Our bleſſed Saviour foretold that there would be in the Church tares with choice Corn, (t) 1 Cor. 5. 10. and ſinners with juſt men. If then Proteſtants wax zealous, with the Servants, to pluck up the weeds, let them first hearken to the wisdom of the Master: Let both grow up. And they ought to imitate them, who as S. Augustine faith, Tolerate for the good of (u) unity, that which they detest for the good of equity. And to whom the more frequent, and foul fuch fcandals are, by fo much the more is the merit of their Perfeverance in the Communion of the Church, and the Martyrdom of their patience, as the fame Saint calls it. If they were offended with the life of fome Eccleſiaſtical perſons, muſt they therefore deny obedience to their Paſtors, and finally break with Gods Church? The Paſtor of Paſtors teacheth us another leſſon. Upon the chair of Moſes (w) have ſitten the Scribes and Phariſees. All things therefore whatſoever they ſhall ſay to you, obſerve ye, and do ye: but according to their works, do you not. Muſt people except againſt laws, and revolt from Magiſtrates, becauſe ſome are negligent, or corrupt in the execution of the ſame aws, and performance of their Office? If they intended reformation of manners, they uſed a ſtrange means for the atchieving of ſuch an end, by denying the neceſſity of Confeſſion, laughing at auſterity of Penance, condemning the Vows of Chaſtity, Poverty, Obedience, breaking Faſts, &c. And no leſs unfit were the Men, than the Means. I love not recrimination. But it is well known to how great crimes Luther, Calvin, Zuinglius, Beza, and others of the prime Reformers were notoriouſly obnoxious; as might be eaſily demonſtrated by the only tranſcribing of what others have delivered upon that Subject: whereby it would appear, that they were very far from being any ſuch Apoſtolical men as God is wont to uſe in ſo great a work. And whereas they were wont, eſpecially in the beginning of their revolt, maliciouſly to exaggerate the faults of ſome Clergy men, Erafmus ſaid well, (Ep. ad Fratres inferioris Germaniæ.) Let the vice, luſt, ambition, avarice of Prieſts, and whatſoever other crime be gathered together, Hereſie alone doth exceed all this filthy lake of vices. Beſides, nothing at all was omitted by the ſacred Council of Trent, which might tend to reformation of manners. And finally, the vices of others are not hurtful to any but ſuch as imitate, and conſent to them; according to the ſaying of S. Auguſtine: we conſent (y) innocency, not by knowing the ill deeds of men, but by not yielding conſent to ſuch as we know, and by not judging raſhly of ſuch faults as we know not. If you anſwer, that, not corruption in manners, but the approbation of them, doth yield ſufficient cauſe to leave the Church; I reply with S. Auguſtine, that the Church doth (as the pretended Reformers ought to have done) tolerate or bear with ſcandals and corruptions, but neither doth, nor can approve them. The church (ſaith he) being placed (z) betwixt much chaff and cockle, doth bear with many things; but doth not approve, nor diſſemble, nor act thoſe things which are againſt Faith, and good life. But becauſe to approve corruption in manners as lawful, were an error againſt Faith, it belongs to corruption in Doctrin, which was the ſecond part of my demand.

19 Now then, that corruptions in Doctrin (I ſtill ſpeak upon the untrue ſuppoſition of our Adverſaries) could not afford any ſufficient cauſe, or colourable neceſſity to depart from that Viſible Church, which was extant when Luther roſe, I demonſtrate out of D. Potter's own confeſſion; that the Catholique Church neither hath, nor can err, in Points Fundamental, as was ſhewed out of his own expreſs words, which he alſo of fet purpoſe delivereth in divers other places, and all they are obliged to maintain the ſame, who teach that Chriſt had always a viſible Church upon earth: becauſe any one Fundamental error overthrows the being of a true Church. Now (as Schoolmen ſpeak) it is implicatio in terminis (a contradiction ſo plain, that one word deſtroyeth the other, as if one ſhould ſay, A living dead man) to affirm, that the Church doth not err in Points neceſſary to Salvation, or damnably; and yet that it is damnable to remain in her Communion, becauſe ſhe teacheth errors which are confeſſed not to be damnable. For if the error be not damnable, nor againſt any Fundamental Article of Faith, the belief thereof cannot be damnable. But D. Potter teacheth, that the Catholique Church cannot, and that the Roman Church hath not erred againſt any Fundamental Article of Faith: Therefore it cannot be damnable to remain in her Communion; and ſo the pretended corruptions in her Doctrins could not induce any obligation to depart from her Communion; nor could excuſe them from Schiſm, who, upon pretence of neceſſity in Point of Conſcience, forſook her. And D. Potter will never be able to ſalve a manifeſt contradiction in theſe his words: To depart from the Church of Rome in ſome Doctrins and practices, there might be neceſſary cauſe, though ſhe wanted nothing neceſſary to Salvation. For if, notwithſtanding theſe Doctrines and Practices, ſhe wanted nothing neceſſary to Salvation; how could it be neceſſary to Salvation to forſake her? And therefore we muſt ſtill conclude, that to forſake her was properly an act of Schiſm.

20. From the ſelf ſame ground of the Infallibility of the Church in all Fundamental Points, I argue after this manner: The Viſible Church cannot be forſaken without damnation, upon pretence that it is damnable to remain in her Communion, by reaſon of corruption in Doctrin; as long as, for the truth of her Faith and belief, ſhe performeth the duty, which ſhe oweth to God, and her Neighbour: As long as ſhe performeth what our Saviour exacts at her hands: as long as ſhe doth, as much as lies in her power to do. But (even according to D. Potters Aſſertions) the Church performeth all theſe things, as long ſhe erreth not in Points fundamental, although ſhe were ſuppoſed to err in other Points not Fundamental: Therefore, the Communion of the viſible Church cannot be forſaken without damnation, upon pretence that it is damnable to remain in her Communion, by reaſon of corruption in Doctrin. The Major, or firſt Propoſition, of it ſelf is evident. The Minor, or ſecond Propoſition, doth neceſſarily follow out of D. Potter's own Doctrin above-rehearſed, that the promiſes of our Lord made to his church for his aſſiſtance, are to be (b) extended only to Points of Faith, or Fundamental; (Let me note here by the way that by his (or ſhe ſeems to exclude from Faith all Points which are not (c) Fundamental, and ſo we may deny innumerable Texts of Scripture:) That, it is (c) comfort enough for the Church, that the Lord in mercy will ſecure her from all capital dangers, &c. but ſhe may not hope to triumph over all ſin and error, till ſhe be in Heavin. For it is evident, that the Church (for as much as concerns the truth of her Doctrins and belief) owes no more duty to God and her Neighbour; neither doth our Saviour exact more at her hands, nor is it in her power to do, more than God doth aſſiſt her to do; which aſſiſtance is promiſed only for Points Fundamental; and conſequently as long as ſhe teacheth no Fundamental error, her Communion cannot without damnation be forſaken. And we may fitly apply againſt D. Potter a Concionatory declamation which he makes againſt us, where he ſaith: (d) May the Church of after-Ages make the narrow way to Heaven, narrower than our Saviour left it? &c. ſince he himſelf obligeth men under pain of damnation to forſake the Church, by reaſon of errors; againſt which our Saviour thought it needleſs to promiſe his aſſiſtance, and for which he neither denieth his grace in this life, or glory in the next. Will D. Potter oblige the Church

Church to do more than ſhe may even hope for, or to perform on earth that which is proper to heaven alone?

21. And as from your own Doctrin concerning the infallibility of the Church in Fundamental Points, we have proved that it was a grievous ſin to forſake her: ſo do we take a ſtrong argument from the fallibility of any who dare pretend to reform the Church, which any man in his wits will believe to be induced with at leaſt as much infallibility as private men can challenge; and D. Potter expreſly affirmeth, that Chriſts promiſes of his aſſiſtance are not intended (e) to any particular perſons or Churches: and therefore to leave the Church by reaſon of errors, was at beſt hand but to flit from one erring company to another, without any new hope of triumphing over errors, and, without neceſſity, or utility, to forſake that communion of which S. Auguſtine faith, There is (f) no juſt neceſſity to divide Unity. Which will appear to be much more evident, if we conſider, that though the Church had maintained ſome falſe Doctrins, yet to leave her Communion to remedy the old, were but to add a new increaſe of errors, ariſing from the innumerable diſagreements of Sectaries, which muſt needs bring with it a mighty maſs of falſhoods, becauſe the truth is but one, and indiviſible. And this reaſon is yet ſtronger; if we ſtill remember, that even according to D. Potter, the viſible Church hath a bleſſing not to err in Points Fundamental, in which any private Reformer may fall: and therefore they could not pretend any neceſſity to forſake that church, out of whoſe Communion they were expoſed to danger of falling into many more, and even into damnable errors. Remember I pray you, what your ſelf affirms (pag. 69.) where ſpeaking of our Church and yours, you ſay: All the difference is from the weeds which remain there, and here are taken away; Yet neither here perfectly, nor every where alike. Behold a fair confeſſion of corruption, ſtill remaining in your Church, which you can only excuſe by ſaying they are not Fundamental, as likewiſe thoſe in the Roman Church are confeſſed to be not Fundamental. What man of judgment will be a Proteſtant ſince that Church is confeſſedly a corrupt one?

22. I ſtill proceed to impugn you expreſly upon your own grounds. You ſay, That it is comfort enough for the Church, that the Lord in mercy will ſecure her from all capital dangers: but ſhe may not hope to triumph over all ſin, and error, till ſhe be in Heaven. Now if it be comfort enough to be ſecured from all capital dangers, which can ariſe only from error in Fundamental Points: why were not your firſt Reformers content with enough, but would needs diſmember the Church, out of a pernicious greedineſs of more than enough? For, this enough, which according to you is attained by not erring in Points Fundamental, was enjoyed before Luther's reformation, unleſs you will now againſt your ſelf affirm, that long before Luther there was no church free from error in Fundamental Points: Moreover if (as you ſay) no Church may hope to triumph over all error till ſhe be in heaven; You muſt either grant, that errors not Fundamental cannot yield ſufficient cauſe to forſake the Church, or elſe you muſt affirm that all community may, and ought to be forſaken, and ſo there will be no end of Schiſms: or rather indeed there can be no ſuch thing as Schiſm, becauſe, according to you, all communities are ſubject to errors not Fundamental, for which, if they may be lawfully forſaken, it followeth clearly that it is not Schiſm to forſake them. Laſtly, ſince it is not lawful to leave the Communion of the Church for abuſes in life and manners, becauſe ſuch miſeries cannot be avoided, in this world of temptation: and ſince according to your Aſſertion no Church may hope to triumph over all ſin and error: You muſt grant, that, as ſhe ought not to be left by reaſon of ſin; ſo neither by reaſon of errors not Fundamental: becauſe both ſin, and error are (according to you) impoſſible to be avoided, till ſhe be in heaven.

23. Furthermore, I aſk, Whether it be the Quantity and Number, or Quality and Greatneſs of doctrinal errors that may yield ſufficient cauſe to relinquiſh the Churches Communion? I prove that neither. Not the Quality, which is ſuppoſed to be beneath the degree of Points Fundamental, or neceſſary to Salvation. Nor the Quantity or Number: for the foundation is ſtrong enough to ſupport all ſuch unneceſſary additions, as you term them. And if they once weighed ſo heavy as to overthrow the foundation, they ſhould grow to Fundamental errors, into which your ſelf teach the Church cannot fall. Hay and ſtubble (ſay you) and ſuch (g) unprofitable ſtuff, laid on the roof, deſtroys not the houſe, whilſt the main pillars are ſtanding on the foundation. And, tell us, I pray you, the preciſe number of errors which cannot be tolerated? I know you cannot do it; and therefore being uncertain, whether or no you have cauſe to leave the Church, you are certainly obliged not to forſake her. Our bleſſed Saviour hath declared his will, that we forgive a private offender ſeventy ſeven times, that is, without limitation of quantity of time, or quality of treſpaſſes; and why then dare you alledge his command, that you muſt not pardon his Church for errors, acknowledged to be not Fundamental? What excuſe can you feign to your ſelves; who for Points not neceſſary to Salvation, have been occaſions, cauſes, and Authors of ſo many miſchiefs, as could not but unavoidably accompany ſo huge a breach in Kingdoms, in Common wealths, in private perſons, in publique Magiſtrates, in body, in ſoul, in goods, in life, in Church, in the State, by Schiſms, by rebellions, by war, by famin, by plague, by bloodſhed, by all ſorts of imaginable calamities upon the whole face of the earth), wherein as in a map of deſolation, the heavineſs of your crime appears, under which the world doth paint?

24. To ſay for your excuſe, that you left not the Church, but her errors, doth not extenuate, but aggravate your ſin. For by this device, you ſow ſeeds of endleſs Schiſms, and put into the mouth of all Separatiſts, a ready Anſwer how to avoid the note of Schiſm from your Proteſtant Church of England or from any other Church whatſoever. They will, ſtay, anſwer as you do prompt, that your Church may be forſaken, if ſhe fall into errors, though they be not Fundamental: and further, that no Church muſt hope to be free from ſuch errors; which two grounds being once laid, it will not be hard to infer the conſequence, that ſhe may be forſaken.

25. From ſome others words of D. Potter I likewiſe prove, that for Errors not Fundamental, the Church ought not to be forſaken, there neither was (ſaith he) nor can be (h) any juſt cauſe to depart from the Church of Chriſt, no more than from Chriſt himſelf. To depart from a particular Church, and namely from the Church of Rome, in ſome Doctrines and practices, there might be juſt and neceſſary cauſe, though the Church of Rome wanted nothing neceſſary to Salvation. Mark his Doctrin, that there can be no juſt cauſe to depart from the Church of Chriſt: and yet he teacheth, that the Church of Chriſt may err in Points not Fundamental; Therefore (by I) we cannot forſake the Roman Church for Points not Fundamental, for then we might alſo forſake the Church of Chriſt, which your ſelf deny: and I pray you conſider, whether

(f) Ep. con. Parmen. lib. 2. c. 11.
(g) Pag. 155.
(h) Pag. 75.

ther do you not plainly contradict your ſelf, while in the words above recited, you ſay there can be no juſt cauſe to forſake the Catholique Church; and yet that there may be neceſſary cauſe to depart from the Church of Rome, ſince you grant that the Church of Chriſt may err in Points not Fundamental: and that the Roman Church hath erred only in ſuch Points; as by and by we ſhall ſee more in particular. And thus much be ſaid to diſprove their chiefeſt Anſwer, that they left not the Church, but her corruptions.

26. Another evaſion D. Potter bringeth, to avoid the imputation of Schiſm, and it is, becauſe they ſtill acknowledge the Church of Rome to be a Member of the body of Chriſt, and not cut off from the hope of Salvation. And this (ſaith he) clears us from the (i) imputation of Schiſm, whoſe property it is, to cut off from the Body of Chriſt, and the hope of Salvation, the Church from which it ſeparates. (i) Pag. 75.

27. This is an Anſwer which perhaps you may get ſome one to approve, if firſt you can put him out of his wits. For what ſrodigious Doctrins are theſe? Thoſe Proteſtants who believe that the Church erred in Points neceſſary to Salvation, and for that cauſe left her, cannot be excuſed from damnable Schiſm: But others who believed that ſhe had no damnable errors, did very well, yea were obliged to forſake her: and (which is more miraculous, or rather monſtrous) they did well to forſake her formally and precisely, becauſe they judged, that ſhe retained all means neceſſary to Salvation. I ſay, becauſe they ſo judged. For the very reaſon for which he acquitteth himſelf, and condemneth thoſe others as Schiſmatiques, is, becauſe he holdeth that the Church which both of them forſook, is not cut off from the Body of Chriſt, and the hope of Salvation, whereas thoſe other Zelots deny her to be a member of Chriſts body, or capable of Salvation, wherein alone they diſagree from D. Potter: for in the effect of Separation they agree, only they do it upon a different motive or reaſon. Were it not a ſtrange excuſe, if a man would think to clear his rebellion, by alledging that he held the perſon againſt whom he rebelleth to be his lawful Sovereign? And yet D. Potter thinks himſelf free from Schiſm, becauſe he forſook the Church, but not ſo, as that ſtill he held her to be the true Church, and to have all neceſſary means of Salvation. But I will no further urge this moſt ſolemn foppery, and do much more willingly put Catholiques in mind what an unſpeakable comfort it is, that our Adverſaries are forced to confeſs, that they cannot clear themſelves from Schiſm, otherwiſe than by acknowledging that they do not, nor cannot, cut off from the hope of Salvation our Church. Which is as much as if they ſhould in plain terms ſay: They muſt be damned, unleſs we may be ſaved. Moreover, this evaſion doth indeed condemn your zealous brethren of Hereſie, for denying the Churches perpetuity, but doth not clear your ſelf from Schiſm, which conſiſts in being divided from that true Church, with which a man agreeth in all points of Faith, as you muſt profeſs your ſelf to agree with the Church of Rome in all Fundamental Articles. For otherwiſe, you ſhould cut her off from the hope of Salvation, and ſo condemn your ſelf of Schiſm. And laſtly, even according to this your own definition of Schiſm, you cannot clear your ſelf from that crime, unleſs you be content to acknowledge a manifeſt contradiction in your own Aſſertions. For if you do not cut us off from the body of Chriſt, and the hope of Salvation; how come you to ſay in another place, that you judge a reconciliation with us to be (k) damnable? That to depart from the Church of Rome, there might be juſt and neceſſary cauſe? That they that have the underſtanding and means to diſcover their error, and neglect to uſe (l) them (m) we dare not flatter them (ſay you) with ſo eaſie a cenſure, of hope of Salvation? If then ſe be (as you ſay) a property of Schiſm, to cut off from the hope of Salvation, the Church from which it ſeparates: how will you clear your ſelf from Schiſm, who dare not flatter us with ſo eaſie a cenſure? and who affirm that a reconciliation with us is damnable? But the truth is, there is no conſtancy in your Aſſertions; by reaſon of difficulties which preſs you on all ſides. For, you are loath to affirm clearly, that we may be ſaved, leſt ſuch a grant might be occaſion (as in all reaſon it ought to be) of the converſion of Proteſtants to the Roman Church: And on the other ſide, if you affirm that our Church erred in Points Fundamental, or neceſſary to Salvation, you know not how, nor where, nor among what company of men, to find a perpetual viſible Church of Chriſt, before Luther: And therefore your beſt ſhift is to ſay, and unſay, as your occaſions command. I do not examine your Aſſertion, that it is the property of Schiſm, to cut off from the Body of Chriſt, and the hope of Salvation, the Church from which it ſeparates: wherein you are mightily miſtaken, as appears by your own example of the Donatiſts, who were moſt formal and proper Hereticques, and not Schiſmatiques, as Schiſm is a vice diſtinct from Hereſie. Beſides, although the Donatiſts, and Luciferians (whom you alſo alledge) had been neither Schiſmatiques, yet it were againſt all good Logick, from a particular, to infer a general Rule, to determine what is the property of Schiſm. (k) Pag. 20. (l) Pag. 77 (m) Pag. 79.

28. A third device I find in D. Potter to clear his brethren from Schiſm, There is (ſaith he) great difference between (n) a Schiſm from them, and a Reformation of our ſelves. (n) Pag. 75.

29. This, I confeſs, is a quaint ſubtilty, by which all Schiſm and Sin may be as well excuſed. For what devil incarnate could meerly pretend a ſeparation, and not rather ſome other motive, of vertue, truth, profit, or pleaſure? But now ſince their pretended Reformation conſiſted, as they gave out, in forſaking the corruptions of the Church: the Reformation of themſelves, and their diviſion from us, falls out to be one and the ſelf-ſame thing. Nay we ſee, that although they infinitely diſagree in the particulars of their reformation, yet they ſymbolize, and conſent in the general Point of forſaking our pretended corruptions: An evident ſign that the thing, upon which their thoughts firſt pitched, was not any particular Model, or Idæa of Religion, but a ſeiled reſolution to forſake the Church of Rome. Wherefore this Metaphyſical ſpeculation, that they intended only to reform themſelves, cannot poſſibly excuſe them from Schiſm, unleſs firſt they be able to prove that they were obliged to depart from us. Yet for as much as concerns the fact it ſelf; it is clear, that Luther's revolt did not proceed from any zeal of reformation. The motives, which put him upon ſo wretched, and unfortunate a work, were, Covetouſneſs, Ambition, Luſt, Pride, Envy, and grudging that the promulgation of Indulgences, was not committed to himſelf, or ſuch as he deſired. He himſelf taketh God to witneſs, that he fell into theſe troubles caſually, and (o) againſt his will, not upon any intention of Reformation, not ſo much as dreaming or ſuſpecting any change which might (p) happen. And he began to preach (againſt Indulgences) when he knew not what (q) the matter meant. For (ſaith he) I ſecretly underſtood (r) then what the name of Indulgences meant. In ſo much as afterwards Luther did much miſlike of his own undertaken courſe, oftentimes (ſaith he) wiſhing (s) that I had never begun that buſineſs. And Fox ſaith: It is apparent that (t) Luther promiſed Cardinal Cajetan to keep ſilence, provided alſo his adverſaries would do the like. (o) Caſu non ſolutate in has tubas incidi, Deum ipſum teſtor. (p) Coll. & Mon. pag. 404. (q) Sleidan. l. 1. fol. 232. (r) Sleid. lib. 1. fol. 177. (s) Luther in collog. mer. fol. (t) Act. Mon. pag. 604.

like. M. Cooper reporteth further, that Luther by his letter ſubmitted (u) himſelf to the Pope, ſo that he might not be compelled to recant, With much more, which may be ſeen in (w) Brerely. But this is inſufficient to ſhew, that Luther was far enough from intending any Reformation. And if he judged a Reformation to be neceſſary, what a huge wickedneſs was it in him, to promiſe ſilence, if his adverſaries would do the like? Or to ſubmit himſelf to the Pope, ſo that he might not be compelled to recant? Or if the Reformation were not indeed intended by him, nor judged to be neceſſary, how can he be excuſed from damnable Schiſm? And this is the true manner of Luther's revolt, taken from his own acknowledgments, and the words of the more ancient Proteſtants themſelves, whereby D. Potter's faltring, and mincing the matter, is clearly diſcovered, and confuted. Upon what motives our Country was divided from the Roman Church by King Henry the Eighth, and how the Schiſm was continued by Queen Elizabeth, I have no heart to rip up. The world knoweth, it was not upon any zeal of Reformation. (u) Pag. 81, 82.

30. But you will prove your former evaſion by a couple of Similitudes: If a Monaſtery (x) ſhould reform it ſelf, and ſhould reduce into practice, ancient good diſciplins, when others would not; in this caſe could it in reaſon be charged with Schiſm from others, or with Apoſtaſie from its rule and order? Or as in a ſociety of men univerſally infected with ſome diſeaſe, they that ſhould free themſelves from the common diſeaſe could not be therefore ſaid to ſeparate from the ſociety, ſo neither can the reformed Churches be truly accuſed for making a Schiſm from the Church, ſeeing all they did, was to reform themſelves. (x) Pag. 81, 82.

31. I was very glad to find you in a Monaſtery, but ſorry when I perceived that you were inventing ways how to forſake your Vocation, and to maintain the lawfulneſs of Schiſm from the Church, and Apoſtaſie from a Religious Order. Yet before you make your final reſolution, hear a word of advice. Put caſe; That a Monaſtery did confeſſedly obſerve their ſubſtantial vows and all principal Statutes, or Conſtitutions of the Order, though with ſome neglect of leſſer Monaſtical Obſervances: And that a Reformation were undertaken, not by authority of lawful Superiors, but by ſome One, or very few in compariſon of the reſt: And thoſe few known to be led, not with any ſpirit of Reformation, but by ſome other ſiniſter intention: and that the Statutes of the Houſe were even by thoſe baſtie fellows confeſſed, to have been time out of mind underſtood, and practiſed as now they were: And further, that the pretended Reformers acknowledge that themſelves as ſoon as they were gone out of their Monaſtery, muſt not hope to be free from thoſe or the like errors and corruptions, for which they left their Brethren: And (which is more) that they might fall into more enormous crimes than they did, or could do in their Monaſtery, which we ſuppoſe to be ſecured from all ſubſtantial corruptions, for the avoiding of which they have an infallible aſſiſtance. Put (I ſay) together all theſe my Ands and then come with your Ifs, If a Monaſtery ſhould reform it ſelf, &c. and tell me if you could excuſe ſuch Reformers from Schiſm, Sedition, Rebellion, Apoſtaſie, &c? what would you ſay of ſuch Reformers in your Colledge? or tumultuous Perſons in a Kingdom? Remember now your own Tenents, and then reflect how fit a ſimilitude you have picked out, to prove your ſelf a Schiſmatique. You teach that the Church may err in Points not Fundamental, but that for all Fundamental Points ſhe is ſecured from error. You teach that no particular Perſon, or Church, hath any promiſe of aſſiſtance in Points Fundamental: You, and the whole world can witneſs that when Luther began, he being but only One, oppoſed himſelf to All, as well ſubjects, as ſuperiors; and that even then when he himſelf confeſſed that he had no intention of Reformation: You cannot be ignorant but that many chief learned Proteſtants are forced to confeſs the Antiquity of our Doctrin and Practice, and to ſeveral and many Controverſies, acknowledge that the Ancient Fathers ſtood on our Side: Conſider, I ſay, theſe Points, and ſee whether your ſimilitude do not condemn your Progenitors of Schiſm from God's viſible Church, yea and of Apoſtaſie alſo from their Religious Orders, if they were vowed Regulars, as Luther, and divers of them were.

32. From the Monaſtery you are fled into an Hoſpital of perſons univerſally infected with ſome diſeaſe, where you find to be true what I ſuppoſed, that after your departure from your Brethren you might fall into greater inconveniences, and more infectious diſeaſes, than thoſe for which you left them. But you are alſo upon the Point to abandon theſe miſerable needy perſons, in whoſe behalf for Charities ſake, let me ſet before you theſe conſiderations. If the diſeaſe neither were, nor could be mortal, becauſe in that Company of men God had placed a Tree of life: If going thence, the ſick man might by curious taſting the Tree of Knowledg eat poyſon under pretence of bettering his health: If he could not hope thereby to avoid other diſeaſes like thoſe for which he had quitted the company of the firſt infected men: If by his departure innumerable miſchiefs were to enſue; could ſuch a man without ſenſeleſneſs be excuſed by ſaying, that he ſought to free himſelf from the common diſeaſe, but not forſooth, to ſeparate from the ſociety? Now your ſelf compare the Church to a man deformed with (y) ſuperfluous fingers and toes, but yet who hath not loſt any vital part: you acknowledg that out of her ſociety no man is ſecured from damnable Error, and the world can bear witneſs what unſpeakable miſchiefs and calamities enſued Luther's revolt from the Church. Pronounce then concerning them, the ſame ſentence which even now I have ſhewed them to deſerve, who in the manner aforeſaid ſhould ſeparate from perſons univerſally infected with ſome diſeaſe. (y) Pag. 154.

33. But alas, to what paſs hath Hereſie brought men, who term themſelves Chriſtians, and yet bluſh not to compare the beloved Spouſe of our Lord, the one Dove, the purchaſe of our Saviours moſt precious blood, the holy Catholique Church, I mean that viſible Church of Chriſt which Luther found ſpread over the whole world; to a Monaſtery, ſo diſordered that it muſt be forſaken; to the Gyves in Gath, much deformed with ſuperfluous fingers and toes; to a ſociety of men univerſally infected with ſome diſeaſe! And yet all theſe Compariſons, and much worſe, are neither injurious, nor undeſerved, if once it be granted, or can be proved; that the viſible Church of Chriſt may err in any one Point of Faith, although not Fundamental.

34. Before I part from theſe ſimilitudes, one thing I muſt obſerve againſt the evaſion of D. Potter that they left not the Church, but her Corruptions. For as thoſe Reformers of the Monaſtery, or thoſe other who left the company of men univerſally infected with ſome diſeaſe, would deny themſelves to be Schiſmatiques, or any way blame-worthy, but could not deny, but that they left the ſaid Communities: So Luther and the reſt cannot ſo much as pretend, not to have left the viſible Church, which according to them was infected with many diſeaſes, but can only pretend that they did not ſin in leaving her. And you ſpeak very ſtrangely when you ſay: In a ſociety of men univerſally infected with ſome diſeaſe, they that ſhould free themſelves from the common diſeaſe, could not be therefore ſaid to ſeparate from the Society.

For

For if they do not separate themselves from the Society of the infected persons; how do they free themselves and depart from the common disease? Do they at the same time remain in the company, and yet depart from those infected creatures? We must then say, that they separate themselves from the persons, though it be by occasion of the disease: Or if you say, they free their own persons from the common disease, yet so, that they remain still in the Company infected, subject to the Superiors and Governours thereof, eating and drinking, and keeping publick Assemblies with them; you cannot but know, that Luther and your Reformers, the first pretended free persons from the supposed common infection of the Roman Church, did not so: for they endeavoured to force the Society whereof they were parts, to be healed and reformed as they were; and if it refused, they did, when they had forces, drive them away, even their Superiours both Spiritual and Temporal, as is notorious. Or if they had not power to expel that supposed infected Community, or Church of that place, they departed from them corporally, whom mentally they had forsaken before. So that you cannot deny, but Luther forsook the external Communion, and company of the Catholique Church,
(z) Pag. 75. for which, as your self (z) confess, There neither was nor can be any just cause, no more than to depart from Christ himself. We do therefore infer, that Luther and the rest who forsook that visible Church which they found upon earth, were truly, and properly Schismatiques.

35. Moreover, it is evident that there was a division between Luther and that Church which was Visible when he arose: but that Church cannot be said to have divided her self from him, before whose time she was, and in comparison of whom she was a Whole, and he but a Part: therefore we must say, that he divided himself and went out of her; which is to be a Schismatique, or Heretique, or both. By this argument, Optatus Milivitanus proveth, that not Cæcilianus, but Parmenianus was a Schismatique,
(a) Lib. 1. cont. Parmen. saying, For, Cæcilianus went (a) not out of Majorinus thy Grandfather, but Majorinus from Cæcilianus: neither did Cæcilianus depart from the Chair of Peter, or Cyprian, but Majorinus, in whose Chair thou sittest, which had no beginning before Majorinus. Since it manifestly appeareth that these things were alled in this manner, it is clear, that you are heirs both of the deliverers up (of the holy Bible to be burned) and also of Schismatiques. The Whole argument of this holy Father makes directly both against Luther, and all those who continue the division which he began; and proves, That going out, convinceth those who go out, to be Schismatiques; but not those from whom they depart: That to forsake the Chair of Peter is Schism; yea, that it is Schism to erect a Chair which had no origin, or as it were predecessor before it self: That to continue in a division begun by others, is to be Heirs of Schismatiques; and lastly, that to depart from the Communion of a particular Church (as that of S. Cyprian was) is sufficient to make a man incur the guilt of Schism, and consequently that although Protestants, who deny the Pope to be supream head of the Church, do think by that Heresie to clear Luther from Schism, in disobeying the Pope: Yet that will not serve to free him from Schism, as it importeth a division from the obedience, or Communion of the particular Bishop, Diocess, Church, and Country where he lived.

36. But it is not the Heresie of Protestants, or any other Sectaries, that can deprive S. Peter, and his Successors, of the authority which Christ our Lord conferred upon them over his whole militant Church: which is a Point confessed by learned Protestants to be of great antiquity, and for which the judgment of divers most ancient holy Fathers is reproved by them, as may be seen at large in Bristly
(b) Tract. 1. Sect. 3 subd. 10. (b) exactly citing the places of such cheif Protestants. And we must say with S. Cyprian; Heresies (c) have sprung, and Schisms been bred from no other cause than for that the Priest of God is not obeyed, nor one Priest
(c) Ep. 55. and judg is considered to be for the time in the Church of God. Which words do plainly condemn Luther, whether he will understand them as spoken of the universal, or of every particular Church. For he withdrew himself both from the obedience of the Pope, and of all particular Bishops and Churches. And no
(d) Lib. 2. cont. Parmen. less clear is the said Optatus Milivitanus, saying: Thou canst not deny (d) but that thou knowest, that in the City of Rome, there was first an Episcopal Chair placed for Peter, wherein Peter the head of all the Apostles sate, whereof also he was called Cephas; in which one Chair, unity was to be kept by all, lest the other Apostles might attribute to themselves, each one his particular Chair; and that he should be a Schismatique and sinner, who against that one single Chair should erect another. Many other authorities of Fathers might be alledged to this purpose, which I omit; my intention being, not to handle particular controversies.

37. Now, the arguments which hitherto I have brought, prove that Luther, and his followers were Schismatiques, without examining (for as much as belongs to this Point) whether or no the Church can err in any one thing great or small, because it is universally true, that there can be no just cause to forsake the Communion of the visible Church of Christ, according to S. Augustine, saying: It is not possible
(e) Ep. 48. (e) that any may have just cause to separate their Communion, from the Communion of the whole world, and call themselves the Church of Christ, as if they had separated themselves from the Communion of all Nations upon just cause. But since indeed the Church cannot err in any one Point of Doctrin, nor can approve any corruption in manners; they cannot with any colour avoid the just imputation of eminent Schism,
(f) De Bapt. lib. 5 cap. 1. according to the verdict of the same holy Father in these words: The most manifest (f) sacrilledge of Schism is eminent, when there was no cause of separation.

38. Lastly, I prove that the Protestants cannot avoid the note of Schism, at least by reason of their mutual separation from one another. For most certain it is that there is very great difference, for the outward face of a Church, and profession of a different faith, between the Lutherans, the rigid Calvinists, and Protestants, of England. So that if Luther were in the right, those other Protestants who invented Doctrins far different from his, and divided themselves from him, must be reputed Schismatiques: and the like argument may proportionably be applyed to their further divisions, and subdivisions. Which reason I
(g) Pag. 20. yet urge more strongly out of D. Potter, (g) who affirms, that to him and to such as are convicted in conscience of the errors of the Roman Church, a reconciliation is impossible, and damnable. And yet he teacheth, that their difference from the Roman Church, is not in Fundamental Points. Now, since among Protestants there is such diversity of belief, that one denieth what the other affirmeth, they must be convicted in conscience that one part is in error (at least not Fundamental,) and, if D. Potter will speak consequently, that a reconciliation between them is impossible, and damnable: and what greater division, or Schism can there be, than when one part must judge a reconciliation with the other to be impossible, and damnable.

39. Out of all which premisses, this Conclusion follows: That Luther and his followers were Schismatiques; from the universal visible Church; from the Pope Christs Vicar on earth, and Successor to S. Peter; from the particular Dioces in which they received Baptism; from the Country or Nation to to which they belonged; from the Bishop under whom they lived; many of them from the Religious Order in which they were professed; from one another; And Lastly, from a mans self (as much as is possible) because the self same Protestant to day is convicted in conscience, that his yesterdays Opinion was an error (as D. Potter knows a man in the world who from a Puritan was turned to a moderate Protestant) with whom therefore a reconciliation, according to D. Potter's grounds, is both impossible, and damnable.

40. It seems D. Potter's last refuge to excuse himself and his Brethren from Schism, is, because they proceeded according to their conscience, dictating an obligation, under damnation, to forsake the errors maintained by the Church of Rome. His words are: Although we confess the (h) Church of Rome to be (in some sense) a true Church, and her errours to some men not damnable: yet for us who are convinced in conscience, that she errs in many things, a necessity lies upon us, even under pain of damnation, to forsake her in those errors. h Pag. 81.

41. I answer: It is very strange, that you judg us extreamly Uncharitable, in saying, Protestants cannot be saved; while your self avouch the same of all learned Catholiques, whom ignorance cannot excuse, if this your pretence of conscience may serve, what Schismatique in the Church, what popular seditious brain in a Kingdom, may not alledge the dictamen of conscience to free themselves from Schism, or Sedition? No man wishes them to do any thing against their conscience, but we say, that they may, and ought to rectifie, and depose such a conscience, which is easie for them to do, even according to your own affirmation, that we Catholiques want no means necessary to Salvation. Easie to do? Nay not to do so, to any man in his right wits must seem impossible. For how can these two apprehensions stand together: In the Roman Church, I enjoy all means necessary to Salvation, and yet I cannot hope to be saved in that Church? or, Who can enjoyn in one brain (not crackt) these Assertions: After due examination I judg the Roman errors not to be in themselves fundamental, or damnable; and yet, I judg that according to true reason, It is damnable to hold them; I say, according to true reason. For if you grant your conscience to be erroneous, in judging that you cannot be saved in the Roman Church, by reason of her errors; there is no other remedy, but that you must rectifie your erring conscience, by your other judgment, that her errors are not fundamental, nor damnable. And this is no more Charity, than you daily afford to such other Protestants as you term Brethren, whom you cannot deny to be in some errors, (unless you will hold, That of contradictory Propositions both may be true) and yet you do not judg it damnable to live in their Communion, because you hold their errors not to be fundamental. You ought to know, that according to the Doctrin of all Divines, there is great difference between a speculative perswasion, and a practical dictamen of conscience: And therefore although they had in speculation conceived the visible Church to err in some doctrins, of themselves not damnable; yet with that speculative judgment they might, and ought to have entertained this practical dictamen, that for Points not substantial to Faith, they neither were bound, nor lawfully could break the bond of Charity, by breaking unity in God's Church. You say that, hay and stubble (i) and such unprofitable stuff (as are corruptions in Points not fundamental) laid on the roof, destroyes not the house, whilst the main pillars are standing on the foundation. And you would think him a mad man who to be rid of such stuff, would set his house on fire, that so he might walk in the light, as you teach that Luther was obliged to forsake the house of God, for an unnecessary light, not without a combustion formidable to the whole Christian world; rather than bear with some errors which did not destroy the foundation of Faith. And as for others who entred in at the breach first made by Luther, they might, and ought to have guided their consciences by that most reasonable rule of Vincentius Lyrinensis, delivered in these words, Indeed it is a matter of great (k) moment, and both most profitable to be learned, and necessary to be remembred, and which we ought again and again to illustrate, and inculcate with weighty heaps of examples, that almost all Catholiques may know, that they ought to receive the Doctors with the Church, and not forsake the Faith of the Church with the Doctors: And much less should they forsake the Faith of the Church to follow Luther, Calvin, and such other Novellists. Moreover, though your first Reformers had conceived their own opinions to be true, yet they might, and ought to have doubted, whether they were certain: because your self affirm, that infallibility was not promised to any particular Persons, or Churches. And since in cases of uncertainties, we are not to leave our Superiour, nor cast off his obedience, or publiquely oppose his Decrees; your Reformers might easily have found a safe way to satisfie their zealous conscience, without a publick breach: especially if with this their uncertainty, we call to mind the peaceable possession, and prescription, which by the confession of your own Brethren, the Church, and Pope of Rome did for many Ages enjoy. I wish you would examine the works of your Brethren, by the words your self set down to free S. Cyprian from Schism: every syllable of which words convinceth Luther, and his Copartners to be guilty of that Crime, and sheweth in what manner they might with great ease, and quietness have rectified their consciences about the pretended errors of the Church. S. Cyprian (say you) was a peaceable (l) and modest man, dissented from others in his judgment, but without any breach of Charity, condemned no man (much less any Church) for the contrary opinion. He believed his own Opinion to be true, but believed not that it was necessary, and therefore did not proceed rashly and peremptorily to censure others, but left them to their liberty. Did your Reformers imitate this manner of proceeding? Did they censure no man; much less any Church? S. Cyprian believed his own Opinion to be true, but believed not that it was necessary, and THEREFORE did not proceed rashly and peremptorily to censure others. You believe the Points wherein Luther differs from us, not to be fundamental, or necessary; and why do you not thence infer the like THEREFORE, he should not have proceeded to censure others? In a word, since their disagreement from us concerned only Points which were not fundamental, they should have believed that they might have been deceived, as well as the whole visible Church, which you say may err in such Points; and therefore their Doctrines being not certainly true, and certainly not necessary, they could not give sufficient cause to depart from the Communion of the Church. i Pag. 155. k Adv. hæres. c 27. l Pag. 124.

42. In other places you write so much, as may serve us to prove, that Luther and his followers ought to have deposed, and rectified their consciences: As for example, when you say, when the Church (m) hath declared her self in any matter of opinion, or of vites; her declaration obliges all her children to peace and external obedience. Nor is it fit, or lawful for any private man to oppose his judgment to the publique, (as Luther and his fellows did) He may offer his opinion to be considered of, so he do it with evidence, or great probability of Scripture, m Pag. 125.

face, or reason, and very meekly, ſtill continuing within the ſtrict rule which he mean: but if he will ſtubbornly advance his own conceits (his own conceits? and yet grounded upon evidence of Scripture) and deſpiſe the Church ſo far as to cut off her Communion; he may be juſtly branded with condemned for a Schiſmatique yea and an Hereticque alſo in ſome degree, and in loco exteriori, though [illegible] were true, and deceſſors of Schiſm, or Hereſie? Could they have ſtronger Motives to oppoſe the Doctrin of the Church, and leave her Communion, than evidence of Scripture? And yet according to your own words, they ſhould have anſwered, & rectified their conſcience, by your Doctrin, that enough their opinion were true, and grounded upon evidence of Scripture, or Reaſon; ye. it was not lawful for any private man to oppoſe his judgment to the publique, which obligeth all Chriſtians to peace and external obedience: and if they caſt off the Communion of the Church for maintaining their own Concits, they may be branded for Schiſmatiques and Hereticques in ſome degree, & in loco exteriori, that is, all other Chriſtians ought to eſteem of them, (and why then are we accounted uncharitable for judging ſo of you?) and they alſo are obliged to Abhor themſelves in the face of all Chriſtian Churches, as if indeed they were not Reformers, but Schiſmatiques, and Hereticques, or as Pagans and Publicans. I thank you for your ingenuous confeſſion: in recompence whereof, I will do a deed of Charity, by putting you in mind, into what Labyrinths you are brought, by teaching that the Church may err in ſome Points of Faith, and yet that it is not lawful for any man to oppoſe his judgment, or leave her Communion, though he have evidence of Scripture againſt her. Will you have ſuch a man to diſſemble againſt his conſcience, or externally deny a truth, known to be contained in holy Scripture? How much more coherently do Catholiques profeſſe, and believe the univerſal infallibility of the Church, and from thence are aſſured, that there can be no evidence of Scripture, or reaſon, againſt her definitions, nor any juſt cauſe to forſake her Communion? M. Hooker, eſteemed by many Proteſtants an incomparable man, yeilds as much as we have alledged out of you, The will of God is (ſaith he) to have (u) them do whatſoever the ſentence of judicial authority ſhall determine, yea though it ſeem in their private opinion, to ſwerve utterly from that which is right, left not this man tell Luther, what the will of God was, which he tranſgreſſing, muſt of neceſſity be guilty of Schiſm? And muſt not M. Hooker either acknowledge the univerſal infallibility of the Church, or drive men into the perplexities and Labyrinths of diſſembling againſt their conſcience, where of now I ſpeak? Not unlike to this, is your Doctrin delivered elſwhere, before the Nicene Council (ſay you) many (o) good Catholique Biſhops, were of the ſame opinion with the Donatiſts, that the Baptiſm of Hereticks was ineffectual; and with the Novatians, that the Church ought not to abſolve ſome grievous ſinners. Theſe errors therefore (if they had gone no further) were not in themſelves Hereticall, eſpecially in thoſe times, and moſt hearty, or bitter ſenſe of that word; neither was it in the Churches intention (or to her power) to make them ſuch by her declaration. Her intention was to ſilence all diſputes, and to ſettle peace and unity in her government: to which all wiſe and peaceable men ſubmitted, what ever their opinion was. And thoſe factious people, for their unreaſonable and unbearable oppoſition, were very juſtly branded for Schiſmatiques. For ſo, the Miſtaker will never prove that we oppoſe any declaration of the Catholique Church, &c. and therefore he doth juſtly charge us either with Schiſm, or Hereſie. Theſe words manifeſtly condemn your Reformers, who oppoſed the viſible Church in many of her Declarations, Doctrines, and Commands impoſed upon them, for ſilencing all diſputes, and ſettling peace and unity in the government, and therefore they ſtill remaining obſtinately diſobedient, are juſtly charged with Schiſm, and Hereſie. And it is to be obſerved, that you grant the Donatiſts to have been very juſtly branded for Schiſmatiques, although their oppoſition againſt the Church, did concern (as you hold) a Point not Fundamental to the Faith, and which according to St. Auguſtin, cannot be proved out of Scripture alone; and therefore either doth evidently convince that the Church is univerſally infallible, even in Points not fundamental; or elſe that it is Schiſm, to oppoſe her Declarations, in thoſe very things wherein ſhe may err; and conſequently that Luther, and his fellows were Schiſmatiques, by oppoſing the viſible Church for Points not fundamental, though it were (untruly) ſuppoſed that ſhe erred in ſuch Points. But by the way, How come you on the ſudden to hold the Determination of a General Council (of Nice) to be the declaration of the Catholique Church, ſeeing you teach, That General Councils may err even fundamentally? And do you now ſay, with us, that to oppoſe the Declaration of the Church, is ſufficient that one may be branded with Hereſie, which is a Point ſo often impugned by you?

43. It is therefore moſt evident, that no pretended Scruple of conſcience could excuſe Luther; which he might, and ought to have rectified by means enough, if Pride, Ambition, Obſtinacy, &c. had given him leave. I grieve was touched with ſcruple of conſcience, but it was becauſe he had forſaken the viſible Church of Chriſt; and I beſeech all Proteſtants for the love they bear to that ſacred ranſom of their ſoule, the Blood of our Bleſſed Saviour, attentively to ponder, and impartially to apply to their own conſciences, what the Miniſters concerning the feelings, and remorſe of his. How often (ſaith he) did my conſcience, what the Miniſters ſay concerning me, object againſt me that moſt ſtrong argument; did my conſcience ſay (p) how wilt thou, and upon what ground, be aſſured that thou haſt the true Faith? Do ſo many words do? more ſo many ages ignorant? what, if thou thy ſelf, and thoſe few only with thee? Do ſo many words do? more ſo many ages ignorant? what, if thou, being but one, offendeſt? And if but one, and of no (q) account, take upon thee ſo great matters? what, if thou, being but one, ſhouldeſt reſiſt ſo many into Hell to be damned eternally with thee? And in another place he ſaith: Doſt thou who art but one, and of no account, take upon thee ſo great matters? what, if thou, being but one, offendeſt? If God permit both, to many, and all to err; why may he not permit that to err? To this belong thoſe examples of the Church, the Church, the Fathers, the Fathers, the Councils, the Cuſtoms, the multitudes, and gainſayings of wiſe men: whom do not theſe mountains of arguments, theſe Clouds, yea theſe ſeas of Examples ſtrangle? And there is no doubt wrought ſo deep in his ſoul that he often wiſht and deſired that he had (r) never been, or that he might never have been born. Behold what remorſe Luther felt, and how he wanted no ſtrength of malice to croſs his own conſcience: wiſhing yet further that his Writings were burned and buried (ſ) in eternal oblivion. and therefore it was no ſcruple, or conceived obligation of conſcience, but ſome other motives which induced him to oppoſe the Church. And if yet you doubt of his Courage to encounter, and through to maſter all reluctations of conſcience, hear an example or two for that purpoſe. Of Communion under both kinds, thus he ſaith: If the council (t) ſhould in any caſe decree this, that of all Communion under both kinds, thus he ſaith: If the council (t) ſhould in any caſe decree this, that of all Chriſtians in the World, one Kind only, or neither, or to uſe both. Was not Luther perſwaded in conſcience, that to uſe neither kind was againſt our Saviours command? Is this, only to offer his opinion to be conſidered of, as you ſaid all men ought to do? And that you may be ſure that he ſpoke from his heart, and it occaſion had been offered, would have been as good as his word; mark what he ſaith of the Elevation of the Sacrament: I till know (u) the Elevation of the Sacrament to be Idolatrical; yet nevertheleſs I did retain it in the Church at Wittemberg, to the end I might vex the Devil Caroloſtadius. Was not this a Conſcience large and capacious enough, that could ſwallow Idolatry? Why would he not tolerate Idolatry in the Church of Rome (as theſe men are wont to blaſpheme) if he could retain it in his own Church at Wittemberg? If Carolaſtadius, Luther's off ſpring, was the Devil, who but himſelf muſt be his Dam? Is Almighty God wont to ſend ſuch Furies to preach the Goſpel? And yet further (which makes moſt directly to the point in hand) Luther in his Book of abrogating the Private Maſs, exhorts the Auguſtine Fryers of Wittemberg, who firſt abrogated the Maſs, that, even againſt their conſcience accuſing them; they ſhould perſiſt in what they had begun, acknowledging that in ſome things he himſelf had done the like. And Joannes Matheſius, Vid. Tom. Tom. 2. Witt. fol. 158. Hiſtor. Intom. Origin. Miſſ. a Lutheran Preacher ſaith: Antonius Muſa, the Pariſh Prieſt (w) of Rocklitz, recounted to me that on a time he heartily moaned himſelf to the Doctor (he means Luther) that he himſelf could not believe what he had preached to others: And that D. Luther anſwered; Praiſe and thanke be to God, that this happens alſo to others, for I had thought it had happened only to me. Are not theſe conſcionable, and fit Reformers? And can they be excuſed from Schiſm, under pretence that they held themſelves obliged to forſake the Roman Luth. Church? If then it be damnable to proceed againſt ones Conſcience, what will become of Luther, who againſt his Conſcience, perſiſted in his diviſion from the Roman Church?

44. Some are ſaid to flatter themſelves with another pernicious conceit, that they (forſooth) are not guilty of ſin; Becauſe they were not the firſt Authors, but only are the continuers of the Schiſm, which was already begun.

45. But it is hard to believe, that any man of judgment, can think this excuſe will ſubſiſt, when he ſhall come to give up his final account. For according to this reaſon no Schiſm will be damnable, but only to the beginners: Whereas contrarily, the longer it continues the worſe it grows to be, and at length degenerates to Hereſie; as Wine by long keeping grows to be Vinegar, but not by continuance returns again to his former nature of Wine. Thus S. Auguſtine ſaith, that Hereſie is (x) Schiſm inveterate. And in another place: He's object to you only the (y) crime of Schiſm, which you have alſo made to become Hereſie, by evil preſerving therein. And S. Hierom ſaith: Though Schiſm (z) is the beginning may be in ſome ſort underſtood to be different from Hereſie; yet there is no Schiſm which doth not fain to it ſelf ſome Hereſie, that it may ſeem to have departed from the Church upon juſt cauſe. And ſo indeed it falleth out. For men may begin upon paſſion, but afterward by inſtinct of corrupt nature, ſeeking to maintain their Schiſm as lawful, they fall into ſome Hereſie, without which their Separation could not be juſtified with any colour: as in our preſent caſe the very affirming, that it is lawful to continue a Schiſm unlawfully begun, is an error againſt the main principle of Chriſtianity, that it is not lawful for any Chriſtian, to live out of Gods Church, with in which alone Salvation can be had; Or, that it is not damnable to diſobey her decrees, according to the words of our Saviour: If he ſhall not hear (a) the church, let him be to thee as a Pagan, or publican. And, He (b) that deſpiſeth you, deſpiſeth me. We heard above Optatus Milevitanus ſaying to Parmenianus, that both he, and all thoſe other who continued in the Schiſm begun by Majorinus, did inherit their Fore-fathers Schiſm; and yet Parmenianus, was the third Biſhop after Majorinus, in his Sea, and did not begin, but only continue the Schiſm. For (ſaith this holy Father) Cæcilianus (c) went not out of Majorinus thy Grand father, but Majorinus from Cæcilianus: neither did Cæcilianus depart from the Chair of Peter, or Cyprian, but Majorinus, in whoſe Chair thou ſitteſt, which before Majorinus (Luther) had no beginning. Seeing it is evident that theſe things paſſed in this manner, (that for example, Luther departed from the Church, and not the Church from Luther) it is clear that you be HEIRS, both of the givers up of the Bible to be burned, and of SCHISMATIQUES. And the Regal Power, or example of Henry the Eighth could not excuſe his ſubjects from Schiſm, according to what we have heard out of S. Chryſoſtom, ſaying: Nothing doth ſo much provoke (d) the wrath of Almighty God, as that the Church ſhould be divided. Although we ſhould do innumerable good deeds, if we divide the full Eccleſiaſtical Congregation, we ſhall be puniſhed no leſs, than they who did rend his (natural) Body. For that was done to the gain of the whole world, though not with that intention, but this hath no good in it at all; but that the greateſt hurt riſeth from it. Theſe things are ſpoken not only to thoſe who bear office, but to ſuch alſo as are governed by them. Behold therefore, how liable both Subjects, and Superiours, are to the ſin of Schiſm, if they break the unity of Gods Church. The words of S. Paul can in no occaſion be verified more than in this of which we ſpeak. They who do ſuch things (e) are worthy of death: and not only they that do them, but they alſo that conſent with the doers. In things which are indifferent of their own nature, Cuſtom may be occaſion, that ſome act, not well begun, may in time come to be lawfully continued. But no length of Time, no Quality of perſons, no Circumſtance of Neceſſity, can legitimate actions which are of their own nature unlawful: and therefore diviſion from Chriſts Myſtical Body, being of the number of thoſe Actions, which Divines teach to be Intrinſecè malas, evil of their own nature and offence, no difference of Perſons or Time can ever make it lawful. D. Potter ſaith: There neither was, nor can be any cauſe to depart from the Church of Chriſt, no more than from Chriſt himſelf. And who dares ſay, that it is not damnable to continue a Separation from Chriſt? Preſcription cannot in conſcience run, when the firſt beginner, and his ſucceſſors are conſcious that the thing to be preſcribed, for example, goods or lands, were unjuſtly poſſeſſed at the firſt. Chriſtians are not like ſtrayes, that after a certain time of wandring from their right home, fall from their owner to the Lord of the Soil; but as long as they retain the indelible Character of Baptiſm, and live upon earth, they are obliged to acknowledge ſubjection to Gods Church. Humane Laws may come to nothing by diſcontinuance of time, but the Law of God, commanding us to conſerve Unity in his Church, doth ſtill remain. The continued diſobedience of Children cannot deprive Parents of their parental right, nor can the Grand-child be undutiful to his Grand-Father, becauſe his Father was unnatural to his own Parent. The longer Gods Church is ſo diſobeyed; the profeſſion of her Doctrin denied; her Sacraments negected; her Liturgy condemned; her Unity violated: the more grievous the fault grows to be: As the longer a man withholds a due debt, or retains his neighbours Goods, the greater injuſtice he commits. Conſtancy in evil doth not extenuate, but aggravate the ſame, which by extenſion of time, receiveth increaſe of ſtrength, and addition of greater malice. If theſe mens conceits were true, the Church might come to be wholly divided by wicked Schiſm, and yet after ſome ſpace of time, none could be accuſed of Schiſm, nor be obliged to return to the viſible Church of Chriſt: and ſo there ſhould remain no one true viſible Church. Let therefore theſe men who pretend to honour, reverence, and believe the Doctrin, and practice of the viſible Church, and to condemn their fore-fathers who forſook her, and ſay, They would not have done ſo, if they had had lived in the days of their Fathers, and yet follow their example in remaining divided from her Communion; consider how truly these words of our Saviour fall upon them, Woe be to you, f Mar. 23. ver. 29, &c. because you build (f) the Prophets Sepulchers, and garnished the monuments of just men, and say: If we had been in our Fathers days, we had not been their fellows in the blood of the Prophets. Therefore you are a testimony to your own selves, that you are the sons of them that killed the Prophets; and fill up the measure of your Fathers.

46. And thus having demonstrated that Luther, his Associates, and all that continue in the Schism by them begun, are guilty of Schism, by departing from the visible true Church of Christ; it remaineth that we examine what in particular was that visible true Church, from which they departed, that so they may know to what Church in particular they ought to return: and then we shall have performed what was propосed to be handled in the fifth Point.

5. Point. Luther and the rest departed from the Roman Church.

47. That the Roman Church (I speak not for the present, of the particular Diocess of Rome, but of all visible Churches dispersed throughout the whole world, agreeing in faith with the Chair of Peter, whether that Sea were supposed to be in the City of Rome, or any other place:) That (I say) the Church of Rome, in this sense, was the visible Catholique Church out of which Luther departed, is proved by your own confession, who assign for notes of the Church, the true Preaching of God's Word, and due administration of Sacraments, both which for the substance you cannot deny to the Roman Church, since you confess, that she wanted nothing Fundamental, or necessary to salvation, and for that very cause you think to clear your self from Schism, whose property, as you say, is to cut off from the (g) Body of Christ, and the Hope of Salvation, the Church from which it separates. Now that Luther and his fellows were born and Baptized in the Roman Church, and that she was the Church out of which they departed is notoriously known: and therefore you cannot cut her off from the Body of Christ, and hope of Salvation, unless you will acknowledg your self to deserve the just imputation of Schism. Neither can you deny, her to be truly Catholique by reason of (pretended) corruptions, not Fundamental. For your self avouch, and endeavour to prove, that the true Catholique Church may err in such Points. Moreover, I hope, you will not so much as go about to prove, that when Luther rose, there was any other true visible Church, disagreeing from the Roman, and agreeing with Protestants in their Particular Dotrins: and you cannot deny, but that England in those days agreed with Rome, and other Nations with England: And therefore either Christ had no visible Church upon Earth, or else you must grant that it was the Church of Rome. A truth so manifest, that those Protestants who affirm the Roman Church to have lost the nature and being of a true Church, do by invitable consequence grant, that for divers ages Christ had no visible Church on earth: from which error, because D. Potter disclaimeth, he must of necessity maintain, that the Roman Church is free from Fundamental, and damnable error, and that she is not cut off from the Body of Christ, and the hope of Salvation, And if (faith he) any Zelots h Ibid. amongst us have proceeded (h) to heavier censures, their zeal may be excused, but their Charity and wisdom cannot be justified.

48. And to touch particulars, which perhaps some may object, No man is ignorant that the Greeks, even the Schismatical Grecians, do in most Points agree with the Roman Catholiques, and disagree from the i Pag. 225. Protestant Reformation. They teach Transubstantiation, (which Point D. Potter also (i) confesseth;) Invocation of Saints and Angels: Veneration of Reliques, and Images; Auricular Confession; enjoyned Satisfaction; Confirmation with Chrism; Extream Unction; all the seven Sacraments; Prayer, Sacrifice, Alms for the dead; Monachism; That Priests may not marry after their Ordination. In which Points that the Grecians agree with the Roman Church appeareth by a Treatise published by the Protestant Divines of Wittenburg, intituled, Acta Theologorum Wittenbergensium, & Jeremiæ Patriarchæ Constantinop. de Augustana confessione, &c. Wittenburgæ anno 1584. by the Protestant (k) Crispinus, and by k De statu Ec- clesiæ, pag. 153. Sir Edwin Sands in the Relation of the State of Religion of the West. And I wonder with what colour of truth (I to say no worse) D. Potter could affirm, that the Dotrins debated between the Protestants (l), and Rome, are only the partial and particular fancies of the Roman Church; unless happily the opinion of Transubstantiation may be excepted, wherein the latter Grecians seem to agree with the Romanists. Beside, the Protestant Authors already cited, Petrus Arcudius a Grecian and a learned Catholique Writer, hath published a large Volume, the Argument and Title whereof is: Of the agreement of the Roman and Greek Church in the seven Sacraments. As for the Heresie of the Grecians, that the Holy-Gost proceeds not from the Son, I suppose, that Protestants disavow them in that error, as we do. l Pag. 225.

49. D. Potter will not (I think) so much wrong his reputation, as to tell us, that the Waldenses, Wicliffe, Huss, or the like, were Protestants, because in some things they disagreed from Catholiques. For he well knows that the example of such men is subject to these manifest exceptions. They were not of all Ages, nor in all Countries, but Confined to certain places, and were interrupted in Time, against the notion and nature of the word Catholique. They had no Ecclesiastical Hierarchy, nor succession of Bishops, Priests, and Pastors. They differed among themselves, and from Protestants also. They agreed in divers things with us against Protestants. They held Dotrins manifestly absurd, and damnable heresies.

50. The Waldenses began not before the year 1218. so far were they from Universality of all Ages. For their Dotrin: first, they denyed all Judgments which extended to the drawing of blood; and the Sabbath, for which cause they were called In-sabbatists. Secondly, they taught that Lay men, and women might consecrate the Sacrament, and preach (no doubt but by this means to make their Master Waldo, a meer lay man, capable of such functions.) Thirdly, that Clergy-men ought to have no possessions, or proprieties. Fourthly, that there should be no division of parishes, nor Churches; for a walled Church they reputed as a Barn. Fifthly, that men ought not to take an Oath in any case. Sixthly, that those persons sinned mortally, who accompanied without hope of Issue. Seventhly, they held all things done above the girdle, by kissing, touching, words, compression of the breasts, &c. to be done in Charity and not against Continency. Eighthly, that neither Priest, nor civil Magistrate, being guilty of mortal sin, did enjoy their dignity, or were to be obeyed. Ninthly, they condemned Princes and Judges. Tenthly, they affirmed singing in the Church to be an hellish clamor. Eleventhly, they taught that men might dissemble their Religion, and so accordingly they went to Catholique Churches, dissembling their Faith, and made Offertories, Confessions, and Communions, after a dissembling manner. Waldo was m Alt. Mon. pag. 62. so enchanted, that (saith (m) Fox) he gave rewards to certain learned men to transliate the holy Scripture for him, and being thus holpen did (as the same Fox there reporteth) confer the form of Religion in his time time, to the infallible Word of God. A Godly example, for such as must needs have the Scripture in English, to be read by every simple body, with such fruit of godly Dotrine, as we have seen in the foresaid gross heresies of Waldo. The followers of Waldo, were like their Master, so unlearned, that some of them (saith (n) Fox) expounded the words, Joan. 1. Sint tum non receperunt: Swine did not receive him. And to conclude, they agreed in divers things with Catholiques against Protestants, as may be seen in (o) Bretly. n Ibid. o Trail. 2. cap. 2. sect. subd. 3.

51. Neither can it be pretended, that these are slanders forged by Catholiques. For, besides that the same things are testified by Protestant writers, as Illyricus, Cowper, and others, our Authors cannot be suspected of partiality in disavour of Protestants, unless you will say perhaps, that they were Prophets, and some hundred years ago, did both foresee that there were to be Protestants in the world, and that such Protestants were to be like the Waldenses. Besides, from whence, but from our Historics are Protestants come to know, that there were any such men as the Waldenses? and that in some Points they agreed with the Protestants, and disagreed from them in others? And upon what ground can they believe our Author for that part wherein the Waldenses were like to Protestants, and imagin they lyed in the rest?

52. Neither could Wicklyffe continue a Church never interrupted from the time of the Waldenses, after whom he lived more than one hundred and fifty years; to wit, the year 1371. He agreed with Catholiques about the worshipping of Reliques and Images: and, about the Intercession of our blessed Lady, the ever immaculate Mother of God, he went so far as to say, It seems to me (p) impossible, that we should be rewarded without the intercession of the Virgin Mary He held seven Sacraments, Purgatory, and other Points. And against both Catholiques and Protestants he maintained sundry damnable Dotrins, as divers Protestant Writers relate. As first: If a Bishop, or Priest be in deadly sin, he doth not indeed either give Orders, Consecrate, or Baptize. Secondly, That Ecclesiastical Ministers ought not to have any temporal possessions, nor propriety in any thing, but should beg; and yet he himself brake into heresie, because he had been deprived by the Archbishop of Canterbury of a certain Benefice, as all Schisms, and Heresies begin upon passion, which they seek to cover with the cloak of Reformation. Thirdly, he condemned lawful Oaths, like the Anabaptists. Fourthly, he taught that all things came to pass by absolute necessity. Fifthly, he defended humane merits as the wicked Pelagians did, namely, at proceeding from natural forces, without the necessary help of Gods grace. Sixthly, that no man is a Civil Magistrate, while he is in mortal sin, and that the people may at their pleasure correct Princes, when they offend: by which Dotrin he proves himself both a Heretique, and a Traitour. p In serm. de Assump. Mariæ.

53. As for Huss, his chiefest Dotrins were: That Lay people must receive in both kinds; and That Civil Lords, Prelates, and Bishops lose all right, and authority, while they are in mortal sin. For other things he wholly agreed with Catholiques against Protestants; and the Bohemians his followers being demanded in what points they disagreed from the Church of Rome, propounded only these: The necessity of Communion under both kinds, That all Civil Dominion was forbidden to the Clergy; That Preaching of the word, was free for all men, and in all places; That open crimes were in no wise to be permitted, for avoiding of greater evil. By these particulars, it is apparent that Huss agreed with Protestants against us, in one only Point of both kinds, which according to Luther is a thing indifferent; because he teacheth that Christ in this matter (q) commanded nothing as necessary. And he saith further: If thou come to a place (r) where one only kind is administred, use one kind only, as others do. Melanchthon likewise holds it a thing (s) indifferent: and the same is the opinion of some other Protestants. All which considered, it is clear, that Protestants cannot challenge the Waldenses, wicklyffe and Huss for members of their Church: and although they could, yet that would advantage them little towards the finding them out a perpetual visible Church of theirs, for the reasons above (t) specified. q In epist. ad Bohemos. r De utraq; specie Sacram. s In cent. epist. Theol. pag. 225. t Numb. 49.

54. If D. Potter would go so far off, as to fetch the Muscovites, Armenians, Georgians, Æthiopians, or Abissines into his Church, they would prove over dear bought: For they either hold the damnable Heresie of Eutyches, or use Circumcision, or agree with the Greek, or Roman Church: And it is most certain that they have nothing to do with the Dotrin of the Protestants.

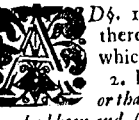

55. It being therefore granted that Christ had a visible Church in all Ages, and that there can be none assigned but the Church of Rome; it follows, that she is the true Catholique Church and that those pretended corruptions for which they forsook her, are indeed divine truths, delivered by the visible Catholique Church of Christ. And that Luther and his followers departed from her, and consequently are guilty of Schism, by dividing themselves from the Communion of the Roman Church. Which is clearly convinced out of D. Potter himself, although the Roman Church were but a particular Church. For he saith: Whosoever professes (u) himself to forsake the Communion of any one member of the body of Christ; must confess himself consequently to forsake the whole. Since therefore in the same place he expressly acknowledges the Church of Rome to be a member of the body of Christ, and that it is clear they have forsaken her; it evidently follows, that they have forsaken the whole, and therefore are most properly Schismatiques. u Pag. 67.

56. And lastly, since the crime of Schism is so grievous, that, according to the Dotrin of holy Fathers rehearsed above, no multitude of good works, no moral honesty of life, no cruel death endured even for the profession of some Article of Faith, can excuse any one who is guilty of that sin from damnation; I leave it to be considered, whether it be not true Charity to speak as we believe, and to believe as all Antiquity hath taught us, That whosoever either begins, or continues, a division from the Roman Church, which, we have proved to be Christ's true Militant Church on earth, cannot without effectual repentance hope to be a member of his Triumphant Church in heaven. And so I conclude with these words of blessed S. Augustine: It is common (w) to all Heretiques to be unable to see that thing which in the world is the most manifest, and placed in the light of all Nations: out of whose unity whatsoever they study, though they seem to do it with great care and diligence, can no more avail them against the wrath of God, than the Spider's web against the extremity of cold. But now it is high time that we treat of the other sort of Division from the Church, which is by Heresie. w Cont. Parm. lib. 2. c. 3.

The

The ANSWER to the FIFTH CHAPTER.

The ſeparation of Proteſtants from the Roman Church, being upon juſt and neceſſary cauſes, is not any way guilty of Schiſm.

1.  D§. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7. In the ſeven firſt Sections of this Chapter, there be many things ſaid, and many things ſuppoſed by you which are untrue, and deſerve a cenſure. As,

2. Firſt, That Schiſm could not be a diviſion from the Church, or that a diviſion from the Church could not happen, unleſs there always had been and ſhould be a viſible Church. Which Aſſertation is a manifeſt falſhood; For although there never had been any Church Viſible or Inviſible before this Age, nor ſhould be ever after; yet this could not hinder, but that a Schiſm might now be, and be a Diviſion from the preſent viſible Church. As though in France there never had been until now a lawful Monarch, nor after him ever ſhould be; yet this hinders not, but that now there might be a Rebellion, and that Rebellion might be an Inſurrection againſt Soveraign Authority.

3. That it is a point to be granted by all Chriſtians, that in all Ages there hath been a viſible congregation of Faithful people. Which Propoſition howſoever you underſtand it, is not abſolutely certain. But if you mean by Faithful, (as it is plain you do) free from all error in faith, then you know all Proteſtants with one conſent affirm it to be falſe; and therefore without proof to take it for granted is to beg the Queſtion.

4. That ſuppoſing Luther and they which did firſt ſeparate from the Roman Church were guilty of Schiſm, it is certainly conſequent, that all who perſiſt in this Diviſion muſt be ſo likwiſe. Which is not ſo certain as you pretend. For they, which alter without neceſſary cauſe the preſent goverment of any State, Civil or Eccleſiaſtical, do commit a great fault; whereof notwithſtanding they may be innocent who continue this alteration, and to the utmoſt of their power oppoſe a change though to the former State, when continuance of time hath once ſettled the preſent. Thus have I known ſome of your own Church, condemn the Low-country men who firſt revolted from the King of Spain, of the ſin of Rebellion; yet abſolve them from it who now being of your Religion there, are yet faithful maintainers of the common liberty againſt the pretences of the King of Spain.

5. Fourthly, That all thoſe which a Chriſtian is to eſteem neighbours do concur to make one company, which is the Church. Which is falſe: for a Chriſtian is to eſteem thoſe his neighbours, who are not members of the true Church.

6. Fifthly, That all the members of the Viſible Church, are by charity united into one myſtical body. Which is manifeſtly untrue; for many of them have no Charity.

7. Sixthly, That the Catholique Church ſignifies one company of faithful people, which is repugnant to your own grounds. For you require, not true Faith, but only the Profeſſion of it, to make men members of the Viſible Church.

8. Seventhly. That every Heretique is a Schiſmatique. Which you muſt acknowledge falſe in thoſe, who though they deny, or doubt of ſome Point profeſſed by your Church, and ſo are Heretiques; yet continue ſtill in the Communion of the Church.

9. Eighthly, That all the Members of the Catholique Church, muſt of neceſſity be united in external Communion. Which though it were much to be deſired it were ſo, yet certainly cannot be perpetually true. For a man unjuſtly excommunicated, is not in the Churches Communion, yet he is ſtill a Member of the Church:

Church: and divers times it hath happened, as in the caſe of Chryſoſtom and Epiphanius, that particular men, and particular Churches, have upon an over-valued difference, either renounced Communion mutually, or one of them ſeparated from the other, and yet both have continued Members of the Catholique Church. Theſe things are in thoſe ſeven Sections, either ſaid or ſuppoſed by you untruly, without all ſhew, or pretence of proof. The reſt is impertinent common place, wherein Proteſtants and the cauſe in hand, are abſolutely unconcern'd. And therefore I paſs to the eighth Section.

10. Ad §. 8. Wherein you obtrude upon us a double Fallacy; One in ſuppoſing and taking for granted, that whatſoever is affirmed by three Fathers, muſt be true; whereas your ſelves make no ſcruple of condemning many things of falſhood, which yet are maintained by more than thrice three Fathers. Another, in pretending their words to be ſpoken abſolutely, which by them are limited and reſtrained to ſome particular caſes. For whereas you ſay S. Auſtin c. 62. l. 2. cont. Parm. infers out of the former premiſes, That there is no neceſſity to divide Unity: to let paſs your want of diligence, in quoting the 62. Chapter of that Book, which hath but 23. in it: to paſs by alſo, that theſe words which are indeed in the 11. Chapter, are not inferred out of any ſuch premiſes as you pretend; this, I ſay, is evident, that he ſays not abſolutely, that there never is, or can be any neceſſity to divide Unity, (which only were for your purpoſe,) but only in ſuch a ſpecial caſe, as he there ſets down: That is, When good men tolerate bad men, which can do them no ſpiritual hurt, to the intent they may not be ſeparated from thoſe, who are ſpiritually good; Then (ſaith he there is no neceſſity to divide Unity. Which very words do clearly give us to underſtand, that it may fall out (as it doth in our caſe,) that we cannot keep Unity with bad men, without ſpiritual hurt, i. e. without partaking with them in their impieties, and that then there is a neceſſity to divide Unity from them: I mean, to break off conjunction with them in their impieties. Which that it was S. Auſtin's mind, it is moſt evident out of the 21. c. of the ſame Book: where, to Parmenian demanding, How can a man remain pure, being joyned with thoſe that are corrupted? he anſwers, Very true, this is not poſſible, if he be joyned with them; that is, if he commit any evil with them, or favour them which do commit it. But if he do neither of theſe, he is not joyned with them. And preſently after, Theſe two things retained, will keep ſuch men pure and uncorrupted; that is, neither doing ill, nor approving it. And therefore ſeeing you impoſe upon all men of your Communion a neceſſity of doing, or at leaſt approving many things unlawfull, certainly there lies upon us an unavoidable neceſſity of dividing Unity, either with you, or with God; and whether of theſe is rather to be done, be ye Judges.

11. Irenæus alſo ſays not ſimply (which only would do you ſervice,) There cannot poſſibly be any ſo important Reformation, as to juſtifie a ſeparation from them who will not reform: But only, they cannot make any corruption ſo great, as is the pernitiouſneſs of a Schiſm: Now, They, here, is a relative, and hath an antecedent expreſſed in Irenæus, which, if you had been pleaſed to take notice of, you would eaſily have ſeen, that what Irenæus ſays, falls heavy upon the Church of Rome, but toucheth Proteſtants nothing at all. For the men he ſpeaks of, are ſuch as propter modicas & quaſlibet cauſas, for trifling & ſmall cauſes, divide the body of Chriſt; ſuch as ſpeak of peace, and make war; ſuch as ſtrain at gnats, and ſwallow Camels. And theſe, ſaith he, can make no reformation of any ſuch importance, as to countervail the danger of a diviſion. Now, ſeeing the cauſes of our ſeparation from the Church of Rome, are (as we pretend, and are ready to juſtifie,) becauſe we will not be partakers with her in Superſtition, Idolatry, Impiety, and moſt cruel Tyranny, both upon the bodies and ſouls of men, Who can ſay, that the cauſes of our ſeparation, may be juſtly eſteemed Modica & quælibet cauſa? On the other ſide ſeeing the Biſhop of Rome, who was contemporary to Irenæus, did (as much as in him lay) cut off from the Churches unity, many many great Churches, for not confirming to him in an indifferent matter, upon a difference, Non de Catholico dogmate, sed de Ritu, vel Ritus potius tempore; Not about any Catholique doctrin, but only a Ceremony, or rather about the time of observing it? so Petavius values it: which was just all one, as if the Church of France should excommunicate those of their own Religion in England, for not keeping Christmas upon the same day with them. And seeing he was reprehended sharply and bitterly for it, by most of the Bishops of the world, as Eusebius testifies, and (as Cardinal Perron though mincing the matter, yet confesseth) by this very Irenæus himself in particular admonished, that for so small a cause (propter tam modicam causam,) he should not have cut off so many Provinces from the body of the Church: and lastly, seeing the Ecclesiastical Story of those times, mentions no other notable example of any such Schismatical presumption, but this of Victor; certainly we have great inducement to imagine, that Irenæus in this place by you quoted, had a special aim at the Bishop and Church of Rome. Once, this I am sure of, that the place fits him, and many of his successors, as well as if it had been made purposely for them. And this also, that he which finds fault with them who separate upon small causes, implies clearly, that he conceived, there might be such causes as were great and sufficient: And that then a Reformation was to be made, notwithstanding any danger of division that might ensue upon it.

12. Lastly S. Denis of Alexandria, says indeed and very well, that all things should be rather endured, than we should consent to the division of the Church: I would add Rather than consent to the continuation of the division, if it might be remedied. But then, I am to tell you, that he says not, All things should rather be done, but only, All things should rather be endured or suffered: wherein he speaks not of the evil of Sin, but of Pain and misery: Not of tolerating either Error, or Sin in others (though that may be lawful,) much less of joyning with others for quietness sake, (which only were to your purpose) in the profession of Error, and practice of Sin, but of suffering any affliction, nay even martyrdom in our own persons, rather than consent to the division of the Church. Omnia incommoda, so your own Christo plerson, enforced by the circumstances of the place, translates Dionysius his words, All miseries should rather be endured than we should consent to the Churches division.

13. Ad §. 9. In the next Paragraph you affirm two things, but prove neither, unless a vehement Asseveration, may pass for a weak proof. You tell us first, That the Doctrin of the total deficiency of the visible Church, which is maintained by divers chief Protestants, implies in it vast Absurity, or rather sacrilegious Blasphemy. But neither do the Protestants, alledged by you maintain the deficiency of the Visible Church, but only of the Churches visibilty; or of the Church as it is Visible, which so acute a man as you, now that you are minded of it, I hope will easily distinguish: Neither do they hold, that the visible Church hath failed totally and from its Essence, but only from its purity: and that it fell into many corruptions, but yet not to nothing. And yet if they had held, that there was not only no pure visible Church, but none at all: surely they had said more than they could justifie; but yet they do not shew, neither can I discover, any such Vast absurity or sacrilegious Blasphemy in this Assertion. You say secondly, that the reason which cast them upon this wicked Doctrine, was a desperate voluntary necessity, because they were resolved not to acknowledg the Roman to be the true Church, and were convinced by all manner of evidence, that for divers Ages before Luther there was no other. But this is not to dispute but to divine and take upon you the property of God which is to know the hearts of men. For why, I pray, might not the reason hereof rather be, because they were convinced by all manner of evidence, as Scripture, Reason, Antiquity, that all the visible Churches in the world, but above all the Roman, had degenerated from the purity of the Gospel of Christ, and thereupon did conclude there was no visible Church, meaning by no Church, none free from corruption, and conformable in all things to the Doctrine of Christ.

14. Ad §. 10. Neither is there any repugnance (but in words only) between these as you are pleased to stile them, exterminating Spirits, and those other, whom out of Courtesie you intitle, in your 10, §. more moderate Protestants. For these affirming the Perpetual Visibility of the Church, yet neither deny, nor doubt of her being subject to manifold and grievous corruptions, and those, of such a nature, as, were they not mitigated by invincible, or at least a very probable ignorance, none subject to them could be saved. And they, on the other side, denying the Churches Visibility, yet plainly affirm, that they conceive very good hope of the Salvation of many of their ignorant and honest Fore-fathers. Thus declaring plainly, though in words they denied the Visibility of the true Church, yet their meaning was not to deny the perpetuity, but the perpetual purity and incorruption of the Visible Church.

15. Ad §. 11. Let us proceed therefore to your 11 Section, where though D. Potter and other Protestants granting the Churches perpetual Visibility, make it needless for you to prove it, yet you will needs be doing that which is needless. But you do it so coldly and negligently, that it is very happy for you, that D. Potter did grant it.

16. For, What if the Prophets spake more obscurely of Christ, than of the Church? What if they had fore-seen, that greater contentions would arise about the Church than Christ? Which yet, he that is not a meer stranger in the story of the Church must needs know to be untrue, and therefore not to be fore-seen by the Prophets. What if we have manifestly received the Church from the Scriptures? Does it follow from any, or all these things, that the Church of Christ must be always visible?

17. Besides, What Protestant ever granted (that which you presume upon so confidently,) that every man for all the affairs of his soul must have recourse to some Congregation? If some one Christian lived alone among Pagans in some Country, remote from Christendom, shall we conceive it impossible for this man to be saved, because he cannot have recourse to any Congregation, for the affairs of his soul? Will it not be sufficient, for such an ones salvation, to know the doctrine of Christ, and live according to it? Such fancies as these, you do very wisely to take for granted, because you know well, 'tis hard to prove them.

18. Let it be as unlawful as you please, to deny and dissemble matters of faith. Let them that do so, not be a Church, but a damned crew of Sycophants: What is this to the Visibility of the Church? May not the Church be Invisible, and yet these that are of it profess their faith? No say you: Their profession will make them visible. Very true, visible in the places where, and in the times when they live, and to those persons, unto whom they have necessary occasion, to make their profession: But not visible to all, or any great, or considerable part of the world while they live, much less conspicuous to all ages after them. Now it is a Church thus illustriously and conspicuously visible that you require: by whose splendour all men may be directed and drawn to repair to her, for the affairs of their souls: Neither is it the Visibility of the Church absolutely, but this degree of it, which the most rigid Protestants deny: which is plain enough out of the places of Napper, cited by you in your ninth Part of this Chapter. Where his words are, God hath withdrawn his visible Church from open Assemblies, to the hearts of particular godly men. And this Church which had not open assemblies, he calls The Latent and Invisible Church. Now, I hope, Papists in England will be very apt to grant, men may be so far Latent and Invisible, as not to profess their faith in open Assemblies, nor to proclaim it to the world, and yet not deny, nor dissemble it; nor deserve to be esteemed a damned crew of dissembling Sycophants.

19. But, Preaching of the Word, and administration of the Sacraments, cannot but make a Church visible: and these are inseparable notes of the Church. I answer, they are ſo far inſeparable, that whereſoever they are, there a Church is: But not ſo,but that in ſome caſes there may be a Church,where theſe notes are not. Again, theſe notes will make the Church viſible: But to whom? Certainly not to all men, nor to moſt men: But to them only to whom the Word is preached, and the Sacraments are adminiſtred. They make the Church viſible,to whom themſelves are viſible,but not to others. As where your Sacraments are adminiſtred, and your Doctrine preached, it is viſible, that there is a Popiſh Church. But this may perhaps be viſible to them only, who are preſent at theſe performances, and to others as ſecret, as if they had never been performed.

20. But St. Auſtin ſaith, It is an impudent, abominable, deteſtable ſpeech,&c. to ſay, the Church hath periſhed. I anſwer; 1. All that St. Auſtin ſays, is not true. 2. Though this were true, it were nothing to your purpoſe,unleſs you will conceive it all one, not to be, and not to be conſpicuouſly viſible. 3. This very ſpeech that the Church periſhed, might be falſe and impudent in the Donatiſts, and yet not ſo in the Proteſtants. For there is no incongruity,that what hath lived 500 years,may periſh in 1600. But St. Auſtin denied not only the actual periſhing, but the poſſibility of it: and not only of its falling to nothing, but of its falling into corruption. I anſwer: though no ſuch thing appears out of thoſe places, yet, I believe, heat of diſputation againſt the Donatiſts,and a deſire to over-confute them tranſported him ſo far, as to urge againſt them more than was neceſſary, and perhaps more than was, true. But were he now revived, and did but confront the Doctrine of after Ages with that; his own experience would enforce him to change his opinion. As concerning the laſt ſpeech of St. Auſtin,I cannot but wonder very much,why he ſhould think it abſurd for any man to ſay, There are ſheep which he knows not, but God knows: and no leſs at you, for obtruding this ſentence upon us as pertinent proof of the Churches viſibility.

21. Neither do I ſee, how the Truth of any preſent Church depends upon the Perpetual Viſibility,nay,nor upon the perpetuity of that which is paſt or future. For what ſenſe is there, that it ſhould not be in the power of God Almighty, to reſtore to a flouriſhing eſtate, a Church which oppreſſion hath made Inviſible? To repair that which is ruined, to reform that which was corrupted,or to revive that which was dead? Nay, what reaſon is there, but that by ordinary means this may be done, ſo long as the Scriptures by Divine Providence are preſerved in their Integrity and Authority? As a Common-wealth, though never ſo far collapſed and over-run with diſorders,is yet in poſſibility of being reduced into its Original ſtate, ſo long as the Ancient Laws, and Fundamental Conſtitutions are extant, and remain inviolate, from whence men may be directed how to make ſuch a Reformation. But St. Auſtin urges this very Argument againſt the Donatiſts, and therefore it is good. I anſwer, that I doubt much of the Conſequence, and my reaſon is, becauſe you your ſelves acknowledge, that even General Councils (and therefore much more particular Doctors) though infallible in their determinations, are yet in their Reaſons and Arguments, whereupon they ground them, ſubject to like Paſſions and Errors with other men.

22. Laſtly, whereas you ſay, That all Divines define Schiſm, a Diviſion from the true Church, and from thence collect, That there muſt be a known Church from which it is poſſible for men to depart: I might very juſtly queſtion your Antecedent, and deſire you to conſider, whether Schiſm be not rather, or at leaſt be not as well a diviſion of the Church,as from it? A ſeparation,not of a part from the whole, but of ſome parts from the other. And if you liked not this definition, I might deſire you to inform me in thoſe many Schiſms,which have hapned in the Church of Rome, which of the parts was the Church, and which was divided from it. But to let this paſs, certainly your conſequence is moſt unreaſonable. For though whenſoever there is a Schiſm, it muſt neceſſarily ſuppoſe a Church exiſtent there, yet ſure we may define a Schiſm, that is, declare what the word ſignifies (for Defining is no more) though at this preſent there was neither Schiſm nor Church

Church in the world. Unleſs you will ſay, that we cannot tell what a Roſe is, or what the word Roſe ſignifies, but only in the Summer when we have Roſes: or that in the world to come, when men ſhall not marry, it is impoſſible to know, what it is to marry: or that the Plague is not a diſeaſe, but only when ſome body is infected: or that Adultery is not a ſin, unleſs there be Adulterers: or that before Adam had a Child, he knew not,and God could not have told him, what it was to be a Father. Certainly Sir, you have forgot your Metaphyſicks, which you ſo much glory in, if you know not, that the connexions of eſſential predicates with their ſubjects are eternal, and depend not at all upon the actual exiſtence of the thing defined. This definition therefore of Schiſm,concludes not the exiſtence of a Church, even when it is defined: much leſs the perpetual continuance of it, and leaſt of all the continuance of it in perpetual viſibility and purity,which is the only thing that we deny,and you are to prove. By this time, you perceive I hope, that I had reaſon to ſay, that it was well for you, that Dr. Potter granted the Churches perpetual Viſibility: for, for ought I can perceive, this Conceſſion of his, is the beſt ſtake in your hedge, the beſt pillar upon which this concluſion ſtands; which yet is the only ground-work of your whole Accuſation.

23. Ad §. 12. 47,48,49,50,51,52,53,54,55. The remainder of this Chapter, to convince Luther, and all that follow him to be Schiſmatiques, affords us Arguments of two ſorts: the firſt drawn from the nature of the thing: the ſecond from Dr. Potters words and acknowledgments. So that the former if they be good, muſt be good againſt all Proteſtants: the later only againſt Dr. Potter. I will examine them all, and doubt not to make it appear even to your ſelf, if you have any indifference,that there is not any ſound and concluding reaſon amongſt them, but that they are all poor and miſerable Sophiſms.

24. Firſt then to prove us Schiſmaticks, you urge from the nature of Schiſm this only Argument.

Whoſoever leave the external Communion of the viſible Church, are Schiſmaticks: But Luther and his followers left the external Communion of the viſible Church of Chriſt: Therefore they are Schiſmaticks,

The Major of this Syllogiſm you leave naked without proof; and conceive it, as it ſhould ſeem,able enough to ſhift for it ſelf. The Minor or ſecond Propoſition of this Argument, you prove by two other. The firſt is this.

They which forſook the external Communion of all viſible Churches, muſt needs forſake the external Communion of the true viſible Church of Chriſt: But Luther and his followers forſook the external Communion of all viſible Churches: Therefore they forſook the external Communion of the true viſible Church.

The Major of this Syllogiſm you take for granted (as you have reaſon:) The Minor you proſecute with great pomp of words, and prove with plenty of Reaſons, built upon the confeſſions of Dr. Potter, Luther, Calvin, and other Proteſtants; and this you do in the 12 §. of this Chapter.

The ſecond Argument to prove the Aſſumption of your Syllogiſm, ſtands thus:

The Roman Church, when Luther and his followers made the ſeparation, was the true viſible Church of Chriſt: But Luther and his followers forſook the external Communion of the Roman Church: Therefore they forſook the external Communion of the true viſible Church of Chriſt.

The Aſſumption of this Syllogiſm needs no proof: the Propoſition which needs it very much, you endeavour to confirm by theſe Reaſons:

1. The Roman Church had the notes of the Church aſſigned by Proteſtants. i. e. The true Preaching of the Word, and due adminiſtration of the Sacraments: Therefore ſhe was the true Church.

The Antecedent is proved: Becauſe Dr. Potter confeſſes ſhe wanted nothing Fundamental or neceſſary to ſalvation: Therefore for the Subſtance of the matter ſhe had theſe notes.

2. Either the Roman Church was the true viſible Church, or Proteſtants can name and prove ſome other, diſagreeing from the Roman, and agreeing with Proteſtants, in their particular Doctrines; or elſe they muſt ſay, There was no viſible Church: But they will not ſay, There was no Church: They cannot name and prove any other diſagreeing from the Roman, and agreeing with Proteſtants, in their particular Doctrines: becauſe this cannot be the Greek Church, nor that of the Waldenſes, Wickliffites, Huſſites, nor that of the Muſcovites, Armenians, Georgians, Æthiopians, which you confirm by ſeveral Arguments: Therefore they muſt grant, that the Roman Church was the true viſible Church.

And this is the buſineſs of your 17, 18, 19, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, and 55, Sections of this Chapter.

25. Now to all this, I anſwer very briefly thus: That you have played the unwiſe builder, and erected a ſtately ſtructure upon a falſe foundation. For whereas you take for granted as an undoubted Truth, That whoſoever leave the external communion of the viſible Church, are Schiſmatical. I tell you Sir, you preſume too much upon us, and would have us grant, that which is the main point in Queſtion. For either you ſuppoſe the external Communion of the Church corrupted, and that there was a neceſſity for them that would Communicate with this Church to communicate in her corruptions: Or you ſuppoſe her Communion uncorrupted. If the former, and yet will take for granted, that all are Schiſmaticks, that leave her Communion though it be corrupted, you beg the Queſtion in your Propoſition. If the latter, you beg the Queſtion in your ſuppoſition; for Proteſtants, you know, are Peremptory and Unanimous in the Denial of both theſe things: Both that the Communion of the Viſible Church was then uncorrupted; And that they are truly Schiſmaticks, who leave the Communion of the Viſible Church, if corrupted; eſpecially, if the caſe be ſo (and Luther's was ſo) that they muſt either leave her Communion, or of neceſſity Communicate with her in her corruptions. You will ſay perhaps, That you have already proved it impoſſible, that the Church, or her communion ſhould be corrupted. And therefore that they are Schiſmaticks, who leave the external Communion of the viſible Church, becauſe ſhe cannot be corrupted. And that hereafter you will prove, that corruption in the Churches Communion, though the belief and profeſſion of them be made the condition of her Communion, cannot juſtifie a ſeparation from it: And therefore that they are Schiſmaticks, who leave the Churches Communion though corrupted. I anſwer, that I have examined your proofs of the former, and found that a vein of Sophiſtry runs clean through them: And for the latter it is ſo plain and palpable a falſhood, that I cannot but be confident, whatſoever you bring in proof of it, will, like the Apples of Sodom, fall to aſhes upon the firſt touch. And this is my firſt and main exception againſt your former diſcourſe: that accuſing Proteſtants of a very great and horrible crime, you have proved your accuſation only which a Fallacy.

26. Another is, that although it were granted Schiſm, to leave the external Communion of the viſible Church in what ſtate or caſe ſoever it be, and that Luther and his followers were Schiſmaticks, for leaving the external Communion of all viſible Churches: yet you fail exceedingly of clearing the other neceſſary point undertaken by you, That the Roman Church was then the Viſible Church. For neither do Proteſtants (as you miſtake) make the true preaching of the Word, and due adminiſtration of the Sacraments, the notes of the Viſible Church, but only of a viſible Church: now theſe you know are very different things, the former ſignifying the Church Catholick, or the whole Church: the later a Particular Church, or a part of the Catholick. And therefore, ſuppoſe out of courteſie we ſhould grant, what by argument you can never evince, that your Church had theſe notes, yet would it by no means follow, that your Church were were the Viſible Church, but only a Viſible Church: not the whole Catholick, but only a part of it. But then beſides, where doth Dr. Potter acknowledge any ſuch matter as you pretend? Where doth he ſay, that you had for the ſubſtance, the true Preaching of the Word, or due Adminiſtration of the Sacraments? Or where does he ſay, that (from which you collect this) you wanted nothing Fundamental, or neceſſary to Salvation? He ſays indeed, that though your Errors were in themſelves damnable, and full of great impiety, yet he hopes, that thoſe amongſt you, who were invincibly ignorant of the truth, might by Gods great mercy, have their errors pardoned, and their ſouls ſaved: And this is all he ſays, and this you confeſs to be all he ſays, in divers places of your Book: which is no more than you your ſelf do, and muſt affirm of Proteſtants: And yet I believe, you will not ſuffer us to infer from hence, that you grant Proteſtants to have, for the ſubſtance, the true preaching of the Word, and due adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and want nothing fundamental or neceſſary to ſalvation. And if we ſhould draw this conſequence from your conceſſion, certainly we ſhould do you injury, in regard many things may in themſelves, and in ordinary courſe be neceſſary to ſalvation, to thoſe that have means to attain them, as your Church generally hath: which yet, by accident, to theſe which were, by ſome impregnable impediment, debarred of theſe means, may by Gods mercy be made unneceſſary.

27. Laſtly, whereas you ſay, that Proteſtants muſt either grant that your Church then was the viſible Church, or name ſome other, diſagreeing from yours, and agreeing with Proteſtants in their particular Doctrine, or acknowledge there was no viſible Church. It is all one, as if (to uſe St. Paul's ſimilitude) the head ſhould ſay to the foot, Either you muſt grant that I am the whole body, or name ſome other member that is ſo, or confeſs that there is no body. To which the foot may anſwer; I acknowledge there is a body: and yet, that no member beſide you is this body: yor yet that you are it, but only a part of it. And in like manner ſay we, We acknowledge a Church there was, corrupted indeed univerſally; but yet ſuch a one as we hope by Gods gracious acceptance, was ſtill a Church. We pretend not to name any one Society that was this Church; and yet we ſee no reaſon, that can inforce us to confeſs that yours was the Church, but only a part of it, and that one of the worſt then extant in the World. In vain therefore have you troubled your ſelf in proving, that we cannot pretend, that either the Greeks, Waldenſes, Wickliffites, Huſſites, Muſcovites, Armenians, Georgians, Abyſſines, were then the viſible Church. For all this diſcourſe proceeds upon a falſe and vain ſuppoſition, and begs another point in Queſtion between us, which is, that ſome Church of one denomination and one Communion (as the Roman, the Greek, &c.) muſt be always excluſively to all other Communions, the whole viſible Church. And though, perhaps ſome weak Proteſtant having the falſe principle ſetled in him, that there was to be always ſome Viſible Church of one denomination, pure from all error in doctrine, might be wrought upon, and prevailed with by it, to forſake the Church of Proteſtants: yet why it ſhould induce him to go to yours, rather than the Greek Church, or any other, which pretends to perpetual ſucceſſion as well as yours, that I do not underſtand; unleſs it be for the reaſon which Æneas Sylvius gave, why more held the Pope above a Council, than a Council above the Pope: which was becauſe Popes did give Biſhopricks and Archbiſhopricks, but Councils gave none, and therefore ſuing in Forma Pauperis, were not like to have their cauſe very well maintained. For put the caſe, I ſhould grant of meer favour, that there muſt be always ſome Church of one Denomination and Communion, free from all errors in Doctrine, and that Proteſtants had not always ſuch a Church: it would follow indeed from thence, that I muſt not be a Proteſtant: But that I muſt be a Papiſt, certainly it would follow by no better conſequence than this; If you will leave England, you muſt of neceſſity go to Rome. And yet with this wretched Fallacy, have have I been sometimes abused my self, and known many other poor souls seduced, not only from their own Church, and Religion, but unto yours. I beseech God to open the eyes of all that love the truth, that they may not always be held captive, under such miserable delusions.

28. We see then,, how unsuccessful you have been in making good your accusation, with reasons drawn from the nature of the thing, and which may be urged in common against all Protestants. Let us come now to the Arguments of the other kind, which you builded upon Dr. Potter's own words, out of which you promise unanswerable reasons to convince Protestants of Schism.

29. But let the understanding Reader, take with him but three of four short Remembrances, and I dare say he shall find them upon examination, not only answerable, but already answered. The Memorandums I would commend to him, are these.

30. 1. That not every separation, but only a causeless separation from the external Communion of any Church, is the Sin of Schism.

31. 2. That, Imposing upon men under pain of Excommunication a necessity of professing known errors, and practising known corruptions, is a sufficient and necessary cause of separation: and that this is the cause which Protestants alledge to justifie their separation from the Church of Rome.

32. 3. That to leave the Church, and to leave the external Communion of a Church, at least, as Dr. Potter understands the words, is not the same thing: That being done, by ceasing to be a member of it, by ceasing to have those requisites which constitute a man a member of it, as faith and Obedience: This, by refusing to communicate with any Church in her Liturgies and publick worship of God. This little Armour if it be rightly placed, I am perswaded, will repel all those Batteries which you threaten shall be so furious.

33. Ad §. 13, 14, 15. The first is a sentence of St. Austine against Donatus, applied to Luther thus. If the Church perished, what Church brought forth Donatus, (you say Luther?) If she could not perish, what madness moved the sect of Donatus, to separate, upon pretence to avoyd the Communion of bad men? Whereunto, one fair answer (to let pass many others) is obvious out of the second observation: That this sentence though it were Gospel, as it is not, is impertinently applyed to Luther and Lutherans, whose pretence of separation (be it true, or be it false,) was not (as that of the Donatists) only to avoid the Communion of bad men: but to free themselves from a necessity (which but by separating was unavoidable,) of joyning with bad men in their impieties. And your not substituting Luther instead of Donatus in the latter part of the Dilemma as well as in the former, would make a suspicious man conjecture that you your self took notice of this exception of disparity between Donatus and Luther.

34. Ad § 16. Your second onset drives only at those Protestants, who hold the true Church was invisible for many ages. Which Doctrine (if by the true Church be understood, the pure Church, as you do understand it) is a certain truth, and it is easier for you to declaim (as you do) than to dispute against it. But these men you say must be Heretick, because they separate from the Communion of the visible Church: and therefore also from the Communion of that which they say was invisible: Inasmuch as the invisible Church communicated with the visible.

35. Answ. I might very justly desire some proof of that which so confidently you take for granted: That, there were no persecuted and oppressed maintainers of the Truth in the days of our Fore-fathers, but only such as dissembled their opinions, and lived in your Communion. And truly if I should say, there were many of this condition, I suppose, I could make my Affirmative much more probable, than you can make your Negative. We read in Scripture, that Elias conceived There was none left beside himself in the whole Kingdom of Israel, who had not revolted from God: and yet God himself assures us that he was deceived.

deceived. And if such a man, a Prophet, and one of the greatest, erred in his judgment touching his own time, and his own country, why may not you, who are certainly but a man, and subject to the same passions as Elias was, mistake in thinking, that in former ages, in some Country or other, there were not always some good Christians, which did not so much as externally bow their knees to your Baal? But this answer I am content you shall take no notice of, and think it sufficient to tell you, that if it be true that this supposed invisible Church did hypocritically communicate with the visible Church, in her corruptions, then Protestants had cause, nay, necessity, to forsake their Communion also; for otherwise they must have joyn'd with them in the practice of impieties: and seeing they had such cause to separate, they presume their separation cannot be schismatical.

36. Yes, you reply, To forsake the external Communion of them with whom they agree in faith, is the most formal and proper sin of Schism. Answ. Very true, but I would fain know wherein. I would gladly be informed, whether I be bound, for fear of Schism, to communicate with those that believe as I do, only in lawful things, or absolutely in every thing: whether I am to joyn with them in superstition and Idolatry, and not only in a common profession of the faith wherein we agree, but in a common dissimulation or abjuration of it. This is that which you would have them do, or else, forsooth, they must be Schismaticks. But hereafter, I pray you remember, that there is no necessity of communicating even with true Believers in wicked actions. Nay, that there is a necessity herein to separate from them. And then I dare say, even you being their judge, the reasonableness of their cause to separate shall, according to my first observation, justifie their separation from being schismatical.

37. Arg. But the property of Schism, according to Dr. Potter, is to cut off from the hope of salvation, the Church from which it separates: And these Protestants have this property, therefore they are Schismaticks.

38. Anf. I deny the Syllogism, it is no better than this:

One Symptom of the Plague is a Fever;
But such a man hath a Fever:
Therefore he hath the Plague.

The true Conclusion which issues out of these Premisses, should be this, Therefore he hath one Symptom of the Plague. And so likewise in the former, Therefore they have one property or one quality of Schismaticks. And as in the former instance, The man that hath one sign of the Plague, may by reason of the absence of other requisites, not have the Plague: So these Protestants may have something of Schismaticks, and yet not be Schismaticks. A Tyrant sentencing a man to death for his pleasure, and a just judge that condemns a Malefactor, do both sentence a man to death, and so for the matter do both the same thing: yet the one does wickedly, the other justly. What's the reason? because the one hath cause, the other hath not. In like manner Schismaticks, either always or generally denounce damnation to them from whom they separate. The same do these Protestants, and yet are not Schismaticks. The reason: because Schismaticks do it, and do it without cause, and Protestants have cause for what they do. The impieties of your Church, being, generally speaking, damnable; unless where they are excused by ignorance, and expiated at least by a general repentance. In fine, though perhaps it may be true, that all Schismaticks do so: yet universal affirmatives are not converted, and therefore it follows not by any good Logick that all that do so, when there is just cause for it, must be Schismaticks. The cause in this matter of separation is all in all, and that for ought I see, you never think of. But if these rigid Protestants have just cause to cut off your Church from the hope of Salvation: How can the milder sort allow hope of Salvation to the Members of this Church? Answ. Distinguish the quality of the Persons censured, and this seeming repugnance of their censures will vanish into nothing.

nothing. For your Church may be conſidered either in regard of thoſe, in whom, either negligence, or pride, or worldly fear, or hopes, or ſome other voluntary ſin, is the cauſe of their ignorance, which I fear is the caſe of the generality of men amongſt you: or in regard of thoſe who owe their Errors from Truth, to want of capacity, or default of inſtruction; either in reſpect of thoſe that might know the truth and will not, or of thoſe who would know the truth, but (all things conſidered) cannot: In reſpect of thoſe that have eyes to ſee, and will not ſee; or thoſe that would gladly ſee, but want eyes, or light. Conſider the former ſort of men, (which your more rigid cenſures ſeem eſpecially to reflect upon,) and the heavieſt ſentence will not be too heavy. Conſider the later, and the mildeſt will not be too mild. So that here is no difference but in words only, neither are you flattered by the one, nor uncharitably cenſured by the other.

39. Your next blow is directed againſt the milder ſort of Proteſtants, who (you ſay) involve themſelves in the ſin of Schiſm by communicating with thoſe (as you call them) exterminating Spirits, whom you conceive your ſelf to have proved Schiſmaticks: And now load them further with the crime of Hereſie. For, ſay you, If you held your ſelves obliged under pain of damnation, to forſake the Communion of the Roman Church by reaſon of her Errors, which yet you confeſs were not fundamental: ſhall it not be much more damnable, to live in confraternity with theſe, who defend an Error of the failing of the Church, which in the Donatiſts you confeſs to have been properly Heretical?

40. Anſw. You miſtake, in thinking that Proteſtants hold themſelves obliged not to communicate with you, only or principally by reaſon of your Errors and Corruption. For the true reaſon, according to my third Obſervation, is not ſo much becauſe you maintain Errors and Corruptions, as becauſe you impoſe them: and will allow your Communion to none but to thoſe that will hold them with you; and have ſo ordered your Communion, that either we muſt communicate with you in theſe things, or nothing. And for this very reaſon, though it were granted, that theſe Proteſtants held this Doctrine which you impute to them; And though this Error were as damnable, and as much againſt the Creed as you pretend: Yet, after all this, this parity between you and them, might make it more lawful for us to communicate with them than you: becauſe what they hold, they hold to themſelves, and refuſe not (as you do) to communicate with them that hold the contrary.

41. Thus we may anſwer your Argument, though both your former Suppoſitions were granted. But then for a ſecond anſwer, I am to tell you, that there is no neceſſity of granting either of them. For neither do theſe Proteſtants hold the failing of the Church from its being, but only from its viſibility: which if you conceive all one, then muſt you conceive that the Stars fail every day, and the Sun every night. Neither is it certain that the doctrine of the Churches failing is repugnant to the Creed. For as the truth of the Article of the remiſſion of ſins, depends not upon the actual remiſſion of any mans ſins, but upon Gods readineſs and reſolution to forgive the ſins of all that believe and repent; ſo that although unbelief or impenitence ſhould be univerſal, and the Faithful ſhould abſolutely fail from the children of men, and the Son of Man ſhould find no faith on the earth; yet ſhould the Article ſtill continue true, that God would forgive the ſins of all that repent: In like manner, It is not certain that the truth of the Article of the Catholick Church, depends upon the actual exiſtence of a Catholick Church; but rather upon the right, that the Church of Chriſt, or rather (to ſpeak properly) the Goſpel of Chriſt hath to be univerſally believed. And therefore the Article may be true, though there were no Church in the world. In regard, this notwithſtanding, it remains ſtill true, that there ought to be a Church, and this Church ought to be a Catholick. For as, of theſe two Propoſitions, There is a Church in America, and There ſhould be a Church in America, the truth of the later depends not upon the truth of the former, ſo neither does it in theſe theſe two: There is a Church diffuſed all the World over, and, There ſhould be a Church diffuſed all the World over.

42. Thirdly, if you underſtand by Errors not fundamental, ſuch as are not damnable, it is not true, as I have often told you, that we confeſs your errors not fundamental.

43. Laſtly, for your deſire that I ſhould here apply an authority of Saint Cyprian alledged in your next number I would have done ſo very willingly, but indeed I know not how to do it: for in my apprehenſion it hath no more to do with your preſent buſineſs of proving it unlawful, to communicate with theſe Men, who hold the Church was not always viſible, than In nova fert animus. Beſides, I am here again to remember you, that St. Cyprians words, were they never ſo pertinent, yet are by neither of the parts litigant eſteemed any rule of Faith. And therefore the urging of them, and ſuch like authorities, ſerves only to make Books great, and Controverſies endleſs.

44. Ad §. 17. The next Section in three long leaves, delivers us this ſhort ſenſe, That thoſe Proteſtants which ſay they have not left the Churches external Communion, but only her corruptions, pretend to do that which is impoſſible; becauſe theſe corruptions were inherent in the Churches external Communion; and therefore he that forſakes them, cannot but forſake this.

45. Anſw. But, Who are they that pretend, they forſook the Churches corruptions, and not her external communion? Some there be that ſay, they have not left the Church, that is, not ceaſed to be members of the Church, but only left her corruptions: ſome, that they have not left the communion, but the corruptions of it; meaning the internal communion of it, and conjunction with it, by faith and obedience: which diſagree from the former only in the manner of ſpeaking; for he that is in the Church, is in this kind of communion with it: and he that is not in this internal communion, is not in the Church. Some perhaps, that they left not your external communion in all things; meaning, that they left it not voluntarily being not fugitivi, but fugati, as being willing to join with you in any act of Piety; but were by you neceſſited and conſtrained to do ſo, becauſe you would not ſuffer them to do well with you, unleſs they would do ill with you. Now to do ill that you may do well, is againſt the will of God, which to every good Man is a high degree of neceſſity. But for ſuch Proteſtants, as pretend that, de facto, they forſook your corruptions only, and not your external communion, that is, ſuch as pretend to communicate with you in your Confeſſions and Liturgies, and participations of Sacraments; I cannot but doubt very much, that neither you, nor I, have ever met with any of this condition. And if perhaps you were led into error, by thinking that to leave the Church, and to leave the external communion of it, was all one in ſenſe and ſignification, I hope by this time you are diſabus'd and begin to underſtand, that as a Man may leave any faſhion or cuſtom of a College, and yet remain ſtill a member of the College; ſo a Man may poſſibly leave ſome Opinion or practice of a Church, formerly common to himſelf and others, and continue ſtill a member of that Church: Provided that what he forſakes be not one of thoſe things, wherein the eſſence of the Church conſiſts. Whereas peradventure this practice may be ſo involved with the external communion of this Church, that it may be ſimply impoſſible for him to leave this practice, and not to leave the Churches external communion.

Caſaubon in Ep. ad Card. Perron.

46. You will reply, perhaps, That the difficulty lies as well againſt thoſe who pretend to forſake the Churches corruptions, and not the Church, as againſt thoſe who ſay, they forſook the Churches corruptions and not her external communion. And that the reaſon is ſtill the ſame: becauſe theſe ſuppoſed corruptions, were inherent in the whole Church, and therefore, by like reaſon with the former, could not be forſaken, but if the whole Church were forſaken.

47. Anſw. A pretty ſophiſm, and very fit to perſwade Men that it is impoſſible for them, to forſake any error they hold, or any vice they are ſubject to, either peculiar to themſelves, or in common with others: Becauſe, forſooth, they cannot forſake Themſelves; and Vices and Errors are things inherent in themſelves. The deceit lies, in not diſtinguiſhing between a Local and a Moral forſaking of any thing. For as it were an abſurdity, fit for the maintainers of Tranſubſtantiation to defend, that a Man may Locally and properly depart from the Accidents of a ſubject, and not from the ſubject it ſelf: So is it alſo againſt reaſon to deny, that a Man may (by an uſual phraſe of ſpeech) forſake any cuſtom or quality, good or bad, either proper to himſelf, or common to himſelf with any company, and yet never truly or properly forſake either his company or himſelf. Thus if all the Jeſuits in the Society, were given to write Sophiſtically, yet you might leave this ill cuſtom, and yet not leave your Society. If all the Citizens of a City, were addicted to any vanity, they might, either all, or ſome of them, forſake it and yet not forſake the City. If all the parts of a Mans body were dirty or filthy, nothing hinders but that all or ſome of them might cleanſe themſelves, and yet continue parts of the body. And what reaſon then in the World is there, if the whole Viſible Church were over-run with tares and weeds of Superſtitions, and corruptions, but that ſome members of it might reform themſelves, and yet continue ſtill true members of the body of the Church, and not be made no members, but the better by their Reformation? Certainly it is ſo obvious and ſenſible a Truth, that this thing is poſſible, that no Man in his wits, will be perſwaded out of it, with all the Quirks and Metaphyſicks in the World. Neither is this to ſay, that a Man may keep company with Chriſtopher Potter, and not keep company with the Provoſt of Qu. Colledg: Nor that a Man can avoid the company of a Sinner, and at the ſame time be really preſent with the Man who is the Sinner: which we leave to thoſe Proteſtants of your invention, who are ſo fooliſh, as to pretend, that a Man may really ſeparate himſelf from the Churches external Communion as ſhe is corrupted, and yet continue in that Churches external Communion, which in this external Communion is corrupted. But we, that ſay only the whole Church being corrupted, ſome parts of it might and did reform themſelves, and yet might and did continue parts of the Church, though ſeparated from the external Communion of the other parts, which would not reform, need not trouble our ſelves to reconcile any ſuch repugnance. For the caſe put by you, of keeping D. Potters company, and leaving the company of the Provoſt of Queens Colledg; and of leaving a Sinners company, and not the Mans: are nothing at all like ours. But if you would ſpeak to the Point, you muſt ſhew, that D. Potter cannot leave being Provoſt of Queens Colledge, without ceaſing to be himſelf: or, that a Sinner cannot leave his ſin, without ceaſing to be a Man: or that he that is part of any Society, cannot renounce any Vice of that Society, but he muſt relinquiſh the Society. If you would ſhew any of theſe things, then indeed (I dare promiſe) you ſhall find us apt enough to believe, that the particular parts of the Viſible Church could not reform themſelves, but they muſt of neceſſity become no parts of it. But until we ſee this done, you muſt pardon us, if we chuſe to believe ſenſe rather than Sophiſtry.

48. In this Paragraph you bring in the ſentence of St. Cyprian, whereto you refer'd us in the former: but, Why, in a Controverſie of Faith, do you cite any thing, which is confeſſed on all hands, not to be a rule of Faith? Beſides, in my apprehenſion, this ſentence of S. Cyprian, is, in this place, and to this purpoſe, meerly impertinent. St. Cyprians words are, The Church (he ſpeaks of the particular Church, or Dioceſs of Rome) being one, cannot be within and without: If ſhe be with Novatianus, ſhe was not with Cornelius: But if ſhe were with Cornelius who ſucceeded Fabianus by lawful Ordination, Novatianus is not in the Church. And now, having related the words, I am only to remember the Reader, that your buſineſs was to prove it impoſſible, For a man to forſake the Churches corruptions, and not the Church, and to requeſt him to tell me, Whether, as I ſaid, In nova fert animus, had not been as much to the purpoſe?

49. Toward the concluſion of this Section, you number up your Victories, and and tell us, That out of your diſcourſe it remaineth clear, that this our chiefeſt Anſwer changeth the very ſtate of the Queſtion; confoundeth internal Acts of the underſtanding, with external deeds: doth not diſtinguiſh between Schiſm and Hereſie, and leaves this demonſtrated againſt us, that they (Proteſtants) divided themſelves from the communion of the Viſible Catholique Church, becauſe they conceived that ſhe needed Reformation. To which Triumphs, if any Reply be needful, then briefly thus: We do not change the ſtate of the Queſtion, but you miſtake it. For the Queſtion was not, Whether they might forſake the corruptions of the Church, and continue in her external communion, which we confeſs impoſſible, becauſe theſe corruptions were in her communion: But the Queſtion was, Whether they might forſake the corruptions of the Church, and not the Church, but continue ſtill the members of it. And to this Queſtion, there is not in your whole diſcourſe one pertinent ſyllable.

50. We do not confound internal Acts of underſtanding with external deeds, but acknowledg (as you would have us) that we cannot (as matters now ſtand) ſeparate from your corruptions, but we muſt depart from your External communion. For you have ſo ordered things, that whoſoever will communicate with you at all, muſt communicate with you, in your corruptions. But it is you that will not perceive the difference, between, being a part of the Church, and being in external Communion of all the other parts of it: taking for granted, that which is certainly falſe, that no two Men or Churches, divided in external communion, can be both true parts of the Catholick Church.

51. We are not to learn the difference between Schiſm and Hereſie, for Hereſie we conceive, An obſtinate defence of any Error againſt any neceſſary Article of the Chriſtian faith: and Schiſm, A cauſleſs ſeparation of one part of the Church from another. But this we ſay, That if we convince you of Errors, and corruptions, profeſſed and practiſed in your Communion, then we cannot be Schiſmaticks, for refuſing to join with you in the profeſſion of theſe Errors, and the practice of theſe corruptions. And therefore you muſt free either us from Schiſm, or your ſelves from Error: at leaſt from requiring the profeſſion of it as a condition of your Communion.

52. Laſtly, whereas you ſay, That you have demonſtrated againſt us, that Proteſtants divided themſelves from the external communion of the Viſible Church, add, Which external communion was corrupted, and we ſhall confeſs the accuſation, and glory in it. But this is not that Quod erat demonſtrandum, but that we divided our ſelves from the Church, that is, made our ſelves out-laws from it, and no members of it. And moreover, in the Reaſon of our ſeparation from the external communion of your Church you are miſtaken: for it was not ſo much becauſe ſhe, your Church, as becauſe your Churches external communion, was corrupted, and needed Reformation.

53. That a pretence of Reformation will acquit no man from Schiſm, we grant very willingly, and therefore ſay, that it concerns every Man who ſeparates from any Churches communion, even as much as his Salvation is worth, to look moſt carefully to it, that the cauſe of his ſeparation be juſt and neceſſary: For unleſs it be neceſſary, it can very hardly be ſufficient. But whether a true Reformation of our ſelves from errors, ſuperſtition, and impieties, will not juſtifie our ſeparation in theſe things; our ſeparation, I ſay, from them who will not reform themſelves, and, as much as in them lies, hinder others from doing ſo, This is the point you ſhould have ſpoken to, but have not. As for the ſentences of the Fathers to which you refer us, for the determination of this Queſtion, I ſuppoſe by what I have ſaid above, the Reader underſtands, by alledging them you have gain'd little credit to your cauſe or perſon. And that, if they were competent Judges of this Controverſie, their ſentence is againſt you much rather than for you.

54. Laſtly, wherein you deſire D. Potter to remember his own words: There neither was nor can be any juſt cauſe to depart from the Church of Chriſt, no more than from Chriſt himſelf, and pretend that you have ſhewed that Luther did ſo: The Doctor remembers his words very well, and hath no reaſon to be aſhamed of them. Only he deſires you to remember that hereafter you do not confound, as hitherto you have done Departing from the Church (i.e. ceaſing to be a member of it,) with departing from the Churches external communion; and then he is perſwaded it will appear to you, that againſt Luther and his followers you have ſaid many things, but ſhewed nothing.

55. But the Church Univerſal, remaining the Church Univerſal, according to D. Potter may fall into error: And from hence it clearly follows, that it is impoſſible to leave the external communion of the Church ſo corrupted, and retain external communion with the Catholique Church. Anſ. The reaſon of this conſequence which you ſay is ſo clear, truly I cannot poſſibly diſcern; But the concluſion inferr'd, me-thinks, is evident of it ſelf, and therefore without proof I grant it. I mean, that it is impoſſible to leave the external communion of the Catholique Church corrupted, and to retain external communion with the Catholique Church. But what uſe you can make of it, I do not underſtand: Unleſs you will pretend, that to ſay a Man may forſake the Churches corruptions, and not the Church, is all one as to ſay, he may forſake the Churches external communion and not forſake it. If you mean ſo, ſure you miſtake the meaning of Proteſtants when they ſay, They forſook not the Church but her corruptions. For in ſaying ſo, they neither affirm, nor deny that they forſook the external communion of the Church, nor ſpeak at all of it: But they mean only, that they ceaſed not to be ſtill members of the Church, though they ceaſed to believe and practiſe ſome things which the whole Church formerly did believe and practiſe. And as for the external Communion of the Viſible Church, we have without ſcruple formerly granted, the Proteſtants did forſake it, that is, renounce the practice of ſome obſervance, in which the whole Viſible Church before them did communicate. But this we ſay they did without Schiſm, becauſe they had cauſe to do ſo, and no Man can have cauſe to be a Schiſmatique.

56. But your Argument you conceive, will be more convincing, if we conſider that when Luther appeared, there were not two diſtinct Viſible true Churches, one Pure, the other Corrupted, but one Church onely. Anſ. The ground of this is no way certain, nor here ſufficiently proved. For, whereas you ſay, Hiſtories are ſilent of any ſuch matter; I anſwer, there is no neceſſity, that you or I ſhould have read all Hiſtories, that may be extant of theſe matters; nor that all ſhould be extant that were written, much leſs extant uncorrupted: eſpecially, conſidering your Church, which had lately all the power in her hands, hath been ſo pernitiouſly induſtrious, in corrupting the Monuments of Antiquity that made againſt her; nor that all Records ſhould remain which were written; nor that all ſhould be recorded which was done. Neither ſecondly, to ſuppoſe a Viſible Church before Luther, which did not err, is it to contradict this ground of D. Potters, that the Church may err. Unleſs you will have us believe, that, May be, and Muſt be is all one, and that all which may be true, is true: which rule if it were true, then ſure all Men would be honeſt, becauſe all men may be ſo; and you would not make ſo bad Arguments, unleſs you will pretend, you cannot make better. Nor thirdly, is it to contradict theſe words, The Church may not hope to triumph over all error, till ſhe be in Heaven: For to triumph over error is to be ſecure from it, to be out of danger of it, not to be obnoxious to it. Now a Church may be free from error, and yet not ſecure from it, and conſequently in this ſenſe, not triumph over it. Fourthly, whereas you ſay, it evacuateth the brag of Proteſtants, that Luther reformed the whole Church; perhaps (though I know not who they be that ſay ſo,) by a frequent Synecdoche, they may mean by the whole, the greateſt, and moſt illuſtrious part of it, the luſtre whereof did much obſcure the other, though it were not wholly inviſible. Beſides, if their brag be evacuated, (as you call it) let it be ſo, I ſee no harm will come of it.

Laſtly

Laſtly, whereas you ſay, that ſuppoſing a viſible pure Church, Luther muſt be a Schiſmatick who ſeparated from all viſible Churches: I tell you, if you will ſuppoſe a viſible Church extant before and when Luther aroſe, conformable to him in all points of Doctrin, neceſſary and profitable, then Luther ſeparated not from this Church, but adjoined himſelf to it: Not indeed in place, which was not neceſſary, not in external communion which was impoſſible, but by the Union of faith and charity. Upon theſe grounds, I ſay, that the ground of this Argument is no way made certain; yet becauſe it is not manifeſtly falſe, I am content to let it paſs. And, for ought I ſee, it is very ſafe for me to do ſo: for you build nothing upon it which I may not fairly grant. For what do you conclude from hence, but that, ſeeing there was no viſible Church but corrupted, Luther forſaking the external communion of the corrupted Church, could not but forſake the external communion of the Catholique Church? Well, let this alſo be granted, what will come of it? What, that Luther muſt be a Schiſmatique? By no means: For not every ſeparation, but onely a cauſleſs ſeparation from the communion of the Church we maintain to be Schiſmatical. Hereunto may be added, that though the whole Church were corrupted, yet properly ſpeaking, it is not true, that Luther and his Followers forſook the whole corrupted Church, or the external communion of it: But only that he forſook that Part of it which was corrupted, and ſtill would be ſo, and forſook not, but only reformed another Part, which Part they themſelves were, and I ſuppoſe you will not go about to perſuade us, that they forſook themſelves or their own communion. And if you urge, that they joined themſelves to no other part, therefore they ſeparated from the whole: I ſay, it follows not, in as much as themſelves were a part of it, and ſtill continued ſo: and therefore could no more ſeparate from the whole than from themſelves. Thus though there were no part of the people of Rome, to whom the Plebeians joined themſelves, when they made their Seceſſion into the Aventine Hill; yet they divided themſelves from the Patricians only and not from the whole people, becauſe themſelves were a part of this people, and they divided not from themſelves.

57. ad §. 18. In the 18. §. you prove that which no Man denies, that Corruption in manners yields no ſufficient cauſe to leave the Church: yet ſure, it yields ſufficient cauſe to caſt them out of the Church, that are, after the Churches publique admonition, obſtinate in notorious impieties. Neither doth the cutting off ſuch men from the Church, lay any neceſſity upon us, either to go out of the World, or out of the Church, but rather puts theſe men out of the Church into the World, where we may converſe with them freely, without ſcandal to the Church. Our bleſſed Saviour foretold, you ſay, that there ſhould be in the Church tares with choice Corn. Look again, I pray, and you ſhall ſee, that the field he ſpeaks of, is not the Church, but the World: and therefore neither do you obey our Saviour's command, Let both grow up till the harveſt, who teach it to be lawful to root theſe tares (ſuch are Hereticks) out of the World: neither do Proteſtants diſobey it, if they eject manifeſt Hereticks and notorious Sinners out of the Church.

58. ad §. 19. In the 19. you are ſo courteous as to ſuppoſe corruptions in your doctrin: and yet undertake to prove that, neither could they afford us any ſufficient cauſe, or colourable neceſſity to depart from them. Your reaſon is, Becauſe damnable errors there were none in your Church, by D. Potters confeſſion, neither can it be damnable in reſpect of error, to remain in any Churches communion; whoſe errors are not damnable. For if the error be not damnable, the belief thereof cannot. Anſ. D. Potter confeſſeth no ſuch matter: but only that he hopes that your errors though in themſelves ſufficiently damnable, yet by accident did not damn all that held them: ſuch he means and ſays, as were excuſably ignorant of the Truth, and amongſt the number of their unknown ſins, repented daily of their unknown errors. The truth is, he thinks as ill of your errors and their deſert, as you do of ours: only he is not ſo peremptory and preſumptuous in judging your perſons, as you are in judging ours, but leaves them to ſtand or fall to their own Maſter, who is infinitely merciful, and therefore will not damn them for meer errors, who deſire to find the truth and cannot: and withal infinitely juſt, and therefore (it is to be feared) will not pardon them, who might eaſily have come to the knowledg of the truth, and either through Pride, or Obſtinacy, or Negligence would not.

59. To your minor alſo, I anſwer almoſt in your own words, §. 42. of this Chap. I thank you for your courteous Suppoſal, that your Church may err, and in recompence thereof, will do you a charity, by putting you in mind, into what Labyrinths you caſt your ſelf, by ſuppoſing that the Church may err in ſome of her Propoſals, and yet denying it lawful for any Man though he know this, which you ſuppoſe, to oppoſe her judgment, or leave her communion. Will you have ſuch a Man diſſemble againſt his conſcience, or externally deny that which he knows true? No, that you will not, for them that do ſo, you your ſelf have pronounced a damned crew of diſſembling Sycophants. Or would you have him continue in your Communion, and yet profeſs your Church to err? This you your ſelves have made to him impoſſible. Or would you have him believe thoſe things true, which together with him you have ſuppoſed to be Errors? This is ſuch an one, as is aſſur'd or perſuaded of that, which you here ſuppoſe, that your Church doth err, (and ſuch onely, we ſay, are obliged to forſake your communion,) is, as Schoolmen ſpeak, Implicatio in terminis, a contradiction ſo plain, that one word deſtroyeth another; as if one ſhould ſay, a living dead man. For it is to require that they which believe ſome part of your Doctrin falſe, ſhould withal believe it all true. Seeing therefore, for any Man to believe your Church in Error, and profeſs the contrary, is damnable Hypocriſie; to believe it and not believe it, a manifeſt repugnancy; and thirdly, to profeſs it and to continue in your Communion (as matters now ſtand) a plain impoſſibility; what remains, but that whoſoever is ſuppoſed to have juſt reaſon to disbelieve any doctrin of your Church, muſt of neceſſity forſake her Communion; Unleſs you would remit ſo far from your preſent Rigour, as to allow them your Churches communion, who publickly profeſs that they do not believe every Article of her eſtabliſhed doctrin. Indeed, if you would do ſo, you might with ſome coherence ſuppoſe your Church in Error, and yet find fault with Men for abandoning her communion, becauſe they might continue in it, and ſuppoſe her in Error. But to ſuppoſe your Church in Error, and to excommunicate all thoſe that believe your own ſuppoſition, and then to complain that they continue not in your communion, is the moſt ridiculous incongruity that can be imagined. And therefore though your corruptions in doctrin, in themſelves (which yet is falſe) did not, yet your obliging us to profeſs your doctrin uncorrupted againſt knowledg and conſcience, may induce an Obligation to depart from your communion. As, if there were any ſociety of Chriſtians, that held there were no Antipodes; notwithſtanding this Error, I might communicate with them. But if I could not do ſo without profeſſing my ſelf of their belief in this matter, then I ſuppoſe I ſhould be excus'd from Schiſm, if I ſhould forſake their communion, rather than profeſs my ſelf to believe that which I do not believe. Neither is there any contradiction or ſhadow of contradiction, that it may be neceſſary for my ſalvation to depart from the Churches communion: And that this Church (though erring in this matter) wants nothing neceſſary to Salvation. And yet this is that manifeſt contradiction, which D. Potter (you ſay) will never be able to ſalve; viz. That there might be neceſſary cauſe to depart from the Church of Rome in ſome Doctrins and Practices, though ſhe wanted nothing neceſſary to Salvation.

60. And your Reaſon wherewith you prove that there is in theſe words ſuch a plain contradiction, is very notable. For (ſay you) if ſhe wanted nothing neceſſary neceſſary to ſalvation, How could it be neceſſary to ſalvation to forſake her? Truly Sir, if this be a good manner of proving, it is a very ready way to prove any thing; for what is there that may not be proved, if it be proof enough to ask, How it can be otherwiſe? Methinks if you would convince D. Potters words of manifeſt contradiction, you ſhould ſhew, that he affirms and denies the ſame of the ſame. From which fault methinks he ſhould be very innocent, who ſays only, that that may be damnable to one, which is not ſo to another; and that may be neceſſary for one, which is not neceſſary for another. And this is all that D. Potter ſays here; viz. That the profeſſion of a falſhood to him that believes it, may not be damnable: and yet damnable to him that believes the contrary. Or that, not to profeſs a falſhood in him that knows it to be ſo, is neceſſary to ſalvation: and yet not ſo, in him that by Error conceives it to be a truth. The words by you cited, and charged with unſalvable contradiction, are in the 75th page. But in the progreſs of the ſame particular Diſcourſe, in the next page but one he gives ſuch evident reaſon of them, (which can hardly be done to prove implicancy true) that whereas you ſay, he will never be able to ſalve them from contradition, I believe any indifferent Reader, having conſidered the place, will be very apt to think, that you (whatſoever you pretend) were very able to have done this courteſie for him, if your will had been anſwerable to your ability. I will ſet down the words, and leave the Reader to condemn or abſolve them, To forſake the errors of that Church, and not to join with her in thoſe practices which we account erroneous, we are enforced by neceſſity. For though in the iſſue they are not damnable to them which believe as they profeſs, yet for us to profeſs a Vow by Oath (as the Church of Rome enjoyns) what we believe not, were without queſtion damnable. And they with their errors, by the grace of God might go to Heaven, when we for our hypocriſie and diſſimulation (he might have added, and perjury) ſhould certainly be condemned to Hell.

61. add §. 20. But a Church not erring in Fundamentals, though erring in other matters, doth what our Saviour exacts at her hands, doth as much as lies in her power to do: Therefore the communion of ſuch a Church is not upon pretence of Error to be forſaken. The conſequence is manifeſt. The antecedent is proved, becauſe God, by D. Potters confeſſion, hath promiſed his aſſiſtance no further, nor is it in her power to do more than God doth aſſiſt her to do. Anſw. The Promiſe of Divine Aſſiſtance is two-fold: Abſolute, or Conditional. That there ſhall be by Divine Providence preſerv'd in the World to the Worlds end, ſuch a company of Chriſtians, who hold all things preciſely and indiſpenſably neceſſary to ſalvation, and nothing inevitably deſtructive of it: This and no more the Doctor affirms, that God hath promiſed abſolutely. Yet he neither doubts nor denies, but that a farther aſſiſtance is conditionally promiſed us, even ſuch an aſſiſtance as ſhall lead us, if we be not wanting to it and our ſelves, into all not onely neceſſary, but very profitable truth, and guard us from all not onely deſtructive, but alſo hurtful Errors. This, I ſay, he neither denies nor queſtions. And ſhould he have done ſo, he might have been confuted by evident and expreſs Text of Scripture. When therefore you ſay, That a Church not erring in Fundamentals, doth as much as by Gods aſſiſtance lies in her power to do: This is manifeſtly untrue. For Gods aſſiſtance is always ready to promote her farther. It is ready, I ſay, but on condition the Church does implore it: on Condition, that when it is offered in the divine directions of Scripture and Reaſon, the Church be not negligent to follow it. If therefore there be any Church, which, retaining the foundation, builds hay and ſtubble upon it; which believing what is ſo preciſely neceſſary, errs ſhamefully and dangerouſly in other things very profitable: This by no means argues defect of Divine Aſſiſtance in God, but neglect of this aſſiſtance in the Church. Neither is there any reaſon, why ſuch a Church ſhould pleaſe her ſelf too much for retaining Fundamental Truths, while ſhe remains ſo regardleſs of others. For though the ſimple defect of ſome truths profitable only and not ſimply ply neceſſary, may conſiſt with ſalvation; yet, Who is there that can give her ſufficient aſſurance, that the neglect of ſuch truths is not damnable? Beſides, Who is there that can put her in ſufficient caution, that theſe Errors about profitable matters may not, according to the uſual fecundity of Error, bring forth others of a higher quality, ſuch as are pernicious and peſtilent, and undermine by ſecret conſequences the very foundations of Religion and Piety? Laſtly, Who can ſay that ſhe hath ſufficiently diſcharged her duty to God and Man by avoiding only Fundamental Hereſies, if in the mean time ſhe be negligent of others, which though they do not plainly deſtroy Salvation, yet obſcure and hinder, and only not block up the way to it? Which though of themſelves and immediately they damn no Man, yet are cauſes and occaſions that many Men run the race of Chriſtian Piety more remiſly than they ſhould, many defer their repentance, many go on ſecurely in their ſins, and ſo at length are damn'd by means and occaſion of theſe Errors, though not for them. Such Errors as theſe, (though thoſe of the Roman Church be much worſe, even in themſelves damnable, and by accident only pardonable) yet, I ſay, ſuch Errors as theſe, if any Church ſhould tolerate, diſſemble, and ſuffer them to reign, and neglect to reform them, and not permit them to be freely, yet peaceably, oppoſed and impugned; Will any wiſe Man ſay, that ſhe hath ſufficiently diſcharged her duty to God and Man? that ſhe hath with due fidelity diſpenſed the Goſpel of Chriſt? that ſhe hath done what ſhe could, and what ſhe ought? What ſhall we ſay then, if theſe Errors be taught by her, and commanded to be taught? What if ſhe thunder out her Curſes againſt thoſe that will not believe them? What if ſhe rave and rage againſt them, and perſecute them with fire and ſword, and all kinds of moſt exquiſite torments? Truly, I do much fear, that from ſuch a Church (though it hold no error abſolutely unconſiſtent with ſalvation) the Candleſtick of God, either is already removed, or will be very ſhortly; and becauſe ſhe is negligent of profitable truths, that ſhe will loſe thoſe that are neceſſary; and becauſe ſhe will not be led into all truths, that in ſhort time ſhe ſhall be led into none. And although this ſhould not happen, yet what mortal Man can ſecure us, that not only a probable unaffected ignorance, not only a meer neglect of profitable truths, but alſo a retchleſs ſupine negligence, manifeſt contempt, Diſſimulation, Oppoſition, Oppreſſion of them may conſiſt with ſalvation? I truly for my part, though I hope very well of all ſuch, as, ſeeking all truth, find that which is neceſſary; who endeavouring to free themſelves from all Errors, any way contrary to the purity of Chriſtianity, yet fail of performance and remain in ſome: yet if I did not find in my ſelf a love and deſire of all profitable truth; If I did not put away idleneſs, and prejudice, and worldly affections, and ſo examine to the bottom all my Opinions of divine matters, being prepar'd in mind to follow God, and God only, which way ſoever he ſhall lead me: If I did not hope, that I either do, or endeavour to do theſe things, certainly I ſhould have little hope of obtaining ſalvation.

62. But to oblige any man under pain of damnation to forſake a Church by reaſon of ſuch errors, againſt which Chriſt thought it ſuperfluous to promiſe his aſſiſtance, and for which he neither denies his grace here, nor his glory hereafter, what is it but to make the narrow way to heaven, narrower than Chriſt left it? Anſw. It is not: for Chriſt himſelf hath obliged us hereunto. He hath forbad us under pain of damnation to profeſs what we believe not, and conſequently under the ſame penalty, to leave that Communion, in which we cannot remain without this hypocritical profeſſion of thoſe things, which we are convinc'd to be erroneous. But then beſides, it is here falſly ſuppoſed, (as hath been ſhewed already) that Chriſt hath not promiſed aſſiſtance to thoſe that ſeek it, but only in matters ſimply neceſſary. Neither is there any reaſon, why any Church, even in this World, ſhould deſpair of Victory over all Errors pernicious or noxious; provided ſhe humbly and earneſtly implore divine aſſiſtance, depend wholly upon it, and be not wanting to it. Though a Triumph over all ſin and error, that is, ſecurity that ſhe neither doth nor can err, be rather to be deſired than hoped for on earth, being a felicity reſerved for heaven.

63. Ad § 21. But at leaſt the Roman Church is as infallible as Proteſtants, and Proteſtants as fallible as the Roman Church: therefore to forſake the Roman Church for errors, what is it but to flit from one erring Society to another. Anſw. The inconſequence of this Argument is too apparent: Proteſtants may err as well as the Church of Rome, therefore they did ſo! Boys in the Schools know, that à Poſſe ad Eſſe, the Argument follows not. He is equally fallible who believes twice two to be four, as he that believes them to be twenty, yet in this, he is not equally deceived, and he may be certain that he is not ſo. One Architect is no more infallible than another, and yet he is more ſecure that his work is right and ſtreight who hath made it by the level, than he which hath made it by gueſs and by chance. So he that forſakes the errors of the Church of Rome, and therefore renounceth her communion, that he may renounce the profeſſion of her errors, though he knows himſelf fallible, as well as thoſe whom he hath forſaken, yet he may be certain (as certain as the nature of the thing will bear) that he is not herein deceived: becauſe he may ſee the Doctrin forſaken by him repugnant to Scripture, and the Doctrine embraced by him conſonant to it. At leaſt, this he may know, that the Doctrine which he hath choſen to him ſeems true, and the contrary which he hath forſaken, ſeems falſe: And therefore without remorſe of Conſcience, he may profeſs that, but this he cannot.

64. But we are to remember, that, according to D. Potter, the viſible Church hath a bleſſing not to err in Fundamentals, in which any private Reformer may fail, therefore there was no neceſſity of forſaking the Church, out of whoſe communion they were expoſed to danger of falling into many more, and even into damnable errors. Anſw. The viſible Church is free indeed from all errors abſolutely deſtructive and unpardonable, but not from all error which in it ſelf is damnable: nor from all which will actually bring damnation upon them, that keep themſelves in them, by their own voluntary and avoidable fault. From ſuch errors which are thus damnable, D. Potter doth no where ſay, that the viſible Church hath any priviledg or exemption. Nay, you your ſelf teach, that he plainly teacheth the contrary, and thereupon will allow him to be no more charitable to Papiſts, than Papiſts are to Proteſtants: and yet upon this affected miſtake your Diſcourſe is founded in almoſt forty places of your Book. Beſides, any private Man who truly believes the Scripture, and ſeriouſly endeavours to know the will of God, and to do it, is as ſecure as the viſible Church, more ſecure than your Church, from the danger of erring in fundamentals: for it is impoſſible, that any Man ſo qualified ſhould fall into any error which to him will prove damnable. For God requires no more of any Man to his Salvation, but his true endeavour to be ſaved. Laſtly, abiding in your Churches Communion is ſo far from ſecuring me or any Man from damnable error, that if I ſhould abide in it, I am certain I could not be ſaved. For abide in it I cannot, without profeſſing to believe your entire Doctrine true: profeſs this I cannot, but I muſt lye perpetually, and exulcerate my Conſcience. And though your errors were not in themſelves damnable, yet to reſiſt the known Truth, and to continue in the profeſſion of known errors and falſhood, is certainly a capital ſin, and of great affinity with the ſin which ſhall never be forgiven.

65. But neither is the Church of Proteſtants perfectly free from errors, and corruptions: ſo the Doctor confeſſes, p. 69. which he can only excuſe, by ſaying, they are not fundamental, as likewiſe thoſe in the Roman Church, are confeſſed not to be fundamental. And what man of judgment will be a Proteſtant, ſince that Church is confeſſedly a corrupted one. Anſw. And yet you your ſelf make large Diſcourſes in this very Chapter, to perſwade Proteſtants to continue in the Church of Rome, though ſuppoſed to have ſome corruptions. And why, I pray, may not a man of judgment continue in this Communion of a Church confeſſedly corrupted, as well as a Church ſuppoſed to be corrupted, requires the belief and profeſſion of her ſuppoſed corruptions, as the condition of her Communion: which this Church, confeſſedly corrupted, doth not. What man of judgment will think it any diſparagement to his judgment, to prefer the better, though not ſimply the beſt, before that which is ſtark nought? To prefer indifferent good health, before a diſeaſed and corrupted ſtate of body? To prefer a field not perfectly weeded, before a field that is quite over-run with weeds and thorns? And therefore though Proteſtants have ſome Errors, yet ſeeing they are neither ſo great as yours, nor impos'd with ſuch tyranny, nor maintained with ſuch obſtinacy; he that conceives it any diſparagement to his judgment, to change your Communion for theirs, though confeſſed to have ſome corruptions, it may well be preſum'd that he hath but little judgment. For as for your pretence that yours are confeſſed not to be Fundamental, it is an effected miſtake, as already I have often told you.

66. Ad § 22. But D. Potter ſays, It is comfort enough for the Church, that the Lord in mercy will ſecure her from all her capital dangers: but ſhe may not hope to triumph over all ſin and error, till ſhe be in heaven. Now if it be comfort enough to be ſecur'd from all capital dangers, which can ariſe only from error in fundamental points, Why were not our firſt Reformers content with enough, but would needs diſmember the Church, out of a pernicious greedineſs of more than enough? Anſw. I have already ſhewed ſufficiently, how capital danger may ariſe from errors, though not fundamental. I add now, that what may be enough for men in ignorance, may be to knowing men not enough: according to that of the Goſpel, to whom much is given, of him much ſhall be required: That the ſame error may be not capital to thoſe who want means of finding the truth, and capital to others who have means, and neglect to uſe them: That to continue in the profeſſion of error diſcovered to be ſo, may be damnable, though the error be not ſo. Theſe I preſume are reaſons enough, and enough why the firſt Reformers might think, and juſtly, that not enough for themſelves, which yet to ſome of their Predeceſſors they hope might be enough. This very Argument was objected to (a) S. Cyprian upon another occaſion, and alſo by the (b) Britiſh Quartodecimans to the maintainers of the Doctrine of your Church; and (c) by both this very anſwer was returned; and therefore I cannot but hope that for their ſakes you will approve it.

(a) S. Cyprian, Ep. 63. In theſe words, Siquis de anteceſſoribus noſtris, vel ignoranter vel ſimpliciter non hoc obſervavit, & tenuit quod nos Dominus ſecuto Exemplo & Magiſterio ſuo docuit, poteſt ſimplicitati ejus, de indulgentia Domini, venia concedi: nobis vrò non poteſt ignoſci, qui nunc à Domino admoniti & inſtructi ſumus. (b) Wilfridus, to Abbot Colman alledging that he followeth the example of his Predeceſſors famous for holineſs, and famous for Miracles in theſe words, De Patre veſtro Columba & ſequacibus ejus, quorum ſanctitatem vos imitari & regulam ac præcepta, cæleſtibus ſignis confirmata ſequi perhibetis, poſſum reſpondere: Quia multi in judicio dicentibus Domino quòd in nomine ejus prophetaverint & dæmonia ejecerint, & virtutes multas fecerint, reſponſurus ſit Dominus, quia nunquam eos noverit. Sed abſit de patribus veſtris hoc dicam, quia juſtius multo eſt de incognitis bonum credere quam malum. Et de illos Dei famulos & Deo dilectos eſſe non nego, qui ſimplicitate ruſticâ, ſed intentione piâ Deum dilexerunt: Neque illis multum obeſſe Paſcha talem vel obſervantiam, quam diu nullus advenerat qui eis inſtituti perfectioris decreta quæ ſequerentur oſtenderet. Quos utique credo, ſiquis tunc ad eos Catholicus circulator adveniret, ſit ejus monita ſuiſſe ſecutoros, quomodo ea quæ noverant ac didicerunt Dei mandata, probantur fuiſſe ſecuti. Tu autem & ſocii tui ſi audita decreta ſedis Apoſtolicæ, imo univerſalis Eccleſiæ, & hæc literis ſacris confirmata contemnitis, abſque ulla dubitate peccatis. (c) Beda, lib. 3. Eccl. Hiſt. c. 25.

67. But if (as the Doctor ſays) no Church may hope to triumph over all error till ſhe be in Heaven, then we muſt either grant, that errors not fundamental cannot yield ſufficient cauſe to forſake the Church, or you muſt affirm, that all Communities may and ought to be forſaken. Anſw. The Doctor does not ſay, that no Church may hope to be free from all error, either pernicious, or any way noxious: But that no Church may hope to be ſecure from all error ſimply, for this were indeed truly to triumph over all. But then we ſay not, that the Communion of any Church is to be forſaken for errors unfundamental, unleſs it exact withal either a diſſimulation of them being noxious; or a Profeſſion of them againſt the dictate of Conſcience, if they be meer errors. This, if the Church does (as certainly yours doth) then her Communion is to be forſaken, rather than the ſin of Hypocriſie to be committed. Whereas to forſake the Churches of Proteſtants for ſuch errors, there is no neceſſity, becauſe they err to themſelves, and do not under pain of Excommunication exact the profeſſion of their errors.

68. But the Church may not be left by reaſon of ſin, therefore neither by reaſon of errors not fundamental: in as much as both ſin and error are impoſſible to be avoided till ſhe be in heaven. Anſw. The reaſon of the conſequence does not appear to me: But I anſwer to the Antecedent: Neither for ſin nor errors ought a Church to be forſaken, if ſhe does not impoſe and enjoin them: But if ſhe do, (as the Roman does) then we muſt forſake Men rather than God; leave the Churches Communion rather than commit ſin, or profeſs known errors to be divine truths. For the Prophet Ezekiel hath aſſured us, that to ſay, The Lord hath ſaid ſo, when the Lord hath not ſaid ſo, is a great ſin, and a high preſumption, be a matter never ſo ſmall.

69. Ad § 23. But neither the quality nor the number of your Churches errors could warrant our forſaking of it. Not the quality, becauſe we ſuppoſe them not fundamental. Not the number, becauſe the foundation is ſtrong enough to ſupport them. Anſw. Here again you vainly ſuppoſe, that we conceive your errors in themſelves not damnable: Though, we hope, they are not abſolutely unpardonable, but to ſay they are pardonable, is indeed to ſuppoſe them damnable. Secondly, though the errors of your Church did not warrant our departure, yet your tyrannous Impoſition of them, would be our ſufficient juſtification. For this lays neceſſity on us, either to forſake your company, or to profeſs what we know to be falſe.

70. Our Bleſſed Saviour hath declared his will, that we forgive a private Offender ſeventy ſeven times, that is, without limitation of quantity of time, or quality of treſpaſſes; and then, how dare we alledg his command, that we muſt not pardon his Church for errors acknowledged to be not fundamental? Anſw. He that commands us to pardon our Brother ſinning againſt us ſo often, will not allow us for his ſake to ſin with him, ſo much as once. He will have us to do any thing but ſin, rather than offend any Man. But his will is alſo, that we offend all the World, rather than ſin in the leaſt matter. And therefore though his will were, and it were in our power (which yet is falſe) to pardon the errors of an erring Church; yet certainly it is not his will, that we ſhould err with the Church, or if we do not, that we ſhould againſt conſcience profeſs the errors of it.

71. Ad § 24. But Schiſmaticks from the Church of England, or any other Church, with this very Anſwer, that they forſake not the Church, but the errors of it, may caſt off from themſelves the imputation of Schiſm. Anſw. True, they may make the ſame anſwer, and the ſame defence as we do; as a Murtherer can cry, Not guilty, as well as an innocent perſon, but not ſo truly, nor ſo juſtly. The queſtion is, not what may be pretended, but what can be proved by Schiſmaticks. They may object errors to other Churches, as well as we do to yours; but that they prove their accuſation ſo ſtrongly as we can, that appears not. To the Prieſts and Elders of the Jews, impoſing that ſacred ſilence mentioned in the Acts of the Apoſtles, Saint Peter and Saint John anſwered, They muſt obey God rather than men. The three Children, to the King of Babylon, gave in effect the ſame anſwer. Give me now any factious Hypocrite, who makes Religion the pretence and cloak of his Rebellion, and, Who ſees not that ſuch an one may anſwer for himſelf, in thoſe very formal words, which the holy Apoſtles and Martyrs made uſe of? And yet, I preſume, no Chriſtian will deny, but this anſwer was good, in the mouth of the Apoſtles and Martyrs, though it were obnoxious to be abuſed, by Traitors and Rebels. Certainly therefore it is no good conſequence to ſay, Schiſmatiques may make uſe of this anſwer, therefore all that do make uſe of it are Schiſmatiques. But moreover, it is to be obſerved, that the chief part of our defence, that you deny your communion to all that deny or doubt of any part of your doctrine, cannot with any colour be imployed againſt Proteſtants: who grant their Communion to all who hold with them, not all things, but things neceſſary, that is, ſuch as are in Scripture plainly delivered.

72. But the forſaking the Roman Church opens a way to innumerable Sects and Schiſms, and therefore it muſt not be forſaken. Anſw. We muſt not do evil to avoid evil: neither are all courſes preſently lawful, by which inconveniences may be avoided. If all Men would ſubmit themſelves to the chief Muſty of the Turks, it is apparent there would be no diviſions; yet Unity is not to be purchaſed at ſo dear a rate. It were a thing much to be deſired, that there were no diviſions: yet difference of Opinions touching Points controverted, is rather to be choſen than unanimous concord in damned errors. And it is better for Men to go to heaven by divers ways, or rather by divers paths of the ſame way, than in the ſame path to go on peaceably to hell. Amica Pax, magis amica Veritas!

73. But there can be no juſt cauſe to forſake the Church, ſo the Doctor grants: who notwithſtanding teacheth that the Church may err in points not fundamental; therefore neither is the Roman Church to be forſaken for ſuch errors. Anſw. There can be no juſt cauſe to forſake the Church abſolutely and ſimply in all things, that is, to ceaſe being a member of the Church: This I grant, if it will do you any ſervice. But that there can be no juſt cauſe to forſake the Church in ſome things, or (to ſpeak more properly) to forſake ſome Opinions and Practices, which ſome true Church retains and defends; this I deny, and you miſtake the Doctor, if you think he affirms it.

74. Ad §. 26, 27. What prodigious Doctrines (ſay you) are theſe? Thoſe Proteſtants who believe that your Church erred in points neceſſary to ſalvation, and for that cauſe left her, cannot be excuſed from damnable Schiſm: But others, &c. Prodigious doctrines indeed! But who, I pray, are they that teach them? Where does D. Potter accuſe thoſe Proteſtants of damnable Schiſm? who left your Church becauſe they hold it erroneous in neceſſary Points? What Proteſtant is there that holds not that you taught things contrary to the plain Precepts of Chriſt: both Ceremonial, in mutilating the Communion; and Moral in points of Superſtition and Idolatry, and moſt bloody tyranny? which is without queſtion to err in neceſſary matters. Neither does D. Potter accuſe any Man of Schiſm for holding ſo: if he ſhould, he ſhould call himſelf a Schiſmatick. Only he ſays, ſuch (if there be any ſuch) as affirm, that ignorant ſouls among you, who had no means to know the truth, cannot poſſibly be ſaved, that their wiſdom and charity cannot be juſtified. Now you your ſelf have plainly affirmed, That Ignorant Proteſtants dying with contrition may be ſaved; and yet would be unwilling to be thought to ſay, that Proteſtants err in no Points neceſſary to ſalvation. For that may be in it ſelf, and in ordinary courſe, where there are means of knowledg, neceſſary, which to a Man invincibly ignorant, will prove not neceſſary. Again, where doth D. Potter ſuppoſe (as you make him) that there were other Proteſtants, who believed that your Church had no errors: Or, where does he ſay, they did well to forſake her, upon this ridiculous reaſon, becauſe they judged that ſhe retained all means neceſſary to ſalvation? Do you think us ſo ſtupid, as that we cannot diſtinguiſh between that which D. Potter ſays, and that which you make him ſay? He vindicates Proteſtants from Schiſm two ways: The one is, becauſe they had juſt and great and neceſſary cauſe to ſeparate, which Schiſmaticks never have; becauſe they that have it, are no Schiſmaticks: For Schiſm is always a cauſleſs ſeparation. The other is, becauſe they did not join with their ſeparation, an uncharitable damning of all thoſe from whom they did divide themſelves, as the manner of Schiſmaticks is. Now that which he intends for a circumſtance of our ſeparation, you make him, make the cauſe of it, and the motive to it. And whereas he ſays, Though we ſeparate from you in ſome things, yet we acknowledg your Church a member of the body of Chriſt, and therefore are not not Schiſmaticks: you make him ſay moſt abſurdly, We did well to forſake you, becauſe we judged you a member of the body of Chriſt. Juſt as if a Brother ſhould leave his Brothers company in ſome ill courſes, and ſhould ſay to him, Herein I forſake you, yet I leave you not abſolutely, for I acknowledg you ſtill to be my Brother, and ſhall uſe you as a Brother: And you perverting his ſpeech ſhould pretend that he had ſaid, I leave your company in theſe ill courſes, and I do well to do ſo, becauſe you are my Brother: ſo making that the cauſe of leaving him, which indeed is the cauſe that he left him no farther.

75. But you ſay, The very reaſon for which he acquitteth himſelf from Schiſm, is, becauſe he holds that the Church which they forſook, is not cut off from the Body of Chriſt. Anſw. This is true: But can you not perceive a difference between juſtifying his ſeparation from Schiſm by this reaſon, and making this the reaſon of his ſeparation? If a Man denying Obedience in ſome unlawful matter to his lawful Sovereign, ſhould ſay to him, Herein I diſobey you, but yet I am no Rebel, becauſe I acknowledg you my Sovereign Lord, and am ready to obey you in all things lawful; ſhould not he be an egregious Sycophant, that ſhould accuſe him, as if he had ſaid, I do well to diſobey you; becauſe I acknowledg you my lawful Sovereign? Certainly, he that joins this acknowledment with his neceſſitated Obedience, does well; but he that makes this conſideration the reaſon of diſobedience, doth ill. Urge therefore this (as you call it) moſt ſolemn ſoppery as far as you pleaſe: For every underſtanding Reader will eaſily perceive that this is no ſoppery of D. Potters, but a calumny of yours; from which he is as far, as he is from holding yours to be the true Church: whereas it is a ſign of a great deal of Charity in him, that he allows you to be a Part of it.

76. And whereas you pretend to find ſuch unſpeakable comfort herein, that we cannot clear our ſelves from Schiſm, otherwiſe than by acknowledging that they do not, nor cannot, cut off your Church from the hope of ſalvation. I beſeech you to take care that this falſe comfort coſt you not too dear. For why this good opinion of God Almighty, that he will not damn Men for error, who were without their own fault ignorant of the truth, ſhould be any conſolation to them, who having the Key of Knowledg, will neither uſe it themſelves, nor permit others to uſe it; who have eyes to ſee and will not ſee, who have ears to hear and will not hear, this, I aſſure you, paſſeth my capacity to apprehend. Neither is this to make our ſalvation depend on yours, but only ours and yours not deſperately inconſiſtent, nor to ſay, we muſt be damn'd, unleſs you may be ſaved; but that we aſſure our ſelves, if our lives be anſwerable, we ſhall be ſaved by our knowledg. And that we hope, (and I tell you again, Spes eſt rei incertæ nomen) that ſome of you may poſſibly be ſaved by occaſion of their unaffected Ignorance.

77. For our Brethren, whom you ſay, we condemn of Hereſie for denying the Churches perpetuity, we know none that do ſo: unleſs you conceive a corrupted Church to be none at all; and, if you do, then for ought I know, in your account we muſt be all Hereticks; for all of us acknowledg that the Church might be corrupted even with errors in themſelves damnable, and not only might, but hath been.

78. But Schiſm conſiſts in being divided from that true Church, with which a Man agreeth in all points of Faith: Now we muſt profeſs, you ſay, that we agree with the Church of Rome in all Fundamental Articles; Therefore we are Schiſmaticks. Anſw. Either in your Major, by all points of Faith, you mean all fundamental points only, or all ſimply and abſolutely. If the former, I deny your Major: for I may without all Schiſm divide from that Church which errs in any point of Faith Fundamental, or otherwiſe, if ſhe require the profeſſion of this Error among the conditions of her Communion. Now this is our caſe. If the later, I deny the Syllogiſm, as having manifeſtly four terms, and being couſin-german to this.

He

He that obeys God in all things is innocent;
Titius obeys God in ſome things;
Therefore he is innocent.

79. But they who judg a reconciliation with the Church of Rome to be damnable; they that ſay, there might be juſt and neceſſary cauſe to depart from it, and that they of that Church which have underſtanding and means to diſcover their Error, and neglect to uſe them, are not to be flattered with hope of ſalvation; they do cut off that Church from the Body of Chriſt, and the hope of ſalvation, and ſo are Schiſmaticks: but D. Potter doth the former; therefore he is a Schiſmatick. Anſ. No, he doth not: not cut off that whole Church from the hope of ſalvation, not thoſe members of it who were invincibly, or excuſably ignorant of the truth; but thoſe only who having underſtanding and means to diſcover their error, neglect to uſe them. Now theſe are not the whole Church; and therefore he that, ſuppoſing their impenitence, cuts theſe off from hopes of ſalvation, cannot be juſtly ſaid to cut off that whole Church from the Body of Chriſt, and the hope of ſalvation.

80. Ad § 28, 29. Whereas D. Potter ſay, There is a great difference between a Schiſm from them, and a Reformation of our ſelves: this, you ſay, is a quaint ſubtilty, by which all Schiſm and Sin may be as well excuſed. It ſeems then in your judgment, that thieves and adulterers, and murtherers, and traitors may ſay with as much probability as Proteſtants, that they did no hurt to others, but only reform themſelves. But then methinks it is very ſtrange, that all Proteſtants ſhould agree with one conſent in this defence of themſelves from the imputation of Schiſm: and that to this day, never any Thief or Murtherer ſhould have been heard of, to make uſe of this Apology! And then for Schiſmaticks I would know, Whether Victor Biſhop of Rome, who excommunicated the Churches of Aſia, for not conforming to his Church in keeping Eaſter; whether Novatian that divided from Cornelius, upon pretence that himſelf was elected Biſhop of Rome, when indeed he was not; whether Felicitſimus and his Crew, that went out of the Church of Carthage, and ſet up Altar againſt Altar, becauſe having fallen in perſecution, they might not be reſtored to the peace of the Church preſently, upon the intereceſſion of the Confeſſors; whether the Donatiſts, who divided from, and damned all the World, becauſe all the World would not excommunicate them who were accuſed only, and not convicted, to have been Traitors of the ſacred Books; whether they which for the ſlips and infirmities of others, which they might and ought to tolerate, or upon ſome difference in matters of Order and Ceremony, or for ſome error in Doctrine, neither pernicious nor hurtful to Faith or Piety, ſeparate themſelves from others, or others from themſelves; Or laſtly, whether they that put themſelves out of the Churches unity and Obedience, becauſe their Opinions are not approved there, but reprehended and confuted, or becauſe being of impious converſation, they are impatient of their Churches Cenſure: I would know, I ſay, whether all, or any of theſe, may with any face, or without extream impudency, put in this plea of Proteſtants, and pretend with as much likelihood as they, that they did not ſeparate from others, but only reform themſelves? But ſuppoſe they were ſo impudent as to ſay ſo in their own defence falſly, doth it follow by any good Logick, that therefore this Apology is not to be imployed by Proteſtants, who may ſay ſo truly? We make (ſay they) no Schiſm from you, but only a reformation of our ſelves: This, you reply, is no good juſtification, becauſe it may be pretended by any Schiſmatick. Very true, any Schiſmatick that can ſpeak may ſay the ſame words, (as any Rebel that makes Conſcience the cloak of his impious diſobedience, may ſay with St. Peter, and St. John, We muſt obey God rather than men:) but then the queſtion is, whether any Schiſmatick may ſay ſo truly? And to this queſtion you ſay juſt nothing: but conclude, becauſe this defence may be abuſed by ſome, it muſt be uſed by none. As if you ſhould have ſaid, St. Peter and St. John did ill to make ſuch an anſwer as they made, becauſe impious Hypocrites might make uſe of the ſame to palliate their Diſobedience and Rebellion againſt the lawful commands of lawful Authority.

81. But ſeeing their pretended Reformation conſiſted in forſaking the Churches corruptions, their Reformation of themſelves, and their diviſion from you, falls out to be one and the ſame thing. Juſt as if two men having been a long while companions in Drunkenneſs, one of them ſhould turn ſober; this Reformation of himſelf, and deſertion of his companion, in this ill cuſtom, would be one and the ſame thing, and yet there is no neceſſity that he ſhould leave his love to him at all, or his Society in other things. So Proteſtants forſaking their own former corruptions, which were common to them with you, could not chuſe but withal forſake you in the practice of theſe corruptions: yet this they might, and would have done without breach of Charity towards you; and without a renunciation of your company in any act of Piety and Devotion, confeſſedly lawful. And therefore though both theſe were by accident joined together, yet this hinders nor but that the end they aimed at, was not a ſeparation from you, but a reformation of themſelves.

82. Neither doth their diſagreement in the particulars of the Reformation, (which yet when you meaſure it without partiality, you will find to be far ſhort of infinite) nor their ſymbolizing in the general of forſaking your corruptions, prove any thing to the contrary, or any way advantage your Deſign or make for your purpoſe. For it is not any ſign at all, much leſs an evident ſign, that they had no ſetled Deſign, but only to forſake the Church of Rome: for nothing but malice can deny, that their intent at leaſt was, to reduce Religion to that Original purity from which it was fallen. The declination from which, ſome conceiving to have begun (though ſecretly) in the Apoſtles times, (the myſtery of iniquity being then in work;) and after their departure to have ſhewed it ſelf more openly: Others again believing, that the Church continued pure for ſome Ages after the Apoſtles, and then declined: And conſequently ſome aiming at an exact conformity with the Apoſtolique times; Others thinking they ſhould do God and Men good ſervice, could they reduce the Church to the condition of the fourth and fifth Ages: Some taking their direction in this work of Reformation, only from Scripture; Others, from the writings of Fathers, and the Decrees of Councils of the firſt five Ages, certainly, it is no great marvail, that there was, as you ſay, Diſagreement between them, in the particulars of their Reformation; nay morally ſpeaking, it was impoſſible it ſhould be otherwiſe. Yet let me tell you, the difference between them (eſpecially in compariſon of your Church and Religion) is not the difference between good and bad, but between good and better: And they did beſt that followed Scripture interpreted by Catholique written-Tradition: which Rule the Reformers of the Church of England propoſed to themſelves to follow.

83. Ad § 30, 31, 32. To this effect D. Potter, p. 81, 82. of his Book ſpeaks thus, If a Monaſtery ſhould reform it ſelf, and ſhould reduce into practice ancient good diſcipline, when others would not: In this caſe could it be charged with Schiſm from others, or with Apoſtacy from its rule and order? So in a Society of Men univerſally infected with ſome Diſeaſe, they that ſhould free themſelves from it, could they be therefore ſaid to ſeparate from the Society? He preſumes they could not, and from hence concludes, that neither can the Reformed Churches be truly accuſed for making a Schiſm, (that is, ſeparating from the Church, and making themſelves no members of it) if all they did was (as indeed it was) to reform themſelves. Which Caſes, I believe, any underſtanding man will plainly ſee to have in them an exact parity of Reaſon, and that therefore the Argument drawn from them is preſſing and unanſwerable. And it may well be ſuſpected, that you were partly of this mind, otherwiſe you would not have ſo preſum'd upon the ſimplicity of your Reader, as pretending to anſwer it, to put another of your own making in place of it, and then to anſwer that.

84. This you do, § 31, 32. of this Chapter, in theſe words, I was very glad to find you in a Monaſtery, &c. Where I beſeech the Reader to obſerve theſe things to detect the cunning of your tergiverſation: Firſt, That you have no reaſon to ſay, That you found D. Potter in a Monaſtery: and as little, That you find him inventing ways how to forſake his vocation, and to maintain the lawfulneſs of Schiſm from the Church, and Apoſtacy from a Religious Order. Certainly the innocent caſe put by the Doctor of a Monaſtery reforming it ſelf, hath not deſerved ſuch grievous accuſations. Unleſs Reformation with you be all one with Apoſtacy: and to forſake ſin and diſorder, be to forſake ones Vocation; and ſurely, if it be ſo, your Vocations are not very lawful, and your Religious Orders not very Religious. Secondly, that you quite pervert and change D. Potters caſes, and inſtead of the caſe, of a whole Monaſtery reforming it ſelf, when other Monaſteries of their Order would not: and of ſome men freeing themſelves from the common diſeaſe of their Society, when others would not: you ſubſtitute two others, which you think you can better deal with; of ſome particular Monks, upon pretence of the neglect of leſſer Monaſtical Obſervances going out of their Monaſtery, which Monaſtery yet did confeſſedly obſerve their ſubſtantial Vows, and all principal Statutes: And of a diſeaſed Perſon, quitting the company of thoſe that were infected with the ſame Diſeaſe: though in their company, there was no danger from his Diſeaſe, it being impoſſible that ſhould be mortal: and out of it, no hope of eſcaping others like that for which he forſook the firſt infected Company. I appeal now to any indifferent judg, whether theſe caſes be the ſame or near the ſame with D. Potter's? Whether this be fair and ingenuous dealing, inſtead of his two inſtances, which plainly ſhewed it poſſible in other Societies, and conſequently in that of the Church, to leave the faults of a Society, and not leave being of it, to foiſt in two others clean croſs to the Doctors purpoſe, of men under colour of faults, abandoning the Society wherein they lived? I know not what others may think of this dealing, but, to me, this declining D. Potter's caſes and conveying others into their place, is a great aſſurance, that as they were put by him, you could ſay nothing to them.

85. But that no ſuſpicion of tergiverſation may be faſtned upon me, I am content to deal with you a little, at your own weapons. Put the caſe then, though not juſt as you would have it, yet with as much favour to you, as in reaſon you can expect, That a Monaſtery did obſerve her ſubſtantial Vows, and all principal Statutes; but yet did generally practiſe, and alſo enjoin the violation of ſome leſſer, yet obliging obſervances, and had done ſo time out of mind: And that ſome inferiour Monks more conſcientious than the reſt, diſcovering this abuſe, ſhould firſt with all earneſtneſs ſolicite their Superiours for a general and orderly reformation of theſe, though ſmall and venial corruptions, yet corruptions: But finding they hop'd and labour'd in vain to effect this, ſhould reform theſe faults in themſelves, and refuſe to join in the practice of them, with the reſt of their Confraternity, and perſiſting reſolutely in ſuch a refuſal, ſhould by their Superiours be caſt out of their Monaſtery, and being not to be re-admitted without a promiſe of remitting from their ſtiffneſs in theſe things, and of condeſcending to others in the practice of theſe ſmall faults, ſhould chuſe rather to continue exiles, than to re-enter upon ſuch conditions: I would know whether you would condemn ſuch men of Apoſtacy from the Order? Without doubt, if you ſhould, you would find the ſtream of your Caſuiſts againſt you; and beſides, involve S. Paul in the ſame condemnation, who plainly tells us, that we may not do the leaſt evil, that we may do the greateſt good. Put caſe again, you ſhould be a part of a Society univerſally infected with ſome Diſeaſe, and diſcovering a certain remedy for this Diſeaſe, ſhould perſuade the whole company to make uſe of it, but find the greateſt part of them ſo far in love with their Diſeaſe, that they were reſolved to keep it; nay, ſo fond of it, that they ſhould make a Decree, that whoſoever would leave it, ſhould leave their company. Suppoſe now, that you your ſelf and ſome few others, ſhould notwithſtanding their injunction to the contrary, free your ſelves from this Diſeaſe, and and thereupon they ſhould abſolutely forſake and reject you: I would know in this caſe who deſerves to be condemned, whether you of uncharitable deſertion of your company, or they of a tyrannical peeviſhneſs? And if in theſe caſes you will (as I verily believe you will) acquit the Inferiours and condemn the Superiours, abſolve the Minor part and condemn the Major, then can you with no reaſon condemn Proteſtants, for chuſing rather to be ejected from the communion of the Roman Church, than with her to perſiſt (as of neceſſity they were to do, if they would continue in her communion) in the profeſſion of errors, though not deſtructive of ſalvation, yet hindring edification; and in the Practice, or at leaſt approbation of many (ſuppoſe not mortal but venial) corruptions.

86. Thirdly, the Reader may be pleaſed to be advertiſed that you cenſure too partially the corrupt eſtate of your Church in comparing it to a Monaſtery, which did confeſſedly obſerve their ſubſtantial vows, and all principal Statutes of their Order, and moreover was ſecured by an infallible aſſiſtance, for the avoiding of all ſubſtantial corruptions: for of your Church we confeſs no ſuch matter, but ſay plainly, That ſhe not only might fall into ſubſtantial corruptions, but did ſo; that ſhe did not only generally violate, but of all the members of her communion, either in act or approbation, require and exact the violation of many ſubſtantial Laws of Chriſt, both Ceremonial and Moral, which though we hope it was pardonable in them, who had not means to know their error, yet, of its own nature, and to them who did or might have known their error, was certainly damnable. And that it was not the tything of Mint, and Anniſe, and Cummin, the neglect whereof we impute unto you, but the neglect of judgment, juſtice, and the weightier matters of the Law.

87. Fourthly, I am to repreſent unto you, that you, nſe Proteſtants very ſtrangely, in comparing them to a company, who all were known to be led to their pretended Reformation, not with an intent of Reformation, but with ſome other ſiniſter Intention; which is impoſſible to be known of you, and therefore to judge ſo, is againſt Chriſtian charity, and common equity: and to ſuch a Company as acknowledge that themſelves, as ſoon as they were gone out from the Monaſtery that refuſed to reform, muſt not hope to be free from thoſe or the like Errors, and Corruptions, for which they left their Brethren: ſeeing this very hope and nothing elſe, moved them to leave your Communion: and this ſpeech of yours, ſo far as it concerns the ſame errors, plainly deſtroys it ſelf. For how can they poſſibly fall into the ſame errors by forſaking your Communion, which that they may forſake they do forſake your Communion? And then for other errors of the like nature and quality, or more enormous than yours, though they deny it not poſſible, but by their negligence and wickedneſs they may fall into them, yet they are ſo far from acknowledging that they have no hope to avoid this miſchief, that they proclaim to all the world, that it is moſt prone and eaſie to do ſo, to all thoſe that fear God and love the Truth; and hardly poſſible for them to do otherwiſe, without ſupine negligence and extreme impiety.

88. To fit the Reddition of your perverted Simile, to the Propoſition of it, you tell us that we teach, that for all fundamental points, the Church is ſecured from error. I anſwer, Fundamental errors may ſignifie, either ſuch as are repugnant to Gods command, and ſo in their own nature damnable, though to thoſe which out of invincible ignorance practiſe them, not unpardonable: or ſuch as are not only meritoriouſly, but remedileſly pernicious and deſtructive of Salvation. We hope that yours, and the Greek, and other Churches before the Reformation, had not ſo far apoſtated from Chriſt, as to be guilty of errors of the later ſort. We ſay, that not only the Catholick Church, but every particular true Church, ſo long as it continues a Church, is ſecured from Fundamental errors of this kind, but ſecured not abſolutely by any promiſe of divine aſſiſtance, which being not ordinarily irreſiſtible, but tempered to the nature of the Receivers, may be neglected, and therefore withdrawn; but by the Repugnance of any error in this ſenſe fun-

...ſential to the eſſence and nature of a Church. So that to ſpeak properly, not any yet known company of men is ſecured, that, though they neglect the means of avoiding error, yet certainly, they ſhall not err in fundamentals, which were neceſſary for the conſtitution of an infallible guide of faith: But rather they which ...ow what is meant by a Church, are ſecured or rather certain that a Church ...ding a Church cannot fall into fundamental errors; becauſe, when it does ... no longer a Church. As they are certain, that men cannot become unreaſonable creatures, becauſe when they do ſo, they are no longer men. But for fundamental errors of the former ſort, which yet, I hope, will warrant our departure from any Communion infected with them, and requiring the profeſſion of them; from ſuch fundamental errors, we do not teach ſo much as that the Church Catholick, much leſs, (which only were for your purpoſe) that your Church hath any protection or ſecurity, but know for a certain, that many errors of this nature, had prevailed againſt you; and that a vain preſumption of an abſolute divine aſſiſtance (which yet is promiſed but upon conditions) made both your preſent errors incurable, and expoſed you to the imminent danger of more and greater. This therefore is either to abuſe what we ſay, or to impoſe falſely upon us what we ſay not. And to this you preſently add another manifeſt falſhood, viz. that we ſay, That no particular perſon, or Church, hath any promiſe of aſſiſtance in points fundamental. Whereas, croſs to this in diameter, there is no Proteſtant but holds, and muſt hold, that there is no particular Church; no, nor perſon; but hath promiſe of divine aſſiſtance to lead them into all neceſſary truth, if they ſeek it as they ſhould, by the means which God hath appointed. And ſhould we ſay otherwiſe, we ſhould contrary plain Scripture, which aſſures us plainly, That every one that ſeeketh findeth, and every one that asketh receiveth: and that if we being evil, can give good gifts to our children, much more ſhall our heavenly Father give his Spirit to them that ask it: and that, if any man want wiſdom (eſpecially ſpiritual wiſdom) he is to ask of God, who giveth to all men, and upbraideth not.

89. You obtrude upon us thirdly, That when Luther began, he being but one, oppoſed himſelf to all, as well Subjects as Superiours. Anſw. If he did ſo in the cauſe of God, it was heroically done of him. This had been without hyperbolizing, Munus contra Athanaſium, and Athanaſius contra Mundum; neither is it impoſſible, that the whole world ſhould ſo far lie in wickedneſs, (as St. John ſpeaks) that it may be lawful and noble for one man to oppoſe the world. But yet were we put to our oaths, we ſhould ſurely not teſtifie any ſuch thing for you; for how can we ſay properly and without ſtreining, that he oppoſed himſelf to All, unleſs we could ſay alſo that All oppoſed themſelves to him? And how can we ſay ſo, ſeeing the world can witneſs, that ſo many thouſands, nay, millions, followed his ſtandard as ſoon as it was advanced?

90. But, none that lived immediately before him thought or ſpake as he did. This is juſt nothing to the purpoſe. The Church was then corrupted, and ſure it was no diſhonour to him to begin the Reformation. In the Chriſtian warfare, every man ought to ſtrive to be foremoſt. Secondly, it is more than you can juſtifie. For though no man before him lifted up his voice like a Trumpet, as Luther did; yet who can aſſure us, but that many before him, both thought, and ſpake in the lower Voice of petitions and remonſtrances, in many points, as he did.

91. Fourthly and laſtly, whereas you ſay, that many chief learned Proteſtants are forced to confeſs the Antiquity of your Doctrine and Practice: I anſwer, Of many Doctrines and Practices of yours, this is not true, nor pretended to be true by thoſe that have dealt in this Argument. Search your Store-houſe, Mr. Brerely, with ſtrict induſtry, and when you have done ſo, I pray inform me, what confeſſions Proteſtants have you, for the Antiquity of the Doctrine of the Communion in one kind: the lawfulneſs and expedience of the Latine-Service: For the ſole uſe of Indulgences: For the Popes power in Temporalities over Princes:

Princes: For the picturing of the Trinity: For the lawfulneſs of the worſhip of Pictures: For your Beads, and Roſary, and Ladies Pſalter; and in a word, for your whole worſhip of the Bleſſed Virgin: For your Oblations by way of Conſumption, and therefore in the quality of Sacrifices to the Virgin Mary, and other Saints: For your ſaying of Pater-noſters, and Creeds to the honour of Saints, and of Ave Maries to the honour of other Saints beſides the Bleſſed Virgin: For the infallibility of the Biſhop or Church of Rome: For your prohibiting the Scripture to be read publickly in the Church, in ſuch Languages as all may underſtand: For your Doctrine of the bleſſed Virgin's immunity from actual ſin; and for your Doctrine and Worſhip of her immaculate Conception: For the neceſſity of Auricular Confeſſion: For the neceſſity of the Prieſts Intention to obtain benefit by any of your Sacraments: and laſtly, (not to trouble my ſelf with finding out more) for this very Doctrine of Licentiouſneſs, That though a man live and die without the Practice of Chriſtian Vertues, and with the habits of many damnable ſins unmortified; yet if in the laſt moment of life, he have any ſorrow for his ſins, and joyn confeſſion with it, certainly he ſhall be ſaved? Secondly, they that confeſs ſome of your Doctrines to have been the Doctrine of the Fathers may be miſtaken, being abuſed by many words and phraſes of the Fathers, which have the Roman ſound, when they are far from the ſenſe. Some of them I am ſure are ſo, I will name Gonlartius, who in his Commentaries on S. Cyprian's 35 Ep. grants that the ſentence [Hereſies have ſprung, &c.] quoted by you §. 36. of this Chapter, was meant of Cornelius: whereas it will be very plain to any attentive Reader, that St. Cyprian ſpeaks there of himſelf. Thirdly, though ſome Proteſtants confeſs ſome of your Doctrines to be ancient, yet this is nothing, ſo long as it is evident, even by the confeſſion of all ſides, that many errors, I inſtance in that of the Millenaries, and the communicating of Infants, were more ancient. Not any Antiquity therefore, unleſs it be abſolute and primitive, is a certain ſign of true Doctrine. For if the Church were obnoxious to corruption (as we pretend it was) who can poſſibly warrant us, that part of this corruption might not get in and prevail in the 5. or 4. or 3. or 2. age? Eſpecially ſeeing the Apoſtles aſſure us, that the myſtery of iniquity was working, though more ſecretly even in their times. If any man ask, How could it become univerſal in ſo ſhort a time? Let him tell me how the Error of the Millenaries, and the communicating of Infants, became ſo ſoon univerſal; and then he ſhall acknowledge, what was done in ſome, was poſſible in others. Laſtly, to cry quittance with you: as there are Proteſtants who confeſs the antiquity, but always poſt-nate to Apoſtolick, of ſome Points of your Doctrine: ſo there want not Papiſts who acknowledge as freely, the Novelty of many of them, and the Antiquity of ours. A collection of whoſe teſtimonies, we have (without thanks to you) in your Indices expurgatorii: The divine Providence, bleſſedly abuſing for the readier manifeſtation of the Truth this engine intended by you for the ſubverſion and ſuppreſſion of it. Here is no place to ſtand upon particulars: only one general ingenuous confeſſion of that great Eraſmus, may not be paſſed over in ſilence. Non deſunt magni Theologi, qui non verentur affirmare, Nihil eſſe in Lutthero quin per probatos authores defendi poſſit: There want not great Divines, which ſtick not to affirm, that there is nothing in Luther, which may not be defended by good and allowed Authors. Whereas therefore you cloſe up this Simile with conſider theſe points, and ſee whether your Similitude do not condemn your Progenitors of Schiſm from God's viſible Church: I aſſure you, I have well conſidered them, and do plainly ſee that this is not D. Potter's ſimilitude, but your own; and beſides, that it is wholly made up of miſtakes and falſhoods, and is at no hand a ſufficient proof of this great Accuſation. Eraſm. Ep. lib. 15. Ep. ad Godeſchalcum Roſ.

92. Let us come now to the ſecond ſimilitude of your making: in the entrance whereunto you tell us, that from the Monaſtery Dr. Potter is fled to an Hoſpital of perſons Univerſally infected with ſome diſeaſe, where he finds to be true, what you ſuppoſed, that, after his departure from his Brethren, he might fall into greater inconveniences, veniences, and more infectious diſeaſes than thoſe for which he left them. Thus you. But, to deal truly with you, I find nothing of all this, nor how it is conſequent from any thing ſaid by you, or done by Dr. Potter. But this I find, that you have compoſed this your ſimilitude as you did the former, of a heap of vain Suſpitions, pretended to be grounded on our confeſſions. As firſt, that your diſeaſes which we forſook, neither were nor could be mortal: Whereas we aſſure our ſelves, and are ready to juſtifie, that they are and were mortal in themſelves, and would have been ſo to us, if, when light came to us, we had loved darkneſs more than light. And D. Potter, though he hope your Church wanted no neceſſary vital part, that is, that ſome in your Church by ignorance might be ſaved; yet he nothing doubts but that it is full of ulcers without, and diſeaſes within, and is far from ſo extenuating your errors as to make them only like the ſuperfluous fingers of the Giant of Gath. Secondly, that we had no hope to avoid other diſeaſes like thoſe for which we forſook your company, nor to be ſecure out of it from damnable errors: whereas the hope hereof was the only motive of our departure; and we aſſure our ſelves that the means to be ſecured from damnable error, is not to be ſecure as you are, but carefully to uſe thoſe means of avoiding it, to which God hath promiſed, and will never fail to give a bleſſing. Thirdly, That thoſe innumerable miſchiefs which followed upon the departure of Proteſtants, were cauſed by it as by a proper cauſe, whereas their doctrine was no otherwiſe the occaſion of them, than the Goſpel of Chriſt of the diviſion of the world. The only fountain of all theſe miſchiefs, being indeed no other than your pouring out a flood of perſecutions againſt Proteſtants, only becauſe they would not ſin and be damn'd with you for company. Unleſs we may add the impatience of ſome Proteſtants, who not enduring to be torn in pieces like ſheep by a company of Wolves without reſiſtance, chuſe rather to die like Soldiers than Martyrs.

93. But you proceed; and falling into a fit of admiration, cry out and ſay thus, To what paſs hath Hereſie brought men, who bluſh not to compare the beloved Spouſe of the Lord, the only Dove, &c. to a Monaſtery that muſt be forſaken; to the Giant in Gath with ſuperfluous fingers! But this Spouſe of Chriſt, this only Dove, this purchaſe of our Saviours bloud, this Catholick Church, which you thus almoſt deifie, what is it but a Society of men, whereof every particular, and by conſequence, the whole company is or may be guilty of many ſins daily committed againſt knowledge and conſcience? Now I would fain underſtand why one error in faith, eſpecially if not fundamental, ſhould not conſiſt with the holineſs of this Spouſe, this Dove, this Church, as well as many and great ſins committed againſt knowledge and conſcience? If this be not to ſtrain at Gnats, and ſwallow Camels, I would fain underſtand what it is? And here, by the way, I deſire you to conſider whether as it were with one ſtroke of a ſponge you do not wipe out all that you have ſaid, to prove Proteſtants Schiſmaticks for ſeparating from your Church, though ſuppoſed to be in ſome errors not fundamental. For if any ſuch error may make her deſerve to be compared to a Monaſtery ſo diſordered that it muſt be forſaken; then if you ſuppoſe (as here you do) your Church in ſuch errors, your Church is ſo diſordered that it muſt, and therefore without queſtion may, be forſaken, I mean in thoſe her diſorders and corruptions, and no farther.

94. And yet you have not done with thoſe ſimilitudes, But muſt obſerve (you ſay) one thing, and that is, That as theſe Reformers of the Monaſtery, and others who left the diſeaſed company, could not deny but that they left the ſaid Communities: So Luther and the reſt cannot pretend, not to have left the viſible Church. And that D. Potter ſpeaks very ſtrangely when he ſays, In a Society of men univerſally infected with ſome diſeaſe, they that ſhould free themſelves from the common diſeaſe, could not be therefore ſaid to ſeparate from the Society. For if they do not ſeparate themſelves from the Society of the infected perſons, how do they free themſelves from the common diſeaſe? To which I anſwer: That indeed, if you ſpeak of the Reformers of a Monaſtery and of the Deſertors of the diſeaſed company, as you put the caſes, that is, of thoſe which left theſe communities, then is it as true as Goſpel, that they cannot deny but that they left the ſaid communities. But it appears not to me, how it will enſue hereupon, That Luther and the reſt cannot pretend not to have left the viſible Church. For, to my apprehenſion, this Argument is very weak,

> They which left ſome communities cannot truly deny but that they left them; therefore Luther and his followers cannot deny but that they left the viſible Church.

Where, methinks, you prove little, but take for granted that which is one of the greateſt Queſtions amongſt us, that is, That the Company which Luther left, was the whole Viſible Church: whereas you know we ſay, It was but a part of it, and that corrupted, and obſtinate in her corruptions. Indeed, that Luther and his Followers left off the Practice of thoſe Corruptions wherein the whole Viſible Church did communicate formerly, (which I meant when I acknowledged above that they forſook the external Communion of the Viſible Church) or that they left that part of the Viſible Church in her corruptions which would not be reformed: Theſe things, if you deſire, I ſhall be willing to grant; and that, by a Synecdoche of the whole for the part, he might be ſaid to forſake the viſible Church, that is, a part of it, and the greater part. But that, properly ſpeaking, he forſook the whole Viſible Church, I hope you will excuſe me if I grant not this, until you bring better proof of it than your former ſimilitude. And my reaſon is this, becauſe he and his Followers were a part of this Church, and ceaſed not to be ſo by the Reformation. Now he and his Followers certainly forſook not themſelves, Therefore not every part of the Church, Therefore not the whole Church. But then if you ſpeak of Dr. Potter's caſes, according as he put them, and anſwer not your own Arguments, when you make ſhew of anſwering his: methinks, it ſhould not be ſo unreaſonable as you make it, for the perſons he ſpeaks of to deny that they left the Communities whereof they were Members. For example, that the Monks of St. Benets Order make one Body, whereof their ſeveral Monaſteries are ſeveral members, I preſume it will be eaſily granted. Suppoſe now, that all theſe Monaſteries being quite out of Order, ſome twenty or thirty of them ſhould reform themſelves, the reſt perſiſting ſtill in their irregular courſes: were it ſuch a monſtrous impudence as you make it, for theſe Monaſteries, which we ſuppoſe reformed, to deny that they forſook their Order or the Community whereof they were parts? In my Opinion it is no ſuch matter. Let the world judge. Again, whereas the Doctor ſays, that in a Society of men Univerſally infected with ſome diſeaſe, they that ſhould free themſelves from the common diſeaſe, could not therefore be ſaid to ſeparate from the Society: It is very ſtrange to me that you ſhould ſay, he ſpeaks very ſtrangely. Truly, Sir, I am extremely deceived if his words be not plain Engliſh, and plain ſenſe, and contain ſuch a manifeſt Truth as cannot be denied with modeſty, nor gone about to be proved without vanity. For whatſoever is proved, muſt be proved by ſomething more evident: Now what can be more evident than this; That if ſome whole Family were taken with Agues, if the Father of this Family ſhould free himſelf from his, that he ſhould not therefore deſervedly be thought to abandon and diſert his Family? But (ſay you) if they do not ſeparate themſelves from the Society of the wicked perſons, how do they free themſelves from the common diſeaſe? Do they at the ſame time remain in the company and yet depart from thoſe infected creatures? Methinks, a Writer of Controverſies ſhould not be ignorant how this may be done without any ſuch difficulty! But if you do not know, I'le tell you, There is no neceſſity they ſhould leave the company of theſe infected perſons at all, much leſs, that they ſhould at once depart from it and remain with it, which I confeſs were very difficult. But if they will free themſelves from their diſeaſe, let them ſtay where they are, and take Phyſick. Or if you would be better informed how this ſtrange thing may be done, learn from your ſelf, They may free their own perſons from the common diſeaſe, yet ſo that they remain ſtill in the company infected, eating and drinking with them, &c.

Which

Which are your own words within four or five lines after this: plainly shewing that your mistaking Dr. Potter's meaning, and your wondring at his words as at some strange Monsters, was all this while affected, and that you are conscious to your self of perverting his Argument that you may seem to say something, when indeed you say nothing. Whereas therefore you add, We must then say that they separate themselves from the persons, though it be by occasion of the disease; I assure you, good Sir, you must not do so at any hand; for then you alter and spoil D. Potter's case quite, and fight not with his reason but your own shadow. For the Instance of a man freeing himself from the disease of his company, and not leaving his company, is very fit to prove, by the parity of reason, that it is very possible, a man may leave the corruptions of a Church, and not leave the Church, that is, not cease to be a member of it: But yours of a man leaving his company by occasion of their disease, hath no Analogy at all with this business.

95. But Luther and his Followers, did not continue in the company of those from whose diseases they pretend to free themselves. Very true, neither was it said they did so. There is no necessity that that which is compared to another thing should agree with it in all things: it is sufficient, if it agree in that wherein it is compared. A man freeing himself from the common disease of a Society, and yet continuing a part of it, is here compared to Luther and his Followers, freeing themselves from the corruptions of the visible Church, and continuing a part of the Church. As for accompanying the other parts of it in all things, it was neither necessary, nor without destroying our supposition of their forsaking the corruptions of the Church, possible, not necessary; for they may be parts of the Church which do not joyn with other parts of it in all observances. Nor possible, for had he accompanied them in all things, he had not freed himself from the common corruptions.

96. But they endeavoured to force the Society whereof they were parts, to be healed and reformed as they were; and, if it refused, they did, when they had power, drive them away even their Superiours both Spiritual and Temporal, as is notorious. The proofs hereof are wanting, and therefore I might defer my answer until they were produced; yet take this before-hand: If they did so, then herein, in my opinion, they did amiss; for I have learnt from the ancient Fathers of the Church, that nothing is more against Religion than to force Religion, and of S. Paul, The weapons of the Christian Warfare are not carnal. And great reason: For humane violence may make men counterfeit, but cannot make them believe, and is therefore fit for nothing but to breed Form without, and Atheism within. Besides, if this means of bringing men to embrace any Religion were generally used (as it may be justly used in any place by those that have power, and think they have truth, certainly they cannot with reason deny but that it may be used in every place, by those that have power as well as they, and think they have truth as well as they) what could follow but the maintenance perhaps of truth, but perhaps only of the profession of it in one place, and the oppression of it in a hundred? What will follow from it but the preservation peradventure of unity, but peradventure only of uniformity, in particular States and Churches; but the immortalizing the greater and more lamentable divisions of Christendom and the world? And therefore what can follow from it, but perhaps in the judgment of carnal policy, the temporal benefit and tranquillity of temporal States and Kingdoms, but the infinite prejudice, if not the desolation, of the Kingdom of Christ? And therefore it well becomes them who have their portion in this life, who serve no higher State than that of England, or Spain, or France, nor this neither any further than they may serve themselves by it; who think of no other happiness but the preservation of their own fortunes and tranquillity in this world; who think of no other means to preserve States, but humane power and Machivilian policy, and believe no other Creed but this, Regi aut Civitati imperium habenti nihil injustum quod utile. Such men as these it may become to maintain by worldly power and violence their State-instrument, Religion. For if all be vain and false, (as in their judgment it is) the present whatsoever, whatsoever, is better than any, because it is already setled: an alteration of it may draw with it change of States, and the change of State the subversion of their fortune. But they that are indeed servants and lovers of Christ, of Truth, of the Church, and of Mankind, ought with all courage to oppose themselves against it, as a common enemy of all these. They that know there is a King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, by whose will and pleasure Kings and Kingdoms stand and fall, they know, that to no King or State any thing can be profitable which is unjust; and that nothing can be more evidently unjust, than to force weak men by the profession of a Religion which they believe not, to lose their own eternal happiness, out of a vain and needless fear, lest they may possibly disturb their Temporal quietness. There being no danger to any State from any mans opinion; unless it be such an opinion by which disobedience to authority, or impiety, is taught or licensed: which sort, I confess, may justly be punished as well as other faults; or, unless this sanguinary Doctrine be joyn'd with it, That it is lawful for him by humane violence to enforce others to it. Therefore if Protestants did offer violence to other mens consciences, and compel them to embrace their Reformation, I excuse them not: much less, if they did so to the sacred Persons of Kings, and those that were in authority over them, who ought to be so secured from violence, that even their unjust and tyrannous violence, though it may be avoided (according to that of our Saviour, When they persecute you in one City flie into another) yet may it not be resisted by opposing violence against it. Protestants therefore that were guilty of this crime are not to be excused, and blessed had they been had they chosen rather to be Martyrs than Murderers, and to die for their Religion rather than to fight for it. But of all the men in the world you are most unfit to accuse them hereof, against whom the souls of the Martyrs from under the Altar cry much louder than against all their other Persecutors together: Who for these many Ages together have daily sacrificed Hecatombs of innocent Christians under the name of Hereticks, to blind zeal and furious superstition. Who teach plainly, that you may propagate your Religion whensoever you have power, by deposing of Kings and invasion of Kingdoms, and think when you kill the adversaries of it, you do God good service. But for their departing corporally from them, whom mentally they had forsaken; For their forsaking the external Communion and company of the unreformed part of the Church, in their superstitions and impieties: thus much of your accusation we embrace and glory in it; And say, though some Protestants might offend in the manner or degree of their separation, yet certainly their separation it self was not Schismatical, but innocent; and not only so, but just and necessary. And as for your obtruding upon Dr. Potter that he should say, There neither was nor could be just cause to do so, no more than to depart from Christ himself, I have shewed divers times already, that you deal very injuriously with him, confounding together, Departing from the Church, and Departing from some general opinions and practices, which did not constitute but vitiate, not make the Church but mar it. For though he says, that which is most true, that there can be no just cause to depart from the Church, that is, to cease being a member of the Church, no more than to depart from Christ himself, in as much as these are not divers but the same thing; yet he no where denies, but there might be just and necessary cause to depart from some opinions and practices of your Church, nay, of the Catholick Church. And therefore you do vainly to infer, that Luther and his followers for so doing, were Schismaticks.

97. Ad §. 35. I answer in a word, that neither are Optatus his sayings rules of Faith, and therefore not fit to determine Controversies of Faith: And then that Majorinus might well be a Schismatick for departing from Cecilianus, and the Chair of Cyprian and Peter without cause; and yet Luther and his followers who departed from the Communion of the Bishop of Rome, and the Bishop of their own Dioceſs be none, because they had just and necessary cause of their departure. For otherwise they must have continued in the profession of known errors and the practice of manifest Corruptions.

98. Ad

98. Ad §. 36. In the next Section you tell us, that Chriſt our Lord gave St. Peter and his Succeſſors authority over his whole militant Church. And for proof hereof you firſt refer us to Brerely, citing exactly the places of ſuch chief Proteſtants as have confeſſed the antiquity of this point, Where firſt you fall into the Fallacy which is called Ignoratio Elenchi, or miſtaking the Queſtion; for being to prove this point true, you only prove it ancient. Which, to what purpoſe is it, when both the parties litigant are agreed that many errors were held by many of the ancient Doctors, much more ancient than any of thoſe who are pretended to be confeſſed by Proteſtants to have held with you in this matter: and when thoſe whom you have to do with, and whom it is vain to diſpute againſt but out of Principles received by them, are all peremptory, that though novelty be a certain note of falſhood, yet no Antiquity leſs than Apoſtolical, is a certain note of truth? Yet this I ſay, not as if I had acknowledge what you pretend, that Proteſtants did confeſs the Fathers agreed them in this point. For the point here iſſuable is not, Whether St. Peter were head of the Church? Nor, whether the Biſhop of Rome had any priority in the Church? Nor, whether he had authority over it given him by the Church? But whether by Divine right, and by Chriſts appointment he were Head of the Catholick Church? Now, having peruſed Brerely, I cannot find any one Proteſtant confeſſing any one Father to have concurred in opinion with you in this point. And the Reader hath reaſon to ſuſpect, that you alſo out of all the Fathers could not find any one authority pertinent to this purpoſe: for otherwiſe you were much to blame, citing ſo few, to make choice of ſuch as are impertinent. For let the underſtanding Reader peruſe the 55 Ep. of S. Cyprian, with any ordinary attention, out of which you take your firſt place, and I am confident he ſhall find that he means nothing elſe by the words quoted by you, But that in one particular Church at one time there ought to be but one Biſhop, and that he ſhould be obeyed in all things lawful: The non-performance whereof, was one of the moſt ordinary cauſes of Hereſies againſt the Faith, and Schiſm from the Communion of the Church Univerſal. He ſhall find, ſecondly, and that by many convincing Arguments, that though he write to Cornelius Biſhop of Rome, yet he ſpeaks not of him, but of himſelf then Biſhop of Carthage, againſt whom a faction of Schiſmaticks had then ſet up another. And therefore here your ingenuity is to be commended above many of your ſide: For whereas they ordinarily abuſe this place to prove, that in the whole Church there ought to be but one Prieſt and one Judge; you ſeem ſomewhat diſſident hereof, and thereupon ſay, That theſe words plainly condemn Luther, whether he will underſtand them as ſpoken of the univerſal, or of every particular Church. But whether they condemn Luther, is another queſtion. The queſtion here is, Whether they plainly prove the Pope's Supremacy over all other Biſhops? which certainly they are as far from proving, as from proving the Supremacy of any other Biſhop: ſeeing it is evident they were intended not of one Biſhop over the whole Catholick Church, but of one Biſhop in one particular Church.

99. And no leſs impertinent is your ſaying out of Optatus; if it be well looked into, though at the firſt ſight it may ſeem otherwiſe; becauſe Optatus his ſcene hapned to be Rome, whereas St. Cyprians was Carthage. The truth is, the Donatiſts had ſet up at Rome a Biſhop of their Faction: not with intent to make him Biſhop of the whole Church, but of that Church in particular. Now Optatus going upon St. Cyprians above-mentioned ground of one Biſhop in one Church, proves them Schiſmaticks for ſo doing, and he proves it by this Argument: St. Peter was firſt Biſhop of Rome, neither did the Apoſtles attribute to themſelves each one his particular Chair, (underſtand in that City; for in other places others, I hope, had Chairs beſide St. Peter) and therefore he is a Schiſmatick, who againſt that one ſingle Chair erects another (underſtand as before, in that place) making another Biſhop of that Dioceſs beſides him who was lawfully elected to it.

100. But yet by the way he ſtiles St. Peter head of the Apoſtles, and ſays, that from thence he was called Cephas. Anſw. Perhaps he was abuſed into this opinion, by thinking Cephas derived from the Greek word Κεφαλὴ, a head: whereas it is a Syriack word, and ſignifies a ſtone. Beſides, St. Peter might be head of the Apoſtles, that is, firſt in order and honour among them, and not have Supreme Authority over them. And indeed that St. Peter ſhould have Authority over all the Apoſtles, and yet exerciſe no one act of Authority over any one of them, and that they ſhould ſhew to him no ſign of ſubjection, methinks is as ſtrange, as that a King of England for twenty five years together ſhould do no Act of Regality, nor receive any one acknowledgment of it. As ſtrange methinks it is, that you, ſo many Ages after, ſhould know this ſo certainly, as you pretend to do, and that the Apoſtles (after that thoſe words were ſpoken in their hearing, by vertue whereof St. Peter is pretended to have been made their head) ſhould ſtill be ſo ignorant of it, as to queſtion which of them ſhould be the greateſt? Yet more ſtrange, that our Saviour ſhould not bring them out of their error, by telling them St. Peter was the man, but rather confirm it by ſaying, the Kings of the Gentiles exerciſe authority over them, but it ſhould not be ſo among them. No leſs a wonder was it that St. Paul ſhould ſo far forget St. Peter and himſelf, as that, firſt mentioning of him often, he ſhould do it without any title of honour. Secondly, ſpeaking of the ſeveral degrees of men in the Church, he ſhould not give St. Peter the higheſt, but place him in equipage with the reſt of the Apoſtles, and ſay, God hath appointed (not firſt Peter, then the reſt of the Apoſtles, but) firſt Apoſtles, ſecondly Prophets. Certainly, if the Apoſtles were all firſt, to me it is very probable, that no one of them was before the reſt. For by Firſt, all men underſtand either that which is before all, or that before which is nothing. Now in the former ſenſe, the Apoſtles could not be all firſt, for then every one of them muſt have been before every one of the reſt. And therefore they muſt be Firſt in the other ſenſe. And therefore No man, and therefore Not St. Peter, muſt be before any of them. Thirdly and laſtly, that ſpeaking of himſelf in particular, and perhaps comparing himſelf with St. Peter in particular, rather than any other, he ſhould ſay in plain terms, I am in nothing inferiour to the very chiefeſt Apoſtles. But beſides all this, Though we ſhould grant againſt all theſe probabilities and many more, that Optatus meant that St. Peter was head of the Apoſtles, not in our but in your ſenſe, and that St. Peter indeed was ſo; yet ſtill you were very far from ſhewing, that in the judgment of Optatus, the Biſhop of Rome, was to be at all, much leſs by divine right, Succeſſor to St. Peter in this his Headſhip and Authority. For what incongruity is there, if we ſay, that he might ſucceed St. Peter in that part of his care, the government of that particular Church, (as ſure he did even while St. Peter was living) and yet that neither he nor any man was to ſucceed him in his Apoſtleſhip, nor in his Government of the Church, Univerſal? Eſpecially ſeeing St, Peter and the reſt of the Apoſtles, by laying the foundations of the Church, were to be the Foundations of it, and accordingly are ſo called in Scripture. And therefore as in a Building it is incongruous that Foundations ſhould ſucceed Foundations: So it may be in the Church, that any other Apoſtles ſhould ſucceed the firſt.

101. Ad §. 37. The next Paragraph I might well paſs over, as having no Argument in it. For there is nothing in it but two ſayings of St. Auſtin, which I have great reaſon to eſteem no Argument, until you will promiſe me to grant whatſoever I ſhall prove by two ſayings of St. Auſtin. But moreover, the ſecond of theſe Sentences ſeems to me, to imply the contradiction of the firſt. For to ſay, That the Sacriledge of Schiſm, is eminent, when there is no cauſe of ſeparation, implies, to my underſtanding, that there may be a cauſe of Separation. Now in the firſt, he ſays plainly, That this is impoſſible. Neither doth any reconciliation of his words occur to me, but only this, that in the former he ſpeaks upon ſuppoſition, that the Publick Service of God, wherein men are to communicate is unpolluted, and no unlawful thing practiſed in their Communion, which was ſo true of their Communion, that the Donatiſts who ſeparated did not deny it. And to make this anſwer no improbable evaſion, it is obſervable out of St. Auſtin and Optatus, that though the Donatiſts, at the beginning of their Separation, pretended no cauſe of it, but only that the men from whom they ſeparated, were defiled with the cogitation of Traditors; yet afterwards, to make the continuance of it more juſtifiable, they did invent and ſpread abroad this calumny againſt Catholicks, that they ſet Pictures upon their Altars: which when St. Auſtin comes to Anſwer, he does not deny the poſſibility of the thing, for that had been to deny the Catholick Church to be made up of men, all which had free will to evil, and therefore might poſſibly agree in doing it, and, had he denied this, the Action of after-Ages had been his refutation; Neither does he ſay, (as you would have done) that it was true, they placed Pictures there, and moreover worſhipped them, but yet not for their own ſakes, but for theirs who were repreſented by them: Neither does he ſay, (as you do in this Chapter) that though this were granted a corruption, yet were they not to ſeparate for it. What then does he? Certainly nothing elſe, but abhor the thing, and deny the imputation: Which way of anſwering, does not, I confeſs, plainly ſhew, but yet it ſomewhat intimates, that he had nothing elſe to anſwer; and that if he could not have denied this, he could not have denied the Donatiſts ſeparation from them to have been juſt. If this Anſwer to this little Argument ſeem not ſufficient, I add moreover, that if it be applied to Luther's ſeparation, it hath the common fault of all your Allegations out of Fathers, Impertinence. For it is one thing to ſeparate from the Communion of the whole world, another to ſeparate from all the Communions in the world: One thing to divide from them who are united among themſelves, another to divide from them who are divided among themſelves. Now the Donatiſts ſeparated from the whole world of Chriſtians, united in one Communion, profeſſing the ſame Faith, ſerving God after the ſame manner, which was a very great Argument, that they could not have juſt cauſe to leave them: according to that of Tertullian, Variaſſe debuerat error Eccleſiarum; quod autem apud multos unum eſt, non eſt Erratum ſed Traditum. But Luther and his Followers did not ſo. The world, I mean of Chriſtians and Catholicks, was divided and ſubdivided long before he divided from it; and by their diviſions had much weakned their own authority, and taken away from you this plea of St. Auſtin, which ſtands upon no other Foundation, but the Unity of the whole worlds Communion.

102. Ad §. 38. If Luther were in the right, moſt certain thoſe Proteſtants that differed from him were in the wrong: But that either he or they were Schiſmaticks, it follows not. Or if it does, then either the Jeſuits are Schiſmaticks from the Dominicans, or they from the Jeſuits; The Canoniſts from the Jeſuits, or the Jeſuits from the Canoniſts; The Scotiſts from the Thomiſts, or they from the Scotiſts: The Franciſcans from the Dominicans, or the Dominicans from the Franciſcans. For between all theſe the world knows, that in point of Doctrine, there is a plain and irreconcileable contradiction; and therefore one Part muſt be in error, at leaſt not Fundamental. Thus your Argument returns upon your ſelf, and, if it be good, proves the Roman Church in a manner to be made up of Schiſmaticks. But the anſwer to it, is, that it begs this very falſe and vain Suppoſition; That whoſoever errs in any point of doctrine is a Schiſmatick.

103. Ad §. 39. In the next place you number up your victories, and tell us, that out of theſe premiſes, this concluſion follows, That Luther and his Followers were Schiſmaticks from the Viſible Church, the Pope, the Diocеſs wherein they were baptized; from the Biſhop under whom they lived, from the Country to which they belonged, from their Religious Order, wherein they were profeſſed; from one another, and laſtly, from a mans ſelf: Becauſe the ſelf-ſame Proteſtant is convicted to day, that his yeſter-days opinion was an error. To which I anſwer, that Luther and his Followers ſeparated from many of theſe, in ſome opinions and practices: But that they did it without cauſe, which only can make them Schiſmaticks, that was the only thing you ſhould have proved, and to that you have not urged one reaſon of any moment. All of them for weight and ſtrength were couſin-germans germans to this pretty device, wherewith you will prove them Schiſmaticks from themſelves, becauſe the ſelf-ſame Proteſtant to day is convicted in conſcience, that his yeſterdays opinion was an error. It ſeems then, that they that hold errors, muſt hold them faſt, and take ſpecial care of being convicted in conſcience that they are in error, for fear of being Schiſmaticks! Proteſtants muſt continue Proteſtants, and Puritans Puritans, and Papiſts Papiſts; nay, Jews, and Turks, and Pagans, muſt remain Jews, and Turks, and Pagans, and go on conſtantly to the Devil, or elſe, forſooth, they muſt be Schiſmaticks, and that from themſelves. And this perhaps is the cauſe that makes Papiſts ſo obſtinate, not only in their common ſuperſtition, but alſo in adhering to the proper fancies of their ſeveral Sects: ſo that it is a miracle to hear of any Jeſuit that hath forſaken the opinion of the Jeſuits, or any Dominican that hath changed his for the Jeſuits. Without queſtion, this Gentleman my Adverſary knows none ſuch, or elſe methinks he ſhould not have objected it to Dr. Potter, That he knew a man in the world, who, from a Puritan, was turned to a moderate Proteſtant, which is likely to be true. But ſure, if this be all his fault, he hath no reaſon to be aſhamed of his acquaintance. For poſſibly it may be a fault to be in error, becauſe many times it proceeds from a fault: But ſure, the forſaking of error cannot be a ſin, unleſs to be in error be a vertue. And therefore to do as you do, to damn men for falſe opinions, to call them Schiſmaticks for leaving them; to make pertinacy in error, that is, un unwillingneſs to be convicted, or a reſolution not to be convicted, the form of Hereſie, and to find fault with men, for being convicted in conſcience that they are in error, is the moſt incoherent and contradictious injuſtice that ever was heard of. But Sir, if this be a ſtrange matter to you, that which I ſhall tell you will be much ſtranger. I know a man that of a moderate Proteſtant turned a Papiſt, and, the day that he did ſo, (as all things that are done are perfected ſome day or other) was convicted in Conſcience, that his yeſterdays opinion was an error, and yet thinks he was no Schiſmatick for doing ſo, and deſires to be informed by you, whether or no he was miſtaken? the ſame man afterwards, upon better conſideration, became a doubting Papiſt, and of a doubting Papiſt a confirmed Proteſtant. And yet this man thinks himſelf no more to blame for all theſe changes, than a Traveller, who uſing all diligence to find the right way to ſome remote City, where he had never been, (as the party I ſpeak of had never been in Heaven) did yet miſtake it, and after find his error, and amend it. Nay, he ſtands upon his juſtification ſo far as to maintain that his alterations, not only to you, but alſo from you by Gods mercy, were the moſt ſatisfactory actions to himſelf, that ever he did, and the greateſt victories that ever he obtained over himſelf, and his affections to thoſe things which in this world are moſt precious; as wherein for Gods ſake, and (as he was verily perſuaded) out of love to the Truth, he went; upon a certain expectation of thoſe inconveniences, which to ingenuous natures are of all moſt terrible. So that though there were much weakneſs in ſome of theſe alterations, yet certainly there was no wickedneſs. Neither does he yield his weakneſs altogether without Apology, ſeeing his deductions were rational, and out of ſome Principles commonly received by Proteſtants as well as Papiſts, and which by his education had got poſſeſſion of his underſtanding.

104. Ad §. 40, 41. Dr. Potter p. 81. of his Book, to prove our Separation from you, not only lawful but neceſſary, hath theſe words, Although we confeſs the Church of Rome, (in ſome ſenſe) to be a true Church, and her errors (to ſome men) not damnable; yet for us who are convinced in conſcience, that ſhe errs in many things, a neceſſity lies upon us, even under pain of damnation, to forſake her in thoſe errors. He means not, in the belief of thoſe errors; for that is preſuppoſed to be done already: for whoſoever is convinced in Conſcience that ſhe errs, hath for matter of belief forſaken, that is, ceaſed to believe thoſe errors. This therefore he meant not, nor could not mean: but that, whoſoever is convinced in Conſcience that the Church of Rome errs, cannot with a good conſcience, but forsake her in the profession and practice of these errors: And the reason hereof is manifest; because otherwise, he must profess what he believes not, and practise what he approves not. Which is no more than your self in these have divers times affirmed. For in one place, you say, it is unlawful to speak any the least untruth: Now he that professeth your Religion, and believes it not, what else doth he but live in a perpetual lie? Again in another, you have called them that profess one thing and believe another, a damned crew of dissembling Sycophants: And therefore in inveighing against Protestants for forsaking the Profession of these errors, the belief whereof they had already forsaken, what do you but rail at them for not being a damned crew of dissembling Sycophants? And lastly, §. 42. of this Chapter, within three leaves after this, whereas Dr. Potter grants but only a necessity of peaceable external obedience to the Declaration of the Church, though perhaps erroneous, (provided it be in matter not of Faith, but of Opinions or Rites,) condemning those men, who by occasion or errors of this quality, disturb the Churches peace, and cast off her Communion: Upon this occasion you come upon him with this bitter Sarcasm, I thank you for your ingenuous confession, in recompence whereof I will do a deed of Charity, by putting you in mind into what Labyrinths you are brought, by teaching that the Church may err in some points of Faith and yet that it is not lawful for any man to oppose his judgment, or leave her Communion, though he have evidence of Scripture against her! Will you have such a man dissemble against his Conscience, or externally deny Truth known to be contained in holy Scripture? I answer for him, No: It is not he, but you, that would have him do so: not he who says plainly, that whosoever is convinced in Conscience that any Church errs, is bound under pain of damnation to forsake her in her profession and practice of these errors: but you, who find fault with him, and make long discourses against him, for thus affirming: Not he who can easily wind himself out of your Imaginary Labyrinth, by telling you, that he no where denies it lawful for any man to oppose any Church, erring in matter of Faith, for that he speaks not of matters of Faith at all, but only of Rites and Opinions. And in such matters, he says indeed at first, It is not lawful for any man to oppose his judgment to the publick: But he presently explains himself by saying, not only that he may hold an opinion contrary to the publick resolution, but besides that he may offer it to be considered of, (so far is he from requiring any sinful dissimulation;) Provided, he do it with great Probability of Reason, very modestly and respectfully, and without separation from the Churches Communion. It is not therefore in this case, opposing a mans private judgment to the Publick simply, which the Doctor finds fault with: But the degree only and malice of this Opposition, opposing it factiously. And not holding a mans own conceit, different from the Church absolutely, which here he censures: But a factious advancing it, and despising the Church, so far as to cast off her Communion, because, forsooth, she errs in some opinion, or useth some inconvenient, though not impious Rites and Ceremonies. Little reason therefore have you to accuse him there, as if he required, That men should dissemble against their Conscience, or externally deny a truth known to be contained in holy Scripture. But certainly a great deal less, to quarrel with him, for saying (which is all that here he says,) That men under pain of damnation, are not to dissemble, but if they be convinced in conscience, that your, or any other Church (for the reason is alike for all) errs in many things, are of necessity to forsake that Church, in the profession and practice of those errors.

105. But to consider your exception to this speech of the Doctors, somewhat more particularly: I say, your whole discourse against it, is compounded of falshoods and impertinencies. The first falshood is, that he in these words avoucheth; that no learned Catholicks can be saved: Unless you will suppose, that all learned Catholicks are convinced in conscience, that your Church errs in many things. It may well be feared that many are so convinced, and yet profess what they they believed not. Many more have been, and have stifled their consciences, by thinking it an act of humility, to do so. Many more would have been, had they with liberty and indifference of judgment, examined the grounds of the Religion which they profess. But to think that all the Learned of your side, are actually convinced of errors in your Church, and yet will not forsake the profession of them, this is so great an uncharitableness, that I verily believe Dr. Potter abhors it. Your next falshood is, That the Doctor affirms, that you Catholicks want no means of Salvation: and that he judges the Roman errors not to be in themselves fundamental or damnable. Which calumny I have very often confuted: and in this very place it is confuted by Dr. Potter, and confessed by your self. For in the beginning of this Answer you tell us, that the Doctor avouches of all Catholicks whom ignorance cannot excuse, that they cannot be saved. Certainly then he must needs esteem them to want something necessary to Salvation. And then in the Doctor's saying, it is remarkable, that he confesses, your errors to some men not damnable: which clearly imports, that according to his judgment, they were damnable in themselves, though by accident to them who lived and died in invincible ignorance, and with repentance, they might prove not damnable. A third is, that these Assertions, the Roman Errors are in themselves not damnable, and yet it is damnable for me (who know them to be errors) to hold and confess them, are absolutely inconsistent; which is false; for, be the matter what it will, yet for a man to tell a lie, especially in matters of Religion, cannot but be damnable. How much more then, to go on in a course of lying by professing to believe these things divine Truths, which he verily believes to be falshoods and fables? A fourth is, that if we erred in thinking that your Church holds errors, this error or erroneous conscience might be rectified and deposed, by judging those errors not damnable. For, what repugnance is there between these two Suppositions, that, you do hold some errors, and that they are not damnable? And if there be no repugnance between them, how can the belief of the later remove or destroy, or if it be erroneous, rectifie the belief of the former? Nay, seeing there is a manifest consent between them, how can it be avoided, but the belief of the later will maintain and preserve the belief of the former? For who can conjoyn in one brain not crackt, (pardon me, if I speak to you in your own words) these Assertions, In the Roman Church there are errors not damnable; and, In the Roman Church there are no errors at all? Or what sober understanding would ever think this a good collection, I esteem the errors of the Roman Church not damnable, therefore I do amiss to think that she errs at all? If therefore you would have us alter our judgment, that your Church is erroneous; your only way is to shew, your doctrine consonant, at least not evidently repugnant, to Scripture and Reason. For as for this device, this short cut of persuading our selves that you hold no errors, because we believe your errors are not damnable, assure your self it will never hold.

106. A fifth falshood is, That we daily do this favour for Protestants you must mean (if you speak consequently) to judge they have no errors, because we judge they have none damnable. Which the world knows to be most untrue. And for our continuing in their Communion notwithstanding their errors, the justification hereof is not so much, that their errors are not damnable: as that they require not the belief and profession of these errors among the conditions of their Communion. Which puts a main difference between them and you: because we may continue in their Communion without professing to believe their opinions, but in yours we cannot. A sixth is, that, according to the Doctrine of all Divines, there is any difference between a Speculative Persuasion of conscience, of the unlawfulness of any thing, and a Practical Dictamen that the same thing is unlawful. For these are but divers words signifying the same thing; neither is such persuasion wholly speculative, but tending to practice: nor such a dictamen wholly practical, but grounded upon speculation. A seventh is, That Protestants did only conceive in speculation, that the Church of Rome erred in some doctrines, and had not also a practical dictamen, that that it was damnable for them to continue in the profeſſion of theſe errors. An eighth is, that it is not lawful to ſeparate from any Churches Communion, for errors not appertaining to the ſubſtance of Faith: Which is not univerſally true, but with this exception, unleſs that Church requires the belief and profeſſion of them. The ninth is, that Dr. Potter teacheth, that Luther was bound to forſake the houſe of God, for an unneceſſary light. Confuted manifeſtly by Dr. Potter in this very place, for by the houſe of God you mean the Roman Church, and of her the Doctor ſays, That a neceſſity did lie upon him, even under pain of damnation, to forſake the Church of Rome in her errors. This ſure is not to ſay, that he was obliged to forſake her, for an unneceſſary light. The tenth is covertly vented in your intimation, That Luther and his Followers were the proper cauſe of the Chriſtian worlds Combuſtion: Whereas indeed the true cauſe of this lamentable effect, was your violent perſecution of them, for ſerving God according to their conſcience, which if it be done to you, you condemn of horrible impiety, and therefore may not hope to be excuſed, if you do it to others.

107. The eleventh is, that our firſt reformers ought to have doubted whether their opinions were certain. Which is to ſay, that they ought to have doubted of the certainty of Scripture: which in formal and expreſs terms, contains many of theſe opinions. And the reaſon of this Aſſertion is very vain: for though they had not an abſolute infallibility promiſed unto them, yet may they be of ſome things infallibly certain. As Euclide ſure was not infallible, yet was he certain enough, that twice two were four, and that every whole was greater than a part of that whole. And ſo though Calvin and Melanchthon were not infallible in all things, yet they might and did know well enough, that your Latine Service was condemned by St. Paul, and that the Communion in both kinds was taught by our Saviour. The twelfth and laſt is this, that your Church was in peaceable poſſeſſion (you muſt mean of her Doctrine, and the Profeſſors of it) and enjoyed preſcription for many ages. For, beſides that Doctrine is not a thing that may be poſſeſſed: And the profeſſors of it were the Church it ſelf, and in nature of poſſeſſors, (If we ſpeak improperly) rather than the thing poſſeſſed, with whom no man hath reaſon to be offended, if they think fit to quit their own poſſeſſion: I ſay, that the poſſeſſion, which the Governours of your Church held for ſome Ages, of the party governed, was not peaceable, but got by fraud, and held by violence.

108. Theſe are the Falſhoods which in this Anſwer offer themſelves to any attentive Reader, and that which remains is meer impertinence. As firſt, that a pretence of conſcience will not ſerve to juſtifie Separation, from being Schiſmatical. Which is true, but little to the purpoſe, ſeeing it was not an erroneous perſuaſion, much leſs an Hypocritical pretence, but a true and well grounded conviction of conſcience, which Dr. Potter alledged to juſtifie Proteſtants from being Schiſmatical. And therefore though ſeditious men in Church and State, may pretend conſcience, for a cloak of their rebellion: yet this, I hope, hinders not, but that an honeſt man ought to obey his rightly informed conſcience, rather than the unjuſt commands of his tyrannous Superiours. Otherwiſe, With what colour can you defend either your own refuſing the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy? Or the ancient Martyrs, and Apoſtles, and Prophets, who oftentimes diſobeyed the commands of men in authority, and for their diſobedience made no other but this Apology, We muſt obey God rather than men? It is therefore moſt apparent that this anſwer muſt be meerly impertinent: ſeeing it will ſerve againſt the Martyrs, and Apoſtles, and Prophets, and even againſt your ſelves, as well as againſt Proteſtants. To as little purpoſe is your rule out of Lyrinenſis againſt them that followed Luther, ſeeing they pretend and are ready to juſtifie, that they forſook not, with the Doctors, the faith, but only the corruption of the Church. As vain altogether is that which follows: That in caſes of uncertainty we are not to leave our Superiour, or caſt off his obedience, nor publickly oppoſe his decrees. From whence it will follow very evidently, that ſeeing it is not a matter of faith, but a diſputed queſtion queſtion amongſt you, Whether the Oath of Allegeance be lawful: that either you acknowledge not the King your Superiour, or do againſt conſcience, in oppoſing his and the Kingdoms decree, requiring the taking of this Oath. This good uſe, I ſay, may very fairly be made of it, and is by men of your Religion. But then it is ſo far from being a confutation, that it is rather a confirmation of Dr. Potter's Aſſertion. For he that uſeth theſe words, Doth he not plainly import (and ſuch was the caſe of Proteſtants) that we are to leave our Superiours, to caſt off obedience to them, and publickly to oppoſe their Decrees, when we are certain (as Proteſtants were) that what they command, God doth countermand. Laſtly, St. Cyprians example is againſt Proteſtants impertinently, and even ridiculouſly alledged. For what if St. Cyprian holding his opinion true, but not neceſſary, condemned no man (much leſs any Church) for holding the contrary? Yet, methinks, this ſhould lay no obligation upon Luther to do ſo likewiſe: ſeeing he held his own opinions not only true, but alſo neceſſary; and the doctrine of the Roman Church not only falſe, but damnable. And therefore ſeeing the condition and ſtate of the parties cenſured by St. Cyprian and Luther was ſo different, no marvel though their cenſures alſo were different according to the ſuppoſed merit of the parties delinquent. For as for your obtruding again upon us, That we believe the points of difference not Fundamental or neceſſary, you have been often told, that it is a Calumny. We hold your errors as damnable in themſelves as you do ours, only by accident through invincible ignorance, we hope they are not unpardonable: and you alſo profeſs to think the ſame of ours.

109. Ad §. 12. The former part of this diſcourſe, grounded on Dr. Potter's words, p. 105. I have already in paſſing examined and confuted: I add in this place, 1. That though the Doctor ſay, It is not fit for any private man to oppoſe his judgment to the publick; that is, his own judgment and bare authority: yet he denies not, but occaſions may happen wherein it may be warrantable, to oppoſe his reaſon or the authority of Scripture againſt it; and is not then to be eſteemed to oppoſe his own judgment to the publick, but the judgment of God to the judgment of men. Which his following words ſeem to import, He may offer his opinion to be conſidered of, ſo he do it with evidence or great probability of Scripture or Reaſon. Secondly, I am to tell you that you have no ground from him, to interline his words with that Interrogatory (his own conceits, and yet grounded upon evidence of Scripture?) For theſe things are in his words oppoſed, and not confounded; and the latter, not intended for a repetition (as you miſtake it) but for an Antitheſis of the former. He may offer (ſaith he) his opinion to be conſidered of, ſo he do it with evidence of Scripture. But if he will factiouſly advance his own conceits (that is, ſay I, clean contrary to your gloſs) Such as have not evident nor very probable ground in Scripture, (for theſe conceits are properly his own) he may juſtly be branded, &c. Now that this of the two is the better gloſs, it is proved by your own Interrogation. For that imputes abſurdity to Dr. Potter, for calling them a mans own conceits, which were grounded upon evidence of Scripture. And therefore you have ſhewed little candor or equity, in faſtening upon them this abſurd conſtruction: They not only bearing, but even requiring another more fair and more ſenſible. Every man ought to be preſumed to ſpeak ſenſe, rather than non-ſenſe; coherent, rather than contradictiouſly, if his words be fairly capable of a better conſtruction. For M. Hooker, if, writing againſt Puritans, he had ſaid ſomething unawares that might give advantage to Papiſts, it were not inexcuſable: ſeeing it is a matter of ſuch extreme difficulty, to hold ſuch a temper in oppoſing one extreme opinion, as not to ſeem to favour the other. Yet if his words be rightly conſidered, there is nothing in them that will do you any ſervice. For though he ſays, that men are bound to do whatſoever the ſentence of final Deciſion ſhall determine, as it is plain men are bound to yield ſuch an obedience to all Courts of Civil Judicature: yet he ſays not, they are bound to think that determination lawful, and that ſentence juſt. Nay, it is plain he ſays, that they muſt do according to the Judges ſentence, though though in their private opinion it seem unjust. As if I be cast wrongfully in a suit at Law, and sentenced to pay an hundred pound, I am bound to pay the money; yet I know no Law of God or man, that binds me in conscience to acquit the Judge of error in his sentence. The question therefore being only what men ought to think, it is vain for you to tell us what M. Hooker says at all. For M. Hooker, though an excellent man, was but a man. And much more vain, to tell us out of him what men ought to do, for point of external obedience. When, in the very same place, he supposeth and alloweth, that in their private opinion they may think, This sentence to which they yield a passive obedience, to swerve utterly from that which is right. If you will draw his words to such a construction, as if he had said, They must think the sentence of judicial and final decision just and right, though it seem in their private opinion to swerve utterly from what is right; It is manifest, you make him contradict himself, and make him say in effect, They must think thus, though at the same time they think the contrary. Neither is there any necessity, that he must either acknowledge the universal infallibility of the Church, or drive men into dissembling against their conscience, seeing nothing hinders, but I may obey the sentence of a Judge, paying the money he awards me to pay, or forgoing the house or land which he hath judged from me, and yet withal plainly profess, that in my conscience I conceive his judgment erroneous. To which purpose, they have a saying in France, that whosoever is cast in any cause, hath liberty for ten days after, to rail at his Judges.

110. This answer to this place, the words themselves offered me, even as they are alledged by you: But upon perusal of the place in the Author himself, I find that here, as elsewhere, you, and M. Brerely wrong him extremely. For, mutilating his words, you make him say that absolutely, which he there expressly limits to some certain cases. In litigious and controverted causes of such a quality (saith he) the will of God is, to have them do whatsoever the sentence of judicial and final Decision shall determine. Observe, I pray, He says not absolutely and in all causes, this is the will of God: But only in litigious causes, of the quality of those whereof he there entreats. In such matters, as have plain Scripture or Reason, neither for them, nor against them, and wherein men are persuaded this or that way, Upon their own only probable collection; In such cases, This persuasion (saith he) ought to be fully settled in mens hearts, that the will of God is, that they should not disobey the certain commands of their lawful Superiours, upon uncertain grounds: But do that which the sentence of judicial and final decision shall determine. For the purpose, a Question there is, Whether a Surplice may be worn in Divine Service: The Authority of Superiours injoyns this Ceremony, and neither Scripture nor Reason plainly forbids it. Sempronius notwithstanding, is, by some inducements, which he confesses to be only probable, led to this persuasion, that the thing is unlawful. The quære is, Whether he ought for matter of practice to follow the injunction of authority, or his own private and only probable persuasion? Mr. Hooker resolves for the former, upon this ground, that the certain commands of the Church we live in, are to be obeyed in all things, not certainly unlawful. Which rule is your own, and by you extended to the commands of all Superiours, in the very next Section before this, in these words, In cases of uncertainty we are not to leave our Superiour, nor cast off his Obedience, or publickly oppose his Decrees. And yet, if a man should conclude upon you, that either you make all Superiours universally infallible, or else drive men into perplexities and labyrinths of doing against conscience, I presume you would not thing your self fairly dealt with; but alledge, that your words are not extended to all cases, but limited co cases of uncertainty. As little therefore ought you to make this deduction from Mr. Hooker's words which are apparently also restrained to cases of uncertainty. For as for requiring a blind and an unlimited obedience, to Ecclesiastical decisions universally and in all cases, even when plain Texts or Reason seems to controul them, Mr. Hooker is as far from making such an Idol of Ecclesiastical Authority, as the Puritans whom he he writes against: I grant (saith he) that proof derived from the authority of mans judgment, is not able to work that assurance which doth grow by a stronger proof. And therefore although ten thousand General Councils would set down one and the same definitive Sentence, concerning any point of Religion whatsoever; yet one demonstrative Reason alledged, or one manifest Testimony cited from the word of God himself, to the contrary, could not chuse but overweigh them all: in as much as for them to be deceived, it is not impossible; it is, that Demonstrative Reason, or Divine Testimony, should deceive. And again, whereas it is thought, that, especially with the Church, and those that are called, mans authority ought not to prevail: It must and doth prevail even with them, yea with them especially, as far as equity requireth, and farther we maintain it not. For men to be tied and led by authority, as it were with a kind of captivity of judgment; and, though there be reason to the contrary, not to listen to it, but follow like Beasts, the first in the Herd, this were brutish. Again, That authority of men should prevail with men either against or above reason, is no part of our belief. Companies of learned men, be they never so great and reverend, are to yield unto reason, the weight whereof, is no whit prejudiced by the simplicity of his person which doth alledge it, but being found to be sound and good, the bare opinion of men to the contrary, must of necessity stoop and give place. Thus Mr. Hooker in his 7. 6. Book 2. which place because it is far distant from that which is alledged by you, the oversight of it might be excusable, did you not impute it to D. Potter as a fault, that he cites some clauses of some Books, without reading the whole. But besides, in that very Sect. out of which you take this corrupted sentence, he hath very pregnant words to the same effect: as for the orders established, sith equity and reason favour that which is in being, till orderly judgment of decision be given against it, it is but justice to exact of you, and preverseness in you it should be to deny thereunto your willing obedience. Not that I judg it a thing allowable, for men to observe those Laws, which in their hearts they are stedfastly perswaded to be against the Law of God: But your perswasion in this case, ye are all bound for the time to suspend; and, in otherwise doing, ye offend against God, by troubling his Church without just and necessary cause. Be it that there are some reasons inducing you to think hardly of our Laws: Are those Reasons demonstrative, are they necessary, or but meer probabilities only? An argument necessary and demonstrative is such, as, being proposed to any man and understood, the mind cannot chuse but inwardly assent. Any one such reason discharged, I grant, the Conscience, and setteth it at full liberty. For the publick approbation given by the body of this whole Church, unto those things which are established, doth make it but probable that they are good. And therefore unto a necessary proof that they are not good, it must give place. This plain declaration of his judgment in this matter, this express limitation of his former resolution, he makes in the very same Section, which affords your former quotation; and therefore what Apology can be made for you, and your Store-house Mr. Brerely, for dissembling of it, I cannot possibly imagine.

111. D. Potter, p. 131. says, That errors of the Donatists and Novatians, were not in themselves Heresies, nor could be made so by the Churches determination. But that the Churches intention was only to silence disputes, and to settle peace and unity in her government: which because they factiously opposed, they were justly esteemed Schismaticks. from hence you conclude that the same condemnation must pass against the first Reformers, seeing they also opposed the commands of the Church, imposed on them, for silencing all Disputes, and setling Peace and Unity in Government. But this Collection is deceitful, and the reason is, because, though the first Reformers, as well as the Donatists and Novatians, opposed herein the commands of the Visible Church, that is, of a great part of it: yet the Reformers had reason, nay necessity to do so, the Church being then corupted with damnable errors: which was not true of the Church, when it was opposed by the Novatians and Donatists. And therefore though they, and the Reformers, did the same action, yet doing it upon different grounds, it might in these merit applause, and in them condemnation.

112. Ad § 43. The next § hath in it ſome objections againſt Luther's perſon, and none againſt his cauſe, which alone I have undertaken to juſtifie, and therefore I paſs it over. Yet this I promiſe, that when you, or any of your ſide, ſhall publiſh a good defence, of all that your Popes have ſaid and done, eſpecially of them whom Bellarmine believes, in ſuch a long train to have gone to the Devil, then you ſhall receive an ample Apology for all the actions and words of Luther. In the mean time, I hope, all reaſonable and equitable Judges, will eſteem it not unpardonable in the great and Heroical ſpirit of Luther, if, being oppoſed, and perpetually baited with a world of Furies, he went tranſported ſometimes, and made ſomewhat furious. As for you, I deſire you to be quiet, and to demand no more, whether God be wont to ſend ſuch Furies to preach the Goſpel? Unleſs you deſire to hear of your killing of Kings, Maſſacring of Peoples, Blowing up of Parliaments; and have a mind to be askt, Whether it be probable, that that ſhould be Gods cauſe, which needs to be maintain'd by ſuch deviliſh means?

113. Ad § 44, 45. In the two next Particles, which are all of this Chapter, that remain unſpoken to, you ſpend a great deal of reading, and wit, and reaſon, againſt ſome men, who pretending to honour and believe the Doctrine and practice of the viſible Church, (you mean your own) and condemning their Forefathers who forſook her, ſay, they would not have done ſo, yet remain divided from her Communion. Which men in my judgment cannot be defended. For if they believe the Doctrine of your Church, then muſt they believe this Doctrine, that they are to return to your Communion. And therefore if they do not ſo, it cannot be avoided but they muſt be ἀυτοκατάκριτοι, and ſo I leave them: only I am to remember you, that theſe men cannot pretend to be Proteſtants, becauſe they pretend to believe your Doctrine, which is oppoſite in Diameter unto the doctrine of Proteſtants; and therefore in a Work which you profeſs to have written meerly againſt Proteſtants, all this might have been ſpared.

CHAP. VI.

That Luther, and the reſt of the Proteſtants have added Hereſie unto Schiſm.

BEcauſe Vice is beſt known by the contrary Virtue, we cannot well determine what Hereſie is, nor who be Hereticques, but by the oppoſite virtue of Faith, whoſe nature being once underſtood as far as belongs to our preſent purpoſe, we ſhall paſs on, with eaſe, to the definition of hereſie, and ſo be able to diſcern who be Hereticques. And this I intend to do, not by entring into ſuch particular Queſtions, as are controverted between Catholiques and Proteſtants, but only by applying ſome general grounds, either already proved, or elſe yielded to on all ſides.

2. Almighty God having ordained Man to a ſupernatural End of Beatitude by ſupernatural means, it was requiſite that his underſtanding ſhould be enabled to apprehend that End, and Means, by a ſupernatural knowledg. And becauſe if ſuch a knowledge were no more than probable, it could not be able ſufficiently to overbear our will, and encounter with humane probabilities, being backed with the ſtrength of fleſh and blood; it was further neceſſary, that this ſupernatural knowledg ſhould be moſt certain and infallible; and that Faith ſhould believe nothing more certainly than that it ſelf is a moſt certain Belief, and ſo be able to bear down all gay probabilities of humane Opinion. And becauſe the aforeſaid means and end of Beatifical Viſion do far exceed the reach of natural wit, the certainty of faith could not always be joyned with ſuch evidence of reaſon, as is wont to be found in the Principles, or Concluſions, of humane d 2 Cor. 10. natural Sciences, that ſo all fleſh might not glory in the arm of fleſh, but he, who glories, ſhould glory (a) in our Lord. Moreover, it was expedient that our belief or aſſent to divine truths, ſhould not only be unknown, or invident by any humane diſcourſe, but that abſolutely alſo it ſhould be obſcure in it ſelf, and (ordinarily ſpeaking) be void even of ſupernatural evidence, that ſo we might have occaſion to actuate, and teſtifie the obedience which we owe to our God, not only by ſubmitting our will to his will and commands, but by ſubjecting alſo our underſtanding to his wiſdom and words, captivating (as the Apoſtle b 2 Cor. 10. 5. ſpeaks) the ſame underſtanding (b) to the obedience of Faith: Which occaſion had been wanting, if Almighty God had made clear to us, the truths which now are certainly, but not evidently preſented to our minds. For where truth doth manifeſtly open it ſelf, not obedience but neceſſity commands our aſſent. For this reaſon, Divines teach, that the Objects of faith, being not evident to humane reaſon, it is in mans power, not only to abſtain from believing, by ſuſpending our Judgments, or exerciſing no act one way or other; but alſo to diſbelieve, that is, to believe the contrary of that which faith propoſeth; as the example of innumerable Arch-hereticques can bear witneſs. This obſcurity of faith we learn from hod 1 Cor. 13. the argument of things not appearing. And, we ſee by a glaſs (d) in a dark manner: but then face to face. And e 2 Pet. 1. 19. accordingly S. Peter ſaith, which you do well attending unto, as to (e) a candle ſhining in a dark place.

3. Faith being then obſcure (whereby it differeth from natural Science) and yet being moſt certain and infallible (wherein it ſurpaſſeth humane Opinion) it muſt rely upon ſome motive and ground, which may be able to give it certainty, and yet not releaſe it from Obſcurity. For if this motive, ground, or formal Object of Faith, were any thing evidently preſented to our underſtanding: and if alſo we did evidently know, that it had a neceſſary connection with the Articles which we believe, our aſſent to ſuch Articles could not be obſcure, but evident; which, as we ſaid, is againſt the nature of our Faith. If likewiſe the motive and ground of our Faith were obſcurely propounded to us, but were not in it ſelf infallible, it would leave our aſſent in obſcurity, but could not endue it with certainty. We muſt therefore for the ground of our faith, find out a motive obſcure to us, but moſt certain in it ſelf, that the act of faith may remain both obſcure and certain. Such a motive as this, can be no other but the divine authority of Almighty God, revealing, or ſpeaking thoſe truths which our faith believes. For it is manifeſt, that God's infallible teſtimony may tranſfuſe certainty to our faith, and yet not draw it out of obſcurity; becauſe no humane diſcourſe or demonſtration can evince that God revealeth any ſupernatural truth, ſince God had been no leſs perfect than he is, although he had never revealed any of thoſe objects which we now believe.

4. Nevertheleſs, becauſe Almighty God out of his infinite wiſdom and ſweetneſs doth concur with his Creatures in ſuch ſort as may befit the temper, and exigence of their natures; and becauſe man is a Creature endued with reaſon, God doth not exact of his Will or Underſtanding any other than, as the Apoſtle ſaith, rationabile (f) obſequium, an Obedience ſweetned with good reaſon; which could not ſo f Rom. 12. 1 appear, if our Underſtanding were ſummoned to believe with certainty, things no way reprehended as infallible and certain. And therefore Almighty God obliging us under pain of eternal damnation to believe with greateſt certainty divers verities, not known by the light of natural reaſon, cannot fail to furniſh our Underſtanding with ſuch inducements, motives, and arguments as may ſufficiently perſwade any mind which is not partial or paſſionate, that the objects which we believe, proceed from an Authority ſo wiſe, that it cannot be deceived, ſo Good that it cannot deceive; according to the words of David: Thy Teſtimonies are made (g) credible exceedingly. Theſe inducements are by Divines call'd arguments g Pſal. 92.
credibilitatis, arguments of credibility, which though they cannot make us evidently ſee what we believe, yet they evidently convince that, in true wiſdom, and prudence, the objects of faith deſerve credit, and ought to be accepted as things revealed by God. For without ſuch reaſons and inducements, our judgment of faith could not be conceived prudent, holy ſcripture telling us, that, he who has no (h) malice, h Eccleſ. 19. 4.
is light of heart. By theſe arguments and inducements our Underſtanding is both ſatisfied with evidence of credibility, and the objects of faith retain their obſcurity: becauſe it is a different thing to be evident-ly credible, and evidently true; as thoſe who were preſent at the Miracles wrought by our bleſſed Saviour, and his Apoſtles, did not evidently ſee their doctrine to be true (for then it had not been Faith, but Science, and all had been neceſſitated to believe, which we ſee fell out otherwiſe) but they were evidently convinced, that the things confirmed by ſuch Miracles, were moſt credible, and worthy to be imbraced as truth revealed by God.

5. Theſe evident arguments of Credibility are in great abundance found in the Viſible Church of Chriſt, perpetually exiſting on earth. For, that there hath been a company of men profeſſing ſuch and ſuch doctrins, we have from our next Predeceſſors, and theſe from theirs upward, till we come to the Apoſtles, and our Bleſſed Saviour; which gradation is known by evidence of ſenſe, by reading Books, or hearing what one man delivers to another. And it is evident that there was neither cauſe, nor poſſibility, that men ſo diſtant in place, ſo different in temper, ſo repugnant in private ends, did, or could agree to tell one and the ſelf ſame thing, if it had been but a fiction invented by themſelves, as ancient Tertullian well ſaith, How is it likely that ſo many (i) and ſo great Churches ſhould err in one faith? Among many events i Præſcript.
there is not one iſſue, the error of the Churches muſt needs have varied. But that which among many is found c. 28. to be One, is not miſtaken, but delivered. Does then any body ſay, that they erred who delivered it? With this never-interrupted exiſtence of the Church are joyned the many and great Miracles wrought by men of that Congregation or Church; the ſanctity of the perſons; the renowned victories over ſo many perſecutions, both of all ſorts of men, and of the infernal ſpirits; and laſtly, the perpetual exiſtence of ſo holy a Church, being brought up to the Apoſtles themſelves, ſhe comes to partake of the ſame aſſurance of truth, which they by ſo many powerful ways, did communicate to their Doctrin, and to the Church of their times, together with the divine Certainty which they received from our bleſſed Saviour himſelf, revealing to mankind what he heard from his Father; and ſo we conclude with Tertullian: We receive it k from the Churches, the Churches (k) from the Apoſtles, the Apoſtles from Chriſt, Chriſt from his Father: And if k Præſcr. c. 21.
we once interrupt this line of ſucceſſion, moſt certainly made known by means of holy Tradition, we & 37.
cannot conjoyn the preſent Church, and Doctrine, with the Church, and Doctrine of the Apoſtles, but muſt invent ſome new means, and arguments ſufficient of themſelves to find out, and prove a true Church, and faith independently of the preaching, and writing of the Apoſtles; neither of which can be known but by Tradition; as is truly obſerved by Tertullian, ſaying, I will preſcribe, that (l) there is no l Præſcr. c. 21 means to prove what the Apoſtles preached, but by the ſame Church which they founded.

6. Thus then we are to proceed: By evidence of manifeſt and uncorrupt Tradition, I know that there hath always been a never-interrupted Succeſſion of men from the Apoſtles time, believing, profeſſing, and practiſing ſuch and ſuch doctrines: By evident arguments of credibility, as Miracles, Sanctity, Unity, &c. and, by all thoſe ways whereby the Apoſtles, and our Bleſſed Saviour himſelf confirmed their doctrine, we are aſſured that what the ſaid never-interrupted Church propoſeth, doth deſerve to be accepted and acknowledged as a divine truth: By evidence of ſenſe, we ſee that the ſame Church propoſeth ſuch and ſuch doctrines as divine truths, that is as revealed and teſtified by Almighty God. By this divine Teſtimony we are infallibly aſſured of what we believe: and ſo the laſt period, ground, motive, and formal object of our Faith, is, the infallible teſtimony of that ſupreme Verity, which neither can deceive, nor be deceived.

7. By this orderly deduction our Faith cometh to be endued with thoſe qualities which we ſaid were requiſite thereto; namely Certainty, Obſcurity, and Prudence. Certainty proceeds from the infallible teſtimony of God propounded and conveyed to our underſtanding by ſuch a mean as is infallible in it ſelf, and to us is evidently known that it propoſeth this point or that, and which can manifeſtly declare in what ſenſe it propoſeth them; which means we have proved to be only the viſible Church of Chriſt. Obſcurity, from the manner in which God ſpeaks to mankind, which ordinarily is ſuch, that it doth not manifeſtly ſhew the perſon who ſpeaks, nor the truth of the thing ſpoken. Prudence is not wanting, because our faith is accompanied with so many arguments of Credibility, that every well disposed understanding, may and ought to judge, that the doctrines so confirmed deserve to be believed, as proceeding from divine Authority.

8. And thus from what hath been said, we may easily gather the particular nature, or definition of Faith. For, it is a voluntary, or free, infallible, obscure assent to some truth, because it is testified by God, and is sufficiently propounded to us for such: which proposal is ordinarily made by the visible Church of Christ. I say, Sufficiently proposed by the Church; not that I purpose to dispute whether the proposal of the Church enter into the formal Object, or Motive of Faith: or whether any error be an Heresie, formally and precisely, because it is against the proposition of the Church, as if such proposal were the formal Object of Faith, which D. Potter, to no purpose at all, labours so very hard to disprove: But I only affirm, that when the Church propounds any Truth, as revealed by God, we are assured that it is such indeed; and so it instantly grows, to be a fit object for Christian Faith, which inclines and enables us to believe whatsoever is duly presented, as a thing revealed by Almighty God. And in the same manner we are sure, that whosoever opposeth any doctrine proposed by the Church, doth thereby contradict a truth, which is testified by God: As when any lawful Superiour notifies his will, by the means, and, as it were, proposal of some faithful messenger, the subject of such a Superiour in performing, or neglecting what is delivered by the Messenger is said to obey, or disobey his own lawful Superiour. And therefore because the testimony of God is notified by the Church, we may, and we do most truly say, that not to believe what the Church proposeth, is, to deny God's holy word or testimony signified to us by the Church, according to that saying of S. Irenæus, It is need not go (m) to any other to seek the truth, which we may easily receive from the Church.

9. From this definition of Faith, we may also know what Heresie is, by taking the contrary terms, as Heresie is contrary to Faith, and saying: Heresie is a voluntary error against that which God hath revealed, and the Church hath proposed for such. Neither doth it import, whether the error concern points in themselves great or small, fundamental or not fundamental. For more being required to an act of Virtue, than of Vice, if any truth though never so small may be believed by faith as soon as we know it to be testified by divine revelation; much more will it be a formal Heresie to deny any least point sufficiently propounded as a thing witnessed by God.

10. This divine Faith is divided into Actual and Habitual. Actual faith, or faith actuated, is when we are in act of consideration, and belief of some mystery of Faith; for example, that our Saviour Christ, is true God, and Man, &c. Habitual faith, is that from which we are denominated Faithful, or Believers, as by Actual faith they are filled Believing. This Habit of faith is a Quality enabling us most firmly to believe Objects above humane discourse, and it remaineth permanently in our Soul, even when we are sleeping, or not thinking of any mystery of faith. This is the first among the three Theological Virtues. For Charity unites us to God, as he is infinitely God in himself; Hope ties us to him, as he is unspeakably Good to us; Faith joyns us to him, as he is the Supreme immovable Verity. Charity relies on his Goodness; Hope on his Power; Faith on his divine wisdom. From hence it followeth, that Faith being one of the Virtues which Divines term Infused (that is, which cannot be acquired by humane wit, or industry, but are in their Nature and Essence supernatural) it hath this property; that it is not destroyed by little and little, (contrarily to the Habits called acquisiti, that is, gotten by humane endeavour, which as they are successively produced, so also are they lost successively; or by little and little) but it must either be conserved entire, or wholly destroyed: And since it cannot stand entire with any one act which is directly contrary, it must be totally overthrown, and, as it were, demolished, and razed by every such act. Wherefore, as Charity, or the love of God, is expelled from our soul by any one act of Hatred, or any other mortal sin against his Divine Majesty: and as Hope is destroyed by any one act of voluntary Desperation: so Faith must perish by any one act of Heresie, because every such act is directly, and formally opposite thereunto. I know that some sins which (as Divines speak) are ex genere suo, in their kind, grievous and mortal, may be much lessened, and fall to be venial, ob levitatem materiæ, because they may happen to be exercised in a matter of small consideration; as for example, to steal a peny is venial, although Theft in his kind be a deadly sin. But it is likewise true, that this Rule is not general for all sorts of sins; there being some so inexcusably wicked of their own nature, that no smalness of matter, nor paucity in number can defend them from being deadly sins. For, to give an instance, what blasphemy against God, or voluntary false Oath is not a deadly sin? Certainly none at all, although the Salvation of the whole world should depend upon swearing such a falshood. The like happeneth in our present case of Heresie, the iniquity redounding to the injury of God's supreme wisdom and goodness, is always great, and enormous.

n Reg. 1. 17. They were no precious stones which David (n) picked out of the water, to encounter Goliah, and yet if a man take from the number but one, and say they were but four, against the Scriptures affirming them to have been five, he is instantly guilty of a damnable sin. Why? Because by this substraction of One, he doth deprive God's Word and Testimony of all credit and infallibility. For, if either he could deceive, or be deceived in any one thing, it were but wisdom to suspect him in all. And seeing every Heresie opposeth some Truth revealed by God: it is no wonder that no one can be excused from deadly, and damnable sin; for, if voluntary Blasphemy, and Perjury, which are opposed only to the infused Moral Virtue of Religion, can never be excused from mortal sin: much less can Heresie be excused, which opposeth the Theological Virtue of Faith.

11. If any object, that Schism may seem to be a greater sin than Heresie: because the Virtue of Charity (to which Schism is opposite) is greater than Faith, according to the Apostle, saying, now three remain (o) Faith, Hope, Charity; but the greater of these is Charity. S. Thomas answers in these words. Charity hath two Objects, one principal, to wit, the Divine (p) Goodness; and another secondary, namely the good of our Neighbour: But Schism and other sins which are committed against our Neighbour, are opposite to Charity in respect of this secondary good, which is less than the object of Faith, which is God, as he is the Prime Verity, on which Faith doth rely; and therefore those sins are less than Infidelity. He takes Infidelity after a general manner, as it comprehends Heresie, and other vices against Faith.

12. Having therefore sufficiently declared, wherein Heresie consists; Let us come to prove that which we proposed in this Chapter. Where I desire, it be still remembred: That the visible Catholique Church cannot err damnably, as D. Potter confesseth. And that when Luther appeared, there was no other visible true Church of Christ, disagreeing from the Roman, as we have demonstrated in the next precedent Chapter.

13. Now

13. Now, that Luther and his followers cannot be excused from formal Heresie, I prove by these reasons. To oppose any truth propounded by the visible true Church, as revealed by God, is formal Heresie, as we have shewed out of the definition of Heresie: But Luther, Calvin, and the rest did oppose divers truths propounded by the visible Church revealed by God; yea, they did therefore oppose her, because she propounded, as divine revealed truths, things which they judged either to be false, or humane inventions: Therefore they committed formal Heresie.

14. Moreover, Every Errour against any doctrine revealed by God, is a damnable Heresie, whether the matter in it self be great or small, as I proved before: and therefore either the Protestants or the Roman Church must be guilty of formal Heresie, because one of them must err against the word and testimony of God: but you grant (perforce) that the Roman Church doth not err damnably, and I add that she cannot err damnably because she is the truly Catholique Church, which you confess cannot err damnably: Therefore Protestants must be guilty of formal Heresie.

15. Besides, we have shewed that the visible Church is Judg of Controversies, and therefore must be infallible in all her Proposals; which being once supposed, it manifestly followeth, that to oppose what she delivereth as revealed by God, is not so much to oppose her, as God himself; and therefore cannot be excused from grievous Heresie.

16. Again, If Luther were an Heretique, for those points wherein he disagreed from the Roman Church; All they who agree with him in those very points, must likewise be Heretiques. Now, that Luther was a formal Heretique I demonstrate in this manner. To say, that God's visible true Church is not universal, but confined to one only place or corner of the world, is according to your own express words (q) properly Heretic, against that Article of the Creed, wherein we profess to believe the holy Catholique Church: And you brand Donatus with Heresie, because he limited the universal Church to Africa. But it is manifest, and acknowledged by Luther himself, and other chief Protestants, that Luther's Reformation when it first began (and much more for divers ages before) was not Universal, nor spread over the world, but was confined to that compass of ground which did contain Luther's body. Therefore his Reformation cannot be excused from formal Heresie. If S. Augustine in those times said to the Donatists, There are innumerable testimonies (r) of holy Scripture in which it appeareth that the Church of Christ is not only in Africa, as these men with most impudent vanity do rave, but that she is spread over the whole earth: much more may it be said; It appeareth by innumerable testimonies of holy Scripture that the Church of Christ cannot be confined to the City of Wittemberg, or to the place where Luther's feet stood, but must be spread over the whole world. It is therefore most impudent vanity and dotage to limit her to Luther's Reformation. In another place also this holy Father writes no less effectually against Luther than against the Donatists. For having out of those words, In thy seed all Nations shall be blessed, proved that God's Church must be universal, he saith, Why (s) do you superadd, by saying that Christ remains heir in no part of the earth, except where he may have Donatus for his Coheir. Give me this (Universal) Church if it be among you; shew your selves to all Nations, which we already shew to be blessed in this Seed: Give us this (Church) or else laying aside all fury, receive her from us. But it is evident that Luther could not, when he said, At the beginning I was alone, give us an Universal Church: Therefore happy had he been, if he had then, and his followers would now, receive her from us. And therefore we must conclude with the same holy Father, saying in another place of the Universal Church: She hath this (t) most certain mark, that she cannot be hidden: She is then known to all Nations. The Sect of Donatus is unknown to many Nations; therefore that cannot be she. The Sect of Luther (at least when he began, and much more before his beginning) was unknown to many Nations, therefore that cannot be she.

17. And that it may yet further appear how perfectly Luther agreed with the Donatists; It is to be noted, that they never taught, that the Catholique Church ought not to extend it self further than that part of Africa, where their faction reigned, but only that in fact it was so confined, because all the rest of the Church was prophaned, by communicating with Cæcilianus, whom they falsly affirmed to have been ordained Bishop by those who were Traditors, or givers up of the Bible to the persecutors to be burned; yea, at that very time they had some of their Sect residing in Rome, and sent thither one Victor, a Bishop, under colour to take care of the Brethren in that City, but indeed, as Baronius (u) observeth, that the world might account them Catholiques by communicating with the Bishop of Rome, to communicate with whom was ever taken by the Ancient Fathers as an assured sign of being a true Catholique. They had also, as S. Augustine witnesseth, a pretended (w) Church in the house and territory of a Spanish Lady called Lucilla, who went flying out of the Catholique Church, because she had been justly checked by Cæcilianus. And the same Saint speaking of the Conference he had with Fortunius the Donatist, saith, How did he first (x) attempt to affirm that his communion was spread over the whole Earth, &c. but because the thing was evidently false, they got out of this discourse by confusion of Language, whereby nevertheless they sufficiently declared, that they did not hold that the true Church ought necessarily to be confined to one place, but only by meer necessity were forced to yield that it was so in fact, because their Sect which they held to be the only true Church was not spread over the world: In which point Fortunius and the rest were more modest, than he who should affirm that Luther's Reformation in the very beginning was spread over the whole Earth; being at that time by many degrees not so far diffused as the Sect of the Donatists. I have no desire to prosecute the similitude of Protestants with Donatists, by remembring that the Sect of these men was begun and promoted by the passion of Lucilla; and, who is ignorant what influence two women, the Mother, and Daughter, ministred to Protestancy in England? Nor will I stand to observe their very likeness of phrase with the Donatists, who called the Chair of Rome, the Chair of pestilence, and the Roman Church an Harlot, which is D. Potter's own phrase, wherein he is less excusable than they, because he maintaineth her to be a true Church of Christ: and therefore let him duly ponder these words of S. Augustine against the Donatists, If I persecute him justly who detracts (y) from his Neighbour, why should I not persecute him who detracts from the Church of Christ, and faith, This is not She, but this is an Harlot? And least of all, will I consider, whether you may not be well compared to one Ticonius a Donatist, who wrote against Parmenianus likewise a Donatist, who blasphemed, that the Church of Christ had perished (as you do even in this your Book write against some of your Protestant Brethren, or as you call them Zelots among you, who hold the very same or rather a worse Heresie) and yet remained among them, even after Parmenianus had excommunicated him (as those your Zealous brethren would proceed against you if it were in their power) and yet, like Ticonius, you remain in their Communion, and come not into that Church which is, hath been, and shall ever be universal: For which very cause S. Augustine complains of Ticonius, that although he wrote against the Donatists, yet he was of an heart (z) so extremely absurd as not to forsake them altogether. And speaking of the same thing in another place, he observes, that although Ticonius did manifestly confute them who affirmed that the Church had perished; yet he saw not (faith this holy Father) that which in good consequence (a) he should have seen, that those Christians of Africa belonged to the church spread over the whole world, who remained united, not with them who were divided from the communion and unity of the same world, but with such as did communicate with the whole world. But Parmenianus, and the rest of the Donatists saw that consequence, and resolved rather to settle their mind in obstinacy against the most manifest truth which Ticonius maintained, than by yielding thereto, to be overcome by those churches in Africa, which enjoyed the Communion of that Unity which Ticonius defended, from which they had divided themselves. How fitly these words agree to Catholiques in England, in respect of the Protestants, I desire the Reader to consider. But these and the like resemblances of Protestants to the Donatists, I willingly let pass, and only urge the main point: that since Luther's Reformed Church was not in being for divers Centuries before Luther, and yet was (because so forsooth they will needs have it) in the Apostles time, they must of necessity affirm hereticully with the Donatists, that the true and unspotted Church of Christ perished; and that she which remained on earth was (O blasphemy!) an Harlot. Moreover the same heresie follows out of the doctrin of D. Potter, and other Protestants, that the Church may err in points not fundamental, because we have shewed that every error against any one revealed truth, is Heresie, and damnable, whether the matter be otherwise, of it self, great or small. And how can the Church more truly be said to perish, than when she is permitted to maintain a damnable Heresie? Besides, we will hereafter prove, that by any act of Heresie, all divine faith is lost; and to imagin a true Church of faithful persons without any faith, is as much as to fancy a living man without life. It is therefore clear, that Donatist-like they held that the Church of Christ perished: yea, they are worse than the Donatists, who said, that the Church remained at least in Africa; whereas Protestants must of necessity be forced to grant, that for a long space before Luther, she was no where at all. But let us go forward to other reasons.

18. The Holy Scripture, and ancient Fathers do assign Separation from the visible Church as a mark of Heresie; according to that of S. John, they went out (b) from us. And, Some who (c) went out from us. And, out of you shall (d) arise men speaking perverse things. And accordingly Vincentius Lyrinensis saith, It is ever (e) began Heresies, who did not first separate themselves from the universality, Antiquity, and Consent of the Catholique Church. But it is manifest, that when Luther appeared, there was no visible Church distinct from the Roman, out of which she could depare, as it is likewise well known that Luther and his followers departed out of her. Therefore she is no way liable to this mark of Heresie: But Protestants cannot possibly avoid it. To this purpose S. Prosper hath these pithy words: A Christian communicating (f) with the Universal Church, is a Catholique, and he who is divided from her, is an Heretique, and Antichrist. But Luther in his first Reformation could not communicate with the visible Catholique Church of those times, because he began his Reformation by opposing the supposed Errors of the then visible Church: we must therefore say with S. Prosper, that he was an Heretique, &c. Which likewise is no less clearly proved out of S. Cyprian, saying, Nc we (g) departed from them, but they from us, and have Heresies and Schisms are bred afterwards, while they make to themselves divers Conventicles, they have forsaken the head and origin of truth.

19. And that we might not remain doubtful what Separation it is, which is the mark of Heresie, the Ancient Fathers tell us more in particular, that it is from the Church of Rome, as it is the See of Peter. And therefore D. Potter need not be so hot with us, because we say, and write, that the Church of Rome, in that sense as she is the Mother Church of all others, and with which all the rest agree, is truly called the Catholique Church. S. Hierom writing to Pope Damasus, saith, I am in the Communion (h) of the Chair of Peter; I know that at the Church is built upon that Rock. Whosoever shall eat the Lamb out of this house, he is prophane. If any shall not be in the Ark of Noah, he shall perish in the time of the deluge. Whosoever doth not gather with thee, doth scatter, that is, he that is not of Christ is of Antichrist. And elsewhere, which doth he (i) call his faith? That of the Roman Church? Or that which is contained in the Books of Origen? If he answer, The Roman; then we are Catholiques, who have transcribed nothing of the error of Origen. And yet farther, Know thou, that the (k) Roman Faith commended by the voice of the Apostle doth not receive those delusions, though an Angel should denounce otherwise than it hath once been preached. S. Ambrose recounting how his Brother Satyrus inquiring for a Church wherein to give thanks for his delivery from shipwrack, faith, He called unto (l) him the Bishop, neither did he affirm any favour to be true, except that of the true faith, and he asked of him whether he agreed with the Catholique Bishops? that is, with the Roman Church. And having understood that he was a Schismatique, that is, separated from the Roman Church, he abstained from communicating with him. Where we see the priviledge of the Roman Church confirmed both by word and deed, by doctrine and practice. And the same Catholique faith of the Roman Church, From thence the Rites (m) of Venerable Communion do flow to all. Saint Cyprian saith, they are (n) to fail to the Chair of Peter, and to the principal Church, from whence Priestly unity hath sprung. Neither do they consider, that they are Romans, whose faith was commended by the preaching of the Apostle, to whom falsehood cannot have access. Where we see this holy Father joyns together the principal Church, and the Chair of Peter: and affirmeth that falsehood not only hath not had, but cannot have access to that See. And elsewhere, Thou wrotest that I should send (o) a Coppy of the same letters to Cornelius our Colleague, that laying aside all solicitude, he might now be assured that thou didst communicate with him, that is, with the Catholique Church. What think you Mr. Doctor of these words? Is it so strange a thing to take for one and the same thing, to communicate with the Church and Pope of Rome, and to communicate with the Catholique Church? S. Irenæus saith, Because it were long to number the succession of all Churches, (p) we declaring the Tradition (and faith preached to men, and coming to us by Tradition) of the most great, most ancient, and most known Church, founded by the two most glorious Apostles Peter and Paul, which Tradition it hath from the Apostles, coming to us by succession of Bishops; we confound all those who any way either by evil complacence of themselves, or vain-glory, or by blindness, or ill opinion, do gather otherwise than they ought. For to this Church for a more powerful Principality, it is necessary that all Churches resort, that is, all faithful people of what place soever: in which (Roman Church) the Tradition which is from the Apostles hath always been conserved from those who are every where. Saint Augustine saith, It pleases us (q) to tie you so to the cat off. Number the Priests even from the See of Peter, and consider in that order of Fathers who succeeded to whom Shi is the Rock which the proud Gates of Hell do not overcome. And in another place, speaking of Cæcilianus, he saith: He might contemn the conspiring (r) multitude of his enemies, because he knew himself to be united, by Communicatory letters both to the Roman Church in which the Principality of the See Apostolique did always flourish; and to other Countries from whence the Gospel came first into Africa. Ancient Tertullian saith, If thou be near Italy, thou hast Rome, whose (s) Authority is near at hand to us: a happy Church, into which the Apostles have powred all Doctrine, together with their Blood. Saint Basil in a letter to the Bishop of Rome, saith, In very deed that which was given (t) by our Lord to thy Piety, is worthy of that most excellent voice which proclaimed the Blessed, to wit, that thou mayst discern betwixt that which is counterfeit, and that which is lawful and pure, and without any diminution mayest preach the faith of our Ancestors. Maximinianus Bishop of Constantinople about twelve hundred years ago, said, All the bounds of the earth who have sincerely acknowledged our Lord, and Catholiques through the whole world professing the true faith, look upon the Power of the Bishop of Rome, as upon the Sun, &c. For the Creator of the world, amongst all men of the world elected him, (he speaks of S. Peter) to whom he granted the Chair of Doctor to be principally possessed by a perpetual right of Privilege; that whosoever is desirous to know any Divine and profound thing, may have recourse to the Oracle, and Doctrine of this Institution. John Patriarch of Constantinople, more than eleven hundred years ago in an Epistle to Pope Hormisda, writeth thus, Because (u) the beginning of salvation is to conserve the rule of right Faith, and in no wise to swerve from the Tradition of our Fore-fathers, because the words of our Lord cannot fail, saying, Thou art Peter, and upon this Rock will I build my Church: the proofs of deeds have made good those words; Because in the See Apostolical the Catholique Religion is always conserved inviolable. And again, We promise hereafter not to recite in the sacred Mysteries the names of them who are excluded from the Communion of the Catholique Church, that is to say, who consent not fully with the See Apostolique. Many other Authorities of the ancient Father might be produced to this purpose; but these may serve to shew, that both the Latin and Greek Fathers held for a Note of being a Catholique, or an Heretique, to have been united, or divided from the See of Rome. And I have purposely alledged only such Authorities of Fathers, as speak of the priviledges of the See of Rome, as of things permanent and depending on our Saviour's promise to S. Peter, from which a general rule, and ground ought to be taken for all Ages; because Heaven and Earth shall (w) pass, but the word of our Lord shall remain for ever. So that I here conclude, that seeing it is manifest that Luther and his followers divided themselves from the See of Rome, they bear the inseparable Mark of Heresie.

20. And though my meaning be not to treat the point of Ordination or Succession, in the Protestants Church, because the Fathers alledged in the last reason, assign Succession as one mark of the true Church; I must not omit to say, that according to the grounds of Protestants themselves, they can neither pretend personal Succession of Bishops, nor Succession of Doctrine. For whereas Succession of Bishops signifies a never-interrupted line of Persons, endued with an indelible Quality, which Divines call a Character, which cannot be taken away by deposition, degradation, or other means whatsoever, and endued also with Jurisdiction and Authority to teach, to preach, to govern the Church by laws, precepts, censures, &c. Protestants cannot pretend Succession in neither of these. For (besides that there was never Protestant Bishop before Luther, and that there can be no continuance of Succession, where there was no beginning to succeed) they commonly acknowledge no Character, and consequently must affirm, that when their pretended Bishops or Priests are deprived of Jurisdiction, or degraded, they remain meer lay persons as before their Ordination; fulfilling what Tertullian objects as a mark of Heresie: To day a Priest, to morrow (x) a Lay-man. For if here be no Immovable Character, their power of Order must consist only in Jurisdiction, and authority, or in a kind of moral deputation to some function, which therefore may be taken away by the same power, by which it was given. Neither can they pretend Succession in Authority, or Jurisdiction. For all the Authority, or Jurisdiction, which they had, was conferred by the Church of Rome, that is, by the Pope: Because the whole Church collectively doth not meet to ordain Bishops or Priests, or to give them Authority. But, according to their own Doctrine, they believe that the Pope neither hath, or ought to have any Jurisdiction, Power, Superiority, Preheminence, or Authority Ecclesiastical, or Spiritual within this Realm, which they swear even when they are ordained Bishops, Priests, and Deacons: How then can the Pope give Jurisdiction where they swear he neither hath, or OUGHT to have, any? Or, if yet he had, how could they without Schism withdraw themselves from his obedience? Beside, the Roman Church never gave them Authority to oppose her, by whom it was given. But grant, their first Bishops had such Authority from the Church of Rome; after the decease of those men, Who gave Authority to their pretended Successors? The Primate of England? But from whom had he such Authority? And after his decease, who shall confer Authority upon his Successors? The Temporal Magistrate? King Henry, neither a Catholique nor a Protestant? King Edward, a Child? Queen Elizabeth a Woman? An Infant of one hours Age, is true King in case of his Predecessors decease: But shall your Church lie fallow till that Infant King and green Head of the Church come to years of discretion? Do your Bishops, your Hierarchy, your Succession, your Sacraments, your being, or not being, Heretiques, for want of Succession, depend on this new-found Supremacy-Doctrine brought in by such a man meerly upon base occasions, and for shameful ends, impugned by Calvin, and his followers; derided by the Christian world; and even by chief Protestants, as D. Andrews, Watton, &c. not held for any necessary point of Faith; And from whom I pray you, had Bishops their Authority when there were no Christian Kings? Must the Greek Patriarchs receive spiritual Jurisdiction from the Great Turk? Did the Pope by the Baptism of Princes, lose the spiritual Power he formerly had of conferring spiritual Jurisdiction upon Bishops? Hath the Temporal Magistrate authority to preach, to absoil from sins, to inflict Excommunications, and other censures? Why hath he not power to Excommunicate, as well as to dispense in Irregularity, as our late Sovereign Lord King James, either dispensed with the late Arch Bishop of Canterbury, or else gave Commission to some Bishops to do it? And since they were subject to their Primate, and not he to them, it is clear, that they had no power to dispense with him, but that power must proceed from the Prince, as Superiour to them all, and head of the Protestants Church in England. If he have no such authority, how can he give to others what himself hath not? Your Ordination, or Consecration of Bishops and Priests imprinting no Character, can only consist in giving a Power, Authority, Jurisdiction, or (as I said before) some kind of Deputation to exercise Episcopal, or Priestly functions: If then, the Temporal Magistrate confers this power, &c. he can, may he cannot chuse but, Ordain and Consecrate Bishops, and Priests, as often as he consers Authority or Jurisdiction: and your Bishops assoon as they are designed and confirmed by the King, must ipso facto be Ordained and Consecrated by him without intervention of Bishops, or Matter and Form of Ordination: Which absurdities you will be more unwilling to grant, than well able to avoid, if you will be true to your own doctrines. The Pope from whom originally you must beg your Succession of Bishops, never received, nor will, nor can acknowledge to receive any Spiritual Jurisdiction from any Temporal Prince, and therefore if Jurisdiction must be derived from Princes, he hath none at all: and yet either you must acknowledge, that he hath true Spiritual Jurisdiction, or that your selves can receive none from him.

21. Moreover, this new Reformation, or Reformed Church of Protestants, will by them be pretended to be Catholique or universal, and not confined to England alone, as the Sect of the Donatists was to Africa: and therefore it must comprehend all the Reformed Churches in Germany, Holland, Scotland, France, &c. In which number, they of Germany, Holland, and France are not governed by Bishops, nor regard any personal succession, unless of such fat-beneficed Bishops as Nicholas Amsfordius, who was consecrated by Luther, (though Luther himself was never Bishop) as witnesseth (y) Dresserus. And though Scotland hath of late admitted some Bishops, I much doubt whether they hold them to be necessary, or of divine Institution; and so their enforced admitting of them, doth not so much furnish that Kingdom with personal Succession of Bishops, as it doth convince them to want succession of doctrine, since in this their neglect of Bishops, they disagree both from the milder Protestants of England, and the true Catholique Church: And by this want of a continued personal Succession of Bishops, they retain the note of Schism, and Heresie. So that the Church of Protestants must either not be universal, as being confined to England: Or if you will needs comprehend all those Churches which want succession, you must confess, that your Church doth not only communicate with Schismatical and Heretical Churches, but is also compounded of such Churches, and your selves cannot avoid the note of Schismatiques, or Heretiques, if it were but for participating with such heretical Churches. For it is impossible to retain Communion with the true Catholique Church, and yet agree with them who are divided from her by Schism, or Heresie; because that were to affirm, that for the self same time they could be within and without the Catholique Church, as proportionably I discourred in the next precedent Chapter, concerning the communicating of moderate Protestants with those who maintain that Heresie of the Latency and Invisibility of Gods Church, where I brought a place of S. Cyprian to this purpose, which the Reader may be pleased to review in the fifth Chapter, and 17. Number.

y In Millenario sexto, Pag. 187.

22. But besides this defect in the personal Succession of Protestant Bishops, there is another of great moment; which is, that they want the right Form of ordaining Bishops, and Priests, because the manner which they use is so much different from that of the Roman Church (at least according to the common opinion of Divines) that it cannot be sufficient for the Essence of Ordination; as I could demonstrate if this were the proper place of such a Treatise, and will not fail to do if D. Potter give me occasion. In the mean time the Reader may be pleased to read the Author (z) cited here in the margent, and then compare the form of our Ordination with that of Protestants; and to remember that if the form which they use either in consecrating Bishops, or in ordaining Priests, be at least doubtful, they can neither have undoubted Priests, nor Bishops. For Priests cannot be ordained but by true Bishops, nor can any be a true Bishop, unless he first be Priest. I say, their Ordination is at least doubtful; because that sufficeth for my present purpose. For Bishops and Priests, whose Ordination is notoriously known to be but doubtful, are not to be esteemed Bishops, or Priests: and no man without Sacrilege can receive Sacraments from them; all which they administer unlawfully: And (if we except Baptism, with manifest danger of invalidity, and with obligation to be at least conditionally repeated) so protestants must remain doubtful of Remission of Sins, of their Ecclesiastical Hierarchy, and may not pretend to be a true Church; which cannot subsist without undoubted true Bishops and Priests, nor without due administration of Sacraments, which (according to Protestants) is an essential note of the true Church. And it is a world to observe the proceeding of English Protestants in this point of their Ordinations. For first, An. 3. Edw. 6. cap. 2. when he was a Child about 12. years of age, It was enacted, that such (a) form of making, and consecrating of Bishops and Priests, as by six Prelates, and six other to be appointed by the King, should be devised (mark this word deviser) and set forth under the great Seal; should be used and none other. But after this Act was repealed 1 Mar. Sess. 2. in so much, as that when afterward An. 6. & 7. Reg Eliz. Bishop Bonner being indicted upon a certificate made by D. Horn a Protestant Bishop of Winchester, for his refusal of the Oath of Supremacy; and he excepting against the Indictment because D. Horn was no Bishop; all the Judges resolved that his exception was good, if indeed D. Horn was not Bishop, and they were all at a stand, till An. 8 Eliz. Cap. 1. the Act of Edw. 6. was renewed and confirmed, with a particular proviso, that no man should be impeached or molested by means of any Certificate by any Bishop or Archbishop made before this last Act. Whereby it is clear, that they made some doubt of their own Ordination, and that there is nothing but uncertainty in the whole business of their Ordination, which (forsooth) must depend upon Six Prelates, the great Seal, Acts of Parliament being contrary one to another, and the like.

23. But though they want Personal Succession, yet at least they have succession of Doctrin as they say, and pretend to prove, because they believe as the Apostles believed. This is to beg the Question, and to take what, they may be sure, will never be granted. For if they want Personal Succession, and slight Ecclesiastical Tradition, how will they perswade any man, that they agree with the Doctrin of the Apostles?

b Sup. c. 5. We have heard Tertullian saying, I will prescribe (b) (against all Heretiques) that there is no means to prove what the Apostles preached, but by the same Churches which they founded. And Irenæus tells us, c Lib. 3. c. 5. that, We may (c) behold the Tradition of the Apostles in every Church, if men be desirous to hear the truth, and we can number them who were made Bishops by the Apostles in Churches, and their Successors even to us. And the same Father in another place saith, We ought to obey (d) those Priests who are in the d L. 4. c. 43. Church, who have Succession from the Apostles, and who together with Succession in their Bishopricks have received the certain gift of truth. S. Augustine saith, I am kept in the Church (e) by the succession of e Contr. epist. Fundam. c. 4. Priests from the very See of Peter the Apostle, to whom our Saviour after his Resurrection committed his sheep to be fed, even to the present Bishop. Origen to this purpose giveth us a good and wholsom Rule (happy, if himself had followed the same) in these excellent words: Since there be many who think

f Præf. ad lib. Periarchon. (f) they believe the things which are of Christ, and some are of different opinion from those who went before them; let the preaching of the Church be kept, which is delivered by the Apostles by order of Succession, and remains in the Church to this very day; that only is to be believed for truth, which in nothing disagrees from the Tradition of the Church. In vain then do these men brag of the doctrin of the Apostles, unless first they can demonstrate that they enjoyed a continued succession of Bishops from the Apostles, and can shew us a Church, which, according to S. Austin, is deduced by undoubted SUCCESSION from the Sea (g) of the Apostles, even to the present Bishops.

24. But yet nevertheless, suppose it were granted; that they agreed with the doctrin of the Apostles, this were not sufficient to prove a Succession in Doctrin. For Succession, besides agreement or similitude, doth also require a never-interrupted conveying of such doctrin, from the time of the Apostles, till the days of those persons, who challenge such a Succession. And so S. Augustin saith: we are to believe that Gospel which from the time of the Apostles the (h) church hath brought down to our days by a never-interrupted course of times and by undoubted succession of connection. Now, that the Reformation, begun by Luther, was interrupted for divers ages before him, is manifest out of History, and by his endeavoring a Reformation, which must presuppose Abuses. He cannot therefore pretend a continued Succession of that Doctrin which he sought to revive, and reduce to the knowledg, and practice of men. And they ought not to prove that they have a Succession of doctrin, because they agree with the doctrin of the Apostles; but contrarily we must infer, that they agree not with the Apostles, because they cannot pretend a never-interrupted succession of doctrin from the times of the Apostles, till Luther. And here it is not amiss to note, that although the Waldenses, Wickliff, &c. had agreed with Protestants in all points of doctrin; yet they could not brag of Succession from them, because their doctrin hath not been free from interruption, which necessarily crosseth Succession.

25. And as want of Succession of Persons and Doctrin, cannot stand with that universality of Time, which is inseparable from the Catholique Church; so likewise the disagreeing Sects which are dispersed through divers Countries, and Nations, cannot help towards that universality of Place, wherewith the true Church must be endued: but rather such local multiplication, doth more and more lay open their division, and want of succession in Doctrin. For the excellent observation of S. Augustin doth punctually agree with all Modern Heretiques; wherein this holy Father having cited these words out of the Prophet Ezekiel, (i) My Flocks are dispersed upon the whole face of the earth: he adds this remarkable sentence: Not all Heretiques (k) are spread over the face of the earth, and yet there are Heretiques spread over the whole face of the Earth, some here, and there, yet they are wanting in no place, they know not one another. One Sect for example in Africa, another Heresie in the East, another in Egypt, another in Mesopotamia. In divers places there are divers: one mother, pride hath begot them all, as our own mother the Catholique Church hath brought forth all faithful people dispersed throughout the whole world. No wonder then, if Pride breed Dissention, and Charity union. And in another place applying to Heretiques those words of the Canticles: If thou know not (l) thy self, go forth, and follow after the steps of the flocks, and feed thy kids, he saith. If thou know not thy self, go (m) thou forth, I do not cast thee out, but go thou out, that it may be said of thee: They went from us, but they were not of us. Go thou out in the steps of the flocks; not in my steps, but in the steps of the flocks; nor of one flock, but of divers and wandering flocks; And feed thy Kids, not as Peter, to whom it is said, Feed thy sheep: but feed thy kids in the tabernacle of the Pastors, not in the Tabernacle of the Pastor, where there is one flock, and one Pastor. In which words this holy Father doth set down the marks of Heresie, to wit, going out from the Church, and want of Unity among themselves, which proceed from not acknowledging one Supreme and Visible Pastor and Head under Christ. And so it being proved that Protestants having neither succession of Persons, nor Doctrin, nor universality of Time, or Place, cannot avoid the just note of Heresie.

i Cap. 24
k Lib. de Past. cap. 8.
m Ep. 48.

26. Hitherto we have brought arguments to prove, that Luther, and all Protestants are guilty of Heresie against the Negative Precept of Faith, which obligeth her under pain of damnation, not to imbrace any one error, contrary to any truth sufficiently propounded, as testified or revealed by Almighty God. Which were enough to make good, that among persons who disagree in any one Point of Faith, one part only can be saved: Yet we will now prove that whosoever erreth in any one Point, doth also break the Affirmative precept of Faith, whereby we are obliged positively, to believe some revealed truth, with an Infallible and supernatural Faith which is necessary to salvation, even necessitate finis, or medii, as Divines speak; that is, so necessary that not any, after he is come to the use of Reason, was or can be saved without it, according to the words of the Apostle: Without faith (n) it is impossible to please God.

n Heb. 11. 6.

27. In the beginning of this Chapter I shewed, that to Christian Catholique faith are required Certainty, Obscurity, Prudence, and Supernaturality; All which Conditions we will prove to be wanting in the belief of Protestants even in those points which are true in themselves, and to which they yield assent, as happeneth in all those particulars, wherein they agree with us, from whence it will follow, that they wanting true Divine faith, want means absolutely necessary to salvation.

28. And first, that their belief wanteth Certainty I prove, because they denying the Universal infallibility of the Church can have no certain ground to know what objects are revealed, or testified by God. Holy Scripture is in it self most true and infallible; but without the direction and declaration of the Church, we can neither have certain means to know what Scripture is Canonical, nor what Translations be faithful, nor what is the true meaning of Scripture. Every Protestant, as I suppose, is perswaded that his own opinions be true, and that he hath used such means as are wont to be prescribed for understanding the Scripture; as Prayer, Conferring of divers Texts, &c. and yet their disagreements shew that some of them are deceived: And therefore it is clear that they have no one certain ground whereon to relie for understanding of Scripture. And seeing they hold all the Articles of Faith, even concerning fundamental points, upon the self same ground of Scripture, interpreted, not by the Churches Authority, but according to some other Rules, which, as experience of their contradictions teach, do sometimes fail; it is clear that the ground of their faith is infallible in no point at all. And albeit sometime it chance to hit on the truth, yet it is likewise apt to lead them to error: As all Arch-heretiques believing some truths, and withal divers errors upon the same ground and motive, have indeed no true divine infallible faith, but only a fallible humane opinion, and perswasion. For if the ground upon which they rely were certain, it could never produce any error.

The Faith of Protestants wanteth certainty.

29. Another cause of uncertainty in the faith of Protestants, must rise from their distinction of points fundamental, and not fundamental. For since they acknowledg, that every error in fundamental points destroyeth the substance of faith, and yet cannot determine what points be fundamental, it followeth that they must remain uncertain whether or no they be not in some fundamental error, and so want the substance of faith, without which there can be no hope of salvation.

30. And that he who erreth against any one revealed truth; as certainly some Protestants must do, because contradictory Propositions cannot both be true) doth lose all Divine Faith, is a very true doctrine delivered by Catholique Divines, with so general a consent, that the contrary is wont to be censured as temerarious. The Angelical Doctor S. Thomas proposeth this Question: whether (o) he who denieth one Article of Faith, may retain Faith in other Articles? and resolveth that he cannot: which he proveth, (Argumento sed contra) because, As deadly sin is opposite to Charity; so to deny one Article of Faith is opposite to Faith. But Charity doth not remain with any one deadly sin; Therefore Faith doth not remain after the denial of any one Article of Faith. Whereof he gives this farther reason: Because (faith he) the nature of every habit doth depend upon the formal Motive and Object thereof, which Motive being taken away the nature of the habit cannot remain. But the formal object of Faith is the supreme Truth as it is manifested in Scriptures, and in the doctrine of the Church which proceed from the same supreme Verity, whosoever therefore doth not rely upon the doctrine of the Church (which proceeds from the supreme Verity, manifested in Scripture) as upon an infallible Rule, he hath not the habit of Faith, but believes those things which belong to Faith, by some other means than by Faith; as, if one should remember some conclusions, and not know the reason of that demonstration, it is clear that he hath not certain knowledge, but only opinion, now it is manifest, that he who relies on the doctrine of the Church, as upon an infallible Rule, will yield his assent to all, that the Church teacheth. For, if among those things which he teacheth, he hold what he will, and doth not hold what he will not, he doth not rely upon the doctrine of the Church, as upon an infallible Rule, but only upon his own will. And so it is clear, that an Heretick, who with pertinacity denieth one Article of Faith, is not ready to follow the doctrine of the Church in all things: And therefore it is manifest, that whosoever is an Heretique in any one Article of Faith, concerning other Articles, hath not Faith, but a kind of Opinion, or his own will. Thus far St. Thomas. And afterward, A man doth believe (q) all the Articles of Faith for one and the self same reason, to wit, for the Prime Verity proposed to us in the Scripture, understood aright according to the Doctrine of the Church: and therefore whosoever falls from this reason, or motive, is totally deprived of Faith. From this true doctrine we are to infer, that to recain, or want the substance of Faith doth not consist in the matter, or multitude of the Articles, but in the opposition against God's Divine testimony, which is involved in every least error against Faith. And since some Protestants must needs err, and that they have no certain rule to know, why rather one than another, it manifestly follows that none of them have any certainty for the substance of their Faith in any one point. Moreover D. Potter, being forced to confess that the Roman Church wants not the substance of Faith, it follows that she doth not err in any one point against Faith, because, as we have seen out of S. Thomas, every such error destroys the substance of Faith. Now, if the Roman Church did not err in any one point of Faith, it is manifest that Protestants err in all those points wherein they are contrary to her. And this may suffice to prove that the Faith of Protestants wants Infallibility.

They want the second Condition of Faith: Obscurity.

31. And now for the second condition of Faith, I say, If Protestants have Certainty, they want Obscurity, and so have not that faith, which, as the Apostle saith, is of things not appearing, or not necessitating our understanding to an assent. For the whole edifice of the faith of Protestants, is seated on these two principles: These particular Books are Canonical Scripture: And the sense and meaning of these Canonical Scriptures, is clear and evident, at least in all points necessary to Salvation. Now these Principles being once supposed, it clearly followeth, that what Protestants believe as necessary to salvation is evidently known by them to be true, by this Argument. It is certain and evident, that whatsoever is contained in the word of God, is true. But it is certain and evident, that these Books in particular are the word of God: Therefore it is certain and evident that whatsoever is contained in these Books is true. Which Conclusion I take for a Major in a second Argument, and say thus: It is certain and evident, that whatsoever is contained in these Books is true: But it is certain and evident, that such particular Articles (for example, the Trinity, Incarnation, Original sin, &c.) are contained in these Books: Therefore it is certain and evident, that these particular objects are true. Neither will it avail you to say, that the said Principles are not evident by natural discourse, but only to the eye of reason cleared by grace, as you speak. For supernatural evidence, no less (yea rather more) draws and excludes obscurity, than natural evidence doth: neither can the party so enlightned be said voluntarily to captivate his understanding to that light, but rather his understanding is by a necessity made captive, and forced not to disbelieve, what is presented by so clear a light: And therefore your imaginary faith is not the true faith defined by the Apostle, but an invention of your own.

Their faith wants Prudence.

32. That the faith of Protestants wanteth the third Condition which was Prudence, is deduced from all that hitherto hath been said. What wisdom was it, to forsake a Church confessedly very ancient, and besides which, there could be demonstrated no other visible Church of Christ upon earth? A Church acknowledged to want nothing necessary to salvation; endued with succession of Bishops, with Visibility and Universality of Time and Place; A Church which if it be not the true Church, her enemies cannot pretend to have any Church, Ordination, Scripture, Succession, &c. and are forced for their own sake, to maintain her perpetual Exsistence, and Being. To leave I say, such a Church, and frame a Community, without their Unity, or means to procure it; a Church which at Luther's first revolt had no larger extent than where his body was; a Church without Universality of Place or Time; A Church which can pretend no Visibility or Being, except only in that former Church which it opposeth; a Church void of Succession of Persons or Doctrine; What wisdom was it to follow such men as Luther, in an opposition against the Visible Church of Christ, begun upon meer passion? What wisdom is it to receive from us, a Church, Ordination, Scriptures, Personal Succession, and not Succession of Doctrine? Is not this to verifie the name of Heresie, which signifieth Election or choice? Whereby they cannot avoid that note of Imprudency, or (as S. Austin calls it) Foolishness, set down by him against the Manichees, and by me recited before. I would not (saith he) believe (r) the Gospel, unless the Authority of the Church did move me. Those therefore whom I obeyed, saying, Believe the Gospel, why should I not obey the same men saying unto me, Do not believe Manicheus, (Luther, Calvin, &c.) chuse what thou pleasest: If thou say, Believe the Catholiques; they warn me not to believe thee. Wherefore if I believe them, I cannot believe thee. If thou say, Do not believe the Catholiques; thou shalt not do well, in forcing me to the faith of Manicheus, because by the Preaching of Catholiques, I believed the Gospel it self. If thou say; you did

did well to believe them (Catholiques) commending the Gospel, but you did not well to believe them, discommending Manicheus; dost thou think me so very FOOLISH, that without any reason at all, I should believe what thou writ, and not believe what thou wilt not? Nay, this holy Father is not content to call it Foolishness, but meer Madness, in these words, If by should I not most diligently enquire (s) what Christ commanded of those before all others, by whose Authority I was moved to believe, that Christ commanded any good thing? Canst thou better declare to me, what he said, whom I would not have thought to have been, or to be, if the belief thereof had been recommended by thee to me? This therefore I believed by fame, strengthned with Celebrity, Consent, Antiquity. But every one may set that you, so few, so turbulent, so new, can produce nothing which deserves Authority. What MADNESS is this? Believe them (Catholiques) that we ought to believe Christ, but learn of us what Christ said. Why I beseech thee? Surely if they (Catholiques) were not at all, and could not teach me any thing, I would more easily perswade my self, that I were not to believe Christ, than I should learn any thing concerning him from other than those, by whom I believed him. Lastly, Task, What wisdom it could be to leave all visible Churches, and consequently the true Catholique Church of Christ, which you confess cannot err in points necessary to salvation, and the Roman Church which you grant doth not err in fundamentals, and follow private men who may err even in points necessary to salvation? Especially, if we add, that when Luther rose, there was no visible true Catholique Church besides that of Rome, and them who agreed with her; in which sense, the was, and is, the only true Church of Christ, and not capable of any error in faith. Nay, even Luther, who first opposed the Roman Church, yet coming to dispute against other Heresiques, he is forced to give the Lye both to his own words and deeds, in saying, We freely confess (t) that in the Papacy there are many good things worthy the name of Christian, which have come from them to us. Namely, we confess that in the Papacy there is true Scripture, true Baptism, the true Sacrament of the Altar, the true Keys for remission of sins, the true office of Preaching, true Catechism, as our Lords Prayer, Ten Commandments, Articles of faith, &c. And afterward, I avouch, that under the Papacy is true Christianity, yea, the Kernel and Marrow of Christianity, and many pious and great Saints. And again he affirmeth, that the Church of Rome hath the true Spirit, Gospel, Faith, Baptism, Sacraments, the Keys, the Office of Preaching, Prayer, Holy Scripture, and whatsoever Christianity ought to have. And a little before, I hear and see that they bring in Anabaptism only to this end, that they may fright the Pope, as men that will receive nothing from Antichrist; no otherwise than the Sacramentarits do, who therefore believe only Bread and Wine to be in the Sacrament, meerly in hatred against the Bishop of Rome; and they think that by this means they shall overcome the Papacy. Verily these men rely upon a weak ground, for by this means they must deny the whole Scripture, and the Office of preaching. For we have these things from the Pope, otherwise we must go make a new Scripture. O Truth, more forcible (as St. Austin says) to wring out (x) Confession, than is any rack, or torment! And to we may truly say with Moses: Inimici nostri sunt Judices, Our very enemies give (y) sentence for us.

y Deut. 32. 31.

33. Lastly, since your faith wanteth Certainty and Prudence, it is easie to infer that it wants the fourth Condition, Supernaturality. For being but an Humane perswasion, or Opinion, it is not in nature or essence Supernatural. And being imprudent, and rash, it cannot proceed from Divine Motion and Grace; and therefore it is neither supernatural in it self, nor in the cause from which it proceedeth. Their faith wants Supernaturality.

34. Since therefore we have proved, that whosoever errs against any one point of faith, loseth all divine faith, even concerning those other Articles wherein he doth not err; and that although he could still retain true faith for some points, yet any one error in whatsoever matter concerning faith, is a grievous sin; it clearly follows, that when two or more hold different doctrines concerning faith and Religion, there can be but one Part saved. For declaring of which truth, if Catholiques be charged with want of Charity, and Modesty, and be accused of rashness, ambition, and fury; as D. Potter is very free in this kind: I desire every one to ponder the whole words of S. Chrysostom, who teacheth, that every least error overthrows all faith, and whosoever is guilty thereof is in the Church, like one, who in the Commonwealth forgeth false coin. Let them hear (saith this holy Father) what S. Paul saith: Namely, that they who brought in some small error (z) had overthrown the Gospel. For, to shew how small a thing ill mingled doth corrupt the whole, he said, that the Gospel was subverted. For as he who clips a little of the stamp from the King's money, makes the whole piece of no value: so whosoever takes away the least particle of sound faith, it wholly corrupted, always going from that beginning to worse things. Where then are they, who condemn us as contentious persons, because we cannot agree with Heretiques: and do often say, that there is no difference betwixt us and them, but that our disagreement proceeds from Ambition to dominer? And thus having shewed that Protestants want true Faith, it remaineth that, according to my first design, I examine whether they do not also want Charity, as it respects a mans self.

z Gal. 1. 7.

The ANSWER to the SIXTH CHAPTER.

That Protestants are not Hereticks.

HE that will accuse any one man, much more any great multitude of men, of any great and horrible crime, should in all reason and justice take care that the greatness of his Evidence do equal, if not exceed, the quality of the crime. And such an accusation you would here make shew of, by pretending, first, To lay such grounds of it, as are either already proved, or else yielded on all sides: and after to raise a firm and stable structure of convincing arguments upon them. But both these I find to be meer and vain pretences, and having considered this Chapter also without prejudice or passion, as I did the former, I am enforc'd by by the light of Truth, to pronounce your whole diſcourſe, a painted and ruinous building upon a weak and ſandy Foundation.

2. Ad §2, 3. Firſt for your grounds; a great part of them, is falſly ſaid to be either proved or granted. It is true indeed, that Man by his natural wit or induſtry could never have attained to the knowledg of Gods will to give him a ſupernatural and eternal happineſs; nor of the means, by which his pleaſure was to beſtow this happineſs upon him. And therefore your firſt ground is good, That it was requiſite his underſtanding ſhould be enabled to apprehend that end and means, by a knowledg ſupernatural. I ſay this is good, if you mean by knowledg, an apprehention or belief. But, if you take the word properly and exactly, it is both falſe; for faith is not knowledg, no more than three is four, but eminently contained in it ſo: that he that knows, believes and ſomething more; but he that believes many times does not; nay, if he doth barely and meerly believe, he doth never know: and beſides it is retracted by your ſelf preſently, where you require, That the object of Faith muſt be both naturally and ſupernaturally unknown. And again in the next page, where you ſay, Faith differs from ſcience in regard of the object's obſcurity. For that ſcience and knowledg properly taken are Synonymous terms, and that a knowledg of a thing abſolutely unknown is a plain implicancy; I think, are things ſo plain, that you will not require any proof of them.

3. But then whereas you add, That if ſuch a knowledg were no more than probable, it could not be able ſufficiently to over-bear our will, and encounter with humane probabilities, being backed with the ſtrength of fleſh and blood, and therefore conclude, that it was farther neceſſary, that this ſupernatural knowledg ſhould be moſt certain and infallible: To this I anſwer, that I do heartily acknowledg and believe, the Articles of our Faith to be in themſelves Truths, as certain and infallible as the very common Principles of Geometry and Metaphyſicks. But that there is required of us a knowledg of them, and an adherence to them, as certain as that of ſenſe or ſcience; that ſuch a certainty is required of us under pain of damnation, ſo that no man can hope to be in the ſtate of ſalvation, but he that finds in himſelf ſuch a degree of Faith, ſuch a ſtrength of adherence: This I have already demonſtrated to be a great error, and of dangerous and pernicious conſequence. And becauſe I am more and more confirm'd in my perſwaſion that the truth which I there delivered, is of great and ſingular uſe I will here confirm it with more reaſon. And to ſatisfie you that this is no ſingularity of my own, my Margent preſents you with a (a) Proteſtant Divine of great authority, and no way ſingular in his opinions, who hath long ſince preached and juſtified the ſame doctrin.

(a) M. Hooker in his anſwer to Travers his ſupplication; I have taught that the aſſurance of things which we believe by the word, is not ſo certain as of that we perceive by ſenſe. And is it as certain? Yea I taught, that the things which God doth promiſe in his word, are ſurer unto us than any thing we touch, handle, or ſee. But are we ſo ſure and certain of them? If we be, why doth God ſo often prove his promiſes unto us, as he doth by arguments taken from our ſenſible experience? We muſt be ſurer of the proof than the thing proved, otherwiſe it is no proof. How is it that if ten men do all look upon the Moon, every one of them knows it as certainly to be the Moon as another: But many believing one and the ſame promiſes, all have not one and the ſame fulneſs of perſwaſion? How falleth it out, that men being aſſured of any thing by ſenſe can be no ſurer of it than they are? whereas the ſtrongeſt in faith that liveth upon the earth, had always need to labour, and ſtrive, and pray, that this aſſurance concerning heavenly and ſpiritual things, may grow, increaſe, and be augmented.

4. I ſay, That every Text of Scripture which makes mention of any that were weak, or of any that were ſtrong in faith: of any that were of little, or any that were of great faith: of any that abounded, or any that were rich in faith; of encreaſing, growing, rooting, grounding, eſtabliſhing, confirming in faith: Every ſuch Text, is a demonſtrative refutation of this vain fancy: proving that faith, even true and ſaving faith, is not a thing conſiſting in ſuch an indiviſible point of perfection as you make it, but capable of argumentation and diminution. Every prayer you make to God to increaſe your faith, or (if your conceive ſuch a prayer derogatory from the perfection of your faith,) the Apoſtles praying to Chriſt to increaſe their faith, is a convincing argument of the ſame concluſion. Moreover, if this doctrine of yours were true, then, ſeeing not any the leaſt doubting can conſiſt with a moſt infallible certainty, it will follow that every leaſt doubting in any matter of faith, though reſiſted and involuntary, is a damnable ſin, abſolutely deſtructive, ſo long as it laſts, of all true and ſaving faith: which you are ſo far from granting, that you make it no ſin at all, but only an occaſion of merit: and if you ſhould eſteem it a ſin, then muſt you acknowledge, contrary to your own Principles, that there are Actual ſins meerly involuntary. The ſame is furthermore invincibly confirmed by every deliberate ſin that any Chriſtian commits; by any progreſs in Charity that he makes. For ſeeing, as S. John aſſures us, our faith is the victory which overcomes the world, certainly if the faith of all true believers were perfect, (and, if true faith be capable of no imperfection, if all faith be a knowledge moſt certain and infallible, all faith muſt be perfect; for the moſt imperfect that is, according to your doctrin, if it be true, muſt be moſt certain; and ſure the moſt perfect that is cannot be more than moſt certain,) then certainly their victory over the world, and therefore over the fleſh, and therefore over ſin muſt of neceſſity be perfect, and ſo it ſhould be impoſſible for any true believer to commit any deliberate ſin; and therefore he that commits any ſin muſt not think himſelf a true believer. Beſides, ſeeing faith worketh by Charity, and Charity is the effect of faith: certainly, if the cauſe were perfect, the effect would be perfect, and conſequently as you make no degrees in Faith, ſo there would be none in Charity, and ſo no man could poſſibly make any progreſs in it, but all true believers ſhould be equal in Charity, as in faith you make them equal: and from thence it ſhould follow unavoidably, that whoſoever finds in himſelf any true faith, muſt preſently perſwade himſelf that he is perfect in Charity: and whoſoever on the other ſide, diſcovers in his charity any imperfection muſt not believe that he hath any true faith. Theſe, you ſee, are ſtrange and portentous conſequences, and yet the deduction of them from your doctrin is clear and apparent; which ſhews this doctrin of yours, which you would fain have true, that there might be ſome neceſſity of your Churches infallibility, to be indeed plainly repugnant not only to Truth but even to all Religion and Piety, and fit for nothing but to make men negligent of making any progreſs in Faith or Charity. And therefore I muſt intreat and adjure you either to diſcover unto me (which I take God to witneſs I cannot perceive) ſome fallacy in my reaſons againſt it, or never hereafter to open your mouth in defence of it.

5. As for that one ſingle reaſon which you produce to confirm it, it will appear upon examination to be reſolved finally into a groundleſs Aſſertion of your own, contrary to all truth and experience, and that is, That no degree of faith, leſs than a moſt certain and infallible knowledg, can be able ſufficiently to over-bear our will, and encounter with humane probabilities, being backt with the ſtrength of fleſh and blood. For who ſees not that many Millions in the world forego many times their preſent eaſe and pleaſure, undergo great and toilſom labours, encounter great difficulties, adventure upon great dangers, and all this not upon any certain expectation, but upon a probable hope of ſome future gain and commodity, and that not infinite and eternal, but finite and temporal? Who ſees not that many men abſtain from many things they exceedingly deſire, not upon any certain aſſurance, but a probable fear of danger that may come after? What man ever was there ſo madly in love with a preſent penny, but that he would willingly ſpend it upon any little hope that by doing ſo he might gain a hundred thouſand pound? And I would fain know, what gay probabilities you could deviſe to diſſwade him from this reſolution. And, if you can deviſe none, what reaſon then, or ſenſe is there, but that a probable hope of infinite and eternal happineſs, provided for all thoſe that obey Chriſt Jeſus, and much more a firm faith, though not ſo certain, in ſome ſort, as ſenſe or ſcience, may be able to ſway our will to obedience, ence, and encounter whith all those temptations which flesh and Blood can suggest to avert us from it? Men may talk their pleasure of an absolute and most infallible certainty, but did they generally believe that obedience to Christ were the only way to present and eternal felicity, but as firmly and undoubtedly as that there is such a City as Constantinople, nay but as much as Cæsar's Commentaries, or the History of Sallust; I believe the lives of most men, both Papists and Protestants would be better than they are. Thus therefore out of your own words I argue against you: He that requires to true faith, an absolute and infallible certainty, for this only reason because any less degree, could not be able to overbear our will, &c. imports, that if a less degree of faith were able to do this, then a less degree of faith may be true and divine and saving faith: But experience shews, and reason confirms, that a firm faith, though not so certain as sense or science, may be able to encounter and overcome our will and affections: And therefore it follows from your own reason, that faith, which is not a most certain and infallible knowledg, may be true and divine and saving faith.

6. All these Reasons I have employed to shew that such a most certain and infallible faith as here you talk of, is not so necessary, but that without such a high degree of it, it is possible to please God. And therefore the Doctrines delivered by you § 25. are most presumptuous and uncharitable: viz. That such a most certain and infallible faith is necessary to salvation, Necessitate Finis or Medii; so necessary, that after a man is come to the use of reason, no man ever was or can be saved without it. Wherein you boldly intrude into the Judgment-seat of God, and damn men for breaking Laws, not of God's but your own making. But withal, you clearly contradict your self, not only where you affirm, That your faith depends finally upon the Tradition of Age to Age, of Father to Son, which cannot be a fit ground, but only for a Moral assurance; nor only, where you pretend, that not alone Hearing and Seeing, but also Histories, Letters, Relations of many (which certainly are things not certain and infallible) are yet foundations good enough to support your faith; Which doctrin, if it were good and allowable, Protestants might then hope that their Histories, and Letters, and Relations might also pass for means sufficient of a sufficient Certainty, and that they should not be excluded from Salvation for want of such a certainty. But indeed the pressure of the present difficulty compell'd you to speak here, what I believe you will not justifie, and with a pretty tergiversation to shew D. Potter your means of moral certainty; whereas the objection was, that you had no means or possibility of infallible certainty, for which you are plainly at as great a loss, and as far to seek, as any of your Adversaries. And therefore it concerns you highly not to damn others for want of it, lest you involve your selves in same condemnation; according to those terrible words of St. Paul, thou art inexcusable, O Man, whosoever thou art that judgest: For, wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thy self; for thou that judgest doest the same things, &c. In this therefore you plainly contradict your self. And lastly most plainly, in saying as you do here, you contradict and retract your pretence of Charity to Protestants in the beginning of your book: For there you make profession, that you have no assurance but that Protestants dying Protestants, may possibly die with contrition, and be saved: And here you are very peremptory, that they cannot but want a means absolutely necessary to salvation, and wanting that cannot but be damned.

7. The third Condition you require to faith, is, that our assent to divine Truths should not only be unknown and unevident by any humane discourse, but that absolutely also it should be obscure in it self, and, ordinarily speaking, be void even of supernatural evidence. Which words must have a very favourable construction, or else they will not be sense. For who can make any thing of these words taken properly, that faith must be an unknown unevident assent or an assent absolutely obscure? I had always thought, that known and unknown, obscure and evident had been affections, not of our Assent, but the Object of it, not of our belief, but the thing believed. For well may we assent to a thing unknown, obscure, or unevident; but that our assent it self should be called therefore unknown or obscure, seems to me as great an impropriety, as if I should say; Your sight were green or blue, because you see something that is so. In other places, therefore, I answer your words, but here I must answer your meaning: which I conceive to be, That it is necessary to faith that the objects of it, the points which we believe should not be so evidently certain, as to necessitate our understanding to an assent, that so there might be some merit in faith, as you love to speak (who will not receive no not from God himself, but a penny-worth for a penny) but, as we, some obedience in it, which can hardly have place where there is no possibility of disobedience; as there is not, where the understanding does all, and the will nothing. Now seeing the Religion of Protestants, though it be much more credible than yours, yet is not pretended to have the absolute evidence of sense or demonstration; therefore I might let this doctrine pass without exception, for any prejudice that can redound to us by it. But yet I must not forbear to tell you, that your discourse proves indeed this condition requisite to the merit, but yet not to the essence of faith: without it faith were not an act of obedience, but yet faith may be faith without it; and this you must confess, unless you will say either the Apostles believed not the whole Gospel which they preached, or that they were not eye-witnesses of a great part of it: unless you will question S. John for saying, that which we have seen with our eyes, and which our hands have handled, &c. declare we unto you: nay our Saviour himself for saying, Thomas because thou seest, thou believest, Blessed are they which have not seen and yet have believed. Yet, if you will say that in respect of the things which they saw, the Apostles assent was not pure and proper and meer faith, but some what more; an assent containing faith but superadding to it, I will not contend with you; for it will be a contention about words. But then again I must crave leave to tell you, that the requiring this condition, is in my judgment a plain revocation of the former. For had you made the matter of faith either naturally or supernaturally evident, it might have been a fitly attempered & duly proportioned object for an absolute certainty natural or supernatural: But requiring as you do, that faith should be an absolute knowledge of a thing not absolutely known, an infallible certainty of a thing, which, though it be in it self yet it is not made appear to us to be, infallibly certain, to my understanding you speak impossibilities. And truly for one of your Religion to do so, is but a good Decorum. For the matter and object of your faith being so full of contradictions, a contradictious faith may very well become a contradictious Religion. Your faith therefore, if you please to have it so, let it be a free necessitated, certain uncertain, evident obscure, prudent and foolish, natural and supernatural unnatural assent. But they which are unwilling to believe non-sense themselves, or perswade others to do so, it is but reason they should make the faith wherewith they believe, an intelligible, compossible, consistent thing, and not define it by repugnancies. Now nothing is more repugnant, than that a man should be required to give most certain credit unto that which cannot be made appear most certainly credible: and, if it appear to him to be so, then is it not obscure that it is so. For if you speak of an acquired, rational, discursive faith, certainly these reasons which make the object seem credible, must be the cause of it, and consequently the strength and firmity of my assent must rise and fall, together with the apparent credibility of the object. If you speak of a supernatural infused faith, then you either suppose it infused by the former means, and then that which was said before must be said again: for whatsoever effect is wrought meerly by means, must bear proportion to, and cannot exceed the virtue of the means, by which it is wrought: As nothing by water can be made more cold than water, nor by fire more hot than fire, nor by honey more sweet than honey, nor by gall more bitter than gall: Or, if you will suppose it infused without means, then that power which infuseth into the understanding assent which bears Analogy to sight in the eye, muſt alſo infuſe evidence, that is, Viſibility into the Object: and look what degree of aſſent is infus'd into the underſtanding, at leaſt the ſame degree of evidence muſt be infus'd into the Object. And for you to require a ſtrength of credit beyond the appearance of the objects credibility, is all one as if you ſhould require me to go ten mile an hour upon an Horſe that will go but five: to diſcern a man certainly through a miſt or cloud that makes him not certainly diſcernable; to hear a ſound more clearly than it is audible; to underſtand a thing more fully than it is intelligible: and he that doth ſo, I may well expect that his next injunction will be, that I muſt ſee ſomething that is inviſible, hear ſomething inaudible, underſtand ſomething that is wholly unintelligible. For he that demands ten of me, knowing I have but five, does in effect, as if he demanded five, knowing that I have none: and by like reaſon, you requiring that I ſhould ſee things farther than they are viſible, require I ſhould ſee ſomething inviſible; and in requiring that I believe ſomething more firmly than it is made to me evidently credible, you require in effect that I believe ſomething which appears to me incredible, and while it does ſo; I deny not but that I am bound to believe the truth of many Texts of Scripture, the ſenſe whereof is to me obſcure; and the truth of many Articles of Faith, the manner whereof is obſcure, and to humane underſtandings incomprehenſible; But then it is to be obſerved, that not the ſenſe of ſuch Texts, nor the manner of theſe things is that which I am bound to believe, but the truth of them. But that I ſhould believe the truth of any thing, the truth whereof cannot be made evident with an evidence proportionable to the degree of Faith required of me, this I ſay for any man to be bound to, is unjuſt and unreaſonable, becauſe to do it is impoſſible.

8. Ad § 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, & 12. Yet though I deny that it is required of us to be certain in the higheſt degree, infallibly certain of the truth of the things which we believe (for this were to know and not believe, neither is it poſſible unleſs our evidence of it, be it natural or ſupernatural, were of the higheſt degree;) yet I deny not, but we ought to be and may be infallibly certain that we are to believe the Religion of Chriſt. For firſt, this is moſt certain, That we are in all things to do according to wiſdom and reaſon, rather than againſt it. Secondly, this is as certain, That wiſdom and reaſon require, that we ſhould believe thoſe things which are by many degrees more credible and probable than the contrary. Thirdly, this is as certain, That to every man who conſiders impartially what great things may be ſaid for the truth of Chriſtianity, and what poor things they are which may be ſaid againſt it, either for any other Religion or for none at all, it cannot but appear by many degrees more credible, that Chriſtian Religion is true, than the contrary. And from all theſe premiſſes, this concluſion evidently follows, That it is infallibly certain, that we are firmly to believe the truth of Chriſtian Religion.

9. Your diſcourſe therefore touching the fourth requiſite to Faith which is Prudence, I admit ſo far as to grant, 1. That if we were required to believe with certainty (I mean a Moral certainty) things no way repreſented as infallible and certain (I mean morally) an unreaſonable obedience were required of us. And ſo likewiſe were it, were we required to believe as abſolutely certain, that which is no way repreſented to us as abſolutely certain. 2. That whom God obligeth to believe any thing, he will not fail to furniſh their underſtandings with ſuch inducements, as are ſufficient (if they be not negligent or perverſe) to perſwade them to believe. 3. That there is an abundance of Arguments exceedingly credible, inducing men to believe the truth of Chriſtianity: I ſay ſo credible, that tho they cannot make us evidently ſee what we believe, yet they evidently convince that in true wiſdom and prudence, the Articles of it deſerve credit, and ought to be accepted as things revealed by God. 4. That without ſuch reaſons and inducements, our choice even of the true faith, is not to be commended as prudent, but to be condemned of raſhneſs and levity.

10. but

10. But then for your making Prudence, not only a commendation of a believer, and a juſtification of his faith, but alſo eſſential to it, and part of the definition of it, in that queſtionleſs you were miſtaken, and have done as if being to ſay what a man is, you ſhould define him, A reaſonable creature that hath skill in Aſtronomy. For as all Aſtronomers are men, but all men are not Aſtronomers, and therefore Aſtronomy ought not to be put into the definition of Men, where nothing ſhould have place, but what agrees to all men: So though all that are truly wiſe (that is, wiſe for eternity) will believe aright, yet many may believe aright which are not wiſe. I could wiſh with all my heart, as Moſes did, That all the Lords people could propheſie: That all that believe the true Religion were able (according to St. Peters injunction) to give a reaſon of the hope that is in them, a reaſon why they hope for eternal happineſs by this way rather than any other! neither do I think it any great difficulty that men of ordinary capacities, if they would give their mind to it, might quickly be enabled to do ſo. But ſhould I affirm that all true believers can do ſo, I ſuppoſe it would be as much againſt experience and modeſty, as it is againſt Truth and Charity, to ſay as you do, that they which cannot do ſo, either are not at all, or to no purpoſe true believers. And thus we ſee that the foundations you build upon, are ruinous and deceitful, and ſo unfit to ſupport your Fabrick that they deſtroy one another. I come now to ſhew that your Arguments to prove Proteſtants Hereticks, are all of the ſame quality with your former grounds: which I will do, by oppoſing clear and ſatisfying Anſwers in order to them.

11. Ad §. 13. To the firſt then, delivered by you, §. 13. That Proteſtants muſt be Hereticks, becauſe they oppoſed divers Truths propounded for divine by the Viſible Church. I anſwer, It is not Hereſie to oppoſe any truth propounded by the Church, but only ſuch a Truth as is an eſſential part of the Goſpel of Chriſt. 2. The Doctrines which Proteſtants oppoſed, were not Truths, but plain and impious falſhoods. Neither, thirdly, were they propounded as Truths by the Viſible Church, but only by a Part of it, and that a corrupted Part.

12. Ad §. 14. The next Argument, in the next Particle tells us, That every error againſt any Doctrine revealed by God is damnable Hereſie: Now either Proteſtants or the Roman Church muſt err againſt the Word of God: But the Roman Church we grant (perforce) doth not err damnably, neither can ſhe, becauſe ſhe is the Catholick Church, which we (you ſay) confeſs cannot err damnably: Therefore Proteſtants muſt err againſt Gods Word, and conſequently are guilty of formal Hereſie. Whereunto I anſwer plainly, that there be in this argument almoſt as many falſhoods as aſſertions. For neither is every error againſt any Doctrine revealed by God a damnable Hereſie, unleſs it be revealed publickly and plainly with a command that all ſhould believe it. 2. Dr. Potter no where grants, that the errors of the Roman Church are not in themſelves damnable, though he hopes by accident they may not actually damn ſome men amongſt you; and this you your ſelf confeſs in divers places of your Book, where you tell us, that he allows no hope of ſalvation to thoſe amongſt you, whom ignorance cannot excuſe. 3. You beg the Queſtion twice in taking for granted, Firſt, That the Roman Church is the truly Catholick Church, which without much favour can hardly paſs for a part of it. And again, that the Catholick Church cannot fall into any error of it ſelf damnable; for it may do ſo, and ſtill be the Catholick Church, if it retain thoſe truths which may be an Antidote againſt the malignity of this error, to thoſe that held it out of a ſimple unaffected ignorance. Laſtly, though the thing be true, yet I might well require ſome proof of it from you, that either Proteſtants or the Roman Church muſt err againſt God's Word, For, if their contradiction be your only reaſon, then alſo you or the Dominicans muſt be Hereticks, becauſe you contradict one another as much as Proteſtants and Papiſts.

13. Ad. §. 15. The third Argument, pretends that you have ſhewed already, that the Viſible Church is Judge of Controverſies, and therefore Infallible, from whence you ſuppoſe that it follows, that to oppoſe her is to oppoſe God. To which I anſwer, that you have ſaid only, and not ſhewed, that the Viſible Church is Judge of Controverſies. And indeed how can ſhe be Judge of them if ſhe cannot decide them? And how can ſhe decide them, if it be a queſtion, Whether ſhe be judge of them? That which is queſtioned it ſelf cannot with any ſenſe be pretended to be fit to decide other queſtions; and much leſs this queſtion, Whether it have Authority to judge and decide all queſtions? 2. If ſhe were Judge, it would not follow that ſhe were infallible; for we have many Judges in our Courts of Judicature, yet none infallible. Nay, you cannot with any modeſty deny, that every man in the world ought to judge for himſelf, what Religion is trueſt; and yet you will not ſay that every man is infallible. 3. If the Church were ſuppoſed infallible, yet it would not follow at all, much leſs manifeſtly, that to oppoſe her Declaration is to oppoſe God: unleſs you ſuppoſe alſo that as ſhe is infallible, ſo by her oppoſers, ſhe is known or believed to be ſo. Laſtly, If all this were true (as it is all moſt falſe) yet were it to little purpoſe, ſeeing you have omitted to prove that the Viſible Church is the Roman.

14. Ad §. 16. Inſtead of a fourth Argument this is preſented to us, That, if Luther were an Heretick, then they that agreed with him muſt be ſo, And that Luther was a formal Heretick, you endeavour to prove by this moſt formal Syllogiſm; To ſay the Viſible Church is not univerſal, is properly an Hereſie: But Luther's Reformation was not Univerſal: Therefore it cannot be excuſed from formal Hereſie. Whereunto I anſwer, firſt to the firſt part, that it is no way impoſſible that Luther, had he been the inventor and firſt broacher of a falſe Doctrine (as he was not) might have been a formal Heretick, and yet that thoſe who follow him may be only ſo materially and improperly, and indeed no Hereticks. Your own men out of St. Auſtin diſtinguiſh between Heretici & Hereticorum ſequaces: And you your ſelf though you pronounce the Leaders among the Arrians formal Hereticks, yet confeſs that Salvian was at leaſt doubtful whether thoſe Arrians, who in ſimplicity followed their Teachers, might not be excuſed by ignorance. And about this ſuſpenſion of his you alſo ſeem ſuſpended; for you neither approve nor condemn it. Secondly, to the ſecond part, I ſay, that, had you not preſumed upon your ignorance in Logick as well as Metaphyſicks and School Divinity, you would never have obtruded upon us this rope of ſand for a formal Syllogiſm. It is even Couſin German to this, To deny the Reſurrection is properly an Hereſie, But Luther's Reformation was not univerſal, Therefore it cannot be excuſed from formal Hereſie! Or to this, To ſay the Viſible Church is not Univerſal is properly an Hereſie: But the preaching of the Goſpel at the beginning was not Univerſal: Therefore it cannot be excuſed from formal Hereſie. For as he whoſe Reformation is but particular, may yet not deny the Reſurrection, ſo may he alſo not deny the Churches Univerſality. And as the Apoſtles who preached the Goſpel in the beginning, did believe the Church Univerſal, though their preaching at the beginning was not ſo: So Luther alſo might and did believe the Church Univerſal, though his Reformation were but particular. I ſay, he did believe it Univerſal, even in your own ſenſe, that is, Univerſal de jure, though not de facto. And as for Univerſality in fact, he believed the Church much more Univerſal than his Reformation: For he did conceive (as appears by your own Allegations out of him) that not only the part reformed was the true Church, but alſo that they were Part of it who needed Reformation. Neither did he ever pretend to make a new Church but to reform the old one. Thirdly and laſtly, to the firſt Propoſition of this unſyllogiſtical ſyllogiſm, I anſwer, That to ſay the true Church is not always de facto Univerſal, is ſo far from being an Hereſie, that it is a certain truth known to all thoſe that know the world, and what Religions poſſeſs far the greater part of it. Donatus therefore was not to blame, for ſaying, that the Church might poſſibly be confined to Africk; but for ſaying with-without ground, that then it was ſo. And St. Auſtin, as he was in the right, in thinking that the Church was then extended farther than Africk; ſo was he in the wrong, if he thought that of neceſſity it always muſt be ſo: but moſt palpably miſtaken in conceiving that it was then ſpread over the whole earth, and known to all nations; which, if paſſion did not trouble you, and make you forget how lately almoſt half the world was diſcovered, and in what eſtate it was then found, you would very eaſily ſee and confeſs.

15. Ad §. 17. In the next Section you pretend that you have no deſire to proſecute the ſimilitude of Proteſtants with the Donatiſts; and yet you do it with as much ſpight and malice as could well be deviſed, but in vain: For Lucilla might do ill in promoting the Sect of the Donatiſts, and yet the mother and the daughter, whom you glance at, might do well in miniſtring influence (as you phraſe it) to Proteſtants in England. Unleſs you will conclude, becauſe one woman did one thing ill, therefore no woman can do any thing well: or becauſe it was ill done to promote one Sect, therefore it muſt be ill done, to maintain any.

16. The Donatiſts might do ill in calling the Chair of Rome the Chair of Peſtilence, and the Roman Church an Harlot; and yet, the ſtate of the Church being altered, Proteſtants might do well to do ſo: and therefore though St. Auſtin might perhaps have reaſon to perſecute the Donatiſts for detracting from the Church, and calling her harlot, when ſhe was not ſo; yet you may have none to threaten D. Potter that you would perſecute him (as the Application of this place intimates you would) if it were in your power: plainly ſhewing that you are a curſt Cow though your horns be ſhort, ſeeing the Roman Church is not now what it was in St. Auſtin's time. And hereof the concluſion of your own Book affords us a very pregnant teſtimony: where you tell us out of St. Auſtin, that one grand impediment, which among many kept the ſeduced followers of the Faction of Donatus from the Churches Communion, was, a calumny raiſed againſt the Catholicks, That they did ſet ſome ſtrange thing upon their Altar. To how many (ſaith St. Auſtin) did the reports of ill tongues ſhut up the way to enter, who ſaid, that we put I know not what upon the Altar? Out of deteſtation of the calumny, and juſt indignation againſt it, he would not ſo much as name the impiety wherewith they were charged, and therefore by a Rhetorical figure calls it, I know not what. But compare with him Optatus, writing of the ſame matter, and you ſhall plainly perceive that this (I know not what) pretended to be ſet upon the Altar, was indeed a Picture, which the Donatiſts (knowing how deteſtable a thing it was to all Chriſtians at that time, to ſet up any Pictures in a Church to worſhip them, as your new faſhion is) bruited abroad to be done in the Churches of the Catholick Church. But what anſwer doth St. Auſtin and Optatus make to this Accuſation? Do they confeſs and maintain it? Do they ſay, as you would now, It is true, we do ſet Pictures upon our Altar, and that not only for ornament or memory, but for worſhip alſo; but we do well to do ſo, and this ought not to trouble you, or affright you from our Communion? What other anſwer your Church could now make to ſuch an objection, is very hard to imagine: And therefore were your Doctrine the ſame with the Doctrine of the Fathers in this point, they muſt have anſwered ſo likewiſe. But they to the contrary not only deny the crime, but abhor and deteſt it. To little purpoſe therefore do you hunt after theſe poor ſhadows of reſemblances between us and the Donatiſts: unleſs you could ſhew an exact reſemblance between the preſent Church of Rome and the ancient: which ſeeing by this, and many other particulars, it is demonſtrated to be impoſſible; that Church which was then a Virgin may be now a Harlot, and that which was detraction in the Donatiſts, may be in Proteſtants a juſt accuſation.

17. As ill ſucceſs have you in comparing Dr. Potter with Tyconius whom as St. Auſtin finds fault with for continuing in the Donatiſts ſeparation, having forſaken the ground of it, the Doctrine of the Churches periſhing: ſo you condemn the Doctor, for continuing in their communion, who hold (as you ſay) the very ſame Hereſie. But if this were indeed the Doctrine of the Donatiſts, how is it that you ſay preſently after, That the Proteſtants who hold the Church of Chriſt periſhed, were worſe than Donatiſts, who ſaid that the Church remained at leaſt in Africa? Theſe things methinks hang not well together. But to let this paſs; The truth is, this difference, for which you would fain raiſe ſuch a horrible diſſention between Dr. Potter and his Brethren, if it be well conſidered is only in words and the manner of expreſſion: They affirming only, that the Church periſhed from its integrity, and fell into many corruptions which he denies not: And the Doctor denying only that it fell from its eſſence, and became no Church at all, which they affirm not.

18. Theſe therefore are but velitations, and you would ſeem to make but ſmall account of them. But the main point you ſay is, that ſince Luther's Reformed Church was not in being for divers Centuries before Luther, and yet was in the Apoſtles time, they muſt of neceſſity affirm heretically with the Donatiſts, that the true unſpotted Church of Chriſt periſhed, and that ſhe which remained on earth, was (O Blaſphemy!) an Harlot. By which words it ſeems you are reſolute perpetually to confound True and Unſpotted; and to put no difference between a corrupted Church and none at all. But what is this, but to make no difference between a diſeaſed and a dead man? Nay, what is it but to contradict your ſelves, who cannot deny but that ſins are as great ſtains and ſpots and deformities in the ſight of God, as errors; and confeſs your Church to be a congregation of men, whereof every particular, not one excepted, (and conſequently the generality which is nothing but a collection of them) is polluted and defiled with ſin? You proceed.

19. But ſay you, The ſame Hereſie follows out of Dr. Potter and other Proteſtants, that the Church may err in points not fundamental; becauſe we have ſhewed that every error againſt any revealed truth is Hereſie and Damnable, whether the matter be great or ſmall: And how can the Church more truly be ſaid to periſh, than when ſhe is permitted to maintain damnable Hereſie? Beſides, we will hereafter prove that by every act of Hereſie all divine faith is loſt, and to maintain a true Church without any faith, is to fancy a living man without life. Anſw. What you have ſaid before, hath been anſwered before; and what you ſhall ſay hereafter, ſhall be confuted hereafter. But if it be ſuch a certain ground, that every error againſt any one revealed truth is a damnable Hereſie, then, I hope I ſhall have your leave to ſubſume, That the Dominicans in your account muſt hold a damnable Hereſie, who hold an error againſt the immaculate Conception: which you muſt needs eſteem a revealed truth, or otherwiſe why are you ſo urgent and importunate to have it defined, ſeeing your rule is, Nothing may be defined, unleſs it be firſt revealed? But, without your leave, I will make bold to conclude, that, if either that or the contrary Aſſertion be a revealed truth, you or they, chuſe you whether, muſt without contradiction hold a damnable Hereſie; if this ground be true that every contradiction of a revealed Truth is ſuch. And now I dare ſay, for fear of inconvenience you will begin to temper the crudeneſs of your former Aſſertion, and tell us, that neither of you are Hereticks, becauſe the Truth againſt which you err though revealed, is not ſufficiently propounded, And ſo ſay I, Neither is your doctrine which Proteſtants contradict ſufficiently propounded. For though it be plain enough, that your Church propoſeth it, yet ſtill methinks, it is as plain that your Churches propoſition is not ſufficient; and I deſire you would not ſay but prove the contrary. Laſtly, to your Queſtion, How can the Church more truly be ſaid to periſh, than when ſhe is permitted to maintain a damnable Hereſie? I anſwer, ſhe may be more truly ſaid to periſh, when ſhe is not only permitted to do ſo, but de facto doth maintain a damnable Hereſie. Again, ſhe may be more truly ſaid to periſh, when ſhe falls into an Hereſie, which is not only damnable in it ſelf, and ex natura rei, as you ſpeak, but ſuch an Hereſie, the belief of whoſe contrary Truth is neceſſary, not only neceſſitate præcepti but medii, and therefore the Hereſie ſo abſolutely and indiſpenſably deſtructive of ſalvation, that no ignorance can excuſe it, nor any general repentance, without a dereliction of it, can beg a pardon for it. Such an Hereſie if the Church ſhould fall into, it might be more truly ſaid to periſh, than if it fell only into ſome Hereſie of its own nature damnable. For, in that ſtate, all the members of it without exception, all without mercy muſt needs periſh for ever: In this, although thoſe that might ſee the truth and would not, cannot upon any good ground hope for ſalvation, yet without queſtion, it might ſend many ſouls to heaven, who would gladly have embraced the truth, but that they wanted means to diſcover it. Thirdly and laſtly, ſhe may yet more truly be ſaid to periſh when ſhe Apoſtates from Chriſt abſolutely, or rejects even thoſe Truths out of which her Hereſies may be reformed; as if ſhe ſhould directly deny Jeſus to be the Chriſt, or the Scripture to be the Word of God. Towards which ſtate of perdition it may well be feared that the Church of Rome doth ſomewhat incline, by her ſuperinducing upon the reſt of her errors the Doctrine of her own Infallibility, whereby her errors are made incurable; and by her pretending that the Scripture is to be interpreted according to her Doctrine, and not her Doctrine to be judged of by Scripture; whereby ſhe makes the Scripture uneffectual for her Reformation.

20. Ad §. 18. I was very glad when I heard you ſay, The holy Scripture and ancient Fathers do aſſign Separation from the viſible Church as a mark of Hereſie: for I was in good hope, that no Chriſtian would ſo belie the Scripture, as to ſay ſo of it, unleſs he could have produced ſome one Text at leaſt, wherein this was plainly affirmed, or from whence it might be undoubtedly and undeniably collected. For aſſure your ſelf, good Sir, it is a very heinous crime to ſay, Thus ſaith the Lord, when the Lord doth not ſay ſo. I expected therefore ſome Scripture ſhould have been alledged, wherein it ſhould have been ſaid, Whoſoever ſeparates from the Roman Church is an Heretick: or the Roman Church is infallible, or the Guide of Faith; or at leaſt, There ſhall be always ſome viſible Church infallible in matters of Faith. Some ſuch direction as this I hoped for: And, I pray conſider, whether I had not reaſon! The Evangeliſts and Apoſtles who wrote the new Teſtament, we all ſuppoſe were good men, and very deſirous to direct us the ſureſt and plaineſt way to heaven; we ſuppoſe them likewiſe very ſufficiently inſtructed by the Spirit of God in all the neceſſary points of the Chriſtian Faith, and therefore certainly not ignorant of this Pnum neceſſarium, this moſt neceſſary point of all others, without which, as you pretend and teach, all faith is no faith, that is, that the Church of Rome was deſigned by God the guide of Faith. We ſuppoſe them laſtly wiſe men, eſpecially being aſſiſted by the Spirit of Wiſdom, and ſuch as knew that a doubtful and queſtionable Guide was for mens direction as good as none at all. And after all theſe ſuppoſitions, which I preſume no good Chriſtian will call into queſtion, is it poſſible that any Chriſtian heart can believe, that not One amongſt them all ſhould ad rei memoriam write this neceſſary Doctrine plainly, ſo much as once? Certainly in all reaſon they had provided much better for the good of Chriſtians, if they had wrote this, though they had writ nothing elſe. Methinks, the Evangeliſts, undertaking to write the Goſpel of Chriſt, could not poſſibly have omitted, any one of them, this moſt neceſſary point of faith, had they known it neceſſary, (St. Luke eſpecially, who plainly profeſſes that his intent was to write all things neceſſary.) Methinks St. Paul writing to the Romans could not but have congratulated this their priviledge to them! Methinks, inſtead of ſaying, Your faith is ſpoken of, all the world over (which you have no reaſon to be very proud of, for he ſays the very ſame thing to the Theſſalonians) he could not have fail'd to have told them, once at leaſt in plain terms, that their Faith was the Rule for all the world for ever. But ſure he would have forborn to put them in fear of an impoſſibility, as he doth in his eleventh Chapter, that they alſo, nay, the whole Church of the Gentiles, if they did not look to their ſtanding, might fall away to infidelity, as the Jews had done. Methinks, in all his other other Epiſtles, at leaſt in ſome, at leaſt in one of them, he could not have failed to have given the world this direction, had he known it to be a true one, that all men were to be guided by the Church of Rome, and none to ſeparate from it under pain of damnation. Methinks writing ſo often of Hereticks and Antichriſt, he ſhould have given the world this (as you pretend) only ſure preſervative from them. How was it poſſible that St. Peter writing two Catholick Epiſtles, mentioning his own departure, writing to preſerve Chriſtians in the Faith, ſhould in neither of them commend them to the guidance of his pretended Succeſſors, the Biſhops of Rome? How was it poſſible that St. James and St. Jude in their Catholick Epiſtles ſhould not give this Catholick direction? Methinks St. John inſtead of ſaying, He that believeth that Jeſus is the Chriſt is born of God, (the force of which direction your gloſſes do quite enervate, and make unavailable to diſcern who are the Sons of God) ſhould have ſaid, He that adheres to the doctrine of the Roman Church, and lives according to it, he is a good Chriſtian, and by this mark ye ſhall know him! What man not quite out of his wits, if he conſider as he ſhould, the pretended neceſſity of this doctrine, that without the belief hereof no man ordinarily can be ſaved, can poſſibly force himſelf to conceive that all theſe good and holy men, ſo deſirous of mens ſalvation, and ſo well aſſured of it (as it is pretended) ſhould be ſo deeply and affectedly ſilent in it, and not One of them ſay it plainly ſo much as once, but leave it to be collected from uncertain Principles, by many more uncertain Conſequences? Certainly, he that can judge ſo uncharitably of them, it is no marvel if he cenſure other inferiour ſervants of Chriſt as Atheiſts and Hypocrites, and what he pleaſes. Plain places therefore I did and had reaſon to look for, when I heard you ſay, the holy Scripture aſſigns ſeparation from the viſible Church as a mark of Hereſie. But inſtead hereof what have you brought us, but meer impertinencies? St. John ſaith of ſome who pretended to be Chriſtians, and were not ſo, and therefore when it was for their advantage forſook their profeſſion, They went out from us, but they were not of us: for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us. Of ſome, who before the decree of the Council to the contrary, were perſuaded and accordingly taught, that the convert Gentiles were to keep the Law of Moſes, it is ſaid in the Acts, Some who went out from us. And again St. Paul in the ſame book forewarns the Epheſians that out of them ſhould ariſe men ſpeaking perverſe things. And from theſe places, which it ſeems are the plaineſt you have, you collect, that ſeparation from the viſible Church is aſſigned by Scripture as a Mark of Hereſie. Which is certainly a ſtrange and unheard of ſtrain of Logick. Unleſs you will ſay that every Text wherein it is ſaid, that ſome body goes out from ſome body, affords an Argument for this purpoſe; For the firſt place, there is no certainty that it ſpeaks of Hereticks; but, no Chriſtians, of Antichriſts, of ſuch as denied Jeſus to be the Chriſt: See the place and you ſhall confeſs as much. The ſecond place, it is certain, you muſt not ſay it ſpeaks of Hereticks; for it ſpeaks only of ſome who believed and taught an Error, while it was yet a queſtion, and not evident; and therefore according to your doctrine no formal Hereſie. The third ſays indeed, that of the Profeſſors of Chriſtianity, ſome ſhall ariſe that ſhall teach Hereſie: But not one of them all that ſays or intimates, that whoſoever ſeparates from the viſible Church in what ſtate ſoever is certainly an Heretick. Hereticks I confeſs do always do ſo; But they that do ſo, are not always Hereticks; for perhaps the ſtate of the Church may make it neceſſary for them to do ſo; as Rebels always diſobey the command of their King, yet they, which diſobey a King's command (which perhaps may be unjuſt) are not preſently Rebels.

21. Your Allegations out of Vincentius, Proſper, and Cyprian, are liable to theſe exceptions. 1. That they are the ſayings of men not aſſiſted by the Spirit of God, and whoſe Authority your ſelves will not ſubmit to in all things. 2. That the firſt and laſt are meerly impertinent, neither of them affirming or intimating, that ſeparation from the preſent Viſible Church is a mark of Hereſie; and the former former ſpeaking plainly of ſeparation from Univerſality, Conſent, and Antiquity, which, if you will preſume without proof that we did and you did not, you beg the Queſtion. For you know we pretend that we ſeparated only from that preſent Church which had ſeparated from the Doctrine of the Ancient, and becauſe ſhe had done ſo, and ſo far forth as ſhe had done ſo and no farther. And laſtly, the latter part of Proſper's words cannot be generally true, according to your own grounds; For you ſay a man may be divided from the Church upon meer Schiſm without any mixture of Hereſie: And a man may be juſtly excommunicated for many other ſufficient cauſes beſides Hereſie. Laſtly, a man may be divided by an unjuſt excommunication, and be both before and after a very good Catholick; and, therefore you cannot maintain it univerſally true, That he who is divided from the Church, is an Heretick, and Antichriſt.

22. In the 19. §. we have the Authority of eight Fathers urged to prove That the ſeparation from the Church of Rome, as it is the See of St. Peter, (I conceive you mean, as it is that particular Church) is the mark of Hereſie. Which kind of Argument I might well refuſe to anſwer, unleſs you would firſt promiſe me, that whenſoever I ſhould produce as plain ſentences, of as great a number of Fathers as ancient, for any Doctrine whatſoever, that you will ſubſcribe to it, though it fall out to be contrary to the doctrine of the Roman Church. For I conceive nothing in the world more unequal or unreaſonable than that you ſhould preſs us with ſuch Authorities as theſe, and think your ſelves at liberty from them; and that you ſhould account them Fathers when they are for you, and Children when they are againſt you. Yet I would not you ſhould interpret this as if I had not great aſſurance, that it is not poſſible for you ever to gain this cauſe at the tribunal of the Fathers; nay, not of the Fathers, whoſe ſentences are here alledged. Let us conſider them in order, and I doubt not to make it appear that far the greater part of them; nay, all of them that are any way conſiderable fall ſhort of your purpoſe.

23. St. Hierom (you ſay) writing to Pope Damaſus, ſaith, I am in the Communion of the Chair of Peter, &c. But then I pray conſider he ſaith it to Pope Damaſus: and this will much weaken the Authority, with them who know how great over-truths men uſually write to one another in Letters. Conſider again, that he ſays only, that he was then in Communion with the Chair of Peter; Not that he always would, or of neceſſity muſt be ſo: for his reſolution to the contrary is too evident out of that which he ſaith elſewhere which ſhall be produced hereafter. He ſays, that the Church at that preſent was built upon that Rock; but, not that only, nor that always. Nay, his judgment, as ſhall appear, is expreſs to the contrary. And ſo likewiſe the reſt of his expreſſions (if we mean to reconcile Hierom with Hierom) muſt be conceived as intended by him, of that Biſhop and See of Rome, at that preſent time, and in the preſent State, and in reſpect of that Doctrine which he there treats of. For otherwiſe, had he conceived it neceſſary for him and all men to conform their judgment in matters of Faith, to the judgment of the Biſhop and Church of Rome, how came it to paſs that he choſe rather to believe the Epiſtle to the Hebrews Canonical, upon the authority of the Eaſtern Church, than to reject it from the Canon upon the authority of the Roman? How comes it to paſs that he diſſented from the Authority of that Church, touching the Canon of the Old Teſtament? For if you ſay, that the Church then conſented with St. Hierom, I fear you will loſe your Fort by maintaining your Out-works; and by avoiding this, run into a greater danger of being forced to confeſs the preſent Roman Church oppoſite herein to the Ancient. How was it poſſible, that he ſhould ever believe that Liberius Biſhop of Rome, either was or could have been brought over by the ſolicitation of Fortunatianus Biſhop of Aquileia, and brought after two years baniſhment to ſubſcribe Hereſie? Which Act of Liberius, though ſome fondly queſtion, being ſo vain as to expect we ſhould rather believe them that lived but yeſterday, 1300 years almoſt after the thing is ſaid said to be done, and speaking for themselves in their own Cause, rather than the disinterested time-fellows, or immediate Successors of Liberius himself: yet I hope, they will not proceed to such a degree of immodesty, as once to question, Whether St. Hierom thought so. And if this cannot be denied, I demand then, If he had lived in Liberius his time, could he, or would he, have written so to Liberius, as he does to Damasus? Would he have said to him, I am in the Communion of the Chair of Peter, I know that the Church is built upon this Rock, Whosoever gathereth not with thee, scattereth. Would he then have said, the Roman faith and the Catholick were the same: or, that the Roman faith received no delusions, no not from an Angel? I suppose, he could not have said so with any coherence to his own belief; and therefore conceive it undeniable that what he said to Damasus, he said it (though perhaps he strained too high, only) of Damasus, and never conceived that his words would have been extended to all his Predecessors and all his Successors.

2.4. The same Answer I make to the first place of St. Ambrose, viz. That no more can be certainly concluded from it, but that the Catholick Bishop and the Roman Church were then at unity; so that whosoever agreed with the later could not then but agree with the former. But that this Rule was perpetual, and that no man could ever agree with the Catholick Bishops, but he must agree with the Roman Church, this he says not, nor gives you any ground to conclude from him. Athanasius when he was excommunicated by Liberius, agreed very ill with the Roman Church; and yet you will not gain-say but he agreed well enough with the Catholick Bishops. The second, I am uncertain what the sense of it is, and what truth is in it; but most certain, that it makes nothing to your present purpose. For it neither affirms nor imports, that separation from the Roman Church is a certain mark of Heresie. For the rights of Communion (whatsoever it signifies) might be said to flow from it, if that Church were, by Ecclesiastical Law, the head of all other Churches: But unless it were made so by divine Authority, and that absolutely, Separation from it could not be a mark of Heresie.

25. For St. Cyprian; all the world knows that he (b) resolutely opposed a Decree of the Roman Bishop, and all that adhered to him in the point of Re-baptizing, which that Church at that time delivered as a necessary Tradition. So necessary, that by the Bishop of Rome Firmilianus and other Bishops of Cappadocia, Cilicia and Galatia, and generally all who persisted in the contrary opinion, (c) were therefore deprived of the Churches Communion, (which Excommunication could not but involve St. Cyprian, who defended the same opinion as resolutely as Firmilianus, though Cardinal Perron magisterially and without all colour of proof affirm the contrary) and Cyprian in particular so far cast off, as for it to be pronounced by Stephen, A false Christ. Again, so necessary, that the Bishops which were sent by Cyprian from Africk to Rome, were not admitted to the Communion of ordinary conference: But all men who were subject to the Bishop of Rome's Authority, were commanded by him not only to deny them the Churches peace and Communion, but even lodging and entertainment: manifestly declaring, that they reckoned them among those whom St. John forbids to receive to house, or to say God speed to them. All these terrors notwithstanding St. Cyprian holds still his former opinion. And though out of respect to the Churches peace (d) he judged no man, nor cut off any man from the right of Communion, for thinking otherwise than he held, yet he conceived Stephen and his adherents, (e) to hold a pernicious error. And S. Austin, (though disputing with the Donatists he useth some Tergiversation in the point) yet confesseth elsewhere, that it is not found that Cyprian did ever change his opinion. And so far was he from conceiving any necessity of doing so, by submitting to the judgment of the Bishop and Church of Rome, that he plainly professeth that no other Bishop, but our Lord Jesus only, had power to judge (with authority) of his judgment; and as plainly intimates that Stephen for usurping such a power, and making himself a Judge over Bishops, was little better than a Tyrant: and as heavily almost he censures him, and peremptorily opposes him as obstinate in error, in that very very place where he delivers that famous saying, How can he have God for his Father, who hath not the Church for his Mother? Little doubting, it seems, but a man might have the Church for his Mother, who stood in opposition to the Church of Rome, and being far from thinking what you fondly obtrude upon him, that to be united to the Roman Church and to the Church was all one, and that separation from St. Peter's Chair was a mark (I mean, a certain mark) either of Schism or Heresie. If after all this, you will catch at a phrase or a complement of St. Cyprians, and with that, hope to persuade Protestants, who know this story as well as their own name, that St. Cyprian did believe that falsehood could not have access to the Roman Church, and that opposition to it was the brand of an Heretick: may we not well expect, that you will the next time you write, vouch Luther and Calvin also for Abettors of this Phansie, and make us poor men believe not only (as you say) that we have no Metaphysicks, but that we have no sense? And when you have done so, it will be no great difficulty for you to assure us that we read no such thing in Bellarmine, as that Cyprian was always accounted in the number of Catholicks; nor in Canisius, that he was a most excellent Doctor and a glorious Martyr; nor in your Calendar, that he is a Saint and a Martyr; but that all these are deceptions of our sight, and that you ever esteemed him a very Schismatick and an Heretick, as having on him the Mark of the Beast, opposition to the Chair of Peter. Nay, that he (whatever he pretended, knew and believed himself to be so; in as much as he knew as you pretend) and esteemed this opposition to be the Mark of Heresie, and knew himself to stand, and stand out, in such an opposition.

26. But we need not seek so far for matter to refute the vanity of this pretence. Let the Reader but peruse this very Epistle out of which this Sentence is alledged, and he shall need no farther satisfaction against it. For he shall find, first, that you have helped the Dice a little with a false, or at least with a very bold and strained Translation: for St. Cyprian saith not, to whom falsehood cannot have access, by which many of you favourable Readers, I doubt, understood, that Cyprian had exempted that Church from a possibility of error, but to whom perfidiousness cannot have access, meaning by perfidiousness in the abstract, according to a common figure of speech, those perfidious Schismaticks whom he there complains of: and of these by a Rhetorical insinuation, he says, that with such good Christians as the Romans were, it was not possible they should find favourable entertainment. Not that he conceived it any way impossible they should do so (for the very writing this Epistle, and many passages in it, plainly shew the contrary;) but because he was confident, or at least would seem to be confident, they never would, and so by his good opinion and confidence in the Romans, lay an obligation upon them, to do as he presumed they would do; as also in the end of his Epistle, he says even of the people of the Church of Rome that being defended by the providence of their Bishop, nay, by their own Vigilance sufficiently guarded, they could not be taken nor deceived with the poyson of Hereticks. Not that indeed he thought either this or the former any way impossible: For to what purpose, but for prevention hereof, did he write this long, and accurate, and vehement Epistle to Cornelius? Which sure had been most vainly done, to prevent that which he knew or believed impossible! Or how can this consist with his taking notice in the beginning of it, That Cornelius was somewhat moved and wrought upon by the attempts of his Adversaries, with his reprehending him for being so, and with his vehement exhorting him to courage and constancy, or with his request to him, in the conclusion of his Epistle, that it should be read publickly to the whole Clergy and Laity of Rome, to the intent, that if any contagion of their poysoned speech and pestiferous semination, had crept in amongst them, it might be wholly taken away from the ears and the hearts of the Brethren: and that the entire and sincere charity of good men might be purged from all dross of heretical detraction: Or lastly, with his vehement persuasions to them to decline, for the time to come, and resolutely avoid their word and conference, because their speech crept as a canker, as the Apostle faith; becauſe evil communication would corrupt good manners, becauſe wicked men carry perdition in their mouths, and hide fire in their lips? All which had been but vain and ridiculous pageantry, had he verily believed the Romans ſuch inacceſſable Forts, ſuch immovable Rocks, as the former ſentences would ſeem to import, if we will expound them rigidly and ſtrictly, according to the exigence of the words, and not allow him who was profeſſed Maſter of the Art, to have uſed here a little Rhetorick, and to ſay, That could not be, whereof he had no abſolute certainty but that it might be, but only had, or would ſeem to have a great confidence that it never would be, Ut fides habita fidem obligaret, that he profeſſing to be confident of the Romans, might lay an obligation upon them to do as he promiſed himſelf they would do. For as for joyning the principal Church and the Chair of Peter, how that will ſerve for your preſent purpoſe of proving ſeparation from the Roman Church a mark of Hereſie, I ſuppoſe it is hard to underſtand! Nor indeed how it will advantage you in any other deſign againſt us, who do not altogether deny, but that the Church of Rome might be called the Chair of Peter, in regard he is ſaid to have preached the Goſpel there; and the Principal Church, becauſe the City was the Principal and Imperial City: which Prerogative of the City, if we believe the Fathers of the Council of Chalcedon, was the ground and occaſion, why the Fathers of former time (I pray obſerve) conferred upon this Church this Prerogative above other Churches.

27. And as far am I from underſtanding, how you can collect from the other ſentence, that to communicate with the Church and Pope of Rome, and to communicate with the Catholick Church, is always (for that is your Aſſumpt) one and the ſame thing. St. Cyprian ſpeaks not of the Church of Rome at all, but of the Biſhop only, who when he doth communicate with the Catholick Church, as Cornelius at that time did, then whoſoever communicates with him, cannot but communicate with the Catholick Church: and then by accident one might truly ſay, ſuch an one communicates with you, that is, with the Catholick Church, and that to communicate with him is to communicate with the Catholick Church. As if Titius and Sempronius be together, he that is in company with Titius, cannot but be at that time in company with Sempronius. As if a General be marching to ſome place with an Army, he that is then with the General muſt at that time be with the Army: and a man may ſay without abſurdity, Such a time I was with the General, that is, with the Army, and that to be with the General is to be with the Army. Or as if a mans hand be joyned to his body, the finger which is joyned to the hand is joyned to the body, and a man may ſay truly of it, This finger is joyned to the hand, that is, to the body, and, to be joyned to the hand is to be joyned to the body; becauſe all theſe things are by accident true. And yet I hope you would not deny, but the finger might poſſibly be joyned to the hand, and yet not to the body, the hand being cut off from the body; and a man might another time be with his General and not with his Army, he being abſent from the Army. And therefore by like reaſon your collection is ſophiſtical, being in effect but this, to communicate with ſuch a Biſhop of Rome, who did communicate with the Catholick Church, was to communicate with the Catholick Church, therefore abſolutely and always it muſt be true, that, To communicate with him, is by conſequent to communicate with the Catholick Church, and to be divided from his Communion is to be an Heretick.

28. In urging the place of Irenæus, you have ſhewed much more ingenuity than many of your fellows. For whereas they uſually begin at, Declaring the Tradition of the, &c. and conceal what goes before; you have ſet it down, though not ſo compleatly as you ſhould have done, yet ſufficiently to ſhew, that what authority in the matter he attributed to the Roman Church in particular, the ſame for the kind (though perhaps not in the ſame degree) he attributed to all other Apoſtolick Churches. Either therefore you muſt ſay, that he conceived the Teſtimony of other Apoſtolick Churches divine and infallible, (which certainly he did not, not, neither do you pretend he did, and if he had, the confeſſed Errors and Hereſies which after they fell into would demonſtrate plainly that he had erred) or elſe that he conceived the teſtimony of the Roman Church only humane and credible, though perhaps more credible than any one Church beſide, (as one man's Teſtimony is more credible than anothers;) but certainly much more credible, which was enough for his purpoſe, than that ſecret Tradition, to which thoſe Hereticks pretended, againſt whom he wrote, over-bearing them with an Argument of their own kind, far ſtronger than their own. Now if Irenæus thought the Teſtimony of the Roman Church in this point only humane and fallible, then ſurely he could never think, either adhering to it a certain mark of a Catholick, or ſeparation from it a certain mark of an Heretick.

29. Again, whereas your great Achilles Cardinal Perron in French; as alſo his Noble Tranſlatreſs, miſled by him, in Engliſh, knowing that mens reſorting to Rome would do his cauſe little ſervice, hath made bold with the Latine Tongue, as he does very often with the Greek, and rendered Ad hanc Eccleſiam neceſſe eſt omnem convenire Eccleſiam, To this Church it is neceſſary that every Church ſhould agree, you have Tranſlated it, as it ſhould be, to this Church it is neceſſary that all Churches reſort: wherein you have ſhewed more ſincerity, and have had more regard to make the Author ſpeak ſenſe. For if he had ſaid, By ſhewing the Tradition of the Roman Church we confound all Hereticks; for, to this Church, all Churches muſt agree, what had this been, but to give for a reaſon, that which was more queſtionable than the thing in queſtion: as being neither evident in it ſelf, and plainly denied by his adverſaries, and not at all proved nor offered to be proved here or elſewhere by Irenæus. To ſpeak thus therefore had been weak and ridiculous. But on the other ſide, if we conceive him to ſay thus, You Hereticks decline a trial of your Doctrine by Scripture, as being corrupted and imperfect, and not fit to determine Controverſies without recourſe to Tradition, and, inſtead hereof, you fly for a refuge to a ſecret Tradition, which you pretend that you received from your Anceſtors, and they from the Apoſtles; certainly, your calumnies againſt Scripture are moſt unjuſt and unreaſonable: but yet moreover, aſſure your ſelves, that if you will be tried, by Tradition, even by that alſo you will be overthrown. For our Tradition is far more famous, more conſtant, and in all reſpects more credible, than that which you pretend to. It were eaſie for me, to muſter up againſt you the uninterrupted ſucceſſions of all the Churches founded by the Apoſtles, all conſpiring in their Teſtimonies againſt you: But becauſe it were too long to number up the Succeſſions of all Churches, I will content my ſelf with the Tradition of the moſt ancient and moſt glorious Church of Rome, which alone is ſufficient for the confutation and confuſion of your Doctrine, as being in credit and authority, as far beyond the Tradition you build upon, as the light of the Sun is beyond the light of a Glowworm. For to this Church, by reaſon it is placed in the Imperial City, whither all mens affairs do neceſſarily draw them, or by reaſon of the powerful principality it hath over all the adjacent Churches, there is, and always hath been, a neceſſity of a perpetual recourſe of all the faithful round about: who if there hath been any alteration in the Church of Rome, could not in all probability but have obſerved it. But they to the contrary have always obſerved in this Church the very Tradition which came from the Apoſtles and no other. I ſay, if we conceive his meaning thus, his words will be intelligible and rational: which if inſtead of reſort we put in agree will be quite loſt. Herein therefore we have been beholding to your honeſty, which makes me think you did not wittingly falſifie, but only twice in this ſentence miſtake Undique for Ubique, and tranſlate it, every where, and of what place ſoever, inſtead of round about. For that it was neceſſary for all the faithful of what place ſoever to reſort to Rome, is not true. That the Apoſtolick Tradition hath always been conſerved there from thoſe who are every where, is not Senſe. Now inſtead of conſervata read obſervata, as in all probability it ſhould be, and tranſlate undique truly round about, and then the ſenſe will be both plain and good; for then it muſt be rendred thus,

For to this Church, by reaſon of a more powerful principality, there is a neceſſity that all the Churches, that is, all the faithful round about, ſhould reſort, in which the Apoſtolick Tradition hath been always obſerved by thoſe who were round about. If any man ſay, I have been too bold a Critick in ſubſtituting obſervata inſtead of conſervata, I deſire him to know, that the conjecture is not mine, and therefore as I expect no praiſe for it, ſo, I hope, I ſhall be far from cenſure. But I would intreat him to conſider, whether it be not likely that the ſame Greek word ſignifying obſervo and conſervo, the Tranſlator of Irenæus, who could hardly ſpeak Latine, might not eaſily miſtake, and tranſlate διατήρητα conſervata eſt, inſtead of obſervata eſt; Or, whether it be not likely, that thoſe men which anciently wrote Books, and underſtood them not, might not eaſily commit ſuch an error; Or, whether the ſenſe of the place can be ſalved any other way; if it can, in God's name let it; if not, I hope, he is not to be condemned, who with ſuch a little alteration hath made that ſenſe which he found non ſenſe.

30. But whether you will have it Obſervata or Conſervata, the new Sumpſimus or the old Mumpſimus, poſſibly it may be ſomething to Irenæus, but to us, or our cauſe, it is no way material. For if the reſt be rightly tranſlated, neither will Conſervata afford you any argument againſt us, nor Obſervata help us to any evaſion. For though at the firſt hearing of the glorious attributes here given, (and that juſtly) to the Church of Rome, The confounding Hereticks with her Tradition, and ſaying, It is neceſſary for all Churches to reſort to her, may ſound like Arguments for you; yet he that is attentive, I hope, will eaſily diſcover, that it might be good and rational in Irenæus having to do with Hereticks, who, ſomewhat like thoſe, who would be the only Catholicks, declined a trial by Scripture, as not containing the Truth of Chriſt perfectly, and not fit to decide Controverſies, without recourſe to Tradition: I ſay, he will will eaſily perceive that it might be rational in Irenæus to urge them, with any Tradition of more credit than their own, eſpecially a Tradition conſonant to Scripture, and even contained in it; and yet that it may be irrational in you to urge us, who do not decline Scripture, but appeal to it as a perfect rule of faith, with a Tradition which we pretend is many ways repugnant to Scripture; and repugnant to a Tradition far more general than it ſelf, which gives Teſtimony to Scripture; and laſtly, repugnant to it ſelf as giving atteſtation both to Scripture, and to Doctrines plainly contrary to Scripture. Secondly, that the Authority of the Roman Church was then a far greater Argument of the Truth of her Tradition when it was United with all other Apoſtolick Churches, than now when it is divided from them, according to that of Tertullian, Had the Churches erred they would have varied, but that which is the ſame in all, cannot be Error but Tradition; and therefore Irenæus his Argument may be very probable, yet yours may be worth nothing. Thirdly, that fourteen hundred years may have made a great deal of alteration in the Roman Church; as Rivers, though near the fountain they may retain their native and unmixt ſincerity, yet in long progreſs cannot but take in much mixture that came not from the Fountain. And therefore the Roman Tradition, though then pure, may now be corrupted and impure: and ſo this Argument (being one of thoſe things which are the worſe for wearing) might in Irenæus his time be ſtrong and vigorous, and after declining and decaying may long ſince have fallen to nothing. Eſpecially, conſidering that Irenæus plays the Hiſtorian only, and not the Prophet, and ſays only, that the Apoſtolick Tradition had been always there as in other Apoſtolick Churches conſerved or obſerved, chuſe you whether, but that it ſhould be always ſo, he ſays not, neither had he any warrant. He knew well enough that there was foretold a great falling away of the Churches of Chriſt to Anti-chriſt: that the Roman Church in particular was fore-warned that ſhe alſo, Nay, the whole Church of the Gentiles might fall if they lookt not to their ſtanding: Rom. 11. and therefore to ſecure her that ſhe ſhould ſtand for ever, he had no Reaſon nor Authority. Fourthly, that it appears manifeſtly out of this Book of Irenæus quoted by by you, that the doctrine of the Chiliaſts was in his judgment Apoſtolick Tradition, as alſo it was eſteemed (for ought appears to the contrary) by all the Doctors, and Saints, and Martyrs of or about his time, for all that ſpeak of it, or whoſe judgments in the point are any way recorded, are for it: And Juſtin Martyr profeſſeth that all good and Orthodox Chriſtians of his time believed it, and thoſe that did not, he reckons amongſt Hereticks. Now I demand, was this Tradition one of thoſe that was conſerved, and obſerved in the Church of Rome, or was it not? If not, had Irenæus known ſo much, he muſt have retracted this commendation of that Church. If it was, then the Tradition of the preſent Church of Rome contradicts the Ancient, and accounts it Heretical, and then ſure it can be no certain note of Hereſie to depart from them, who have departed from themſelves, and prove themſelves ſubject unto Error by holding contradictions. Fifthly and laſtly, that out of the Story of the Church it is as manifeſt as the light at noon, that though Irenæus did eſteem the Roman Tradition a great Argument of the doctrine which he there delivers and defends againſt the Hereticks of his time, viz. That there is one God, yet he was very far from thinking that Church was, and ever ſhould be a ſafe keeper, and an infallible witneſs of Tradition in general: Inaſmuch as in his own life, his action proclaimed the contrary. For when Victor Biſhop of Rome obtruded the Roman Tradition touching the time of Eaſter upon Aſian Biſhops under the pain of Excommunicaton, and damnation; Irenæus, and all the other Weſtern Biſhops, though agreeing with him in his obſervation, yet ſharply reprehended him for excommunicating the Aſian Biſhops for their diſagreeing, plainly ſhewing that they eſteemed that not a neceſſary doctrine and a ſufficient ground of excommunication, which the Biſhop of Rome and his adherents did ſo account of: For otherwiſe how could they have reprehended him for excommunicating them, had they conceived the cauſe of this Excommunication juſt and ſufficient? And beſides, evidently declaring that they eſteemed not ſeparation from the Roman Church, a certain mark of Hereſie, ſeeing they eſteemed not them Hereticks though ſeparated and cut off from the Roman Church. In Dial. cum Tryphon.

Cardinal Perron, to avoid the ſtroke of this convincing Argument, raiſeth a cloud of eloquent words, which becauſe you borrow them of him in your Second part, I will here inſert, and with ſhort cenſures diſpel; and let his Idolaters ſee that Truth is not afraid of Giants: His words are theſe. Lib. 3. Cap. 2. Of his Reply to King James. c. 2. fol. 32.

The firſt inſtance then that Calvin alledgeth againſt the Popes Cenſures, is taken from Euſebius (a) an Arrian Author, and from Ruffinus (b) enemy to the Roman Church his Tranſlator: who writ, (c) that St. Irenæus reprehended Pope Victor for having excommunicated the Churches of Aſia for the queſtion of the day of Paſche, which they obſerved according to a particular Tradition that St. John had introduced (d) for a time in their Provinces, becauſe of the Neighbourhood of the Jews, and to bury the Synagogue with honour, and not according to the univerſal Tradition of the Apoſtles. Irenæus (ſaith Calvin) reprehended Pope Victor bitterly, becauſe for a light cauſe he had moved a great and perillous contention in the Church. There is this in the Text that Calvin produceth, he reprehended him, that he had not done well, to cut off from the body of unity, ſo many and ſo great Churches. But againſt whom maketh he this, but (e) againſt thoſe that object it? For who ſees not, that St. Irenæus, doth not there reprehend the Pope for the (f) want of power, but for the ill uſe of his power; and doth not reproach to the Pope, that he could not excommunicate the Aſians, but admoniſheth him, that for (g) ſo ſmall a cauſe he ſhould not have cut off ſo many Provinces from the body of the Church? Irenæus (ſaith Euſebius) did fitly exhort Pope Victor, that he ſhould not cut off all the Churches of God which held this ancient Tradition. And Ruffinus tranſlating and envenoming Euſebius ſaith; He queſtioned Victor, that he had not done well in cutting off from the Body of Unity ſo many and ſo great Churches of God. And in truth, how could St. Irenæus have reprehended the Pope for want of power; he that cites:

To

To the Roman Church, becauſe of a more powerful principality; (that is to ſay) as above appeareth, (b) becauſe of a Principality more powerful than the Temporal: or (as we have expounded otherwhere) becauſe of a more powerful Original (i) It is neceſſary that every Church ſhould agree? And (k) therefore alſo St. Irenæus alledgeth not to Pope Victor, the example of him, and of the other Biſhops of the Gauls aſſembled in a Council holden expreſly for this effect, who had not excommunicated the Aſians: nor the example of Narciſſus Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and of the Biſhops of Paleſtina aſſembled in another Council, holden expreſly for the ſame effect, who had not excommunicated them; nor the example of Palmas, and of the other Biſhops of Pontus aſſembled in the ſame manner, and for the ſame cauſe in the Region of Pontus, who had not excommunicated them; but only alledges to him the example of the Popes his Predeceſſors: The Prelates (ſaith he) who have preſided before Soter in the Church where thou preſideſt, Aniſius, Pius, Hyginus, Teleſphorus, and Sixtus, have not obſerved this cuſtom, &c. and nevertheleſs none of thoſe that obſerved it, have been excommunicated. And yet, O admirable providence of God, the (l) ſucceſs of the after-ages ſhewed, that even in the uſe of his power, the Popes proceeding was juſt. For after the death of Victor, the Councils of Nicea,, of Conſtantinople, and of Epheſus, excommunicated again thoſe that held the ſame cuſtom with the Provinces, that the Pope had excommunicated, and placed them in the Catalogue of Hereticks, under the titles of Hereticks Quarto-decumans.

But to this inſtance Calvins Sect do annex two new Obſervations; the firſt, that the Pope having threatned the Biſhops of Aſia, to excommunicate them, Polycrates the Biſhop of Epheſus and Metropolitan of Aſia, deſpiſed the Popes threats, as it appears by the anſwer of the ſame Polycrates to Pope Victor, which is inſerted in the Writings of Euſebius, and of St. Jerom, and which Jerom ſeemeth to approve, when he ſaith, he reports it to ſhew the ſpirit and authority of the man. And the ſecond, that when the Pope pronounced anciently his Excommunications, he did no other thing but ſeparate himſelf from the Communion of thoſe that he excommunicated, and did not thereby ſeparate them from the univerſal Communion of the Church. To the firſt then we ſay, that ſo far is this Epiſtle of Polycrates from abating and diminiſhing the Popes Authority, that contrariwiſe it greatly magnifies and exalts it. For although Polycrates blinded with the love of the cuſtom of his Nation, which he believed to be grounded upon the Word of God, who had aſſigned the fourteenth of the Month of March, for the obſervation of the Paſche, and upon the example of St. John's Tradition maintains it obſtinately; Nevertheleſs, this that he anſwers, ſpeaking in his own Name, and in the name of the Council of the Biſhops of Aſia, to whom he preſided; I fear not thoſe that threaten us; for my Elders have ſaid, It is better to obey God than man: Doth it not ſhew, that had it not been, that he believed the Pope's threat, was againſt the expreſs Word of God, there had been cauſe to fear it, and he had been obliged to obey him; for (m) who knows not, that this anſwer, It is better to obey God than men, is not to be made but to thoſe whom we were obliged to obey, if their commandments were not contrary to the Commandments of God; And that he adds, that he had called the Biſhops of Aſia, to a National Council, being (n) ſummoned to it by the Pope; doth it not inſinuate, that the other Councils whereof Euſebius ſpeaks, that were holden about this matter, through all the Provinces of the earth, and particularly that of Paleſtina, which if you believe the act that Beda ſaid came to his hands, Theophilus Archbiſhop of Ceſarea had called by the authority of Victor, were holden at the inſtance of the Pope, and conſequently, that the Pope was the firſt mover of the Univerſal Church? And that the Councils of Nicea, of Conſtantinople, of Epheſus, embraced the Cenſure of Victor, and excommunicated thoſe that obſerved the cuſtom of (o) Polycrates that was deceived, in believing that the Popes commandment, was againſt Gods Commandment? And that St. Jerom himſelf celebrates the Paſchal Homilies of Theophilus Patriarch of Alexandria, which followed the Order of Nicea concerning the Paſche; doth doth it not juſtifie, that when St. Jerom ſaith, That he reports the Epiſtle of Polycrates, to ſhew the ſpirit, and authority of the man, he intends by authority, not authority of right, but of fact; that is to ſay, the credit that Polycrates had amongſt the Aſians, and other Quarto decimans?

Theſe are the Cardinal's words, the moſt material and conſiderable paſſages whereof to ſave the trouble of repetition, I have noted with Letters of reference: whereunto my anſwers noted reſpectively with the ſame Letters foliow now in order.

(a) If Euſebius were an Arrian Author, it is nothing to the purpoſe; what he writes there is no Arrianiſm, nor any thing towards it. Never any error was imputed to the Arrians for denying the authority or the infallibility of the Biſhop or Church of Rome. Beſides, what Euſebius ſays, he ſays out of Irenæus: Neither doth or can the Cardinal deny the ſtory to be true, and therefore he goes about by indirect Arts to foil it, and caſt a blur upon it. Laſtly, whenſoever Euſebius ſays any thing, which the Cardinal thinks for the advantage of his ſide, he cites him, and then he is no Arrian: or at leaſt he would not take that for an anſwer to the Arguments he draws out of him.

(b) That Ruffinus was enemy to the Roman Church, is ſaid, but not proved, neither can it be.

(c) Euſebius ſays the ſame alſo of cæteri omnes Epiſcopi, all the other Biſhops, That they adviſed Victor to keep thoſe things that belonged to peace and unity, and that they ſharply reprehended Victor for having done otherwiſe.

(d) This is ſaid, but no offer made of any proof of it: The Cardinal thinks we muſt take every thing upon his word. They to whom the Tradition was delivered, Polycrates and the Aſian Biſhops knew no ſuch matter, nay, profeſſed the contrary. And who is more likely to know the Truth, they who lived within two ages of the fountain of it, or the Cardinal who lived ſixteen ages after it?

(e) How can it make againſt thoſe that object it: ſeeing it is evident from Irenæus his Reprehenſion, that he thought Victor and the Roman Church, no infallible nor ſufficient Judge, of what was neceſſary to be believed and done, what not: what was univerſal Tradition, what not: what was a ſufficient ground of Excommunication, and what not: and conſequently, that there was no ſuch neceſſity as is pretended, that all other Churches ſhould in matters of faith, conform themſelves to the Church of Rome?

(f) This is to ſuppoſe, that Excommunication is an Act, or Argument, or ſign of power and Authority in the party excommunicating, over the party excommunicated; whereas it is undeniably evident out of the Church-Story, that it was often uſed by Equals upon equals, and by Inferiours upon Superiours, if the Equals or Inferiours thought their Equals or Superiours did any thing which deſerved it.

(g) And what is this but to confeſs, that they thought that a ſmall cauſe of Excommunication and unſufficient, which Victor and his adherents thought great and ſufficient; And conſequently, that Victor and his Part declared that to be a matter of faith and of neceſſity, which they thought not ſo; And where was then their conformity?

(h) True, you have ſo expounded it, but not proved nor offered any proof of your exception. This alſo we muſt take upon your Authority. Irenæus ſpeaks not one Word of any other power to which he compares, or before which he preſers, the power of the Roman Church. And it is evident out of the Council of Chalcedon; * That all the Principality which it had, was given it (not by God, but) by the Church, in regard it was ſeated in the Imperial City, Whereupon, when afterwards Conſtantinople was the Imperial City, they decreed that that Church ſhould have equal Priviledges and Dignity and Prehemincnce with the Church of Rome. All the Fathers agreed in this Decree, ſaving only the Legats of the Biſhop of Rome: ſhewing plainly, that they never thought of any Supremacy given the Bishops of Rome by God, or grounded upon Scripture, but only by the Church, and therefore alterable at the Churches pleasure.

(i) This is falsely translated, Convenire ad Romanam Ecclesiam, every body knows, signifies no more but to resort or come to the Roman Church: which then there was a necessity that men should do, because that the affairs of the Empire were transacted in that place. But yet Irenæus says not so of every Church simply, which had not been true, but only of the Adjacent Churches: for so he expounds himself in saying, To this Church it is necessary that every Church, that is, all the faithful, round about should resort. With much more reason therefore we return the Argument thus. Had Irenæus thought that all Churches must of necessity agree with the Roman, how could he and all other Bishops have then pronounced, that to be no matter of Faith, no sufficient ground of Excommunication, which Victor and his adherents thought to be so? And how then could they have reprehended Victor so much, for the ill use of his power, as Cardinal Perron confesses they did; seeing, if that was true which is pretended, in this also as well as other things, it was necessary for them to agree with the Church of Rome?

Some there are that say, but more wittily than truly, that all Cardinal Bellarmines works, are so consonant to themselves as if he had written them in two hours. Had Cardinal Perron wrote his Book in two hours, sure he would not have done that here in the middle of the Book, which he condemns in the beginning of it. For here he urgeth a Consequence, drawn from the mistaken words of Irenæus against his lively and actual practice: which Proceeding, there he justly condemns of evident injustice. His words are *, For who knows not that it is too great an injustice to alledge consequences from passages, and even those ill interpreted and misunderstood, and in whose Illation there is always some Paralogism hid against the express words, and the lively and actual practice of the same Fathers from whom they are collected: and that it may be good, to take the Fathers for Adversaries, and to accuse them for want of sense or memory: but not to take them for Judges, and to submit themselves to the observation of what they have believed and practised.

* In his Letter to Casaubon, towards the end.

(k) This is nothing to the purpose: he might chuse these examples, not as of greater force and authority in themselves, but as fitter to be imployed against Victor, as domestick examples are fitter and more effectual than forein: and for his omitting to press him with his own example and others, to what purpose had it been to use them, seeing their Letters sent to Victor from all parts, wherein they reprehend his presumption, shewed him sufficiently, that their example was against him. But besides, he that reads Irenæus his Letter, shall see, that in the matter of the Lent-Fast, and the great variety about the celebration of it, which he parallels with this of Easter, he presseth Victor with the example of himself and others, not Bishops of Rome; Both they (saith he, speaking of other Bishops) notwithstanding this difference, retained peace among themselves; and we also among ourselves retain it; inferring from his example, that Victor also ought to do so.

(l) If the Pope's proceeding was just, then the Churches of Asia were indeed, and in the sight of God excommunicate, and out of the state of Salvation: which Irenæus, and all the other ancient Bishops never thought. And if they were so, why do you account them Saints and Martyrs? But the truth is, that these Councils did no way shew the Pope's proceedings just, but rather the contrary. For though they setled an uniformity in this matter, yet they setled it as a matter formerly indifferent, and not as a matter of faith or necessity, as it is evident out of * Athanasius; and consequently, they rather declare Victor's proceeding unjust, who excommunicated so many Churches, for differing from him in an indifferent matter.

* In ep. ad Epiſcopos in Africa: Where he clearly shews that this question was not a question of faith: By saying, The Council of Nice was celebrated, by occasion of the Arrian Heresie, and the difference about Easter. Insomuch as they in Syria and Cilicia and Mesopotamia, did differ herein from us, and kept this Feast on the same day with the Jews: But thanks be to God, an agreement was made, as concerning the Faith, so also concerning this holy Feast.

(m) It

(m) It seems then Polycrates might be a Saint and a Martyr, and yet think the commands of the Roman Church, enjoyed upon pain of Damnation, contrary to the Commandments of God. Besides, St. Peter himself, the head of the Church, the Vicar of Christ (as you pretend) made this very answer to the High Priest; yet I hope, you will not say, he was his inferiour and obliged to obey him. Lastly, who sees not, that when the Pope commands us any thing unjust, as to communicate Lay-men in one kind, to use the Latine Service, &c. we may very fitly say to him, It is better to obey God than men, and yet never think of any authority he hath over us?

(n) Between requesting and summoning, methinks, there should be some difference; and Polycrates says no more, but he was requested by the Church of Rome to call them, and did so. Here then (as very often) the Cardinal is fain to help the Dice with a false Translation; and, his pretence being false, every one must see that that which he pretends to be insinuated by it, is clearly inconsequent.

(o) Polycrates was deceived, if he believed it to be against Gods Commandment, and the Pope deceived as much, in thinking it to be Gods Commandment, for it was neither one nor the other, but an indifferent matter, wherein God had not interposed his Authority. Neither did the Council of Nice embrace the Censure of Victor. by acknowledging his Excommunication to be just and well grounded, for which the Cardinal neither doth pretend, nor can produce any proof, any way comparable to the fore-alledged words of Athanasius testifying the contrary; though peradventure, having setled the observation, and reduced it to an uniformity, they might excommunicate those who afterward should trouble the Churches peace for an indifferent matter. And thus much for Irenæus.

31. I come now to St. Austin, and to the first place out of him, where he seems to say, that the Succession in the See of Peter, was the Rock which our Saviour meant when he said, Upon this Rock, &c. I answer, first, we have no reason to be confident of the truth hereof, because St. Austin himself was not, but retracts it as uncertain, and leaves to the Reader whether he will think that, or another more probable, Retr. l. 1. c. 26. Secondly, What he says of the Succession in the Roman Church in this place, he says it elsewhere, in all the Successions in all other Apostolick Churches. Thirdly, that as in this place he urgeth the Donatists with separation from the Roman Church, an Argument of their Error: So elsewhere he presseth them with their Separation from other Apostolick Churches, nay, more from these than from that, because in Rome the Donatists had a Bishop though not a perpetual Succession of them; but in other Apostolick Churches they wanted both. These scattered men (saith he of the Donatists, Epist. 165.) read in the holy Books the Churches to which the Apostles wrote, and have no Bishop in them: But what is more perverse and mad, than to the Lectors reading these Epistles to say, Peace with you, and to separate from the peace of these Churches, to which these Epistles were written? So Optatus, having done you (as it might seem, great service) in upbraiding the Donatists as Schismaticks, because they had not Communion with the Church of Rome, overthrows and undoes it all again, and as it were with a Spunge wipes out all that he hath said for you, by adding after that they were Schismaticks, because They had not the fellowship of Communion with the seven Churches of Asia, to which St. John writes: whereof he pronounces confidently, (though I know not upon what ground) Extra septem Ecclesias quicquid foris est, alienum est. Now, I pray tell me, do you esteem the Authority of these Fathers a sufficient assurance, that separation from these other Apostolick Churches, was a Certain mark of Heresie, or not? If so, then your Church hath been for many Ages Heretical. If not, How is their authority a greater Argument for the Roman, than for the other Churches? If you say, they conceived separation from these Churches a note of Schism, only when they were united to the Roman: ſo alſo they might conceive of the Roman, only when it was united to them. If you ſay, they urged this only as a probable, and not as a certain Argument, ſo alſo they might do that. In a word, whatſoever anſwer you can deviſe to ſhew, that theſe Fathers made not ſeparation from theſe other Churches a mark of Hereſie, apply that to your own Argument, and it will be ſatisfied.

32. The other place is evidently impertinent to the preſent queſtion, nor is there in it any thing but this, That Cæcilian might condemn the multitude of his Adverſaries, becauſe thoſe that were united with him were more, and of more account than thoſe that were againſt him. Had he preferred the Roman Church alone, before Cæcilian's enemies, this had been little, but ſomething; but when other Countries from which the Goſpel came firſt into Africa, are joyned in this Patent, with the Church of Rome, how the can build any ſingular priviledge upon it I am yet to learn! Neither do I ſee what can be concluded from it, but that in the Roman Church was the Principality of an (a) Apoſtolick See, which no man doubts: or that the Roman Church, was not the Mother Church, becauſe the Goſpel came firſt into Africa, not from her, but from other Churches.

33. Thus you ſee his words make very little, or indeed nothing for you. But now his Action, which according to Cardinal Perron's rule, is much more to be regarded than his words, as not being ſo obnoxious to miſ-interpretation, I mean his famous oppoſition of three Biſhops of Rome, in Succeſſion, touching the great queſtion of Appeals, wherein he and the reſt of the African Biſhops proceeded ſo far in the firſt or ſecond Milevitan Council, as to (b) decree any African Excommunicate that ſhould appeal to any man out of Africk, and therein continued reſolute unto death: I ſay this famous action of his, makes clearly, and evidently, and infinitely againſt you. For, had Boniface, and the reſt of the African Biſhops, a great part whereof were Saints and Martyrs, believed as an Article of Faith, that Union and Conformity with the Doctrine of the Roman Church, in all things which ſhe held neceſſary, was a certain note of a good Catholick, and by God's command neceſſary to Salvation, how was it poſſible they ſhould have oppoſed it in this? Unleſs you will ſay they were all ſo fooliſh as to believe at once direct contradictions, viz. that conformity to the Roman Church was neceſſary in all points, and not neceſſary in this: or ſo horribly impious, as believing this Doctrine of the Roman Church true, and her power to receive Appeals derived from Divine Authority, notwithſtanding to oppoſe and condemn it, and to Anathematize all thoſe Africans, of what condition ſoever, that ſhould appeal unto it. I ſay, of what condition ſoever: For it is evident, that they concluded in their determination, Biſhops as well as the inferiour Clergy and Laity: And Cardinal Perron's pretence of the contrary, is a ſhameleſs falſhood, repugnant to the plain words of the (c) Remonſtrance of the African Biſhops to Celeſtine Biſhop of Rome.

a You do ill to tranſlate it the Principality of the See Apoſtolick, as if there were but one; whereas S. Auſtin preſently after ſpeaks of Apoſtolical Churches, in the plural number; and makes the Biſhops of them joynt-Commiſſioners for the judging of Eccleſiaſtical cauſes.

b The words of the Decree (which alſo Bellarm. l. 1. de Matrim. c. 17. aſſures us to be performed by St. Auſtin) are theſe, Si qui (Africani) ab Epiſcopis provocandum putaverint, non niſi ad Africana provocent Concilia, vel ad Primates provinciarum ſuarum. Ad tranſmarina autem qui putaverit appellandum, a nullo intra Africam in Communionem ſuſcipiatur. This Decree is by Gratian moſt impudently corrupted. For whereas the Fathers of that Council intended it particularly againſt the Church of Rome, he tells they forbad Appeals to all, excepting only the Church of Rome. (c) The words are theſe, Præfato debito ſalutationis officio, impendio deprecamur: ut Reſcripta ad nos veſtros hinc emanata, non facilius admittatis; nec à nobis excommunicatos ultra in Communionem velitis recipere, quia hoc etiam Niceno Concilio definitum facile advertere venerabilitas tua. Nam ſi de inferioribus Clericis vel Laicis videtur id præcaveri, quanto magis hoc de Epiſcopis voluit obſervari.

34. Your Allegation of Tertullian is a manifeſt conviction of your want of ſincerity: For you produce with great oſtentation what he ſays of the Church of Rome: but you and your fellows always conceal and diſſemble, that immediately before theſe words he attributes as much for point of direction to any other Apoſtolick Church, and that as he ſends them to Rome who lived near Italy, ſo thoſe near Achaia he ſends to Corinth, thoſe about Macedonia to Philippi and Theſſalonica, thoſe of Aſia to Epheſus. His words are, Go to now thou that that wilt better imploy thy curioſity in the buſineſs of thy ſalvation, run over the Apoſtolical Churches, wherein the Chairs of the Apoſtles are yet ſate upon in their places, wherein the Authentick Epiſtles are recited, ſounding out the voice, and repreſenting the face of every one! Is Achaia near thee? there thou haſt Corinth: If thou art not far from Macedonia, thou haſt Philippi, thou haſt Theſſalonica: If thou canſt go into Aſia, there thou haſt Epheſus: If thou be adjacent to Italy, thou haſt Rome, whoſe Authority is near at hand to us (in Africk:) A happy Church, into which the Apoſtles powred forth all their Doctrine together with their blood, &c. Now I pray you Sir tell me, if you can for bluſhing, why this place might not have been urged by a Corinthian, or Philippian, or Theſſalonian, or an Epheſian, to ſhew that in the judgment of Tertullian, ſeparation from any of their Churches is a certain mark of Hereſie, as juſtly and rationally as you alledge it to vindicate this priviledge to the Roman Church only; Certainly, if you will ſtand to Tertullian's judgment, you muſt either grant the Authority of the Roman Church (though at that time a good Topical Argument, and perhaps a better than any the Hereticks had, eſpecially in conjunction with other Apoſtolick Churches:) yet, I ſay, you muſt grant it perforce but a fallible Guide as well as that of Epheſus, and Theſſalonica, and Philippi and Corinth: or you muſt maintain the Authority of every one of theſe infallible, as well as the Roman. For though he make a Panegyrick of the Roman Church in particular, and of the reſt only in general, yet, as I have ſaid, for point of direction he makes them all equal, and therefore makes them (chuſe you whether) either all fallible, or all infallible: Now you will and muſt acknowlege that he never intended to attribute infallibility to the Churches of Epheſus, or Corinth: or, if he did, that, (as experience ſhews) he erred in doing ſo; and what can hinder, but then we may ſay alſo that he never intended to attribute infallibility to the Roman Church, or, if he did, that he erred in doing ſo.

35. From the ſaying of St. Baſil, certainly nothing can be gathered, but only that the Biſhop of Rome may diſcern between that which is counterfeit, and that which is lawful and pure, and without any diminution may preach the faith of our Anceſtors. Which certainly he might do, if ambition and covetouſneſs did not hinder him, or elſe I ſhould never condemn him for doing otherwiſe. But is there no difference between may and muſt? Between he may do ſo, and he cannot but do ſo? Or doth it follow, becauſe he may do ſo, therefore he always ſhall or will do ſo? In my opinion rather the contrary ſhould follow! For he that faith, you may do thus, implies according to the ordinary ſenſe of words, that if he will he may do otherwiſe. You certainly may, if you pleaſe, leave abuſing the world with ſuch Sophiſtry as this: But whether your will or no, of that I have no aſſurance.

36. Your next witneſs I would willingly have examined, but it ſeems you are unwilling he ſhould be found, otherwiſe you would have given us your direction where we might have him. Of that Maximianus who ſucceeded Neſtorius, I can find no ſuch thing in the Councils: Neither can I believe that any Patriarch of Conſtantinople twelve hundred years ago was ſo baſe a Paraſite of the See of Rome.

37. Your laſt witneſs, John of Conſtantinople, I confeſs, ſpeaks home, and advanceth the Roman See, even to heaven! But I fear it is, that his own may go up with it, which he there profeſſes to be all one See with the See of Rome; and therefore his Teſtimony, as ſpeaking in his own caſe, is not much to be regarded. But beſides, I have little reaſon to be confident that this Epiſtle is not a forgery; for certainly, Binius hath obtruded upon us many a hundred ſuch. This though written by a Grecian is not extant in Greek but in Latine only. Laſtly, it comes out of a ſuſpicious place, an old book of the Vatican Library: which Library the world knows to have been the Mint of very many Impoſtures.

38. Ad. §. 20,21,22,23. The ſum of your diſcourſe in the four next Sections, if it be pertinent to the queſtion, in agitation muſt be this: Want of ſucceſſion of Biſhops and Paſtors, holding always the ſame doctrine, and of the forms of ordaining Biſhops and Prieſts which are in uſe in the Roman Church, is a certain mark of Hereſie: but Proteſtants want all theſe things: Therefore they are Hereticks. To which I anſwer, that nothing but want of truth and holding error can make or prove any man or Church heretical. For if he be a true Ariſtotelian, or Platoniſt, or Pyrrhonian, or Epicurean, who holds the Doctrine of Ariſtotle, or Plato, or Pirrho, or Epicurus, although he cannot aſſign any that held it before him for many ages together; why ſhould I not be made a true and Orthodox Chriſtian, by believing all the Doctrine of Chriſt, though I connot derive my deſcent from a perpetual Succeſſion that believed it before me? By this reaſon you ſhould ſay as well, that no man can be a good Biſhop or Paſtor, or King or Magiſtrate, or Father, that ſucceeds a bad one. For, if I may conform my will and actions to the Commandments of God, why may I not embrace his Doctrine with my underſtanding, although my Predeceſſor did not ſo? You have above in this Chapter defined Faith, A free infallible, obſcure, ſupernatural aſſent to divine Truths, becauſe they are revealed by God and ſufficiently propounded: This definition is very phantaſtical; but for the preſent I will let it paſs, and deſire you to give me ſome piece or ſhadow of reaſon, why I may not do all this without a perpetual Succeſſion of Biſhops and Paſtors that have done ſo before me? You may judge as uncharitably, and ſpeak as maliciouſly of me, as your blind zeal to your ſuperſtition ſhall direct you, but certainly I know, (and with all your Sophiſtry you cannot make me doubt of what I know) that I do believe the Goſpel of Chriſt (as it is delivered in the undoubted books of Canonical Scripture) as verily as that it is now day, that I ſee the light, that I am now writing: and I believe it upon this Motive, becauſe I conceive it ſufficiently, abundantly, ſuperabundantly proved to be divine Revelation; and yet in this, I do not depend upon any Succeſſion of men that have always believed it without any mixture of Error; nay, I am fully perſuaded, there hath been no ſucceſſion, and yet do not find my ſelf any way weakened in my faith by the want of it, but ſo fully aſſured of the truth of it, that not only though your Devils at Lowden do tricks againſt it, but though an Angel from heaven ſhould gain-ſay it, or any part of it, I perſuade my ſelf that I ſhould not be moved. This I ſay, and this I am ſure is true: and if you will be ſo hyperſceptical as to perſuade me, that I am not ſure that I do believe all this, I deſire you to tell me, how are you ſure that you believe the Church of Rome? For, if a man may perſuade himſelf he doth believe what he doth not believe, then may you think you believe the Church of Rome, and yet not believe it. But if no man can err concerning what he believes, then you muſt give me leave to aſſure my ſelf that I do believe, and conſequently that any man may believe the foreſaid truths upon the foreſaid motives, without any dependance upon any ſucceſſion that hath believed it always. And as from your definition of Faith, ſo from your definition of Hereſie, this fancy may be refuted. For queſtionleſs no man can be an Heretick but he that holds an Hereſie, and an Hereſie you ſay is a voluntary error; therefore no man can be neceſſitated to be an Heretick whether he will or no, by want of ſuch a thing that is not in his power to have: But that there ſhould have been a perpetual Succeſſion of Believers in all points Orthodox, is not a thing which is in our own power; therefore our being or not being Hereticks depends not on it. Beſides, What is more certain, than that he may make a ſtraight line who hath a Rule to make it by, though never man in the world had made any before: and why then may not he that believes the Scripture to be the Word of God, and Rule of Faith, regulate his Faith by it, and conſequently believe aright, without much regarding what other men will do or have done? It is true indeed, there is a neceſſity that if God will have his Word believed, he by his providence muſt take order, that either by ſucceſſion of men, or by ſome other means natural or ſupernatural, it it be preſerved and delivered, and ſufficiently notified to be his Word; but that this ſhould be done by a Succeſſion of men that holds no error againſt it, certainly there is no more neceſſity, than that it ſhould be done by a Succeſſion of men that commit no ſin againſt it. For if men may preſerve the Records of a Law, and yet tranſgreſs it, certainly they may alſo preſerve directions for their Faith, and yet not follow them. I doubt not but Lawyers at the Bar do find by frequent experience, that many men preſerve and produce evidences, which being examined oft-times make againſt themſelves. This they do ignorantly, it being in their power to ſuppreſs, or perhaps to alter them. And why then ſhould any man conceive it ſtrange, that an erroneous and corrupted Church ſhould preſerve and deliver the Scriptures uncorrupted, when indeed for many reaſons which I have formerly alledged, it was impoſſible for them to corrupt them? Seeing therefore this is all the neceſſity that is pretended of a perpetual Succeſſion of men Orthodox in all points, certainly there is no neceſſity at all of any ſuch, neither can the want of it prove any man or any Church Heretical.

39. When therefore you have produced ſome proof of this, which was your Major in your former Syllogiſm, That want of Succeſſion is a certain mark of Hereſie, you ſhall then receive a full anſwer to your Minor. We ſhall then conſider whether your indelible Character be any reality, or whether it be a creature of your own making, a fancy of your own imagination? And if it be a thing, and not only a word, whether our Biſhops and Prieſts have it not as well as yours; and whether ſome mens perſuaſion that there is no ſuch thing, can hinder them from having it, or prove that they have it not if there be any ſuch thing! (Any more than a mans perſuaſion that he has not taken Phyſick or Poyſon, will make him not to have taken it if he has, or hinder the operation of it?) And whether Tertullian in the place quoted by you, ſpeak of a Prieſt made a Layman, by juſt depoſition or degradation, and not by a voluntary deſertion of his Order? And whether in the ſame place he ſet not ſome mark upon Hereticks that will agree to your Church? Whether all the Authority of our Biſhops in England before the Reformation was conferred on them by the Pope? And if it were, whether it were the Pope's right, or an uſurpation? If it were his right, Whether by Divine Law or Eccleſiaſtical? And, if by Eccleſiaſtical only, Whether he might poſſibly ſo abuſe his power, as to deſerve to loſe it? Whether de facto, he had done ſo? Whether, ſuppoſing he had deſerved to loſe it, thoſe that deprived him of it, had power to take it from him? or if not, Whether they had power to ſuſpend him from the uſe of it, until good caution were put in, and good aſſurance given, that, if he had it again, he would not abuſe it as he had formerly done? Whether in caſe they had done unlawfully that took his power from him, it may not, (things being now ſetled, and the preſent Government eſtabliſhed) be as unlawful to go about to reſtore it? Whether it be not a fallacy to conclude, Becauſe we believe the Pope hath no power in England, now when the King and State and Church hath deprived him upon juſt grounds of it, therefore we cannot believe that he had any before his deprivation? Whether, without Schiſm, a man may not withdraw obedience from an uſurped Authority commanding unlawful things? Whether the Roman Church might not give Authority to Biſhops and Prieſts to oppoſe her errors, as well as a King gives authority to a Judge to judge againſt him, if his cauſe be bad; as well as Trajan gave his Sword to his Præfect with this Commiſſion, that, If he governed well, he ſhould uſe it for him, if ill, againſt him. Whether the Roman Church gave not Authority to her Biſhops and Prieſts to preach againſt her corruptions in manners? And if ſo, Why not againſt her errors in Doctrine, if ſhe had any? Whether ſhe gave them not authority to preach the whole Goſpel of Chriſt, and conſequently againſt her Doctrine, if it ſhould contradict any part of the Goſpel of Chriſt? Whether it be not acknowledged lawful in the the Church of Rome, for any Lay-man or woman, that has ability, to perſuade others by word or writing ting from error, and unto truth? And why this liberty may not be practiſed againſt their Religion, if it be falſe; as well as for it, if it be true? Whether any man need any other commiſſion or vocation than that of a Chriſtian, to do a work of Charity? And whether it be not one of the greateſt works of Charity (if it be done after a peaceable manner, and without any unneceſſary diſturbance of order) to perſuade men out of a falſe unto a true way of eternal happineſs? Eſpecially, the Apoſtle having aſſured us, that he (whoſoever he is) who converteth a ſinner from the error of his way, ſhall ſave a ſoul from death, and ſhall hide a multitude of ſins? Whether the firſt Reformed Biſhops died all at once, ſo that there were not enough to Ordain others in the places that were vacant? Whether the Biſhops of England may not conſecrate a Metropolitan of England, as well as the Cardinals do the Pope? Whether the King or Queen of England, or they that have the Government in their hands, in the Minority of the Prince, may not lawfully commend one to them to be conſecrated, againſt whom there is no Canonical exception? Whether the Doctrine, that the King is Supreme Head of the Church of England, (as the Kings of Judah, and the firſt Chriſtian Emperours were of the Jewiſh and Chriſtian Church) be any new-found Doctrine? Whether it may not be true, that Biſhops being made Biſhops, have their authority immediately from Chriſt, though this or that man be not made Biſhop without the King's Authority; as well as you ſay, the Pope being Pope, has authority immediately from Chriſt, and yet this or that man cannot be made Pope without the authority of the Cardinals? Whether you do well to ſuppoſe, that Chriſtian Kings have no more authority in ordering the affairs of the Church, than the great Turk, or the Pagan Emperours? Whether the King may not give authority to a Biſhop to exerciſe his Function in ſome part of his Kingdom, and yet not be capable of doing it himſelf: as well as a Biſhop may give authority to a Phyſician, to practiſe Phyſick in his Dioceſs, which the Biſhop cannot do himſelf? Whether, if Nero the Emperour would have commanded St. Peter or St. Paul to preach the Goſpel of Chriſt, and to exerciſe the Office of a Biſhop of Rome, whether they would have queſtioned his Authority to do ſo? Whether there were any Law of God or man, that prohibited King JAMES to give Commiſſion to Biſhops, nay, to lay his Injunction upon them, to do any thing that is lawful? Whether a caſual irregularity may not be lawfully diſpenſed with? Whether the Pope's irregularities, if he ſhould chance to incur any, be indiſpenſable? And if not, who is he, or who are they, whom the Pope is ſo ſubject unto, that they may diſpenſe with him? Whether that be certain which you take for granted; That your Ordination imprints a character, and ours doth not? Whether the power of Conſecrating and Ordaining by impoſition of hands, may not reſide in the Biſhops, and be derived unto them, not from the King but God? And yet the King have authority to command them to apply this power to ſuch a fit perſon, whom he ſhall commend unto them: As well as if ſome Architects only had the faculty of Architecture, and had it immediately by infuſion from God himſelf, yet, if they were the King's Subjects, he wants not Authority to command them to build him a Palace for his uſe, or a Fortreſs, for his ſervice: Or, as the King of France pretends not to have power to make Prieſts himſelf, yet, I hope, you will not deny him power to command any of his Subjects that has this power, to Ordain any fit perſon Prieſt, whom he ſhall deſire to be Ordained? Whether it do not follow, that whenſoever the King commands an Houſe to be built, a Meſſage to be delivered, or a Murtherer to be executed, that all theſe things are preſently done without intervention of the Architect, Meſſenger, or Executioner: As well as, that they are ipſo facto Ordained and Conſecrated, who by the King's Authority are commended to the Biſhops to be Ordained and Conſecrated: Eſpecially, ſeeing the King will not deny, but that theſe Biſhops may refuſe to do what he requires to be done, lawfully if the perſon be unworthy; if worthy, unlawfully indeed; but yet de facto they may refuſe: and, in caſe they ſhould do ſo, whe-whether juſtly or unjuſtly; neither the King himſelf, nor any body elſe, would eſteem the perſon Biſhop upon the King's deſignation? Whether many Popes, though they were not conſecrated Biſhops by any temporal Prince, yet might not, or did not receive authority from the Emperour to exerciſe their Epiſcopal function in this or that place? And whether the Emperours had not authority, upon their deſert, to deprive them of their juriſdiction, by impriſonment or baniſhment? Whether Proteſtants do indeed pretend that their Reformation is univerſal? Whether in ſaying, the Donatiſts Sect was confined to Africa, you do not forget your ſelf, and contradict what you ſaid above, in §. 17. of this Chapter where you tell us, they had ſome of their Sect reſiding in Rome? Whether it be certain that none can admit of Biſhops willingly, but thoſe that hold them of Divine Inſtitution? Whether they may not be willing to have them, conceiving that way of Government the beſt, though not abſolutely neceſſary? Whether all thoſe Proteſtants that conceive the diſtinction between Prieſts and Biſhops not to be of Divine Inſtitution, be Schiſmatical and Heretical for thinking ſo? Whether your form of Ordaining Biſhops and Prieſts, be eſſential to the conſtitution of a true Church? Whether the forms of the Church of England differ eſſentially from your forms? Whether in ſaying, that the true Church cannot ſubſiſt without undoubted true Biſhops and Prieſts, you have not overthrown the truth of your own Church: wherein I have proved it plainly impoſſible, that any man ſhould be ſo much as morally certain, either of his own Prieſthood or any other mans? Laſtly, Whether any one kind of theſe external Forms and Orders, and Government, be ſo neceſſary to the being of a Church, but that they may be diverſe in diverſe places, and that a good and peaceable Chriſtian may and ought to ſubmit himſelf to the Government of the place where he lives, whatſoever it be? All theſe queſtions will be neceſſary to be diſcuſſed for the clearing of the truth of the Minor Propoſition of your former Syllogiſm, and your proofs of it: and I will promiſe to debate them fairly with you, if firſt you will bring ſome better proof of the Major, That want of Succeſſion is a certain note of Hereſie, which for the preſent remains both unproved and unprobable.

40. Ad §. 23. The Fathers, you ſay, aſſign Succeſſion as one mark of the true Church: I confeſs they did urge Tradition as an Argument of the truth of their Doctrine, and of the falſhood of the contrary; and thus far they agree with you. But now ſee the difference: They urged it not againſt all Hereticks that ever ſhould be, but againſt them who rejected a great part of the Scripture, for no other reaſon but becauſe it was repugnant to their Doctrine, and corrupted other parts with their additions and detractions, and perverted the remainder with divers abſurd interpretations: So Tertullian not a leaf before the words by you cited. Nay, they urged it againſt them who when they were confuted out of Scripture, fell to accuſe the Scriptures themſelves as if they were not right, and came not from good authority, as if they were various one from another, and as if truth could not be found out of them, by thoſe who know not Tradition, for that it was not delivered in writing, (they did mean wholly) but by word of mouth: And that thereupon Paul alſo ſaid, we ſpeak wiſdom amongſt the perfect. So Irenæus in the very next Chapter before that which you alledge. Againſt theſe men being thus neceſſitated to do ſo, they did urge Tradition, but what, or whoſe Tradition was it? Certainly no other but the joynt Tradition of all the Apoſtolick Churches with one mouth and one voice teaching the ſame Doctrine. Or if, for brevity ſake, they produce the Tradition of any one Church, yet is it apparent, that, that one was then in conjunction with all the reſt; Irenæus, Tertullian, Origen teſtifie as much in the words cited, and St. Auſtin, in the place before alledged by me. This Tradition they did urge againſt theſe men, and in a time, in compariſon of ours, almoſt contiguous to the Apoſtles: So near, that one of them, Irenæus, was Scholar to one who was Scholar to St. John the Apoſtle. Tertullian and Origen were not an an Age removed from him: and the last of them all, little more than an Age from them. Yet after all this they urged it not as a Demonstration, but only as a very probable Argument, far greater than any their Adversaries could oppose against it. So Tertullian in the place above quoted §. 5. How is it likely that so many and so great Churches should err in one faith (it should be, should have erred into one Faith.) And this was the condition of this Argument as the Fathers urged it. Now if you having to deal with us, who question no Book of Scripture, which was not anciently questioned by some whom you your selves esteem good Catholicks; nay, who refuse not to be tried by your own Canon, and your own Translation, who in interpreting Scriptures are content to allow of all those rules which you propose, only except that we will not allow you to be our Judges; if you will come fifteen hundred years after the Apostles, a fair time for the purest Church to gather much dross and corruption, and for the mystery of iniquity to bring its work to some perfection, which in the Apostles time began to work; If (I say) you will come thus long after, and urge us with the single Tradition of one of these Churches, being now Catholick to it self alone, and Heretical to all the rest: nay, not only with her ancient and original Traditions, but also with her post-nate introduced Definitions, and these as we pretend repugnant to Scripture, and ancient Tradition, and all this to decline an indifferent trial by Scripture, under pretence (wherein also you agree with the calumny of the old Hereticks) that all necessary truth cannot be found in them without recourse to Tradition: If, I say, notwithstanding all these differences, you will still be urging us with this Argument, as the very same, and of the same force with that wherewith the forementioned Fathers urg'd the old Hereticks: certainly this must needs proceed from a confidence you have, not only that we have no School Divinity, nor Metaphysicks, but no Logick or common sense; that we are but pictures of men, and have the definition of rational creatures given us in vain.

41. But now suppose I should be liberal to you, and grant what you cannot prove, that the Fathers make Succession a certain and perpetual mark of the true Church; I beseech you what will come of it? What, that want of Succession is a certain sign of an Heretical company? Truly, if you say so, either you want Logick, which is a certain sign of an ill disputer: or are not pleased to use it, which is a worse. For Speech is a certain sign of a living man, yet want of Speech is no sure argument that he is dead: for he may be dumb and yet living still, and we may have other evident tokens that he is so, as eating, drinking, breathing, moving: So, though the constant and universal delivery of any Doctrine by the Apostolick Churches, ever since the Apostles, be a very great argument of the truth of it, yet there is no certainty, but that truth, even Divine truth, may, through mens wickedness, be contracted from its universality, and interrupted in its perpetuity, and so lose this argument, and yet not want others to justifie and support it self. For it may be one of those Principles which God hath written in all mens hearts, or a conclusion evidently arising from them: It may be either contained in Scripture in express terms, or deducible from it by apparent consequence. If therefore you intend to prove want of a perpetual Succession of Professors a certain note of Heresie, you must not content your self to shew, that having it, is one sign of truth; but you must shew it to be the only sign of it, and inseparable from it. But this, if you be well advised, you will never undertake; First, because it is an impossible attempt: and then because, if you do it, you will marr all: for by proving this an inseparable sign of Catholick Doctrine, you will prove your own, which apparently wants it in many points, not to be Catholick. For whereas you say this Succession requires two things, agreement with the Apostles Doctrine, and an uninterrupted conveyance of it down to them that challenge it: It will be proved against you, that you fail in both points; and that some things wherein you agree with the Apostles have not been held always, as, your condemning the Doctrine of the Chiliasts, and holding the Eucharistist not necessary for Infants; and that in many other things you agree not with them, nor with the Church for many Ages after. For example; In mutilation of the Communion, in having your Service in such a Language as the Assistants generally understand not, your offering to Saints, your picturing of God, your worshipping of Pictures.

42. Ad §. 24. As for Universality of place, the want whereof you object to Protestants as a mark of Heresie: You have not set down clearly and univocally what you mean by it, Whether universality of fact, or of right: and if of fact, Whether absolute or comparative: and if comparative, Whether of the Church in comparison of any other Religion, or only of Heretical Christians: or, if in comparison of these, whether in comparison of all other Sects conjoyned, or in comparison only of any One of them. Nor have you proved it by any good Argument in any sense to be a certain mark of Heresie: For those places of St. Austin do not deserve the name. And truly in my judgment you have done advisedly in proving it no better. For as for Universality of right, or a right to Universality, all Religions claim it, but only the true has it; and which has it cannot be determined, unless it be first determined which is the true. An absolute Universality and diffusion through all the world if you should pretend to, all the world would laugh at you: if you should contend for latitude with any one Religion, Mahumetism would carry the victory from you. If you should oppose your selves against all other Christians besides you, it is certain you would be cast in this suit also. If lastly, being hard driven you should please your selves with being more than any one Sect of Christians, it would presently be replied, that it is uncertain whether now you are so, but most certain that the time has been when you have not been so. Then when the (a) whole world wondred that it was become Arrian: then when Athanasius opposed the world, and the world Athanasius: then when (b) your Liberius having the contemptible paucity of his adherents objected to him as a note of error, answered for himself, There was a time when there were but three opposed the decree of the King, and yet those three were in the right, and the rest in the wrong: then when the Professors of error surpassed the number of the Professors of truth in proportion, as the sands of the Sea, do the Stars of the Heaven. (As (c) St. Austin acknowledgeth:) then when (d) Vincentius confesseth, that the poyson of the Arrians had contaminated, not now some certain portion, but almost the whole world: then when the Author of Nazianzen's life testifies, That (e) the Heresie of Arrius, had possessed in a manner the whole extent of the world; and when Nazianzen found cause to cry out, (f) Where are they who reproach us with our poverty, who define the Church by the multitude, and despise the little flock? They have the People, but we the Faith. And lastly, when Athanasius was so overborn with Sholes and Floods of Arrians, that he was enforced to write a Treatise on purpose (g) against those, who judge of the truth only by plurality of adherents. So that if you had proved want of Universality, even thus restrained, to be an infallible note of Heresie, there would have been no remedy but you must have confessed, that the time was when you were Hereticks. And besides, I see not how you would have avoided this great inconvenience, of laying grounds and storing up arguments for Antichrist, against he comes, by which he may prove his Company the true Church. For it is evident out of Scripture, and confessed by you, that though his time be not long, his dominion shall be very large; and that the true Church shall be then, the woman driven into the wilderness.

43. Ad §. 25, & 26. The remainder of this Chapter if I would deal strictly with you, I might let pass as impertinent to the question now disputed: For whereas your argument promises that this whole Chapter shall be imployed in proving Luther and the Protestants guilty of Heresie, here you desert this question, and strike out into another accusation of them, that their faith even of the truth they hold, is not indeed true faith. But put case it were not, does it follow, that the having of this faith makes them Hereticks, or that they are therefore Hereticks becauſe they have this faith? Ariſtotle believed there were Intelligences which moved the Spheres; he believed this with an humane perſuaſion, and not with a certain, obſcure, prudent, ſupernatural faith: and will you make Ariſtotle an Heretick, becauſe he believed ſo? You believe there was ſuch a man as Julius Cæſar, that there is ſuch a City as Conſtantinople, and your belief hereof has not theſe qualifications which you require to divine faith: And will you be content that this ſhall paſs for a ſufficient proof that you are an Heretick? Hereſie you have defined above to be a voluntary error: but he that believes truth, though his belief be not qualified according to your mind, yet ſure in believing true he believes no error; and from hence according to ordinary Logich methinks it ſhould follow, that ſuch a man for doing ſo, cannot be guilty of Hereſie.

44. But you will ſay, though he be not guilty of Hereſie for believing theſe truths, yet if his faith be not ſaving, to what purpoſe will it be? Truly very little to the purpoſe of Salvation, as little as it is to your proving Proteſtants guilty of Hereſie. But out of our wonted indulgence, let us pardon this fault alſo, and do you the favour to hear what you can ſay, to beget this faith in us, that indeed we have no faith, or at leaſt not ſuch a faith, without which it is impoſſible to pleaſe God. Your diſcourſe upon this Point you have, I know not upon what policy, disjoyned, and given us the grounds of it in the beginning of the Chapter, and the ſuperſtructure here in the end. Them I have already examined, and for a great part of them, proved them vain and deceitful. I have ſhewed by many certain arguments, that though the ſubject matter of our faith be in it ſelf moſt certain, yet that abſolute certainty of adherence is not required to the eſſence of faith, no nor to make it acceptable with God, but that to both theſe effects it is ſufficient, if it be firm enough to produce Obedience and Charity. I have ſhewed beſides, that Prudence is rather commendable in faith, than intrinſecal and eſſential to it. So that whatſoever is here ſaid, to prove the faith of Proteſtants no faith, for want of certainty, or for want of prudence, is already anſwered before it is objected: for the foundation being deſtroyed, the building cannot ſtand. Yet for the fuller refutation of all pretences, I will here make good, that to prove our faith deſtitute of theſe qualifications, you have produced but vain Sophiſms, and for the moſt part, ſuch arguments as return moſt violently upon your ſelves. Thus then you ſay.

45. Firſt, that their belief wanteth certainty, I prove, becauſe they denying the univerſal infallibility of the Church, can have no certain ground to know what objects are revealed or teſtified by God. But if there be no other ground of certainty but your Churches infallibity, upon what certain ground do you know that your Church is infallible? Upon what certain ground do you know all thoſe things which muſt be known before you can know that your Church is infallible? As, that there is a God: that God hath promiſed his aſſiſtance to your Church in all her Decrees: that the Scripture wherein this promiſe is extant, is the Word of God: that thoſe Texts of Scripture which you alledge for your Infallibility, are incorrupted: that that which you pretend is the true ſenſe of them? When you have produced certain grounds for all theſe things, I doubt not but it will appear that we alſo may have grounds certain enough to believe our whole Religion, which is nothing elſe but the Bible, without dependance on the Churches infallibility. Suppoſe you ſhould meet with a man that, for the preſent, believes neither Church nor Scripture, nor God, but is ready and willing to believe them all, if you can ſhew ſome ſufficient grounds to build his faith upon; will you tell ſuch a man, There are no certain grounds, by which he may be converted; or there are? If you ſay the firſt, you make all Religion an uncertain thing; If the ſecond, then either you muſt ridiculouſly perſuade, that your Church is infallible becauſe it is infallible, or elſe that there are other certain grounds beſides your Churches infallibility.

46. But

46. But you proceed, and tell us, that Holy Scripture is in it ſelf moſt true and infallible, but without the direction and declaration of the Church, we can neither have certain means to know what Scripture is Canonical, nor what Tranſlations be faithful, nor what is the true meaning of Scripture. Anſ. But all theſe things muſt be known, before we can know the direction of your Church to be infallible, for no other proof of it can be pretended, but only ſome Texts of Canonical Scripture, truly interpreted: Therefore either you are miſtaken, in thinking there is no other means to know theſe things, but your Churches infallible direction; or we are excluded from all means of knowing her direction to be infallible.

47. But Proteſtants, though, as you ſuppoſe, they are perſuaded their own opinions are true, and that they have uſed ſuch means as are wont to be preſcribed for underſtanding the Scripture, as Prayer, conferring of Texts, &c. yet by their diſagreement ſhew, that ſome of them are deceived. Now they hold all the Articles of their faith, upon this only ground of Scripture, interpreted by theſe rules, and therefore it is clear, that the ground of their faith is infallible in no point at all. The firſt of theſe ſuppoſitions muſt needs be true, but the ſecond is apparently falſe: I mean, that every Proteſtant is perſuaded that he hath uſed thoſe means which are preſcribed for underſtanding of Scripture. But that which you collect from theſe ſuppoſitions is clearly inconſequent: and by as good Logick you might conclude, that Logick and Geometry ſtand upon no certain grounds, that the Rules of the one, and the Principles of the other do ſometimes fail, becauſe the diſagreement of Logicians and Geometricians ſhew, that ſome of them are deceived. Might not a Jew conclude as well againſt all Chriſtians, that they have no certain ground whereon to relie in their underſtanding of Scripture, becauſe their diſagreements ſhew that ſome are deceived; becauſe ſome deduce from it the infallibility of a Church, and others no ſuch matter. So likewiſe a Turk might uſe the ſame argument againſt both Jews and Chriſtians, and an Atheiſt againſt all Religions, and a Sceptick againſt all Reaſon. Might not one ſay, Mens diſagreement in Religion, ſhews that there is no certainty in any; and the other, that experience of their contradictions teacheth, that the rules of reaſon do ſometimes fail? Do not you ſee and feel how void of reaſon and how full of impiety your ſophiſtry is? And how, tranſported with zeal againſt Proteſtants, you urge Arguments againſt them, which if they could not be anſwered, would overthrow not only your own, but all Religion? But God be thanked, the anſwer is eaſie and obvious! For let men but remember not to impute the faults of men but only to men, and then it will eaſily appear, that there may be ſufficient certainty in Reaſon, in Religion, in the Rules of interpreting Scripture, though men through their faults, take not care to make uſe of them, and ſo run into divers errors and diſſentions.

48. But Proteſtants cannot determine what Points be fundamental, and therefore muſt remain uncertain, whether or no they be not in ſome fundamental error. Anſw. By like reaſon ſince you acknowledge, that every error in Points defined and declared by your Church deſtroys the ſubſtance of Faith, and yet cannot determine what Points be defined, it followeth that you muſt remain uncertain, whether or no you be not in ſome fundamental error, and ſo want the ſubſtance of faith, without which there can be no hope of ſalvation. Now that you are uncertain what Points are defined appears from your own words, c. 4. §. 3. of your ſecond Part, where, ſay you, no leſs impertinent is your diſcourſe concerning the difficulty to know what is Hereſie: For we grant that it is not always eaſie to determine in particular occaſions, whether this or that Doctrine be ſuch, becauſe it may be doubtful, whether it be againſt any Scripture, or divine Tradition, or definition of the Church. Neither were it difficult to extort from you this confeſſion, by naming divers Points, which ſome of you ſay are defined, others the contrary. And others hang in ſuſpence, and know not what to determine. But this I have done elſewhere: as alſo I have ſhewed plainly enough that though we cannot perhaps ſay in particular, thus much, and no more is fundamental, yet believing all the Bible, we are certain enough that we believe all that is fundamental. As he that, in a Receit, takes twenty ingredients, whereof ten only are neceſſary, though he know not which thoſe ten are, yet taking the whole twenty he is ſure enough that he has taken all that are neceſſary.

49. Ad §. 29. But that he who erreth againſt any one revealed truth loſeth all Divine Faith, is a very true Doctrine delivered by Catholick Divines, (you mean your own) with ſo general a conſent, that the contrary is wont to be cenſured as temerarious: Now certainly ſome Proteſtants muſt do ſo, becauſe they hold contradictorious which cannot all be true: Therefore ſome of them at leaſt, have no divine faith. Anſ. I paſs by your weakneſs, in urging Proteſtants with the authority of your Divines, which yet in you might very deſervedly be cenſured. For when Dr. Potter, to ſhew the many actual diſſentions between the Romiſh Doctors, notwithſtanding their brags of potential Unity, refers to Pappus, who has collected out of Bellarmine their contradictions, and ſet them down in his own words to the number of 237. and to Flacius, de Sectis & Controverſiis Religionis Papiſticæ; you making the very ſame uſe of Mr. Brerely againſt Proteſtants, yet jeer and ſcorn Dr. Potter, as if he offered you for a proof, the bare authority of Pappus and Flacius, and tell him, which is all the Anſwer you vouchſafe him, It is pretty that he brings Pappus and Flacius, ſtat Hereticks, to prove your many contradictions: As if he had proved this with the bare authority, the bare judgment of theſe men, which ſure he does not, but with the formal words of Bellarmine faithfully collected by Pappus. And why then might we not ſay to you, Is it not pretty that you bring Brerely as ſtat an Heretick as Pappus or Flacius, to prove the contradictions of Proteſtants? Yet had he been ſo vain as to preſs you with the meer authority of Proteſtant Divines in any Point, methinks, for your own ſake, you ſhould have pardoned him, who here, and in many other places, urge us with the judgment of your Divines as with weighty Arguments. Yet if the authority of your Divines were even Canonical, certainly nothing could be concluded from it in this matter, there being not one of them, who delivers for true Doctrine this Poſition of yours, thus nakedly ſet down, That any error againſt any one revealed truth deſtroys all divine faith. For they all require, (not your ſelf excepted) that this truth muſt not only be revealed, but revealed publickly, and (all things conſidered) ſufficiently propounded to the erring Party, to be one of thoſe, which God under pain of damnation commands all men to believe. And therefore the contradiction of Proteſtants, (though this vain Doctrine of your Divines were ſuppoſed true, is but a weak Argument) That any of them have no divine Faith ſeeing you neither have, nor ever can prove, (without begging the Queſtion of your Churches infallibility) that the truths about which they differ, are of this quality and condition. But though out of courteſie we may ſuppoſe this doctrine true, yet we have no reaſon to grant it, nor to think it any thing but a vain and groundleſs fancy: and that this very weak and inartificial Argument, from the authority of your Divines, is the ſtrongeſt Pillar which it hath to ſupport it. Two reaſons you alledge for it out of Thomas Aquinas, the firſt whereof vainly ſuppoſeth againſt reaſon and experience, that by the commiſſion of any deadly ſin, the habit of Charity is quite extirpated. And for the ſecond, though you cry it up for an Achilles, and think, like the Gorgons head, it will turn us all into ſtone, and in confidence of it, inſult upon Doctor Potter, as if he durſt not come near it, yet in very truth have conſidered it well, I find it a ſerious, grave, prolix, and profound nothing. I could anſwer it in a word, by telling you, that it begs without all proof or colour of proof, the main queſtion between us, That the infallibility of your Church is either the formal motive, or rule, or a neceſſary condition of Faith: which you know we flatly deny, and therefore all that is built upon it has nothing but wind for a foundation. But to this anſwer I will add a large confutation of this vain vain fancy, out of one of the moſt rational and profound Doctors of your own Church, I mean Eſtius, who upon the third of the Sent. the 23. diſt. the 13. §. writes thus, It is diſputed (ſaith he) whether in him who believes ſome of the Articles of our Faith, and diſbelieves others, or perhaps ſome one, there be Faith properly ſo called in reſpect of that which he does believe? In which queſtion we muſt before all, carefully diſtinguiſh between thoſe, who retaining a general readineſs to believe whatſoever the Church believes, yet err by ignorance in ſome Doctrine of faith, becauſe it is not as yet ſufficiently declared to them that the Church does ſo believe; and thoſe who after ſufficient manifeſtation of the Churches Doctrine, do yet chuſe to diſſent from it, either by doubting of it, or affirming the contrary. For of the former the anſwer is caſie; but of theſe, that is, of Hereticks retaining ſome part of wholſom Doctrine, the queſtion is more difficult, and on both ſides by the Doctors probably diſputed. For that there is in them true faith of the Articles wherein they do not err, firſt experience ſeems to convince: For many at this day denying, for example ſake, Purgatory or Invocation of Saints, nevertheleſs firmly hold, as by divine revelation, That God is Three and One, that the Son of God was incarnate and ſuffered, and other like things. As anciently the Novatians, excepting their peculiar error, of denying reconciliation to thoſe that fell in perſecution, held other things in common with Catholicks: So that they aſſiſted them very much againſt the Arrians, as Socrates relates in his Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. Moreover the ſame is proved by the example of the Apoſtles, who in the time of Chriſt's Paſſion being ſcandalized, loſt their faith in him: as alſo, Chriſt after his Reſurrection upbraids them with their incredulity, and calls Thomas incredulous, for denying the Reſurrection. John 20. Whereupon St. Auſtin alſo in his Preface upon the 96 Pſalm ſaith, That after the Reſurrection of Chriſt, the faith of thoſe that fell was reſtored again. And yet we muſt not ſay, that the Apoſtles then loſt the faith of the Trinity, of the Creation of the world, of Eternal life, and ſuch like other Articles. Beſides, the Jews before Chriſts coming, held the faith of one God the Creator of Heaven and Earth: who although they loſt the true faith of the Meſſias by not receiving Chriſt; yet we cannot ſay, that they loſt the faith of one God, but ſtill retained this Article as firmly as they did before.

Add hereunto, that neither Jews nor Hereticks ſeem to lie, in ſaying, they believe either the Books of the Prophets, or the four Goſpels: it being apparent enough, that they acknowledge in them Divine Authority, though they hold not the true ſenſe of them, to which purpoſe is that in the Acts, Chap. 20. Believeſt thou the Prophets? I know that thou believeſt. Laſtly, it is manifeſt, that many gifts of God are found even in bad men, and ſuch as are out of the Church; therefore nothing hinders but that Jews and Hereticks, though they err in many things, yet in other things may be ſo divinely illuminated as to believe aright. So St. Auſtin ſeems to teach in his Book De Unico Baptiſmo contra Petilianum c. 3. in theſe words: When a Jew comes to us to be made a Chriſtian, we deſtroy not in him God's good things, but his own ill. That he believes, One God is to be worſhipped, that he hopes for Eternal life, but he doubts not of the Reſurrection we approve and commend him: we acknowledge, that as he did believe theſe things, ſo he is ſtill to believe them, and as he did hold, ſo he is ſtill to hold them. Thus he ſubjoyning more to the ſame purpoſe in the next, and again in the 26 Chapter, and in his third Book, De Bapt. contr. Donat. cap. ult. and upon Pſal. 64. But now this reaſon ſeems to perſuade the contrary: Becauſe the formal object of Faith ſeems to be the firſt verity, as it is manifeſted by the Churches Doctrine as the Divine and infallible Rule; wherefore, whoſoever adheres not to this Rule, although he aſſent to ſome matters of faith, yet he embraces them not with faith, but with ſome other kind of aſſent: as if a man aſſent to a concluſion, not knowing the reaſon by which it is demonſtrated, he hath not true knowledge, but an opinion only of the ſame concluſion. Now that an Heretick adheres not to the Rule aforeſaid, it is manifeſt: Becauſe if he did adhere to it, as divine and infallible, he would receive all without exception which the Church teacheth,

teacheth and ſo would not be an Heretick. After this manner diſcourſes St. Thom. 2. q. 5. art. 3. From whom yet Durand diſſents upon this diſtinction, thinking there may be in an Heretick true faith, in reſpect of the Article in which he doth not err. Others, as Scotus and Bonaventure, define not the matter plainly, but ſeem to chuſe a middle way.

To the authority of St. Auſtin and theſe School-men, this may be adjoyned, That it is uſual with good Chriſtians to ſay, that Hereticks have not the entire faith. Whereby it ſeems to be intimated, that ſome part of it they do retain. Whereof this may be another reaſon: That if the truths which a Jew or a Heretick holds, he ſhould not hold them by faith, but after ſome other manner, to wit, by his own proper will and judgment, it will follow, that all the excellent knowledge of God and divine things, which is found in them is to be attributed not to the grace of God, but the ſtrength of Free-will: which is againſt St. Auſtin, both elſewhere, and eſpecially in the end of his Book De potentia.

As for the reaſon alledged to the contrary, We anſwer: It is impertinent to faith, by what means we believe the prime Verity, that is by what means God uſeth to confer upon men the gift of faith. For although now the ordinary means be the Teſtimony and teaching of the Church, yet it is certain that by other means, faith hath been given heretofore, and is given ſtill. For many of the Ancients, as Adam, Abraham, Melchiſedeck, Job, received faith by ſpecial revelation; the Apoſtles by the Miracles and Preaching of Chriſt; others again by the Preaching and Miracles of the Apoſtles; And laſtly, others by other means, when as yet they had heard nothing of the infallibility of the Church. To little Children by Baptiſm, without any other help, faith is infuſed: And therefore it is poſſible, that a man not adhering to the Churches Doctrine as a Rule infallible, yet may receive ſome things for the Word of God, which do indeed truly belong to the faith; either becauſe they are now, or heretofore have been confirmed by Miracles; or becauſe he manifeſtly ſees that the ancient Church taught ſo; or upon ſome other inducement. And yet never theleſs we muſt not ſay, that Hereticks and Jews do hold the Faith, but only ſome part of the Faith. For the Faith ſignifies an entire thing, and compleat in all parts; whereupon an Heretick is ſaid to be ſimply an Infidel, to have loſt the Faith, and, according to the Apoſtle, 1 Tim. 1. to have made ſhipwreck of it, although he holds ſome things, with the ſame ſtrength of aſſent and readineſs of will, wherewith by others are held all thoſe Points which appertain to the Faith. And thus far Æſtius. Whoſe diſcourſe I preſume may paſs for a ſufficient refutation of your argument out of Aquinas. And therefore your Corollaries drawn from it, That every error againſt Faith, involves oppoſition againſt God's teſtimony, That Proteſtants have no Faith, no certainty, And that you have all Faith, muſt together with it fall to the ground.

50. But, If Proteſtants have certainty, they want obſcurity, and ſo have not that faith, which as the Apoſtle ſaith is of things not appearing. This Argument you proſecute in the next Paragraph; But I can find nothing in it, to convince or perſuade me that Proteſtants cannot have as much certainty as is required to faith, of an object not ſo evident as to beget ſcience. If obſcurity will not conſiſt with certainty in the higheſt degree, then you are to blame for requiring to faith contradicting conditions. If certainty and obſcurity will ſtand together, what reaſon can be imagined that a Proteſtant may not entertain them both as well as a Papiſt? Your bodies and ſouls, your underſtandings and wills are, I think, of the ſame condition with ours: And why then may not we be certain of an obſcure thing as well as you? And as you make this long diſcourſe againſt Proteſtants, why may not we putting Church inſtead of Scripture, ſend it back again to you? And ſay, If Papiſts have certainty, they want obſcurity, and ſo have not that faith, which, as the Apoſtle ſaith, is of things not appearing, or not neceſſitating our underſtanding to an aſſent? For the whole edifice of the faith of Papiſts is ſetled on theſe two Principles, Theſe particular Propoſitions are the Propoſitions of the Church, And the ſenſe and meaning of them is clear and evident, at leaſt in all Points neceſſary ceſſary to ſalvation. Now theſe Principles being once ſuppoſed, it clearly followeth, that what Papiſts believe as neceſſary to ſalvation is evidently known by them to be true, by this Argument; It is certain and evident, that whatſoever is the Word of God or Divine Revelation is true; But it is certain and evident that theſe Propoſitions of the Church in particular are the Word of God and Divine Revelations; Therefore it is certain and evident, that all Propoſitions of the Church are true; Which concluſion I take for a Major in a ſecond Argument, and ſay thus; It is certain and evident that all Propoſitions of the Church are true; But it is certain and evident, that ſuch particulars, for example, The lawfulneſs of the half Communion, The lawfulneſs and expedience of Latine Service, the Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation, Indulgences, &c. are the Propoſitions of the Church; Therefore it is certain and evident that theſe particular objects are true. Neither will it avail you to ſay, that the ſaid Principles are not evident by natural diſcourſe, but only by the eye of Reaſon cleared by Grace: For ſupernatural evidence, no leſs (yea, rather more) drowns and excludes obſcurity, than natural evidence doth. Neither can the Party ſo enlightned, be ſaid voluntarily to captivate his underſtanding to that light, but rather his underſtanding is by neceſſity made captive, and forced not to diſbelieve what is preſented by ſo clear a light. And therefore your imaginary faith is not the true faith defined by the Apoſtle, but an invention of your own.

And having thus cried quittance with you, I muſt intreat you to deviſe (for truly I cannot) ſome anſwer to this argument, which will not ſerve in proportion to your own. For I hope you will not pretend that I have done you injury, in feeling your faith upon principles which you diſclaim. And if you alledge this diſparity, That you are more certain of your Principles than we of ours, and yet you do not pretend that your Principles are ſo evident, as we do that ours are: what is this to ſay, but that you are more confident than we, but confeſs you have leſs reaſon for it? For the evidence of the thing aſſented to, be it more or leſs, is the reaſon and cauſe of the aſſent in the underſtanding. But then beſides, I am to tell you, that you are here, as every where extremely, if not affectedly, miſtaken in the Doctrine of Proteſtants; who though they acknowledge, that the things which they believe are in themſelves as certain as any demonſtrable or ſenſible verities, yet pretend not that their certainty of adherence is moſt perfect and abſolute, but ſuch as may be perfected and increaſed as long as they walk by faith, and not by ſight. And conſonant hereunto is their Doctrine touching the evidence of the objects whereunto they adhere: For you abuſe the world and them, if you pretend that they hold the firſt of your two Principles, That theſe particular Books are the Word of God, (for ſo I think you mean) either to be in it ſelf evidently certain, or of it ſelf, and being deveſted of the motives of credibility, evidently credible: For they are not ſo foud as to conceive, nor ſo vain as to pretend, that all men do aſſent to it, which they would if it were evidently certain; nor ſo ridiculous as to imagine, that if an Indian that never heard of Chriſt or Scripture, ſhould by chance find a Bible in his own Language, and were able to read it, that upon the reading it he would certainly without a miracle believe it to be the Word of God: which he could not chuſe if it were evidently credible. What then do they affirm of it? Certainly, no more than this, that whatſoever man that is not of a perverſe mind, ſhall weigh with ſerious and mature deliberation, thoſe great moments of reaſon which may incline him to believe the Divine authority of Scripture, and compare them with the light objections, that in prudence can be made againſt it, he ſhall not chuſe but find ſufficient, nay, abundant inducements to yield unto it firm faith and ſincere obedience. Let that learned man Hugo Grotius ſpeak for all the reſt, in his Book of the truth of Chriſtian Religion; which Book whoſoever attentively peruſes, ſhall find that a man may have great reaſon to be a Chriſtian without dependance upon your Church for any part of it: and that your Religion is no foundation of, but rather a ſcandal and an objection againſt Chriſtianity. He then in the laſt Chapter of his ſecond

Book

Book hath these excellent words, If any be not satisfied with these Arguments above-said, but desires more forcible reasons for confirmation of the excellency of Christian Religion, let such know that as there are variety of things which be true, so are there divers ways of proving or manifesting the truth. Thus is there one way in Mathematicks, another in Physicks, a third in Ethicks, and lastly, another kind when a matter of fact is in question; wherein verily we must rest content with such testimonies as are free from all suspicion of untruth; otherwise down goes all the frame and use of History, and a great part of the Art of Physick, together with all dutifulness that ought to be between Parents and Children: for matters of practice can no way else be known but by such testimonies. Now it is the pleasure of Almighty God that those things which he would have us to believe (so that the very belief thereof may be imputed to us for obedience) should not so evidently appear, as those things which are apprehended by sense and plain demonstration, but only be so far forth revealed as may beget faith, and a persuasion thereof, in the hearts and minds of such as are not obstinate: That so the Gospel may be as a touch-stone for trial of mens judgments, whether they be sound or unsound. For, seeing these arguments whereof we have spoken, have induced so many honest, godly, and wise men to approve of this Religion, it is thereby plain enough that the faults of other mens infidelity is not for want of sufficient testimony, but because they would not have that to be had and embraced for truth, which is contrary to their wilful desires; it being a hard matter for them to relinquish their honours, and set at nought other commodities; which thing they know they ought to do, if they admit of Christ's Doctrine, and obey what he hath commanded. And this is the rather to be noted of them, for that many other Historical Narrations are approved by them to be true, which notwithstanding are only manifest by authority, and not by any such strong proofs, and persuasions, or tokens, as do declare the History of Christ to be true.

52. And now you see, I hope, that Protestants neither do need nor pretend to any such evidence in the Doctrine they believe, as cannot well consist both with the essence and the obedience of faith. Let us come now to the last Nullity which you impute to the faith of Protestants, and that is, want of Prudence. Touching which Point, as I have already demonstrated, that wisdom is not essential to faith, but that a man may truly believe truth, though upon insufficient motives; So I doubt not but I shall make good, that if prudence were necessary to faith, we have better title to it than you; and that if a wiser than Solomon were here, he should have better reason to believe the Religion of Protestants than Papists, the Bible rather than the Council of Trent. But let us hear what you can say!

53. Adh. 31. You demand then first of all, What wisdom was it to forsake a Church confessedly very ancient, and besides which there could be demonstrated no other Visible Church of Christ upon earth? I answer: Against God and truth there lies no Prescription, and therefore certainly it might be great wisdom to forsake ancient errors for more ancient Truths. One God is rather to be followed than innumerable worlds of men: And therefore it might be great wisdom either for the whole visible Church, nay, for all the men in the world, having wandred from the way of Truth, to return unto it; or for a part of it, nay, for one man to do so, although all the world besides were madly resolute to do the contrary. It might be great wisdom to forsake the errors though of the only Visible Church, much more of the Roman, which in conceiving her self the whole Visible Church, does somewhat like the Frog in the Fable, which thought the ditch he lived in, to be all the world.

54. You demand again, What wisdom was it to forsake a Church acknowledg'd to want nothing necessary to Salvation, indued with Succession of Bishops, &c. usque ad Election or choice? I answer: Yet might it be great wisdom to forsake a Church not acknowledged to want nothing necessary to salvation, but accused and convicted of many damnable errors: certainly damnable to them who were convicted victed of them, had they still persisted in them after their conviction; though perhaps pardonable (which is all that is acknowledg'd) to such as ignorantly continued in them. A Church vainly arrogating without possibility of proof a perpetual succession of Bishops, holding always the same doctrine; and with a ridiculous impudence pretending perpetual possession of all the world: whereas the world knows, that a little before Luther's arising, your Church was confined to a part of a part of it. Lastly a Church vainly glorying in the dependence of other Churches upon her, which yet she supports no more than those crouching Anticks which seem in great buildings to labour under the weight they bear, do indeed support the fabrick. For a corrupted and false Church may give authority to preach the truth, and consequently against her own falsehoods and corruptions. Besides, a false Church may preserve the Scripture true (as now the Old Testament is preserved by the Jews) either not being arriv'd to that height of impiety as to attempt the corruption of it, or not able to effect it, or not perceiving, or not regarding the opposition of it to her corruptions. And so we might receive from you lawful Ordination and true Scriptures, though you were a false Church; and receiving the Scriptures from you (though not from you alone) I hope you cannot hinder us, neither need we ask your leave, to believe and obey them. And this, though you be a false Church, is enough to make us a true one. As for a Succession of men that held with us in all points of Doctrine, it is a thing we need not, and you have as little as we. So that if we acknowledge that your Church before Luther was a true Church, it is not for any ends, for any dependence that we have upon you; but because we conceive that in a charitable construction, you may pass for a true Church. Such a Church (and no better) as you do some times acknowledge Protestants to be, that is, a company of men, wherein some ignorant souls may be saved. So that in this ballancing of Religion against Religion, and Church against Church, it seems you have nothing of weight and moment to put into your scale; nothing but smoak and wind, vain shadows and phantastical pretences. Yet if Protestants, on the other side, had nothing to put in their Scale but those negative commendations which you are pleas'd to afford them; nothing but, no unity, nor means to procure it; no farther extent when Luther arose than Luthers body; no universality of time or place; no Visibility or being, except only in your Church; no Succession of persons or doctrine; no leader but Luther, in a quarrel begun upon no ground but passion: no Church, no Ordination, no Scriptures but such as they receiv'd from you; if all this were true, and this were all that could be pleaded for Protestants, possibly with an allowance of three grains of partiality your Scale might seem to turn. But then, if it may appear that part of these objections are falsly made against them, the rest vainly; that whatsoever of truth is in these imputations, is impertinent to this trial, and whatsoever is pertinent is true; and besides, that plenty of good matter may be alledged for Protestants which is here dissembled: Then, I hope, our cause may be good, notwithstanding these pretences.

55. I say then that want of Universality of time and place, the invisibility or not existence of the professors of Protestant doctrine before Luther, Luther's being alone when he first opposed your Church, Our having our Church, Ordination, Scriptures, personal and yet not doctrinal Succession from you, are vain and impertinent allegations, against the truth of our doctrine and Church. That the entire truth of Christ without any mixture of error should be professed or believed in all places at any time, or in any place at all times, is not a thing evident in reason, neither have we any revelation for it. And therefore in relying so confidently on it, you build your house upon the sand. And what obligation we had either to be so peevish, as to take nothing of yours, or so foolish as to take all, I do not understand. For whereas you say that this is to be choosers, and therefore Heretiques, I tell you that though all Heretiques are choosers, yet all choosers are not Heretiques; otherwise they also, which choose your Religion must be Heretiques. As for our wanting Unity and means of proving it, Luther's oppoſing your Church upon meer paſſion, Our following private men rather than the Catholique Church, the firſt and laſt are meer untruths, for we want not Unity, nor means to procure it in things neceſſary. Plain places of Scripture, and ſuch as need no interpreter are our means to obtain it. Neither do we follow any private men, but only the Scripture, the word of God, as our rule; and reaſon, which is alſo the gift of God given to direct us in all our actions, in the uſe of this rule. And then for Luthers oppoſing your Church upon meer paſſion, it is a thing I will not deny, becauſe I know not his heart, and for the ſame reaſon you ſhould not have affirmed it. Sure I am whether he oppoſed your Church upon reaſon or no, he had reaſon enough to oppoſe it. And therefore if he did it upon paſſion, we will follow him only in his action, and not in his paſſion; in his oppoſition, not in the manner of it; and then I preſume you will have no reaſon to condemn us, unleſs you will ſay that a good action cannot be done with reaſon, becauſe ſome body before us hath done it upon paſſion. You ſee then, how imprudent you have been in the choice of your Arguments, to prove Proteſtants unwiſe in the choice of their Religion.

56. It remains now, that I ſhould ſhew that many reaſons of moment may be alledged for the juſtification of Proteſtants, which are diſſembled by you, and not put into the ballance. Know then Sir, that when I ſay, The Religion of Proteſtants, is in prudence to be preferr'd before yours: as, on the one ſide I do not underſtand by your Religion the doctrine of Bellarmin, or Baronius, or any other private man amongſt you, nor the doctrine of the Sorbon, or of the Jeſuites, or of the Dominicans, or of any other particular company among you, but that wherein you all agree, or profeſs to agree, the Doctrine of the Council of Trent: ſo accordingly on the other ſide, by the Religion of Proteſtants, I do not underſtand the Doctrine of Luther, or Calvin, or Melanæthon; nor the confeſſion of Auguſta, or Geneva, nor the Catechiſm of Heidelberg, nor the Articles of the Church of England, no nor the Harmony of Proteſtant Confeſſions; but that wherein they all agree, and which they all ſubſcribe with a greater Harmony, as a perfect rule of their faith and actions, that is, the BIBLE. The BIBLE, I ſay, the BIBLE only, is the Religion of Proteſtants! Whatſoever elſe they believe, beſides it, and the plain, irrefragable, indubitable conſequences of it, well may they hold it as a matter of Opinion; but as matter of Faith and Religion, neither can they with coherence to their own grounds believe it themſelves, nor require the belief of it of others, without moſt high and moſt Schimſatical preſumption. I for my part after a long and (as I verily believe and hope) impartial ſearch of the true way to eternal happineſs, do profeſs plainly that I cannot find any reſt for the ſole of my foot, but upon this Rock only. I ſee plainly, and with mine own eyes, that there are Popes againſt Popes, Councils againſt Councils, ſome Fathers againſt others, the ſame Fathers againſt themſelves, a Conſent of Fathers of one age againſt a Conſent of Fathers of another age, the Church of one age againſt the Church of another age, Tradtive interpretations of Scripture are pretended, but there are few or none to be found: No Tradition but only of Scripture, can derive it ſelf from the fountain, but may be plainly prov'd, either to have been brought in, in ſuch an age after Chriſt; or that in ſuch an age it was not in. In a word, there is no ſufficient certainty but of Scripture only, for any conſidering man to build upon. This therefore and this only I have reaſon to believe: This I will profeſs, according to this I will live, and for this, if there be occaſion, I will not only willingly, but even gladly loſe my life, though I ſhould be ſorry that Chriſtians ſhould take it from me. Propoſe me any thing out of this Book, and require whether I believe or no, and, ſeem it never ſo incomprehenſible to humane reaſon, I will ſubſcribe it with hand and heart, as knowing no Demonſtration can be ſtronger than this, God hath ſaid ſo, therefore it is true. In other things, I will take no mans liberty of judgment from him; neither ſhall any man man take mine from me. I will think no man the worſe man, nor the worſe Chriſtian: I will love no man the leſs, for differing in opinion from me. And what meaſure I mete to others, I expect from them again. I am fully aſſured that God does not, and therefore that men ought not to require any more of any man than this, To believe the Scripture to be Gods word, to endeavor to find the true ſenſe of it, and to live according to it.

57. This is the Religion which I have choſen after a long deliberation, and I am verily perſuaded that I have choſen wiſely, much more wiſely than if I had guided my ſelf according to your Churches authority. For the Scripture being all true, I am ſecured by believing nothing elſe, that I ſhall believe no falſhood as matter of faith. And if I miſtake the ſenſe of Scripture, and ſo fall into error, yet am I ſecure from any danger thereby, if but your grounds be true: becauſe endeavoring to find the true ſenſe of Scripture, I cannot but hold my error without pertinacy, and be ready to forſake it when a more true and a more probable ſenſe ſhall appear unto me. And then all neceſſary truth, being, as I have prov'd, plainly ſet down in Scripture, I am certain by believing Scripture, to believe all neceſſary Truth: And he that does ſo, if his life be anſwerable to his Faith, how is it poſſible he ſhould fail of Salvation?

58. Beſides, whatſoever may be pretended to gain to your Church the credit of a Guide, all that and much more may be ſaid for the Scripture. Hath your Church been ancient? The Scripture is more ancient. Is your Church a means to keep men at unity? So is the Scripture, to keep thoſe that believe it and will obey it in unity of belief, in matters neceſſary or very profitable; and in unity of Charity, in points unneceſſary. Is your Church univerſal for time or place? Certainly the Scripture is more univerſal. For all the Chriſtians in the world (thoſe I mean that in truth deſerve this name) do now, and always have believed the Scripture to be the word of God, ſo much of it at leaſt, as contains all things neceſſary; whereas only you ſay, that you only are the Church of God, and all Chriſtians beſides you deny it.

59. Thirdly, following the Scripture, I follow that whereby you prove your Churches infallibility, (whereof were it not for Scripture what pretence could you have, or what notion could we have?) and by ſo doing tacitly confeſs that your ſelves are ſurer of the truth of the Scripture than of your Churches authority. For we muſt be ſurer of the proof than of the thing proved, otherwiſe it is no proof.

60. Fourthly, following the Scripture, I follow that which muſt be true if your Church be true: for your Church gives atteſtation to it. Whereas if I follow your Church, I muſt follow that, which, though Scripture be true, may be falſe; nay which, if Scripture be true muſt be falſe, becauſe the Scripture teſtifies againſt it.

61. Fifthly, to follow the Scripture I have God's expreſs warrant and command, and no colour of any prohibition: But to believe your Church infallible, I have no command at all, much leſs an expreſs command. Nay I have reaſon to fear that I am prohibited to do ſo in theſe words, Call no man Maſter on the earth: They fell by infidelity, Thou ſtandeſt by faith, Be not high-minded but fear: The ſpirit of truth the world cannot receive.

62. Following your Church I muſt hold many things not only above reaſon but againſt it, if any thing be againſt it: whereas following the Scripture I ſhall believe many myſteries but no impoſſibilities; many things above reaſon, but nothing againſt it; many things which had they not been reveal'd, reaſon could never have diſcovered, but nothing which by true reaſon may be confuted: many things which reaſon cannot comprehend how they can be, but nothing which reaſon can comprehend that it cannot be. Nay I ſhall believe nothing which reaſon will not convince that I ought to believe it: For reaſon will convince any man, unleſs he be of a perverſe mind, that the Scripture is the word of God: And then no reaſon can be greater than this; God ſays ſo, therefore it is true.

63. Following your Church I muſt hold many things which to any mans judgment that will give himſelf the liberty of judgment, will ſeem much more plainly contradicted by Scripture, than the infallibility of your Church appears to be confirmed by it: and conſequently muſt be ſo fooliſh as to believe your Church exempted from error upon leſs evidence, rather than ſubject to the common condition of mankind upon greater evidence. Now if I take the Scripture only for my Guide, I ſhall not need to do any thing ſo unreaſonable.

64. If I will follow your Church I muſt believe impoſſibilities, and that with an abſolute certainty, upon motives which are confeſſed to be but only prudential and probable: That is, with a weak foundation I muſt firmly ſupport a heavy, a monſtrous heavy building: Now following the Scripture I ſhall have no neceſſity to undergo any ſuch difficulties.

65. Following your Church I muſt be ſervant of Chriſt and a ſubject of the King, but only ad placitum Papæ. I muſt be prepared in mind to renounce my allegiance to the King, when the Pope ſhall declare him an Heretick and command me not to obey him: and I muſt be prepared in mind to eſteem Virtue Vice, and Vice Virtue, if the Pope ſhall ſo determine. Indeed you ſay it is impoſſible he ſhould do the later; but that you know is a great queſtion, neither is it fit my obedience to God and the King ſhould depend upon a queſtionable foundation. And howſoever you muſt grant that if by an impoſſible ſuppoſition the Popes commands ſhould be contrary to the Law of Chriſt, that they of your Religion muſt reſolve to obey rather the commands of the Pope than the law of Chriſt. Whereas if I follow the Scripture I may, nay I muſt, obey my Sovereign in lawful things, though an Heretick, though a Tyrant; and though, I do not ſay the Pope, but the Apoſtles themſelves, nay an Angel from heaven ſhould teach any thing againſt the Goſpel of Chriſt, I may, nay I muſt denounce Anathema to him.

66. Following the Scripture I ſhall believe a Religion, which being contrary to fleſh and blood, without any aſſiſtance from worldly power, wit, or policy, nay againſt all the power and policy of the world, prevailed and enlarged it ſelf in a very ſhort time all the world over; whereas it is too too apparent, that your Church hath got and ſtill maintains her authority over mens conſciences by counterfeiting falſe miracles, forging falſe ſtories, by obtruding on the world ſuppoſititious writings, by corrupting the monuments of former times, and defacing out of them all which any way makes againſt you, by Wars, by Perſecutions, by Maſſacres, by Treaſons, by Rebellions; in ſhort, by all manner of carnal means whether violent or fraudulent.

67. Following the Scripture I ſhall believe a Religion, the firſt Preachers and Profeſſors whereof, it is moſt certain they could have no worldly ends upon the world, that they ſhould not project to themſelves by it any of the profits or honors or pleaſures of this world; but rather were to expect the contrary, even all the miſeries which the world could lay upon them. On the other ſide, the Head of your Church, the pretended Succeſſor of the Apoſtles, and Guide of Faith, it is even palpable, that he makes your Religion the inſtrument of his ambition, and by it ſeeks to entitle himſelf directly or indirectly to the Monarchy of the world. And beſides, it is evident to any man that has but half an eye, that moſt of thoſe Doctrines which you add to the Scripture do make one way or other, for the honor or temporal profit of the Teachers of them.

68. Following the Scripture only, I ſhall embrace a Religion of admirable ſimplicity conſiſting in a manner wholly in the worſhip of God in ſpirit and truth. Whereas your Church and Doctrine is even loaded with an infinity of weak, childiſh, ridiculous, unſavory Superſtitions and Ceremonies, and full of that righteouſneſs for which Chriſt ſhall judg the world.

69. Following the Scriptures, I ſhall believe that which Univerſal, never-failing failing Tradition aſſures me, that it was by the admirable ſupernatural works of God confirmed to be the word of God: whereas never any miracle was wrought, never ſo much as a lame horſe cured in confirmation of your Churches authority and infallibility. And if any ſtrange things have been done, which may ſeem to give atteſtation to ſome parts of your Doctrine, yet this proves nothing but the truth of the Scripture, which foretold that (Gods providence permitting it, and the wickedneſs of the world deſerving it) ſtrange ſigns and wonders ſhould be wrought to confirm falſe doctrine, that they which love not the truth, may be given over to ſtrong deluſions. Neither does it ſeem to me any ſtrange thing, that God ſhould permit ſome true wonders to be done to delude them who have forged ſo many to deceive the world.

70. If I follow the Scripture, I muſt not promiſe my ſelf Salvation without effectual dereliction and mortification of all vices, and the effectual practice of all Chriſtian Virtues: But your Church opens an eaſier and a broader way to Heaven, and though I continue all my life long in a courſe of ſin, and without the practice of any virtue, yet gives me aſſurance that I may be let into heaven at a poſtern gate, even by an act of Attrition at the hour of death, if it be joyn'd with Confeſſion, or by an act of Contrition without Confeſſion.

71. Admirable are the Precepts of piety and humility, of innocence and patience, of liberality, frugality, temperance, ſobriety, juſtice, meekneſs, fortitude, conſtancy and gravity, contempt of the world, love of God and the love of mankind; In a word, of all vertues, and againſt all vice, which the Scriptures impoſe upon us, to be obeyed under pain of damnation: The ſum whereof is in manner compriſed in our Saviours Sermon upon the Mount, recorded in the 5. 6. and 7. of St. Matthew, which if they were generally obeyed, could not but make the world generally happy, and the goodneſs of them alone were ſufficient to make any wiſe and good man believe that this Religion rather than any other, came from God the Fountain of all goodneſs. And that they may be generally obeyed our Saviour hath ratified them all in the cloſe of his Sermon, with theſe univerſal Sanctions, Not every one that ſaith Lord, Lord, ſhall enter into the Kingdom, but he that doth the will of my Father which is in heaven: And again, Whoſoever heareth theſe ſayings of mine and doth them not, ſhall be likened unto a fooliſh man which built his houſe upon the ſand, and the rain deſcended, and the flood came, and the winds blew, and it fell, and great was the fall thereof. Now your Church, notwithſtanding all this, enervates and in a manner diſſolves and abrogates many of theſe precepts teaching men that they are not laws for all Chriſtians, but Counſels of perfection and matters of Supererogation: that a man ſhall do well if he do obſerve them, but he ſhall not ſin if he obſerve them not; That they are for them who aim at high places in heaven, who aſpire with the two ſons of Zebedee, to the right hand or the left hand of Chriſt: But if a man will be content barely to go to heaven, and to be a door-keeper in the houſe of God, eſpecially if he will be content to taſte of Purgatory in the way, he may obtain it at an eaſier purchaſe. Therefore the Religion of your Church is not ſo holy nor ſo good as the Doctrine of Chriſt delivered in Scripture, and therefore not ſo likely to come from the Fountain of holineſs and goodneſs.

72. Laſtly, if I follow your Church for my Guide, I ſhall do all one, as if I ſhould follow a company of blind men in a judgment of colours, or in the choice of a way. For every unconſidering man is blind in that which he does not conſider. Now what is your Church but a company of unconſidering men, who comfort themſelves becauſe they are a great company together; but all of them, either out of idleneſs refuſe the trouble of a ſevere trial of their Religion, (as if heaven were not worth it;) or out of ſuperſtition fear the event of ſuch a tryal, that they may be ſcrupled and ſtaggered and diſquieted by it; aud therefore for the moſt part do it not at all; Or, if they do it, they do it negligently and hypocritically, and perfunctorily, rather for the ſatisfaction of others than themſelves: but but certainly without indifference, without liberty of judgment, without a resolution to doubt of it, if upon examination the grounds of it prove uncertain, or to leave it, if they prove apparently false. My own experience assures me, that in this imputation I do you no injury: but it is very apparent to all men from your ranking, doubting of any part of your Doctrine, among mortal sins. For from hence it follows, that seeing every man must resolve that he will never commit mortal sin, that he must never examine the grounds of it at all, for fear he should be moved to doubt: or if he do, he must resolve that no motives, be they never so strong shall move him to doubt, but that with his will and resolution he will uphold himself in a firm belief of your Religion, though his reason and his understanding fail him. And seeing this is the condition of all those whom you esteem good Catholicks, who can deny, but you are a company of men unwilling and afraid to understand, lest you should do good! That have eyes to see and will not see, that have not the love of truth (which is only to be known by an indifferent tryal) and therefore deserve to be given over to strong delusions; men that love darkness more than light: in a word, that you are the blind leading the blind; and what prudence there can be, in following such Guides, our Saviour hath taught us, in saying, If the blind lead the blind both shall fall in to the ditch.

73. There remains unspoken to in this Section, some places out of St. Austin, and some sayings of Luther, wherein he confesses that in the Papacy are many good things. But the former I have already consider, and returned the argument grounded on them. As for Luther's speeches, I told you, not long since, that we follow no private men, and regard not much what he says, either against the Church of Rome, or for it, but what he proves. He was a man of a vehement spirit, and very often what he took in hand, he did not do it, but over-do it. He that will justifie all his speeches, especially such as he wrote in heat of opposition, I believe will have work enough. Yet in these sentences, though he overreach in the particulars, yet what he says in general we confess true, and confess with him that in the Papacy are many good things, which have come from them to us; but withal we say there are many bad, neither do we think our selves bound in prudence either to reject the good with the bad, or to retain the bad with the good, but rather conceive it a high point of wisdom, to separate between the precious and the vile, to sever the good from the bad, and to put the good in vessels to be kept, and to cast the bad away; to try all things, and to hold that which is good.

74. Ad §. 32. Your next and last argument against the Faith of Protestants is, because wanting Certainty and Prudence, it must also want the fourth condition, Supernaturality. For that being a human persuasion, it is not in the essence of it supernatural: and being imprudent and rash, it cannot proceed from Divine motion, and so is not supernatural in respect of the cause from which it proceedeth. Answer, This little discourse stands wholly upon what went before, and therefore must fall together with it. I have proved the Faith of Protestants as certain, and as prudent as the faith of Papists; and therefore if these be certain grounds of supernaturality, our faith may have it as well as yours. I would here furthermore be informed how you can assure us that your faith is not your persuasion or opinion (for you make them all one) that your Churches Doctrine is true? Or if you grant it your persuasion, why is it not the persuasion of men, and, in respect of the subject of it, an humane persuasion? I desire also to know, what sense there is in pretending that your persuasion is, not in regard of the object only and cause of it, but in the nature or essence of it, supernatural? Lastly, whereas you say, that being imprudent it cannot come from divine motion: certainly by this reason all they that believe your own Religion, and cannot give a wise and sufficient reason for it, (as millions amongst you cannot) must be condemned to have no supernatural faith: or if not, then without question nothing can hinder, but that the imprudent faith of Protestants may proceed from divine motion, as well as the imprudent faith of Papists.

75. And

75. And thus having weighed your whole discourse, and found it altogether lighter than vanity, why should I not invert your conclusion, and say, Seeing you have not proved that whosoever errs against any one point of Faith loseth all divine Faith: nor that any error whatsoever concerning that which by the Parties litigant may be esteem'd a matter of Faith is a grievous sin, it follows not at all, that when two men hold different doctrines concerning Religion, that but one can be saved? Not that I deny, but that the sentence of S. Chrysostom with which you conclude this Chapter may in a good sense be true: for oft-times by the Faith is meant only that Doctrine which is necessary to salvation, and to say that salvation may be had without any the least thing which is necessary to Salvation implies a repugnance and destroys it self. Besides, not to believe all necessary points, and to believe none at all, is for the purpose of salvation all one; and therefore he that does so, may justly be said to destroy the Gospel of Christ, seeing he makes it ineffectual to the end for which it was intended, the Salvation of mens souls. But why you should conceive that all differences about Religion are concerning matters of Faith, in this high notion of the word, for that I conceive no reason.

CHAP. VII.

In regard of the Precept of Charity towards ones self, Protestants are in a state of Sin, as long as they remain separated from the Roman Church.

THAT due Order is to be observed in the Theological Virtue of Charity, whereby we are directed to prefer some Objects before others, is a truth taught by all Divines, and declared in these words of holy Scripture: He hath ordered (a) charity in me. The reason whereof is, because the infinite goodness of God, which is the formal Object, or Motive of Charity, and for which all other things are loved, is differently participated by different Objects; and therefore the love we bear to them for Gods sake, must accordingly be unequal. In the virtue of Faith, the case is far otherwise; because all the Objects, or Points which we believe, do equally participate the divine Testimony or Revelation, for which we believe alike all things propounded for such. For it is as impossible for God, to speak an untruth in a small, as in a great matter. And this is the ground for which we have so often affirmed, that any least error against Faith, is injurious to God and destructive of salvation.

a Cant. 2. 4.

2. This order in Charity may be considered; towards God, our own Soul; the soul of our Neighbour; our own life, or goods; and the life or goods of our Neighbour. God is to be beloved above all things, both objectivè (as the Divines speak) that is, we must wish or desire to God, a good more great, perfect and noble than to any, or all other things: namely, all that indeed He is, a Nature Infinite, Independent, Immense, &c. and also Appretiativè, that is, we must sooner lose what good soever, than leave, and abandon him. In the other Objects of Charity, of which I spake, this order is to be kept. We may, but are not bound, to prefer the life and goods of our Neighbour before our own; we are bound to prefer the soul of our Neighbour before our own temporal goods or life, if he happen to be in extreme spiritual necessity, and that we by our assistance can succour him, according to the saying of St. John: in this we have known (b) the charity of God, because he hath given his life for us, and we ought to give our life for our Brethren. And Saint Augustine likewise v. 16. saith, A Christian will not doubt (c) to lose his own temporal life, for the eternal life of his Neighbour. Lastly we are to prefer the spiritual good of our own soul, before both the spiritual and temporal good of our Neighbour, because as Charity doth of its own nature, chiefly incline the person in whom it resides, to love God, and to be united with him: so of it self it inclines him to procure those things whereby the said union with God is effected, rather to himself than to others. And from hence it follows, that in things necessary to salvation, no man ought in any case, or in any respect whatsoever, to prefer the spiritual good, either of any particular person, or of the whole world before his own soul; according to those words of our blessed Saviour: what doth it (d) avail a man if he gain the whole world, and suffer the damage of his own soul? And therefore (to come to our present purpose) it is directly against the Order of Charity, or against Charity as it hath a reference to our selves, which Divines call Charitas propria, to adventure either the omitting of any means necessary to salvation, or the committing of any thing repugnant to it, for whatsoever respect; and consequently, if by living out of the Roman Church we put our selves in hazard either to want something necessarily required to salvation, or else to perform some act against it, we commit a most grievous sin against the virtue of Charity, as it respects our selves, and so cannot hope for salvation without repentance.

d Mat. 16. 26.

3. Now of things necessary to salvation, there are two sorts, according to the doctrin of all Divines. Some things (say they) are necessary to salvation, necessitate præcepti, necessary only because they are commanded; For, if thou wilt (e) enter into life, keep the Commandments. In which kind of things, as probable ignorance of the Law, or of the Commandment, doth excuse the party from all faulty breach thereof: so likewise doth it not exclude salvation in case of ignorance. Some other things are said to be necessary to salvation necessitate medii, finis, or fatus; because they are Means appointed by God to attain our end of eternal salvation, in so strict a manner, that it were præsumption to hope for Salvation

tion without them. And as the former means are said to be necessary, because they are commanded, so the latter are commonly said to be commanded, because they are necessary; that is, although there were no other special precept concerning them; yet supposing they be once appointed as means absolutely necessary to salvation, there cannot but arise an obligation of procuring to have them, in virtue of that universal precept of Charity, which obligeth every man to procure the salvation of his own soul. In this sort divine infallible Faith is necessary to salvation; as likewise repentance of every deadly sin, and in the doctrin of Catholiques, Baptism in re, that is, in Act, to Children, and for those who are come to the use of reason, in voto, or hearty desire, when they cannot have it in act. And as Baptism is necessary for remission of Original and Actual sin committed before it; so the Sacrament of Confession, or penance is necessary in re, or in voto, in act or desire, for the remission of mortal sins committed after Baptism. The Minister of which Sacrament of Penance being necessarily a true Priest, true Ordination is necessary in the Church of God for remission of sins by this Sacrament, as also for other ends not belonging to our present purpose. From hence it riseth, that no ignorance or impossibility can supply the want of those means which are absolutely necessary to salvation. As if, for example, a Sinner depart this world without repenting himself of all deadly sins, although he die suddenly, or unexpectedly fall out of his wits, and so commit no new sin by omission of repentance; yet he shall be eternally punished for his former sins committed, and never repented of. If an Infant die without Baptism, he cannot be saved; not by reason of any actual sin committed by him in omitting Baptism, but for Original sin, not forgiven, by the means which God hath ordained to that purpose. Which doctrin, all, or most Protestants will (for ought I know) grant to be true, in the Children of Infidels; yea, not only Lutherans, but also some other Protestants, as Mr. Bilson, late of Winchester (f) and others, hold it to be true, even in the Children of the faithful. And if Protestants in general disagree from Catholiques in this point, it cannot be denied but that our disagreement is in a point very fundamental. And the like I say of the Sacrament of Penance, which they deny to be necessary to salvation, either in act or in desire; which error is likewise fundamental, because it concerns (as I said) a thing necessary to salvation: And for the same reason, if their Priesthood and Ordination be doubtful, as certainly it is, they are in danger to want a means without which they cannot be saved. Neither ought this rigour to seem strange, or unjust: For Almighty God having, of his own Goodness, without our merit, first ordained man to a supernatural end of eternal felicity; and then, after our fall in Adam, vouchsafed to restore us to the attaining of that end, it has liberal will be pleased to limit the attaining of that end, to some means which in his infinite wisdom he thinks most fit; who can say, Why doth thou so? or who can hope for that end, without such means? Be that be his Divine Majesty, for vouchsafing to ordain us, base creatures, to so sublime an end, by any means at all!

(f) In his true difference &c. Part. 4. Pag. 168. and 369.

4. Out of the foresaid difference followeth another, that (generally speaking) in things necessary only because they are commanded, it is sufficient for avoiding sin, that we proceed prudently, and by the conduct of some probable opinion maturely weighed and approved by men of virtue, learning, and wisdom. Neither are we always obliged to follow the most strict, and severe, or secure part, as long as the doctrin which we embrace, proceeds upon such reasons, as may warrant it to be truly probable, and prudent, though the contrary part want not also probable grounds. For in humane affairs and discourse, evidence and certainty cannot be always expected. But when we treat not precisely of avoiding sin, but moreover of procuring some thing without which I cannot be saved; I am obliged by the Law and Order of charity, to procure as great certainty as morally I am able, and am not to follow every probable opinion or dictamen, but ratione partis, the safer part, because, if my probability prove false, I shall not probably but certainly come short of Salvation. Nay in such a case, I shall incur a new sin against the Virtue of charity towards my self, which obligeth every one not to expose his soul to the hazard of eternal perdition, when it is in his power, with the assistance of Gods grace, to make the matter sure. From this very ground it is, that although some Divines be of opinion, that it is not a sin to use some Matter or Form of Sacraments, only probable, if we respect precisely the reverence or respect which is due to Sacraments; as they belong to the Moral infused Virtue of Religion; yet when they are such Sacraments, as the invalidity thereof may indanger the salvation of souls, all do with one consent agree, that it is a grievous offence to use a doubtful, or only probable Matter or Form, when it is in our power to procure certainty. If therefore it may appear, that though it were not certain that Protestancy unrepented destroys Salvation (as we have proved to be very certain) yet at least that it is probable, and withal, that there is a way more safe; it will follow out of the grounds already laid, that they are obliged by the law of Charity to embrace that safe way.

5. Now that Protestants have reason, at least to doubt in what case they stand, is deduced from what we have said, and proved about the universal infallibility of the Church, and of her being Judg of Controversies, to whom all Christians ought to submit their Judgment (as even some Protestants grant) and whom to oppose in any one of her definitions, is a grievous sin: As also from what we have said of the unity, universality, and visibility of the Church, and of Succession of Persons and Doctrine; Of the conditions of Divine Faith, Certainty, Obscurity, Prudence, and Supernaturality, which are wanting in the faith of Protestants; of the frivolous distinction of Points fundamental and not fundamental, (the confutation whereof proveth that Heretiques disagreeing among themselves in any least point, cannot have the same faith, nor be of the same Church:) Of Schism, of Heresie, of the persons who first revolted from Rome, and of their Motives; of the Nature of Faith, which is destroyed by any least error, and it is certain, that some of them must be in error, and want the substance of true Faith; and since all pretend the like certainty, it is clear that none of them have any certainty at all, but that they want true faith, which is a means most absolutely necessary to Salvation. Moreover, as I said heretofore, since it is granted that every Error in fundamental points is damnable, and that they cannot tell in particular, what points be fundamental, it follows that none of them knows, whether he, or his Brethren do not err damnably, le being certain that among so many disagreeing persons some must err. Upon the same ground of not being able to assign what points be fundamental, I say, they cannot be sure whether the difference among them be fundamental or no, and consequently whether they agree in the substance of Faith and hope of Salvation. I omit to add, that you want the Sacrament of Penance, instituted for remission of sins, or at least you must confess that you hold it not necessary; and yet your own Brethren, for example the Century writers do (g) acknowledg that in times of Cyprian and Tertullian, Private Confession even of Thoughts was used; and that it was then commanded and thought necessary. The like, I say, concerning your Ordination, which at least is very doubtful, and consequently all that depends thereon.

6. On the other side, that the Roman Church is the safer way to Heaven (not to repeat what hath been already said upon divers occasions) I will again put you in mind, that unless the Roman Church was the true Church there was no visible true Church upon earth. A thing so manifest, that Protestants themselves confess that more than one thousand years the Roman Church possessed the whole world, as we have shewed heretofore, out of their own (h) words: From whence it follows, that unless Ours be the true Church, you cannot pretend to any perpetual visible Church of your Own; but Ours doth not depend on yours, before which it was. And here I wish you to consider with fear and trembling how all Roman Catholicks, no one excepted; that is, those very men whom you must hold not to err damnably in their belief, unless you will destroy your own Church, and Salvation; do with unanimous consent believe, and profess that Protestancy unrepented destroys Salvation; and then tell me, as you will answer at the last day, Whether it be not more safe, to live and die in that Church, which even your selves are forced to acknowledg not to be cut off from hope of Salvation, (which are your own words) than to live in a Church, which the land on directly true Church doth firmly believe, and constantly professeth not to be capable of Salvation. And therefore I conclude, that by the most strict obligation of charity towards your own soul, you are bound to place it in safety, by returning to that Church, from which your Progenitors Schisme totally departed, left too late you find that saying of the Holy Ghost verified in your selves: He that loves (i) the danger, shall perish therein.

(h) Chap. 6. Num. 9.

(i) Eccli. 3. 27.

7. Against this last argument of the greater security of the Roman Church drawn from your own confession, you bring an Objection; which in the end will be found to make for us, against your self. It is taken from the words of the Donatists, speaking to Catholiques in this manner: You have ceased (k) to be Baptists, Sacraments, and Faith (here you put an Explication of your own, and say, for the most part, as if any small error in faith did not destroy all Faith) to be good and available. Wherefore you have to be, and say. That no Church, no Salvation amongst us; therefore it is fitfull for you to join with us.

(k) Pag. 111.

8. By your leave our Argument is not (as you say) for simple people alone, but for all those who have care to save their souls. Neither is it grounded upon your Charitable Judgment (as you (l) speak) but upon an inevitable necessity for you, either to grant Salvation to our Church, or to entail certain damnation upon your own: because yours can have no being till Luther, unless ours be supposed to have been the true Church of Christ. And since you term this Argument a Charm, take heed you be none of those, who, according to the Prophet David, do not hear the voice of him (m) who charmeth wisely. But to come to the purpose: Catholicks never granted that the Donatists had a true Church, or might be saved: And therefore you having cited out of S. Augustine, the words of the Catholicks, that the Donatists had true Baptism, when you come to the contrary words of the Donatists, you add, No Church, no Salvation; making the Argument to have quinq; terminos, without which Addition you did see it made nothing against us: For, as I said, the Catholicks never yielded, that among the Donatists there was a true Church, or hope of Salvation. And your self, a few leaves after, acknowledg, that the Donatists maintained an error, which was in the Matter and Nature of it properly Heretical, existing that Justice of the Church, wherein we possess to believe the holy (n) Catholick Church: and consequently not common how salvation to them, as you do, and must do to us. And therefore the Donatists could not make the like argument against Catholicks, as Catholicks make against you, who grant us salvation, which we deny to you. But at least (you will say) this Argument for the certainty of their Baptism, was like to Ours touching the Security and Certainty of our Salvation; and therefore that Catholicks should have esteemed the Baptism of the Donatists more certain than their own, and to have allowed Rebaptization of such as were baptized by Hereticks, or Schismaticks, as the Donatists esteemed all Catholicks to be. I answer, No. Because it being a matter of Faith, that Baptism administred by Heretics, observing due Matter, Form, &c. is valid: to rebaptize any so baptized, had been both a sacrilege in reiterating a Sacrament not reiterable, and a profession also of a damnable Heresie, and therefore had not been more safe but certainly damnable. But you confess that in the doctrin or practice of the Roman Church, there is no belief, or profession of any damnable error, which if there were, even your Church should certainly be no Church. To believe therefore and profess as we do, cannot exclude Salvation, as Rebaptization must have done. But if the Donatists could have affirmed with truth, that in the opinion both of Catholicks and themselves, their Baptism was good, yea, and good in such sort as that unless theirs was good, that of the Catholicks could not be such; but theirs might be good, though that of the Catholicks were not: and further, that it was no damnable error to believe, that Baptism administred by the Catholicks was not good, nor that it was any Sacrilege to reiterate the same Baptism of Catholiques: If I say, they could have truly affirmed these things, they had said somewhat, which at least had seemed to the purpose. But these things they could not say with any colour of truth, and therefore their argument was fond, and impious. But we with truth say to Protestants: You cannot but confess that our Doctrin contains no damnable error, and that our Church is so certainly a true Church, that unless ours be true, you cannot pretend any; Yea, you grant, that you should be guilty of Schism, if you did cut off our Church from the Body of Christ, and the hope of Salvation: But we neither do, nor can grant that yours is a true Church, or that within it there is hope of Salvation: Therefore it is fitfull for you to join with us. And now against whom hath your Objection greatest force?

(l) Pag. 81.

(m) Psalm. 57. 6.

(n) Pag. 112.

9. But I wonder not a little, and so I think will every body else, what the reason may be, that you do not so much as go about to answer the Argument of the Donatists, which you say is all one with Ours, but refer us to S. Augustine there to read it; as if every one carried with him a Library, or were able to examine the place in S. Augustine; and yet you might be sure your Reader would be greedy to see some solid answer to an Argument so often urged by us, and which indeed, unless you can confute it, ought alone to move every one who hath care of his soul, to take the surest way, by incorporating himself in our Church. But we may easily imagin the true reason of your silence: for the answer which S. Augustine gives to the Donatists, is directly against your self, and the same which I have given, Namely, that Catholicks (o) approve the Baptism of Donatists, but abhor their heresie of Re-baptization. And that as Gold is good (which is the Similitude used by (p) S. Augustine) yet not to be bought in company of thieves; so though Baptism be good, yet it must not be bought for in the Conventicles of Donatists. But you free us from damnable heresie, and yield us salvation which I hope is to be embraced in whatſoever Company it is found; or rather, that Company is to be embraced before all other, in which all ſides agree, that ſalvation may be found. We therefore muſt infer, that it is ſafeſt for you to ſeek ſalvation among us. You had good reaſon to conceal S. Auguſtin's anſwer to the Donatiſts.

(o) Ad Hic. Vetil. lib. 1. cap. 168.

(p) Contra Crescon. lib. 1. cap. 28.

10. You frame another Argument in our behalf, and make us ſpeak thus: If Proteſtants believe the

11. But what Catholick maketh ſuch a wiſe demand as you put into our mouths? If our Religion be a ſafe way to Heaven, that is, not damnable; why do you not follow it? As if every thing that is good, muſt be of neceſſity embraced by every body! But what think you of the Argument framed thus? Our Religion is ſafe even by your confeſſion, therefore you ought to grant that all may embrace it. And yet further, thus: Among different Religions and contrary ways to Heaven, one only can be ſafe: But ours, by your own confeſſion, is ſafe, whereas we hold that in yours is no hope of ſalvation: Therefore you may and ought to embrace ours. This is our Argument. And if the Dominicans and Jeſuits did ſay one to another as we ſay to you; then one of them might with good conſequence preſs the other to believe his opinion. You have ſtill the hard fortune to be beaten with your own weapon.

12. It remaineth then, that both in regard of Faith and Charity, Proteſtants are obliged to unite themſelves with the Church of Rome. And I may add alſo, in regard of the Theological Virtue of Hope, without which none can hope to be ſaved, and which you want, either by excels of Confidence, or defect by Deſpair, not unlike to your Faith, which I ſhewed to be either deficient in Certainty, or exceſſive in Evidence; as likewiſe, according to the rigid Calviniſts, it is either ſo ſtrong, that once had, it can never be loſt: or ſo more than weak, and ſo much nothing; that it can never be gotten. For the true Theological Hope of Chriſtians, is a Hope which keeps a mean between Preſumption, and Deſperation which moves us to work our ſalvation with fear and trembling; which conducts us to make ſure our ſalvation by good works, as holy Scripture adviſeth: But, contrarily, Proteſtants do either exclude Hope by Deſpair, with the Doctrin, That our Saviour died not for all, and, that ſuch, want grace ſufficient to ſalvation; or elſe by vain Preſumption, grounded upon a fantaſtical perſwaſion, that they are Predeſtinate; which Faith muſt exclude all fear and trembling. Neither can they make their Calling certain by good works, who do certainly believe, that before any good works they are juſtified, and juſtified even by Faith alone, and by that faith whereby they certainly believe they are juſtified. Which Point ſome Proteſtants do expreſly affirm to be the ſoul of the Church, the principal Origin of ſalvation, of all other Points of Doctrin, the chiefeſt and weightieſt; as already I have noted chap. 3. n. 19. And if ſome Proteſtants do now relent from the rigour of the aforeſaid Doctrin, we muſt affirm, that at leaſt ſome of them want the Theological Virtue of Hope; yea, that none of them can have true Hope, while they hope to be ſaved in the Communion of thoſe, who defend ſuch doctrins, as do directly overthrow all true Chriſtian Hope. And for as much as concerns Faith, we muſt alſo infer, that they want unity therein (and conſequently have none at all) by their diſagreement about the ſoul of the Church; the principal Origin of ſalvation, of all other Points of Doctrin the chiefeſt and weightieſt. And if you want true Faith, you muſt by conſequence want Hope, or if you hold that this Point is not to be ſo indiviſible on either ſide, but that it hath latitude ſufficient to embrace all parties, without prejudice to their ſalvation; notwithſtanding that your Brethren hold it to be the ſoul of the Church, &c. I muſt repeat what I have ſaid heretofore, that, even by this Example, it is clear, you cannot agree what Points be fundamental. And ſo (to whatſoever anſwer you fly) I preſs you in the ſame manner, and ſay, that you have no Certainty, whether you agree in fundamental Points; or Unity and ſubſtance of Faith, which cannot ſtand with difference in fundamentals. And ſo, upon the whole matter, I leave it to be conſidered, whether, want of Charity can be juſtly charged on us, becauſe we affirm, that they cannot (without repentance) be ſaved, who want of all other the moſt neceſſary means of ſalvation, which are the three Theological Vertues, FAITH, HOPE, and CHARITY.

13. And now I end this firſt part, having, as I conceive, complied with my firſt deſign, (in that meaſure, which Time, Commodity, ſcarcity of Books, and my own ſmall Abilities could afford) which was to ſhew, that amongſt men of different Religions, one ſole only can be ſaved. For ſince there muſt be ſome infallible Means to decide all Controverſies concerning Religion, and to propound truth revealed by Almighty God; and this means can be no other, but the Viſible Church of Chriſt, which at the time of Luther's appearance was only the Church of Rome, and ſuch as agreed with her: We muſt conclude, that whoſoever oppoſeth himſelf to her definitions, or forſaketh her Communion, doth reſiſt God himſelf, whoſe Spouſe ſhe is, and whoſe divine truth ſhe propounds; and therefore becomes guilty of Schiſm and Hereſie, which ſince Luther, his Aſſociates, and Proteſtants have done, and ſtill continue to do; it is not want of Charity, but abundance of evident cauſe, that forceth us to declare this neceſſary Truth, PROTESTANCY UNREPENTED DESTROYS SALVATION.

The ANSWER to the SEVENTH CHAPTER.

That Proteſtants are not bound by the Charity which they owe to themſelves, to reunite themſelves to the Roman Church.

THE firſt four Paragraphs of this Chapter, are wholly ſpent in an unneceſſary introduction unto a truth, which I preſume, never was, nor will be, by any man in his right wits, either denied or queſtioned; and that is, That every man in Wiſdom and Charity to himſelf, is to take the ſafeſt way to his eternal Salvation.

2. The fifth and ſixth are nothing in a manner, but references to diſcourſes, already anſwered by me, and confuted in their proper places.

3. The ſeventh, eighth, ninth, tenth, and eleventh, have no other foundation but this falſe pretence, That we confeſs the Roman Church free from damnable error.

4. In the twelfth there is ſomething that has ſome probability to perſuade ſome Proteſtants to forſake ſome of their opinions, or others to leave their communion; but to prove Proteſtants in general, to be in the ſtate of ſin while they remain ſeparate from the Roman Church, there is not one word or ſyllable: and beſides, whatſoever argument there is in it for any purpoſe, it may be as forcibly returned upon Papiſts, as it is urged againſt Proteſtants; in as much as all Papiſts either hold the Doctrine of Predetermination, and abſolute Election, or communicate with thoſe that do hold it. Now from this Doctrine, what is more prone and obvious, than for every natural man (without Gods eſpecial preventing grace) to make this practical collection, Either I am elected, or not elected; If I be, no impiety poſſible can ever damn me: If not, no poſſible induſtry can ever ſave me. Now whether this disjunctive perſuaſion be not as likely (as any Doctrine of any Proteſtants) to extinguiſh Chriſtian hope, and filial fear, and to leads ſome men to deſpair, other to preſumption, all to a wretchleſs and impious life, I deſire you ingeniouſly to inform me? and if you deny it, aſſure your ſelf you ſhall be contradicted and confuted by men of your own Religion and your own Society, and taught at length this charitable Doctrine, that though mens opinions may be charged with the abſurd conſequences which naturally flow from them, yet the men themſelves are not; I mean, if they perceive not the conſequence of theſe abſurdities, nor do not own and acknowledge, but diſclaim and deteſt them. And this is all the anſwer which I ſhould make to this diſcourſe if I ſhould deal rigidly and ſtrictly with you. Yet that you may not think your ſelf contemned, nor have occaſion to pretend, that your arguments are evaded, I will intreat leave of my Reader to bring to the teſt every Particle of it, and to cenſure what deſerves a cenſure, and to anſwer what may any way ſeem to require an anſwer: and then I doubt not, but what I have affirmed in general will appear in particular.

5. Ad §. 1. To the Firſt then I ſay: 1. It was needleſs to prove, that due Order is to be obſerved in any things; much more in Charity, which being one of the beſt things, may be ſpoyled by being diſordered: Yet if it ſtood in need of proof, I fear this place of the Canticles, He hath ordered Charity in me, would be no enforcing demonſtration of it. 2. The reaſon alledged by you why we ought to love one object more than another, becauſe one thing participates the Divine Goodneſs more than another, is phantaſtical and repugnant to what you ſay preſently after. For by this rule, no man ſhould love himſelf more than all the world; which yet you require, unleſs he were firſt vainly perſuaded that he doth more participate the Divine Goodneſs than all the world. But the true reaſon why one thing ought to be loved more than another, is, becauſe one thing is better than another, or becauſe it is better to us, or becauſe God commands us to do ſo, or becauſ

God himſelf does ſo, and we are to conform our affections to the will of God. 3. It is not true, that all objects which we believe, do equally participate the Divine Teſtimony or Revelations: For ſome are teſtified more evidently, and ſome more obſcurely; and therefore whatſoever you have built upon this ground, muſt of neceſſity fall together with it. And thus much for the firſt number.

5. Ad §. 2. In the Second, many paſſages deſerve a cenſure. For 1. it is not true that we are to wiſh or deſire to God a nature infinite, independent, immenſe: For it is impoſſible I ſhould deſire to any perſon that which he hath already, If I know that he hath it; nor the perpetuity of it, if I know it impoſſible but he muſt have it for perpetuity. And therefore, Rejoycing only and not Well-wiſhing is here the proper work of love. 2. Whereas you ſay, That in things neceſſary to ſalvation, no man ought in any caſe or in any reſpect whatſoever, to prefer the ſpiritual good of the whole world before his own ſoul: In ſaying this, you ſeem to me to condemn one of the greateſt acts of Charity, of one of the greateſt Saints that ever was, I mean St. Paul, who for his brethren deſired to be an Anathema from Chriſt. And as for the Text alledged by you in confirmation of your ſaying, What doth it avail a man if he gain the whole world, and ſuſtain the damage of his own ſoul? It is nothing to the purpoſe: For without all queſtion, it is not profitable for a man to do ſo; but the queſtion is, whether it be not lawful for a man to forgo and part with his own particular profit, to procure the univerſal, ſpiritual, and eternal benefit of others? 3. Whereas you ſay, It is directly againſt Charity to our ſelves, to adventure the omitting of any means neceſſary to ſalvation, this is true: But ſo is this alſo, that it is directly againſt the ſame Charity, to adventure the omitting any thing, that may any way help or conduce to my ſalvation, that may make the way to it more ſecure or leſs dangerous. And therefore if the errors of the Roman Church do but hinder me in this way, or any way endanger it, I am, in Charity to my ſelf, bound to forſake them, though they be not deſtructive of it. 4. Whereas you conclude, That if by living out of the Roman-Church we put our ſelves in hazard to want ſomething neceſſary to Salvation, we commit a grievous ſin againſt the vertue of Charity as it reſpects our ſelves: This conſequence may be good in thoſe which are thus perſuaded of the Roman Church, and yet live out of it. But the ſuppoſition is certainly falſe, We may live and die out of the Roman Church, without putting our ſelves in any ſuch hazard: Nay, to live and die in it is as dangerous as to ſhoot a gulf, which though ſome good ignorant ſouls may do and eſcape, yet it may well be feared that not one in a hundred but miſcarries.

7. Ad §. 3. I proceed now to the third Section; and herein firſt I obſerve this acknowledgement of yours, That in things neceſſary only becauſe commanded, a probable ignorance of the Commandment excuſes the Party from all fault, and doth not exclude Salvation. From which Doctrine it ſeems to me to follow, that ſeeing obedience to the Roman Church cannot be pretended to be neceſſary, but only becauſe it is commanded, therefore not only an invincible, but even a probable ignorance of this pretended command, muſt excuſe us from all faulty breach of it, and cannot exclude Salvation. Now ſeeing this command is not pretended to be expreſly delivered, but only to be deduced from the Word of God, and that not by the moſt clear and evident conſequences that may be; and ſeeing an infinity of great Objections lies againſt it, which ſeem ſtrongly to prove that that is no ſuch command, with what Charity can you ſuppoſe, that our ignorance of this command is not at the leaſt probable, if not, all things conſidered, plainly invincible? Sure I am, for my part, that I have done my true endeavour to find it true, and am ſtill willing to do ſo; but the more I ſeek, the farther I am from finding, and therefore if it be true, certainly my not find it is very excuſable, and you have reaſon to be very charitable in your cenſures of me. 2. Whereas you ſay, that beſides theſe things neceſſary becauſe commanded, there are other things, which are commanded becauſe neceſſary: of which number you make Divine infallible faith, Baptiſm means: I answer, that it is true, we are not to question the known will of God of injustice; yet whether that which you pretend to be Gods will be so indeed, or only your presumption, this I hope may be questioned lawfully and without presumption; and if we have occasion we may safely put you in mind of Ezekiel's commination, against all those who say, Thus saith the Lord, when they have no certain warrant or authority from him to do so.

Baptiſm in act for Children, and in Deſire for thoſe who are come to the uſe of Reaſon, and the Sacrament of Confeſſion for thoſe who have committed mortal ſin: In theſe words you ſeem to me to deliver a ſtrange Paradox, viz. That Faith, and Baptiſm, and Confeſſion, are not therefore neceſſary for us, becauſe God appointed them, but are therefore appointed by God, becauſe they were neceſſary for us, antecedently to his appointment: which if were true, I wonder what it was beſide God that made them neceſſary, and made it neceſſary for God to command them! Beſides, in making Faith one of theſe neceſſary means, you ſeem to exclude Infants from Salvation: For, Faith comes by hearing, and they have not heard. In requiring that this Faith ſhould be divine and infallible, you caſt your Credence into infinite perplexity, who cannot poſſibly by any ſure Mark diſcern whether their Faith be Divine or Humane; or if you have any certain ſign, whereby they may diſcern whether they believe your Churches infallibility with Divine, or only with Human Faith, I pray produce it, for perhaps it may ſerve us to ſhew, that our faith is divine as well as yours. Moreover, in affirming that Baptiſm in act is neceſſary for Infants, and for men only in deſire, You ſeem to me in the later to deſtroy the foundation of the former. For if a deſire of Baptiſm will ſerve men inſtead of Baptiſm, then thoſe words of our Saviour, Unleſs a man be born again of water, &c. are not to be underſtood literally and rigidly of external Baptiſm; for a deſire of Baptiſm is not Baptiſm, and ſo your foundation of the abſolute neceſſity of Baptiſm is deſtroyed. And if you may gloſs the Text ſo far, as that men may be ſaved by the deſire, without Baptiſm it ſelf, becauſe they cannot have it, Why ſhould you not gloſs it a little farther, that there may be ſome hope of the Salvation of unbaptized Infants: to whom it was more impoſſible to have a deſire of Baptiſm, than for the former to have the thing it ſelf? Laſtly, for your Sacrament of Confeſſion, we know none ſuch, nor any ſuch abſolute neceſſity of it. They that confeſs their ſins and forſake them ſhall find mercy, though they confeſs them to God only, and not to men. They that confeſs them both to God and men, if they do not effectually and in time forſake them, ſhall not find mercy. 3. Whereas you ſay, that ſuppoſing theſe means once appointed as abſolutely neceſſary to Salvation, there cannot but ariſe an obligation of procuring to have them; you muſt ſuppoſe, I hope, that we know them to be ſo appointed, and that it is in our power to procure them: otherwiſe though it may be our ill fortune to fail of the end, for want of the means, certainly we cannot be obliged to procure them. For the rule of the Law is alſo the dictate of common reaſon and equity, That no man can be obliged to what is impoſſible. We can be obliged to nothing but by vertue of ſome command: now it is impoſſible that God ſhould command in earneſt any thing which he knows to be impoſſible. For to command in earneſt, is to command with an intent to be obeyed, which is not poſſible he ſhould do, when he knows the thing commanded to be impoſſible. Laſtly, whoſoever is obliged to do any thing, and does it not, commits a fault; but Infants commit no fault in not procuring to have Baptiſm; therefore no obligation lies upon them to procure it. 4. Whereas you ſay, that If Proteſtants diſſent from you in the Point of the neceſſity of Baptiſm for infants, it cannot be denied but that our diſagreement is in a point fundamental; If you mean a point eſteemed ſo by you, this indeed cannot be denied: But if you mean, a point that indeed is fundamental, this may certainly be denied: for I deny it, and ſay, that it doth not appear to me any way neceſſary to Salvation to hold the truth, or not to hold an error, touching the condition of theſe Infants. This is certain, and we muſt believe that God will not deal unjuſtly with them; but how in particular he will deal with them concerns not us, and therfore we need not much regard it. 5. Whereas you ſay the like of your Sacrament of Penance, you only ſay ſo, but your proofs are wanting. Laſtly, whereas you ſay, This rigor ought not to ſeem ſtrange or unjuſt in God, but that we are rather to bleſs him for ordaining us to Salvation by any means:

8. Ad §. 4. In the fourth Paragraph, you deliver this false and wicked Doctrine, that for the procuring our own salvation we are always bound under pain of mortal sin, to take the safest way; but for avoiding sin we are not bound to do so, but may follow the opinion of any probable Doctors, though the contrary way be certainly free from sin, and theirs be doubtful. Which Doctrine in the former part of it is apparently false. For though Wisdom and Charity to our selves would persuade us always to do so, yet many times, that way which to our selves and our salvation is more full of hazard, is notwithstanding not only lawful but more charitable and more noble. For example, to fly from a persecution and so to avoid the temptation of it, may be the safer way for a mans own salvation; yet I presume no man ought to condemn him of impiety, who should resolve not to use his liberty in this matter, but for Gods greater glory, the greater honor of truth, and the greater confirmation of his brethren in the faith, choose to stand out the storm and endure the firy trial, rather than avoid; rather to put his own soul to the hazard of a temptation, in hope of Gods assistance to go through with it, than to baulk the opportunity of doing God and his brethren so great a service. This part therefore of this Doctrine is manifestly untrue. The other, not only false but impious; for therein you plainly give us to understand, that in your judgment, a resolution to avoid sin, to the uttermost of your power, is no necessary means of Salvation; nay, that a man may resolve not to do so, without any danger of damnation. Therein you teach us that we are to do more for the love of our selves, and our own happiness, than for the love of God; and in so doing contradict our Saviour, who expressly commands us, to love the Lord our God with all our heart, with all our soul, and with all our strength; and hath taught us, that the love of God consists in avoiding sin and keeping his commandments. Therein you directly cross S. Pauls Doctrine, who though he were a very probable Doctor, and had delivered his judgment for the lawfulness of eating meats offered to Idols; yet he assures us that he which should make scruple of doing so, and forbear upon his scruple should not sin, but only be a weak brother; whereas he, who should do it with a doubtful conscience, (though the action were by S. Paul warranted lawful, yet) should sin and be condemned for so doing. You pretend indeed to be rigid defenders and stout champions for the necessity of good works; but the truth is, you speak lies in hypocrisie, and when the matter is well examined, will appear to make your selves and your own functions necessary, but obedience to God unnecessary: Which will appear to any man who considers what strict necessity the Scripture imposes upon all men, of effectual mortification of the habits of all vices, and effectual conversion to newness of life, and universal obedience, and withal remembers that an act of Attrition, which you say with Priestly Absolution is sufficient to salvation, is not mortification, which being a work of difficulty and time, cannot be performed in an instant. But for the present, it appears sufficiently out of this impious assertion, which makes it absolutely necessary for men, either in Act, if it be possible, or if not, in Desire, to be Baptized and Absolved by you, and that with intention: and in the mean time warrants them that for avoiding of sin, they may safely follow the uncertain guidance of vain man, who you cannot deny may either be deceived himself, or out of malice deceive them, and neglect the certain direction of God himself, and their own consciences. What wicked use is made of this Doctrine, your own long experience can better inform you than it is possible for me to do: yet my own little conversation conversation with you affords one memorable example to this purpose. For upon this ground I knew a young Scholar in Doway, licenced by a great Casuist to swear a thing as upon his certain knowledge, whereof he had yet no knowledge but only a great presumption, because (forsooth) it was the opinion of one Doctor that he might do so. And upon the same ground, whensoever you shall come to have a prevailing party in this Kingdom, and power sufficient to restore your religion, you may do it by deposing or killing the King, by blowing up of Parliaments, and by rooting out of all others of a different Faith from you. Nay, this you may do though in your own opinion it be unlawful, because * Bellarmine, a man with you of approved vertue, learning, and judgment, hath declared his opinion for the lawfulness of it in saying, that want of power to maintain a rebellion, was the only reason that the Primitive Christians did not rebel against their persecuting Emperors. By the same rule seeing the Priests and Scribes and Pharisees, men of greatest repute among the Jews for vertue, learning, and wisdom, held it a lawful and a pious work to persecute Christ and his Apostles, it was lawful for their people to follow their Leaders: for herein, according to your Doctrine, they proceeded prudently, and according to the conduct of opinion, maturely weighed and approved by men (as it seem'd to them) of vertue, learning, and wisdom; nay by such as sate in Moses chair, and of whom it was said, Whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do: which Universal you pretend is to be understood universally, and without any restriction or limitation. And as lawful was it for the Pagans to persecute the Primitive Christians, because Trajan and Pliny, men of great vertue and wisdom were of this opinion. Lastly, that most impious and detestable Doctrine, (which by a foul calumny you impute to me, who abhor and detest it) that men may be saved in any religion, follows from this ground unavoidably. For certainly, Religion is one of those things which is necessary only because it is commanded: for if none were commanded under pain of damnation, how could it be damnable to be of any or to be of none? Neither can it be damnable to be of a false Religion, unless it be a sin to be so. For neither are men saved by good luck, but only by obedience; neither are they damned for their ill fortune, but for sin and disobedience. Death is the wages of nothing but sin: and S. James sure intended to deliver the adequate cause of sin and death in those words, Lust when it hath conceived bringeth forth sin, and when it is finished bringeth forth death. Seeing therefore in such things, according to your doctrin, it is sufficient for avoiding of sin that we proceed prudently, and by the conduct of some probable opinion, maturely weighed and approved by men of learning, virtue and wisdom: and seeing neither Jews want their Gamaliels, nor Pagans their Antoninus's nor any Sect of Christians such professors and maintainers of their several Sects, as are esteemed by the people, which know no better (and that very reasonably) men of virtue, learning and wisdom, it follows evidently that the imbracing their religion proceeds upon such reason as may warrant their action to be prudent, and this (say you) is sufficient for avoiding of sin, and therefore certainly for avoiding damnation, for that in human affairs and discourse, evidence and certainty cannot be always expected. I have stood the longer upon the refutation of this doctrine not only because it is impious, and because bad use is made of it, and worse may be; but only because the contrary position, That men are bound for avoiding sin always to take the safest way, is a fair and sure foundation, for a clear confutation of the main Conclusion, which in this Chapter you labour in vain to prove, and a certain proof that in regard of the precept of Charity towards ones self, and of obedience to God, Papists (unless ignorance excuse them) are in a state of sin, as long as they remain in subjection to the Roman Church.

9. For if the safer way for avoiding sin, be also the safer way for avoiding damnation, then certainly it will not be hard to determine, that the way of Protestants must be more secure, and the Roman way more dangerous: Take but into your consideration these ensuing Controversies; Whether it be lawful to worship worſhip Pictures? To Picture the Trinity? To invocate Saints and Angels? To deny Lay-men the Cup in the Sacrament? To adore the Sacrament? To prohibit certain Orders of men and women to marry? To celebrate the publick Service of God in a Language which the aſſiſtants generally underſtand not? And you will not chooſe but confeſs that in all theſe you are on the more dangerous ſide for the committing of ſin, and we on that which is more ſecure. for in all theſe things, if we ſay true, you do that which is impious: On the other ſide, if you were in the right, yet we might be ſecure enough, for we ſhould only not do ſomething which you confeſs not neceſſary to be done. We pretend, and are ready to juſtifie out of principles agreed upon between us, that in all theſe things you violate the manifeſt commandements of God; and alledge ſuch Texts of Scripture againſt you, as, if you would weigh them with any indifference, would put the matter out of queſtion, but certainly you cannot with any modeſty deny, but that at leaſt they make it queſtionable. On the other ſide, you cannot with any face pretend, and, if you ſhould, know not how to go about to prove, that there is any neceſſity of doing any of theſe things; that it is unlawful not to worſhip Pictures, not to Picture the Trinity, not to invocate Saints and Angels, not to give all men the entire Sacrament, not to adore the Euchariſt, not to prohibit marriage, not to celebrate Divine Service in an unknown tongue: I ſay, you neither do nor can pretend that there is any Law of God which enjoyns us, no nor ſo much as an Evangelical Counſel that adviſes us to do any of theſe things. Now where Law is, there can be no ſin; for ſin is the tranſgreſſion of the Law. It remains therefore that if your Church ſhould forbear to do theſe things, ſhe muſt undoubtedly be in the free from all danger and ſuſpicion of ſin; whereas your acting of them muſt be, if not certainly impious, without all contradiction queſtionable and dangerous. I conclude therefore that which was to be concluded, that if the ſafer way for avoiding ſin, be alſo (as moſt certainly it is) the ſafer way for avoiding damnation, then certainly the way of Proteſtants muſt be more ſafe, and the Roman way more dangerous. You will ſay, I know, that theſe things being by your Church concluded lawful, we are obliged by God, though not to do, yet to approve them: at leaſt in your judgment we are ſo, and therefore our condition is as queſtionable as yours. I anſwer, The authority of your Church is no common principle agreed upon between us, and therefore from that you are not to diſpute againſt us. We might preſs you with our judgment as well and as juſtly as you do us with yours. Beſides, this very thing that your Church hath determined theſe things lawful, and commanded the approbation of them, is that whereof ſhe is accuſed by us, and we maintain you have done wickedly, or at leaſt very dangerouſly, in ſo determining; becauſe in theſe very determinations, you have forſaken the ſafe way which was ſecure from ſin, and have choſen that which you cannot but know to be very queſtionable and doubtful; and conſequently have forſaken that way to heaven, and taken a way which is full of danger. And therefore, although if your obedience to your Church were queſtioned, you might fly for ſhelter to your Churches determinations, yet when theſe very determinations are accuſed, methinks they ſhould not be alledged in defence of themſelves. But you will ſay, Your Church is infallible, and therefore her determinations not unlawful. Anſw. They that accuſe your Church of error, you may be ſure do queſtion her infallibility: ſhew therefore where it is written, that your Church is infallible, and the diſpute will be ended. But till you do ſo, give me leave rather to conclude thus, Your Church, in many of her determinations, chooſes not that way which is moſt ſecure from ſin, and therefore not the ſafeſt way to ſalvation; than vainly to imagine her infallible, and thereupon to believe; though ſhe teach not the ſureſt way to avoid ſin, yet ſhe teaches the certaineſt way to obtain ſalvation.

10. In the cloſe of this Number, you ſay as follows, If it may appear though not certain, yet at leaſt probable, that Proteſtancy unrepented deſtroys ſalvation, and withal withal that there is a ſafer way, it will follow that they are obliged by the Law of Charity to that ſafe way. Anſw. Make this appear, and I will never perſuade any man to continue a Proteſtant; for if I ſhould, I ſhould perſuade him to continue a fool. But after all theſe prolix diſcourſes, ſtill we ſee you are at, If it may appear: From whence without all Ifs and Ands, that appears ſufficiently which I ſaid in the beginning of the Chapter, that the four firſt Paragraphs of this Chapter are wholly ſpent in an unneceſſary introduction, unto that which never by any man in his right wits was denied, That men, in wiſdom and charity to themſelves, are to take the ſafeſt way to eternal ſalvation.

11. Ad §. 5. In the fifth you begin to make ſome ſhew of arguing, and tell us, that Proteſtants have reaſon to doubt in what caſe they ſtand, from what you have ſaid about the Churches univerſal Infallibility, and of her being Judge of Controverſies, &c. Anſw. From all that which you have ſaid, they have reaſon only to conclude that you have nothing to ſay. They have as much reaſon to doubt, whether there can be any motion, from what Zeno ſays in Ariſtotles Phyſicks, as to doubt, from what you have ſaid, Whether the Roman Church may poſſibly err. For this I dare ſay, that not the weakeſt of Zeno's Arguments but is ſtronger than the ſtrongeſt of yours, and that you would be more perplext in anſwering any one of them, than I have been in anſwering all yours. You are pleaſed to repeat two or three of them in this Section, and in all probability ſo wiſe a man as you are, if he would repeat any, would repeat the beſt; and therefore if I deſire the Reader by theſe to judge of the reſt, I ſhall deſire but ordinary juſtice.

12. The firſt of them being put into form, ſtands thus, Every leaſt error in faith deſtroys the nature of faith: It is certain that ſome Proteſtants do err, and therefore they want the ſubſtance of Faith. The Major of which Syllogiſm I have formerly confuted by unanſwerable Arguments out of one of your own beſt Authors, who ſhews plainly that he hath amongſt you, as ſtrange as you make it, many other abettors. Beſides, if it were true, it would conclude, that either you or the Dominicans have no faith, inaſmuch as you oppoſe one another as much as Arminians and Calviniſts.

13. The ſecond Argument ſtands thus, Since all Proteſtants pretend the like certainty, it is clear that none of them have any certainty at all. Which Argument if it were good, then what can hinder but this muſt alſo be ſo, ſince Proteſtants and Papiſts pretend the like certainty, it is clear that none of them have any certainty at all! And this too: Since all Chriſtians pretend the like certainty, it is clear that none of them have any certainty at all! And thirdly this: Since men of all Religions pretend a like certainty, it is clear that none of them have any at all! And laſtly this: Since oft-times they which are abuſed with a ſpecious Paralogiſm, pretend the like certainty with them which demonſtrate, it is clear that none of them have any certainty at all! Certainly, Sir, Zeal and the Devil did ſtrangely blind you, if you did not ſee that theſe horrid impieties were the immediate conſequences of your Poſitions, if you did ſee it, and yet would ſet them down, you deſerve a worſe cenſure. Yet ſuch as theſe, are all the Arguments wherewith you conceive your ſelf to have proved undoubtedly, that Proteſtants have reaſon, at leaſt, to doubt in what caſe they ſtand. Neither am I afraid to venture my life upon it, that your ſelf ſhall not chuſe ſo much as one out of all the pack, which I will not ſhew before indifferent Judges, either to be impertinent to the queſtion, inconſequent in the deduction, or grounded upon ſome falſe, or at leaſt uncertain foundation.

14. Your third and fourth Argument may be thus put into one; Proteſtants cannot tell what Points in particular be fundamental; therefore they cannot tell whether they or their brethren do not err fundamentally, and whether their difference be not fundamental. Both which deductions I have formerly ſhewed to be moſt inconſequent; for knowing the Scripture to contain all fundamentals, (though many more Points beſides, which makes it difficult to ſay preciſely what is fundamental, and what not) knowing this, I say, and believing it, what can hinder but that I may be well assured, that I believe all fundamentals, and that all who believe the Scripture sincerely as well as I, do not differ from me in any thing fundamental?

15. In the close of this Section, you say, that you omit to add that we want the Sacrament of Repentance, instituted for the remission of sins, or at least we must confess that we hold it not necessary: and yet our own Brethren the Century-writers acknowledge that in the times of Cyprian and Tertullian, private confession even of thoughts was used, and that it was then commanded and thought necessary; and then our Ordination, you say, is very doubtful, and all that depends upon it. Answ, I also omit to answer, 1. That your brother Rhenanus, acknowledges the contrary, and assures us, That the Confession then required, and in use, was publick, and before the Church, and that your Auricular Confession was not then in the world; for which his mouth is stopped by your Index Expurgatorius. 2. That your Brother Arcudius acknowledges, that the Eucharist was in Cyprian's time given to Infants, and esteemed necessary, or at least profitable for them, and the giving it shews no less: and now I would know, whether you will acknowledge your Church bound to give it, and to esteem so of it: 3. That it might be then commanded, and being commanded, be thought necessary, and yet be but a Church Constitution. Neither will I deny, if the present Church could, and would so order it, that the abuses of it might be prevented, and conceiving it profitable, should enjoyn the use of it, but that being commanded it would be necessary. 4. Concerning our Ordinations, besides that I have proved it impossible that they should be so doubtful as yours, according to your own Principles; I answer, that experience shews them certainly sufficient to bring men to faith and repentance, and consequently to salvation; and that if there were any secret defect of any thing necessary, which we cannot help, God will certainly supply it.

16. Ad §. 6. In the sixth, you say, you will not repeat, but only put us again in mind, that unless the Roman Church were the true Church there was no visible Church upon earth, a thing so manifest, that Protestants themselves confess, &c. Answ. Neither will I repeat, but only put you in mind that you have not proved that there is any necessity that there should be any true Church in your sense visible; nor if there were, that there was no other besides the Roman. For as for the confession of Protestants which here you insist upon, it is evident out of their own words cited by your self, that by the whole World, they meant only the greatest part of it, which is an usual figure of speech, and never intended to deny that besides the Church then reigning and triumphing in this world, there was another militant Church, other Christians visible enough though persecuted and oppressed. Nor thirdly, do you here make good so much as with one fallacy, that if the Roman Church, were then the visible Church, it must needs be now the only or the safer way to heaven: and yet the connexion of this consequence was very necessary to be shown. For, for ought I know, it was not impossible that it might then be the only visible Church, and yet now a very dangerous way to heaven, or perhaps none at all.

17. Afterwards you vainly pretend that all Roman Catholicks, not one excepted, profess, that Protestancy unrepented destroys salvation. From which generality we may except two at least to my knowledge, and those are, your self, and Franciscus de Sancta Clara, who assures us, that Ignorance and Repentance may excuse a Protestant from damnation, though dying in his error. And this is all the Charity, which by your own confession also, the most favourable Protestants allow to Papists; and therefore with strange repugnance to your self, you subjoyn, that these are the men whom we must hold not to err damnably, unless we will destroy our own Church and Salvation. Whereas, as I have said before, though you were Turks, and Pagans, we might be good Christians. Neither is it necessary necessary for perpetuating of a Church before Luther, that your errors even then should not be damnable, but only not actually damning to some ignorant souls among you. In vain therefore you do make such Tragedies as here you do! In vain you conjure us with fear and trembling to consider these things! We have considered them again and again, and look'd upon them on both sides, and find neither terror nor truth in them. Let Children and Fools be terrified with Bugbears, men of understanding will not regard them.

18. Ad §. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. Your whole discourse in your five next Paragraphs, I have in the beginning of this Chapter fully confuted, by saying, that it stands altogether upon the false foundation of this affected mistake, that we do and must confess the Roman Church free from damnable error; which will presently be apparent, to any one who considers, that the seventh and tenth are nothing but Dr. Potter's words; and that in the other three, you obtrude upon us this Crambe no fewer than seven times. May you be pleased to look back to your own Book, and you shall find it so as I have said: and that at least in a hundred other places, you make your advantage of this false imputation: which when you have observed, and withal considered, that your self plainly intimate, that Dr. Potter's discourses, which here you censure, would be good and concluding, if we did not (as we do not) free you from damnable error; I hope you will acknowledge that my vouchsafing these Sections the honour of any farther answer, is a great supererogation in point of civility. Nevertheless partly that I may the more ingratiate my self with you, but especially that I may stop their mouths who will be apt to say, that every word of yours which I should omit to speak to, is an unanswerable argument, I will hold my purpose of answering them more punctually and particularly.

19. First then, to your little Parenthesis, which you interline among Dr. Potter's words, §. 7. That any small error in faith destroys all faith, (To omit what hath been said before) I answer here what is proper for this place: that S. Austin, whose authority is here stood upon, thought otherwise: He conceived the Donatists to hold some error in faith, and yet not to have no faith. His words of them to this purpose are most pregnant and evident, You are with us (saith he to the Donatists, Ep. 48.) as Baptism, in the Creed, and the other Sacraments: And again, Super gestis cum emerit: Thou hast proved to me that thou hast Faith: prove to me likewise that thou hast Charity. Parallel to which words are these of Optatus, Amongst us and you is one Ecclesiastical conversation, common Lessons, the same Faith, the same Sacraments. Where, by the way, we may observe, that in the judgment of these Fathers, even Donatists, though Hereticks and Schismaticks, gave true Ordination, the true Sacrament of Matrimony, true Sacramental Absolution, Confirmation, the true Sacrament of the Eucharist, true Extreme Unction; or else (chuse you whether) some of these were not then esteemed Sacraments. But for Ordination, whether he held it a Sacrament or no, certainly he held that it remained with them entire: for so he says in express terms, in his Book against Parmenianus his Epistle. Which Doctrine if you can reconcile with the present Doctrine of the Roman Church, Eris mihi magnus Apollo.

20. Whereas, in the beginning of the eighth Sect. You deny that your argument drawn from our confessing the possibility of your Salvation, is for simple people alone, but for all men: I answer, Certainly whosoever is moved with it, must be so simple as to think this a good and a concluding reason: Some ignorant men in the Roman Church may be saved, by the confession of Protestants, (which is indeed all that they confess) therefore it is safe for me to be of the Roman Church; and he that thinks so, what reason is there why he should not think this as good, Ignorant Protestants may be saved, by the confession of Papists, (by name, Mr. K.) therefore it is safe for me to be of the Protestant Church? Whereas you say, that this your Argument is grounded upon an inevitable necessity for us, either to grant Salvation to your Church, or to entail certain damnation upon our own, because ours can have no being till Luther, unleſs yours be ſuppoſed to have been the true Church. Ianſwer, This cauſe is no cauſe: For firſt, as Luther had no being before Luther, and yet he was when he was, though he was not before; ſo there is no repugnance in the terms, but that there might be a true Church after Luther, though there were none for ſome Ages before; as ſince Columbus his time, there have been Chriſtians in America, though before there were none for many Ages. For neither do you ſhew, neither does it appear, that the generation of Churches is univocal, that nothing but a Church can poſſibly beget a Church; nor that the preſent being of a true Church, depends neceſſarily upon the perpetuity of a Church in all Ages; any more than the preſent being of Peripateticks or Stoicks depends upon a perpetual pedigree of them. For though I at no hand deny the Churches perpetuity, yet I ſee nothing in your Book to make me underſtand, that the truth of the preſent depends upon it, nor any thing that can hinder, but that a falſe Church, (Gods Providence over-watching and over-ruling it) may preſerve the means of confuting their own Hereſies, and reducing men to truth, and ſo raiſing a true Church, I mean the integrity and the authority of the Word of God with men. Thus the Jews preſerve means to make men Chriſtians, and Papiſts preſerve means to make men Proteſtants, and Proteſtants (which you ſay are a falſe Church) do, as you pretend, preſerve means to make men Papiſts; that is, their own Bibles, out of which you pretend to be able to prove that they are to be Papiſts. Secondly, you ſhew not, nor does it appear, that the perpetuity of the Church depends on the truth of yours. For though you talk vainly, as if you were the only men in the world before Luther, yet the world knows that this is but talk, and that there were other Chriſtians beſides you, which might have perpetuated the Church though you had not been. Laſtly, you ſhew not, neither doth it appear, that your being acknowledged in ſome ſenſe a true Church, doth neceſſarily import, that we muſt grant Salvation to it, unleſs by it you underſtand the ignorant members of it, which is a very unuſual Synechdoche.

21. Whereas you ſay, that Catholicks never granted that the Donatiſts had a true Church or might be ſaved. Ianſwer, S. Auſtin himſelf granted that thoſe among them, who fought the Truth, being ready when they found it to correct their error, were not Hereticks, and therefore notwithſtanding their error, might be ſaved. And this is all the Charity that Proteſtants allow to Papiſts.

20. Whereas you ſay, that Dr. Potter having cited out of St. Auſtin the words of the Catholicks, that the Donatiſts had true Baptiſm, when he comes to the contrary words of the Donatiſts, adds, No Church, No Salvation. Anſw. You wrong Dr. Potter, who pretends not to cite St. Auſtin's formal words, but only his ſenſe, which in him is complete and full for that purpoſe, whereto it is alledged by Dr. Potter. His words are, Petilianus dixit, Venite ad Eccleſiam Populi & aufugite Traditores, ſi perire non vultis: Petilian ſaith, Come to the Church ye people, and fly from the Traditors, if ye will not be damn'd: for that ye may know, that they being guilty, eſteem very well of our Faith, Behold I Baptize theſe whom they have infected, but they receive thoſe whom we have Baptized. Where it is plain, that Petilian by his words makes the Donatiſts the Church, and excludes the Catholicks from ſalvation abſolutely. And therefore no Church, no ſalvation was not Dr. Potter's addition. And whereas you ſay the Catholicks never yield that among the Donatiſts there was a true Church and hope of Salvation: I ſay, it appears by what I have alledged out of St. Auſtin, that they yielded both theſe were among the Donatiſts, as much as we yield them to be among the Papiſts. As for Dr. Potter's acknowledgment, that They maintained an error in the matter and nature of it Heretical: This proves them but Material Hereticks, whom you do not exclude from poſſibility of Salvation. So that all things conſidered, this Argument muſt be much more forcible from the Donatiſts againſt the Catholicks, than from Papiſts againſt Proteſtants, in regard Proteſtants grant Papiſts no more hope of ſalvation than Papiſts grant Proteſtants: whereas the Donatiſts excluded abſolutely all but their own Part from hope of Salvation, ſo far as to account them no Chriſtians that were not of it: The Catholicks mean while accounting them Brethren, and freeing thoſe among them, from the imputation of Hereſie, who being in error quærebant cautâ ſollicitudine veritatem, corrigi parati cùm invenerint.

23. Whereas you ſay, That the Argument for the certainty of their Baptiſm (becauſe it was confeſſed good by Catholicks, whereas the Baptiſm of Catholicks was not confeſſed by them to be good) is not ſo good as yours, touching the certainty of your ſalvation grounded on the confeſſion of Proteſtants, becauſe we confeſs there is no damnable error in the Doctrine or practice of the Roman Church: I anſwer, No: we confeſs no ſuch matter, and though you ſay ſo a hundred times, no repetition will make it true. We profeſs plainly, that many damnable errors, plainly repugnant to the precepts of Chriſt both Ceremonial and Moral, more plainly than this of Rebaptization, and therefore more damnable, are believed and profeſſed by you. And therefore, ſeeing this is the only diſparity you can deviſe, and this is vaniſhed, it remains that as good an Anſwer as the Catholicks made touching the certainty of their Baptiſm, as good may we make, and with much more evidence of Reaſon, touching the ſecurity and certainty of our Salvation.

24. By the way, I deſire to be informed, ſeeing you affirm that Rebaptizing thoſe whom Hereticks had baptized was a ſacriledge, and a profeſſion of a damnable Hereſie, when it began to be ſo? If from the beginning it were ſo, then was Cyprian a ſacrilegious profeſſor of a damnable Hereſie, and yet a Saint and a Martyr. If it were not ſo, then did your Church excommunicate Fermilian and others, and ſeparate from them without ſufficient ground of Excommunication or Separation, which is Schiſmatical. You ſee what difficulties you run into, on both ſides; chuſe whether you will, but certainly both can hardly be avoided.

25. Whereas again in this §. you obtrude upon us, That we cannot but confeſs that your Doctrine coutains no damnable error, and that yours is ſo certainly a true Church, that unleſs yours be true we cannot pretend any: I anſwer, there is in this neither truth nor modeſty to outface us, that we cannot but confeſs what indeed we cannot but deny. For my part, if I were upon the rack, I perſwade my ſelf I ſhould not confeſs the one nor the other.

26. Whereas again preſently you add, that Dr. Potter grants we ſhould be guilty of Schiſm, if we did cut off your Church from the body of Chriſt and the hope of Salvation: I have ſhewed above, that he grants no ſuch matter. He ſays indeed, that our not doing ſo frees us from the imputation of Schiſm, and from hence you ſophiſtically infer, that he muſt grant, if we did ſo, we were Schiſmaticks, and then make your Reader believe, that this is Dr. Potter's confeſſion, it being indeed your own Collection. For as every one that is not a Papiſt, is not a Jeſuit: and yet not every one that is a Papiſt is a Jeſuit: As whoſoever comes not into England, comes not to London, and yet many may come into England, and not come to London: As, whoſoever is not a man, is not a King, and yet many are men that are not Kings: So likewiſe it may be certain, that whoſoever does not ſo is free from Schiſm, and yet they that do ſo (if there be ſufficient cauſe) may be not guilty of it.

27. Whereas you pretend to wonder that the Doctor did not anſwer the Argument of the Donatiſts, which he ſays is all one with yours, but refers you to St. Auſtin, there to read it, as if every one carried with him a Library, or were able to examine the places in St. Auſtin. Ianſwer, The parity of the Arguments was that which the Doctor was to declare, whereto it was impertinent what the anſwer was: But ſufficient it was to ſhew that the Donatiſts Argument which you would never grant good, was yet as good as yours, and therefore yours could not be good. Now to this purpoſe, as the concealing the anſwer was no way advantageous, ſo to produce it was not neceſſary: and therefore he did you more ſervice than he was bound to, in referring you to St. Auſtin for an anſwer to it.

it. Whereas you ſay, he had reaſon to conceal it, becauſe it makes directly againſt himſelf: I ſay, it is ſo far from doing ſo, that it will ſerve in proportion to the Argument, as fitly as if it had been made for it: for, as St. Auſtin ſays; That Catholicks approve the Doctrine of Donatiſts, but abhor their Hereſie of Re-baptization: ſo we ſay, that we approve thoſe fundamental and ſimple neceſſary Truths which you retain, by which ſome good ſouls among you may be ſaved, but abhor your many Superſtitions and Hereſies. And as he ſays, that as Gold is good, yet ought not to be ſought for among a company of Thieves; and Baptiſm good, but not to be ſought for in the Conventicles of Donatiſts: ſo ſay we, that the Truths you retain are good, and as we hope ſufficient to bring good ignorant ſouls among you to ſalvation, yet are not to be ſought for in the Conventicles of Papiſts,, who hold with them a mixture of many vanities, and many impieties. For, as for our freeing you from damnable Hereſie, and yielding you Salvation, (which ſtone here again you ſtumble at) neither he nor any other Proteſtant is guilty of it, and therefore you muſt confeſs that this very anſwer will ſerve Proteſtants againſt this Charm of Papiſts, as well as St. Auſtin againſt the Donatiſts, and that indeed it was not Dr. Potter, but You, that, without a Sarcaſm, had reaſon to conceal it.

28. The laſt piece of Dr. Potter's Book, which you are pleaſed to take notice of in this firſt Part of yours, is an Argument he makes in your behalf, p. 79. of his Book, where he makes you ſpeak thus, If Proteſtants believe the Religion of Papiſts to be a ſafe way to heaven, why do they not follow it? This Argument you like not, becauſe many things may be good and yet not neceſſary to be embraced by every body, and therefore ſcoff at it, and call it an Argument of his own, a wiſe Argument, a wiſe demand: And then ask of him, what he thinks of it being framed thus. Our Religion is ſafe, even by your confeſſion, and therefore you ought to grant that all may embrace it, And yet farther thus, Among different Religions one only can be ſafe. But yours by our own confeſſion is ſafe; whereas you hold that in ours there is no hope of ſalvation; therefore we ought to embrace yours. Anſw. I have adviſed with him, and am to tell you from him, that he thinks reaſonable well of the Arguments, but very ill of him that makes them, as affirming ſo often without ſhame and conſcience, what he cannot but know to be plainly falſe: and his reaſon is, becauſe he is ſo far from confeſſing, or giving you any ground to pretend he does confeſs, that your Religion is ſafe for all that are of it, from whence only it will follow that all may ſafely embrace it, that in this very place, from which you take theſe words, he profeſſeth plainly, that it is extremely dangerous if not certainly damnable to all ſuch as profeſs it, when either they do, or, if their hearts were upright and not perverſely obſtinate, might believe the contrary, and that, for us who are convinced in conſcience that ſhe (the Roman Church) errs in many things, it lies upon us, even under pain of damnation, to forſake her in thoſe errors. And though here you take upon you a ſhew of great rigour, and will ſeem to hold that in our way there is no hope of ſalvation; yet formerly you have been more liberal of your Charity towards us, and will needs vie and contend with Dr. Potter, which of the two ſhall be more charitable, aſſuring us that you allow Proteſtants as much Charity as Dr. Potter ſpares you, for whom he makes Ignorance the beſt hope of ſalvation. And now I appeal to any indifferent Reader, whether our diſavowing to confeſs you free from damnable error, were not (as I pretend) a full confutation of all that you ſay in theſe five foregoing Paragraphs: And as for you, I wonder what anſwer, what evaſion, what ſhift you can deviſe to clear your ſelf from diſhoneſty, for imputing to him almoſt an hundred times, this acknowledgment which he never makes, but very often, and that ſo plainly that you take notice of it, profeſſeth the contrary.

29. The beſt defence that poſſibly can be made for you, I conceive, is this, that you were led into this error, by miſtaking a ſuppoſition of a confeſſion for a confeſſion; A Rhetorical conceſſion of the Doctors for a poſitive aſſertion. He ſays tion. He ſays indeed of your errors, Though of themſelves they be not damnable to them which believe as they profeſs, yet for us to profeſs what we believe not, were without queſtion damnable. But to ſay, Though your errors be not damnable, we may not profeſs them, is not to ſay your errors are not damnable, but only though they be not. As if you ſhould ſay, though the Church err in Points not fundamental, yet you may not ſeparate from it: Or though we do err in believing Chriſt really preſent, yet our error frees us from Idolatry: Or, as if a Proteſtant ſhould ſay, Though you do not commit Idolatry in adoring the Hoſt, yet being uncertain of the Prieſt's intention to conſecrate, at leaſt you expoſe your ſelf to the danger of it: I preſume you would not think it fairly done, if any man ſhould interpret either this laſt ſpeech as an acknowledgment, that you do not commit Idolatry, or the former as confeſſions, that you do err in Points not fundamental, that you do err in believing the Real Preſence. And therefore you ought not ſo to have miſtaken Dr. Potter's words, as if he had confeſſed the errors of your Church not damnable, when he ſays no more but this, though they be ſo, or, ſuppoſe, or put the caſe they be ſo, yet being errors, we that know them may not profeſs them to be divine truths. Yet this miſtake might have been pardonable, had not Dr. Potter in many places of his Book, by declaring his judgment touching the quality and malignity of your errors, taken away from you all occaſion of error. But now that he ſays plainly, That your Church hath many ways played the Harlot, and in that regard deſerved a Bill of Divorce from Chriſt, and the deteſtation of Chriſtians, p. 11. That for that maſs of Errors and Abuſes in Judgment and practice which is proper to her, and wherein ſhe differs from us, we judge a Reconciliation impoſſible, and to us (who are convicted in conſcience of her corruptions) damnable, page 20. That Popery is the contagion or plague of the Church, page 60. That we cannot, we dare not communicate with her in her publick Liturgy, which is manifeſtly polluted with groſs Superſtition, page 68. That they who in former Ages died in the Church of Rome, died in many ſinful errors, page 78. That they that have underſtanding and means to diſcover their errors and neglect to uſe them, he dares not flatter them with ſo eaſie a cenſure, as to give them hope of ſalvation, page 79. That the way of the Roman Religion is not ſafe, but very dangerous, if not certainly damnable, to ſuch as profeſs it, when they believe (or, if their hearts were upright and not perverſely obſtinate, might believe) the contrary, page 79. That your Church is but (in ſome ſenſe) a true Church: and your errors only to ſome men not damnable, and that we who are convinced in conſcience that ſhe errs in many things, are under pain of damnation, to forſake her in thoſe errors. Seeing I ſay, he ſays all this ſo plainly and ſo frequently, certainly your charging him falſly with this acknowledgment, and building a great part not only of your diſcourſe in this Chapter, but of your whole Book upon it, poſſibly it may be palliated with ſome excuſe, but it can no way be defended with any juſt Apology. Eſpecially ſeeing you your ſelf more than once or twice, take notice of theſe his ſeverer Cenſures of your Church, and the errors of it, and make your advantage of them. In the firſt number of your firſt Chapter, you ſet down three of the former places; and from thence infer, that as you affirm Proteſtancy unrepented deſtroys Salvation, ſo Dr. Potter pronounces the like heavy doom againſt Roman Catholicks: And again, §. 4. of the ſame Chapter, We allow Proteſtants as much charity as Dr. Potter ſpares us, for whom he makes Ignorance the beſt hope of ſalvation. And c. 5. §. 41. you have theſe words: It is very ſtrange that you judge us extreamly uncharitable in ſaying Proteſtants cannot be ſaved, while your ſelf avouch the ſame of all learned Catholicks, whom Ignorance cannot excuſe! Thus out of the ſame mouth you blow hot and cold; and one while when it is for your purpoſe, you profeſs Dr. Potter cenſures your errors as heavily as you do ours; which is very true, for he gives hope of Salvation to none among you but to thoſe whoſe ignorance was the cauſe of their error, and no ſin cauſe of their ignorance: and preſently after, when another project comes in your head you make his words ſofter than oyl towards you, you pretend he does and muſt confeſs, That your doctrine contains no damnable error, that your Church is certainly a true Church, that your way to heaven is a ſafe way, and all theſe acknowledgments you ſet down ſimple and abſolute, without any reſtriction or limitation; whereas in the Doctor they are all ſo qualified, that no knowing Papiſt can promiſe himſelf any ſecurity or comfort from them. We confeſs (ſaith he) the Church of Rome to be (in ſome ſenſe) a true Church, and her errors (to ſome men) not damnable: we believe her Religion ſafe, that is, by Gods great mercy not damnable, to ſome ſuch as believe what they profeſs: but we believe it not ſafe, but very dangerous, if not certainly damnable to ſuch as profeſs it, when they believe (or if their hearts were upright and not perverſly obſtinate might believe) the contrary. Obſerve, I pray you, theſe reſtraining terms which formerly you have diſſembled, A true Church in ſome ſenſe not damnable to ſome men, a ſafe way, that is, by Gods great mercy, not damnable to ſome. And then ſeeing you have pretended theſe Confeſſions to be abſolute, which are thus plainly limited, how can you avoid the imputation of an egregious Sophiſter? You quarrel with the Doctor, in the end of your Preface, for uſing in his Book ſuch ambiguous terms as theſe, in ſome ſort, in ſome ſenſe, in ſome degree: and deſire him, if he make any reply, either to forbear them, or to tell you roundly in what ſort, in what ſenſe, in what degree, he underſtands theſe and the like mincing phraſes. But the truth is, he hath not left them ſo ambiguous and undetermined as you pretend; but told you plainly, in what ſenſe your Church may paſs for a true Church, viz. in regard we may hope that ſhe retains thoſe truths which are ſimply, abſolutely, and indiſpenſably neceſſary to Salvation, which may ſuffice to bring thoſe good ſouls to heaven, who wanted means of diſcovering their errors; this is the charitable conſtruction in which you may paſs for a Church: And to what men your Religion may be ſafe, and your errors not damnable, viz. to ſuch whom Ignorance may excuſe, and therefore he hath more cauſe to complain of you, for quoting his words without thoſe qualifications, than you to find fault with him for uſing of them.

30. That your Diſcourſe in the 12. §. preſſeth you as forcibly as Proteſtants, I have ſhewed above: I add here, 1. Whereas you ſay, that faith, according to your rigid Calviniſts, is either ſo ſtrong, that once had, it can never be loſt; or ſo more than weak, and ſo much nothing, that it can never be gotten: That theſe are words without ſenſe. Never any Calviniſt affirmed that faith was ſo weak, and ſo much nothing, that it can never be gotten: but it ſeems you wanted matter to make up your Antitheſis, and therefore were reſolved to ſpeak empty words, rather than loſe your figure,

Crimina raſis
Laudatur.

2. That there is no Calviniſt that will deny the truth of this Propoſition, Chriſt died for all; nor to ſubſcribe to that ſenſe of it, which your Dominicans put upon it; neither can you, with coherence to the received Doctrine of your own Society, deny that they as well as the Calviniſts, take away the diſtinction of ſufficient and effectual grace, and indeed hold none to be ſufficient, but only that which is effectual. 3. Whereas you ſay, They cannot make their calling certain by good works, who do certainly believe that before any good works they are juſtified, and juſtified by faith alone, and by that faith whereby they certainly believe they are juſtified. I anſwer, There is no Proteſtant but believes Faith, Repentance, and univerſal Obedience, are neceſſary to the obtaining of Gods favour and eternal happineſs. This being granted, the reſt is but a ſpeculative Controverſie, a Queſtion about words which would quickly vaniſh, but that men affect not to underſtand one another. As if a company of Phyſicians were in conſultation, and ſhould all agree, that three medicines and no more were neceſſary for the recovery of the Patients health, this were ſufficient for his direction towards the recovery of his

His health; though concerning the proper and ſpecifical effects of theſe three medicines, there ſhould be amongſt them as many differences as men: So likewiſe being generally at accord that theſe three things, Faith, Hope, and Charity, are neceſſary to Salvation, ſo that whoſoever wants any of them, cannot obtain it, and he which hath them all cannot fail of it, is it not very evident that they are ſufficiently agreed for mens directions to eternal ſalvation? And ſeeing Charity is a full comprehenſion of all good works, they requiring Charity as a neceſſary qualification in him that will be ſaved, what ſenſe is there in ſaying, they cannot make their calling certain by good works? They know what ſalvation is as well as you, and have as much reaſon to deſire it: they believe it as heartily as you, that there is no good work but ſhall have its proper reward, and that there is no poſſibility of obtaining the eternal reward without good works: and why then may not this Doctrine be a ſufficient incitement and provocation unto good works?

31. You ſay, that they certainly believe that before any good works they are juſtified: But this is a calumny. There is no Proteſtant but requires to Juſtification, Remiſſion of ſins, and to Remiſſion of ſins they all require Repentance, and Repentance I preſume may not be denied the name of a good work; being indeed, if it be rightly underſtood, and according to the ſenſe of the Word in Scripture, an effectual converſion from all ſin to all holineſs. But though it be taken for meer Sorrow for ſins paſt, and a bare Purpoſe of amendment, yet even this is a good work; and therefore Proteſtants requiring this to Remiſſion of ſins, and Remiſſion of ſins to Juſtification, cannot with candor be pretended to believe, that they are juſtified before any good work.

32. You ſay, They believe themſelves juſtified by faith alone, and that by that faith whereby they believe themſelves juſtified: Some peradventure do ſo, but withal they believe that that faith which is alone, and unaccompanied with ſincere and univerſal obedience, is to be eſteemed not faith but preſumption, and is at no hand ſufficient to Juſtification; that though Charity be not imputed unto Juſtification, yet it is required as a neceſſary diſpoſition in the perſon to be juſtified, and that though in regard of the imperfection of it, no man can be juſtified by it, yet that, on the other ſide, no man can be juſtified without it. So that upon the whole matter, a man may truly and ſafely ſay, that the Doctrine of theſe Proteſtants, taken altogether, is not a Doctrine of Liberty, not a Doctrine that turns hope into preſumption and carnal ſecurity: though it may juſtly be feared, that many licentious perſons, taking it by halves, have made this wicked uſe of it. For my part, I do heartily wiſh, that by publick Authority it were ſo ordered, that no man ſhould ever Preach or Print this Doctrine that Faith alone juſtifies, unleſs he joyns this together with it, that Univerſal Obedience is neceſſary to ſalvation. And beſides, that thoſe Chapters of St. Paul which intreat of juſtification by faith, without the works of the Law, were never read in the Church, but when the 13. Chapter of 1 Epiſt. to the Corinthians concerning the abſolute neceſſity of Charity ſhould be, to prevent miſpriſion, read together with them.

33. Whereas you ſay, that ſome Proteſtants do expreſly affirm the former Point to be the ſoul of the Church, &c. and therefore they muſt want the Theological vertue of Hope, and that none can have true hope, while they hope to be ſaved in their communion. I anſwer, They have great reaſon to believe the Doctrine of Juſtification, by faith only, a Point of great weight and importance, if it be rightly underſtood: that is, they have reaſon to eſteem it a principal and neceſſary duty of a Chriſtian, to place his hope of Juſtification and Salvation, not in the perfection of his own righteouſneſs (which if it be imperfect will not juſtifie) but only in the mercies of God through Chriſts ſatisfaction; and yet notwithſtanding this, nay, the rather for this, may preſerve themſelves in the right temper of good Chriſtians, which is a happy mixture and ſweet compoſition of confidence and fear. If this Doctrine be otherwiſe expounded than I have here expounded, I will not undertake the juſtification of it: only I will ſay (that which I may do truly) that I never knew any Proteſtant ſuch a Soli-fidian, but that he did believe theſe divine truths: That he muſt make his calling certain by good works: That he muſt work out his ſalvation with Fear and Trembling, and that while he does not ſo, he can have no well-grounded hope of Salvation: I ſay, I never met with any who did not believe theſe Divine Truths, and that with a more firm, and a more unſhaken aſſent, than he does that himſelf is Predeſtinate, and that he is juſtified by believing himſelf juſtified. I never met with any ſuch, who if he ſaw there was a neceſſity to do either, would not rather forgo his belief of theſe Doctrines, than the former: theſe which he ſees diſputed and contradicted and oppoſed with a great multitude of very potent Arguments; than thoſe, which being the expreſs words of Scripture whoſoever ſhould call into queſtion, could not with any modeſty pretend to the title of Chriſtian. And therefore, there is no reaſon but we may believe, that their full aſſurance of the former Doctrine, doth very well qualifie their perſuaſion of the later; and that the former (as alſo the lives of many of them do ſufficiently teſtifie) are more effectual to temper their hope, and to keep it at a ſtay of a filial and modeſt aſſurance of Gods favour, built upon the conſcience of his love and fear, than the later can be to ſwell and puff them up into vain confidence and ungrounded preſumption. This reaſon joyned with our experience of the honeſt and religious converſation of many men of this opinion, is a ſufficient ground for Charity, to hope well of their Hope: and to aſſure our ſelves that it cannot be offenſive, but rather moſt acceptable to God, if, notwithſtanding this diverſity of opinion, we embrace each other with the ſtrict embraces of love and communion. To you and your Church we leave it, to ſeparate Chriſtians from the Church, and to proſcribe them from heaven upon trivial and trifling cauſes. As for our ſelves, we conceive a charitable judgment of our Brethren and their errors, though untrue, much more pleaſing to God than a true judgment, if it be uncharitable; and therefore ſhall always chooſe (if we do err) to err on the milder and more merciful part, and rather to retain thoſe in our Communion which deſerve to be ejected, than eject thoſe that deſerve to be retained.

34. Laſtly, whereas you ſay, that ſeeing Proteſtants differ about the Point of Juſtification, you muſt needs infer that they want Unity in faith, and conſequently all faith, and then that they cannot agree what Points are fundamental; I anſwer, to the firſt of theſe Inferences, that, as well might you infer it upon Victor Biſhop of Rome and Polycrates; upon Stephen Biſhop of Rome and St. Cyprian: inaſmuch as it is undeniably evident that what one of thoſe eſteemed neceſſary to ſalvation the other eſteemed not ſo. But Points of Doctrine (as all other things) are as they are, and not as they are eſteemed: neither can a neceſſary Point be made unneceſſary by being ſo accounted, nor an unneceſſary Point be made neceſſary by being over-valued. But as the ancient Philoſophers, (whoſe different opinions about the Soul of man you may read in Ariſtotle de anima, and Cicero's Tuſculan Queſtions,) notwithſtanding their diverſe opinions touching the nature of the Soul, yet all of them had ſouls, and ſouls of the ſame nature: Or as thoſe Phyſicians who diſpute whether the Brain or Heart be the principal part of a man, yet all of them have brains and have hearts, and herein agree ſufficiently: So likewiſe though ſome Proteſtants eſteem that Doctrine the ſoul of the Church, which others do not ſo highly value, yet this hinders not but that which is indeed the ſoul of the Church may be in both ſorts of them: And though one account that a neceſſary truth which others account neither neceſſary, nor perhaps true; yet, this notwithſtanding, in thoſe truths which are truly and really neceſſary they may all agree. For no Argument can be more ſophiſtical than this; They differ in ſome Points which they eſteem neceſſary; Therefore they differ in ſome that indeed and in truth are ſo.

35. Now as concerning the other Inference, That they cannot agree what Points are fundamental: I have ſaid and proved formerly that there is no ſuch neceſſity as as you imagine or pretend, that men ſhould certainly know what is, and what is not fundamental. They that believe all things plainly delivered in Scripture, believe all things fundamental, and are at ſufficient Unity in matters of Faith, though they cannot preciſely and exactly diſtinguiſh between what is fundamental, and what is profitable: nay, though by error they miſtake ſome vain, or perhaps ſome hurtful Opinions for neceſſary and fundamental Truths. Beſides, I have ſhewed above, that as Proteſtants do not agree (for you over-reach in ſaying, they cannot) touching what Points are fundamental; ſo neither do you agree what Points are defined, and ſo to be accounted, and what are not: nay, nor concerning the ſubject in which God hath placed this pretended Authority of defining: ſome of you ſetling it in the Pope himſelf, though alone without a Council, Others in a Council, though divided from the Pope: Others only in the conjunction of Council and Pope: Others not in this neither, but in the acceptation of the preſent Church Univerſal: Laſtly, others not attributing it to this neither, but only to the perpetual Succeſſion of the Church of all Ages: of which divided Company, it is very evident and undeniable, that every former may be and are obliged to hold many things defined and therefore neceſſary, which the latter, according to their own grounds, have no obligation to do, nay, cannot do ſo upon any firm and ſure and infallible foundation. c. 3. Sect. 54. & alibi.

THE CONCLUSION.

AND thus, by God's aſſiſtance, and the advantage of a good cauſe, I am at length, through a paſſage rather tyring than difficult, arrived at the end of my undertaken Voyage; and have, as I ſuppoſe, made appear, to all diſintereſſed and unprejudicate Readers, what in the beginning I undertook, that a vein of Sophiſtry and Calumny runs clean though this firſt part of your Book: wherein though I never thought of the directions you have been pleaſed to give me in your Pamphlet entituled, A direction to N. N. yet upon conſideration of my Anſwer, I find that I have proceeded, as if I had had it always before my eyes, and ſteered my courſe by it as by a Card and Compaſs.

For firſt, I have not proceeded by a meer deſtructive way (as you call it) nor objected ſuch difficulties againſt your Religion, as upon examination, tend to the overthrow of all Religion, but have ſhewed that the truth of Chriſtianity is clearly independent upon the truth of Popery: and that on the other ſide, the Arguments you urge, and the courſes you take, for the maintenance of your Religion, do manifeſtly tend (if they be cloſely and conſequently followed) to the deſtruction of all Religion, and lead men by the hand to Atheiſm and Impiety; whereof I have given you ocular demonſtrations in divers places of my Book, but eſpecially in my anſwer to your Direction to N. N.

Neither can I diſcover any repugnance between any one part of my anſwer and any other, though I have uſed many more judicious and more ſearching eyes than mine own to make, if it were poſſible, ſuch a diſcovery; and therefore am in good hope, that, though the Muſick I have made be but dull and flat, and even downright plain-ſong, even your curious and critical ears ſhall diſcover no diſcord in it; but on the other ſide, I have charged you frequently, and very juſtly, with manifeſt contradiction and retractation of your own aſſertions, and not ſeldom of the main grounds you build upon, and the principal concluſions which you endeavour to maintain: which I conceive my ſelf to have made apparent even to the eye, c. 2. §. 5. c. 3. §. 88. c. 4. §. 14. and 24. c. 5. §. 93. c. 6. §. 6, 7, 12, 17. c. 7. §. 29, and in many other parts of my Anſwer.

And though I did never pretend to defend Dr. Potter abſolutely and in all things, but only ſo far as he defends Truth; (neither did Dr. Potter deſire me, nor any Law of God or man oblige me, to defend him any farther) yet I do not find that I have cauſe to differ from him in any matter of moment: particularly, not concerning the infallibility of God's Church, which I grant with him to be infallible in fundamentals, becauſe if it ſhould err in fundamentals, it were not the Church: Nor concerning the ſupernaturality of Faith, which I know and believe as well as you, to be the gift of God, and that fleſh and bloud revealed it not unto us, but our Father which is in heaven. But now if it were demanded, What defence you can make for deſerting Charity Miſtaken, in the main queſtion diſputed between him and Dr. Potter, Whether Proteſtancy, without a particular repentance and derelittion of it, deſtroy Salvation, whereof I have convinced you? I believe your anſwer would be much like that which Ulyſſes makes in the Metamorphoſis for his running away from his friend Neſtor, that is, none at all.

For Oppoſing the Articles of the Church of England, the Approbation, I preſume, clears my Book from this imputation.

And whereas you give me a Caution, that my grounds deſtroy not the belief of divers Doctrines which all good Chriſtians believe, yea, and of all verities that cannot be proved by natural reaſon: I profeſs ſincerely, that I do not know nor believe, that any ground laid by me in my whole Book, is any way inconſiſtent with any one ſuch Doctrine, or with any verity revealed in the Word of God, though never ſo improbable or incomprehenſible to Natural Reaſon: and if I thought there were, I would deal with it as thoſe Primitive Converts dealt with their curious Books in the Acts of the Apoſtles.

For the Epiſtle of St. James, and thoſe other Books which were anciently controverted, and are now received by the Church of England as canonical; I am ſo far from relying upon any Principles which muſt (to my apprehenſion) bring with them the denial of the authority of them, that I my ſelf believe them all to be Canonical.

For the overthrowing the Infallibility of all Scripture, my Book is ſo innocent of it that the infallibility of Scripture is the chiefeſt of all my grounds.

And laſtly, for Arguments tending to prove an impoſſibility of all Divine, Supernatural, Infallible Faith and Religion, I aſſure my ſelf, that if you were ten times more a Spider than you are, you could ſuck no ſuch poyſon from them. My heart, I am ſure, is innocent of any ſuch intention: and the Searcher of all hearts knows, that I had no other end in writing this Book, but to confirm to the uttermoſt of my ability, the truth of the Divine and Infallible Religion of our deareſt Lord and Saviour Chriſt Jeſus, which I am ready to ſeal and confirm, not with my Arguments only, but my bloud.

Now theſe are the Directions which you have been pleaſed to give me, whether out of a fear that I might otherwiſe deviate from them, or out of a deſire to make others think ſo; But howſoever, I have not, to my underſtanding, ſwarved from them in any thing, which puts me in good hope, that my Anſwer to this firſt Part of your Book will give even to you your ſelf indifferent good ſatisfaction.

I have alſo provided, though this were more than I undertook, a juſt and punctual examination and refutation of your Second Part: But (if you will give your conſent) I am reſolved to ſuppreſs it, and that for divers ſufficient and reaſonable conſiderations.

Firſt, Becauſe the diſcuſſion of the Controverſies intreated of in the Firſt Part (if we ſhall think fit to proceed in it, as I for my part ſhall, ſo long as I have truth to reply) will, I conceive, be ſufficient employment for us, though we caſt off the burden of thoſe many leſſer diſputes which remain behind in the Second. And perhaps we may do God and his Church more ſervice by exactly diſcuſſing and fully clearing the truth in theſe few, than by handling many after a ſleight and perfunctory manner.

Secondly, becauſe the addition of the Second Part, whether for your purpoſe or mine, is clearly unneceſſary: there being no underſtanding man, Papiſt or Proteſtant, but will confeſs, that (for as much as concerns the main queſtion now in agitation, about the ſaveableneſs of Proteſtants) if the firſt part of your Book be anſwered, there needs no reply to the Second: As on the other ſide, I ſhall willingly grant, if I have not anſwered the Firſt, I cannot anſwer a great part of the Second.

Thirdly, Becauſe the addition of the Second not only is unneceſſary, but in effect by your ſelf confeſſed to be ſo. For in your Preamble to your Second Part you tell us, That the ſubſtance of the preſent Controverſie is handled in the firſt: and therein alſo you pretend to have anſwered the chief grounds of D. Potters Book: So that in replying to your Second Part, I ſhall do little elſe but purſue ſhadows.

Fourthly, Becauſe your Second Part (ſetting aſide Repetitions and References) is in a manner made up of Diſputes about particular matters, which you are very importunate to have forborn, as ſuſpecting, at leaſt pretending to ſuſpect, that they were brought in purpoſely by D. Potter to dazle the Reader's eyes, and diſtract his mind, that he might not ſee the clearneſs of the reaſons brought in defence of the general Doctrine delivered in Charity Miſtaken. All which you are likely enough (if there be occaſion) to ſay again to me; and therefore I am reſolved for once even to humour you ſo far as to keep my diſcourſe within thoſe very liſts and limits which your ſelf have preſcribed, and to deal with you upon no other Arguments, but only thoſe wherein you conceive your chief advantage and principal ſtrength, and, as it were, your Sampſon's lock to lie: wherein if I gain the cauſe clearly from you (as I verily hope by Gods help I ſhall do) it cannot but redound much to the honour of the truth maintained by me, which by ſo weak a Champion can overcome ſuch an Achilles for error, even in his ſtrongeſt holds.

For theſe reaſons, although I have made ready an anſwer to your Second Part, and therein have made it ſufficiently evident: That for ſhifting evaſions from Dr. Potter's Arguments: for impertinent cavils, and frivolous exceptions, and injurious calumnies againſt him for his miſalledging of Authors: For proceeding upon falſe and ungrounded Principles; for making inconſequent and ſophiſtical deductions, and, in a word, for all the virtues of an ill anſwer your Second Part is no way ſecond to the firſt. Yet notwithſtanding all this advantage, I am reſolved, if you will give me leave, either wholly to ſuppreſs it, or at leaſt to defer the publication of it until I ſee what exceptions, upon a twelve-months examination (for ſo long I am well aſſured you have had it in your hands) you can take at this which is now publiſhed, that ſo if my grounds be diſcovered falſe I may give over building on them: or (if it ſhall be thought fit) build on more ſecurely when it ſhall appear that nothing material and of moment is or can be objected againſt them. This I ſay, upon a ſuppoſition that your ſelf will allow theſe reaſons for ſatisfying and ſufficient, and not repent of the motion which your ſelf has made, of reducing the Controverſie between us to this ſhort Iſſue. But in caſe your mind be altered, upon the leaſt intimation you ſhall give me, that you do but deſire to have it out, your deſire ſhall prevail with me above all other reaſons, and you ſhall not fail to receive it with all convenient ſpeed.

Only that my Anſwer may be compleat, and that I may have all my work together, and not be troubled my ſelf, nor enforced to trouble you, with after-reckonings, I would firſt entreat you to make good your Promiſe of not omitting to anſwer all the Particles of Dr. Potter's Book, which may any way import, and now at leaſt to take notice of ſome (as it ſeems to me) not unconſiderable paſſages of it, which between your firſt and ſecond Part, as it were between two ſtools, have been ſuffered hitherto to fall to the ground, and not been vouchſafed any anſwer at all.

For after this neglectful faſhion you have paſſed by in ſilence, Firſt, his diſcourſe, wherein he proves briefly, but very effectually, that Proteſtants may be ſaved, and that the Roman Church, eſpecially the Jeſuits, are very uncharitable, S. 1. p. 6, 7, 8, 9. Secondly, the authorities whereby he juſtifies, That the ancient Fathers, by by the Roman understood always a particular, and never the Catholick Church: to which purpose he alledgeth the words of Ignatius, Ambrose, Innocentius, Celestine, Nicolaus, *S.*1.*p.*10. Whereunto you say nothing, neither do you infringe his Observation with any one instance to the contrary.

Thirdly, The greatest and most substantial part of his answers to the Arguments, of Charity Mistaken, built upon *Deut.*17. *Num.*16. *Mat.*28.20. *Mat.*18.17. and in particular many pregnant and convincing Texts of Scripture, quoted in the Margin of his Book, *p.*25. to prove that the Judges of the Synagogue (whose Infallibility yet you make an Argument of yours, and therefore must be more credible than yours) are vainly pretended to have been infallible: but as they were obliged to judge according to the Law, so were obnoxious to deviations from it. *S.*2.*p.*23,24,25,26,27.

Fourthly, His discourse wherein he shews the difference between the Prayers for the dead used by the Ancients, and those now in use in the Roman Church.

Fifthly, the Authority of three Ancient, and above twenty Modern Doctors of your own Church alledged by him, to shew that in their opinion even Pagans, and therefore much more erring Christians (if their lives were morally honest) by Gods extraordinary mercy and Christs merit may be saved. *S.*2. *p.*45.

Sixthly, A great part of his discourse whereby he declares that actual and externalCommunion with the Church is not of absolute necessity to Salvation: nay, that those might be saved whom the Church utterly refused to admit to her Communion. *S.*2.*p.*46,47,48,49.

Seventhly, His discourse concerning the Churches Latitude, which hath in it a clear determination of the main Controversie against you: For therein he proves plainly, that all appertain to the Church who believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God, and Saviour of the world with submission to his Doctrine in mind and will: which he irrefragably demonstrates by many evident Texts of Scripture, containing the substance of his Assertion even in terms. *S.*4. *p.*114,115,116,117.

Eighthly, That wherein he shews by many pertinent examples, that gross error and true Faith may be lodged together in the same mind: And that men are not chargeable with the damnable consequences of their erroneous opinions, *S.*4, *p.*112.

Ninthly, A very great part of his Chapter touching the dissentions of the Roman Church, which he shews (against the pretences of Charity Mistaken) *to be no less than ours, for the importance of the matter, and the pursuit of them to be exceedingly uncharitable. S.*6. *p.*188,189,190,191,193,194,195,196,197.

Tenthly, His clear refutation and just reprehension of the Doctrine of implicite Faith, as it is delivered by the Doctors of your Church. which he proves very consonant to the Doctrine of Hereticks and Infidels, but evidently repugnant to the Word of God. Ibid, *p.*201,202,203,204,205.

Lastly, His discourse wherein he shews that it is unlawful for the Church of after Ages to add any thing to the Faith of the Apostles. And many of his Arguments whereby he proves that in the judgment of the Ancient Church the Apostles Creed was esteemed a sufficient Summary of the necessary Points of simple belief, and a great number of great Authorities, to justifie the Doctrine of the Church of England touching the Canon of Scripture, especially the Old Testament, *S.*7. *p.*221,223,228,229.

All these parts of Dr. Potter's Book, for reason best known to your self, you have dealt with, as the Priest and Levite in the Gospel did with the wounded Samaritan, that is, only look'd upon them and passed by: But now at least when you are admonished of it, that my Reply to your second part (if you desire it) may be perfect, I would entreat you to take them into your consideration, and to make some shew of saying something to them, lest, otherwise, the world should interpret your obstinate silence a plain confession that you can say nothing.

THE Apostolical Institution OF EPISCOPACY DEMONSTRATED.

THE Apostolical Institution OF EPISCOPACY DEMONSTRATED.

SECT. I.

IF we abstract from Episcopal Government all accidentals, and consider only what is essential and necessary to it; we shall find in it no more but this: An appointment of one man of eminent sanctity and sufficiency to have the care of all the Churches, within a certain Precinct or Diocess; and furnishing him with authority (not absolute or arbitrary, but regulated and bounded by Laws, and moderated by joyning to him a convenient number of assistants) to the intent that all the Churches under him may be provided of good and able Pastors: and that both of Pastors and People, conformity to Laws, and performance of their duties may be required, under Penalties, not left to discretion, but by Law appointed.

SECT. II.

To this kind of Government, I am not by any particular interest so devoted, as to think it ought to be maintained, either in opposition to Apostolick Institution; or to the much desired reformation of mens lives, and restauration of Primitive Discipline; or to any Law or Precept of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ: for that were to maintain a means contrary to the end; for Obedience to our Saviour is the end for which Church Government is appointed. But if it may be demonstrated (or made much more probable than the contrary) as I verily think it may: I. That it is not repugnant to the Government setled in and for the Church by the Apostles. II. That it is as complyable with the Reformation of any evil which we desire to reform either in Church or State, or the introduction of any good which we desire to introduce as any other kind of Government: And, III. That there is no Law, no Record of our Saviour against it: Then, I hope, it will not be thought an unreasonable Motion, if we humbly desire those that are in Authority, especially the High Court of Parliament, That it may not be sacrificed to Clamour, or over-born by Violence, and though (which God forbid) the greater part of the Multitude should cry, Crucifie, Crucifie; yet our Governours would be so full of Justice and Courage, as not to give it up, until they perfectly understand concerning Episcopacy it self, Quid mali fecit?

SECT. III.

I shall speak at this time only of the first of these three Points: That Episcopacy is not repugnant to the Government setled in the Church for perpetuity by the Apostles. Whereof I conceive this which follows is as clear a Demonstration, as any thing of this nature is capable of.

That this Government was received universally in the Church, either in the Apostles time, or presently after, is so evident and unquestionable, that the most learned Adversaries of this Government do themselves confess it.

SECT. IV.

Petrus Molinæus in his Book, De munere pastorali, purposely written in defence of the Presbyterial Government, acknowledgeth: That presently after the Apostles times, or even in their time (as Ecclesiastical story witnesseth) it was ordained, That in every City one of the Presbytery should be called a Bishop, who should have pre-eminence over his Colleagues; to avoid confusion which oft times ariseth out of equality. And truly, this form of Government all Churches every where received.

SECT. V.

Theodorus in his Tract, De triplici Episcopatus genere, confesseth in effect the same thing. For, having distinguished Episcopacy into three kinds, Divine, Humane, and Satanical; and attributing to the second (which he calls Humane, but we maintain and conceive to be Apostolical) not only a Priority of Order, but a superiority of Power and Authority over other Presbyters, bounded yet by Laws and Canons provided against Tyranny: he clearly professeth that of this kind of Episcopacy, is to be understood whatsoever we read concerning the Authority of Bishops (or Presidents, as Justin Martyr calls them) in Ignatius, and other more ancient Writers.

SECT. VI.

Certainly, from * these two great Defenders of the Presbytery, we should never have had this free acknowledgment, (so prejudicial to their own pretence, and so advantageous to their Adversaries purpose) had not the evidence of clear and undeniable truth enforced them to it. It will not therefore be necessary, to spend any time in confuting that uningenuous Assertion of the anonymous Author of the Catalogue of Testimonies, for the equality of Bishops and Presbyters, who affirms, That their disparity began long after the Apostles times: But we may safely take for granted that which these two learned Adversaries have confessed; and see, whether upon this foundation laid by them, we may not by unanswerable reason raise this superstructure;

That seeing Episcopal Government is confessedly so Ancient and so Catholick, it cannot with reason be denied to be Apostolick.

* To whom two others also from Gentia may be added: Daniel Chamierus (in Panstratia, tom. 2. lib. 10. cap. 6. Sect. 24.) and Nicol. Vedelius (Exercitat. 3. in Epist. Ignatii ad Philadelph. cap. 24. & Exercit. 8. in Epist. ad Mariam. cap. 3.) which is fully demonstrated in Dr. Hammond's Dissertations against Blondel (which never were answered, and never will) by the Testimonies of those who wrote in the very next Age after the Apostles.

SECT. VII.

For so great a change, as between Presbyterial Government and Episcopal, could not possibly have prevailed all the world over in a little time. Had Episcopal Government been an aberration from (or a corruption of) the Government left in the Churches by the Apostles, it had been very strange, that it should have been received in any one Church so suddenly, or that it should have prevailed in all for many Ages after. Variâsse debuerat error Ecclesiarum: quod autem apud omnes unum est, non est erratum, sed traditum. Had the Churches erred, they would have varied: What therefore is one and the same amongst all, came not sure by Error, but Tradition. Thus Tertullian argues very probably, from the consent of the Churches of his time, not long after the Apostles, and that in matter of opinion much more subject to unobserved alteration. But that in the frame and substance of the necessary Government of the Church, a thing always in use and practice, there should be so sudden a change, as presently after the Apostles times; and so universal, as received in all Churches; this is clearly impossible.

SECT. VIII.

For, What universal cause can be assigned or feigned of this universal Apostasie? You will not imagine that the Apostles, all or any of them, made any Decree for this Change when they were living; or left order for it in any Will or Testament, when they were dying. This were to grant the question; to wit, That the Apostles, being to leave the Government of the Churches themselves, and either seeing by experience, or foreseeing by the Spirit of God, the distractions and disorders, which would arise from a multitude of equals, substituted Episcopal Government instead of their own. General Councils to make a Law for a general Change, for many Ages there was none. There was no Christian Emperour, no coercive Power over the Church to enforce it. Or, if there had been any, we know no force was equal to the courage of the Christians of those times. Their lives were then at command (for they had not then learnt to fight for Christ) but their obedience to any thing against his Law was not to be commanded (for they had perfectly learnt to die for him.) Therefore there was no Power then to command this Change; or if there had been any, it had been in vain.

SECT. IX.

What device then shall we study, or to what fountain shall we reduce this strange pretended alteration? Can it enter into our hearts to think, that all the Presbyters and other Christians then, being the Apostles Scholars, could be generally ignorant of the Will of Christ, touching the necessity of a Presbyterial Government? Or, dare we adventure to think them so strangely wicked all the world over, as against knowledge and conscience to conspire against it? Imagine the spirit of Diotrephes had entred into some, or a great many of the Presbyters, and possessed them with an ambitious desire of a forbidden superiority, was it possible they should attempt and atchieve it once without any opposition or contradiction? And besides, that the contagion of this ambition, should spread it self and prevail without stop or controul; nay, without any noise or notice taken of it, through all the Churches in the world; all the watchmen in the mean time being so fast asleep, and all the dogs so dumb, that not so much as one should open his mouth against it?

SECT. X.

But let us suppose (though it be a horrible untruth) that the Presbyters and people then, were not so good Christians as the Presbyterians are now; that they were generally so negligent to retain the Government of Christ's Church commanded by Christ, which we now are so zealous to restore: yet certainly we must not forget nor deny, that they were men as we are. And if we look upon them but as meer natural men; yet, knowing by experience, how hard a thing it is, even for Policy armed with Power by many attempts and contrivances, and in a long time, to gain upon the liberty of any one people; undoubtedly we shall never entertain so wild an imagination, as that, among all the Christian Presbyteries in the world, neither conscience of duty, nor love of liberty, nor averseness from pride and usurpation of others over them, should prevail so much with any one, as to oppose this pretended universal invasion of the Kingdom of Jesus Christ, and the liberty of Christians.

SECT. XI.

When I shall see therefore all the Fables in the Metamorphosis acted and prove stories; when I shall see all the Democracies and Aristocracies in the world lie down and sleep, and awake into Monarchies; then will I begin to believe that Presbyterial Government, having continued in the Church during the Apostles times, should presently after (against the Apostles Doctrine and the Will of Christ) be whirl'd about like a Scene in a Masque, and transformed into Episcopacy. In the mean time, while these things remain thus incredible, and, in humane reason, impossible, I hope I shall have leave to conclude thus:

Episcopal Government is acknowledged to have been universally received in the Church, presently after the Apostles times.

Between the Apostles times and this presently after, there was not time enough for, nor possibility of, so great an alteration.

And therefore there was no such alteration as is pretended. And therefore Episcopacy being confessed to be so Ancient and Catholick, must be granted also to be Apostolick, Quod erat demonstrandum.

TO THE READER.

Christian Reader,

THese Sermons were, by the Godly and Learned Author of them, fitted to the Congregations to which he was to speak; and no doubt intended only for the benefit of Hearers, not of Readers. Nevertheless, it was the desire of many that they might be published upon the hope of good that might be done to the Church of God by them. There is need of plain Instructions to incite men to holiness of life, as well as accurate Treatises in Points Controverted, to discern Truth from Error. For which end I dare promise these Sermons will make much, where they find an honest and humble Reader. It was the Author's greatest care (as you may find in the reading of them) To handle the Word of God by manifestation of the truth, commending himself to every mans conscience in the sight of God: as one St. Paul pleaded for himself, 2 Cor. 4. 2. And if that be the property (which they say) of an eloquent and good Speaker, Non ex ore, sed ex pectore, To speak from his Heart rather than his Tongue; then surely this Author was an excellent Orator, one that spake out of sound understanding with true affection.

How great his parts were, and how well improved, as may appear by these his Labours, so they were fully known, and the loss of them sufficiently bewailed by those among whom he lived and conversed.

Many

Many excellencies there were in him, for which his memory remains; but this above all was his crown, that he unfeignedly ſought God's Glory, and the good of mens Souls. It remains, that theſe Sermons be read by thee with a care to profit, and thanks to God for the benefit thou haſt by them, ſith they are ſuch talents, as in the uſe of which he requires and expects to be glorified. Farewel.

THE

The Firſt Sermon.

2 TIM. III. 1,2,3,4,5.

This know alſo, that in the laſt days perilous times ſhall come.
For men ſhall be lovers of their own ſelves, covetous, boaſters, proud, blaſphemers, diſobedient to Parents, unthankful, unholy, Without natural affection, truce-breakers, falſe accuſers, incontinent, fierce, deſpiſers of thoſe that are good,
Traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleaſures more than lovers of God; Having a Form of godlineſs, but denying the Power thereof.

TO a Diſcourſe upon theſe words, I cannot think of any fitter introduction, than that wherewith our Saviour ſometime began a Sermon of his, This day is this Scripture fulfilled. And I would to God, there were not great occaſion to fear, that a great part of it may be fulfilled in this place.

Two things are contained in it. Firſt, the real wickedneſs of the generality of the men of Latter-times, in the four firſt verſes. For by men ſhall be lovers of themſelves, covetous, boaſters, proud, &c. I conceive is meant, men generally ſhall be ſo; otherwiſe this were nothing peculiar to the laſt, but common to all times: for in all times ſome, nay, many, have been lovers of themſelves, covetous, boaſters, proud, &c. Secondly, We have here the formal and hypocritical godlineſs of the ſame times, in the laſt verſe, Having a form of godlineſs, but denying the power thereof; which latter, ordinarily and naturally accompanies the Former. For, as the ſhadows are longeſt when the Sun is loweſt, and as Vines and other fruit-trees bear the leſs fruit, when they are ſuffered to luxuriate and ſpend their ſap upon ſuperfluous ſuckers, and abundance of leaves: So commonly, we may obſerve both in Civil converſation, where there is great ſtore of formality, there is little ſincerity: and in Religion, where there is a decay of true and cordial piety, there men entertain and pleaſe themſelves, and vainly hope to pleaſe God with external formalities, and performances, and great ſtore of that righteouſneſs for which Chriſt ſhall judge the world.

It were no difficult matter to ſhew that the truth of St. Paul's Prediction is by experience juſtified in both parts of it; but my purpoſe is to reſtrain my ſelf to the latter, and to endeavour to clear unto you, that that in our times is generally accompliſhed: That almoſt in all places the power of Godlineſs is decayed and vaniſhed; the form and profeſſion of it only remaining: That the ſpirit, and ſoul, and life of Religion, is for the moſt part gone; only the outward body or carkaſs, or rather the picture or ſhadow of it being left behind; this is the Doctrine which at this time I ſhall deliver to you; and the Uſe, which I deſire moſt heartily you ſhould make of it, is this, To take care that you confute ſo far as it concerns your particulars, what I fear I ſhall prove too true in the general.

To come then to our buſineſs, without further complement, let us examine our ways, and consider impartially, What the Religion of most men is.

We are baptized in our Infancy, that is, as I conceive, dedicated and devoted to God's service, by our Parents and the Church, as young Samuel was by his Mother Anna, and there we take a Solemn Vow, To forsake the Devil and all his works, the vain pomp and glory of the world, with all the covetous desires of it: to forsake also all the carnal desires of the flesh, and not to follow nor be led by them. This Vow we take when we be Children, and understand it not: and, how many are there, who know, and consider, and regard what they have vowed, when they are become men, almost as little as they did being Children: Consider the lives, and publick actions of most men of all conditions, in Court, City, and Country, and then deny it, if you can, that those three things which we have renounced in our Baptism; the profits, honours, and pleasures of the World, are not the very Gods which divide the world amongst them, are not served more devoutly, confided in more heartily, loved more affectionately, than the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, in whose name we are baptized? Deny, if you can, the daily and constant imployment of all men, to be either a violent prosecution of the vain pomp and glory of the world, or of the power, riches, and contemptible profits of it, or of the momentary or unsatisfying pleasures of the flesh, or else of the more diabolical humours of pride, malice, revenge, and such like: And yet with this empty form we please and satisfie our selves, as well as if we were lively born again by the Spirit of God, not knowing or not regarding what St. Peter hath taught us, That the Baptism which must save us, is, Not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience unto God.

1 Pet. 3. 21.

When we are come to years capable of instruction, many, which is lamentable to consider, are so little regarded by themselves or others, that they continue little better than Pagans in a Commonwealth of Christians, and know little more of God or of Christ, than if they had been bred in the Indies. A lamentable case, and which will one day lie heavy upon their account, which might have amended it and did not. But many, I confess, are taught to act over this play of Religion, and learned to say, Our Father which art in Heaven; and, I believe in God the Father Almighty: but, Where are the men that live so, as if they did believe in earnest, that God is their Almighty Father? Where are they that fear him, and trust him, and depend upon him only, for their whole happiness, and love him, and obey him, as in reason we ought to do to an Almighty Father? Who, if he be our Father, and we be indeed his Children, will do for us all the good he can; and if he be Almighty, can do for us all the good he will; and yet, how few are there, who love him with half that affection as Children usually do their Parents, or believe him with half that simplicity, or serve him with half that diligence? And then for the Lords Prayer, the plain truth is, we lie unto God for the most part clean through it, and for want of desiring indeed, what in word we pray for, tell him to his face as many false tales as we make Petitions. For who shews by his endeavours, that he desires heartily that God's Name should be hallowed; that is holily and religiously worshipped and adored by all men? That his Kingdom should be advanced and inlarged? That his blessed Will should be universally obeyed? Who shews by his forsaking sin, that he desires so much as he should do the forgiveness of it? Nay, who doth not revenge, upon all occasions, the affronts, contempts, and injuries put upon him, and so upon the matter curse himself, as often as he says, Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us? How few depend upon God only for their daily bread, viz. the good things of this life, as upon the only giver of them, so as neither to get nor keep any of them, by any means which they know or fear to be offensive unto God? How few desire in earnest to avoid temptation? Nay, who almost is there, that takes not the Devils Office out of his hand, and is not himself a Tempter both to himself and others? Lastly, who almost is there that desires heartily and above all things so much as the thing deserves, to be delivered from the greatest evil; Sin, I mean, and the Anger of God? Now, Beloved, this is certain; he that imploys not requisite industry, to obtain what he pretends to desire, does not desire indeed, but only pretends to that desires not what he prays for, prays with tongue only, and not with his heart, indeed does not pray to God, but play and dally with him. And yet this is all which men generally do, and therefore herein also accomplish this Prophesie, Having a form of Godliness, but denying the power thereof.

And this were ill enough, were it in private, but we abuse God Almighty also with our publick and solemn formalities, we make the Church a Stage whereon to act our parts, and play our Pageants; there we make a profession every day of confessing our sins with humble, lowly, and obedient hearts, and yet when we have talked after this manner, twenty, thirty, forty years together, our hearts for the most part continue as proud, as impenitent, as disobedient, as they were in the beginning. We make great Protestations, when we assemble and meet together to render thanks to God Almighty, for the benefits received at his hands; and if this were to be performed with words, with Hosanna's, and Hallelujahs, and Gloria Patri's, and Psalms, and Hymns, and such like outward matters, peradventure we should do it very sufficiently: but in the mean time with our lives and actions, we provoke the Almighty, and that to his face, with all variety of grievous and bitter provocations; we do daily and hourly such things as we know, and he hath assured us, to be odious unto him, and contrary to his nature; as any thing in the world is to the nature of any man in the world; and all this upon poor, trifling, trivial, no temptations. If a man whom you had dealt well with, should deal so with you; one whom you had redeemed from the Turkish slavery, and instated in some indifferent good inheritance, should make you fine Speeches, entertain you with Panegyricks, and have your praises always in his mouth; but all this while do nothing that pleases you, but upon all occasions, put all affronts and indignities upon you, Would you say, this were a thankful man? Nay, would you not make heaven and earth ring of his unthankfulness, and detest him almost as much for his fair Speeches, as his foul Actions. Beloved, such is our unthankfulness to our God and Creator, to our Lord and Saviour; our tongues ingeminate, and cry aloud Hosanna, Hosanna, but the louder voice of our lives and actions is Crucifie him, Crucifie him: We court God Almighty, and complement with him, and profess to esteem his service perfect freedom; but if any thing be to be done, much more if any thing be to be suffered for him, here we leave him. We bow the knee before him, and put a Reed in his hand, and a Crown upon his head, and cry, Hail King of the Jews: But then with our customary sins, we give him Gall to eat, and Vinegar to drink, we thrust a Spear in his side, nail him to the Cross, and crucifie to our selves the Lord of Glory. This is not the office of a friend to bewail a dead friend with vain lamentation. Sed quæ voluerit meminisse, quæ mandaverit exequi, to remember what he desires, and execute what he commands; so said a dying Roman to his friend, and so say I to you, To be thankful to God is not to say, God be praised, or, God be thanked, but to remember what he desires, and execute what he commands. To be thankful to God, is certainly to love him, and to love him is to keep his Commandments, so saith our Saviour, Joh. 19. If ye love me, keep my Commandments: If we do so, we may justly pretend to thankfulness; which, believe me, is not a word, nor to be performed with words; But if we do not so, as generally we do not, our talk of thankfulness is nothing else but meer talk, and we accomplish St. Paul's Prophesie herein also: Having a form of thankfulness, but not the reality, not the power of it.

If I should reckon up unto you, how many direct lies every wicked man tells to God Almighty, as often as he says Amen, to this form of Godliness, which our Church hath prescribed; If I should present unto you all our acting of Piety, and playing of Humiliation, and personating of devotion in the Psalms, the Letanies, the Collects, and generally in the whole Service, I should be infinite: And therefore I have thought good to draw a vail over a great part of our Hypocrisie, and to restrain the remainder of our discourse to the contrariety between our profession and performance, only in two things, I mean, Faith and Repentance.

And first for Faith: We profess, and indeed generally, because it is not safe to do otherwise, that we believe the Scripture to be true, and that it contains the plain and only way to infinite and eternal happiness: But if we did generally believe what we do profess, if this were the language of our hearts as well as our tongues, How comes it to pass that the Study of it is so generally neglected?

Let a Book that treats of the Philosophers stone, promise never so many mountains of Gold, and even the restoring of the golden Age again, yet were it not marvel, if few should study it; and the reason is, because few would believe it. But if there were a Book extant, and ordinary to be had, as the Bible is, which men did generally believe to contain a plain and easie way for all men to become rich, and to live in health and pleasure, and this worlds happiness, can any man imagine that this Book would be unstudied by any man? And why then should I not believe, That if the Scripture were firmly and heartily believed, the certain and only way to happiness, which is perfect and eternal, it would be studied by all men with all diligence? Seeing therefore most Christians are so cold and negligent in the study of it, prefer all other business, all other pleasures before it; is there not great reason to fear, that many who pretend to believe firmly, believe it not at all, or very weakly and faintly? If the General of an Army, or an Embassadour to some Prince or State, were assured by the King his Master, that the transgressing any point of his Commission, should cost him his life; and the exact performance of it, be recompenced with as high a reward as were in the Kings power to bestow upon him: can it be imagined that any man who believes this, and is in his right mind, can be so supinely and stupidly negligent of this charge, which so much imports him, as to oversee, through want of care, any one necessary Article, or part of his Commission; especially if it be delivered to him in writing, and at his pleasure to peruse it every day? Certainly this absurd negligence is a thing without example, and such as peradventure will never happen to any sober man to the worlds end: And by the same reason, if we were firmly persuaded, that this Book doth indeed contain that charge and commission, which infinitely more concerns us, it were not in reason possible, but that to such a persuasion, our care and diligence about it, should be in some measure answerable: seeing therefore most of us are so strangely careless, so grosly negligent of it, is there not great reason to fear, that though we have Professors and Professors in abundance; yet the faithful, the truly and sincerely faithful, are, in a manner, failed from the children of men. What but this can be the cause that men are so commonly ignorant of so many Articles, and particular Mandates of it, which yet are as manifest in it, as if they were written with the beams of the Sun? For example; how few of our Ladies and Gentlewomen, do or will understand, that a voluptuous life, is damnable and prohibited to them? Yet St. Paul saith so very plainly, She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth. I believe this case divinely regards not the Sex, He would say: He as well as She, if there had been occasion. How few of the Gallants of our time do or will understand, that it is not lawful for them to be as expensive and costly in apparel, as their means, or perhaps, their credit will extend unto? Which is to sacrifice unto vanity, that, which by the Law of Christ, is due unto Charity; and yet the same St. Paul forbids plainly this excess even to women—Also let women (he would have said it much rather to the men) array themselves in comely apparel, with shamefastness and modesty, not with embroidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly apparel; and to make our ignorance the more inexcusable, the very same rule is delivered by St. Peter also, 1 Epist. 3. 3.

1 Tim. 2. 9.

How few rich men are or will be persuaded, That the Law of Christ permits them not to heap up riches for ever, nor perpetually to add House to House, and Land to Land, though by lawful means, but requires of them thus much Charity at least, that ever while they are providing for their Wives and Children, they should, out of the increase wherewith God blesseth their industry, allot the Poor a just and free proportion? And when they have provided for them in a convenient manner, (such as they themselves shall judge sufficient and convenient in others) that then they should give over making Purchase after Purchase, but, with the surplussage of their Revenue

Revenue beyond their expence, procure, as much as lies in them, that no Christian remain miserably poor: few rich men, I fear, are or will be thus persuaded, and their daily actions shew as much; yet undoubtedly, either our Saviour's general command, of loving our neighbours as our selves, which can hardly consist with our keeping vainly, or spending vainly, what he wants for his ordinary subsistence, lays upon us a necessity of this high liberality: or his special command concerning this matter, Quod superest date pauperibus; That which remains give to the poor: or that which St. John saith, 1 Epist. 3. 17. reacheth home unto it, Whosoever hath this worlds good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up the bowels of his compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? Which is in effect, as if he had said, He that keepeth from any brother in Christ, that which his brother wants, and he wants not, doth but vainly think that he loves God, and therefore vainly hope that God loves him.

Where almost are the men that are or will be persuaded the Gospel of Christ requires of men Humility, like to that of little Children, and that under the highest pain of damnation? That is, that we should no more over-value our selves, or desire to be highly esteemed by others; no more undervalue, scorn, or despise others; no more affect preeminence over others, than little children do, before we have put that pride into them, which afterwards we charge wholly upon their natural corruption: and yet our blessed Saviour requires nothing more rigidly, nor more plainly, than this high degree of humility; Verily, saith he, I say unto you (he speaks to his Disciples affecting high places, and demanding, which of them should be greatest) Except ye be converted and become as little Children, ye shall not enter into the Kingdom of heaven.

Would it not be strange news to a great many, that not only Adultery and Fornication, but even uncleanness and lasciviousness; not only Idolatry and Witchcraft, but Hatred, Variance, Emulations, Wrath, and Contentions; not only Murthers, but Envying; not Drunkenness only, but revelling, are things prohibited to Christians, and such as if we forsake them not, we cannot inherit the Kingdom of Heaven? And yet these things, as strange as they may seem, are plainly written; some of them by St. Peter, 1 Ep. 4. Chap. but all of them by St. Paul. Gal. 5. 19. Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these, adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, &c. of the which I tell you before, as I have told you in times past, that they who do such things, shall not inherit the Kingdom of God.

If I should tell you, that all bitterness and evil speaking (nay, such is the modesty and gravity which Christianity requires of us) foolish talk and jesting, are things not allowed to Christians, would not many cry out, These are hard and strange sayings, who can hear them? And yet, as strange as they may seem, they have been written well nigh 1600 years, and are yet extant in very legible Characters, in the Epistle to the Ephesians, the end of the fourth, and the beginning of the fifth Chap.

To come a little nearer to the business of our times, The chief Actors in this bloudy Tragedy, which is now upon the Stage, who have robbed our Sovereign Lord the King of his Forts, Towns, Treasure, Ammunition, Houses, of the Persons of many of his Subjects, and (as much as lies in them) of the hearts of all of them: Is it credible that they know, and remember, and consider the example of David recorded for their instruction? Whose heart smote him when he had but cut off the hem of Sauls Garment.

They that make no scruple at all of fighting with his Sacred Majesty, and shooting Muskets and Ordnance at Him (which sure have not the skill to choose a Subject from a King) to the extreme hazard of his Sacred Person, whom by all possible obligations they are bound to defend; do they know, think you, the general rule without exception or limitation, left by the Holy Ghost for our direction in all such cases, Who can lift up his hand against the Lords Anointed, and be innocent? Or, do they consider his command in the Proverbs of Solomon, My Son fear God and the King, and meddle not with them that desire change? Or, his counsel in the Book of Ecclesiastes,

1 Sam. 26. 9.

Prov. 24. 21.

Eccles. 8. 2. Ecclesiastes, I counsel thee to keep the Kings Commandment, and that in regard of the oath of God. Or because they possibly may pretend that they are exempted from, or unconcerned in, the commands of obedience delivered in the Old Testament, Do they know and remember, the Precept given to all Christians by St. Peter, Submit your selves to every Ordinance of man for the Lords sake, whether it be to the King as Supreme, or unto Governours, as unto them that are sent by him? Or, that terrible sanction of the same command, They that resist shall receive to themselves damnation, left us by S. Paul in his Epistle to the Romans, who then were the miserable Subjects of the worst King, the worst man, nay, I think I may add truly the worst beast in the world; that so all Rebels mouths might be stopt for ever, and left without all colour or pretence whatsoever, to justifie the resistance of Sovereign power. Undoubtedly, if they did know and consider, and lay close to their hearts, these places of Scripture; or the fearful judgment which befel Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, for this very sin which now they commit, and with a high hand still proceed in, it would be impossible but their hearts would smite them, as David's did, upon an infinitely less occasion, and affright them out of those ways of present confusion, and eternal damnation. And then on the other side, they that maintain the Kings righteous cause with the hazard of their lives and fortunes, but by their oaths and curses, by their drunkenness and debauchery, by their irreligion and prophaneness, fight more powerfully against their Party, than by all other means they do or can fight for it; are not, I fear, very well acquainted with any part of the Bible: but that strict caution which properly concerns themselves in the Book of Leviticus, I much doubt they have scarce ever heard of it, When thou goest to war with thine Enemies, then take heed there be no wicked thing in thee; not only no wickedness in the cause thou maintainest, nor no wickedness in the means by which thou maintainest it; but no personal impieties in the persons that maintain it. Beloved, for the former two, we have reason to be full of comfort and confidence; For what is our cause? What is that which you fight, and we pray for? But to deliver the King and all his good Subjects out of the power of their Enemies, who will have no peace but with their slaves and vassals: and for the means by which it is maintained, it is not by lying, it is not by calumnies, it is not by running first our selves, and then forcing the people to universal perjury: But by a just War, because necessary; and by as fair and merciful a War, as if they were not Rebels and Traytors you fight against, but Competitors in a doubtful Title. But now for the third part of the caution, that, to deal ingenuously with you, and to deliver my own soul, if I cannot other mens, that I cannot think of with half so much comfort as the former; but seeing so many Jonasses imbarqued in the same Ship, the same cause with us, and so many Achans entring into Battel with us against the Canaanites; seeing Publicans and Sinners on the one side, against Scribes and Pharisees on the other; on the one side Hypocrisie, on the other Prophaneness; no honesty nor justice on the one side, and very little piety on the other: On the one side horrible Oaths, Curses, and Blasphemies; on the other, pestilent Lies, Calumnies, and Perjury: When I see amongst them the Pretence of Reformation, if not the desire pursued by Antichristian, Mahumetan, Devillish means; and amongst us little or no zeal for reformation of what is indeed amiss, little or no care to remove the cause of God's anger towards us, by just, lawful, and Christian means; I profess plainly, I cannot without trembling consider, what is likely to be the event of these Distractions; I cannot but fear, that the goodness of our cause may sink under the burden of our sins: And that God in his Justice, because we will not suffer his Judgments to atchieve their prime scope and intention, which is our amendment and reformation, may either deliver us up to the blind zeal and fury of our Enemies; or else, which I rather fear, make us instruments of his Justice each against other, and of our own just and deserved confusion. This, I profess plainly, is my fear, and I would to God it were the fear of every Soldier of his Majesties Army: but that which increaseth my fear is, that I see very many of them have very little, or none at all: I mean not, that they are fearless towards their Enemies, (that's our joy and

and triumph, but that they shew their courage even against God, and fear not him, whom it is madness not to fear. Now from whence can their not fearing him proceed, but from their not knowing him, their not knowing his Will and their own Duty? Not knowing how highly it concerns Soldiers, above other Professions, to be Religious? And then, if ever, when they are engaged in dangerous adventures, and every moment have their lives in their hands, When they go to war with their Enemies, then to take heed there be no wicked thing in them.

You see, Beloved, how many instances and examples I have given you of our gross ignorance of what is necessary and easie for us to know; and to these it were no difficult matter to add more. Now from whence can this ignorance proceed, but from supine negligence? And from whence this negligence, but from our not believing what we pretend to believe? For, did we believe firmly and heartily, that this Book were given us by God for the rule of our Actions, and that obedience to it were the certain and only way to eternal happiness, it were impossible we should be such enemies to our selves, such Traitors to our own souls, as not to search it, at least, with so much diligence, that no necessary point of our duty plainly taught in it, could possibly escape us. But it is certain, and apparent to all the world, that the greatest part of Christians, through gross and wilful negligence, remain utterly ignorant of many necessary points of their duty to God and Man; and therefore it is much to be feared, that this Book, and the Religion of Christ contained in it, among an infinite of professors, labours with great penury of true believers.

It were an easie matter (if the time would permit) to present unto you many other demonstrations of the same conclusion; but to this drawn from our willing ignorance of that which is easie and necessary for us to know, I will content my self to add only one more, taken from our voluntary and presumptuous neglect to do those things which we know and acknowledge to be necessary.

If a man should say unto me, That it concerns him as much as his life is worth, to go presently to such a place, and that he knows but one way to it, and I should see him stand still, or go some other way, Had I any reason to believe that this man believes himself? Quid Verba audiam, cum facta videam? Saith he in the Comedy; Protestatio contra factum non valet, saith the Law; and why should I believe, that that man believes obedience to Christ the only way to present and eternal happiness, whom I see wittingly, and willingly, and constantly, and customarily to disobey him? The time was, that we all knew that the King could reward those that did him service, and punish those that did him disservice, and then all men were ready to obey his Command, and he was a rare man that durst do any thing to his face that offended him. Beloved, If we did but believe in God, so much as most Subjects do in their King; did we as verily believe, that God could and would make us perfectly happy, if we serve him, though all the world conspire to make us miserable, and that he could and would make us miserable if we serve him not, though all the world should conspire to make us happy, How were it possible that to such a faith our lives should not be conformable? Who was there ever so madly in love with a present peny, as to run the least hazard of the loss of 10000 l. a year to gain it, or not readily to part with it upon any probable hope or light persuasion, much more a firm belief that by doing so he should gain 100000 l. Now, Beloved, the happiness which the servants of Christ are promised in the Scripture we all pretend to believe, that it exceeds the conjunction of all the good things of the world, and much more such a proportion as we may possibly enjoy, infinitely more than 10000 l. a year, or 100000 l. doth a peny; for, 100000 l. is but a peny so many times over, and 10000 l. a year is worth but a certain number of pence; but between heaven and earth, between finite and infinite, between eternity and a moment, there is utterly no proportion; and therefore seeing we are so apt, upon trifling occasions, to hazard this heaven for this earth, this infinite for this finite, this all for this nothing; is it not much to be feared, that though many of us pretend to much faith, we have indeed very little or none at all? The sum of all which hath been spoken concerning this point is this: Were we firmly perſuaded, that obedience to the Goſpel of Chriſt is the true and only way to preſent and eternal happineſs, (without which faith no man living can be juſtified) then the innate deſire of our own happineſs could not but make us ſtudious inquirers of the will of Chriſt, and conſcionable performers of it; but there are (as experience ſhews) very few, who make it their care and buſineſs to know the will of Chriſt; and of thoſe few again, very many who make no conſcience at all of doing what they know: therefore though they profeſs and proteſt they have faith, yet their proteſtations are not to be regarded againſt their actions, but we may ſafely and reaſonably conclude what was to be concluded, That the Doctrine of Chriſt, amongſt an infinite of profeſſors, labours with great ſcarcity of true, and ſerious, and hearty believers; and that herein alſo we accompliſh St. Paul's Prediction, Having a form of godlineſs, but denying, &c.

But perhaps the truth and reality of our repentance may make ſome kind of ſatisfaction to God Almighty for our hypocritical dallying with him in all the reſt; truly, I ſhould be heartily glad it were ſo: but I am ſo far from being of this faith, that herein I fear we are moſt of all hypocritical, and that the generality of Profeſſors is ſo far from a real practice of true Repentance, that ſcarce one in an hundred underſtands truly what it is.

Some ſatisfie themſelves with a bare confeſſion and acknowledgment either that they are ſinners in general, or that they have committed ſuch and ſuch ſins in particular; which acknowledgment comes not yet from the heart of a great many, but only from their lips and tongues; For how many are there that do rather complain and murmur that they are ſinners, than acknowledge and confeſs it? And make it, upon the matter, rather their unhappineſs and misfortune, than their true fault, that they are ſo? Such are all they who impute all their commiſſions of evil to the unavoidable want of reſtraining grace, and all their omiſſion of good to the like want of effectual exciting grace. All ſuch as pretend that the Commandments of God are impoſſible to be kept any better than they are kept; and that the World, the Fleſh, and the Devil, are even omnipotent enemies; and that God neither doth, nor will, give ſufficient ſtrength to reſiſt and overcome them. All ſuch as lay all their faults upon Adam, and ſay with thoſe rebellious Iſraelites (whom God aſſures, That they neither had nor ſhould have juſt reaſon to ſay ſo) That their Fathers had eaten ſowre grapes, and their teeth were ſet on edge. Laſtly, all ſuch as lay all their ſins upon divine Preſcience, and Predeſtination, ſaying with their tongues, O what wretched ſinners have we been; but in their hearts, How could we help it, we were predeſtinate to it, we could not do otherwiſe.

All ſuch as ſeriouſly ſo perſuade themſelves, and think to hide their nakedneſs with ſuch fig-leaves as theſe, can no more be ſaid to acknowledge themſelves guilty of a fault, than a man that was born blind or lame, with the Stone or Gout, can accuſe himſelf of any fault for being born ſo; well may ſuch a one complain and bemoan himſelf, and ſay, O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from this unhappineſs! but ſuch a complaint is as far from being a true acknowledgment of any fault, as a bare acknowledgment of a fault is far from true repentance: for, to confeſs a fault, is, to acknowledge, that, freely and willingly, without any conſtraint, or unavoidable neceſſity, we have tranſgreſſed the Law of God, it being in our power by God's grace, to have done otherwiſe. To aggravate this fault is to confeſs we have done ſo, when we might eaſily have avoided it, and had no great nor violent temptation to it; to pretend any great difficulty in the matter, is to excuſe and extenuate it: but to ſay, that, all things conſidered, it was abſolutely impoſſible for you to avoid it, is flatly to deny it. Others there are that think they have done enough, if to confeſſion of ſin, they add ſome ſorrow for it; if when the preſent fit of ſin is paſt, and they are returned to themſelves, the ſting remaining, breed ſome remorſe of conſcience, ſome complaints againſt their wickedneſs and folly for having done ſo, and ſome intentions to forſake it, though vaniſhing and ineffectual: Theſe heat-drops, this morning dew of ſorrow, though it preſently vaniſh, and they return to do ſo: He that to their ſin again upon the next temptation as a dog to his vomit, when the pang is over; yet in the pauſes between while they are in their good mood, they conceive themſelves to have very true, and very good repentance; ſo that if they ſhould have the good fortune to be taken away in one of theſe Intervalla, one of theſe ſober moods, they ſhould certainly be ſaved; which is juſt as if a man in a Quartane Ague, or the Stone, or Gout, ſhould think himſelf rid of his diſeaſe as oft as he is out of his fit.

But if repentance were no more but ſo; how could St. Paul have truly ſaid, That godly ſorrow worketh repentance? Every man knows that nothing can work it ſelf. The Architect is not the houſe which he builds, the Father is not the Son which he begets, the Tradeſman is not the work which he makes; and therefore if ſorrow, godly ſorrow, worketh repentance, certainly ſorrow is not repentance: the ſame St. Paul tells us in the ſame place, That the ſorrow of the world worketh death; and you will give me leave to conclude from hence, therefore it is not death; and what ſhall hinder me from concluding thus alſo, godly ſorrow worketh repentance, therefore it is not repentance. 1 Cor. 7. 10.

To this purpoſe it is worth the obſerving, that when the Scripture ſpeaks of that kind of repentance, which is only ſorrow for ſomething done, and wiſhing it undone, it conſtantly uſeth the word Μεταμέλεια, to which forgiveneſs of ſins is no where promiſed. So it is written of Judas the Son of perdition, Matt. 27. 3. Μεταμεληθεὶς ἀπέκτεινεν ἑαυτὸν, he repented and went and hanged himſelf, and ſo conſtantly in other places. But that repentance to which remiſſion of ſins and ſalvation is promiſed, is perpetually expreſſed by the word Μετάνοια, which ſignifieth a through change of the heart and ſoul, of the life and actions, Μετανοεῖτε, ἤγγικε γὰρ ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν, Mat. 3. 2. which is rendred in our laſt Tranſlation, Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand: But much better, becauſe freer from ambiguity in the entrance to our Common-Prayer-Book, Amend your lives, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. From whence, by the way, we may obſerve, That in the judgment of thoſe holy and learned Martyrs, Repentance, and amendment of life are all one: And I would to God, the ſame men, out of the ſame care of avoiding miſtakes, and to take away occaſion of cavilling our Liturgy from them that ſeek it, and out of fear of encouraging carnal men to ſecurity in ſinning, had been ſo provident, as to ſet down in terms, the firſt ſentence taken out of the eighteenth of Ezekiel, and not have put in the place of it an ambiguous, and (though not in it ſelf, yet accidentally, by reaſon of the miſtake to which it is ſubject) I fear very often a pernicious Paraphraſe; for whereas thus they make it, At what time ſoever a ſinner doth repent him of his ſins from the bottom of his heart, I will put all his wickedneſs out of my remembrance, ſaith the Lord; The plain truth, if you will hear it, is, the Lord doth not ſay ſo, theſe are not the very words of God, but the Paraphraſe of men: the words of God are as followeth— If the wicked turn from all the ſins which he hath committed, and keep all my Statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he ſhall ſurely live, he ſhall not die; where, I hope, you eaſily obſerve that there is no ſuch word as, At what time ſoever a ſinner doth repent, &c. and that there is a wide difference between this (as the word repent uſually ſounds in the ears of the people) and turning from all ſins, and keeping all Gods Statutes; that indeed, having no more in it but ſorrow and good purpoſes, may be done eaſily and certainly at the laſt gaſp, and it is very ſtrange that any Chriſtian, who dies in his right ſenſes, and knows the difference between heaven and hell, ſhould fail of the performing it: but this work of turning, keeping, and doing, is (though not impoſſible, by extraordinary mercy to be performed at laſt) yet ordinarily a work of time, a long and laborious work (but yet heaven is very well worth it) and if you mean to go through with it, you had need go about it preſently. Yet ſeeing the Compoſers of our Liturgy thought fit to abreviate, Turning from all ſin, and keeping all God's Statutes, and doing that which is lawful and right, into this one word, Repenting, it is eaſie and obvious to collect from hence, as I did before, from the other place, that by Repentance, they underſtood not only ſorrow for ſin, but conversion from it. The same word Μετάνοια, Mat. 12. 42. is used in speaking of the Repentance of the Ninivites: And, how real, hearty, and effectual a Conversion that was, you may see Jonas 3. from the fifth to the last verse. The people of Ninivch believed God, and put on Sackcloth from the greatest of them to the least of them; for word came to the King of Ninivch, and he arose from his Throne, and he cast his Robe from him, and covered him with Sackcloth, and sate in ashes; and he caused it to be proclaimed and published throughout Ninivch, by the Decree of the King and of his Nobles, saying: Let neither man nor beast, herd, nor flock, taste any thing, let them not feed, nor drink water; but let man and beast be covered with Sackcloth, and cry mightily unto God; yea, let every one turn from his evil way, and from the violence which is in their hands, who can tell if God will turn and repent, and turn away his fierce anger that we perish not?

Which words contain an excellent and lively pattern for all true penitents to follow, and whereunto to conform themselves in their humiliation and Repentance. And truly, though there be no Jonas sent expressly from God to cry unto us, Yet forty days and Ninivch shall be destroyed; yet seeing the mouth of Eternal Truth hath taught us, that a Kingdom divided is in such danger of ruine and destruction, that morally speaking, if it continue divided it cannot stand; and seeing the strange and miserable condition of our Nation at this time, may give any considerable man just cause to fear, that as in Reboboam's case, so likewise in ours, The thing is of the Lord, intending to bring his heavy judgment upon us, for our great sins, and our stupid, and stupendious security in sinning, and to make us instruments of his designed vengeance, one upon another; peradventure it would be a seasonable and necessary motion to be made to our King and his Nobles —— To revive this old Proclamation of the King of Ninivch, and to send it with Authority through his Majesties Dominions, and to try whether it will produce some good effect: Who can tell if God will turn and repent, and turn away from his fierce anger, that we perish not? Who can tell, whether he that hath the hearts of King and People in his hand, and turneth them whithersoever he thinketh best, may not upon our repentance take our extremity for his opportunity, and at last open our eyes that we may see those things that belong to our peace, and shew us the way of Peace, which hitherto we have not known? but this by the way; For my purpose, I observe, That this Repentance, which when the sword of God was drawn, and his arm advanced for a blow, staid his hand, and sheathed his sword again, was not a meer sorrow for their sins, and a purpose to leave them; nay, it was not only laying aside their gallantry and bravery, and putting on Sackcloth, and sitting in ashes, and crying mightily unto God, of which yet we are come very short: but it was also, and that chiefly, their universal turning from their evil way, which above all the rest was prevalent and effectual with God Almighty: for so it is written, And God saw their works that they turned from their evil way, and God repented him of the evil that he said he would do, and he did it not.

In the Gospel of St. Luke, Chap. 24. The condition of the new Covenant, to which remission of sins is promised, is expressed by the word Μετάνοια, —— Thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead, and that (Μετάνοια) Repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name. Which place, if ye compare with that in the Gospel of St. Matthew, Go teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all whatsoever I shall command you; It will be no difficulty to collect, that what our Saviour calls in one place Μετάνοια, Repentance, that he calls in another, Observing all that he hath commanded; which, if Repentance were no more but sorrow for sin, and intending to leave it, certainly he never could, nor would, have done: And as little could St. Paul. Acts 20. 21. professs, that the whole matter of his preaching was nothing else but Μετάνοια εἰς Θεὸν, Repentance towards God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ: It being manifest in his Epistles, he preaches, and presses every where, the necessity of mortification, regeneration, new, and sincere obedience, all which are evidently not contained under under the head of Faith; and therefore it is evident he comprized all these under the name of Repentance.

In which words moreover it is very considerable, as also in another place, Heb. 6. where among the Fundamentals of Christianity the first place is given to Μετάνοια ἀπὸ νεκρῶν ἔργων, I say, it is very considerable, that though the word may not very absolutely be rendred Repentance; yet we shall do much right to the places, and make them much more clear and intelligible, if instead of Repentance, we should put Conversion, as it is in some of the best Latine Translations: So, for example, if instead of repentance to God, Acts 20. and repentance from dead works, in the Epistle to the Hebrews, which our English tongue will hardly bear; we should read conversion to God, and conversion from dead works, every one sees, it would be more perspicuous and more natural; whereas, on the other side, if, instead of repentance, we should substitute sorrow (as every true genuine interpretation may with advantage to the clearness of the sense, be put in place of the word interpreted) and read the place sorrow towards God, and sorrow from dead works, it is apparent that this reading would be unnatural, and almost ridiculous; which is a great argument, that Μετάνοια, to which forgiveness of sins is promised in the Gospel, is not only sorrow for sin, but conversion from sin.

And yet if it be not so, but that Heaven may be purchased at easier, and cheaper rates: how comes it to pass, that in the New Testament, we are so plainly, and so frequently assured, that without actual, and effectual amendment, and newness of life; without actual, and effectual Mortification, Regeneration, Sanctification; there is no hope, no possibility of Salvation.

Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire. So St. John Baptist preaches repentance. It is not then the leaves of a fair profession, no nor the blossoms of good purposes and intentions, but the fruit, the fruit only, that can save us from the fire; neither is it enough not to bear ill fruit, unless we bring forth good. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire. Mat. 3. 9.

Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but he that doth the will of my Father which is in Heaven: So our Saviour, Mat. 7. 21. And again, after he had delivered his most divine Precepts in his Sermon on the Mount, (which Sermon contains the Substance of the Gospel of Christ:) he closeth up all with saying, He that heareth these sayings of mine, and doth them not, (and yet these were the hardest sayings that ever he said) I will liken him to a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand, (that is, his hope of Salvation, upon a sandy and false ground) and when the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that House, it fell and great was the fall of it.

They that are Christs have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts: So St. Paul, Gal. 5. 24. They then that have not done so, nor crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts, let them be as sorrowful as they please, let them intend what they please, they as yet are none of Christs, and, good Lord! What a multitude of Christians then are there in the world that do not belong to Christ?

The works of the flesh, says the same St. Paul, are manifest, which are these, Adultery, Fornication, Uncleanness, Lasciviousness, Idolatry, Witchcraft, Hatred, Variance, Emulations, Wrath, Strife, Seditions, Heresies, Envyings, Murthers, Drunkenness, Revelings; of which I tell you before, as I have told you in times past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the Kingdom of God. He doth not say, they which have done such things shall not be saved, but manifestly to the contrary, ——Such were some of you, but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified; but he says; they which do such things, and without amendment of life shall continue doing them, shall not be excused by any pretence of sorrow and good purposes, They shall not inherit the Kingdom of Heaven. Gal. 5. 19, 20, 21.

And again, in another Epistle, Know ye not, that the unrighteous shall not inherit the Kingdom of God? Be not deceived, neither Fornicators, nor Idolaters, nor Adulterers, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor Thieves, nor Covetous, nor Drunkards, nor Revilers, shall inherit the Kingdom of God.

In Christ Jesus (saith the same St. Paul in other places) nothing availeth but faith: nothing but a new Creature: nothing but keeping the Commandments of God; it is not then a wishing, but a working faith; not wishing you were a new Creature, nor sorrowing you are not, but being a new Creature; nor wishing you had kept, nor sorrowing you have not kept, nor purposing vainly to keep, but keeping his Commandments must prevail with him.

Follow peace with all men, and holiness, saith the Divine Author of the Epistle to the Hebrews) without which no man shall see the Lord.

St. Peter, in his second Epistle, commends unto us a golden chain of Christian perfections; consisting of these Links, Faith, Vertue, Knowledge, Temperance, Patience, Godliness, Brotherly kindness, Charity: and then adds,——He that lacketh these things, is blind, and knoweth not that he was purged from his old sins. Let his sorrow be never so great, and his desires never so good, yet if he lack these things, he is blind: and was purged from his old sins, but is not.

Lastly, St. John, He that hath this hope purifieth himself, even as he is pure; the meaning is not with the same degree of purity, for that is impossible; but with the same kind, the same truth of purity; he that doth not purifie himself may, nay, doth flatter himself, and, without warrant, presume upon God's favour; but this hope he hath not: and again, Little Children, let no man deceive you, he that doth righteousness, is righteous, even as he is righteous; And thus you see all the divine Writers of the New Testament, with one consent, and with one mouth, proclaim the necessity of real holiness, and labour together to disinchant us, from this vain phansie, That men may be saved by sorrowing for their sin, and intending to leave it, without effectual conversion and reformation of life; which, it may well be feared, hath sent thousands of souls to hell in a golden dream of heaven.

But is not this to preach works as the Papists do? No certainly, it is not; but to preach works as Christ and his Apostles do: it is to preach the necessity of them, which no good Protestant, no good Christian ever denied; but it is not to preach the merit of them, which is the error of the Papists.

But is it not to preach the Law in time of the Gospel? No certainly, it is not: for the Law forgives no sins, but requires exact obedience, and curseth every one which from the beginning to the end of his life, continueth not in all things which are written in the Law to do them; but the Gospel says, and accordingly I have said unto you, that there is mercy always in store for those who know the day of their visitation, and forsake their sins in time of mercy; and that God will pardon their imperfections in the progress of holiness, who miscall not presumptuous and deliberate Sins by the name of Imperfections, but seriously and truly endeavour to be perfect: Only I forewarn you that you must never look to be admitted to the Wedding Feast of the Kings Son, either in the impure rags of any customary sin, or without the Wedding Garment of Christian holiness; only I forewarn you, that whosoever looks to be made partaker of the joys of heaven, must make it the chief, if not the only business of his life, to know the will of God, and to do it; that great violence is required by our Saviour for the taking of this Kingdom, that the Race we are to run is a long Race, the building we are to erect is a great building, and will hardly, very hardly be finished in a day; that the work we have to do of mortifying all vices, and acquiring all Christian vertues, is a long work; we way easily defer it too long, we cannot possibly begin it too soon, Only I would persuade you, and I hope I have done it, that that Repentance which is not effectual to true and timely Conversion, will never be available unto eternal Salvation. And if I have proved unto you, that this is indeed the nature of true Repentance, then certainly, I have proved withal, that that Repentance wherewith the generality of Christians content themselves, notwithstanding their great professions what they are, and their glorious protestations of what they intend to be, is not the power, but the form; not the truth, but the shadow of true Repentance; and that herein also we accomplish St, Pauls Prediction, Having a form of godliness, &c.

And

And now what remains, but that (as I said in the beginning) I should humbly intreat, and earnestly exhort every man that hath heard me this day, to confute in his particular, what I have proved true in the general; To take care that the sin of formality, though it be the sin of our times, may yet not be the sin of our persons; that we satisfie not our selves with the shadows of Religion, without the substance of it, nor with the Form of Godliness without the Power of it.

To this purpose I shall beseech you to consider, That though sacrificing, burning incense, celebrating of set festivals, praying, fasting, and such like, were, under the Law, the service of God commanded by himself; yet whensoever they proceed not from, nor were joyned with the sincerity of an honest heart, he professeth frequently almost in all the Prophets, not only his scorn and contempt of them all, as fond, empty, and ridiculous; but also his hating, loathing, and detesting of them as abominable and impious.

The Sacrifice of the wicked is abomination to God, Prov. 15. 8. What have I to do with the multitude of your Sacrifices? saith the Lord, Isaiah the first, I am full of the burnt offerings of Rams, and of the fat of fed beasts, when ye come to appear before me, who required this at your hands? Bring no more vain Oblations: Incense is an abomination to me, I cannot suffer your New Moons, nor Sabbaths, nor solemn Days, it is iniquity even your solemn Assemblies: My soul hateth your New Moons, and your appointed Feasts, they are a burthen to me, I am weary to bear them; and when you shall stretch out your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you, and though you make many prayers I will not hear, for your hands are full of blood.

And again, Isa. 66. 3. He that kills an Oxe is as if he slew a man, he that sacrificeth a Lamb as if he cut off a Dogs neck, he that offereth an Oblation as if he offered Swines-flesh, he that burneth incense as if he blessed an Idol. And what's the reason of this strange aversion of God from his own Ordinances? It follows in the next words, They have chosen their own ways, and their soul delighteth in their abominations.

Terrible are the words which he speaketh to the same purpose in the Prophesie of Amos. Chap. 5, 21, 22, 23. I hate, I despise your Feast days, and I will not smell in your solemn Assemblies, though you offer me burnt-Offerings, and meat-Offerings, I will not accept them, nor will I regard your peace Offerings.

Now, Beloved, if this Hypocrisie, this resting in outward performances were so odious to God under the Law, a Religion full of Shadows, and Ceremonies; certainly it will be much more odious to do so under the Gospel, a Religion of much more simplicity, and exacting so much the greater sincerity of the heart, even because it disburdens the outward man of the performance of legal Rites and Observances. And therefore if we now under the Gospel, shall think to delude God Almighty, as Michal did Saul, with an Idol handsomly dress instead of the true David; if we shall content and please our selves with being of such or such a Sect or Profession: with going to Church, saying, or hearing of Prayers, receiving of Sacraments, hearing, repeating, or preaching of Sermons, with zeal for Ceremonies, or zeal against them; or, indeed, with any thing besides constant piety towards God, Loyalty and obedience towards our Sovereign, Justice and Charity towards all our Neighbours, Temperance, Chastity, and Sobriety towards our selves, certainly we shall one day find, that we have not mocked God, but our selves; and that our portion among Hypocrites shall be greater than theirs.

In the next place, let me intreat you to consider the fearful judgment which God hath particularly threatned to this very sin of drawing nigh unto him with our lips, when our hearts are far from him: It is the great judgment of being given over to the Spirit of slumber and security, the usual forerunner of speedy desolation and destruction, as we may see in the 29 Chap. of Isaiah, from the 9 to the 14 verse, Stay your selves and wonder, cry ye out, and cry, They are drunken, but not with wine, they stagger, but not with strong drink: for the Lord hath poured out upon you the Spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes. The Prophets, and your Rulers, the Seers hath he covered: and after, at the 14 verse, The wisdom of their Wisemen shall perish, and the understanding of their Prudent-men ſhall be hid. Certainly, this judgment if ever it were upon any people, we have cauſe to fear it is now upon us. For, if the ſpirit of deep ſleep were not upon us, How could we ſleep ſo ſecurely even upon the brink of the pit of perdition? How could we proceed on ſo confidently in our mirth and jollity, nay, in our crying ſins and horrible impieties; now when the hand of God is upon us, and wrath is gone out, and even ready to conſume us? And if the wiſdom of our Wiſe-men were not periſhed, How were it poſſible they ſhould ſo obſtinately refuſe the ſecurity offered of our Laws, Liberties, and Religion, by the King's Oath, by his Execrations on himſelf, and his poſterity, in caſe he ſhould violate it; by the Oaths of all his Miniſters not to conſent to, or be inſtruments in, ſuch a Violation; by the ſo much deſired Triennial Parliament, from which no tranſgreſſor can poſſibly be ſecure; and inſtead of all this ſecurity, ſeek for it by a Civil War, the continuance whereof, muſt bring us to deſtruction and deſolation, or elſe He hath deceived us by whom we are taught, That a Kingdom divided againſt it ſelf cannot ſtand.

Now what was the ſin which provoked this fearful judgment? What but that which I have laboured to convince you of, and to diſſwade you from, even the ſin of Hypocriſie; as we may ſee at the twelfth verſe, Wherefore ſaith the Lord, foraſmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honour me, but have removed their heart far from me; and their fear toward me is taught by the precepts of men: therefore, behold I will proceed to do a marvellous work amongſt them; for the wiſdom of their Wiſe-men ſhall periſh, &c.

Conſider, thirdly, what woes, and woes, and woes our Saviour thunders out againſt the Scribes and Phariſees for their Hypocriſie, Woe be unto you Scribes, and Phariſees, Hypocrites; and again and again, Woe be unto you Scribes, and Phariſees, Hypocrites: Beloved, if we be Hypocrites as they were, Tythe Mint and Cummin, and neglect the weighty matters of the Law, Judgment, and Juſtice, and Mercy, as they did: Make long Prayers, and under a pretence devour Widows houſes, as they did: Waſh the outſide of the diſh and Platter, while within we are full of ravening and wickedneſs; write God's Commandments very large and fair upon our Phylacteries, but ſhut them quite out of our hearts: Build the Sepulchres of the old Prophets, and kill their Succeſſors: In fine, if we be like painted Sepulchres, as they were, outwardly garniſhed and beautiful, but within full of dead mens bones and rottenneſs; we are then to make accompt that all theſe woes belong to us, and will one day overtake us.

Conſider, laſtly, the terrible example of Ananias and Saphira, and how they were ſnatcht away in the very act of their ſin, and that their fault was (as the Text tells us) that they lied unto God. Beloved, we have done ſo a thouſand thouſand times: our whole lives (if ſincerely examined) would appear, I fear little leſs but a perpetual Lie; hitherto God hath been merciful to us, and given us time to repent; but let us not proceed ſtill in imitating their fact, leſt at length we be made partakers of their fall.

God of his infinite mercy prevent this in every one of us, even for his Son our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt's ſake; by whom, and with whom, in the unity of the Holy Spirit, be all honour and glory to the eternal Father, world without end. Amen.

The

The Second Sermon.

Psalm XIV. 1.

The Fool hath ſaid in his heart, There is no God.

IF you will turn over ſome few leaves, as far as the 53 Pſalm, you ſhall not only find my Text, but this whole Pſalm; without any alteration, ſave only in the fifth verſe, and that not at all in the ſenſe neither. What ſhall we ſay? Took the holy Spirit of God ſuch eſpecial particular notice of the ſayings and deeds of a Fool, that one expreſſion of them would not ſerve the turn? Or, does the babling and madneſs of a Fool ſo much concern us, as that we need to have them urged upon us once and again, and a third time in the third of the Romans? Surely not any one of us preſent here, is this Fool: Nay, if any one of us could but tell where to find ſuch a Fool as this, that would offer to ſay, though in his heart, There is no God; he ſhould not reſt in quiet, he ſhould ſoon perceive we were not of his faction.

2. We, that are able to tell David an Article or two of faith, more than ever he was acquainted with! Nay! more: Can we, with any imaginable ground of reaſon be ſuppoſed liable to any ſuſpicion of Atheiſm, that are able to read to David a Lecture out of his own Pſalms, and explain the meaning of his own Propheſies, much clearer than himſelf, which held the Poſt to the holy Spirit of God? Though we cannot deny, but that in other things there may be found ſome ſpice of folly and imperfection in us: but it cannot be imagined, that we who are almoſt cloyed with the heavenly Manna of God's Word, that can inſtruct our Teachers, and are able to maintain Opinions and Tenents, the ſcruples whereof not both the Univerſities of this Land, nor the whole Clergy, are able to reſolve; that it ſhould be poſſible for us ever to come to that perfection and excellency of Folly and Madneſs, as to entertain a thought, that there is no God: Nay, we are not ſo uncharitable as to charge a Turk or an Infidel with ſuch an horrible imputation as this.

3. Beloved Chriſtians, be not wiſe in your own conceits: If you will ſeriouſly examine the third of the Romans (which I mentioned before) you ſhall find that St. Paul, out of this Pſalm, and the like words of Iſaiah, doth conclude the whole Poſterity of Adam (Chriſt only excepted) under ſin and the curſe of God: which inference of his were weak and inconcluding, unleſs every man of his own nature, were ſuch a one as the Prophet here deſcribes; and the ſame Apoſtle in another place expreſſes, Even altogether without God in the world; i. e. not maintaining it as an opinion which they would undertake by force of Argument to confirm, That there is no God: For, we read not of above three or four among the Heathens, that were of any faſhion, which went thus far: But ſuch as though in their diſcourſe and ſerious thoughts they do not queſtion a Deity, but would abhor any man that would not liberally allow unto God all his glorious Attributes; yet in their hearts and affections they deny him; they live as if there was no God, having no reſpect at all to him in all their projects, and therefore indeed, and in God's eſteem, become formally, and in ſtrict propriety of ſpeech, very Atheiſts.

4. That this is moſt true, and that therefore many, who, becauſe they are Orthodox in in opinion, have thereupon a great conceit of their faith towards God; yet, being ſtrictly examined, ſhall be found to have built ſuch glorious buildings in ſhew upon Sand; or, which is worſe, to have made hay and ſtubble (matter fit only for the fire) foundations of many golden hopes, and glorious preſumptions, muſt be ſhewed at large hereafter.

5. The words now read, are a ſecret confeſſion which the Fool whiſpers to his own heart: He neither can nor dare profeſs this openly, and when he calls his reaſon to counſel about this buſineſs, the queſtion is far otherwiſe ſtated. The words do not run thus, The Fool being convinced by evidence of reaſon and demonſtration, hath concluded, There is no God; no, this is no Heatheniſh Philoſophical Fool, he is quite of another temper: This is a worldly, proud, malicious, projecting wiſe Fool, a Fool that knows it is for his advantage to put God out of his thoughts, and therefore doth forcibly captivate, and wilfully hoodwink his underſtanding, and thinks he hath obtained a great victory, if he can contrive any courſe to bring himſelf to that paſs, that no cold melancholy thoughts of God or Hell may interrupt or reſtrain him from freely wallowing in the luſts and uncleanneſs of his heart, without any remorſe, without any reluctance or griping within him. It is for his Hearts ſake, the love that he bears to the luſts thereof, that makes him an Atheiſt: If it could ſtand with that courſe and trade of life that he is reſolved upon, to entertain contrary thoughts, he would as ſoon work his judgment and thoughts another way. And therefore in his open profeſſion, it ſometimes falls out, that even when he wiſhes there were no God, yet he is a very forward zealous acknowledger, in general of God and his glorious Attributes: So that the ſame deſire of a quiet and uninterrupted enjoying the hope and freedom of the luſts and affections of his heart, makes him both a reſolute ſecret Atheiſt, and withal wiſe enough to keep his folly to himſelf, and to make none elſe acquainted with his curious art and method of ſuch wofull ſelf-deceiving, but his dearly beloved Heart. The Fool, &c.

6. The diſcuſſion of theſe words, does not engage me to a dividing or deſcanting upon the whole Pſalm: Let it ſuffice, that we may moſt probably conceive, that David in this Pſalm intends the deſcription of the woful eſtate of that Kingdom, after God had taken away his good Spirit from Saul; wherein the ſecret Enemies of God did greedily lay hold on that occaſion to vex and deſpite, and, as much as was in their power, to lay waſte the Heritage of God.

7. The Fool (who is the perſon that through the whole Pſalm works all the miſchief) in the Original is, Nabal: which hath the ſignification of fading, dying, or falling away, as doth a leaf, or flower, Iſa. 40. 8. And is a Title given to the fooliſh man, as having loſt the juyce and ſap of wiſdom, reaſon, honeſty, and godlineſs; being fallen from grace, ungrateful, and without the life of God: As a dead carkaſs (which of this word is called Nebalah, Lev. 11. 40.) and therefore ignoble and of vile eſteem, oppoſed to the Noble-man, Iſa. 32. 5. The Apoſtle in the Greek turneth it imprudent, or without underſtanding, Rom. 10, 19. from Deut, 32. 21.

8. Hath ſaid in his Heart, There, &c. i. e. Not ſo much perſuadeth himſelf in ſecret, that there is no God; But rather expreſſeth ſo in his life, or in his affections, which are called the Heart, in the Phraſe of God: proportionable to the ſame expreſſion of David, Pſal. 10. 4. The wicked through the pride of his countenance will not ſeek after God, God is not in all his crafty purpoſes. If you would have the full ſenſe of my Text more largely expreſſed, turn to Tit. 1. 16. where perſons of the ſame mould that the Prophet here complains of, are thus deſcribed, They profeſs that they know God, but in works they deny him, being abominable, and diſobedient, and to every good work void of judgment.

Pſal. 10. 4.

Tit. 1. 16.

9. Where are obſervable firſt, the cauſe of this Practical Atheiſm, in theſe laſt words of the verſe, They were to every good work, ἀδόκιμοι, and that was Ignorance, or rather Imprudence, Inconſiderance: Implying not a bare want of knowledge; but an abuſing thereof, in not reducing it to practice, in hiding the light which was in them under a buſhel. Secondly, Then we have the manner of the expreſſion of this Atheiſm, Atheiſm, viz. not in words, or in opinion to deny God; but, which is worſe, in the carriage and courſe of our life; to allow him his Attributes, and yet not to fear him, not to ſtand in awe of his power, which he acknowledgeth to be infinite, to diſtruſt his Providence, to ſlight his Promiſes, neglect his Threatnings, which is in effect, as much as in him lieth, to tear and raviſh from him all his glorious Attributes; by living, as if God himſelf were leſs powerful, leſs wiſe than himſelf, improvident, not deſerving ſo much fear of his power, or reſpect to his command, as he would perform to a wretched mortal man, that is a little richer, or in ſome place of Authority above him.

10. I need travel no farther for a diviſion to my own Text: Here we may obſerve likewiſe, Firſt, The cauſe of Atheiſm, and by conſequence, all the abominable impieties that follow in the Pſalm, and that is, Ignorance, Indiſcretion, Inconſiderance, expreſſed in the perſon of Nabal, The Fool: Secondly, We have the expreſſion of it, not by word of mouth, or writing, but per motum cordis, by the inclination of the heart, or affections. 1. 2.

11. In the proſecution of the former part (which may very well take up and ſpend this Hour-glaſs) I ſhall proceed thus: Firſt, I will conſider wherein this folly conſiſts, and that it is not ſo much in an utter ignorance of God and his holy Word, as a not making a good uſe of it when it is known, a ſuffering it to lie dead, to ſwim unprofitably in the brain, without any fruit thereof in the reformation of ones life and converſation: And there I will ſhew you, the extreme folly for a man to ſeek to increaſe his knowledge of his Maſter's will, without a deſire and reſolution to increaſe proportionably in a ſerious active performance thereof. Secondly, I will propoſe to your conſideration the extreme unavoidable danger, and increaſe of guilt, that knowledge without practice brings with it: To both which conſiderations I ſhall ſeverally annex Applications to the Conſciences of you my Hearers, and ſo ſpend out my time. 1.

12. Now I take it for granted, that I have hit right in declaring wherein the folly of Nabal in my Text conſiſts, namely, in an unfruitful knowledge, a knowledge that lies fallow, is not exerciſed: which, if it were not allowed me, I would only refer my ſelf for proof unto ſome of David's Pſalms, and almoſt all his Sons Proverbs: I ſhould ſin againſt the plenty of matter in my Text more worth our conſideration, if I ſhould enlarge my ſelf in this point: Only one place of David ſhall ſuffice, and that is in Pſalm 111. 10. where he repeats that old Divine Proverb made by God himſelf, the Lord knows how long ſince, and by him delivered to man, as Job telleth us, Chap. 28. ver. 28. The Pſalmiſts words are theſe, The fear of God is the beginning of wiſdom, and a good underſtanding have all they that do thereafter. Pſal 111. 10.

13. I do not now exclude Ignorance from making up ſome part of this Fool; but becauſe the other piece of extreme deſperate folly is rather the ſin of theſe days, namely, a barren uneffectual knowledge; therefore I ſhall rather inſiſt upon it: Yet, by the way, I ſhall not fail to diſcover to you the danger of the other too.

14. It is a pretty Obſervation, that the Author of the Narration of the Engliſh Seminary founded in Rome, has concerning the Method and Order the Devil has uſed in aſſailing and diſturbing the peace and quiet of the Church, with Hereſies and Schiſms: He began (ſaith he) with the firſt Article of our Creed, concerning one God the Father Almighty, Creator of Heaven and Earth; againſt which in the firſt 300 years he armed the Simonians, Menandrians, Baſilidians, Valentinians, Marcionites, Manichees, and Gnoſticks. After the 300th year he oppoſed the ſecond Article, concerning the Divinity of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by his beloved Servants the Noetians, Sabellians, Paullians, Photinians, and Arrians. After the four hundreth year he ſought to undermine the fourth, fifth, ſixth, and ſeventh Articles of the Incarnation, Paſſion, Reſurrection, Aſcenſion, and the ſecond coming to Judgment, by the Hereſies of Neſtorius, Theodorus, Eutyches, Dioſcorus, Cnapheus, Sergius, &c.

After the eight hundred and sixtieth, he assailed the eighth Article concerning the Holy Ghost, by the Heresie and Schism of the Greek Church: Lastly, since the year one thousand, till these times, his business and craft has especially expressed it self in seeking to subvert the ninth and tenth, concerning the Holy Catholick Church, and forgiveness of sins, by the aid and Ministry of the Pontificians, Anabaptists, Familists, and the like: And with the deceits and snares of these his cunning Ministers hath he entangled the greatest part of the now Christian World.

15. But (our blessed and gracious God be praised for it) we, and some with us, have escaped as a Bird out of the snare of the Fowler, the Net was broken, and we were delivered. The whole Doctrine of Christian Faith is restored to the Primitive lustre and integrity: Nay more, (which is a greater happiness than God ever created to those his chosen good servants which lived in the Infancy of the Church) the profession of a pure unspotted Religion is so far from being dangerous, or infamous, that we have the Sword of the Civil Magistrate, the power and inforcement of the Laws and Statutes, to maintain this our precious Faith without stain and undefiled, against all Heretical and Schismatical oppugners thereof.

16. If ever we forget the goodness and mercy of God in this our deliverance, then let our tongues cleave to the roof of our mouths: Nay, if in our Songs of joyfulness and melody we remember not our escape, wherewith the Lord snatcht us out of Egypt, and our victorious passage through a Red-Sea of Bloud and Ruine, Thou O Lord wilt not hear our Prayers.

17. It was a seasonable Admonition that the Apostle St. Paul gave to other Gen-
Rom.11. 20. tiles after such a glorious Victory and Deliverance as this of ours, Be not high-minded, but fear. Heresie is not the only Engine that Satan is furnished with to assault and infest the Church of Christ, neither is it the most dangerous: He has the cunning to destroy Foundations, and make no use of Heresie in the work neither. You would wonder how it should be possible for the Devil to make an Orthodox Christian, one perfect and studied in all the points of the Creed, and one that can for a need maintain the Truth thereof against all gain-sayers: I say, it would seem strange for the Devil to make such a one to destroy and utterly demolish the very Foundations of his Faith, and yet not at all to alter his opinions neither: Yet, that it is not only a possible contrivance, but too too ordinary and familiar in these times, woful Experience hath made it evident.

18. The art and cunning whereby this great work of the Devil's is brought about, is clearly detected by our Saviour in his Exposition of the Parable of the Sower, in Luk.7.12. these words, When they have heard, then cometh the Devil, and taketh away the Word out of their Hearts, i. e. The Devil will give such people leave freely to hear the Word of God preached, to study it, dispute it, to know and be acquainted with all the curious intricate subtilties of it, upon condition that they will promise to resolve not to be a jot the better disposed for it in their lives. He can well suffer it to swim in the Brain, that the Understanding should be enlightned, the fancy affected and pleased with it, so that he may have leave to stop the secret intercourse and passages thence to the Heart: It troubles him not to have the precious seed of the Word entertain'd by a man, so that it may be kept up safe in Granaries, and not multiply: so that the heart be not plough'd up, and furrowed for the receiving of it; as long as there is no fruitful Harvest there, all goes well.

19. He will be so far from hindering such from going to the Church, so that their errant be to learn what they may be able to talk of, and maintain discourse with, that he could wish every day were a Sunday for them, that they might be able by abundance of knowledge, fruitless, and void of practice, to hasten and aggravate their own damnation.

20. Now whom the Devil thus uses, whom he thus baits, nay, contents and satisfies with an empty, speculative, aerial knowledge, a knowledge, only fruitful in increasing their guilt, and torment, who can deny to be sottish, ignorant, easie fools, childishly affected with a knowledge, glorious only in shew, without any substance, or depth at all. And yet this was a temptation strong enough for Paradise; for just so did the Devil entrap Adam at the first; so that, in him, we have received one foil already, at this weapon: And he proceeds daily in acting that over again: For what was it which destroyed Adam, but the preferring of the Tree of Knowledge, before the Tree of Life?

21. St. James, speaking of such persons so insnared, seems [illegible] and guilt of so cruel a deceit and cousenage as this is, from off the Devil, and [illegible] upon themselves: Be not hearers of the Word only, but doers [illegible] He confesses such to be tools, cousened and deceived people; but then [illegible] he, are their own cheaters: wherein lies a strong Emphasis, expressing the extreme unhappiness of such poor deceived Wretches. If the cunning insinuation of one, that for his own ends pretends friendship to me, draw me into some inconvenience, or danger; the World will think me a fool for being so catch'd, and not being able to dive and pierce into his secret purposes: But this folly is not of so perfect a strain, but that it may deserve both excuse and pity: But that man that spends his whole life in contriving and plotting, and laying snares for his own soul; if after all this ado he be indeed caught in the pit, that with so much pains he digged only for himself, Would not any man forfeit his discretion, that should either excuse, or pity him? And in such, or worse a case, is he that contents himself with bare hearing and knowing the Word.

22. Who do you think would undertake to excuse a Pharisee, if he should be condemned for want of spiritual wisdom: one whose profession it was, whose trade and course of life, to be conversant in the Scriptures: who had spent his age in reading the Holy Writ, and teaching others out of it: One that was so curious in having the Scripture always near him, that he wore it continually about him: it was a trimming and ornament to his Apparel; It was always in his eyes: It was guarded about the wrists of his arms, and instead of a Lace or Fringe at the bottom of his garment. If one after all this curiosity of dressing, sedulity in reading, industry in teaching, should at length, with so good parts, in such good clothes, go down into Hell, and, so die for want of true knowledge; Who would adventure to excuse him, who would dare to pity him?

23. Yet not one, or two, but the whole Colledge, the whole Faction of them, you shall find in *Mat.*23. very near their end. No less than eight woes denounced Mat.23. against them by our Saviour himself. (who is not very forward to destroy, he came upon a far other business) and all those woes for their folly and blindness: In the denouncing of every Woe, but one, he stiles them Hypocrites. (And an Hypocrite, you know, is the veriest fool in the world, for he thinks to couzen and put a cheat upon God, whom yet himself confesses to be Omniscient, and who knoweth all things.) In that single woe, he calls them blind guides, elsewhere, Fools, and blind. This was our Saviour's judgment of them, and you may rest upon it, that it was upon sufficient grounds.

24. But their folly and ridiculous madness will yet more appear, if you take notice of the opinion and judgment that these very Pharisees gave of themselves. It is in John 7. 48, 49. The occasion of it was this. The great Council of the Sanhedrin, seeing so many of the ignorant people, (as they thought) seduced by our Saviour; to remedy any further spreading of so dangerous a contagion, They by common advice send Officers to attach him, and to make him sure enough for preaching: The Officers find him busie instructing the people, and instead of laying hands on him, themselves are even caught, and almost bereft of their infidelity: When Sermon was done, they return to their Masters, the Rulers and Pharisees, without their Prisoner, and give a good account why they did not fulfil their command, in telling them, they never heard a better Preacher in their lives, Never man, say they, Joh.7.46; spake like this man. These wise Magistrates pitying the simplicity and easiness of their Sergeants, answer them thus; Are ye also deceived? Have any of the Rulers, Ver. 47, 48, 49.

or of the Pharisees believed on him? But this people who know not the Law, are cursed. Implying, that if the people had been as well read in the Law of God, as their Teachers were, they would have kept themselves safe enough from the ensnaring Sermons of Christ: But now they may see what difference there is between men utterly unacquainted with Gods Word, and themselves, how subject they are to destruction, and to be cursed of God.

25. How is it possible for the wit of man, to imagine folly and madness of a more perfect strain? Our Saviour Christ, who is Truth it self, did not exact Faith from his Followers meerly for his Miracles sake, but sent them to search the Scriptures, For they, saith he, testifie of me. And yet these wise men impute it to their knowledge of the Law, that they were freed from this Curse into which the poor ignorant people fell. How cunningly have these fools laid a snare for their own lives? Joh.5.39.

26. Alas, what could the poor People think, when they heard their Doctors and Magistrates, (men that were gods to them, that sate in Moses Chair) condemned of such extreme folly and indiscretion? What will become of us, might they say, if the Pharisees (from whom all that we know, is but a thin thrifty gleaning) have so many woes denounced against them for want of spiritual knowledge?

27. Certain it was, There were many poor souls, whom the Pharisees kept out of Heaven for company. Our Saviour tells them so much; Ye neither go into Heaven your selves, nor suffer others to go in: But they were such as they had infected with their Leaven: Such as made those rotten superstructions, which those great Doctors built upon the Word, foundations of their Faith and Hope: And as certain it is, that many there were, upon whom God out of his gracious favour and mercy, had not bestowed such piercing brains, and enquiring heads, as to make them acquainted with their dangerous Opinions and traditions. They were such as made better use of that little knowledge they had, than to vent it in discourse, or in maintaining Opinions and Tenents against the Church. They heard the Word with an humble honest heart, submitting themselves wholly to it, and restored their Faith to its proper seat, the Heart and Affections, and it was fruitful in their lives and practice. The Wisdom of Solomon himself, as long as he gave himself to Idolatry, and Luxury, was folly and madness, to the discretion and prudence of these poor despised people.

28. Thus you see, The Fool, that in my Text, is so mad, as to say, There is no God, may have wit enough to understand more; nay, in the opinion of the World, may make a silly fool of him, that has laid up in his heart unvaluable treasures of spiritual wisdom and knowledge. And therefore the Latine Translation following St. Paul, might more significantly have stiled him Imprudens, than Insipiens. For the wisdom which is according to Godliness, doth most exactly answer to that Prudence which moral Philosophers make a general over-ruling Virtue, to give bounds and limits to all our Actions, and to find out a temper and mean wherein we ought to walk: And therefore a most learned Divine of our Church, yet alive, knew very well what he said, when he defined our Faith to be A Spiritual Prudence; implying, that Faith bears the same office and sway in the life and practice of a Christian, as Prudence of a moral honest man.

29. Now, saith Aristotle, there may be many intemperate, youthful, dissolute spirits, which may have an admirable, piercing, discerning judgment in speculative Sciences, as the Mathematicks, Metaphysicks, and the like; because the dwelling upon such Contemplations, does not at all cross, or trouble, those rude untamed passions and affections of theirs: yea, they may be cunning in the speculative knowledge of Virtues: But all this while they are notwithstanding utterly invincibly, imprudent; because Prudence requires not only a good discerning judgment and apprehension, but a serenity and calmness in the passions.

30. Therefore the same Philosopher does worthily reprehend some Ancients, who called all Virtues Sciences; and said, that each particular virtue was a several Art;

Art: requiring only an enlightning or informing of the Reason, and Understanding, which any, for a little cost and small pains-taking in frequenting the learned Lectures of Philosophers, need not doubt but easily to obtain.

31. The conceit, of so learned a man does very well deserve our prosecution: And it will not be at all swerving from the business in hand: Therefore I shall shew you, how the Moralist, by the force of natural Reason, hath framed to himself a Divinity and Religion, resembling, both in method and many substantial parts, the glorious learning of a Christian. I told you the forenamed Doctor did very well to call our Faith, or Assent to supernatural Mysteries, A Spiritual Prudence.

32. Now, besides moral prudence, nay, before the Moralist can make any use thereof, or exercise it in the work of any Virtue, there is required another general Virtue, which the Philosopher calls Universal Justice, which is nothing else, but a sobriety and temper in the affections, whereby they are subdued and captiv'd unto well informed Reason, So that whatsoever it commands to be done, there is no rebellion, no unwillingness in the Passions, but they proceed readily to execution, though it be never so distasteful to sense.

33. Now, how well does this express the nature of Charity: for, what else is Love, but a sweet breathing of the Holy Spirit upon our Passions, whereby the Holy Ghost does, as it did in the beginning of Genesis, incubare aquis, move by a cherishing, quieting virtue, upon the Sea of our Passions? Did not the same Spirit come to Eliah in a soft whisper? He walks not in Turbine, in a strong wind to raise a Tempest in our Affections. Now when we have received this ipsissimam Dei particulam, (as Plato said of the Soul) this shred or portion of the Holy Spirit, which is Charity, how evenly and temperately do we behave our selves to God, and all the world besides? How willingly and obediently do we submit our selves to the performance of whatsoever Faith, out of God's Word, doth enjoyn us?

34. But yet the Analogy and proportion between these two is more evident and observable: That Universal Justice is no particular singular virtue, neither hath it any particular singular object. (As other virtues have; For example, Temperance, or Abstinence, which hath to do with sensual delights and pleasures, and none else.) But when it is determined to, and fastens on, the object of a particular virtue, it is converted into, and incorporates with that very virtue: For example, If I do exercise this general Habit of observing a mean and temper, in things that concern diet, or sensual pleasures, it becomes abstinence; if upon objects of terror, it becomes Fortitude, or Magnanimity: Just so is it with Charity. For,

35. Charity is a virtue which never goes alone, and is busied in solitary places, being reserved and excluded, from the society and communion of other Graces: But it is that which seasons, gives life and efficacy to all the rest; without which, if it were possible for me to enjoy all the Graces that the bountiful hand of God ever showred upon reasonable Creature; yet, if St. Paul speak truth, I should be nothing worth: It is that which fulfils all the Commandments, This is evident to all that shall but slightly and in haste read over 1 *Cor.*13. beginning with verse 4. and so onwards: where we may behold almost all the virtues that can be named, enwrapped in one virtue of Charity; and Love, according to the several Acts thereof, chang'd and transformed into so many several Graces, It suffereth long, and so 'tis Longanimity; It is kind, and so 'tis Courtesie; It vaunteth not it self, and so 'tis Modesty; It is not puffed up, and so 'tis Humility; It is not easily provoked, and so 'tis Lenity; It thinketh no evil, and so 'tis Simplicity; It rejoyceth in the truth, and so 'tis Verity; It beareth all things, and so 'tis Fortitude; It believeth all things, and so 'tis Faith; It hopeth all things, and so 'tis Confidence; It endureth all things, and so 'tis Patience; It never faileth, and so 'tis Perseverance. 1 Cor. 13. 4, &c.

36. You see two glorious and divine Virtues, namely, Faith and Charity, though not naturally expressed, yet pretty well counterfeited by the Moralist. And to make up the Analogy compleat, we have the third Royal Virtue, which is Hope, reasonably well shadowed out in that which they call Intentio Finis: which is nothing thing elſe but a fore-taſting of the happineſs which they propoſe to themſelves as a ſufficient reward for all their ſevere and melancholick endeavours.

37. What ſhall we ſay, (my beloved Friends) ſhall the Heatheniſh Moraliſt, meerly out of the ſtrength of natural Reaſon, conclude, that the knowledge of what is good and fit to be done, without a practice of it upon our affections, and outward actions, to be nothing worth, nay, ridiculous and contemptible? And ſhall we, who have the Oracles of God; nay, the whole perfect Will of God fully ſet down in the holy Scriptures, in every page almoſt whereof, we find this urged and preſſed upon us, That to know our Maſters Will, without performing it, is fruitleſs unto us; nay, will intend the heat, and add virtue and power to the Lake of fire and brimſtone; reſerved for ſuch empty unfruitful Chriſtians: and ſhall we, I ſay, content our ſelves any longer with bare hearing and knowing of the Word, and no more? God forbid, rather let us utterly avoid this holy Temple of God: Let us rather caſt his Word behind our backs, and be as ignorant of his holy Will as ever our fore-fathers were: Let us contrive any courſe to cut off all commerce and entercourſe, all communion and acquaintance with our God, rather than when we profeſs to know him, and willingly to allow him all thoſe glorious Titles and Attributes by which he hath made himſelf known unto us in his Word, in our hearts to deny him, in our lives and practices to diſhonour him, and uſe him deſpightfully.

38. It were no hard matter, I think, to perſuade any, but reſolved hardned minds, that Fruit is neceſſary before any admiſſion into heaven, only by propoſing to your conſiderations the form and proceſs of that Judgment, to which you and every man in his own perſon muſt ſubmit. The Authors word may be taken for the truth of what I ſhall tell you: for the ſtory we receive from his mouth that ſhall be Judge of all, and therefore is likely to know what courſe and order himſelf will obſerve.

39. In the general Reſurrection, when ſentence of Abſolution, or condemnation, ſhall be paſſed upon every one according to his deſerts, Knowledge is on no ſide mentioned: but one, becauſe he hath cloathed the naked, and fed the hungry, and done ſuch like works of Charity, he is taken; and the reſt, that have not done ſo much, are refuſed: Will it avail any one then to ſay, Lord, we confeſs, we have not done theſe works, but we have ſpent many an hour in hearing and talking of thy Word: nay, we have maintained to the utmoſt of our power, and to our own great prejudice, many Opinions and Tenents: Alaſs! we little thought, that any ſpotted imperfect work of ours was requiſite, we were reſolved that for working thou hadſt done enough for us to get us to Heaven? Will any ſuch excuſes as theſe ſerve the turn? Far be it from us to think ſo.

Mat.7.22. 40. If you will turn to *Mat.*7.22. you ſhall find ſtronger and better excuſes than theſe to no purpoſe: Many ſhall ſay unto me, (ſaith Chriſt) Lord, have not we propheſied in thy Name? Theſe were ſomething more than hearers, they had ſpent their time in preaching and converting ſouls unto Chriſt, (which is a work, if directed to a right end, of the moſt precious and admirable value, that it is poſſible for a Creature to perform:) And yet whiles they did not practiſe themſelves what they taught others, they became Caſt-aways. Others there were, that had caſt out Devils, and done many miracles; And yet ſo loved the unclean Spirits, that themſelves were poſſeſſed withal, that they could not endure to part company then, and now were never likely.

41. But have not I all this while miſtaken my Auditory? Were not theſe Inſtructions fitter for the Univerſities? Had it not been more fit and ſeaſonable for me to have inſtructed and catechized mine hearers, rather than to give them cautions and warnings, leſt they ſhould abuſe their knowledge? No ſurely! Inſtructions to make uſe of knowledge in our practice and converſation, and not to content our ſelves with meer knowing and hearing, and talking of the myſteries of our Salvation, cannot in the moſt ignorant Congregation be unſeaſonable. Even the Heathen then which were utter ſtrangers from the knowledge of Gods ways, did notwithſtanding render themſelves inexcuſable, for detaining ſome part of the Truth, as it were, naturally ingrafted in them, in unrighteouſneſs. So, that there is no man in the world, but knows much more than he practiſes, every man hides ſome part, at leaſt, of his Talent in a Napkin, wherefore let every man, even the moſt ignorant that hears me this day, ſearch the moſt inward ſecret corners of his heart for this treaſure of knowledge, and let him take it forth, and put it into the Uſurers hands, and trade thriftily with it, that he may return his Lord his own with increaſe, Bleſſed is that ſervant whom his Lord when he cometh ſhall find ſo doing: Verily I ſay unto you, he ſhall make him Ruler over all his houſhold.

42. And thus I have gone through one member of my firſt General, namely, the conſideration, wherein the Imprudence of the Fool in my Text doth conſiſt. In the proſecution whereof, I have diſcovered unto you, how ſeverally Satan plants his Engines for the ſubverſion of the Church: In the Primitive times, when Religion was more ſtirring and active, and Charity in Faſhion, he aſſayed to corrupt mens underſtandings with Hereſies; and there, by the way, was obſerved his order and method, how diſtinctly beginning in thoſe firſt times with the firſt Article he hath orderly ſucceeded to corrupt the next following, and now in theſe laſt days, he's got to even the laſt end of the Creed. But ſince, by the mercy and goodneſs of God, we are delivered and ſtand firm in the Faith once delivered to the Saints; he hath raiſed another Engine againſt us that ſtand, and that is, to work, that our Orthodox Opinions do us no good; which he performs by ſnatching the Word out of our Hearts, and making it unfruitful in our Lives: Now thoſe that are thus inveagled and wrought upon, are meerly befool'd by the Devil, or rather by themſelves, for ſo I told you, that St. James ſays; And for an example, I propoſed the learned Phariſees, who for all their learning and knowledge in the Scripture, yet our Saviour denounceth eight ſeveral Woes againſt them for being Fools and blind Guides. So that the Fool in hand was not oppoſed to a Learned man, but to a Prudent man: And therefore a worthy Doctor of our Church did well define Faith to be A ſpiritual Prudence, that is, a knowledge ſought out only for practice. And there I compared Faith with moral Prudence, and the fruit thereof Charity, with the virtue of Univerſal Juſtice. Therefore leſt the very Heathen ſhould riſe up in judgment againſt us, for not doing ſo much with the help and advantage of God's Word as they could without it; I did, and do, beſeech you not to content your ſelves with meer knowing and hearing, with only a conceit of Faith without Works, for that was an ancient Hereſie in the Nicolaitans, (whom God by name, profeſſeth an hatred to, as Euſebius tells us.) And for an effectual motive, I told you, how at the laſt great Trial, you ſhall not be catechiſed, How well you can ſay your Creed, or how many Catechiſms without Book, but, how fruitful in works of Charity your Faith hath been. And ſo I come to the ſecond member of the firſt General, namely, the conſideration how dangerous and grievous a burden Knowledge will be, where it is fruitleſs and ineffectual: of which briefly.

43. I will once again repeat that divine ſentence of the Pſalmiſt in *Pſal.*111.10. The fear of God is the beginning of wiſdom, and a good underſtanding have all they that do thereafter, i.e. Till a man put his knowledge in practice he is ſo far from being a good man, that he is ſcarce a man, hath not the underſtanding of a man till he do, till he fall a-work; he was wiſer a great deal before he gained his knowledge: Knowledge alone is a goodly purchaſe in the mean time. It is ſo worthy a purchaſe, that, as it ſhould ſeem by our Saviour's account, till a man have obtained ſome competency in knowledge, he hath gotten no right to the Kingdom of Darkneſs and Hell. Pſal.111. 10.

44. For certainly, no man can juſtly challenge damnation, but he that is burdened with Sin: Now he that hath no knowledge, but is utterly blind in his underſtanding, hath no ſin, that is, in compariſon; the words are (John 9. 39, &c.) And Jeſus ſaid, for judgment I am come into this world, that they which ſee not might ſee, John 9. 39, &c. and and that they which see might be made blind; Not as if Christ did imprint, or inflict, blindness upon any man, but only occasionally, that is, those which walk in darkness, and love it: when the light comes upon them, and discovers their wandring, they hate it, and turn their eyes from it, and become more perversly and obstinately blind. In the same sense that St. Paul saith, (*Rom.*7.) Sin taking occasion by the Law becomes more sinful; whilst sin is not opposed, it goes on in its course quietly; but when the Commandment comes and discovers, and rebukes it, it becomes furious and abominable; and much more raging and violent.

Ver 40. 45. There follows, And some of the Pharisees which were with him, heard these words, and said unto him, Are we blind also? There is nothing in the world, that a Pharisee can with less patience endure than to hear any intimation given, that he may be suspected of folly: And therefore they were not so sensible or conceited of some wrong received, when our Saviour called them Generation of Vipers, as they are when their wisdom and discretion are called in question. Witness this answer; when no man spake to them, they suspiciously demand, whether Christ in his last words meant them or no. But what answers our Saviour?

Ver 41. 46. Jesus said unto them, If ye were blind, ye should have no sin; but now ye say, We see, therefore your sin remaineth. As if he had said, So little shall this supposed knowledge, and wisdom, that ye have, profit you, that you shall curse the time that ever you saw the holy Word of God, and wish that all the Sermons that ever you heard, all the gracious Invitations, and sweet Promises which God by the Ministry of his Servants the Prophets, hath sent unto you, had been sentences of some horrible death and torments, from the mouth of a severe Judge. For, your sins, which otherwise had not been so insupportable, now by your abusing the knowledge which God hath given you, by your wilful contempt of those many invitations, which have continually sounded in your ears, are become as a Mountain upon you to crush you into powder: You have hang'd a Mill-stone about your own necks, which shall irrecoverably sink you into the bottomless comfortless pit, whereas otherwise there might have been some hope of escape.

47. And yet for all this, let not any one favour and cherish himself in this conceit, That, he thanks God, he is ignorant enough, that a very little practice will serve his turn, his knowledge is not so much that it should put him to too great a labour in expressing it in the course of his life: for whosoever he be that dares entertain, or give way to such a thought as this is, Let him be sure that if he do not know so much as God requires at his hands, (especially now that God hath sealed up the Scripture-Canon, now that the whole Will of God is revealed) this very ignorance alone will be a thousand weights, to fasten him on the earth, to make him sure for ever ascending to God, in whom there is no darkness at all.

48. For it is not so with an ignorant man, as it is with one that is blind, who, if he will be sure not to tempt God by venturing and rushing forward in paths unknown to him, may live as long, and as safe as he that is most quick-sighted: No, Ignorance alone, though it be not active and fruitful in works of darkness, is crime enough. For, with what colour of reason will such a one expect the reward of the Just? Such a one will not doubt, but that the Gates of Heaven are barr'd against the sottish blind ignorant Heathen, to whom God never revealed any part of his Will; yet himself may fare well enough. Is not this a degree beyond madness it self? What? does such a one think, that because he lives among Religious people, and such as are well acquainted with the way to heaven, that himself shall be sure to go for company? Does he make no doubt of his part in the Resurrection of the Just, because he was born in England, or in such a year of our Lord when the Gospel flourished? Nay, shall it not be much more tolerable for the worst of the Heathens than for such a man?

49. For if the Heathen were left without excuse, because they knew not God, or, if they knew him, they did not honour him as God, whereas they were only instructed by the Book of Nature: The very main principle of all Religion, namely, That there there is a God, was a business of great labour, and required a good understanding to find out, being a Conclusion to be collected and deduced from many experiments of his Power, Providence, and the like. Shall those hope to escape, that pretend ignorance, after they may, if they refuse it not, have use of all that ever Reason found out; nay, have before their eyes the sum and effect of all the Sermons and Instructions that ever any Prophet or Apostle made since the world began? If after all this, there be any safety to be hoped for from Ignorance, then have the Apostles travelled, Christ preached, nay, died, in vain.

50. But to return to our business in hand. Knowledge, at least in some measure, there must necessarily be, else no hope of Salvation: And with Knowledge, there must of necessity be joyned some proportionable measure of Practice, else a greater and more insupportable burden of woe and destruction. And the reason is evident out of those words of our Saviour, To whom much is given, of him shall much be required. We must know, that there is not any good thing in the world wherein we have any propriety; We are only Stewards, and have such things committed to our trust, and one day there will certainly be exacted a strict account. As of our riches, health, education, but much more our knowledge, and especially that knowledge, which is perfected only in practice, such is the wisdom of a Christian.

51. What reason can be imagined why God should take such pains, give such royal and precious graces to his Servants the Prophets and Apostles to enable them to make known his good will and pleasure, and what he commands us, and expects at our hands. Was all this performed, think we, to afford us only matter of Table-talk? Does he exhort and persuade us to hear and discourse? No surely, He gave it us to profit withal, both our selves and others. And therefore where there is a more abundant plenty of knowledge lent us, the Bill of Account must arise proportionably, or for what is wanting in the sum, we remain debtors; and when once the Creditor catches us by the throat, and casts us into Prison, there is no coming out, till all, even the uttermost Farthing, be discharged: he might as well have said Never, for it comes all to one end.

52. It will be worth our consideration, and very material, to press this so necessary a point, to take notice of the nature and fashion of the Judgment, which shall befall the Fool in my Text, and such Companions of his as are content to enjoy a fruitless ineffectual knowledge, how fit and suitable it is to their offence. You shall find it expressed in *Luk.*13,25, &c. in these terms, Many in that day shall begin to say, We have Luk.13. eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets: This is something 25. more than hearing Sermons, or learning Catechisms by heart. These had heard him preach, nay, were familiarly acquainted with him, and yet in that day will get but a comfortless answer from him in the following verse, But he shall say, I tell you, I know Ver.26. not whence you are; Depart from me ye workers of Iniquity. St. Matthew hath it more sharply, I never knew you. They might else have imputed his not knowing them to the weakness of his memory: But he stops that conceit, and professes, He never knew them, i.e. He denies not, but he had often seen them at Sermon when he preached, and, it may be, he had eaten and drunk with them, yet for all this, He never knew them; they were strangers to him, he never acknowledged them to be his flock, and therefore was not bound to take notice of them: But there is one will own them, even Satan, whom before they acknowledged for their Lord; and to his Kingdom they may, nay, they must, go.

53. Are not these men right served? Are not they justly and righteously dealt with-al? They had eaten and drunk in his presence, it is true; nay, peradventure, they had eaten him and drunk him in his Sacrament: They had oft heard him preach in their streets, and could for a need repeat a good deal of the substance of his Sermons: But, in very deed, they never knew him, nor one word that ever he spoke: that is, they took no especial notice of him, they did not acknowledge him for their Lord, neither cared they to perform any thing that he commanded. And now he is quit with them, He remembers well enough what kind of people they were, even his very Enemies and Deriders; and as he never did acknowledge them for his sheep, so neither now will he admit them into his fold. A most righteous, yet withal, a most heavy doom.

54. And here I will briefly end my other member of the First General, namely, how dangerous and heavy a burden Knowledge will be, where it is fruitless and ineffectual. Where you have heard how poor and worthless a purchase Knowledge alone is; nay, how without it, a man has scarce any title at all unto Hell, there is no guilt without it; Alone it is a good Qualification, a fair towardly disposition towards our ruine. Our Saviour professes that the Pharisees themselves, (A Nation, the very Proverb of perverseness and infidelity) if they had been blind, i.e. without knowledge, they had had no sin. Yet for all this, though Knowledge be so dangerous a ware (it is something like Gunpowder; a man when he has it, must take heed how he uses it:) yet this is by no means a sufficient excuse for any one utterly to neglect the purchase of it, at least, in some measure: For it is true, Knowledge not used, or ill used, will aggravate our torment, and adds even fire unto Hell; yet withal, it is true, that an utter neglect of all Knowledge, especially, in these times of light, when it is to be had at so cheap a rate, will make damnation as sure to a man as the former. Now the reason, why Knowledge, where it is fruitless in practice, will be abundantly fruitful in torment, is taken from that Maxim of our Saviour, To whom much is given, of him shall much be required, i. e. We being onely Stewards of Gods blessings, no proprietaries in them, must expect one day to give account of them all, but especially Knowledge, which is a Ware of the chiefest Trade. Now where there are great receipts, and no disbursements, the debt must needs be exceeding great; and when once the Sergeant hath arrested us for it, The Lord knows when we shall pay it. The last thing that I proposed to your thoughts, was the suitableness of the punishment that will attend such an offence: For the Fool, in my Text, when he would give himself leave to think, knew well enough that there was a God, and that all his love and service was due to him: But these were melancholick thoughts, and such as would hinder him in the prosecution of his design'd projects, and therefore he put them far from him: So that, in effect, and in Gods account, he was utterly ignorant of him, did not at all know him. Just so shall they be served: Christ knows all the world better than any man knows his own heart: Yet in that great day, he shall prove to be a very stranger, utterly ignorant of the greatest part of the world, though many of them had been his acquaintance here; nay, though through faith, in his power, they had unawares by wonders and miracles, brought many to Heaven, and had been good helpers to destroy the Infernal Kingdom, whereof before they were in Affection, and now for ever must, indeed, be Inhabitants.

55. There remains the other main General, which is, indeed, the substance of the whole Text, namely, the fruit of this folly, and that is, Atheism, not in Opinion, but Practice: In the prosecution whereof, I shall mainly insist upon this, to demonstrate, by infallible deductions out of Gods Word, that men who profess Religion, and a perfect Knowledge of God, yet whilst they allow him only the Brain, and not (what he only desires) the Heart and Affections, may prove in Gods account, very Atheists. Or, to bring it nearer home, I will shew how that many, the ordinary courses, and the most incontrouled practices of men of this Age do utterly contradict, and formally destroy the very Foundations and Principles of the glorious Religion which they profess. But this will require a much longer time than your patience can allow me: Therefore I will only add some few words of Application, of what hath been spoken, and so conclude.

56. That Jewel which our Saviour so magnifies, (Mat. 13.) and so commends the wisdom of the Merchant for selling all, even utterly undoing himself to purchase it, is the Gospel of the Kingdom of Heaven. Which though it be of most precious and inestimable value, worthy the selling of the whole world to buy it, yet is every mans money, every man has riches enough to adventure upon it, so he will but sell all that he has, so he will be content to turn bankrupt for it, and upon no other terms can he have it.

57. That

57. That advice which Christ gave the rich young man, that had a good mind to follow him, viz. that he should sell all that he had, and take up his Cross, was not any extraordinary unusual trial, but we have all accepted the same offer upon the very same conditions: We must of necessity sell all, deny and renounce the keeping and possessing of any thing besides this Pearl; We must even sell our selves, deny and renounce our own souls, they are both become Gods own, and we are but borrowers of them: Now if we be not Masters of our goods, nor of our selves, neither then may we do our own actions, we must not think our own thoughts. They were such Fools as this great notorious one in my Text, who in Psal. 12. say, Our tongues are our own, we may say what we list. We are all bought with a price; yea, all that we have, is bought.

58. Yet though we must sell all, and deny our own selves, yet we need not part with our goods, or riches, we need not make away our selves. For example: when our Saviour says, He that hateth not Father, and Mother, and Brethren, and Sisters, and all the world besides, for my Names sake, and the Gospels, is not worthy of me; this speech does not bind me to hate, persecute, and destroy all the kindred I have; no, but rather to love and honour them, to spend, and be spent for them: Yet if those persons, or if it be possible for ought else, to be more dear and precious than they, stand in my way to hinder me from coming to Christ; then it is time for me to hate them, then I must trample them under my feet. So that a man is no more bound to sell his Goods, that is, to throw them away, than he is to hate his Parents; Only neither of them may by any means offend us, or annoy us, in our journey to Christ.

59. Now to bring this home to our purpose. Can any face be so impudent, as to profess he hath already sold all, himself to boot, and is ready to part with them when God shall call for them, who contents himself only with knowing and hearing Stories of him, and reserves his heart to his own use, which is all that God requires? Can he with any reason in the world be said to sell all for the Gospel of Christ, that sees Christ himself every day almost hungry, and does not feed him; naked, and does not cloath him; in prison, and does not visit him; For inasmuch as they do not these offices of Charity to his beloved little ones, they deny them to him. Will he be found to be worthy of Christ, that for his sake will not renounce one delightful sin, which a Heathen would easily have done, only for the empty reward of fame? That for his sake will not forgive his Brother some small injury received; nay, perhaps some great kindness offered as a seasonable reproof, or loving dissuasion, from sinning? That for his sake will not undergo the least trouble in furthering his own Salvation?

60. Far from us (beloved Christians) be so barren a Profession, a Profession having only the vizzard and form of Godliness, but denying the power thereof. No, let us with thankful hearts, and tongues, recount and consider, what God hath done for our souls, how he hath given us his Word, abundantly sufficient to instruct us. How he hath spoke the word, and great is the multitude of Preachers. Yet withal, let us consider, that it is in our power to turn these unvaluable Treasures of Gods favours into horrible curses. Let us consider how God hath sent out his Word, and it will not return unto him empty, it will be effectual one way or other, it will perform some great work in us. God doth but expect what entertainment it finds upon Earth, and will proportion a reward accordingly: on them which detain the truth in unrighteousness he will rain snares, fire, and brimstone: But to such as with meek hearts, and due reverence receive it into good ground, and express the power thereof in their lives, there remaineth an exceeding eternal weight of Joy and Glory. Let us therefore walk as children of the light; and not content our selves with a bare empty Profession of Religion: Let him that but nameth the Name of the Lord, depart from Iniquity. Brethren, consider what I say, and the Lord give you understanding in all things. To God, &c.

The Third Sermon.

PSALM XIV. 1.

The Fool hath said in his heart, There is no God.

I Will not be ashamed to be so far my own Plagiary, as for your sakes, that you may be the better able to go along with me in what remains of this Text, briefly to discover unto you, how far I have already, in another Auditory, proceeded in it.

1. 2. First therefore, I conceived (by attending to the course and series of the Psalm, and by comparing this place with many others in Holy Scripture in different Language, expressing the same sense) That this Fool, in my Text, was not a man utterly ignorant and devoid of the knowledge of God, and his Word; For he is supposed by the Psalmist, to be a man living within the Pale of the Church, and outwardly professing the true Religion and Worship of God: And thereupon, Secondly, That his Atheism was no Heathenish, Philosophical Atheism, no Problematical maintaining an opinion, That there is no God, For even among the very Heathens, we read not of above three or four, of any account, which have proceeded to this excelling degree and height of Impiety,

2. 3. But this Person (whether Doeg the Edomite, or whosoever he were) is such a one, as though, in his Profession, and even serious thoughts, he do not question a Deity, but would be a mortal Enemy to any one, who should dare to deprive and rob Almighty God of any of his glorious Attributes: Notwithstanding in his Heart, (that is, in the phrase of the Scripture) in the propension and inclination of his Affections, and by consequence, in the course and practice of his life, he denies and renounces God: He accounts the spending a little time in thinking and meditating on the Providence, or Mercy, or severity of God, to be an employment very ungainful and disadvantageous to him, a business likely to trouble and spoil many of his ungodly projects, and to hinder him in his fortunes: And for this reason, he will put God far away from him; He will not suffer him to be (as the Psalmist saith, Psal. 10.4.) in all his crafty purposes.

Psal. 10. 4.

4. Yet willingly confess, that this, Saying in the Heart, There is no God, may reasonably be interpreted to be a secret whispering suggestion, an inward persuasion, by fits, which a wretched worldling may have, that, since he has thrived so well by his carelesness in observing Gods Word, and obstinate opposing himself to his Will, it may be possible there is indeed no God at all; or, if there be, that he will not vouchsafe to descend so low, as to take notice what is done here on earth, or to observe how each particular person behaves himself in this life. Now, because I will not set up one of these Expositions against the other, I will hereafter, as occasion shall offer it self, make use of them both.

5. Having therefore conceived the sense of the Text to be such as I have now told
1. you; In the words I observed two General Parts. First, the cause of Atheism, and, by consequence, all the abominations following through the whole Psalm, intimated in the person Nabal, i. e. The Fool, which is, Folly; i.e. Ignorance, or rather, Incogitancy, 2. Inconsideration. Secondly, The effect of this Folly, which is Atheism, and that seated not not in the Brain, but in the Heart or Affections. I have already gone through the former part, namely, the cause of Atheism, which is Folly: in the prosecution whereof, I endeavoured to discover, wherein this Folly doth consist. And that is not so much in an utter ignorance of God, and his Holy Word, as a not making a good use of it, when it is known, a suffering it to lie dead, to swim unprofitably in the Brain, without any fruit thereof in the reformation of a mans life and conversation. And there I shewed, first, what extreme folly it was for a man to seek to encrease the know- 1.

ledge of his Masters Will, without a resolution to encrease proportionably in a serious active performance thereof. And secondly, the extreme unavoidable danger and encrease of guilt, which knowledge, without practice, brings with it. To both which Considerations, I severally annexed Applications to the Consciences of them that heard me, and should have proceeded to——

6. The Second General Part: which is the effect and fruit of the folly, or inconsideration of Nabal, (the Fool) in my Text, which is Atheism practical, not of the Understanding, but the Will and Affections. But, the time being spent in the prosecution of the former General Part, I was forced to reserve this second General, to be the employment of another Hour.

7. Only thus much, I then made promise of, (which debt I purpose now to discharge to you) namely, To demonstrate by infallible deductions out of Gods Word, that many, who profess Religion, and a perfect knowledge of Gods Word, yet whiles they allow him only the Brain, and not (what he almost only requires) the Heart, and Affections, may prove in Gods account very Atheists. Or to bring it nearer home, I promised to shew, how that many the ordinary courses, and most uncontrouled practices of men of this Age, do utterly contradict, and formally destroy the very Foundations and Principles of that glorious Religion which they profess. Of these, &c.

8. At the first sight, indeed, a man would think, that of all the places in Holy Scripture, and of all the Ages which have been since the world began, That this Text, and these times, should suit worst together; For first, if a man would strive with all the earnestness, and even spite, he could, in all the abominable odious colours to describe the worst of all humane Creatures, even the Idolatrous, self-devouring Indians, What more horrible expression could he imagine to himself, than to call them Fools, and such Fools, who say in their Heart, There is no God. Again, if we shall enquire and ask the former Ages, if ever the world was so flored, and even oppressed with knowledge: They will tell us, That the Light was never a burden, nor Knowledge a vice before now: Never till now did all sorts and conditions of men pretend to be able to state the most intricate profound questions of our Religion. Never till now was Moses his wish fulfilled, I would to God, that all the people of the Lord were Prophets: though in a sense which would scarce have pleased him.

9. These things considered, were it not fit (I think you) that I should renounce my Text, or travel to find out a Nation whom it may concern, and who have need to hear Atheists condemned? I would to God, (my beloved Brethren) that whatsoever I shall speak against that fearful sin of Atheism, may prove vain unprofitable words, words which may return empty, having found none to fasten upon: I would to God, that I might strive now, as one that beateth the air, so that you, (even you who know so much) were innocent. But David found this a Doctrine fit to be pressed in his days, which were none of the worst neither: Yea, he hath a second time, (in Psal. 53.) almost in terminis terminantibus, repeated whatsoever he here speaks of the Atheist: We find not such an example through the whole Scripture, except it be in a History, or where the quotation is mentioned. Therefore surely it may be pertinent, and sometimes useful even in the Church to have Atheism discovered, to have this Doctrine preached and re-preached: it was so in David's time: and it shall go hard, but we shall shew, that we our selves, (though never so wise and learned and knowing in our own opinion:) yet that we also ought not to take it to heart, if sometimes we be suspected and challenged of Atheism:

10. That

10. That Temptation which the Devil found hard enough for himself, even when he was an Angel of Light, namely, Ero similis Altissimo; I shall be like the most High est: Now that it is his Office, and employment, to become a Tempter, He had since scarce ever varied: At the first exercise of his Trade, with his first Customers, Adam and Eve, he begun with it, Ye shall be as Gods, knowing Good and Evil. And if we shall impartially examine our own thoughts, we shall find almost in every suggestion, at least, some degree and tincture of Atheism: either we do exalt and Deifie our own selves, or else we do dishonour, and, in a manner, degrade Almighty God, deposing him from that sovereignty and sway which he ought to exercise in our Hearts and Consciences.

11. This, I say, is true in some measure, in all temptations, in all sins whatsoever, there is some quantity of Atheism, though the sins be but of an ordinary size and rank: But this is not that which I would now stand upon: It concerns me to shew, that though men be never so Orthodox in their Opinions, though they pretend to never so much zeal of the Truth, which they profess, yet unless that Divine Truth be powerful and persuasive enough to the performance and practice of such Duties, as bear a natural resemblance and proportion unto it: They that make such a Profession of Gods truth, do but flatter themselves, they only think they believe, but indeed, and in truth, there is no such thing as Faith in them. For, we must know, that there is no Divine Truth so utterly speculative, but that there naturally and infallibly flows and results from it (as necessarily as warmth from light) a Duty to be practised and put in execution: Insomuch, that it is impossible for a man to be truly persuaded of the one, but he shall infallibly be persuaded to the other: So that
1 Joh. 2 4. he which saith, He knoweth God, and keepeth not his Commandments, is a Liar, and the Truth is not in him. And this I shall endeavour to confirm by induction, examining the truth and reality of our assent to the chief Fundamental Points of our Religion, by our practices answerable thereto, and concluding, that where the latter is not to be found, it is but a vain persuasion and phantastical illusion for a man to think he hath the former.

12. But in the first place, that we may be the better able, and without interruption proceed in this design'd course, I will first remove an Objection, which may seem to Object. prevail against that which hath been spoken, to this effect: The Devils (as St. James Jam. 11. 19. faith) believe and tremble: They do indeed assent unto the Truth of all the mysteries of our Salvation: In the place of St. James, they acknowledge One God: In Mat. 8. 28. they acknowledge the second Article of our Faith, allowing Christ to be the Son of God. And the like may be said of the others following: and yet if we examine their practice: How absolutely contradicting and warring is it with their Profession? Therefore, it may seem, that where there is a firm assent to Divine Truths, there may consist with it a contrary repugnant practice.

Sol. 13. For answer therefore we must know, that the Assent which the Devil gives to the Revelations of God, is extremely different from that belief which is exacted of us Christians, and which every one of us, (though never so vicious and irreligious) would gladly persuade our selves that we allow unto Gods Word: For though, for example, the Devils acknowledge the Precepts and Commandments of God to be Holy, and Just, and Good, and most fit to be observed; As likewise that to those who sincerely, and without Hypocrisie, shall perform these Commandments of God, Heb. 11. 1. the Promises of God shall be Yea and Amen, they shall infallibly attain those joys which exceed mans understanding to comprehend: Yet, these things to them are only as a Tale which is told; or rather they are to them occasion of horrour and gnashing of Teeth, that there should be such glorious comfortable things, which do nothing concern them, and of malice and hatred to those who have an interest in them, and are in a fair possibility of attaining unto them: And therefore no marvel if such a Faith as this be barren and unfruitful of Good Works. Whereas our Faith (saith St. Paul) is the substance of things hoped for, of things which concern us, we do not only acknowledge, that the Precepts of God are good, but also necessarily to be be performed by us: and that the Promises of God are not only desirable in themselves, but also that being such, they were revealed for our sakes, and are infallibly destined unto us, when we shall have performed such conditions as may by the assistance of God be executed by us, even with ease and pleasure: Now wheresoever such persuasions as these are, it is impossible (even if the Devils themselves could be supposed capable of them) but that there should accompany them earnest and serious endeavours not to come short of the Glory of God. This difficulty therefore being dissolved, I shall pursue the examination of our belief of the Foundations of our Religion, by the fruits and issues of it in the practice of our lives.

14. We will begin with some of Gods Attributes: Whosoever thou art, that professest thy self a Christian, thou believest, that God whom thou servest is present every where, both in Heaven and Earth, insomuch, that it is altogether impossible for thee to exclude him from thy company; wheresoever thou goest, he will pursue thee: Though thou shouldst cloath thy self with darkness, as it were with a garment, the darkness would be to him as the Noon-day: And though it were possible for thee to deceive the eyes and observation of Men and Angels, yea, even of thine own Conscience, yet to him thou wouldst be open and transparent; Γυμνὸς & πεπερχωλισμένος, as it were, Dissected, and having the very Entrails exposed to his sight.

15. Thou canst hide therefore nothing which thou doest from his eyes, he taketh notice of every word which thou speakest, he hears even the very whispering of thy thoughts: And all this, thou sayest, thou acknowledgest. Out of thy own mouth shalt thou be condemned, thou wicked Servant: Darest thou then make thy Master a witness of thy Rebellion and Disobedience? When thou art about the fulfilling of any of thine ungodly lusts, thou retirest thy self from company, and art afraid of the faces of men; thou abhorrest the light, and yet darest out face him whose Eyes are ten thousand times brighter than the Sun. Thou wouldst not have the confidence to commit filthiness, if thy Friend were in company: And yet what injury is done to him by it? What Commandment of his doest thou transgress in it? Or if thou didst, What power, or Authority, has he over thee to punish thee? Thou wouldst be ashamed to commit such a sin, if thy Servant were by, one whom thou art so far from being afraid of, that himself, his words, almost his very thoughts, are in thy power: Nay, if a Child were in company, thou wouldst not have the face to do it.

16. Thou canst not deny, but respect to a Friend, to a Servant, even to a Child, will withhold thee from such practices, and yet withal confessest, that Almighty God, whom thou professest, to serve, to fear, and to love, that he all the while looks upon thee, and observes thee; his Eyes are never removed from thee, and which is worse, though thou mayst endeavour to forget, and blot such actions out of thy remembrance, yet it is impossible he should ever forget them: He keeps a Register of all thy sins, which no time shall ever be able to deface: And what will it then profit thee to live a close concealed sinner from the world, or to gain amongst them the reputation of a devout religious Christian, when in the mean time thine own Heart and Conscience shall condemn thee; nay, when Almighty God, who is greater than thy heart, and knoweth all things, when he shall be able to object unto thee all thy close ungodly projects, all thy bosome private lusts; Yea, that conceit (wherein thou didst so much please thy self) of being able to delude and blind the observation of the World shall nothing avail thee, but whatsoever mischiefs thou hast contrived in thy Closet; whatsoever abominations thou hast practised in thy bed; all these, with each aggravating Circumstance, shall be discovered in the presence of all men, and Angels, and Devils; when Satan, whom before thou madest an Instrument and Baud unto thy lusts, to whose counsels and suggestions thou before wouldst only hearken, shall be the most forward and eager to appeach thee.

17. When thou art brought to such an exigent as this (which, without a timely unfeigned repentance, as sure as there is a God in Heaven, thou shalt at last be brought to) what will then thy Orthodox Opinions do thee good? What will it then then profit thee, to say, Thou never didst maintain any impious dishonourable Tenents concerning God, or any of his glorious Attributes? Yea, how happy hadst thou been, if worse than the most ignorant heathenish Atheist, no thought or consideration of God had entred into thy heart? For this professing thy self a Christian rightly instructed in the knowledge of God, will prove heavier to thee than a thousand millstones hanged about thy neck, to sink thee into the bottom of that comfortless Lake of fire and brimstone? For, for example: What a strange Plea would it be, for a Murderer to say, I confess I have committed such or such a murder; but all the excuse which I can alledge for my self, is, that I was well studied in the Laws which forbad murder, and I knew that my Judge who tied me to the observance of this Law, upon pain of death, was present, and observed me when I committed the Fact. Surely it would be more tolerable for him to say, I never heard of any such Law or Judge; or if I have been told of such things, I gave but little heed to the report, I did not at all believe it. For though this Plea will be very insufficient to acquit the Malefactor; yet it will be much more advantageous than the former: for what were that, but to flout the Judge to his face, and to pretend a respectful worthy opinion of him, for this end, that his contempt and negligence in performing his Commandments, may be more extreme and inexcusable; and by consequence, without all hope or expectation of pardon. I need make no application of the example, the Similitude doth sufficiently apply it self.

18. Therefore if I were to advise any man who is resolved by his practice to contradict that opinion which he saith he hath of God; or, that is not resolved to live with that reverence and awfulness due to the Majesty of Almighty God, in whose presence he always is; I would counsel him not to believe himself, when he professes the Omnipresence, or Omniscience of God; For without all contradiction, though by living in a Nation where every one with whom he converses, professeth so much, he may have learned to say, There is a God, and that this God is every where present; and takes particular notice of whatsoever is done in heaven and earth: yet if this Notion were firmly rooted in his soul, as a matter of Religion, as a business upon which depends the everlasting welfare of his soul and body; it is altogether impossible for him to continue in an habitual practice of such things as are evidently repugnant and destructive to such a conceit. For tell me, Would any man in his right senses, when he shall see another drink down a poyson which he knows will suddenly prove mortal unto him; I say, will any man be so mad as to believe such a one, though he should, with all the most earnest protestations that can be imagined, profess that he is not weary of his life, but intends to prolong it as long as God and Nature will give him leave?

19. The Case is altogether in each point and circumstance the same: For he which saith, He believeth or assenteth to any Doctrine, as a Fundamental Point of his Religion, intends thus much by it, that he has bound himself in certain bonds unto Almighty God (for so the very name of Religion doth import) to expect no benefit at all from him, but upon condition of believing such divine truths as it shall please him to reveal unto him, namely, as means and helps of a devout religious life and worship of him: For God reveals nothing of himself to any man for this end, to satisfie his curiosity, or to afford him matter of discourse or news; but to instruct him how he may behave himself here in this life, that he may attain those promises which shall be fulfilled to those who sincerely and devoutly serve and obey him.

20. Therefore he that shall say, I believe such a Truth revealed by God, and yet lives as if he had never heard of such a thing; yea, as if he had been perswaded of the contrary; is as much to be believed, as if he should say, I will drink a deadly poyson to quench my thirst, or will stab my self to the heart, for Physick, to let out superfluous bloud: So that that man who is not resolved to break off his wicked courses by repentance, and conversion unto God; that lives as if the Devil only were every where, and he resolved to please and delight him with his ungodly life; let not such a one use himself to say, I believe that God is always present with me, and a Spectator

Spectator of my actions; for thereby, he shall only add a lie to the rest of his sins, and fewel to the Lake of fire and brimstone: He shall never perswade God to believe him, that he was of such an opinion; but that whatsoever his tongue said, and his fancy now and then apprehended, yet in his conscience he was always a constant resolved Atheist, and in his heart he said, There is no God.

21. In the second place, thou acknowledgest, that God whom thou professest obedience to, is infinitely Righteous; insomuch that it is impossible that he should not hate and abhor unrighteousness in whomsoever he finds it: Yea, so natural and essential is his Justice unto him, that he should deny himself, if he should accept any mans person, if he should not be avenged on sin, if he should not most severely punish it. Thou canst not be ignorant how many Vows and Protestations he hath made almost every where through the holy Scripture, of his hatred and indignation against sin, insomuch, that heaven and earth may pass away, but not one jot or tittle of those Curses and Plagues shall fall to the ground, which he hath denounced against impenitent sinners.

22. And shall not thy own mouth here once again condemn thee, O thou wicked servant? Darest thou then every hour wilfully, and even contentedly do such things, as must certainly procure his anger and indignation against thee for ever? Wilt thou, for the sinful pleasure of a few minutes, put thy self in such a condition, that God must of necessity be angry with thee? That he must cease to be God, unless he hate and abhor thee? Certainly, if it thou wouldst descend into thine own heart, if thou wouldst give thy self leave carefully and impartially to examine thy thoughts, thou wouldst find that thy tongue has given thy soul the lie, when it hath told thee, that God is immutably just and righteous; and yet for all that, that thou art resolved to run on in such courses, as must of necessity pull down his heavy displeasure against thee.

23. At least, thou wilt find in thy heart earnest desires and wishes, that God were not so righteous as Preachers tell thee he is! Oh, thinkest thou in thy heart, that God were such an unrighteous person as I am! Oh, that he could be content to wink at me, when I am about the fulfilling of my ungodly desires! Alas, what harm is it to him, what inconvenience accrews to him by it, if I enjoy the sinful pleasures of this life? Or if he will needs be angry, Oh that it were not in his power to revenge himself upon me! Oh that his power were not so unlimited as (they say) it is!

24. I know men will be apt to flatter themselves, though they be never so vicious, and to think that they are extremely wronged, to have such imputations laid upon them. They will be ready to answer me, in the words of Hazael to the Prophet Elisha, when he told him what horrible Massacres he should commit among the Israelites, when he should have the Crown of Syria set on his head: What dost thou think us dogs, that we should do such things as these? We are so far from robbing God of his Justice, that we would be mortal enemies to any that dare proceed to that height of impiety: Nay, we would be content to sacrifice our own lives, rather than be brought to deny that, or any other of his glorious Attributes.

25. Truly, I am so charitably minded, as to think that there is none so wicked, but would confidently make this defence for himself; yea, and believes he is in earnest when he speaks so. But this will not serve the turn: For, God seeth not as man sees, he judgeth not as man judgeth, but he judgeth righteous judgment. For instance, in that great example which our Saviour gives of the fashion and course of judgment, according to which he purposes to proceed in the last day; He accuses the wicked, and condemns them for neglect of visiting, and feeding, and cloathing Him. The Apology which they make for themselves, as having never seen him in that exigence, would not be taken: For, though I am perswaded they there spake nothing but what they verily thought, namely, that if ever they had seen Christ himself in such want and necessity, they would not have been so hard-hearted to him, as they were to his poor servants: yet Christ will not allow of that excuse, but accounts of their uncharitableness to afflicted Christians, as directed to himself.

26. So likewise in the Case in hand. Though I believe it would be hard to perswade ſuade even the moſt licentious profeſſed ſinner, that he believes not indeed the Juſtice and Righteouſneſs of God; yet he ſhall find at laſt, and that miſerably to his coſt, that God who knows his heart much better than himſelf, for all his profeſſions, will yet eſteem him an Atheiſt; and will prove evidently and convincingly unto him, that ſince that knowledge which he pretended to have of Gods Righteouſneſs, had been ſo fruitleſs and ſuperficial, that notwithſtanding ſuch a conceit, he proceeded ſtill on in his ungodly courſes; that therefore he did delude himſelf all the while with phantaſtical ungrounded illuſions; ſo that whatſoever imagination ſwim in his brain, yet in the language of his heart, that is, in the propenſion and ſway of his affections, he ſaid, There is no God --- Now what hath been ſaid of the Omnipreſence, Infinite Knowledge, and Juſtice of God, may by the ſame reaſon and proportion, be ſpoken of the reſt of his glorious Attributes. But the ſtraitneſs of time will force me to leave the reſt untouched: I will proceed therefore to make the like Collections from one or two Articles more of the Creed.

27. Thou believeſt that after this life (which cannot laſt very long, it will, and that ſhortly, have an end) there remain but two ways for all men of what ſtate and condition ſoever that ever were, to be diſpoſed of, either into life and glory everlaſting, or elſe into pains and torments infinite and inſupportable. And by conſequence, that thy ſoul is an immortal ſubſtance, which ſhall for ever continue ſomewhere: and according to thy behaviour here, during that ſhort meaſure of time which thou liveſt upon the earth, it muſt expect a reward proportionable thereto. If thou canſt perſuade thy ſelf to walk worthy of that calling whereunto thou art called in Jeſus Chriſt: If thou wilt not forſwear and renounce that glorious Profeſſion which thou madeſt in thy Baptiſm: If thou canſt be content to ſubmit thy ſelf to the eaſie yoke of Chriſt, propoſe to thy ſelf what reward thou canſt imagine, give thy thoughts ſcope and licence to be exceſſive and overflowing in their deſires: if thou art not ſatisfied to the uttermoſt, infinitely above what thou art now able to comprehend, Tell God he is a Liar, and has deceived thee. Oh what unſpeakable joys ſhall hereafter expect thee? Oh with what a burden and weight of glory ſhalt thou even be oppreſſed?

28. But on the other ſide; If notwithſtanding ſuch ineſtimable bleſſings as are now ſet before thine eyes, thou art yet reſolved to content thy ſelf with ſuch vain trifling pleaſures as thou canſt meet with in this life, which yet thou canſt not attain to, but with as much pains, and anxiety, and care, as, if rightly applied, would have been ſufficient to have procured heaven for thee! What ſhall I ſay unto thee? Only this, Thou haſt thy reward; Remember that thou haſt already received thy good things. What a terrible affrighting ſpeech in this? It may be thou haſt fed and glutted thy luſts with ſome pleaſures of this life; it may be thou haſt ſatisfied in ſome ſmall meaſure thy ambition with honour and preferment; and yet it may be for all thy cares and travels, thou haſt not been able to attain to any of thoſe things as thou didſt deſire; whether thou haſt or haſt not, it is all one, there is little to chuſe, but howſoever, Remember that thou haſt received thy good things; Remember, thou haſt thy reward. Do not hereafter preſume to offer to pretend to any the leaſt good from God. It may be hereafter thou mayeſt come to ſuch want, as to ſtand in need of a cup of cold water; nay, it may be thou wouldſt think thy ſelf happy, if any body would afford thee but one drop of water to refreſh thy tongue. But in vain: for, Son, Remember thou haſt already received thy good things. Thou never ſaweſt beggar ſo utterly wretched and deſtitute, but he might almoſt every where have filled himſelf with water, and have thanked no body for it: and yet though thou ſhouldſt even conſume thy ſelf with intreating, and crying for it, yet none ſhall be found to give it thee, even thy liberal good father Abraham will deny it to thee.

29. Surely there cannot be found ſo impudent, ſo unreaſonable a ſinner, as to profeſs he is fully perſuaded of theſe things, and that he hath a deſire, and even ſome hope, that God will be ſo merciful to him, as to preſerve him, that none of thoſe things happen unto him, and yet reſolve to follow the devices of his own heart; To ſay, He

He acknowledgeth that the joys which are reſerved for penitent Believers, are ſo exceſſively glorious, that the afflictions of this life are not worthy of them, much leſs the vain pleaſures thereof; and yet withal, rather than not enjoy the pleaſures of ſin for a ſeaſon, to make himſelf uncapable of thoſe great bleſſings. Such a generation of men I find in holy Scripture, and God himſelf takes notice of them, who ſay, We ſhall have peace, though we walk in the imaginations of our heart: But withal, I can ſcarce meet with God ſo impatient through the whole Bible, as he is with people of ſuch a temper as this, Surely, the Lord will be avenged on ſuch a nation as this, and will make his fierce wrath to ſmoak againſt them.

30. Therefore, whomſoever thou art that haſt taken up thy reſolution, to walk in the imagination of thine own heart; at leaſt, take ſo much pity of thy ſelf, do not thou thy ſelf add violence and heat to the wrath of God, which ſhall ſmoak againſt thee, by pretending to a belief of Heaven or Hell, or by ſeeming to profeſs, that all the while that thou art buſie in the proſecution of thine ungodly luſts, notwithſtanding that, all that time, this opinion hath never left thee, That God will bring thee to Judgment; That even that very body of thine, which thou mad'ſt a manſion for the Devil, an inſtrument for any wickedneſs that he would ſuggeſt unto thee, yet that that body ſhould be raiſed up; that to thy extreme horror and aſtoniſhment, God would take ſuch particular care of that very body of thine, that whereſoever it were loſt, he would recover it, though diſperſed to the four Winds of heaven, and build it up again (thou ſayeſt thou knowſt for what uſe) even to be a mark againſt which he will empty his Quivers, and ſhoot out all the Darts of his fiery indignation, in the puniſhing of whom he will expreſs his Almighty Power.

31. But I cannot allow my ſelf any longer time to proſecute the former part of my Propoſition, viz. to ſhew how much men deceive themſelves, who think they indeed believe the Fundamental Points of their Faith, when by their practice and courſe of life, they live in an habitual exerciſe of ſuch ſins, as are utterly repugnant and deſtructive to ſuch a belief: And this, I think, I have performed; but yet only in general terms, not deſcending to a view of ſome more eminent and particular ſins and enormities: For that, therefore, which remains of the time that your patience will allow me, I will ſpend it in acquitting my ſelf of the other part of my promiſe, namely, in inſtancing in ſome extraordinary incontrouled practices of theſe times; and, diſcovering how utterly they do deſtroy the very grounds and foundations of our Religion, and how impoſſible it is they ſhould conſiſt with a true ſincere profeſſion of Chriſtianity.

32. As firſt, for example; How ordinarily do we meet with this practice, for men which are above others in wealth and power, to employ both theſe to their utmoſt abilities, for the maintaining of an unjuſt cauſe againſt a poor inferiour Adverſary: I am ſure, this is no news to you, you do not ſtartle at the hearing of ſuch a crime as this: And yet, if it be well conſidered, what can be imagined more monſtrous and abominable? For, give me leave to ſuppoſe, or put the caſe, that ſome one of this company were guilty of this ſin, 1.

33. If I ſhould ask him, Whence, and from whom he had his riches or power? Whom he would acknowledge for his Benefactor? I make no queſtion, but he would give me a good religious Anſwer, and ſay, That he would not ſacrifice to his Net, nor burn Incenſe to his Drag; but that God, who gave a bleſſing to his cares and endeavours, had advanced him to ſuch a place and fortunes in the world. Again, if I ſhould ask him, In what eſteem and value (he thought that) God holds his faithful ſervants? or, Whether he would take it well, to have them oppreſſed and trampled on by others more potent than themſelves; He muſt needs anſwer again, that God is no Accepter of perſons, neither riches nor poverty are a means to procure His favour, but that in all conditions of men, He that loveth righteouſneſs, and hateth iniquity, ſhall be accepted by him.

34. If theſe be his Anſwers (as, without all contradiction, unleſs he will profeſs himſelf an Atheiſt, ſuch muſt be the effect of them;) Then, let him conſider, in what a woful condition he has concluded himself to be in, and, what reason he has to thank God for his honour or riches? Does he think, that God has furnished him with strength and weapons for this end, that thereby he might be able to make war with himself, that he might have the power to overrun and lay waste those whom God loveth as the apple of his own eye? Can he imagine, that God has been so beneficial and liberal to him, in preferring him to a rank and degree above others not inferiour to him in the riches and treasures of God's grace, and therefore as dear unto him as himself; for this end, that thereby he may prove a more able, and fit instrument for the Devil to wreak his malice and hatred upon those whom God loves?

35. Therefore, if there be ere such a person in this Auditory (yet I hope there is not) but and if there be! What shall I say unto him? Let him consider, what a hard task he has undertaken to war against God? Let him consider, what a strange reckoning he is likely to make unto God, when he shall at last (as undoubtedly he will) require of him an account of his Stewardship? Behold, Lord, thou hast given me five Talents, and what have I done with them? Why, loe, I have made them ten Talents. But how, by what courses? Why, I have unjustly and injuriously robbed and wrung from my fellow servants, those few Talents which thou gavest them: I have gained thus much by my violent maintaining of a cause which thou hatedst, and which my self could not deny but to be most unjust: This is surely a fore evil under the Sun. But, since, I hope, it little concerns any one here, to have such a crime as this dissected curiously and purposely insisted upon, it shall suffice me to say, That they who are guilty of it, are far from knowing of what spirit they are, when they say, they are Christians, since even a very Heathen would abhor to countenance or entertain such a vice as this.

2. 36. In the second place, How can ye believe (saith Christ) who seek honour one of another, and not that honour which is of God? If these words of Christ be true, That they who too earnestly desire applause and reputation among men, neglecting, in the mean time, seriously to endeavour the attaining to the honour which is of God; that is, obedience and submission to his Commands, which is that wherein a Christian ought especially to place his honour and reputation: If such men as these, do in vain, and without all ground of reason, reckon themselves in the number of true believers: Again, if the chief badge and χαρακτηρ, whereby Christ would have his Servants to be distinguished from the world, be a willingness to suffer injuries, a desire rather to have the other cheek strucken, and to have the Cloak go the same way with the Coat, than to revenge one blow with another, or to go to Law for a matter of no great moment, for recovering of that which a man might well enough lose, without endangering his Estate.

37. If these things, I say, be true; Suppose Christ (according to the Vision of Ezekiel) should command his Angels utterly to slay through all Jerusalem, that is, the Church, old and young, maids, and little children, and women, excepting only those upon whom his mark and badge were to be found; what destruction and desolation would there be? How would the Sanctuary of God be defiled, and his Courts be filled with the slain? How would many (who now pass, both in their own and other mens opinions, for good Christians enough) be taken for Mahomets servants whose Religion it is, by fury and murther, to gain Proselites to their abominable profession: Suppose our Garments should be presented to God with the same question that Jacob's Sons sent their Brother Joseph's, Num hæc est tunica filii tui? Is this thy Sons Coat? Would they not rather be taken for the skins of savage Beasts, so unlike are they to that Garment of Humility and Patience which our Saviour wore, and which he bequeathed us in his Legacy.

Ezck 9. 5, 6.

38. We are so far from seeking that Honour which is of God, from endeavouring to attain unto, or so much as countenance such virtues, which God hath often professed, that he will exalt and glorifie; such is humility, and patiently bearing of injuries, that we place our honour and reputation in the contrary; that is counted noble noble and generous in the Worlds opinion, which is odious and abominable in the sight of God: If thy Brother offend or injure thee, forgive him, saith Christ; if he proceed, forgive him; What? Until seven times? I, until seventy times seven times. But how is this Doctrine received now in the World? What counsel would men, and those none of the worst sort, give thee in such a case? How would the sobereст, discreetest, well-bred Christians advise thee? Why thus: If thy Brother or thy Neighbour have offered thee an injury or an affront! forgive him? By no means, of all things in the world take heed of that, thou art utterly undone in thy reputation then, if thou dost forgive him: What is to be done then? Why, let not thy heart rest, let all other business rest, let all other business and employment be laid aside, till thou hast his bloud: what, a mans bloud for an injurious passionate speech, for a disdainful look? Nay, this is not all. That thou may'st gain amongst men the reputation of a discreet well tempered murderer, be sure thou killest him not in passion, when thy bloud is hot and boyling with the provocation; but proceed with as much temper and settledness of reason, with as much discretion and preparedness as thou wouldst to the Communion: After some several days meditation, invite him mildly, and affably, into some retired place, and there let it be put to the trial, whether thy life or his must answer the injury.

39. Oh most horrible Christianity! That it should be a most sure setled way for a man to run into danger and disgrace with the world, if he shall dare to perform a Commandment of Christ's which is as necessarily to be observed by him, if he have any hope of attaining heaven, as meat and drink is for the sustaining of his life? That ever it should enter into the heart of a Christian to walk so exactly and curiously contrary to the ways of God; that whereas he every day and hour, sees himself contemned and despised by thee who art his servant, his creature, upon whom he might (without any possible imputation of unrighteousness) pour down the Vials of his fierce wrath and indignation? Yet he, notwithstanding, is patient and long suffering towards thee, hoping that his long-suffering may lead thee to repentance, and earnestly desiring and soliciting thee by his Ministers to be reconciled unto him: Yet, that thou, for all this, for a blow in anger; it may be, for a word or less, shouldst take upon thee to send his soul, or thine, or, it may be, both, clogg'd and press'd with all your sins unrepented of (for thou canst not be so wild as to think, thou canst repent of thy sins, and yet resolve upon such a business) to expect your sentence before the judgment seat of God: wilfully and irrecoverably to deprive your selves of all those blessed means which God had contrived for your salvation, the power of his Word, the efficacy and virtue of his Sacraments; all which you shall utterly exclude your selves from, and leave your selves in such a state, that it shall not be in Gods power to do you any good. Oh consider this all ye that fight against God, lest he tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver you.

3. 40. In the third place: There is another great evil under the Sun, and that is, When men are not content to dishonour Almighty God, and their glorious Religion, by unworthy scandalous Practices; but, to make themselves innocent, they will entitle God to their abominations: Of this nature are those, who are curious and inquisitive into Scripture, great students in it for this end, That they may furnish them with some places, which being violently wrested, and injuriously handled, may serve, at least in their opinion, to patronize and warrant their ungodly irreligious courses. The time will come, saith Christ to his Disciples, when they who hate and persecute you, shall think they do God good service. And the time is come, when men think they can give no greater, nor more approved testimony of their Religion, and zeal of God's Truth, than by hating and abhorring, by reviling and traducing their Brethren, if they differ from them in any, though the most ordinary, innocent Opinions: If men accord not altogether with them, if they run not on furiously with them in all their Tenets, they are enemies unto God and his Truth, and they can find Scripture enough to warrant them to disgrace and revile such, to raise any scandalous dishonourable reports of them, and to poyson utterly their reputation with the World.

An

An Application to the Communion.

I Have hitherto, as carefully as ſo ſhort a time would permit, (and yet, it may be, with greater earneſtneſs than you could have been content I ſhould) ſearched into the retired corners of our hearts, and there diſcovered a vice, which, it may be, you little expected, namely, Atheiſm: A ſtrange vice, I confeſs, to be found in Chriſtian Hearts. I have, likewiſe, exemplified in ſome particular practices of theſe times, moſt exactly contrary to our Profeſſion of Chriſtian Religion: If I ſhould endeavour to diſcover all that might be obſerved of this nature, not my hour only, but the day it ſelf would fail me. Notwithſtanding, I am reſolved to make one inſtance more about the buſineſs for which we are met together, namely, The receiving of the bleſſed Body and Bloud of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt: I ſuppoſe you will all acknowledge with me, that that is a buſineſs of the greateſt conſequence that a Chriſtian is capable of performing: I hope I need not to inſtruct you, how inexcuſably guilty thoſe men render themſelves who come with an unprepared heart, with an unſanctified mouth, to the partaking of theſe heavenly Myſteries: What art thou (ſaith God by the Pſalmiſt) that takeſt my word into thy mouth, when thou hateſt to be reformed? And if that be ſo great a crime for a man only to talk of God, to make mention of his Name, when the heart is unclean and unreformed; with how much greater reaſon may Chriſt ſay, What art thou that takeſt Me into thy Mouth? What art thou that dareſt devour my Fleſh, and ſuck my Bloud, that dareſt incorporate my Fleſh and Bloud into thy ſelf, to make my ſpotleſs Body an Inſtrument of thy Luſts, a Temple for the Devil to inhabit and reign in? To Crucifie Chriſt once more, and put him to open ſhame? To Crucifie him ſo that no good ſhall follow upon it, to make the Bloud of the New Covenant a profane thing? And thus far, if not deeper, is that man guilty, that ſhall dare to come to this heavenly Feaſt with ſpotted and unclean affections.

The

The Fourth Sermon.

Luke IX. 23.

— Let him deny himſelf.

GOod reaſon there is, that, according to that exceſs of value and weight, wherewith heavenly and ſpiritual things do ſurmount and preponderate earthly and tranſitory; ſo likewiſe the deſire and proſecution of them ſhould be much more contentiouſly active and earneſt, than that of the other: Yet, if men were but in any proportion ſo circumſpect, and careful in buſineſſes that concern their eternal welfare, as even the moſt fooliſh Worldlings are about Riches, Honour, and ſuch trifles, as are not worthy to take up the mind even of a natural man; We ſhould not have the glorious Profeſſion of Chriſtianity, ſo carelefly and ſleepily undertaken, ſo irreſolutely and fearfully, nay, cowardly maintained; I might add, ſo treacherouſly pretended and betrayed to the encompaſſing of baſe and unworthy ends, as now it is.

2. To what may we more juſtly impute this negligent wretchleſs behaviour of Chriſtians, than to an extreme incogitancy, and want of conſideration in us, upon what terms it is, that we have entred into League with God, and to what conſiderable ſtrict Conditions we have in our firſt initiation at our Baptiſm, ſo ſolemnly ſubmitted and engaged our ſelves; without a ſerious reſolute performance whereof, we have promiſed by no means to expect any reward at all from God, but to remain ſtrangers, utterly excluded from the leaſt hope of enjoying any fruit of thoſe many glorious Promiſes which it hath pleaſed our gracious God, ſo liberally to offer and reach out unto us in our bleſſed Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

3. It was no good ſign, when the precious Seed of the Word was received into the ſtony ground with ſuch a ſudden Joy. Hearers reſembled by that ground, give good heed to the glorious and comfortable Promiſes, which attend Religion, without having reſpect to many troubleſom and melancholick Conditions, which muſt neceſſarily go along too: And therefore, when Perſecution begins, either within them, when they are commanded to ſtrangle a Luſt as dear unto them, and as neceſſary for their employments, as an eye, or right hand; Or without them, when that Profeſſion which they have undertaken becomes offenſive or ſcandalous to great men: Then, (as if they had been miſtaken in the Purchaſe, or deceived by the Preacher,) the joy ſo ſuddenly kindled, as ſoon vaniſhes, and they retire themſelves home, expecting a more commodious and gainful bargain.

4. Hereupon it is, that our Saviour in this Chapter ſpends two Parables, One of a King preparing for War, The other of a Builder for a Houſe; whereby to inſtruct his hearers, what they ſhould do before they did offer to undertake his ſervice: The ſum whereof is this; That if they had any ends and projects of their own, if they thought to ſerve themſelves upon him, they were much deceived; that they ſhould deeply, and thoughtfully conſider of what weight and conſequence the buſineſs was that they went about:

5. There is a Kingdom to be obtained, and a glorious Palace, wherein are to be erected many fair Manſions to reign in: But it is a Kingdom that ſuffers violence, and the the violent muſt take it by force; And it is a Building that will exact perchance all the means they have, and their whole lives labour to boot: Wherefore it is good for them to ſit down, to ſend for their friends to counſel, to queſtion their hearts, whether they have courage and reſolution, and to examine their incomes, whether they will bear the charges to muſter Souldiers for the Conqueſt, and Labourers for the Building.

6. If they like theſe large offers, and have means enough for the employment, and are not unwilling to ſpare for coſt, let them go on in God's Name: There is no doubt to be made of an end, that ſhall fully recompence their loſſes, and ſatisfie their utmoſt boldneſs deſires, and fill the whole capacity of their thoughts. But on the other ſide, unleſs all theſe conditions concur, He has ſo much care of their credit that he would with them, not to ſet one foot further in the employment, but to betake themſelves home, leſt, if they ſhould fail in the buſineſs, they ſhould make themſelves ridiculous to the world of Scorners: to whom it would be meat and drink to ſee ſome glorious freſh ruines of a Building left to the fouls and beaſts to inhabit; or to ſee a fierce invading Army forced to retire themſelves home, cool'd and content with their former want and poverty.

Object. 7. But might not ſome poor, low-minded, ſinful hearer reply upon our Saviour, and enquire, whence theſe Sums muſt be raiſed, and theſe Forces muſtered. Alas, what is a wretched mortal man, that he ſhould think of taking Heaven by Compoſition, much more of forcing and invading it: What is there on Earth to lay in balance againſt Heaven? Has not the Spirit of God told us, that all is vanity, nay, lighter than vanity, through all Eccleſiaſtes? And again, that men of low condition are vanity, and men of high condition (to wit, ſuch, as becauſe they abound with wealth, think that therefore they are in much better eſteem and favour with God than their Brethren) they are worſe than vanity, for as it is Pſal. 62. 9. They are a Lie, that is, they are no ſuch things as they take themſelves for, they are quite contrary to what they ſeem. Pſal. 62. 9.

Reply. 8. The anſwer hereto is not very difficult: For 'tis true, If we conſider our own abilities, ſuch, I mean, as our fore-fathers have left us, it is as impoſſible for us by any worth in our power, to offer at the purchaſe of heaven, as to make a new one: yet ſuch is the mercy of God in Jeſus Chriſt, that ſo glorious a Bargain is already made to our hands, the gain whereof will redound unto us upon very reaſonable conditions; Namely, if we can be brought to acknowledge our own beggarly ſtarved eſtate, and thereby evacuating our ſelves of all manner of worth and deſert in our ſelves, and relying only upon his mercy which is infinite, ſubmitting likewiſe our ſelves to be abſolutely at his diſpoſition without any reſervation at all.

9. So that the ſame unvaluable precious Jewel, which coſt the rich Merchant in the Parable, all his Eſtate, and had like to have made a young Gentleman in the Goſpel turn bankrupt, may become ours, even the pooreſt and moſt deſpiſed perſon's amongſt us; if we will be content to part with our totum nihil, all whatſoever we are, or have: If we can perſuade our ſelves, to eſteem pleaſure and profit as droſs and dung, when they come in competition with this Pearl: If we can readily and affectionately hate our deareſt friends and kindred, even tread our Parents under our feet, when they lie in our way unto Chriſt: If we can perfectly deteſt even the moſt deareſt cloſeſt luſts and affectionate ſins: Finally, if our own ſouls become contemptible and vile in our own eyes, in reſpect of that glorious Inheritance ſo dearly purchaſed for us: Then are we rich to purchaſe this Pearl, then are we able and ſufficient to go through with this Building, and ſtrong enough to conquer this Kingdom.

10. Now all this (as muſt be ſhewed in many more particulars) is properly to deny our ſelves, which is a condition that our Saviour makes ſo neceſſary and inſeparable in every one, that purpoſes to be any thing the better for him, that deſires to be found in the number of thoſe that have given up their names unto him, for ſaith the Text, Jeſus ſaid unto them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himſelf. ——Let him——

11. Theſe few words are not conveniently capable of a diviſion; But taking them in groſs, as a Precept or Law delivered by Chriſt, and which concerns every man, of what ſtate or condition ſoever, that reſolves to accept of him for a Lord and Saviour: We will proceed according to the ordinary Method of expounding a Law: Namely, firſt, we will in general, conſider the nature, meaning, and extent of this Law; How far the action here injoyned (which is a denying or renouncing) doth reach; and how much is comprehended in the object thereof, Our ſelves: Secondly, I will reſtrain this general Duty into ſpecial Caſes, which may conveniently be reduced to three, namely, that by vertue thereof we are bound to evacuate our ſelves, and utterly deny, 1. Our own Wiſdom or Underſtanding, 2. Our Will and Affections. And laſtly, our own Deſert and Righteouſneſs. 1. 2.

12. Out of this Commandment, then, conſidered in general terms only, (for ſo I ſhall only handle it in this hours Diſcourſe) as it is contained in theſe two words ἀπαρνησάσθω ἑαυτὸν, but two ſuch words, ſo full and ſwelling with expreſſion, that our Language can ſcarce at all, or but faintly, expreſs and render the force and vigour of them in twenty; I ſhall obſerve unto you this doctrinal Poſition; namely, That it Doctr. is abſolutely, and indiſpenſably required of every man that profeſſes Chriſtianity; not only utterly to renounce all manner of things that thwart and oppoſe Gods Will and Command, but alſo reſolutely, and without all manner of reſervation, to purpoſe and reſolve upon the denial of whatſoever is in our ſelves, or any thing elſe, how full of pleaſure, profit; or neceſſity ſoever, though in themſelves indifferent, lawful, or convenient; when they come in competition with what Chriſt hath enjoyned us. Which after I have explained and confirmed by comparing this Law with many other Precepts of the ſame nature in the holy Scripture, I ſhall apply unto your conſciences by two uſeful inforcements, One, taken from the extreme undeniable reaſonableneſs of the thing here commanded. 1. The other, from the wonderful love and kindneſs in the Law-giver, that requires not ſo much at our hands as himſelf hath already voluntarily performed, and that for our ſakes: For thus, or to this purpoſe, run the words: If any man will come after me, let him do as I have done, even deny himſelf, take up his, indeed my, Croſs daily, and ſo follow me. 2.

13. I told you, I remember, my Text was a Law, and I repent not of the expreſſion, though I know not how, ſince our Divinity has been impriſoned and fettered in Theſes and diſtinctions, we have loſt this word Law; and men will by no means indure to hear, that Chriſt came to command us any thing, or that he requires any thing at our hands, he is all taken up in promiſe: All thoſe Precepts which are found in the Goſpel, are nothing, in theſe mens opinions, but mere promiſes of what God will work in us, I know not how, ſine nobis, though indeed they be delivered in faſhion, like Precepts.

14. Theſe, and many other ſuch dangerous conſequences do and muſt neceſſarily ariſe from that new invented fatal Neceſſity; a Doctrine, that fourteen Centuries of Chriſtianity never heard of: If we will enquire after the old and good ways, we ſhall find the Goſpel it ſelf by its own Author called a Law: For thus ſaith the Pſalmiſt in the Perſon of Chriſt: I will preach the Law, whereof the Lord hath ſaid unto me, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. And how familiar are ſuch ſpeeches as thoſe, in our Saviour's mouth: This is my command; a new Commandment I give unto you; Ye ſhall be my Diſciples, if ye do thoſe things which I command you, Among the ancient Fathers, we find not only that Chriſt is a Law-giver, but that he hath publiſhed Laws which were never heard of before: That he hath enlarged the ancient Precepts, and enjoyned new; and yet now 'tis Socinianiſm to ſay but half ſo much. Clemens Alexandr. (3. στρωμ. in fine) ſaith, that Chriſt is more than a Law-giver, he is both Λόγος & Νόμος, and quotes St. Peter for it. Pſal. 2. 7.

15. Well then, my Text is a Law, and a preparatory Law; it is the voice of one crying, Prepare the ways of the Lord; let all hills be depreſſed, and all valleys exalted. It bears indeed the ſame office in our converſion, or new birth, that Ariſtotle aſſigns to his Privation in reſpect of natural Generation. It hath no poſitive active influence upon the work, but it is Principium Occaſionale, a condition or ſtate neceſſarily ſuppoſed or prerequired in the ſubject before the buſineſs be accompliſhed. For, as in Phyſical Generation there can be no ſuperinduction of forms, but the ſubject which expects a ſoul muſt neceſſarily prepare a room or manſion for it, which cannot be, unleſs the ſoul that did before inhabit there, be diſpoſſeſſed. So, it likewiſe comes to paſs in our Regeneration; there is no receiving of Chriſt, to dwell and live with us, unleſs we turn all our other gueſts out of doors. The Devil, you know, would not take poſſeſſion of a houſe, till it was ſwept and garniſhed: and, Dares any man imagine, that a heart defiled, full of all uncleanneſs, a decayed ruinous ſoul, an earthly ſenſual mind, is a Tabernacle fit to entertain the Son of God? Were it reaſonable to invite Chriſt to ſup in ſuch a Manſion, much more to reſt and inhabit there?

16. In the ordinary Sacrifices of the Old Law, God was content to ſhare part of them with his Servants the Prieſts, and challenged only the Inwards as his own due. And proportionably in the ſpiritual ſacrifices, his claim was, My Son, give me thy heart: He was tender then in exacting all his due. It was only a temptation, we know, when God required of Abraham, that his only Son Iſaac ſhould be offered in holocauſtum, for a whole burnt Sacrifice, to be utterly conſumed, ſo that no part nor reliques ſhould remain of ſo beloved a Sacrifice. Yet even in thoſe old times, there were whole burnt-offerings; whereby (beſides that one Oblation of Chriſt) was prefigured likewiſe our giving up our whole ſelves, ſouls and bodies, as a living reaſonable Sacrifice unto God. And therefore our Saviour Chriſt (who came to fulfil the Law, not only by his obedience thereto but alſo by his perfect and compleat expreſſion of its force and meaning) doth in plain terms reſolutely and peremptorily exact from all them that purpoſe to follow him, a full perfect reſignation of themſelves to his diſpoſing, without all manner of condition or reſervation.

17. This was a Doctrine never heard of in the world before compleatly delivered. Never did any Prophet or Scribe urge, or inforce ſo much upon Gods people, as is herein contained. Yet in the Evangelical Law, we have it preciſely, and accurately preſſed; inſomuch, that the holy Spirit of God has taken up almoſt all the Metaphors that can poſſibly be imagined, the more forcibly to urge this ſo neceſſary a Doctrine.

18. We are commanded ſo perfectly, and wholly, to devote our ſelves to Gods ſervice; ſo earneſtly, and reſolutely, to undertake his Commands, that we muſt determine to undervalue, and deſpiſe all earthly and tranſitory things beſides; nay, from the bottom of our hearts we muſt hate and deteſt all things (how gainful, or delightful, or neceſſary ſoever they ſeem) if they do in any meaſure hinder, or oppugn us in our journey to Chriſt.

19. We muſt not ſo much as look upon Chriſt, or glance our eyes upon his glorious mercy, expreſſed in ſuffering and ſatisfying for us (for St. Luke calls this θεωρίαν) but we muſt reſolve to keep them there fixed, and not deign to think any creature to be a ſpectacle worthy our looking on; ἀφορῶντες εἰς Ἰησοῦν, (ſaith St. Paul) we have no engliſh term that can fully expreſs the force of this word; for it is not only as we have it tranſlated, looking unto Chriſt, but taking off our ſpeculations from other objects, and faſtning them upon Chriſt, the Author and Finiſher of our Faith. Heb. 12. 11.

20. When we have been once acquainted, though but imperfectly, with this ſaving knowledge, we muſt ſtrait bring our underſtandings into captivity, unto the obedience thereof; and whatſoever other ſpeculations we have, how delightful ſoever they be unto us, yet rather than they ſhould over-leaven us, and (as Knowledge without Charity is apt to do) puff us up, we muſt with much greater care and induſtry, ſtudy to forget them, and reſolve with St. Paul, to know nothing, ſave Jeſus Chriſt and him crucified.

21. When

21. When we have had notice of that ineſtimable Jewel, the Kingdom of Heaven (ſo called by our Saviour in the Parable) expoſed to ſale, though our eſtate be never ſo great, our Wares never ſo rich and glorious, yet we muſt reſolvedly part with all we have; utterly undo our ſelves, and turn Bankrupts, for the purchaſing of it. Hence are thoſe commands, Sell all thou haſt. And, leſt a man ſhould think, that when the Land is ſold, he may keep the Mony in his Purſe, there follows, And give to the poor. And ſuch care is taken by the Holy Ghoſt in thoſe expreſſions, leſt any evaſions ſhould be admitted; leſt it ſhould happen that ſuch a Merchant ſhould find no Chapman to buy his Wares, nor, (which is ſcarce poſſible) hands to receive his money, when he would beſtow it; it is further ſaid, Forſake all, leave all: by all means quit thy ſelf of thy own Riches, run away from thy Poſſeſſions. And if there be any thing yet more dear unto thee than thy Poſſeſſions, as neceſſary as thy Cloaths, Deſpoila teipſum, Put off the old man, and his luſts with affections; and though he ſtick never ſo cloſe, tear it from thee, ſhake off the ſin that hangeth ſo faſt on.

22. And yet the Holy Ghoſt proceeds further in a more forcible expreſſion: For many Heathens have been found, that could perſuade themſelves to prefer Fame obtained by a Philoſophical auſtere life, before Riches, or Honours, but every man loveth and cheriſheth his fleſh: Therefore, if there be a luſt ſo incorporated into thee, that it becomes as uſeful and neceſſary as thy right hand, or eye, yet thou muſt reſolve to be thine own Executioner, to deform, and maim thy ſelf; for what will it profit thee, to go a proper perſonable man into hell. Nay, if thy whole body begin to tyrannize over thee, thou muſt fight and war with it, and never leave, till thou haſt brought it into Captivity. Then muſt thou uſe it like a ſlave, with ſhort and coarſe diet, and ſtore of correction, as St. Paul did, ὑποπιάζω μου τὸ σῶμα καὶ δουλαγωγῶ. Nay, more, ſaith he, Ἐγὼ πὺξ οὐκ ἀγωνίζομαι ὡσεὶ οὐκ τύπτων ἀέρα· ἀλλὰ ὑπωπιάζω μου τὸ σῶμα καὶ δουλαγωγῶ. Such hatred he bore to that body of ſin, which did always accompany him, that not content to over-maſter it, he did ignominiouſly ſtigmatize and brand it with the marks of ſlavery.

23. Yet this is not all: If it be rebellious and incorrigible, thou muſt even diſpatch it, put it to death, and that no ordinary one, it muſt be a ſervile, ſlaviſh, cruel death; Crucifie the fleſh, with the luſts and affections thereof. A man would think that this were ſufficient, and that we might here reſt from further tyrannizing over our ſelves: but there is no ſuch matter; If any man hate not Father, and Mother, and Brethren, and Siſters, and all the world beſides, even his own ſoul, for my Name ſake and the Goſpels, ſaith Chriſt, he cannot be my Diſciple. And now we are at the height, never till now, did I tell you the full meaning of my Text; how far every man is ingaged by vertue of this Precept, Let him deny himſelf.

24. The ſtrength and vigour of this Phraſe (which expreſſes as much indeed, as all the former laid together) we ſhall the better underſtand, ſaith St. Chryſoſtom, if we conſider what it is to deny another: If a Father, in extreme diſpleaſure, do ſo caſt off his Son, that he denies him to be his Son, he becomes worſe than a ſtranger; for he will not ſo much as admit him to enjoy the benefit that common humanity teacheth every man to ſhew to another; he will not endure him in his ſight, leſs will he vouchſafe to expoſtulate with him; nay, he will rejoyce when he hears of ſome misfortune that hath befaln him, and be beholden to any man that will revenge his injuries upon him.

25. Thus muſt every one do, who enters into league and friendſhip with God; He muſt work himſelf out of his own acquaintance; He muſt be a ſtranger, (or, if God will have him) an enemy to all the world, and eſpecially to himſelf; though he flow with wealth, yet he muſt live as being poor, as having nothing, (ſaith St. Paul.) If afflictions, or perſecution, come upon him in Gods behalf, he muſt with all joy entertain them. Whatſoever God enjoyns him, though otherwiſe never ſo diſtaſteful to him, it muſt be his meat and drink to perform it. There is nothing must lay a necessity upon him, but only God; and, to serve him, he must account the only Unum necessarium.

26. Will you see an example of such obedience, and that in the Old Law. An extra-Exod. 32. 29. ordinary one you shall find in Exod. 32. 19. which depends upon a story which went before, the sum whereof was this: Moses, in revenge of that horrible Idolatry which was committed during his absence upon the Mount, commands the Sons of Levi to consecrate every man himself unto the Lord, upon his Son, and upon his Brother, and upon his Neighbour, by destroying any man, whoever he were, that came in their way: which they resolutely performed. And this obedience of theirs, was so acceptable to God, that at Moses death they obtained the blessing of Urim and Thummim above all the Tribes, with this Elogy: He said unto his Father, and to his Mother, I have not seen them, neither did he acknowledge his Brethren, nor knew his own Children, for they have observed thy Word, and kept thy Covenant. By which obedience, the Children wiped out, as it were, the Fact of their Father Levi, who had before abused his Sword unto injustice, for which he lost the blessing, that else he should have had, Gen. 49.

27. But will not here be room for that earnest Objection, which the Disciples, in great anxiety of mind, made to our Saviour, when he was pressing a Doctrine of the same nature with this we have in hand, Who then can be saved? If there be required at our hands, so absolute and peremptory a resignation of our selves to Gods disposal, that we must root out of our hearts all manner of love of our selves, or any other creature, then Christ hath destroyed the whole Second Table of the Law. For, at the best, we are but to love our Neighbours as our selves: If therefore our first Lesson must be to learn to contemn and despise, nay, even hate our own souls; Why do we not, with the Levites, so commended even now, consecrate every man himself to the Lord upon our Kindred and Neighbours, destroying all about us? Besides, how dare we presume to be rich, or retain those possessions, which, as it seems, God hath bought from us? If our Goods be not our own, if our Souls be not our own, Men and brethren, what shall we do? Into what a strait are we faln? We are commanded to love our Brethren as our own Souls, and we are commanded to hate our own Souls, We are enjoyned to give God thanks for those blessings which here we are enjoyned to cast away. We are counselled, even by our Saviour, to be perfect as our Heavenly Father is perfect, and yet we must deny our selves; Whereas the Spirit of God hath told us, That it is impossible that God should deny Himself.

28. For answer: This Law must be read and understood, (as the Schools say) cum grano salis: For though it must be most true, that by vertue of this Precept, we are obliged to an utter evacuation of the love and desire of any thing, and of all manner of confidence in our selves, or any other creature: Yet this must be understood, not absolutely, but when such things come in competition with our Love or Obedience to God: For otherwise, we are most necessarily bound, to love our selves and others, to study and care for our own good, and the welfare of our Brethren, even to lay down our lives for them. So, that we are not bound to destroy the love of our selves, but only when it is a hinderance to our fulfilling of what God commands us.

29. We therefore, who have given up our Names unto Christ, must expect to enjoy the fruits of his Obedience, by treading in the same steps which he hath left unto us. As shall be shewed hereafter more plentifully.

30. And yet it is not necessary, that we should exactly and curiously apply our selves to the Rule of his Obedience: For, whereas he voluntarily undertook the form and fashion of a Servant, and being Lord of Heaven and Earth, despised and neglected the riches and glory of this world: We notwithstanding are not tied to such hard conditions, but may flow and abound with wealth and honour; neither need we to deny our Souls any pleasure under the Sun, but liberally enjoy it as the gift of God, as long as thereby we withdraw not our Obedience and Allegiance from God.

31. Peccatum

31. Peccatum non est appetitus malarum rerum sed defertio meliorum, (saith St. Augustine quoted by Lombard, 2 Sent. 42. dist.) i.e. Sin does not consist in desiring or lusting after things which in their own natures are evil and inconvenient, but in preferring a low inconstant changeable good, before another more worthy and of greater excellency and perfection: Whilest therefore, God has that estimation and value in our thoughts that he deserves, whilest there is nothing in our selves, or any other creature, which we prefer before him, whilest we conspire not with our lusts to depose him from bearing a Sovereign sway in our hearts and Consciences, whilest we have no other God before him, not committing Idolatry to Wealth, Honour, Learning, and the like. It shall be lawful, in the second place, to love our selves: So that we fulfil this Commandment, when we do not Deifie our selves, whilest we sacrifice not to our own wisdom, nor burn Incense to the pride of our hearts, &c.

32. Conceive then the meaning of this Law to be such, as if it had been more fully inlarged on this wise: Let every one that but hears any mention of Christ this day, take into deep consideration, and spend his most serious morning thoughts, in pondering and weighing, whether those benefits, which Christ hath promised to communicate to every one that shall be joyned and married to him by a lively faith, be worthy his acceptation: Let him oppose to them all the pleasures and profits which he can promise, or but fancy, to himself under the Sun.

33. If after a due comparing of these things together, he have so much wisdom as to acknowledge, that an eternal weight of joy and glory, an everlasting serenity and calmness be to be preferred before a transitory, unquiet, restless, unsatisfying, pleasure, And seeing both these are offered, and set before him; or rather seeing such is the extreme mercy of our God, that whereas the goods of this life, are not allowed, nor so much as offered equally and universally to all, (For not many have ground to hope for much Wealth, Not many wise, not many learned, saith St. Paul.) Yet to every man, whom God hath called to the acknowledgment of the Gospel; these inestimable benefits are offered and presented bona fide, without any impossible condition, so that (let the Disputers of this Age say what they will) it shall be found, that those who have failed and come short of these glories offered, may thank themselves for it, and impute it to an actual voluntary misprision and undervaluing of these riches of Gods mercies which they might have procured, and not to any fatal over-ruling power, that did enforce and necessitate and drive them to their destruction.

34. These things considered, if you are indeed convinced, that light is to be preferred before darkness; It is impossible, but that you should likewise acknowledge, that it were meer madness for a man to imagine to himself any the most vanishing faint expectation of those glorious Promises, whilest he is busie and careful, by all means, to avoid those, indeed, thorny and unpleasant paths that lead unto them, whilest he promiseth to himself rest and impunity, though he walk in the Imagination of his own heart; surely the Lord will be avenged on such a person, and will make his fierce wrath to smoak against him.

35. Therefore resolve upon something, If the Lord be God follow him, serve him, conform your selves to the form of new obedience, which he hath prescribed: But if Baal be God, if Mammon be God, if your selves be Gods, follow the devices of your own hearts; But by no means expect any reward at all from God for dishonouring him, or preferring a base unworthy lust before his commands. Loe'tis the Lord of Glory who is Salvation and the way too, it is he that hath professed, that there is no possible way of attaining unto him, but by treading in the same steps which he hath left us. A way which he found full of thorns, full of difficulties, but hath left it to us, even strewed with Roses in comparison.

36. The greatest and most terrible Enemies which we can fashion to our selves, are those three, which St. Paul hath mustered together, and ordered them just Roman wise, the strongest in the Rear, 1. Death, and 2. the sting of that, Sin; and 3. the the poyſon of that ſting, the Law. But over all theſe, we are more than Conquerours, for it follows, Thanks be unto God, which hath (mark, hath already) given us the victory through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. At the firſt, indeed, till the paths were worn, and made ſmooth, there were ſome difficulties; for what could the Primitive Chriſtians expect, having all the world their Enemies, but reproaches, exiles, deportations, even horrible torments and death.

37. But we (bleſſed be our gracious God) are ſo far from being annoyed with ſuch difficulties and preſſures in the way, that all thoſe are to be feared and expected by them, that dare deny the Profeſſion of our glorious Religion. What therefore, if the Lord had commanded ſome great thing of us, even as much as he did of his beloved Servants, the Apoſtles, and Primitive Chriſtians, would we not have done it? How much more, when he ſays only, Be not aſhamed of me; now, when you dare not be aſhamed of me; now, that it is almoſt death to be aſhamed of me: Deny not me before this generation, who would hate and perſecute you to the death, if you ſhould deny me. Cruciſie unto you the unclean affections, the incendiary luſts of your hearts, which the Heathens have performed for the poor empty reward of Fame: Preſer not riches nor honours before me, which is no more than many Philoſophers have done for thoſe vulgar changeable Gods which themſelves have contemned.

38. Having therefore (beloved Chriſtians) ſuch Promiſes to encourage us, ſuch as the poor Heathens never dream'd of, and yet, for all that, travelled more earneſtly after an airy phantaſtical happineſs of their own, than we (to our extreme ſhame be it ſpoken) do after the true one: Having ſuch advantages, even above the bleſſed Apoſtles and ancient Martyrs, Let us walk as becometh the Children of God, having our eyes faſtened upon the Lord our Salvation, and conforming our ſelves freely and unconſtrainedly to whatſoever it ſhall pleaſe him to preſcribe unto us: Not admitting our own carnal reaſon and worldly wiſdom into counſel about his Worſhip, nor believing any thing which he has propoſed unto us in his Word, but for the authority of him that ſpoke it, not acccepting the perſons of men, not perſuading our ſelves to the belief of horrible and unworthy Opinions of God, becauſe men, affected by us, have ſo delivered. It was a grievous complaint, that God made by the Prophet Iſaiah, Cap. 29. 13. Their fear towards me is taught by the Commandments of men. Iſa. 29. 13.

39. Again, we muſt ſubdue our Affections to be ruled and ſquared according to the good Will of God, rejoycing to ſee our moſt beloved ſins diſcovered and rebuked, and even cruciſied by the powerful Word and Spirit of God. Laſtly, We muſt be ready for Chriſt his ſake, to root out of our hearts, that extravagant immoderate Love of our own ſelves, that private affection, as Baſil calleth it; reſolving rather to undergo a ſhameful horrible death, than to maintain any inordinate baſe deſire, or to take part with our filthy luſts againſt our Saviour, who hath ſo dearly redeemed us.

40. Thus have you heard in general terms largely, and, I fear, tediouſly, delivered the ſum and effect of this Doctrine of Self-denial, (for the reſtraining of it to particular Caſes, I have reſerved to another hour:) Now I will according to my promiſe, as earneſtly as I can, inforce this neceſſary duty upon you, from the two Circumſtances before-mentioned, viz. 1. From the greater reaſonableneſs in the thing commanded; And 2. Extreme Love and Kindneſs of the Law-giver, that hath in his own perſon, given us a perfect example directing us how we ſhould fulfil his command.

41. For the firſt, namely, the reaſonableneſs of the thing commanded: To omit, how all creatures, in acknowledgment of that duty which they owe to God their Creator, do willingly ſubmit themſelves to his diſpoſition, denying their own ſpecifical private natures for the general good of the world. For example; The Elements are ſubject to alterations and deportations, to be deſtroyed and revived, to be Inſtruments of Gods favour, and again, of his wrath: Surely, Man above all the World

World beſide, (not excepting that glorious heavenly Hoſt of Angels) is by a more indiſſoluble Adamantine chain obliged and bound to his Maker; For, to which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee?

42. Again, when a great portion of thoſe glorious Spirits had mutinouſly rebelled againſt God, and Man following the example of their prevarication, had with them plung'd himſelf irrecoverably into extreme unavoidable deſtruction; In that neceſſity, God had no reſpect to thoſe heavenly Spirits, which were by nature much more admirable and perfect than we; for he did in no wiſe (ſaith the Apoſtle) take upon him the nature of Angels, but he took on him the ſeed of Abraham, and therein performed the glorious work of our Redemption.

43. Surely, after this great Love, than which (I dare not ſay, God cannot, but) I may well ſay, he will never ſhew a greater, we, his unworthy creatures, are bound to expreſs ſome greater meaſure of thankful obedience than we were for our Creation. And, yet even then, the leaſt that could be expected from us, was a full perfect reſignation of our ſelves, to the diſpoſition of that God that gave us our being. Therefore now, after a work that has coſt God all that pains and ſtudy in inventing and contriving, and ſo much ſorrow and labour in performing; Certainly, after all this, it is no great thing, if the Lord ſhould require our whole ſelves, ſouls and bodies, for a whole burnt-offering, a Sacrifice of praiſe and thankſgiving: If he ſhould require from us our whole ſubſtance, whole Rivers of Oyl, and all the Cattel feeding on a Thouſand Hills.

44. Yet now he is content, that leſs thanks ſhall ſatisfie, than was due before ever he performed that glorious work: Nay, he hath after all this taken off and ſubducted from that debt which we owed him for our Creation. For whereas then one actual offence againſt this Law, did neceſſarily draw along with it inevitable deſtruction; yet now, our gracious God perceiving that we are but duſt, accepts of our imperfect ſinful obedience; nay, ſometimes of the inward deſire and willingneſs to perform, where there is not power to put it in execution. Nothing then can be more reaſonable, than that a Chriſtian ſhould be commanded, not to prefer the fulfilling of his own will before Gods Will, nor to ſuffer that his carnal deſires, ſhould have greater power and ſway with him, than the command of ſuch a God; or, Laſtly, not to withdraw his Allegiance and Obedience due to his Redeemer, and place them upon a creature, but equal, or may be, inferiour to himſelf.

45. Secondly, Conſider the wonderful love and kindneſs of the Law-giver, that hath already taſted unto us; taſted, nay, hath drunk the dregs of this unpleaſant bitter potion. He by whom all things were made, even the Eternal Almighty Word: He which thought it no robbery to be equal with God, became his own creature, and ſubmitted himſelf to be trod upon, reviled, hated, deſpiſed by the worſt of all creatures, cruel, ungodly, and perverſe ſinners: He of whoſe fulneſs we have all received, did utterly evacuate and empty himſelf of his glory and Majeſty, denying to himſelf ſuch things, which he would not, even to the moſt deſpiſed creatures. For, ſaith he, The Foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have neſts, but the Son of Man hath not whereon to lay his head. To know (ſaith St. Paul, 2 Cor. 8. 9.) the grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that though he was rich, he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be made rich. So poor he was, that he was forced to borrow Tribute money of a Fiſh, and was fain to ſtrain himſelf to a Miracle to get the Fiſh to bring it. So poor, that he was forced to borrow a young Colt of ſtrangers, never known to him; Say (ſaith he) the Lord hath need of him. A ſtrange unheard of ſpeech! The Lord that created the world, and can as eaſily annihilate it, yet he hath need, and hath need of a Colt, the Foal of an Aſs. Time would fail me, for I ſuppoſe the World it ſelf would not contain the Books that might be written of his dangers, his temptations, his faſtings, his travels, his diſgraces, torments, and death; all performed, without any end propoſed to himſelf beſides our good and happineſs. 2 Cor. 8. 9.

46. It behoved him (ſaith St. Paul) to be made like his Brethren in all things, that he might be a merciful and faithful High-Prieſt in things pertaining to God, to make Heb. 2. 17, 18.

make reconciliation for the ſins of the People; For in that he himſelf hath ſuffered being tempted, he is able to ſuccour them which are tempted. Which of you (my Beloved friends) when he does ſeriouſly meditate on this place, will not be forced to ſit down, even raviſhed and aſtoniſhed at the exceſſive and ſuperabundant Mercy of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt: That he which was the God that created us, in whom we live, move, and have our being; and, being more intrinſecal to us than our own Natures (as the Schools do boldly expreſs) doth know our moſt hidden thoughts, long before they are, that he, notwithſtanding, ſhould deſcend to ſubmit himſelf to the ſame infirmities and temptations with us, to this end, that by bettering and adding to that knowledge which he had before of our wants and miſeries, to wit, by perfecting and increaſing his former ſpeculative knowledge by a new acquired experimental knowledge, he might be better acquainted with what we want, and thereby more inclined to Mercy and Commiſeration, and more powerful to ſuccour us being tempted.

47. See, behold (beloved Chriſtians) how for our ſakes he hath enlarged, as it were, three of his glorious incomprehenſible Attributes, 1. His Omniſcience, by knowing that perſonally and experimentally, which he did before only know contemplatively. 2. His Mercy, in that this his Knowledge, doth more incite his Goodneſs, And 3. his Omnipotent Power, for (ſaith the Text (in that he himſelf hath ſuffered, being tempted, he is (thereby) able to ſuccour them which are tempted. There ſeems likewiſe
Heb. 5. 5. to be an acceſs to his Glory by this his great Humility; For ſaith the Text in Heb. 5. 5. Chriſt glorified not himſelf to be an High Prieſt.

48. Woe unto us, my beloved friends, if ſuch mercies as theſe be neglected and ſleighted by us: Woe unto us, if a Commandment proceeding from ſuch a Law-giver have not greater force upon us, than any Obligation whatſoever.

Uſe 1. 49. And if theſe things be ſo, then (in the firſt place) How miſerably are thoſe deceived, that think they have ſufficiently obſerved this Commandment when they deny to themſelves ſome one delightful inſinuating affection, ſome one enormous crying ſin, to which they ſee others wilfully and ſcandalouſly devoted; yet in the mean time, reſerve to themſelves many a boſom, private, beloved Luſt.

50. You that know the ſtory of Ananias and Saphira, may remember with what a fearful name the Holy Spirit hath branded their ſin; it is called no leſs than Lying to the Holy Ghoſt: It comes near both in name and condition to that fearful ſin for which Chriſt did not die, and for which God could yet never find mercy enough to forgive.

51. Yet, conſider what this ſin was: they voluntarily ſold all the means they had, that the money, being equally divided, might ſupply the neceſſity of thoſe that wanted. Notwithſtanding, to make ſure work for ſome certain eſtate whereupon they might relie, they ſubducted ſome part of the money, and laid the reſt at the Apoſtles feet.

52. St. Peter told them, that their Land was in their own power; neither did any conſtraint lie upon them, to enforce them to ſell all: But ſince they had profeſſed themſelves among the number of them, which were willing to cloath, and cheriſh, and feed Chriſt, in the perſons of their new-converted Brethren: It was horrible theft, and deſperate lying againſt God, to diminiſh one peny of the ſum.

53. Now that you may know how much this concerns you: Which of you (Beloved Chriſtians) hath not ſolemnly, and publickly, ſworn and vowed to Almighty God at your Baptiſm, not to prefer the vain pomp and vanities of this world, much leſs, the abominable crimes thereof, above your Saviour, into whoſe name you were baptized?

54. Are not you then moſt ſhamefully perjured, when you are ſo far from renouncing the vanities of this World for Chriſt his ſake, that you will not be withdrawn from the crimes of it? When the baſe luſt of an Harlot, or the furious exceſs of Wine, or that untempting, undelightful, and therefore more unpardonable ſin of Swearing, and Blaſphemy, ſhall be of ſufficient force with you every every hour, not only to withdraw all manner of reſpect, and obedience from Chriſt, but even to make you crucifie him again, and to put him to open ſhame.

55. And do not pleaſe your ſelves in this conceit, that becauſe God does not exact of you now the forfeiture of your Vow and Promiſe, as he did of Ananias and his Wife, that therefore your caſe is much better than theirs: For, let me tell you, as our Saviour on ſuch an occaſion told the Jews, Think you that you are leſs ſinners than they whoſe blood Pilate mingled with the ſacrifices, or thoſe upon whom the Tower of Siloe fell? So let me ſay unto you: Think you, that becauſe God ſhewed ſo terrible an example upon Ananias and Saphira, for their lying to the Holy Ghoſt, by taking them away ſuddenly by a fearful death; and hath not yet ſhewed the like upon you, that your ſin comes much ſhort of theirs, and that you may notwithſtanding eſcape? I tell you nay, but except ye repent, ye ſhall likewiſe periſh. Alas, what a trifle was that judgment which befel them, to thoſe plagues which are reſerved for wilful obſtinate ſinners.

56. I beſeech you therefore, Brethren, even by the bowels of Jeſus Chriſt, that you would conſider what it is you do, when you allow your ſelves in the practice of any one habitual ſin; it is no leſs than a wilful wiping off the water wherewith you were Baptized; it is no leſs than an abjuring of Chriſt: nay, it is no leſs than a devoting and ſacrificing your ſelves to Devils.

57. In the ſecond place, Where will thoſe appear, that are ſo far from denying Uſe 2. all for Chriſt, that, for his ſake, they will not leave one delightful profitable ſin; they will rather deny Chriſt himſelf, than the leaſt troubleſom pleaſure, running into all exceſs of riot: nay, they will ſell Chriſt cheaper than Judas did; they will ſell him, and take no money for him. What elſe do thoſe that ſpend their time in idle vain Lying, in fruitleſs Oaths, in unneceſſary Blaſphemy? They can be content to ſee Chriſt himſelf almoſt every day naked, and do not cloath him; hungry, and do not feed him; in priſon, and do not viſit him; for inaſmuch as they perform not theſe works of Charity to his beloved little ones, they deny them to Him. Will they be found worthy of Chriſt, that for his ſake will not do ſo much as a Heathen hath done in an humour, or for the unprofitable reward of fame? That, for his ſake, will not forgive their brother ſome ſmall injury received; nay, perhaps ſome great kindneſs offered, as a ſeaſonable correction, or loving diſſuaſion from ſin; that, for his ſake, will not take the leaſt pains in furthering their own ſalvation?

58. Laſtly, What will become of me, and you, (beloved Fathers and Brethren Uſe 3. of the Clergy?) We to whom God hath entruſted the exerciſe and managing of three or four of his glorious Attributes: for to us is committed the Goſpel of Chriſt, which is the wiſdom of God hidden from the World. And to us is committed the Goſpel of Chriſt, which is the power of God to ſalvation, and which worketh mightily in them which believe, even according to the mighty working whereby he raiſed Chriſt from the dead. And to us is committed the Goſpel of Chriſt, even the Diſpenſation of the riches of his glorious Mercy, and compaſſions.

59. What then will become of us, if we, notwithſtanding theſe great ingagements, theſe ineſtimable prerogatives, ſhall turn this Wiſdom of God into fooliſhneſs, by exalting and deifying our own carnal wiſdom; if we ſhall weaken and make void this Almighty Power, by the violent oppoſition of our ſinful luſts and affections; finally, if we ſhall be too ſparing and niggardly in the Diſpenſing of theſe his Mercies; if we ſhall render his goodneſs ſuſpected to our hearers, as if thoſe frequent and plentiful offers of pity and compaſſion, were only empty hiſtrionical expreſſions, and not profeſſions of a mind, heartily and ſincerely inclined unto us.

60. I will tell you what will become of us; And I shall the better do it, by telling you first, what an excessive weight of Glory, we especially, shall lose by it: They that be wise (saith Daniel) shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars for ever and ever. Not as those vulgar ordinary stars, that have light enough only to make them visible; but like those more noble lights, which are able to cast a shadow through the whole Creation, even like the Sun in his full strength. And the preferment we are likely to gain, is very answerable to our loss, we shall be glorious shining firebrands, of the first magnitude, in whose fearful horrible destruction, God will shew what he is able to do.

The

The Fifth Sermon.

Rom. VIII. 34.

Who is he that condemneth? it is Christ that died, Yea rather that is risen again.—

IF I durst appear in this place with any ends and projects of mine own; If whilst I preach unto you Jesus Christ, I could think it worth my labour to lose a thought about the purchasing of a vain, fruitless reputation, and opinion amongst my hearers; surely, I should by no means omit so commodious and tempting an opportunity, as this argument of Christ's Resurrection may suggest unto me. It being a business, in the effecting whereof, above all the works which God ever made since he began to work, he most especially glorified almost all his divine Attributes: It being a deliverance, even of God himself, from destruction and rottenness.

2. It is an Argument so pleasing to St. Paul, that in many places, he seems to magnifie it even to the undervaluing, and disparagement of whatsoever Christ before either did or suffered. In a Sermon of his (Acts 13.) preached at Antioch, he makes Acts 13; it the complement and fulfilling of whatsoever God before had promised to the Fathers, and of all the Prophesies which, since the beginning of the world, had been delivered by God's Messengers. To make which Good, the Apostle himself in that place (whereas he needed not to strain so far; there were then extant Prophesies enough purposely and precisely declaring the glory and power of Christ's Resurrection) he notwithstanding, as it would seem, mistakes that famous Prophesie of Christ's Birth in those words of the second Psalm: Thou art my Son, this day have Psal. 2. I begotten thee; and seemingly misapplies them to his Resurrection, Why, was he then indeed the Carpenter's Son? Was it a confession, and not humility, that he called himself the Son of Man? Were the torments of his Passion and Death (as himself seems to intimate, John 16. 21.) only the pangs and throws of his new birth?

3. By no means: He was even in the extremest degree, and lowest point of his humiliation: yea, when himself in that last terrible Agony, did seem to call it in question; yet then also he was indeed the only begotten eternal Son of God: or, if he had not, most miserable and desperate had been our case. But by his Resurrection, he did declare, unquestionably and without all contradiction, unto the world, his Glory and Majesty: or, to speak in St. Paul's words, Rom. 1. He was mightily declared to be the Son of God, by his Resurrection from the dead.

4. But we now celebrate a Feast, a season of Joy and exultation, which we use not to do upon the memory of Gods most wonderful acts and exploits, though never so much expressing the glory of his Majesty and Power; unless they have been beneficial unto us, unless they have very nearly concerned our safety and happiness.

5. And surely this great deliverance of Christ from the dominion and power of Hell and the Grave; when God called his Son the third time out of Egypt:

this victory of his, did in a high degree import us, and advance our welfare; it had some more than ordinary influence upon our salvation; otherwise, this season dedicated to the memory thereof, would not have been so acceptable to the Primitive Christians, to make them (as it were in revenge and faction against the late melancholly time of Fasting and Repentance) for its sake, to set up an Anti-Lent, and to appoint other forty days of Feasting and Triumph, which was more (as Tertullian boasteth) than all the solemn Holy-days of the Heathen joyned together. Yea, so scrupulous were they in the celebration of this Feast, (quite opposite to the solemn peevishness of some Christians of our times) that for the whole space between Easter and Pentecost, as it is thought, they quite intermitted the works and exercise of their vocations: they would not suffer one Fasting-day to appear; they left off their severity and discipline, their Vigilia, and Stationes; Nay, they would not, all that time, so much as De geniculis adorare (in the witty barbarous expression of the same Father, in his Book De Corona Militis) they would not shew so much faint-heartedness and dejection, as to kneel at Prayers.

6. Therefore, instead of saying fine things of the fashion and contrivance of this business of Christ's Resurrection; instead of raising matter of wonder and astonishment out of the glory and power of it; I will endeavour (being to conclude the solemn celebration of this Feast) by way of Use and Application, to discover the issue and fruit thereof in respect of us; not only the convenience, but the extreme necessity, and the strict coherence, which our Salvation has, not only upon the Satisfaction and Death, but upon the Resurrection and Life of our Blessed Saviour.

7. Now we find many things ascribed to Christ's Life and Death in holy Scripture, only as to Patterns and exemplary causes, being duties which the consideration of Christ's Death and Resurrection, ought proportionably to exact from us: As, If Christ be dead, then count your selves also dead unto Sin; If risen again, then count your selves alive unto Righteousness. For how it should come to pass, that so much of our holiness as makes up mortification, and no more, should be ascribed to Christ's Death, as a proper effect and fruit thereof; And the rest, which is newness of life and obedience, should be imputed to his Resurrection, I shall never be able to comprehend.

8. The benefits therefore which accrue unto us by Christ, I suppose may be divided either into those which flow from the merit of his Death, or from the power and influence of his Life. In the former, are comprehended all whatsoever Christ hath done for us: In the later, whatsoever he doth or will work in us. And both being extremely necessary, it shall be this hours employment, to shew with what good reason we celebrate a Feast at this time, that we should not terminate our contemplation only on the great love and bowels of compassions on Good-Friday expressed unto us; but also, and with better reason, on the Joy and Comfort, which with great reason we may collect from this business of Easter; even that lively hope whereunto we are regenerated by the Resurrection of Christ: And to joyn with St. Paul in his wonder and amazement, at the consideration of the infinite mercy and power of God; and thereupon his boasting and challenging, securely, all manner of adversaries: Who is he that shall lay any thing to the charge of Gods Elect? It is God that justifieth: Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again.

9. In which words are comprehended the great dependence and combination, which our non-condemnation or salvation has; not only with the death and satisfaction of Christ, but also rather, even with advantage on his Resurrection. Now, because they are so few, they cannot conveniently be divided, I will out of them raise this Doctr. Doctrinal Proposition, namely, That Christ's Resurrection and Exaltation, is fully as necessary and effectual to procure and perfect our Salvation, if not more, than even the all-sufficient Sacrifice upon the Cross.

10. Which, that I may more fully and distinctly confirm unto you, I will divide into into two Propositions, which if sufficiently maintained, doth necessarily infer the Doctrine. The first whereof is this: That the purpose of Christ, who satisfied for our sins, and the Covenant which he made with God, who accepted of this satisfaction, was not, that remission of sins should immediately enlue upon his death, but only upon performance of the Conditions of the new Covenant made in Christ's Blood, which are, unfeigned Repentance for Sin, and a serious Conversion unto God by Faith. The second, That by the Dominion and Power of Christ, which at his Resurrection, and not before, he received, as a reward of his great humility; we are not only enabled to the performance of the conditions of this new Covenant, and, by consequence, made capable of an actual application of his satisfaction; but also, by the same power, we shall hereafter be raised up, and exalted to everlasting Happiness. Of these two Propositions therefore in the order proposed, very briefly, and even too too plainly. And first of the first, namely, That the purpose of Christ, who, &c. Prop. 1. Prop. 2.

11. I confess, it would be no hard matter for a Disputant, meeting with an adversary that would be content to be swayed and governed by Reason alone; to molest, and even fright him from the truth of this Doctrine. For, if we shall consider not only the excessive unspeakable Torments which Christ suffered for us, but especially the infinite Majesty and Glory of the Person, who willingly submitted himself to that Curse: what less reward can be expected, than the present deliverance and salvation, not only of a few selected men, but even of many worlds of Men and Angels.

12. But it is not for us, Beloved Christians, to set our price and value upon Christ's precious Bloud, to say, Thus much it is worth, and no more. As there have not wanted men on the other side, who have dared to affirm, That Christ's Bloud, according to exact estimation, did amount to a certain value, by the worth and cost whereof, such a set number as shall be saved, were redeemed and purchased. And if one besides should be delivered, it were more than the price of the Bloud came to. What a fearful dangerous curiosity is this? Is it not a piece of Judas his sin, to set our own estimation and value, to make a bargain, and sale of Christ's Death; to set up a kind of shambles to sell his Flesh and Bloud in?

13. But leaving these vain phantastical Calculations to their chief Professors, the Schoolmen, who are so unreasonably addicted to this dreaming Learning, that nothing can escape their Compass and Ballance. For, to omit their curious descriptions and Maps of the dimensions and situation of Heaven and Hell; the Figure, Borders, Islands of both; They have undertaken to discover the exact proportionable increase of the graces of the Saints, especially of the blessed Virgin; whose good actions they have found to increase just in Octupla ratione: so that, for example, her twentieth good action, did exceed the first in virtue and intention of Grace, as much as the whole earth doth exceed a grain of mustard-seed.

14. Is not this (beloved Friends) a learning and wisdom to be pitied? Is not this that disease which St. Paul discovers (1 Tim. 6.) the effect whereof is to make men sick about vain questions, and oppositions of Science, falsly so called? Therefore leaving these vain Speculations, as likewise others about the business in hand, no less curious, and much more dangerous, yet securely stated in these days, almost in every Pamphlet and Synopsis. As namely, Whether God could have contrived any course for mans salvation, beside that which he prosecuted? Whether, without accepting any satisfaction to his Justice, he could freely and absolutely have remitted our sins?

15. For what use or profit can be made of these Questions, though with never so great subtilty and curiosity stated? Besides, we find that God had protested unto Adam; that his death, together with the destruction of all mankind, should be the reward of the breach of his Covenant. By which means Gods Justice being interested in the business, the very grounds and foundation of this later question are destroyed, the doubt and scrue whereof must needs have been blasphemous: namely, Whether God could have been unjust? Nay more, it makes the sending of Christ into the World, together with his obedience to the death, even that accursed death of the Cross, to be a matter of no necessary importance; to be only a great Complement, whereby

God

God shews unto mankind, that, though he could easily have remitted their sins without any satisfaction (for whatsoever is possible to God is easie) notwithstanding, that they should see, He would strain himself even farther for them, was very requisite; and withal, to shew his abomination of sin, he was content, that all this ado, all these pompous Tragical businesses should be performed.

16. But what saith the Scripture? If there had been a Law which could have given life, Christ should have died without cause. And thereupon our Apostle (in Rom. 3. 25.) saith, that God hath set forth his Son to be a propitiation through faith in his Blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins, that are past through the forbearance of God. To declare, I say, at this time his righteousness, that he might be Just.— That is, left by the forbearance of God, who since the foundation of the world had shewed no sufficient example of his hatred and indignation unto sin; as also to shew there was a reason sufficient to move him to remit the sins of many his chosen Servants before Christ: He hath now at last evidently expressed unto the world his righteousness; to wit, his ἐνδειξιν, and ἀπαποδοσιν by condemning sin, and revenging himself upon it, in the person of his beloved innocent Son.

Rom. 3. 25.

17. And left all this stir should seem to have been kept only to give us satisfaction, and to create in us a great opinion and conceit of his righteousness; The Apostle clearly saith, He did all this to declare at this time his righteousness, that he might be Just. Which otherwise it seems he could not have been. But I am resolved to quit my self abruptly, and even sullenly, of those questions, and betake my self more closely to the matter in hand.

18. What therefore is the effect and fruit which accrews even to the Elect of God, by virtue of Christs satisfaction, humiliation, and death, precisely considered, and excluding the power and virtue of his Resurrection, and glorious life? Why, Reconciliation to God, Justification or Remission of sins, and finally, Salvation both of body and soul. But is there any remission of sins without Faith? Shall we not only exclude Works from Justification, but Faith also? God forbid. For so we should not only contradict the grounds of Gods holy Word, but also raise and destroy the very foundations of the second Covenant.

19. For answer: We must consider our Reconciliation under a twofold state (according to the Distinction of the Reverend and Learned Dr. Davenant Bishop of Salisbury.) 1. Either as it is Applicabilis, not yet actually conferred; Or, 2. as Applicata, particularly sealed and confirmed to us by a lively Faith. For the understanding of which, we must know, that in Christ's death, there was not only an abolishing of the old Covenant of Works; the Hand-writing which was against us, which Christ nailed unto his Cross (as St. Paul saith, Col. 1.) delivering us from the Curse and Obligation thereof: But also, there was a new gracious Covenant, or (which is a word expressing greater comfort to us) a new Will or Testament made, wherein Christ hath bequeathed unto us many glorious Legacies, which we shall undoubtedly receive, when we shall have performed the Conditions, when we shall be found qualified so as he requires of us.

20. Till which Conditions be performed by the power of Gods Spirit assisting us; all that we obtain by the death of Christ is this: That, first, whereas God, by
1. reason of sin, was implacably angry with us, would by no means accept of any reconciliation with us, would hearken to no conditions: Now by virtue of Christ's death and satisfaction, he is graciously pleased to admit of Composition; the former aversation, and inexorableness is taken away; or, to speak more significantly in
2. St. Paul's language, (Ephes. 2. 16.) Enmity is slain. Secondly, that whereas before we were liable to be tried before the Throne of his exact severe rigorous Justice, and bound to the performance of Conditions, by reason of our own contracted weakness become intolerable, nay, impossible unto us: we are released of that Obligation, and though not utterly freed from all manner of conditions, yet tied to such as are not only possible, but, by the help of his Spirit which inwardly disposeth and cooperateth with us, with ease and pleasure to be performed. Besides which, we have a Throne

Throne of Equity and grace to appear before. Mercy is exalted above, even against Justice; it rejoyceth against Judgment; it is become the higher Court, and hath the priviledges of a Superiour Court, that Appeals may be made from the Inferiour Court of Justice, to that of Mercy and Favour. Nay more, whereas before we were justly delivered into the power of Satan, now being reconciled to God by the Bloud of Christ, we are (as it is in Col. 1. 13.) delivered from the power of darkness, and translated into the Kingdom of his dear Son. 3.

21. All this, and more (if it were the business of this time to be punctual in discovering all) hath Christ wrought for us, being aliens and strangers, yea, enemies afar off, without God in the world. Yet for all this, that Christ hath merited thus much for us, and more; notwithstanding, take away the power of Christ's Resurrection, and Life; take away the influence of his Holy Spirit, whereby we are regenerated and made new Creatures; and we are yet in the Gall of bitterness, and Bond of iniquity. For though (as it is, Heb. 10. 19.) we have παῤῥησίαν, i. e. liberty, and free leave to enter into the Holiest by the Bloud of Jesus, though there be a way made open: yet walk we cannot, we are not able to set forwards into it, as long as we are bound and fettered with our sins: though there be an access to the Throne of Grace, yet it is only for them which are sanctified.

22. And therefore what dangerous consequences do attend that Doctrine which teacheth, That immediately upon the death of Christ, all our sins are actually forgiven us, and we effectually reconciled. But because another employment is required by this time, I will, out of many, make use of two Reasons only to destroy that Doctrine; whereof the one is taken from the nature of the second Covenant: the other, from the necessity of Christ's Resurrection.

23. For the first: If we, that is, the Elect of God (for I am resolved to have to do with none else at this time) be effectually reconciled to God, by virtue of Christ's death, having obtained a full perfect remission of all our sins, why are we frighted; or to say truly, injured with new Covenants? Why are we, seeing our Debts are paid to the utmost farthing, the Creditor's demands exactly satisfied, the Obligation cancelled; why then are we made believe that we are not quite out of danger; nay, that unless we our selves out of our own stock pay some charges and duties extraordinarily, and by the Bye inforced upon us. All the former payments, how valuable soever, shall become fruitless, and we to remain accomptable for the whole debt?

24. But it may be (and that seems most likely) there is no such thing indeed as a new Covenant: Promises and Threatnings are only a pretty kind of Rhetorical device, which God is pleased to use, sometimes to allure us, and win our hearts to do that which shall please him; other times to startle, and affright us, when we are about something contrary to his command. And to say the truth, This must of necessity be the issue of the former Doctrine: For how is it possible to make these things hold together; We are already perfectly reconciled to God by the death of his Son, without any consideration had to our personal Faith and Repentance; And yet, unless we do earnestly repent us of our sins, and with a lively Faith adhere to God's promises, we shall never be reconciled unto God! Or these, All our sins are already remitted, and that only for the virtue of Christ's satisfaction: And yet unless we believe, our sins shall never be forgiven us!

25. So that by this reckoning, we must be forced to purge the Gospel of those troublesom dangerous terms of Covenants, and Conditions, of those fruitless affrighting Conjunctions, Si Credideris, Si non pœnitentiam egeris. Or (which is all one) soften them into a sense utterly repugnant and warring against the naturall force and signification of the words; on this wise; where the Scripture saith, If thou repentest not, thy sins shall not be forgiven thee; Thou art not to conceive, that forgiveness of thy sins is a work yet to be done, or that it has any dependance upon any thing in thee: But this great blessing shall be hid from thine eyes, thou shalt never come to the knowledge of it, and thereby shalt live here a discontented, pensive, suspicious life: Again, If thou believest, believeſt, thou ſhalt be ſaved, that is, Thou ſhalt obtain a comfortable aſſurance of Hope, may, an infallible faith of thy future Salvation: though that was intended thee, without any conſideration of thy faith.

26. So that the Goſpel of Chriſt, is not the power of God unto Salvation: for, How can the Word be an Inſtrument of that, which was long ago abſolutely performed and purchaſed? And therefore Chriſt his preaching, his miracles, and tears, the Apoſtles Travels and Perſecutions, the ſending of the Holy Spirit, Baptiſm, Euchariſt, Impoſition of hands, Abſolution, and many more bleſſed means of our Salvation, were not inſtituted for this end, to make us capable of remiſſion of our Sins (for that (it ſeems) was already not only meritoriouſly, but effectually procured, and without all manner of Conditions infallibly deſtin'd to God's Elect;) but only for this end, That whilſt they live here, to their thinking, in danger and hazard, (but they are fools for thinking ſo) they may now and then be a little cheared and comforted with apprehending what Chriſt hath done for them, and to what a comfortable ſtate and Inheritance he hath deſtin'd them. Thus the Covenant which God hath ſworn ſhall be everlaſting, is by the improvidence and ignorance of ſome men rendred unprofitable, yea, utterly abrogated: But (Ne quid inclementius dicam) we have not ſo learned Chriſt.

27. The ſecond Reaſon deſtroying the former Doctrine, I told you ſhould be taken from the neceſſity of Chriſt's Reſurrection. For if the immediate effect of Chriſt's Death, be the purchaſing of a perfect Reconciliation with God, and full remiſſion of Sins for us the Elect of God; Then (I will not ſay, what Benefit, but) what neceſſity is there of Chriſt's Reſurrection in reſpect of us? For, by this accompt, after the Conſummatum eſt, upon the Croſs, when the ſatisfaction was perfected, and our debts paid: Though Chriſt had afterwards miſcarried, though he had been detained by death, though his Soul had been left in Hell, and he had ſeen corruption; Notwithſtanding we ſhould ſtand upon good terms with God, unleſs we ſhall conceive of Him worſe than of the moſt oppreſſing Uſurer, that when a debt is diſcharged, and the Bond cancelled, will notwithſtanding not releaſe the Priſoner, unleſs the undertaker come in Perſon, or by main force deliver him.

28. I confeſs, that to ſee a friend that had ventured ſo far for us, as our Saviour did, that to do us good had put himſelf in ſuch extreme danger. I ſay, to ſee ſuch a one to be utterly caſt away, without all hopes and poſſibility of being able to pay him our thanks, would be a ſpectacle, which would grieve and pierce our very ſouls, it would be a renting to our bowels. But this is only Charity and Gratitude, or good nature in us, which would procure this grief; not that it ſtands upon our ſafety, his preſervation being a matter only of convenience, not extreme neceſſity to us.

29. We all do worthily condemn and deteſt, that blaſphemous Hereſie of the Socinians, who exclude the meritorious death and ſufferings of Chriſt, from having any neceſſary influence into our Juſtification, or Salvation, making it of no greater virtue than the ſufferings of the bleſſed Martyrs, who by their death, ſet their Seal and Teſtimony to the Truth of the Goſpel, which freely offers forgiveneſs of ſins to all penitent believers. Now the ſame injury which theſe Hereticks do to the merit of Chriſt's Death, in proportion the former Doctrine faſtens upon his Reſurrection, and new life, by taking from it the chief and proper effect thereof, which is an actual vindication of us from the power of ſin, into the glorious liberty of the Sons of God, by the power of Chriſt's Spirit plentifully by him diffuſed and ſhed abroad in our hearts, and making the chief virtue thereof to conſiſt in affording us only matter of comfort and hope, that God will deal no otherwiſe with us, than he hath dealt with Chriſt, and after a life full of diſturbance and miſery, revive us to glory and immortality with his Son for evermore: whereas St. Paul hath another kind of conceit of Chriſt's Reſurrection: for, ſaith he, in Heb. 5. 9. Chriſt being made perfect, (i. e. glorified, Chap. 2. 10.) becomes Author of eternal Salvation to all that obey him; And if Chriſt be not riſen, your faith is vain, you are yet in your ſins; and if Chriſt be not riſen, neither ſhall we ever be raiſed, but be utterly irrecoverably condemned to everlaſting rottenneſs.

30. And

30. And thus I am unawares fallen upon my ſecond Propoſition, namely, That by the Dominion and Power of Chriſt, which at his Reſurrection, and not before, he received as a reward of his great Humility, we are not only enabled to the performance of the Conditions of this New Covenant, and, by conſequence, made capable of an actual application of his Satisfaction; But alſo by the ſame power, we ſhall hereafter be raiſed up, and exalted unto everlaſting happineſs. Prop. 2.

31. Though by the virtue of the Incarnation of our Saviour, the Humane Nature was raiſed to a ſtate and condition of unſpeakable glory: Notwithſtanding, if in this place, as well as before, we ſhall be content to ſubmit our Reaſon to Scripture, we ſhall find, that according to a Covenant made between Chriſt and his Father, he was content not to challenge to himſelf any right of Dominion and Rule over us, till he had perfectly deſerv'd and earn'd it by a former voluntary ſubmiſſion and humiliation of himſelf.

32. The Conditions on Chriſt's part we find moſt exactly performed by him, wholly reſigning and proſtrating his own Will to the Will and diſpoſition of his Father. At his private Paſſion, which immediately went before his Attachment, when he was ſacrificed, and even crucified, alone in the Garden, without the aſſiſtance and malice of a trayterous Diſciple, of the Chief Prieſts or Romans: Though he retain'd that innocent fear of death and ſhame which is natural to Man, which forced him to cry out, Father, if it be poſſible, let this Cup paſs from me? Notwithſtanding, though he could not hate his own life, yet, to ſhew he preferred the fulfilling of his Fathers Will before it, he adds, Nevertheleſs, not my will, but thy will be done: By which words he reſigns the whole power and Faculty of his Will into his Fathers hands. In the words of another Evangeliſt, he ſaith, Not what I will, but what thou wilt: Where he reſigns and ſubmits the Acts and Exerciſe of his Will. And laſtly, to make all compleat in the expreſſion of a third Evangeliſt, he ſaith, Not as I will, but as thou wilt: Where he ſubjects not only the faculty and the exerciſe of his Will to the performance of what God ſhall command him, but is willing and deſirous to do it after what manner and faſhion ſoever God ſhall be pleaſed. It is not poſſible for the underſtanding of man to add or conceive a degree beyond this. Luke 22. 42. Mark 14. 35. Mat. 26. 39.

33. In the next place we ſhall ſee, How God the Father is as good as his word to his Son: But, firſt, give me leave to complain to you of that Tyranny, which cuſtom, partiality, or ſomething worſe, has laid upon our Underſtandings: And that is this, That whereſoever any former Proteſtant Writer hath ſuſpected a Doctrine as not beneficial, but rather dangerous, to ſome concluſion, which he is reſolved to maintain againſt the Papiſts, we their Scholars are obliged to make good their jealouſies and (may be) groundleſs ſuſpicions.

34. To omit many examples, I will produce only theſe few: It lies upon us to maintain, that St. John's Baptiſm, was one and the ſame Sacrament with that of Chriſt's, contrary to expreſs words of Scripture, and ſomething elſe: That Chriſt is a Mediator ſecundum Divinam Naturam: which borders, I fear, upon an old dangerous Hereſie. As likewiſe, (which eſpecially concerns this place) That Chriſt merited nothing to himſelf by his Paſſion, neither was the Exaltation of his Humane Nature to the Dominion and Rule over all Creatures a reward of his Humility, but a preferment due to his Perſon, though by ſpecial diſpenſation the exerciſe thereof was deferred for a time, but ſhould have been conferred upon him as fully as he now enjoys it, though he had never ſuffered.

35. But Scripture teacheth us, That Chriſt was to be made perfect by ſufferings: That, Becauſe he had drunk of the Brook by the way, Therefore he ſhould lift up his head: That, for the joy which was ſet before him, (that is, having an eye to the glorious reward and fruit of his ſuffering) he endured the Croſs, and deſpiſed the ſhame, and therefore is ſet up at the right hand of Glory. Becauſe being found in faſhion as a Man, he humbled himſelf, and became obedient to the death, even the death of the Phil. 2. 8. 9.

Cross, Διὸ, Therefore, for this reason, God hath highly exalted him, and given him a Name, which is above every Name, &c. Nay, St. Paul makes the obtaining a Rule and Dominion over mankind, a main end of his death, (for in Rom. 14. 9. he saith) Εἰς τοῦτο, For this end, Christ both died and rose again, that he might be Lord both of the Dead and of the Living. By his death, meriting this Dominion; by his Resurrection, receiving it. But I will forbear controversie, because I desire to seek out no adversary, especially in my preaching, but only the Devil and Sin.

Rom. 14. 9.

36. This therefore I think we shall agree upon, That it was the purpose and immutable decree of God, that after the fall and misery of man, whatsoever good should befal us toward our restitution and repairing to our lost happiness, should be convey'd unto us by our own nature, That the Seed of the Woman should break the Serpent's head; That is, not only in St. John's phrase, destroy the works of the Devil, but also in St. Paul's, destroy his kingdom and power, which is Death. So that, As by Man came Sin and Error, so by Man also should come Grace and Truth. As by Man came Death, so by Man also should come the Resurrection from the Dead; By man also, life and immortality should be brought to light.

37. Now that these great projects and intendments might be brought about, and that the Humane nature might be furnish'd with ability to discharge this Province, and to go through with this great undertaking: God the Father, for the merit of Christ's great humility, by his Resurrection, hath highly exalted him far above all Principality and Power, and Might, and Dominion, and every name that is named not only in this world, but also in that which is to come: And hath given him a Name above all Names, that at the Name of Jesus every knee shall bow of things in heaven, and things in the earth, and things under the earth, and that every tongue should confess, that Jesus is the Lord to the glory of God the Father.

38. And thus much Christ himself confesseth and acknowledgeth presently upon his Resurrection, for then he saith, All power is given unto me in Heaven and Earth. It was then only he received the Dominion, whereof his Father David's Kingdom was but a Type and shadow: And as his Father David was anointed and deputed by God to the Kingdom, but received not actual possession of it till after many persecutions and afflictions at the hands of his Master Saul: In like manner, though our Saviour even in the days of his humility, teacheth us, that the Father judgeth no man, but resigneth all judgment to the Son: Notwithstanding these words are to be understood only by way of Anticipation, or Prophesie of what should befall him, after he should have performed the work of our Redemption: For while he lived here among men, he professed he was so far from being a King, that he had no sufficient authority given him to be a petty Judge in a case of Inheritance: And that wicked Pilate himself had power given him from Heaven to become his Judge: so that, though in the days of his flesh, he was Heir of all things, yet he was only a conditional Heir, and therefore till the conditions were performed, and himself seized of the Inheritance, even the Heir himself differed nothing from a Servant.

39. But within three days after his Passion, the case was much altered: For, whereas before he was allowed no Authority, no, not in Israel; At his Resurrection, he obtains the Heathen for his Inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the Earth for his Possession. Now it would be a hard undertaking to describe the limits and borders of Christ's Kingdom; as also to define the Polity, whereby it is administred. Therefore, leaving the most glorious part of it, which is in heaven, undiscovered; we find in holy Scripture, that according to the several dispositions and qualifications of men here on earth, he hath both a Scepter of righteousness to govern and protect his faithful subjects and servants; and a rod of Iron, to break the wicked in pieces like a Potters Vessel. And though the greatest part of the world will acknowledge no subjection to Christ's Kingdom; notwithstanding this does not take away his authority over them, no more than the murmuring, and rebellion of the Israelites did depose Moses their Governour. But there will come a time when that Prophetical Parable of his, shall be resolved, and interpreted to their confusion when he he shall indeed say, Where are those my enemies, which would not have me to reign over them? Bring them hither, and slay them before me.

40. But the most eminent and notorious exercise of Christ's Dominion, is seen in the rule over his Church, which he purchased with his own Bloud: Now the first business he took in hand, presently upon his Resurrection, when all power and dominion was given him, was, to give commission and Authority to his Embassadours the Apostles, and Disciples, to make known to the world, that so great salvation which he had wrought at his Passion. Now though the Apostles were sufficiently authorized, by virtue of that Commission which Christ gave them in those words: As my Father sent me, so send I you —— Notwithstanding they were not to put this authority presently in practice, but to wait for the sending of the Holy Ghost, which Christ before had promised them: That by his virtue and influence they might be furnished with abilities to go through with that great employment of reconciling the world unto God, by subduing mens understandings to the truth and obedience of the Gospel.

41. We read in the Gospel of St. John, that, during the life which Christ lived in the flesh, the Holy Ghost was not sent: and the reason is added, Because the Son of man was not yet glorified. The strength and vigour of which reason, doth excellently illustrate the point in hand. For, the sending of the Holy Ghost, was one of the most glorious acts of Christ's Kingly Office, and the most powerful means of advancing his Kingdom. Therefore in the days of his humiliation, whilst he lived in the form of a Servant, before he had purchased to himself a Church by his own Bloud, his Humane Nature obtained no right of dominion and power over mankind. For till we were redeemed from the power and subjection of the Devil, and sin, by the merit of Christ's Death, we were none of Christ's subjects, but servants and slaves, sold under sin and Satan.

42. So that it being necessary, that the Son of man should not only pay a price and ransom for our Redemption by his Death, but also, that the same Son of man, and none else, should actually and powerfully vindicate his Elect from the bondage they were in, and effectually apply his merits and satisfaction to their souls and consciences; till he was in St. Paul's words, Διὰ τὸ πάθημα τοῦ θανάτου δόξῃ & τιμῇ ἐστεφανωμένον, For the suffering of death, crown'd with glory and honour; He, according to his Humane Nature (and that was the only instrument whereby our Salvation was to be wrought) had no power of sending the Holy Ghost.

43. And indeed till Reconciliation was made by his Death, to what purpose should the Holy Ghost be sent? What business or employment could we find for him on earth? You will say, to work grace and new obedience in us. I confess, that is a work worthy the Majesty and goodness of Gods holy Spirit. But yet, suppose all this had been wrought in us; put case, our hearts were sprinkled from an evil conscience, and that we were renewed in the spirits of our minds. Perhaps, all this might procure us a more tolerable cool place and climate in Hell: But without Christ, it would be far from advantaging us toward our salvation: for alas, though we should turn never so holy, never so vertuous and reformed: what satisfaction or recompence could we make for our former sins and iniquities? God knows, it must cost more to redeem a soul, therefore we must let that alone for ever; we must take heed of ever medling in that office, we must let it alone to him (even Jesus Christ) who alone is able to be at that cost.

44. But I might have spared all these suppositions: For, as, excluding Christ, there is no satisfaction, no hope of redemption for us: so excluding Christ's satisfaction, he hath no power or authority, as man, of sending the Holy Ghost, thereby to work in us an ability of performing the conditions of the second Covenant; and, by consequence, of making us capable of the fruit and benefit of his satisfaction. Therefore, blessed be God the Father, for the great glory whith he gave unto Christ; And blessed be our Lord Jesus Christ, for meriting and purchasing that Glory at so dear a rate: And blessed be the Holy Spirit, who, when Christ (who is flesh of our flesh, and bone of our bone) did send him, would be content to come down and dwell among us.

45. We find in holy Scripture, that our Salvation is ascribed to all the three Persons of the blessed Trinity, though in several respects: To the Father, who accepts of Christ's Satisfaction, and offereth pardon of all our sins: To the Son, who merited and procured Reconciliation for his elect faithful Servants; And to the Holy Ghost the Comforter, who, being sent by the Son, worketh in us power to perform the conditions of the new Covenant, thereby qualifying us for receiving actual remission of our sins, and a right to that glorious Inheritance purchased for us.

46. And from hence may appear, how full of danger the former Doctrine is, which teacheth, that actual remission of sins is procured to Gods Elect immediately by Christ's Death; and how dishonourable it is to the Spirit of Grace, excluding him from having any concurrence or efficacy in our Salvation. For, if this should be true, the powerful working of the Holy Spirit, can in no sense, concern either our Justification, or everlasting happiness. For, how can it be said, that the Holy Spirit doth co-operate to our Salvation, since all our good and happiness was procured by Christ's death; not only before, but without all manner of respect had to our Regeneration and Sanctification, by the power of the blessed Spirit. Therefore by this Doctrine, if we be any thing at all beholden to the Holy Spirit, it is only for this, that he is pleased now and then, by fits, to be a Messenger, or Intelligencer, to discover unto us, what Christ alone hath purchased for us.

47. But I forbear to enlarge my self further in this point; and indeed I have already done too much wrong to the honour and dignity of this Feast, not only in mixing the business of Good Friday with it, as I did in my former part; but also (as I now have done) in taking in the matter and imployment of Whitsontide too. Suffice it therefore, that the sending of the Holy Ghost, was an especial exercise of that power, which was given Christ at his Resurrection; by the influence and virtue whereof, we do restrain and appropriate the merit of his Death to our own good and benefit.

48. Now I would not be mistaken, as if I said, that the Resurrection of Christ precisely taken for that individual action, whereby he was restored to life and glory, was then effectual and powerful to produce those admirable effects: For, that being a Transient action, past and finished many hundred years since, can very improperly be termed capable of having such effects ascribed to it as have since, and shall to the end of the world be wrought in Gods Elect. Therefore St. Paul shall be mine interpreter, in Rom. 5. 10. saying, If when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life; that is, By that glorious Life which began at his Resurrection. Rom. 5. 10.

49. For, as in the matter of Satisfaction, we ascribe our reconciliation to his Death especially, yet not excluding his former Obedience and Humiliation; but naming that, as being the complement and perfection, terminating whatsoever went before: So likewise, in Christs Exaltation, though there were divers degrees, and ascents, and stages of it; yet we especially take notice of his Resurrection, because in that Christ took his rise as it were, and was then a Bridegroom coming out of his Chamber, rejoycing as a Giant to run his race. His goings out indeed were from the Grave, but his Circuit is to the ends of Heaven, and nothing is hid from his heat and virtue. He illuminates every man that cometh into the world: He was made, (saith St. Paul,) a quickning Spirit, cherishing, actuating, and informing us with life and motion. By the influence and power of his life, he undergoes, as it were, a second Incarnation, living and dwelling in our hearts by his Grace, and reigning powerfully in our souls by Faith. Psal. 19.

50. And hereby he even shares his Kingdom, his Power, and his Victory with us; For, saith St. John, This is the victory whereby ye overcome the world, even your Faith. Christ is not content only to destroy in us, the works of darkness; to dispel the clouds of ignorance and error, or to rectifie the crookedness and perverseness of our wills: neither yet to implant in us a heavy, unactive, sleepy, harmlessness, a dull dull lethargick innocence; but withal, indues us, Justitiâ germinante, with a fruitful budding righteousness, and works in us, in the expression of St. Paul, both ὑπομονὴν τῆς ἐλπίδος, a patient unwearied hope, not hasty nor discontented with expecting; and κόπον τῆς ἀγάπης, a painful, laborious love, and ἔργον τῆς πίστεως, a working, sprightful, victorious Faith, whereby we violently lay hold on the Promises. And in this sense, the same Apostle saith, that as Christ died for our sins, so he rose again for our justification: that is, one chief end of Christ's Resurrection, in respect of us, was to work in us a lively faith, whereby we might be justified, and acquitted from our sins. 1 Thes. 1. 3. Rom. 4. 24.

51. And yet the power of Christ's Life, leaves us not here neither: Nay, all this is performed only to make us capable of greater blessings yet. For, by our sanctification and new-birth, we are (saith Tertullian,) Restitutioni inaugurati, destin'd and consecrated to a glorious Resurrection. Hereupon St. John calls holiness, the first Resurrection whereby sin is destroyed: And it is a pawn of the second, whereby Death also shall be swallowed up in victory. By the first, the sting of the Serpent is taken away, which is sin, (as St. Paul saith, The sting of death is sin.) And when the sting is gone, the Serpent cannot long out-live it; for by the second Resurrection, that also is destroyed. Tertul. de Res. carnis.

52. But you will say, How is Death destroyed? Do not all men die? Do not all men see corruption? You may as well ask, How is sin destroyed? For, have not all men sinned, and come short of the glory of God? Nay, do not all men sin, how righteous soever? And, if they were rewarded according to their own demerits, would they not all come short of the glory of God: Most certainly true: Therefore to say the truth, as yet, neither Sin nor Death are destroyed, but only the Dominion of Sin, and the Victory of the Grave. And thereupon the Apostle contemplating the conquering power of Christ at his Resurrection, saith not, Oh Death, or, Oh Grave, where are you? For a little travel would serve the turn to assoil that question: But, Oh Death, where is thy sting? How comes it to pass, that thy poyson is not so keen and mortal, as it hath been; that it is so easily, though not expelled, yet tempered and corrected by the healing Bezoartical virtue of Grace. And thou, Oh Grave, where is thy victory? Though thou hast given thine adversary the foil, though thou hast gotten him under thee, yet thou shalt never be able to detain him long: For, Behold, a little while, and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry: He will ransack the most private reserved corners of thy Treasury; and though thou mayst consume and devour our bodies, yet he will force thee to vomit and disgorge them again; he will not leave one portion, one morsel of them in thy stomach and entrails. 1 Cor. 15. 55.

53. I know, the ingenuous and learned Paræus, because he would not suffer any portion of the merit of Christ's Death to be extended and meant to the ungodly; or, that He, by the fruit of his Passion, should obtain any power over them, will therefore, consequently, exclude them from the efficacy and power of his Resurrection and Life: He will not allow them to be raised by the power of Christ, but only by the Justice of God to their own condemnation: So that, by his reckoning, the great business and work of the last day, shall not wholly lie upon Christ's hand to perform, but shall be parted and shared between the Power of Christ, and the Justice of God.

54. I am confidently perswaded, St. Paul in this point was not of his mind, when he saith, As in Adam all have died, so by Christ shall all (All, without exception) be made alive again. And, As by man came death, so by Man also cometh the Resurrection of the Dead. Indeed, I wonder Paræus would not likewise find some shift to exclude Christ, as well from being a Judge to condemn the Wicked: For with as much reason, and as great ease, he might have given him a Writ of Ease, a discharge from that Office as well as the other.

55. And now I could wish I had said nothing all this while: (and likely enough so could you:) But it grieves me, that the portion of time allowed me, will not suffer ſuffer me in any reaſonable proportion to contemplate the wonderful mercy and goodneſs of God; who, to do us good, has given ſuch power to our nature in Chriſt, to make a new Heaven, and a new Earth, to reſtore a new Generation of Creatures, ten times more glorious and perfect than the firſt. Only, now tell me, Did not St. Paul, with good reaſon, ſpeaking of the Reſurrection of Chriſt, give it an advantage and preeminence, even above his death? Is not the Μᾶλλον δὲ in my Text, the, Yea rather, verbum Ταλαντᾶιον, a word of great moment and weight? Since the Reſurrection of Chriſt, actuates and ripens the fruit of Chriſt's Death, which, without it, would have withered, and been of no help to us. Is not the Doctrine of Chriſt's Reſurrection and Exaltation, with as good reaſon made an Article of our Creed; and as neceſſarily, if not rather, to be leaned upon, as any of the reſt? Nay, hath not S. Paul epitomized the whole Creed into that one Article, ſaying (in *Rom.*9.) If thou ſhalt believe in thine heart, that God raiſed the Lord Jeſus from the dead, thou ſhalt be ſaved.

Rom. 10. 9.

56. And now 'tis time to conſider, who are the perſons whom the Death, yea rather, the Reſurrection of Chriſt, will protect and warrant from condemnation. In my Text, as we find none to condemn, ſo likewiſe, we cannot light upon any to be condemned. In the verſe immediately before theſe words, the Elect of God, are thoſe which are juſtified, and therefore muſt not be condemned. And, to ſay the truth, though we diſpute till the worlds end, the event will ſhew, that the Elect of God, and only they, ſhall reap the harveſt of Chriſt's ſufferings, and bring their ſheaves with them. As for the wicked and Reprobates, it ſhall not be ſo with them: but why it ſhall not be ſo with them, whether, becauſe they have wilfully excluded themſelves, or, becauſe God had no mind they ſhould be any thing the better for theſe things, I will not tell you.

57. In the verſes on both ſides of my Text, we find, that, We are thoſe that muſt not be condemned: We? Which we? why Paul and the Romans, Jews and Gentiles. What all Jews, and all Gentiles? I told you I will not tell: Only thus much let me tell you, we may boldly maintain St. Paul's phraſe: nay, it is unſafe, and dangerous to alter it. Why, it is all the comfort we have to live by, it is our glory and crown of rejoycing, that we are thoſe whoſe ſalvation Chriſt did ſo earneſtly and unfeignedly deſire, and thirſt after; that, to obtain power and authority to beſtow it on us, he ſuffered ſuch torments and blaſphemies, that, Never ſorrow was like unto his ſorrow, which was done unto him, wherewith the Lord afflicted him in the day of his fierce wrath.

58. Wherefore, I beſeech you (beloved Brethren) even by the bowels of this Jeſus Chriſt, that you would give me leave to adviſe you, if there be any here fit to be adviſed by me, if there be any in this company as weak and ignorant as my ſelf: (And though my heart be deceitful above all things, yet as far as I underſtand mine own heart, If I ſpeak theſe words out of partiality or faction, let me be excluded from having my part in thoſe merits.) I ſay, let me deſire you, or rather, let our holy Mother the Church, perſuade you (in the 17. Article) to receive Gods promiſes in ſuch wiſe, as they are generally ſet forth to us in holy Scriptures?

59. For, conſider impartially with your ſelves, what an unreaſonable horrible thing is it, ſeeing there are ſo many ſeveral frequent expreſſions of Gods general love & gracious favour unto Mankind, inforced and ſtrengthened with ſuch proteſtations and ſolemn oaths, that the cunning'ſt Linguiſt of you all, cannot with your whole lives, ſtudy, conceive, or frame expreſſions more full and ſatisfactory. I ſay then, Is it not deſperate madneſs, for a man to ſhew ſuch hatred and abomination at theſe comfortable and gracious profeſſions of God, that he can be content to ſpend almoſt his whole age in contriving and hunting after Interpretations, utterly contradicting and deſtroying the plain apparent ſenſe of thoſe Scriptures: and will be glad and heartily comforted to hear tidings of a new-found out Gloſs to pervert, and rack, and torment Gods holy Word.

60. On the other ſide; far be it from us to think, that it is in our power, when we we liſt or have a mind to it, to put our ſelves in the number of Gods elect faithful ſervants. Or, to imagine, that we have God ſo ſure chain'd and fettered to us by his Promiſes, that we may diſpenſe now and then for the Commiſſion of a delightful, gainful crime: Or, that when we have buſineſs for a ſin to advantage us in our fortunes, we need not be too ſcrupulous about it, ſeeing God is bound, upon our ſorrow and contrition, to receive us again into favour. Thou wretched Fool! Dareſt thou make an advantage of Gods goodneſs, to aſſiſt and patronize thy ſecurity? 'Tis true, God has promiſed Remiſſion of ſins to a repentant contrite ſinner: But has he aſſured thee that he will give thee repentance, whenſoever thou pleaſeſt to allow thy ſelf leiſure to ſeek it? No: Know, that there is a time (and preſuming Security, like ſleep, doth haſten and add wings to that time) when there will be found no way for Repentance, though thou ſeekeſt it with tears. And thus more than I meant for the perſons.

61. And now what remains, but that we try an experiment: That we may know in what a comfortable ſtate Chriſt hath ſet us; let us conſider, and look about us, to ſee if we can find any enemies that are likely to do us any harm: For which purpoſe, we ſhall not meet with a more accurate Spie and Intelligencer than St. Paul: who in the remainder of this Chapter, after my Text, hath muſtered them together in one Roll. But firſt, there is one, if he were our adverſary, he would be inſtead of a thouſand enemies unto us, and that is GOD. But him we are ſure of in the verſe before my Text; for it is he that juſtifies, therefore ſurely he will not condemn: Therefore what ſay you to Tribulation, or Diſtreſs, or Perſecution, or Famine, or Nakedneſs, or Peril, or the Sword? Why theſe are not worthy the naming, for over all theſe we are more than Conquerours. More than conquerours? What is that? Why they are not only overcome and diſarmed, but they are brought over to our Faction; they war on our ſide.

62. Well, in the next file, there follow Adverſaries of better faſhion; there is Life, and Death, and Angels, and Principalities, and Powers, (Who are thoſe? In truth I know not; but be they who they will, they can do us no harm:) No, nor things preſent, nor things to come, nor heighth, nor depth; (Theſe are adverſaries we ſhould ſcarce have dream'd of.) And to make all ſure, in a word, There is no other Creature ſhall ever be able to ſeparate us from the love of God, which is in Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.

63. Yet for all St. Paul's exactneſs, there remains one enemy behind, and that is a ſore one, of prime note; and truly I wonder how the Apoſtle could miſs him. And that is Sin. I would to God St. Paul had taken notice of him: For this one enemy is able to do us more harm than all the reſt put together: nay, but for ſin, all the reſt almoſt were our very good friends. Had we beſt ſupply St. Paul's incogitancy, and even adventure to put him in the Catalogue too? Well, let them that have a mind to it, do it; truly, I dare not. And, but that I know Martin Luther was a bold ſpirited man, I ſhould wonder how he durſt ſo confidently have adventured upon it: In his Book entituled Captivitatis Babylonicæ (cap. de Baptiſmo, near the beginning) he hath theſe words, Vides quam dives ſit homo Chriſtianus ſive Baptizatus, qui etiam volens non poteſt perdere ſuam ſalutem quantiſcunque peccatis, niſi nolit credere. I will not tranſlate them to you: and I would they had never been Engliſhed; for by that means, it may be, ſome of our loudeſt Preachers would have wanted one point of comfortable falſe Doctrine, wherewith they are wont to pleaſure their friends and benefactors. Only, let us do thus much for St. Paul's credit, to believe it was not meerly inconſideration in him to leave out ſin in this Catalogue; that there was ſome ground of reaſon for it: For though it may come to paſs, by the mercy and goodneſs of God, that even ſin it ſelf ſhall not pluck us out of his hand, yet it would be ſomething a ſtrange prepoſterous Doctrine, for a Preacher of the New Covenant, to proclaim, that we ſhall undoubtedly obtain the Promiſes of the Covenant, though we never ſo much break the Conditions.

64. I do confeſs my ſelf very guilty, and am ſorry that I have thus long exerciſed and and wearied your patience: And yet, for all that, have not performed that task which I fully resolved upon, when I adventured upon this subject; and that was, to spend this time in raising your devotions to the contemplation of the glorious mercies of God, expressed to us in Christ's Resurrection and Exaltation. But because other thoughts have carried me away (even against my will) almost all this while, I shall further take leave to wrong and injure your patience, with proposing one consideration more, which ought by no means to be omitted.

65. And that is, to take notice of the person, to whom we have been beholden for these unspeakable mercies; and that is Christ, Christ alone, none else mentioned or thought upon. If Bellarmine had been to advise St. Paul, if he had been privy to the writing of this Epistle, it is likely he would not have taken it ill, to have had Christ's name in the matter of our Salvation: But he would not have endured the Apostles utter silence of all helps and aids besides: yea, though himself acknowledgeth it to be the safest course, to put our whole confidence, only in the mercy of God; yet, quia magis honorificum est habere aliquid ex merito, because it concerns our credit, to put in a little for merit and desert on our side. He would not have us so to disparage our selves, as to make salvation a meer Alms, proceeding meerly out of Courtesie.

66. Nay but, Oh thou man, Who art thou that answerest against God? What art thou that justifiest thy self before him? Nay, what art thou that condemnest God, making him a lyar all the Scripture over? The whole project whereof is this, to let us know, how unable, how sick, how dead we are of our selves, and therefore ought most necessarily to have recourse to him for our salvation. As for us (Beloved Christians) if we must needs rejoyce, let us rejoyce in our infirmities, let our glory be our
Isa. 63. 1, 2. shame, and let us lift up our eyes and behold; Who is this that cometh from Edom, with died garments from Bozrah; This that is glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatness of his strength? And Christ will say, It is I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save: But, wherefore Lord, art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the Wine-fat? He will answer, I have trodden the wine-press alone, and of the people there was none with me: for which reason I am now crown'd with glory, and honour, and immortality! I alone am mighty to save, and besides me there is none other.

Psal. 45. 67. And good luck have thou with thine honour, Oh Lord: ride on, because of thy word of truth, of meekness, and of righteousness: and thy right hand shall teach thee terrible things: Terrible things for the King's enemies, for them which would not have thee to rule over them. And good luck have we with thine honour, O Lord: ride on, because of thy word of truth, of meekness, of righteousness, and thy right hand shall teach thee gracious and comfortable things for us thy servants, and sheep of thy pasture; who dare not exalt a weak arm of flesh against thee. Thy right hand shall mightily defend us in the midst of our enemies, Thy right hand shall find us out, and gather us up, though lost and consumed in the grave; though scattered before the four winds of heaven: And, thy right hand shall exalt us to glory and immortality for ever with thee in thy heavenly Kingdom, where all the days of our life, yea, all the days of thy glorious endless life, we shall, with Angels and Archangels, say, Glory, and honour, and power, and immortality, be unto him which sitteth on the Throne, and to the Lamb, and to the Holy Spirit, for ever, and for ever, Amen, Amen.

The

The Sixth Sermon.

Luke XVI. 9.

Make to your selves friends of the Mammon of unrighteousness, that when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations.

THE Children of this world (saith Christ) are wiser in their generation than the Children of Light. To make which good, our Saviour, in so much of the Chapter as goes before my Text, brings in a Story, or, as they call it, a Parable of a cunning Fellow, yet no great Projector neither, no very subtile Politician: notwithstanding, one who being in an extremity, turned out of his Office for mispending his Masters Goods, had found out a shift, and that by meer cousenage, to procure so much as would serve to keep him, indeed not according to the Port and fashion after which before he had lived; but only to maintain him in meat and drink, out of danger of starving, or, which was more fearful, because more full of trouble or dishonour, hard labour or begging.

2. Surely it had been no hard matter for our Saviour, who knew all whatsoever was in man, to have discovered more subtil projects, plots of a finer and more curious contrivance than this fellow's: But this, it seems, would serve his turn well enough for the purpose, for which he made use of it! And to say the truth, there cannot be imagined an example more exactly suiting, more closely applicable to his intent, which was not to discredid and dishearten his followers, by comparing, I, and preferring the cunning of an ordinary fellow, a meer Bayliff, or Steward, before that spiritual heavenly wisdom to which they pretend: Nor, secondly, to instruct them by indirect and unwarrantable courses to provide for themselves hereafter. But chiefly this,

3. To teach us, by objecting to our view, a man who by his own negligence; and carelesness, being brought to an extremity (for there was no necessity he should be brought to these plunges; a little timely care and providence, even ordinary honesty, would easily have warranted and preserved him) had upon the sudden found out a trick of his Office, namely, by proceeding in his old courses of wasting his Master's substance to the enriching of his Fellow-servants, thereby gained their good wills, that for the time following they might preserve him from perishing.

4. Our Saviour, I say, by this example, would teach us, That since God hath placed us here in this world as his Stewards, has put into our hands, his Goods, his Riches, to be dispensed for his use and advantage: And such Stewards (we are) who have advantages infinitely more urgent and pressing us to an honest faithful discharge of our Office, than this man in the Parable ever had; As first, We must of necessity fail, and be cashiered of our Office. All the power of Heaven and Earth cannot procure us a perpetuity in it: The case did not stand so with this man, for it was meerly his own fault to deserve discarding; and besides, having deserved that censure, it was his misfortune too, that his Lord should come to the knowledge of it, (for it is no impossible thing, that a Steward should thrive by his Lords loss, and yet never be called to an account for it.) And secondly, upon our behaviour in this our Office, depends the everlasting welfare of our souls and bodies; we shall for ever be diſpoſed of, according to the honeſt, or unfaithful diſcharge of our place: If ill, Lord what ſhall become of us? Where ſhall we appear in that great day of account? I dare not almoſt tell you the iſſue of it: But if we have carried our ſelves as faithful Servants; propoſe to your ſelves your own conditions, give your thoughts licenſe and ſcope to be exceſſive and over-flowing in their deſires, if the whole extenſion and capacity of your thoughts be not ſatisfied and filled to the brim with meaſure preſſed down and running over, God himſelf (which is impoſſible to imagine) will prove a deceiving unfaithful Maſter.

5. Theſe things therefore conſidered, without queſtion, it doth infinitely concern us to conſult, and project, what we mean to do with our Riches, to what employment we intend to put thoſe honours, and that power which God hath conferred on us in this life: Whether to receive them as our good things, to go away contented with them as our Rewards, our final rewards, expecting no other good things from God after them: Or, which is our Saviours advice, uſe them as means, and helps of attaining bleſſings above all conceivable proportion exceeding them; ſo diſpenſing and providently ſcattering them abroad, that againſt our time of need, (which ſooner or later will undoubtedly come) we may oblige to our ſelves ſuch friends, ſo gracious, and prevailing with our Maſter, who, either by their Prayers and Interceſſions, or ſome other way which we know not, may procure for us admiſſion into our Maſter's joys, to be no longer Stewards and Servants, but Friends and Sons: Thus by the help and benefit of this Mammon of unrighteouſneſs in my Text, theſe little things, even the leaſt bleſſings that God has to beſtow upon us, ſo called in the verſe following, and in the next but one to that, theſe things of other men, as if they were trifles, not worthy the owning if compared with what rewards may be had in exchange for them, purchaſing to our ſelves everlaſting and glorious rewards; By the aſſiſtance of our Riches (in the expreſſion of St. Paul) laying up for our ſelves a foundation of good works againſt the time to come, that we may lay hold on eternal life.

6. And this I ſuppoſe to be the force and meaning of this ἐπιμύθιον, or moral of the Parable, which Chriſt hath cloſely contrived and preſſed into theſe few words, Make to your ſelves friends of the, &c. In which words I ſhall obſerve unto you theſe three general parts:

1. What we muſt expect at laſt, notwithſtanding all the Riches and Pomps of this world, i.e. To fail. Chriſt you ſee makes no queſtion at all of it, he takes it for granted, where he ſays, That when ye fail, as implying, that certainly fail we muſt.
2. This being ſuppoſed, that fail we muſt, the counſel of Chriſt comes in very ſeaſonably, namely, to provide for the main, to take order, that though we our ſelves ſink, yet we may procure us friends to ſupport us in our neceſſities, and that is, by making to our ſelves friends of the Mammon, &c.
3. The comfortable iſſue and convenience which ſhall accrew unto us by thoſe friends thus purchaſed, i.e. by them to be received into everlaſting, &c. Of theſe in the order propoſed.

Part. I. 7. You do not expect, I am ſure, that I ſhould go about ſeriouſly to perſuade you, that you ſhall not live here for ever; For, whom ſhould I ſeek to perſuade? God forbid I ſhould be ſo uncharitable, as to think, or, but ſuſpect, that ever I ſhould find occaſion to make uſe of any perſuaſions for ſuch a purpoſe. Indeed a very good man (it was the Prophet David) once ſaid in his proſperity, I ſhall never be removed, Thou Pſal. 30. 6. Lord of thy goodneſs haſt made my hill ſo ſtrong: But was this well ſaid of him, think you? It ſeems not: For preſently to confute this his confidence, The Lord did but turn Ver. 7. his face away from him, and he was troubled. Yet ſurely ſuch a ſpeech as this could never be ſpoken upon better grounds; for this his aſſurance, it ſeems, proceeded not out of any preſumptuous confidence of his own ſtrength or policy: But only out of conſideration of God's eſpecial Providence ſhewed in his wonderful preſervation from many great and imminent dangers, and in preferring him from a low contemptible fortune to the Rule and Dominion over his People.

8. There

8. There is another fellow in a Parable, who though he came ſhort of David, in Luke 12. this his unwarrantable confidence and preſumption upon that foundation of Riches and Wealth, which with unwearied anxiety and care he had laid up, notwithſtanding was more ſuddenly and unanſwerably confuted: For, he did not promiſe to himſelf a perpetuity, only he imagined to himſelf (as he thought, reaſonably) that ſince he had at laſt obtained that which he had aimed at, and which had coſt him ſo many years travel, it were fit for him now to enjoy the fruit which he had ſo dearly bought. And in a joyful contemplation of this his happineſs he enters into Dialogue with his ſoul, Soul, ſaith he, now take thy reſt, No more ſhalt thou be vexed, and even conſumed with the painful and violent thirſt after Riches, thou haſt that laid up for thee which ſhall abundantly ſatisfie all thy deſires. All my buſineſs hereafter, ſhall be to find out ways how to repay unto my ſoul all thoſe pleaſures which heretofore I have denied unto my ſelf; I have ſtore ſufficient for many years expences ſafely laid up in my Barns: Yet for all this man's thus pleaſing himſelf with aſſured promiſes of many years happineſs; if you will but vouchſafe to enquire after him the very next day after he ſpoke thus, His Garners it is likely you may yet find ſtanding, thronged and oppreſſed with the abundance of corn. But for his ſoul (for whoſe ſake all this ado had been kept) the Lord knows what became of that, it was hurried away, no man can tell whither.

9. Now the thing that it becomes me to deſire at your hands from the conſideration of theſe two Examples, is this, not to require of you to believe that you muſt once fail (for that I ſuppoſe were needleſs) nor yet to diſſuade you from allowing to your ſelves a reaſonable uſe and moderate lawful pleaſures from that abundance of bleſſings wherewith God hath enriched you beyond all other men. But to beſeech you, that this meditation, that certainly you muſt fail, may be no unwelcom thought to you, that when the time ſhall come that you muſt leave theſe riches and pleaſures which God has given you here to enjoy, it may not come upon you as an unexpected misfortune, as a thing you were afraid of, and would willingly be content to avoid.

10. I confeſs, this were a meditation ſufficient to diſcourage and quite diſhearten a man that were reſolved to take up his reſt in the pleaſures and preferments of this world, that were content to ſit down ſatisfied with ſuch a ſleight happineſs, as this life is able to afford him; for one who would make Riches his ſtrong City, a place of refuge and ſecurity, a fortreſs whereto he would have recourſe in all his extremities, and from whence he would expect ſafety in all dangers and troubles which may aſſail him: For, what were that, but to withdraw him from his ſtrong holds, and leave him unfortified and expoſed to any injury and misfortune! How could I be more injurious to ſuch a man, than to vex and affright him with ſuch ſad melancholick thoughts as theſe, That the time will come, when that ſtrong Caſtle of his, his Riches, ſhall be undermined and demoliſhed, when he ſhall be left naked and defenceleſs. At which time, if it were poſſible for him to retain his Riches, which before he made his Bulwark and place of Security, yet he will find them then but Paper-Walls, unable to ſtand the weakeſt battery.

11. But I hope better things of you, (Beloved Chriſtians) even things which accompany ſalvation: And indeed, why ſhould I not? Who can forbid me to hope ſo? For alas, I know you not. I have no reaſon to aſſure my ſelf of the contrary. And then I ſhould be moſt inexcuſably uncharitable, if I ſhould not even rejoyce in this my hope: I ſee God hath plentifully ſhowr'd down upon you, almoſt overwhelmed you with all the bleſſings of this life. He has moreover given you peaceable times to enjoy them, (Bleſſed be his holy Name for it, and a thouſand bleſſings be returned into the boſom of his Anointed for his moſt pious Chriſtian-like care to confirm this peace, and to preſerve it from interruption.) God, I ſay, has given you leiſure and opportunity to enjoy and improve theſe your riches for your everlaſting happineſs: A comfort which he has denied almoſt to all other Nations; Nothing abroad but Wars, and rumours of Wars, no joy nor comfort but only in the effuſion of precious Chriſtian bloud, nothing but ſacking of Towns and Invaſions of Countries, God only knows upon how juſt pretenſions. But which is above all other bleſſings, (indeed without which all the reſt will prove very curſes) God has given you an abundant plentiful uſe of his bleſſed Word and Sacraments, every week, ſeveral times (till now) a worthy and able Clergy to put you in mind, how great an account you are to make to Almighty God of theſe his bleſſings, and what extraordinary Intereſt is expected at your hands.

12. Let me not therefore, I beſeech you, be your Enemy, if I prove troubleſom to any ſlumbring Lethargick Spirit, if I put him in mind, that the time will come, when ſleep ſhall for ever depart from his eyes, and that if his ſlumber laſt till a Trumpet awake him, darkneſs he may find, moſt palpable Ægyptian-darkneſs, but not darkneſs commodious to call on and procure ſleep, not very convenient to take ones reſt in. Forgive, I beſeech you, my importunity, if I earneſtly deſire you frequently to repreſent to your minds a time of failing, and preſently after that a ſevere inexorable Judge, requiring a ſtrict exact account of your behaviour in your Stewardſhip; if I beſeech you, from the conſideration of the foolish Virgins, not to put far from you the coming of the Bridegroom, not to frame to your ſelves reaſons and probabilities, why he is not likely to come yet a good while, (for he himſelf has told you, he will come as a Thief in the Night, and therefore when you are thus ſecure and ſlumbering, your ſelves create a night, a fit ſeaſon for him to come unawares upon you.) For, if you be unprovided of Oyl in your Lamps, of good works which may ſhine before men, and the door be once ſhut, Talk not of any new deviſed Faith, and I know not what aſſurance; there is no poſſibility of ever having it opened, but you ſhall be forced to remain expoſed to all dangers, to all manner of misfortunes, not one ſhall be found to befriend you, and to receive you into everlaſting habitations.

13. And, I pray you, conſider, that if the apprehenſion of theſe things conceived, not as preſent, but as to be expected, it may be many years hence, be ſo diſtaſteful and ominous to fleſh and bloud, Who will be able to abide the time, when it ſhall, indeed, overtake him? If now in theſe days of leiſure and forbearance (a ſeaſon which God out of his glorious mercy hath allowed us on purpoſe to ſpend in ſuch thoughts as theſe, in projecting againſt the evil day) the meditation thereof bring ſuch anguiſh and torment along with it; what terrible inſupportable effects will it work in us, when we ſhall find our ſelves ſurprized by it, and caught as in a ſnare? If a man can no ſooner hear ſuch things related, or but ſeriouſly think upon them, though in the height of his jollity, but ſtraight, as if ſome ill news had been told him; as if he had heard ſome ſad tragical ſtory of his own misfortunes, he will preſently recoil from his mirth, pleaſure will become troubleſom and diſtaſteful to him; Oh with what anguiſh and vexation of ſpirit, with what agony of ſoul ſhall they be entertained, when they come in earneſt?

14. Obſerve therefore, I beſeech you, that our Saviour does not bid you, When you fail make to your ſelves friends; No alas, that is not the time to make friends in; Then is the ſeaſon when you are to expect comfort and aſſiſtance from thoſe friends which you have gained before, in the time when you were furniſhed with ſuch good things as were likely to oblige men unto you. What title then can be found out equal to expreſs the folly and madneſs of ſuch people; who, as if God had created them on purpoſe for the pleaſures and vanities of this world, make that the whole buſineſs of their lives; and, as if the care of their ſouls everlaſting diſpoſal were but an employment of an hours diſpatch, will not vouchſafe ſo fruitleſly to caſt away any part of the time, when their ſouls are vigorous and healthful, about ſuch a trifling deſign, but deſtine their laſt few hours, when they are unable for any buſineſs elſe, to ſettle for themſelves an eſtate of eternity.

15. But becauſe I have not the leiſure now to proſecute this Argument as fully as it may deſerve; Give me leave, I pray you, in brief, to preſent to your view, a man brought to ſuch an extremity as this; One faſtened and chained unto the bed of ſickneſs, one that has already received within himſelf the meſſages of death, Death beginning beginning (in the language of the Pſalmiſt) to gnaw upon him. Take the pains, I beſeech you, to imagine to your ſelves (and it will require ſome courage but to conſider it) what unquiet buſie thoughts ſhall then poſſeſs him, what terrible affrighting meditations ſhall then be ſuggeſted to him, when he ſhall be forced to apprehend, that now he has but a very ſmall portion of time left him; and yet for all that, all the buſineſs for the diſpatching of which he came into the world, is left undone: the counſel and good intention of God, out of which he gave him his Riches, being utterly defeated, ſcarce one friend made, that will vouchſafe to look upon him now in his neceſſity: but on the contrary, many ſore enemies procured, that will be ready to cry for vengeance againſt him: No account to be found of the diſpenſation of thoſe goods which God has given him, but ſuch a one as will ſerve to feed and nourish the diſtemper and ſickneſs of his thoughts: ſo much (may be) ſpent in the proſecution and fulfilling of his ungodly luſts, ſo much in gorgeous raiment and delicious feeding, yet all this while ſcarce one poor Lazarus obliged. Now all the remedy that is to be had in ſuch an exigence as this, is to have the next Preacher ſent for, who muſt inſtill a little comfortable Divinity into him, to make him ſleep, and ſo his ſoul departs the Lord knows whither. And yet theſe are but the beginning of ſorrows, but what the end and perfection of them will be, I confeſs I have not the courage to tell you.

16. But yet for all this, I know men are apt ſo much to favour themſelves in their ſecurity, they will be ready to produce that famous example of the Thief on the Croſs to confute me, and to teſtifie, that even he that ſhall at the laſt puſh, as it were, have recourſe unto Gods mercy, is not altogether hopeleſs. Beſides, Did not he which came the laſt hour of the day to labour in the Vineyard, receive the ſame wages with them who had ſuffered the toyl and heat of the whole day? For the Thief on the Croſs, there can lie no exception againſt the example. But yet conſider, I pray you, that from the beginning of the world, till the time that the Scripture-Canon was ſealed up, there is not to be found one example more to equal it. Beſides, it was done at the time of Chriſts ſuffering; a ſeaſon wherein God in that one Act of the Redemption of the World, by the death of his Son, expreſſed the very utmoſt of his mercy, and diſcovered unto the world, as it were, in one entire ſum, all the riches and treaſures of his goodneſs. If therefore at ſuch a time, he was pleaſed to work a Miracle of mercy upon one, who probably having ſpent his whole life in ungodly forbidden courſes, had not, till then, light upon any extraordinary opportunities and means, able to break in pieces, and melt his flinty obdurate heart; Can this example then be any advantage to you, who every day, almoſt, have more than ſufficient means and offers of Grace, and are continually threatned with the danger of deferring your repentance, and of prolonging the time of making up your accounts; ſince you neither do, nor muſt, know the day nor hour, when God will expect them at your hands? Obj. 1. 2. Sol. 1.

17. As concerning the man which was called the laſt hour of the day to labour in the Vineyard: I pray you take notice, that this man was a Labourer, and though he took pains but for a ſhort time, yet labour he did: whereas, he that ſhall defer his repentance and amendment of life, till his laſt hour, if he indeed prove ſorry for his ſins, yet labour he cannot; the beſt that he can do, is to make offers and reſolutions to work the good work of God, if it ſhall pleaſe him to ſpare him life: But that thoſe reſolutions of his ſhall be accepted with God, inſtead of real very labour indeed, I find no Commiſſion to aſſure you. But I confeſs, it is ſomething unſeaſonably done of me, to ſtand, ſo long at leaſt, upon ſuch ſullen melancholick meditations as thoſe are; eſpecially now in the midſt of this ſolemn glorious Feaſt: Therefore I am reſolved even abruptly to break through them, and to haſten to my ſecond General, which is the Counſel which our Saviour gives us upon this conſideration, that neceſſarily we muſt fail, namely, to provide, and ſeriouſly project againſt that time, by all the means that we can make, to oblige to our ſelves friends in that extremity; expreſſed in theſe words, Make to your ſelves friends of the Mammon of unrighteouſneſs. 2.

18. Mammon

Part II. 18. Mammon of unrighteousness? What is that? Shall I deal freely and honestly with you? Indeed I will: for, woe unto me, if I should dare to come into this place to flatter you: and woe unto me, if I should dare to come into this place to vent my spleen against any. Then all this, for which there is such ado kept, not only here, but all the world over; such making of friends, nay, such undermining of friends, so many dangers sought out and despised: This is the Mammon of unrighteousness. An untoward name, I confess, for a thing so much set by, so carefully and ambitiously courted, so insatiably thirsted after. But yet a name of Christ's devising, He has afforded this Idol, Riches, no better a title; and therefore I must, and dare call them so, any where.

19. But may it not be lawful to enquire after; or, give some guesses, at least, at the Reasons which might move our Saviour to put so disgraceful a name upon Riches? Without question, it is not only lawful to be so curious, but also very useful and expedient. A main Reason (I have heard) is, because ordinarily, Riches leave a tincture and infection in the persons who have any thing to do with them. It is a hard thing, almost impossible, for a man any ways to meddle with them without sin: ordinarily, they are got with sin, they are possessed with sin, they are spent with sin. A man (saith Siracides) cannot hasten to be rich without sin: and when he has once got them, how unwilling will he be to let a Lust pass unsatisfied, seeing he is furnished with that, to which (in his opinion at least) nothing can be denied! How unwilling will he be to be worsted, though in the most unjust cause, seeing he is furnished with that which will blind the eyes of the Prudent, and pervert the understanding of the Wise! For (saith the same Wise man) as a mans Riches, so his anger encreaseth. And upon the same grounds, it may be said, that, As a mans Riches encrease, so likewise his Desires and Lusts encrease. I will undertake to give you one Reason more, why Riches are called Mammon of unrighteousness; and it is, because they are Mammon, Riches indeed, only to unrighteous men; none beside such, will rest contented with them, and suffer God to depart from him without a greater blessing than they can be.

20. But what need I trouble my self about enquiring after reasons, why this so universally-adored Idol, Mammon, is so dishonourably branded and stigmatized by our Saviour, since himself in another place has said enough of it, which may suffice, not only to warrant the reasonableness of this title; but also to make them, who are apt to glory so much in riches, if they well consider it, even to envy the happiness and security of those who are not trusted with so dangerous wares. The words were spoken upon occasion of a sudden great sorrow, and melancholy which appeared in a young mans countenance, and procured by the temptations of Riches, which made him refuse the most advantageous Bargain that ever was offered to man. Whereupon,
Mat. 19. 23 24. saith Christ to his Disciples (as his words are recorded by St. Matthew) Verily, I say unto you, that a Rich man shall hardly enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. And again I say unto you, that it is easier for a Camel to go through the eye of a Needle, than for a rich
Mark 10. 24. man to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. Indeed, St. Mark reports this speech something more largely than it is there, and instead of a Rich man, puts in, One that trusteth in his Riches: Which he does not so much to explain the phrase of the speech, as to give a reason of the Impossibility.

21. For, if our Saviour (in saying, It is impossible for a rich man to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven) by a rich man, had meant one that trusteth in his Riches, there had been no sufficient ground for so great an amazement as seized upon the Disciples at the hearing of it; For that was a thing which they knew well enough before; not the most ignorant of his hearers, but could have told him as much. Therefore S. Matthew's and St. Mark's words joyned together, will make up this sense (which I make no question at all, but that it was Christs meaning) namely, that it is even almost impossible for a Rich man to be saved, because he cannot chuse but trust in his Riches.

22. And

22. And this is more clearly evinced by that satisfaction which our Saviour gave to his Disciples to recover them from their astonishment; where he says, With men it is impossible, but not with God; for with God all things are possible: Intimating thus much; That considering the great, almost irresistable, Temptations which Riches carry along with them, and mans extreme weakness and natural impotency; his willing propension, and to all ordinary natural means, most incurable inclination to make them his place of rest, his strong City wherein he trusts: It is impossible, that these things meeting together, he should not put his confidence in them, and so make himself incapable of Heaven, between which and Riches thus used, there is a large, as unpassable a gulf as between Heaven and Hell: With men therefore these things are impossible, but not with God; for with Him all things are possible. It is in his power, by the help and assistance of that grace which he showres upon every one of us in Baptism, to cure this hereditary weakness and sickness of our natures, and to render us healthful and vigorous, powerful enough to free our selves from that bondage and slavery, wherein these outward worldly blessings are apt to captive us, and whereunto by nature we do willingly submit our selves. It is in his power to make those pernicious pleasures, which Riches may promise unto us, to become unwelcom and distasteful unto us: Nay, which is more, it is in his power to make even this Mammon of unrighteousness against its own nature, to become an help and instrument to procure for us the true Riches, even those unvaluable treasures which God hath laid up in heaven for us. Take it not ill therefore, I beseech you, if that, for which you are so much envied and reverenced above other men, be so undervalued by our Saviour in comparison with the true Riches; be not angry with our Saviour for it: But rather endeavour, by trading providently with them, for your own and others benefit, to render Christ's language in this place improper and abusive.

23. But now if Riches deserve no better a title at our Saviour's hands, how can it be likely that they can prove fit instruments to procure friends, and such friends as we stand in need of? For, do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Indeed the argument held well on St. Paul's side, when he says, If we have sowed to you spiritual things, is it much if we reap your temporal things? But will the argument hold also on Christ's part; If ye have not been faithful in the Mammon of unrighteousness, who will trust you with the true Riches? Certainly, if it does not, not only this, but divers Chapters besides, might, without any loss, have been left out of the Gospel.

24. And there it was a sullen ill-natured fellow (he in the Parable, I mean, which received the one Talent) and without all question, a shameless Liar (though I fear, there be many, who are not very averse from his opinion) who with an impudent face durst tell God, He was austere, reaping where he had not sown, and gathering wher he had not scattered. And though he spake this with the same confidence that his Proselytes do in these our days, not as a probable opinion, but as a thing that he is assured of; (for, says he, I know thee, that thou art austere, &c.) Yet I beseech you believe him not: No, no, Our God is a gracious God, and requires of us no more than we are able to do. He does not expect Faith, and Repentance, and good Works, where he has given no abilities to perform them: Nay, doth not God by his Prophet tell us, and Christ repeats it in his Parable, that he is so far from that, that after several years labour bestowed on his Vineyard, and yet no fruit issuing; yet he was content to expect one year longer, even till he had done so much, that no more could be done; he is at a stay, and asks, What he could have done more?

25. It were therefore very fit and convenient, that we should, at least in our own hearts, silence and stifle such opinions concerning God as these are. And believe, that he is a well-wisher to us, when he bestows any means upon us, whereby we may do good. Otherwise, we shall without any comfort or courage, heartlesly, and even sleepily go about the performing of what Christ here counsels us to. If you will will not believe me upon my word, take the mans own confeſſion: Says he, When I had once entertained this perſuaſion, that God would expect a more yielding plentiful harveſt, fruitful beyond that proportion of ſeed which he gave me to ſow, I was afraid: horror and uncomfortable thoughts ſeized upon me, and I went and hid my Talent in a Napkin, I even ſate ſtill, reſolved to put all to an adventure, and to expect what God would do with me; for, alas, how bootleſs, and to no purpoſe, would my weak endeavours be to procure the favour of ſuch a God, that would not be content but with a great deal more than lay in my power to perform.

26. It is true indeed, Chriſt told him, that though he had had ſuch an unworthy prejudicial conceit of him, yet that even from thence he might have been moved to have made the beſt and moſt advantageous uſe of that Talent, which God had beſtowed on him; for ſays Chriſt, If thou knewest I was auſtere, why didſt thou not therefore put my money into the Exchangers hands, and trade with it, that I might have received mine own with increaſe? Why didſt thou not at the leaſt do thy beſt, to give ſatisfaction to thy hard auſtere Maſter? God forbid that I ſhould doubt but that there are thouſands, who, though, it may be, they have entertained this mans opinion and conceit of God; yet make better uſe of it than he did. But yet the mans own confeſſion ſhews what ordinarily and naturally is the fruit and iſſue of it.

27. That therefore, which God ſows among you, is Riches; but yet, Riches, moſt improperly ſo called, that which he ſcatters and ſtrews abroad, is the Mammon of unrighteouſneſs: Now, he which ſoweth (ſaith the Apoſtle) ſoweth in hope, and he which ſcattereth, ſcattereth in hope. But what gain or intereſt, what a kind of harveſt does God hope for after this his ſeeds time? Why juſt ſuch another as the ſame Apoſtle ſpeaks of (1 Cor. 15.) where he diſcourſes upon the Reſurrection and glorious change of theſe our bodies; They are ſown, ſaith he, in corruption, but 1 Cor. 15. 42, 43, 44. are raiſed in incorruption; they are ſown in diſhonour, but are raiſed in glory; they are ſown in weakneſs, but are raiſed in power; they are ſown natural bodies, but are raiſed ſpiritual heavenly bodies. In like manner, God ſows among you thoſe Riches, which himſelf, moſt diſgracefully calls the Mammon of unrighteouſneſs, in hope that he may reap the true Riches: He ſcatters among you ſuch ſmall trifles, that many even Heathen men, have been content to want, for the empty aerial reward of Fame: nay, that ſome of them have been content to caſt away in an humour; and theſe ſmall things he ſcatters abroad, in hope that he may gather (what, think you?) the Everlaſting Salvation of your Souls and Bodies. And is this that harſh auſtere Maſter?

28. Indeed, if God were ſuch a perſon as ſome men have given him out for; if he ſhould ſcatter abroad his Riches as ſnares, on purpoſe to fetter and entangle men with them. If he ſhould beſtow upon any this Mammon of unrighteouſneſs, with an intent, and reſolution, that it ſhould become unto them the Mammon of unrighteouſneſs indeed, that it ſhould make them indiſpoſed and uncapable of attaining unto the true riches; there might be ſome plea for them to faſten ſo injurious an accuſation upon God. But can the Judge of all the earth deal ſo with his Servants? Can he, which is Goodneſs and Mercy it ſelf, He who rejoyces to ſtile himſelf, The Preſerver of men, Can he be ſo cruelly bountiful to his Creatures, as by heaping upon them the vaniſhing, unſatiſfying, bleſſings of this life, thereby to fat and cheriſh them againſt the day of ſlaughter and deſtruction? God forbid!

29. I confeſs, notwithſtanding that, ſuch perſons there may be upon whom God may in his wrath ſhowr down Bleſſings and Riches in his fierce diſpleaſure: But they are only ſuch, as by living in a continual habitual practice of undervaluing and contemning the daily offers of Grace and favour, have already condemned themſelves, and ſealed themſelves unto the day of deſtruction; and ſuch an one was Exod 9. 16. Pharaoh: concerning whom, God himſelf teſtifies, ſaying, For this reaſon I have raiſed thee up, that I might ſhew my power in thee, and that my Name might be declared throughout throughout all the Earth, that is, Since by thy continual Rebellions thou haſt judged thy ſelf unworthy of life, for this reaſon I have raiſed thee up, I have kept thee alive, and preſerved thee that none of my former Plagues ſhould ſweep thee away, that at laſt, by an utter deſtruction of thee, together with the whole ſtrength and flower of thy Kingdom, I may be glorified throughout the whole world. But I will leave diſcourſing, and come nearer unto you, in the ſerious application of Chriſts counſel here.

30. It is the property of Riches (ſaith the Wiſe-man) to gather many friends: Thoſe who are above others in wealth and power ſhall preſently be furniſhed with friends more than they can well know what to do withal; But ſuch friends are not concerned at all in our Saviour's advice in my Text; The friends here intended are ſuch, who are not here to reſtore again unto you in the ſame Coyn that they received: Give not to the Rich (ſaith our Saviour) for fear they repay you. Of all things in the world, take heed of being paid back again in this life, beware how you carry your reward along with you to your Grave. But leave it to be paid in exchange in another Country, where for uſing five Talents well, you ſhall have ten Cities given you: Where for the bounty of a Cup of cold water, you ſhall receive a Prophet's reward. Such a friend was offered once to the Rich man in the Goſpel, God ſent him one to his doors, even to crave his friendſhip: But the Rich-man was ſo buſied with the care of his Wardrobe and his Table, that he was not at leiſure to hearken to ſo gainleſs an offer: Notwithſtanding the time came afterwards, when he miſerably, to his coſt, perceived what a bleſſed opportunity he had moſt negligently omitted, and even in Hell attempted to purchaſe his favour, and to obtain from his hand a poor Alms (God knows) but one drop of water; but all too late, the time of making friends was paſt, and a great unfordable Gulf had divided them from all poſſible ſociety and communion for ever. Prov. 19.

31. Now conſider (I beſeech you) that it had been a very eaſie matter, for God ſo to have provided for all his creatures, that each particular ſhould have had enough of his own without being beholden to another for ſupply: But then two heavenly and divine Vertues had been quite loſt; For, Where had been the Poor mans Patience, and the Rich mans Charity? The poor man therefore wants that you may have occaſion to exerciſe your liberality, and that by loſing and diminiſhing your wealth upon them, ye may become more full of Riches hereafter. So that, it is Gods great bounty to you, not only to give you plenty and abundance, but alſo to ſuffer others to languiſh in penury and want; It may be, God has ſuffered himſelf ſo long to be robbed of his own Poſſeſſions his Tythes, that you might have the glory and comfort of reſtoring them: It may be, God has ſuffered the ancient ſuperſtitious Hiſtrionical adorning of his Temples to be converted into the late ſlovenly prophaneneſs (commonly called worſhipping in Spirit, but intended to be Worſhip without coſt) that you may find a happy occaſion to reſtore thoſe ſacred places dedicated to his honour, to that Majeſty and Reverence as may become Houſes wherein God delights that his Name ſhould dwell.

32. Now, if it be not in my power to perſuade you, neither to make God nor man your debtors by your Riches: Yet I beſeech you, make neither of them your Enemies by them: Do not make your Riches Inſtruments of War to fight againſt God himſelf; for example, as maintaining an unjuſt cauſe by power, a cauſe which God abhors: Do not ſo requite God for his extraordinary liberality to you, as to make his Riches Inſtruments for the Devil to wreak his malice upon thoſe whom God loveth, If I had not a care not to injure your patience too far, what might not be ſaid upon this ſubject? But, I perceive, it is fit for me to haſten to your releaſe.

33. But before I quit my ſelf, and eaſe you of further proſecution of this point, I ſhall deſire you all to ſuffer one word of Exhortation, and if there be any here whom it may more nearly concern, I beſeech them even by the bowels of Jeſus Chriſt, that they will ſuffer too a word of moſt neceſſary reproof: and though what

I shall say, doth not naturally flow from the words in hand, yet they bear a reasonable resemblance and proportion with them: So pertinent, I am sure, they are to the Auditory to whom I speak, that I would chuse rather quite to lose my Text, than here to leave them unhad.

34. It is about making friends too: indeed not with the Mammon of unrighteousness: No, that is a trifle to it. It is about making friends with not revenging of injuries, with patient bearing and willing forgiving of offences: A duty so seriously, so incessantly, sometimes in plain words, sometimes in Parables, all manner of ways, upon all occasions, urged by our Saviour, that we cannot so much as pray, but we must be forced to acknowledge obedience to this Law, Forgive us, — As we forgive: Yea, so boundlesly, and without all restrictions or reservations, is it enjoyned, That when as Peter thought it fair to have it limited to a certain number, and proposed Seven, as, in his opinion, reasonable and convenient; No, saith our Saviour, Forgive not until seven times, but until four hundred fourscore and ten times: And if he could have imagined, that it were possible for a man to have exceeded even this number also in injuries, without question he would not have left there neither.

35. But, How is this Doctrine received in the world? What counsel would men, and those none of the worst sort give thee in such a case? How would the sobereſt, discreetest, well-bred Christian advise thee? Why thus, If thy Brother, or thy Neighbour, have offered thee an injury, or an affront, forgive him? By no means: Thou art utterly undone, and lost in thy reputation with the world if thou dost forgive him: What is to be done then? Why, let not thy heart take rest, let all other business and employment be laid aside till thou hast his bloud: How? A mans bloud for an injurious passionate speech, for a disdainful look? Nay, that is not all, That thou may'st gain among men the reputation of a discreet well-tempered Murderer, be sure thou killest him not in passion, when thy bloud is hot and boyling with the provocation; but proceed with as great temper and settledness of reason, with as much collection and preparedness as thou wouldst to the Communion: After some several days respite, that it may appear it is thy Reason guides thee, and not thy Passion: Invite him mildly and courteously into some retired place, and there let it be determined, whether his bloud or thine shall satisfie the injury.

36. Oh thou holy Christian Religion! Whence is it that thy children have sucked this inhumane poysonous bloud, these raging fiery Spirits? For if we shall enquire of the Heathen, they will say, They have not learned this from us; or the Mahumetan, they will answer, We are not guilty of it; Blessed God! that it should become a most sure setled course for a man to run into danger and disgrace with the world, if he shall dare to perform a Commandment of Christ, (which is as necessary for him to do, if he have any hopes of attaining Heaven, as meat and drink is for the maintaining of life!) That ever it should enter into Christian hearts to walk so curiously and exactly contrary unto the ways of God! That whereas He sees himself every day and hour almost contemned and despised by thee who art his Servant, his Creature, upon whom he might without all possible imputation of unrighteousness pour down all the Vials of his wrath and indignation, yet He notwithstanding is patient and long-suffering towards thee, hoping that his long suffering may lead thee to repentance, and beseeching thee daily by his Ministers to be reconciled unto him: And yet thou on the other side for a distemper'd passionate speech, or less, shouldst take upon thee to send thy Neighbours soul, or thine own, or likely both clogg'd and oppressed with all your sins unrepented of, (for how can repentance possibly consist with such a resolution?) before the Tribunal seat of God to expect your final sentence; utterly depriving thy self of all the blessed means which God has contrived for thy Salvation, and putting thy self in such an estate, that it shall not be in Gods power almost to do thee any good. Pardon, I beseech you, my earnestness, almost intemperateness, seeing it hath proceeded from so just, so warrantable a ground; And since it is in your power to give rules of honour and reputation to the whole Kingdom, do not you teach others to to be ashamed of this inseparable Badge of your Religion, Charity and forgiving of offences, give men leave to be Christians without danger or dishonour; Or, if Religion will not work with you, yet let the Laws of that State wherein you live, the earnest desires and care of your Righteous Prince, prevail with you: But I have done, and proceed to my last part, which is the convenience and gain which shall accrew unto us by friends obliged with this Mammon of unrighteousness, namely, by them to be received into everlasting habitations.

37. I must here again propose another question, but when I have done that, I must be forced to leave it without an answer, unless you will be content to take a conjecture, a probability, for an answer: It is, How, or after what manner those to whom we have done good here, shall hereafter receive us into everlasting habitations? Whether this is performed only by their Prayers and Intercession with God in the behalf of their Benefactors; Or, whether they are used as Instruments and Conductors, as it were, as our Saviour may probably seem to intimate in the Parable where the Lord speaks to his Servants, That they should take away the one Talent from him which had no more, and bestow it on him which had ten Talents. So uncertain it is, whether this task shall be performed by them one of these ways, or by some other unknown course, that St. Augustine ingenuously confesses, he knows not what to make of it: Yet Cardinal Bellarmine says, he can easily assoil it, and can in these words find out Purgatory, and satisfaction for sin after death, and a great deal more than I can understand: But truly, if he be able to spy Purgatory in this Text, especially such a one as he fancies to himself in his Books of that Argument, he has made use of better Glasses than ever Galileo found out. And I would to God, those of his Party would consider how much the weakness of their cause is argued even from hence, that they are forced to ground most of the Points controverted between us upon such difficult places as these, of so ambiguous and uncertain meanings, and therefore equally obnoxious to any mans Interpretation. There may yet be found out a convenient sense of this place, especially, if we will allow an Hebraism in those words (which is frequent enough in the Evangelical Writings) of putting the third Person Plural to express a Passive sense, and then the meaning will be, That when, &c. they may receive you, i. e. That ye may be received into everlasting habitations: Parallel to a like Phrase in Luke 12.12. Thou Fool, this night shall they take away thy soul from thee, i. e. Thy soul shall be taken from thee. And, if this sense be true, as it is very likely, many of our Romish Adversaries have spent much pains about this Text to no purpose.

38. But to leave quarrelling: It is no very considerable matter: whether we have light upon the true sense of these words, or no, or whether those, to whom we have done good, have a share in purchasing for us an admission into these everlasting habitations, as long as we may infallibly hence conclude, that though it should fall out, that Abraham should forget us, and Israel become ignorant of us; yet certainly, God, (who alone, is instead of ten thousand such friends) he will keep a Register of all our good actions, and will take particular care of us, to give us a just proportion of reward and harvest of glory according to our sparingness, or liberality in sowing.

39. But would Almighty God have us such mercenary Servants, so careful and projecting for our own advantage, that we should not obey him without a Compact and Bargain? Is not He worthy the serving, unless we first make our condition with him, to be sure to gain and thrive by him? Is this a consideration worthy and befitting the ingenuity and nobleness of a Christian mind, to have an eye unto the recompence of reward? Is Christ also become a School-master unto us, as well as the Law was to the Jews, that we should have need of Thunder and Blackness of smoke, and Voices to affright us, or Promises to win and allure us? Nay, have not your ears oftentimes heard, from such places as this, an Obedience of this nature disgraced and branded for a servile slavish obedience; an obedience ordinarily made the mark and badge even of a formal Hypocrite, the worst kind of Reprobates?

Part. III.

Object.

Sol. 40. I confeſs, I could ſhew you a more excellent way than this, if men were ordinarily fitted and qualified for the receiving of it: And that is St. Paul's more excellent way of Charity: the keeping of God's Commandments meerly out of the love of his goodneſs and conſideration of his infinite inconceivable holineſs: And he that can receive this, let him receive it, and thrice happy and bleſſed ſhall he be of the Lord: But in the mean time, let him not be forward to judge his fellow-ſervants, if they acknowledge themſelves ſo far guilty of weakneſs and imperfections, that they have need to receive ſtrength and encouragement in this their painful and laborious race, by looking forward unto the glorious prize of their high calling in Jeſus Chriſt.

41. Surely God is wiſe enough to contrive the ſureſt courſe, and to ſet down the beſt and likelieſt means for perſuading us to his ſervice, and the obedience of his Commandments: He is able to enquire and ſearch into the moſt retired corners of our wicked, deceitful hearts, and thereby knowing our temper and diſpoſition, he is able beſt to preſcribe us a method and diet ſuitable to our conſtitutions. Therefore, if he out of his infinite wiſdom, and the conſideration of what encouragements we ſtand in need of, hath thought it fit to annex to every Precept almoſt, a promiſe of happineſs, or a threatning of unavoidable danger to the tranſgreſſours; What art thou, O man, that thou dareſt take upon thee to calumniate his proceedings, and to preſcribe better directions than he has thought fit!

42. I beſeech you therefore (my beloved Brethren) by all means make uſe of any advantages, which may ſerve to render you more earneſt, more eager, and reſolute in your obedience to thoſe holy and perfect Commandments which he hath enjoyn'd you: If you cannot find your ſelves arrived as yet to that height of perfection, as that Love and Charity cannot wreſt from you ſufficient carefulneſs to obey him; Let fear have its operation with you, fear and horrour of that terrible iſſue which ſhall attend the wilful and habitual tranſgreſſours of his Laws: And you need not ſuſpect this courſe as unwarrantable, for you ſhall have St. Paul for your example, even that Paul for whoſe miraculous converſion, Chriſt was pleaſed himſelf in Perſon to deſcend from his Throne of Majeſty: that Paul who laboured in the Goſpel more than all the reſt of the Apoſtles: that Paul, whoſe joy and hearts comfort it was to be afflicted for the Name of Chriſt: Laſtly, that Paul, who for a time was raviſhed from the Earth to the third Heaven after a moſt inexpreſſable manner, and there heard things that cannot be uttered; This Paul, I ſay, ſhall be your example, who after all theſe things, found it yet a convenient motive, and received great encouragement and eagerneſs to proceed in his moſt bleſſed converſation, even from this fear, Leſt, whilſt he preached to others, himſelf ſhould become a caſt-away.

43. And when Fear has done its part, let Hope come in; Hope of that happy Communion, which you ſhall once again have with thoſe friends which may be purchaſed it this life at ſo eaſie a rate; Hope of that eternal weight and burden of joy
Heb. 3. 6. and glory, which is reſerved in Heaven for you if you hold faſt the rejoycing of the Hope ſtedfaſt unto the end: Let a comfortable meditation of theſe things encourage and hearten you to proceed from one degree of holineſs to another, till we all come in the unity of the Faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God to a perfect Man, to the meaſure of the fulneſs of the ſtature of Chriſt: And for an example in this, take that whole cloud of witneſſes muſtered together (in Heb. 11.) Or, if they will not ſerve the turn, take an Example above all examples, an Example beyond all imaginable exceptions, even our bleſſed Saviour Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, concerning whom the Author of the ſame Epiſtle (it was St. Paul ſure) ſaith Chap. 12. That for the joy which was ſet before him, deſpiſed the ſhame, and endured the Croſs, &c.

44. God knows, we have need of all manner of encouragements, and all little enough for us, ſo ſluggiſh and immoveable, ſo perverſe and obſtinate are we: Therefore for Gods ſake, upon any terms, continue in the ſervice of Chriſt, make uſe of all manner of advantages, and though ye find hope, or fear, predominate in you, (theſe ſervile affections, as they are commonly called) yet for all that, faint not, deſpair not, but rather give thanks to Almighty God: and God who ſees ſuch good effect of his Promiſes Promiſes and Threatnings in you, (of which all the Scripture is full from one end to the other) will in his good time fill your hearts full of his Love, even that perfect love which caſteth out fear, and of that perfect Love which ſhall have no need of Hope, He will perfect that his good work in you unto the end.

45. To conclude all: Whether ye ſhall perform this Commandment of Chriſt, or whether ye ſhall not perform it, it cannot be avoided, Everlaſting habitations ſhall be your reward: Only the difference is, Whether ye will have them of your Enemies providing, whether ye will be beholden to the Devil and his Angels, your ancient mortal Enemies to prepare everlaſting dwellings for you; And who can dwell in everlaſting fire, (ſaith the Prophet) Who can dwell in continual burnings? Or, whether ye will expect them from the aſſiſtance of thoſe juſt perſons, whom you have by your good works eternally obliged to you, even thoſe bleſſed and glorious Habitations, which God the Father Almighty hath from the beginning of the world provided and furniſhed for you; which God the Son by his meritorious Death and Paſſion hath purchaſed for you; and for the admiſſion whereunto, God the Holy Ghoſt hath ſanctified, and adorned you, that in thankfulneſs and gratitude you your ſelves may become everlaſting Habitations, pure and undefiled Temples for him to dwell in for ever and ever. Now unto theſe glorious and everlaſting Habitations God of his infinite mercy bring us, even for Jeſus Chriſt his ſake: To whom, with the Father, &c;

The

The Seventh Sermon.

Luke XIX. 8.

—— And if I have defrauded any man by forged cavillation I reſtore unto him fourfold.

Ver. 10. THE Son of man (ſaith our Saviour of Himſelf in the end of this ſtory) is come to ſeek and to ſave that which was loſt. And how careful and ſolicitous he was in the diſcharge of this employment and buſineſs about which his Father ſent him; this ſtory of Zaccheus (out of which my Text is taken) will evidently and lively diſcover. For here we have a Man, that among ten thouſand one would think were the moſt unlikely to become a Diſciple of Chriſts, ſo indiſpoſed he was for ſuch a change, ſo unqualified in all reſpects. For firſt, he was Rich, as the third verſe tells us; and if that were all his fault, yet in our Saviour's judgment, which was never uncharitable, being ſo clogg'd and burdened with theſe impedimenta (as even the Heathens could call Riches) it would be as hard for him to preſs through and enter in at the ſtreight gate, without uneaſing and freeing himſelf from them, as for a Camel to go through the eye of a Needle.

2. But ſecondly, theſe his Riches, as it would ſeem, were ſcarce well and honeſtly gotten. For his trade and courſe of life, was a dangerous trade, obnoxious to great, almoſt irreſiſtible, temptations: A great meaſure of grace, would be requiſite to preſerve a man incorrupt and undefiled in that courſe: and ſo ill a name he had gotten himſelf, that all that afterwards ſaw Chriſts familiarity with him, were much offend-
Ver. 7. ed, and ſcandalized at it; for we read in the ſeventh verſe, that when they all ſaw it, they murmured, ſaying, that he was gone in to lodge with a ſinful man; with one famous and notorious for a great oppreſſor.

3. Yet notwithſtanding all this, ſuch was the unſpeakable mercy and goodneſs of Ver. 9. Chriſt, that even of this Stone, ſo ſcorned and rejected of all the people, he raiſed a Son unto Abraham, as we find in the ninth verſe. And to bring this to paſs, he took occaſion even from a vain curioſity of this Zaccheus, an humour of his, it may be ſuch a one as afterward poſſeſſed Herod (though God knows he had not the ſame ſucceſs) namely, to ſee ſome ſtrange work performed by Chriſt, of whom he had heard ſo much talk. This opportunity, I ſay, our Saviour took to perform an admirable miracle, even upon the man himſelf; and that he brought about by as unlikely a courſe, only with inviting himſelf to his houſe: By which unexpected affability and courteſie of our Saviour, this ſo notorious and famous Publican and ſinner was ſo ſurprized with joy and comfort, that preſently he gives over all thought and conſideration of his trade, as a thing of no moment; and being to receive Chriſt into his houſe, and knowing how ill agreeing Companions Chriſt and Mammon would prove in the ſame Lodging; he reſolves to ſweep it and make it clean, for the entertaining of him; he empties it of that droſs and dung wherewith before it was defiled; half of his eſtate goes away at a clap upon the poor, and the remainder, in all likelihood, is in great danger to be conſumed by that noble and generous offer which he makes in the words of my Text: Whomſoever I have defrauded by forged cavillation, I reſtore, &c.

4. In

4. In which words I ſhall obſerve unto you theſe two General Parts: Firſt, Diſcovery, and, it may be, confeſſion of his beloved boſom ſin, the ſin of his Trade, in theſe words: If I have defrauded any man, or whomſoever I have defrauded. Secondly, Satisfaction tendered in the words following: I reſtore unto him four fold. In the former General, we may take notice of two particulars: 1. Zaccheus his willingneſs and readineſs of his own accord to diſcover and confeſs his ſin, when he ſaid, Whomſoever I have defrauded. And, 2. the nature and hainouſneſs of the crime diſcovered, which is called a defrauding by forged cavillation; or, as ſome Tranſlations read, with falſe accuſation. In the ſecond General likewiſe (which is the ſatisfaction tendered by Zaccheus) there offer themſelves two particulars more, namely, 1. So much of the ſatisfaction as was neceſſary to be performed, by vertue of an indiſpenſable Precept, and that is Reſtitution in theſe words, I reſtore unto him. 2, That which was voluntary and extraordinary, namely, the meaſure and exceſs of this Reſtitution, which he profeſſeth ſhould be four fold. Of theſe two parts therefore, with their ſeveral particulars in the ſame order as they have been propoſed, briefly, and with all the plainneſs and perſpicuity I can imagine: And, 1. Of the former General, and therein of the firſt Particular, Namely, Zaccheus his readineſs to confeſs his Sin, in theſe words: If I, &c.

5. I ſaid even now only, It may be this was a confeſſion of his crime; but now I will be more reſolute, and tell you peremptorily, this was a confeſſion: for without all queſtion, Zaccheus, as the caſe ſtood now with him, was in no humour or Juſtifying himſelf, he had no mind to boaſt his integrity, in his Office: Or, if he had, he might be ſure that common fame (if that were all, yet that alone) might be a ſufficient argument, at leaſt too great a preſumption againſt him, to confute him. But to put it out of queſtion: Our Saviour himſelf, by applying the tenth verſe of this Chapter to him, acknowledgeth him for a ſinful undone man; one that had ſo far loſt himſelf in the wandring mazes of this wicked world, that unleſs Chriſt himſelf had taken the pains to ſearch and enquire after him, and having found him, by the power and might of his Grace to reſcue and recover him from the error of his ways, by reſtoring him his eyes, whereby he might take notice towards what a dangerous precipice he was haſtening, there had been no poſſibility but at laſt he muſt have needs fallen headlong into the gulf of deſtruction.

6. Now it being, I ſuppoſe, evident, that Zacchæus was guilty, and that in a high degree, and openly and ſcandalouſly guilty of the crime here diſcovered: there is no doubt to be made, but that he, who was ſo willing to unlock and diſperſe his ill-gotten treaſures, would not begin to divert his covetouſneſs upon his ſins, he would not hoard them up, but would place his glory even in his ſhame; and whereas he had been the ſervant and ſlave of ſin, he would wear his ſhackles and fetters, as ſigns of the glorious victory, which through Chriſt he had won, and emblems of that bleſſed change which he found in himſelf, being reſcued from the baſeſt ſlavery that poſſibly can be imagined, into the glorious liberty of the Sons of God.

7. But it may be, you will ſay, Suppoſe Zaccheus did freely and voluntarily confeſs his ſin to Chriſt, who had authority to forgive him his ſins, though he had never diſcovered them: what collection ſhall be made from hence? Zaccheus might be as bold as he would with himſelf; but as for us, his example ſhall be no rule to us; we thank God this is Popery in theſe days, and ſince we have freed our ſelves from this burden, we will not be brought into bondage to any man; we will confeſs our ſins, I warrant you, only to God, who is only able to forgive us them: as for the Miniſter, it may be, we will ſometimes be beholden to him to ſpeak ſome comfortable words now and then to us, when we are troubled in conſcience, and we have not been taught to go any further.

8. I confeſs I find no great inclination in my ſelf, eſpecially being in the Pulpit, to undertake a controverſie, even where it may ſeem to offer it ſelf, much leſs to preſs and ſtrein a Text for it, for I deſire to have no Adverſaries in my Preaching, but only the Devil and Sin. Only having now mentioned Confeſſion, and conſidering how much the Doctrine of our holy Mother the Church hath been traduced, not only by the malice and detraction of our profeſſed enemies of the Church of Rome, but alſo by the ſuſpicious ignorance and partiality of her own children; who out of a liking of the zeal, or rather fury, of ſome former Proteſtant Writers, have laid this for a ground of ſtating Controverſies of our Religion: That that is to be acknowledged for the Doctrine of theſe Reformed Churches, which is moſt oppoſite and contradicting to the Church of Rome. So that, as the caſe goes now, Controverſies of Religion are turned into private quarrels, and it is not ſo much the Truth that is ſought after, as the ſalving and curing the reputation of particular men.

9. Theſe things therefore conſidered, truly for my part, I dare not take upon me ſo much to gratifie the Papiſts, as to think my ſelf obliged to maintain many incommodious ſpeeches of ſome of our Divines in this point. Hic Ithacus velit & magno mercentur Atridæ —— They will never be unfurniſhed of matter to write Books to the worlds end, if this ſhall be the method of ſtating Controverſies. Oh what an impregnable cauſe ſhould we have againſt the Church of Rome, if we our ſelves did not help to weaken and betray it, by mixing therewith the intereſts and conceits of particular men.

10. Give me therefore leave, I pray you, to give you the ſtate of the Queſtion, and the Doctrine of our Church, in the words of one who both now is, and for ever will worthily be accounted, the glory of this Kingdom. "Be it known (ſaith he) to "our Adverſaries of Rome, (I add alſo, to our Adverſaries even of Great Britain, "who ſell their private fancies for the Doctrine of our Church) that no kind of "Confeſſion, either publick or private, is diſallowed by our Church, that is any "way requiſite for the due execution of that ancient Power of the Keys, which "Chriſt beſtowed upon his Church. "The thing which we reject, is that new pick-"lock of Sacramental Confeſſion obtruded upon mens Conſciences, as a matter ne-"ceſſary to Salvation, by the Canons of the late Conventicle of Trent, in the 14. "Seſſion.

11. And this truth being ſo evident in Scripture, and in the Writings of the ancient beſt times of the Primitive Church, The ſafeſt Interpreters of Scripture, I make no queſtion, but there will not be found one perſon amongſt you, who when he ſhall be in a calm unpartial diſpoſition, that will offer to deny: For, I beſeech you, give your ſelves leave unpartially to examine your own thoughts. Can any man be ſo unreaſonable as once to imagine with himſelf, that when our Saviour after his Reſurrection, having received (as himſelf ſaith) all power in heaven and earth, having led captivity captive, came then to beſtow gifts upon men: when he, I ſay, in ſo ſolemn a manner (having firſt breathed upon his Diſciples, thereby conveying and inſinuating the Holy Ghoſt into their hearts) renewed unto them, or rather confirmed and ſealed unto them that glorious Commiſſion, which before he had given to Peter, ſuſtaining, as it were the perſon of the whole Church; whereby he delegated to them an authority of binding and looſing ſins upon earth, with a promiſe, that the proceedings in the Court of Heaven, ſhould be directed and regulated by theirs on Earth: Can any man, I ſay, think ſo unworthily of our Saviour, as to eſteem theſe words of his for no better than complement; for nothing but Court-holy-water?

12. Yet ſo impudent have our Adverſaries of Rome been in their dealings with us, that they have dared to lay to our charge; as if we had ſo mean a conceit of our Saviour's gift of the Keys, taking advantage indeed from the unwary expreſſions of ſome particular Divines, who out of too forward a zeal againſt the Church of Rome, have bended the ſtaff too much the contrary way; and inſtead of taking away that intolerable intolerable burden of a Sacramental, neceſſary, univerſal Confeſſion, have ſeem'd to void and fruſtrate all uſe and exerciſe of the Keys.

13. Now, that I may apply ſomething of that, which hath now been ſpoken, to your hearts and conſciences. Matters ſtanding as you ſee they do; ſince Chriſt, for your benefit and comfort, hath given ſuch authority to his Miniſters upon your unfeigned repentance and contrition, to abſolve and releaſe you from your ſins: why ſhould I doubt, or be unwilling to exhort and perſwade you, to make your advantage of this gracious promiſe of our Saviour's? Why ſhould I envy you the participation of ſo heavenly a Bleſſing? Truly, if I ſhould deal thus with you, I ſhould prove my ſelf a malicious, unchriſtian-like, malignant Preacher; I ſhould wickedly and unjuſtly, againſt my own conſcience, ſeek to defraud you of theſe glorious Bleſſings, which our Saviour hath intended for you.

14. Therefore, in obedience to his gracious will, and as I am warranted, and even enjoyned, by my holy Mother the Church of England expreſly, in the Book of Common-Prayer, in the Rubrick of Viſiting the Sick (which Doctrine this Church hath likewiſe embraced ſo far) I beſeech you, that by your practice and uſe, you will not ſuffer that Commiſſion, which Chriſt hath given to his Miniſters, to be a vain form of words, without any ſenſe under them, not to be an antiquated, expired Commiſſion, of no uſe nor validity in theſe days: But whenſoever you find your ſelves charged and oppreſſed, eſpecially with ſuch crimes as they call Peccata vaſtantia conſcientiam, ſuch as do lay waſte and depopulate the conſcience, that you would have recourſe to your ſpiritual Phyſician, and freely diſcloſe the nature and malignancy of your diſeaſe, that he may be able, as the cauſe ſhall require, to proportion a remedy, either to ſearch it with corroſives, or comfort and temper it with oyl. And come not to him, only with ſuch a mind as you would go to a learned man experienced in the Scriptures, as one that can ſpeak comfortable quieting words to you, but as to one that hath authority delegated to him from God himſelf, to abſolve and acquit you of your ſins. If you ſhall do this, aſſure your ſouls that the underſtanding of man is not able to conceive that tranſport and exceſs of joy and comfort which ſhall accrew to that mans heart, that is perſuaded, that he hath been made partaker of this Bleſſing, orderly and legally, according as our Saviour Chriſt hath preſcribed.

15. You ſee, I have dealt honeſtly and freely with you; it may be more freely than I ſhall be thanked for: But I ſhould have ſinned againſt my own ſoul, if I had done otherwiſe; I ſhould have conſpired with our Adverſaries of Rome againſt our own Church, in affording them ſuch an advantage to blaſpheme our moſt holy and undefiled Religion. It becomes you now, though you will not be perſuaded to like of the practice of what, out of an honeſt heart, I have exhorted you to; yet for your own ſakes, not to make any uncharitable conſtruction of what hath been ſpoken. And here I will acquit you of this unwelcom ſubject, and from Zacchæus his confeſſion of his ſin, I proceed to my ſecond particular, namely, the nature and heinouſneſs of the crime confeſſed, which is here called a defrauding another by forged cavillation.

16. The crime here confeſſed, is called in Greek, Sycophancy; for the words are, Εἴ τινός τι ἐσυκοφάντησα. For the underſtanding of which word in this place, we ſhall not need ſo much to be beholden to the Claſſical Greek Authors, as to the Septuagint, who are the beſt Interpreters of the Idiom of the Greek Language in the Evangelical Writings. Two Reaſons of the word Συκοφάντης are given, the one by Ister in Atticis, the other by Philomneſtus de Smirnhis Rhodiis, both recorded by Athenæus in that treaſury of ancient Learning, his Deipnoſophiſts, in the third Book: which becauſe they are of no great uſe for the Interpretation of St. Luke, I willingly omit. Part. 2.

17. Now there are four ſeveral words in the Hebrew, which the Seventy Interpreters have rendred in the Old Teſtament by the word, Συκοφάντης, and the verbal thereof Συκοφαντία. One whereof ſignifies to abalienate or wreſt any thing from another by fraud and sophistry, opposed to another word in the same language, which imports to rob by plain open force and violence, Job 25.9. *Psal.*119.121. Prov. 28.3. *Eccles.*4.1. as likewise in *Psal.*71.4. *Prov.*14.33. A second word signifies to deal captiously and fallaciously with another, Lev. 29. 11. A third implies, a punishment or Mulct, which (as the Latin word mulcta will bear it) is either inflicted on the body or the purse. And the last signifies, to circumvent, or rather indeed to roll himself upon another, *Gen.*43.18.

Job 25.9. Psal. 119. 121. Prov.28. 3. Eccl. 4. 1. Psal. 71 4. Prov. 14. 33. Lev. 29. 11. Gen 43. 18.

18. Out of all which expressions in the Hebrew compounded together, we may extract a full sense of the Crime here confessed by Zaccheus, and rendred in the Greek Original by Συκοφαντέω, (especially if we have respect to Zaccheus his office and trade of life, which was to be a Master of the Publicans in that part of the Country where he lived, i.e. one who had chief authority in receiving the rents and customs due from thence to the Empire:) Zaccheus his crime therefore (as may likewise be collected from that counsel which St. John the Baptist gave to the Publicans who came to his Baptism; which was, that they should exact no more than was their due:) His crime, I say, was to wring and extort from his poor Country-men, either by fraud and false suggestions, or by violence, more than was due from them to the Empire: to enrich his private Coffers by the spoils of the miserable Inhabitants; to roll himself upon them and overwhelm them, by exactions for his private benefit: for that end, pretending the rights and necessities of State, and thereto tentering and streining to the uttermost that power and authority wherewith he was invested from Rome.

19. These kind of Officers, though they were of good reputation with the Romans, as we may collect out of several Orations of Cicero, for by their place they had the privilege to be reckoned among the Equites Romani: yet in the Countries wherein they lived, especially in Jewry, a tenacious covetous Nation, they were the most odious persons upon the earth: insomuch as the very name of a Publican was grown into a Proverb, expressing a person that deserved at all mens hands infamy and hatred. This therefore was Zaccheus his crime, this is that which he calls by as odious a name, of Sycophancy. But to leave this general discourse of the name (for in your behalfs, I am weary of an argument so useless to you) I will now try what advantage every one of us may make from Zaccheus his behaviour in this place.

Use 1. 20. You see here Zaccheus (though he was a man exalted above the ordinary rank of men, yet he) deals something plainly and homely with himself, when he can afford himself no better a name than Sycophant: a title of so odious and hateful a signification, that the Devil himself has not got so disgraceful a name as that: For he is called but Satan, or Διάβολος, that is, as the Holy Ghost himself interprets it, an accuser of the brethren. And though even that be a sufficient crime, yet it is counted a more plausible generous sin, out of hatred, and rancour, and ill nature by false accusations, to endeavour the subversion of ones enemy, than by base dilating and informing, only for the hope of a little gain to himself, to procure the overthrow of his Neighbours Estate and Reputation; which is the condition of a Sycophant.

21. From hence then we may be taught how differently we ought to behave our selves in the discovery of our own, and other mens sins. If our brother hath offended, we are to soften and qualifie his sin, to think charitably of him notwithstanding, and to frame our selves excuses, that the matter may not be so bad as is generally supposed; as likewise hope, that hereafter, by a reformed life, he may redeem and cancel his fore past transgressions. And so we see even John Baptist himself (though a man of no plausible Court-like behaviour, yet) giving his advice to these Publicans, he would only call that an exacting more than was due, which Zaccheus here in himself most boisterously terms Sycophancy. Whereas towards our selves, we must be tetrical and almost uncharitable; we must not break our own heads with precious Balm, as the Psalmist speaketh, that is, by softned oyly excuses, aggravate and assist our own disease.

Use 2. 22. Secondly consider, that Zaccheus his sin, which he deals so roughly and discourteously withal here, was his beloved bosom sin, the sin of his trade and course of life, a sin, in whose company and society, he had always been brought up; his Peccatum, εὐπερίστατον, (as St. Paul most elegantly calls it) the sin that doth so easily beset Heb. 12.1. him, or rather, that doth so well and fitly encompass him, that doth so exactly suit with him. For ordinarily, every man hath some one particular sin, that fits his humour better, and sits closer to him, like a well made Garment, than any other. (And I think this expression renders St. Paul's peccatum εὐπερίστατον, reasonably well.) Other sins are either too streight for him, and do continually vex and gird him, so that he can take but little comfort in them: And such are sins against a mans constitution and temper: as for example, one act of Adultery, though for the time pleasant, would yet afterwards more torment and afflict a covetous mans conscience, than the devouring, it may be, of a whole Country. Or else they hang loose about him, so that though they be easie and delightful sometimes, yet to wear them continually, would prove tedious and irksom. But his dearly respected sin, is good company at all times for him; and, so he may have leave to enjoy but that, he cares not much what becomes of all the rest.

23. As for instance, that I may press a little nearer to your consciences. Put the case there were any one in this company, a covetous oppressing person, such a one as Zaccheus; I'le warrant, he would have been content, that I should rather have taken any Text in the Bible than this: he would have been pleased, nay, even rejoyced, to hear me inveigh bitterly against any other sin besides: Yea, he would willingly, in his own thoughts have joyn'd with me against any man living; for thereby he would be apt to justifie himself in his own eyes, and to say in his thoughts, The Preacher indeed is very earnest in Gods behalf against some body, but I thank God I am righteous all this while, I am not at all concerned in it: Nay, it may be he would have been content to have taken my part even against himself too, in any other sin besides this.

24. But now, that I begin to set my self against his darling, only favourite sin, the delight of his soul, and, as it were, the breath of his nostrils, he will by no means endure it. What? (thinks he) is there not room enough in all the Old and new Testament for this Preacher to expiate in; are there not a thousand precepts, and almost as many stories in the Bible, and must he needs single out this? Am I the only person that he must aim at? Or if he would needs be medling with me, could he not spare me, at least in this one small sin? Let him do his worst to the rest of my sins; let him draw bloud from me in any other place besides this: but this is a very sucking of my hearts bloud; it is a renting to my bowels. The Lord surely will be merciful to me in this sin only; Lo, is it not a little one, and my soul shall live in pleasure and happiness. And such thoughts as these would the lascivious person have entertained, if I had light upon his Text; and so the rest.

25. But as for our new Convert Zaccheus, (and I beseech you let him be he to in your example) he deals not so mercifully, no not with his dearly loved sin of Oppression: No, he is so far from that, that as if, in all other respects, he had been the most innocent holy man alive; he cannot remember, that his conscience is troubled with any sin besides: All his aim and spight is directed against this only sin, which having rooted out of his heart, he supposes he shall then be worthy to entertain his new invited blessed Guest.

26. And to say the truth, if a heart once enlightned by grace, find so much courage, as to be able to prevail against his peccatum εὐπερίστατον, it will be an easie secure skirmish and resistance that all the rest will afford him: Hereupon, saith our Saviour to the Pharisees who were covetous, If you give your riches to the poor, all things shall become pure unto you: As if he should say, this sin of Covetousness is the main chain whereby the Devil holds you captive at his pleasure; strein and force your selves only to break this chain, and then you shall be free indeed in perfect liberty; all your other sins will be only to you as the green withs were to Sampson, even as threds of tow that have smelled the fire.

27. Pertinent to this may that saying of our Saviour's be in the 13 of St. John's Gospel; where giving his Disciples a blessed Example of Humility, in vouchsafing to wash their feet; when it came to St. Peter's turn, he would by no means endure it. But after our Saviour had somewhat sharply rebuked him; Well, says he, since thou
John 13. 9. wilt descend so far, as to wash me, Lord, not my feet only, but my hands and my head: Leave not the work unperfect, since thou wilt begin to cleanse and sanctifie me, per-
Ver. 10. fect this thy good work unto the end. Our Saviour replies, He that is washed, needeth not, save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit. As if he should say, If thou wilt take so much care, as to cleanse and purifie such parts as by continual exercise and travel, are most subject to be defiled, it will be an easie matter to preserve thy self pure through all the rest. Thus Zaccheus having searched out the head and fountain, whence all those noysom lusts which appeared in his life, did flow, he supposes he shall sufficiently purifie the streams thence issuing; if he can once cleanse the spring. Which he proceeds to perform, in my second General; which is the satisfaction by him tendred in lieu of his former oppressions, in these words, I restore unto him four-fold. In the handling of which, I will, according to my promise, begin with the first particular thereof, namely, so much of this satisfaction, as is necessary to be performed by virtue of an indispensable precept, which is of Restitution, in these words, I restore unto him.

Genes. II. Part. I. 28. There is a Doctrine blown about and dispersed by a sort of Preachers in the Reformed Churches, and greedily imbraced by their followers and Proselytes, because they are perswaded, that themselves are the most interested in it; which teacheth, that no man has any right or propriety in the goods and riches which he possesseth, unless he be one of Gods elect faithful servants. So that those who are resolved to account themselves in this number, and to exclude from this Society, all others who suit not with their humours; such, I say, are apt too forwardly to think all others no better than Usurpers of their Patrimony and Inheritance. The dangerous effects and consequences of which Doctrine (especially where power has not been wanting to make the best use and advantage of it) was wofully discovered in those tumults, which not very long since were raised in Germany, especially in Westphalia, about the City of Munster.

29. This Doctrine I suppose was borrowed especially fom the Jesuits, who, upon the same grounds, have entituled their Catholick King to almost all the Western parts of the World; whereby many millions of poor souls have been most unhumanely and barbarously massacred, to make way for the supposed right owners the Spaniards, as we find testified with horrour and detestation, even by many ingenious honest-hearted Writers of their own Nation.

30. Neither the time nor my Text will allow me leisure to stand long upon the confuting of this pernicious Doctrine, I will only oppose to it that saying of the Psalmist. The Earth is the Lords, but he hath given it to the children of men: No man alive hath any right in the goods of this world, but only by a gift from God: and by his gift, all the children of men, without exception, are instated in it; so that no pretence of Religion or Election can be sufficient for any one to disseise another man, of what condition or quality soever he be, that is once legally possessed of them.

31. Therefore, whosoever he be, that whether by fraud, or violence, or any other title, shall invade, or usurp upon the rights of another, he does, as much as in him lies, without any warrant, nullifie the gift of God, and takes upon him to oppose and thwart his most wise providence; setting up himself as it were in Gods seat, and dethroning him, establishing a new order of providence of his own. And thinkest thou that dost these things, that thou shalt escape the Judgment of God? Canst thou imagine, that he will patiently endure to see his Judgments reversed, or his Mercies evacuated by thee? That whereas he hath said, I will bless this man, and enlarge his bounds upon the Earth; thou shouldst take upon thee to say on the other side, Let God deal as mercifully as he pleaseth to this man, but I know what I am

I am resolved of, I am determined to crush and grind him to powder; I am resolved that his children shall beg at my gates, and not be satisfied; they shall bow unto me, and not be regarded. What a wretched unworthy opinion must such a one of necessity entertain of God?

32. And I beseech you, do not think that this is only a Rhetorical forced straining of a Point. The Holy Ghost will tell you as much in express terms, Prov. 14. 31. and Prov. 14. again, Prov. 17. 5. He that oppresseth the poor, reproacheth his Maker. He sets his mark 31. and 17. 5. and brand of infamy almost upon all Gods glorious Attributes; as if God had not power enough to maintain the poor man against his Adversary; as if he had not wisely enough dispensed his blessings; as if he would not suffer God to extend his mercies but upon whom himself shall please; and so of the rest.

33. But I will now, for your sakes, transgress something the limits of my Text, and whereas I should only meddle with the unlawfulness of detaining goods gotten by oppression, and sycophancy, I will make the subject more general in this Proposition, which I beseech you heedfully to attend, and hereafter seriously to consider of: This therefore I say and testifie, That whosoever he be, whose Conscience shall convince him, Doctr. that he hath gain'd any thing by an unlawful course, If he resolve not to restore it, and die in that resolution, it is impossible he should be saved. For the confirming of which Proposition, instead of many, almost infinite, unanswerable reasons, I will only make use of two, each of them drawn from the impossibility in such a man of performing two duties, most necessarily required at every mans hands that professeth Christianity; the one whereof is, Prayer; the second, Repentance.

34. Concerning Prayer, I will demonstrate, That he can neither seriously give God thanks for bestowing upon him those Riches which he calls Blessings; nor secondly, desire Gods blessing upon those Riches. For the first, Without question, if such a one shall dare to open his mouth to give God thanks for his Riches, it will prove to him a greater sin than the unjust unlawful gathering of them, as the Psalmist saith, His very Prayers shall be turned into sin; for thereby he will entitle the just righteous God unto his abominable sin. Dares such a man, with any confidence give thanks to Almighty God for suffering him to be his Enemy in oppressing and persecuting, it may be, Gods faithful beloved servants, for suffering him to be an instrument of the Devils? Therefore, if there be any such that hear me this day, (yet I hope, nay, I am almost confident, there is not) but, and if there be, let me beseech him, that of all things in the world, he will take heed of giving thanks, let him rather proceed on blindly in his sin, and put out of his mind all thought and consideration of God; for never any Heathen could offer him such an indignity as this, no not Epicurus nor Diagoras himself.

35. In the second place, How can such a one desire God to bless unto him, and increase those Riches so unjustly gotten? Will he say, Lord make it appear unto the world, by blessing me in these my ungodly courses that thou likest well of them, and that thou hast been of conspiracy with me in all mine ungracious projects; so shall the godly quickly be rooted out of the earth, for every one will take advantage to wrong another; If thou wilt bless me, every one will be ready to tread in my steps. We see a man in such a state cannot seriously pray no kind of Prayer, unless he purpose to mock God to his face, so that he has defrauded himself of one necessary means of Salvation: But that which follows is of greater importance yet.

36. There is nothing wherein a man (that is resolved not to part with goods unlawfully gathered) can deal with more despightful petulancy and uncivility with God, than by offering to pretend to an unfeigned Repentance. It is much like the behaviour of Charles the Fifth unto God, who caused publick Prayers and Processions to be made unto God for the delivery of the Pope in Spain, whom himself at the same time detained Prisoner in his own Castle St. Angelo, with a resolution that howsoever those Prayers wrought with God to pity his Vicar, yet till he had concluded Conditions for his own advantage with him, he should never be released: Just such another Enterlude, and phantastical Pageant must this mans Repentance be.

37. He

37. He will ſay, perhaps: Lord, I confeſs, I cannot juſtifie thoſe ways and courſes whereby I procured my wealth; it may be, to make way for my exceſs and ſuperfluity many a poor ſoul (yet richer in thy grace and favour than my ſelf) has been forced almoſt to ſtarve for penury and want. It may be there are ſtore of Orphans and Widows that are importunate upon thee for vengeance againſt my unchriſtian profeſſion; and I acknowledge, that for my demerits I am liable to be forced to drink the very dregs of thy fierce wrath and indignation for ever. I will therefore rely and caſt my ſelf upon thy mercy and pity, which yet, if I cannot purchaſe without the loſs and reſtitution of my ill-gotten wealth, I will rather adventure upon thy fury; And though I know it to be a fearful thing and inſupportable miſery to fall into thy hands, as into the hands of an enemy and purſuer; yet upon no manner of conditions will I part with my Riches; No, not though I were now upon my death-bed, being out of all hopes of ever enjoying any comfort and pleaſure my ſelf from them, and within few hours expecting to be convey'd into my everlaſting Priſon: yet rather than my Son, or my Kinſman (who even after reſtitution made of what is unlawfully got, might perhaps have remaining to him ſufficient to maintain him plentifully in this world) yet rather than he ſhall abate any thing of that vanity and ſuperfluity which my exceſs of wealth will be able to bear, I will endanger the forfeiture of my inheritance in the land of the living.

Obj. 1. 38. But it may be, you will ſay, That it is an impoſſible thing for any man that pretends to Chriſtianity, to have ſuch thoughts in him as theſe. I confeſs, it is a hard thing for a man to make ſuch a formal diſtinct Diſcourſe with himſelf as this was: But con-

Sol. ſider, whether ſuch a mans thoughts (which at an exigence, like this, are confuſed and tumultuous) yet if they were reduced into order and method, conſider, I ſay, whether they would not be digeſted into a ſenſe and meaning equivalent unto that which before I expreſſed; ſo that God who knows the bent and inclination of his heart (much better than himſelf) he will diſplay and diſcover them diſtinctly and legibly before his eyes, and will proceed againſt him, as if he had behaved himſelf towards him after ſuch an unworthy, more than Atheiſtical, faſhion.

Obj. 2. 39. But again, it is poſſible, I may be replied upon, and have the caſe put, that a man who hath unrighteouſly oppreſſed or defrauded his neighbour, has not means enough left to make ſatisfaction by reſtoring. And that is no extraordinary example, that Goods ill got ſhould have by the Juſtice of God Wings given them to fly away, and eſcape out of the hands of the Purchaſers: Shall ſuch men, becauſe they are not able to reſtore, be concluded in ſuch a deſperate eſtate as before I have mentioned?

Sol. No, God forbid! If in ſuch circumſtances a man ſhall be unfeignedly ſorry for his miſdeeds, and withal reſolve, if God ſhall hereafter bleſs him with abilities, to make reſtitution, our merciful God will accept of that good inclination of his heart, as if he had perfectly ſatisfied and reſtored to each man his due: For without all queſtion, God will never condemn any man becauſe he is not rich.

Obj. 3. 40. If it ſhall be again queſtioned, and the ſuppoſition made, that a man (for example, a Tradeſman) cannot poſſibly call to remembrance each particular mans name whom he hath wrong'd, (as indeed, it is almoſt impoſſible he ſhould) what

Sol. advice ſhall he take in ſuch a caſe? I anſwer, that he muſt in this caſe conſider, that by this ſin, he hath not only wrong'd his Neighbour, but God alſo; therefore ſince he cannot find out the one, let him repay it to the other: Let him be ſo charitable, and do that kindneſs to God, as to beſtow it in Alms upon his poor ſervants: Or, ſince God himſelf is grown ſo poor and needy, (eſpecially in this Kingdom) that he hath not means enough to repair his own houſes, nor ſcarce to make them habitable, he may do well to reſcue Gods Churches from being habitations of Beaſts, and ſtables for Cattel: or laſtly, which more concerns you, ſince God is here grown ſo much out of purſe, that he has not means enough to pay his own ſervants wages equal to the meaneſt of your houſhold ſervants, let not them any longer be the mocking ſtocks of thoſe Canaanites, your enemies, that ſo ſwarm in your Land: here is a ſubject fit indeed for your Charity: and a miſerable caſe it is, God knows, that they ſhould ſhould be the perſons, who of all conditions of men ſhould ſtand in greateſt need of your mercy and charity.

41. Oh! but will ſome man ſay: we have found now at what the Preacher aimeth: all this ado about reſtitution is only to enrich the Clergy. If ſuch thoughts and jealouſies as theſe ariſe in your hearts, (as I know, by experience it is no unlikely thing they ſhould) O then, I beſeech you, for the mercies of God, conſider in what a miſerable ſtate the Church muſt needs be, when the moſt likely courſe to keep the Miniſters of God from ſtarving, muſt be your ſins: When thoſe to whom you have committed your ſouls in truſt, as they that muſt give God an account for them, ſhall through want and penury be rendred ſo heartleſs, and low-ſpirited, that for fear of your anger, and danger of ſtarving, they ſhall not dare to interrupt or hinder you, when you run headlong in the paths that lead you to deſtruction: when out of faint-heartedneſs they ſhall not dare to take notice, no, not of the moſt ſcandalous ſins of their Patrons, but, which is worſt, be the moſt forward officious Paraſites to ſooth them in their crimes, and cry peace unto them, when God and their own Conſciences tell them that they are utter ſtrangers from it, and neither do, nor are ever likely to know the ways of peace: Laſtly, when theſe Meſſengers of God ſhall be the moſt ready to tell you, that thoſe Poſſeſſions and Tithes which have been wreſted out of Gods hands are none of Gods due, that they are none of the Churches Patrimony; that their right is nothing but your voluntary Alms and charitable Benevolence, and that they ſhall think themſelves ſufficiently and liberally dealt withal, if you ſhall account them worthy to be the companions of the baſeſt and meaneſt of your ſervants. I could almoſt be ſilent in this cauſe, did not our enemies in Gath know of it, and if it were not publiſhed in the ſtreets of Askalon; inſomuch, that you have given cauſe to the enemies of God to blaſpheme our glorious and undefiled Religion.

42. I will conclude this Doctrine of Reſtitution moſt neceſſary certainly to be proſecuted in theſe times, only with propoſing to your conſiderations two Motives, which in all reaſon ought to perſuade you to the practice of it: the one ſhall be, that you would do it for your own ſakes; the other, for your childrens ſake. For the former, though I could never be ſcanted of Arguments ſufficient to enforce it, though I ſhould make it the ſubject of my Sermons to my lives end, yet becauſe, I perceive, it is time for me to haſten to your releaſe, I will only deſire you to remember how much I have told you already, that this Doctrine concerns you, ſince it is impoſſible for any man while he is guilty of the breach of this duty, to put in practice even the moſt neceſſary and indiſpenſable Precepts of Chriſtian Religion.

43. But concerning the ſecond Motive, which I deſire ſhould induce to the practice of Reſtitution, namely, that you ſhould be perſuaded to it even for your childrens ſake, I beſeech you, take this ſeriouſly into your conſideration. That whereas it may be, you may think that by heaping wealth, howſoever purchaſed, upon your heirs, you ſhall ſufficiently provide for them againſt all caſualties, yet, that God alſo hath his treaſures in ſtore to countervail yours, and to provide ſo, that your Heirs ſhall take but little content, God knows, in all their abundance: for, as it is in Job 20.8. God will lay up the iniquity of ſinners for their children, i.e. He will not ſatisfie himſelf with wreaking vengeance of other mens wrongs upon your heads that have done them, but will take care alſo, that your children ſhall be no gainers by the bargain: Therefore, as you deſire the welfare of thoſe for whoſe ſake eſpecially, you dare adventure to hazard even your own ſouls, bequeath not to them for a Legacy a canker and moth, that will aſſuredly conſume and devour all your Riches: Take pity of thoſe poor ſouls who are nothing intereſſed in their own perſons in thoſe crimes wherewith their wealth was purchaſed, and leave not unto them a curſe from God upon their Inheritance. But, I ſee, I muſt be forced even abruptly to break from this argument of Reſtitution; I come therefore, briefly, to my laſt particular, namely, the exceſs and extraordinary meaſure of Zaccheus his Reſtitution, which he profeſſeth ſhall be fourfold, to be diſpatch'd in one word.

44. However, I found it ſomething a hard task to clear my firſt particular of Part. 2. Con-

Confeſſion, from the danger and neighbourhood of Popery, yet, I fear, that in moſt mens opinions, it will prove more difficult to do as much for this: For here is an Object. action performed by Zaccheus, (namely, Four-fold Reſtitution) without all queſtion, good and acceptable to God, and yet not enjoyned by virtue of any Commandment, and, What is that, but plain Popiſh Super-erogation? For, the Judicial Law of reſtoring four-fold, is only in ſtrictneſs and propriety applicable to plain direct Stealing.

Sol. 45. I confeſs, that ſome particular men, for fear of this conſequence have thought themſelves obliged to diſſent not only from St. Paul's diſtinction of counſels from Precepts in the Goſpel, but alſo from the general uniform conſent of all Antiquity: Whereas, if we ſhall well conſider it, they have feared where no fear was: For, our Churches never condemned that diſtinction, as if there were danger from thence of making way for Popery: But this is that abomination of a more than Phariſaical ſelf-juſtifying Pride in the Church of Rome, that upon ſo weak a foundation they have moſt inartificially erected their Babel of Super-erogation, whereby they teach that they cannot only through the whole courſe of their lives exactly perform all the Commandments of God, without offending in any one mortal ſin; by this means challenging at Gods hands Remiſſion of their Sins, and everlaſting Salvation for themſelves; but alſo by their voluntary unrequired obedience unto Evangelical Counſels, leave God in arrearages unto them, and make an extraordinary ſtock of merits, which ſhall be left unto the Popes care and providence to manage, and diſpenſe to any mans uſe for ready money. This is that Doctrine which the Church of England, in expreſs words, moſt worthily profeſſeth a deteſtation unto, in their fourteenth Article, which hath been tranſcribed into the five and fortieth of this Church. And yet for all this neither of theſe Churches have any quarrel to that
1 Cor. 7. 25. diſtinction of St. Paul, (when ſpeaking of voluntary Chaſtity, he ſaith, I have received no ſuch Commandment from the Lord, yet I give my advice or counſel) as hath been excellently diſcovered by the late incomparable Biſhop of Winchester in his Reſp. ad Apologiam.

46. And now though I have gone through and quite abſolved my Text, yet I can ſcarce think my Sermon finiſhed, till I have endeavoured to make it beneficial unto you by applying it to your Conſciences and practice: But when I ſhould come to that, I confeſs, I find theſe times wherein we live ſo indiſpoſed for ſuch an Application, that I know not which way to begin with you: For, ſhall I ſeriouſly enjoyn you, as by a Precept from God, that where you have unjuſtly oppreſſed, or cunningly and cloſely defrauded your Neighbour, that you ſhould, as Zaccheus did here, reſtore unto him four-fold? No, I dare not adventure ſo far, I have received no ſuch Commandment from the Lord: and then, I ſhould be guilty of that which was an unjuſt accuſation laid upon Moſes and Aaron, Ye take too much upon you, ye Sons of Levi.

47. Shall I then endeavour to perſuade you to conform your ſelves to this pattern of Zaccheus, as to a Counſel? Alas the times are ſuch, that well were we if as ſome have turned all Counſels into Precepts, that the ſame men would not at leaſt in their practice convert all Precepts into Counſel: If they would not think that the Moral Legal Precepts were Antiquated and diſſolved by bringing in the New Covenant of Grace! Or, if not quite abrogated, yet left ſo arbitrary, that they ſhould become matters of no neceſſary importance and conſequence, duties, which if we ſhall perform, we ſhall thereby approve our gratitude and thankfulneſs unto God our Saviour; and yet, if by chance they be left undone, ſince they are eſteemed no neceſſary conditions of the New-Covenant, there is no great danger as long as we can keep a
Dr. Carleton in his Epiſtle to K. James. ſpark of faith alive, as long as we can perſuade our ſelves that we have a firm perſuaſion of Gods mercy in Chriſt to our ſelves in particular; which kind of newly invented faith, an Adverſary of our Church pleaſantly, and I fear too truly defines, when he ſays, It is nothing but a ſtrong fancy.

48. Theſe

48. Theſe things therefore conſidered, I will leave the application of Zaccheus his extraordinary Reſtitution to your own Conſciences, according as God and your own ſouls ſhall agree together: Only I beſeech you, not to make a counſel of Reſtitution in general, but to free your ſelves from the burden and weight of other mens Riches, leſt they over-leaven and ſwell you ſo unmeaſurably, that you ſhall not be able to preſs in at that ſtraight gate, which would lead you unto thoſe bleſſings and glorious habitations which Chriſt hath purchaſed for you, not with theſe corruptible things of Silver and Gold, but with his own precious Bloud: Unto which habitations God of his infinite mercy bring us all, for the ſame our Lord Jeſus Chriſt his ſake, To whom with the Father, &c.

The Eighth Sermon.

Gal. V. 5.

For we through the Spirit, wait for the hope of Righteousness by Faith.

THis day the wisdom of the ancient Primitive, and I think, Apostolick Church hath dedicated to the memory of an Epiphany, or Apparition of a miraculous Star, which was sent to guide the Magi, or Wisemen of the East, to the place where our Saviour was born. But suppose there were such a Star seen, and three men of the East conducted by it; must all the Christian World presently fall a rejoycing for it? There was reason indeed, that they should be exceeding glad, but shall we therefore lose a whole days labour by it. To say the truth, there is no reason for it: therefore either better grounds must be found out for our rejoycing, or it were well done to make Christmass a day shorter hereafter.

2. But for all this, if we well consider it, we Gentiles might better spare any Holiday in the year than this; for there is none besides this, properly our own, but the Jews will challenge an equal interest in it. The appearing of the Star, then, is the least part of the Solemnity of this day: For a greater and more glorious light than the Star this day arose unto us, even that so long expected Light which was to lighten the Gentiles, which was to give light to them which sate in darkness, and in the shadow of death, and to guide our feet in the way of peace. This day, as St. Paul saith, Τὸ Tit. 2, 11.
χάρις τοῦ Θεοῦ, There was an Epiphany likewise of the grace of God, to wit, the Gospel; which now, as on this day, began to bring Salvation, not to the Jews only, but to all men, even to us sinners of the Gentiles, of whom these three wise men were the first fruits. And, to say the truth, the appearing of Christ himself, unless he had brought with him this light to lighten the Gentiles in his hand, had not been sufficient to make a solemn day for us. The Star then was not that light, but it was sent to bear witness of that light, namely, the Gospel, the glory whereof fills my Text fuller than the Majesty of God ever filled the Temple. For here we have the whole nature of the Gospel comprehended and straitned within the narrow compass of my Text, yet no part of it left out; yea, we have not only the Gospel discovered by its own light as it is in it self, but in comparison with those twinkling cloudy Stars of Jewish Ordinances, and that once-glorious, but now eclipsed light, the Law of Works: since then, this is the day which the Lord hath made for us, we will rejoyce and be glad in it, and we will be ready to hearken, especially to any thing that shall be spoken concerning our Epiphany; concerning that blessed light, for many Ages removed out of our sight, and as on this day beginning to appear in our Horizon.

3. The words of my Text, I find so full and swelling with expression, so fruitful and abounding in rich sense, that I am almost sorry I have said so much of them to fit them to this day: But in recompence, I will spare the labour of shewing their dependence and connexion with the preceding part of the Epistle, and consider them as a loose severed Thesis. In which is contained, not only the sum and extract of this Epistle, but likewise of Christian Religion in general, in opposition both to the Mosaical saical Law given to the Jews; and the Law of Works, called also the Moral Natural Law, which from the beginning of the World hath been assented to, and written in the hearts of all mankind. The sense of which words, if they were inlarged, may be this, "We Christians, by the tenour and prescript of our Religion, expect the hope of " Righteousness, i.e. the reward which we hope for by righteousness; not as those, " vain Teachers newly sprung up among you Galatians, would have us, by obedi- " ence unto the carnal Ceremonial Law of Moses, but, through the Spirit, i.e. by a spi- " ritual worship; neither by performing the old Covenant of Works, which we are " not able to fulfil, but by faith, by such an obedience as is prescribed unto us in the " Gospel, We through the Spirit wait, &c.

4. In these words then, which comprehend the complete essence of the Covenant of Grace, we may consider, First, the conditions on mans part required, in these words, through the Spirit, and by Faith. Secondly, upon the performance of a duty, there follows Gods promise, and the condition which God will make good unto us, and that is, the hope of Righteousness, or Justification. In the former part, namely, the obedience which is required from us Christians, we may consider it, first, in oppositon to the Mosaical Law, by these words, through the Spirit; which import, that it is not such an outward carnal obedience, as Moses his Law required: but an internal spiritual worship of the heart and soul. Secondly, the opposition of this new Covenant, to the old Covenant of Works, in these words, by Faith; which signifie, that we do not hope for Salvation by the Works of the Law, but by the righteousness of Faith, or the Gospel. In the second General, we may likewise observe, first the nature of Justification, which comprehends the promises which God has been pleased to propose to us as the reward of our obedience. Secondly, the interest which we Christians in this life after we have performed our duties, may have in these promises, which is Hope, expressed in these words, We wait for the hope, &c. Of these ------ I. 1. 2. II. 1. 2.

5. First then of the Covenant of Grace, as it is distinguish'd from the Mosaical Law by these words, through the Spirit. Where we will consider the nature of the Jewish Law, and wherein it is distinguished from the Christian. When Almighty God, with a high hand and a stretched out arm, had rescued the people of Israel from the Egyptian slavery, and brought them in safety into the Wilderness, intending then to settle and reduce them into good order and government himself, and by common voluntary consent, they all agreed to submit themselves, to whatsoever Laws he shall prescribe unto them, as we find Exod. 19. from the third to the ninth verse. So that afterwards, Judg. 8. when the people, after an unexpected glorious victory obtained by Gideon, would have made him a King, and have setled the government in his house: No, saith Gideon, (ver. 23,) I will not rule over you, neither shall my Son rule over you, The Lord shall rule over you. And likewise afterward when Samuel complained to God of the perverseness of the people, who were weary of his Government, and would have a King, as the Nations round about them had: Thou art deceived, saith God, it is my government that they are weary of; They have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, and now are risen up in rebellion against me, to depose me from that Dominion which with their free consents I assumed: For which intolerable base ingratitude of that Nation, in his wrath he gives them a King, he appoints his Successour, which revenged those injuries and indignities offered to Almighty God, to the uttermost upon them. Exod. 19. Judg. 8, &c. Judg. 8. Ver. 22.

6. Now during the time of Gods reign over them, never any King was so careful to provide wholesom Laws both for Church and Commonwealth as he was, insomuch, as he bids them look about, and consider the Nations round about them, If ever any people was furnished with Laws and Ordinances of such equity and righteousness, as theirs were: which Laws, because they were ordained by Angels, in the hand of a Mediator, namely Moses, are commonly called by the name of the Mosaical Law, and are penned down at large by him in his last four Books.

7. The Precepts and prohibitions of this Law, are of several natures: For some duties therein enjoyned, are such as in their own natures have an intrinseal essential goodneſs and righteouſneſs in them, and the contrary to them, are in themſelves evil, and would have been ſo, though they had never been expreſly prohibited: Such are eſpecially the ten Words or Precepts written by Gods own finger in the two Tables of Stone: Other Precepts concern matters of their own nature indifferent, and are only to be termed good, becauſe they were commanded by a poſitive divine Law; ſuch are the Ceremonial Waſhings, Purifications, Sacrifices, &c. A third ſort are of a mixt nature, the objects of which, are, for the moſt part, things in their own nature, good or evil; but yet the circumſtances annexed unto them, are meerly arbitrary and alterable, as namely, thoſe things which are commanded or forbidden by that which is commonly called the Judicial Law: for example, The Law of four-fold Reſtitution of things ſtoln. Theft of its own nature is evil, and deſerves puniſhment: But that the puniſhment thereof ſhould be ſuch a kind of Reſtitution, is not in it ſelf neceſſary, but may be changed either into a corporal puniſhment, or, it may be, into a civil death, according as thoſe who have the government of Kingdoms and States ſhall think fit and convenient for the diſpoſitions of the times wherein they live, as we ſee by experience in the practice of our own Kingdoms. For the due execution of which Laws, and puniſhment of tranſgreſſors, God appointed Judges and Rulers; and where they failed through want of care or partiality, himſelf many times would immediately and perſonally inflict the puniſhment.

Deut. 27. 26. 8. Now the general Sanction of this whole Law is expreſſed, Deut. 27. 26. in theſe words, Curſed is every one that continueth not in all the words of this Law to do them: which curſe, as we find it afterwards at large interpreted, imported a ſudden violent untimely death, together with all kind of misfortune, that could make this life miſerable: ſo that he was liable to this Curſe that ſwerved in any one point or circumſtance, from what was contained in that Law. Notwithſtanding, in ſome caſes, God was pleaſed to remit the rigour of this Curſe, and to accept of certain gifts and offerings, and the expiatory ſacrifices of Beaſts, as it were, in exchange for the lives of the delinquents. I ſhould but fruitleſly trifle away the time in inſiſting any longer upon the nature and quality of the Moſaical Law. I will now, as I am required by my Text, ſhew you the extreme difference, and incomparable excellency of the Covenant of Grace, or the Goſpel beyond this, in ſeveral reſpects.

9. As firſt, The Moral Duties of the two Tables, as they are part of the Moſaical Jewiſh Law required only an external obedience and conformity to the Affirmative Precepts thereof, and an abſtaining from an outward practice of the Negative. They did not reach unto the conſcience, no more than the National Laws of other Kingdoms do: ſo that for example, where the Law of Moſes forbids Adultery upon pain of Death, he that ſhould in his heart luſt with any woman, could not be accounted a tranſgreſſor of Moſes his Law, neither was he liable to the puniſhment therein ſpecified: whereas the Goſpel requires not only an outward, and, as I may ſay, corporal obedience to Gods Commandments, but alſo an inward ſanctification of the ſoul and conſcience upon the ſame penalty of everlaſting damnation with the former. And what is now ſaid of the Moral Precepts (as they are part of Moſes his Law) by the ſame proportion likewiſe, is to be underſtood of the Judicial.

10. Notwithſtanding what hath now been ſaid, yet we muſt know, that theſe very Jews, to whom this Law was given, being the children of Abraham, were heirs likewiſe of the Promiſes which were made unto him and his Seed; and the way or means whereby they were to attain unto theſe Promiſes, were the very ſame by which himſelf obtained them, namely, Faith. So that this Moſaical Law (whatſoever glorious opinion the Jews had of it) was not that Covenant whereby they were to ſeek for Juſtification in the ſight of God. Till Chriſt's coming there was no Law given, which could have given life, that is, which could promiſe everlaſting life unto man; not the Law of Works by reaſon of man's imperfection and weakneſs; not the Law of Moſes, by reaſon of its own weakneſs, as St. Paul clearly demonſtrates, eſpecially in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews.

11. For what end then was the Law of Moſes given? St. Paul ſhall anſwer the queſtion, queſtion, Gal. 3. 19. It was added (ſaith he) becauſe of tranſgreſſions, till the ſeed ſhould come to whom the promiſes were made. It was added, as if he ſhould ſay, After the promiſes made unto Abraham and his Seed, this Law was moreover annexed, not as any new condition whereby they were to attain unto the promiſes, but that, in the mean time, till the promiſes were fulfilled, they ſhould be reſtrained, as it were, and kept under a ſtrict outward diſcipline, from running into any exceſs of diſobedience: for thoſe, whom perhaps the goodneſs and mercy of God, in affording them thoſe promiſes, would not by the hope of them be able to bridle, they notwithſtanding when they ſaw puniſhment even unto death without mercy inflicted upon the Tranſgreſſors, they would be more careful of their ways. It follows, Till the Seed ſhould come to whom the promiſes were made; or as himſelf in Heb. 9. alters the phraſe, till the time of Reformation: that is, When Chriſt, who was that bleſſed Seed, promiſed to Abraham, ſhould come, he would ſo clearly and convincingly ſhew unto the World the way of Salvation, that they ſhould no longer need to be kept under their old Schoolmaſter, the Law; and therefore at his coming, the date of the whole Moſaical Law ſhould expire. And that may be one reaſon why St. Paul is in this Chapter ſo violent againſt thoſe that would urge the obſervation of the Moſaical Law; foraſmuch as by inforcing it now when the Seed was already come, to whom the Promiſes were made, they did ſeem to evacuate the coming and Goſpel of Chriſt. Gal. 3. 19. Heb. 9. 10.

12. Now, that the Moſaical Law was not given to the Jews for this end, that by the fulfilling thereof, they ſhould promiſe to themſelves the reward of righteouſneſs, everlaſting life; is evidently demonſtrated, both by our Saviour in the fifth of S. Matthew, and by St. Paul through all his Epiſtles, but eſpecially in that to the Hebrews. The force and virtue of whoſe arguments, may in general be reduced to that ſence which before I mentioned, viz. That the Law, by the performance whereof we may expect life, requires not only an external conformity to the outward works, but an inward ſpiritual ſanctification alſo of the ſoul and heart.

13. But what ſaith the Law of Moſes? It was ſaid, ſaith our Saviour, by them of old, i. e. in the Law of Moſes, Thou ſhalt not kill; not, Thou ſhalt not be angry, thou ſhalt not bear malice in thy heart: ſo that if thou abſtaineſt from Murder, thou fulfilleſt Moſes his Law; and if thou doeſt kill, thou ſhalt be in danger of Judgment, i. e. the only puniſhment which the Law of Moſes inflicted upon the Tranſgreſſors thereof, was the danger to be condemned to death by the Judgment, or Bench of Judges appointed for the execution of this Law. But I ſay unto you; I, who clearly ſhew unto you that way wherein you muſt walk, before you can promiſe to your ſelves any hope of eternal life; I ſay unto you, not only, whoſoever ſhall kill his neighbour, but whoſoever out of malice or rancour, ſhall ſay unto his brother, Thou fool, ſhall be in danger of Hell fire. So likewiſe, not only he which commits Adultery in the outward act, is culpable by my Goſpel before God, but alſo he which looks upon a woman to luſt after her in his heart. And ſo inſtead of forſwearing and breaking of Oaths, and Vows, which Moſes his Law forbad; Chriſt condemns fruitleſs and unneceſſary, though true, Oaths. Inſtead of the Law of Retaliation of injuries, Chriſt commands rather to ſuffer a ſecond injury, than to revenge the firſt. Mat. 5. 21. Ver. 22. Ver. 27. Ver. 33. Ver. 38.

14. But in the laſt place, the laſt example which our Saviour gives, may ſeem to deſtroy this collection which hath been drawn out of this Chapter: for, ſaith he, Verſ. 43. You have heard, that it hath been ſaid of old, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy. What! did Moſes his Law then permit a man to bear hatred and malice unto another? Did I ſay, permit them? Nay, it commanded them ſo perfectly to hate their enemies, to wit, the ſeven Nations who poſſeſs that Land, which was theirs by promiſe, mentioned, Exod. 3. 2. Deut. 7. 1. to which were added the Amalekites, Exod. 27. 19. Deut. 30. 19. That they were enjoyned to deſtroy them utterly, old and young, men, women, and children, even to the very cattel, without all pity and conſideration. Inſomuch, that Saul, for his unſeaſonable pity but of one perſon, and that a King of the Amalekites, and reſerving the beſt Ver. 43. Exod. 34. 2. Deut. 7. 1. Exod. 23. 23. Deut. 20. 16. Deut. 25. 19.

of the Cattel for sacrifice to God, had the Kingdom utterly rent from him and his posterity. Whereas, by our Saviour, in the words of St. Paul, enmity is slain, No enemies now in Christianity, but all Neighbours, and Friends, and Brethren; nay more, if any one will needs be your enemy, love him notwithstanding, saith Christ, If he curse you, bless him; if he hate you, do good unto him: If he use you despitefully, and persecute you, pray for him, To conclude this Argument from our Saviour's authority; Christ adds, as a Corollary to his discourse, speaking to his Disciples and Followers,

Ver. 20. Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, i.e. whereas they content themselves with an outward carnal obedience to the Law, unless you, besides this, add a spiritual sanctification of the mind, ye shall in no wise enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. I deny not now, but that there may be a mystical spiritual sense even of this Law, and an application thereof almost as perfect, as is expressed in the Gospel, which those who were guided extraordinarily by the Spirit of God, and with help of Tradition, might collect out of it: As the Prophet David, Psal. 19. 7. where Psal. 19. 7. he saith, The Law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul; the Commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightning the eyes, &c. And in this sense, the succeeding Prophets endeavoured to persuade the people to apprehend it. But this was a forced sense of Moses his Law, not primarily intended by the Author; it was no proper natural meaning of it.

15. Proportionably to this Doctrine of our Saviour, St. Paul, speaking of Moses his Law, considered in its proper natural and direct sense, and as extremely unsufficient to justifie a man in the sight of God, calls it ἀδενῆ καὶ πτωχὰ στοιχεῖα, weak and Ibid. v. 19. God, might perform. And, a Law which made no man perfect, Heb. 7. 19. Nay more,

Heb. 8. 7. faith he, it is not ἄμεμπτος, not without fault, Heb. 8. 7. i.e. a man might perform the Law of Moses, and yet not be ἄμεμπτος, he may be a wicked man still in Gods sight; for all his legal Righteousness, he may remain dead in trespasses and sins. Insomuch, as the same Paul speaking of himself, before he was converted to Christianity, says he,

Phil. 3. 6. Concerning the righteousness which is of the Law, I was blameless; I did so exactly fulfil that measure of Righteousness, which Moses his Law required of me: that, in respect of that Law, I was a guiltless innocent person; I could justifie my self; I durst with confidence oppose my self in judgment, to the censure of our most severe strict Judges.

16. But what then? Durst Paul with this his Legal Righteousness appear before God, as expecting to be justified in his sight, as claiming any interest in the promises of eternal life, by vertue of this his innocency? By no means: No, saith he, though

Phil. 3. 5. I were blameless, as concerning this righteousness which is of the Law, though I had all the priviledges that any Jew could be capable of, circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the Tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews, according to the Law a Pharisee, (i.e. of that Sect which had preserved the Law in the greatest interity)

Ver. 6. though I were so zealous thereof, that I persecuted the Churches of Christ, which sought to abrogate it: And lastly, though concerning the righteousness of the Law, I was blameless: Yet notwithstanding all these, I will have no better an opinion of these priviledges than they deserve; I will account them only outward carnal priviledges; If I at all rejoyce in them, yet this I will account only, a rejoycing in the flesh. Far be it from me, to think to appear before Christ with such a righteousness as this is. God forbid I should expect to be accepted of by him, for these carnal outward priviledges: Nay, so far am I from that, that, whatsoever I thought, before I knew him, to be a gain and a prerogative unto me, now that I have attained to the excellency of the knowledge of Jesus Christ, I account as loss, as things likely to be rather a hin-

Ver. 9. drance unto me; yea, as dross and dung, and desire to be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the Law: For, alass, how mean, and unworthy will that appear in his eyes? But the righteousness which is of Faith, the righteousness which is of God by Faith. The former righteousness was mine own, and therefore could could not stand in his sight; but that righteousness to which Faith or the Gospel directs me, proceeds not from my own strength, but only from God, who will crown his own graces in me.

17. I have thus far shewed you, both from our Saviour's authority, and St. Paul's likewise; that the performing of the Moral Duties as far as they were inforced, by vertue of Moses his Law, could not make a man capable of attaining to the promises of the New Covenant. And (that I may add one confirmation of this more out of the Old Testament) hereupon it is, that God by the Prophet Ezekiel manifestly sheweth, that God gave not the Law of Moses to the Israelites, for this end, that they should think that the performance of that Law, was all the duty which they owed unto God; or that that obedience could make them accepted of him unto eternal life: No, saith he, if you have any such conceit of those Ordinances, I gave them Statutes which I gave them, were not good, and the Judgments such, as they should not live by them. I will now proceed to shew you the weakness and unprofitableness of the Ceremonial part of Moses his Law likewise, for such a purpose: and that by Arguments taken from St. Paul, especially out of that his most Divine Epistle to the Hebrews.

Ezek. 20. 25.

18. The first Argument shall be drawn out of the ninth Chapter of that Epistle, the sum whereof is this: The first Covenant, which had Ordinances of Divine Service, v. 1, 10. and a worldly Sanctuary, which consisted in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and &c. carnal Ordinances imposed on them i.e. the time of Reformation, in which also were offered gifts and sacrifices; yet with all these Ceremonies and Formalities, they could enter no deeper than the flesh, they could not make him which did the service perfect, as ver. 9. pertaining to the Conscience: That is, for example; those Expiatory Sacrifices which were to be offered for him which had transgressed, they absolved him indeed from a civil carnal punishment, but they could not reach to the conscience; that remained still as guilty and defiled before God, as ever it was. And can it be imagined, that a man so qualified, with such an accusing, condemning conscience, could with any hope or confidence appear before God, as expecting to be freed from the danger of Hell, for the cost or ceremony of a Sacrifice? Those Sacrifices therefore and Ceremonies, the Blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer, sprinkling the un- Ver. 13. clean, might sanctifie a man to the purifying of the flesh, and that is all they could do; and so far they could sanctifie even the most profane person, or the veriest Hypocrite in the world: But it must be only the Blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit, Ver. 14. offered himself without spot unto God, that is able to purge our Consciences from dead works to serve the living God.

19. But it may be objected, The Baptizing and washing of us Christians, and our Object. Commemoration of the true Sacrifice, are powerful and effectual, even to the sanctification of the soul and spirit: And why should not the water of Jordan have as much vertue in it, during Moses his Law, as it has had since, or as ours has now? Why should not their pre-figuration of the true Sacrifice by typical Sacrifices, be as much worth as our post-commemoration thereof? For Christ was the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever. I answer, that Baptism and the Eucharist, are proper Sol. instruments, whereby the Sacrifice of Christ is applied, and made beneficial unto us, and were instituted for that, and no other end: whereas the proper and direct end of Moses his Liturgy and Ceremonies, were only civil carnal immunities; and though it be true, that the Legal Sacrifices were very apt and commodious, to shadow forth the Oblation and Satisfaction of Christ; yet this use of them was so mystical and reserved, so impossible to be collected out of the Letter of the Law, that without a special Revelation from God, the eyes of the Israelites were too weak to serve them to pierce through those dark clouds and shadows, and to carry their observation to the substance: so that I conceive those Sacrifices of the Law, in this respect, are a great deal more beneficial to us Christians; for there is a great difference between Sacraments and Types: Types are only useful after the Antitype is discovered, for the confirmation of their Faith that follow. As for example, Abraham's offering of Isaac by faith, did lively represent the real Oblation of Christ, but in that respect, was of little or no use till Christ was indeed crucified; it being impossible to make that history a ground-work of their Faith in Christ. The like may be said of the Legal Sacrifices.

Isaac

Acts 13. 38. 20. My second Argument shall be taken out of those words of St. Paul. Acts 13.38. where, speaking of Christ, he saith, By him all that believe, are justified from all things, from which they could not be justified by the Law of Moses: From which I infer, that since there were many sins for which the Law of Moses allowed no Sacrifice, no Redemption, no Satisfaction, no Commutation, in what a fearful desperate case would a person that should commit such sins be, if he were to expect Justification before God by the Law of Moses? for that must needs lead him to despair; It could shew him no refuge, no Sanctuary to fly unto; nothing would remain unto such a person but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation to consume Gods Adversary: And therefore no marvel if the same Apostle (*Heb.*7.17,18.) saith, That the former Law for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof (i.e. to Justification) was to be disannulled, since it could make nothing perfect.

Heb. 7. 17,18.

Heb. 8.6. 21. The last Argument shall be inferred from that saying of the Apostle, *Heb.*8.6. where speaking of the New Covenant of Grace, he saith, It was established on better promises, namely, than the Jewish Covenant was: For all the happiness which was to be expected from Moses his Law, was only an exemption from the inconveniences and curses of this life, long days and peaceable, enriched with worldly content and prosperity: Whereas the blessings which attend the performance of the New Covenant or the Gospel are unspeakable and glorious, Such as eye hath not seen, nor indeed, as long as it is mortal, can see, neither can the heart of man conceive them, being eternal in the Heavens. Neither will the ordinary evasion serve the turn, as if these temporal blessings, or plagues and curses mentioned in Moses his Writings, should purposely signifie the blessed estate of glorified Saints, or woes of the damned, for then St. Paul's Argument would fall to the ground; and indeed, that whole Epistle to the Hebrews, would be rendred inconcluding, as might easily be demonstrated, if the time, and throng of matter, which follows would permit.

22. I would not now have you so conceive me, as if I would exclude the Jews of the Old Testament from being partakers of the Promises of the Gospel: No, God forbid: But that which I have said is this, that they attained not unto them by performing Moses his Law, but by the very same means by which we hope to be partakers of them, namely, by performing the substance of those duties which are clearly delivered unto us in the Gospel, and may be found sprinkled in several places, even in Moses his Writings, and no question but were more fully and compleatly delivered unto them by Tradition from their Fathers. And hereupon, I suppose, it is, that when any were converted to the knowledge and worship of the true God in those times, they who made them Proselytes, were not curious to enforce upon them the Observation of Moses his Ordinances and Ceremonies, as we find in the behaviour of Elisha to Naaman the Assyrian, of Jonah to the Ninivites, of Daniel to Nebuchadnezzar, and of the rest of the Prophets to the Tyrians, Moabites, Egyptians, to whom they writ, and whose conversion they sought: None of which urged upon them the observation of the Mosaical Liturgy as a thing necessary or needful to be observed by them: Indeed those who were content to live amongst the Jews, and enjoy their Priviledges and Immunities, were bound to undergo the burden and costliness of the Offerings and Sacrifices, which as St. Paul saith, was so great, that they were both to themselves and their fore fathers intolerable.

Jer. 31. 31. 23. I will conclude this whole point of the difference between Moses his Law, and the Law of Faith, or the Gospel, in Gods own words by the Prophet, *Jer.*31.31. twice quoted by St. Paul in Heb. 8. and 10. where God saith, Behold the days come saith the Lord, that I will make a New Covenant with the House of Israel, and with the House of Judah: Not according to the Covenant which I made with their Fathers in the day that that I took them by the hand to lead them out of the Land of Egypt, which my Covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them, saith the Lord: But this shall be the Covenant that I will make with them, After those days, saith the Lord, I will put my Laws in their hearts, and write them in their inward parts, &c. As if he should say, The former Covenant which I made with them by Moses was only written in two Tables of Stone, as the Roman Laws were in Twelve Tables, and required only an outward conformity and obedience, for the which they did not need an inward sanctifying spiritual Grace to enable them, as the New Covenant of Grace doth. And therefore for the performing of that, I will abundantly afford and supply them with all the Graces of my Holy Spirit.

24. But a little to interrupt this Text: You will say, What, had not the Jews God's Law written in their hearts also? Did not they worship him in Spirit as well as we? No question: But this they did not as commanded by Moses his Law, but by that Covenant made with Abraham, and by him traduced unto them. It follows, And I will be their God, and they shall be my people, i.e. I will be their God after a more especial manner than I was unto them in the Wilderness; I will not only be their King to govern them in peace and tranquillity, out of the danger and fear of their Enemies the Nations about them, and preserve them safe in the promised Land; but I will keep them from the fury and malice of their spiritual Enemies that would seek to destroy their souls, and I will bring them to a Land infinitely exceeding theirs, and whereof the Land of Canaan was but a most unproportionable type and shadow, even mine own blessed and glorious Kingdom, reserved in the highest Heavens, for them who sincerely perform the conditions of my New Covenant. Thus far as largely as so small a measure of time would permit me, I have told you the difference betwixt the Covenant of Grace and Moses his Law, implied in these words of my Text, through the Spirit: I come now to my second particular, namely, the distinction of the same Covenant of Grace from the Law of Works, wherein I shall proceed by the same method, i.e. shewing you first absolutely the nature of those Laws, and then the several differences betwixt them.

25. The Law of Works is the same with that, to the obedience whereof Adam was obliged in Paradise with this exception, that besides the Moral natural Law written in his heart, (the substance whereof is to this day reserved in the minds of all the Sons of Adam) Adam had a second positive Law injoyned him by God, namely, the forbidding him to eat of the Tree of Good and Evil: which one Precept cannot properly be called a part of the Law of Works, or Nature, since the Action thereby forbidden was not of its own nature evil, but only made unlawful by vertue of God's prohibition: Excepting therefore this one particular Precept, the Law which was given to Adam, (called the Law of Works) comprehended in it all kind of moral duties referred either to God, his Neighbour, or Himself, which have in them a natural essential goodness, or righteousness; and, by consequence, the prohibition, of all manner of actions, words, or thoughts, which are in themselves contrary to Justice and Reason. All these Precepts are generally supposed to be contained in the Ten Words written by Gods own finger in two Tables of Stone; though, with submission, I think, that those two Tables contain only directly the moral duties of man to God and his Neighbour: for it will require much forcing and straining to bring in the duties and sins of a man against his own person within that compass, as Temperance, Sobriety, and their opposites, Gluttony, Drunkenness, Self-incontinency, &c.

26. The Obligation to this Law is so strict, severe and peremptory, That it required not only an universal Obedience to whatsoever is contained in that Law, in the full extent, latitude, and perfection thereof, but that continual without interruption through the whole course of a man's life: Insomuch, that he that should but once transgress it in the least point or circumstance, should without redemption, or dispensation, be rendred culpable as of the breach of the whole Law, and remain liable to the malediction thereof. And to this Law in this strictness mentioned are all men living obliged, who are out of Christ, and who either know not of him, or are not willing to submit themselves to his New Covenant.

27. The Justification which was due to the performance of this Law by Justice, and as the wages thereof, that is, the condition wherein God obliged himself to such as fulfilled it, was the promises of this life, and that which is to come; Long, happy, and peaceable days in this world, and in their due time a translation to the joys and glory of heaven: This Justification did not comprehend Remission of Sins, as ours does, for the Law excluded all hope of pardon after sin, no promise made to repentance, repentance would do no good: The Court wherein they were to be judged was a Court of meer rigorous Justice, Justice rejoyced over and against Mercy, Grace, Loving-kindness, and all those blessed and glorious Attributes, whereby God for our Saviour Jesus Christ his sake is pleased and delighted to be known unto the world.

28. This Law in the rigour thereof might easily have been performed by Adam; he had that perfection of grace and holiness given him, which was exactly equal and commensurable to whatsoever duties were enjoyned him: But by his wilful voluntary (God forbid we should say enforced, or absolutely decreed) prevarication he utterly undid both himself and his Posterity, leaving them engaged for his debts, and as much of their own, without almost any money to pay them: Without Christ we are all obliged to the same strictness and severity of the Law, which by reason of our poverty and want of grace, is become impossible to be performed by us: As the blessed Apostle St. Paul hath evidently proved by Induction, in the beginning of his Epistle to the Romans: In the first Chapter, declaring that the Gentiles never did, nor could perform the Law; in the second, saying as much for the Jews; and in the third, joyning them both together in the same miserable desperate estate. The conclusion of his whole discourse is, All have sinned and come short of the glory of God. Thus much for the Law of Works.

29. The state of mankind without Christ, being so deplored, so out of all hope, as I told you: Almighty God out of his infinite mercy and goodness, by his unspeakable wisdom found out an attonement, accepting of the voluntary exinanition and humiliation of his dearly beloved Son, who submitted himself to be made flesh, to all our natural infirmities (sin only excepted) and at last to die that ignominious accursed death of the Cross for the Redemption of mankind; Who in his death made a Covenant with his Father, that those, and only those, who would be willing to submit themselves to the obedience of a new Law, which he would prescribe unto mankind, should for the merits of his obedience and death be justified in the sight of God, have their sins forgiven them, and be made heirs of everlasting glory: Now, that Christ's death was in order of Nature, before the giving of the Gospel, is (I think) evident by those words of St. Paul, Heb. 9. 16, 17. where comparing the old Covenant of the Jews with that of Christ, he saith, Where a Testament is, there must of necessity be the death of the Testator; for a Testament is of force after men are dead, otherwise it is of no strength at all while the Testator liveth; whereupon neither the first Covenant was dedicated without bloud. It was necessary therefore (saith he, ver. 23.) that the patterns of things in heaven should be purified with these. i. e. with the bloud of Beasts, but the heavenly things themselves with better things than those, namely, with the bloud of Christ.

Heb. 9. 15, 17.

30. Which Covenant of Christ (called in Scripture the New Covenant, the Covenant of Grace, the Grace of God, the Law of Faith) according to the nature of all Covenants being made between two parties (at the least) requires conditions on both sides, to be performed, and being a Covenant of Promise, the Conditions on man's part must necessarily go before, otherwise they are no Conditions at all: Now man's duty is comprehended by St. Paul in this word Faith, and God's Promise in the word Justification: And thus far we have proceeded upon sure grounds, for we have plain express words of Scripture for that which hath been said: But the main difficulty remains behind, and that is the true sense and meaning meaning of these two words, Faith and Justification, and what respect and dependence they have one of the other. Which difficulty by Gods assistance, and with your Christian charitable patience, I will now endeavour to dissolve.

31. For the first therefore, which is Faith; we may consider it in several respects, to wit, first as referring us to, and denoting the principal object of Evangelical Faith, which is Christ: Now, if Faith be meant in this sense, (as by many good Writers of our Reformed Churches, it is understood) then the meaning of that so often repeated saying of St. Paul, We are justified by Faith without the Works of the Law, must be, We are justified only for the obedience of Christ, and not for our righteousness of the Law, which is certainly a most Catholick Orthodox sense, and not to be denied by any Christian, though, I doubt it does not express all that St. Paul intended in that Proposition. Secondly, Faith signifies the Act, or exercise, or duty of Faith, as it comprehends all Evangelical Obedience, called by St. Paul, the Obedience of Faith, Rom. 16. 26. The Righteousness of Faith, Rom. 4. 13. & 9. 13. & 10. 6. And it is an inherent grace or vertue, wrought in us by the powerful operation of God's Spirit: Or thirdly, it may be taken for the Doctrine of Faith, called also by him, the Word of Faith, Rom. 10. 8. and the Word of Gods Grace, Acts 20, 32. and the hearing of Faith, Gal. 3. 2. In which sense, as if he meant the Word, St. Paul may seem to resolve us, Rom. 3. 27. where he saith, that boasting is excluded by the Law of Faith, which words are extant in the very heat of the controversie of Justification. Now these senses of Faith, if they be applied to that conclusion of St. Paul, We are justified by Faith, come all to one pass, for in effect it is all one, to say, We are justified by our Obedience, or Righteousness of Faith, and to say, We are justified by the Gospel, which prescribes that Obedience: As on the contrary, to say, We are justified by the Law, or by works prescribed by the Law, is all one. There is a fourth acception of Faith, taken for the single Habit or Grace of Faith, and applied to this proposition (only of all Christians that I have heard of) by the Belgick Remonstrants: which being a new invented fancy, and therefore unwarrantable, yet I shall hereafter have occasion it may be to say something of it.

2. Rom. 16. 25. & 4. 13. & 9. 13. & 10. 6. Rom. 10. 8. Acts 20. 32. Gal. 3. 2. Rom. 3. 27.

31. St. Paul's Proposition, I am perswaded, excludes none of these senses; it is capable of them all: But, before I shew you how they may consist together, I will, in the first place, declare of what nature that righteousness is, which God by vertue of his New Covenant requires at our hands before he will make good his promise unto us. First, then, God requires at our hands a sincere obedience unto the substance of all Moral Duties of the Old Covenant, and that by the Gospel: And this obedience is so necessary, that it is impossible any man should be saved without it. The pressing of this Doctrine takes up by much the greatest part of the Evangelical Writings. Now, that these Duties are not enforced upon us, as conditions of the Old Covenant of Works, is evident, because, by Christ we are freed from the Obligation of the Old Covenant: God forbids, that we should have a thought of expecting the hope of righteousness upon those terms: For, that Covenant will not admit of any imperfection in our works, and then, in what a miserable case are we! There is no hope for us, unless some course be taken, that not only our imperfections, but our sins, and those of a high nature, be passed by, and over-looked by Almighty God, as if he had lost his eyes to see them, or his memory to remember them.

32. The substance then of the Moral Law is enjoyned us by the New Covenant, but with what difference I shall shew you presently, And hereupon it is that our Saviour saith to the Pharisees, who were willing to make any misconstruction of his Doctrine, Think you that I am come to destroy the Law? I, by all means, say we, God forbid else, for unless the old Law be destroyed, we are undone; as long as that is alive, we are dead: If the Law of Works have its natural force still, woe be to us. Therefore, that must not be Christ's meaning: His intent is, as if he should say, Think you that I am come to destroy the righteousness of the Law? Or disoblige men from the necessity of being good, holy, and vertuous? No, by no means; I am not come to destroy the Law, but to fulfill it: The righteousness of the Law, according to the substance thereof, shall be as necessarily required by vertue of that New Covenant which I preach unto you, and to which I exhort you all to submit your selves, as ever it was by the Old Covenant; only because of your weakness and infirmity, I will abate the rigour of it: Those who notwithstanding my offer of Grace and Pardon upon such easie conditions as I prescribe, will yet continue in an habitual state of prophaneness and irreligion shall be as culpable, nay, ten times more miserable than if they never had heard of me, for their wilful neglecting so great salvation. It is easier for Heaven and Earth to pass away, than for one tittle of the Law to fail: For God would be no loser by the annihilation of the world, whereas if any part of the Moral Law should expire, the very beams and rays of Gods essential goodness should be darkned and destroyed.

Rom. 3. ult. 33. In like manner saith St. Paul, Rom. 3. ult. Do we make void the Law through Faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the Law. Now, if a succeeding Covenant establisheth any part of a Precedent, especially, if there be any alteration made in the conditions established, all obligation whatsoever is taken from the Old Covenant, and those conditions are in force only by vertue of the New. When the Norman Conqueror was pleased to establish and confirm to the English some of the ancient Saxons Laws, Are those Laws then become in force as they are Saxon? No, for the Authority of the Saxons, the Authors of those Laws, is supposed to be extinguished, and therefore no power remains in them to look to the execution of them: But by the confirmation of the Norman they are become indeed Norman Laws, and are now in force, not because they were first made by the Saxons, but only by vertue of the succeeding power of the Norman Line. So likewise, when the Gospel enjoyns the substance of the same duties which the old Covenant of Works required; Are we Christians enforced to the obedience of them, because they are duties of the Law? By no means; But only because our Saviour and only Law-maker Jesus Christ commands the same in the Law of Faith.

34. Thus far the New Covenant is in some terms of agreement with the Old, inasmuch as the same Moral duties are enjoyned in them both, as parts of the conditions of both. But the difference herein is, That the Law commands a precise exact fulfilling of these Precepts, (as I told you before) which the Gospel descending to our infirmities, remits and qualifies much: For in the Gospel, he is accounted to fulfil the moral Precepts, that obeys them according to that measure of Grace which God is pleased to allow him; that obeys God, though not with a perfect, yet with a sincere upright heart; that when he is overcome with a temptation to sin, continues not in it, but recovers himself to his former righteousness by Repentance and new Obedience: Thus much then for the Moral Precepts, and with what difference they are commanded in the Old and New Covenant.

35. In the second place, there is another part of Evangelical Obedience, which is purely Evangelical, and which has no commerce nor reference at all to the Law, and that is the Grace of Repentance: For saith St. Paul, Acts 17. 30. But now (that is by the Gospel) God commands all men every where to repent. Now Repentance implies a serious consideration and acknowledgment of that miserable estate whereunto our sins have brought us, and thereupon an hearty unfeigned sorrow for them, a perfect hatred and detestation of them, inferring a full peremptory resolution to break them off, and interrupt the course of them by new obedience. This, I say, is an obedience purely Evangelical, The Law of Works did not at all meddle with it, neither indeed could it: The Law condemns a man as soon as ever he is guilty of the breach thereof, and makes no promise at all of Remission of sins upon Repentance; but rather quite excludes it. Yet from the grace of Repentance we may gather a forcible Argument to make good that which before we spoke concerning the Renewing of the Moral Precepts in the New Covenant. For no reasonable man can deny, that Repentance is absolutely necessary before a man can be justified. Now what is that for which (for example) a new converted Heathen repents, but the breach breach of the Moral Law? Therefore by this necessity of Repentance, he acknowledgeth (and so do we) that by such sins he was excluded from all hope of being Justified. Now it were absurd, for a man to say that any thing excludes a man from being capable of receiving the promises of a Covenant, but only the breaking of the conditions thereof.

36. The third part of Evangelical Righteousness is, Faith, not Moral, but Christian; which is, A relying upon Christ, as the only meritorious cause of whatsoever benefit we obtain by the New Covenant; It being for his sake, both that God bestows upon us Grace, whereby we are enabled to perform his will; and after we have done our duty, that he will freely, and not as wages, bestow upon us the reward thereof. There is another virtue Evangelical, which is Hope, but of that I must speak in my last Point. And thus I have gone through the Conditions required on mans part in the New Covenant, all which I suppose are implied in this word Faith: which being taken in so general a sense, may, I conceive, be thus not improperly defined, viz. To be a receiving and embracing of the Promises made unto us in Christ upon the terms and conditions proposed in the Gospel.

37. Now follow the conditions on Gods part, comprehended in these words: The hope of Righteousness, which are equivalent to the term of Justification: the nature whereof, I shall now endeavour to discover. Justification, I suppose, imports the whole Treasure of blessings and favours, which God, who is rich in mercy, will freely bestow on those whom he accepts as Righteous for his beloved Son our blessed Saviour Jesus Christ his sake; which are first, Remission of sins, and an interest unto the Joys of heaven in this life, and a full consummation both of Grace and Glory in the life to come. Some, I know, think that St. Paul when he discourses of Justification, thereby intends only Remission of sins: And the ground of this opinion is taken from St. Paul quoting those words of David, when he states the Doctrine of Justification, Rom. 4. 6, 7, 8. where he saith, that David describeth the blessedness of the man unto whom God imputeth Righteousness without works, saying, Blessed are they whose unrighteousnesses are forgiven, and whose sins are covered; Blessed is the man unto whom the Lord will not impute sin. But if this Argument out of the Epistle to the Romans be of sufficient force for their sense of Justification; Then certainly an Argument from as expres words in the Epistle to the Galatians, will be as concluding for mine (in which Epistle he also purposely states the same questions.) The words are Gal. 3. 11. That no man is justified by the Law in the sight of God, it is evident, for the Just shall live by faith. Now, to live, I hope, does not signifie, to have one's sins forgiven him, but to be saved: Therefore, unless St. Paul include a right unto Salvation within the compass of Justification, that Text might have been spared, as nothing at all serving for his purpose. Besides, Is not Salvation as free, as gracious, as undeserved an act of God, as Remission of sins? Is it not as much for Christs sake that we are saved, as that our sins are forgiven us? Thus much for what I suppose is meant by Justification. I will now as briefly and as perspicuously as I can (without using Allegories and Metaphorical expressions, with which this Point is ordinarily much obscured) shew you the combination of these two words, in what sense I suppose St. Paul may use this Propositon; We are Justified by Faith, without the Works of the Law.

Rom. 4. 6, 7, 8.

Gal. 3. 11.

38. In the first place therefore I will lay down this Conclusion as an infallible safe foundation, That if we have respect to the proper meritorious cause of our Justification, we must not take faith, in that Proposition, for any virtue of Grace inherent in us, but only for the proper and principal object thereof, Jesus Christ and his Merits. And the meaning of that Proposition must be, that we are not justified for the merits of any Righteousness in our selves, whether Legal or Evangelical, but only for the Obedience and Death of our Blessed Saviour Jesus Christ. Though this be most true, yet I suppose that St. Paul in that Proposition had not a respect to the Meritorious Cause of our Justification; but to that Formal Condition required in us before we be Justified: as I think may appear by that which follows.

39. I

39. I told you even now, that I would in this Point purpotely abſtain from uſing Metaphors, and Figurative Alluſions; and the reaſon is, becauſe, I ſuppoſe, and not without reaſonable grounds, that the ſtating of this Point of Juſtification by Metaphors, has made this Doctrine, which is ſet down with greater light and perſpicuity in holy Scripture, than almoſt any other, to be a Doctrine of the moſt Scholaſtical ſubtilty, the fulleſt of ihadows and clouds of all the reſt. For example: In that faſhion and dreſs of Divinity, as it is now worn, ſliced and mangled into Theſes and Diſtinctions, we find this Point of our Juſtification thus expreſſed: That Faith is therefore ſaid to juſtifie us, becauſe it is that which makes Chriſts Righteouſneſs ours: it is as it were an inſtrument or hand, whereby we receive, lay hold on, and apply Chriſt unto our ſelves. Here's nought but flowers of Rhetorick, Figures, and Metaphors; which though they are capable of a good ſenſe, yet are very improper to ſtate a Controverſie withal.

40. But let us examine them a little: We muſt not ſay, they conceive of Faith, as if it were a Vertue or Grace, or any part of Righteouſneſs inherent in us: For Faith as a Grace has no influence at all into our Juſtification. Mark the Coherence of theſe things: Faith is conſidered as an hand or an Inſtrument in our Juſtification, and yet, for all it is a Hand, it is nothing in, or of, us; for it ſeems, Hands are not parts of mens bodies. Again, Faith puts on Chriſt, receives him, lays hold upon him, makes his righteouſneſs ours, and yet it does nothing for all that. Beſides, How can Faith be properly called an inſtrument of Juſtification? An Inſtrument is that which the principal Cauſe the Efficient makes uſe of in his operation. Now Juſtification in this ſenſe, is an immanent internal action of God, in which there is no co operation of any other agent, nor any real alteration wrought in man, the object thereof. Does God then uſe Faith as an inſtrument, in producing the Act of Juſtification? No, but it is Inſtrumentum Paſſivum, faith one; That is a thing never heard of in nature before, and the meaning is ſure, Faith, certainly, is ſomething, but what a kind of thing, we know not. By theſe means it comes to paſs, that the Doctrine of our Juſtification, as ſome men have handled it, is become as deep, as unſearchable a myſtery, as that of the Trinity.

41. Without queſtion, there is nothing can be more evident to a man, that ſhall unpartially conſider St. Paul's method in his diſcourſe of Juſtification, than that by Faith he intends ſome operative working grace in us: For inſtance, The Apoſtle proves that we Chriſtians are to ſeek for Juſtification the ſame way that Abraham attained unto it, namely, by Faith; for ſaith the Scripture in his quotation, Abraham believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteouſneſs. What was that which was accounted to him? His believing; That is, ſay ſome, Chriſt who was the object of his Belief: This is a forced interpretation certainly, and which a Jew would never have been perſuaded to. But that Chriſt was not at all intended in that place it is evident; for Abraham's belief there, had reſpect to Gods Promiſe made to him of giving him a Son in his old age, and by that Son, a Seed as innumerable as the Stars in heaven, as appears *Gen.*15.4,5,6. whereas the Promiſe of Chriſt follows three Chapters after, to wit, *Gen.*18.18. Again, the Apoſtle in many places uſeth theſe words, We are Juſtified by Faith in Chriſt, and by the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt; which ſpeeches of his, will admit of no tolerable ſenſe, unleſs by Faith he intends ſome work or obedience performed by us. This therefore being taken for granted, that by Faith, is meant ſome condition required at our hands, (and yet my former concluſion of our Juſtification only for the merits of Chriſt remaining firm:) we will in the next place conſider what kind of obedience that of Faith is, and in what ſenſe it may be ſaid to juſtifie us.

Gen. 15. 4,5,6. Gen. 18. 18.

Aſſertion 42. What ſatisfaction I conceive may be given to this Quæry, I will ſet down in this Aſſertion: That ſince Juſtification, even as it includes Remiſſion of ſins, is that Promiſe, to perform which unto us, God has obliged himſelf in the New Covenant; it muſt neceſſarily preſuppoſe in the perſon to be ſo juſtified, ſuch an obedience as the Goſpel requires; namely, firſt, Repentance from dead works, a converſion to a new obedience of thoſe holy Moral Commands which are ratified in the Goſpel, and a relying upon Chriſt as the only meritorious cauſe of our Juſtification and Salvation, by a particular Evangelical Faith. All this, I ſay, is pre-required in the perſon who is made capable of Juſtification, either in the exerciſe, or at leaſt in præparatione cordis, in a full reſolution of the heart, and entire diſpoſition of the mind: So that, though God be the ſole proper Efficient Cauſe; and Chriſt, as Mediator, the ſole proper Meritorious Cauſe of our Juſtification: yet theſe inherent diſpoſitions, are exacted on our part, as cauſæ ſine quibus non, as neceſſary conditions to be found in us, before God will perform this great work, freely, and graciouſly towards us, and only for the Merits of Chriſt.

43. This Aſſertion may, I ſuppoſe, be demonſtrated, firſt from the nature of a Covenant: For unleſs there be pre-required conditions on man's part to be performed, before God will proportion his reward; the very nature of a Covenant is deſtroyed. And it will not boot to anſwer, that though there be no qualifications required in a man, before he obtain Remiſſion of ſins, yet they are to be found in us before we be made capable of Salvation. For, as I have ſhewed before, Salvation is as properly a gracious Act of Mercy, as free and undeſerved a gift, as truly beſtowed on us only for the Merits of Chriſt, as Remiſſion of ſins; and therefore may as well conſiſt without any change in us as the former. And ſecondly, If that Propoſition of St. Paul, We are Juſtified by Faith, without the works of the Law, exclude all conditions to be performed by man; If it exclude not only the righteouſneſs of the Law (which indeed it doth) but the obedience of Faith, or the Goſpel likewiſe, from being neceſſary diſpoſitions in us before we receive remiſſion of ſins; Then another ſaying of his, parallel to this, will exclude as well the neceſſity of an Evangelical Obedience to our ſalvation: For, ſaith St. Paul, Eph.2.8. By Grace are ye ſaved through Faith, and that not of your ſelves, it is the gift of God: not of Works, leſt any man ſhould boaſt. But I hope no man will be ſo unchriſtian-like, as to exclude the neceſſity of our good works to ſalvation, for all this ſaying of St. Paul; therefore they may as well be pre-required to Remiſſion of ſins, notwithſtanding the former place.

*Reaſ.*1. *Sol.*1. *Sol.*2. Eph.2.8.

44. Secondly, If there be neceſſity of any pre-diſpoſition in us before Remiſſion of ſins; then a man may have his ſins forgiven him, and ſo become a perſon accepted of God, whileſt he is a perſon unregenerate, unſanctified, whileſt he is dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, whileſt he walks according to the courſe of this world, according to the Prince of the power of the air, the Spirit that worketh in the children of diſobedience; whileſt he has his converſation in the luſts of the fleſh, fulfilling the deſires of the fleſh, and of the mind, being notwithſtanding his Juſtification, a child of wrath, as much as the profaneſt heathen, though the veriеſt reprobate in the world; Laſtly, though he be no child of Abraham according to faith, that is, not having in him that faith which was imputed to Abraham for righteouſneſs. Now whether this Divinity be conſonant to Gods word, let your own conſciences be Judges.

*Reaſ.*2. Eph.2. 1,&c.

45. A third Argument to prove the Truth of the former Aſſertion, ſhall be taken from ſeveral Texts of Scripture; where Juſtification, even as it is taken for Remiſſion of ſins, is aſcribed to other virtues beſides Faith, (whether it be taken for a particular virtue, or for the object thereof.) For example, Our Saviour ſaith expreſly, By thy words thou ſhalt be juſtified, and by thy words thou ſhalt be condemned: Where we ſee, Juſtification is taken in that proper ſenſe, in which we maintain it againſt the Papiſts. Again, If you forgive men their treſpaſſes, your heavenly Father will alſo forgive you; But if you forgive not men their treſpaſſes, neither will your Father forgive your treſpaſſes. Again, our Saviour ſpeaking concerning Mary, ſaith, Her ſins are forgiven her, becauſe ſhe loved much. If the time, or your patience, could ſuffer me, I might add a fourth Reaſon to prove my former Aſſertion, which is the clearneſs and evidence of agreement and reconciliation between St. Paul, and St. James, in this Point upon theſe grounds, without any new invented Juſtification before men, which is a conceit taken up by ſome men, only to ſhift off an Adverſaries

*Reaſ.*4.

Argument,

Argument, which otherwiſe would preſs them too hard, they think: for St. Paul's Faith, taken for the obedience of the Goſpel, would eaſily accord with Jam. 1. 27. St. James his holy and undefiled Religion before God, or works wich is all one; And St. James would be St. Paul's Expoſitor without any injury or detraction at all from the merits of Chriſt, or Gods free and undeſerved mercy to us in him. But I muſt haſten.

46. The full meaning, then, of St. Paul's Propoſition; We are juſtified by Faith, and not by the works of the Law: and by conſequence, the ſtate of the whole Controverſie of Juſtification, in brief, may be this; That if we conſider the efficient cauſe of our Juſtification, it is only God which Juſtifies: if that for which we are juſtified, that is, the meritorious cauſe thereof, it is not for any thing in our ſelves, but only for the obedience and ſatisfaction of our Bleſſed Saviour, that God will Juſtifie us: But if we have reſpect to what kind of Conditions are to be found in us, before Chriſt will ſuffer us to be made partakers of the benefit of his Merits, then we muſt ſay, that we are not juſtified by ſuch a Righteouſneſs, ſo perfect, abſolute, and complete, as the Law of Works does require; but by the Righteouſneſs of the Goſpel, by a Righteouſneſs proportionable to that Grace which God is pleaſed to beſtow on us; not by the perfection, but the ſincerity of our obedience to the New Covenant. And the Apoſtle's main Argument will ſerve to prove this to any underſtanding, moſt undeniably. St. Paul has demonſtrated, that if we conſider the rigour of the Law, all men, both Jews and Gentiles, are concluded under ſin, and moſt neceſſarily obnoxious to Gods wrath. Which Reaſon of his, would not be at all prevailing, unleſs by works of the Law, he intended only ſuch a perfect obedience as the Law requires; which by reaſon of mans weakneſs, is become impoſſible unto him. For it might eaſily be replied upon him thus: We confeſs, no man can fulfil the Law; but the conditions of the Goſpel are not only poſſible, but, by the aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit, eaſie to be performed; ſo that though, for this reaſon, the former Righteouſneſs be excluded from our Juſtification, not only quoad meritum, but alſo, quoad præſentiam; yet the later Evangelical Righteouſneſs is excluded from our Juſtification, only quoad Meritum.

47. But I perceive an Objection ready to aſſault me; And I will impartially aſſiſt the force and ſtrength thereof againſt my ſelf, with all the advantage I can. It is to this purpoſe: When men are diſputing in the Schools, or diſcourſing in the Pulpit, they may ſtate this Queſtion as they pleaſe: But the fitteſt time to decide this Point, is, when, in a ſerious contemplation, we preſent before our eyes Almighty God, the righteous impartial Judge of heaven and earth, ſitting in his Throne, ready to execute Judgment, and our ſelves arraigned at the Bar before him, expecting a final irreverſible ſentence. In theſe circumſtances, I would fain ſee the ſtouteſt-hearted man alive, that ſhould dare to ſay unto Almighty God, Thou haſt given me a Law, which my conſcience witneſſeth unto me, that I have performed. Therefore I now challenge thee upon thy Truth and Faithfulneſs, that thou perform thy conditions alſo with me, and give me Remiſſion of my former ſins, as a Reward of my obedience.

Sol. 48. For anſwer to this Objection: This is confeſſed by all Chriſtians of all Religions, that a Profane perſon, or an Hypocrite dying in ſuch an eſtate, ſhall neither in the laſt day be acquitted of his ſins, nor ſaved: Therefore unleſs a mans heart can
1 Joh. 3. 20. witneſs unto him, that he hath unfeignedly kept Gods Commandments, God, who is greater than his heart, and knoweth all things, will aſſuredly condemn him: But then we muſt know, that it is not a Chriſtians plea, to relie upon his own, though ſincere unhypocritical Righteouſneſs, and therefore to challenge heaven. But as our
Luk. 17. 10. Saviour adviſeth us, We when we have done all we can, muſt ſay, We are unprofitable ſervants: And not ſay ſo in a Complement only, but in the truth and ſincerity of our hearts. It is the perfection of Evangelical Righteouſneſs, to deny our own righteouſneſs, to diſclaim all meritorious efficacy thereof, either in Remiſſion of ſins, or Salvation. Therefore, he that after he hath performed Gods Commandments ſhall ſhall think to challenge the reward as of a debt, or as promiſed only to his own holineſs, wants the proper peculiar righteouſneſs of a Chriſtian: he muſt ſay in holy Job's words, Though I were righteous, yet would I not anſwer God but I will make ſup- Job 9. 15. plication to my Judge: I would ſay unto him, Lord look not upon that holineſs which is in me, which yet is not mine neither, for thou wrought'ſt it in me; But look on him in whom only thou art well pleaſed; Accept of me in him, and for his ſake only, who hath fulfilled all righteouſneſs for me, who through the eternal Spirit, hath offered himſelf without ſpot unto thee, being made ſin and a curſe for me, that I might be made the Righteouſneſs of God in him. To him only be glory for ever and ever. The ſum of all which I have ſaid, is contained Tit. 2. 11, 14. The Grace of God which bringeth, &c. And ſo I come to the ſecond General, namely, the Promiſe which God will make good unto us who ſincerely obey him, contained in theſe words, We wait for the Hope, &c.

49. Which General I divided into two Particulars: 1. The nature of the reward promiſed, which I told you was, Juſtification containing Remiſſion of Sins, and everlaſting Life. 2. The intereſt, which, during this life, we ordinarily have in that reward, namely Hope, expreſſed in theſe words, We wait for the Hope of Righteouſneſs: that is, by hope we expect the reward of righteouſneſs. I cannot now enlarge my ſelf in the former Particular, ſomething I have already been forced to ſay of it, which muſt ſuffice: I will in few words conſider the ſecond Particular, namely, the intereſt which we have in the Promiſes, which is Hope: We wait for, &c.

50. I know nothing more effectual to perſuade me to ſearch for and embrace Divine Truth with ſingleneſs of heart, and without reſpect of perſons, than to conſider, that there are no opinions ſo unreaſonable, ſo directly contradictory to one another, but the Spirit of contradiction and partiality will make a man eaſily to ſwallow and digeſt them, As for example, whereas the Papiſts moſt preſumptuouſly maintain, that it is in a mans power, by the ordinary aſſiſtance of Grace, ſo exactly to perform all Gods Commandments, that he ſhall have no need to ſay, Lord forgive us our treſpaſſes; Some of their Adverſaries ſtrive ſo much to avoid this Aſſertion on the contrary extreme, that they will not allow, even the beſt and moſt holy Actions of the moſt Regenerate man, to be ſuch as God requires at our hands; they will not only have them to be imperfect, but ſinful, I, if ſtrictly examined, ſins. And yet for all this, they who put it in a mans power to fulfil all Gods Commandments, will not ſuffer any man to have any certainty of their Salvation: On the contrary, the others, though they make a mans beſt actions to be ſins, yet require at his hands an infallible divine Faith of his Salvation, not only as an attendant, but as the very nature and eſſence of that Faith, whereby he ſhall be juſtified.

51. It may be poſſible, that one of theſe parties might light upon the truth, if either of them would be willing to change one of his opinions with his Adverſary: but as they have been pleaſed to yoke ſuch jarring Poſitions together, I am confidently perſuaded, that both of them have miſſed of the truth, and left it in the middle to any third perſon that will be willing to ſtand Neuter in a mean betwixt them both. I will not now examine how far each ſide have out-run the truth contrary ways: only as I am required by that part of my Text which remains, I will lay down two Aſſertions participating, in ſome meaſure, of both opinions; The firſt 1. whereof is this (which I have already touched) That no man can juſtly and reaſonably expect or hope for the reward of righteouſneſs. but he whoſe heart and conſcience can unfeignedly witneſs unto him, that he hath, though not exactly, yet ſincerely, and without Hypocriſie, performed the conditions of the New Covenant. The ſecond, That the intereſt which ſuch a perſon ordinarily hath in the Promiſes, is only 2.
Hope.

52. Now concerning the firſt Aſſertion, namely, That no man can juſtly, &c. I Aſſert. 1.
would not now be miſtaken, as if I ſaid, that before a man can hope for Salvation he muſt perform Gods Commandments exactly, but only according to the equity of the Goſpel; according to that famous ſaying of St. Auguſtine, Retractat. l. 1. c. 19.

Omnia mandata facta deputantur, quando quicquid non fit ignoscitur. Now, that a man may keep Gods Commandments, as far as the Equity of the Gospel expects from him, may, I think, be thus demonstrated: There is no man that hears me this day, I am perswaded, but he does often seriously desire of God, that he would give him the Grace to do his will: Now, all Prayer, if it be right, is to be performed in Faith, i.e. with a full perswasion, not only that it is lawful, and warrantable, for him to desire that which he prays for, but also with as full a perswasion, that Almighty God is not only able, but ready and willing also to grant him his Petitions; otherwise, it is not only a vain, but a sinful Prayer; it is a tempting of God, as if he should desire him to do that, which he knows is impossible. Besides, can we think that God would command us (and withal add a promise of hearing and granting our Petitions) would he, I say, command us to pray for that which we are assured of before-hand, cannot, and must not, be granted? Therefore certainly, some Christians have been heard in these Petitions; some men have been found, who have fulfilled the righteousness of the Gospel.

53. Now till thou hast done this, which thou seest by the assistance of God's Spirit, (which will never be wanting to them which desire it) it is possible for thee to do; nay, I will add further, is easie for thee to do: Doth not Christ say as much? My yoke is easie, and my burthen is light. I say, till thou hast done this, thou canst have no reason in the world to hope for Gods mercy. For tell me! why dost thou hope, thou that continuest still in an unrepentant estate, in an habitual opposition to God's holy Commandments? Art thou resolved to hope, because thou hast a mind to it, upon no ground, when thou oughtest rather to fear, almost to despair? Or rather, canst thou perswade thy self in earnest, that this is indeed a hope? Is it not a fancy
Rom. 5 5. of thine own brain, or rather a Temptation of the Devil? Hope, which is hope indeed, which is not a fancy and Chimera, makes not ashamed, saith St. Paul: A man may with confidence, without confusion of face, profess and maintain it. But such a hope as this is, which is not a hope in earnest, how will it disgrace a man, and put him out of countenance, when God shall ask him why he did offer to hope?

54. Let thy conscience now answer me, whosoever thou art, in such a state. Thou that knowest how often God hath said, nay, sworn in his wrath, that none of those which continue disobedient shall enter into his rest! That none shall be partakers of the second Resurrection unto Glory, but those that have been partakers of the first unto Grace! Canst thou for all this imagine that God has such a peculiar particular affection and respect to thee, who art yet a slave of the Devils; that he will be content to strain his Truth and Veracity, to break his Oath for thy company? Shall the whole Scripture, which promises glory to none but those who perform the conditions prescribed, for thy sake be turned into a Romance, into a melancholy Tale to fright Children withal? No, no, assure thy self, it is not a conceit of Election which will save thee: thou must work, and work hard, in fear and trembling, before God will raise in thee the good Spirit of Christian Hope.

55. For to say the truth, of all Divine Graces, Hope is incomparably the hardest to attain unto: And the reason is evident, because it presupposes the possession of all other Graces before it. And yet for all this, nothing counted so easie, now adays, as Hope, though men both are and resolve to be never so wicked: Nay, and it is well if Hope will serve their turn, they must have an infallible assurance, a Divine Faith of everlasting glory; and no manner of sins, though never so heinous, never so oft committed, shall be able to weaken this their assurance, that they are resolved of. This they think is a spell strong enough for the Devil in all assails; when, God knows, the Devil is more joy'd and comforted, to see them so vainly delude themselves, than they themselves possibly can be. This for my first Assertion; now follows the second.

Assert. 2. 56. When I say, that the Interest which a Christian ordinarily has in the Promises of God, is Hope; I mean, it is not absolute and irrespective, but depending upon conditions, namely, Grace, and perseverance therein. And this I took for granted, for for I never heard of any yet, that denied perseverance to be necessary to salvation. If then his Interest be by Hope, then it is not yet by Faith, properly so called; For it is not possible that the same object (considered with the same circumstances at the same time) should be the object both of Faith and Hope. For example: I believe by a Divine Faith, i.e. a Faith grounded upon God's Word, that there shall be a Resurrection of the Flesh, even of this flesh of mine; And I believe it firmly, because God hath said that he will bring it to pass; neither is there any condition of mine pre-required to the performance of this promise of God; for howsoever I behave my self here in this world, whether well or ill, it matters not, my behaviour cannot make God alter his resolution. Now, if I assuredly believe this, it would be improper and absurd for me to say, I hope there will be a Resurrection of my body; for when I say, I hope any thing, I imply a possibility, in nature, that such a thing may not be, which in this case I cannot do without infidelity.

57. But, on the other side, I hope that God will raise this flesh of mine unto Glory, and I hope this upon safe grounds: Therefore, if it be true that I hope it, I cannot properly be said to believe it, because my salvation yet depends upon conditions; namely, perseverance. Therefore let me propose this one question to any mans conscience: Hast thou such an assurance of salvation given thee of God, that Hope is quite evacuated in thee: Is there no such virtue left in thee as Hope? Surely God hath dealt extraordinarily mercifully with thee; Thou art many degrees gone beyond the state of those believers which St. Paul speaks of, and includes himself in the number, when he saith, We live by hope: For thou dost not live by Hope, thou art exalted above it. Notwithstanding, I beseech you, consider well upon the matter, (for it concerns you very much) be not too hasty to credit fancies, when conceits of assurance or impeccability shall be suggested to your minds. There may be great danger of a confidence ungrounded; a confidence only taken upon trust from other mens words or opinions.

58. Do I go about (now think you) to bereave you, or cozen you of any spiritual comfort in this life? Do I envy any of you your assurance? Alas, why should I deal so with you? For I was never injured by you; or, if I were, surely, of all places, I would not make choice of this to execute my Revenge in. Or if I thought that such an assurance were ordinarily to be had, at least necessary, to the making up of a Justifying Faith, (and have you never heard it said so?) Would I not (think you, strive and endeavour to obtain it at any rate, even with the loss of all worldly comforts? Yes certainly, I would count them all but as dross and dung in comparison of it: But I confess unto you I am yet contented with enjoying Heaven by Hope: And I bless Almighty God, that he hath dealt so graciously with me, that I should dare to hope for it, and not be ashamed and confounded by my hope. And if there be any amongst you, that will vouchsafe to content himself with such a neglected degree of comfort, with only hope, and no more, I will not enter into comparison with those that are perfect; but I dare promise him, that all those troublesom pleasures, which do so ravish the men of this world, shall be as nothing; yea, as afflictions and torments, in comparison of those spiritual heavenly Joys, which Hope, well and legally atchieved, will be able to afford us: No dangers will there be of terrours or jealousies, as if God would happen to grow weary, or repent himself of any grace or blessing which he hath bestowed upon us.

59. For, tell me; Do you think that Adam, while he continued in his Innocency, had any grudgings of suspicions or fears? Was he not, during that time, in as great a quiet and serenity of mind, as any of us dare hope for? And yet the most that he could do then, was to hope that he might continue in that state even to the end: The event shews, he could not have an infallible Faith of his perseverance. If then such a contented settled mind could accompany Adam in Paradise, even when he knew it was in his power, with but reaching out his hand, and tasting an Apple; yea, with a sudden wicked word, or an unsanctified thought, utterly, and irrecoverably to degrade himself from that happy estate; surely, we Christians have much more reason to rejoyce in our hope,ſince we know aſſuredly,that asGod has been ſo gracious to begin this good work in us,ſo he will not be wanting to perfect it even to the end,if we will but perform our parts, which he has already given us more than ſufficient grace to do,and will never fail to ſupply us with more, for the asking, nay, more, which are ſurer grounds to build upon than ever Adam had; ſince we know, that not one, nor ten, nor a hundred ſins, ſhall be able ſo irreparably to caſt us out of God's favour, but that he will be willing upon our Repentance, eſpecially calling to mind his old mercies,to reſtore us again to our loſt happineſs.

6. Neither are we utterly excluded from all aſſurance; for there is a πληροφορία, A full aſſurance of Hope. ſaith St. Paul, Heb.6.11. This Hope we have as a ſure Anchor the Soul faſtned on a Rock: The Rock cannot fail us,the Anchor will not; all the danger is in the Cable or Chain of ſpiritual Graces, whereby we are faſtned to this Rock: If this Chain but hold, no tempeſt, no winds, no flouds can endanger us. And part of our Hope reſpects this Chain; for God has promiſed his willingneſs and readineſs to ſtrengthen it every day more and more, till our ſtate ſhall be ſo changed, that there ſhall be no ſuch things as Tempeſts known,no toſſings of waves,no tumults of winds, nor fear of leaking or decay in the Veſſel, but all calmneſs and ſecurity. And for the attaining to this happy unchangeable eſtate,where is it that we place our hope? Truly our Hope is even in thee, O God; who, if thou ſhalt think it convenient or neceſſary for us, wilt enlarge this our Hope into confidence,and add, unto that, aſſurance, and ſwallow up all in poſſeſſion; And that not for any merits of ours,but only for thy free undeſerved Mercies in our bleſſed Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, in whom alone thou art well pleaſed; To whom, with thee, O Father, and the bleſſed Spirit, be aſcribed by us, and thy whole Church, the Kingdom, and the Power, and the Glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Ninth Sermon.

1 COR. X. 13.

____God is Faithful, who will not ſuffer you to be tempted above that ye are able.____

WHatever puniſhments befel the diſobedient Iſraelites, who murmured and tempted God in the Wilderneſs, They all hapned unto them (ſaith St. Paul) for enſamples to us, and are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come. This Priviledge we may have beyond our Fore-fathers, that we may preſent before our eyes a larger Series and Hiſtory of God's Providence, even ſince the foundation of the World: We may take a view and proſpect of his conſtant unaltered courſe of revenging himſelf upon ſin, in whatſoever perſons he finds it; And we ought from thence to collect, that whatſoever immunities and priviledges we may conceive to our ſelves, whatſoever comfortable Errors we may take up upon truſt, yet that God will not (for our ſakes) begin a new frame of Polity in the Adminiſtration of the World; but that we alſo, unleſs we break off our ſins by repentance, and converſion unto God, We,I ſay, after the example of theſe murmuring Iſraelites, as thoſe upon whom the Tower of Siloe fell; as thoſe fourteen, whoſe bloud Pilate mingled with the Sacrifices, that we alſo unleſs we repent, ſhall all likewiſe periſh. Nay certainly, we (upon whom the ends of the world are come) ſhall be much more culpable, our puniſhment and ſtripes ſhall be more in number and weightier, if we (notwithſtanding that larger experience which we may have of Gods unpartial dealing with ſinners) ſhall yet promiſe to our ſelves impunity, If we ſhall ſay, we ſhall have peace, though we walk in the imaginations of our hearts. Verſ. 6. Verſ.11.

2. The ſame collection we may proportionably make to our own benefit and advantage,from Gods gracious dealing and behaviour to any of his beloved faithful ſervants, we may appropriate to our ſelves, all thoſe bleſſings and promiſes which have been afforded unto them, if our Conſciences can aſſure us, that we do obey Gods Commandments in the truth and ſincerity of our hearts,Now for warrant to this kind of collection, inſtead of ſeveral examples in Holy Scripture, I will only make uſe of one taken out of (I think) this our Apoſtle, where he ſaith, Let your converſation be without covetouſneſs, and be content with ſuch things as you have; For God hath ſaid, I will never leave thee, nor forſake thee. Which words by him quoted,as the Margins of our Bibles will direct us, are to be found, *Joſh.*1.5. Which, though they be a particular Promiſe which God immediately made to Joſhua, thereby to encourage him after the death of Moſes, to take upon him the conducting of the Jews into the Land of Promiſe, aſſuring unto him a continuation of his extraordinary aſſiſtance in the enterpriſe: yet notwithſtanding, St. Paul, we ſee (as if God had proclaimed this Promiſe to the whole world) applies theſe words to all the Faithful among the Hebrews, and by the ſame proportion to all Chriſtians likewiſe. Heb.13.5. Joſh.1.5.

3. Upon which grounds I may as reaſonably direct the words of this verſe, out of which my Text is taken, to you that now hear me, as the Apoſtle does to the Corinthians, And ſay, There hath no Temptation taken you,but ſuch as is common to man: For certainly, we will not imagine, that the Church or City of Corinth had any ſuch such extraordinary Immunity or Charter granted them, whereby they should be exempted from the danger of Temptations above all the Christian world besides. Therefore let your memories recollect and examine the time past of your lives, and tell me, Did there ever any Temptation take hold of you, or assault you so powerful and irresistable, that there was no way left for you but to be overcome by it? (Take Temptation now in what sense you please, either for a Misfortune and Affliction, or else for a Suggestion to sin.) Was there ever any calamity, any loss, any pain, any sickness, so violent and impetuous, but that still you might perceive your selves notwithstanding (though perhaps in your outward man unequally match'd by it) yet in your spirits and minds strong enough to conquer the malice thereof, and to convert it into wholsom Physick? Again, was there ever any sinful Temptation so strongly urged upon you, but that you might by the assistance of that Grace which God had already given you, or at the least, for the asking, would have super-added, you might easily have dulled and diverted the force thereof? Did not your Consciences, even after you were overcome by such a Temptation, tell you, that it was meer voluntary cowardize in you, to suffer your selves to be overcome by it, that you willingly surrendred and betrayed those forces which already God had given you?

4. Now, though I am perswaded this be so evidently true, that there is scarce any one here but his Conscience will assure him as much; Yet, for all this, we must not begin hereupon to fancy in our minds any extraordinary worth or dignity in our selves, as though by our own power or holiness we could work such wonders. No alas, nothing less: For take away the assistance and guard of our Auxiliary Forces, God's free and undeserved Graces within us, and his Divine assistance, together with the guard of his blessed Angels without us, and there is no Temptation so weak and despicable, which we should not suddenly yield unto; Nay, we should need no outward Tempters to help us to sin, our own wicked hearts would save the Devil that labour; for nothing is there so vile and abominable, whereunto without God's restraining Grace we should not readily and impetuously hasten unto.

5. Therefore let us neither defraud God nor our selves of their dues: But as we have spoken of the time past, so likewise of that which follows, If hereafter we shall overcome any Temptation (as certainly, by Gods help, if we have but a mind to it, we may) Let us bless Almighty God for assisting us so far, let us give the glory and Trophies of the conquest to him: But on the contrary side, if we shall neglect to make use and advantage of those many helps against sin, which Almighty God is ready to supply unto us: If notwithstanding those many Promises of assistance so frequently set down in Holy Scripture: If notwithstanding those many secret whisperings and inspirations of his Holy Spirit in our souls: If notwithstanding God's Voice, which (as every days experience can witness unto us) continually calls upon us, saying, This is the right way, walk in it, and ye shall find rest to your souls; we will yet continue to extinguish those good motions, to deafen and drown God's voice, and be ready to hearken unto, and obey our own filthy lusts and vile affections: Let us lay the fault where it is due, even upon our own deceitful wicked Hearts; or otherwise, the time will come when in Hell we shall be evidently convinced thereof, when the worm of Conscience which never dieth shall continually torment and gnaw us. Let God be true and faithful in his Promises, and every man a Liar. For, as hitherto God has been so merciful to you to preserve you, that no temptation should take you, but such as is common to man: so likewise for the time following, though perhaps greater trials may befall you, than hitherto you have had experience of, yet of this you may be confident, that however they may seem grievous; yet the same God continues faithful and righteous to fulfil his Promises, He will never suffer you to be tempted above that you are able.

6. Temptation is a thing of its own Nature indifferent, and is rendred good or evil, from the end and intention of the Tempter especially: It is nothing else but making making a trial or experiment. If good; an assay, whether that good which seems to be in a subject be true and firmly grounded, or no: So God may be said to tempt, as he did Abraham, &c. And this he performs not to satisfie his curosity, but meerly out of a good inclination to the party; both thereby to confirm his graces in him, and to reward them with a greater measure of Glory. If evil; Temptation is an assay, whether that good which seems to be in a man, may not by some means or other be extinguished, and so the person destroyed, so the Devil is most properly called the Tempter: And of this nature are the Temptations of my Text: Now these we find in Holy Scripture to be twofold: For either they are apt to draw us 1.

from good by way of Discouragement; so all manner of afflictions, misfortunes, persecutions, &c. are called Temptations, because by these a man is inclinable to be
us by way of invitation or solicitation to evil: so wicked pleasing suggestions are said to be temptations, because these are fit to palliate the unlovelinesse and deformity of sin, and thereby to make it desirable unto us. It would be but loss of time to heap together Examples of holy Scripture to make good this distinction; since it is an Argument which you daily meet withal discoursed of in Sermons.

7. But, I confess, I find it something difficult to determine, whether of these two senses, with exclusion of the other be intended by St. Paul, in my Text, whether, when he says, God will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able, his meaning should be, God by his Wisdom and Providence, will so contrive businesses for you, that though you are not likely to live in a continual uninterrupted course of happiness and security, but that sometimes you shall dash your foot against a stone, you shall be disquieted and molested with afflictions of several natures; notwithstanding, this you may be confident of, that let what misfortune will come, how grievous and even insupportable soever it may seem unto you, it shall never be so violent and outragious, but that God will provide a way for you to escape from it, there will be a door left open for you to avoid the furiousness and impetuousness of it; either God will arm you with patience to bear it, and then the comfort which your souls may feel, in the consideration of what glorious rewards are promised unto your Patience, shall make your afflictions even matters of rejoycing unto you; in which respect, (as St. James saith) you ought to count it all joy, when you fall into divers Temptations, Or, if those Temptations and afflictions reach so far as to the destroying of your Lives, yet notwithstanding all this, they are so unable to make you miserable, unless you will take part with them against your own souls, by repining and murmuring under the mighty hand of God, that when you shall consider that blessed change which death shall bring unto you, when all tears shall be wiped from your eyes, all fear and expectation of misery removed, nothing but inexpressable and everlasting joys to be expected, you shall bless the time that ever you were afflicted, and with St. Paul confess, That the afflictions of this life are worthy of that joy which shall be revealed: This, I say, is a good Catholick, Orthodox sense, and which it is very probable, that St. Paul might more directly intend in these words of my Text.

8. Notwithstanding I cannot exclude the other sense of the word Temptation from this Text; for according to the Analogy of Faith, and without any wrong done to the dependence and connexion of these words (God will not suffer you to be tempted, &c.) St. Paul's intent in them might be such, as if it had been thus spread out more at large, though considering the many disadvantages we have in the way of godliness, in respect both of our powerful, malicious, industrious, and subtil Enemy the Devil, who continually waits upon us to entrap us; in respect of our seeming flattering friend, the world and vanities thereof alluring us; But especially in respect of our own wicked and deceitful hearts, forward and desirous enough to embrace the wicked suggestions and temptations of both, nay, sufficient to destroy us without the assistance of either: I say, that though (these things considered) we may seem to be set (in the expression of the Holy Ghost) upon slippery places, where it is almost impossible for us to keep our footing, and to preserve our selves from falling dangerously, and dashing our selves in pieces.

9. Notwithstanding, if our eyes were opened, as were the eyes of the Prophet Elisha's servant, we should find as well as he, that they that be with us are more than they that be against us: For God and his holy Angels, who are on our side, are both wiser and stronger than the Devil, and more willing to do us good, than the other can be to hurt us: Besides, the expectation of those glorious rewards, which are laid up in Heaven for us, are sufficient, even to any reasonable man, to distrelish unto him the vain unsatisfying pleasures of this world: And though our own hearts naturally be never so traiterous and unfaithful, yet by the power of that Grace which is plentifully showred down upon every one of us in our Baptism, and which is daily encreased and supplied unto us, they may easily be corrected and renewed. So, that if the suggestion of any wicked Temptation get the mastery over us, let us not impute too much to the valour and strength of our Enemies; let us not accuse God of any unwillingness to succour us; For never any Temptation hath or ever shall happen unto us, but such as is ἀνθρώπινος, suitable unto the nature of man, such as a reasonable, considerate, and a circumspect man, by the ordinary assistance of God's Grace, and careful application of those means wherewith we are abundantly furnished out of Holy Scripture, as Prayer, Watchfulness, Fasting, and the like, may easily conquer and subdue.

10. This sense of these words may with as good reason and probability be supposed to be intended by St. Paul in this place as the former: And indeed, unless we inlarge St. Paul's words to this meaning also, we shall receive no extrordinary comfort and encouragement from them: For though indeed, it is true, that it is more than we can deserve at God's hands to obtain a Promise from him, to secure us, that no Temptations, no outward afflictions of this world, shall be so violent and furious upon us, as to exceed the strength of Reason and Grace to withstand them; Yet, since Sin is that only Enemy which is able to withdraw God's favour from us, and make him our Enemy, unless we can be put in some hope, that there is a possible course for us to prevail against sin also, and all the dangerous temptations and suggestions thereof, we should live but an uncomfortable discontented life, we should be continually affrighted with sad melancholick thoughts, with disquieting jealousies and fears, that however we may now and then please our selves with conceits of Gods favour for the present, yet, since he has passed no promise of securing us for the future, it may happen, that such a sinful Temptation may come upon us, which may be able, do what we can, to overwhelm us irrecoverably. Therefore since this latter sense (which I mentioned of these words) is more profitable and advantageous to us, I will especially at this time insist upon it, and labour to demonstrate undeniably to every one of us, that God is faithful, and will assuredly make good that promise which he hath made unto us all, namely, Not to suffer us to be tempted, that is, by any sinful temptation, above that we are able.

11. Now, he is said to be tempted above that he is able, who, do what he can, though he strain his natural endowments to the uttermost, and though he endeavour heartily to make use of all the outward helps and assistances which he finds prescribed unto him out of God's Word, though he extend that measure of Grace wherewith he is furnished to the extremest activity thereof to resist such a Temptation; yet, in the end is forced to yield to the power of it, utterly fainting and languishing in the combate. So, on the contrary, that man who being compleatly furnished with all requisite weapons both for his own defence, and encountring his Adversary; and besides, having in him both ability of body, and courage enough, and yet out of a sleepy negligence, or obstinate sullenness, will not take the pains to lift up his arm, or otherways bestir himself to oppose his Enemy, such a man, if overcome, can in no reason be said to be Over-match'd, but is a meer Traitor to his own safety and reputation.

12. And

12. And indeed, before I can proceed any further, I must either take this for granted, That some men though (de facto) they have been overcome by a Temptation, yet might have resisted it by the assistance of that Grace wherewith they were enabled, or truly, I know not what to say: For, if this be a good inference, a man is overcome by a Temptation, therefore he could not possibly have resisted, Adam, for all he was seduced by the Devil, is not so culpable as I took him to be. How can I charge such a man for not doing his duty? How can I convince his Conscience, that it was his own fault and negligence, that he did not that which he ought and might have done? Is there no man then to be found, that could possibly have done no more good than actually he has done? Does every man improve that Talent of Grace which God has given him to the uttermost of his power and skill: Or will any of you, when you confess your sins unto Almighty God, tell him to this purpose, Lord, I confess, I do daily fall into many and grievous sins; but, since they are gone and past, I perceive there was no remedy for it, it could not be avoided, those sins must needs have been practised by me, I did whatsoever I was enabled to do; if I had had more strength, I had done better; when thou bestowest on me more Talents of Grace, I shall be a more profitable servant, and yield thee a greater interest and advantage by them. If any of you entertain such conceits as these, I confess, you are a great deal more righteous than I thought you had been.

13. For mine own part, I confess with grief and shame, and self-condemnation, that I have offended Almighty God in many respects, when I might have done otherwise. I have not only hid my Talent in a Napkin, I have not only not improved that stock of Grace which God gave me; but, on the contrary, notwithstanding that, I have been very laborious and abounding in the unfruitful works of darkness. I have wilfully grieved the Holy Spirit of God, and many times quenched his good motions in me. Yea, so voluntarily and resolvedly have I done all these sins, that I am perswaded I could easily have chosen, whether I would have committed them or no: no necessity at all lay upon me to compel me thereunto, God was faithful and righteous in his promises and dealings with me, and my own wicked heart deceived me. And, I think, all of you have been guilty in some measure of betraying and surrendring the abilities which God has bestowed on you, though I dare not charge you so deeply as my self.

14. Now that we have heard, who may be said to be able to resist a Temptation or not: for my more distinct proceeding in the confirmation of St. Paul's Proposition in my Text, I will take our Saviour's counsel, I will sit down and examine, whether he that hath but ten thousand, be able to meet with him which cometh against him with twenty thousand. Here are two Enemies Camps, and no doubt great Forces on both sides: But without question, disproportionable: It concerns me therefore now, by taking a survey and muster of each, to demonstrate, that in all respects the advantage lies on our side. I mentioned before, briefly, that we had three especial enemies to deal with, the Devil, the World, and the Flesh: We will proceed in this order against them, in the first place examining the Devil's power, and the forces we have to oppose against him.

15. There are many terrible names, I confess, by which the Devil is described in Holy Writ; He is called Abaddon, and Ἀπολλύων, the Destroyer, as one whose imployment it were to counter-work against God; who calls himself the Saviour and preserver of all men: He is called a ramping and a roaring Lion, that runs about seeking whom he may devour: He is called the great Dragon, the old Serpent, the Devil, and Sathan, which deceiveth the whole world. (All this in one verse.) He is called the Red fiery Dragon. There are extant a great many more hideous pictures of him in God's Word: But these will serve our turn sufficiently, to shew how dangerous an enemy we have, and therefore how great ought to be our resolution and wisdom in encountring with him: And lest we should think, that since he is named in the fore-cited places in the singular number, that therefore there is but one Lion, and but one fiery Dragon to deal with all mankind, and thereupon begin to be a little more secure; Apoc.12. 9.

since we should have hard fortune, if it should light upon us to be singled out by him, out of so infinite a crowd as the world is. No, God knows, it is so far from that, that there is an unutterable number of them, such an infinite vast Army, that one whole Legion (which are near about 4000) were at leisure to possess one man; And Ephes. 6. 12. St. Paul tells us, We wrestle not against flesh and blood; as if he should say, These worldly enemies are so weak and despicable, in comparison of those we are to meet withal, that they are not to be reckoned of: But, says he, We wrestle against Principalities and Powers, (There are it seems, many Principalities and Powers) against the Rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickednesses in high places, (the word is) in heavenly places.

16. Now, what have we to oppose against such an innumerable multitude of Spirits, whereof each particular for his excessive strength is called a Lion; for his fierceness, a Dragon; for his poysonous malice, a Red Dragon; for the extreme intensenes of that poysonous malice, a Red fiery Dragon; and for his wisdom and cunning to make use of this strength, fierceness, and malice, he is called the old Serpent; one that has been a Serpent continually spitting out his poyson against us, within very few days since any creature was; and therefore, if at the first, by his own natural wit, he was able, upon even terms, to overcome Adam, then innocent, and therefore not apt to betray himself, as we are, What may we conceive of him now after above 5000 years experience: I say, What shall we who are ready to fall into a swoon, if we see but an apparition of one of them, though he do us no harm; How are we likely, think you, to behave our selves in combat against so many thousands of them?

17. Why truly, God be thanked, notwithstanding all this, we may do well enough. For we have spiritual Armies on our side too, that are able to contend with all these, and overcome them in all those advantages which they have against us. Are they many? Michael and his Angels are more certainly; which to me is evident by that saying in Daniel, where it is made an expression of Gods Glory and Majesty;
Dan. 7. 10. His innumerable multitude of attendants; the words are, Thousand thousands minister unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stand before him; which surely, God would not have made choice of as fit language to express his Power and Glory, if the Devil had been able to contend with God, I, and out-vie him too in this Article: Again, are they strong? These sure are stronger: for we read of one that slew an hundred fourscore and five thousand Soldiers in one night: We never heard of such an exploit of the Devils, Are they malicious against us? These are more loving and careful to do us good. And certainly, as God is stronger than the Devil, so likewise excessive goodness in the Angels will easily prevail against extreme malice in the Devil. Now, it is the nature of Love, to be willing to take any pains for the good of the person beloved: whereupon St. Paul, in that most divine description of the three
1 Thess. 1. 3. Cardinal Christian Virtues, thus expresseth them: Remembring your work of Faith, and labour of Love, and patience of Hope in our Lord Jesus Christ. I confess, it is the nature of Malice too to be very laborious and observant of all advantages against the subject hated: But this must needs be granted, that Love will conquer malice in the same degree.

18. Thus you see, we are reasonably well befriended and backed by these our Auxiliary Forces of our Guardian Angels, so, that we need not be disheartned, if we had no more: But beyond al these, we have Almighty God to our friend, whose power is so unlimited, that without any straining of himself, without the bending of his Bow, and drawing his Sword, only with unclasping his hand, Subtractione Manutenentiæ, with meer letting hold go, all Creatures in Heaven and Earth, would return Psal. 84. 11. to nothing. He is in the language of the Psalmist, a Sun and a Shild, that is, in the phrase of another Psalm, a Light and Defence; a Sun to discover unto us the secret ambushes and practices of our Enemies, and a Shield to protect us from their open force and violence.

Object. 19. I, (will some man say) there is no man can make any question of God's Power?

Power; But the difficulty is, how we should be sure of his good will: if that were but once procured, the Battel were as good as at an end: Why, for that we must Sol. have recourse to God's Word, there it is that we must find upon what terms businesses stand between him and us. And there certainly, we shall find words, which at the first sight to any ordinary reasonable man would seem to make much for us: There are Invitations to a League with him: desires and requests as passionate as (I think) ever Poet strain'd for: There are Promises which look as if they were serious and unfeigned, they are confirm'd with Vows and solemn Oaths of sincerity, and all these seemingly directed to every one of us. What can we desire any more, especially from Almighty God, who stands in no need of our favour, and therefore is not likely to bespeak our good opinions of him with dissembling and lies.

20. Oh, but it is the easiest matter in the world for a man with a School-Subtilty, Object. by an Almighty distinction to cut off any mans right of Entail to those Promises; to appropriate them only to our own friends, to some two or three that he is pleased to favour: I would to God, that men would but consider what end, what project Sol. Almighty God should have in making his poor creatures believe he means well to them, when there is no such matter: Would any of you, saith our Saviour, when his Son shall ask him bread, give him a stone; or instead of a fish to nourish him, a serpent to destroy him? If then you (which are evil) know how to give good gifts; If you would not have the heart to mock poor children after this manner, how much rather would not God? For Gods sake therefore let there be but as much sincerity, as much good nature in Almighty God (I will not say as in your selves, for it may be that would be too much for you to grant, but) as our Saviour confesseth, that there were in the Jews that crucified him; and then we all of us have right enough to his Promises; we shall have no reason to doubt of his good intention to help and assist us so far, that unless we delight in destruction, unless we will turn Fugitives, unless we will fight on our enemies side; all the Devils in Hell shall not be able to prevail against us. And thus much of the first Squadrons, Michael and his Angels opposed to the Devil and his Angels.

21. The second enemy which we professed hostility against in our Baptism, was the vain temptations of this world; and so forcible and prevailing are the temptations thereof; that the Devil (who for his powerful managing of this weapon is called the God of this world) in his Encounter with our Saviour, set up his rest upon it, as supposing if this would not serve his turn, there were no more fighting for him; All this will I give thee, said he. And such a value he set upon this stake, that no less than the extremest degree of horrible Idolatry could serve his turn to oppose against it; All this will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me. And when he saw that this proffer would not be accepted, he presently quits the field, despairing utterly of any success. The more dangerous indeed is this enemy, I may say, more dangerous to us than the Devil himself; because we all acknowledge the Devil in person to be our enemy; and therefore not one of us will be beholden to him for any thing, if he bring us the gift himself; a sick man would not be healed by him, nor a poor man made rich, but scarce one among a thousand has that opinion of the vain pomps and sinful pleasures of the world. Our Enemy! No certainly, It is the best and most comforting friend we have in this life; all our thoughts are taken up with it, it possesseth us at all times, we dream of it sleeping, and pursue it waking: And yet our Saviour saith, Ye cannot serve God and Mammon. And again, How can ye believe, who seek honour one of another: And again, If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. What strength then have we to oppose this Enemy?

22. Why, surely that which would suffice but an ordinary, reasonable man, and might serve any of us, but that we will needs be unreasonable only in things which concern our everlasting welfare: And that is the consideration of those unspeakable joys which shall attend those who can despise the unsatisfying vain pleasures of this life. A Philosopher, which but reading Plato's Poetical description of the serenity of that life, which a virtuous soul (delivered from the prison of the body) lives, was so far transported with the conceit of it, though for ought he knew, there was no such thing indeed; or if there were, perhaps never intended for him, that he becomes presently weary of this prison, and by a violent death frees himself from it; and God only knows what a change he found. Whereas we have Gods word for the certainty of that glorious life which his servants shall live; yea, a great deal of pains he hath taken, to make it desirable and amiable unto us, by ransacking all the treasures of this world, the most costly jewels, the most precious metals, to embellish the description thereof withal. We have besides the experience of several men, who have seen and tasted as much of that glory, as a mortal creature is capable of; St. Paul, and St. John the Divine. Surely, the consideration hereof might serve our turn, if not quite to distrelish unto us, and even to make us hate the vain pleasures of this world; yet, at least, not to prefer them when they come in competition with the other: And I would to God we would suffer them but so far to prevail upon us. But I cannot stay.

23. I have rank'd the three Armies of our enemies, just after the Roman fashion, reserving the Triaries, the old experienced Soldiers to the last. For though in shew, the first rank of the Devils appear most terrible; yet in very deed, all their power is nothing, unless the lusts of our hearts take part with them, and give them advantage against us. The lusts of the flesh, are those Traytors which continually keep us company, we cannot be quit of them; without the Devils assistance, they are able to captive us; what, think you, then are they able to do, being manag'd by so powerful, so wise an enemy? Without them, all the powers of Hell and darkness are insufficient to withdraw us from our obedience, and, by consequence, from the love and favour of God. For, suppose the Devil (for example) present a lustful object to our fancy, as it were holding a lascivious picture before our eyes; if we consent not in our minds, to any base delight in such a spectacle; if we settle not our thoughts upon it, as upon a pleasing sight; it will be so far from doing us any harm, that it will rather prove a means to root us more deeply in the favour of God, as persons unwilling to take pay of his and our enemies.

24. But alas, as we are ordinarily so far from this nobleness of mind, from this bravery of a Christian-like Spirit; that, as if the Devil were too slow to object such Temptations to us, we will not await his leisure; but on all occasions be ready and desirous to raise up, and then settle such unworthy thoughts in our minds; we will be content to spend many hours sometimes in the acting of this inward contemplative Adultery. St Paul, speaking of those lusts of our flesh, calls them our members, when he saith, Mortifie your members which are on earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, &c. And indeed we, by our practice, make good the Apostles expression; for we account our selves as lame unperfect creatures without them; we know not what to do with our selves, especially when we are alone, unless we set our selves on work this way, by acting our selves such filthy sins, which perhaps natural bashfulness, want of money or opportunity, will not suffer us to put in practice. What strength have we now to oppose to these most pernicious enemies, which are so closely cemented, and even incorporated within us, that they are become as it were flesh of our flesh, and bones of our bones? Col. 3. 5.

25. Why surely, as naturally we have received this root of Bitterness in our hearts, which is apt to give an infectious tincture to all the thoughts and actions issuing from thence: So likewise it hath pleased Almighty God to imprint a new Principle in our minds, to plant as it were a new spirit in our souls; I mean, that active powerful Grace, which without any co-operation of our own, he infuses into us especially, in our Baptism; and which is afterward, ἀναζωπυρούμενον, strengthened and enlivened daily, by a constant frequent exercising our selves in the use of those manifold blessed means of our salvation, the hearing, reading, and meditating on his holy Word, and participation of his heavenly mysteries. For surely, if Reason alone (by the help of those worthy grave precepts which are extant in the Treatises tises of Moral Philosophy) hath been able to change many men from the habitual practice of several vices to a virtuous (I had like to have said also a Religious) life; why should any man think so meanly of God's Holy Word and Sacraments, as to doubt, but that much rather they should be able to make us new creatures, to make us wise unto salvation, especially considering that continual assistance of Gods Holy Spirit which infallibly attends the use and exercise of those his blessed means. Do you think God is so favourable to the Devil or his instruments, (our lusts) that he is unwilling to have them subdued and mortified in us? And, if he be not unwilling, surely much less is he unable to perform this great work in us, even to the end.

26. Therefore, as before, speaking of those outward forces, God and his holy Angels, which are ready to take our parts, and fight on our sides against the Devil and his Angels, we applied that saying of Elisha to his servant, If thine eyes were opened, thou shouldest perceive, that they which are with us, are more than they which are against us. So likewise in the case in hand, we may make use of that saying of St. John, Greater is he which is in you, than he which is in the world: implying that God is not only in himself stronger than the Devil, but also as considered in us, i. e. as working in our hearts by his Grace: This way, I say, he is stronger than the Devil; his Spirit co-operating with the means of our salvation, is more vigorous and powerful to renew us unto the Image of his Holiness; if we will but do that which lies in our own power, than the Devil (though taking his advantage of that concupiscence, which in some measure is continually resident in us) is or can be to corrupt, and so to destroy us. For his power is not considerable, unless we be willing to joyn with him. Thus you see, though our enemies be allowed all the advantages they can challenge, yet in exact esteem, without any flattering of our selves, we may conclude, that they who are ready, and desirous to joyn forces with us, are greater, in all respects, than they which are against us. 1 John 4. 4.

27. But yet for all this, since the conducting and managing of those forces, is left to our discretion; for God will not fight single against the Devil in our behalf, unless we lend him our aid and assistance: And therefore, Curse ye Meroz, saith the Angel of the Lord (in the victorious Song of Deborah) curse bitterly the inhabitants thereof. And why must poor Meroz be so bitterly cursed? Because they came not to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the Mighty. Hereupon it may seem, that Almighty God will not put to his strength in our defence, unless we joyn with him; he will not be our Champion to fight, whilst we sit still, only spectators of the Combat. And therefore this consideration alone may be sufficient to abate that confidence, which the foregoing discourse might be apt to raise in us, especially if we be not utter strangers to our selves, if we be not ignorant of our own weaknesses. Judg. 5. 23.

28. For satisfaction therefore to this discouragement, I will now endeavour to demonstrate by proofs drawn from undeniable Reason, and experience, That there is no sinful Temptation so strong, but that an ordinary Christian may (by the assistance before mentioned) easily conquer it. And lest my proceeding herein may lie open to any manner of exception; let me choose from among you the weakest, most unexperienced Christian, I dare oppose this man against the sharpest and most furious Temptation; and will make him confess, that though he be (de facto) subdued by it, yet that that came to pass meerly by his own voluntary and affected unwatchfulness and cowardise, and that it was truly in very deed, in his power to have resisted it, I will make choice to instance in the sin of uncleanness and Fornication; a sin, that generally finds such excuse and patronage in the world; because it is supposed to be so naturally born and bred up with us, that there is no shaking it off: it is a sin so resolved upon to be unconquerable, that few men go about to restrain it. The ancient Antidotes against this sin, Watching and Fasting, are grown out of use with us, we conclude they will do us little good against this hereditary evil, and therefore the best is to give them clean over.

29. Yet

29. Yet I say, let me suppose an ordinary Christian, environed with all the strongest temptations to this so natural, and therefore concluded so excusable a sin; let him have the most charming beauty, that has the most artificial ways of solicitation, together with opportunity, and all circumstances which are not fit to be supposed here; yet for all this, if that man should say he is not able to resist such a temptation, he lies against his own soul: For if at that instant a sudden message would interrupt him, a threatning of Death, if he did not free himself from the danger of her filthy embraces, would he not do it? I desire only that each one of you in his heart would answer for him. Then it is clear, he is able to resist this pretended irresistable temptation: And why should not the consideration of the danger of eternal Torments be as persuasive against any sin, as the fear of a momentary death? But I will not make my advantage of so frightful an enemy to his pleasure, as Death. Suppose in all those circumstances before-mentioned, a good sum of money were but offered him, upon condition he would abstain but that time from the execution of his filthy lust: I doubt not at all, but that upon these terms he would find strength enough to conquer this temptation. Shall Satan then be able to cast out Satan, and shall not God much more do it? Shall one sin be able to destroy the exercise of another, and shall not Grace much rather?

30. Besides, if we believe that generally it is not in our power to resist any of these temptations; How dare you who are Fathers, suffer your Daughters after they are come to years, to live unmarried? How dare you expose their souls to such dangers, unless you think, that ordinarily any man or woman is able to resist the temptations of the flesh? How dare you who are Merchants, for the hope of a little gain, live in foreign Countries, as if you were divorced from your Wives; if you religiously think, that were it not for the benefit of marriage, they could not ordinarily be honest?

31. Lastly, you may remember that our Saviour (in his descriptions of Hell) seldom leaves out this phrase, where the worm dieth not: which worm is generally by Interpreters moralized into the sting of conscience, i. e. a continual vexation of soul in the Reprobates, caused by the consideration, how it was meerly their own fault, their wilful folly, which brought them to that misery. Now this worm would die, and be quite extinguish'd in them, if they were of some mens opinions; that the reason why they sinned, was not because they would sin, but because they could not choose but do it, because they wanted power to resist all the temptations which were objected to them. Such a conceit may serve indeed to vex them, but it is not possible it should trouble their conscience; for by this reason, Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, might with as good reason be tormented in conscience for falling into Hell, when the earth opened under them, as for their sin of Rebellion against Moses; If the Reason why they committed that sin, was the subtraction of Divine Grace and assistance, without which it was impossible for them not to be Rebels. But indeed, Object. why should Almighty God withdraw his Grace from any man? Because (say some)

Sol. by falling, they may experimentally learn their own weakness without his assistance; and so be discouraged from trusting or relying upon themselves. A strange Reason no doubt: For as long as they have the Grace of God, they will not rely upon themselves; and when they are destitute of his Grace, they cannot rely upon him: so that it seems, God takes away his Grace from a man for this end, that wanting it, he may sin; and by that means, when he has got that grace again, he may perceive, that when he is destitute of Gods Grace, he cannot chuse but sin; which was a

Object. thing which he knew at the first without all this ado. But there may be a better reason given, why God should take away his Grace from a man; and that is, because

Sol. he negligently omits to make his best use of it, and so deserves that punishment. But this reason will satisfie as little as the former: For suppose (for example) a man at this instant in the state of Grace, and so in the favour of God. Upon these grounds, it is impossible that this man should ever sin; for surely God will not undeservedly take away his Grace from him, till he merit that punishment by his Sin; and till God

God take away his Grace from him, he cannot sin; therefore he must never sin. But this discourse, though it meerly concern practice, looks so like a Controversie, that I am weary of it.

32. We are apt enough to slander God with too much mercy sometimes, as if he bore us so particular an affection, that notwithstanding our never so many sins, yet he will still be merciful unto us. Oh that we could conceive of his mercy and goodness aright! as rather willing to prevent our sins by giving us sufficient preservatives against the committing them. I would to God, that instead of making subtil scholastical disputes of the power and efficacy of Gods Grace, we would magnifie the force thereof, by suffering it to exercise its sway in our lives and conversation; we should then easily find, that we are able to do all things through Christ that strengtheneth us.

Reasons againſt Popery, in a Letter from Mr. William Chillingworth to his Friend Mr. Lewger, perſuading him to return to his Mother the Church of England from the corrupt Church of Rome.

Good Mr. Lewger,

THough I am reſolved not to be much afflicted at that which is not in my power to Help, yet I cannot deny but the loſs of a Friend goes very near to my heart, and by this name of a Friend, I did preſume, till of late, that I might have called you; becauſe though perhaps for want of power and opportunity I have done you no good office, yet I have always been willing and ready to do you the beſt Service I could, and therefore I cannot but admire at your affected ſtrangeneſs which in your laſt Letter to me you ſeem to take upon you; renouncing in a manner all Relation to me, and tacitly Excommunicating me from all Intereſt in you. The Superſcription of your Letter is to Mr. William Chillingworth, and the Subſcription John Lewger, as if you either diſdained, or made a Conſcience of ſtiling me your Friend, or your ſelf mine. If this proceed from paſſion and weakneſs pray mend it; if from reaſon pray ſhew it: If you think me one of thoſe to whom S. John forbids you to ſay (God ſave you) then you are to think and prove me one of thoſe Deceivers, which deny Chriſt Jeſus to be come in the fleſh: If you think me an Heretick, and therefore to be avoided, you muſt prove me to be ἀυτοκατάκριτον, condemned by mine own judgment, which I know I am not, and therefore think you cannot. If you ſay I do not hear the Church, and therefore am to be eſteemed an Heathen or Publican, you are to prove then that by the Church is meant the Church of Rome, and yet when you have done ſo, I hope Chriſtians are not forbidden to ſhew humanity and civility even to Pagans.

For God's ſake Mr. Lewger free your ſelf from this blind Zeal, at leaſt for a little ſpace, and conſider with reaſon and moderation, what ſtrange Crime you can charge me with that ſhould deſerve this ſtrange uſage, eſpecially from you: Is it a Crime with all my underſtanding to endeavour to find your Religion true, and to make my ſelf a believer of it, and not to be able to do ſo? Is it a Crime to imploy all my reaſon upon the Juſtification of the Infallibility of the Roman Church; and to find it impoſſible to be juſtified? I will call God to witneſs, who knows my heart better than you do, that I have evened the Scale of my Judgment, as much as poſſibly I could, and have not willingly allowed one grain of worldly motives on either ſide, but have weighed the reaſons for your Religion, and againſt it, with ſuch indifference, as if there were nothing in the world but God and my ſelf; and is it my fault that the Scale goes down which hath the moſt weight in it? That the Building falls that hath a falſe foundation? Have you ſuch power over your underſtanding, that you can believe what you pleaſe, though you ſee no Reaſon? Or that you can ſuſpend your belief, when you ſee Reaſon? If you have, I pray for old Friendſhip's ſake, teach me this trick, and until I have learned it, I pray blame me not for going the ordinary way, I mean for believing, or not believing as I ſee reaſon. If you can convince me of wilful oppoſition againſt the known Truth; of negligence in ſeeking it, of unwillingneſs to find it, of preferring temporal reſpects before it, or of any other fault which is in my power to amend, that is indeed a fault, if I mend it not; be as angry with me as you pleaſe; but to impute to me involuntary Errors, or that I do not ſee that which I would ſee, but cannot; or that I will not profeſs that which I do not believe; certainly this is a far more unreaſonable error, than any you can juſtly charge me with; for let me tell you, the imputing Socinianism to me (whosoever was the Author of it) was a wicked and groundless Slander. Perhaps you will say (for this is the usual Song of that side) Pride is a voluntary fault, and with this I am justly chargeable, for forsaking the Guide that God hath appointed me to follow: but what if I forsook it, because I thought I had reason to fear it was one of those blind Guides, which whosoever blindly follows, is threatned by our Saviour, that both he and his Guide shall fall into the Ditch? Then I hope you will grant it was not Pride, but Conscience, that moved me to do so: for as it is wise humility to obey those whom God hath set over me, so is it sinful credulity to follow every man, or every Church, that without warrant will take upon them to guide me: shew then some good and evident title which your Church of Rome hath to this Office; produce but one reason for it, which upon trial will not finally be resolved and vanished into incertainty, and if I yield not unto it, say, if you please, I am as proud as Lucifer.

In the mean time give me leave to think it strange, and not far from a Prodigy, that this Doctrine of the Roman Churches being the Guide of Faith (if it be true Doctrine) should either not be known to the Evangelists, or if it were known to them, yet being Wise and Good Men, they should either be so envious of the Churches Happiness, or so forgetful of the Work they took in hand, which was to write the Whole Gospel of Christ, as that not so much as one of them should mention so much as once this so necessary part of the Gospel, without the belief whereof there is no Salvation, and with the belief whereof, unless men be snatched away by sudden death, there is hardly any damnation. It is evident they do all of them with one consent speak very plainly of many things of no importance in comparison hereof, and is it credible or indeed possible that with one consent or rather conspiracy, they should be so deeply silent concerning this Unum Necessarium? You may believe it if you can, for my part I cannot, unless I see demonstration for it: And if you say they send us to the Church, and consequently to the Church of Rome, this is to suppose that which can never be proved, that the Church of Rome is the only Church, and without this supposal upon the Division of the Church, I am as far to seek for a Guide of my Faith as ever.

As for example: In that Great Division of the Church when the whole World wondered, said St. Jerom, that it was become Arrian, when Liberius Pope of Rome (as St. Athanasius, St. Jerom, and St. Hilary testifie,) subscribed their Heresie, and joyned in Communion with them: or in the Division betwixt the Greek and Roman Church, about the Procession of the Holy Ghost, when either side was the Church to it self, and each part Schismatical and Heretical to the other: what direction could I then, an ignorant man, have found from the Text of Scripture, Unless he hear the Church, let him be unto thee as an Heathen or a Publican: Upon this Rock will I build my Church, and the Gates of Hell shall not prevail against it.

Again, Give me leave to wonder that neither St. Paul writing to the Romans, should so much as intimate this their priviledge of Infallibility, but rather on the contrary put them in fear in the 11 Chapter, that they, as well as the Jews, were in danger of falling away!

That St. Peter, the pretended Bishop of Rome, writing two Catholick Epistles, mentioning his departure, should not once acquaint the Christians whom he writes to, what Guide they were to follow after he was taken from them!

That the Writers of the New Testament should so frequently warn men of Hereticks, false Christs, false Prophets, and not once arm them against them, with letting them know this only sure means of avoiding their danger!

That so great a part of the New Testament should be imployed about Antichrist, and so little, and indeed none at all, about the Vicar of Christ, and the Guide of the Faithful!

That our Saviour should leave this only means for the Ending of Controversies, and yet speak so obscurely and ambiguously of it, that now our Judge is the greatest Controversie, and the greatest hindrance of ending of them!

That

That there should be better evidence in the Scripture to justifie the King to this Office, who disclaims it, than the Pope, who pretends to it!

That St. Peter should never exercise over the Apostles any one Act of Jurisdiction, nor they ever give him any one Title of Authority over them!

That if the Apostles did know that St. Peter was made Head of them, when our Saviour said, Thou art Peter, they should still contend who should be the First, and that our Saviour should never tell them that St. Peter was the man!

That St. Paul should say he was nothing inferiour to the very chief Apostles!

That the Catechumeni in the Primitive Church should never be taught this Foundation of their Faith, that the Church of Rome was the Guide of their Faith!

That the Fathers, Tertullian, St. Jerom, and Optatus, when they slew highest in recommendation of the Roman Church, should attribute no more unto her than to all Apostolical Churches!

That in the Controversie about Easter, the Bishops and Churches of Asia should be so ill Catechised as not to know this Principle of Christian Religion, The necessity of Conformity of Doctrine with the Church of Rome!

That they should never be pressed with any such Conformity in all things, but only with the particular Tradition of the Western Churches in that point!

That Irenæus and many other Bishops notwithstanding, Ad hanc Ecclesiam necesse est omnem convenire Ecclesiam, should not yet think that a necessary Doctrine, nor a sufficient ground of Excommunication, which the Church of Rome thought to be so!

That St. Cyprian and the Bishops of Affrick should be so ill instructed in their Faith, as not to know this Foundation of it!

That they likewise were never urged with any such necessity of Conformity with the Church of Rome, nor ever charged with Heresie or Error for denying of it!

That when Liberius joyned in Communion with the Arrians, and subscribed their Heresie, the Arrians then should not be the Church, and the Guide of the Faith!

That never any Hereticks for five Ages after Christ were pressed with this Argument of the Infallibility of the present Church of Rome, or charged with the denial of it as a distinct Heresie, so that Æneus Sylvius should have cause to say, Ante tempora Concilii Niceni quisque sibi vivebat, & parvus respectus habebatur ad Ecclesiam Romanam!

That the Ecclesiastical Story of these times, mentions no Act of Authority of the Church of Rome over other Churches; as if there should be a Monarchy, and the King for some Ages together should exercise no Act of Jurisdiction in it!

That to supply this defect, the Decretal Epistles should be so impudently forged, which in a manner speak nothing else but Reges & Monarchas, I mean the Popes making Laws to exercise Authority over all other Churches!

That the Affrican Churches in St. Austin's time should be ignorant that the Pope was Head of the Church, and Judge of Appeals Jure Divino, and that there was a necessity of Conformity with the Church in this and all other points of Doctrine!

Nay, that the Popes themselves should be so ignorant of the ground of this their Authority, as to pretend to it, not upon Scripture or Universal Tradition; but upon an imaginary pretended Non-such-Canon of the Council of Nice!

That Vincentius Lirinensis seeking for a Guide of his Faith and a Preservation from Heresie, should be ignorant of this so ready an one, the Infallibility of the Church of Rome!

All

All these things, and many more, are very strange to me, if the Infallibility of the Roman Church be indeed, and were always by Christians acknowleged the Foundation of our Faith: and therefore I beseech you pardon me, if I chose mine upon one that is much firmer and safer, and lies open to none of these Objections, which is Scripture and Universal Tradition.

And if one that is of this Faith may have leave so to do, I will subscribe with hand and heart,

Your very Loving and True Friend,

W. CHILLINGWORTH.
